THE FOOL'S PRAYER.

The royal feast was done; the king!
Sought some new sport to banish care,
And to his jester cried, "Sir Fool,
Kneel now, and make for us a prayer!"

The jester doffed his cap and bells,
And stood the mocking court before;
They could not see the bitter smile
Behind the painted grin he wore.

He bowed his head, and bent his knee
Upon the monarch's silken stool;
His pleading voice arose: "O Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

"No pity, Lord, could change the heart
From red with wrong to white as wool;
The rod must heal the sin; but, Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

"Tis not by guilt the onward sweep
Of truth and right, O Lord, we stay;
Tis by our follies that so long
We hold the earth from heaven away.

"These clumsy feet, still in the mire,
Go crushing blossoms without end;
These hard, well-meaning hands we thrust
Among the heart-strings of a friend.

"The ill-timed truth, we might have kept—
Who knows how sharp it pierced and stung?
The word we had not sense to say—
Who knows how grandly it had rung?"

"Our faults no tenderness should ask,
The chastening stripes must cleanse them all;
But for our blunders—oh, in shame
Before the eyes of Heaven we fall.

"Earth bears no balsam for mistakes:
Men crown the knave, and scourge the fool
That did his will; but thou, O Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

The room was hushed; in silence rose
The king, and sought his gardens cool,
And walked apart, and murmured low,
"Be merciful to me, a fool!"

Notes on a Sermon

Delivered by Joseph A. Crawford, at Galland's Grove, Iowa, September 26th, 1879, taken by S. F. Walker.

I MIGHT offer many excuses, and make numberless apologies in appearing on the stand this morning; but it would "all be vanity;" for the "powers that be" have spoken; the fiat has gone forth; I must be your speaker to-day.

The words upon which I shall base my remarks, will be found in the 17th chapter of St. John's Gospel, 3rd verse:

"And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

While it is true that mankind must obtain an experimental knowledge of God, by and through the agency of the Holy Ghost, to entitle them to "life eternal" it is equally true that they must possess some knowledge, or have a correct idea, regarding the "God of Israel," and the Christ, before they can predicate their faith; which, through obedience, will lead to an experimental knowledge of the Deity. For, without a true conception of God's personality, characteristics, and power, there can be no true worship. When the Jehovah appeared in the burning bush on Mount Horéb to Moses, and commissioned him as the instrument under God to bring Israel out of Egyptian bondage and idolatry, he delegated to Moses the mission of proving to both the Israelites and Egyptians that the God whom he represented was a God of power; and in nature and attributes was far superior to the combined strength of all the seven deities of Egypt.

Through Moses this fact was amply demonstrated, for we see one after another of the "seven deities" being smitten by the miraculous power of Jehovah; and Israel is thoroughly convinced regarding His exceeding Majesty and power above the gods which for generations they had been serving; and Pharaoh was constrained to let Israel go. Then we find the chosen people led up and down in the wilderness for forty years, God continually teaching them, before they were prepared to enter Canaan. Why this? They must of necessity have learned sufficient of the nature and attributes of the Great I Am, to worship him knowingly, understanding what he was. They were commanded to worship him alone, to have no idols made with hands, neither to bow to any "image of any thing in the heavens above, or earth beneath." Then, to have worshipped any image, or likeness, or idol of wood or stone, would have been absolute idolatry. If it were idolatry then to worship images, likenesses, wood or stone, the same kind of worship to-day would again be idolatry.

Thus, your speaker is led to conclude, that if mankind now, in this age, chances to conjure up in his brain, an imaginary being, that they may imagine to be the "likeness or image" of the Jehovah, and it fails to correspond with the nature, attributes, characteristics, and personality of God; that person who worships and adores such an image or likeness, will be an idolator, be he whom he may. Then, if in the very inception of the "new life," a proper and correct understanding of "God and his Christ" is necessary to "life eternal," all Bible believers ought to be willing to say: "To the law and the testimony;" whoever abides not this testimony "has not light." What does the world believe on this question?

1st. Some believe that in the beginning God ruled in heaven in his majesty, all alone, and Christ existed only in the bosom of the Father as "the Word"—existed in the mind of God, as exists a building in the mind of the architect, even before the foundation is laid—that in the meridian of time this Word, or idea became flesh—was then Christ, the Son of God.

2nd. Some argue that it was the very and eternal Father himself who assumed the flesh, was crucified, arose and ascended for man's redemption; that He, God the Father, is without body or parts, and fills all the immensity of space.

Now, if your speaker should ask the advocates of the "Word" theory for proof positive substantiating that position, he would be at once referred to St. John's Gospel, 1: 1:

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God."

If this theory is the true one, what was Christ before his advent on earth? Simply a word. What is a word? A sound, a sign, brought into being by the action of the vocal organs upon the atmospheric air. A word possesses no intelligence, no life, lives or exists only while the vibratory action of the air lasts, passes away, dies, can never more be recalled from the realm of the dead past. Then if Christ was a "word" he lived a moment, then passed away, then was recalled, assumed flesh, and became the "Man-God." When God spoke, Christ existed; when God ceased speaking Christ died, ceased to have an existence. Such a theory is unreasonable. Well, says the advocate, I claim it is scriptural. Let us see. Jesus prayed a prayer as recorded in John 17. Every advocate of the "Word" theory, if they believe the Bible, will be forced to admit that every request Jesus asked of the Father would, by the Father, be granted to him. In verses 4 and 5 Jesus says:

"I have glorified thee on the earth; I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was."

Now, if Christ was only a word, or idea, in the mind of the Father, before his advent to earth, the very moment that he returned to the Father, and the Father give him the "same glory" Christ "had with him before the world was," Christ will cease to have a personal existence; the mediator between God and man will be lost to man; Christ will again become a word in the bosom of the Father—an idea in the Father's mind. How preposterous such a thought appears; yet the conclusion is unavoidable; thus we are led to believe that the "non-pre-existent-word" theory is wholly devoid of Scripture truth, and doubly unreasonable.

We can arrive truthfully at what was Christ's glory before his advent, if we can find what was his glory after his ascension; for he prayed to be "glorified with the same glory." Can this be done? Yes, if our Word theorists will accept the martyr Stephen as a witness in the case. Luke records Stephen's testimony thus: "He being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God" (Acts 7:55). Could a word in the bosom of the Father, or an idea in the Father's mind, stand upon the "right hand of God?" How could a word or idea stand, and what would it stand upon? Could a word or idea be seen? Absurdity! What did Stephen see? A personal, tangible being; Jesus, the advocate between God and man; in person, separate and distinct from God the Father; high, exalted, on God's right hand; side by side with the Father upon the throne of his glory. This was his, Jesus', glory after he returned to heaven; and now, if God granted his petition, to be "glorified with the glory" he had before he left the Father, and who dare be impious enough to deny it, what was Jesus before his advent on earth? A separate and distinct personal entity, possessed of intelligence, being side by side with God; exalted high on God's throne, in the "heaven of heavens" above. How dare any one, professing any belief whatever in God's revealed word, say that Christ had no personal pre-existence?

But the second party named in the introduction, now comes to the partial rescue of the "word and idea" theorist. Say they: "We do believe in pre-existence, but deny that Jesus existed before his birth on earth, or now exists as a separate and distinct being. We hold him to be the "very and eternal Father, without body or parts." If your speaker should demand Bible proof of this party, he would be referred to St. John 10:30, "I and my Father are one." Again to 1 John 5:7, "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one."

Now, while your speaker believes that both Jesus and John said the Father and Son were one, he is not willing to admit that they are one in person; however, for argument's sake, and to prove the fallacy of the position, let us admit that both wished us to understand they were one individual. Jesus prays (John 17:11): "And now I am no more in the world, but these [all his disciples] are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are." Now, if the admission that the Father and Son are one person be true, Jesus also wants us to understand that he wanted the Twelve Apostles, twice seventy Evangelists, and above five hundred brethren to lose their individuality, and be blended into one body. What an absurd idea! what a monstrous impossibility! It would indeed be an anomaly in nature, to see more than six hundred individuals losing their identity and individuality; yet each one of the number "working out their own salvation with fear and trembling." Yet we can not escape this conclusion. If the first position is true, the conclusion is also truth. Now, as the results are manifestly absurd and altogether impossible, we are forced to admit the foundation is both unreasonable and unscriptural. Therefore Jesus did not say, neither did John intimate that the Father and Son were one in personal entity, or individuality. They were one; he wanted the saints to be one as they were one. How did Christ wish the saints to be one? One in faith, one in baptism, one in hope, one in aim and design. How then were the Father and Son one? One in the plan and work of creation, one in the plan of redemption to rescue fallen man from sin, death, and condemnation, one in aim and in design.

The oneness of "Paul that planted" and "Apollos who watered," is after the same order of oneness. The objector may say: "John says the Word was God; if he is not God the Father, how can he be called a God? "God, who at sundry times * * * spake to the fathers by the Prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son," says Paul, in Hebrews 1:1. Then in 8th verse, this same God—God the Father—says through Paul, in speaking of the Son: "Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom." John said the "Word" was God; God says the Son is God, seated upon the throne wielding the power of God. Let us ask John how Jesus obtained the name and nature of God. He answers in John 5:18: "Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God." And Paul says (Heb. 1:3) of the Son: "Who being the brightness of his [God's] glory, and the express image of his [God's] person." Your speaker leaves you to answer now, how the Son of God obtained the name and nature of God without being God the Father.

But in the last passage quoted from Paul to the Hebrews, we find that Christ was the "express image of the person of God." Can a something "without body and parts" be a personage? Verily, nay. Then how, say some among you, that God has neither body nor parts? Christ had body and parts, and is by Paul declared to be the "image of God's person;" therefore, if the noted Apostle testifies truly, the Elohim of Creation, the God of Abraham, the Great I Am of Israel—the God the Father of our Lord Jesus must indeed be a personal God. He wrote the law with his finger upon the tables of stone; his ears are open to the cry of the righteous; his arm was over the nations; and Stephen, the martyr, saw him, saw his right hand; and Moses hid in the rocks and saw God pass by. Then, if Stephen saw him in heaven, and he passed by Moses in the Mount, I fail to comprehend the theory that would try to make us believe that being without body or parts, "God fills the immensity of space," and is every where and nowhere at the same time. Please explain how Stephen could testify that he had seen God in heaven, for if God fills all space, only part of God was in heaven. How could he pass by Moses on the Mount? Pray tell me how if he fills "all space" he could pass beyond space? which he must do in moving to pass Moses. How did Jesus understand this matter? Why, he taught his disciples to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven;" and he surely would not have located the Father in heaven, if the bounds of the Father's bodiless existence were as extended as the bounds of space.

Your speaker is, therefore, thoroughly convinced, despite the man-made theories, and the number of their adherents and advocates, that God is a personal being, that he sits high and exalted of the "throne of thrones," occupying space, and having bounds to his tabernacle and dwelling. In fancy, I hear some one say: Horrible! He does not believe that God is "around and about us." True; let me explain. We see around us the fields of golden corn, almost matured, ready for the granary; a velvet green sward is beneath our feet; we are shaded by the leafy foliage of the trees; what force in nature is the prime motive power in producing this state of things? You readily answer, The rays of sunlight, crossing ninety-five millions of miles of space. Now, because I see the effects of the sun upon old mother earth, do you think your speaker would be justified in arguing and attempting to prove that the sun itself was "around and about us?" A school boy would laugh such an idea to scorn. Neither can we consistently believe that God is personally present with us, because we see the handiwork of God upon every hand. As the sun operates by its rays of light sent out through space, so your speaker believes that God dwelling in the heavens above, operates upon, governs, guides and directs humanity by the office of the Holy Spirit. This is reasonable, this is consistent.

Now, friends, if it was idolatry four thousand years ago to worship an "image," or a "likeness," the like worship is idolatry now. If a portion of the religious world bow down and worship and adore an image generated in and through the imagination, and call that phantasmic existless thing "a God without body or parts," or a "word taking upon itself flesh," or a "trinity of three in one, and one in three," your speaker is bold to state that such adoration is nothing more nor less than absolute idolatry. For, "Thou shalt have no other Gods" but Jehovah; and in the very inception of the "new life" that tends to "life eternal," we must know enough about his nature, attributes and characteristics to be able to exercise a living faith in him, in and through the name of Jesus Christ our Lord; then, by obedience, the Spirit comes and brings with it the experimental knowledge of God and Christ; and that knowledge is life eternal.

Now, having rapidly examined the different theories on this vexed question, and tested each by the "law and testimony," we are forced to the following conclusions:

1st. Christ existed as an intelligent entity, separate and distinct, personally from God the Father, before the world was.

2d. The God of Creation, the Father of our Lord Jesus, is a personal God.

3d. In the meridian of time Christ assumed humanity, to suffer, die, be resurrected and glorified for man's redemption.

4th. We must worship God, the Father, through his name.

And, finally, in Christ, our Advocate, is blended both the human and divine natures—man and God. This duality is established beyond the shadow of a doubt, by his life on earth. Humanity wept when meeting the disconsolate sisters at Bethany; while yet the cheek of humanity was wet with sorrowing and sympathizing tears, with the power of a God he calls Lazarus out of the bondage of death. He sleeps in the hold of the vessel to recuperate the wasted energies of his physical system; walks out on the vessel's deck, and with the power of God controls the winds and the waves; is judged as a man in Pilate's hall; crowned with thorns; totters and falls beneath the weight of the cross; dies, and in dying calls on the Father for strength and help, and is locked in the tomb of Joseph of Armathea; on the morning of the third day, with Godly power, breaks the bands of death, and rises triumphant over death, hell, and the grave. Humanity is redeemed, and he the Redeemer, man and God, is a perfect advocate between God and man.

And he comes again, then without sin offering unto salvation. And John, seeing to the end of time by the spirit of prophecy, says: "And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood, and his name is called THE WORD OF GOD. * * * And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS.

Babylonian Inscriptions.

CYRUS THE KING.

ON Monday the Royal Asiatic Society met for the first time after the recess. Sir Henry Rawlinson was in the chair, and read an important paper on "A Newly-Discovered Cylinder of Cyrus the Great," which he described as the most interesting historical record in the cuneiform character as yet brought to light. It is in the Babylonish script, as was to have been expected from its having been discovered among the ruins of the Birs Nimroud, the acknowledged site of the ancient Borsippa, of which city, as Sir Henry Rawlinson remarked, it was the more surprising that it makes no mention. The cylinder is nine inches long by three and one-quarter inches in diameter, and must originally have been covered with forty-five long lines of text. The writing is very minute, and it is computed that the inscription would run to about 130 lines of the average length. Unfortunately, the monument is very badly injured, and the beginning is wholly lost, with the exception of a few scattered signs. When it does begin to be legible it is found to relate to the very moment of that great historical event, the capture of Babylon by the founder of the Persian Universal Monarchy. Nabonidus has abandoned his capital, which has fallen into the hands of Cyrus, though he is still struggling against his fate in Babylonia. But the worshippers of the rising sun declare that the gods have rejected him for his impiety and for his scandalous neglect of their temples. On the other hand, they extol the piety and the greatness and the glory of Cyrus, whom the heavenly powers have raised up to avenge their cause. The Guti, whose overthrow Sir Henry Rawlinson thinks was involved in that of the Medes, and a people whose name is taken to be equivalent to Blackheads, reminding us of the Negroes, are described as his subjects, and the god Merodach has delivered King Nabonidus into his hands. Of Belshazzar no mention is discoverable, although it is conceivable that this may be due to the many and serious gaps in the inscription. The long introduction is followed by what purports to be the text of a proclamation issued by Cyrus upon the taking of the city, and in which the King repeats in the first person the principal allegations of the preamble. It is partly mutilated, but the beginning, "I am Cyrus," with his genealogy in full, and his description of himself as "King of Gyndia," can be pretty clearly made out, and Sir Henry gave a translation of all that is legible. Cyrus is made to speak of his reparation of the temples in Babylon, and of the favors conferred on upon him by Merodach, Bel, and Nebo, in answer to his prayers to them, of the homage paid him by distant nations, and of the gatherings of the people in the city to acclaim him King. The last ten lines are illegible. Sir Henry Rawlinson said this new text settled forever in favor of Herodotus as against Ctesias (in Diodorus) the genealogy of Cyrus. He was fifth in descent from Achæmenes, next to whom came Theispes, then Cyrus the grandfather, and Cambyses, the father of Cyrus the Great. Moreover, the succession was direct, not indirect as Prof. Oppert had maintained. The inscription styles the native country of the Persians "Assan," which Sir Henry Rawlinson gave reason for locating in the plains between the modern Shaster and the Persis of the classical writers. He gave an interesting account of the great temples of Babylon. An important religious center named Calana in the inscription he illustrated by reference to the Calneh of Genesis and the Calno of Isaiah. The great difficulty, he said, in the inscription was the transformation of the royal zealot of Aurumazda into a devotee of the Babylonian gods.—London Times, November, 1879.

Is Christ Now on His Throne?

WE often hear it said that Christ is now seated on his throne, reigning "Lord of lords and King of kings," where he will remain henceforth, even for ever.

I claim that this is one of the "fables" referred to by Paul, and think I can prove it to be a plain contradiction of God's word. In the first place we want to find out what throne belongs to Christ. We turn to the book of Isaiah, and find him prophesying of Christ many years before his birth, in the following manner:

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end; upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."—Isa. 9: 6, 7.

Now we turn to the Book of Luke, and see if we can find anything to agree with this prophecy of Isaiah's. We find the angel telling Mary about a child which she should bring forth, and he says:

"He shall be great, and he shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."—Luke 1: 32, 33.

We learn from these two witnesses, that Christ is to have David's throne: but I think we should be better satisfied if we could read some of the promises which God made to David on this point.

We turn to Psalms first, and the Psalmist says:

"I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations." "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven."—Psa. 89: 3, 4, 32-37.

"And it shall come to pass when thy days be expired that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build me a house, and I will establish his throne for ever. I will be his father and he shall be my son: and I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it away from him that was before thee: but I will settle him in mine house and in my kingdom for ever: and his throne shall be established for evermore."—1 Chron. 17: 11-14.

I have quoted enough to prove that David should have a man to sit on his throne, and he should be of his seed.

Now we want to find out if Christ is of the seed of David. We turn to the New Testament and see what we find there. John said:

"Hath not the Scripture said, that Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was?"—John 7: 42.

On the day of Pentecost while Peter was preaching (being filled with the Holy Ghost), he referred to the words of David, and said:

"Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne."—Acts 2: 30.

I do not want better proof than that given by the Holy Ghost; but as that is not enough to satisfy some, we will see what the multitude said when they saw Jesus coming towards Jerusalem:

"And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest."—Matt. 29: 9.

It seems from this that it was well understood that Jesus was of the seed of David; but to be more sure on this point, we will find one more passage, which gives the words of Jesus.

"I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star."—Rev. 22: 16.

I think I have given sufficient proof that Christ is of the seed of David, and heir to David's throne; and now we want to find out where David's throne is. Some have even gone so far as to say it is up in heaven, but I think we can soon tell where it is if we search carefully. I think if we can prove that Solomon sat upon David's throne, it will convince many that it is upon the earth, for every one must believe that King Solomon reigned in Jerusalem, and built the temple there. We will first turn to the Book of Kings, and there find it written thus:

"And let Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet anoint him there king over Israel; and blow ye with the trumpet, and say, God save king Solomon. Then ye shall come up after him, that he may come up and sit upon my throne: for he shall be king in my stead: and I have appointed him to be ruler over Israel and over Judah."—1 Kings 1: 34, 35.

"And of all my sons, (for the Lord hath given me many sons), he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel."—1 Chron. 28: 5.

"And the Lord hath performed his word, that he spake, and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as the Lord promised, and have built a house for the name of the Lord God of Israel."—1 Kings 8: 20.

"And the days that David reigned over Israel were forty years: seven years reigned he in Hebron and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem. Then sat Solomon upon the throne of his father: and his kingdom was established greatly."—1 Kings 2: 11, 12.

I think I have read enough to show plainly where the throne of David is; also, to prove that it belongs to Christ. But I will refer to one more passage of Scripture, which proves beyond a doubt, that Christ is not now seated upon his throne.

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne."—Rev. 3: 29.

Now the question arises, When will Christ take his throne?

"When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory."—Matt. 25: 31.

Let us be more willing to accept the plain teachings of God's holy word, and not "turn our ears away from the truth" to listen to fables.

M. MANSFIELD.

From London, England.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I again inform you of our circumstances in this city and its vicinity. I can now add the last three words of the previous sentence with some degree of satisfaction; for not only have we increased in town, and at Stratford, but our influence is felt in the northern suburbs also. Since my last, the "Lyme Grove" Branch has been organized in North-East District, and has sent its priesthood forth on all sides; and as some honest enquirers are in those parts, the result has been that three who live in the village of Ponders' End have been baptized, two in Enfield, and a prospect of two more in each place shortly. And in the immediate neighborhood of the branch we have been busy, and fruits appear. A few months ago, previous to organization of second branch, we were so very offensive as to baptize two one-time "Disciples." This brought upon us the honor of the "Campbellite" attention, and, after a few conversations, a mutual arrangement was made for three public discussions upon the following subjects:

1. "Does the Bible teach the continuance of the miraculous gifts until the second advent?"
2. "Is a priesthood necessary to the valid administration of Christ's ordinances?"
3. "The Book of Mormon, is it of God?"

These propositions I had the honor to affirm, and it was my pleasing experience to meet, in Elder Russell Dick, a truly gentlemanly opponent. Prophecies of our annihilation (theologically of course) were abundant; but somehow it was found that we were rather more heretical than at first. It was actually attempted to prove from the Bible (authorized edition) that the gifts were to cease with the first century! The Bible disappointed them.

As to the matter of the Priesthood, no attempt was made to disprove my affirmation, but only an appeal to popular prejudice, against what was called a "class priesthood," and a "puff" of the "teach who likes and what you please" system was indulged in. I believe a good many outsiders saw its fallacy.

Respecting the last proposition, you will imagine my amusement and surprise to hear the Spaulding "yarn" seriously advocated; and I came to the conclusion that the poor folks knew no better. But it failed them, and so (in violence to the subject) the Martyr's supposed life and works were dragged in, but proved unprovable.

We had very good houses, and I am glad to take this opportunity of thanking Mr. Hutchinson (one of my opponent's community) for his impartial presidency. We are not annihilated, neither do our heads hang down, but we still rejoice that every attempt to disprove our position only makes it the plainer.

Twelve months ago, when I embraced the gospel, the Saints here were in a very sad condition: all the "heat and burden of the day" were resting upon a devoted few, spiritual life at a low ebb, and general weakness painfully prominent. But we have "shaken the coals from our garments, and arisen in the strength of the Lord;" and are stronger. An evident effort is being made to overcome the weaknesses of the flesh, and I pray the Father that we may succeed.

The desire of years has at last been realized, the gift of tongues has been given to us here. I shall always remember the night when it first occurred. We waited on the Lord in our prayer and testimony meeting, and the voice of the Spirit told us to contend for that gift, and we should then have it. We did. We had! And the interpretation inspired us to renewed diligence. It was "Awake, ye saints, and strike the lyre, Angels wait with tongues of fire!"

Some will say, "Well, that wasn't much." No, but it was a beginning, and it strengthened us, and so, by diligent faith, we have since received that gift in more fullness. It is poured out upon both branches, and prophecy is heard, visions are seen, and none of the sick are ministered to in vain, but whether they be of the Church or not, the Spirit manifests the power of God and blessings are enjoyed.

But I begin to question the wisdom of having penned the foregoing rosy sketch, lest when it is read by those here, they should think they are very near perfection. But we emphatically are not. Would to God that we could only see the littleness of our spiritual force, the preponderance of our physicalism. We can only enjoy spiritual gifts by much striving, but we can produce physical manifestations, a very great deal too much. If a cross word is spoken we can get vexed with consummate ease, and if anything should happen to occur contrary to our desires, we find nothing so easy as to loose all powers of combativeness, and express ourselves in very unmistakable terms.

But I hope that we shall begin to know ourselves a little, and continue to develop that which is spiritual, praying for the assistance of the Eternal Spirit. For, I take it, Latter Day Saints should raise their voices loud and long against the empty physicalism of these days, and that their voices should be ably supplemented by their good lives.

Everything is physical among the people here, excepting Spiritualists of course, but they sometimes lay themselves open to the same charge. For instance, John Lawrence, a short time ago gave "physical manifestation seances;" but, one evening, as the materialized spirit exhibited itself, several unbelievers grasped it and found it to be an embodied spirit who had not previously passed away! J. L. was cared for by the prison authorities for several months, but he is now out again, and busy with another line of spiritual phenomena, which, though it does not pay so well, yet is not so hazardous. We have several Spiritualists investigating, and hope they will discern the truth.

Concerning others, I can only say that the gratification of the physical senses is all they seem to be capable of realizing. And I do not in the least exaggerate when I say that any appeal to the senses of the people here is sure to meet with success; but ask them to rise above that level and to believe that they are capable of "worshiping God in Spirit and in truth," and you strike a chord which you may continue striking a long time without provoking anything like sympathy in them. We must feel thankful that we meet with rare exceptions now and then, who obey the doctrine and try to press on. And we are determined still to go on, feeling to answer the appeal:

"O! touch those chords which long ago
Gave forth a trembling sound,
But now, as seasons onward roll,
Each string is silent found.
Put forth thy hand and gently try;
Call not the effort vain;
Deep in the heart's recess they lie,
O! touch those chords again."

For I, for one, can not forget that if this appeal had not been answered by those whom I first heard preaching the truth, I should now have been either the tool of false spirits, or trying to comfort myself with the uncomfortable philosophy of Atheism. And the spirit of our calling inspires us to the work, the voice of the Spirit declaring that we shall increase in numbers, and gain the prize we seek.

But it is hard work, the proverbial prejudice of the Englishman being amply proved.

In conclusion I must mention that the question of district reorganization is now under our consideration, and I trust we shall so labor that when next I write I can tell you of many added and branches organized. We hope to organize a third branch northward soon, and when the brethren of Limehouse Branch can find a suitable place in Stratford, they will speedily do likewise. So, on the whole, the cause of truth is onward; and though attempts to stay it are not wanting, yet they are futile; the more so that our opponents will not come out like men, but do their best behind our backs. "For God's sake don't go near these anti-polygamic Mormons," etc., is the cry of some Rev. friends around Hackney; but the people come and some are impressed, and so we conquer; for "He that is for us is more than all that be against us." Four will be baptized in a few days into Lyme Grove Branch, and others inquire honestly.

Thus is the gospel triumphing over obstacles, and so it will continue, and my only fear is lest the priesthood of Zion should fail to see the present necessity for putting forth their strength in all their might whilst Babylon is falling, and while the opportunity is ours.

O! ye servants of the Most High God, cease from personal pettinesses, and armed with the principles of the doctrine of Christ let us assert the cause of truth, and verily shall Zion shine with the glory of her King.

Praying for the triumph of truth, I remain yours in the same.

R. KENDRICK.

Address to the Colorado Saints.

To the Brethren and Sisters assembled in Conference, and to those scattered in Colorado greeting:—Having been appointed by General Conference to labor in Colorado, it seems proper, in order that an understanding may obtain, to take this method of offering a few suggestions.

I arrived November 10th, and, in connection with Bro. Jas. Kemp, have held thirteen meetings, seven of which we held on Bear Creek. A few showed signs of belief. Colorado is a vast territory, over which thousands of souls are scattered. How far we may succeed in gathering from among them the God-fearing and truth-loving into the fold of Christ, the future must tell. God, 'tis said, giveth the increase, but 'tis ours to scatter the seed.

I have not come among you expecting that one blast upon the gospel trumpet will bring all from their idols, and so Colorado be born in a day, but rather believe that, as in some other places, so it may be here, viz., two of a family and one of a city. And, to reach the twos and ones, well directed and continuous efforts will be necessary.

We may be called upon while thus convened, to consider and pass upon ways and means by common consent. Some disputations have arisen touching the right of the laity to vote in conference meetings. But, to my knowledge, the body has never passed any measure denying this privilege to the laity. Hence, so far as I am concerned, the practice obtained elsewhere will govern us here. I understand that no precedent or practice, sanctioned by the General Conference, can be changed, by district, branch, quorum or individual, while any member having dubiety as to any measure may, at a proper time, petition the body and be heard. This is liberty. But, to attack or ignore what the body enjoins, would be license, bringing, to say the least of it, disorder.

Yet we all have rights that are sacred, and they must be preserved. Permit me, then, to suggest, that whatever measures may be offered, that all will have the right (subject to order of course) to speak and vote as they please; and whether at this or any subsequent time, a measure we favor may obtain or be lost, let us never so far forget ourselves as to censure any one for talking or voting differently from us; nor offer personal abuse while any motion is pending, or being debated. We should never set our hearts upon any measure that, being lost, would so worry us, as to make some one the object of spite or malice. But, for any measure we, in our judgment, think necessary, talk and vote as we think best, and be content with the issue. But as for lobbying, wire pulling, or resorting to any unfair means, to carry a projected scheme, it should never enter our hearts. We should not be too jubilant when our measure obtains, nor sullen and revengeful when the reverse happens.

To pursue an even tenor is our duty, but the best is sometimes at fault; hence the necessity for self-examination and culture, seeing ourselves as others may see us.

I think I appreciate the kindness received since my arrival; and, while I hope to continue worthy of the same, I have no promise or vow to make, further than to say that I feel desirous to-day to evidence my fidelity to God and his cause, and to remain worthy of your confidence, by performing what I understand to be my duty.

And should any future act of mine to you appear wrong, I shall be willing, and hope to be the first to hear what you have to say; and if it so happens that I should take exceptions to any of your acts, I will not allow myself to be a tale-bearer.

To prevent, is much better than to adjust difficulties. Let us see to it, that the love we feel for all, especially for the household of faith, for entering the fold of Christ is not supplanted by hate and revenge. Love and confidence lost by contention, are hard to regain.

I have no authority to make laws, but to expound and enforce the laws that Christ has given is incumbent, or so I understand. I may change; others have, and I too am a man. But now I am resolved that no duty shall be left undone, nor will I palliate God's word to obtain favor from any; nor would I desire to grow wise above that which is written; nor will this procedure infringe on your rights.

I learn by Bro. Kemp that about fifty members are scattered over the State. But few appear to be active, and, through inattention, the records are incomplete. It is to be hoped that the future will remedy this evil, and a correct record be obtained. At the present time there is but one organized branch, to which we would respectfully suggest to all scattered members that they report, and forward their offerings to the Bishop's Agent. The readiness with which the members of the above branch have contributed means, supercedes the necessity of exhortation, further than to advise a continuance.

It may not be out of place to suggest, however, that the beginning of tithing is the consecration of surplus property, that means otherwise paid comes under the head of freewill offering. The Church does not seek to force her members to thus donate, but only to induce by moral suasion, leaving them to be their own exactors.

You need not be reminded that those who are called to spend their whole time in the ministry have not only in the beginning, but to continue to make sacrifice, for none expect them to lay by for a rainy day or a decent burial. So far from this, that if they fail to evidence a becoming resignation, if not content, having food to eat, and raiment to wear. Besides all this, when those who are now active shall cease their activity, because of the weight of their physical bodies through accumulating years, there appears little other prospect for them (without special interposition of Providence), than a pauper's home. Whether this is right or wrong I will not say; but some of our efficient representatives have ceased their ministerial labors, not only to secure a home for the present, but that in their declining years they may also have a sacred spot called home, wherein to rest.

But, for all this, I would advise you not to let your sympathies be too easily aroused, by any having a special faculty in parading their wants, pleading their poverty, or always being blatant of great sacrifice made. But as sacrifice by those sent forth as representatives has to be made, it seems proper that there should be something like equality in sacrifice. Hence it is that the members are called upon to consecrate their earthly substance. And that there may be system and order in financial, as well as in other matters, men are set apart to receive and disburse the means received.

The system of tithing, as held by the Reorganized Church, is not oppressive, though a compliance therewith may be a trial of faith. That it is just and benevolent is seen from the fact of its being taken from where it is not wanted and placed where it is wanted, not only for the ministry, but for the sick, infirm, orphans and widows, and hence, for the general use of the Church, or so the law of God contemplates. And, while we have cause to praise God for our success, and for the bright prospects for the future, yet there is a necessity for a greater unity upon the question of finance, and a greater willingness to co-operate therein, for the consummation of which economy with the receiver and giver is absolute.

The misapplication of means in the past has been an excuse with many for holding back. If, in this particular, confidence is not yet restored, what must the Reorganized Church do to reach that desired object? If any body knows, let them rise, come to the front, and explain. Many of the struggling poor are willingly offering their mites, with burdened souls, because of inability to do more; while some of the more affluent are holding back, or giving sparingly, doing considerable croaking because so little is being done. Others are adding field to field, telling the Church to hold on until they get ready to donate a big pile. Others are giving time and money to perpetuate secret societies. Thus the Church is struggling like a heavily laden ship against wind and tide, and still she is destined to reach the port, for the Captain's at the helm. The alms and private donations may be dispensed by you at pleasure, but it would seem your first duty is to lodge your means as the Church directs.

There being an order for the appointing and directing of the ministry, I would suggest that you are under no obligation to receive any, as representatives, who refuse to give evidence of their appointment by and recognition of the Church. We hope, by God's blessing, to see the work extend. And injustice is done to none in observing the order of the Church as a preventive to imposition; and none who mean right are injured thereby.

The harvest here, as elsewhere, is great, and the laborers few; but this should not discourage or deter us from having faith in God and doing our duty, for that is the road to salvation. Few as we are, when compared with the population of Colorado, we exceed in number, and ought to be by experience and the many evidences of God's goodness, with a promise of its continuance, if we abide, as well at least to cope with the opposition of a single state, as the six were who composed the Church in 1830 to cope with the whole world. Let us remember that it is not only how we may sing, preach, or pray, but our other acts will also go to make up the record of our lives. Let us then strive to do our part, without growing weary. The body is not one but many members, and may aspire to and reach salvation, as a heart religion (which we may all have) gives the victory.

I come to you in much weakness and trembling, with neither natural nor acquired ability to fascinate with the fire of eloquence, but not, thank God, without evidence of the validity of his cause, and to make plain the old, primitive gospel, evading vagaries, which have had their origin through aspiring men. Other suggestions might be offered, but I forbear, hoping you will feel free to suggest what you may think for good, that we may have joy to-day, and in subsequent time conferring and laboring together; and as time flies, so may our folly depart, bringing an increase of union and peace, I will ever pray Yours in the covenant of peace,

JAMES CAFFALL.

Ancient Art.

AN exchange, speaking of the English proposition for a systematic and competent exploration of the seats of the ancient empire in western Asia, says: "The success which has attended the exploration of Palestine and the limited research that has been made in other parts of Asia Minor give assurance of grand discoveries to result from such an enterprise. Speaking of the relics already possessed, throwing light on the ancient Babylonian empire, the London Globe remarks that they cannot but fill with astonishment any one who will take the trouble to examine them, showing, as they do, that in an age of the world which we are accustomed to regard as an age of all but universal darkness and savagery, there flourished a degree of learning and civilization which seems in many respects to have been but little behind our own. It is really startling to find a library catalogue compiled some four thousand years ago, appended to which is a direction to the student to write down and hand to the librarian the number of the book he wishes to consult, just as he would have to do to-day at the British Museum or the Guildhall library. There are now in the collection at Bloomsbury, Assyrian bas-reliefs testifying to an extinct but advanced civilization to an extent of which comparatively few persons have any idea."

Which leads us to make a deprecatory remark or two. "The age in which we live" has advanced in natural science more than in any thing else. We have our steamboats, railroads, telegraphs, telephones, steel bridges, and a million others. The earth is no longer flat. We travel round and round it, until its finiteness becomes a symbol of infinity. We count the stars and tell their seasons. From the smallest to the greatest of nature's magnificences, the constant developments of science are opening golden doors. Algebra and the telescope prophesy the comet; and the microscope shows us the wonders of a gnat's heel. Ere long, the spy may walk among us, with a little phonograph in his pocket, and repeat our private conversations in our own voices. The greatest discovery that we have made is that nature is undiscoverable. Her "wonders never cease."

But in aesthetics, the ancients were not a little behind our age, but in advance of it. Considering the scientific knowledge which we have and they had not, their superiority is beyond calculation.

The most beautiful architecture of to-day is the every-day architecture of ancient Greece. The only real departure from it is the Gothic; and even that, in its mediæval ruggedness, is sublime beside our Mansard roofs and pigeonhole towers. The ruins of a more ancient architecture, the Egyptian, show massive stones at a height where human ingenuity can not put them now. Who can make a Damascus blade? There is not in the world to-day, a library like that of ancient Alexandria. Every discovery that is made among those "ruins of the past" shows little subtleties of art which we can not compass. Even our laws are those of ancient empires, modified only by constantly recurring necessities, and softened by the influences of a higher religion.

The more we look back, and the more we look forward, the more modest we will be. Our ignorance of the lost arts may be as great a misfortune to us as to Archimedes was his ignorance of the steam engine. Our forward look shows us a universe that is still unknown, into whose mysterious depths we are creeping every day. In this progress, "the light of other days" will help us vastly; and it will shine on us to the end.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Immortality of the Soul.

In the Herald, of October 15th, I see an article under the above caption, which states "that the resurrection is the result of an obedience to the laws of the gospel;" "that it can never take place until the gospel is obeyed." Then, of course, all would have to obey the gospel, or all would not be resurrected. To the above statements we are constrained to differ, as they seem to be entirely conflicting with the word of God, which teaches plainly that all will be resurrected independent of any act of obedience or disobedience, on their part, to the gospel law. That one of the glories will be peopled with those who "received not the gospel of Christ, neither the testimony of Jesus."—D. C. 76:7. In support of this position, we invite attention to Book of Mormon, 2d Nephi 6:5:

"And all men become incorruptible and immortal, and they are living souls, having a perfect knowledge like unto us in the flesh; save it be that our knowledge shall be perfect; wherefore we shall have a perfect knowledge of all our guilt," etc.

"Do you look forward with an eye of faith, and view this mortal body raised in immortality, and this corruption raised in incorruption, to stand before God, to be judged according to the deeds which have been done in the mortal body."—Alma 8:3.

"Now there is a death which is the temporal death; and the death of Christ [not obedience to the gospel] shall loose the bands of this temporal death, that all shall be raised from this temporal death; the spirit and the body shall be reunited again in its perfect form. * * * and we shall be brought to stand before God."—Alma 8:10.

"And it shall come to pass that the spirits of the wicked, yea, who are evil; for behold, they have no part nor portion of the Spirit of the Lord: * * * shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping, and wailing and gnashing of teeth. * * * Now this is the state of the souls of the wicked; yea, in darkness [not in the light of the gospel], * * * thus they remain in this state as well as the righteous in paradise until the time of their resurrection."—Alma 9:6.

"Therefore, as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life."—Rom. 5:18.

Hence all men will be resurrected through the grace of Christ, every man in his own order, the saints of God in all ages to glory celestial; those who "afterwards" received the gospel in the spirit world to glory terrestrial; and those who never receive it on earth, neither in the prison-house, to a glory celestial, this all comprising the resurrection of the just and the unjust.

A Great Evil.

THE foe of American social life is in the tendency to luxury and effeminacy among the well-to-do young women of our American cities and large towns. They do not realize how this dreadful mania for expensive pleasures, and a life of alternate idleness and amusement, is destroying their health, abolishing true marriage, feeding the flame of gross sensuality and intemperance among young men, and saddening the hopes of the best parents in the land. Some of them will never know it in this world. But most of them have no real purpose to waste their lives in this wretched way. And it is a high crime in mothers, teachers, ministers of religion and the public press to pander to this insanity. Thousands of good-hearted young girls are sacrificed every year when a little wise and loving guidance would save them. But we feel that they should be told that unless they change this life they will pass away like the flowers of June, and a more hardy and resolute class occupy their places.

American society will shed every class of triflers, male or female, that does not do its work, as the forests shed their withered leaves. Let them awake from their dream of social indulgencies; learn to live out of doors; to build up their health; to cultivate more simple tastes in dress, and more moderation in pleasure; study domestic economy; study social skill and tact; fit themselves for the noblest positions ever offered to their sex, and learn that woman is the soul of American life and not the tinsel on its garment.

President Hayes' Message.

THE annual message of President R. B. Hayes to the Forty-sixth Congress of the United States, contains the following notice of and recommendations concerning the territory of Utah and the crime of polygamy.

"The continued deliberate violation by a large number of the prominent and influential citizens of the Territory of Utah of the laws of the United States for the prosecution and punishment of polygamy demands the attention of every department of the Government. This Territory has a population sufficient to entitle it to admission as a State. The general interests of the Nation, as well as the welfare of the citizens of the Territory, require its advance from the Territorial form of Government to the responsibilities and privileges of a State. This important change will not, however, be approved by the country while the citizens of Utah, in very considerable number, uphold a practice which is condemned as a crime by the laws of all civilized communities throughout the world. The law for the suppression of this offense was enacted with great unanimity by Congress more than seventeen years ago but has remained until recently a dead letter in the territory of Utah because of the peculiar difficulties attending its enforcement. The opinion widely prevailed among the citizens of Utah that the law was in contravention of the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom.

"This objection is now removed. The Supreme Court of the United States has decided the law to be within the legislative power of Congress, and binding, as a rule of action, for all who resided within the Territories. There is no longer any reason for delay or hesitation in its enforcement. It should be firmly and effectively executed. If not sufficiently stringent in its provisions, it should be amended, and in aid of the purpose in view, I recommend that more comprehensive and more searching methods for preventing as well as punishing this crime be provided.

"If necessary to secure obedience to the law, the enjoyment and exercise of the rights and privileges of citizenship in the Territories of the United States may be withheld or withdrawn from those who violate or oppose the enforcement of the law on this subject."

THE INDIANS.

The President relates the situation between the Government and the Indians; and, after mentioning the two cases of difficulty with them, one in Colorado and one in New Mexico, as heretofore reported in our News Summary, he says:

"While these occurrences, in which a comparatively small number of Indians were engaged, are most deplorable, a vast majority of our Indian population have fully justified the expectations of those who believe that by humane and peaceful influences the Indian can be led to abandon his habits of savage life, and to develop a capacity for useful and civilized occupations. What they have already accomplished is shown in the pursuit of agricultural and mechanical work. The remarkable success which has attended the experiment of employing as freighters a class of Indians hitherto counted among the wildest and most intractable, and the general and urgent desire expressed by them for the education of their children, may be taken as sufficient proof that they will be found capable of accomplishing much more if they continue to be wisely and fairly guided.

The Indian policy sketched in the report of the Secretary of the Interior, the object of which is to make liberal provision for the education of Indian youth, to settle the Indians upon farm lots in severalty, to give them title in fee to their farms inalienable for a certain number of years, and when their wants are thus provided for to dispose by sale of the lands on their reservations not occupied and used by them, a fund to be formed out of the proceeds for the benefit of the Indians, which will gradually relieve the Government of the expenses now provided for by annual appropriations, must commend itself as just and beneficial to the Indians, and as also calculated to remove those obstructions which the existence of large reservations presents to the settlement and development of the country.

"I therefore earnestly recommend the enactment of a law enabling the Government to give Indians a title in fee inalienable for twenty-five years to the farm lands assigned them by allotment.

I also repeat the recommendation in my first annual message that a law be passed admitting Indians who can give satisfactory proof of having, by their own labor, supported their families for a number of years, and who are willing to detach themselves from their tribal relations, to the benefit of the Homestead act, and to grant them patents containing the same provision of inalienability for a certain period.

"The experiment of sending a number of Indian children of both sexes to the Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute in Virginia to receive elementary English education and practical instruction in farming and other useful industries, has led to results so promising, that it was thought expedient to turn over the cavalry barracks at Carlisle, in Pennsylvania, to the Interior Department for the establishment of an Indian school on a larger scale. This school has now 158 pupils, selected from various tribes, and is in full operation. Arrangements are also made for the education of a number of Indian boys and girls belonging to tribes on the Pacific slope in a similar manner, at Forest Grove, in Oregon. These institutions will commend themselves to the liberality of Congress and to the philanthropic munificence of the American people.

"Last spring information was received of the organization of an extensive movement in the Western States, the object of which was the occupation by unauthorized persons of certain lands in the Indian Territory ceded by the Cherokees to the Government for the purpose of settlement by other Indian tribes. On the 29th of April I issued a proclamation warning all persons against participation in such an attempt, and by the co-operation of a military force the invasion was promptly checked. It is my purpose to protect the rights of the Indian inhabitants of that Territory to the full extent of the Executive; but it would be unwise to ignore the fact that a Territory so large and so fertile, with a population so sparse, and so great a wealth of unused resources, will be found more exposed to the repetition of such attempts as happened this year when the surrounding States were most densely settled, and the westward movement of our population looks still more eagerly for fresh lands to occupy.

"Under such circumstances the difficulty of maintaining the Indian Territory in its present state will greatly increase, and the Indian tribes inhabiting it would do well to prepare for such a contingency. I therefore fully approve of the advice given to them by the Secretary of the Interior on a recent occasion to divide among themselves, in severalty, as large a quantity of their lands as they can cultivate, to acquire individual title in fee, instead of their present tribal ownership in common, and consider in what manner the balance of their lands may be disposed of by the Government for their benefit. By adopting such a policy they would more certainly secure to themselves the value of their possessions, and at the same time promote their progress in civilization and prosperity than by endeavoring to perpetuate the present state of things in the Territory."

Ancient America.

DR. J. M. PEBBLES, in a recent lecture in San Francisco upon the above subject, took occasion to say that his face once crimsoned in Egypt when asked by a scholarly native engaged in the Cairo Museum how the buried and half buried cities of Central America and the pyramidal ruins of Yucatan and southern Mexico compared with those of Egypt. The lesson was: "Visit and study the wonders of your own country before traversing foreign lands." The speaker pronounced the railroad from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico a splendid specimen of engineering. The Aztec Anahuac, the vale of the Montezumas, has an area of some 600 square miles. It was the sunny home of the old Aztecs. The Aztec and Toltec relics preserved in the City Museum of Mexico were intensely interesting, inasmuch as they establish the fact of maritime relations and inter-oceanic intercourse between the Toltecs and the Phoenicians and Egyptians. As the Laurentian rocks, far to the north of us, constitute the oldest range of rocks in the world; as Cholula is considered the oldest pyramidal structure known, why may it not be true that this is the old world, and that the Egyptians learned pyramid building from the ancient Americans of this continent? "I saw," said the speaker, "carved upon templed ruins in Yucatan, hawks' and other birds' heads similar to those upon the temples, tombs and obelisks of Egypt. Among the ruins of Uxmal and Palenque I saw the carved cross and the same phalic symbols so common in India, Phoenecia and the East; and I further saw the chiseled serpent, the mummy-shaped sarcophagus, the winged rod and the lamp immortal, so frequently seen in Egyptian tombs and temples. Few men of research doubt the existence and sinking of the Atlantis Isle; doubt that there were commercial relations in ancient times between this country, Toltecs probably, and the old nations of Europe and Asia. Strabo, living before Christ, said 'that the art of night-sailing was taught in ancient Tyre.' This indicates a knowledge of the mariners' compass. Possibly the second expedition sent out by Necho II, an ancient Egyptian king, reached this continent. The first expedition of this king sailed down the Indian Ocean, doubled the Cape, and entered the Pillars of Hercules. The ancients in some respects equaled if not excelled us. The Aztecs conquered the Toltecs and then adopted more or less of their arts and sciences. The calender stone that now rests against the side of the Roman Catholic Cathedral in the City of Mexico is a Toltec rather than an Aztec production. Is it asked, 'Who were the Toltecs?' They were the descendants of the Nahuas, and this was a conglomerate nationality, made up of the autochthonic races and the remnants of those who peopled the Atlantis Isle. Traveling in Yucatan is hardly safe and very inconvenient. Merida, the capital, has but one hotel, and that is kept by a Spaniard. It is sixty-five miles from Merida to Uxmal. The Maya Indians in these regions are friendly, but the southern tribes are warlike."—Pacific Rural Press.

Baptism.

WHAT a glory shines in this ordinance of God's house, when we look at it in the pure and undistorted light of God's word, rather than through the clouds of human device. It is, in the one case, luminous with the resplendent and immortal truth of our holy faith—the death, burial and resurrection of Christ; and the symbolic death and burial of the believer to the world, and his resurrection to a new life of holiness in his Redeemer; while, in the other, it is, at best, a barren offshoot from the dead tree of Jewish ceremony; a meaningless and variable sign of an outward adherence to some form of Christianity. Let us rejoice that the Bible reveals to us, unmistakably, notwithstanding these clouds and films, a divine and significant ordinance; a fitting part of that sacred Trinity of our religion, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism."

THERE come times to us when we hardly know which way to turn, or in which direction to look for aid. No man or woman lives to middle life without going through some hard places. Bitter experiences come to the heart. Dear ones are taken away. Riches are dissipated. The trusted prove unworthy of confidence, and the soul is like a ship beaten off the wind and tossed. But there is always one way to look. Look up! There, far above the black clouds, forever shines the blue. There somewhere out of sight, but inexpressibly near to the frail one who seeks His help, is the Friend who is ever waiting to be gracious.

When any great loss or sudden pain comes unawares upon us we are apt to forget everything else for the time but our own intense suffering. The skies may be as blue and the fields as green as ever, but for us they wear a different hue. The brook whose bubble over the stones was once music to the ear, has now a mournful sound. Nature sympathizes with our moods, smiling with our joys and mourning with our sorrows.

THE more the Christian enjoys of his God, the more he is concerned to bring others to enjoy the same.

In doing the Lord's work, we may expect the Lord's smile.

Saints' Herald

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.
HENRY A. STEBBINS, ASSISTANT.

Plano, Illinois, January 1st, 1880.

SALUTATORY.

In beginning the present volume of the HERALD, we do so with a degree of pleasure that we do not often experience.

The long pressure of doubt and uncertainty respecting the business interests of the country which necessarily affected the Saints, the HERALD and the general work, has been gradually, but surely removing. The upward turn of the wave has begun; and unless something unforeseen occurs to destroy the fair hopes of the sanguine, the period of prosperity will for a time continue. We hope that the Saints in participating in the general good coming to the land, will remember the HERALD.

The spiritual condition of the Church has been improving. It should have been no wonder that in the outset of the Reorganization, and for some years after, if the effort was to continue so long, there should be a reign of unsettled spirituality; that men, and women too, should unite with the church who would not endure unto the end; who would be "lovers of pleasure," and would in the service of self drift into unregenerate habits again from which they had once been made free. Many such have been eliminated, and now the spiritual atmosphere is growing clearer. The fresh invigorating impulses of the Spirit are at work—not in isolated places, as at the first, but generally, in all the places where the gospel has been taken and where there have been converts made. Further than all this, there were many of the old-time Saints, that in the "dark and cloudy day" had gathered unto themselves some idiosyncracies of character and doctrine, which seemed to them to be regular and proper according to the word as delivered to them, but which after years of wear and tear proved fallacious, or unimportant; and these have had to be assimilated, or absorbed with the whole lump of the law; or the Saints freed from them. This was a work of time. But time has been lending a plastic hand to the effort, and an increased activity and a greater degree of strength have been developed—we have been growing, and from the appearance all round the religious horizon just in time to be ready for the higher position before us as a people.

Pleasant news from London, England, brings the assurance that there, also, the work has assumed proportions of greater stability. The unwavering fidelity of those upon whom the burden has been resting for the past few years; the unflinching persistence with which the elders have maintained the standard truths of Mormonism proper, have at length begun to tell upon the world. The natural result has followed, the men stand more firmly than ever; the principles of the faith are made more honorable, and dearer to them and more bearable and attractive to others.

The Church in Utah, now the only opposing element of the Church (Mormon) militant that the Reorganization has to contend with, and before which we have stood in warlike attitude for years, must soon face the issues we have raised against her, whether she will or will not. Those issues are being plainly set forth by the Elders whom we have sent to Utah, and are receiving the notice of those within and without. It will soon come that we cannot be safely ignored; that passive, "masterly inactivity," sometimes good strategy will not avail against the truths we are pushing forward, they must and will be heard.

The work in the Canadas is likely to revive under the administration of Bro. W. H. Kelley and his co-workers; while in the United States at large it is doing well. In every state, where the Elders have been laboring there is manifest a great desire to hear. In the south and southeast Brn. H. C. Smith, J. H. Hansen, J. W. Bryan and D. H. Bays have set the foundations of the work, in the old and in many new places, and the spirit of inquiry there is also ripe.

There is a far better understanding between the different corps of workers than heretofore existed, and much that was vexing has been solved, or so near an approximation reached that the intermediate barriers do not separate. But we can not yet say "All is well in Zion." There is and has been in some localities a disposition manifested to dominate opposition by a use of the clerical knife, and some have been "cut off," who might have been saved by careful forbearance. It is a fearful responsibility to assume, that of passing judgment upon a fellow man's goodness; and declaring whether Christ will fellowship him or not. Not only this, but sometimes it occurs that men are excluded because they tenaciously cling to their own opinions; a failing that we applaud as a virtue when the same men stand before the world to defend the faith. If "charity covereth a multitude of sins," we should spread the mantle over the believing. We have often thought and now think, that we expect too much of one another. We did not, however, begin to write to find fault but to cheer; therefore, we pass this by until another and more fitting opportunity.

The turmoil of the elements, the rapid changes in public sentiment, the unrest and disquiet in political circles, the strange and universal shaking of thrones and powers are all of them striking tokens indicating that the times of trouble before the end are at hand; and besides this, that the era when events rapidly succeeding each other everywhere indicating the universality with which the light and truth of freedom are spreading, is also upon us—not at the doors—but actually upon us. These enable us to see, that the divine purpose of God as announced in the closing sentences of the "Revelation to Moses," found in the opening of the Inspired Translation, to "bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man," has not been forgotten; and that in every nation "he that feareth him and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." How grandly then looms up the work of God—not a narrow and sectarian work—but a widely reaching work of redemption worthy of God and god-like men. In this spirit do we salute the Saints, and in this spirit present the Herald to them for their support, moral, mental and material.

BURNS, the Scotch poet, once wrote:

"Oh, would some power the giftie gie us,
To see ourselves as others see us,
It would from many a blunder free us,

It begins to be monotonous, though a trifle quizzical, for men of the Church engaged in the "work of God," having their "hearts in the work," to write letters to us telling how much they love the work, and exhorting the brethren to help "roll the work on;" when some of these same men will not so far help us in our part of it as to send us a statement of the books, tracts and other matter in their hands belonging to the office, which they are holding and selling for the office. Out of quite a large number of agents, to whom the secretary has made direct application for a statement of what they had remaining on hand and unsold, notwithstanding that good business principles make it their duty to report at least once in six months, three or four have responded. What is the matter with our agents? Are they all defaulters, having sold the books, and now keeping the proceeds? Have they sold them to this one and that one on credit; and are those to whom they sold them keeping both money and books? Or, which is what we think about it, is it simply for the want of taking a little time and pains?

Come now, brethren, all of you who have been acting as agents for the Herald Office, and who have not reported within three months past, please report to us at once, whatever you may have on hand, belonging to the office unsold, by January first, without fail.

We want all presiding elders, (district or branch), all traveling elders, and all agents for the office, to canvas for subscribers. We shall print for January from one to two hundred extra HERALDS to supply specimen numbers. Get us by January 15th, five hundred more subscribers. Our types and mailing machines just fairly ache this cold weather to be serving a big list of HERALD readers. Send them in. Send the money if you can; but don't fail to get and send the names, if they can pay after awhile.

By advices from Bro. W. W. Blair, dated December 2d, we learned that on Monday the 1st, he and his co-laborers had organized the Utah mission of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; W. W. Blair, Presiding Elder; Robert Warnock, Financial Agent; and Joseph Foreman, Secretary.

The local secular press of Salt Lake City, thus notices the opening discourses of Brn. Charles Derry and Joseph Luff:

THE PREACHING AT THE INSTITUTE.

Elders Derry and Luff delivered two ringing discourses on Sunday afternoon and evening at the Liberal Institute; and we have to congratulate our law-defending friends, the Josephite Mormons, upon having in their fold two such thoroughly trained and effective speakers. (They may give the credit wherever they think best. We of Babylon must be allowed to treat of men and speakers as they impress us). In the afternoon Elder Derry discoursed upon the Liberty of the Gospel, taking for his text the words: "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. Abide in the truth, and the truth shall make you free." This gentleman has a clear and forcible delivery and a coherent flow and sequence of thought and ideas quite unusual in our experience of Mormon pulpit oratory. He has a voice of remarkable volume and smoothness, every intonation of which gives token of a manly, sympathetic and independent mind. The truly eloquent discourse of Elder Derry, cogent in reason, rich in illustration, and so fervently impressive in its whole tone and spirit, will not soon be forgotten by those who heard it.

In the evening Elder Luff addressed a full house upon the subject of the Utah Apostasy, giving a most searching and scathing analysis of the so-called revelation on Celestial Marriage. As an extemporaneous religious speaker Elder Luff is at once to be noted as one of a thousand. His rousing discourse on Sunday must have drawn forth rounds of uproarious applause, had the feeling of impropriety not stayed the demonstration. The feeling to applaud though subdued and held back was emphatic and unmistakable, and it was evident that this young, graceful and energetic speaker carried the full sympathies of his audience with him. His whole soul is clearly enlisted in the work he has in hand. Coming from a source which calls itself Mormon, the exhibition, on Sunday, of combined mental and moral power, with an unaffected modesty and charity, was something here at Salt Lake at once unprecedented and reassuring.—Tribune.

The editorial comment closes thus:

"The warfare these elders are waging must arouse the attention of the people. Their convincing arguments and keen logic can not be whistled down the wind. Truth is mighty and will prevail; and unless the arguments they are addressing to "this people" can be confuted with counter argument, they will win the minds of their hearers, and there will be nothing to oppose their triumph. They have laid the axe to the root of the tree, and unless its edge can be blunted, this monarch of the mountains will fall."

We have been fighting against terrible odds for these many years for the privilege of being "heard for our cause;" and now feel very thankful that the discovery is being made; that however mad and distraught we may have been, there have been earnestness and method in our madness.

How gratifying is the thought that the same supervising spirit and power that watched over the elders at the rise of the Church a half century ago, and made the boys whom God called men, still provides the mental and moral force that strengthens the men of the Reorganization.

How significant the suggestion, "coming from a source calling itself Mormon, the exhibition of mental and moral power," which is made in reference to our brethren.

It now remains for us who stay at home to be sedulously maintaining the character of loving, law abiding, devoted and faithful christians—followers of Christ, in order to supplement with strength the labors of the elders abroad. Let the old causes of complaint, of which for redress appeals have been long since made to the last court of resort, the final judgment, be and abide the issue of such appeal. The mobbings in Missouri, Ohio, and Illinois are all of them, with the rights and wrongs of both sides of the controversy in the hands of divine arbiters; and it is unbecoming in men to be recalling what has by them been finally appealed. Redress for many of the wrongs said to have been inflicted upon the Saints can not be made by any method known to human jurisprudence; and no secular government could in justice reinstate men, who have themselves bartered away their rights of redress. For instance, many of those driven from Missouri after having acquired title to their lands, sold those lands for recompence; and whether the price were large or small the title passed beyond recovery. It may be true that some sold under duress and by constraint, but the number of these is comparatively few. We made the attempt years ago to look into this matter and found that not a sufficient number of titles to land once held by Saints in Missouri remained in the right of the Saints to warrant an outlay to recover; notwithstanding the fact that the courts were open to all legal claimants. Besides this, the successive appeals for redress were made until the final appeal to the Lord of Sabaoth was taken; and unless he has abdicated, or has been dethroned, we feel it to be our bounden duty, as well as essential to the final determination of that sacred tribunal, to rest our case there.

So far as the martyrs and the shedding of their blood with all the treachery and cruelty manifested during those troublous times, are concerned, no power at the command of the state of Illinois, or the United States can reinstate in life those men. The mischief that was wrought by the cruelty of their killing has been taken note of by the higher and better powers of a superior government, and shall be made to add to the weight of glory of which the afflicted and oppressed shall be found worthy in the day when final adjustment shall be made. Our work now lies largely along the very paths trod by these two men and their compeers in gospel labor, while yet they were unitedly pursuing the mission to which they were called; and within the limits of which, while they devotedly and sincerely kept themselves there, the Spirit of the Master, Christ, was with them. In these paths we, their successors that should be, may safely tread, with benefit to mankind that dwell by their sides and with honor to ourselves, if we journey in them in humility, humanely, and without bitterness of spirit. And in doing this, the same Spirit of the same wonderously tender and careful Master, The Christ, is with us. How then can we afford, brethren of Christ, to darken the sky of promise by constantly keeping the gloom of those dark and stormy days between us and the Sun of Righteousness and Peace that has risen upon us. No, let those who choose so to do, still flaunt the misdeeds and wrongs against the Saints, in the faces of those whom the gospel of these latter days was sent to reclaim and redeem; but let us who hope to win and wear an honest crown as "saviors of men," not carry this useless burden of accusation to hamper and destroy our usefulness. Bro. William Redfield, now at rest, while living near the northern border of Missouri, once during the late war found a lot of refugees from that state camped near his farm. He went among them and enquired where they were from. One of them speaking for the rest, told him that they were from one of the counties about Jackson; and added, "We once drove the Mormons out of that country, and now we are ourselves driven out. And for my part, I believe it serves us right." Bro. Redfield thought the matter over a little while and then told them that he was one of the men that was driven with his family out of that country; that he was still a Mormon; that he owned the farm where they were camped; that he felt for them in their distress, and offered them what hospitalities his premises afforded and they needed. Here was a grand opportunity to have remembered in bitterness of spirit and harshness of hate the wrongs of the Saints; and to have retaliated upon those who confessed to having participated in that driving from the state; but no, the Spirit of the Master was there; and the disciple, remembering what the Master had said, "Ye shall forgive all men," wept with pity for their distresses, and offered a share of his comforts to them. Such a moment, in which to manifest to his Lord that he was not a forgetful hearer, was worth a lifetime of waiting for.

Saints let the Lord remember, but let us forgive; and suffering our remembrance of those deplorable scenes to be among the things that are forgotten, let us rise up to the grandeur and greatness of the occasion; for now is the hour come to manifest the sublimity of a purer faith and better religion which the world has waited for and sadly needs. And though it may come by a source that is called Mormon, may it soon cease to be a wonder that the name of Saint is made honorable in the sight of men, of angels, of Christ and of God.

THE MORMON CIRCULAR.

TEXT OF THE DOCUMENT SENT BY SECRETARY EVARTS TO OUR DIPLOMATIC OFFICERS ABROAD.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 18th.—The following is the text of the circular letter of instruction of the Secretary of State to the diplomatic officers of the United States in the various countries from which Mormon emigrants come to this country. Although stated in substance some weeks ago, the State Department has not until now felt at liberty to make the circular public in its entirety:

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 9th, 1879.—Sir: The annual statistics of emigration into the United States show that large numbers of emigrants come to our shores every year from the various countries of Europe for the avowed purpose of joining the Mormon community at Salt Lake, in the Territory of Utah, under the auspices and guidance of the emissaries and agents of that community in foreign parts. This representation of the interests of Mormonism abroad, which has been carried on for years, is understood to have developed unusual activity of late, especially in —, among other countries where it has unfortunately obtained a greater or less foothold. The system of polygamy which is prevalent in the community of Utah is largely based upon and promoted by these accessions from Europe, drawn mainly from the ignorant classes, who are easily influenced by the double appeal to their passions and their poverty, held out in the flattering picture of a home in the fertile and prosperous regions where Mormonism has established its material seat. Inasmuch as the practice of polygamy is based on a form of marriage by which additional wives are "sealed" to men of that community, these so-called "marriages" are pronounced by the laws of the United States to be crimes against statutes of the country, and punishable as such.

On the 1st of July, 1862, the Congress of the United States passed an act expressly designed, as appears from its title, "To punish and prevent the practice of polygamy in the Territories of the United States and other places," etc. That act remains the law of the land as to its continuing provisions, which, in the revision of the Statutes of the United States made in 1874, read as follows:

"Sec. No. 5,352.—Every person having a husband or wife living who marries another, whether married or single, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, is guilty of bigamy, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500, and by imprisonment for a term not exceeding more than three years. But this section shall not extend to any person by reason of any former marriage whose husband or wife by such marriage is absent for five successive years and is not known to such person to be living, nor to any person by reason of any former marriage which has been dissolved by decree of a competent court, nor to any person by reason of any former marriage which has been pronounced void by decree of a competent court on the ground of nullity of the marriage contract."

Whatever doubt, if any, has heretofore existed as to the efficiency of the law above cited, and the intent of the General Government to enforce it, has now been terminated by the recent decision of the Supreme Court, the highest judicial tribunal of the land, sustaining the constitutionality of the legislation and affirming the conviction and punishment of offenders against that law.

Under whatever specious guise the subject may be presented by those engaged in investigating the European movement to swell the numbers of the law-defying Mormons of Utah, the bands and organizations which are got together in foreign lands as recruits, can not be regarded as otherwise than a deliberate and systematic attempt to bring persons to the United States with the intent of violating their laws and committing crimes expressly punishable under the statutes as penitentiary offenses.

No friendly Power will, of course, knowingly lend its aid even indirectly, to attempts made within its borders against the laws and government of a country wherewith it is at peace, with established terms of amity and reciprocal relations of treaty between them; while, even were there no question involved of open and penal infraction of the laws of the land every consideration of comity should prevail to prevent the territory of a friendly State from becoming a resort or refuge for the crowds of misguided men and women whose offense against morality and decency would be intolerable in the land from whence they come.

It is not doubted, therefore, that when the subject is brought to its attention, the Government of — will take such steps as may be compatible with its laws and usages to check the organization of these criminal enterprises by agents who are thus operating beyond the reach of the law of the United States, and to prevent the departure of those proposing to come hither as violators of the law, by engaging in such criminal enterprises, by whomsoever instigated.

You are instructed, therefore, to present the matter to the Government of —, through the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and to urge earnest attention to it, in the interest not merely of a faithful execution of the law of the United States, but of the peace, good order, and morality which are cultivated and sought to be promoted by all civilized countries. You will fortify your representations on the subject by the citation of any facts which may come to your notice concerning emigration of this character from —, and to this end the consular officers in your jurisdiction have been instructed to communicate to you what information with regard thereto may come to their knowledge. Your timely protest in cases where the probable departure of Mormon emigrants is reported or known to you would probably prove a weighty auxiliary to the general representations you are now instructed to make. You are also authorized in your discretion to call attention to this subject, and the determined purpose of this Government to enforce this law and eradicate this institution, through the public press of the principal cities or parts of the country, as you may find it useful toward the end in view. I desire to be informed of the steps taken by you under these instructions, and of the disposition shown in reference to the same by the Government to which you are accredited.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM M. EVARTS.

SOME time ago, one of the brethren sent us the published text of the circular letter of Secretary Evarts' to foreign powers, upon the Mormon question. We at first thought that we would publish it in the HERALD, and afterward thought that we would not. Subsequently, a statement made by George Q. Cannon, polygamous delegate to Congress from Utah, in connection with what was said lately at Provo, by Pres. John Taylor, determines us to put the circular in print. The dispatches of Dec. 4th, state that Mr. John Taylor, in a sermon preached at Provo, Utah, said,

"There is a principle in connection with our social life—one of the greatest principles advanced by the Lord for the good of the human family—with which one of the laws of the land is at variance. We know that the Lord has transmitted the law of plural marriages through his holy priesthood. I know it, and all the decrees and edicts of the world can not change my mind. This question regarding our religious belief has been decided by the courts, and the laws of God are at variance with them. Which shall we obey?" The writer of the telegram concludes by saying that the congregation voted by raising their right hands to support the law of God rather than the law of the United States."

This dispatch was shown to Mr. Cannon and in answer to the question as to what the result would be, if the Government should adopt and use stringent measures against polygamy, he said

"He didn't know what his people might do if they were crowded. There are about 150,000 Mormons in Utah, of whom 30,000 are men. Of these, perhaps 4,500 are polygamists. Against this handful of men, then, the Government of the United States is directing the tremendous engine of its power, and is attempting to lead public opinion in the same direction."

Here is a most suggestive statement in this conflict between Utah and the United States. Perhaps 4500 men of the 30,000 men in Utah are polygamists; and because of this handful of transgressors, the spectacle is presented of a government practically held at bay in the absolute execution of its statutory enactments, upon the plea that what is adjudged by the law as their crime is in reality their religion, which the said government is not only bound to tolerate, but to foster and protect.

The statement made by Pres. John Taylor that the "Lord for the good of the human family" advanced" the "law of plural marriages" through the holy priesthood, lacks proof, decidedly. And in the absence of proof, the statement of Mr. Cannon that less than one-sixth of the men in Utah are benefitted by this advancement, shows considerable near sightedness in either the one giving the law; or an inadequate conception of its wondrous benefits by the remaining five sixths of the men of Mormondom. The question between the law of the Lord and the law of the land, so far as Mormons are concerned, was long since settled, by a far more authentic, "thus saith the Lord," than can possibly be shown for this plural marriage permission, for it seems now to have fallen to the status of a permission rather than a command, when it was stated "he that keepeth the law of God, hath no need to break the law of the land."

Mr. Cannon is the actual representative of less than one-fifth of the Mormon men of Utah; who represents the rest? He sits in a Congress representing several millions of monogamists; who, by themselves or their predecessors, have enacted laws declaring polygamy a crime; and yet he just such a criminal as is described in the law thus enacted, sits there representing a small lot of criminals like himself. While sitting there at the clemency of the laws that he is outraging, he calls Secretary Evarts' dignified circular, calling the attention of foreign powers and their constituents to the exact facts in the case, a weak effort.

1. That such a thing as polygamy is existent in the United States.
2. That propagandizing with that as a part of religious sentiment is going on in those countries to which this circular is addressed.
3. That the United States Government has taken cognizance of these things, and instead of canonizing polygamy by the law, has anathematized it as contrary to the genius of the nation, and destructive and dangerous in its tendencies, and therefore a crime.
4. That those now practicing it, or who may hereafter adopt its practice, do so with a knowledge of its criminality and are not ignorant and therefore not excusable for so breaking the law.
5. That all persons accepting the polygamie theory of religion as practiced in the territory of Utah, in any and all of the countries to whom this circular letter is addressed, may do so with a full knowledge of the fact of criminality attaching to it where it is to be practiced, that they may not be innocently made subject to the penalty to be incurred.
6. That the governments addressed will see to it that all persons emigrating to this country with a view to the practice of polygamy shall be informed of the existence of such laws in the United States, as make the practice of polygamy a crime, notwithstanding its religious claim.

Now, all this seems to be eminently proper. No man, or woman ought to be permitted to espouse a religion taught in the United States, any portion of which requires a breaking of the laws, without they are made acquainted with the facts.

We know how well and how persistently the cry of persecution, persecution, has been raised and maintained by all classes of Mormons. We know, too, how sometimes in the past the cry has been too well founded. But it seems to be time when a just discrimination should be made between "persecution for righteousness sake;" and that just proscription that is styled "persecution for evil doing." Against the latter there is no safe defense. In the present issue we sincerely hope that the Government, including Secretary Evarts and Congressman Willets, of Michigan to whom as chairman a certain bill touching polygamy is referred, are informed that polygamy can not be defended as legitimately a tenet of Mormonism. With this strongly ingrafted in their political heads, the way out seems to be clear.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Do NOT forget, we are still praying for the special providence we cited a few issues back. And we want a thousand, two thousand, ten thousand more subscribers. Bro. "A" sends seven, Bro. "B" sends three, and Bro. "C" five; that is right, brethren, send them along; we want the HERALD read, that is what we print them for. Send them in, send them in.

The license of Elder David Powell, given up to his quorum at last Fall Conference, has been restored to him; the misunderstanding and difficulty under which he lodged the same with his Quorum, having been removed upon inquiry by and statement from the Presidency, as provided in the case by order of conference as may be seen by the minutes of session. Bro. Powell is an honorable man and we wish him much success in the cause.

Bro. J. H. Lake baptized seven at Hannibal, Missouri, December 6th. He felt well in his work and expected to go into Brown county, Illinois, soon.

Sr. S. C. Harvey, of Kirtland, Ohio, expresses her thanks for the light of God enjoyed by her. She says that the few Saints there are firm in the faith. She relates the testimony of Martin Harris, as received by her from his own mother, concerning the translation of the Book of Mormon by the means of the Seer Stone, and he also described the interpreters, or large spectacles, as they seemed to be, and the engravings, also the manner of translating as described in a late HERALD letter. Sr. H. exhorts those of the Church who may have any doubt about the truth of the Book of Mormon to read, to study, to pray, and to strive earnestly and continuously for a knowledge of it.

Bro. J. C. Foss wrote from Machias, Me., Dec. 3d, that he baptized there Nov. 29th and on Thursday following another, an old man and full of years. The Saints of the Sea Side Branch, met and presented Bro. Foss, with a fine testimonial of their love and regard for which he hearty thanks them.

Bro. Joseph a Crawford writes from Farmington, Iowa, Dec. 10th that the Nauvoo and String Prairie District, is doing quite well. They hold a series of two days meeting noticed in our last, and will convene for counseling at an early day.

Bro. Mark Forscutt writes by card from Cleveland, Iowa: "I go from here to-morrow to Burlington. Have sown the good seed here on quite extensive ground. Its fruitage will be garnered hereafter."

Bro. John Eames, is still holding up the banner of the gospel at Cheyenne, Wyoming, and he has hopes of bringing some to know the truth. He has baptized an old-time member who wandered far in the dark day.

Bro. R. C. Elvin preached at Omaha, Nebraska, Sunday, December 14th. Thence he intended to go into Saline county, Nebraska, and thereabouts to preach during the winter, mostly in new fields. May his desires for heavenly aid and strength be graciously answered by the Father above, and may great good result from his labors.

Bro. E. C. Brand wrote from Virginia City, Montana, November 29th, of his having preached in the Methodist Chapel there the evening before. He expected to preach that night and the next day (Sunday) in the afternoon. The kindness of these Methodist friends is appreciated.

Bro. Charles Derry writes from Salt Lake City to Bro. Samuel Platt, of St. Louis, Missouri, Dec. 4th, feelingly and pleasantly of the opening efforts in that city. Bro. Derry is one of those into whose soul the iron penetrated, and who found excellent comfort from Christ in the Reorganization. We have labored with Bro. Charles Derry, waited, watched and prayed with him as a fellow soldier, and know that few nobler soldiers carry the banner of Christ.

Bro. James Caffall writes from Denver, Dec. 13th, that he and Bro. Kemp had been trying to get a foothold in Denver. But up to date, except a private house, no place for service had been secured. He proposed to make Denver headquarters, and then reach places within sixty miles as he could. He commends the Saints highly; and thinks that a "special providence" that would enable them to purchase a place of worship in Denver would be a desirable one now.

The readers of the HERALD will be pained to learn of the departure to the world beyond, of Bro. Louis Louis VanBuren, an early and constant reader and contributor to the HERALD. He died at his son Louis', on Indian Kentucky Creek, Indiana, November 13th, 1879, aged seventy-seven, a good and faithful man to the last. Bro. B. V. Springer sends us an obituary cut from a local paper, from which we learn of his demise.

ORDER OF ENOCH LANDS.

We all love pleasure and abhor sorrow. No one will choose a cloudy sky and a rough path; but these evils have their good parts and those who really long for peace and happiness will try to find out and extract them, instead of hurrying along resentfully or with forced gaiety.

One of the news journals of the day says: "The great popular want in Europe is food. Never was there a scarcity extending over as great an area, or so directly affecting so many millions of people. The loss of crops by the severity of the seasons, by protracted rainfalls, by storms, and by floods, has been unprecedented, and to this must be added the desolation of war in many of the best food-producing districts. The loss of trade, the stagnation of industry, the reduction of wages, have all given an extraordinary severity to the high prices of all articles of food.

8th.—A great exodus of Negroes from North Carolina is taking place. It is not due to political oppression, but to injustice concerning land-rents and road taxes, the land-owners having the benefit of a State law that gives them almost entire advantage over the renters. As for road taxes, the law reads that these renters may be called upon to work from three to thirty days on the road, or else pay a tax of one dollar per day, a terrible tax indeed. A prominent North Carolinian says of this exodus: "The loss of each colored laborer is a direct loss to the State of at least $150. The negroes are the only laborers that we have that are worth much. They raise nearly all the crops, and do the most of our work. If they leave us I don't see how we are to get along."

The Interior department has recently unearthed great frauds by Indian contractors in Arizona, who have been engaged in systematically swindling the Government out of large amounts by the false weighing of beef and supplying a quality of flour inferior to that required by their contracts.

An immense mass meeting was held yesterday at Castlereagh, Ireland, addressed by prominent agitators. A collision with the police was barely escaped.

Another detachment of troops has sailed from Spain for Cuba.

The Montenegrins and Albanians, in Southern Europe, had a heavy battle day before yesterday. The latter were victorious till the former were reinforced when they were sorely defeated.

Sir Austin Layard, British Ambassador at Constantinople, has received satisfactory intelligence from Asia Minor to the effect that affairs there have considerably improved, owing to the energy of Ottoman authorities.

9th.—The examination of the Ute Indians concerning the massacre at the White River Agency, held at Los Pinos, has closed, and, to the demand for the parties to the deed, their chiefs refused to give them up for trial unless the government would consent to their being taken to Washington for trial, for they say that all the Colorado people and officials are their enemies and will not deal justly by them. At one time the twenty-five Indians in the council room laid hands on their knives as if for war then and there, but the whites had their pistols ready and no conflict took place.

Brennan, the fourth Irish agitator arrested was examined yesterday at Castlebar was committed for trial and then released on bail.

Floods in Hungary are reported, and the cattle plague has broken out on the Island of Cyprus.

10th.—At Arbroath, Scotland, the mill and factory owners agreed to return to paying the same wages paid last January. The flax spinning works in Perthshire and Fifeshire will advance five per cent in wages.

Severe weather continues in Great Britain and on the Continent. Heavy snow-falls are reported throughout Germany and Austrian Switzerland, and from Paris, Madrid, Brussels, Florence, Bologna, Milan, Genoa, Venice, Verona, and Rome. The river Loire is frozen. The thermometer, indicating five degrees above zero at Paris, and in some of the suburbs 6 below. The Seine is frozen.

A steamer from Liverpool November 13th for Havana, capsized and sunk at sea. Six of the crew were drowned.

Trustworthy news from the counties of Sligo, Roscommon, Mayo, Leitrim, Galway, and a part of the counties of Cork, Kerry, Tipperary, Antrim, and Tyrone, Ireland, all unite in expressing a foreboding of the most terrible suffering during the coming winter by a fireless and foodless peasantry.

England is still having trouble in Afghanistan, and two brigades are marching against some armed natives.

A Spanish general commanding one department in Cuba proffers pardon to the remaining insurgents chiefs and men if they will surrender before December 15th.

The loss of vessels and men engaged in the fishery business on the New Foundland Banks has been greater this year than ever before, the number being 30 vessels and 262 men. Widows left 88, fatherless children 219. In one gale 13 vessels went down and 143 men were drowned.

The Government agrees that the murderous Utes shall not be tried in Colorado or New Mexico, but does not agree that they may come to Washington for trial.

11th.—The question of suppressing the practice of polygamy has been brought before Congress in the form of a joint resolution, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States declaring that "polygamy shall not exist within the limits of the United States; or any place subject to their jurisdiction;" and providing that Congress shall have the power to enforce this prohibition by appropriate legislation.

Rumor says that the Imperial Council of St. Petersburg has decided to abandon the present aggressive policy in Asia, and to devote the strength and wisdom of the Czar and his advisers to the development of home interests and the introduction of needed reforms.

A Berlin dispatch says, the famine among the Polish miners in Upper Silesia is beginning to produce typhus-fever.

12th.—The cases of Davitt and Daley have just come before the grand jury yesterday, at Connaught, Ireland.

War still goes on between the Chilians and Peruvians, with the former in advantage yet.

A storm at Aspinwall damaged the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's wharf $100,000, and that of the Panama Railroad Company $20,000. Thirteen hundred and twenty-nine tons of coal were lost by vessels sinking.

Two villages were swept away, and the water flooding in, left mud in the streets and over the railway track two feet deep. The sea was a heavier one than was ever seen there before.

The weather in Great Britain continues to be very severe, and in Austria so hard frosts have not been experienced so early in the season for over forty years. Much snow has fallen in Sicily. In Germany the cold is great.

Bread riots have occurred in Ravenna, Italy, because the lack of food is great in that province.

Near Nashville, Tennessee, a storm so increased a stream that it swept away two dams and then a house. The family tried to swim ashore but a girl and a boy were struck by timbers driven by the raging waters and swept away. The parents and one girl escaped.

A great wind in Randolph county, Missouri, the 9th inst., shattering houses, tearing up trees, killing live stock and wounding nine persons, two of whom will probably die.

The weather has turned cold all through the Northern States, and last night the mercury stood at Zero at Omaha; St. Paul three degrees below; Duluth eight degrees below, Breckenridge, Minnesota, twenty-one degrees below.

The destruction of the dams on nearly all the principal rivers in Hungary and Transylvania and the terrible inundations are again filling the public mind with anxiety.

Temeovar, Arad, and several towns in Transylvania were partly inundated Monday, and, as in Grosswardein, a great number of houses fell in. So suddenly came the flood that hardly any preventive measures had been taken, and great damage to property is reported.

13th.—An attempt was made yesterday at Calcutta, India, to shoot Lord Lytton the Viceroy of India. The shot was fired by a native who was intoxicated.

Davitt, Killen and Daley are formally indicted for sedition. It is stated, however, that the Government does not intend to press the prosecutions.

In Russia many more people have been arrested on suspicion of conspiring against the government. That nation and its Czar is likely to have plenty of business on hand, as disaffection among the Russians is greatly on the increase especially in view of the horrors of the Siberian exile and other forms of punishment and terrible rule.

More fighting between the British and the Afghans, the latter being badly whipped. The English loss, however, was severe.

An exchange says: "The present year will be distinguished in history as one remarkable for its endless catalogue of crimes and casualties: cyclones, tornadoes, inundations, marine disasters, railroad catastrophes, burglaries, bank and train robberies, suicides, murders, and an interminable train of other crimes and mishaps, go to make up the dread account. If all these events could be collected in one volume it would be the largest book the world ever saw. Many of the crimes chronicled within the year are of the most horrible character of any yet recorded in the world's history."

14th.—An effort is being made in Congress to adopt a resolution to take from the Utes their reservation in Colorado.

In Russia more Nihilists have been arrested with explosive machines in their possession.

A dispatch from Calcutta, India, says that the Sepoys are strongly entrenched upon the heights near Bala Hissar. The British forces are concentrating and will attack them with hopes of success. In the late battle the British suffered severely. The hill tribes have combined, which causes alarm among the military in India. It is doubtful if the troops can remain much longer in Afghanistan with safety.

There is some fighting between the British and natives near Capetown, Africa. Latter defeated.

15th.—At Washington, Representative Willits, of Michigan, is making a careful study of the Mormon question, with a view to the amendment to the law against polygamy. Mr. Willits will introduce two bills on this subject, and move their reference to the Judiciary committee. One of these bills provides for an amendment of the Jury law of Utah, making the practice of polygamy, or a belief that it is morally and legally right for a man to have more than one wife at the same time, a sufficient cause for the challenge and rejection of a juror on any trial for an offense against the Anti-Polygamy laws. The other bill deprives all persons in the Territories, women as well as men, who live in the polygamous relation, of the right to vote or hold office.

It is reported from Washington that most of the army officers in the West believe that there will be a war with the Indians ere long.

16th.—The British in Afghanistan are having a severe time with the natives. It seems undoubted that the Russian government has for years been inciting the insurrection that has now assumed such proportions.

A $40,000 fire at Clarksville, Greene county, Iowa, yesterday.

Gen. Grant arrived at Philadelphia, yesterday and a grand demonstration was made, a larger and finer procession being out than the one at Chicago. This concludes Grant's journey round the world, he having started from there in May 1877, to cross the Atlantic.

The situation of the British troops in Afghanistan has a very serious look. The force under Gen. Roberts, which occupied Cabul shortly after the massacre of the embassy, appears to be in one of those traps which the Afghans have laid for the capture of the English several times before. Cut off from their base of communications, supplies, and reinforcements by the hill tribes, it will not be remarkable if another massacre should occur before they can receive help. Against the 10,000 troops of England there are arrayed 30,000 of the enemy, and they are fierce, warlike, armed with the best of rifles, and commanded by able chieftains.

A famine in Armenia, Asiatic Turkey, is reported.

The Peruvians and Bolivians have again been defeated by the Chilians both on land and at sea.

By the explosion of blasting material in a salt-mine, in Wertemberg, Germany, twelve men were killed, and six mortally wounded and two others injured.

There is great distress among the poor in Rome, Italy, the city and country where hundreds of life-size silver statues of the saints and martyrs are kept in the cathedrals, and where the priests and Romish dignitaries abound in wealth while the poor are in rags and die of starvation.

18th.—The city of Cabul is in the hands of the Afghans. Gen. Roberts and the British forces are entrenched two miles north, and it is hoped that they will hold out till nine regiments of infantry and cavalry and two batteries reach them from Jellabad. Yet the country is alive with the enemy, and grave doubts are had in England and India about it.

The evicted Irish tenant who struck down Lord Fermoy has been sentenced to five years penal servitude.

The famine in Silesia now includes four more districts.

19th.—The Russian Government has traced Nihilism to some of the noble families of that kingdom.

In England the excitement over the situation in Afghanistan is great. There are some in authority who fear that the regiments marching to relieve Gen. Roberts at Cabul may be lost by stress of weather and the power of the enemy.

20th.—It is feared that the beleaguered British troops near Cabul may be starved out before relief arrives.

The famine in Silesia, Germany, is intensified by a rage of typhoid fever. Eighty five thousand people are said to be destitute of sufficient food?

At St. Paul, Minnesota, last night, a large meeting of sympathy for the suffering people in Ireland was held, and $1,500 was raised for their aid. In San Francisco a meeting was held, and a committee was appointed to take subscriptions for relief.

A London, England, dispatch says: "The situation in Russia is not at all hopeful. Nihilist conspiracies are discovered, revealing wide spread ramifications and involving parties who should be above suspicion. It is rumored that several of the most aristocratic families in Russia are on their march to Siberia. The condition of the Czar is not improving mentally or physically. He is constantly apprehensive of assassination, and very suspicious. The servants of the palace are changed daily and the police closely watched.

A dispatch from Madrid, Spain, says "Various circumstances have occurred within the last few days which caused great uneasiness in Government circles. Secret police employed by the authorities at the capital and principal towns have reported that evidences of a conspiracy against the life of King Alfonso exist, and numerous arrests of suspected persons have been made."

The appeal made by the Duchess of Marlborough for subscriptions to a fund for relief of the suffering Irish is being generously and generally responded to throughout England. This generosity on the part of the wife of the Lord Lieutenant and the English people has had its effect on the Irish people, and the tone of the agitation has been materially modified. Meanwhile the distress is increasing in the counties heretofore named, and relief is sorely needed there. Lord Beaconsfield subscribed £100 to the Irish distress fund. There are reports of serious trouble in Kings County, where several landlords have been obliged to flee the wrath of the anti-tenants.

22d.—The situation in Afghanistan is considered very critical. The reinforcements are marching rapidly, but they are having some encounters with the natives, and just what may take place is uncertain.

Philip Best's brewery at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, was burned last night; loss three hundred thousand dollars.

23d.—Reinforcements in Afghanistan marching to relieve Gen. Roberts at Cabul are encountering strong bodies of natives. The St. Petersburg Gazette says that the Afghan revolt is due to cruelty of the English.

In Paris, France, continued cold weather prevails. The Seine is frozen over so that it can be crossed at several points in the city. There is much distress in that city.

Correspondence.

KENT, Illinois, Dec. 19th, 1879.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I came here nearly two weeks ago. Have preached eight times. The people are divided. Some, I think, are really investigating. At the first they were inclined to think that we were advocating "our views" of the Bible doctrine, but now they understand that as regards "the gospel" we have no views; that we give it as it is recorded, and insist upon the unchangeability of its character. My first "talk" was from the text; "I am the Lord, I change not." We told them that we could not possibly conceive, if such be possible, of an unchangeable God, save by the unchangeability of his truth. Here we take issue with the world. They tell us God is unchangeable and yet insist that "the gospel" in the entirety is unnecessary in "our day." If God's truth has been changed, it is because he has changed in his opinion (?) respecting the same. We told them if a certain author should arrive at certain conclusions respecting any given subject, and those conclusions should be subsequently changed, it indicated most emphatically a change of the author's mind respecting that conclusion. So have we reasoned with them, or tried to at least. God has blessed us, and enabled us to give in all plainness and simplicity of his ever blessed truth to a perishing humanity.

The more I advocate the gospel in its plenitude, the better I love it, and praise God for its greatness, and the plainer I behold the fallacy of man's uninspired ways. Moreover I told them, and I was blessed with the Holy Spirit, that I questioned the right of any man who denied the power and inspiration of God in this age, to set himself up as a dictator, and critic of the gospel Paul preached. Paul, a man who said that what he received of doctrinal matters has been "by revelation from Jesus Christ." Such a man, denying God's power, tell us that certain principles were not needed now-a-days? Never. The people are seeing, if it may not be boastful to state to you, that we "speak as one having authority, and not as the scribes &c." We have done it all good humoredly and the fact that we have occasioned no offense intentionally, is attested by the fact that our numbers in audience increases. We go to-night by request of some friends to a place two miles from here. Pray for Brother Charles and the writer's success in the ministry of the word of life. I love it more and more. Brother Charles loves it. People ask us many questions in an inquiring manner, indicative of a desire to "know more perfectly the way of the Lord." Whether our labors will bear fruit now I know not. One thing we do know, the witness that God is true and the same, has been given, so they are or will be without excuse. More anon.

"SEER STONE" OR "URIM AND THUMMIM."

Bro. Joseph:—When I first read Mr. Traugher's paper in Herald of November 15th, I thought that I would not notice his attack at all, as I supposed that I was believed by the Church to be fair and truthful in my statements of other men's views, when I have occasion to use them, and I shall make this reply only: That unless my interview with David Whitmer in January, 1876, was only a dream, or that I failed to understand plain English, I believed then, and since, and now, that he said that Joseph possessed, and used the Urim and Thummim in the translation of the inscriptions referred to, and I remember of being much pleased with that statement, as I had heard of the "Seer stone" being used. And unless I dreamed the interview, or very soon after failed to recollect the occasion, he described the form and size of the said Urim and Thummim. The nearest approach to a retraction of my testimony as given in the Fall River Herald and that given publicly in many places from the stand from January, 1876, till now, is, that unless I altogether misunderstood "Father Whitmer" on this point, he said the translation was done by the aid of the Urim and Thummim. If he says he did not intend to convey such an impression to my mind, then I say I regret that I misunderstood him, and unintentionally have misrepresented him. But that I understood him as represented by me frequently I still affirm. If Father Whitmer will say over his own signature, that he never said, or at least never intended to say, that Joseph possessed or used in translating the Book of Mormon, the Urim and Thummim, I will agree to not repeat my testimony as seen in the Fall River Herald on that point.

T. W. SMITH.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Dec. 15, 1879.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—I do not see how any person in the Church can doubt the divine origin of the Book of Mormon. To such I would say, I am afraid you do not know about Joseph's mission, and whether the Latter Day Work is true or not. Dear brethren and sisters, if that book is not true, then Joseph Smith was not a prophet, and none of the work is true; and if that is not true, where will you go for truth? Where will you find the pure, precious gospel outside of this Church? For one I bear my testimony to all that I know that it is true, and the power of God unto salvation to all that will believe and obey it with an honest heart. All such will receive a knowledge of its truth. There is no doubt but they will be able to say, "I know it is truth." As for the Book of Mormon, though all others deny that book, yet I would not. Why? Because I have received a witness for myself. Whoever reads its pages, and is in possession of the Spirit of God, can they not truly say, "It bears witness of itself." You mark when you see a Saint that doubts that book, and you will find at times they doubt the whole work; while on the other hand, you find those that believe it with all their heart, and though storms howl and clouds gather, they are firm as the rocks, and as immovable. Nothing can shake their faith in the work. It is a precious book, its teachings are pure and holy, and it oft fills my soul to overflowing to read it. It leads my mind towards God; it leads me to pray. Oft when I have been reading here I felt to kneel down and ask my Heavenly Father to help me to live like them of old. Brethren and sisters, we are commanded to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

That book contains the word of God as much as do the Bible and Book of Covenants. Let us search them, remembering that it is they that testify of Christ.

Your sister in the gospel,

S. C. H.

ROCK ISLAND, Illinois,
December 16th, 1879.

Bro. Stebbins:—The quarterly conference for the Eastern Iowa District, (held at Davenport) has just closed. The session was characterized by good feeling, and the brethren have returned to their homes encouraged to new efforts for the triumph of the gospel truth. Our esteemed president, Bro. E. Larkey, was prevented from attending the conference, but by what unfortunate circumstance I am not informed, yet I fear it is sickness in his family. May our Heavenly Father's mercy be around and about him and his; and may his spiritual strength be equal to the trials that meet him on his life's journey. Bro. R. Rowley, of the Davenport branch, presided over the conference. One was baptized who was an old time Saint, namely Bro. Jacob Boice of Buffalo, Iowa. In bearing his testimony he expressed great satisfaction at having a home with the Latter Day Saints once more. May a loving Father's care shield him in danger, and give him strength for every trial.

A brother from Iowa City bore his testimony to the truth of the latter day work, and said that he rejoiced when he heard the true sound of the gospel as proclaimed by the elders of the Reorganization. He stated that the circumstances of his life had prevented him from meeting with brethren for many years. He knew the work was of God, and that Joseph the Martyr was a prophet called of God.

For myself, I leave my home to-day for Maquoketa and Bro. Larkey's, where I expect to enter upon the mission assigned me by our conference. Praying for the triumph of the gospel, I subscribe myself, your brother,

JEROME RUBY.

December 2d, 1879.

President Joseph Smith:—Dear brother.—That which at one time would have seemed impossible, has at length become a fact; and that which, up to a few weeks ago, was to me like a mere vision, has become a matter of real experience. I refer to my presence in this city as a gospel missionary. Surrounded by the evidences of a misplaced trust, as manifested by the words and acts of nearly all who here claim fellowship with the Mormon institution, I suddenly remember Jeremiah's words "Cursed is the man that trusteth in man," and believing, as I do, that this curse must be removed, and that the offering of an entire deliverance from soul bondage, for all the noble-hearted, is, in effect, the burthen of our purpose and mission, I feel, more than ever before, the need of wisdom and strength. Since our arrival here I have felt, when viewing the gigantic proportions assumed by the evil with which we have to combat, that the words of Bro. Z. H. Gurley, at Conference, were true, when he said that "inspiration alone should declare who were the men for this field and work." Were it not for the assuring evidences, given by the Comforter, that my whole being was in the hands of God, and would be controlled even here for a purpose and end, as yet withheld from my clear understanding, but pleasing unto him, I should shrink from the task before me. It is ours to labor and trust. It is God's to direct and complete.

With my family I left Plano, Oct. 31st, and arrived at Independence, Mo., the following day. I immediately set to work to secure for them a home, in which effort I was successful. I preached three times each Sunday while I remained there, also once in Wyandotte. While in Independence I formed an acquaintance with Dr. William E. McLellan, of early Mormon notoriety. I had formerly heard of him, and felt that perhaps my safety would be in keeping my distance, but on passing down one of the streets, he hailed me, and entered into a lengthy conversation on general Church matters, in which Sister Emma's testimony, the Book of Covenants, Joseph the Seer, the Reorganization, and other men and things, were treated to a very systematic dish of stale abuse. I accepted an invitation to visit his home, to look over the "Book of Commandments," published in Independence, in early days, and with him compare it with the present "Doctrine and Covenants," as he had informed me that in one Revelation about one hundred and thirty changes had been made and whole verses had been added. Other Revelations had been similarly treated, until (from his statement) there could be hardly anything reliable left. We read that much abused revelation over, and compared the two books; and on leaving the place I thanked God for the knowledge conveyed to me and confirmed by that interview, that when prejudice is the motive power in man,

"He wields a straw as though it were a weaver's beam,
And to him mole hills mighty mountains seem."

I found that a number of "thats" and "ands," and similar words, were not found in the Doctrine and covenants as in the other. "Therefore," for "wherefore" was inserted, and vice versa. Such changes as these constituted the supposed difficulty. The whole sense of the passages were identical, as far as we examined, and all are aware that subsequent to the publication of the Book of Commandments, a republication was ordered because of the first not being according to the wording of the manuscript. The verses that were added, cannot be called verses, unless you compare the Book of Commandments with the late Brighamite edition of Doctrine and Covenants, from the fact that the latter is versed off like the New Testament, and what would be called one verse or paragraph in the Plano edition, is split up into many verses in the Salt Lake edition. The whole of the additions charged by him, would not constitute one-fifth of some of our verses, and the whole substance is embodied in the one as in the other, so that were I to read one to-day and the other to-morrow, the sense would appear identically the same. I called to mind the state of affairs existing at the time of printing the Independence edition, and, being a printer, could easily account for the neglect on the part of "typos" to "follow copy," strictly, as well as the proof reader's privileges being taken advantage of; and various matters, the understanding of which, go to make up a printer's experience, as well as the imperfection of manuscripts, when handed in, leading the typo to imagine at times that a tea-box label had been placed before him, with undecipherable hieroglyphics thereupon, requiring him to guess one-third at least of what was set before him, or seek a fresh revelation of the language to himself. Some times we have had to guess the sense of a writer's hieroglyphics, and then because in print he appeared as a "devil in human shape," instead of a "dealer in hams and steak," curses had to serve us for our cash in payment for our trouble.

The Doctor informed me that my mission to Utah was a "wild goose chase," and also gave me similar encouragement concerning other matters. His manner was gentlemanly, and he took care to inform me that he would not argue the matter with me.

If all the information we obtained from him was correct, then all our zeal and wisdom, together with that of every other religious system on earth, is being turned to good account, in carrying out the devil's purpose for a wholesale damnation of the race; and we apprehend that the Doctor will enjoy his peculiar "Robinson Crusoe" glory hereafter, as much as he does his peculiar privilege of being the exclusive embodiment of holiness and intelligence now. We cordially invite all Saints and others to forward him all the unproved statements concerning Mormonism, and we feel satisfied in guaranteeing that they will be diligently peddled throughout the entire community where he resides.

I found some others there who felt and talked differently, and in whose society I obtained more light in a moment than in all my conversation with the Doctor, among whom were brethren Brackenbury, Kaster, and others, the very shake of whose hands made a different impression.

The music of truth sounds sweeter to me than ever, after such discord, and I feel satisfied that the learned Doctor might as well try to blot out the sun with his puny hand as seek to make me and others risk much upon his testimony against the truth of Mormonism. The old moon shines still, though many a dog has barked at her.

Many good Saints are there, and more are moving thitherward. May the spirit of discernment and of wisdom be theirs.

I hope that the spirit that has characterized our opening efforts here in the valley may continue with us, and ere long we will have good reports to make. The interest is increasing, and the Lord is with us indeed. Hoping and laboring, as ever, for the redemption of Zion,

I remain, your brother,

JOSEPH LUFF.

NOTICE.—I will willingly exchange all the stock-in-trade twaddle against Mormonism, furnished me by the Doctor, for one fresh saving truth, and pay the difference to any one having the same.

39 Russell St., DRESDEN,
Staffordshire, England,
December 4th, 1879.

Dear Herald:—We have many joyous times at Hanley; many of us can say that God is true, that he does live to bless, comfort, guide, and guard his Saints with his Holy Spirit. The lame have walked, the deaf heard, the blind seen, the sick raised, the captive liberated, the poor made rich in grace, the doubting convinced to doubt no more, and thus I might go on telling all that the Lord has done for his people in these parts, until, like one of old, I should end by saying time would fail to tell all.

Ten years ago I heard, believed, and obeyed the good news taught by the greatest of all teachers, Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God. And now I can testify, I know this work that it is the gospel which Christ declared should be preached for a witness; that the ensign is raised; that the angel's message is going to and through the earth, "Fear God and give glory to him for the hour of his judgment is come." A change will shortly take place, the fittest will only survive. Be wise, remember the word of wisdom, live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God and ye shall live through the struggles, trials, pestilences, and famine that are yet to come. Yours in love and truth,

C. H. HASSALL.

St. Louis, Nov. 21st, 1879.

Bro. Henry:—I recently returned from my second visit to Moselle, Franklin county, Mo., where I went at the call of Bro. Davison. And perhaps in all my experience as a traveling Elder, I never witnessed a more interesting field. The location of our preaching was a little south of Moselle, and it would have pleased you very much to have seen the people coming from near and far, to hear what we advocated as the gospel revealed in these last days. I spoke to them six times, two at Bro. Cheshires, four miles, and four times at Oak Hill, about thirteen miles from Moselle; and feel that though they are living in a very secluded part of Missouri far away from the path of many visitors, our Heavenly Father will bless the truth delivered to them. One feature of their conduct towards me impressed me very much, the kind feelings evinced by their actions and their great desires to know of our doctrines. One gentleman was so elated by the new born truths he heard, that he began immediately to defend the truth as the only plan of salvation to save sinners. The Methodist Church (south) was also very kind in giving up to us their church, for our use. It seemed to me that the leading thought of their minds after hearing the gospel, was, why did not we see these things before, when it is so plain and very simple that any one can understand it and we have read it so very often in the Bible. When I heard these sentiments, my dear brother, then I knew God had right there, honest soil for precious seed, and I felt doubly repaid for my journey of between sixty and seventy miles. And this I feel is only one of the numerous places in Missouri where many of God's people are waiting for the simplicity of the latter day gospel to be applied to their hearts; but the question is how can they hear without a preacher, and how can he preach except he be sent. I ask the prayers of the Saints that the little band at Moselle, with their devoted president, Elder Davison, be blessed by the sustaining influences of the Holy Spirit, and that God will add to the Church there, many of such as shall be eternally saved. Yours in bonds,

W. STILL.

ELKO, Nevada, Dec. 6th, 1879.

Bro. Henry:—We are four hundred miles from the nearest branch in this state, and about two hundred and seventy-five miles from Ogden, Utah. When I make some money I want to send for an Elder to come here. I have the promise of the use of a Church here. There are a great many old Saints, or Salt Lakers in this county; but most of them try to hide the facts from being known. I think that a wide-awake Elder would fish out many. He would find a welcome home with us. If any Elder or Saint is passing on the rail road they can get a stop check of the conductor and we would be happy to have them stay with us as long as they please. Praying for the cause of truth, your unworthy brother,

E. PENROD.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 4th, 1879.

Editors Herald: I am pleased with the spirit of "No Cross no Crown," in your last issue, and am persuaded that such influence will prove more efficacious for good than "whole burnt sacrifices." I hope that "Anon" will appear again. I am struggling for more perfect liberty, but the end is not yet. If I could sell what land I have, I think it would assist me. If any one wishes farm lands in this vicinity, they will do well to address me, as I have good lands at reasonable prices and easy terms—titles good. I am also selling town lots in Lamoni, for the Railroad Company and Bro. Dancer, et al. Our new town still grows, and prospects good. Depot and stock yards are being built in good shape. The iron horse seems to have enthused new life into this country; and as a little iron in the blood is needed, it may assist materially hereafter in warding off the malarial attacks so common to these western wilds. However, we do not wish too much of it, lest our hearts become iron-clad, and the love of God, which should burn there for all souls, be blighted. Spiritually, our people are in a fair condition. I have tried to assist the interest at Davis City, once every two weeks, and am pleased to state that the congregation does not diminish. The branch there are feeling well, and doing so.

Yours in bonds,

Z. H. GURLEY.

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND.

Brothers Joseph and Henry:—I hope you will allow me space in the Herald to tell a little of my experience and certainty there is in the gospel of Christ. Having started for the paths of truth and holiness when very young I have since endeavored to press onward, and though surrounded oft times by many doubts and fears, fears which often burdened my heart with sorrow, because of my inability to know whether my salvation was secure or not, yet I girded up myself once more for the struggle, and so continued on doing my best, but I found like Paul, that when I would do good, evil was present with me; but I even believe that in that state God assisted me by the influence of the Holy Ghost. I have also, as says Paul, been brought up in the strictest sect of my religion a Pharisee, so I was brought to obey very stringent rules, in order to advance me for that position in life which humanity thought to place me in, but God thought otherwise. I was educated in the city of Dublin, (Ireland) for twelve years, the last two being especially set apart for training for that most solemn responsibility of teaching my fellow-men their duty toward their God; but at this interregnum I was laid low, nigh unto death, by typhoid fever; after which I was sent to the west of Ireland and taught a Mission School. 'Twas there I thought of wandering from my native shore, and from the moment this idea seized me I could not erase it, so I bade farewell to all and came to America; but landed only to await a still greater trial than any which preceded it, for I came to my own, and my own received me not; and all this through our different ways of serving the one God. I had also to leave them and wander farther, till after two years, I found my way to the city of Providence, R. I., having found work there I immediately started to do all I could for the Lord once more, and that with a more firm resolution than ever till by mistake I was directed to a boarding house, which contained four stars of the faith once delivered to the ancients. I immediately set to work, but the flame was too strong, and my poor fortress of theology fell to the ground, and was burned completely to ashes; but still for six months unceasingly I struggled to free myself from the grasp of truth and intelligence which were presented to me, and I stuck to my opinions as long as there was any essential point left uncontroverted, till at last I completely caved in, and through honesty and conviction of heart after ten o'clock at night I was immersed beneath the baptismal wave. Since then I have received that certainty and knowledge which I vouch to say none but a Latter Day Saint can have. And now it astonishes me that Satan has acted and is acting his part so well, so that that verse in Genesis 3:15 has, and is being literally fulfilled, whereby Satan, not satisfied with bruising Christ's heel, by causing Him to die for the sin of the world, but is extending his power as far on the body as he can, but this gospel, I believe, keeps Satan at bay, and the Saint dwells secure under the shadow of the Almighty. There is a good, lively, and energetic branch here, one worthy of the cause they advocate, and one that is making itself felt, and the Lord is adding daily such as shall be saved, and I hope I shall not slack but partake of the same spirit, and be instrumental in beckoning others to the harvest field; my heart is indeed in the work, and though still young, for my experience not being 22 years old yet, still I believe I am feeding of the strong meat of the gospel, and when it is God's wish I am willing to do all I can for His honor and glory. With much regard towards God's honored presbyters, and the Saints, I remain your brother in Christ,

HENRY GREELEY.

JOHN ROBERTS, Bishop's Agent for California.

NOTICE.

TO THOSE HAVING IN CHARGE PROPERTY BELONGING TO THE CHURCH.

Those concerned will please take notice that the General Conference of April, 1878, adopted a recommendation of its committee, whereby it is required that all those "having charge of Church property" should "value the same and forward to the Bishop the report of such valuation, and that all property not yet deeded to the Church * * be alike valued and proper deeds made, as provided in the Church articles."

No such reports were made to me prior to the April Conference of 1879, consequently I could not present them when called upon there, nor have I received any since. Therefore, I now urge upon the attention of the brethren concerned, the necessity and importance of complying with the above requirement of the General Conference, and I request them to send in their reports by the 1st of March, 1880, without fail.

TO BISHOP'S AGENTS.

At the April Conference of 1878, it was made requisite that Bishop's Agents should render annual itemized accounts to me, for presentation to the General Conference, and yet but a few agents complied with this law. Then, in April,

1879, the General Conference further required that the Agents should not only make out itemized reports, but that these reports should be published as are the itemized reports of the Bishop, these to be published annually. The resolution reads as follows: "Resolved, that we require of the Bishop of the Church a report through the Herald, or in a supplement sheet, an itemized report of the means received and paid out by the Agents, with the names of the donors and to whom paid, and that this report be made annually."

I therefore call the attention of the Agents to this matter, and urge that they pay heed to it, all of them. From the first of March, 1879, to the first of March, 1880, every item of receipt and of expenditure should be given in their reports to me, giving names of persons or branches (if by branch collection) giving, and the names of those to whom anything has been paid. Where an Agent has resigned and another has succeeded him, the books of the former will show the facts, and the report should embrace them the same from the date named. Be prompt and accurate, brethren, and send in your reports immediately after March 1st, 1880, so that they can be arranged, copied, and prepared for presentation to the Conference, and for publication. ISRAEL L. ROGERS, SANDWICH, ILL., 20th Dec. 1879. Presiding Bishop.

She lived nearly forty eight years as a faithful wife, and as a mother she was kind and loving, and as a neighbor had ever borne a name as a most excellent one. To add to her terrible grief the death of her mother followed quickly after, and she thus has a double sorrow to bear.

Laying on of Hands.

IN order to come down to the subject as indicated by the caption, it may be necessary to ascertain whether there be any promise of the Spirit, that the laying on of hands may follow as an ordinance for its conferment. However we can safely assume that God is fully able to grant anything that he has promised; that he has made no promise without ample and complete provision for fulfillment and realization; and that all the promises are "true and faithful." It would indeed be inconsistent with infinite wisdom and omnipotence to make promises and decrees without also making provision for their consummation; for it is written: "Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand."—Isaiah 14: 24. A limited, or local promise would only require limited and local means, for its success and fulfillment is so self evident that none will deny. An universal promise, must, in the nature of things, demand a means adequate thereto, and susceptible of an universal application, any sane person will admit. Like the stones of the temple of Solomon, the promises and means appointed by the wise and Master builder, come together without the sound of a hammer, without a jar, and with an accuracy and precision that can not but vindicate the wisdom of the Great Architect.

The promise of the Spirit to man, like that of salvation, is conditional; and therefore its realization is equally dependent upon the receiver and giver. If, therefore, God gave a promise to the members of his Church, and the means he ordained toward its consummation to be comprised within the ministry he had appointed, as the church would grow in numbers, its ministry would also grow in numbers because of its office and use, and therefore an increase of the means to meet the necessities of the body, in receiving grace upon grace according to the promise made; otherwise the wisdom of God in building up and extending his kingdom upon earth, made a promise and signally failed—appointing means that were inadequate and insufficient to do his behests.

If the Lord gave an universal promise to his church, a promise to extend to all time, and only ordained twelve men as the means through whose personal administrations the promise could be fulfilled, and made no promise for succession, or the filling of vacancies that must necessarily occur while mortality endures, it certainly indicates a short sightedness and failure of calculation, worthy only of a weak man, and unworthy in every sense of an all wise God.

How devious and void of infinite perfection do human creeds declare the wisdom, power, and perfection of God! Some creed makers have failed to recognize the ordinance of "the laying on of hands" according to the "Apostles' doctrine," as of any value, as no part of the doctrine of Christ; and hence they deny its use and necessity, and yet they claim that they can enjoy and do enjoy the "baptism of the Spirit," which their ignorance leads them to think consists in a "change of heart"—repentance. The idea of a "change of heart"—mere repentance, constituting the baptism of the Spirit, is simply preposterous, in view of the fact that repentance invariably preceded baptism in water, and hence the name, "the baptism of repentance."

John the Baptist said, "I indeed baptize you with water; but he [Christ] shall baptize you with fire and the Holy Ghost." Peter said upon Pentecost: "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of the Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. Those who ignore the ordinance of God's appointment seem to reverse the order of things as appointed by Christ and as promulgated by precept and practice by his Apostles. They now claim that the baptism of the Spirit must be before the baptism of water, and they have no use for the laying on of hands at all. They have found that they can get along with less doctrine, less ordinances, less promises, less "ceremony" than the early Christians could, and be very good and moral people, "having a form of godliness and denying the power thereof;" "ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." There is a class that aver that there is no baptism of the Spirit to-day, and hence no necessity for the ordinance of the laying on of hands, that only water baptism is available and of use.

They deny the promises of God to his people, and also deny an ordinance that is one of the fixed principles of the everlasting gospel. We would not venture to assert that any principle of the gospel can be inoperative, when the gospel in all its fullness is preached by those duly "called." There is not, nor can there be, any part of the gospel obsolete. Men may depart from the faith, may wander into by-ways; but the everlasting gospel remains like its author and giver, unchanged. The gospel may cease to be preached, and men may select some of its principles and ignore others, and preach—but not "the power of God unto salvation unto all them that believe;" and yet, after all the confusion and darkness, the truth still remains. "Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and thy law is the truth" (Psa. 119: 142). It is further written: "Thou art near, O Lord, and all thy commandments are truth" (Psa. 119: 151). As the gospel is to all, so also is God's grace to all; his commandments to all, and the promises to all, and necessarily the means to all to the fulfilling of his promises.

As the command to be baptized necessitates a candidate and an administrator; so the presence in the gospel of the laying on of hands presumes and necessitates not only a candidate, but the existence of proper authority, and that available, to administer to the willing and obedient. While faith, repentance, and baptism are for the remission of sins, the laying on of hands is for the reception of the Holy Ghost. As water baptism is a necessity, so also is the spiritual baptism; and hence it is made a necessity, a saving necessity to receive the spiritual birth or baptism. (St. John 3: 5; Titus 3: 5).

Now, "the law of the spirit of life" designs and intends the laying on of hands as preparatory to and for the reception of that spirit and birth. It is the channel marked out by Almighty God through which flow his mercy and blessing; and most certainly, a necessity. "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed" (Gal. 1: 6). Now to the law and testimony, as to what the will of God concerning man is. Let us be sure and not teach that which is opposed thereto, lest we fall under the anathema of Paul.

"Therefore, [not], leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and faith towards God, of the doctrine of baptisms [water and spirit] and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment" (Heb. 6: 1, 2). This then places the matter beyond controversy; for it is positive and clear, as one of "the principles of the doctrine of Christ," and if so, certainly one with an office work and use designed by the giver of all good. There was no word of Christ, nor any of any prophet or apostle or other inspired man or woman, that any part of the gospel should ever become obsolete; for in its entirety it was the "perfect law of liberty;" and therefore a change was not intended; nor yet permissible.

That all the early ministry did not possess power and authority to administer in this sacred ordinance, is very evident, from the reading of the New Testament; and further, just what authority is necessary in order to its carrying out, the New Testament does not state. That was one of the things necessary to be revealed at the opening of this dispensation, that the promises might be realized. The nature of the case seems to demand an office and authority that was susceptible of universality; and hence Paul instructed Titus (Titus 1:5) to "ordain elders in every city." We only infer from the reading of the New Testament that the eldership was duly authorized to lay on hands for the conferring of the spirit, first, because of its universality; and second, because they were authorized to administer in the laying on of hands for the healing of the sick [James 5:14, 15] and ordination, &c. See 1 Tim. 4:14.

In the great city of Samaria, when one of the "helps" by the name of Philip went there and preached Jesus the Christ, it is written that they believed and were baptized "both men and women." But they had not received the seal of their adoption, of which is written: "After that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory" (Eph. 1:13, 14). Therefore the historian records: "Now, when the Apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God they sent unto them Peter and John; who, when they were come down, prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost; for as yet he was fallen upon none of them; only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. Then laid they their hands on them and they received the Holy Ghost" (Acts 8:14-17). Simon Magus, a sorcerer that had been converted, offered the Apostles money, saying: "Give me also this power that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost."—19th v. "Peter rebuked him saying, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter; for thy heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent, therefore, of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee."—20th, 21st, 22d verses.

In the city of Ephesus the eloquent Apostle Paul found certain disciples that had not received nor heard of the Holy Ghost. He knew that something was wrong in the matter, notwithstanding that they said they had received of John's baptism; for John, as the forerunner of Christ, proclaimed, "I indeed baptize you with water; but he [Christ] shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost." Hence Paul baptized them again, and "laid his hands on them" for the reception of the Spirit. See Acts 19:5, 6. As indicative of the Spirit's presence and power, it is written, "They spake with tongues and prophesied." The Redeemer said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, and he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved and he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they speak with new tongues," &c. (Mark 16). The promise of Christ makes the presence of the Spirit a necessity to the existence of the signs to follow the believer; and as a matter of logical sequence, the ordinance and the power to act therein, to the conferring of the Spirit promised.

Throughout the testament era the promises and commandments were inseparable, one ever attended the other; the laying on of hands was as much revered as a principle of the doctrine of Christ, as faith or any other principle; for they realized that "whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God; he that abideth in the doctrine hath both the Father and the Son" (2 John 9th verse); and that to dishonor the faith or any part of it, was but to dishonor its author and giver. Notwithstanding the many encroachments of error, that history records as attempted, the professed Christians even down to the third and fourth centuries of this era revered this ordinance. Cyprian, in his 73rd letter, shows clearly the faith of his time: "It is manifest where, and by whom the remission of sin, conferred in baptism is administered.—They who are presented to the rulers of the Church, obtain, by our prayers and imposition of hands, the Holy Ghost."

Dr. Moshem, in his Ecclesiastical History, records: "The remission of sin was thought to be its [baptism's] immediate and happy fruit; while the bishop by prayer and the imposition of hands was supposed to confer those sanctifying gifts of the Holy Ghost, which are necessary to a life of righteousness and virtue."—Third Century, 4th chapter, 4th par.

The historian admits considerable for a doctrine, and promises in which he did not believe. Perhaps the doctor thought that people who lived when the gifts and graces were enjoyed, only about three hundred years after Christ, did not know as much of Christ's doctrine as those who should live after the gifts and graces had vanished, some sixteen or seventeen centuries after Christ. For further testimony in regard to this important doctrine, see Eusebius, lib. 7, cap. 8.

Now as a recognition or endorsement of heaven to the observance of the "laying on of hands," after the apostles' death by those not apostles, we point to the fact that the spiritual gifts followed its observance. Our friends who think that gifts and the practice of this divine ordinance were limited to the apostles' lives, show themselves ill informed in what history establishes regarding this subject.

"But," says one, "I admit the apostles laid on hands; but only the apostles. The gifts only attended the personal ministrations of the apostles." If that be correct, we then have an everlasting principle of the "everlasting gospel," inoperative and obsolete! For the same parties tell us that there were only twelve apostles, and no succession whatever.

Again, if it be true, then God gave an universal promise, and extended it through all time; and yet failed even to provide for a succession of means for all time. He made promise of the Spirit to all and yet by his own plan frustrates his own promises. The folly of the thought is seen in the number said to have been appointed to do the laying on of hands for "all nations, kindreds, tongues and peoples." Twelve men to lay hands on all in every city, clime and land! No. It is incompatible with reason and truth, that the Almighty should appoint a means so limited for such an unlimited work.

If the twelve only had power to lay on hands, and thus fulfill the promise of the Spirit to the believer, then only when the Church was small could this promise to all be fulfilled; for a saving state introduced, a water and a spiritual birth. As the church grew large, a large part must be neglected and so deprived of the promises and life; for it would be impossible for twelve men to be in ten thousand places baptizing and laying on hands on all baptized by any and all of the ministry. The work is altogether too vast for so few men to do in so large an area of territory as "all the world," without others to assist.

It would place the Lord as requiring of all men what he prevents them from having, by a limitation of means. Secondly, of requiring impossibilities at the hands of the apostles. If the promise had only extended to those to whom the apostles administered, it would not have been written of the church: "The Spirit is given to every man to profit withal."—1 Cor. 12:7. If it had been limited it would not have been to all "them that obey him." (Acts 5:32), and God would have been a "respector of persons," and the gifts and graces would have ceased with the apostles, and per sequence the laying on of hands. Then all that part of the New Testament which relates to the spiritual gifts, powers and birth, would be inapplicable to us being only for a past and more favored age and generation.

By a retrospect over the past, we see how fearful has been the departure from the doctrine of Christ, his promises and ordinances.

"Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks: Walk in the light of your fire and in the sparks that ye have kindled. This shall ye have of mine hand; ye shall lie down in sorrow."—Isa. 50:11.

It is written to our own profit: "I know that whatsoever God doeth, it shall be forever; nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it."—Ecc. 3:14.

"The law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul."—Ps. 19:7. "The word of the Lord endureth forever."—Peter.

May we be found on the side of truth and light, is the wish of THOS. E. LLOYD.

Future Rest.

WE are told that it is a life that can and will be enjoyed on this same earth, where we have been born and where we now live. It will be a rest from weary toil; for then the curse of weeds and thorns, pestilence and evil, which came by reason of the fall will be removed. It will be a rest from sin, for then Satan will be bound for a thousand years. "A rest for weary souls." Brethren and sisters in Christ, this glorious rest is drawing near. Let us be willing now to bear all things that we may gain it. It is the only chance to enjoy a peaceful life on earth this side of eternity. O, then let us wake up and keep awake; be diligent to search the Scriptures, to treasure up the words of Christ, to walk in the path of duty, to make every sacrifice we can, lest we be deceived, and are overcome.
INFERIOR.

We are ruined not by what we really want, but by what we think we do; therefore, never go abroad in search of your wants. If they be real wants they will come home in search of you; for he that buys what he does not want will soon want what he can not buy.

The Lord thinks nothing too good for you, if it will make you holy; or too great, if you can use it to his praise.

THE CHEMISTRY OF CHARACTER.

John and Peter, and Robert and Paul—
God in his wisdom created them all,
John was a statesman, and Peter a slave,
Robert a preacher, and Paul was a knave,
Evil or good, as the cause might be,
White or colored, or bound or free;
John and Peter, and Robert and Paul—
God in his wisdom created them all.

Out of earth's elements mingled with flame,
Out of life's compounds of glory and shame,
Fashioned and shaped by no will of their own,
And helplessly into life's history thrown;
Born by the law that compels men to be,
Born to conditions they could not foresee;
John and Peter, and Robert and Paul—
God in his wisdom created them all.

John was the head and the heart of his State;
Was trusted and honored, was noble and great;
Peter was made 'neath life's burdens to groan,
And never once dreamed that his soul was his own;
Robert great glory and honor received
For zealously preaching what no one believed;
While Paul of the pleasures of sin took his fill,
And gave up his life to the service of ill.

It chanced that these men in their passing away
From earth and its conflicts all died the same day, John was mourned through the length and breadth of the land;

Peter fell 'neath the lash of a merciless hand;
Robert died with the praise of the Lord on his tongue,
While Paul was convicted for murder and hung.
John and Peter, and Robert and Paul—
God in his wisdom created them all.

Men said of the statesman: "How noble and brave;"
But of Peter; alas! "He was only a slave;"
Of Robert: "Tis well with his soul—it is well;"
While Paul they consigned to the torments of hell;
Born by one law, through all nature the same,
What made them differ, and who was to blame?
John and Peter, and Robert and Paul—
God in his wisdom created them all.

Out in the region of infinite light,
Where the soul of man can grow pure and bright,
Out where the spirit, thro' sorrow made wise,
No longer resorts to deception and lies,
Out where the flesh can no longer control
The freedom and faith of a God-given soul;
Who shall determine what change shall befall
John and Peter, and Robert and Paul?

John may in wisdom and goodness increase,
Peter rejoice in infinite peace,
Robert may learn that the truths of the Lord
Are more in the spirit and less in the word,
And Paul may be blessed with a holier birth
Than the passions of men had allowed him on earth;
John and Peter, and Robert and Paul—
God in his wisdom created them all.

Scolding.

SCOLDING is mostly a habit. There is not much meaning to it. It is often the result of nervousness, and an irritable condition of both mind and body. A person is tired, or annoyed at some trivial cause, and forthwith commences finding fault with everything and everybody in reach.

Scolding is a habit easily formed. It is astonishing how soon one who indulges in it at all becomes addicted to it and confirmed in it. It is an unreasoning and unreasonable habit. Persons who once get in the way of scolding always find something to scold about. If there was nothing else, they would fall a scolding at the mere absence of anything to scold at. It is an extremely disagreeable habit. The constant rumbling of distant thunder, caterwaulings, or a hand organ under one's window, would be less unpleasant.

The habit is contagious. Once introduced into a family, it is pretty certain, in a short time, to affect all the members. If one of them begins always finding fault about something, or nothing, the others are apt very soon to take it up, and a very unnecessary bedlam is created.

People in the country more readily fall into the habit of scolding than people in town. We suppose it is because they have less to occupy and divert their attention. Women contract the habit more frequently than men. This may be because they live more in the house, in a confined and heated atmosphere, very trying to the nervous system and the health in general; and it may be, partly, that their natures are susceptible, and their sensitiveness more easily wounded. Women are sometimes called divine. But we will say no more on the subject, or some pretty creature may feel inclined to scold us for what we say about scolding.

The Situation in Russia.

JUST now the eyes of the whole civilized world are fixed with full attention upon the Empire of Russia, not only because she stands face to face with England, as foe does to foe, each with sword drawn and prepared for a deadly struggle upon the failure of diplomacy, or at some particular offensive or defensive movement of the other; but also as much or more does Russia attract the gaze of Europe and America to-day because of the issue now at hand and waiting a decision in her own dominions, namely, the one between the governing powers and the groaning millions of that vast, almost limitless dominion; an issue so often presented during the thousands of years that man has tried to govern himself and to rule over his kind in States and Nations.

And such an issue, wherever occurring, has ever been viewed with keenest interest by every other nation, in each case all other peoples being anxious to see what the result will be in so grave a matter as a kingdom or a nation divided against itself in any way, whether rebellion shall be exalted to honor, as being in the right and its cause just, or whether the dignity and rule of the nation or kingdom shall be sustained and maintained; or, on the other hand, if the one in the wrong shall prevail by force of arms or by strategy, whichever that party in the forceful wrong may be, the ruling powers or the disaffected people.

At a serious condition of national affairs, such as that described above, Russia appears to have arrived, and it is a critical one for all concerned, both to the Emperor, the nobleman, the citizen of wealth, and the peasant; for there is now evidently a great struggle pending, one that may cause a radical change in the whole face and force of national affairs in that land of the Czars and the serfs.

And when we think of all the possibilities of disintegration or of cementing in a stronger union under a new or changed management, there comes in another and more absorbing thought, that concerning Russia as the theme of prophecy. It is not entirely a new thought to the Bible student, but one that is becoming more and more interesting by the constant occurrence of events that go to substantiate many in the belief that Russia is playing and shall continue to play to the end an important part in God's providential interpositions in the affairs of peoples and nations in the latter times, the times so much spoken of by the prophets.

Many readers and students of divine prophecy hold that Russia lives, moves and acts in consonance with the predictions of the inspired men of old, of course in accordance with the will of her rulers and people, but over all the Lord God ruling to bring to pass the great purposes planned in his righteous wisdom and directed by his overruling hand as the arbitrator of nations, in his sovereign purpose to bring about the restoration of his people Israel, and the establishment of righteousness and peace in all the earth, as he has foretold.

Hence has arisen the view that that nation, with her bands and tribes, stands as the descendant of Gog and Magog, who settled in those "north quarters" when they went out from Babel, the prophecy of Ezekiel concerning the latter days still calling their descendants by the names of the founders.

And, say these who claim to correctly interpret the writings of God's prophets, the dwellers in that land, even the Russian nation is a great and important factor in the accomplishment of the grand events prophesied of as to take place in the "last days," even in the bringing about of those changes in the government of the nations and of the whole world, such as will fill the people of every land with astonishment when they come to pass.

And probably none are any more interested than are the Elders and members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, in the supposed destined part that Russia will have in fulfilling the word of the Lord in the time of "turning and overturning," preparatory to the establishment of his kingdom and the righteous and peaceful reign of Christ on the earth.

Many are carefully comparing the events, now rapidly succeeding each other, with the utterances of God's prophets, and they see in the history so fast being made by the European nations, the working out of the great plan of the Almighty. Hence to them these movements of the kingdoms in the great drama, or tragedy of earth's story, will be of deep and increasing interest till the "consummation" of all things "spoken by all the holy prophets since the world began;" and to those so interested the present is a time of striking and peculiar interest.

It is conceded by journalists and historians that the people of Russia in the present struggle must, sooner or latter, win the victory, whether by the Czar giving up to their demands, or by his abdication and the succession of a more liberal and pleasing ruler, or by force of arms and the assassination of Alexander. His life has been sought twice during the past year, and it is boldly threatened by the revolutionary party as we write, (December 26th), unless he accedes to their wishes for a change. He remains now closely shut up in his winter palace like a prisoner, awaiting the movement of events.

While the Russians have progressed in sentiment and in civilization, as a people, their Government has remained stationary in its forms and its administration for centuries. All other European powers have gradually changed from the old rules of despotism and barbarism, and, in this increasing spirit of freedom that is everywhere abroad in the world since the bold Declaration of Independence by the American people a hundred years ago, have outgrown the unlimited monarchical forms of sovereignty, the terrible methods of crushing tyranny and autocratic power; and the more cruel modes of punishment by various devices of torture, by labor as a galley slave and other means of subjugation, have given place to less cruel forms. And this outside influence for more liberty of person and of thought, and for less autocratic sway, is being felt more and more in Russia, until all classes of the present generation are being affected and the rising one will doubtless ask for still more freedom. The liberal ideas of Western Europe and of America have gone into the Czar's country also, into the schools, universities, and homes of the people, until they urgently demand a better government, a milder rule, more humane methods of punishment, and a system throughout that will secure light and freedom for all classes.

As previously remarked, Russia has stood still during all the advancement among the peoples and nations of Europe, and she has retained her power over her subjects by the use of the most terrible forms of imprisonment and death. The tale of the horrors of Siberian exile is known everywhere, it standing as a synonym for nothing else in our day in the way of torturous bondage. No other punishment fills the Russian mind with such dread, none other, when administered, gives to the body such prolonged suffering, and to the spirit such hopeless misery, as this banishment for life to the deep, damp, dismal mines of Siberia, where no ray of God's sunlight will ever cheer or bless them again in this world.

To see that these people are in earnest in their requests for better laws and greater freedom, we need but to note that they are daily facing torture, starvation, the terrible lash and the awful things of Siberia, in this strong endeavor of the present to bring about a concession to their just demands. They ask for a representative form of government like the English or German; they ask for a constitution, and they ask for the rights and privileges granted to most other nations, else they say that they will dethrone the Czar or take his life.

The heir to the throne is understood to be in favor of making the changes demanded, hence the idea among his subjects that if he will abdicate all may be made satisfactory. Otherwise Russia is likely to drift into deeper confusion and civil strife.

Among those that are being arrested daily by the Government spies and emissaries are some of the noblest of the land. Also artillery and engineer officers have been imprisoned for alleged conspiracy in the last attempt upon the life of the Czar. All these events add terror to the situation, and the rulers know not whom to trust or where to find faithful guards and officers. Every day increases knowledge of how wide spread is the conspiracy and spirit of revolution. The police are active, and are secretly making arrests of people of position and power, the arrests of these being kept from the public so far as possible.

What the near future may bring can not be told, but at the present writing the feelings of alarm and terror increase, and, as usual, revolution grows under persecutions in this case and great events, startling ones, may be at hand.

Since the above was written, comes the news (January 1st, 1880) from Russia, that the Czar, Alexander, has submitted a proposition to the Czarowitch (by which name the heir to the throne of Russia is known) to divide the rulership with him, the Czarowitch to have the government of home affairs and the Czar to retain control of foreign affairs. The revolutionary party consider this to be an important concession, and the first step towards a liberal government. It is doubtless a recognition by the Czar of the popular sentiment among his subjects. But they think that he will not long find a stopping place short of "a representation of the people in a constitutional assembly." So may it be realized. H. A. S.

Cure for Gossip.

EVERYBODY must talk about something. The poor fellow who was told not to talk for fear that the people would find out that he was a fool, made nothing by the experiment. He was considered a fool because he did not talk on some subject or other. Everybody must have something to say or give up society. Of course, the topics of conversation will relate to the subjects of knowledge. If a man is interested in science he will talk about science. If he is an enthusiast in art he will talk about art. If he is familiar with literature, and is an intelligent and persistent reader, he will naturally bring forward literary topics in his conversation. So with social and religious questions. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." That of which that of which the mind is full, that with which it is furnished, will come out in expression.

The very simple reason why the world is full of gossip is that those who indulge in it have nothing else in them. They must interest themselves in something. They know nothing but what they learn from day to day in intercourse with, and observation of, their neighbors. What these neighbors do, what happens to them in their social and business affairs, what they were, these become the questions of supreme interest. The personal and social life around them—this is the book under constant perusal, and out of this comes that pestiferous conversation which we call gossip. The world is full of it, and in a million houses, all over the country, nothing is talked of but the personal affairs of neighbors.

What is a cure for gossip? Simply culture. There is a great deal of gossip that has no malignity in it. Goodnatured people talk about their neighbors because, and only because, they have nothing else to talk about. Gossip is always a personal confession either of malice or imbecility, and the young should not only shun it, but by the most thorough culture relieve themselves from all temptation to indulge in it. It is low, frivolous, and too often a dirty business. There are country neighborhoods in which it rages like a pest. Churches are split in pieces by it. Neighbors make enemies by it for life. In many persons it degenerates into a chronic disease which is practically incurable. Let the young cure it while they may.

Cogitations.

I HAVE hesitated much because of doubts of the propriety of one so weak, and inactive in the cause, trying to offer thoughts for so valuable a sheet as the Herald.

I sit this evening with the Bible opened at the fifteenth Psalm, and the question presents itself "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill, Zion?"

The answering of this important inquiry solves, to a great extent, the "gathering," as to when and how it is to be brought about. It requires certain conditions and attributes to constitute a Zion of enjoyment such as is contemplated in God's promises to his children, and these conditions are in fact necessary to happiness wherever God's people are found; and any attempt upon the part of the people to gather without these conditions will be met with disappointment. Therefore the principal work of the gathering must be done while the Saints are in their scattered condition, and according to my present understanding success can not otherwise be met. The condition to which I refer is a "heart purification," a cleansing from selfishness and every other vice which gives rise to discord, schism, disunion, which in their very nature are calculated to destroy peace and happiness. One great object of the gathering is to enjoy the strengthening influence of the society of the Saints; and unless the society is of such a nature as to edify and build up, one of the chief ends will be lost. What would it amount to if the Church should buy the entirety of Jackson county and place the Saints there in peaceable possession, if the Saints so placed would become dissentious, quarrelsome, heady, proud, &c, would it be a Zion of enjoyment? By no means. No better than the world. It would not be the Zion that God designs.

We read in the Book of Covenants that "Zion is the pure in heart," this is apposite and to the point. When the Saints have attained to this degree of perfection, and through the providence of God are permitted to gather to the land of Zion, methinks it will contain all the elements of true happiness, which according to David's teaching, are an upright walk, a working of righteousness, speaking the truth in (from) his heart; backbiting not with his tongue, refusing to take up a reproach against his neighbor, honoring them that fear the Lord, swearing not falsely to hurt any man, putting not out money to usury, &c. He that possesses all these sterling qualities, which are all comprehended in "the pure in heart" shall never be moved.

The gathering is something in which each Saint is personally concerned, and a work, too, in which all have something to do. Let us not flatter ourselves that it depends on the moneyed men of the Church, that we can lay on our oars and wait for them to "purchase the lands" and then expect we can go up and get our inheritance without any effort on our part. No, no, let us not deceive ourselves with such dreamings, for it is certainly wrong, because not in consonance with the spirit of the gospel; for the gospel has never, nor will it ever offer to man something for nothing. If we ever get an inheritance in Zion, it will be because of honest, faithful toil, and worthiness on our part. For it to be a place of enjoyment to us, a preparation is necessary. I m often led to ask myself the question, when see and hear of so much bickering among the Saints, If the Saints were gathered, would they live in peace? If they can not agree in small branches, how could they if thousands were congregated? I am a strong advocate of the gathering, and look forth with joy to the time; but unless it is accomplished according to God's divine plan it will not be permanent. I believe the great work is nobly progressing. The preparatory work is pushing forward. The Church is gaining the necessary elements. The Saints are learning wisdom and are learning to understand each other better. We must not expect it will be the work of a day or a year, but as God works gradually and wisely, and as the work is a great one it will necessarily be a long time in being accomplished. When we take a glimpse at the preparatory work to the bringing forth the gospel it will be seen it was a gradual one. When the idea obtained in the mind of Columbus that there was land that could be reached by sailing westward, though it was implanted as we believe by the Spirit of God, yet how many years of toil passed before he could make the desired voyage. We find him applying to his own country Genoa, but was refused. To Venice he went with like results. After a tedious waiting for a decision of John II of Portugal, he abandoned him, and applied to Henry VII of England, who also refused. After spending seven years with Ferdinand and Isabella, of Spain, he finally succeeded after some fifteen years trying to get the necessary means. This was God's work, hence God's way of working, and is a fair precedent to his later works. After the discovery of America how many futile attempts to colonize were made; how many years of toil, how many lives were lost in the endeavor. And after it was finally colonized, how many years hard battle it took to free it from the tyranny of the mother country. To the historian it is plainly visible that the spirit of freedom was seen many centuries ago, but did not culminate until 1776 when the final blow was struck. I speak of this as I hope you see by this time to show that God's work is a gradual one. The work which began many hundred years ago, will finally end in the redemption of God's people, and their gathering place,—in their gathering home with songs of joy and looking forth to the coming of the blessed Savior to reign as king of kings, and lord of lords. Let the beautiful words of Whittier express the sentiment of every heart.

"I only know my present duty
And my Lord's command to occupy
Till he come.—Then at my post,
Where my Lord hath placed me in his Providence, I for one choose to stand.
No faithless servant frightened from My task, but ready when the Lord of The harvest comes."

At our late conference a good time was enjoyed and an important measure was adopted. The putting an elder into the field to spend his entire time in the ministry. If this was done by every district; it certainly would give the work an impetus which would be felt for good. The Saints in the region round about seem to have a double responsibility, for they are looked to for an example by all, and the progress of the gathering depends largely on them. Let us therefore, who are residents in the region, buckle on the whole armor and stand to the front of the battle; but while I pen this I am reminded of the words of Shakespeare, "He is a good divine who follows his own teachings. It were easier for me to tell twenty what were good to do, than be one of the twenty to do it. The mind may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper overleaps a cool decree."

Ancient Forts in Michigan.

THE Farwell (Mich.) Register of August 16, 1879, contains an interesting account of the present condition of the ancient forts on Rifle river, twelve miles east of West Branch, Mich., from which the following extracts are taken:

There are two of these forts, and an examination of the upper one, which is situated on a high bank near the river and twenty-five feet above the water, showed the enclosure to be regular in form; round or rather oblong, the longest distance being north and south.

The works consist of a ditch and earth embankment, which are found to be about 250 feet in circumference, and about five feet from the bottom of the trench to the top of the embankment, which appears to have been greatly reduced in height by exposure to the elements. Inside the embankment the ground is very level, save where trees grew, and there have been some large ones.

There are four entrances to this enclosure, one facing each of the cardinal points of the compass. These entrances or gateways are about wide enough to admit the passage of a wagon. Instead of the trench being completed around the entrance, and bridging the same, it terminates on each side of the passage-way, where a narrow strip of ground appears not to have been disturbed. These openings were undoubtedly protected by gates. On top of the embankment was a rampart of logs with a palisade. There can scarce be any doubt of this, as the remains of charred wood are found in different parts of the embankment. On the right hand side of each passage-way leading out, the embankment is higher than in other places.

About eight years ago the pine timber here was cut off. By counting the rings or yearly growth on a pine stump which stood on an embankment, it was found to contain 264, which, together with the eight years since the tree was out, makes this work at least 272 years old—long before the days of the Jesuit missionaries, or the first Whites that history records, which was in the year 1641—238 years ago. Thus it will be seen that the date of this work is anterior to the first permanent English settlement upon the American continent, and about the days of Queen Elizabeth of England.

The timber that now stands within the surroundings has grown since the erection of this fortification; for the trees found within this inclosure and those surrounding appear to be of about the same general size and age. Within about sixty rods, overlooking this work, are situated hills that rise perhaps, 100 feet above the surroundings, showing that the builders of the defence did not expect artillery to be used against it.

The other fort, which is the larger of the two, is situated three miles further down the river, and is much more imposing and impressive in appearance. Like the other, this is situated near the river on a slight eminence, and contains the same general characteristics—four entrances at right angles—north, south, east and west. Here the embankment in some places is ten feet high. The circumference of this work is over 600 feet. As in the other case, large trees grew on the embankment, and within the inclosure there was one above four feet in diameter. In the center of the western gateway stands a large hemlock tree, and the surroundings are covered with a thick, heavy growth of live timber. One tree which had been cut down near the edge of the inclosure was over four feet in diameter, and by counting the successive rings or circles of wood, was found to be about 390 years old.

Keep Out of Debt.

HALF the perplexity, annoyance and trouble that men have in the world is in consequence of getting in debt. It seems to be natural for some people to buy, and incur obligations without measure, so long as they can avoid paying ready cash. Give one of this sort a chance to buy on credit, and the questions of payment are matters that he cares but little about. But what a crop of trouble springs up from the seed of debt! How many gray hairs it brings, and how often it shortens life, sometimes leading men to commit suicide or murder. And yet how easy it is to keep clear of this terrible monster. Every young man should form a fixed and unalterable determination, before commencing his active business career, not to incur one penny of indebtedness under any circumstances. Never buy anything without you have the money to pay for it at once. Pay no attention to "splendid opportunities," "bargains," and the like. Such are only traps set to catch victims. If you see anything that you would like to possess, look first at your money pile and make the answer depend on that. Always pay as you go. If you are short of money, gauge your demands accordingly.

Acquaintance and Confidence.

SOMETIMES confidence grows through acquaintance, but not always. We may have the least confidence where we have the most thorough acquaintance. However cautious we may be, common fairness requires us to suspend judgment concerning those of whom we know nothing; but when, on becoming acquainted with persons, we find them guilty of little tricks, and honey-combed with traces of craft and meanness, we grow increasingly suspicious of them and desire to be free from their presence; just as we desire to retain those about us who prove themselves true and trusty and worthy of our confidence.

It often happens that we think least of the services of those who think most of their own abilities. Their self-consciousness and their anxiety to be regarded great and prominent, leads us to doubt and question whether sincerity is in them. Happy are they whose conduct is so frank and open and faithful, that long acquaintance only deepens the first favorable impression they make, and the regard of those who know them, and causes them to trust them with increasing confidence at every trial and under every circumstance of temptation. With such, to know them is to trust them, and to trust them is not to be disappointed. They are not moved by impulse or by self interest. They have principles, and they adhere to them. They know what is right, and they do it because it is right. Their fidelity does not depend on your confidence, your smiles or your rewards. They have a higher master;—they serve the Lord, and faithfulness in his service makes them faithful everywhere else.

Gather up the Fragments.

THE fragments of a broken life can be so gathered up as to make a noble and even a happy life unto the end. Many a time, as we go on our troublous way through the world, are we cheered and encouraged by the sight of such: old men who have done their work, and for whom is come the time of rest—the “blind man’s holiday” between the lights, when they do nothing, and nobody expects them to do anything but to look back on the fruits of their labor, and rejoice; old women who have their children around them, and grandchildren, in whom they take over again all a mother’s delight freed from a mother’s anxiety. Lastly—and these are not the least numerous, and perhaps the most touching of all—unmarried women, whose lives must necessarily have been incomplete, barren of joy, or clouded with incurable grief; yet one has but to look on their faces, sweet and saintly, to perceive that their evil has brought forth good—that, whatever their own lot may have been, to others they have proved a continual blessing. How can those fail to be blessed who are everybody’s comfort and everybody’s help?

Occasionally, too, we meet persons, still in middle age, for whom, it is easy to see, the sun has gone down at noon. Something has happened—we know not what, or perhaps we do know, but never mention it—something which will make their future like that of a tree with its “leader” broken; it may not die, it may grow up green and strong, but it will never grow tall, it will never be a perfect tree. With them, too, life in its highest sense is over; the play is played out—the feast is ended; there is nothing left but to gather up the fragments and endure.

And they are gathered. Slowly, painfully maybe, but it is done. Nothing is lost. Nothing remains to cumber, corrupt, or decay. Everything available to use still, is used—strength, talents, energies, affections; all that God gave has been given back to Him; not, perhaps, in the way the offerer once desired to give, but nevertheless in the right way, as the final result proves. And He has accepted the sacrifice, and requited it, too. Not, perhaps, with earthly felicity, but with something better than happiness—peace; “the peace of God which passeth all understanding.”

There is a psalm of David—poor King David, who paid so dearly in sorrow for every sin he committed, yet who had strength over and over again to gather up the fragments of his piteous, errorful life, and live on—aye, and to die in faith, and in hope of his never-built temple—there is a psalm, I say, in which he speaks of those who “have their portion in this life.” He never blames them; He envies them not. Neither does he murmur at the will of God, who sees fit to fill them with His “hid treasure.”

But “as for me,” he continues—and you can almost hear the ringing of the triumphant harp, David’s harp of solemn sound—“as for me, I will behold Thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with Thy likeness.

Thoroughly “satisfied.” Nothing lost. Nothing scattered or wasted. No fragments to be gathered up; everything perfect and complete in him—in the fullness of Him which filleth all in all.—Miss Mulock.

Talking with God.

THERE is a pleasure in mutual conversation. We like to talk with people, we talking to them and they talking to us. We are not fond of having people talk to us by the hour, and not allow us an opportunity to say a word; nor are we pleased to talk to others and receive no answers from them.

Prayer is talking to God. Before him we pour out our hearts. We tell him our needs; we speak to him as man speaketh to his friend. But he has something to say to us; he wishes to teach us what is his will, and what is for our good. He talks to us in his Bible. If we would have God hear us when we speak to him, we must hear him when he speaks to us. If we would have answers to our petitions, we must return answers to his commands. And if we will from day to day listen while God speaks to us from his Word, we shall find him ready to hearken when we speak to him, for he has said: “If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done.” If we will heed the teachings of the Word of God it may be said: “When thou goest it shall lead thee; when thou sleepest it shall keep thee; and when thou awakest it shall talk with thee.” But if we refuse to hear the voice of God in admonition and instruction, the time will come when we shall appeal to him in vain, and when he shall say: “Because I have called and ye refused, I have stretched out my hand and no man regarded; I also will laugh at your calamity, I will mock when your fear cometh.” We have ears to hear all other voices. We listen to beggars and to strangers, to friends and to foes—shall we not listen and hear what God the Lord will say to us.

The Jews in Palestine.

“Judging by reports which appear tolerably well confirmed, the Jews are little by little retaking possession of their ancient patrimony. Eighty years ago the Sublime Porte permitted residence in the holy city to only 300 Israelites. Forty years ago this number was raised, but the Jews were obliged to reside in a special quarter of the city which bore their name. This last restriction, however, disappeared in its turn ten years ago, and since then the Jews have bought up all the land in Jerusalem that could be bought, and have even built entire streets of houses outside the walls. Naturally, the increase of the population has been followed by substantial progress. Synagogues and Jewish hospitals have multiplied. The German Jews have no less than sixteen charity associations, and in the interior of the city one may count already twenty-eight ‘congregations religieuses.’ Two journals have been started. In the Rothschild and other Jewish hospitals 6 000 patients are ministered to annually. A Venetian Jew has given 60,000 francs to found a school of agriculture in Palestine. Baron Rothschild, at the time of the last loan of 200,000,000 made to Turkey, accepted as security a mortgage on the whole of Palestine. Owing to the Jewish immigration, the population of Palestine has doubled during the last ten years. In 1875 there were 13,000 Jews in Jerusalem only. The value of the land at the gates of the city has increased more than tenfold; building and constructing work of all kinds is carried on night and day and it is to be remarked that the immigrants, who, to a large extent, are from Russia, are animated by religious enthusiasm of a very pronounced type. Given the industrial enterprise and activity of the Jews, one may predict the resuscitation, at no distant period, of this once so flourishing a province.”

The Useful and the Beautiful.

THE tomb of Moses is unknown; but the traveler slakes his thirst at the well of Jacob. The gorgeous palace of the wisest and richest of monarchs, with cedar, and the gold, and ivory, and even the great temple of Jerusalem, hallowed by the visible glory of the Deity himself, are gone; but Solomon’s reservoirs are as perfect as ever. Of the ancient architecture of the Holy City, not one stone is left upon the other, but the pool of Bethesda commands the pilgrim’s reverence at the present day. The columns of Persepolis are mouldering into dust, but its cistern and aqueduct remain to challenge our admiration. The golden house of Nero is a mass of ruins, but the Aqua Claudia still pours into Rome its limpid stream. The Temple of the Sun, at Tadmore, in the wilderness, has fallen, but its fountain sparkles in its rays, as when thousands of worshippers thronged its lofty colonnades.

It may be that London will share the fate of Babylon, and nothing be left to mark it save mounds of crumbling brickwork. The Thames will continue to flow as it does now. And if any work of art should rise over the deep ocean of time, we may well believe that it will be neither a palace nor a temple, but some vast aqueduct or reservoir; and if any name should flash through the mist of antiquity, it would probably be that of the man who, in his day, sought the happiness of his fellowmen rather than glory, and linked his memory to some great work of national utility or benevolence. This is the true glory which outlives all others, and shines with undying lustre from generation to generation, imparting to works some of its own immortality, and in some degree rescuing them from the ruin which overtakes the ordinary monument of historical tradition or mere magnificence.—Edinburgh Review.

Beware of humble self; it is the proudest frame you can be in.

Every day will bring its own troubles, and God will every day give us more grace.

PERSECUTION.

WHY does not the Reorganization suffer persecution?

This is a question just now troubling our Utah friends. A writer in a late Salt Lake Herald, states with quite an air of triumphant assertion that these Josephite elders can dress well, sleep well, and be cared for well, and go here and there preaching at will, and without persecution. In this writer's mind the absence of persecution renders the Reorganization untrue. Others have expressed a similar thought.

There are two ways to redeem Zion named in the law. One of them is "by blood," the other is "by purchase." The consequences to result from either course are clearly defined, and the people of the Church given their choice. As the choice is made so are the consequences to be. If the choice was made to redeem by blood, the enemies were to be upon those so choosing, and they were to be "scourged from city to city and from synagogue to synagogue." If the choice was to redeem by purchase, then they were to be "blessed."

It seemed to us at an early day of our ministry that the "by blood" policy had been tried long enough; and that if for no other purpose than to try an experiment, the other, or the "by purchase" policy should be tried.

One may say in objection, that there has been no attempt to redeem the land by blood, that is, by an armed invasion. Let us see. Armed invasion with a conquering host is one thing; an active preparation for such an event is another thing; but they are of the same kind, differing only in degree—the one is but the prelude and leads to the other. Will any one deny that there was a preparation for war, a spirit of blood shedding engendered and fostered among the people called Saints? If any do, let them read the history, and they will find that from the very day the Church began to feel itself secure in Nauvoo a military spirit was infused into the leading men, and thence into the people. It was this that made opportunity for such men as James Arlington Bennett, John C. Bennett, Col. Brower and others, whose chief interest in the Mormon Church, or their religion is proved by the lapse of time to have been the desire to advance their own ambitious views for self promotion and aggrandizement. What other than the spirit of war could prompt men holding high spiritual positions to prefix the appellations Lieutenant General, General, Colonel, Major and Captain, to their names, and take pleasure (or pride) in so doing. It was a preparation, a spirit of preparation for a redemption that was to come "by blood."

There came a time when guns, pistols, swords and knives were as familiar to the eyes and hearts of many of the so called Saints as were the Bible and Book of Mormon; and, may God forgive the people for the sins of their leaders, many grew more anxious to acquire a knowledge of the art of war, than to secure an acquaintance with the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Even the children were trained and drilled, with the intent that they might be familiarized with military tactics, and learn the art of war.

With this spirit of warlike preparation grew the habit of denouncing their enemies; and, co-existent with the sham battles that were fought, grew the desire to see the day come when they might "throw down the towers" of the enemy, and go in and possess the goodly land.

To us, all this was within the intent and meaning of the terms "by blood." The after experience of the people proves this; and, whether it may be styled persecution or not, the fact remains that nowhere have that people found rest.

It may be said, and these same men who point to the Reorganization and say in self righteous derision, "O, they are not persecuted!" may say it, Why, this man denounces his father in open and harsh terms! But they mistake us. We do not denounce the men, but we deprecate, and, with regret and shame, the measures in which they were either movers or victims. These measures we have a right to examine; and, in the light of the law, to decide as to our course touching them.

The men sleep, the measures lived on, and in their train have brought the consequences declared. We have shared these consequences and are satisfied. Besides this, the work inaugurated by Joseph and Hyrum Smith was and is of more importance than was, or could be their earthly lives; and as those lives were but the spheres in which the issues of their salvation were to be sublimated, and ours are but the same, we must learn by what they did, and left undone, by what they experienced and suffered, how we may become better and wiser.

To us of the Reorganization, it is not a question of Joseph Smith, or Hyrum Smith; of Moses or of John, but of Jesus Christ and the work of redemption for man. And if God could say to Moses, "This is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man," we see no reason why we may not feel and manifest an interest in that work of God superior to and to the exclusion of earthly ties and considerations.

The gospel theory proposes that Christ hath purchased his right to an inheritance, on the earth and in his Saints; that they are "bought with a price," who become his; that a "ransom hath he paid" for the redemption of the world. This taken in connection with his abjuration of the sword; his bitter denunciation of them that "take the sword," that they shall "perish with the sword;" together with his statement that if his kingdom were of this world then "would his servants fight," all indicate that in the spirit of solicitation and purchase would he first redeem the world.

If in this conflict, this spiritual warfare, the servant is not above his master, then is there no warrant for the use of other means to redemption than purchase until this be exhausted. Unto the revelator it was stated, "He that killeth with the sword, must be killed with the sword," and as if to supplement their long waiting, "Here is the patience and faith of the Saints."

But it may be said, "The Saints did purchase and so redeem the land." Whoever makes this statement does not know how inadequately the facts support it. Only a small portion of the lands was ever purchased, notwithstanding the very decided expression of the Lord, both in 1831 and 1833, that they should so be purchased. In the first reference it is stated, "This is the will of the Lord your God concerning his Saints;" and in the latter, that "All the lands which can be purchased for money," not only in the one spot, but in the "counties round about."

To make this charge to buy more emphatic, and to bring the penalty for neglect more forcibly to mind, there is this pungent mention of the command not to shed blood; "and if by blood, as you are forbidden to shed blood, lo, your enemies are upon you." The opposite to this is clearly defined. In the expression, "if by purchase then are ye blessed," is all that needed to have been stated. "Blessed are ye when men hate you and persecute you for my name's sake," was not written of, nor for the encouragement of those who disregarded the plain teachings of Christ, and thus brought persecution upon them. It was however spoken to, and for the sustaining of those who by patient persistence in keeping within Christ's commands, received the hate and consequent evil entreatment at the hands of the enemies to the Master.

The Saints should know by this time that the experiment of purchasing the lands, with all the accompanying characteristics of that effort to purchase, has not had a sufficient trial; unless it is being done in and by the Reorganization.

And now, because we and our co-workers are trying the purchasing policy, with all the other principles and expedients that are clearly attached to and are identical with the actual purchase of the acres of valley, hill and plain, there is a terrible cry—"Oh! we are the righteous; and these Josephites are unrighteous! Behold! they are not persecuted as we are!"

We, of the Reorganization are seeking the blessing promised right there, "If by purchase, then are ye blessed." Not in our courts resounds the tread of armed men; not upon our sacred roll of spiritual authorities is found the titles of the sword; not upon our patriarchs, priests, and elders do we confer the badges and insignia of military distinction and renown; not in our council meetings do the ring of the scabbard, and the dull thud of the carbine and the rifle mark the men who are holding aloft the Ensign of Peace; not in the hearts, nor on the faces of the elders, does the war spirit kindle ablaze at the sound of the trumpet and the drum; for unto them does the solemn march of time signify the coming of the Monarch of the earth; who, in the habiliments of Peace, will, by his Spirit, subdue the evil and the wrong.

If it may be truthfully said of the Reorganization that they are permitted to abide in peace, while they are trying to build up Zion and establish the pure in heart, it is significant; and its significance is found in the fact that it is teaching the principles of Mormonism as they were taught in the days when the Church was prospered; in addition to which, they have adopted the principle of purchase, with its concurrent accessories, in place of the redemption-by-blood theory. In this they have been blessed indeed; and therefore, we are not disturbed that we are not persecuted. For those who were to do the final work for the gathering of the honest in heart, were to find favor in the eyes of the people; and the Lord was to give them this grace and favor. What, therefore, the Lord giveth, as grateful recipients we shall lift our eyes to heaven and say, Glory, Honor and dominion be to Him who ruleth on high, Forever, and Forever.

Again, accompanying the statement respecting the shedding of blood this is pointed out, "Satan putteth it into their hearts to anger against you, and to the shedding of blood." If this was Satan's work, the effort was to entice the Saints to commit the overt acts of blood shedding that they might themselves destroy their own right to favor and peace upon the land. Whether the Saints knew this, or not, the Adversary did; and like himself he tried to induce the Saints to put forth their hands to pluck the forbidden fruit. He knew that the evil consequences of disobedience would certainly ensue to the erring ones. Distress and eviction were the results likely to ensue, and if he could but manage to cause the people to be the responsible agents of their own disasters, he could say, they did it, and exonerate himself. Their sins would be upon their own head.

The writer in the Herald before referred to states further that these Josephite elders do not have to wander in "sheepskins and goatskins," taking shelter in the "dens and caves of the earth." So far as this is concerned, we were not aware that these complaining Brighamite elders were under the necessity to do these terrible things; and we are sincerely glad that for our part we can not truthfully be called "wolves in sheep's clothing."

But, in some localities, many of them, these same Josephite elders, are in danger of their lives being taken; their reputations are blackened, their liberty of speech denied to them; threats are made and overt acts of violence offered,—the alleged reason for which is, that they are of the same faith and practices as are the Brighamites, by reason of which the "way of truth is evil spoken of." Let these Brighamite elders throw down their weapons of rebellion, cease to teach and to practice that which the Josephites war against as improper and evil in the children of Zion, return to the religion and holy practice of the Church in its early prosperity; and they too may go "here and there" preaching where they will, making friends for themselves and the Master's cause everywhere they go. Let them do this, and like doves to their windows, shall the weary and worn "come to Zion with songs of rejoicing upon their heads;" and in their hearts the peace that passeth understanding.

The places where the Latter Day Saints of the Reorganization dwell, as a rule, accord to them the meed of fearless, unflinching steadfastness in the declaration of their views and doctrines. Their religious cotemporaries give place to them only as they win their right to recognition and consideration. Many of the clergymen of the popular denominations regard them as heretics, of a bad type, whose influence and teaching are destructive of the interests of the Christian church, so called; and so only tolerate them with a sneer, or a frown. But the people, the thinking and investigating, liberty loving people, the "common people" give place and a hearing to them; and in spite of ostracism, in spite of the opprobrium wrong doers and unfaithful shepherds have brought upon the flock of God, these ("Josephite elders") elders of the Reorganization, ministers for Christ are pushing the cross victoriously forward. They will continue to do so, we trust, in honor; for, while they shall do so, the bulwarks of truth are round about them, and they shall continue to prosper; but, if they shall be lured from the standard and ensign of Peace, by the spirit of war, "that which maketh desolate," the enticements of the flesh, or the love of self aggrandisement, the history of the past warns them that they too, shall be driven from the land where they now hope to receive their inheritances, and be "scourged from city to city and from synagogue to synagogue."

Brethren, Saints of the Reorganization, stand firmly in this peaceful spirit of purchase and redemption; and the sweet songs of Zion's messengers with her redeemed children, shall soon resound from the "rivers" that traverse the centres of "Joseph's land," unto the "ends of the earth." And he who carries in his hands the "law" that is to "go forth from Zion," shall find that to be a talisman before whose touch the walls of spiritual Babylon shall crumble to dust; and they who will not flee from out those crumbling ruins shall be overwhelmed in the fall thereof. We stand in striking contrast to our contemporaries in the Salt Land; for while the sectarians denounce and oppose us as seditious heretics, ignorant, unlearned and presumptuous, they gladly see and help to push us into the breach to defend Christian truth against error and infidelity, as they class unbelief; though they denounce us as allied to those of the Salt Land by reason of a supposed common origin; these Salt Land Saints scout us as heretics, apostates, recreant and sectarian, by reason of our persistent warfare against what we believe to have been improperly and unlawfully added to the faith of the Church of Christ by them. Refusing to hold converse, or discussion with us, because they so hold us apostate, they still are glad to class us with the sectarians and as those who are not "persecuted." That is a strange position in which men may be placed wherein there is no compensating, or alleviating conditions; hence in this labyrinth of dilemmas in which it may be supposed by these who say we are not persecuted, that they have placed us, and where they would fain believe that we are, there is this alleviating circumstance; the Lord said that he would bless a people who should do as we are striving to do; and the very blessing that he declared he would bless them with, these men accuse us of having, therefore, we must be the people he referred to.

CONTRARIETIES.

BRO. A. KENISON, writing from Eagle Rapids, Kansas, rather deprecates the differences that he sometimes sees in the HERALD between different writers upon the same general subject. He argues, and perhaps rightly, that they should all be of one mind. We remind the brother, and all others of the Church, that we do not hold ourself responsible for these differences; and are only responsible for the general spirit of the articles presented. That there are differences of opinion and reasonings presented, we know; but we really see no reason why there should not be, if indeed we are to "grow in the knowledge of God." There must be a comparison of views, or we shall never "see eye to eye." A comprehension of what others' views are will aid us in determining our own.

If a man gives his views, and the reasons for them, in civil and temperate language, there is no just reason to condemn him if he perchance sees things in somewhat different lights than does his brother. The same brother objects to an Elder advancing an idea and another coming right after him contradicting it, the one denouncing the other. This we believe to be wrong and inconsistent, and productive of harm; men may differ without denouncing each other as being false teachers.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Does the Church permit its members to belong to Secret Societies?

Ans.—The Church neither commands its members to unite with, nor prohibits them from belonging to secret societies.

Q.—What should be done with members of the Church who belong to one, or more secret societies, if the laws of the Church forbids them so doing?

A.—Disfellowship them.

Q.—If the laws of the Church do not forbid members to unite with secret societies, what is the meaning of the following passages: par. 1:1, 18:42, 6:38?

A.—Paragraph 1, section 1, is the statement that the voice of the Lord is to be the criterion of judgment upon all men; and has no more reference to secret societies than to secret sins of individuals, or to insurance, railway and manufacturing companies.

We believe that the reference to secret combinations referred to in par. 18, sec. 42, is to apply to those secret political and other combinations by which the social and political rights of the people were and are endangered, making it difficult to succeed to so great an extent in the east as was and is now possible in the west.

The reference to the "enemy" in par. 6, sec. 38, is to us clearly applicable to the adversary of souls; who through men of all grades, and professions opposes the truth. The "secret chambers" is indicative of the fact that all organized effort against the Saints will be contrary to the laws of the land, hence secret; having its rise in secrecy, not in open, fair light of day. We can not in this see any reference to existent societies, usually called secret orders. Many of these secret orders are simply beneficiary and soon outline the object of their organization, and none of them, with possibly an exception or two, have any extensive political significance now, if they ever had any.

Q.—Why do some of the elders speak in favor of, and some against secret societies?

A.—We can not tell, any more than we can tell why one elder thinks that salt tastes sweet and another that it tastes sour. One man may construe every passage that we have written of in this answer to mean, and hold that the Lord intended that it should mean, and apply to every secret society of whatever complexion, or character; while another may construe them not necessarily applying to any of them. The Book of Mormon quite plainly indicates that we should be distrustful of all secret societies, organized and carried on to "get power and gain." Of these we are distrustful, and can see no good reason why Saints should identify themselves with them. As for us personally, we have neither time, money, nor inclination to spare for membership in any of them. But our opinion is not Church law, nor infallible; therefore, we can not insist that every body must see as we see. We know some good Saints who have belonged to one or the other of the popular societies; and we know that these men do not sanction wrong purposes, or wrong doing by anybody, whether they are members of that society or not. At the same time we think that time and money could be better employed than in the service of any one of them, that we know anything about—and we know precious little of any.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A CONTRIBUTION is received from Bro. J. M. Terry, which we accept and insert with pleasure, and give Bro. Terry a welcome. Others of our young Elders and co-laborers would do well to make an effort of their powers, as Bro. Terry has done.

Bro. A. J. Cato, silenced at last session of Conference subject to inquiry by the Presidency, has made satisfactory acknowledgement and restitution to parties offended, evidence of which has been made to the Presidency; his license has therefore been restored to him, with letters of instruction and advice, and he is at liberty to labor again in the gospel field. Trusting that Bro. Cato's chastisement and affliction may chasten and purify, we wish him success in the truth. It is but just for us to state that testimonials of Bro. Cato's recent excellent behavior are in our hands from Brn. Billingsley, Bullard, Pollard, Walker, Sherrill and Bradley, all of them near to the place of his labor. Bro. Cato has answered our inquiries frankly and without acrimony or malice toward any.

Elder Job Brown, of Clinton, Iowa, a licensed Elder of the Minnesota Conference of Adventists, visited Plano December 18th, and delivered a short series of lectures on the Prophetic History of Our World, as depicted in the symbolic language of Scripture. The Saints were his principal hearers, very few of those outside turning out. An unusual degree of excitement in the town of different sorts, kept some away; and the busy preparation for the Christmas holidays kept others. The course proved interesting and instructive to the Saints. He left Plano en route for home, on Monday, December 22nd.

Bro. Albert Haws sends us five new subscribers from Washington Corners, California. He says that he adopts the following tactics: He goes to his most reliable neighbors and presents the claims of the HERALD as an opponent of the errors of Mormonism in Utah, and asks them to help us by sustaining our paper. Washington Corners lies not far from the one-time headquarters of Fremont's early explorations. It is within sight of Fremont's Peak and within a few miles of Mission Peak, about three miles of the old Mission San Jose, among the most salubrious and lovely spots in all California. The change that has taken place at this spot would astonish the Pathfinder himself, we should think, so different must be its appearance now to what it is described by him in his Explorations. It was to us one of the most interesting places that we visited in 1876. We thank Bro. Albert for his efforts. He is an old play and schoolmate of ours; and we appreciate his love of the cause.

Bro. Elias Land, Lone Star Branch, Texas, says that the Saints are striving for the faith,

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert, Dow City, Iowa, has been quite sorely afflicted for some months past with sickness in his eyes. In addition to this personal pain and disability, a little one was born to them, lived a few days and was taken away by death, a succession of trouble that has kept him from his field of labor. He writes: "My eyes are better than they were, though they are far from being well. I could not stand continued night meetings; and am therefore unable to take the field. I hope the Saints will be patient, not quick to condemn; and if the good Lord will, I will go forth by and by. My prayer is for the redemption of Zion, the continued progress of God's work."

Sister Mary C. Rogers writes from Dennisport, Massachusetts, that the work is going on slowly there. She has, as have all Saints, been sorely tried, but is now greatly rejoicing.

Bro. C. Wicks, was in Plano during the Holiday week, and spoke in the Saints' chapel at that place. He left for his field of labor in Michigan after the opening of the year.

Bro. W. H. Kelley has been in Sanilac, Michigan, and in Canada; was en route to Steuben, Indiana, when he last wrote. Bro. C. Scott, was at Holstein, Canada, with Bro. James A. McIntosh, and Bro. G. Weston with Bro. B. V. Springer in Southern Indiana.

Bro. William Williams writes from Savanah, Illinois, that the members of the Church there and many of the outside friends, are quite anxious that some one should come there and preach. They seem quite desirous to hear the story of Christ as the Elders of the Reorganization tell it. O, that the Master would answer our prayers and send more and worthy laborers into the harvest field.

Bro. Wm. O. Closson writes from Excelsior, Wisconsin: "My brother and I have eight miles to go to church on Sundays; but we love to go to the Latter Day Saints meetings. I am a member of the Wheatville Branch. We enjoy a great portion of the Holy Spirit in our branch."

Bro. I. N. White writes: "Just closed my meetings in Powesheik county. Baptized four, and left many more much interested. Had some opposition, but done us good. Will re-open my efforts there next Friday night, and continue while the harvest is ripe. Bro. R. Goreham (Priest) still assists me—doing the baptizing."

Bro. Otis C. Eaton, writing from Winterport, Maine, December 8th, last, gives an excellent account of the desires of the Saints there to keep within the way of life. He is doing what he can.

Bro. W. T. Bozarth returned December 24th or 25th to his home, from a trip from Johnson and Pettis counties, Missouri. He found the people quite willing to hear. Bro. G. T. Griffiths and himself were to start on the 27th for a mission. May the Spirit accompany.

Bro. A. C. Everett, now at Springerton, Illinois, sends word of his improvement in health, by God's blessings. In spiritual things he is also alive and rejoices.

Bro. T. E. Thompson, lives near the station of Sumner, on the O. & M. R. R., in Richland county, Illinois, not Chauncy, though the latter is his post office address, in Lawrence county. Any Elder who can visit him he will meet at Sumner.

Bro. C. G. Lanphear wrote from Ford county, Illinois, January 5th. He was laboring in the Piper City Branch. He had been at Mission and Streator just previously.

Bro. Morris T. Short, Joplin, Missouri, wrote December 9th. He is yet with his father, who is still sick. However, Bro. Morris attended their district conference, and he reports a large attendance and a peaceful and profitable session. Those not of us listened eagerly to the preaching of life and salvation.

Bro. L. R. Devore wrote from Jackson county, Ohio, December 6th, that there was a prospect of gathering in some more souls as the result of his labors. The Saints of his branch enjoys much of the Holy Spirit. He writes later that he baptized on Christmas Day, 1879, a man aged seventy-four years, a fact worthy of mention.

Bro. D. S. Crawley, of Cherokee, Kansas, is out preaching from time to time as he can leave home. He loves the cause of Christ.

Bro. M. V. B. Smith, in charge of the Davis City Branch, Iowa, says that they are flourishing and now enjoy the gifts and blessings of the gospel, peace and union prevailing.

Bro. N. J. C. Oleson, of St. Louis, feels deeply interested in the Danish Mission, and very desirous that some Elder of the Danish nation in this country should offer and prepare himself to go. Bro. Oleson is a Dane but is not in the ministry.

Bro. John Pett, Galland's Grove, Iowa, wrote December 16th, that he and Bro. Clothier were to start out soon for the northern and eastern parts of that district to preach. By their conference minutes we judge that the Elders of that district intend to be lively this winter, or that the conference intended that it should be anyway, and we hope they will all have good news to bring in at their March convening.

Bro. J. F. Harris, Coal Valley, West Virginia, is circulating tracts to prepare the people for hearing the gospel should a minister come there, as Bro. Harris desires there should. We commend him for his zeal and wisdom in thus removing prejudice.

Bro. Geo. Wyman, of Fontanelle, Adair county, Iowa, writes in gratitude for the knowledge that God has given him of the truth of his work and word. May he abide steadfast and do good to many.

Bro. Geo. S. Hyde wrote from Woodbine, Iowa, December 15th, favorably of the condition of the work in that part of Iowa, and he says that the name of the Latter Day Saints is growing more and more honorable, and kind people on every hand welcome to their homes the messengers of the Latter Day Work. Bro. Hyde is engaged in doing a part therein.

Sister Elvira Brayton has removed from Gladwin, Michigan, to New Bedford, Massachusetts, and is alone there, standing bravely for the gospel of Christ, and having joy in so doing.

Bro. B. V. Springer, who still remains preaching in Southern Indiana, says that their late conference was a success. He had baptized four persons since writing last. Prospects good. He expected to go north soon.

Bro. Stephen and Sister Jemima Califf, at Wilson, Adair county, Missouri, are likewise distant from any branch of the Saints but they remain strong as heretofore.

Bro. and Sister Spann, at Reedsville, Meigs county, Ohio, are still strong in the faith and anxiously await the coming of some gospel minister. They are alone and striving to live in the light and faith of the gospel, rejoicing in the truth.

One of the present duties clearly incumbent upon the Church is to prevent by careful scrutiny ordinations to the eldership of those whom the Spirit does not call, and who are not qualified by gift of endowment or acquirement. Ordinations for expediency are of doubtful propriety and frequently work injuriously to the individual and the Church. Ordinations for convenience are worse and are almost indefensible; and should not be made. Personal regard should not be allowed to loudly dictate the office to which a friend should be ordained. Probation will develop the man, and trial and advancement, are better than advancement followed by humiliation and abasement.

Bro. Thomas Bearss, Corinth, Ontario, wrote December 20th, that Bro. Robert Davis was then there, but he was not in good health. The work prospers, says Bro. Bearss, and the future is promising. We hope that Bro. Davis will recover better health soon.

Bro. J. T. Phillips sends a dollar to aid in sending tracts for distribution in Utah by our missionaries, and he hopes that many others will do likewise. He says that they have good meetings in the Renick Branch, (Missouri), the Lord's Spirit being with them. They rejoice in the prosperity of the work of God everywhere.

Bro. Charles Derry, laboring in the Utah Mission of the Church, wrote from Ogden, Utah, December 15th, saying: "We trust in God and in his name we labor and will patiently wait. Pray for us." We do, Bro. Derry, that your harvest, labored in and waited for, may abundantly satisfy your ardent longings for the salvation of men from the bondage of error.

Sister Clara E. Leland of Pecatonica, Illinois, is visiting her friends in Brooklyn, New York. Being zealous in Christ's cause she sends for more publications to aid her in presenting its truths.

Bro. R. Gould, London, Ontario, mentions the satisfaction felt by the Saints there over their late conference and their pleasure in meeting their former president, Bro. J. J. Cornish, once more, and Bro. R. Davis. Bro. Gould feels well over the situation. He writes later: "I humbly solicit the earnest prayers of the Saints for us in this branch, for humility, love and unity, and that the good Spirit may be given to us. Many around here would embrace the latter day work if hindrances were removed." Comment is perhaps needless.

Bro. John Eames wrote Dec. 22d, 1879, of his continued efforts in that place to lift up the banner of truth. He greatly deplors having kept silence as to his faith for so many years, and is endeavoring to show the people where he stands and that he has begun anew and in earnest. The Baptist ministers and people seem to be very friendly to him and he speaks in their meetings and is called on to pray with them. He says that Bro. David Murray, recently baptized by him, an old-time believer, is much help and strength to him, and the prospect is fair for some to believe and obey, they think. May they wisely and successfully labor. Bro. Eames wishes the elders, in going from the States to Utah or homeward, all to call at Cheyenne, half-way between Omaha and Ogden.

Bro. William Aird, Heber City, Utah, reports their regular meetings and he rejoices in the gospel. He labors also for the spread of the Church papers and publications.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn of Shelby, Iowa, went into the town of Marne, Cass county, Iowa, some time since, and found the society of Methodists divided very much, even so that they had built two houses of worship and the sides were in open war against each other. He occupied the school house and aroused a strong interest in the gospel truths presented forcibly and ably, and some excellent results are hoped for by him. He speaks there alternate Sundays. At the close of the first meeting he found that two old-time Saints were in that place, those who had not forgotten the faith but ever holding it in their hearts; namely Bro. Rufus Peaslee and wife. They were comforted as lost sheep found, and Bro. Chatburn was encouraged. May God be with him in his labor of love for Christ's cause. He says that at Shelby their branch is in good spiritual condition and they are hoping to build a chapel the coming season.

Bro. James Perkins, at Morgan City, Utah, still stands for the cause of the Reorganized Church in that place and he hopes to see Bro. Charles Derry with them. They live near the South Morgan school house, Bro. Derry.

Sister Betsy Ames at Galesburg, Illinois, who was eighty-six years old on Dec. 23d, 1879, wishes to let her friends know that she still lives and is firm in the faith of the gospel, in whose progress she rejoices.

Bro. Thomas Hull, Hartford, Warren county, Iowa, bears testimony of the blessed power of the Creator as manifested to him by the gospel ordinances given in James 5:14. He also praises God for giving him a knowledge of the truth.

Bro. Daniel Evans of the Boon Creek Branch, Franklin county, Missouri, says that they are gaining in spiritual strength. Bro. A. Reese and George Hicklin of that (the St. Louis) district have visited them and preached several times. Thereby good was done and prejudice removed.

Bro. B. V. Springer has been doing some good work in Southern Indiana the past fall and early winter, having good audiences and many attentive hearers in various places, while the aid of the Spirit gave him power in presenting heavenly truths. October 13th he organized in Perry county the Mount Pleasant Branch which is enjoying spiritual blessings.

Brother James Buckley of Centralia, Kansas, wrote some time ago of the progress of their little branch, and we are glad to note that they were enjoying the blessings of God's Spirit and favor, both in the manifestations and in much joy in the kingdom of peace and love.

Lorenzo Barton, at Parowan, Utah, wishes that the hunters of Israel may find them, he is with one other, thirty-five miles from any of the Church membership.

Bro. M. O. Howard, Gainesville, Florida, wishes the Saints to remember the little band there, in faith and prayer that they may abide faithful to the end.

We thank the following brethren and friends for papers received: T. R. Hawkins, A. Greek, Thomas Henning, J. J. Cornish, J. M. Leland, James Lamb, M. H. Bond, Henry Marriott, John Ellis, G. W. Galley, C. G. Lanphear and James Caffall.

The wise man said, "Get understanding. With all thy getting, get wisdom." We say, get subscribers, every one of you, in the name of the HERALD. Get them, O, get them.

Bro. Joseph Westwood sends a St. Charles Cosmos (Missouri), containing an account of some pre-historic corn found near Madisonville, Ohio. It was dug out in what appears to have been an ancient burial ground, for a number of large skeletons were unearthed with the corn. By the hand of Bro. L. R. Devore we have a clipping from Bro. T. W. Smith about some provinces in Spain (three) that are shut off from the rest of the kingdom by mountains and that have no sea-ports, hence are isolated and for centuries have been almost independent, and in language and customs have been diverse from all other peoples, and from generation to generation have remained in their land-locked and water-locked country, unchanged. The Philadelphia Record sent us by some unknown one, contains an allusion to the inconsistencies of Utah Mormonism, especially to those seen between the teachings of John Taylor in 1850 and those in 1879. The Record mentions the commandment in the Book of Covenants, concerning one wife only, and says that the "Josephites" allege that polygamy is an excrescence upon the true faith.

Bro. Thomas Taylor writes from Birmingham, England, November 21st: "The work of the Kingdom is steadily moving in this land. We baptized five last week, in the Birmingham Branch. Some are being added in most other branches—all glory be to God. We are enjoying the peace of the gospel, and are receiving many blessings, especially in the healing of the sick. Trade is bad and times are hard; but still the Saints are rejoicing."

Bro. C. H. Pierce, at Clitherall, Minnesota, writes that some remain steadfast in the faith and some do not. They are far away from the body, and he asks the remembrance of the Saints for them in prayer that all who will may be confirmed and enabled to abide. So may Bro. Pierce and the others be blessed, we pray.

Sister E. G. Page, an old time and steadfast Saint, still lives at Hudson, Wisconsin, where she has lived and testified of the truth over thirty years. Bro. Miner and family, across the lake in Minnesota, whom we baptized in 1869, are the only ones who hold the faith thereabouts.

Bro. Adam See, in Adams Center, Wisconsin, longs to hear the sound of the gospel in that country. The HERALD comforts and teaches him greatly, and the opposing Adventists keep him alive and contending for the true faith, so that he is firm in it all the time, but he wishes his friends and neighbors to hear, as who does not that loves the work that gives such heavenly knowledge. "Let him who heareth say, Come." Bro. See and all the lone ones will have great rejoicing together by and by, if they abide faithful.

Sister Flora L. Scott writes from Lawrence, Michigan, that the branch there is in good spiritual condition, and prospering through the grace of God. Her husband (Bro. C. Scott) is still absent in Canada, preaching the gospel and aiding to build up the work there.

Bro. Daniel Munns, Good Intent Branch, Kansas, mentions their meetings and says that they rejoice in the good cause.

Bro. J. S. Goble, Blue Rapids, Kansas, mentions the progress of the work there and the joy of the Saints in the same.

ADDRESSES.

Heman C. Smith, Moss Point, Jackson Co., Miss.
Mark H. Forscutt, Plano, Kendall county, Illinois.
T. A. Phillips, Box 37, St. Thomas, Ontario.

THE following action by the Interior Department seems just, and puts the extra wives of muchly married men on their proper basis as wives.

PRE-EMPTION BY PLURAL WIVES.

An interesting decision has just been made by Acting Secretary Bell, of the interior department, in the case of Hugh Lyons against Rachael Stevens, of Salt Lake City, involving the question of the right of these parties to a section of land in the Salt Lake City land district. The claim of Lyons is rejected on the ground that the tract was not subject to pre-emption or settlement by him. Rachel Stevens, it appears, is one of the several wives of John G. Holman, whom she recognizes as her husband, and he, to all intents and purposes, governs and controls her acts. The decision holds, that in view of the polygamous condition, that if the first polygamous wife, while voluntarily retaining that illegal relation to a man, may in her own title obtain one hundred and sixty acres of public land, the second or twentieth wife may do the same, and the so-called husband would thus obtain, in fact, for his own use and benefit, the control of that number of tracts of public land. This will not be permitted under the homestead or pre-emption laws. "If this so-called wife," the decision continues, "should repudiate the illegal relation and cease to violate positive laws of her country and of the civilized world, the fact that she had at one time been called the wife of a man and had maintained that relation to him would not operate as a bar to her right. No woman, however, who voluntarily maintains and acknowledges her position to be that of a plural or polygamous wife, should be permitted to make a homestead or pre-emption entry of public land, as the very fact that she retains such relation is conclusive evidence that the entry is not made in good faith for her exclusive use and benefit."

News Summary.

Dec. 24th.—The Chilians are still successful against the allied forces of Bolivia and Peru in some heavy conflicts.

An ocean steamer foundered at sea, south-west of the Azores Islands. But few persons are thus far known to have escaped, nine men having been picked up from an open boat and carried to Queenstown, Ireland. The crew and part of the passengers left the sinking ship in eleven boats. What became of the others, not yet known. Over one hundred persons remained on board, and are supposed to have perished.

A dispatch from Berlin, Germany, says: "In a letter from Prof. Nordenskjold, the Arctic explorer to the Russian Geographical Society, he advocates the establishment of a regular navigation line to the mouth of the River Jenesei, in Siberia. He even believes that the mouth of the River Lena may be regularly reached from Russia and America, and with a view to this end, he proposes the establishment of lifeboat and hospital stations on the Siberian shores."

There is no change for the better in the situation of affairs at St. Petersburg. The arrests of several artillery officers for alleged complicity in the attempted assassination of the Czar at Moscow not only produced intense excitement, but have added to the general terror as showing the conspiracy was even more widespread than generally believed. The police are extremely vigilant and active, and are secretly making many arrests daily, the names and positions of the arrested parties being kept from the public as far as possible. The feeling of insecurity and alarm is general, and is becoming almost insupportable. The Czar remains virtually a close prisoner in his Winter Palace and his condition is unchanged. The latest advices from Cannes show that the Empress is in a critical condition, and the news of her death may be expected at any moment.

A Berlin correspondent states that the Russian Ambassadors abroad have received a circular purporting to issue from the Revolutionary Committee, threatening that if the Ambassadors do not represent to the Czar that the country wants a Constitution, the Czar will be removed from the throne.

25th.—Five more survivors from the foundered steamer were picked up from a small boat after six days' exposure and suffering on the sea, tossed and driven.

26th.—The war in South America is said to be virtually over, the Chilians being completely victorious over Peru and Bolivia, whose armies are shattered and destroyed.

Better news comes from Afghanistan for the British. The enemy have not seemed to improve their chances, as was expected they might, and the reinforcements have likely reached General Roberts at Cabul.

President Hayes, says a Washington dispatch, is determined to pursue an aggressive course against the Utah Mormons and polygamy. He would deprive them of all political power, and put Gentiles in their places throughout, and also deprive all polygamists of the right to vote.

27th.—A Mussulman priest has been arrested at Constantinople by the Turkish authorities for assisting to translate the Bible into the Turkish language. He had also been circulating Christian pamphlets. He was sentenced to death, but saved by the British ambassador, Layard.

The Abolition bill which has passed both houses of the Spanish Cortes provides for the gradual emancipation of slaves in Cuba in 1886, 1887 and 1888, after eight years of servitude (with certain provisions) under their present masters.

In Roumelia, Turkey, thousands of people are likely to perish of severe cold and starvation, unless help is sent them.

By the breaking of a rail yesterday, on the Chicago and Alton Railroad, a passenger train went fifteen feet down an embankment. Two persons were killed and twenty four wounded.

By an accident at East St. Louis, twelve freight cars were broken to pieces, three into splinters. Several men were wounded.

29th.—A terrible accident is reported from Scotland, namely, that a passenger train, while crossing a bridge over the Frith of Tay, was blown, with the bridge, down into the deep water, and it is supposed that all on the train were drowned. A great wind was blowing at the time, and up to the hour of sending the telegram no particulars had come in.

The news from Afghanistan is again pleasing to Britain. The Afghans attacked Gen. Roberts' stronghold, and were defeated, on the 22d inst. Then the cavalry and artillery sallied out, pursuing the enemy to a distance. The reinforcements under Gen. Gough arrived after the battle, and the troops were soon to re occupy Cabul.

A very destructive conflagration occurred in Boston, Mass., last night, burning the store of Houghton, Osgood & Co., book publishers, and several other valuable business houses. Loss one million dollars.

A $50,000 fire at Palestine, Texas, and one of $6,000 at Boone, Iowa.

Another steamer foundered at sea, the Arragon, from New York to England.

The Ute Indians in Colorado have not given up the ones engaged in the White River Agency killing, and the fear now is that they may fall upon and slaughter the whole Agency and Government Commission at Los Pinos, where the examination was held. The situation is considered critical, as no troops can reach that part quickly.

The boiler of a flouring mill at Springfield, Illinois, blew up yesterday, and, though only the life of the engineer was destroyed, all the buildings in the neighborhood were badly damaged for blocks around. The boiler head weighed 400 lbs, and the flues were sixteen feet long, each weighing about forty or fifty pounds, all of which went flying about.

30th.—The bridge and passenger train in Scotland, mentioned yesterday, fell a distance of 88 feet, and plunged into water 45 feet deep. Not one survived out of all on board. The bridge was the second largest in the world, being over two miles in length. It was supposed to be as strong as wood, iron and brick work could make it, and was looked upon as being one of the finest specimens of engineering art in the world. The spans that fell leave a gap of half a mile in the bridge. As to the number of lives lost, rumors vary it from ninety to three hundred. There is great excitement in England and Scotland over the matter.

Gen. Roberts, at Cabul, reports the Afghans badly demoralized by the late battle, and that he is occupying the lost positions.

31st.—An attempt was made, yesterday, to assassinate King Alphonso of Spain and Queen Christine, to whom he was married but two weeks since. They were fired at, as they rode in their carriage, by a young man of eighteen years. The king's life was attempted once last year.

Great floods occurred on the Canary Islands, December 21st, destroying houses and crops.

Rain and hail storms, thunder and lightning, and heavy winds have played havoc on the British coast, besides the destruction of the bridge over the Frith of Tay, where the train went down.

A serious riot in one of the districts of Russia is reported. It is reliably stated that "the Czar offers to transfer to his son the government of home affairs, retaining for himself the control of foreign affairs; and the Czarowitch has accepted." This is a concession to the Nihilists.

Cabul is re-occupied by the British troops. Previous to Gen. Roberts being in such a tight place he sentenced many Afghans to death, hanging forty-nine in one day. Even in England there is indignation over his acts in this line.

Jan. 1st, 1880.—It is stated that Kansas is becoming overstocked with Negroes, because of the exodus from the Carolinas, 15,000 having emigrated there the last fall.

2d.—Russian matters are becoming more important and critical. A number of army officers have been imprisoned, charged with complicity with the revolutionary party, the Nihilists. The Czar is evidently preparing the way for his son to come into power, so say the telegrams.

And now Spain is said to be "trembling on the brink of a political volcano, which is liable to break forth at any moment." A socialist or revolutionary party also exists there that may yet undermine kingly rule.

The famine in Northern Persia is reported as still increasing, and many people are likely to perish thereby.

3d.—The Hon. Charles S. Parnell, of Ireland, has arrived in New York City, having come to this country in behalf of the distressed people of Ireland. A reception committee met him down the bay and welcomed him on his errand of mercy and patriotism. He asks for financial aid, but more for American sympathy for Ireland's woe. He represents that two hundred and fifty thousand people in Ireland will be destitute by February.

In Russia the country between the Don and the Volga is famine stricken, and many people have already perished. Typhus fever has set in to aid destruction.

5th.—The Honorable Parnell, the Irish statesman and patriot, addressed eight thousand people in a public garden in New York City, last evening. A leading journal of Chicago, to day's issue, says: "The appearance of Parnell, the Irish leader, before the people of this country ought to be productive of benefits to the Americans as well as to the Irish. It will undoubtedly result in exciting widespread sympathy and active aid for the Irish in their present distress, but it ought also to disseminate a more general understanding in this country of the conditions which impose chronic poverty and practical serfdom upon the mass of Irish people at home. Americans will come to apprehend more correctly than ever before why it is that such vast numbers of Irish people have sought America poor, ignorant, and dejected."

At London, Ontario, a heavy rain caused a flood on the river Thames, yesterday. Valuable bridges were swept away, and houses in Kensington were submerged, the people having to flee.

It is feared that the famine in Armenia will become general all along the eastern border of Turkey.

One hundred and fifty million of paper collars are manufactured yearly in the United States.

6th.—A telegram from Colorado announces that the twelve Ute Indians, alleged to have had part in the White River Agency massacre, are on their way East for trial by the Government.

By a fire in New York, four persons perished, and six others were terribly hurt by the fire, or by jumping from the building. Some were mashed or broken entirely to pieces by jumping so far.

By an explosion in a Celuloid Manufacturing Company's works in Newark, N. J., six persons were killed.

By the explosion of a boiler in a mill near Baltimore, eleven persons were injured, none fatally.

Such heavy rains near Grand Rapids, Michigan, that railway and road bridges were washed away; and dams, highways, and fences were destroyed. The melting snow added to the waters greatly.

In Afghanistan, powerful chiefs are still said to be hatching trouble for the English.

Fresh disturbances are reported in Ireland. In Galway county the peasants and police came into collision, and in Mayo county an agent who undertook the eviction of a tenant was set upon and severely beaten.

7th.—The telegrams of to day announce that five hundred coal miners at Covington, Kentucky, have struck for higher wages; also, over a thousand of them at Belleville, Illinois, have done likewise.

Russia is gradually but surely increasing her military preparations, as all Europe is greatly interested in noting, and on the western border of her empire she is increasing the garrisons of her fortresses. England is especially on the lookout.

Great land meetings are still being held in Ireland. Near Sligo, 10,000 people attended one yesterday.

More revolutions in Mexico, this time in the state of Durango, against the government, and it is expected that the people in other states will also take part in it. What notoriety would Mexico have without these revolutions? Not any.

The tales of starvation in Silesia, Germany, are very sad. A letter in the London Times shows the horrors of the famine and its extent.

Correspondence.

HANNIBAL, Mo. Dec. 16th, 1879.

Brother John H. Lake left us this morning for Versailles, Brown county, Illinois; after tarrying eighteen days in our midst and baptizing seven precious souls. His presence and ministrations cheered and comforted us, and there has been begotten among the Saints here, a fresh zeal and love of the work which promises happy results. He enjoyed uncommon liberty in declaring the truths of the gospel, and while we sadly bade him adieu, we hope and pray that others may be benefited through his labors, as we have been. May his pathway be lighted up by the Spirit of God, and his heart be comforted and cheered in the continued success of his ministry. Yours in the gospel,

Dear Herald.—I notice a letter in the last Herald, without date or signature, containing a question which has been a poser to many, and has been the subject of a deal of conjecture and discussion, viz. What did Christ mean by saying that he that was least in the kingdom of God was greater than John the Baptist, at the same time saying there was none born of woman greater than he, (John)?

I have heard it variously answered. Never heard Fleetwood's explanation, but have heard Latter Day Saints express it thus; That John was not in the kingdom of God, having died before Christ established his Church, consequently he was less than one who had been admitted to the kingdom by conforming to the ordinances of initiation. As the brother said of Fleetwood's explanation, so I say of this one, "I do not admire it." I do not lay claim to being a "good able brother," but I believe our Savior gives us the key to this mystery himself. Let us try and unlock it thus. John says, "One cometh after me who is mightier (greater) than I, he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." (Christ.) The Savior said, "He that would be greatest among you let him be servant unto the least." He girded himself with a towel, took water, and servant like washed their feet, therein making himself less than the least in the kingdom; they were prospectively members of the kingdom. Christ proved his greatness by abiding his own test. In the importance of his mission John was greater than any man in, or out of the kingdom. Christ being God, and serving the least of his subjects, was greater than John and all others.

Let us have the opinion of others, that we may judge.

Brethren Joseph and Henry.—A few words from this part may be interesting to some. We have a branch of nine members, and in our meetings we have the comforting Spirit to encourage us to fight with diligence the good fight of faith. I am often constrained to say "O! it is good to be a Saint in latter days." Brethren Brackenbury and Mayo, of Independence, have preached in this neighborhood and they left a good impression with the people, and Bro. Brackenbury has preached four miles south of here at West Union, where quite an interest was shown. He gained friends for the cause, and many have expressed a desire to hear more. May the precious seed sown by all God's servants find good ground, so it will grow abundantly to the glory of their Redeemer, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,
ABNER LLOYD.

Bro. Henry A. Stebbins.—I left Philadelphia November 22d, for Hornerstown, New Jersey, where we held our District Conference. After transacting the business we met at 9:30 on Sunday for testimony meeting, and we had a time long to be remembered. The Spirit was poured out without measure. There was speaking in tongues and prophesying. Many cheeks were wet with tears, every heart seemed to be filled with love. It was a time I shall never forget. We closed our prayer meeting and then had preaching. We came together again at 2:30 p.m., and witnessed another pouring out of the Spirit of God. At 6:30 p.m. Brother Joseph Squire of Brooklyn, New York, preached to a full house. I feel confident that there is a good people in that region, and, with care, there will be a good branch and a large one raised up there.

One of the brethren said that he would give the ground to build a place of worship on, and they are going to try to build one next Spring. May God bless their efforts in so doing.

Yours truly,
JOHN STONE.

COVE, Jackson Co., Ohio,
December 25th, 1879.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins.—At a place called Lemric, about eight miles from here, I held a series of meetings. The people turned out well, and on the 20th I was challenged for a public discussion, by a Rev. Dr. Redfern of the Christian Union Order. I accepted, notwithstanding he boasted much of his great ability as a debater. The proposition was: "Resolved, that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the only true church of Christ upon the earth to-day, by the faith and doctrine they teach." I affirmed, and he denied. The debate commenced on Monday 23d ult. I expected to have met a champion, but I was disappointed. He did nothing but ridicule, slander, and utter falsehoods the whole day. I commenced at the bottom of the latter day work and built up. I presented the truth in as clear a manner as possible, and was aided by the Spirit. The excitement was great at the close of the discussion, and there were two parties to be seen clearly,—truth haters and truth lovers. It put me much in mind of some occasions we can read of in the former apostolic Age. I baptized one of the trustees of the church, also his wife; said to be one of the most honorable men in that community. Satan roared loud. This is five baptized since I returned. The branch numbers twelve, and is in good condition. It is but justice to say the Lord used a man of the world to get the above door opened,—the same man sends for the Book of Mormon. Pray for me, for I am but young in the work.

PORTLANDVILLE, Plymouth Co., Iowa,
Dec. 28th, 1879.

Although I rejoice in these gospel truths, yet I sometimes wonder how long we sisters will be left alone among the enemies of truth, without the sound of the gospel. I feel in great need of more teaching, yet I teach what I understand, to those who are willing to hear; and I earnestly pray God to guide me aright. I do not feel contented unless I am trying to advance in knowledge, and also to do something to keep God's work advancing. Dear ones in Christ, there are so many ways that we can work for the Master. If we can not go out to preach, let us sustain the hands and hearts of those who do go. If we have but just the penny to give let us cast it in. And we know that they always need our faith and prayers; and, for these to avail anything for their good or ours, we must walk justly before God and men. It is only to the faithful the promises are made. I ask an interest in the prayers of all that I may do what my hands find to do. Your sister in Christ,
M. A. CHRISTY.

SOUTH LOGAN, Dickinson Co., Kansas,
December 22d, 1879.

Brother Joseph.—Since the Semi Annual Conference I have labored in Smith, Jewell, Osborn and Mitchell counties; and have been greatly blessed of the Lord in speaking to the people, and regulating Church matters. I have opened four new places for preaching; was gladly received and the doctrine listened to with favor. I love the cause with all my heart and to see every one prompt to duty. The calls are many here for preaching and no one to go, or that will go. I realize the responsibility that rests on me, and therefore, shall always try to be at my post. The work here is in a prosperous condition, save a few things in some of the branches, and I hope they will soon come out all right. I have baptized four since conference, and there are many more almost persuaded. May we all so live that when our Master comes all will be well with us.
Your brother in Christ,
ISAAC N. ROBERTS.

NORTH WILLOUGHBY, N. S. W.,
Australia.

Bro. Joseph.—I received the Advocate safely, with many thanks to Bro. Rodger. I think it will be the means of doing a great deal of good. Bro. Gillen is visiting the Saints up the country. I expect he will soon be back to Sydney. I am still holding on to the faith. I have two sons at Salt Lake. The eldest one wrote that he desires to come back here, as he says that he can scarcely maintain his family, for there is such unjust tithing there. I feel sorry for them. I keep praying that our heavenly Father will open the eyes of their understanding so that they can see the truth as it is in Jesus.

Your sister in the new covenant,
KEZIA CARR.

GLEN EASTON, West Virginia,
December 29th, 1879.

Dear Brethren and Sisters.—The letters in the Herald are always cheering to me, and not seeing any thing from our branch for a long time, perhaps a word from us might prove interesting to some. There are but few of us that meet together, but we try not to forget the assemblies of ourselves. We have prayer meetings twice a week, when the weather will permit, and the Lord meets with us. We have had no preaching since last May, when Brn. L. R. Devore and S. W. Hogue paid us a visit and preached several times. I have realized greatly the lack of a minister, for how can we fully learn without a preacher. I am thankful that I can testify to the truthfulness of this Latter Day Work, for I know it is the truth revealed from heaven. I have enjoyed many blessings since I obeyed it, and the light that God gives his children is precious indeed. The Scriptures used to seem like a sealed book, but now filled with light from heaven. While I read the words of our Savior, his Holy Spirit bears witness with mine that I am an heir of his kingdom, if I only prove faithful to the end. I am alone, not one of my kin folks, that I know of, having obeyed the true gospel; but, by the grace of God, I am going to try to keep his commandments. Saints, pray for me. If an Elder would be so directed as to pay our branch a visit we would be glad to meet any one that might come, and they will find a home at my house while here, and we will do the best we can to make their visit both pleasant and profitable.

Your sister in the one faith,

MRS. CAROLINE WAYT.

WALLESEND, Australia,
November 28th, 1879.

Bro. Joseph.—We give thanks unto God for sending Bro. Rodger here with the everlasting gospel, in all its gifts and blessings; and that we have obeyed it. We send our best love to Bro. Rodger and his family, and that God will bless them with every thing that they are in need of, is the prayer of the Saints in Wallsend. Also we feel vere happy since Bro. Gillen has come here to teach us our duties. He is very much liked here by all that have heard him, and we hope that he will do much good. We hold meetings twice a week and the Spirit of God is with us in our meetings, and the Saints are strong in the Latter Day Work. They are determined, by the help of God, to work out their own salvation, and we ask you and the Saints all to remember us in your prayers, that we may gain strength and be saved in the kingdom of God.

WM. L. LEWIS.

HARROW, Ontario, Dec. 23d, 1879.

Beloved Herald.—Please take some thoughts for Aunt Matilda to all the Saints you meet. Not that they are great, or she worthy, but desiring God's righteousness, she wishes all a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year, hoping that all may have an abundance of the necessary comforts of this life; but that none would prepare sumptuous feasts for self or friends; but rather make sacrifices, taking of their comfortable things and imparting to the poor, maimed, halt, blind, rejoicing in the words of the heavenly host, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Trusting that we all shall think of the dear missionary elders; and that perhaps brave Bro. Nelson may have to satisfy his real hunger with raw fish. And think of Christ's glorious appearing. A. M. HALSTED.

Bro. Henry.—Since last General Conference I have done but little on account of ill health. Yet I have preached all I could, and feel a great desire to do more than I ever have done, but I must wait patiently till the good Lord shall loose my hands by restoring my health, which I have full confidence he will do in due time, when the cause may be fully removed. I know there is a cause for all things, and pain comes by transgression of law, known or unknown, natural or divine; hence the consistency in learning obedience by the things we suffer.

There are very many earnest calls for preaching in these parts, enough to make the hearts ache of those who love the work, when they hear the calls, but can not respond. I never saw, at any time, more interest paid to the preaching, and from the North Western Kansas District to the Northern Nebraska District there is one universal cry, "Come and preach to us." Offers of private houses, school houses and churches, are on every hand. O, how earnest and constant should be our prayers for God to raise up more zealous laborers for the field, enabling them to administer the word of life in due season, rightly applying it with moderation and consistency, as the Spirit will direct.

And, again there comes to mind the great necessity of the Saints making every effort to assist the many worthy Elders, whose hearts long to be in the work, battling for truth, and feeding the perishing souls with the bread of life; but, through their limited means, or by the constant needs of their families, it is impossible for them to spend their time in the field. Now, who is to blame for this? Has God called men that he foreknew could not preach, their temporal circumstances not admitting? And then in some day to come, does he intend to bring these Elders to judgment? Will he punish them because he finds their preaching talent buried in the earth? If this is the case it looks rather deplorable for the poor Elder; for how can he escape?

But, it seems to me, that God has abundantly blessed the Church with means, and that all parts of the Church are equal, the means equal to the appointments. That is, if those who have means, and who devote their time to the obtaining of the same, would apply them according to the revealed law, then every Elder called of God will be at liberty to fill his calling. And if both Elders and members do an equal part and then they are entitled to equal glory; and, if otherwise, how hardly shall those that have riches enter the kingdom of God. It is not always those who have the most riches who have the greatest craving for the same; but let us remember that from all of us a little is expected. The burden of the work is upon the whole Church. Let none flinch, but each do his part. God has called all of us to usefulness. A glorious work it is, and a glorious reward is ahead if we but prove faithful.

Your brother in Christ, JAMES PERKINS.

December 17th, 1879.

Bro. Henry.—I preached in Virginia City 28th and 29th November, and in Ruby Valley, December 1st and 2nd. Then on the 3rd to Pony, fifty-one miles; thence, on the 4th, to Lower Willow Creek, fifteen miles. There I found a branch of the Saints in a disorganized condition; preached there the 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th, and left them to come to this place, and here they are now ready for reorganization. On the 9th, eight miles, to Gallatin; 10th to the house of Br. Amos B. Moore, on Dry Creek, fifteen miles, and arrived here on the 11th. Have preached here the 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th; held one organization meeting; preach here to-morrow; prayer meeting next night, and am to preach again Sunday, and on Monday next shall reorganize the branch. There are several to baptize; hope to leave the work here on a firm basis, then go back to Willow, organize there, and then on to Deer Lodge, Helena and Butte City, where there is, I expect, a large labor to be performed. I have met with much kindness from all the brethren in this Territory. May the Lord bless them. E. C. BRAND.

Five Elders and one Teacher reported.

Whereas, while we consider it a duty and a privilege to meet and confer together, and to adopt and carry out measures for the spread of the cause in this part of God's vineyard, yet, in consideration of there never having been more than two branches in Colorado, and that an organized district can not exist with less than two branches; and, whereas, one of these branches (the one at Denver) has, through the removal of members, ceased to exist; therefore, be it Resolved that the Colorado District is hereby declared disorganized, there being but one organized branch in Colorado, known as the Rocky Mountain Branch.

Bishop's Agent's report:—Received since last conference, (held in September, 1879), $45 00; paid out to, or sent to Bro. James Caffall for traveling expenses to Colorado, $20 00; balance on hand, $26 00. John Ellis, Agent.

Resolved that we sustain Bro. John Ellis as Bishop's Agent, and that we invite the scattered members to forward their donations to him to aid the cause.

That the clerk forward the above resolution to all scattered members.

That all the Elders in Colorado labor as their circumstances and abilities will permit, and report to next conference.

That we invite all scattered members in Colorado to report themselves to Bro. James Kemp, and if they know of any favorable opening for the preaching of the gospel to make it known.

That we sustain Bro. Caffall in his mission to Colorado by our faith, prayers and means, as far as able.

Preaching by Bro. Caffall Saturday evening and at 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. on Sunday. At 6 p. m. a prayer, testimony and sacrament meeting. The spirit of love, peace and harmony was enjoyed by the Saints throughout the entire conference.

Adjourned to meet on call of Brn. James Kemp and James Caffall.

CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

There continues to be a great lack on the part of branch presidents and clerks in the matter of making out correct quarterly reports of the numbers and changes in their branches and sending the same to their respective Conferences each session, and some do not send any kind, good or bad, with any degree of regularity.

Also from some districts the General Church Recorder never receives the reports of branches that have come up to their conferences, and which should be forwarded as soon after the conference is over as the district clerk can record the changes in the district record, providing one is kept.

In these instances of not forwarding at all, or not for months, sometimes not for years, after the branch sends them, there is made necessary a repeated direct application to the branch officers for corrections, and, in a majority of instances, to get a correct record the Church Recorder must send a copy of all the names he has, in order to find out who are removed, expelled or dead of the number, and ask for the names he has not, with the necessary items of birth, baptism, confirmation and ordination. Thus, with the branches in the Florida, St. Louis, Southern Illinois, Southern Indiana, Central Kansas and Spring River Districts, and generally the California Mission, and lately the Canada districts, this direct correspondence must be had in order to obtain corrections; and with those of many other districts it frequently becomes necessary. And, as a consequence, there is fault finding because of having to make out a report the second time.

Hence, if district officers will see to it that reports are forwarded to me it will be an obligation, one not to me alone, in aiding my earnest wish to see the records of every branch perfect, but it will also oblige all concerned; and, besides that, they who aid will be doing their part to keep the commandments of God concerning the records of his Church, as given in the Doctrine and Covenants.

As the matter now stands the record of many branches for the past year is very imperfect; but I am laboring nights to put them in shape, and it will be the fault of the officers of the districts and branches if, in the annual report next April, their statistics are not correct, barring chance errors in figures that may occur through copying or proof reading.

I therefore invite the assistance of those upon whom, by choice of districts and branches, the duty is laid, and I invite those who appointed the officers to be interested enough to see that the duty is performed. Do not consider it to be a matter of no consequence to have order and perfection in this matter, for it is a mistaken idea to think that this command of God can be slighted with satisfaction to him as well as if it was done.

HENRY A. STEBBINS,
General Church Recorder.

PLANO, Illinois, January 3d, 1880.

A PLEA FOR THE ADVOCATE.

From the many kind words of approval and encouragement reaching us from all quarters, we are led to think the Advocate is pretty thoroughly endorsed both in its subject matter, and in its spirit and purpose.

It certainly is a power in Utah that can not well be dispensed with for the present. It is dropping quietly into the homes of hundreds—probably thousands—in Utah and Idaho, like the small rain from heaven and the generous rays of the sun upon the cold and thirsty ground, and the joy and gladness of hope renewed are taking the place where reigned doubt and sadness and fear.

God is moving in many ways for the redemption of his people, and for the vindication and honor of his Church in all places where it has been dishonored and brought to shame, and the light is now pouring in upon Utah with a clearness and power that bespeaks a work of extraordinary import and extent just at hand.

We are circulating, free, from 1,500 to 5,000 copies of each issue of the Advocate, and it costs money to publish and circulate them. We need help in this direction, and we ask all to aid us as they can, and especially by procuring us all the paying subscribers they can. Send money and address, with care, to Joseph Smith, box 50, Plano, Kendall county, Illinois.

DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

The sisters of the Providence, R. I., Branch, have organized a Society, called the Daughters of Zion, for the mutual good of each other, and to aid in the advancement of the latter day work. They meet every two weeks, and hold a meeting in the afternoon for prayer and testimony. Afterwards, if time permits, and it is convenient for the sisters, they devote an hour or two making garments to be sold, and will assist any one with their important needle work.

They have adopted the following Constitution and By Laws:

CONSTITUTION.

This Society shall be known as the daughters of Zion. Any sister of the Church can become a member by paying the fee of twenty-five cents, and signing the Constitution and Rules of the society, if able so to do, if not they are cordially invited to come free.

Officers shall consist of a President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer.

Duties of Officers.—The President shall preside over all meetings, and see that the rules are observed, and that the other officers attend to their duties. The Vice President shall assist the President in any of the duties of that office, when called on; and in the absence of the President shall preside.

The Secretary shall keep the record of the business meetings of the Society, and an account of materials purchased, and of all articles sold; with the amount paid for, or received therefrom; also see that each new member signs the Constitution and Rules of the Society.

The Treasurer shall receive all fees, dues, or money received for articles sold, and keep detailed accounts of the same; also an account of all money expended, and what expended for.

Duties of Members.—They shall be willing to assist in all the labors of the Society, and sustain the officers in the performance of their duties.

Committees.—There shall be a committee to purchase materials for the society to make up into articles for sale. Said committee shall consist of President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer.

Meetings.—There shall be a regular meeting held once every other Thursday afternoon, at half-past two o'clock.

The nature of the meetings shall be prayer and testimony, at the close of which the Secretary and Treasurer shall read their reports, and any other business may be brought up.

RULES OF GOVERNMENT.

Any officer failing to attend the regular meetings of the Society four successive meetings, without a reasonable excuse, shall lose her office, and another be chosen in her stead.

ELIZA HAWKS, President.

ABBIE M. BARNES, Vice President.

Sept. 28th, 1879.

These meetings have been a source of blessing to the children of the Most High. In his infinite mercy he has bestowed upon us the gifts and blessings of the gospel, whereby we have all been edified and strengthened afresh to go on our way rejoicing. We have agreed to unite our prayers every day at three o'clock, for the Providence branch and the Church at large, for the "perfecting of the Saints, until we all come to the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

A. M. BARNES, Vice President.

NOTICE.

TO THOSE HAVING IN CHARGE PROPERTY BELONGING TO THE CHURCH.

Those concerned will please take notice that the General Conference of April, 1878, adopted a recommendation of its committee, whereby it is required that all those "having charge of Church property" should "value the same and forward to the Bishop the report of such valuation, and that all property not yet deeded to the Church * * be alike valued and proper deeds made, as provided in the Church articles."

No such reports were made to me prior to the April Conference of 1879, consequently I could not present them when called upon there, nor have I received any since. Therefore, I now urge upon the attention of the brethren concerned, the necessity and importance of complying with the above requirement of the General Conference, and I request them to send in their reports by the 1st of March, 1880, without fail.

TO BISHOP'S AGENTS.

At the April Conference of 1878, it was made requisite that Bishop's Agents should render annual itemized accounts to me, for presentation to the General Conference, and yet but a few agents complied with this law. Then, in April, 1879, the General Conference further required that the Agents should not only make out itemized reports, but that these reports should be published as are the itemized reports of the Bishop, these to be published annually. The resolution reads as follows: "Resolved, that we require of the Bishop of the Church a report through the Herald, or in a supplement sheet, an itemized report of the means received and paid out by the Agents, with the names of the donors and to whom paid, and that this report be made annually."

I therefore call the attention of the Agents to this matter, and urge that they pay heed to it, all of them. From the first of March, 1879, to the first of March, 1880, every item of receipt and of expenditure should be given in their reports to me, giving names of persons or branches (if by branch collection) giving, and the names of those to whom anything has been paid. Where an Agent has resigned and another has succeeded him, the books of the former will show the facts, and the report should embrace them the same from the date named. Be prompt and accurate, brethren, and send in your reports immediately after March 1st, 1880, so that they can be arranged, copied, and prepared for presentation to the Conference, and for publication.

ISRAEL L. ROGERS,
SANDWICH, Ill., 20th Dec. 1879. Presiding Bishop.

CONDIT.—At his residence, near Little Sioux, Iowa, October 27th, 1879, of quick consumption, Elder Silas W. Condit. He was born in New Jersey, June 17th, 1819. He was baptized in Ohio, in 1842, by Elder John Riggs, and was ordained an Elder by Hyrum Smith and John P. Green. Funeral services by Elder D. M. Gamett.

[Bro. Condit was one of the earliest and staunchest defenders of the Reorganization. His faith and integrity were unshaken. He was an able and just counsellor, and a steadfast friend of the cause. He will be missed when the elders gather to counsel.—Eds.]

GORDON.—At Nebraska City, Nebraska, December 24th, 1879, of typhoid pneumonia, Sr. Margaret Gordon, aged about 40 years. She leaves a husband and six children. Died strong in the faith, and a hope in the first resurrection. The Saints who attended the Fall Conference of 1878, will remember the little colored woman camped at the big linn tree. Funeral sermon by Elder Robt. M. Elvin. Text, 1 Peter 1:7.

DETRO.—At Carson City, Nevada, December 11th, 1879, of typhoid fever, Maggie A., wife of J. C. Detro, and daughter of Bro. and Sr. David I. Jones, formerly of Merthyr Tydvil, Wales. She sleeps where earthly ills no more,
Will break the slumberer's rest.

KELSO.—At Bellview, Illinois, November 1st, 1879, of pneumonia, Alvin Austin, son of Sister Hattie E. and N. W. Kelso; aged 6 years, 3 months and 5 days.

And listen for the steps of his feet;
For the smiling lips and dancing eye,
That no more our coming greet.

STONE.—At Amboy, Illinois, September 9th, 1879, of consumption, Bro. Nathaniel L. Stone, aged 40 years, 1 month and 24 days. He was born in Vienna, Oneida county, N. Y.; was baptized at Amboy, June 14th, 1859, by Eld. Samuel Powers. During all his protracted illness and bodily suffering for nearly seventeen years, his faith in God and in his promises was unshaken, and his last days were truly his best and happiest days, for his hope grew more and more steadfast. While we are left to mourn his loss, we are confident that it is his eternal gain. His mother survives him, and he left a wife and one child.

Lardner is gone! he who was our bright sunbeam,
Gone from our home here, but not from our heart;
There the feelings of anguish are cutting and keen,
And griefs bitter tears unbidden do start.
We know that we're selfish to wish Lardner here,
Yet to be reconciled we hardly know how;
But with joy we may dry up our sorrowing tears,
For the angels in heaven are caressing him now.

EMILY E. STONE.

On the 26th day of September, 1878, she became the wife of Mr. F. A. Woods, a gentleman who is highly esteemed by all who know him. She gave birth to a child about four months ago, who is now in the hands and good care of her mother. Her disposition and manners were always such as to win the esteem of all with whom she associated, but her sudden departure was a hard trial to her loving husband, father, mother and sister.

BESHER.—At Peoria, Illinois, November 20th, 1879, Sr. Elizabeth, wife of Bro. James Bewsher, deceased. She was born near Bolton, England, September 18th, 1808; baptized by Thomas Green, in Manchester, 1840; went from Nauvoo, after the trouble, to St. Louis, where she married Bro. There are five children, a daughter and son her own, and two daughters and one son by a former wife of her husband. Resolutions of condolence of the Peoria Branch of the Church of Jesus Christ, occasioned by the death of Sr. Bewsher: Resolved that in the death of our beloved sister, Elizabeth Bewsher, wife of our late brother, James Bewsher, the neighborhood has lost a good friend and neighbor, the children a faithful and devoted mother, the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints one of its earliest members, tried and true. Resolved that the branch membership in Peoria mourn the loss of a mother in Israel, — a devoted, spiritual-minded member; one who was always (when health would permit it) at her post, ready to perform her duties as a christian, in her sphere, as friend, wife, mother, and sister in the Church; a lover of the house and worship of God. Resolved that we sympathize with the children in their loss, and hope that they may be stimulated by the example of the mother of whom they are bereft, to seek and gain the blessed assurance of an eternal inheritance with her in celestial life.

After leaving the army he departed for America, and has been a resident of this county for forty-nine years. He was the father of Mrs. John Litterer, Mrs. Frank Litterer, Louis, Gustavus, John, and David Van Buren. After he came here he married the oldest daughter of Christian Beuler. He was the brother-in-law of Mr. Jacob Grebe, of Ryker's Ridge. He lived a widower for thirty seven years. During that time he crossed the ocean twenty-two times, made one trip to the Holy Land, visited different places there, and brought shells as relics from the river Jordan to his children. He has two cousins in Europe—one, Mr. Eugene Van Buren, being a banker, and the other, one of the high officials of the Government. His sickness was of about twenty-two days' duration, and his sufferings were severe, all of which he bore with patience and Christian fortitude. During all these years he was never known to speak ill of any one.

LAMBERT.—At Dow City, Iowa, December 9th, 1879, Mattie Jane, daughter of brother Joseph R. and sister Anna E. Lambert, aged 12 days. So pass the innocents away.

VICKERY.—At Butler Branch, Butler county, Alabama, May 25th, 1879, Bro. John J. Vickery. He was born April 11th, 1794, in Lancaster District, South Carolina. ## "Produce Your Cause."

"Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob."—Isaiah 41: 21.

BEING a firm believer in the teachings of Christ and his apostles, as well as the teachings of the old prophets and patriarchs, I would take the above expression of the prophet as a good starting point from which one may give a reason why he should so believe.

It is said too, that the Scriptures are of no private interpretation, "but holy men of God spake as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost." The Scripture, the word of God, is then the chart, the guide, with the assistance of the Holy Spirit, by which one may be led into the truth, and by which he is able to produce his cause, and to bring forth the strong reasons. Many, and different writers, have tried to bring forth their strong (weak) reasons against the doctrines which were taught from of old. They, not knowing that the Bible taught them, could not readily (if at all) admit of their being true; because they were brought to light by Latter Day Saints, or, more commonly speaking, "Mormons."

One of the great truths taught in the Old Testament Scriptures, is, that a book is to come forth. They teach of the condition that the world, or the people, would be in at the time of the coming forth of the book. The Scriptures teach us that God would set his hand again the second time to gather the outcasts of Israel. That there was to be a dispensation in the fullness of times in which God would gather together in one all things, both in heaven and in the earth.

The book and the dispensation are closely allied one to the other, so much so that they can not be separated. And, while we show cause for believing in the book, we also at the same time present the reasons for believing in the dispensation. To begin with the cause, we will need to go back many centuries, in order to find what the dealings of God were with his servants. God spake to Abraham, who is called the father of the faithful, and gave him the promise that in him and in his seed should all the families of the earth be blessed. All the families of the earth. This is a broad expression, and extends a long way, and there are few comparatively, that understand the expression in its broad sense. This covenant was renewed to Isaac, and confirmed to Jacob for a law.

The coming forth of the Book was comprehended in the covenant; yea one of the great features of it; and without the coming forth of the book the covenant with Abraham would have been broken.

And he blessed Joseph and said: God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day, the angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac, and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth."

"And when Joseph saw that his father laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it displeased him, and he held up the hand of his father to remove it to Manasseh's head. "And Joseph said, Not so my father, for this is the first born, put thy right hand upon his head. And his father refused and said, I know it, my son; he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great, but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations."—Gen. 48: 15 to 19.

Referring to the 14th verse, we discover that when Joseph presented his sons to his father, it was to have the patriarchal blessing given them before his death.

Perhaps some are wondering what that has to do with the book. Please be patient,—it has a good deal to do with it. Those conversant with the Bible understand that God chose Abraham from among all others, and made an especial agreement, or covenant, that in him and in his seed should all the families of the earth be blessed. Mark you, this covenant or blessing should extend to all people, all families of the earth. It was not enough when the angel said: "Fear not, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." Luke 2: 10. There was more to follow when the dispensation, in the fullness of times, would be revealed.

So Jacob in blessing his grandsons, Ephraim and Manasseh, was confirming to them a part of the blessings contained in the agreement. The blessings were to come through the descendants of Abraham.

We now turn to Gen. 49: 1, "And Jacob called unto his sons, and said, Gather yourselves together that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days. 2d verse, Gather yourselves together and hear, ye sons of Jacob, and hearken unto Israel your father." Reading these two verses carefully, one is struck with their force.

Jacob is speaking like one having authority from God, and inspired by the Holy Ghost. For, who would think of making known future events, especially events so closely connected with their own posterity, unless inspired by the Holy Spirit.

Beginning with the 22d verse of this 49th chapter, and reading down to the 26th inclusive, find recorded the blessing that Jacob pronounced upon the head of Joseph, his first born by the beloved "Rachel." But for a more extended view of this blessing turn to Deut. 33, beginning at the 13th and read to the 17th, inclusive. In Gen. 49: 26, Joseph is informed that the blessings of his father (Jacob) have prevailed above the blessings of his (Jacob's) progenitors, "unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills; they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren." Who is the crown? Gen. 48: 19. "But truly, his younger brother shall be greater than he and his seed shall become a multitude of nations." Could this be fulfilled in the land of Palestine which is said to be only forty-five miles broad on an average, by one hundred and forty-five long?

This land of Palestine, or Canaan, was obtained by Abraham for a blessing upon his posterity, but Jacob, or Israel, obtained a blessing greater than that which his progenitors had obtained. When did Jacob receive the promise of this blessing that is so much greater than that which Abraham had received? Gen. 32:24, 29. This is the angel that Jacob spoke of in the 48:16. "The angel which redeemed me from all evil." Gen. 31:18; It is recorded that Jacob was on his way from Laban, his father-in-law, who lived in Padan Aram, to his father Isaac in the land of Canaan. While journeying to Canaan, it was made known to him that his brother Esau was coming to meet him. Jacob feared to meet his brother because of the difficulty between them on account of the patriarchal blessing, and remembering that God had made a promise to bless him. Gen. 32:12, "And thou saidst I will surely do thee good" &c. Also Gen. 28:13-15. "And the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: The land whereon thou liest to thee will I give it, and to thy seed. And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth; and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the south; and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And behold I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and I will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of."

Before meeting with his brother, he sought unto the Lord again, remaining all night wrestling with the angel, and would not let him go until the blessing was given. And here it was that the blessing so much greater than the blessings of his progenitors was obtained, the blessing that was to extend to the utmost bound of the everlasting hills. We have underlined those expressions quoted above, because we think them to be very significant, as evidence pointing toward the "book" we are in search of. But the blessing that was pronounced upon the head of the younger son, who was to be the crown, or the greater of the two, his seed was to become a multitude of nations. The smallness of the land of Palestine precludes the possibility of a multitude of nations dwelling therein, and the blessing being received there. For it is recorded, both in Biblical and profane history, that the Hebrews never became but two nations while in the land of Palestine. Where shall we find the literal fulfillment of this promise? Be not startled, kind reader, if in our researches, we should make the discovery that your, as well as my salvation depends upon a right understanding of these things. Salvation unto the end of the world is involved in this great covenant.

Where, I say, shall we find the fulfillment of this great blessing? Where was Jacob when he blessed Joseph and the rest of his sons? In Egypt, surely. And the blessing was to extend unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills? Yes. Then go either east or west, to the utmost point geographically, and where would you land, but in America; the land of Columbus? Remember, Jacob's seed were to extend to the west, and Joseph was to be a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well, whose branches were to run over the wall.

Please turn to Deut. 33, beginning with the 13th verse: "And of Joseph he said,

Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew and for the deep that coucheth beneath. And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon. And for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills.

"And for the precious things of the earth and the fullness thereof. And for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush; let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns (power) are like the horns (power) of unicorns. With them (horns or power) he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth; and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh."

No land bears such a description but the land of America. Joseph is a fruitful bough, by a well, whose branches run over the wall. The wall is the sea, and his branches are his descendants, consequently the descendants were to extend beyond the sea. God made the promise and it becomes him as the first party in the contract to fulfill to the chosen seed, according to the stipulation agreed upon.

But there were greater blessings set forth in the Abrahamic covenant than obtaining a land of promise, although Jacob said, "The blessings of thy father have obtained to a greater blessing than my progenitors." Temporally it was greater; but we read that Eternal Life is the greatest gift of God to man. The blessing that was promised, was that in Abraham all families of the earth should be blessed. That is, from his lineage a Savior would be raised up. The promise was confirmed to Jacob for a law.

Let the reader bear in mind, that in this covenant and the promises made therein, there is a gathering contemplated, a gathering of the people, God's people.

This gathering is to be at the end of the earth, or at "the time of the end," as we infer by reading the 17th verse of 33rd of Deut. Also the Savior taught that he would send his angels and they should gather the elect from the four winds of heaven. Matt. 28:31.

The horns spoken of in Deut. 33:17, are emblems of power, the same being authority that should be given to Ephraim and Manasseh, to gather the people together at the time of the end, or in the dispensation in the fullness of times. Paul refers to this same time, Eph. 1:10. Also Rom. 11:25-27. God has surely given to Jacob a clear view of those things that he pronounced upon Joseph's head, and also upon the rest of his sons. Gen. 49:1: "Gather yourselves together that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days."

In tracing the subject this far, we have found that Joseph's chief blessing fell upon Ephraim who was made the crown, or the head of him that was separated from his brethren. He was to become a multitude of nations. Joseph being sold by his brethren to the Ishmaelites and carried into Egypt, certainly was a type of his descendants in like manner being separated from the other tribes of Israel, and directed to the land that was to be theirs by promise. "For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant." Isaiah 37:32.

Joseph's descendants fell heir to his blessings. Then God would remember the promise and fulfill the same to them, because it is with them that God will push the people together. How is it that some Latter Day Saints do not believe in the gathering?

According to the promise made, God would instruct his people in this matter, would he not? Yes.

He would give them a law in the land whither he had directed them, which would be a natural consequence, just as he had given a law to the Jews? We think so. "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." Amos 3:7.

The Lord, speaking by his prophet Hosea, 8:11, 12, says, "Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be unto him to sin. I have written to him the great things of my law, but they were counted as a strange thing."

The law here spoken of is not that law that was given to Moses in Horeb with the statutes and judgments for all Israel. The Mosaic code was in full force until the crucifixion, then it was to cease by limitation, Christ being the end of that law. God had written to Ephraim a law. Then Ephraim must have existed as a nation somewhere, separated entirely from all the rest of Israel, and he was in a condition to receive such a law.

Ezekiel 37, beginning with the 15th verse we read: "The word of the Lord came again unto me saying, Moreover thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah and for the children of Israel his companions; then take another stick and write upon it, For Joseph the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions; and join them one to another into one stick, and they shall become one in thine hand."

According to the blessing pronounced upon Judah, he was to retain the scepter, and be a lawgiver until Shiloh (the Redeemer) came. Hence the stick, which was referred to by the prophet, written upon for Judah and the house of Israel his companions, was Judah's record or law. And the one written upon for Joseph, the stick of Ephraim and the house of Israel his fellows, was Ephraim's record. Anciently the manner of keeping records was to write upon parchment, and fasten a stick at either end, and when one wished to read, it was unrolled, and rolled up at pleasure, hence they were called sticks.

The prophet shows that the records referred to, are two distinct records. 18th verse, "And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by these? 19, Say unto them, thus saith the Lord God, Behold I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.

Here we discover that a question is asked: Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by these? Mark: The stick of Judah remains in his own hand; while the Lord proceeds to take that of Ephraim and put it with the stick of Judah. The two records are to come together, but it is not said that they are to be in Judah's hand at the time they are to come together. But they are to be "one in mine, (the Lord's) hand." In the 18th verse is the question, "And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying: Wilt thou not show unto us what thou meanest by these? 19. "Say unto them thus saith the Lord God: Behold I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim." It is evident from the foregoing that God is to bring about these events by raising up a servant, by whom to accomplish so great an event, The expression, "And when the children of thy people shall say unto thee" &c., shows conclusively that these things were to be done in the after time, and not in the time of Ezekiel, which is plainly set forth in the rest of the chapter. The outcasts of Israel are to be gathered and brought again into their own land.

Theologians have taught that the canon of scripture was full. But more recently there is a change seen among them; that idea is becoming somewhat stale; it being proven an erroneous idea by many infallible proofs.

Judah and Israel possessed the land of Canaan, Joseph was promised another land, Ephraim and Manasseh fall heir to this promise, they extend over the wall, (sea), God gives to them his law, they count it as a strange thing. Then the Lord takes that law and places it with Judah's law, and the two become one; that is, their internal evidences run together. As the testimony of two men agree, so their testimonies agree together, each proving the other true. By Ezekiel's account, a servant is to be raised up unto the Lord by which these things are to be done. For, "Surely the Lord will do nothing, but he revealeth the secret unto his servants the prophets." We infer from the above that when the book comes forth that it will be a time long remembered by those who become acquainted with the facts of its coming, and are connected with the great work. We infer that it will be near the time in which the Lord will write his law in the inward parts, and enstamp it on the heart.

"Thou shalt arise and have mercy on Zion; for the time, yea the set time to favor her is come."—Psalms 113:13. Also 85:9-13, "Surely his salvation is nigh them that fear him, that glory may dwell in our land. Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each; truth shall spring out of the earth, and righteousness shall look down from heaven. Yea the Lord will give that which is good, and our land shall yield her increase. Righteousness shall go before him, and set us in the way of his steps."

Eph. 1:10: "That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth; even in him."

It is they who glorify, who shall enjoy, Him; they who deny themselves, who shall not be denied; they who labor on earth, who shall rest in heaven; they who bear the cross, who shall wear the crown; they who seek to bless others, who shall be blessed.

The Blood, Sacrifice, AND Pre-eminence of Jesus Christ.

THE BLOOD AND SACRIFICE.

FROM the earliest history of the world, it is recorded that man anticipated the enjoyment of a life beyond this one; or, as has been remarked, "a life beyond the tomb." The idea of obtaining that life was introduced by the giver himself—God. Death having been introduced into the world by sin, life must be introduced by that which might be productive of such, which was and is righteousness. As Paul said:

"For if by one man's offense death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace, and of the gift of righteousness, shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ."—Rom. 5:17.

"For, as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."—1 Cor. 15:22.

We are aware of the fact that, objections are presented to the idea of a Christ to save mankind from their sins, on the plea that there have been sixteen Christs, professedly; and that man has been grossly deceived. We admit such to be the case. One author says that the twelfth century alone, produced no less than twelve false Christs.

"The world has witnessed since the coming of Christ, more than twenty false Messiahs, or pretended Christs, who have obtained sufficient notoriety to live on the pages of history; besides similar pretenders, whose memory has rotted with their bones." "In the year 434 a pretender arose called Moses, who persuaded the Jews on the island of Crete to abandon their houses and lands, and to assemble on a given day on a rock overhanging the sea, from which they were to cast themselves into the deep, that he might conduct them in safety * * * to their promised land, the Mount Zion of old. So large was the number that leaped into the sea that a stop was put to the destructive work." "In 529, A. D., another pretender arose, named Julian, who, after an immense slaughter of his followers, was taken and put to death by the Emperor Justinian. In the year 1167, another arose in Arabia, who pretended that if he should be beheaded, he would come to life again. The Arabian King took him at his word and ended the delusion by decapitation. In the year 1199, one arose in Persia called David El David. Vast numbers of the Jews were butchered for following this impostor. In 1666, immediately after the dreadful massacre of the Jews in Persia, Sabbatai Levi appeared in Smyrna, a man of learning, and an impostor of surpassing skill among the Jews. They flocked around him in multitudes, and styled him 'the king, our king and Lord, the man elevated to be the height of all sublimity, the Messiah of the God of Jacob, the true Messiah, the celestial Zion, Sabbatai Levi.' Some starved themselves by fasting, others buried themselves in the earth until their limbs grew stiff and useless, etc."—Mormonism in All Ages, pp. 76, 77.

By the above brief account we can obtain an idea of how the Jews have suffered by rejecting Christ, and following impostors. Some would say that all this shows conclusively that the idea of a Christ is a false one, and has always resulted in evil. We say that it proves conclusively that the idea is a true one; and, moreover, that it was implanted in the heart of man by a power not his own, and it never was, nor never can be eradicated. As we have said, mankind in past times expected a Christ—a Savior. The Christian claims that he has come and was manifest in the person of the Jesus of New Testament times and history.

1st. Was it necessary that the blood of Jesus should be shed? 2d. Was the manner of the death of Jesus an unfortunate one? 3d. Was it not so pre-determined that the blood should be shed? 4th. Was or is the idea of Pagan origin?

(1). It was necessary to have the blood shed. Because, God, in the beginning gave commandment to Adam to offer a sacrifice, by the which blood was shed. An angel interrogated Adam as to why he offered sacrifice, and Adam said he knew not, save the Lord had commanded him. "And the angel spake, saying, This thing is a similitude of the sacrifice of the Only Begotten of the Father, which is full of grace and truth" I. T. Gen. 4:7. Here then, was the incipency of sacrificial offering and the object and manner made known. From that very day was the rite and idea and object of sacrificial offering perpetuated down through subsequent ages to the flood; after the flood, by Noah and his sons to their posterity;—and the Babel people carried it with them whithersoever they went at the time of their dispersion from the tower. From those people all the subsequent nations originated. And it matters not how many additional rites and ceremonies may have sprung into existence thereafter, one thing is obvious, unto which history attests, that sacrificial offering was and is practiced by all nations of heathen caste, and it was and is performed with the idea of it being typical of a Savior's sacrifice.

(2). The manner of Jesus' death was not an unfortunate one; because if it was an unfortunate one, and any other way would have served the purpose, why was it shown that such should be the manner of his death, and sacrificial offering instituted at the very incipency of the establishment of religion among mankind by God himself? The firstling of the flock must be brought, it must be slain, its blood spilled, or shed; the tabernacle (in Moses time) must be sprinkled with it and water also, the people with it, typical of the water and blood that issued from Christ, by which his fleshly tabernacle was wet. When Moses attended to the typical sacrifices, he said: "This is the blood of the testament (covenant) which God hath enjoined unto you." Heb. 9:20. Jesus said when instituting the sacrament, "For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Matt. 26:28. Paul said in harmony with this language, "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins."

(3). It was pre-determined and predicted by all prophets who prophesied of Christ. Enoch saw the Son of Man lifted upon the cross in vision in his day.

(4). No. As we have stated, it originated in the garden of Eden and was perpetuated from one generation to another.

We read in 1 John 5:5-8, "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God? This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth. For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one." Did the above idea originate with John or was it known aforetime? We will see. In Genesis 6:61-63, I. T., we read: "And inasmuch as ye were born into the world by water and blood, and the Spirit, which I have made, and so became of dust a living soul; even so ye must be born again into the kingdom of heaven, of water and of the Spirit, and be cleansed by blood, even the blood of mine Only Begotten; that ye might be sanctified from all sin, and enjoy the words of eternal life in this world, and eternal life in the world to come, even immortal glory. For, by the water ye keep the commandment; by the Spirit ye are justified; and by the blood ye are sanctified." John says—"And these three agree in one." We recapitulate; was the idea of the shedding of blood of Pagan origin or did it originate in the mind of God himself? In speaking of the redemption we have through Christ's sacrifice, Paul said to the Ephesians: "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." Eph. 1:7. We read in the Apocalypse, concerning a great multitude that sang a song concerning their redemption and how they received it. We will see how it was obtained: "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation." Rev. 5:9.

We offer for the consideration of "Herald" readers the above passages on the blood of Christ; and also the following: John 19:34; 1 John 1:7; Acts 20:28; Heb. 9:7-12-14; 1 Peter 1:19; Rev. 1:5; Heb. 9:19-24; Rom. 3:25; Col. 1:20, Rom. 5:11; Rev. 12:11; Heb. 12:24; 1 Cor. 11:25; Heb. 10:29.

CHRIST'S PRE-EMINENCE.

We have heard much said respecting Christ's combined nature—of human and divine, and as to wherein he held any pre-eminence over mankind in general. We read in Gal. 3:16, "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." Paul said, Heb. 2:16, "For verily, he took not on him the likeness of angels, but he took on him the seed of Abraham." Acts 2:30: "Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, (David), that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." Heb. 10:5: "Wherefore, when he cometh into the world, he saith, sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me." We read of the preparation of that body in Matt. 1. Predicted, Isa 7:14.

We say that there never was and never shall be again, an individual like unto Jesus Christ. In regard to his pre-eminence we read in the first place: "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows," or brethren. Christ is called our "elder brother," in consequence of that portion of human nature which he possessed. He received his glorification and sanctification immediately from God, and we from God through Christ. In Matthew 28:17 we read: "All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth." Herein he held a pre-eminence of power greater than God ever conferred upon any one other individual. Isaiah 42:6, 7; 49:8, 9; 61:1, 2, all refer to a work which none other could perform but Christ. In John 1:3 we read:

"All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made."

"And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the first born from the dead; that in all things he (Jesus Christ) might have the pre-eminence."—Col. 1:18.

We can readily perceive wherein he holds the pre-eminence over other individuals among mankind. If any one should disbelieve in the "immaculate conception" there is much to substantiate the pre-eminence of Christ; the divinity of the power that accompanied him in all his ministrations; the majesty of character. Jesus said: "I have power to lay down my life, and I have power to take it up again; and this commandment (power) I have received of my father."—John 10:18. In this also he held a grand pre-eminence power above others of mankind. I say mankind, because by virtue of his birth he was "the Son of Man;" by virtue of the "immaculate conception" he was "the Only Begotten Son of God." Although we read and may understand all this, we read concerning that same Jesus:

"For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through suffering."—Heb. 2:10.

"Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."—Heb. 5:8, 9.

"Christ being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit, that he might bring us unto God."—1 Pet. 3:18.

"Who being in the brightness of his [Father's] glory, and the express image of his [Father's] person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high."—Heb. 1:3.

"Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God. But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men. And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to glory the of God the Father."—Phil 2:6-11.

"Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins."—Acts 5:31.

Thus we see that God exalted Christ, making him "both Lord and Christ." God highly favored him; qualified him in every particular by the bestowal of divine power; and by obedience to God's perfect law he became the Savior of all men, honored and revered by the angelic host—crowned "Lord of lords and king of kings." May we be worthy of the reception of his saving power. May we adore him and revere him in his princely station; and remember that he is "our elder brother." He is near and dear unto us; let us ever love and serve him.

After Death;

Does the Spirit or Soul Return to Earth?

"And the spirit shall return unto God who gave it."—Ecc. 12:7.

By this we see a separation while the spirit goes to God. Now then, after going there, does it return to earth? I answer No; for three reasons: First, because it is the principal tenet of that wonder-working power, which, by means of false miracles, will in the last days deceive at least a portion of the human race, as represented in Revelations, 13th chapter; also in Revelations 16:13, 14. Second, the need of their return is not apparent. Third, the word of God does not sustain the position that they will return before the resurrection.

In regard to the first proposition one needs only to read the standard works of the Spiritualists to be convinced that they believe in the return of the spirit to earth after death. That they are the power spoken of can be readily proven; but, for the present, we will assume that such is the case, lest we wander from the question at issue. We do not repudiate the theory simply because it is believed in by the Spiritualists, but from the fact in brief that, as a power antagonistic to the power of God, they rely upon this theory for their accessions of numbers; and in fact they would not be able to practice their work of deception so successfully without it; for, of the people of God, we read, "These signs shall follow them that believe." But this power has its signs going before, which would be without effect were it not for the putative return of the spirit in many cases, as is evidenced by the great number who have embraced Spiritualism because of the putative return of the spirit of some deceased friend.

As to the need of the return of the spirit, it is not necessary to reveal the will of God; for we have an agency for that express purpose: "God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit."—1 Cor. 2:10. Mind, it is God's Spirit, not man's. And we find by reading the next verse that, of the things of God, "knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God," doing away entirely with the need of the return of the spirit of man after death. See Ezra 1:5; Nehemiah 9:30; Isaiah 48:16, and Zechariah 7:12. And, as to ministering to and comforting the Saints by its return, in the first place we are promised a Holy Comforter, in obedience to the gospel; and as to ministering, we read, speaking of angels: "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation."—Heb. 1:14.

The word of God does not sustain the position that they will return. As we have brought considerable evidence from the Bible in support of our previous positions, we refer to them as evidence on this last proposition, and add some testimony from the Book of Mormon. In his conclusion, Moroni says: "I soon go to rest in the Paradise of God, until my spirit and body shall again reunite."—Moroni 10:2. Mark, now, Moroni was soon going to the Paradise of God. There he was to remain. How long? "Until my spirit and body shall again reunite." Again, Alma:

"Now, concerning the state of the soul between death and resurrection. Behold, it has been made known unto me, by an angel, that the spirits of all men, as soon as they are departed from this mortal body; yea, the spirits of all men, whether they be good or evil, are taken home to that God who gave them life. And then shall it come to pass the spirits of those who are righteous, are received into a state of happiness, which is called paradise; a state of rest; a state of peace, where they shall rest from all their troubles, and from all care, and sorrow, &c. And then shall it come to pass that the spirits of the wicked, yea, who are evil; for behold, they have no part nor portion of the Spirit of the Lord: for behold they choose evil works rather than good: therefore the spirit of the devil did enter into them, and take possession of their house; and these shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth; and this because of their iniquity; being led captive by the will of the devil. Now this is the state of the souls of the wicked; yea, in darkness, and a state of awful, fearful, looking for, of the fiery indignation of the wrath of God upon them; thus they remain in this state, as well as the righteous in paradise, until the time of their resurrection."—Alma 19: 5, 6.

Notice the next to the last sentence of this quotation: "Thus they remain in this state as well as the righteous in paradise." For how long? "Until the time of their resurrection." This settles beyond question that the spirit does not return to earth after death. ACB.

Hints to Mortals.

PERMIT me, gentle Herald, to make a few suggestions, that may not be amiss, to the mortals who read your varied columns. If I improve it is with the desire for good. I hope that none will say that what I may write was written intentionally to apply to him, for he may in so saying do injustice to the writer, as well as reveal where the cap fits. Besides that, by so doing he gives the appearance of thinking himself such an important character, that he must be made a special target for the shots of others through the press.

The longer we live, and the more we know of men, the more we are persuaded that "It is human to err."

That any man may err in conduct, or in giving utterance to an opinion at variance with that of the majority, needs no proof for its establishment; but the proper course to be pursued at such times, is the question that should invite our attention. To err in conduct, so far as it directly concerns others, the law is plain and decisive, and that we leave, adding this only: If a brother has injured you, act the man with him; don't go around in the dark, or in his accidental absence and seek to becloud his character. Be sure and do not give insinuations and innuendoes that only disclose a mind loaded with evil and malice. As to the proper course to pursue if a brother should happen to say something that you do not believe,—something not interdicted by law or revelation, or act of the general body, I would suggest that you accord to him the same liberty that the law accords, and that you desire yourself, and that you thus fulfill the Golden Rule. Remember, "Where there is no law there is no transgression," was the utterance of a great lawyer, and also an apostle of Christ. Do not prove yourself a bigot, a conceited person, who is too narrow minded to allow other to see, unless they shall condescend to go to you and ask for a loan of your eyes. "Conceit in weakest bodies, strongest works."

If you are an elder and should you have reason to feel aggrieved at a brother who differs from you, do not seek to antagonize either in private or in public that in your brother which you do not endorse; for in so doing you may injure him, and certainly you will injure yourself with those who think, and you do injury to the cause of Christ. An elder goes to a town to preach, and does so to the best of his ability, using the truth as he understands it, to advance truth with the people. He is scarcely gone when another elder goes there and he preaches vehemently against everything that the other may have said that he did not endorse and approve.

If the first was a great man, and the latter a great man also, it gives the appearance that the latter may believe that two great men can not well exist in the same church, possibly in the "survival of the fittest," else that he was bent on a parade of forensic powers. If you are a traveling elder, endeavor to accommodate yourself to your surroundings; for it is not at all probable that everything will succumb to your way of thinking and doing, and in so doing you may save yourself the good will and esteem of many.

The gospel ministry requires a "constant labor all his precepts to obey,"—a yielding in so many things in order to be the means of saving some. Are you prepared for it? With God's help you can accomplish all that he has appointed.

When you come into a district it should be to attend strictly to the duties incumbent upon you. You should keep yourself out of any and all the differences the brethren may have; for if you fail in this regard you but injure yourself and the influence you may have for good. You should not battle; neither go around prying into other folk's business; nor be too ready and liberal in giving opinions to the detriment and at the expense of others. You should not consent to become a busybody; or what has been fitly denominated a "traveling granny."

If you are even treated in a princely style, or taken to the mineral springs that your wearied physique may share of the benefits of its curative and panacea qualities, even then, you should not fail to observe the Mormon creed: "Let every one mind his own business." You should use your influence to promote amity and good will, law and order; and never be guilty of lending yourself to defeat the ends of justice. You should never misapply, knowingly, the meaning of any text, writing or word; but you should be positive, candid and frank in all your teachings, that truth and humanity may be built up in righteousness and peace. Seek to strengthen the other laborers and to enable them to better discharge the duties devolving upon them; for in so doing you honor the cause of God.

Your calling is not one of parade and pomposity, with buttoned coat, and collar cutting the ear, to strut about as if saying to yourself:

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime;
And departing leave behind us,
Footprints in the sands of time."

Do not be boastful over your own labors; neither of your spiritual manifestations, lest scoffers give you credit of giving them "mouthfuls of wind;" and besides this, it illy becomes you as servants of the great Nazarene. Be very careful what you say of others, for you, above all others, are subject to misrepresentation. You know not what feelings, or to what extent feelings are wounded by words merely dropped.

"Oh! many a shaft at random sent, Finds mark the archer little meant."

Ever breathing good wishes for you all, that as stars you may shine in the diadem of Christ, I subscribe myself,
T. E. L.

When the Bible was Written.

FROM the Council of Nice we go back ten years, to A. D. 315, which brings us to the world-renowned Eusebius, bishop of Caesarea, an intimate friend of the Emperor Constantine. Eusebius was a man of extraordinary learning, diligence, and judgment, and singularly studious in the Scriptures. His invaluable Ecclesiastical History, written at that date, is a volume of over four hundred pages, containing a particular account of Jesus Christ, his twelve apostles, the early rise and wonderful progress of Christianity in the world. He gives a minute account of each book of the New Testament, calling each by its name, telling who wrote it, how sacred it was held by the whole church, etc. Chapter twenty-five of Book III. he devotes particularly to a catalogue of these books. His list is exactly the same as that which we now have. Here, then, is another nail in a sure place.

We will now push our inquiry about fifty years farther back, bringing us to A. D. 260, or to the middle of the third century, to the testimony of Victorinus, bishop of Pettau in Germany: "Victorinus wrote commentaries on different books of the Old Testament, an exposition of some passages of St. Matthew's gospel, a commentary on the Apocalypse, and various controversial treatises against the heretics of the day; in which we have valuable and most explicit testimonies to almost every book of the New Testament." Horne's Introduction, vol. 1, p. 80. No doubt, then, about the old Bible thus far.

Going back to a still more remote period, we come to the great and learned Origen. Of all the fathers who flourished in the third century, he is unquestionably the most learned and renowned. He was born A. D. 184, and died about A. D. 253. Thus it will be seen that he lived within a hundred years of the death of St. John, and was therefore so near the time of the publication of the books of the New Testament that he could hardly avoid obtaining the most accurate knowledge of their origin and authors. So great was the esteem in which this man was held, even by the heathen, that their philosophers dedicated their writings to him. He traveled all over the Eastern world, collecting different manuscripts and versions of the Bible. He compiled a Bible called the Hexapla. It contained six columns to a page, one in Hebrew, one in Hebrew with Greek characters, and the other four the versions of the Bible by Acquila Symmachus, the Septuagint, and Theodosian.

"Besides these, which in themselves form a decisive testimony to the authenticity of the Scriptures, he wrote a threefold exposition of all the books of the Scripture; viz., scholia, or short notes; tomes, or extensive commentaries, in which he employed all his learning, critical, sacred, and profane; and a variety of homilies and tracts for the people. Although a small portion only of his works has come down to us, yet in them he uniformly bears testimony to the authenticity of the New Testament, as we now have it; and he is the first writer who has given us a perfect catalogue of those books which Christians unanimously, or at least the greater part of them, have considered as the genuine and divinely inspired writings of the apostles." Horne's Introduction, p. 81.

What more abundant testimony to the existence of the Scriptures at that time could any Christian ask?

From this we proceed to the second century. Here we find Tertullian, of the city of Carthage. He lived within fifty years of the last of the apostles and was a vigorous writer in defense of Christianity. His work abounds in quotations and long extracts from the books of the New Testament. It is said that "his quotations occupy nearly thirty folio pages." Lardner says, "There are more and larger quotations of the small volume of the New Testament in this one Christian author, than of all the works of Cicero in the writers of all characters for several ages." Irenæus and Clement both lived in this century. They often quote from the apostolic writings; but our limits forbid giving quotations from these and others of this century.

Tertullian says in his Apology to the Roman Presidents, "Look into the words of God, our Scriptures, which we ourselves do not conceal, and many accidents bring into the way of those who are not of our religion." Does not this appeal to the heathen rulers to read "the words of God," show that these writings were then in circulation? In the time of Tertullian it is believed that the original manuscripts were still in existence. He says: "Well, if you be willing to exercise your curiosity profitably in the business of your salvation, visit the apostolic churches, in which the very chairs of the apostles still preside, in which their truly authentic letters are recited, sounding forth the voice and representing the countenance of each one of them. Is Achaia near you? you have Corinth. If you are not far from Macedonia, you have Philippi, you have Thessalonica. If you can visit Asia, you have Ephesus; and if near Italy, you have Rome, from whence also you may be easily satisfied."—De Prescriptione cxxxvi, p. 245.

"If Tertullian did not mean that the original manuscript, but only authentic copies of the epistles to the Corinthians, Phillippians, etc., were to be seen by application, why send inquiries thither? Could an authentic copy of the epistle to the Phillippians be seen nowhere but at Philippi? or of that to the Corinthians nowhere but at Corinth?"—Alexander on the Canon, p. 142.

One step farther back and we are in the generation immediately succeeding the apostles. Here we find Justin Martyr, born ten years before John was banished. "After becoming a Christian he occupied a high stand in learned writing and holy living. His remaining works contain numerous quotations from, as well as allusions to, the four gospels, which he uniformly represents as containing 'the genuine and authentic accounts of Jesus Christ and his doctrine.' The same is true in relation to the Acts of the Apostles, and the greater part of the epistles. The book of Revelation is expressly said by Justin to have been written by 'John, one of the apostles of Christ.' Having lived before the death of that apostle, he had the best opportunity of knowing."—M'Ivaine's Evidences, p. 72.

"Further, in his (Justin Martyr's) first apology he tells us that the memoirs of the apostles and the writings of the prophets were read and expounded in the Christian assemblies for public worship; whence it is evident that the gospels were at that time well known in the world, and not designedly concealed from any one."—Horne's Introduction, p. 85.

"We finish the second century with Papias, bishop of Hieropolis in Asia, whom Irenæus speaks of as a hearer of John, and a disciple of Polycarp, a pupil of John the apostle. How he obtained his information will appear from the only fragment of his writings remaining. It is found in Eusebius: 'If at any time I met with one who had conversed with the elders, I inquired after the sayings of the elders; what Andrew or what Peter said; or what Philip, Thomas, or James has said; what John or Matthew, or what any other of the disciples of the Lord were wont to say.' Thus we have a witness who lived near enough to the beginning to inquire of those who had conversed with the apostles, if not to listen to St. John himself. Too little remains of his writings to furnish many testimonies, especially as he had it not in view to confirm the authenticity of any part of the scripture; but still he gives a very valuable testimony to the gospels of Matthew and Mark, and the first epistles of Peter and John. He alludes to the Acts and the book of Revelation.

"Thus we have ascended to the apostolic age. But we may reach still higher. We have in our possession the well-authenticated writings of four individuals and fathers in the primitive church, who, because they were contemporary with the apostles, are called apostolic fathers. Two of them, Clement and Hermas, are mentioned by name in the New Testament; the third, Polycarp, was an immediate disciple of St. John; the fourth, Ignatius, enjoyed the privilege of frequent intercourse with the apostles. There is scarcely a book of the New Testament, which one or another of these writers has not either quoted or alluded to. Though what is extant of their works is very little, it contains more than two hundred and twenty quotations, or allusions to the writings of our sacred volume, in which they are uniformly treated with the reverence belonging to inspired books, and entitled, 'The Sacred Scriptures;' 'The Oracles of the Lord.'"—Selected.

What to Eat.

THE new school of physicians, with Dio Lewis at their head, who reduce medicine to a system of diet and exercise, declare that no meat except poultry and lamb should be eaten in hot weather, adding, indeed, fresh fish to the bill of fare. Certain it is that but little meat is necessary for even laboring men in hot weather. The East Indian coolie toils all day long on his diet of rice. The Arab conquered a world upon dates and barley bread, and ceased to be formidable only when he became luxurious in his tastes and appetites. He who eats much meat with the mercury among the nineties is apt to pay for it in headache and sluggish brain. Oatmeal and milk for breakfast; bread and eggs, with fruit, for lunch; soup and vegetables, with little or no meat, for dinner, and the lightest of possible teas—this is the diet on which a man is able to work best and find himself most comfortable in hot weather.

Meditations.

THEY who have the capacity for doing much good are surely required to do so.

The Book of Mormon contains a very strict doctrine, and is evidently calculated more for those who are able to abide the celestial law.

The Lord's goodness is manifested in divers ways in different ages. In one revelation found in the Book of Covenants we are informed, or rather given to understand, that they who fail to abide the law of the celestial, or of the terrestrial, but are able to abide a lesser, will receive a salvation in the same.

In the vision of glories we find it stated that all the workmanship of God will be redeemed and saved in the due time of the Lord, except the sons of perdition. "They are the only ones on whom the second death shall have power, and the only ones who will not be redeemed and saved in the due time of the Lord."

Christ is said to be the Savior of all, especially those who believe. "But this is no license for any of us to sin.

The way of sacrifice, duty, and obedience is the safest track.

Obedience is better than sacrifice, the same as works are better than faith, and knowledge than mere belief. Is some of us (after doing all we are able to, according to our capacity for exercising faith, to the possessing of spiritual strength according to the order of heaven) gain no more at the end of our struggle than a servant's portion in the millennial era, and final salvation in the celestial, it will be greater than the greatest now. Then we have reason to be encouraged as day follows on day.

Our chief and most prayerful efforts, however short of the mark we have come hitherto, should be to try, through God's help, to make the coming days of our future life over-arch the crumbled past.

We have all to run the gauntlet, and we must go through. But, O how great the consolation, if we can only remain steadfast in the faith and not be overcome. All suffering, all misery, all woe, will only be in this life. Then as Saints of God, weak or strong, let us fight on till we see the end of the war, or fall in the combat.

There is more joy in believing than otherwise.

If a good man fall he shall not be utterly cast down, saith the 37th psalm.

They who lean not on their own understanding, and who are not wise in their own eyes, but who trust in God and refrain from evil, the Lord shall direct their paths. "It shall be health to thy navel, and marrow to thy bones." Proverbs 3:7.

"All things shall work together for good to them who walk uprightly," saith the Lord. Then all ye who want to be there, at the first resurrection, to share the special salvation with the Lord and the redeemed of former and of latter days, bear onward, and let us hunger and thirst after righteousness, and suffer for righteousness' sake, even wear the crown of thorns now all we can, and abstain, all we can be enabled to, through faith in Jesus name, from every hurtful habit, giving all diligence. Extend from faith to charity, in the channel of meekness and humility, that we may be those who shall find rest to their souls in "the sweet by and by," when there will be no more curse, no suffering, nor sin, neither poverty, nor distress of any kind.

"When all the earth in glorious bloom, Affords the Saints a holy home."

My prayer and my hope is that we will all be there, with all who shall yet believe and obey and endure till millennium dawn, in the name of Christ, Amen. INFERIOR.

Be Sure of This.

PLANT yourselves in imagination in the ancient and sacred city of Jerusalem, some eighteen centuries ago. The great Teacher had but lately been crucified between two thieves, had broken the power of death, and demonstrated the reality of the resurrection, had bid his disciples tarry in the place made sacred by his presence in life, death, burial and resurrection, "until they were endowed with power from on high." The great manifestation came; they went forth to proclaim their message, the Lord working with them" by signs following the believer." As converts and congregations increased, suppose, if you will, that there were those who neglected to practice, or repudiated the customs and methods of those early apostles and disciples. By what show of consistency could they claim to be Christians or followers of Christ? Had a congregation arisen and declared themselves independent of the Priesthood or Apostleship, ignoring that organization mentioned incidentally by Paul, how could they claim to be called "the Church of God or of his Christ?"

If another section had separated themselves, denying the necessity, the form, or the purpose of baptism, how would they have been estimated by the primitive church? If any man had claimed to be a teacher of "the gospel" and declared in that capacity that the laying on of hands was only fiction and conveyed no power, how would he have been treated by the officers of the Church of Jesus Christ? Would not each of these dissenters from the official and authoritative order been deemed apostates and heretics? Or would they have been recognized as workers in and for a common cause, and that cause the one established by the dead yet risen Jesus? No matter how popular, how numerous, or wealthy these seceders might have become, nor how closely they might have followed the original in some things, if they deliberately and voluntarily gave up part, thus calling in question the intelligence or integrity of the founder, could they have been said to be his disciples?

They might have said they were of Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or later, of Wesley, or Luther, or Knox; they might have preferred Episcopacy, Presbyterianism, Catholicism, or Judaism, but in what sense or with what justice could they have expected the blessings and results inseparably attached to a special system, while they were following one of their own? And it is preposterous to suppose that in the very cradle of Christianity there could be those divergencies without exciting both ridicule and contempt. It is very evident from the teachings of Jesus that he inculcated and expected unity in the Church, that there were means and machinery provided to secure and perpetuate so desirable and essential a feature in that which without it could not have been considered a divine work.

The results of this union would as inevitably be power, as that there is weakness in division, and this power, being protecting and aggressive, would inevitably create opposition and in time persecution, the conflict between good and evil being eternal.

The hypothesis among so-called Christians is, that Jesus was the revelation of God's will to man, that in the devices of the gospel there was and is salvation; yet, with a fatuity really incomprehensible, all the jarring, conflicting and contending sects expect, when in ignorance of, in hostility to, or in repudiation of its cardinal and necessarily essential characteristics, that salvation, which in its unity and entirety the gospel alone can give!

Now is there not a parallel between the primitive age of Christianity and the present age? "Mormonism" professes to be a new revelation of the ancient system. Its professions may be genuine or they may be false, but, so far as all outward observation goes, in its organization, in its ordinances, in its signs, in its reception by the world, it is a perfect fac simile of the original. There is this much in favor; and men may cavil, and they may doubt whether Joseph Smith was a prophet, but the fact above stated remains forever unimpeached and unimpeachable.

Now if the sectarians of this day are in love with Jesus, if they are in love with his system, if they have faith in the record of the past, is it asking too much that they abstain now from all inconsistencies which would have been untolerated in the early days? So if there are those who profess faith in the great restorer of our times, who award to Joseph Smith the position of a Prophet, who in that admit the possession of every requisite qualification for his office, the same as they would in the great revelator, Jesus, and yet ignore or repudiate his practices and the methods of salvation consequent upon that practice, how can they consistently claim to be followers of Joseph?

Can those who win the applause of the bitterest enemies of his work be indeed his friends? Can those who meet no opposition, who receive no persecution, who practice no innovation, who are "hail fellows, well met," with every dispenser of the vagaries of sectarianism, be the disciples of Joseph, whose whole life was a continual protest, and whose death was testimony to the undying hatred of that class who now pet and applaud some of his so-called followers?

Can those who ignore the gathering, and all organization and power growing from that, be the founders (under God) of "that kingdom which shall stand forever?" Are these they who are to have arrayed against them first a County, then a State, then the United States, and finally the world? We trow not. The elements with which the world would battle are not there.

But, say they, polygamy is an evil, a false doctrine, and not an essential of "Mormonism." Whence then comes this opposition to it? Is the world so filled with love for the truth that it has become its advocate and champion? Since when was this most wonderful of all revolutions brought to pass? Ah, it is very evident that our cause is not as their cause, "our enemies themselves being judges." Then again how does it happen that the rich spiritual experience of tens of thousands under the administration of President Brigham Young is to be so depreciated and ignored? Since he came to power, the gathering, plural marriage, persecution, temple building, and blessing have gone hand in hand, and history says the work of God through Joseph has never been overthrown, "nor given to another people!"

These are all characteristics of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, they are the fulfillment of prophecy, the marks of an honored authority, and the unmistakable voice of God!—Deseret News.

Dressing the Children in the Fashion.

"Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it."—Prov. 22: 6.

"TRAIN up a child in the way he should go." Mothers are you doing this? Are you trying to train your daughters in the way they should go? A mother remarked some time ago, "I know my daughters are dressed in the latest style, but let them dress; when they become older they won't want these things any more." Mother, I am afraid you are mistaken. If you are not, the Scriptures can't be true. Can you bring up your daughters with all the foolish fashions of the world, and hope when they become old, it will depart from them? This is not the case. The daughters generally hold out the way mother trained them. If you show your daughter the humble way when she is young, she will not depart from it when she is old, but if you show your daughter the fashionable way, she will not depart from it. But when she comes to her death-bed she will say, "I am lost, and mother is the fault of it." Like I read in a paper the other day: A young woman after she was converted, felt it her duty to lay off her jewelry and gay clothing. She did so, and for awhile attired herself modestly and was a devoted Christian. But her mother persuaded her to put on the jewelry and gay clothing again. Not long after her mother told her there was no harm in this and the daughter was as gay as before. A few years later she took sick, and just before she died, she said to her mother in the presence of others: "Mother I am dying without hope. Once I was a Christian, but at your suggestion I put on that jewelry and gay clothing that hangs there on the wall, and by that I fell from grace. Now I must die and go to hell. Mother, it is your fault," and pointing to the clothes on the wall she said, "keep my clothes, and when you look at them you will remember that your daughter, who wore them at your suggestion, is in the lost world."

Can you dress in all the foolish fashions of the world and be a Christian? Fathers and mothers let this be a warning for you. Train your children in the way they should go, that when they come to die, they are prepared to go to that heavenly land.—Brethren at Work.

We shall have plenty of rest and comfort at the end, if we have but little by the way.

SHAKING HIS FAITH.

A BROTHER, George W. Galley, writes from Columbus, Nebraska, under a late date, and sends us two copies of the Daily Deseret News, Salt Lake City paper. He states that the papers were evidently sent him with a view to disturb his faith in the Reorganization; but the effect was to make him the firmer in his convictions that the system they of the Utah valley seek to bolster up is a grievous error.

One of the papers contains a leaded article, marked "communicated," published in close proximity to the editorials and not signed, giving it the look of an unacknowledged editorial. This article entitled "Be sure of this," we reproduce on page 39, for the purpose of reviewing it. The other paper contains the discourses of Joseph F. Smith, Elias Smith, D. H. Wells and John Taylor at the funeral services of William Clayton, December 7th, 1879, in the 17th Ward meeting-house. From these discourses we shall take extracts and review.

The evident effort of this writer, is to place the Utah Church in the position of the primitive church under Christ and his immediate disciples, and those who oppose in the condition of those who might have seceded from that church, denying and ignoring some of the fundamental principles of salvation promulgated by Jesus; and the close of the article is very clearly intended to be an argumentative defense against the attack that the Reorganization has been and is making upon the tenet and practice of "celestial marriage," as held by these Utah Saints.

The argument seems to be good, that if any of those who had accepted the methods of salvation proposed and authoritatively taught by Jesus Christ should have seceded therefrom, they could hardly maintain with consistency that they were disciples of Christ. This argument, unfortunately for the writer of the article and for the cause he tried to serve, has two edges, and has been unskillfully used. "Suppose," writes he; well suppose what is clearly provided for in the supposition, that some one had risen up among those early apostles and had declared that in addition to the "customs and methods" given of Christ and accepted by the church there was a practice, or practices, upon the observance of which their exaltation in glory depended, what would and should have been the course of the church toward them. Suppose further, that one of those early apostles, James for instance, had received from some source, what he thought to be a revelation from God; but because it was so palpably in subversion of all that he had before learned of Jesus, his feelings rose up in antagonism and he was afraid to teach it, though commanded so to do; and suppose further, that, after thinking it over a long time he instills it secretly and clandestinely into the minds of one, two, or more of the apostles and principal elders, and they went about secretly to practice it; and suppose further, that when it came to be whispered about, that James and those to whom it had been secretly, clandestinely taught, and who had as secretly and clandestinely practiced it, should openly, publicly and persistently deny it, until years after James had died; and that then one of those to whom it had been so secretly taught, and who had a written copy of it as he said, should come before the church and state how all this secrecy had been known to him; could that man and those who acceded to that thing so secretly brought in to the gospel economy, consistently be called or "lay claim to be called 'the Church of God,' or of his Christ."

This supposition is the other edge of the argument so deftly introduced under a supposition.

The statement, "They might have said they were of Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or later, of Wesley, or Luther, or Knox; they might have preferred Episcopacy, Presbyterianism, Catholicism or Judaism, but in what sense, or with what justice could they have expected the blessings and results inseparably attached to a special system, while they were following one of their own?" contains the principal count in the indictment we specially find against these Utah religionists and to which they must answer, sooner or later. All this peculiar defense, artistic and seemingly fair as it seems to be, is specious and faulty. The assumption is that these supposed seceders from the doctrines, "customs and methods" of Christ, might with consistency claim the title of disciples of Paul, or Wesley; the name of Catholicism or Judaism; but by reason of their departure from Christ they could not claim to be disciples of Christ's, nor christians.

Let us see how this works out: When Joseph Smith announced the message with which the angel had commissioned him, he declared that it was the power of God unto salvation, unto all them who would receive and obey it; that it was the gospel of Christ—the primitive gospel restored again, with its ceremonies, ordinances and blessings. In an editorial of the Deseret News, the same organ from which we have quoted, for December 24th, under the caption, "Be not led astray by Deceivers," it is stated that at the time H. P. Brown was cut off for "preaching polygamy, and other corrupt doctrines, polygamy was not a part of the creed of the church." And in the same editorial, in seeking to shield Pres. John Taylor from the charge of deception, the editor states "Monogamy was at one time the rule of the church." It is further stated in the same editorial:

"It was not until 1852 that the revelation on celestial marriage was publicly announced to the world. Up to that time no missionary of the church had the right to teach the doctrines it contained. They were held among the secret things which belong to God."

These evidences, taken from their own witnesses, clearly prove that neither in the primitive church, under Christ and his disciples; nor in the church founded by Joseph Smith under God, were the "customs and methods" of this "celestial marriage" system, using the term these polygamists themselves love to apply to their theory, to be found until introduced by a disciple, an apostle, a leader, if we admit the claim made for it. It was therefore clearly added, was an innovation, a departure, therefore can those accepting it and thus seceding from the "customs and methods" of the church as instituted by Christ, consistently claim to be the church of Christ, or christians. If "it is preposterous to suppose that in the very cradle of christianity there could not be divergences without exciting both ridicule and contempt," how much more preposterous to suppose that in after years when christianity had passed its cradling days, and assumed the garb of maturer years, a "divergence" so glaring should escape the "ridicule and contempt" it so richly merits. Nor should these innovators take exception to what they so aptly give us to understand must ensue. The "parallel between the primitive age of christianity and the present age," is, in the events which have characterized this later departure, too striking to be ignored, too sharply drawn for these sophists to dispose of readily. The doctrine, "methods and customs" of the Nicolaitans, was "hated" by him who founded the primitive church; and the "many wives" of David and Solomon were "an abomination" in the sight of the same being. How then runs the parallel, for them or against them?

That "Mormonism professes to be a revelation of the ancient system," refers and applies to it in its revelation in 1830 in its "organization," "ordinances" and "signs" in its gospel terms, in which eternal life and ultimate happiness and celestial glory were and are to be obtained; and can in no just sense be applied to the alleged revelation so strangely and so secretly obtaining credence and practice in this divergence; for "celestial marriage," "plurality of wives," or "polygamy" is not a "fac simile" of the ancient gospel system.

We accord to Joseph Smith the position of a prophet, with "every requisite qualification for his office;" but do not accord to him, or any other, the characteristics, office and power of Jesus, the great revelator. Jesus stands alone, pre-eminently the Only One of God. All that Joseph Smith was or claimed to be was delegated from Jesus; and hence, when these men ask, as does this writer whom we are reviewing, if those "who profess faith in him as the great restorer of our times," "ignore or repudiate his practices and the methods of salvation consequent upon that practice, how can they consistently claim to be followers of Joseph?" We answer at once, when Joseph Smith reveals Jesus Christ, the Redeemer and his methods, we follow his revelations; but when Joseph Smith in his revelations discovers Paul, Apollos, Wesley, Knox, David, Solomon, Nicholas or Joseph Smith, we cease to follow him; because he ceases to follow Christ.

When this writer carries the inference that the Saints of the Reorganization "meet no opposition" and are "hail fellows, well met, with every dispenser of the vagaries of sectarianism," he is very wide of the truth and shows himself to be ignorant of the people of whom he writes and the work that they are doing. And when he states that the same body ignores any fundamental principle, doctrine, or tenet, advanced, promulgated and defended by the church and its ministry under the public presidency of Joseph Smith, as the gospel revealed as the everlasting gospel, he makes a serious and fatal mistake, as do all others who make the same charge.

The opposition to polygamy is upon the ground that it is a doctrine foreign to original "Mormonism" and not "essential" to it. If it were essential we should not oppose it. We oppose it because that by reason of it, the "rich spiritual experience" of thousands and "tens of thousands," under the teaching of the elders of the church, when "monogamy was the rule," has been turned into sadness and sorrow, by the gall of this new departure.

The reference to the coming "to power, of President Brigham Young," is an unfortunate one. The "gathering" so flatteringly alluded to has been a gathering from, not to Zion; and besides this, so strange a gathering has it been, that after the lapse of thirty-six years since "President Brigham Young came to power," and during twenty-eight years of which time the "celestial marriage" system has been taught, the estimated aggregate of membership at the death of Joseph Smith has fallen from 150,000 to 125,000. The city of Salt Lake is but little larger after a growth and gathering of thirty-two years, than was Nauvoo, which was founded in the days of "Monogamic rule," and reached its zenith in the short space of eight years, the building of the temple included; and Salt Lake City has the advantage too, of a greater number of Gentiles to increase its statistical strength.

In carrying out the "plural marriage" policy co-existent with the gathering and temple building, the few and not the many have been benefited. To such an extent is this true, that now after all these years, George Q. Cannon, the chosen representative of the people of Utah, delegate to Congress, gives the number of men practising it at four thousand out of thirty thousand in the Territory. Think of it, ye twenty-six thousand! Four thousand of your brethren are being celestialized, basking in the beatific blessings of the eternal world, exalting and being exalted by from one to twenty wives for this and the life to come; while you are grovelling in despair with one—many of you with none. If any think we overstate this, they have only to take the census, and by a very little calculation they will soon discover that were there an equal chance given to all the men to marry some must remain single because no unmarried women remained unappropriated by those already married. In addition to this it is stated in the editorial in the News of Dec. 24th, already quoted from, that, "When the law of celestial marriage was revealed, permission and commandment were given therein, under certain prescribed rules and conditions for men in the priesthood, to have more than one wife." Therefore, instead of this revelation being like that which "shall be unto all people," it created a privileged class. This privileged class, the priesthood, (the ministry), upon whom should have rested the burden of preaching the gospel abroad, (including the twelve apostles), if it was to go to every "nation, kindred, tongue and people," soon became absorbed in the personal work of creating and enlarging their separate kingdoms. This was done under the rule, and "with the sanction, and governed by the restriction of one." This virtually placed the spiritual life, future advancement and celestial enlargement within the grasp and control of the man who "came into power." If this was the "unity" of the church in the valley, resulting in "power," we can not wonder that at the nod of President Brigham Young the priesthood of Zion trembled. But while this was going on in the valley to which this gathering was taking place, the missions abroad were languishing. The creating of union in the valley of Utah, was creating disunity in the branches. Proselyting to "plural marriage" was making apostates to Mormonism by hundreds. The centralizing of the priesthood in Utah, to build up individual kingdoms by the practice of the new revelations, weakened the power of the church abroad. The excellent opinion which this gathering of notable apostles and brethren to Utah Zion engendered for each other among themselves, because of their zeal in the new direction, lessened their influence abroad; except that influence was supplemented by an earthly element. All this was incident to the "gathering" so glibly recited.

The reference to temple building is hardly more fortunate than the one to gathering. Of this we only care to state. The Temple at Salt Lake is not yet built. The one at St. George, stands now more as a monument of the will, wish and personal power of President Brigham Young, than as a witness to the spiritual elevation and advancement of the people whom he ruled. Of these temples in the valleys of Utah, Orson Pratt, chief among their apostles, in point of probity and ability, in a sermon preached in the 17th Ward meeting house in Salt Lake City, December 10th, 1876, which sermon we heard and noted, stated that at a conference held January 2nd, 1831, at Father Whitmer's, at which some fifty or sixty of the church were present, the new doctrine of the Saints' inheritance of the earth was presented; and a commandment given that they were to go to the Ohio where he, God, would give unto them his law. That in pursuance of this commandment Joseph and others went in February, 1831, from New York to Ohio; but before they arrived there Joseph had received a revelation which was "to be a law unto them suitable for them in their then situation and in the New Jerusalem on this land." We have quoted the language of Elder Pratt, as we heard and noted it at the time. Joseph F. Smith and other prominent men were with him on the stand at the time. He further stated that that law was found in the "Book of Doctrine and Covenants," and when he said it he held up before the congregation a copy of the Liverpool edition of said book. There are four revelations published in the Doctrine and Covenants, received by Joseph Smith in February 1831, any one of which we commend to the readers of this review, and they may take their choice as to which one Elder Pratt referred to as indicated by the Lord as "suitable to them then and in the New Jerusalem."

In the further delivery of that discourse and upon the same subject of the Saints' hopes and inheritance, Elder Pratt stated that the land of Zion referred to in the revelation and the prophecy of Isaiah, which he had read for his text, were one and the same, and that the place for the establishing of the New Jerusalem was in Missouri; that there would be the "place of the New Jerusalem." He continued, "Forty-three years have rolled away; but the word of the Lord will be fulfilled." "A temple will be built in the place appointed in that land of Missouri." "That house will be built and while some will be living who lived in 1832." He also stated that there had yet been no temple built which God had acknowledged as his. The temples that they were building in the valleys were not the ones referred to in the prophecy, or the revelation to which he had called attention; and that when that house would be built many of the Saints would return to the land and be blessed in their inheritances, but that some would not be permitted to return. The "temple building" then, so relied upon as an evidence of their identity with Zion and her builders, is answered out of the mouth of their own chief apostle. We thought then and think now, that if Elder Orson Pratt had been left free from the domination of the "one who governed and restricted," he would be likely to tell the truth.

So far as "blessing" is referred to, we are not informed just what the writer may rate as blessings, and therefore can write but little of them; we can say however, that having met some who have essayed to enjoy them, whose experience we have listened to, and from their relation of them we are not in need of them.

PRESIDENT Joseph Smith left Plano January 10th, for McDonough and Hancock counties, Illinois. He wrote from Carthage on the 16th (Friday) saying that he preached in Colchester, McDonough county, twice on Sunday the 11th, and at Burnside, Hancock county, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings following, and was to speak the evening he wrote, and twice on the succeeding Sabbath, the 18th, in the court house at Carthage. This town of Carthage was the scene of the murder of his father and uncle, and it must be with strange emotions that he stands close by that spot of death to declare the gospel which those men lived for and endured the hate of many because of, their death ending the earthly term of their labor, while it devolves upon him to lead the van and hold up the standard that fell for a time when they went down. It is good that he, and all who will bring the good and true tidings of the latter-day call to men, can now preach there in safety and with welcome.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt, accompanied by Bro. Charles Wicks, went into Chicago January 8th, with the intention of preaching the principles of the gospel to all who could be brought to hear in that city. A small hall, called McFarlane's, 213 West Madison Street, was secured for Sunday services, and Bro. Forscutt spoke twice on the 11th, to small but evidently interested audiences. A reporter of the Chicago Tribune was present at the morning service, and nearly half a column in a friendly tone, about the discourse and the faith of the Church, was given in their issue of Monday the 12th. Bro. Forscutt intends to continue, and we are now, January 15th, printing a quantity of large cards announcing his services, the cards to be hung up in the street cars of the city; also some large posters for putting up, and a thousand epitomes with announcement of the services printed on the back of them. It is indeed to be earnestly hoped that this effort will result in the salvation of many souls, and Bro. Forscutt be laden with sheaves there as in the most successful of his other places of labor. His address is 498 Warren Avenue.

Bro. J. J. Billings, Deer Isle, Maine, says that he and the Saints there are working for the cause of Christ and they mean to continue, but they desire to have the aid of the traveling and presiding ministry, as the people without desire to hear them. He says that the Saints and their faith have many friends in that region. Bro. J. C. Foss visits them briefly occasionally. They hope to see Bro. T. W. Smith there at as early a date as possible. The work languishes for want of some one appointed by the General Conference to prosecute it.

Bro. W. S. Loar, of Elk county, Kansas, spoke at Fort Scott recently, while on a visit there.

Bro. Lorenzo Barton, at Parowan, Utah, asks for some of our Utah missionaries to come to Parowan and preach to them, for they need some spiritual food other than reading.

Bro. M. T. Short wrote from Columbus, Kansas, January 12th, that he would begin preaching there that evening. Success attend him.

Bro. L. R. Devore baptized two others recently in Jackson county, Ohio, and more seem about ready to obey the truth.

Sr. Eliza Hunter of Alton, Illinois, mentions a good discourse preached by Father James Whitehead, president of the Alton Branch, on January 11th. The Saints are enjoying spiritual blessings under his teaching and presidency.

Sister Mira J. Eaton, Winterport, Maine, relates some of her experiences during the thirteen years since she obeyed the gospel. She feels that she has fully proved the divine origin of the latter-day-work. She loves the three books and desires to live according to them, as we judge by the spirit and language of her letter. She testifies also to the healing power of God existing now as in former days. She and her family have no meeting privileges with the Saints for but one besides them lives there, and she longs to hear God's word preached and to meet with his people.

Bro. Joseph Lampert of Binghamton, Wisconsin, says that as no elders from outside that place or from a distance came to attend the conference of the Northeastern Wisconsin District that should have been held December 27th and 28th, they held no business meeting, but they had preaching and prayer services and enjoyed the spiritual gifts. No time was set for the next quarterly session. The minutes of the September session, published in December 15th Herald, stated that the conference would meet December 28th and 29th, but it should have been 27th and 28th. We published as written in the minutes, which are before us now. Bro. Lampert writes of his good intentions and efforts for the gospel work. May he be able to do much good.

May Bro. Joseph Emmett, president of the Genesee Branch, Michigan, have that wisdom and strength that he desires of the Lord, in order to do well in his duties; and may the Saints with him become zealous and active in spiritual things to the enjoyment of many heavenly blessings.

Bro. Levi Cheney speaks well of the efforts of Bro. Charles Wicks, followed by Bro. Joseph F. McDowell, at Kent, Stephenson county, Illinois. He says that there is considerable inquiry for "the young preachers," and several are studying the scriptures for light and truth.

Sister Mattie Spaulding of Nobles county, Minnesota, mentions the loss they sustained in crops by grasshoppers the past season. Of one hundred acres of wheat they only cut thirty acres, and of this they thrashed out but twenty-seven bushels of grain. Though some of the Saints think to go south, yet Bro. Spaulding intends to try it there one year longer; for, notwithstanding the discouragements, some of them are cheerful and hopeful of yet having better success in that land of locusts.

Bro. J. S. Patterson was preaching in Peoria, Illinois, early in January, and the Journal of that city gives a very good notice of him and the position of the Reorganized Church, in a brief editorial.

Bro. E. M. Wildermuth mentions the burning of the woollen factory at that place (Blue Rapids, Kansas) on the 23d of December, 1879. The loss was twenty thousand dollars, and about a hundred people were thrown out of employment.

Sister Mary A. Jones, Plymouth, Pa., writes that she would be glad to hear of ministers being sent into that country to preach, and she says that she will give ten dollars towards helping them on the mission, and that others there would do their best to the same end, for there is great need and great desire for the gospel to be preached in all that region.

Bro. Edward Delong of the Reese Branch, Michigan, Tuscola county, relates his going to Guilford and being invited at a Methodist meeting to preach, he did so, and continued several days, and then baptized two persons. He intended to go again and try to bring in some more.

Bro. John Eames continues to strive for the salvation of himself and his household and that of the people of Cheyenne, Wyoming. He is favored by his friends in other religious bodies, and he has hopes that "after many days," if need be, the bread cast upon the waters will be found to have fed some unto life eternal. May he walk worthily and realize his expectations of doing good.

Sister Mary A. Wilcox at New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas county, Ohio, wishes greatly to hear the gospel preached again. She is alone and needs it and also the prayers of the Saints that she have help to abide faithful.

Bro. Moses Welch of Shell Creek, Colfax county, Nebraska, writes that they need an able elder there and have been expecting Bro. George Hyde to visit them. Bro. Welch lives ten miles from Columbus, to which branch he belongs and is the priest of.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll considers, says a writer, that he makes "a hard hit" against religion and its support, and that of its ministers, when he says that the preachers in the United States cost the people thereof the sum of twelve millions of dollars per annum. But the tables may be turned upon the Colonel, says another paper, by reminding him that the lawyers, (who serve because of crime and law-breaking, not as moral teachers, except as in their business to serve their clients, they may defend just law and law keeping,) cost the people of this same country, seventy millions of dollars per year. The criminals, for their support and prosecution, cost the country forty millions of dollars, and intoxicating liquors are sold to the value of six hundred millions of dollars. Any of these quite throw in the shade the ministers, notwithstanding a good deal might properly be said about the salary business and the grand and expensive structures where fashion and wealth hold sway, not the true worshipers, neither the religion of Jesus Christ as he would teach it were he here.

Bro. J. D. Bennett wrote from Fanning, Doniphan county, Kansas, January 19th, saying that he had been preaching there for nearly a month, and that he had orderly and interested audiences. They came on dark nights and over muddy roads. He found Bro. Bays name and work there especially remembered by the people. The branch there, he writes, seems flourishing well now after a period of trial. Bro. Bennett was going thence to Blue Rapids, and feeling that he has been blessed recently in his efforts, he desires to do good and to receive more.

We regret to hear from Bro. James Perkins, has been compelled by ill health to stop active field service of the past months and to retire for a time. His address will be Gaylord, Smith county, Kansas. May he recover from the bronchial trouble soon.

Bro. T. R. Gibbs, at Warrior Station, Jefferson county, Alabama, says; "Please mention that I am living here, and the Elders will find a home if they come this way." We hope that Bro. Heman can go there, as Bro. Gibbs has been long alone.

THE Sentinel, published at Independence, Missouri, a copy of which is sent us by Bro. C. G. Lanphear, in its issue for December 20th, says of Jackson county:

"Among the first of Missouri's splendid counties stands Jackson. Second in population and wealth to St. Louis, it is absolutely the first in natural resources and enterprise. We look forward to the time when it will be first in all things.

Jackson county has an area of 620 34 square miles or 397,337,72 acres. Of this 273,260 acres are enclosed or susceptible of being cultivated and of yielding inexhaustably. The elevation of the county varies from 770 to 1000 feet above the sea level, the highest point being about 2 miles north of the court house at Independence. * * To the great altitude of this country are we indebted for our pure air and consequent excellent health which is a marked feature at this point.

The climate is lovely. The mercury in summer scarcely ever attains a higher degree than 90, and scarcely ever falls below 10 below zero. * *

The average annual rainfall is 40 inches, about 30 of it generally falling during the spring and summer months. The soil is very rich and deep, being composed of rich, mellow sandy loam along the river banks, and loam with less sand on the prairie and upper timber lands. It is known as walnut, elm and hackberry land, and is productive in the highest degree. Here we raise wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley, broom corn, tobacco and all the root crops and vegetables known to the temperate zone in extreme abundance. The soil is also adapted to fruits and unexcelled for apples, peaches, pears, cherries, grapes and the other small fruits, which, under a moderate state of cultivation, produce luxuriously. The soil is also adapted to the various grasses, essential to the stock raising and grazing country."

These statements will doubtless be of interest to many of the Saints and will answer the questions asked about the soil, temperature, products, fertility, &c of that county.

On the arrival of the Ute Indians and their escort at Pueblo, Colorado, yesterday, on their way to Washington, there was such a threatening crowd, talking of lynching and shooting, that the train east was taken immediately without any getting their dinner.

The obelisk at Alexandria, Egypt, that was recently presented to the city of New York, was last month (Dec. 6th) lowered from the pedestal where it had stood for nearly two thousand years. It was to be started for America as soon as the float could be finished and got into deep water.

In one province of Russia the diphtheria prevails to a destructive degree.

Another insurgent commander in Cuba has surrendered. He had but few men left.

The Montenegrins and Albanians have had another battle, and the former were again victorious.

The American and Mexican forces on the border are co-operating for the annihilation of Victoria and his band of thieving Indians, at one time in Texas and New Mexico, now in Mexico.

Congress, by committee, is inquiring into the cause of the Negro exodus from the Carolinas. Also irregularities and frauds in postal route matters are to be looked into.

General Fiske at Washington has submitted specific charges against Indian Commissioner Hayt of maladministration in his office. The most serious is that "the Ute outbreak was due, more than to any other cause, to Hayt's failure to provide the Indians with rations and clothing in conformity with the treaty" of the Government with them. Mr. Hayt claims that he can disprove all the charges without difficulty.

Prince Bismarck of Germany is quite ill, and there are grave fears in Berlin that he will not recover.

All the Afghans connected with the killing of the British Embassy have been executed.

The waters of a river in Austria have risen so that twenty villages in the Cracow district are inundated.

There is a strike among the miners on the Loire, France.

In southern New York 300 men in the iron mines of Lyon Mountain struck, and also tried to stop others from working, but the sheriff and 60 special constables arrested the chief strikers. Also among the coal miners of West Virginia several hundred men have ceased work and are seeking to intimidate the owners. The governor has ordered some militia companies to be ready in case of need.

The delegation of Utes from Colorado for Washington arrived in Chicago, yesterday.

12th.—Among the charges against Commissioner Hayt are that he shielded corrupt Indian agents and contractors, and persecuted the honest ones; that he was not only neglectful of business and irregular in his duties, but also was in general a bad man for both the Government and the Indians. General Fiske, Commissioner Stebbins and others who seem to know what they are about are presenting their proofs. The Indians were starved and the Government robbed.

The Ute delegation has arrived in Washington and the Government will see what can be done.

A strike of 5,000 or 6,000 miners begins at Pittsburgh to-day. In West Virginia the State authorities will protect the miners who are willing to work.

The political situation between Russia and Germany is said to be growing more serious, for much ill feeling prevails.

There is a great deal of sickness among the British troops in Afghanistan, pneumonia in particular.

Weather so warm that the Mississippi River at Prairie Du Chien, Wisconsin, is clear of ice; a remarkable thing.

13th.—In Ireland disorder increases and bread riots are likely to occur. Five hundred inhabitants of county Limerick are said to be on the brink of starvation. The streets of Cork are patrolled by mounted police, for bodies of men have been parading the streets carrying black flags. The means of relief thus far proposed have been inadequate to the demands. The provision and bake shops are guarded by the police. Great outbreaks in the rural districts are expected, unless full relief is sent to the people.

Germany is suspicious of the intentions of France in case a war arises between Germany and Russia. France wishes revenge for her humiliating defeat in 1870, and having most remarkably recovered her standing as one of the first-class powers of Europe, she is about ready to try her hand in the great game of war that seems to be expected in Europe, particularly by Germany. Bismarck is both sick in body and troubled over the situation.

Over fifteen million bushels of grain is now in store in the elevators in Chicago, Illinois.

The island of St. Kitts in the West Indies was inundated on the 11th inst. by great floods, and the lives of 200 persons were destroyed, and $250,000 worth of property. One town was wrecked, sugar fields were swept away, and dwelling and sugar houses carried off bodily into the sea, along with human beings and cattle. In 1722 a great hurricane nearly destroyed the island. It has an area of only about 70 square miles.

The Ute chief, Ouray, of the delegation at Washington was yesterday interviewed by Mr. Schurz, Secretary of the Interior, concerning the tribe giving up those engaged in the White River Agency affair, as the condition of peace, and the shrewd chief replied: "How can I give them up? Why do you hold my tribe responsible for what those men did? If a murder were committed here in Washington would your authorities make the whole population suffer for it?" He says it is impossible for him to deliver the twelve men demanded by the Government, but if the Government will give him six months' time he will see that they are appropriately punished. That probably means, under the Ute law, "death on sight." The House Indian Commission will at once begin its special work of investigating the cause of the late massacre. Mr. Schurz is firmly of the opinion that all the Utes must be removed from Colorado.

15th.—In England extensive strikes of the cotton operatives at Bolton, Burnley and Ashton-under-Lyne are imminent, in consequence of the masters refusing an increase of 10 per cent in wages.

16th.—The investigation of the White River affair was begun by the House committee at Washington yesterday. Mr. Schurz is still inflexible in his demand that the Ute prisoners must be surrendered, and makes this a condition precedent to any negotiations as to the cession of their present reservation.

The situation in Ireland is becoming daily more critical. Already one case of death by starvation has occurred.

Riots in Pesth, Hungary, are reported. Parties took sides in a personal quarrel and the police were harsh in their action and a great disturbance has taken place. The police killed two persons. Greater troubles were expected at latest dispatches received.

More fighting in Afghanistan; natives defeated by the British.

The United States troops in New Mexico came up with chief Victoria's band of Indians, and killed and wounded several on the 12th inst. Major Marrow hopes to strike them again with greater effect.

17th.—Process servers in Mayo county, Ireland, are being roughly handled by the renters and their friends.

A quarrel has taken place between the officers in garrisons on the Russo-German frontier, and the bitterness evinced shows that a deep seated jealousy exists between the two armies.

The riots in Pesth, Hungary, continue.

The situation in Ireland grows more critical with each day's news. In some districts starvation is starving the poor laborers and their families in the face. In others, they are thronging to the work-houses for relief. In still others, private charity has had to come to the rescue, though it is insufficient to cope with the distress. Meanwhile the Government seems to be doing nothing to remove the original causes of the distress or to help the miserable condition of the tenants.

The Government at Washington has determined to send Ouray, Jack and one other chief back to Colorado in charge of an agent, to make an effort to bring in the twelve murderers. Ouray says that he can not compel them to come "unless he can kill them first," which he says he will undertake. The others of the delegation will remain at Washington till some decision is reached about the Ute reservation in Colorado.

The strike among the miners at Pittsburgh, Pa., is not yet over.

One man shot to death in his own house in Chicago yesterday morning, and another poisoned by his mistress and dying there. The paymaster of a gas company, while driving on Deering street, yesterday, was robbed of $3,900 in gold and silver. Three men made a sudden attack on him and his driver, and by violence overcame them; and, taking the bags, were off before any one else knew what was going on, though it was early in the afternoon, with workmen laboring near by. It was a bold and successful deed.

19th.—A dispatch from Dublin, Ireland, says: "The inclement weather is aggravating the distress, and deaths from want and exposure on the highways are becoming alarmingly frequent. The evictions at Knockricard are being renewed, and the bloody fighting of last week between the peasantry of this mountainous district and the constabulary is likely to be repeated. Riots are everywhere reported, and the police force is daily increased, and is yet thought inadequate to the present troubles."

20th.—The English are steadily strengthening their position at Cabul, and the late great effort of the Afghans having failed the dominion of Britain over the people of that land, without any great trouble hereafter, is supposed to be certain.

It is reported that Russia has informed both Germany and Austria that she will withdraw her troops from their borders to avoid any further chance of trouble between the garrisons.

At Tokio, Japan, the third disastrous conflagration within seven years occurred December 26th, miles of the city being laid waste. Fifteen thousand houses destroyed, and fifty thousand people destitute thereby. Loss of life thought to be one hundred. Extensive relief measures were instituted by the Japanese government and private individuals.

President Hayes has nominated Eli H. Murray, of Kentucky, as Governor of Utah. It is quite a disappointment to Gov. Emory and friends that he is not renominated.

Correspondence.

CONCORDIA, Lafayette Co., Missouri,
January 13th, 1880.

Brs. Joseph and Henry:—I left home October 20th, for Salt River Branch, with Brother W. T. Bozarth, and from there to Elliott and made a new opening. Thence to the North East Missouri District Conference, held at Renick. Had a very good time. All seemed to enjoy themselves well. Since then I have traveled in Caldwell, Davies, Clinton, Buchanan, Jackson, Johnson and Macon counties. I have been blessed with much liberty in teaching the way of life in places. I have, on the other hand, met many things to discourage and dishearten, finding contention and trouble in some branches, caused mostly by slothfulness and a lack of doing duty by officials. But I sincerely hope that those things tending to retard the progress of the work in those branches may be removed in the near future.

I had the pleasure of staying one night with the Saints at Independence, and of viewing the temple lot. Went from there to a new field of labor in Jackson and Lafayette counties, opened by Bro. Bozarth. We are at present separated, Bro. Josiah Curtis assisting Bro. Bozarth, and Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser, of Independence, is laboring with me. He is young and inexperienced, but desires to aid in furthering the cause. There seems to be a good interest prevailing here; do not know what the results may be. I hope to be instrumental, in the hands of God, in bringing many honest souls into the fold. Since Conference I have baptized but one. Have been tempted and tried nearly to the utmost; but, thank the Lord, by his help, I have been enabled to stand the storm this far. I desire an interest in the prayers of those who pray for themselves, that we, who are youthful in the cause, may be able to surmount the trials, troubles, and evils that tend to destroy our usefulness in the kingdom of God. I thank the Saints and friends for their kindness, hospitality, and benevolence during my travels; and I pray God to bless them.

Yours in the new and everlasting gospel,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

EDENVILLE, Iowa, January 5th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—Having lively times in Powshiek county, eight or ten miles north and west of Brooklyn. Brn. W. C. Nirk and R. Goreham with me. Preaching in several different school houses, packed with listeners. The vicinity is flooded with about all the defamatory novels, from Mrs. Ward's to Ann Eliza Young's. Have four of them in my possession, and giving them a little airing. What a time our good christians(?) have, in keeping together the tangled web these novels weave. Find many of "Jo Smith's" neighbors; all have seen him, sure. One, a Mr. Roberts, says: "I was in Nauvoo when 'Joe' gave out that angels would appear to him from the opposite shore of the Mississippi. The time having come, sure enough twelve men dressed in white came down (flew over the grove) with geese wings on them, and 'Joe' tried to go to them by walking on the water, and fell in." Strange to say some are trying hard to believe such stories. Have been able to meet every phase of opposition with success. Our efforts have not been in vain, as we have baptized fourteen, all but three being heads of families. The people for miles around, are in an uproar about "this way."

We discontinue our meetings for two weeks, or so, to labor elsewhere, and to visit the wife and little ones at home for a few days. We have been much blessed in Spirit, and have the new Saints firm in the faith. Oh, how our hearts have been made to rejoice, while the Holy Spirit has been burning upon the altar of our souls. I never felt more firm in the work; and hope my lot may ever be cast to pray, live and labor for the spread of this glorious truth, and the emancipation of the honest in heart. Yours in the one faith,
I. N. WHITE.

NETAWAKA, Kan., Jan'y 12th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—The good and cheering news that is reported from almost everywhere, where the brethren are laboring, is very encouraging, and adds much to the joy of the Saints. And we here have learned by experience that the time has come (as promised) when God's children "find favor in the eyes of the people."

Of late I have been several times from home preaching. When at Centralia three were added to the few faithful and kind hearted Saints there. I have been preaching in two new places, where I found people very friendly; and in both places men of high standing in other churches, and one a minister, expressed publicly that they believed everything that was said. Some questions were asked, but all ended in good, friendly feeling; and some of the friends believe that branches could be established in both places, if preaching could be continued for awhile. I will say that we believe that a good deal of good could be done in this part of the country, and that many could be added to the Church, if our traveling ministry could visit us occasionally. If they will come we will do all we can for their comfort. This is the feeling of the branch. Prejudice exists for want of better understanding; but he that bringeth glad tidings and preaches salvation through Christ, on the terms of the gospel, creates friends for himself and the Church. In hopes in the near future to spend more time in preaching the gospel. I remain your brother in Christ,
HENRY GREEN.

CHEROKEE, Kansas, Jan. 6th, 1880.

Beloved Herald:—In taking the pen to contribute for your worthy columns, my weaknesses, inactivity and nothingness in general loom up, till I am in a quandary whether I will go right forward or stop short off.

Father has been sick for a long time. I was called home and detained to see after the aged, and to serve tables. He is much better. The horn of plenty has turned its contents into my lap, and I am very free. I am in the field. The old parents want me to remain there irrespective of sickness and death on their part, and I most heartily concur with them.

The work in these regions could be better, but we have no complaints. The people are willing to hear, and openings are abundant.

I might report that "I am willing to do all I can," but we have sickened on such reports ere now. I rejoice greatly on reading about the work spreading abroad. I feel glad to learn that it is taking strong hold on the hearts of those who have enlisted, as well as commanding the respect and admiration of the honest, virtuous, truth loving element at large. I want to love more and serve better as the gospel effect widens and deepens in all the earth. I mean to be at the coming jubilee and lay all that I have and am "on the missionary altar." Zeal burns within me for the spreading of divine truth, for the refutation of error and the celestial salvation of mankind. Favoritism I dislike, but the love and co-operation of all are intensely desired. The weather is damp but we will work anyway.

Praying for the progress of Zion, and for the health, peace and prosperity of her children, I subscribe myself as a true friend and brother,
MORRIS T. SHORT.

MOSS POINT, Jackson Co., Mississippi,
January 1st, 1880.

Dear Herald:—Another year has rolled around. yet I am in the "sunny south," and have been striving during the past year against contending obstacles to do good. Just what amount I have done I do not know, but not nearly so much as I wish I had. Yet I have succeeded in making some more happy; and I trust their happiness will increase. I have met some severe trials, and the year has been a checkered scene of joy and sorrow. But God has been merciful, and time would fail me to tell of all the manifestations of his love that I have felt. I am so well satisfied that I am resolved to engage in his service for the coming year.

After writing in October I staid in Florida the remainder of the month, spending the time very pleasantly, and preaching at Coldwater, Eureka and Santa Rosa branches. Individual improvement is discernable in some. I must here relate one instance of God's power manifested while I was in Coldwater Branch:

October 23d I chanced to be at Bro. Jordon Faulks, when their little grandchild fell from a loaded cart, and the wheel ran over its body. It was picked up almost lifeless, and to all appearance was severely if not mortally injured. I immediately anointed it with oil, and prayed for it. It went to sleep, and in the morning it was as well as before the accident, with not a bruise upon its body. God be praised!

November 1st arrived at Pleasant Hill, Alabama, where I found some sickness. Brn. Chute, Parker and Wiggins were afflicted. The two former, through the mercy of God, have since recovered, but the latter departed this life November 26th. He was a faithful man, and must needs rest in peace. Two days later Bro. Samuel Paget of Flat Rock was called away, and December 12th Father Parker of Pleasant Hill was called upon to lay down the weapons of this earthly warfare. So you see we have had our share of sorrow here; we mourn but not as those who have no hope. About this time I also heard of my father's death, who died at his home, Cedar Creek, Nebraska, November 17th, 1879. It is impossible to describe my feelings when hearing this sad news. I was a stranger in a strange land, with none who were acquainted with him to sympathize with me; yet God, my true, faithful friend, spoke peace to my heart; and, after the first struggle, I was ready to say, "Thy will be done." He was a good, faithful man, and must rest in peace. His counsel, in years gone by, often kept me from sin and harm; and it has perhaps done much toward placing me where I am now, as an advocate of heavenly truth. I revere his memory, and hope to meet him where death can not invade. I remained at Pleasant Hill over a week, and preached several times. Thence to Butler Branch for a week, where I found the Saints still enjoying the favor of heaven, and my stay with them was pleasant.

November 23d and 24th attended conference at Flat Rock, where some very unpleasant things were witnessed; but I believe that clouds will be removed, and the tried and true will be the purer for their trials.

Bro. G. T. Chute resigned the presidency of the District, and Bro. G. R. Scogin was chosen to succeed him. May God endow him with the spirit of his calling, and make him firm and steadfast, yet kind and sympathizing. This is an arduous duty, and one who holds the position should be prayerfully sustained by the Saints; as they expect him to bear with them so should they bear with him. May God breathe the spirit of peace upon the Alabama District!

After conference I visited the Lone Star Branch, and instructed them according to the light given me.

December 7th I preached the funeral sermon of Bro. Joshua Wiggins at Pleasant Hill. On my return with Bro. Scogin from Lone Star I called on the Saints near Brewer's Creek, and preached once. We found Bro. Samuel Page, his wife, and aged mother still strong in the faith; may God give them grace to continue.

December 14th, I preached the funeral sermon of Bro. John J. Vickery, who died May 25th, at Butler Branch. Then returned to Pleasant Hill; and, after a few days there, I came to this place, arriving December 22d. Bro. Daniel McPherson, a young brother of Pleasant Hill, came with me, and will perhaps remain with me for some time. May God make him an instrument of usefulness.

We found the Saints here, with but few exceptions, strong in the faith. They have undoubtedly made considerable progress in the cause. Bro. Grierson president of the branch, has been able to be with them but a few times since our departure in March, but Brn. Sherman and Porter, (Priest and Teacher) have done well, and labored faithfully and with good effect. I think the branch is destined to live. We have held meetings every night since coming, also on Sunday and on Christmas day. Our hearts were made glad in prayer meeting to hear the earnest and pathetic prayers offered by the Saints and their children. Even the little children, six years old and upwards, prayed in public meeting. God bless the little lambs of the fold!

We have not yet visited Bluff Creek Branch, but will go there to-morrow. We hear fair reports. Brn. David and Albert Goff were over last Sunday night. If the zeal manifested by them is a characteristic of the branch, they are doing well. They had only heard a rumor that we were here, but they were so anxious to find out whether it were so or not, that in making the trip they pulled a boat eighteen miles, nine miles being against the current of Pascagoula river. That kind of zeal will do if applied to all matters of interest to the cause; don't you think it will?

The Saints at Gainesville, Florida, were doing well when last heard from; may heaven preserve them. Two whom Bro. Howard baptized at Gainesville have removed to Tuscaloosa county, Alabama. There was a branch of the Church there in 1844. It may be that if I can go to see Bro. and Sr. White I can find some of the old sheep. I want to go,

O! that the Lord would send more laborers. I have prayed that he would; and somehow it strikes me that the young brother with me now has come in answer to that prayer. I have been hindered some for want of finances; but it looks a little brighter now; only day before yesterday I received a letter from Bro. H. A. Stebbins, stating that he had a $20.00 order from Sister A. F. Robinson, of Visalia, California, which she wished forwarded to me.

Accept my thanks, Sr. Robinson, and may God bless you. I never met you, but this only proves the purity of your motives; for it could not have been personal friendship, but love for the cause that prompted the act. Pray that I may have wisdom to use it for the best interest of the work; this I shall try to do. Saints of the mission have kindly remembered me too. We shall go north from here, visit Winston county, Mississippi, and other points, and perhaps take a run over into Tuscaloosa county, Alabama.

We have been thinking of proceeding northward, and perhaps reaching Plano for Spring conference. May God direct in this matter, as in all others, is the prayer of

HEMAN C. SMITH.

MT. HOLLY, New Jersey,
January 8th, 1880.

Brother Henry:—I rejoice that I have accomplished my desire of having preaching at Smithville. I obtained the use of Mechanic's Hall, and sent for Bro. J. A. Stewart. He was prompt to answer, and day before yesterday he preached an able discourse on the continuation of revelation and the divine calling of Joseph Smith. A good number was present, considering the weather, which was dark and stormy. I asked some the next morning what they thought, and they said they could find no fault with what he preached; so we will give them some more soon. Bro. B. O. Herbert, of Hornerstown Branch, is preaching near here, and is sowing the good seed to hungry seekers. A great deal is said about making the Herald a weekly. I favor that, if it continues with as good sound and solid matter as it has now. It beats all other papers, in my estimation. I have a treatise on the fullness of the everlasting gospel, setting forth its first principles, promises, and blessings; written by Elder Moses Martin, and printed in New York in 1842. I think if this could be printed and circulated by lone members, here and there, it would open the way for preaching. It contains so much in a nut shell. Yours truly, SAMUEL A. REEVE.

HELENA CITY, Montana,
January 5th, 1880.

Dear Herald:—I wrote last from Virginia City, where I preached on the 28th and 29th of November, and December 1st and 2nd in Ruby Valley. Left there the 3rd, at 6 a. m., for Virginia City, and thence on stage at 8 o'clock and arrived that night at Pony, and next day arrived at Bro. Gaultier, on Willow Creek; preached there 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th. Left on the 9th for Reese Creek, arriving there on the 11th. Preached there the 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th. On the 17th held business meeting. Preached the 18th and 19th. Held a prayer meeting and baptized three. Sunday went to Bozeman. I saw the Editor of the Avant Courier, a Judas who used to be a Methodist preacher as long as it paid, then turned infidel; still owns a Methodist church. He insulted me; said the people of Bozeman had too much sense to listen to my tom-foolery. I found Bozeman too sensible a place for me. It has eleven whisky shops and no free church. Sunday 21st preached twice in Grange Hall; the 22d organized the Reese Creek Branch. 26th returned to Willow Creek; preached there the 28th and 29th. Held business meeting Tuesday 30th and organized the Willow Creek Branch. Wednesday the 31st, preached again. Thursday, Jan. 1st, 1880, came ten miles to Fork of Missouri, Friday 2d to Radersburg, Saturday 3d to Beaver Creek, Sunday 4th to this place, Helena. I preach to-night in the Christian Church. The results are in the future. From here I go to Blackfoot City, Deer Lodge, Butte City and Glendale. The Saints are feeling well. I am well in health, and enjoy the favor of my Heavenly Father. Pray for the mission. The climate is cold but there are warm, honest hearts.

She was born in Lamoille, Bureau county, Illinois, May 24th, 1850. The funeral services were well attended by weeping relations and friends in and out of the Church. Her death was anticipated, but it came after relief and ease, hence the sad shock. Gentle she was, and tenderly loved by a large circle. Determined and persistent in the right, a model of fidelity, prudent in counsel, and admired, she has gone to join the redeemed in the mansion of light and rest. She requested her honorable husband to embrace the faith. Services by Elder M. T. Short.

Has gone where all is joy and peace."

Meeting opened in due form. Committee on by-laws reported. Report accepted and committee discharged. The following by-laws were then read, and unanimously adopted.

Whereas, this branch has been for some time in a disorganized state, and in its reorganization we are desirous of avoiding the evils that have caused the same, and that have brought reproach on the cause of Christ in this Territory, we therefore do adopt the following by-laws, and cheerfully subscribe to the same:

1. Resolved that no member can be received into this branch who has hardness of heart or any unsettled difficulty. 2. That we will not fellowship gambling in any form whatever. 3. That we will not fellowship any one using profane language. 4. That we not fellowship dancing. 5. That we discountenance the use of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, and will not fellowship any one who frequents saloons or any places of that character, unless calling there on legitimate business. 6. That we look upon the use of tobacco as a dirty, injurious habit, and earnestly recommend the Saints to abstain from its use. 7. That these bye-laws be spread upon the record.

The following then gave their names for organization:

John E. Reese	Mary J. Reese	Thomas Harris
Thomas Reese	George Smith	Dan. R. Harris
Geo. W. Courts	James Bamber	John D. Reese
John Pritchard	Mary Reese	Polly A. Reese

WILLOW CREEK BRANCH.

A meeting of the Saints was held at the house of Bro. Lewis Gaultier, Willow Creek, Gallatin county, Montana, December 30th, 1879, (according to previous appointment), for the purpose of organization. Elder E. C. Brand was called to the chair, and Bro. L. B. Gaultier was chosen to act as clerk pro tem. Meeting was opened in due form. The following preamble and bye-laws were presented, read, and unanimously adopted:

[Then follows alike the preamble and the first five resolutions adopted by the Reese Creek Branch, as given above, and in the place of the 6th, the following on the Sabbath.—Eds.]

Resolved that the Sabbath be properly observed, and that no work should be performed on that day, except works of necessity, or acts of mercy.

Resolved that these bye-laws be spread upon the record.

On balloting for branch officers, Bro. James Green was chosen as Presiding Elder; Bro. Lewis

B. Gaultier as Priest; Bro. Clinton Williams as Teacher. The latter was ordained to that office by Bro. E. C. Brand. Adjourned.

E. C. BRAND, President pro tem.
L. B. GAULTIER, Clerk.

THE following lines were composed by a gentleman who had attended our meetings at Hanley some few times, but for the loss of the paper on which they were written, the lines would perhaps never have become known. The permission of the writer to publish has been gained:

THE LATTER DAY SAINTS.

In a plain and humble room
In an unpretending street,
On a Sunday afternoon
The Saints of Jesus meet.

They meet as brethren dear
To help each other on;
And shed a silent tear
For the poor dejected one.

These saints of latter days
Are earnest and sincere;
They work, and watch, and pray,
To keep a conscience clear.

There is no choir to charm the ear;
No sights to catch the eye;
No cushioned pews are there
In which to lounge or lie.

But here we find the poor—
The poor but rich in grace—
Not rich in worldly store
Our Father's fond embrace.

Despised although they be,
Their motives misconstrued,
The candid must agree
They seek each other's good.

Christianity.

WHAT is Christianity? Webster apprises us that it is "The religion taught by Christ." This, then, is the definition of the word, Christianity.

Did Jesus teach a system of his own, or was he sent by one paramount to him?

"For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. * * * My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me"—John 6: 38; 7: 16.

The doctrine which Jesus taught was "heaven born." It was founded and established by the great I AM. Whatsoever he taught was for the benefit of the human family. What did he teach?

1st, Faith. "And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which * * believeth on the son, may have everlasting life."

—John 6: 40. 2d, Repentance. "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish.—Luke 13: 3. 3d, Baptism of water and the Spirit. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of heaven."—John 3: 5.

The gospel came with power. We read, "And they were astonished at his doctrine; for his word was with power."—Luke 4: 32. He gave power to his ministry. "And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power."—1 Cor. 2: 4. Again. "That your faith should not rest in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God."—5. "For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."—1 Thes. 1: 5. Read Mark 16: 15-20. Matt. 10: 7, 8. Luke 9: 1, 2; 10: 17-19.

We ask then, that inasmuch as the many churches of to-day claim to teach the doctrines of Christianity, where is the power that accompanies the word? All their preaching is destitute of any power whatever, that is, of God. Where are the "gifts of the Holy Spirit?" "Ah!" says some one, "they were only designed to remain in the primitive church. They were needed in connection with miracles simply to establish Christianity; and then, when that was once done, they were no longer needed." Where is there such language to be found in the Bible? Did Christ say so? Did Paul say so? No. Modern divines said so. And we ask, where is their proof? If God reveals not his will in this age of the world, then how did they receive this information, or the knowledge that God designed such a thing to be? Let them answer.

Where is primitive Christianity to be found? There is so much talk about "non-essentials," that it appears therefrom that Christ failed to know what was really essential to man's salvation. Baptism is "non-essential." "Laying on of hands" is "non-essential." The "gifts" are "non-essential." "Miracles" are "non-essential." And I suppose the "resurrection of the dead" will finally be esteemed as "non-essential,"—wont need to be done. Hence, we will all turn infidel. If they would only believe that "fire and brimstone" were "non-essential" in the punishment of the sinner, we would think, or begin to think that they were learning wisdom. When people think that the sinner must have a share of "fire and brimstone," and "deny the Holy Spirit that giveth utterance," we think there is blindness exhibited on their part. The Christianity of to-day is not the Christianity of Christ's day, or of his time.

"After the Apostles were dead, everything came to pass they had foretold; the whole Christian system, in time, underwent a miserable change; preaching shared a similar fate of the other institutions, and the glory of the primitive church gradually degenerated. Those writers whom we call "fathers," however, held up to view by some as models for imitation, do not deserve that indiscriminate praise ascribed to them. Christianity, it is true, is found in their writings; but how sadly incorporated with Pagan philosophy and Jewish allegory. It must indeed, be allowed, that in general the simplicity of Christianity was maintained, though under gradual decay, during the first three centuries. The next five centuries produced many pious and excellent preachers, both in the Latin and Greek churches, though the doctrine continued to degenerate."

Here is a candid acknowledgement of one learned writer (at least) of modern times, who in a frank and manly manner confesses the degradation of primitive Christianity. What then have we left to-day? Why nothing better than degenerated Christianity. Is it then beneficial to mankind in this degenerate condition? Has not the Professor himself confessed, yea, acknowledged that "the glory of the primitive church gradually degenerated." What could have better constituted the "glory" of the church other than the "gifts and blessings of the Holy Spirit" and the power of communion which she held with Christ? Nothing. This all "gradually" disappeared. What was the cause of this? Because they were no longer needed? No. But because the people began to depart from the right ways of the Lord and he therefore began to withdraw his Holy Spirit from them, the church.

"Though degenerate, however, as these days were, in comparison with those of the Apostles, yet they were good times, or ages, in comparison with the times that followed, when metaphysical reasoning, mystical divinity, Aristotelian categories, and reading the lives of the Saints, were substituted in the place of sermons &c."

Here we learn of a still deeper, or worse degenerate condition of primitive Christianity. And now we ask, how can "the glory" of the primitive church that has entirely disappeared, because of "apostasy" be brought back again? It is not in the power of humanity to do it. Is the world so full of righteousness that it is not necessary that we should have it? Is there no one that would like to hold communion with God, as did the ancients? None of the "Reformers" have been able to restore the lost "glory." It must be done by the power of God, if it has not as yet been done. But we believe it has,—may I be permitted to be dogmatic in the assertion that we know it has been restored according to God's own way—Rev. 14: 6.

Dr. Adam Clarke in speaking of the establishment of the "Apostolic church," says, "In the book of Acts, we see how the church of Christ was formed and settled. As far as any church can show that it has followed this model, so far it is holy and apostolic."

Would those who believe the writing of the Doctor be willing to stand by this declaration of his; should we point them to a church which is a complete "model" of the "Apostolic church?" We fear not; it would be very apt to be called a "modern delusion."

As recently as 1866, Prof. R. S. Foster, in speaking of the condition of the churches of to-day, said,

"The church is not ready to meet the demands of the times. And her want is in a vital point. There is a want growing out of the present crisis; a want which money can not supply, which Bible societies, missionary phalanxes, universities, and even a martyr's devotion and zeal will not make up; it is the want of that higher life which the churches may have—nay—which they must have, before the consummation of their mission. That deep and entire consecration to God." "Demand has increased more than piety."

Bishop Asbury said, "Our ease in Zion makes me feel awful. Who shall reform the reformer?"

What a question to ask. Who shall reform the man that is out in the world endeavoring to reform other people. Each successive reformer must discover error in the doctrines of the precedent "Reformer," else what are they endeavoring to "reform?" Not "the gospel" surely; for it is "pure and holy;" "the power of God unto salvation unto all them that believe," hence, if it is the power of God unto salvation, surely no "modern reformer" could improve upon it to make it any better.

We will in conclusion of this article quote a verse of one of their hymns, and ask you kind reader what is the cause for using such language.

"In vain we tune our formal song
In vain we strive to rise;
Hosannahs languish on our tongues,
And our devotion dies."

We should say somewhat as Bishop Asbury said, "Ah, poor dead christians."

JOSEPH F. McDOWELL.

A Timely Suggestion.

Do NOT keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled by them. The things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them.

If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away, full of perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary hours, and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a bare coffin without a flower, and a funeral without an eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand, for their burial. Postmortem kindnesses do not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary days.

In every company, remember that you profess to be a member of Christ, a child of God, a temple of the Holy Ghost.

Letter from Elder W. H. Kelley.

Editors Herald:—This writing finds me at home and all well. Yesterday a number of the brethren visited us and we spent the Christmas very pleasantly, and the Saints placed us still more under obligations to them.

Since writing last I have made a tour through this district and Canada. Nov. 16th I left home and the evening of the 18th found me with the Lawrence Saints, enjoying the hospitality of Brother and Sister Hulse. Bro. George Weston was there, and had been having some success in the ministry. The next day met with the Saints in a business meeting, and Bro. C. Scott and myself (acting as a court) proceeded to investigate some matters, which resulted in excommunicating some from the Church, the transgressions being aggravating, damaging, of long standing, and unrepented of. A partial reorganization of the branch was also effected, Bro. Seth M. Bass being ordained a priest, and sustained as president of the branch, and Bro. Henry Manee being ordained teacher. The evening was devoted to a testimony meeting, and a profitable time was had.

On the 20th, Bro. Scott and I started for Sanilac county, and the 21st we boarded the steamer at Port Huron for Forrester. The evening found us the guests of Bro. and Sr. Campbell, and later we met with the Saints in a prayer meeting. Saturday, 22nd, the Saints met to consider the propriety of organizing a new district, as per announcement of Brn. Davis and Cornish. The meeting was organized and the forenoon was spent in a social way. A good representation was present. In the afternoon the organization of a new district was considered. It was soon ascertained that however feasible it might be to effect such organization, the meeting had no authority to do it. The territory was already included in an organized district, and could only be set off by request of the membership composing the proposed district, and the consent of the majority forming the district. All seemed satisfied. It was not as apparent that a new district was the most needful thing any way. Bro. Scott addressed the meeting in the evening.

Sunday the 23d was devoted to preaching. A large audience was in attendance. The Saints enjoyed the prayer meeting in the evening. An excellent feeling prevailed during the entire time, and all were made glad. Bro. J. J. Cornish resides in the neighborhood, and is deserving of great credit for standing in defense of the cause there. May his usefulness increase. Our home was with Mr. John McKay, from whom we received kindest considerations. Mr. George McKay, Mr. Templeton and families, were very kind and manifested a deep interest in the work. We thank them and others for generous hospitalities. May they all soon find a place in the fold of the Good Shepherd. We met with great kindness from the Saints also. They are new beginners, in the main, but in earnest and endeavoring to put on the whole Christian character. We held meetings also in the school houses with good audiences. There exist evidences of a growing interest in the latter day work among the more thoughtful and serious-minded, while some of the more fearful and unbelieving are apprehensive lest the "Mormons become as thick as Canada thistles," by the progress they have been making, if it is not checked in some way. It is our hope that they may realize their fears.

On the 27th Bro. Wilky brought us on our way to the neighborhood of Lexington, where we preached again in the little brick school house where the work was planted some years ago, by others. We stopped over night with Mr. and Mrs. Tate, who have always shown themselves friendly and made things comfortable for the elders. The few brethren in that neighborhood are striving to keep in the unity of the spirit, and others are investigating.

We departed on the 28th for London, Ontario, and there we were met by Brn. Cornish and Evans and made Bro. Evans' house our home. Saturday, 29th, the district conference convened, with a good representation in attendance. At the business meeting a lively interest was manifest. As a rule, good feeling and unity prevailed; yet, at times, the discussion of questions became sharp and animating, with an exhibition of a little feeling on the part of some.

It is to be regretted that there is a kind of party spirit or feeling which tends to divide the membership somewhat, keeping the branch in a constant fermentation. There has been no officers yet found who could please all, and even the transient elder, keeping his own counsel and committing himself to no one, is not entirely beyond suspicion. Brn. Cornish, Luff and Mottashed, respectively, have acted as president of the branch, but not with satisfaction to all. While we were in Canada, but away from London, all the branch officers resigned, and new ones were elected in their stead, Bro. Harrington being chosen president. On our return we found him duly in charge, and we hope that wisdom may be given him to administer, and he be able to command the respect of all.

Bro. Mottashed resigned the presidency of the district, being so circumstanced that he could not well be from home, and Bro. Robert Davis was chosen in his stead for the present term. Bro. Davis has been laboring in Canada and Michigan for some time, with commendable success.

On Sunday, the 30th, large audiences attended the preaching services, morning and evening. At 2 p.m. a good prayer meeting was held. The conference adjourned to June 12th, 1880.

We remained in London until Thursday, December 4th, holding meetings. Then went to Usborne, where we held two meetings. The little band of Saints there are doing well, and our stay with them was very enjoyable to us. It is likely their membership may be increased ere long. Saturday the 6th we had a pleasant ride of about sixteen miles over a nice country to Carlingford. Here we tarried till the 10th, holding meetings on Sunday and on Monday evening, returning to London for the Wednesday evening prayer meeting. The revivalist, Hammond, got aboard at Thornburg, on his way to London to hold forth in the evening.

Friday, the 12th, went to Bothwell to attend the Kent and Elgin conference which convened on the 13th. Business was transacted with unity of feeling and sentiment. In the evening Bro. Scott preached. Sunday was devoted to preaching, and a large audience listened with interest to what was said. An excellent spirit prevailed during the conference, and the Saints enjoyed their association together. We only regretted that our stay was not longer. Bro. Leverton was sustained as president of the district, receiving the hearty support of all the members present. May he have good success in the future.

But little was done during the summer in either of the Canada districts aside from local labor, as there has been no one devoting their whole time to the ministry. The cause has suffered somewhat by reason of this, and brethren have felt discouraged and a little dejected. There is not a more inviting field, in many regards, any where, nor one where the cause is making more rapid progress according to the work done. Canada needs some constant efficient laborers, to make a proper effort there. Who will volunteer to go?

It was thought wisdom that Bro. C. Scott should remain there for a part of the winter, and visit the churches. Hence, on Dec. 15th, I left him at Bro. Norman Blakely's, in the Zone Branch, and returned to Michigan, making a short but pleasant stay at Bro. Traxler's on the way.

All considered, the cause is rapidly advancing, measuring it by the little labor done. Saints are learning by experience to be more wise and useful. So the signs are hopeful and we are encouraged. W. H. K.

COLDWATER, Mich., Dec. 26th, 1879.

An Ancient Tomb in Nebraska.

Bro. Neils Nielson sends a Nebraska City Sun, which contains an account of an antiquarian discovery by Prof. Wilbur, in Webster county, the Republican Valley, that state. Rocky bluffs and deep canons abound in that region, where geological treasures and petrifications are numerous, and recently the Professor found some stones "which appeared to have been hewn and chiseled by the hand of man," as, upon investigation proved to be the case; "for they were chiseled in a scientific manner, and evidently by the hand of a master." The account further says that Prof. Wilbur was astonished at finding under these stones "a stone tomb, or sarcophagus, * * of the finest finish and workmanship, * * and the outside was covered with ornamental carvings." The writer further says:

"Upon the lid being pried off, nothing was found but a handful of gray dust and a few beautifully-made gold ornaments, which had evidently been used for personal adornment. They are now in the possession of the professor, and at an early day will be placed on public exhibition. Steps will also be taken to remove the tomb from its present location.

"The discovery is a curious one, to say the least, and gives rise to many queer surmises. The tomb bearing as it does the marks of great antiquity, and also evidences of a superior civilization, shows that it is not that of an Indian. Then arises the question, "Whose is it?" It will undoubtedly furnish much food for discussion among scientific men, and may lead to some new discoveries of great importance."

Concluded.

"Produce Your Cause."

WE might ask, When will these things be, and what the sign of their beginning? As this great work is the Lord's, and that he will accomplish it in his own way, so will do nothing until he reveals the secret, will send a messenger for that purpose, as his own way of dealing with man.

Rev. 14:6. "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, kindred, tongue and people,

7. "Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

An angel, a heavenly messenger, is to come with tidings, with a secret long hid from man. Gospel tidings; perhaps the book we are in search of, when found, will contain the very gospel that the angel was to announce, and is, by means of the Book, to go to all nations, kindreds, tongues and people.

We will now examine the 29th of Isaiah, beginning at the ninth verse:

"Stay yourselves, and wonder: cry ye out, and cry: they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink."

Why this condition?

"For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes; the prophets, and your rulers, the seers hath he covered. And the vision of all is become as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this I pray thee; and he saith, I can not, for it is sealed: and the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this I pray thee; and he saith, I am not learned. Wherefore the Lord hath said, [that is because of the condition of the people], Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me; and their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men."

In connection with this last verse quoted, please turn to 1 Tim. 3:1-7:

1. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. 2. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, (4) traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. 7. Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth."

These two servants of God are describing one and the same people. Micah also describes a people who are not dissimilar:

Micah 3:5, 6, 7: "Thus saith the Lord concerning the prophets that make my people err, that bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace; and he that putteth not into their mouths, they even prepare war against him. Therefore night shall be unto you, that ye shall not have a vision; and it shall be dark unto you that ye shall not divine; and the sun shall go down over the prophets, and the day shall be dark over them. Then shall the seers be ashamed, and the diviners confounded: yea, they shall all cover their lips, for there is no answer of God."

And while I am producing my cause and setting forth my reasons, I must give you a quotation from Amos 8:11:

"Behold the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water."

What kind of a famine could it be?

"But of hearing the words of the Lord."

Turn which way we will, and ask the learned divines of these times, and for many years past, if there has been a prophet among us of whom we could hear from the Lord. We are told that the days of living prophets have long since passed. Surely, then, all these hundreds of years in which we have had no prophets, have been dark days indeed.

Will this state of things always continue? Will not the Lord speak to us again and give us a hope? If so, he will speak to his prophet, if he has one; if not, he will send one, because it is his manner of dealing with men.

"Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet, before that great and notable day of the Lord come."—Mal. 4:5.

"I will hear what God the Lord will speak: for he will speak peace to his people, and to his Saints; but let them not turn again to folly."—Ps. 85:8.

In our search after truth, we find this consolation, that God reveals his secrets unto his prophets. That he will speak peace to his people. That he will reveal the abundance of peace and truth, and that he will send Elijah the prophet, by whom the hearts of both fathers and children are to be turned toward each other. And we expect the accomplishment of this when the book is brought forth and sent upon its mission.

But we return now to the 14th verse of the 29th chapter:

"Therefore, behold, [because of the condition of the people, and the set time being come], I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish; and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid. 15. Wo unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark, and they say, Who seeth us, and who knoweth us. Surely your turning things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay, for shall the work say of him that made it, he made me not. Or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, he had no understanding?"

In our intercourse with men, and with religionists especially, they have contended that the canon of Scripture was full. That God had revealed all that he ever would reveal to man, and that in this nineteenth century of gospel light and liberty we needed no further revelation. Thus men, who are the handiwork of God, by these expressions say to him, "What doest thou? We have no further need of thee!" This is certainly what the prophet meant, as quoted above: "Shall the work say of him that framed it, he had no understanding?" God has nowhere taught us in his word that he would cease to speak to man.

17. "Is it not a very little while and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed a forest?"

It is well known that Lebanon is none other than Palestine or Canaan. (See Isa. 32:13, 14, 15). And since the expulsion of the Jews therefrom, it has been an unfruitful field. But in a little while after the coming forth of the Book, it is to become a fruitful field. Since 1853 the land of Palestine began to become fruitful, and by accounts from different sources, its fruitfulness is on the increase, and the Jew is beginning to gather back to Jerusalem, and they as a people seem to have strong hope that soon they will have entire control of their lost inheritance. This is strong evidence of the fulfillment of the prophecy contained in this 29th chapter.

18. "And in that day [the coming forth of the Book] shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness. The meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel. For the terrible one is brought to nought, and the scorner is consumed, and all that watch for iniquity are cut off; that make man an offender for a word, and lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just for a thing of nought. Therefore, thus saith the Lord who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale. But when he seeth his children, the work of mine hands, in the midst of him, they shall sanctify my name, and sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel. They also that erred in spirit shall come to understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine."

We have presented to the reader the fact that Lebanon should become a fruitful field, and the Jews would begin to gather again to Canaan, and we wish the reader to remember another fact presented in the prophecy, in the 29th of Isaiah, to wit: "Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale."

It is a well known fact that since the rejection of the Redeemer by the children of Jacob, that they have been scattered to the four corners of the earth, according to the prediction of Moses, and also that of Christ; that they have become a hiss and a by word, persecuted and hated, plucked up, robbed and spoiled to the full extent of the prophecy. But looking back only a few years, since the book has come to light, and what a change? They are finding favor everywhere. They now are lifting up their heads, because favors are being courted at their hands. Men from among them stand connected with the greatest nations of the earth as assistants in governmental affairs. Among them are found the greatest bankers and moneyed men in the world. By these things the Jew is becoming bold, and his face ceases to wax pale. This is another evidence of the coming forth of the Book.

In the 11th verse: "And the vision of all is become as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee, and he saith, I can not, for it is sealed."

Now, if we should be successful in proving that this too has been fulfilled, we shall have produced three witnesses in our favor, and it is said that "a three-fold cord is not easily broken." In Genesis and Deuteronomy we showed that Joseph's chief blessing was placed upon the head of Ephraim. Hosea says that God had written to him the great things of his law. Ezekiel informs us that the stick of Joseph is in the hand of Ephraim, and is to be put with that of Judah. And Isaiah says the vision of all (the people) is become as the words of a book that is sealed, which the learned could not read, because they had no power to read a sealed book. But the Book is delivered to one not learned, who said he was not learned. If this has taken place, then there must be an account of it. And as we examine the account, we find the following:

"Mr. Joseph Smith, Jun., who made the following discovery, was born in the town of Sharon, Windsor Co., Vermont, A. D. 1805. When ten years of age, his parents, with their family moved to Palmyra, in the State of New York. In this vicinity he resided about eleven years, assisting in cultivating the soil. His advantages for acquiring literary knowledge were very limited, hence his education did not extend, only to two or three branches of learning. These were his highest attainments. When about fifteen years of age, he began to reflect upon the necessity of being prepared for a future state of existence. If he went to the religious denominations to seek information, each pointed to its particular tenets, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it."

But it occurred to him that God could not be the author of but one true church. And the question, which was the one, for God could not acknowledge but one. The great question to be decided in his mind was, If any one of the denominations is the church of Christ, which is it? But while reading the Scriptures, among others he found this passage, recorded in James 1:5: "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth liberally to all men and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." He found by this that a man might get light and understanding by seeking unto God, and for this purpose he retired to a secret place, and by prayer sought that which he desired, and obtained an answer to his wishes.

Two glorious personages appeared to him, whose form and appearance were just alike. Was informed that his sins were forgiven him, and also in regard to the matter that had troubled him, that all religious denominations were believing in incorrect doctrines. He was informed that the fulness of the gospel was soon to be made known, after which the vision withdrew. Again, on the evening of September 21st, 1823, while calling on the Lord, he was visited in like manner. This personage that visited him at this time, declared himself to be an angel of God, sent forth by commandment to communicate to him that his sins were forgiven, and that his prayers were heard; and also to bring the glad and joyful tidings that the covenant which God had made with ancient Israel concerning their posterity was at hand to be fulfilled; that the great preparatory work for the second coming of Christ was speedily to commence; that the time for the gospel in its power and fulness to be preached to all nations, that a people might be prepared with faith and righteousness for the Millennial reign of universal peace and joy was near. He was informed that he was called and chosen as an instrument in the hands of God to bring about some of the purposes and marvelous things in this glorious dispensation. It was made manifest to him that the American Indians were a remnant of Israel, that when they first emigrated to America they were an enlightened people, possessing a knowledge of the true God, enjoying favor and peculiar blessings; that their prophets and inspired men were instructed to keep a sacred history of the most important events transpiring among them, which history was handed down for many generations. At this interview the heavenly messenger caused Mr. Smith to have a view of the place where the records were deposited, and after giving him further instructions necessary, he took his departure. Mr. Smith came in possession of the plates on the 22d of September, 1827.

"And the vision of all is become as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this I pray thee, and he saith, I can not, for it is sealed. And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned."

By the aid of the "Urim and Thummim," an instrument that was found deposited with the plates, Mr. Smith was enabled to translate some of the words of this otherwise sealed book, and to transcribe some of the characters from the plates, and delivered them to a Mr. Martin Harris, who came to his house during the month of February 1828. Mr. Harris says:

"I went to the city of New York, and presented the characters which had been translated, with the translation thereof to Professor Anthon, a gentleman celebrated for his literary attainments. Professor Anthon stated that the translation was correct, more so than any he had before seen translated from the Egyptian. Then I showed him those which were not yet translated, and he said that they were the true Egyptian, Chaldaic, Assyriac and Arabic characters. He gave me a certificate, certifying to the people of Palmyra that they were true characters, and the translation of such of them as were translated was also correct. I put the certificate which he had given me in my pocket, and was just leaving the house, when he called me back, and asked me how the young man found out there were gold plates in the place where he found them. I answered that an angel of God had showed (revealed) it unto him. He then said to me, 'Let me see that certificate.' I accordingly took it out of my pocket and gave it to him, when he took it and tore it to pieces, saying, that there was no such thing now as ministering of angels, and, that if I would bring the plates to him, he would translate them. I informed him that part of the plates were sealed, and that I was forbidden to bring them. He replied, 'I can not read a sealed book.' I left him and went to Dr. Mitchell, who sanctioned what Professor Anthon had said, respecting both the characters and the translation."

And now, kind reader, we have produced the three witnesses in favor of the Book; to wit: that Lebanon was to become a fruitful field, which began to be fulfilled between the years 1850 and 1860.

That "Jacob should not now be ashamed, neither should his face now wax pale." And this because of his having gained much influence by his wealth and learning, which the chief nations desired to profit by. Also that at this time there is a prophecy being fulfilled by them, which you will find by turning to Jer. 32:42-44: "For thus saith the Lord: Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them. And fields shall be bought in this land, whereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the the Chaldeans. Men shall buy fields with money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them, and take witnesses in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, and in the cities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south, for I will cause their captivity to return, saith the Lord."

Again, Zach. 2:3, 4: "And behold, the angel that talked with me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, and said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls, for the multitude of men and cattle therein."

This is what was declared emphatically by Joseph Smith. For what good would a wall be, let it be made ever so strong, in these days of modern artillery?

Also, in Deut. 4 : 30, 31, Moses said : "When thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the Lord thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice, * * * he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers, which he swore unto them."

"Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness : let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together ; I the Lord have created it."—Isa. 45 : 8.

"Mercy and truth are met together ; righteousness and peace have kissed each other. Truth shall spring out of the earth ; and righteousness shall look down from heaven."—Ps. 85 : 10, 11.

In conclusion, we would say that we think we have produced our cause partially, and set forth some of our strong reasons why we believe in the Book, and also in the dispensation, which dispensation we now know to be begun, because in the book spoken of by Isaiah is contained the fulness of the gospel, and shows us that when it would come forth, then, God would set his hand the second time, as it is termed, which was to be the last time, the last dispensation of the gospel, in the which all the outcasts and dispersed of Israel were to be gathered, and that for the last time. Hence in it was to be blended all former dispensations, and the fulfilling of the promise, "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet," and the saying of Christ, "Other sheep I have, which I must bring, and there shall be one fold and one shepherd." The sending of the angel with the everlasting gospel, revealing the book that contained that gospel, and revealing who the American Indians are, and the rightful heirs to the promise, by whom the people should be pushed together, and all this in accordance with Christ's words, "There is nothing hid, but it shall be revealed ; and there is nothing covered, but it shall come abroad."

D. D. BABCOCK.

THE following Essay was written by one of the young ladies of the graduating class for 1879, in the school at Plano, and possesses such merit that we asked and obtained the privilege of putting it in print. To the scholars and students of the Church it will commend itself.

Yesterday, To-day, To-morrow.

In Ancient Mythology there is a significant picture called the "Three Fates." It represents three women ;—the first holds a distaff, the second is spinning, and the third cuts the thread and so finishes the work.

These three fates we will call Yesterday, To-day, and To-morrow. Yesterday held the thread of our lives, To-day works out a plan, To-morrow looses the golden cord. It is our fate that there shall always be, Time past, Time present, Time coming.

There is always a Yesterday to live from, a To-day to live in, a To-morrow to live for.

Yesterday the flower budded, To-day it blooms, To-morrow it withers. Change, change, wondrous change ! It is this change which makes the acorn an oak, the oak, the prison bar ;—the change which makes a little band of pilgrims, tossing on the wide ocean, a colony, a force, a rebel, a victor, a nation, a fortress of liberty, a refuge for the oppressed.

This was the work of Yesterday. For it was but Yesterday that those memorable words rang out on the still ear of listening night, "Give me liberty, or give me death."

In a nearer Yesterday the American nation was divided ;—father against son, brother against brother, husband against wife. To-day, the very ones who fought against the good old flag, stand in the halls of Congress and profess to guard it. They strove,—but honor be to our brave soldiers,—in vain, to cast it beneath their feet, and now they are fain to hold it up with the very hands that yesterday defiled it.

The change from past to present is the change which turns earth, air, dew and rain to waving wheat, wheat into bread, bread into bone, sinew, and brain, and brain into the mighty influences which sway man's purposes.

Go into the forest with the woodman To-day. Select the tallest, mightiest tree in all the woodland. Hear the sturdy, ringing strokes as he measures his axe to the oak. See, the tree is yielding to his might. It trembles ! It totters ; looks proudly around once more, then falls with a deafening crash to mother earth. Now come nearer. Note the hundred rings and layers found within. Here a ring is narrowed ;—'twas a drought : again, the next is broad and cellular ; that year there was almost a flood. Here the wood is hard and solid, there perchance, the heart-wood rotten. Here is a knot, there a hollow, here a worm nest. All the past life, the Yesterday of the tree, unfolded in present To-day. Just so of nations and of individuals. Every man is an "almanac of self,"—idleness, industry ; folly, wisdom ; selfishness, generosity ; pride, humility ; avarice, prodigality ; passion, forbearance ; depravity, morality,—the traces of all are here.

Time once gone is gone forever. There is no recall, no time to do again. It behooves us to fashion well each To-day, that when it has become Yesterday we may look back with pleasure on time past. For there is much pleasure in memory of Yesterdays. Open again the magic book of your life. Ah ! this is childhood. How anxiously tended by a watchful mother ; how fondly cherished by a loving father. Carefully should children be nurtured, for "the child is the to-morrow of society."

The days of childhood are fleeting, and quick the vision fades into youth ;—youth full of hope, energy, ambition, aspirations ; possibilities unmeasured, all before us.

We may make our To-morrow what we will. The marble and the chisel await, the shape we must form. It is for the youth "to be, rather than to seem." Now the prime of manhood or womanhood is reached, and you are doing your best work for the world. You are surrounded on all sides by influences and may steer against the current, or float idly down the stream until the vessel founders. Experience has taught you much ; your powers are developed, use them you must. Perhaps even now the weight of many years has frosted thy head and dimmed thine eye. Soon it will be an eternal To-morrow. Possibilities are past. Fast are you leaving Yesterday behind, reaching over to the To-morrow.

To-day is a dangerous strait ;—rocks around us, unseen breakers on every hand ; giant waves threatening each moment to engulf us. To-day, nature waters the earth that To-morrow it may bring forth plenty. Plants and animals are workers in the To-days, while man, the highest of all, is prone to put off till To-morrow.

There are mighty works going on all over this broad land To-day, which shall tell a strange story to the coming man ; a story of mingled good and ill :—of a race, energetic, ambitious, intelligent, prosperous, grown strong through trial ; tales of want, of woe, of plenty, of pleasure ; of the onward march of civilization and the diffusion of Christianity ; of women claiming rights,—rights which God gave them, and of which Yesterdays have deprived them ; of men abusing their own rights, and the rights of those they profess to protect.

To-day is America's day of progress, advancement in art, science, morality, mentality. Great changes are taking place, but they are changes for the better.

Longfellow says, "All are architects of fate, working in these walls of time." We are working in To-day, and on either side are walled in Yesterdays and To-morrows.

Now is the constant syllable ticking from the clock of time. Now is the watchword of the wise, on the banners of the prudent. To-day is the harvest of Yesterdays, the seed of To-morrow. Soon it is gone, and in the book there is a blot, a blank, or a perfect page.

Man's life is like a stairway of many steps, that as he toils upward, crumble successively behind him. No going back,—the past is an abyss. No stopping,—the present perishes.

There is a skiff on the ocean, and in it sits a gentle mariner, guiding man's fragile bark. To-morrow is that skiff, and Hope full of gladdening looks the mariner. Hope flatters the painful present with gracious promises for the future, and kind To-morrow bears half the burdens of To-day.

To-morrow is the rainbow's cup,—the prize of ignorance, the shifting anchorage, the wrecker's beacon. It is "only another To-day, with its measure of joy and sorrow." Delusion hides in the fairy land To-morrow, and oft we waste the precious present in fancies of the future. But coy To-morrow comes not, with promises fulfilled.

Feeble as we are, there is within us a conqueror,—the innate sense of right, and the power of discrimination, always with us. This conqueror himself shall make us friends of these our transformed foes : Yesterday, To-day, and To-morrow.

Yesterday held the thread of our lives, To-day we are working out the pattern and filling in the warp with various colors, and by and by when To-morrow shall sever the golden cord, may the memory of well spent To-days shed a halo of light on the promised To-morrow.

We, this class of '79, have been working many Yesterdays in the pursuit of knowledge. We realize that as yet we have gone but a short distance in wisdom's road, and yet, we think this school life has accomplished its mission. We have gained the tools, and To-morrow will test the metal.

Classmates: We have all worked together here during three years, and some of us have been children here. We have met together day after day in yonder school room, solved the same problems, conned the same lessons, oftentimes from the same book. But to-night this ends. To-morrow our paths must diverge, some widely, although we shall have the same final object in view. Two can not tread one path in the world, but somewhere there must be a divergence. Yet as in after life we meet again, memory will often recur to the school-days, old associations will crowd upon us, and lovingly our thoughts will turn to the teachers who have so well assisted us. We feel that to them we owe a debt of gratitude which can never be paid. "By their works ye shall know them," and if we are possessed of any merit in the eyes of the world, it is due to these who were once our instructors, counselors and friends. Let us endeavor to live right lives, to excel in every undertaking, and we shall not be content with climbing the mountain, but will press on and beyond To-morrow.

To the Board of Education: We tender our thanks for your interest in our progress, and for the honor you propose to confer upon us. We hope that we may prove worthy recipients, worthy as the first class, and worthy as precedents of the classes that are to follow.

Ladies and gentlemen: We thank you for your kind attention this evening. We have received much encouragement from you in the past, and we ask that in the broader field of work To-morrow you will still lend us your kindly support and generous sympathy.

As we all go forth to engage in the To-morrow of life, may we so live that in both the bright hours and the darkest days, that when we reach that long and fair eternal To-morrow, we may receive the reward that crowns the many Yesterdays of a noble, virtuous, well spent life.

The Hope and Rest of Saints.

WHAT a blessed hope the Saints of latter days have, and what a consolation it is to know that it is the same hope that the former day saints had. To live on the earth when Jesus comes; when paradise lost will be restored. Then all shall see and know the Lord. The promise is that all who learn of Jesus to be meek and lowly in heart shall find rest to their souls. "The meek shall inherit the earth, when the wicked are cut off."—37th Psalm.

Says one, "Who can be meek in this world?" If you believe, repent, and are baptized and use the Spirit given to help you to be meek, you will gain a portion then; for every man, whether king or servant, shall sit under his own vine and fig-tree.

INFERIOR.

BEST THINGS.—The best theology—a pure and beneficent life. The best philosophy—a contented mind. The best law—the golden rule. The best education—self-knowledge. The best statesmanship—self government. The best war—to war against one's weakness. The best medicine—cheerfulness and temperance. The best art—painting a smile upon the face of childhood. The best music—the laughter of an innocent child.

Keep a good conscience, let it cost you what it may.

Christ left the cross and went to glory, that you might take it and follow after him.

In bodily sickness, Jesus is beckoning you home.

Faith and Repentance.

THE principle of faith is the first one in the gospel order or scheme. Paul, in defining the term, says it is "the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Faith is the grand moving principle in all intelligent beings, or existences. When we attempt to do or perform any kind of labor, faith is the incentive to action. Active faith is living faith. Inactive faith is dead faith. This appertains mostly to religion. Active faith is a working, energetic, fruitful faith; blessed principle! Inactive, dormant faith, is simply an expression, or utterance of words that bear no manner of fruit; it is a dead thing and the individual who is in possession of the same is a worthless member in any kind of society whatever, religious or otherwise. God has no manner of use for any such person in his Church.

Christian faith is Christ-like faith. Behold what confidence Jesus placed in his God, who is our God. In the 17th chapter of John's gospel, Jesus commends his disciples into his Father's care, and manifests unbounded confidence in God, that they should be kept by Omnipotence. The faith Christ exercised was truly one "of assurance" of the thing "hoped for"—a sacred protection of his disciples from evil. Without faith it is impossible to perform any kind of work whatever.

Some say they can exercise no faith in God nor in Christ. It may be possible to exercise faith, but with some it seems otherwise.

It is obvious that there must be existent in God and his word something that is of such a nature as to create a faith, or an assurance of or in the principles presented ere faith can be exercised. When an individual contemplates planting any kind of seed from which he may receive fruit, there existing certain things which he can behold for himself, about which he may reason, and may test the reality of. Such being the case, he plants the seed, having faith within himself that there are certain conditions which must be complied with ere he can reap any reward from the seed as fruit. The conditions are explicit, they are before him; he plants, believing that having complied with apparent conditions he will reap. That faith becomes an assurance unto said person that he will obtain a reward for his labor. It is an evidence of the reception of the thing hoped for; he hopes to receive the fruit of his labor. He knew full well that the seed could never evolve or mature while in his hand. He could behold plainly that the proper conditions to develop the seed were not in his hand. And so it is with the gospel faith. We have the conditions stated explicitly. It matters not what men may say or think, ascertain what Jesus says, or what it is that is recorded as a statement of his. You know it is not the language of humanity alone; because what man says is generally antagonistic to what is recorded that Jesus should have said; so it must be of philosophical necessity, that it originated with a higher type of intelligence than is in man. Man is too apt to acknowledge the verity, or supposed verity, and soundness of what their fellow men have expressed as being principles of right, philosophically or otherwise. When, therefore, an individual upon the perusal of the divine language, truly and heartily imbibes of its blessedness, it will at once excite a faith, a lively faith in said person. Said faith will create within his heart the hope of receiving the things promised; giving him also an assurance that such will be the result upon a ready compliance to the rules laid down in the sacred record. Thus the faith created acts as an incentive to obedience. Such individual is obviously without improbity. It does not act as anything impromptu, but is and must be, the inevitable result of candid, critical and prayerful investigation; ascertaining thereby, the character or nature of the soil, and the conditions pertaining thereunto, into whose charge and care the seed is to be planted or entrusted.

Then this same faith attracts the attention of the individual to the all important fact that, although it may have created within his heart the hope of receiving "the rest" in the blessed beyond; that all his past sins and follies must be laid aside, and this brings about that change which may most properly be termed repentance.

Repentance is indispensably necessary. To repent, is to "cease to do evil and learn to do well," and do it. It is a forsaking of evil and evil ways. With sin and sin stains upon you, you can not enter the kingdom; they must be forsaken, they must be washed away. Though a person should profess to have faith and yet continue in the ways of vice and folly, what would it profit him? Nothing. Repentance is a command most explicit. Peter said: "God now commands all men everywhere to repent." Christ came to call sinners to repentance. What is a sinner? "Sin is the transgression of law;" therefore, all who transgress law, God's law, commit sin, and are sinners. This class of people Jesus came to call to repentance; for he came not to save men in their sinful state, but from sin and its terrible consequences.

Repentance is a work of reformation. Should all evil persons repent, society would be reformed, and a better state of things exist among men than now exists. This is what the gospel is for; and when man performs this work of reformation, promises are made to him of better things to come.

One Thing at a Time.

A GREAT many things may be well done, provided that only one thing at a time is attempted. Many active, energetic people suffer their lives to waste, simply because they are without method of any kind. True, they are busy, and fussy, and filgety: and full to the bursting with all manner of plans and projects; but while agonizing with the pains of parturition, they seldom bring any matters of importance to birth. They should recollect that good deeds are not produced in litters, but are laid down on a solid basis, after the order of steps ascending toward the summit of a pyramid.

As a rule, the first thing to be done is that of immediate, present duty. It should be done to-day, and not be postponed until to-morrow. It should be done now, and when one feels more like trying it. The body is lazy. The mind is sluggish; but to will is to do. The will has imperial force in men of will, who firmly resolve to rule themselves, and so far as they can, all the circumstances around them.

Few things worthy of being done can be accomplished without hard work. Shiftless people are cowardly. They shrink from contests with difficulty or hardships. They run from refuge to the quicksands of idle hope.

Full of wishes, they imagine that, somehow, luck will fill their hands with benefits. And so they dream and wonder why others get along, and why they do not. Life oozes out nothing but stagnation and decay for all such cowardly spirits that dare not compete for the prizes of diligent industry.

Hard work grows easy and becomes a pleasure to all who have felt the stimulus of its medicinal charms. One task well done makes the next one lighter. The ancient Syracusan, who began by carrying the calf, found himself able to carry the grown-up bullock with ease. "One thing at a time, and courage," these make life pleasant and fruitful.

Letter from Elder T. W. Smith.

Editors Herald:—I left the September Conference with Bro. Ells. We made the first stop at Des Moines, where he remained, while I came on to Buffalo Prairie Branch, Elder Isaac B. Larew, president. I spoke on Saturday night and Sunday to attentive and interested congregations; and on Monday night I spoke in Millersburg, where Elder Ezra T. Bryant presides. Enjoyed a goodly measure of the Holy Spirit in both places. I left on Tuesday, intending to preach that night at Kewanee, but when I called on the president, I found that no appointment was given out, my notice having only reached him that morning. I pushed on, taking the next train, via Aurora, to Streator, and found Bro. J. S. Patterson preaching there. After a few days' tarry, I moved on to Piper City, Ford county, where Elder Silas M. Rogers presides. I spoke in the school house several times to good audiences.

Thence to Cove, Jackson county, Ohio, where Elder Luther R. Devore and wife were laboring. I mention Sr. Devore, for she is a help-meet to Bro. Luther, and quite an able defender of the faith, one of those women who, as in Paul's day, "helped in the gospel," God having set in the Church "helps" as well as "governments," and as well as "apostles, prophets, teachers" &c. I spoke in several places around Cove, in a Free Will Baptist Church among others, to a large congregation. Bro. Devore is doing a good work around there, and is an able, spiritual-minded worthy young elder. From Cove I went to Warnocks, and attended a two days' meeting held in the barn and house of Bro. Sheldon. God bless our noble-hearted, generous brother, and his excellent wife and family.

Good old Father Ells arrived there the same day I did, Sr. Ells having made her abode there while he was at conference.

We had a good meeting. I had excellent liberty in preaching on the "Signs of the Times." I thank God to-day, for the assistance of his Spirit at that time. From Bro. Sheldon's I went to West Wheeling, Ohio, where Bro. and Sr. Ells reside. I spoke once there.

Then on to Pittsburg, where I remained over three Sundays, with as noble a body of Saints as can be found anywhere.

Without design to disparage others, I would make mention of two promising young brethren, who will, if they continue humble, make their mark in the Church, and in the world, Bro. George Hulmes and Richard S. Salyards. They were born and bred in the latter day work.

There is a noble brother there, who could do a good work among the Germans, with a little practice, Elder Jacob Reese, and I long to see him at work among the thousands of Germans in Pittsburg. The kindness of the Pittsburg Saints shown in so many ways I can never forget. Bro. Joseph Parsons now presides there. I baptized twelve persons during my stay.

From Pittsburg I went to Philadelphia, and thence to Cedarville, New Jersey, where my wife had been staying with her sisters and brother. We returned to Philadelphia on Saturday, and I spoke with good liberty twice on Sunday, and aided by the sympathy and prayers of the Saints in Pittsburg, I felt much blessed by the divine Spirit in preaching. I was called upon to baptize two gentlemen, and immersed them in the Delaware River at Camden. On Friday, we went to New Egypt, Monmouth county, N. J., where I spoke once, and several times in Hornerstown, and baptized two ladies, one of them the aged mother of Bro. Samuel Hopkins. I left quite a number "almost persuaded" to obey.

Leaving Helen to return to Philadelphia, to stay with, and assist her sister in the care of a sick daughter-in-law, I left on Thursday for New York and Providence, arriving on Friday morning at the latter place. I preached here twice on Sunday. Bro. Wm. Bradbury, who ably presides here, baptized five persons in the morning. There are quite a number of earnest, faithful German Saints in Providence. I went from Providence to Boston, and found a pleasant home with our Bro. E. N. Webster. The flock here is small, yet some faithful souls are there. They have, as yet no hall, so the meetings are held in private houses, and but few will attend.

As quite a number of our brethren are sailors, and frequently call at the ports of Philadelphia and Providence, it would be well for them to know where the Saints meet. In Providence, at 159 Westminster Street, Bro. Wm. Bradbury, presiding. In Philadelphia, at Corner 9th and Callowhill Streets, entrance on 9th Street, Bro. John Stone, Presiding Elder. Bro. Joseph Squires, 93 Ralph Avenue, Brooklyn, is President of Brooklyn or Williamsburg Branch. Bro. Webster, 191 Hampden Street, Boston Highlands, is President of Boston Branch. I preached several times to small but attentive audiences in Bro. Webster's house, and among them was a young man, who bids fair to become a member, and a useful one, in the Church.

On Friday, December 19th, I left Boston for Maine, on the steamer Katahdin, which was advertised to be at Rockland early next morning, but when we reached Cape Ann the Captain concluded that the weather looked too stormy, so run into Cape Ann, and tied up. In the morning left for Rockland, and landed about seven o'clock Saturday night, the time I had hoped to be in Jonesport, for the conference of the Eastern Maine District, on Sunday. At Rockland I took the steamer, City of Richmond, hoping to reach Jonesport early Sunday morning, but at Sedgewick the Captain concluded to not run any farther, owing to a snow storm impending.

In the morning of Sunday we went as far as South-west Harbor, Mt. Desert, and because of so much vapor being on the water, (for the air was much colder than the water), the captain refused to leave for about three hours, then went as far as Bar Harbor, where he concluded to wait until the tide would rise so he could run to the upper pier at Millbridge. Well, by the time we reached Jonesport it was six o'clock Sunday night, and conference was being held ten miles off, at Addison point. We were just twenty-four hours behind time, so I did not get to the conference.

I have been preaching about every night since I have been here in Maine; namely at Jonesport, Indian River, Mason's Bay, Little Kennebec and at Holmes' Bay. The cause is in a low state here. The officers in some branches have been very remiss of duty; the sacrament has been omitted for months at a time; transgressors have been allowed to run for a long time undealt with, and, in some branches there are few officers, and not much suitable material for that purpose.

But there are plenty of good Saints in this region; and perhaps, when fully awakened from their slumbering condition, they will be as alive and earnest as in former days. Bro. John C. Foss has tried to do his duty; but one man can not carry on this work alone, and especially when other elders get discouraged on different grounds and lay their armor by, and confess that they have not got the Spirit, and have "no heart" to labor. To see this fair field, where I introduced the gospel eleven years ago, and where I had baptized nearly a hundred precious souls, and where I left earnest, spiritual-minded, self-denying Saints, so lifeless is sad, and so many have fallen morally, and others are disheartened because iniquity has abounded. O, the heart is sick, and pained and saddened. O, foolish virgins! awake from your slumbers, or you will soon sleep the sleep of death. You did run well for a season; who or what has bewitched you!

O the responsibility that rests on branch officers, and the judgment approaches! Priests who do not visit the houses of the members, and exhort them to pray vocally, and in secret; teachers who do not watch over the flock, and who leave iniquity, evil speaking, &c., uninvestigated and unpunished; elders who do not see the law of God kept, how much blood is there to be found on your garments? Christ is coming, and before his judgment seat you must appear, to give an account of your labors, your work, your deeds, as officers of the body. Then, for your own soul's sake, for the sake of other souls, for the sake of the honest in heart, who are stumbling over this condition of things, awake, and gird on your armor! Trim your lamps, and go to work in earnest, as in days gone by; and you will be blessed here and hereafter.

Of course there are some faithful officers, as well as faithful members here; but every soul knows his and her own condition, and experience, and nothing need be applied, where there is no occasion. Cold is the weather; cold is the cause; cold is the zeal of officers and members. But there are some thawing out, some improvement is seen. But what room there is for improvement! And God alone can bring about a revival. Man is helpless, insufficient. O the impotence of man. Help him, Lord, to not shun to declare the whole counsel of God; to keep back nothing that is profitable; to preach the word; to reprove, rebuke, exhort, entreat, "with all long suffering and doctrine."

But, must not the Church slumber before the Bridegroom comes? Must not some be as the foolish virgins, having none of the Holy Spirit when the Master appears, although once having their lamps trimmed and burning? If it must be so, and the "Scripture can not be broken," painful and distressing as it is, we must not cease our diligence to make our calling and election sure, if we yet be wise and have yet the Spirit. And who is safe?"

"O to grace how great a debtor,
Daily I'm constrained to be;
Let thy grace, Lord, like a fetter,
Bind my wandering heart to thee."

T. W. SMITH.

Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.
HENRY A. STEBBINS, ASSISTANT.

Plano, Illinois, February 15th, 1880.

We left home January 10th, last, for a short absence from official labor, and for the further purpose of assisting Bro. Joseph A. Crawford, of Farmington, Iowa, presiding over the Nauvoo and String Prairie District, to begin an effort to preach the one faith at Carthage, the county-seat of Hancock county, Illinois. We spoke at Colchester, McDonough county, the home of several members of the family, on Sunday, January 11th; and at Burnside, in Hancock county, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings. Bro. Crawford, Solomon Salisbury and W. McGahen, of the branch near Burnside, made suitable effort and procured the use of the Court House in Carthage, Judge John B. Risse, of the county court, and Sheriff Damron, cheerfully granting their consent to its use. Bro. Crawford succeeded admirably in giving the notice of our meeting a wide circulation, by poster, newspaper and letter, so that when we met in the evening at the hour appointed we found that quite a fair number of the citizens, including many of the prominent ones, were present. We spoke on Friday and Saturday nights, and on Sunday at 11 a. m. and in the evening. The interest seemed to increase, and on Sunday night the audience was a large one, the court room, a large one, being fairly filled, many standing during the service. We were met by Saints from Rock Creek, Elvaston, Burnside, and the region round Carthage. The meetings were in charge of Bro. Crawford; but on Friday night Bro. Richard Lambert, sen., of Rock Creek, led in prayer; and on Sunday night our cousin, Solomon Salisbury, was with us and offered the opening prayer. The interest seemed good and we felt specially blessed in delivering the message of life and peace. We presented the doctrines of Mormonism, including the mission of Joseph Smith, the Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Mormon. Lest any may say that we avoided the questions upon which there might be diverse and obnoxious opinions, and only presented what might be acceptable to the people, we state that we taught the gospel and it restored, and revelation as the means of that restoration. We returned satisfied that our experience verified the promise of Christ to the Church that the "waste places of Zion shall be rebuilt;" which is equivalent to saying that in the places where the Saints who are the "honest in heart" had been denied the opportunity and place to teach the truth and were driven, they should be permitted to again declare the riches of redemption.

DISTRICT AND MINISTRY REPORTS.

We call the attention of the district presidents and clerks to the resolutions of the General Conference requiring ANNUAL STATISTICAL REPORTS of their several districts, said reports to embrace not names, but the numbers of all changes from January 1st to December 31st each year, namely, the net total at least preceding report, and then the gain by baptism, letter or vote, and the loss by death, expulsion and removal by letter; showing the total increase and decrease for the year, whichever it may be.

If the report can show the changes in each branch, and then a total be made of all in footings of loss and gain, it will be so much the more satisfactory. This can best be done by each branch clerk keeping a tally of the standing of his branch at the end of the year, and then the next year giving totals of loss and gain, and sending a report of it to the district clerk, who can then report to the Church Secretary each branch and the total of all. Or if the district clerk has a record of every branch and obtains items of loss and gain up to the close of each year he can make such a report himself, of every branch. Otherwise, if full and perfect reports of districts can not be sent, let them be as near to it as possible, or approximately to it. These reports are required only at the April Conferences, and a system ought to be adopted by the clerks of branches and districts that will comply fully with the resolutions of the General Conference before referred to.

The presidents of districts, or others authorized, may send reports of the spiritual and working condition of the districts, giving a summary of of labor done, and of present and future prospects for the work in their respective districts.

The above reports, statistical and spiritual, should be sent to the Church Secretary at least a week or two, more if possible, before the April sessions so that all may be properly arranged for presenting to Conference and prepared for publication.

Let the work be done, brethren of the districts and branches, and let it be done promptly, and at an early day, if it has not already been attended to or set in motion; and send as correct and full reports as you can.

It is also desirable that those brethren who are in the field by General Conference appointment, should send a summary of their work in the ministry in time for us to receive it before conference, that they may be read, and any wishes or requests considered, and all be placed in order for conference attention. Those who will attend in person would also confer a favor by writing out their reports and reading them, or presenting them early in the session, when the others are being read and considered.

BRO. P. N. BRIX wrote December 30th from his field of labor in Denmark in a cheerful and a pleasant way. He was meeting the Seventh Day Adventists on the question of the second death, and was doing well. He is extremely anxious that some co-laborer should come and labor with him. We are also anxious that some one should go to his aid. O, how long, O, Lord, shall there be such a dearth for the word and so few laborers!

We pray with our hearts and lips that the Lord of the harvest will send more laborers into the field; and he will answer our prayer if we will but pay the way before them; or better still, and more to the purpose, if we will take care of the dependent ones that these co-workers must leave at home when they go out to labor.

There are some who can take this Scandinavian Mission if their families can be cared for. The First President has no family of wives to be supported by the Church, keeps no fine horses or carriages, does not wear costly array or fine linen, tries to live within his income, is willing to labor and not ashamed to be poor like his brethren, and can therefore with a safe conscience ask that the Church shall look after the laborers in the field. Considerable improvement in this respect is noticeable during the last two or three years; and we hope that the good work will still continue.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We received on the 5th a consignment of Books of Mormon, Harps, and Lucy Smith's History of Joseph Smith, commonly called "Mother Smith's History." These are now on sale; and we think that the style of binding will commend itself to the buyers. It is recommended to us, and we hope will give excellent satisfaction. Prices will be found in the price list and are as follows: For Mother Smith's History, leather binding $1.25; in cloth binding, 75 cents. The Saints must not mistake this book for Bro. Tullidge's History of Joseph and the Reorganization now in process of publication; it is a reprint of "Joseph Smith and His Progenitors," revised and with some explanatory foot notes. Books of Mormon and Harps at same prices as before.

There is a great necessity that those who are desirous to secure to themselves the blessings provided for and promised in the law of tithing and consecration, should remember that they are to be secured only by obedience to the requirements of that law. No blessing should be demanded unless one is entitled to it. While the law of the gospel offers life to all who believe and obey it, and no power is granted to the officers of Christ's Church to compel obedience to it, so it is with this law. There is no enabling clause in the law by which the officers of Christ's Church can go and wrest a man's property or moneys from him; yet he who would reap of the law its joys, peace and blessings, must sow to the law in obedience. That is the whole secret of its power and glory.

Thanks to the following for papers received: T. R. Hawkins, Thomas Henning, James Lamb, A. C. Everett, and some others unknown.

A brother living in Iowa sends us ten dollars for the Utah mission, and is willing to give more if needed. He feels the great necessity for the good work to be done there. May the brother be blessed indeed that he may ever be able to help on the good cause at the right time. All aid of the kind comes in good time now.

We have received from a brother a poem called "Widder Green's Last Words," which are quite pointed, but rather out of our line for the HERALD. We are obliged to decline some obituary poetry for similar reasons.

A good sister and her kind husband, living in Iowa, have made us their debtor in thanks, by sending the senior editor a New Year's remembrance in the shape of gloves, which are received and appreciated.

Bro. J. J. Kaster, writing from Independence, Missouri, states that there is quite a variety of Saints there and in that vicinity, mostly poor in this world's gear. He expresses the wish that more would move in there who are able to make themselves comfortable homes. A grist mill would do well there he thinks.

Bro. George Hicklin wrote January 28th, good and cheering words regarding the Alma, Illinois, Branch. They are held in good repute by their neighbors. Surely where the Saints do right they are finding favor in the eyes of the people.

We are out of Holy Scriptures, and would prefer that no orders for them should be sent us until we secure another edition. We can not safely print the Scriptures on our newspaper press; so there is need for the special providence referred to by us. Another has sent us word that he is ready to send us $100 in answer to our prayer. Who next?

A bout, or a little over a hundred new subscribers have been so far added to our HERALD list this year. Send them in. We are growing more and more anxious every day to have the HERALD published as a weekly. The Church and work sadly need it. Send in the subscribers' names. Everybody send one, or a hundred.

Sr. Carrie N. Cooper, of Streator, Illinois, desires to sell her house and lot in that place. It is a mining town and in a mining region; so that if there is one wishing to locate in such a place, she offers a good opportunity to buy a home there. Any one wishing to learn terms and price and other particulars may address, Carrie N. Cooper, Streator, Illinois.

Sister S. C. H., of Kirtland, Ohio, says that in the note in HERALD of January 1st, about her letter, the word "brother" should have been in the place of "mother," in naming the one from whom she received testimony concerning the translation of the Book of Mormon. She writes a letter of exhortation and good advice which we have not space for.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn, whose recent work at Marne, Iowa, he wrote of lately, sent the names of ten new HERALD subscribers, none of them members of the Church. That was a good work, all done in one evening while laboring there. He wrote from Shelby, January 23d, that Bro. J. H. Lake was then there preaching, and was going to Newton next.

Wanted—144,000 subscribers to the HERALD—get them. Get wisdom—get understanding—get subscribers, don't fail. We all want the HERALD to grow good and great; so get the subscribers. Nearly two hundred already this new year—let the line stretch out!

Bro. Jerome Ruby has been preaching at Maquoketa, Iowa, and from home was going next to Buffalo, Bro. M. G. Maudsley to be with him. The latter writes in commendation of the labors of Bro. Ruby at Maquoketa. The Saints were made glad, and those without were forced by truth to say that things were made very plain. One lady from the Methodist Church was baptised. Bro. Ruby set forth in plainness the calling of Joseph Smith, and numbers were surprised at the amount of evidence presented.

Bro. D. S. Crawley, Kansas, wrote January 22d, that he finished his appointed debate at Star Valley, and Bro. M. T. Short was then following it up by preaching. Bro. Crawley was engaged for another debate.

Bro. John Barber, of Bexar county, Texas, mentions their having no crops there last season, and he says that he is now paying $1 per bushel for corn to feed. This winter has also been one of drouth, so that the prospect for the regular February planting was a very dubious one when he wrote in January, for no plowing could be done unless rain should fall.

Bro. M. O. Howard, a Priest presiding over the branch at Gainesville, Florida, baptized five in October, but, up to his writing of January 18th, they had not been confirmed. Four of them had moved into Tuscaloosa county, Alabama, and Bro. Howard was hoping that Elder Heman C. Smith would go where they live and administer the ordinance, where also these write that good can be done by a gospel minister among the people. Bro. Howard, and those with him, are striving for the life of true Saints, and for their success and full triumph we pray; and may an elder go there to revive, strengthen and instruct them, as they do earnestly wish for. Cheer up, brethren; be not despondent, for the day will surely dawn and relief will come, though you now feel "almost forsaken," and your joy will exceed all past darkness and fear.

Bro. Charles Wicks was at Benton Harbor, Michigan, January 20th. He had been at New Troy, and spoke to the people there, and was to speak at the Harbor in the District School House, when he wrote.

Sister R. Dayton, Kirtland, Ohio, writes that she considers that region to be a good place for preaching the gospel in, if some one could come and reside there and preach in the temple, which she believes God has preserved for some wise purpose, and also that it will yet be filled with true worshippers. She says of herself: "My path grows brighter as I draw near my last resting place." May it so continue to be.

Bro. S. P. Sherrill of Burleson county, Texas, continues to teach his kindred and neighbors the truth of the gospel of Christ, and he rejoices in the evidences of the acceptance of his work by the Master, in that some have believed and obeyed the past year; among others his mother, who has just passed to the other world. We hope that he will continue to labor and to rejoice in the same.

Bro. M. O. Howard, at Gainesville, Florida, still prays that an elder may be led to visit them. Report to Bro. H. A. Stebbins, Box 50, Plano, once in three months, or to the secretary of the district where you reside just before each quarterly conference, of which notice is usually given in the conference minutes published in HERALD, or communicate with Bro. Stebbins as to the manner of reporting.

Bro. E. C. Brand wrote from Butte City, Montana, January 26th, that he was preaching there to large audiences, once in a hall, and that night he was to have the use of the Methodist chapel. He had been at Deer Lodge, where he preached in the Masonic Hall once. Previously he was at Blackfoot City. His address is Willow Creek, Gallatin county, Montana.

Sister Cynthia B. Knowlton, Green's Landing, Maine, writes: "We have had no meetings for a long time. We can go to hear others but they preach not the word of God, so we stay at home." We are glad that Sister Knowlton is restored from the illness of the past fall. May all there in the faith hold fast.

Bro. Henry Holdsworth, Leasburg, Missouri, says that their small branch holds regular meetings, and they hope that some others will obey the truth.

On January 20th came a telegram from Bro. M. B. Williams, of Middletown, Ohio, stating sickness there and asking for an elder. As neither of us could well leave our office duties, Bro. J. F. McDowell was sent to administer the ordinance according to God's word. Bro. Williams wrote on the 23d that Bro. McDowell's coming was very opportune, and his service effectual in behalf of Bro. Williams' mother, who was very sick. He says: "When we telegraphed we did not think she would live till this time, but it seems that from the time the telegram reached you she began to improve." We are glad of this, and believe that the prayers of God's people for the sick ones at a distance may often avail, as numbers of instances have proved. Yet the appliance of the ordinance, though had at considerable expense to Bro. Williams, was satisfactory and confirmatory, and we trust that it was unto the entire healing of the sick one. Bro. McDowell wrote January 30th that he was preaching to good audiences of intelligent people. He added that Bro. Williams' mother was then able to walk about.

Bro. James Buckley, of Centralia Branch, Kansas, says that they are blessed with the spiritual gifts in their meetings, and peace exists among them. Some able elders have preached there and done them good.

Bro. J. F. Patten, Charles City, Floyd county, Iowa, thinks that the time now is that good could be done there by a minister of the gospel, but we have no one to send.

Bro. Briggs Alden writes that they have had a few meetings at Fontanelle, Iowa, where he is living, and were cheered once again by the preached word.

Bro. Jackson Goodale, writes from Barry, Ills., "We had Bro. J. H. Lake at our conference, and had an excellent meeting, one that did us all good, thank God."

A WOMAN, a sister, writes from Utah as follows:

"I despise such an evil and corrupt form as they profess to call a religion—it is too humiliating, too degrading, to give the name of religion to cover it. I want a religion that is calculated to elevate the mind and soul, to purify the heart and enlighten the understanding and raise the individual in the scale of life, instead of driving them downwards, and cause many to think and feel and do things that they never would have done. I am thankful to my Heavenly Father that I have lived through my heavy troubles to see this day when I can sit beneath the sound of the voices of noble men—men of God—who have time and again borne their testimony that God has sent them here to Utah to feel after those who are honest in heart. I went to hear the elders of the Reorganized church preach. I never had heard such beautiful preaching. I have attended all the time since, and my heart has been made glad. They enjoy the good Spirit and shed its influence around them."

Such a tribute as that, from a tried and pained heart and mind, is like "apples of gold set in pictures of silver."

THE readers of the HERALD must pardon our vanity, if we indulge a little, as it is for the gospel's sake.

The following notices are from the Carthage, Hancock county, Illinois, papers, copies of which for January 21st, 1880, have been sent us by brethren Crawford and Salisbury.

The Republican, J. M. Davidson, publisher, has the following from its Burnside correspondent.

"Rev. Joseph Smith, Jr., held forth three evenings of last week to good audiences in McCormick's Hall, greatly to the encouragement of the faithful few."

The notice of our effort at Carthage is this:

"Elder Joseph Smith, son and successor of the founder of the Mormon Church, delivered a series of discourses at the Court House in this city, commencing on Friday evening and closing on Sunday evening. He had good audiences throughout, that gave him a respectful hearing. His discourses were chiefly directed to an explanation and defense of the tenets of the Reorganized Mormon Church. His Sunday night's discourse was directed to a defense of the Mormon Bible against sundry charges made as concerning its authenticity and the character of its teachings. Mr. Smith is a man of unaffected manners and quite pleasing address. He has evidently greatly improved as a public speaker since leaving Hancock county. While here he received the courteous treatment characteristic of our citizens and expressed his thanks therefor in fitting terms.

Elder Crawford, of Burnside, who was present and assisting, announced that he would continue the lectures for a few evenings."

The Gazette, Thomas C. Sharp, editor and publisher, from its Burnside news gives this notice of our stop there:

"The Mormons held a meeting here last week, under the auspices of Joe Smith. He is a good talker."

Of the Court House effort this notice is given:

"The lectures of Elder Joseph Smith, of the Reorganized Mormon Church, at the Court House, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and on Sunday morning and evening, were attended by crowded audiences. We were not present at any of the lectures, but learn from those who were, that there was nothing said, at which any person could take offense. He simply argued religious questions from a Mormon stand point, but repudiated polygamy. Mr. Smith has the reputation of being a gentleman and a good citizen, and received from our people the courteous treatment which every such man, irrespective of his religious views, is entitled to."

The old-time Saints will remember the editor of the Gazette, as at one time the publisher of the Warsaw Signal, so famously hostile to the Saints at Nauvoo, and in Hancock county. He has practiced law for many years, and was at one time county judge. It will now be in order for the enemies and opposers of the Reorganization to make anew the statement that little Joseph has "stricken hands" and is "hail fellows, well met," with the murderers of the martyrs, because that Thomas C. Sharp has something commendatory to say of the son, though he was an enemy to the father.

What he has said of us, we have won by trying to live in accordance with the principles of primitive Mormonism; and when we spoke there we advocated the claims of the Golden Bible—"Tell it not in Gath;" nor mention it in Utah. A score or more of Latter Day Saints assembled in the Court House of Hancock county, Illinois, and worshiped there in peace and unmolested.

News Summary.

Jan. 21st.—Ireland, by a committee, appeals to the United States for aid in their time of distress. Jules Favre, the eminent French statesman, died at Versailles, France, yesterday, aged 71 years.

22d.—Another terrible mine explosion in England, near Hanly, Staffordshire. Seventy or eighty were in the mine, and it is not expected that any of them will be found alive; a fearful loss of life indeed. The bodies were being brought up at last telegram and the scene among the families of the dead miners was heart rending. Some were burned to cinders, and others only killed by the concussion. The fire rages below.

At Andover, Mass., a woman who seem to have gone insane religiously, has been arrested for killing her two little boys on the 18th of last November. She has neither mourned nor seemed to realize the greatness of her loss or the enormity of her crime.

A meeting was held in Washington night before last, to obtain aid for Ireland. Some leading Senators were present and made speeches. Over three thousand dollars was raised.

In San Salvador, Central America, on January 1st, violent shocks of an earthquake were felt. In the village of La Libertas that night "the earth seemed literally to be dancing." Persons in the streets were thrown down and many buildings were damaged. At the capital it was apprehended that the city would fall and all who could leave, did so, and "many business men kept their animals saddled, prepared for flight. The lake of Ilopango was in motion, like a boiling cauldron, emitting dense, sulphurous vapors. Industries of all sorts are suspended, the terrified inhabitants being only concerned about their safety. The Government has used every means in its power to calm the populace, and has furnished facilities for travel and ample protection against lawlessness and robberies."

According to a Mobile telegram of the 15th, the exodus of negroes to the North from Eastern Mississippi had been over 1000 during the preceding three weeks.

The Louisville Savings Bank suspended on the 14th, upon the discovery that J. A. Rhoer, the Cashier' was a defaulter for over $67,000.

A Santa Fe dispatch states that Major Morrow caught up with Victoria's band on the Pershaw River. Victoria made a stubborn fight from noon to sundown and then fled toward the head waters of the Anima. Several dead Indians were left on the field. The United States forces had one man killed and several wounded.

At Panama it is believed that Callao, Peru, has been blockaded by the Chilean war-vessels. The Peruvian army is still in the field and divided into three corps, the northern, central and southern. The Bolivians are not much help to Peru. Near Pisco, on the coast, south of Lima, there was a revolt of Negroes and some horrible butcheries by them. Excited by a false report that the Spanish land proprietors and sugar plantation owners were about to establish slavery, fifty or sixty armed themselves, broke into several haciendas and murdered the proprietors and some of the principal employees, sacking and burning their premises and breaking up the machinery. They were partially dispersed by the Prefect of Ica, who killed four of their number. The band was increased from other sugar districts to numbers variously stated at 300, 400, and 600. These twice attacked the Town of Chinchua, and were repulsed by the people with large loss in killed and captured. It was reported that the bandits would attack Pisco, and the women and children were sent on board the ships in the harbor. The troops marched next day to meet the mob.

From Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, comes news of a riot, because of a tax levied on street-car passengers, and the cars and tracks were torn up and firing and stone throwing were indulged in. The troops and police were out. Three persons were killed and thirty wounded.

A dispatch from Mexico says that President Diaz is making preparations to entertain Gen. Grant and party. Gen. Garcia Cadena, Governor of Zacatecas, is expected to proclaim himself President. Gen. Gonzalez, another candidate, is at the head of 7,800 Government troops, ostensibly to preserve peace in the interior States of the district, including Zacatecas, but in the event of Cadena pronouncing will march against him.

23d.—Thus far fifty bodies have been removed from the burning mine in England.

Gen. Grant, Col. Fred Grant and Gen. Sheridan and their wives arrived in Havana, Cuba, yesterday, and were cordially received by the Spanish authorities.

Affairs in Afghanistan are very unsettled, and a fresh outbreak may occur at any time, says a dispatch from Cabul, and is certain to occur when the snow melts away.

There is excitement among the laity and clergy at Rome over the granting of a divorce by the Cardinals, confirmed by the Pope, to the Duchess of Hamilton from her husband, Prince de Monaco. A serious issue for the Papal Church seems to have thus arisen and the door of divorce may be opened to any. Society in Rome is amazed at the reported Pontifical action in this famous case.

The Cauca Valley, Central America, has been devastated by floods. Villages and people, crops, cattle, horses and goats were swept away. Estimated loss, one million dollars.

24th.—The distress in Ireland is now intensified by the sudden coming of severe cold weather, and thousands of the unemployed are suffering.

Night before last, "for the first time in the recollection of living residents," Havana, Cuba, was roused by earthquake shocks "that made her massive buildings shudder like shanties in a storm," says a telegraphic dispatch. The sensation is described as follows: "Suddenly a sound was heard as of the rising of a mighty wind through the pines, and then an unmistakably subterranean moan, while the earth reeled with three unsteady oscillations. Stricken with momentary alarm, the swarms of people in the parks paused and reeled likewise. The horses hitched to a hundred flying carriages stopped and braced themselves in dumb affright. Restaurant-tables rocked and spilled their liquids. Druggists' bottles were shaken from their shelves. Senoras and Senoritas gazed aghast at the overturn of their toilet stands. Whole families rushed from their homes into the streets, and the stairways of some hotels were crowded with the guests. A place on the ground or pavement seemed preferable to most citizens who huddled in groups beyond the moonlit shadows of the building they had deserted, and talked of bivouacking for the night. Down in the bay vessels rocked at their anchorages and groaned against the wharves, and rusty cannon threatened to fall from their pivots on the ancient fortifications of Cabana. Hours passed ere the apprehension caused by these first shocks was calmed in general slumber. About 4 o'clock in the mornidg the correspondent was awakened by a premonitory commotion in the atmosphere so direful that, before the head could leave the pillow, ladies were already rushing through the upper corridors of the hotel. Then came the second earthquake. One lift and pause of the air, then a settling down to solid immobility, and all was over. That is to say, all except the wild increase of terror among the people of Havana."

26th.—The Lord Mayor of Dublin has appealed to England for aid.

A Constantinople dispatch asserts that terrible distress prevails in Adrianople. Fifteen persons were found dead from hunger there in one day.

A dispatch from London says that the Government will issue a proclamation, stating that vengeance for the massacre of the British Embassy at Cabul being satisfied, the army withdraws to Jelalabad, leaving the Afghans to live under such sovereign as they may elect. Until such sovereign be firmly established, the Queen foregoes the right to place an Envoy at Cabul. Pending a peaceful settlement of the country, Jelalabad and Candahar will be occupied by British troops. The Queen will insist that the communications of the Afghan ruler with foreign Governments shall be held subject to her approval.

27th.—John Bright, in a speech to Parliament, has suggested a remedy for the land troubles in Ireland, namely, that a commission be appointed by the Government who shall have power to sell the farms of landlords to the tenants; that is to such as are willing to buy, the Commission to advance three-fourths of the purchase-money therefor, the purchaser to repay the principal and interest within thirty five years. The Commission is to assist the tenants to purchase whenever a landlord is willing to sell, but only to make compulsory sales of land that belongs to London companies, as in the case of large tracts owned by them near Londonderry. He expressed the conviction, however, that if his plans were adopted, self-interest or public opinion would soon compel individual landlords to sell to their tenants.

At the earthquake in Cuba, before mentioned, much damage was done at San Cristobel. All the public buildings are said to be in ruins.

A bill presented by the Judiciary Committee to Congress provides that any person not an Indian, who should steal property from Indians under charge of a Government Agent, should be guilty of felony, and, on conviction in the United States Courts, be punished by imprisonment at hard labor for not less than one year or more than five, and pay a fine equal to double the value of property stolen.

28th.—Gonzales, the man who attempted the assassination of the King of Spain a few weeks ago, has been pronounced insane by a commission of medical experts, and so will escape capital punishment.

From New Mexico comes the news that Major Morrow and his troops are pursuing and fighting Chief Victoria and his Indian band of thieves. Horses, mules and goods are being recaptured, and the band are being severely punished.

29th.—In Hanover, Germany, petroleum is being found in unlimited quantities. Depth of boring sixty feet.

In Ireland the people intend to nominate both Brannan and Davitt for Parliament, and it is thought that they will be elected. They are still under indictment for sedition and it is not expected by the people that they will take their seats, but the nomination and election will be for the effect.

30th.—A dispatch from Odessa says that a Russian transport has been lost in the Caspian Sea with two thousand soldiers on board.

The distress in Ireland is said to be increasing. Foreign and home subscriptions of $145,000 have been received at Dublin.

For the fourth time during the century Lake Zurich, Switzerland, is frozen over, as are also the other lakes, and the River Arve.

31st.—Three deaths from starvation are reported in County Louth, Ireland, and in the western part of that country the suffering is greatly increased.

Infectious diseases have broken out in St. Petersburg, and many deaths are occurring.

Feb. 1st.—The charges against Mr. Hayt, Indian Commissioner, of mal-administration and swindling having proven true, he has been removed in disgrace. General Hammond is also under suspicion, and Mr. Barstow of the Indian Board is said to be implicated in some fraudulent contract matters. Hence quite a sensation exists in Washington.

2d.—Excessive cold prevails in Turkey and much snow has fallen. People have perished while traveling, and many cattle have died.

Yellow fever has broken out in Brazil, and it is spreading from place to place.

The Chilians are occupying more of the Peruvian cities and capturing their garrisons.

In its session at Hamburg the International Convention on Arctic Exploration, has decided not to send a fresh expedition at present. It advocates the gradual establishment of a chain of stations towards the Arctic regions.

Heavy rains have caused the rivers in Sicily and Calabria, to overflow, doing great damage to property.

3d.—In Dakota, on the upper Missouri, a party of hostile Sioux attacked a village of friendly

Gros Ventre Indians, and a battle ensued, in which the Gros Ventres were victorious. More fighting is expected.

Intelligence from St. Petersburg announces that a new revolutionary proclamation is being circulated by the students of the High Schools. The students declare that they will fight the great Moloch called the Russian Government to the end, even though the best of them perish. The proclamation is considered important, as showing the formation of a new party against the Government.

Concerning the Nihilists it is reported that a paper has been found containing their program of intended procedure. It states: "That the only way to obtain the reforms they seek is to overthrow the Government by forcible revolution or conspiracy. The Socialists would then transfer the government to an Assembly elected by all the Russians, irrespective of class. This is the general policy of the Socialists, by which they cast their lot with all oppressed Russians. But when the Assembly is elected, the Socialists will recommend a program in favor of permanent popular representation, with full power over all general State questions. A wide liberty of local self-government, independence of rural communities, the principle that land is the property of the people, the transfer of all works and factories to workingmen, complete liberty of speech, conscience, the press, public meetings, and associations, and electoral agitation, and replacement of the standing army by a territorial army."

It is also announced from St. Petersburg that the Czar will introduce several new measures on the day of the 25th anniversary of his ascension to the throne. Among these is one proposing to "place the Jews upon the same footing as other Russians, and extending to Poland all the regulations existing in the rest of Russia. The proposal to concede freedom to the press is under consideration.

4th.—The British Parliament has decided to move in the matter of relief for Ireland. It is denied that deaths have occurred in County Louth by starvation.

It is reported, via Vienna, that some Russian army officers high in command have joined the revolutionists.

In the Philippine Islands a great tornado has occurred, wrecking ships and destroying or damaging property on the land.

Quite a snow storm in Newport night before last, filling the air and drifting as the wind increased in violence. It was a rough night on Long Island Sound, and along the coast thereabout. On Coney Island much damage was done by the waves to piers, hotels and wharfs, while bathing houses and other structures were completely destroyed. The wind at New York blew forty-eight miles per hour. At Long Branch, summer-houses, bath-houses and portions of hotel piazzas and roofs were blown away, and a brig and two schooners went ashore. Trains were blocked by snow in parts of Pennsylvania. Along the Hudson a heavy snow storm prevailed, with the wind like a hurricane. Trains stopped by heavy drifts on the New York and Erie road. Dispatches from the New England coast represent the storm as terrible. Much damage done to shipping, and fears are entertained for the safety of fishing fleets at sea. Also a heavy storm in Nova Scotia. At Deadwood, Dakota, a like storm was raging. Here, in the Northwestern States, a little snow fell, but none of any moment has fallen this winter.

The latest from Santa Fe about Victoria and his Apache band, is that Majors Morrow and Hooker, with their troops, are after him lively and fighting him whenever they can get a chance. They are along the Rio Grande, and in the Solidad and Organ Mountains.

A dispatch says that the new grand jury impaneled at Ogden, Utah, the 2d inst, was mostly Mormons. Judge Hunter directed their special attention to the law against bigamy. But, as no accessible record is kept of bigamous marriages, it is not probable this Grand Jury will be able to find any evidence. Thomas Heniger, a wealthy Mormon, aged about 60, was arrested for bigamy, and will be taken to Salt Lake for trial. He was indicted in November last, but kept out of sight until now.

5th.—At Fez, Morocco, recently, the Moors made an attack upon the Jews and committed some terrible outrages. They bound and gagged one man, put kerosene on his clothing and set him on fire. The sufferings of the man, till death relieved him, were terrible. The Moors then made a rush for the Jews' quarter and killed and wounded many, till the Moors were satiated with their bloody work and ceased it. Some of the victims were French subjects, and the French officials are making an investigation that alarms the city authorities, some of whom were lookers-on at the massacre and even incited the mob.

The situation in Ireland is becoming worse daily, and returns by counties show that over three hundred thousand people are slowly starving. Subscriptions are being taken in France for the sufferers.

The American demand for iron, through the revival of business in this country and the building of railroads, is causing a great activity in Great Britain. Four vessels loaded with iron and rails left England yesterday, and thirteen others are chartered to sail thus loaded.

By a railway collision in France eleven persons were killed and sixty wounded.

Correspondence.

OAK ISLAND, Dec. 28th, 1879.

Brs. Joseph and Henry:—We meet regularly for Sunday School and prayer meeting under an arbor, although it is now the last of December. It seems that the Lord favors us with pleasant days for worship, as we have not been compelled to omit Sunday School a single day yet.

We had quite a nice Christmas tree the night of the 25th, for the Sunday School. While a number were dressing the tree with presents to both young and old, and what a casual observer would have called enjoying themselves very well, a sister entered with the Heralds. I think a pleasant sight might then have met the Editors' gaze could they have beheld with what eagerness the Heralds were received by all; it is our most welcome visitor. If it comes in a time of rejoicing it is an additional pleasure, for it brings us news continually of the efforts and labors of the elders in the field who have heard the call of the Lord for reapers and who have nobly responded thereto, sacrificing their own pleasures of homes, families and friends to bear the gospel tidings to those whom we may almost say know not God; and again if it reaches us in a time of sickness, how many testimonies we there see of the power and willingness of our God to heal and bless all who call upon him in the name of Jesus, and ask in faith. The use of medicine has been almost done away with in our branch; some have entirely laid it aside and go according to St. James, 5th chapter, 13th and 14th verses. I think the time is speedily coming when God will be the only physician looked to, and prayer and faith the only medicine used among the Saints. God has mercifully blessed us here in healing numbers who have been ill, members of the branch or some members of their families. We have had some severe sickness in our family and tried earthly physicians and drugs, the patient continually sinking until it seemed as if the lamp of their existence had almost burned to a close, then at last, as if man's extremity was God's opportunity, we sought help of him who never sent a sorrowing soul away empty; he sent his blessing in answer to our call; our loved one was healed, our faith confirmed, and we enjoyed food that the world knew not of. I often think how sad would be our condition if the Lord was as slow to answer our prayers as we are to respond to his call when he knocks at the door of our hearts to remind us of some forgotten or neglected duty. The question has been asked here, How is it; if yours is the Church of Christ that you do not have the gifts, and that we do not see the signs follow. Others stand off and watch us, and say: "When I see you enjoy the blessings that are promised the Church of Christ, then I will join." They seem to forget that the signs are to follow believers and not unbelievers. They also expect to see the workings of the Spirit of God. Now the things of God are spiritually discerned, and just so long as they stand off and wait for signs to convince them they will remain out of the Church. Our branch here is composed of seventeen members, organized by Bro. D. H. Bays, is struggling onward with good feeling existing in the branch, and an earnest desire in the hearts of most to progress in the work they have enlisted in. May God help us all to press onward for it is a progressive work and for every one that lives faithfully and prayerfully before God, bearing every trial, cross and temptation with the Spirit of Christ, there is a rich reward. I trust some elder, or elders may be able to give us a call as we have heard no preaching for five months. Bro. Bays had to leave us on account of hard times brought on by drought and hailstorm. He stood it longer perhaps than any other would have done with a large and helpless family. We trust they have reached their destination in safety.

Pray for us brethren, that the Spirit of Christ may dwell in us and that the love of God may bind us together as members of one body. Your sister in Christ.
C. E. BARBER.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Jan. 18th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—I have been reading the Herald to-day, and have been greatly blessed and edified. I could not do without it. It is all the preacher I have. I live twelve miles from Council Bluffs, in a neighborhood where there are no Latter Day Saints. I have not heard a gospel sermon, or been to a Saints' meeting, since the Semi-annual Conference. I often feel lonely, but my faith does not fail, nor my hopes expire. The Comforter, the Holy Spirit, enlightens my mind and cheers my soul, and I press on with renewed courage. When I read your repeated solicitations for subscribers, and for means to carry on the work, I see the necessity for it, and I feel that if it was in my power, I would bestow an especial providence upon you. As it is I will send you five dollars, hoping that every one will do all they can, until there is sufficient to make the Herald a weekly and to send the gospel to all the nations of the earth. I ask you to pray for me that I may secure to myself an inheritance with the Saints. Your sister in Christ,
L. A. HARTWELL.

HUTCHINSON, Jefferson Co., Colorado,
January 22nd, 1880.

Dear Herald:—Since last addressing you, we have been necessitated, to bring into requisition, and freely use traveling Elders' horses to reach the few points in which we have gained a foothold. Our course has been impeded by religious intolerance. Colorado soil does not give flattering promises of Mormon fruit. It would seem that many, very many think, they are just right as they are, and with what they have, and that Mormonism would interfere with their present and future joy, and no such unpopular doctrine is wanted. But we have, and at present feel resolved, to continue, to put forth our best efforts to show the benefits resulting from accepting and abiding in the doctrine of Christ; believing that when we have done our duty, if we shall be saved we shall still be debtors to the Lord.

We opened last Sunday in Denver, having rented a hall, seated, lighted, and fuel furnished for $15 per month, for Sunday afternoon and evening, increased to $20 if using it an extra night in the week. About a dozen in the afternoon, and thirty-one or two, greeted us in the evening, of the thirty-five thousand citizens of Denver. We visited three of the newspaper offices and were promised that our notice should be published; we were kindly received, and two kept their promise, one failing. Prejudice runs high in Colorado, and Denver has many fashionable and costly churches, and the several orthodox ministers are very united at this juncture in laboring assiduously, for a mighty religious revival.

I much regret to learn of the affliction of Bro. J. R. Lambert, and trust the good Lord may interpose his power ere long, and by the way, I have just received a letter from that worthy Bro. Jas. Perkins, who is prohibited by sickness from sounding the gospel he so much loves. Bro. Perkins is worthy the esteem and assistance of the Saints in the hour of his affliction. I was glad to learn of his being in the Northern Nebraska District, for they are liberal souls, who delight in doing good. Come to the aid of this noble young man; do not let him think he is a burden to you, but rather that assistance in the time of his distress is his right. It appears to be a trying time for all who want to do the Master's will.

Has that dispensation of providence yet reached your office? If not, had you not better make another appeal; the first was very touching. We think you improve in this appealing business. That printing office at Plano should keep a booming; we expect to want some thousands of tracts out here. A becoming zeal with the Church would double, or greatly increase the Herald, Hope and Advocate. They are all indispensable for the progress of the latter day work, and then we ought to have a good Magazine with suitable literature for Latter Day Saints, as a preventive to feeding upon the light literature of the day. We have brethren well adapted for such work, and their talent ought to be thus used. A dispensation of providence, or a large bit of earthly treasure with economy, would do wonders.
JAMES CAFFALL.

STREATOR, LaSalle Co., Ills.,

January 17th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—We have been very much discouraged here for a long time, and nothing short of a knowledge of the gospel would have enabled us to retain our standing in the Church. Satan has made such an inroad into our ranks till we have thought we were destitute of the Spirit of God, and when we think of a membership of forty-three reported to last conference, and such a few of us coming together to praise the Lord we have thought our condition very sad. But thanks be to God, a better spirit, one of determination and humility, is manifest since the dawn of a new year; and if meeting together often brings a reunion of hearts, we are resolved to gain it. We are now holding four meetings per week, prayer meeting Tuesday evening, social meeting Thursday evening, and a social and a preaching meeting on Sunday. The Herald is a very welcome messenger. It stands ahead of any other paper I can find to read. Sickness has been and is prevalent here, and our hearts have been saddened by having to sacrifice those dear to us; but we hope to meet them in the better land, in the "sweet bye and bye." We have an elder here named Bickerton, nephew to William Bickerton, founder of that faction. We have talked on the subject of authority and he seems to be a very humble man; attends our meetings very punctually; seems very firm in the principles of the gospel and called upon us to administer to his little boy. We have every reason to believe he would be of good service here if obedient to the proper authority, and if, by manifesting a spirit of kindness and charity towards him, and by the aid of the Holy Spirit, we can win him and his daughter over to the true path, we shall endeavor to make manifest such a spirit, and render all the praise to God. We have been blessed with the presence of Bro. John S. Kier and C. G. Lanphear, and we pray that the seed sown by them and others will not be void, but will accomplish its purpose. In Christ yours,
JACOB STANLEY.

BRIDGEPORT, Ohio,

January 22nd, 1880.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I feel very pleased to note that the Herald and the Church papers have lost none of their vigor, and the interest in them with the earnest Saints is evident. The last two numbers of the Advocate have presented to the world some wonderful things, completely sapping the pretensions of those Twelve usurpers in Utah. From my heart I pity them, but more especially those who they have deceived, betrayed. Surely the wrong will recoil fearfully at some point in their history; to evade the recoil is impossible. The truth of the living God never fails of its aim. "Be sure your sin will find you out," is as certain and forcible in its application to-day as when addressed by Moses to Israel, on the other side of Jordan. I pray for my brethren of the Utah mission; that through their agency the Lord may manifest the truth to that people, and that the people may know the day of their visitation, for it must be if they harden their heart and reject the truth, they will be desolate, cast out and trodden under foot of men; but they are in the hand of a gracious God, his word will not fail. I know by my own individual experience that the path of life is in the light of the Lord, obtained and retained in the perfect law of liberty. And there is the conflict in the minds of the Utah people, they have been taught to disregard the written law, for the precepts of men.

Respects to yourself and all in the office.
JOSIAH ELLS.

EDENVILLE, Iowa, January 20th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—Since quarterly conference in Newton, December 20th, I have been preaching in this northern part of the district, in Storey county, three miles west of Edenville. I commenced holding meeting in the school-house on the 29th of December, where Bro. William and Abel Hidy are living. I was made welcome and to feel at home. I preached nine discourses with the best of liberty, and had good attention. The brethren from Edenville came over and took an active part in the preaching of the word. I. N. White preached five times with good effect. On Sunday, the 16th, the Saints of Edenville came up, and Bro. A. White preached at 11 a. m., and 7 p. m., to a packed house. One was baptized by me at Edenville, and I think many will obey.

I thank God for his goodness, for he is with us. My whole heart is in this work. I feel stronger than ever in the work; and if some of our able Elders would go and preach the gospel to the poor, and let Joseph Smith, the martyr, rest, it would be a far greater blessing to them and to the Church at large. That the strong arm of the Almighty may keep us from falling, and keep us in the right way, even in the way of his (Christ's) paths, is the prayer of

GOSEPEL SWAMP, Dec. 29th, 1879.

Editors Herald:—With gratitude to the good Father who has called me out of darkness and established my faith in the latter-day work by the power of his Spirit, I write this in testimony of the truth of this gospel of Jesus Christ. In the great conflict in which we have engaged we are on all sides confronted by the enemy—his cunning is everywhere manifest. Here we meet a disappointment, there an obstacle to our wishes, and the little pelf we called ours seems to take wings and fly—thus we are tried. But is this the result of accident or is there a design in it. If temporal possessions tend to exalt us, or burden us by consuming our time and attention, is it not a mercy to us to have it removed? Then are we made to feel our dependence on him from whom cometh every blessing. It is written he will have a tried people.

We are out at sea; it is night and a storm is upon us. Reaching the round-top high, we look around on every side, but neither light, nor land can spy. Yonder appears a stranger vessel bearing a red light on her front; shall we in our distress signal to her to come to our relief, or shall we contend with the raging elements that threaten our destruction? We are toiling on, struggling against wind and tide; consulting our chart and compass we find that we are still on our course and making for our intended port. The storm has now abated and land appears in sight; approaching, we learn that the vessel we saw was a pirate ship with a false light to lure us to our doom.

So it is with us, darkness at times surrounds us and trouble of all kinds besets our path; while thus perplexed the cunning foe tries to lead us off by false representations, to draw us away from the Good Shepherd who is ever ready to save us. We are now approaching the day of victory and of rewards; we stand on dangerous ground, hostile forces are at our doors and our little army is surrounded; the Lord and his angels are looking on and witness our struggles and our triumphs. My brethren let us arise unitedly and with our might labor in the cause we have engaged in; let us help bear each other's burdens, sustaining each other in all things pertaining to the cause with an eye single to the glory of God and the good of this people. So shall our cause triumph, the waste places be built up and Zion be established.

We may be persecuted by our enemies, but strength shall be given us. We may think we are weak and can do but little, but the Lord works through such, and victory is promised unto the weakest. We must pray for the watchers on the towers, they are a target for the missiles of the enemy. Let our prayers ascend for them to the God of battle that they have strength given them in the hour of trial, and hold out unto the end. Let us remember our beloved leader, who is constantly reviewing and animating the army. He has peculiar trials that we know nothing of; let us sustain him by our faith and prayers and redouble our energies in this particular; that wisdom and light be given sufficient to lead us on to victory; then when the grand Sabbath morn opens before us, if we are faithful we shall stand on Mount Zion with palms of victory in our hands, celebrating the triumph of Jehovah and the redemption of his people.

EMILY B. FARRAR.

NETAWAKA, Kansas, Jan., 1880.

Bro. Joseph.—Having a slight personal acquaintance with you, also being conscious in part of our relative connection in proportion to our standing in the interest of the church of our Savior, I wish to tell you that it was not because that my interest was lessened, nor my faith weakened, that I have done so little for the Church for several years past. Fighting with circumstances to make a home out here has been a great prevention. Grasshoppers, drought, and chills and fever have been a great hindrance. We have been away from the place three times on account of the above things which was very expensive for our large family. I have not been silent altogether, but it has been my lot to be in new and strange places for some time; but now I think we are going to remain here and make it a permanent home. My heart rejoices in the present prospect of the work, and the progress and peaceful condition of the Church. My soul praises the Lord that he hath called such mighty and willing men for the ministry. I am fully persuaded to believe that before long the condition and progress of the Church will be glorious, and its ministers will be joyful in the Lord. Praying that the God who upheld and sustained you in the past, may continue to be your guide and strength in the future, I subscribe myself your brother and well wisher in the gospel of peace,

HENRY GREEN.

COLTHARP, Houston Co., Texas,
January 21st, 1880.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins.—I preach in Angelina county on the first Sunday of each month, and here in my own neighborhood on the fourth Sunday. I am not very well posted, but well enough to know that this is the true doctrine of Jesus Christ, and I preach faith, repentance, baptism for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, according to the Scriptures; and I think that the Church here will prosper. I joined the Saints because they believe in the word and power of God, and because I believed in the Apostles' doctrine. The local correspondent here of one of the papers, wrote as follows:

"Strange things occur among us: A preacher of the order of Latter Day Saints passed through the country a few days ago. One of our Methodist brethren bolted from us and joined his church. I wish that Bro. John or some other posted man would favor us with an article on the principles of Mormonism, as he will come back again.—Local Preacher."

I bolted because I believed as I have said, and because I wanted oil in my lamp. To the above the pro tem editor responded as follows:

"The editor is absent. The pro tem is not among the "posted men" on this Mormon business. However, we venture to say there is no principle involved, except the principle of evil—and the devil manufactures that. As a mild measure we would recommend that if the Latter-day man comes back, you have him arrested as a peace disturber. Would suggest a suit of tar and feathers, but fear Dr. John would expel us from the corps editorial when he returns.—Pro tem."

To my mind no good "principle" is "involved" in the suggestion of this "mild measure," but only the one that came from the source he mentions, from the manufacturer named.

It is with regret that I record the death of Sister Goodwin, daughter of the late Bro. Robuck. She died January 4th. She was a true and faithful woman, and now rests, awaiting the resurrection to a better life. My prayers are with the Saints.

SHERIDAN, Nevada, Jan. 22d, 1880.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I feel for one that if God gives me life and health, I will do more this year than the last; as I can plainly see the wickedness increasing in the land, and infidelity on every hand, and religion is nearly out of the question. It is almost impossible to get the people to hear anything only at a funeral, or something of that kind, and then they hear for the sake of the dead, and think no more of it. Bro. Abednego Johns is our District president, this quarter; he holds his years well and can raise his voice in the gospel trump above all of us and make every body understand its principles. Our conference for the 11th and 12th did not come off on account of the weather, which was very stormy; we anticipate a better time in our branch this year, as we feel to try our energies to work for the master more faithfully as we go on with the latter day work. We feel stronger in the faith of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and pray with the Saints of God for health and strength to hold fast to the end. Yours with all Saints,

D. R. JONES.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, January 20th, 1880.

Brother Joseph.—The Saints as a general thing are firm in the faith, but there seems to be so many ways for us to be led astray, that we fall far short of a "perfect man," like unto Christ. But we are trying to attain to that mark, by following the precepts laid down by him.

The meetings are well attended as a general thing, and considerable interest manifested. I have been preaching in the western part of Harrison county, and have had the aid and assistance of God's Spirit. Two weeks ago last Sabbath I preached in what is known as the Evening Star Branch, presided over by Bro. Levi Gamet, a man well qualified for his calling. After service was called upon, in connection with Bro. Geo. Hyde, to administer to an old and worthy sister. She was suffering intensely with pain in her breast and side, and was instantaneously relieved; to God be the praise.

I shall continue to do all I can now, and trust that the Lord, if he thinks best, will open the way whereby I can do more. Your brother in Christ,

J. F. MINTUN.

MALAD CITY, Idaho,

January 26th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Bro. Charles Derry parted company with me on the 12th inst., at Ogden, he to go up the Weber and I to this place. So far as the prospects for good being done at Ogden and vicinity, I think Bro. Derry has given it correctly in the letter he wrote you from there; at least I have nothing to add.

I arrived at this place on the 18th inst.; met with the Saints at 2 p. m., and partook of the sacrament. At 7 p. m. I spoke to a large sized congregation. They seemed to be interested, and gave excellent attention. On the 22nd I preached a funeral sermon; quite a number present of the Utah Church, and some unbelievers. It is thought that a good impression was made. At night a prayer meeting was held. On Friday night spoke again; also on Sunday (25th) twice. The house was well filled, and I felt free in talking.

There is, perhaps, a better prospect in the Malad Valley at present than there has been before, the brethren think. At Oxford and Franklin there are thought to be fair chances. The brethren have had invitations to visit these places and speak to the people.

To-morrow I go to Oregon Springs, seventeen miles from here, to hold a series of meetings. Bro. John Vanderwood is going with me. There is a more liberal element in Idaho than exists in and around Ogden, Utah.

At Samaria in this valley there was division, so I have been told, on the Adam-God doctrine, and it was decided by vote, the majority voting for Adam. So, by that decision, Adam is the God of the Samaritans. The brethren here will go over and see if there can be an opening there. If so, we shall, with the help of the true and living God, contest that question with them. Many in these valleys claim to believe it, with other dogmas, and have given themselves up to worshipping idols, and to the lusts of the flesh. For such we can only pray that a kind and loving Savior may lead them out of darkness into the light of this glorious gospel.

In the name of our blessed Master we shall earnestly pray and labor for the emancipation of those who are in bonds, that the honest may be free. We believe that only the power of God can throw down the strongholds. Therefore we shall sow the seed, trusting that, in his own good time, he will gather the wheat into the garner.

Yours in Christ,

NEWTON, Iowa, Feb. 3rd, 1880.

Bro. Joseph.—I have been out in Poweshiek county, attending a discussion between Bro. I. N. White and Rev. S. H. Hendrix, of the Christian Church. Discussion was held on the 26th and 27th ult in the Methodist Church; two sessions a day of two hours each. The issue was on the spiritual gifts,—there was somewhere near four hundred people out. Bro. White did well; and the cause did not suffer. We gained many friends, and a good impression was left. Mr. Hendrix is a learned gentleman and an eloquent speaker. The Saints there are feeling strong in the Faith and the prospects for many more to be added ere long are good. May the work continue to roll until the "little stone" shall fill the whole earth. We expect Bro. J. H. Lake here this week and to remain in this district for some time. I expect do some preaching as the way may open, the Lord being my helper. Yours in Christ,

D. C. WHITE.

OAK ISLAND, Bexar Co., Texas,
January 2nd, 1880.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins.—Are we to be left entirely without a preacher? We are all hungry for a good sermon, and if some Elder without family could come we could support him. Our hearts were good to support Bro. Bays and his family, but we had nothing to do it with, and it was with unfeigned sorrow that we saw him depart. But we could not blame him; for, as it has been remarked of us, if we had been in his place we would most likely have left before he did. I do not know why it is that nearly all Latter Day Saints are poor, unless it is in fulfillment of the Savior's words, "And the poor have the gospel preached to them." This seems to me by far more comforting than the riches of this world. For, when we meet for prayer, I think there is not the least approach to hard feelings, because the greetings to each other are all so cordial that it seems more like the reunion of one family than the meeting of the members of different families. I wish we could do something towards making the Herald a weekly, but I can not see how to accomplish it. There are eight families of us that meet regularly, and by them five copies of the Herald are taken. If times would improve, I think every member would take it; for it is the most welcome visitor we have. With kindest wishes for the welfare of you and yours, and trusting the Herald will soon come more frequently, I am yours fraternally,

JOHN BARBER.

MACHIAS, Maine, Jan. 19th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry.—A few weeks ago, our noble brother, T. W. Smith, arrived in Maine, and he has preached some powerful sermons. One of them was delivered on Sunday afternoon; text Dan. 8:9. No doubt in my mind but there came to every person within hearing, a thought of all the sins they ever committed. The sermon was deep and interesting; and so might it be, when given in the power of God's Spirit. Our brother is doing much good in reviving the spirits of many. He has the love and sympathy of all true Saints and friends. So onward we go. Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

COVE, Jackson Co., Jan. 26th, 1880.

Bro. Henry.—I have baptized three, all heads of families, since the first of this month. There are several places calling for preaching, which I shall fill as fast as I can. The branch here now numbers sixteen. Bro. and Sr. Spann at Reedsville are urging us to visit them, but I see no way to leave here until those are "warned" that desire to be. I feel the need of a "lot" of tracts to distribute, but am not able now to order them. As great an interest is manifested at one house as I ever saw anywhere. The people turn out to hear, and many seem to believe the doctrine. As ever,

BEAVER, Utah, January 23rd, 1880.

Brother Joseph.—I am well and am trying to build up the cause of Christ in this place. It is slow work. The people are slow to hear, and are set in their way, and don't want to be taught any thing different from what they have been learned in these valleys and mountains. I have preached in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Some few do and will come, but the mass harken to their teachers and take their council, that is, "Stay away from those Josephites or you will apostatize." But I am determined they shall hear, for I have been going from house to house, leaving tracts and talking with all who are willing to read and know for themselves of the truth as it was in the early rise of the Church, and the blessing attending all the faithful in keeping the law of God as given in the Covenants, Book of Mormon, and Holy Scriptures. What a change has come! Sorrow and pain have come for treating lightly the things written in these books, saith the Lord. Some of the Saints invite me to call again and seem them and get the tracts I lend them. Others like best the tracks I leave heels toward the door. Some old Saints are not only pickled, but are petrified, I do believe. As a sample: I went to Greenville, about five miles from here, and asked Bro. Robert Easton, bishop of that place, if he would grant me the liberty to preach in the log school house. "What do you preach?" "The gospel of Christ." "That is good. Where are you from?" "From the United States, Iowa." "Where are you stopping?" "At Beaver." "With whom?" "Sometimes with one and at times with others." "What is your name?" "Gordon E. Deuel." "I have seen it in the papers. What church do you represent?" "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the Josephite Reorganization. I am a firm believer in the divine calling of Joseph, the martyr, and the law God gave through him to govern his Church." Then he said that he was a good judge, and if Jesus Christ was to come down from heaven and preach a year he could not move him or change his mind; he was well satisfied. I bade him good day. I believed then, and I do still, that it will take the judgments of God to change him.

The weather has been cold and stormy. There are some who are desirous to cast their lot with us, but they are old and feeble. When the weather becomes warm and fine they will be baptized. Others are searching and are reading the books for themselves. I think they will soon be ready to come and enjoy the light and love of Christ. I shall soon go to Parowan and try what can be done for the cause in that place, the Lord willing.

Yours in the truth,
GORDON E. DEUEL.

CLEAR CREEK, Saunders Co., Neb.,
January 26th, 1880.

Dear Herald.—I wish to inform you of the good conference held at the Morgan school house, in Otoe county. From the beginning to the end the spirit of peace and union prevailed over all, and not one harsh word was spoken. Bro. Elvin preached some of the best sermons I ever heard. I know this is the work of God. Your brother in Christ,
LUTHER MELTON.

The request of the Lone Rock Branch that Bro. John Chapman be ordained a Priest, was granted, and also that of the Lamoni Branch, that Bro. Martin Turpin be ordained a Priest, the time of ordination being set at 11 a.m., on Sunday.

In reply to the question: "Have the officers of a branch a right to ordain an Elder, by the vote of the branch?" Brn. Z. H. Gurley and A. H. Smith said that they believed that while a branch held the legal right to ordain, it is the safer way, in the interests of the body, to consult the conference.

Evening:—A call was made for the report of the court of elders appointed last conference. One of the court being present, stated that he had no report to make. The committee was continued.

A question was asked respecting the authority of the law requiring branches to recommend to the district conferences the persons chosen by the branch to be ordained to the office of an Elder, and the president replied.

Resolved that all persons chosen by branch for ordination be recommended to the district conferences; and that, in our opinion, this should be the rule governing such cases.

Resolved that the resolution passed last conference, requiring the branches of this district to send their reports, as appointed under the law, in time to be presented at the first session of each conference, be republished with the minutes of this conference.

OBITUARY.

Dear Brethren: Out of duty and respect I send you the death of our much esteemed and beloved brother, Elder John Whitehouse. He died January 19th, 1880, aged 74 years last 4th of July, 1879. Born in Dudley, Worcestershire, England. He had been a member in the old organization for a number of years; entered the Reorganization, May 14th, 1864, and has proved himself by faith and actions to be a true and sincere lover of the latter day message to fallen man. It is true that his ability was small, but all that laid in his power, seemingly, he did. Hence we say, as a Branch, Peace, peace to his now silent and living remains, to await the call of the first resurrection. He leaves a great number of children and grandchildren to mourn his loss. Bro. R. Holt preached the funeral discourse, which was indeed very interesting, especially to those well acquainted with the good old soul. Our feelings are poorly described in the following verses:

He's gone to his resting abode —
While spirits immortal did wait
To hail with a welcome applause,
Our brother on entering the gate.
With a grasp of the hand, and a kiss,
He passed through the portal divine;
Eternal, e'erlasting the bliss,
With nobles, Christ's loved ones, to shine.

Return with the Savior again,
Their bodies immortal to raise,
In glory celestial to reign
With sonnets and anthems of praise.

On earth, in its sanctified state,
No one will be missing, I know,
Of those for the kingdom that wait
In patience while mortals below.

Reluctant, the brotherly hand
We slacken the grip with a tear;
With hope like an anchor to stand
Alike for the truth ever dear.

Thy weak and dilapidated frame,
Thy casket, thy temple of clay,
In Christ, the Immaculate's name
In quietude's resting we lay.

The willow above it shall weep,
The ivy, the fig ever green,
While angels in safety will keep
The spot as a sanctified scene.

The songsters in music shall sing
A sonnet in love for the brave,
While loved ones in sunny days bring
Sweet flowers to strew on thy grave.

The gospel, the joy of thy heart,
The banner of Jesus unfurled;
Thy faith and thy hope to impart,
We still will proclaim to the world.

Until we are call'd home like thee,
Our mission so ended complete;
O, what a glad time it will be,
Triumphant to sing when we meet.

REYNOLDS — At his residence, 139 Campbell Avenue, Chicago, on January 21st, 1880, of bilious colic, Bro. Frank Reynolds. He was born near Annapolis, Park county, Indiana, February 8th, 1832. He leaves a wife and five children behind,—one, an infant son, had gone on before. Brother Frank was baptized by Elder Blair in 1860, and remained firm in his faith to the last. Ailing for some time, his sickness unto death was of only about thirty-nine hours' duration. He looked calm and sweet in death. Funeral services by Elder M. H. Forscutt, January 23d. Another of the Seventy is gone on his better mission.

McALLISTER — At Streator, Illinois, November 28th, 1879, of scarlet fever, Charles, son of Mr. Thomas and Sr. Mary McAllister, aged 1 year, 11 months and 24 days. Funeral sermon by Jacob S. Stanley.

MINTUN — At Magnolia, Iowa, December 5th, 1879, of inward cancer, Sr. Phebe Ann Mintun, after a very severe and painful trial during two years and three months, which she endured with patience. She was faithful to Christ. A husband, six children and many friends mourn her. Funeral sermon by Elder J. C. Crabbe, from Romans 8:28, selected by herself.

ARMSTRONG.—Sr. Elizabeth Armstrong died at Council Bluffs, Iowa, October 28th, 1879. She was born 16th June, 1812, in Liverpool, England; baptized and confirmed by John Taylor. Funeral service by Andrew Hall, assisted by Wm. Gess.

LEWIS.—At Malad City, Idaho, January 20th, 1880, Elizabeth Ann, daughter of George and Martha Lewis, aged 1 year, 1 month and 29 days. Funeral services by R. J. Anthony.

ADDRESS TO THE MONTANA SAINTS.

To those who are scattered, or living in isolated parts of the Territory, greeting:—

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS: In response to an appointment of the General Conference, calling me to this field of labor, I arrived at the terminus of the Utah Northern, and have since been laboring in this Territory to the best of my abilities. There are now two flourishing branches of the Church in Gallatin county: one on Reese Creek, fifteen miles from Bozeman, and one on Lower Willow Creek. In my travels I have found several Saints that will hold on to the rod of iron, and who are trying, under difficult circumstances, to live the life of those who have received the teachings of Christ. We wish to notify all whom it may concern, that there will be a Special Conference held at Reese Creek, fifteen miles from Bozeman City, Gallatin county; and we now invite all that can come to come and meet with us. The conference will commence at 10 a.m. on Saturday, the 6th day of March, and continue on Sunday, the 7th. All who can not come, we respectfully request them not to fail to report by letter; and we desire that they will do so at as early a date as possible. Address: E. C. Brand, Lower Willow Creek, Gallatin county, Montana.

Your brother in bonds,
E. C. BRAND.

P. Tucker's "Rise and Progress of Mormonism" Examined.

THERE are numerous publications abroad in the land that claim to give the history of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, but which are in reality but the histories of the false reports that have been circulated by opposers of the work, and therefore only calculated to mislead the public mind, in reference to the rise of the Church, its origin, doctrine and practice, its aims, policy and objects.

It is not our object to enter into an examination of all these various works referred to, but to make a slight investigation of the one designated in our caption. It was written as late as 1867; at least was published in that year, and the writer had the advantage of similar works published prior to that date. Our apology for examining this work, is: The writer was a resident of Palmyra, N. Y., the place where the work began, about the time of the rise of the Church, and was acquainted (or claimed to have been) with the Smith family, Harris, Cowdery, and all the "Pioneer Mormons," and with all the important events connected with the "Advent of Mormonism." Let us examine these claims, and if we shall discover that "would-be witnesses" fail to give us a truthful relation of things they claim to see, then beware of the writings of those "far away."

We begin this review by reference to a statement found in the preface of Mr. Tucker's work, and which is as follows:

"The facts and reminiscences contained in this volume, based upon the author's personal knowledge and information, are produced to fill the blank and supply the omitted chapters in Mormon history," and "this truthful narrative is necessary to the completion of the history from the foundation of the institution."

We wish these statements to be borne in mind, for if they are true, we shall find that the author "personally knows" some very opposite things, that the sources of his "information" are very conflicting and contradictory, even amounting to "it is believed," "I have heard," and "it is thought," etc.!

As testimony of the authenticity of the work, Mr. T., on page five, cites names to the number of ten, and as an evidence of the strength of the evidence of his witnesses, inserts a letter from Mr. Thurlow Weed, some time of Rochester, N. Y., in which is found this statement: "The character you have given 'Joe Smith,' his family and associates, corresponds with what I have often heard from the old citizens of Palmyra." "Often heard." This needs no comment. In the first two chapters of the work we are treated to a pretty full history of the stories then current, (but these did not happen to be known till about 1827), concerning the boyhood days of Joseph Smith, and his father's family. Of all this, however, he could have had no knowledge till the tenth year of Smith's age, as he did not reside in Palmyra till of that age. Beside, there is nothing in the after years of Joseph's life to warrant the statements made by Mr. Tucker. He tells us, however, on page 17 of the work, that as Joseph "further advanced in reading and knowledge, he assumed a spiritual or religious turn of mind, and frequently perused the Bible, becoming quite familiar with portions thereof, both of the Old and New Testaments."

But Mr. T. fearing he had said too much in Joseph's favor, immediately proceeds to kill the strength of the foregoing statement, by telling us on the 18th page, that: "In unbelief, theory and practice, the Smith family * * * were unqualified Atheists." This latter saying not only contradicts the former one, but also the public record of their lives, as attested by their works, their friends and their foes. This illustrates the utter regardlessness, as to truth, of Mr. T. in his pretended history of those he writes of.

In chapter two of Mr. Tucker's work, is a detailed account of some of the false stories that were manufactured by the enemies of the work, about the "fortune-telling," "money-digging" schemes of Joseph, all concocted to falsify and ridicule the fact of his having labored for one Mr. Stool, of a neighboring county to Wayne, who believed there was money or silver on his farm, and who employed Joseph, in company with others, in digging for it. Why not brand the others as "money-diggers?" Nay, all the gold and silver miners of the "Great West?" Mr. Stool failed to find the supposed treasure, and hence the failures of Joseph's "schemes!"

But this "long-continued" "career" of Smith's "failures" of "seven or eight years," all sprung out of a "curious shaped" "stone," found in digging a well for Mr. Clark Chase, in the year 1819, of which Joseph became possessed at the time—this was the "fortune-stone"—the "acorn" from which the Mormon tree grew.

On pages 24 and 25 is a lengthy description of one of Joseph's "money-digging," night scenes, said to have taken place by "lantern-light." He now "assumes a mysterious air," employs the "miraculous stone," goes to neighbor Stafford, who is "a respectable farmer in comfortable worldly circumstances," who supplies the "black sheep," the blood of which is to encircle the spot where the treasure lies buried in the earth. All being now in readiness, Joseph and his dupes repair to the spot, and the digging begins. All is silent, no one daring to speak! But bye and bye some one in a moment of forgetfulness speaks, the spell is broken, the treasure vanishes, and the work ceases! A retrospect of the locality shows that the sheep's carcass is gone, investigation reveals that J. Smith, Sen., has taken it to his house, "reduced to mutton" for family use. The above is only illustrative of the many, and in all such work respectable farmers, such as Harris and Stafford; with school teachers, such as O. Cowdery, are engaged! Does it seem reasonable that respectable farmers and school teachers would be duped in this way out of their sleep, property and honesty? And lawyers too!? But Mr. Tucker has not informed us whether he was present as one of Joseph's chief managers, or one of his dupes! Probably the latter, that is, if he knows these things to be true whereof he writes. Mr. Tucker spoils all these stories, however, when he tells us, on page 27, that these "failures" were of "seven or eight years" duration. Can it be possible that men of sense and education could thus be duped, and led, and deceived in such a manner for a period of seven or eight years? Think of this, ye respectable farmers, everywhere. Could you be made to believe that men of your class could be deceived in this manner, by experiences not of a mystic or spiritual character, but of a natural, physical character. What utter nonsense! If any body can be found silly enough to believe these stories, then, in the language of Mr. T., "The fools are not all dead yet." I much prefer to believe in the doctrine of the ministering of angels in this age of the world.

Mr. Tucker goes back to the pretended "little stone," as a basis on which to novelize and ridicule the Urim and Thummim. And in attempting to account for its non-existence in 1827, says: "This spectacle pretension, is believed to have been purely an after-thought, for it was not heard of outside of the Smith family for a considerable period subsequent to the first story." Yes, "it is believed," and we are called on to receive this belief as evidence.

There is no reason whatever for believing that these said-to-be first stories—false stories—had any existence till after the real events thus counterfeited by the false, had really transpired, and thus these pretended fore-thoughts are in reality the after-thoughts, not of Joseph, or his opposers. If the best evidence of the best witness is belief only, what of the testimony of a "far off" writer.

On pages 38 and 39, is enumerated the names of some thirty-one persons "and the remainder of the Smith family," with the statement, "It is believed that this list embraces all the persons residing at or near the prime seat of the Mormon advent, who from first to last made a profession of belief either in the money-digging, or Golden Bible finding pretensions of Joseph Smith, jun." Another instance of "it is believed," but the writer does not tell us who it is believed by; does not even say whether he believes it or not. But this kind of evidence seems to be characteristic of "the author's personal knowledge" of the things he writes concerning. Belief is not evidence, either legal or historical, hence is no decision of this question.

On page 33, Mr. Tucker avers that it is further "believed" that the development of the Book of Mormon or the "plates" "was also a secondary invention." By this it may be clearly seen that the very best evidence, that the most accredited historian on the negative side of this question concerning the Urim and Thummim and the Book of Mormon is in possession of, is mere belief, and belief only. These examples serve to illustrate "the author's personal knowledge" of the historical "facts" he pretends to relate.

In dealing with this question the author encounters the plain, straightforward, unequivocal testimony of twelve witnesses to the veritable existence of the plates, and not being able to impeach their evidence by reference to character, proceeds to manufacture "another theory" as a basis for their testimony which he divulges at length on pages 74 and 75, entitled the "Glyph" theory; that is: As similar plates to those described by the witness in some respects, are referred to by Professor Rafinesque in his Asiatic Journal for 1832, and others found in Pike county, Illinois, in 1836. "Smith may have obtained through Rigdon (the literary genius behind the screen) one of these glyphs, which resemble so nearly his description of the book he pretended to find on Mormon Hill. For the credit of human character, it is better at any rate to presume this, and that the eleven ignorant witnesses were deceived by appearances, than to conclude that they willfully committed such gross moral perjury before high heaven, as their solemn averments imply."

From this statement we learn that even Mr. Tucker had too much respect for the "moral" character of the witnesses to believe they would knowingly testify of things they knew not, and tries to apologize for their testimony on other grounds, as above stated. This ought to have its due weight with those who consider this author as good authority. But the testimony of the eleven witnesses was published to the world in 1830, and those plates described by Professor Rafinesque were not discovered till 1832, and those of Illinois in 1836. This "Glyph" theory will not answer, and this Mr. T. admits on page 112. He says, in speaking of the origin of the Book of Mormon, "It," the Glyph theory, "can in no wise apply in this case." And last, but not least, he only "presumes" all this "for the credit of human character." When we remember that

Mr. Tucker was a resident of Palmyra in 1830, and had ample opportunity to investigate these events in detail, and that this was the best explanation he was able to give, as the result of his own investigation, what of the explanation of those "from afar?"

Mr. Tucker, however, repudiates his own "Glyph" theory, as we have seen, to make room for the introduction of the "Spaulding Story" theory, as gathered from books that have been published prior to his own; thus manifesting his determination to write a book at all hazards, all this exemplary of "the author's personal knowledge."

In presenting his claims to our consideration of his rendering of the "Spaulding Story" he informs us that his data are "derived from the declarations of Mrs. Spaulding herself, as in 1831 and subsequently." Page 124. Our author anticipates the current date of the story, however, by telling us that, "Sidney Rigdon," who on page 28 and 46, is styled "a mysterious stranger," frequently visited at Joseph's house between the years 1820-27, planning the arrangements to be subsequently developed. That these visits were "the subject of inquiry and conjecture by observers, from whom was withheld all explanation of his identity, or purpose." If these visits were subjects "of inquiry and conjecture" and "all explanation of identity and purpose" was withheld, how does Mr. Tucker know that they were plotting this great delusion during these years? More especially, if, as he says on page 121, "they were mutually sworn" to "secrecy and falsehood." How does he know that this "mysterious stranger" was Rigdon, if "all explanation of his identity was withheld?"

All this is mere "conjecture" with him, as with other "observers." As to Rigdon's whereabouts from the time of his birth till 1827, yes, 1830, the following from the Family Record of Rigdon's father, is quite satisfactory: He "returned to Pittsburgh in the winter of 1821 and '22, and took the care of the First Regular Baptist Church, and there continued to preach until the Baptist Association met in Pittsburgh in 1824. Rev. Williams (at which time they brought some charges against him for not being sound in the faith) brought him to trial, but denied him the liberty of speaking in self-defence, and he declared a non-fellowship with them, and began to preach Campbellism. And he and those that joined with him got the liberty of the Court House; there they held their meetings, and he and his brother-in-law, Mr. Brooks, followed the tanning business till the winter of 1827 and '28, when he (S. Rigdon) moved somewhere into the Western Reserve of Ohio, and there continued to preach till the Latter Day Saints came to that part of the country, when he joined them and continued to be an Elder in that Church (of Latter Day Saints, called Mormons)." This is confirmed by Carvil Rigdon and Peter Boyer, whose characters are attested by five others, two of whom are members of the Old Regular Baptist Church.

But, as Mr. Tucker admits that "the bearing of these circumstances (of the visits of the mysterious stranger to Joseph Smith during the years 1820-27) upon any important question can only be left to reasonable conjecture in reference to the subsequent developments," we need not devote further space to a refutation of this assumption. Page 48.

We are told on page 122 and 123 that Spaulding took his manuscript to a Mr. Patterson of Pittsburgh, a printer, for publication. Patterson did not print it. In 1816 "it was reclaimed by the author, who in that year removed to Amity, Washington county, N. Y., where he died in 1827." But this same Mrs. Spaulding, who supplies the above data, says in her Boston letter, published in the Episcopal Recorder: "At length the manuscript was returned to the author, and soon after we removed to Amity, Washington county, Pa., where Mr. S. deceased in 1816." Mr. Tucker further says, page 123, that "one Sidney Rigdon" was in the office of Patterson in 1816, "and the probable solution of the mystery of the Book of Mormon is found in the fact that he had made a copy of Spaulding's manuscript and communicated information of the existence of the fictitious record to Joseph Smith jun." Also, page 125, "Rigdon was in possession of a copy of this manuscript before he had heard of Smith's money-digging delusions." But we ask, What object had Rigdon in making "a copy" of this Romance ere he became acquainted with Smith and his designs touching the establishment of a church? An answer is unnecessary. Rev. Samuel Williams of Pittsburgh, a bitter opponent of the Latter Day Saints, on the 22nd page of his Mormonism Exposed, says: Rigdon "came to this city and connected himself with the First Regular Baptist Church on the 28th of January, 1822."

Dr. Hulbert, an apostate from the Church of Latter Day Saints, said in 1834, on the 289th page of his History of Mormonism: "Now, as Spaulding's book can nowhere be found, or any thing heard of it after being carried to this establishment, there is the strongest presumption that it remained there in seclusion till about the year 1823 or 1824, at which time Sidney Rigdon located himself in that city."

Rigdon's Family Record says he went to Pittsburgh in the "winter of 1822 and '23." Hence, Rigdon was not in Pittsburgh for eight years after the manuscript was taken to Amity by its author, and therefore had no opportunity of copying it, and Mr. Tucker's "fact" is a false one. Now, while Mrs. Spaulding tells Mr. Tucker that the manuscript was reclaimed by the author in 1816, she informs Dr. Hulbert that she "was unable to tell whether it was ever returned or not from this office." Tucker, page 123; Howe, page 287.

Our reason for introducing the testimony of Howe, is that Mrs. Spaulding's statements are the basis of his data likewise, and no two persons whose writing we have yet consulted render her story alike. And this fact demonstrates that the sources of their information are not to be relied on. And further, shows this Spaulding Story to be a mere conjuration by the enemies of the work of God.

Again, Mr. Tucker says, page 123: "The manuscript remained in the widow's possession until it was missed or stolen from a trunk in Otsego county, where she had removed about the time the Book of Mormon began to be publicly spoken of." Howe says: "She was unable to tell whether it was ever returned or not from this office." In her Boston letter Mrs. Spaulding says:

"The manuscript then (1816) fell into my hands and was carefully preserved. It has frequently been examined by my daughter [who was five years old when the manuscript was written in 1809-10, see Haven's letter in the Quincy (Ill.) Whig, and was twelve years old when she read it in 1816 or 1817], Mrs McKinstery, of Monson, Massachusetts, with whom I now reside, and by other friends. After the Book of Mormon came out a copy of it was taken to New Salem. * * * The excitement became so great in New Salem that the inhabitants had a meeting, and deputed Dr. Philastus Hulbert, to repair to this place and obtain from me the original manuscript of Mr. Spaulding, for the purpose of comparing it with the Mormon Bible, to satisfy their own minds and to prevent their friends from embracing an error so delusive. This was in the year 1834. Dr. Hulbert brought with him an introduction and request for the manuscript signed by Messrs Henry Lake, Aaron Wright and others, with all of whom I was acquainted, as they were my old neighbors when I resided at New Salem."

Can any one tell from the three foregoing statements whether the manuscript was stolen, remained at Patterson's office, or whether it was preserved carefully by Spaulding's widow till 1834. Yet these authors all claim that the widow Spaulding is their authority for the three contradictory stories. How many Spaulding stories are there as origins of the Book of Mormon? Would not any judge, justice, or jury in all the land dismiss such a witness, as the above testimony shows Mrs. Spaulding to be, from the court and reject the evidence as unworthy of credence? It seems so to us.

Now this whole story of Rigdon's copying the manuscript seems to contradict what Mr. Tucker had before said on page 36: "The manuscripts were in the handwriting of one Oliver Cowdery." The reason assigned was "Cowdery had been a school master, and was the only man in the band who could make a copy for the printer."

Thus it seems, the more we investigate this Spaulding Story, as to its giving rise to, or relation to the Book of Mormon, the greater the humbuggery of the story appears. And Mr. Tucker's efforts relative to this, like those of his predecessors, amount to nothing against the work.

On page 55 and 56, in referring to the printing of the Book of Mormon, Mr. Tucker tells us that: "The first and second books of Nephi and same other portions of the forthcoming revelations were printed in sheets; and armed with a copy of these, Smith commenced other preparations for a mission to Pennsylvania, where he had some relatives residing, and where the before-mentioned Rev. Sidney Rigdon was then (1829) residing, or temporarily sojourning." Mr. Tucker is not certain about where Rigdon then resided, but by and by he grows more positive, and on page 76, he tells us: "He was a backsliding clergyman of the Baptist persuasion, and at the period referred to (1830) was the principal preacher of a sort of religious society calling themselves 'Reformers,' or 'Disciples,' at Mentor, Ohio, near Kirtland." While this latter statement seems to harmonize with and support the "Family Record" of Rigdon, it surely contradicts and invalidates the former one, and still further illustrates the utter unreliability of Mr. Tucker's history of the "Rise and Progress of Mormonism."

Again, on page 76: "This man Rigdon now [1830, see page 126] appeared as the first regular Mormon preacher in Palmyra." Now as the Church was organized on the 6th of April, and a conference was held in June, 1830, near Palmyra, and as Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery and others took missions from this conference, and they had all preached at Palmyra, how could Rigdon appear "as the first regular Mormon preacher at Palmyra?" More especially, since Mr. Tucker himself informs us on page 82, that: "In the summer of 1830 the founders of the Mormon Church then remaining at the scene of its birthplace * * * went to Mentor, Ohio, the residence of Rigdon, and of Parley P. Pratt, his friend and co-worker." "Near this place is Kirtland, where there were a few families belonging to Rigdon's congregation. * * * Seventeen of these people, men and women, readily espoused the new revelation, and were immersed by Cowdery in one night."

We learn by these statements, first, that Rigdon resided in Ohio, instead of Pennsylvania in 1829 and '30; second, that instead of preaching the Mormon faith at Palmyra then, he was pastor of a congregation of "Disciples" at Mentor, Ohio; that seventeen of his congregation were baptized by Cowdery, when on his mission west, in the latter part of 1830.

Urim and Thummim.

Bro. Joseph:—A few words more in connection with what I said in reply to Mr. Traugher's attack in a late Herald. In Oliver Cowdery's first letter to W. W. Phelps, which was published at Kirtland, O., 1834, in the Messenger and Advocate, and which fact was known by Joseph at the time, and never contradicted by him, the following words occur: "Day after day I continued, uninterrupted, to write from his mouth (Joseph's) as he translated with the Urim and Thummim, or as the Nephites would have said, 'Interpreters,' the history or record called the Book of Mormon." If I have misrepresented David Whitmer, who has misrepresented Oliver Cowdery? In sec. 9, par. 1, D. & C., it is written: "Now, behold I say unto you, because you delivered up those writings which you had power given you to translate by the means of the Urim and Thummim," &c. Now, who has been publishing for so many years this misrepresentation of Joseph Smith—nay of the Spirit of God? When I was in Ray county, Mo., a few years ago I was told of a certain "peep stone" that was owned by members of the Hiram Page family. See sec. 27, par. 4, D. & C. And I was since informed that David Whitmer had seen divers wonderful things through a "seer stone." Is it the Hiram Page stone? How stands the proposition: 1st, Joseph Smith did not translate by the Urim and Thummim, but by a "seer stone," a "peep stone," and hence was a Seer and Revelator, and head of the Church. 2nd, David Whitmer possesses a "seer" or "peep stone," and has seen and revealed divine things thereby; ergo, David Whitmer is a Seer and Revelator; hence the true head of the Church. And 2nd conclusion, Young Joseph has no "peep stone" or "seer stone," hence can not reveal, translate, &c., and is no Seer and Revelator, hence false head of the Church.

The "interpreters" or "two stones which were fastened into the two rims of a bow" (Mosaiah 12:3) were described to me by David Whitmer, like they were by him to a Chicago Times reporter in August, 1875, as being "shaped like a pair of spectacles, only much larger." And he called them (not it a peep stone), but the Urim and Thummim. And unless some of the Elders (or the printers) have misrepresented the Lord in sec. 15, par. 1, D. & C., Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris, were promised a view of the plates, breast-plate, sword of Laban, and the Urim and Thummim. But then there was no Urim and Thummim—it was only a "peep stone;" Hiram Page had one, his descendants and others have it now. There were several around in New England a few years ago, owned by those out of the Church. Isaiah says something about people that "peep and mutter."—Isaiah 8:19. We have said.

Better Than Silver and Gold.

"SILVER and gold have I none," said Peter to the cripple at the beautiful gate of the temple; "but such as I have give I thee." The helpless man extended his long, thin hand for a penny; but instead, received a perfect cure.

Silver and gold are good in their places; and are not to be despised; but there is something better. They secure to us the comforts and luxuries of life, take away the fear of want and dependence, afford means of culture and refinement, and are an instrument in blessing and saving mankind.

Life is better than silver and gold. "All that a man hath will he give for his life." Money, watches, jewelry, are nothing worth when the steamer is sinking or the flames pursue a man.

Health is better than silver and gold. Disease is bribed at heavy sums. The best skill of nations, and the climates of the world, are tried at any expense.

An unbroken family is better than silver and gold. Often a man would deed away all his property to save the life of a beloved wife or child, while that life is fading away with a rapidity which his wealth can not stay.

Innocence and peace of mind are better than silver and gold. Many a man, after some great sin, would buy back at heavy cost his former state; but sin and Satan laugh at his hoard of gold. They have got his virtue and peace, and will not sell at any price.

Salvation is better than silver and gold. It is the costliest thing in the universe, but it is not for sale. Every drop of Christ's blood is worth more than a globe of gold. Many a man thinks he is willing to give half he is worth to save his soul; but salvation can not be bought. A man with a room full of gold may perish, and another be saved who does not leave two coins to close his eyelids with.

There will be no use of silver and gold in heaven. We read of streets of gold, and crowns of gold, but of no coin to purchase the various and tempting forms of bliss. Friends put no pockets in the shroud, and the white robes of the redeemed will need none, for there is no money wanted to secure admission to the choicest scenes in the heavenly city.

ADIEU.

Adieu to honor, wealth and fame,
And every worldly pleasure;
I bid farewell to my good name,
For to obey my Savior.

I covet not that high esteem
To which I did aspire;
My Savior's love shall be my theme;
I care for nothing higher.

Yes, if I could advance his praise,
By works of my performing,
Among the Saints of Latter Days,
I would be called a "Mormon."

Although they commonly are call'd
A poor deluded people;
Their prophets, priests, and teachers, all
Offscourings of the rabble.

And were not all the Saints of old
Derided by opposers
Of light, and truth, which did unfold
From Adam down to Moses?

Yes, all the holy prophets were,
With Christ and his apostles,
Accounted as these "Mormons" are False prophets and imposters.

But truth is strong, and will prevail;
For it proceeds from heaven;
It always did, and ever shall,
By inspiration given.

And when it doth their systems rub,
Proud men become uneasy,
Call the Master, Beelzebub,
And all his servants crazy.

Thus all, in every age, who live
Godly, in Christ the Savior,
Such base calumny shall receive
From those they can not favor.

Nor think as they would have them think,
Nor do as they are doing;
And blunder with them on the brink
Of everlasting ruin.

Men still love darkness more than light,
Because their deeds are evil;
And will declare that wrong is right,
Though it were from the devil.

That mid-night, the old carnal mind,
Remains as dark as ever;
And all the blind that lead the blind
Fall in the ditch together.

Oh! how they earnestly contend,
And still sink in the mire!
Their broken systems can not mend
Till purified by fire.

Letter from Elder B. V. Springer.

Editors Herald:—As I am in receipt of numerous letters from relatives and friends who desire to reclaim me from the great error that I have imbibed in the acceptance of Mormonism, I desire to offer a few thoughts.

While examining some of the arguments offered in some of those letters with a view to my reconstruction, I hope, although I may not be able to convince the writers of the correctness of my position, it will at least relieve their minds of all dubiety as to my confidence in it.

"My dear B., do consider the slippery ground you stand on and come to the front; renounce Joe. Smith and his doctrine and take the Bible and the Bible alone, and with your talent you may be the means of saving many sinners and thus add many stars to your crown. O, consider the groundless, proofless, sandy foundation on which you stand. Apostles, prophets, and spiritual gifts were given to establish Christ's Church and were to cease when the twelve apostles died, as you know, or ought to know."

Well, well, at the risk of being considered the fool of the family, I must say that I was not aware that such were the facts. "Bible and Bible alone is good," and after a careful investigation of your theory, as compared with the Bible, I think I discover a vein of consistency, in that you are willing to let alone the greater part of its (the Bible's) teaching. Such as may, by a great amount of twisting, be so fashioned as to fit your pet theory is accepted, the remainder (about seven-eighths) is laid aside as being inapplicable, to be deified as a sacred relic of the past: thus, to my mind, representing the Almighty as being partial, and full of notions, adapting himself to circumstances; and worst of all, making a grand failure of the plan of salvation, finding by experimenting a few years that the plan would not work, and leaving it then for the wisdom of man to improve upon and give poor humanity a better plan. As a result of their wisdom, we are gravely told that there is no way of demonstrating the truth of the gospel now; no more apostles, no prophets, no revelation, no spiritual gifts—that was tried and would not work. No, no, Paul said prophecies should fail, tongues cease, knowledge vanish away, and Paul was inspired when he said it; and the church was enjoying all the blessings, and yet Paul says, "We only know in part and prophecy in part, but when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." And so when the apostles died the spiritual gifts died with them, and thus the perfect had come; the part they had was done away, and they became perfect—idiots. "O," say these reconstructors, "all you have to do now is come to Jesus via. the mourners' bench; get the kingdom in your hearts; join some Orthodox church; be immersed, poured or sprinkled, as you please; believe what your preacher says; accept the Bible as interpreted by them, and above all pay your preacher; and when you die, your immaterial soul will soar away beyond the bounds of time and space, there to sing and shout and flap your immaterial wings, before a topless throne, and bask in the smiles of him whose centre is everywhere and circumference nowhere—and—whew; now that we have come back to terra firma we breathe easier, while we read an extract from letter number two. "Don't believe in mourner's bench religion." Don't, eh! Belong to the Christian Church? Ah, yes, let me see:—Once upon a time, in the Old Dominion State, some wise and pious men assembled themselves together for the purpose of improving upon the oft improved plan of salvation. Some of those men were of the Presbyterian faith and others of the Baptist faith, and they did mutually agree that both of these systems were false; and after mature deliberation, it was resolved to form a new church, which was to contain all the elements necessary to constitute it the body of Christ; and thus was born into the world the kingdom of God, of a Presbyterian father from whom it inherited the communion; and from its Baptist mother the mode of baptism; and from both the salary grab. Cheering thought, that after the long night of darkness, centuries of spiritual blindness, lo, the true Church of Christ appears evolved out of two limbs of a tree known as confusion, and may be summed up thus, a bundle of inconsistencies based on an if!

Next: "Don't, my dear B., depend on the testimony of frail man. You know that you have nothing but Joe Smith's bare word for all his pretended revelations, and I have heard a great many men say that he was a bad man and an impostor," etc. Very likely. It is also recorded in the Bible that men said the same of Paul, that he was a blasphemer, a setter up of strange gods; taught new and false doctrines; for which he was whipped, imprisoned, had to act the part of a gladiator at Ephesus, and was finally killed. Jesus also was reviled, accused of being a wine bibber, a glutton, a Sabbath breaker, a blasphemer, etc. What does all this prove? That they were guilty? Scarcely, you will say, and so say I. But I notice that the reliability of men's testimony depends altogether upon the side the hearer is on. All that is said in Smith's favor is a lie, while all that is said against him is golden truth.

These arguments remind me of the story of the poor Hibernian who was arraigned before a court of justice on the charge of stealing a pig. Three men swore positively that they saw the prisoner steal a pig. Paddy in his defence filed his answer thus: "Bad luck to yer American laws intirely. Here is three spalpeens shware they see me shtale the pig, and I can bring twinty honesth men that will shware they didn't see me shtale him."

And further, if the Bible can be depended on, there was a means provided in the gospel by which it might be tested as to whether it was true, or false. Jesus told the people that if they would do the Father's will they should know of the doctrine, and men were enabled to testify understandingly. The manifestation of the Spirit was given to every man. (See John 7:17; Mark 16:16, 17; 1 Cor. 12; Jas. 5; John 15:19. The same test holds good now. And Joseph Smith put it entirely beyond his power to practice deception. He claimed simply a restoration of the primitive gospel, not a new gospel. And upon the face of this claim stood out in bold relief the idea that if it is the primitive gospel, it carries the element within it to demonstrate its truth. Thousands have obeyed it and attest the divinity of it. So much for Smith's word. And reasoning from analogy, if the charges against him prove anything, they prove the divinity of his mission.

We will enquire into the object had in view in establishing the church of Christ anciently. We read: "Wherefore he saith when he ascended upon high, he led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men." What were they? "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." What for? "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." And why? "That we be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about by every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ, from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."—Eph. 4.

Now let us reason a little. "For the perfecting of the saints." Query: Were there no saints to be perfected after the first century? If so, what means all this stuff about these all being done away? "For the work of the ministry." Was there no longer a need for the ministry of Christ after the death of the twelve apostles? If so, what do the ministers of the present day mean? Was there no necessity for the building up of the church, or body of Christ after the apostles' day? If so, what mean all this parade and furore, church organizations, buildings, etc?

We sum up thus: This order things was given for the purpose stated, i. e., for the perfecting of the saints as individual members; for the work of the ministry, involving the question of divine authority; and for the building up of the church. And again, we ask if all these things were specialities what is there left for us; pray? "Bible and Bible alone," indeed. Again, where do you get the doctrine of repentance, baptism, the Lord's supper, elders, evangelists, teachers, deacons, etc? "Bible," Eh! Where? Eph. 4, it says, "He gave some evangelists, pastors and teachers."

True, but how can you be so inconsistent as to make that claim in the same breath that you claim that these were specialities confined to the apostles' day; and accuse me of swallowing Joe Smith raw; because I referred to the same chapter for evidence in favor of the position I occupy. Another question, my dear M., Where do your ministers get their authority to preach, baptize, administer the sacrament, ordain, etc?

"Why, my dear B., don't you know that Jesus said, 'Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, he that believeth not shall be damned.'"

Yes, I understand all that. But you forget that the individuals commissioned on that occasion were your specialities, and are dead. Also, Jesus said to these individuals at the same time, that "These signs shall follow them that believe." Next.

"But, dear B., you misunderstand me. If you will read all the connecting paragraphs, you will see that all the signs spoken of in Mark 16, were to the unbelieving disciples."

"Ah! indeed. Now light begins to dawn. These signs were not to follow the believer, but the unbelievers; those of whom it is said shall be damned. They to have power to cast out devils in the name of Christ, to take up serpents, drink poison, lay hands on the sick and they should recover! Well, that out Herods Herod. Such arguments ought to reconstruct a cast iron man.

But more about the authority. If you insist in getting it from the great commission referred to, then your ministers are apostles, and prophets, evangelists, etc. "Modestly assumed other names," Eh! Yes, I should think they had. Very modest indeed. Acting in the capacity of a fourth corporal, with a general's commission in their pockets. Bro. Jones, pass the hat.

"Now, my dear B., I do not ask you to join our church. I know you are honest, and so far as you are individually concerned, all will be well with you." This is encouraging, truly. Can I be saved on this "groundless, proofless, sandy foundation?" And if so, can others be saved by adhering to my teachings, by stepping on the same "groundless, proofless, sandy foundation." O, consistency, what a jewel thou art!

In conclusion, I have this to say to all interested, that I am now on the down hill side of life, all the best years of my manhood have been given to preaching this glorious gospel of truth. My earthly substance has melted away; meantime, I have no foot of earth to call my own, discarded by relatives, scoffed at by the self-righteous meteors; have drank the cup of sorrow to its very dregs, yet I feel "Nearer my God to thee." Thou hast not, nor will not forsake me. And while I have powers of body and mind, while reason retains her throne, I will by God's help continue to ring into the ears of this generation my testimony of the truth of the gospel as restored in this dispensation; that the divinity of the calling of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon are inseparably connected with the restoration of the gospel, and indispensibly necessary to its completeness in the fulfilment of the Scriptures. Therefore, with the pure testimony in the spirit of the Master, and backed by the faith and prayers of the dear Saints who know me best, I go satchel in hand, again to face the world, the flesh and the devil, singing as I go, "Babylon trembles for fear of her loss," and

When death gives intimation
That my last hour is nigh,
With placid resignation,
I'll lay me down to die;
Fond hope my bosom cheering,
That on fair Zion's shore
I'll meet with all earth's loved ones,
Where parting is no more.

MOORFIELD, Ind., January 20th, 1880.

Peace.

BETIMES in this life we have momentary seasons of peace, rest, relief, comfort and pleasing prospects to encourage us on, and to strengthen us to bear this burden of life to the weary end. It is through the goodness of God that these seasons are allowed us; for, were it not for them, any of us would soon faint and sink down in death. But the race set before us is unto a lasting peace, when wars shall cease, when strife shall no longer rage.

"We are traveling homeward through changes and gloom;
To a kingdom where pleasures unchangably bloom."

Weak ones, bear on, for we are near the close of our sufferings. Truly these are the times (years) of the restitution of all things. The gospel is restored. The land where David dwelt now "yields her increase." (See 85th Psalm). Strong ones, be guarded, your strength is of the Lord. We will gain immortal peace if we endure. Lord, aid us to abide.

INFERIOR.

Whatever talent you may possess, the Divine Master says, "Occupy till I come.

As long as we have corruptible flesh, we must expect thorns in the flesh.

When you think of the grave, remember you are only going where Jesus has been.

However dark the night of affliction may be, light is sown for thee, and will eventually spring up.

Liberality and Duty.

THIS is a professedly liberal age. I say professedly, because I do not think it is the will of man to be so, but it is the purpose of the Almighty. He is carrying out his designs, establishing his truth and laying the foundation for his glorious kingdom on the earth, and for this purpose he is restraining the wrath of man. I rejoice that the spirit of liberality reigns whether man is willing or not. Was not this the case, the world would now be bound fast in the chains of Paganism, Popery, or some other equally tyrannical system; but to-day, thank God, the ruling principle is liberality of sentiment, and this brings liberty of action.

All men, in this land at least, have the God-given right to think for themselves, and generally the privilege to act for themselves; but the history of the past fifty years presents too many instances when this right has been denied, and I am not sure that this liberality is so deeply rooted in the hearts of men, as many of its professed admirers would have us believe. As witness the undermining and covert opposition by pious priests, and laymen too, to anything in the name of "Mormonism," their willingness to brand anything that bears that name with the names of "imposture," "fanaticism," etc. In the mouths of such men liberality is only a name; they dare not honestly represent it lest their hearers and readers should become enamored of it, and their craft be endangered thereby.

But I want to speak of liberality in the Church. I am fully aware of the possibility of even the sons of light being illiberal; not because we wish to be, but because of our short-sightedness, and a blind zeal that may overcloud even our eyes. It is well we should guard against this, and seek to extend the same generosity to our fellow-workers who, like ourselves, are only fallible beings. If we honestly err, we may safely conclude they may be equally honest in their errors; and, if they differ from us in opinion, they have a right so to differ, and are not infringing upon any right of ours in their difference of thought. We, too, differ from them, and the right we claim for ourselves we must concede to others; this is the spirit of the gospel.

But we claim that God has spoken to man and revealed the fullness of the everlasting gospel; has called and ordained men to preach that gospel; has given revelations showing the order of his Church to be established, and has made promises to man. And in the law of that Church we find it written:

"Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues."—D. & C. 42:16.

"The Elders, Priests and Teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings as they shall be directed by the Spirit; and the Spirit shall be given unto you, and if ye receive not the Spirit, ye shall not teach."—D. & C. 42:5.

"Verily, I say unto you, that which is governed by law is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willeth to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, can not be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice or judgment, therefore it must remain filthy still."—D. & C. 85:8.

In section 41:1, 2, the Lord tells the elders of his Church "Ye shall see that my law is kept." We claim that the Church of God is one of order, but without law there could be no order. What is the object of God in setting up his Church? One object was to correct error, and place mankind in the way that leads to eternal life. This could only be done upon the principles of the gospel; hence the gospel was revealed before the organizing of his Church.

As we have stated men were ordained to declare the gospel and promises of God to man. No man was compelled to come into the church, nor were any compelled to receive an ordination. These things were voluntary. God made choice of such, as his servants, and they willingly yielded to his choice; and, in that act, accepted the Church with all its precepts, promises, laws and ordinances, and agreed to administer in their several callings in harmony with the law, promises, ordinances, or precepts of the Church. God has pledged that inasmuch as they do this, he will accept and acknowledge their works; but forbids them to teach anything contrary to those things which he has revealed. And to preserve them from error in this matter he has declared, "Unless ye have the Spirit ye shall not teach."

Now, having voluntarily accepted this responsibility, are we at liberty to teach, either orally, or by the pen, any doctrines, laws, ordinances, or promises that are not warranted in God's word? We deny this liberty to the world, i.e. we say that in doing so they prove that God has not sent them, or they are perverting the law of God, and bringing themselves under condemnation. If this is true in their case, and we adopt their rule, is it not equally applicable to us? We think so. If any man, so called and ordained to this sacred calling, is found teaching contrary to the accepted laws and revelations of God, is it not in the province of the Church to call him to order, and remonstrate with him? And, in doing so, shall that Church be charged with instituting or reviving the inquisition, and be branded with the charge of desiring to "gag" its members and playing the part of Calvin toward Servetus? Is it reasonable for such a man to raise the cry of martyrdom, simply because he is called to account for teaching contrary to the accepted doctrine of the Church? Does it not show a desire to manifest himself a heromartyr, and excite the sympathies of the people in his favor against imaginary wrongs? Would it not be more manly, if he can not accept these doctrines, to do, as another has done, give in his resignation and tell the Church he can not be its servant? Or is the Church to be silent, and blind to her interests, and allow herself to be gagged and fed with such food as such men may choose to cram her with? If the latter is to be the case, I beg to state that I am no party to the degradation. Once in her history we have seen this sad spectacle. The Church being stripped of her glorious apparel, her shame exposed to the world, and her beautiful symmetry marred and smeared with filth and pollution, and her vitality destroyed by poison in the hands of those who should have fostered and protected her. And we bear her shame to-day! Shall we stand by and see the damning spectacle repeated, because forsooth, the hue and cry of the "inquisition," "Servitus burned at the stake," or "the gag law," is lustily shouted in our ears?

While I, for one, will never be a party to the wronging, or oppressing, or gagging any man, I will not be a party to see the Church doctrines and laws perverted by any man, be his office and calling whatever it may be.

I am not taking it for granted that it is a settled fact that a wrong has been done by any one; that is left for the Church to determine, through the means appointed; but I do object to the idea that we must permit men, who wear the sacred garb of the holy priesthood, to teach what they please under the plea of liberality. If any man has erred honestly, I can sympathise with him and pray for him, but I have no right to wink at the error and let it pass unreprieved. In doing so I should be a traitor to the cause I have espoused, and no friend to the erring one. When that error has been discovered and forsaken, then the hand of mercy should be extended and full forgiveness be pronounced. We are all liable to err, and no one has any room to rejoice over his fellows.

The revelations which I have referred to, show most unmistakably the binding nature of God's law, and the absolute necessity of our abiding in the same. It is made obligatory upon the elders to see that the law of God is kept, and that law (in part) is that the elders etc, shall teach the principles of the gospel, "as revealed in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants." We are not ordained to teach our opinions, either by pen or tongue, unless we have adopted these principles as our opinions, and if we have not, we have no right to teach at all. That we do err is evident many times, but the greatest evil is persistency in error. We are to be willing to be corrected; nor should we brand every man as our foe because he undertakes to correct us. Let us bear with each other, not seek to crush but to save; and, while we are jealous for the purity and good name of the Church, let us be careful lest we injure any and drive them from the pale of the Church by unwise and harsh treatment. Let us be merciful as we hope for mercy.

May every wrong be righted;
May every eye be clear,
And every heart united,
In love and mercy here.

Is the prayer of CHARLES DERRY.
FAMERSVILLE, Neb., August 19th, 1879.

Capturing a Spirit.

The following letter appears in the London Times of January 12:

SIR: We think the following facts will be interesting to the readers of the Times: Some time ago, being desirous of investigating the truths of so-called Spiritualism, we were advised by an eminent Spiritualist, to attend the seances held at No. 38 Great Russel street (British National Association of Spiritualists). We were assured that the seances conducted at that Association were the most genuine in England, and under strict test conditions. On our first visit, the medium being tied by one of us with great care, no manifestations followed. At the second visit (January 2) one of us again tied the medium, but under the directions of the Chairman, who is officially connected with the institution. A "spirit" soon appeared, which we were told was "Marie," and was represented to be that of a dead child twelve years of age. She was dressed in white, her face covered with a veil, and her arms and feet bare. We were surprised to distinguish the appearance of a corset under the white robes, and her voice and general appearance gave us the idea that it was the medium herself,—Mrs. Corner (nee Florie Cook). On the third visit, January 9, we were accompanied by a friend, Mr. John C. Fell, engineer, and editor of a scientific journal, of No. 23 Rood-lane, E. C., with his wife. The "spirit Marie" again appeared, and rendered our former suspicions almost certain by the audible sound of undressing within the curtain, and by the "unspiritual" levity of her behavior and conversation. One of us by a sudden rush intercepted and gently held "the spirit," while another dashed into the curtains, and, drawing them aside, displayed the medium's empty chair with the knot slipped, her dress, stockings, and boots, and other discarded garments. There was sufficient light from a half-obscured candle for the captured "spirit" and all the above objects to be plainly seen, which latter were handed around for inspection and examined by those present. After a few minutes—to cover the confusion, we presume—the candle was extinguished by the officer present, and we adjourned to the lower room. All present, except the officers, one of whom took refuge in abuse, entirely agreed with us, and thanked us for exposing the deception. Now, sir, we leave general conclusions on Spiritualism to others, but what we do claim to have proved is that in the first society of Spiritualists in England, one of its best mediums has been detected in personating the spirit herself. Not wishing to further occupy your valuable space, we shall be happy to give fuller information to any one interested in the cause of truth.

Indian and Mound-builders' Relics.

THERE has recently been found in the vicinity of Kalamazoo a very large number of interesting relics of Indian occupation and workmanship, and also those silent yet eloquent mementoes of a still older race, the pre historic people,—Mound-builders, or whatever they were. In a locality some three miles north of the big village on the west bank of the Kalamazoo, hundreds of arrow heads of various sizes, pipes of better than usual Indian skill, very strikingly carved, pieces of broken pottery, and other evidences of an old village exist. The number of arrows found within certain prescribed limits would rather tend to prove that it may have been also a battlefield. Certain stone hatchets have been found there, and quite a number of strange, curiously shaped stones almost flat and round, some with holes in them have been picked up, supposed to have been used in gaming, of which the Lo-family were so passionately fond. On the opposite side of the river up and down the stream, on the bluffs, are many evidences that this portion of the state was a favorite resort of the red man in those times when he was perhaps more like the portraiture which the novelist Cooper has made of him, and as the poet delights to paint him. We have three or four experts in looking up Indian relics, some of whom display quite wonderful knowledge of the subject being able just from the appearance of the ground and the character of the grass and vegetation to locate a "find." The most interesting history of the Mound-builder, or pre-historic race, that has been reported to us, is a stone pavement, discovered while building the Kalamazoo division of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway, about three miles south of Kalamazoo. In building the track across the low bottom land near Kilgore's, a thick cobble-stone roadway, several feet thick, was found, which seemed to lead across the swamp from the spur of one of the hills. If investigation should prove that there was, as reported, a well-cemented, deeply laid road, it shows a greater degree of civilization than has been attributed to the Mound-builders within the territory embraced by the lower peninsula.—*Allegan (Mich.) ### A Living Epistle.

A YOUNG man joined one of our churches recently, whose experience is worth telling. He was the son of pious parents. They talked with him, prayed with him, made him read the Bible and go to church. But every effort and influence seemed only to harden his heart. In early manhood he became an avowed sceptic, and repelled with rudeness every attempt to talk with him about his soul. He was intelligent and thoughtful, however, and hence, though he would not read the Bible, God sent him a living epistle that he was compelled to study, and that brought him to Christ.

In the family there was a relative, a young lady, who had been so very fretful and quick-tempered that she made all around her unhappy. She was absent, at school, for some months. When she came back she was so changed that all who knew her wondered and rejoiced. She was patient, cheerful, kind, unselfish, charitable. Her lips distilled honey instead of gall. Her presence brought sunshine instead of clouds. The young man, after watching her closely for a long time, and becoming satisfied that the change was radical, asked what had caused it. She told him she had become a Christian.

It was not any power of her own, but the power of God received by faith. "Well," said he, "I don't believe that God had anything to do with it, though she imagines that he did; yet I would like to be as amiable as she is, and I mean to be." He tried to control his temper. He formed resolutions. He kept, as he thought, a most vigilant watch over himself. But it seemed to do no good. He was constantly surprised and overcome. Whenever he failed, he would turn and study again that living epistle: "How is it that she, who has not my native strength of character, whom I have hitherto regarded as a weak woman—how is it that she does what I can not do? She must have help. It must be as she says—a power not her own. I will seek that power." He went into his chamber and prayed to the God whose very existence he had denied. He prayed earnestly, and God heard him. Light dawned upon him, a light from heaven, in whose radiance he has walked and rejoiced for many weeks.

Now, if every Christian was a living epistle would not more of such sceptics be converted? The world is full of men and women who will not read Paul's epistles. But if you and I illustrate from day to day what is taught in those epistles; if we show that our religion makes us better and happier, they will be compelled to read. And God's Spirit will use the teachings of the living epistles to change darkness into light. The great value of a living epistle is that men can not shut the book, and refuse to know what is in it. The book of a true life is not only ever open before men, but its letters are luminous. Says Christ, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." This is the way to save the world; not only by preaching sermons, scattering tracts, or distributing Bibles, but by illustrating, in holy and loving lives, the power of the Gospel.

The Sufferings and Genius of the Jews.

THAT wonderful woman, George Eliot, says: "If there are ranks in suffering, Israel takes precedence of all the nations; if the duration of sorrows and the patience with which they have been borne ennobles, the Jews are among the aristocracy of every land; if a literature is called rich in the possession of a few classic tragedies, what shall we say of a national tragedy lasting for fifteen hundred years, in which the poets and the actors were also the heroes?"

The author of "Daniel Deronda" discusses the history, suffering and genius of the Jewish people at very great length through Mordecai, the Jew, and we transfer to these columns a few of the thoughts of this gifted writer upon a subject concerning which there exists so much prejudice without knowledge. It having been said by one of her characters to another, that the Jews have "no development in them," and that they are "the type of obstinate adherence to the superannuated," Mordecai resents the imputation and is made to say:

"This is false. Let their history be known and examined; let the seed be sifted, let its beginning be traced to the weed of the wilderness—the more glorious will be the energy that transformed it. Where else is there a nation of whom it may be as truly said that their religion and law and moral life mingled as the stream of blood in the heart and made one growth—where else a people who kept and enlarged their spiritual stores at the very time they were hunted with a hatred as fierce as the forest fires that chase the wild beast from his covert. * * * * *

"Hooted and scared like an unowned dog, the Hebrew made himself envied for his wealth and wisdom, and was bled of them to fill the bath of Gentile luxury; he absorbed knowledge; he diffused it; his dispersed race was a new Phoenicia working the mines of Greece and carrying their products to the world. The native spirit of our tradition was not to stand still, but to use records as a seed, and draw out the compressed virtues of law and prophecy; and while the Gentile who had said, "What is yours is ours, and no longer yours," was reading the letter of law as a dark inscription, or was turning its parchments into shoe soles for an army rabid with lust and cruelty, our masters were still enlarging and illuminating with fresh-fed interpretation. But the dispersion was wide, the yoke of oppression was a spiked torture as well as a load; the exile was forced afar among brutish people. * * * What wonder that multitudes of our people are ignorant, narrow, superstitious?

"What wonder? The night is unto them that they have no vision; in their darkness they are unable to divine; the sun is gone down over the prophets, and the day is dark above them; their observances are as nameless relics. But which among the chief of the Gentile nations has not an ignorant multitude? They scorn our people's ignorant observance; but the most accursed ignorance is that which has no observance, sunk to the cunning greed of the fox, to which all law is no more than a trap or the cry of a worrying hound. * * * In the multitudes of the ignorant on three continents who observe our rites and make the confession of the divine unity, the soul of Judaism is not dead. Revive the organic center; let the unity of Israel which has made the growth and form of its religion be an outward reality. Looking towards a land and a polity, our dispersed people in all the lands of the earth may share the dignity of a national life which has a voice among the people of the east and the west—which will plant the wisdom and skill of our race so that it may be as of old, a medium of transmission and understanding."

"I say that the effect of our separateness will not be completed and have its highest transformation unless our race takes on again the character of a nationality. That is the fulfillment of the religious trust that moulded them into a people, whose life has made half the inspiration of the world. What is to me that the ten tribes are lost untraceably, or that multitudes of the children of Judah have mixed themselves with the Gentile populations as a river with rivers? Behold our people still! Their skirts spread afar; they are torn and soiled and trodden; but there is a jeweled breastplate. Let the wealthy men, the monarchs of commerce, the learned in all knowledge, the skilled in all arts, the speakers, the political counsellors, who carry in their veins the Hebrew blood which has maintained its vigor in all climates, and the pliancy of Hebrew genius for which difficulty means new device—let them say, we will lift up a standard, we will unite in labor hard but glorious, like that of Moses and Ezra, a labor which shall be worthy fruit of the long anguish whereby our fathers maintained their separateness, refusing the ease of falsehood. They have wealth enough to redeem the soil from debauched and paupered conquerors; they have the skill of the statesmen to devise, the tongue of the orator to persuade. And is there no prophet or poet among us to make the ears of Christian Europe tingle with shame at the hideous obloquy of Christian strife which the Turk gazes at as at the fighting of beasts to which he has lent an arena? There is a store of wisdom among us to found a new Jewish polity, grand, simple, just, like the old—a republic where there is equality of protection, an equality which shone like a star on the forehead of our ancient community, and gave it more than the brightness of western freedom amidst the despotisms of the east."—Sci.

STRONG ARGUMENTS.

AN extract from a letter written by a man living about Egremont, Ontario, to Bro. Neil Clark, at Boston Mills, the same province, states that two or three of the Elders of the Latter Day Saints were preaching at Egremont and creating some excitement when they were threatened to be mobbed, and chased away by a pelting with rotten eggs. The writer says: "Such doings would convince me that the said Elders had the best of it; and that it must be a weak cause that required such nasty arguments to sustain it."

This occurred in Ontario, the upper province of Canada, in the Queen's dominions of fair play and free speech. The man who makes this remark is not a member of the Church; but he is evidently impressed with the force of the argument resorted to to silence the Elders.

And here is the counterpart of the occurrence: At Kamas, Utah, while Bro. Derry was there upon a late occasion he writes that he succeeded in exciting some opposition; the strongest argument presented being in the shape of an ox tethered to the school house door.

Let us see, the ox is the emblem of honest labor; he is also the type of patience in toil, a patience better than that of the ass, for patient forbearance is ever better than stolid endurance; he is also a fair type of meekness under abuse; and when a Roman lover would praise his lady's eyes he would call her Juno-eyed, and Juno was called the Ox-eyed Juno. Surely that rascal "built better than he knew" when he tied that ox to the school house door.

Again, the bulls of Bashan roared, and the bulls of Spain are noted for their fearless courage; even the bulls of the buffalo herds will fight an enemy in honest warfare; but the defenders of the many-wived principle like the emasculated ox are tethered in their weak obedience to an authority that says to them, "Don't you discuss with these Josephites. Let them alone." And are compelled to resort to discreditable methods to evade what they can not openly defeat.

We have been requested to publish the Charter of the Church granted by Congress; it having been stated to an Elder in the East that unless a church has such charter it can not hold property. We are not aware that Congress granted church charters. There was a time when in Illinois special charters were granted to different organizations by the Legislature; but so strong an opposition was raised to such special class legislation that a general incorporation law was adopted, and under this law the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was incorporated in 1873. By this act of incorporation the Church became entitled to hold property; and wherever "six or more" persons in good standing in the Church, one of whom is an Elder, Priest, Teacher or Deacon, are organized into a branch, there is a church; and that church may, with or without filing a copy of the Articles of Incorporation in the proper court of record in the county where said branch is, hold property in the name of the church, and for the use of the members of said branch.

Congress grants no charters to churches. If it did, then it could properly prescribe and prescribe articles of faith and forms of religious worship; and thus make laws interfering with the liberty of conscience.

We are growing anxious about the enlargement of the HERALD to a weekly issue. One of the first steps is being bravely taken by the Saints almost everywhere. Our list is beginning to boom; almost every day bringing in its quota of new and old subscribers; and we begin to feel that the hoped for goal is almost reached. Another step that we are solicitous should be taken soon is the procuring a book press. The one we have will answer for some years to print the HERALD on, but it is not suited to our book work. We are now out of the Inspired Translation and must reprint; the rapid sale of the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants will soon demand another edition; and the history now in hand will also require to be done by us. A synopsis and a History of the Priesthood are both needed and are provided for by resolution—but press builders can not melt down resolutions and mould press materials out of them. Two brethren have placed one hundred dollars each at our disposal for the purchase of a press, and two sisters have sent five or ten dollars each for the same purpose, in answer to our special providence. We somehow feel as if the prayer would yet be answered to the full; or so nearly so that the object desired will come easily within the reach of the office.

It is not the object to make money out of the office of publication. If it were, or if that is the object of publishing the HERALD and other works, it is a bad investment. But the object is to spread the gospel; defend the faith; build up and establish the Saints; create and maintain a good healthy moral prestige in behalf of the work, both among the Saints and those of the outside world who may come within our influence. If the press is the grand palladium of the liberties of the people, we want a good one. If the press be the lever with which to overturn and overturn, let us have a good one and strong one; so tell us speedily what you will do. Only two of the brother's "ten" have answered. Who will rescue it from failure!

PROF. J. F. FARGO, of Bloomington, professor of voice culture and musical elocution, teaching at Bloomington, Illinois, is treating persons for the loss of voice quite successfully. His method avoids drugs, but includes temperate living; and the active exercise of the will power in using the vocal organs in ways quite unusual with most sick people; and the right use of the respiratory organs, the breathing machinery. He writes us: "When will doctors learn that the God given sunlight and pure air if properly employed are a thousands times more efficacious as medical agents, than are their pills and powders?"

The method of inhaling the breath as taught by him ought to be known and practiced by every teacher in our public schools, and become widely spread and known. It might possibly round out and fill up some wasp-like and degenerate waists, but vital lung power, and consequent vigor of the "blood" which the Scriptures say is the "life of man," would be largely increased. We believe it to be a fact as stated by Prof. Fargo, that very few people know how to breathe; "what is worth doing at all, is worth doing well."

If Prof. Fargo were a quack dealer in patent nostrums we should not write a word in his favor, but he who teaches air, sunlight, and right breathing, is our brother worker, and we shall help him all we can to "throw physic to the dogs."

We have tried the Professor's method nearly a year, and have during the time undoubtedly used several hogsheads more of air, than for the same time in any previous year.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Saints will please remember that communications, orders, and letters on Herald Office matters should be addressed and sent to Joseph Smith, Box 50, Plano, Kendall county, Illinois. We specially request that all moneys intended for church uses, and the Bishopric be sent to Israel L. Rogers, Sandwich, Ill., or to H. A. Stebbins, Box 50, Plano. Write all business matters, orders for HERALD or books, on separate pieces of paper, and not in the body, nor on the back of articles, contributions, or letters for the HERALD, HOPE, or ADVOCATE. It is an annoyance, and subjects the loss of the letter to the columns of the paper. Only the other day, we were obliged to read to the end of four pages of closely written foolscap paper to find out what was wanted for a dollar bill enclosed in the letter. Don't do like that, the money directions go into the secretary's hands, the literary matter to ours, personally.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt has been at work lately in the city of Chicago, having gone there January 8th, to endeavor to get an opening for preaching there; with the advice and counsel of Bro. Rogers and others. He succeeded in getting a small hall at No. 213, West Madison street, and has since that time been doing all that he could. He writes that it seems necessary to get into some other and different sort of building, as the citizens of Chicago rate the character of religion as they do exhibitions, the more respectable the place, the better the religion. The interest has increased somewhat, and he hopes favorably. Bro. Forscutt has also struck a blow or two through the press, the Times having given an insertion to an article from his pen in a late issue, that will be reproduced in the Salt Lake Tribune.

Bro. Thomas W. Smith was at Jonesport, Maine, at last advices, February 8th, and was doing good work there. A brother wrote quite commendatory of the labors of Bro. Smith but a short time since.

Bro. L. J. Eskridge, of Webster, Mississippi, desires that the Saints remember him and his family, his wife especially. She has long been afflicted.

Bro. Charles Wicks was at last advices still driving the gospel plow at and in the vicinity of Benton Harbor, Michigan. He had several openings before him. He had been having a sharp turn with a Methodist preacher, Weaver by name.

Sister Nannie A. Gifford, of the Oak Island Branch, Texas, writes encouragingly of the faith and zeal of the Saints there. They meet in a brush arbor, and they feel that the Lord has favored them in giving them such weather on Sundays that but two or three days during the past six months have been so bad as to prevent holding meetings and Sunday School.

In our review of an article in the Deseret Evening News, we quoted a reference made to H. P. Brown, who it was stated was cut off many years ago, for teaching false doctrine. Bro. H. P. Brown, of Oaklands, California, calls our attention to the article, in a letter which we publish in this issue; and we hasten to make amends for our careless quotation. The reference in the News was to H. P. Brown, but the real person cut off was Hiram Brown, and the News should have so stated. The notice was published in the Times and Seasons, February 1st, 1844, and did not have reference to Bro. H. P. Brown, as will be seen from his letter. We were at an early day informed that Bro. H. P. was not the Hiram Brown of that notice, and therefore did not think of him in connection with it when we saw, and quoted the reference to it in the News.

Bro. W. H. Kelley wants numbers 6 and 7 of volume 14 (1868) of HERALD. Any one having these numbers to spare will confer a favor upon Bro. Kelley by sending them to him at Coldwater, Michigan, and he will pay for them to the satisfaction of the sender.

Bro. E. Penrod, writing from Elko, Nevada, states that on January 24th, 6 o'clock a.m., the mercury indicated 20 degrees below zero in Elko, and at the mines seventy-five miles distant 20 degrees colder.

Sr. M. Parks writes from Santa Rosa, California, that were it not for the HERALD they would be lonely there; for Bro. Root, nearly eighty years of age, can only get to town to preach occasionally. He is in his seventy ninth-year.

Bro. J. F. McDowell, at Amanda, Butler county, Ohio, writes cheerfully of the situation there, and of the good that seems to have been done by his coming, for people are looking at the doctrine, and some of them doing so with favor for its evident truths. One had been baptized when he wrote, February 2d.

Bro. W. F. Clark, Pre-emption, Illinois, teaches his neighbors, as he has opportunity, concerning the gospel. He and his family serve God in their own house, meeting together for worship.

Bro. J. W. Johnson, Breckenridge, Caldwell county, Missouri, says that is a good place for a silversmith to start business, and he wishes if any of the brethren in that trade desire a place that they would come there; also write him at once.

Bro. John Gallup states in a late letter that he was for a long time addicted to the use of tobacco; but finding it a filthy and disgusting habit, he abandoned it five years ago. He strongly advises the Saints to put it away. In connection he relates a rather curious story which we omit inserting.

Be sure that you always remember that the HERALD needs new subscribers; always like Oliver Twist is "asking for more." Send us one, two, two hundred of them, every one of you.

Bro. Frederick C. Warnky, absent sometime in Colorado, has returned to Missouri, and is at present stopping at Independence, where he thinks some of locating. He proposes to do what he can towards aiding the brethren there to spread the gospel. Bro. Warnky reports meetings held at Fort Garland, Coal Creek and Los Animas.

Bro. W. P. Brents writes from Independence, Missouri, of his desire that the cause shall roll on. He relates a dream for which we have not room.

The Saints will remember that by a resolution adopted at last fall conference, the Bishopric were made a committee to secure reduced rates for delegates to the April conference of 1880. The Bishopric in compliance with that resolution, have corresponded with the authorities of the several lines of road reaching Plano, and have been unable to secure the desired reduction. This notice will therefore give the Saints to understand that the Bishopric discharged their duty and are not in fault that those attending conference will have to pay full fares.

Bro. S. O. Foss, of Jonesport, Maine, writes on January 26th, of the work in Maine, and its revival at the coming of Bro. T. W. Smith. Bro. Foss thinks a part of their spiritual dearth is owing to a failure on the part of the district to sustain some one in the field all the time. The district numbers 270, and Bro. Foss thinks that five cents a month from each of 250 of this number, would give twenty-five dollars per month, enough to keep one in the field all the time. How is this?

Brn. Blair, Derry, Luff, Anthony, Deuel and Brand are busily engaged in their respective fields, and are in some respects meeting with encouragement. But the field is a hard one; as are all fields where self-indurating righteousness shuts the eyes and hearts of the people. Israel was of old hard to make see their wickedness and folly; but we hope of better success after a time. Much is being done by bringing a better personal influence to bear upon the people.

Bro. T. W. Smith wrote from Jonesport, Maine, February 8th. His letter shows that he has been faithfully laboring in that country to revive and build up the work of God. He says that the condition of affairs has greatly improved since the recent letter in the HERALD was written. Branch officers are resuming their duties, differences have been settled, and regular meetings are held for the worship of God, so that a more earnest and spiritual state of things exist than did before, while many rejoice in the presence among them and labors of Bro. Smith. May he be able to put the work on a good basis all through Eastern and Western Maine, as well as in Massachusetts, and labor wisely and successfully.

Bro. Thomas Daley writes from California, giving the names and items of four baptized by him at Uniontown, Eldorado county, and he says that others seem about ready to obey. These were the results of his labor. We commend Bro. Daley and those baptized there to the attention of the authorities of the Sacramento District, as the nearest in jurisdiction, we think.

Bro. Ole O. Bean, at Carroll City, Iowa, abides strong in the faith, though he has not heard a gospel sermon for about eight years, nor seen a member of the Church for about seven years, excepting his wife. He reads devotedly the books and papers, and his brief letter breathes the right spirit. Those who have many religious privileges may think of such an isolation, and be thankful to God for their better situation. Yet Bro. and Sr. Bean have the advantage in that they will grow strong by standing alone and defending themselves and their faith.

Bro. William Crick, with the brothers White at Edenville, Iowa, writes of having attended the successful debate of Bro. I. N. White with Rev. Hendricks, in Poweshiek county. He also says that more and more he wishes to be useful in the Lord's work.

Sr. Susan Tyler, Conneautville, Pennsylvania, has also been deprived of hearing the gospel for the past six years, but she holds fast to the faith and reads all the works. May she continue to receive spiritual grace and the testimonies of the Lord to comfort her till she may have the added blessing of hearing the word preached.

Brother J. R. Badham, Shenandoah, Iowa, is preaching from one to three times per week, doing as much as he can consistently with his business. And this winter sickness in his family has hindered his going abroad to do much.

Bro. Alfred Rich sends number three of a paper called The Coming Struggle. The object of the Editor seems to be to warn the people that the end of the present dispensation is near at hand, and to show by the signs of the times that greater calamities and evils are to follow. It is published at Bangor, Maine.

Bro. J. X. Davis, Newton, Iowa, wrote February 10th of the arrival there of Bro. J. H. Lake, who intended to labor in that district for several weeks, so writes Bro. Davis. That will be good for the work there.

Bro. George Wyman, at Fontanelle, Iowa, says that some there are investigating, and that he does all that he can to enlighten them. He thinks that if an able Elder would come there and remain several weeks, much good could be accomplished.

Sister Jennie Krahl, of Schuyler, Nebraska, says that through many trials she has continued in her faith towards God and his work, and indeed grows stronger. It is well; and we would that all wrote in that manner.

Bro. John Richards, living at New Excelsior, Butler county, Kansas, sends an excellent testimony of special favor, received by him through God's healing power, at a time last summer when he was severely wounded by the discharge of a gun which he drew towards him from the wagon in which he was journeying. The blood flowed from his hand and body, and he cried in faith unto the Lord and the flow ceased as he spoke. He promised to bear testimony of this, and does so, adding that he praises God for his goodness to him in this matter, and he wishes to serve God with all his powers, and to exalt his name. He represents that good advantages are to be had for farming purposes in that country. Bro. Richards went there last year and he has done a little preaching, and would do more but for his age and infirmities. There is plenty of chance for any who need get the rust off their sickles, he says.

Bro. W. N. Ray, of Casey, Iowa, mentions there being an inquiry for the truth, about Fontanelle. An Elder would be received with welcome by the Saints at either place.

Bro. Elias Land, Thornton, Texas, writes of Brother H. L. Thompson having preached twice there, and that he was zealous in the cause.

Sister Helen Wedlock, Cherokee, Kansas, writes of their having good meetings, and the Saints are trying to be faithful in all duties to God and men. Sr. Wedlock considers that the work of the Lord is grand and beautiful in every respect, so that her heart rejoices in it continually. They will gladly care for any traveling Elders who will visit them.

Bro. J. C. Foss says that in Maine the cause is improving very much since Bro. T. W. Smith's arrival. They together were to start for Western Maine, February 23rd.

Sister Mary E. Thatcher, of Gentryville, Missouri, writes that her mother, her brothers and herself are endeavoring to live faithful, and are blessed in so doing. They were formerly of the South-eastern Illinois District.

Sister M. A. Wetherbee, North Bend Branch, Brown county, Illinois, mentions their enjoyment of the gifts of the Holy Spirit, by whose presence they are encouraged. The branch numbers twenty-eight members.

Bro. John Eames says that he continues to find friends for himself and the cause at Cheyenne, Wyoming.

Bro. C. G. Lanphear has been preaching in Ford county, and at Braidwood, Illinois, recently, writing from the latter place February 17th.

Bro. J. F. Burton writes of having baptized one more in the Pacific Ocean, at Laguna, California, lately. Some excellent meetings there and more will soon be added, he thinks. May he go on doing good.

Besides the letters inserted or noticed, we have others from Brn. B. V. Springer, M. B. Williams, Jerome Ruby, J. A. McIntosh (Canada), T. R. Allen, J. A. Stromberg, W. J. Curry, E. C. Brown, D. F. Crane, and E. Wunsch, that we have not space for, at least not this issue. We need a weekly.

Bro. C. N. Brown writes that the good work moves on in Rhode Island. He is preaching at various places on Sundays.

Bro. J. R. Cook wrote from Ione City, California, February 13th, as follows: "Six have been baptized in my field lately. Elders Marcus Lowell, Thomas Daily, and J. H. Parr, are actively engaged in the great work." That is good news.

Sister E. Lowrie, of Dacota, California, sends for books and for to renew her papers. Her letter shows that she loves the work of God.

Brother A. F. Rudd, Dow City, Iowa, mentions with commendation some excellent labor at Maple Creek by Bro. D. H. Bays. Some, formerly Methodists, are ready to be baptized into the kingdom of God.

Brn. F. Scarcliff, Gomer Griffiths, and R. Etzenhouser have been at Bevier, Missouri, preaching for some two weeks, but separated there to pursue different routes to Conference.

BRO. C. H. HASSALL, sends us from Dresden, Staffordshire, England, a copy of the North Staffordshire Christian Journal, for January 3rd, 1880, from which we quote the following, taken from the answers to correspondents. The initials C. H. H. are those of brother Hassall:

"C. H. H. (Dresden).—The title of this paper is "Christian Journal," and we only include in our programme those bodies which come under that title. The Latter Day Saints do not, we presume, call themselves Christians; at any rate the articles of their creed include several doctrines which appear to us in direct opposition to the teachings of Christ. No sect that holds Mormonism to be correct, and which only abstains from its practice from fear of incurring legal penalties, can come within the scope of a Christian Journal, and we have never seen its doings chronicled in any religious publication. Hence we cannot give reports of your meetings, much as we should regret to be uncharitable or narrow-minded."

The Christian Journal ought to be re-christened in some way that would show that it was a denominational sheet, governed and controlled by the public opinion of the so-called evangelical associations called churches. If Bro. "C. H. H." sent the editor an "Epitome," which we presume that he did, the editor must surely have been denominationally short-sighted if he saw any thing of anti-Christ in it; and he has certainly incurred a liability to be charged with lack of charity, if not of narrow-mindedness. The Circuit Judge of Steuben county, Indiana, who dismissed an appeal from a magistrate's decision inflicting a penalty in a case in which a congregation of Latter Day Saints were unlawfully disturbed, upon the ground that the Latter Day Saints did not come within the provision of the statutes protecting worshiping bodies from intrusion and disturbance; because they were not worshipers in the rule—i. e., the rule of popular christianity, as he might with propriety have added; must be a sort of ecclesiastical second cousin of the Editor of this Christian Journal.

We thank Bro. Hassall for the paper sent; and shall pray that there may not be any more such intolerent Christianity. The charge that Latter Day Saints, of the Reorganization, only refrain from evil practices through fear of the penalty of the law, is an unfounded one; we believe totally untrue.

We learn from the minutes of the last conference of the Saints in England that there is some prospect of obtaining a press there for the use of the Church. May the Lord aid and direct that work. Go on brothers, let the special providence grow and it will not be long till the Lord will have a cordon of gospel sentinels round the world.

THE Chicago Evening Journal of the 12th of February had the following in its editorials:

"That branch of the Mormon "Church of Latter-Day Saints" which has its center at Plano, Ills., is in harmony with the general sentiment of the country, demanding the enforcement of the law for the punishment and suppression of polygamy in Utah. In a memorial to Congress they set forth the history and faith of the Mormon Church, showing that polygamy was explicitly condemned by the founders of the sect; that polygamy was subsequently injected into the creed by evil-minded men, and asking that those guilty of this vile and scandalous practice may be treated as criminals, being violators alike of the true Mormon faith, of common decency and of the laws of the country."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Question.—Why are not some Elders sent to the Indian nation.

Answer.—For the same reason that some Elders are not sent to France and other places where the doors are opening—the want of men who can and will go.

News Summary.

Feb. 6th.—The British Parliament convened yesterday in London, and the Lord High Chancellor read the Queen's speech. Among other matters to which she called their attention is that of the suffering in Ireland and the necessity for relief.

The French missionaries in Mosul give painful accounts of the ravages of the famine in Mesopotamia and Kurdistan, where Christians, Jews, and Mahometans all suffer.

Shocks of earthquake were felt at Cordova, Orizaba, Tehuacan, and Vera Cruz Jan. 22d. Same date they were felt in Cuba. No damage done.

7th.—It is now stated that twenty-two persons were killed in the recent railway disaster in France, and that one hundred and sixteen were wounded, instead of the numbers given on the 5th inst.

From Afghanistan the news is that nine more Afghans have been executed by Gen. Roberts for attacking the British Embassy at Cabul, making eighty-two altogether, and fifteen more are sentenced.

9th.—The relief measures now reaching Ireland are making a more hopeful state of affairs, so says a dispatch.

The volcano of Vesuvius, near Naples, Italy, is again in a state of eruption.

At Salt Lake City, Utah, yesterday, John Taylor, president of the Mormon Church, preached the funeral sermon of a young man named Cain, whose father had been rich and influential, but whose estate B. Young robbed the heirs of to a great extent, and the young man apostatized and through the courts recovered some of his rights. His fault seems to have been solely intemperance, and when he died, by typhoid fever, John Taylor took occasion to abuse both the dead and the living, (his mother and sister), for what would have been no fault in Taylor's eyes had young Cain been faithful to them and been robbed without demurring. After some proper remarks, Taylor spoke as follows of the young man: "Was he a saint? No. He was once a saint, but departed from the Church; he left the faith. Did he die a saint? No. He died a drunkard and will find a drunkard's grave. He has gone to hell! And there is where he deserved to go!" The mother and sister cried out at these awful words and both fainted, and, being taken out, had to have a physician's attendance and care. It was a sad event.

10th.—Starvation is extending and increasing in the west of Ireland, particularly in Galway county, where those who have anything of food at all to eat are eking out an existence by eating the few seed potatoes they had saved for spring planting, while others are eating sea-weed. The weather is cold and the people are half naked, and even the sick have no beds. Between Galway and Sligo it is said that nine-tenths of the people are on the road to death by starvation.

At Dublin, Ireland, the Theatre Royal, the third in size in Britain, was burned yesterday at 3 p. m. Some curtains ignited from the gas just before a performance. The manager and six persons were burned to death. Loss one million dollars.

At Constantinople a large three-story barrack for soldiers fell, and it is said that two or three hundred soldiers were killed and wounded.

The hillmen of Afghanistan are being aroused by the priests and chiefs to prepare for fighting the British in the spring.

At Bradford, Pennsylvania, one man was blown to pieces by nitro-glycerine and his companion mortally wounded. The tipping over of their sleigh caused the striking of the cans on the ground and the explosion of the stuff.

11th.—The would be murderer of King Alphonso of Spain has been sentenced to death, to be carried into effect by strangling.

A steamer, bound out from Plymouth, England, encountered a gale, in which four persons were killed and seventeen others injured. Also six of her boats were lost and other damage done. She put back into port.

Fires yesterday: The city hall was burned at Albany, N. Y., and seven firemen were crushed. Many of the records were burned. Near Platteville, Ala., a cotton factory was burned; loss $100,000. At San Jose, Cal., the State Normal school building was burned; loss $250,000. A $25,000 fire at Indianapolis, Indiana.

By a boiler explosion at Windsor, Canada, two men were killed and ten others wounded.

12th.—Davitt and Killen, the Irish agitators, have visited France and Belgium to collect information with regard to the land systems of those countries. In a month a deputation from the Irish Land League, including Davitt, will visit the chief places in France, Germany, Belgium, Italy, and Spain, where committees are being organized to receive them, to enlist support for the land movement, and relief for the distress in Ireland.

By the recent great fire at Tokio, China, nine thousand houses were destroyed. A cattle plague prevails near Shanghai, China.

One hundred thousand deaths by cholera in Japan last year. The ministry of education in Japan report a steady increase in public instruction throughout the empire. Thirty-six million children attend school at present.

Another large bank robbery, this time at Westport, (or Saugatuck), Connecticut. About one hundred thousand dollars in money and securities was taken, or what was not destroyed when the safe was blown up.

13th.—The German newspapers defend the proposed increase of the German army, saying that it is necessary in order to keep pace with Russia and with France.

The President of the United States yesterday issued a proclamation on the subject of the unlawful invasion of the Indian Territory by white people for the purposes of settlement, declaring it to be the purpose of the Government to put a stop to the movement, and to rigidly enforce the laws and treaties under which the lands in that Territory are reserved for the exclusive occupation of the Indian tribes, officers of the Interior Department, and military posts. Notice is given that if necessary the military power of the United States will be employed to suppress the movement.

14th.—The unemployed workmen in Dublin, Ireland, held a great meeting yesterday, and in an orderly manner. Their speakers set forth the situation, and said that many of them were near to starvation, but they did not ask for charity but for labor; and if the government would set them at the public works promised they would be satisfied. As it is they are in humiliation and distress with starvation at the door. Also the suffering throughout the country increases.

General Grant and party sailed from Cuba yesterday for Vera Cruz, Mexico.

Nashville, Tennessee, was visited by a great wind yesterday, and the loss of property, it is thought, amounts to about two hundred thousand dollars. St. Paul's (colored) Methodist chapel was wrecked; loss twenty thousand dollars. Also eight thousand dollars damage done to a colored Baptist house. Two others, (one a Methodist the other a Catholic) were damaged about ten thousand dollars each. Manufactories, mills and other property, furnished the balance of the loss. In some portions of the state great damage was done by the wind and the rain accompanying it, causing floods. Also in Kentucky some loss of property.

15th.—On this (Sunday) morning a terrible tragedy took place at Sandwich, our neighboring city. The junior editor was staying at the house of Mr. Thomas Smith over the Sabbath; and near one o'clock in the morning we were awakened by the screams of a woman ringing out on the still, night air, crying, "Murder! murder! My father is killed; help, help!" Thus crying all the way, she ran to the door below our room. With Mr. Smith we hastened as soon as possible to a house across the way, and found the doors open, furniture overturned, and three women in terror and grief, bewailing the murdered husband and father, who lay stretched on the bedroom floor, dead past all help, yet probably scarce fifteen minutes, if even that, had passed since the shooting. It was Mr. Hiram Allen, an esteemed citizen of the place, aged about sixty. We turned the body face upward and placed it on the bed. He had been struck three times with false knuckles, evidently with the intent to kill him without much noise; he, we believe, having known them, or being so likely to, that they would not suffer him to live. His wife was in bed with him, but hid her face from the awful struggle; and as they began shooting him, she ran into the closet and hid. He was shot twice in the body and twice in the head, then the burglars left, as the terrified daughter came screaming down stairs. They had turned the key of the front door with nippers, and now made good their escape and their hiding. From that time on, all through the day, excited and sorrowful throngs of people came and went. Morning showed that other houses had been tried before this, but bolts prevented entrance where keys could not; and this house only did they enter. Some men were arrested at Plano and some at Sandwich, and as we write, Feb 18th, the investigation is still going on. The coroner's jury sat all day on Sunday, taking evidence from those first on the scene. Though we held two services at our chapel that day, it was a task; and not yet have we recovered composure from the awful sound, the terrible sight, and the remaining sleepless hours of that night. It seemed doubly sad, too, to have occurred just before the coming in of a beautiful Sabbath-day. A wife and only child were robbed of their loved protector, and a house made desolate by those who must indeed have been hardened criminals, and we can but weep with and for those who have suffered thus. A large reward is offered by the brothers of the deceased, and by the citizens of Sandwich, and it is ardently hoped that if detective skill can find the doers of this deed that it be done speedily.

16th.—From Mexico come rumors of impending trouble. It is said that Gen. Gonzales, the military candidate for President and the commander of the bigger part of the Mexican army, has formed a plan looking to the secession of a number of the states in the northern part of the country, intending to erect a confederacy to be known as the Republic of Sierra Madre. The States named as those which Gonzales proposes to "take out of the Union" with him are Sonora, Chinaloa, Durango, Colima, Jalisco, and Michoacan.

A dispatch from the City of Mexico says that the visit of Elder Thatcher of the Utah people, who went there to secure a country of refuge for that people, in the event of Utah becoming uncomfortably hot, has proved a failure. He found the Mexican Government willing to protect them in their worship, but not in their polygamous practices.

The British troops in Afghanistan are concentrating to repel anticipated attacks of the natives.

Relief measures for Ireland are alleviating the suffering, and the wife of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland writes to the Lord Mayor of London, that if they can receive two hundred thousand dollars per week for six weeks more, the great stress will be over. There is much suffering among some who are too proud to make their wants known. Fever has set in in some of the more destitute districts. The British Government has agreed to advance a total of three million seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars for relief.

17th.—In the city of San Salvador, Central America, a great fire was raging, February 1st, when the steamer left there. Several Government buildings and much other property was burned. The inhabitants were returning after the earthquake scare. Volcanic action is again plainly apparent in the lake of Ilopango, which has long been known as the crater of an extinct volcano.

A dispatch from Rome says that the Pope's Encyclical letter against divorce insists on the eminently religious nature of marriage, and exhorts the Bishops to urge that view upon their flocks.

18th.—Another attempt made to kill the Czar and his family by a gunpowder explosion under the dining-room of the winter palace, but they had not yet entered the room. Five soldiers were killed and thirty-five wounded.

A steamer from Boston to Liverpool lost two hundred and forty-seven cattle overboard during a stormy passage.

19th.—Accounts from Ireland are more hopeful. There is much suffering still, but, except in the most distant parts, starvation is being routed by the relief measures.

The explosion of dynamite and gun-cotton under the Czar's dining room in St. Petersburg tore a hole in the floor twelve feet wide by fifteen long. Had the family entered at their usual time all of them would probably have perished. The Czar knows not whom to trust of his own attendants, his own court or his own police.

20th.—Many of the palace retainers at St. Petersburg have been arrested on suspicion of complicity in the recent attempt on the lives of the Imperial family. Others fled, including the captain of the palace police.

At Nashville, Tennessee, about a thousand people have been compelled by flooding waters to leave their dwellings along the river.

21st.—The soldiers killed by the explosion at the Czar's palace were buried yesterday with military ceremonies. Detectives are sent to the various national capitals to search for the participants in the plot.

At Rome great honors have been shown to Prof. Nordenskjoeld, the Swedish Arctic explorer.

Advices from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, state that from eight to ten persons are dying daily from yellow fever.

Advices from Valparaiso, Chili, to the 27th ult., state that by an explosion of shells in the arsenal, twenty persons were killed and half the building destroyed.

A dispatch from Geneva, Switzerland, says: "Pontresa Bay, in the Lake of Lugano, is covered with ice,—a phenomenon, so far as known, without precedent. Sledges and horses are traversing daily the Lake of Zurich in all directions."

23d.—Six more of the soldiers who were wounded by the palace explosion at St Petersburg have died. An academy at Moscow was burned the 21st, cause unknown. A valuable museum was destroyed with it.

Correspondence.

LACROSSE, Hancock Co., Illinois,
January 29th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—Your visit to this county has brought to mind some strange thoughts. In 1860, indignation meetings were held in this county, and at those meetings resolutions were passed that Mormons should not be allowed to preach, pray, or sing in the county of Hancock; nevertheless, in 1880, I was present when we prayed, preached and sang hymns of praise to God, the Eternal Father, in the Court House, before large and attentive congregations. What a change in twenty years! And what has brought about this change? I will tell you; twenty years of toil and labor such as no other church has had to endure; twenty years of scorn, contumely and derision, with the reproach of Utah Mormonism, with all of its kindred evils added, and everything that sectarian hate, and the power of Satan could heap upon us; twenty years of trial. Do we feel to regret it. No. Should we be discouraged. By no means. We begin to feel the foundation is getting more secure and firm; we begin to feel confidence in the ultimate triumph of our cause, and the salvation of latter-day Israel. We now know that the Lord is beginning to fulfill the promise that he made to his people. Brethren and sisters of Christ, I feel like rejoicing as the hour of redemption draweth nigh. In the gospel of Saint Luke the testimony of the angel in the proclamation to the shepherds was, to "Fear not, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people," "For unto you is born this day in the City of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." But that was not all of it, for there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will toward men." Eighteen hundred and eighty years have passed away and the latter part of the proclamation has not yet been verified altogether, yet we begin to find some of the fruits which give confidence to the servants that the Master still remembers the covenant he made with his people who should believe on his name, and in his gospel and obey the same. "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

SOLOMON J. SALISBURY.

OENAVILLE, Bell county, Texas,
January 15th, 1880.

Editors Saints' Herald:—For some time I have felt inclined to write to the Herald, and now the receipt of a letter of mild reproof from one of your members, lends action to inclination. The letter alluded to, was occasioned by a remark I had made, which came to him like this, "I had seen so much of the rise and fall of sensational religion, that I could but look forward to the ebbing of the tide of that of the Latter Day Saints." He requests a reply, and if you have space, I prefer making it in this way.

Upon my first hearing the doctrine of your Church presented, I resolved that if I could not "put my own shoulder to the wheel" to assist it on to success, I would at least, offer no obstacle to impede its progress; hence, I regret having said the words, though I meant nothing derogatory of the church, or disparaging of any of its members. It has been my pleasant privilege to make the acquaintance of Elders Bays, Jenkins and Cato, during their sojourn in Texas. From them and the Herald I have learned all that I know of the Church, and the differences between it and the faith of those people in Utah. I frankly confess that I think that the Herald is an advocate of the purest religion, and would rather read it than any other Christian paper. I like to hear your ministers preach, and honestly believe that if they do not preach the gospel in fact, then indeed, is the Bible a mystery, and hard to be understood; but as to the "how" they have attained to their pre-eminence over all the sects I am not fully satisfied. I have lost confidence in the philosophy and "cunning craftiness" of man, and am loath to accept anything that savors of man's ingenuity. In the event that this meets the notice of Messrs Bays and Jenkins, I take the occasion to offer them our kind regards, with the desire to see them again in Texas. Hoping this will make satisfactory reparation to my correspondent and all whom it concerns I subscribe myself most respectfully,

MRS. FRANK McMAINS.

FAIRPORT, Dekalb Co., Missouri,
January 26th, 1880.

Dear Saints:—The Herald is a comfort, a blessing indeed, to me, isolated as I am from the Saints. And how I do rejoice that the Lord has seen fit to give me an understanding of the plan of salvation. I am now sixty eight years of age; was a member many years of the Methodist church; but I feel that I can not be thankful enough to God that my eyes have been opened to behold the true way. May I have strength the remainder of my days to walk therein. I have borne testimony, many times to the truth of this work, in the branch where I have membership, (which is twenty miles from my home), and now I wish to bear testimony to all who read our loved Herald, that I know this is the true faith, as taught by him who knew no guile. He said: "If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God," and also that his Spirit should bear witness to us. What a blessed promise to those who love the truth! I love it, and my soul rejoices in it. I have two daughters and a son who are trying to walk in the way of light, which is a comfort to me. But other children I have, who procrastinate, which troubles me. May the Lord be merciful to them, and to all others who delay doing what they know is their duty. Your sister in the gospel,
MARY FLANDERS.

LILLY DALE, Perry Co., Indiana,
January 21st, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—It has been about seven years since the gospel was first introduced in this county; and, in spite of opposition, persecution, and in fact nearly everything that the opposer could do against the work, it still lives, and is gaining ground. The branch here numbers forty-six, including one Teacher and one Priest. But the cause suffers for the want of an efficient Elder. Bro. Harbert Scott, who lives fifty or sixty miles distant, is the nearest elder, therefore we have but little preaching. Occasionally an elder on a mission comes and spends a few days with us. Our Priest and Teacher do the best they can to keep the cause moving, and, mostly by their labors, are our prayer meetings kept up every Lord's day. We are building a church-house, and have it nearly ready for the roof now, and hope to have it ready for dedication in the Spring. We rejoice in the hope of having a house of our own, in which to worship the Lord. I think we will not meet with so much embarrassment as we do at present. I hope not. The Saints now, to a great extent, take part in our meetings, but then I hope each one will consider that they have a special interest in the house, and when we meet, will remember that there is a duty devolving upon each, and act accordingly.

When Bro. Springer was here he did us much good in setting forth the principles of the doctrine of Christ in a plain and comprehensive manner. Indeed I heard some who are not members of the Church speak very highly of his power in reasoning, and he preached in such a frank and friendly manner that all seemed to like to hear him, although there were some who were ready to take issue at a distance. Prejudice seems to be giving way slowly, and people are becoming more liberal and friendly. Bro. Springer baptized two here and others are believing and investigating. I have just been reading Bro. Gurley's letter in the Herald, and it makes me wish I was out there, away from these hills and able to buy me a little home. May the Lord prosper the Saints in that country, and pour out his blessings upon their lands. The Herald gives me great pleasure and I am led to exclaim, How can Saints do without it? It possesses such a great amount of profitable reading. And I can not refrain from speaking of the Advocate. I think it a noble little periodical, rich with important instruction for all. I long to see the time when the Herald will be a weekly, and my admonition to all is, Work for the Herald that it may become a weekly; and solicit your friends and neighbors to take it. I hope to see the time when every Saint will read these papers. I love to read the letters from the different fields, and to see the progress being made by the Elders. When I read of the many hardships that some of them go through, and still they do not shrink from their duty, I think how great will be their reward. There are Bro. H. C. Smith, J. W. Gillen, and many others, who have gone far away from their homes for the purpose of laboring to bring others to a knowledge of the truth; and there are those who have gone to Utah to present the truth to the honest among that people, and my desire is that they will be blessed with all necessary knowledge for the performance of their work. Your brother in the gospel,

S. C. GRUVER.

TAFTSVILLE, Ray Co., Missouri,
January 25th, 1880.

Dear Brethren:—I have been reading the news in the Herald for several years, and among the many testimonies that I have read is one from Mr. L. Traugher, of Carroll county, Missouri, said to be from D. Whitmer. Mr. D. Whitmer told me in the year 1874, that Joseph Smith used the Urim and Thummim when he was translating. But now it is said that he lost it when he gave the first part of the book to Martin Harris; after that he used the Stone. Bro. T. W. Smith, I think was right. I for my part know he said that Joseph had the instrument Urim and Thummim. I asked him how they looked. He said they looked like spectacles, and he (Joseph) would put them on and look in a hat, or put his face in the hat and read. Says I, "Did he have the plates in there." "No; the words would appear, and if he failed to spell the word right, it would stay till it was spelled right, then pass away; another come, and so on." Now this Mr. Traugher used to say that the Reorganized Church was right, but now he fights against us; says we are not right, neither the Book of Covenants. I believe both to be right. but that Mr. Whitmer carried the idea that the translation was by both, or either Urim and Thummim and the stone.
ERI B. MULLIN.

[Bro. E. L. Kelly being present in the office when the proof of this letter was read, says that Mr. Whitmer stated precisely the same thing to him].—Ed.

CHAUNCEY, Lawrence Co., Illinois,
January 27th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. I. A. Morris and I are here preaching to crowded houses of very attentive people; apparently interested in the doctrine. What the result may be I can not tell. We came from Kinmundy, in Marion county, to this place last Saturday, where we had been holding meetings for a week with fair results. Two were baptized there and others will be at no distant day. We have many warm friends for the cause in that vicinity as well as here. Bro. I. M. Smith and I. A. Morris visited these places last summer and preached and made quite a good impression, by their example as well as by preaching. They are very desirous that Bro. Smith should come back and labor among them. Some say that our preaching does very well, but his was just a little better. I am thankful that God is raising up such men. O, that he would raise up many, yea, enough to carry the gospel to all nations, as well as to all people in this country. We have no one in this district that is devoting their entire time to the ministry; Bro. Smith is teaching school this winter. We will try to have him take the field in the Spring if possible. The president of the district thinks he can not travel much on account of the demands at home. Possibly he ought to do more, but every one is responsible to God, and unquestionably shall give an account of their stewardship. The work is in fair condition throughout this district, and prospects fair for the future if the Saints and Elders will conduct themselves properly and do their whole duty. Which I hope they may. If they could feel the necessity of helping to keep the elders in the field as well as they can pray for it, there might be more accomplished. We have eight Saints now near Kinmundy and when three of them get their letters from Kirtland, Ohio, we hope to be able to organize a branch. Hoping that God may work with us and all his people for the salvation of the honest in heart, and enable us to accomplish all he requires us to do, obtain the crown over the kingdom and be permitted to enter into his rest, I shall still work and pray.

G. H. HILLIARD.

GAINESVILLE, Alachua Co., Fla.,
February 1st, 1880.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins:—I received your encouraging letter yesterday. I do not feel altogether forsaken for I know that God is ever with us; for it is manifested by his Holy Spirit's presence, and I feel, as you say, that there is a work for me to do, and I am resolved, by the grace of God, to hold fast to that which is good. I do desire the prayers of all that I may hold out, and be made an instrument in Christ's hands of doing good. All rests on me here. No Priest, Teacher, Elder or officer of any kind here, but me, a Priest. I sow the seeds of righteousness, although some falls on stony ground and some among thorns, yet I trust that some will also fall in good ground. I desire the correspondence of some of the good Saints. It gives one in my condition great enjoyment and it is a great help. May God bless his people, that they may be faithful and hold fast to that which is good, and God bless and keep you, my brother. Pray for us all. Yours in the bonds of peace,
M. O. HOWARD.

MANDEVILLE, Carroll Co., Missouri,

Editors Herald:—I have hoped for a long time to see the Herald come out weekly. It seems to me that it would be an easier matter to sustain the Herald as a weekly than it is at present. It certainly would not lose any of its present readers, and it would surely gain and retain subscribers of all classes, who do not patronize it in its present form.

It may be interesting to some, especially some of those who bore the name of Mormon in the days of the first Joseph, if I relate what an old lady who lives in this county says she saw many years ago, in Ray county, Missouri, when she was a young girl. The lady, whose name is Mrs. James, says that she was at the house of a gentleman who resided near Hardin, Ray county, many years ago, when the Mormons were moving to Davies county, and while there, a body of them came along and camped near the house. Being tired, and some of their number being unwell, they concluded to remain several days. Some of the citizens of Ray county, having heard much about the Mormons, were desirous of learning what they believed; therefore they had the Elders preach several discourses, which pleased the people so well that they told them to go on to Davies county and settle, without fear of molestation. In the camp there was a girl who appeared to be quite sick. The gentleman who owned the house invited the friends of the sick girl to remove her to his house, which was accordingly done, but she had not been there long before several of the elders came to administer to her, and when they assembled, they removed all outsiders from the room. But Mrs. James and another girl, who belonged at the house, determined to see what was done. They accordingly took a position which commanded a view of the interior of the sick room, where they could watch proceedings, unknown to the Mormons, and the old lady says, "I will always remember that circumstance as the most solemn proceeding I ever saw. Several Elders laid their hands upon the girl and offered prayer." She says in conclusion: "I have always wondered whether the girl was really sick or not; for she immediately arose and went her way, apparently as well as any body." This is the testimony of a very good old Methodist lady, who was awakened to her sinful condition by an exhortation from one of the Mormon Elders.

OAKLAND, California, Feb. 8th, 1880.

President Joseph Smith; dear Sir and Bro:—In an editorial in No. 3, February 1st, 1880, Saints' Herald, I find the following language. "In an editorial of the Deseret News, the same organ from which we have quoted, for December 24th, under the caption, "Be not led astray by deceivers" it is stated that at the time H. P. Brown was cut off for "preaching polygamy and other corrupt doctrines, polygamy was no part of the creed of the Church."

I desire to know whether the Deseret News said H. P. Brown was cut off the Church? Will you be kind enough to send me the copy of said News?

I am certainly surprised that you would suffer much less write an article connecting my name with any such an offense, especially without a note of correction, and send it forth among the thousands of your readers, when you knew or ought to have known that it was not I that was cut off nor indeed H. P. Brown at all but one Hiram Brown, a person to me unknown; especially as I personally informed you of the fact at Amboy in 1864, the first time I ever had the honor of a personal acquaintance with you. And again at my house in the presence of D. S. Mills at Sacramento, California, in 1876. If you wrote and published that article and suffered it to go before the Church and the world without note or comment and cause every member of the Church who were not intimate with me and my history in 1843-4 to believe and think I was cut off the Church for "teaching polygamy and other corrupt doctrines," I shall regard it as done in malice or at least of great criminal neglect and as a known libel on my character. If it was written by Bro. Stebbins and published without your knowledge, of course I can not blame you, although it is a libel just the same whether copied from the Deseret News or composed in your sanctum.

Now the "Hiram Brown" referred to as cut off, &c., and advertised by Pres. Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith on the 1st February 1844. See Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 423, was an "Elder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" and was "preaching in the county of Lapeer, State of Michigan." This was not H. P. Brown or Hiram Petteys Brown, the name I have carried from birth and the only H. P. Brown I ever knew belonging to the Church. I suppose it will be in order to show my pedigree. Born of Quaker parents and lineage, in Warren county, New York, September 12th, 1825. At the age of fifteen I left home and went to Lockport, Niagara county, New York. In March, 1843, I was baptized into the Church by Henry Jacobs and became a member of the Cambria branch. In May following, I went to Beloit, Wisconsin, arriving there on the 4th day of June, 1845. In July following, I found Jason W. Briggs, and became acquainted with his father's family; we lived nine miles apart on air line. An intimate and close friendship grew up between us; and I made visits to him monthly, or at intervals from that time to the year 1848, when I married. On the 29th day of June, 1845, I was called and ordained an Elder at the Wakesha branch, at a conference held there, and ordained under the hands of Silas Briggs, a brother, and Almon White, a cousin, of J. W. Briggs, at his uncle's, White's house, at the age of 19 years, 9 months, and 17 days. I never "preached" or tried to "teach" any body in public or private, either true or false doctrines of the Church before that except at Turtleville, where I lived in 1843-44. About three weeks after the murder of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, the neighbors there called a meeting and requested me to address them upon the subject of "Mormonism and the Mormons," which was then exciting the people, and I being the only Mormon in the place, they gave me time and in my weak boyhood I prepared a written address and read it to an attentive audience, among whom I continued to live until after I was married in 1848. Now as I do not know the address of J. W. Briggs or Mary Stiles, his sister, who know that from July 1st, 1843 to 1848, I was never out of the state of Wisconsin, except as far south in Illinois as Pecatonica. I call on them through the Herald to corroborate my statement, or brand me as a liar and settle forever this libel on my character. If any are curious enough to go to Turtleville on the Turtle Creek, six miles above Beloit, Wisconsin, they will find among all who knew me there from 1843 to present time, that I maintained a pure and unblemished character. I desire to have this letter published in the Herald. I am not ashamed to have my history investigated from my birth until now. I am very respectfully yours, &c.,

HIRAM P. BROWN.

N.B.—If said publication was made in the Herald without motive, I shall expect you to acknowledge that at Amboy, and afterwards at Sacramento, I informed you that I was not the man, and that I never had a charge preferred against me in the Church in the world, except for apostasy from Strang when I bolted his polygamy and kindred doctrines.

VISALIA, Tulare Co., California,

December 7th, 1879.

Brother Henry:—We have had no preaching here since Bro. Clapp passed here last August on his way to Oregon. He blessed two children and baptized two persons. We were very much pleased to hear the words of eternal life, and to partake of the emblems of our Savior's death. I wish very much we could have such a privilege every Sabbath. We are very few in number, and very much scattered. Firmly trusting God will open up our way to get near a branch, where we can be instructed and can worship him, I remain your sister in the gospel,

MRS. A. F. ROBINSON.

CLAY CENTER, Kansas, Feb. 10th, 1880.

Messrs. Editors:—I left my home in Iowa December 20th for Kansas, to preach the gospel. Arrived in Ellsworth county, and commenced on the first day of the year. Remained in Ellsworth and Barton counties over two Sabbaths, holding meetings each night and Sabbaths with fair liberty. There being no school houses in the neighborhood we were obliged to use private houses and dugouts, miserable places to speak in, but found the people hospitable and free. The congregations were not large, but they were attentive. It resulted in the baptism of six, and the reviving of some old members; also in the organizing of a branch of eleven members. Ordained Bro. F. M. Dennis, Priest, and Bro. Judson Scott, Teacher, both promising young men. Left them rejoicing in the gospel. My next place was Kansas Center, Rice county. Opened meetings with a good congregation, but at the close of my services there was a display of revolvers, and I was given to understand that I had mistaken my mission, and that Kansas did not need my services. I was not badly scared, as I had been brought to face such music in my younger days. The result was that I remained till over Sabbath, holding meetings each night and on Sabbath, with increased interest. I baptized none, but left a good feeling, and a goodly number seem near the kingdom. I feel that in the near future the fruit may be garnered. Found kind friends, and the shake of the hand, and the tear that filled the eye, with the earnest request to return again, told the love they cherished for the truth. May God bless them. My next stop was in McPherson county, Lindsburg, where in fifteen days I delivered seventeen discourses, with good liberty; congregation increasing each night. Here the enemy was aroused, and he came out of his hiding place, and made war, lecturing on the evils of Mormonism, reiterating all the old stories about polygamy, the Spaulding story, the corruptions of Joseph, etc.; but, by the help of the Lord all this was satisfactorily disposed of, and good feeling prevailed. They brought me to this place, eighty miles, and I commenced the evening of the seventh, ten miles north of here, and am having crowded houses. Good feeling prevails. I never felt better spiritually. I rejoice in the work of the latter days. Love to all. I remain as ever,

A. KENT.

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 11th, 1880.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins:—I send you these lines of greeting. The work goes bravely on; good meetings, numbers coming to hear; interest still increasing, and the prospects brighten. The Lord is with his people, and they begin to see that the clouds are breaking, and the true light shines in upon the soul. The power of God is being made manifest in healing the sick, and calls come from many in the Utah church. We attend to all, and the Lord gives the blessing. Expect soon to baptize quite a number more. The Spirit is extending its way, and finding a resting place with the honest in heart. We feel happy, and will press on and do all we can in the cause of the Master. Pray for us. Yours truly,

T. N. HUDSON.

INDEPENDENCE, Jackson Co., Missouri,

February 1st, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—To-day was our fast day, it being the first sacrament Sunday in the month. At 10 a.m. was our Sabbath School, continuing one hour; at 11 a.m. preaching by Bro. J. J. Vickey, who delivered a very able discourse from 1 Cor. 12:14, "For the body is not one member but many." Followed by Bro. Brackenburg. At 12:15 commenced our sacrament and testimony meeting. During it the power of God was manifested in prophecies, saying that the Saints who would prove faithful, should be protected from the darts of the Adversary. And those who are trying to sow the seeds of discord among the Saints were warned and exhorted to repent of their evil ways or they would be visited with sure destruction. The spirit of peace and love seemed to be shed abroad in every breast, and many testified to their rejoicing. My heart truly rejoiced over the feast, and I was convinced that the Saints in this place are becoming awakened to a sense of their duty, and more united. Of late they have been supplicating the throne of grace to that end.

May the God of heaven assist his Saints to be more and more united, until Zion shall be established, and all nations flow unto her as spoken in the Scriptures. Yours for Christ's sake,

KINMUNDY, Marion Co., Illinois,

February 7th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—Brethren Morris and Hilliard have been here, and two more have embraced the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and more are searching the Scriptures.

DANA P. BROWN.

BUTTE CITY, Montana, Jan. 27th, 1880.

Dear Herald:—After preaching twice in the Christian church in Helena, Elder Hoffman, the Evangelist, kindly assisting in my meetings, I went over the divide. Self and horse were buried in a snow drift; took me an hour to get out. Found several Latter Day Saints on Snow-shoe Creek. Blessed seven children there, and preached in Black Foot City three times. Thence to Deer Lodge City. I there blessed one child, preached three times in the house of one of the Morrisite brethren, and once in the Masonic Hall, kindly given by the Masonic brethren. I there succeeded in getting subscriptions to Herald, etc., to the amount of $25.05. From there I went to Race Track, and the Canaanite brethren kindly permitted me to preach in the "House of the Lord," a neat, clean, well finished house that would be a credit to any branch of the Church. Every particle of the work was that of their own hands; nicely hard finished, and painted, with a handsome pulpit, cloak room, etc. They showed me every kindness, but they think they know it all, yet they do not even understand the rudiments of the gospel. I found the same to be the case at Warm Springs. But of the brethren at Deer Lodge City, I have hopes, that, as they have subscribed for printed matter, that they will read and gain light. I preached twice on Willow Creek, at lower part of valley, and then to this place. I preached to a large congregation in a hall on Sunday evening, and in the M. E. Church last night. The papers this morning speak very highly of our service. I preach again to-night and during the week. Then I am to go to Glendale. I have an invitation to return to Bozeman. They offer me any hall in town, free, and I shall go. I am encouraged; for truly the Lord has blessed me; and the brethren in the Montana branches send me cheering accounts that their numbers are increasing; that they are enjoying the Spirit, that the sick are being healed, and that they are rejoicing. The weather is now warm, but traveling over the divides is heavy. The mail is carried in sleighs. They have to carry shovels and dig themselves out of drifts frequently. The track fills in five minutes. The track lies over snow from four to eight feet deep, and poles or boughs are set up every ten feet, and even closer, on the side of the road, and in a storm they can not see even them. My address is Willow Creek, Gallatin county, Montana. E. C. BRAND.

MONTROSE, IOWA, February, 1880.

Brother Henry—The Saints of Montrose and vicinity are few in number and fewer still are the Saints who keep the covenant by attending upon the means of grace by which spiritual life and light are enjoyed. Those few are made to rejoice occasionally by the Spirit's presence; they find that it is good to be "Saints of latter days." The increased grandeur, beauty and sublimity of the gospel plan is pleasing, because of a "hungering after righteousness." The few are living in hopes that others may come and cast in their lot with them, and together seek the "better country." The promise was made a year ago that, if we were faithful, our numbers would be added to. There is now an effort being made to finish our house of worship this season, that it may be properly dedicated, and then properly placed in the hands of the Bishop. If any feel disposed to aid us in finishing our house, they can do so by sending what they can to Thomas Revel (our branch president), Nauvoo, Illinois. Yours in gospel bonds, D. D. BABCOCK.

CARTHAGE, Ill., February 23rd, 1880.

Bro. Joseph—I met Rev. J. Dunham in debate at Rock Creek. Ended last Friday evening, after four days duration. Truth triumphant. I expect to meet an infidel, Palmer, for four days, at Montrose, next month. Your brother, J. A. CRAWFORD.

Twelve Elders reported in person, one by letter and one by proxy. Also 4 Priests and 3 Teachers.

The Elders were requested by the president to remain and counsel about the difficulties in the Bevier Branch. He first called attention to the course of action had against Sister Margaret Rowland; and, reviewing the proceedings in the light of the law, declared them illegal, consequently null and void, saying also that her status as a member in the Church had not at any time been changed; reference also being had to Bro. W. W. Blair's written opinion. The president's view of the case was sustained unanimously by the council, and the clerk was directed to prepare a resolution which should affirm the same, and submit it the conference for their action. As the proceedings in the case of Ephraim Rowland, and also in the case of Joseph Stott, were equally illegal, the law on the part of the officers having not been complied with, their names were to be included in the resolution.

At 7 p.m. Bro. F. P. Scarcliff preached from John 17:17, followed by Bro. John Taylor.

A business meeting followed. In the final disposal of the several cases mentioned the following was adopted:

Resolved that the proceedings in the stated expulsion from the Church of Sister Margaret Rowland, Brother Ephraim Rowland and Joseph Stott, be declared null and void, as illegally held, owing to a misapprehension of the law, on the part of the branch officers, and also on the part of the three Elders to whom was referred the matter, at the district conference held in Bevier, May 3d and 4th, 1879, reported in the Herald; and that those proceedings be expunged from the record, and the Herald be requested to give this resolution prominence in its columns.

February 4th. Met at 9 a.m. for prayer, after which Bro. John Taylor preached on the gathering.

At 2 p.m. testimony and sacrament meeting. The presence of the Holy Spirit was manifest.

Evening business resumed. Brother G. T. Griffith was appointed as our delegate to the General Conference.

Brother John Taylor offered his resignation as district president in consequence of inability to do all the work necessary, but, Bro. G. T. Griffith was chosen by the conference as assistant president, and so Bro. Taylor was sustained, also Bro. E. L. Page as secretary.

Brother E. L. Page offered a resolution concerning the Bevier Branch troubles, but it failed to carry.

Adjourned to Bevier, at 10 a.m. May 1st, 1880.

Miscellaneous.

AN APPEAL TO THE CHURCH.

We pray God to direct us in writing this our petition to the Church, that we may write according to his will; and that, in the true Spirit, and in a correct manner, we may present to you at this time the matter upon which we are impressed to publish this appeal to the Saints; namely that of the duty incumbent upon them of paying their tithes and offerings unto the Lord, that the gospel of Christ may be preached according to his commandment.

And, first of all, we wish in the name of the Church to thank the many who have heretofore stood nobly by the cause in its times of need and who have aided and who still continue to aid it by their means, that it may accomplish the will of God in the salvation of men.

And, it is for you more than for any other people upon the earth, to be concerned in this matter, and to be zealously engaged, either with your talents or your means, that your fellow men may be saved from error, from scepticism and from sin, preparatory to the appearing of the Lord of the vineyard, who will then give, as he has promised, to every one according to the use they have made of the things committed to their trust. At that time we are assured that those who are found to have been valiant as "laborers together with God," in the manner they best could, shall receive crowns of everlasting life, while those who have not put those gifts of ability or of substance to good use in his service, it shall be with them as the Lord may will.

And, ye Saints of God, think how many people in this and in foreign lands are either calling or writing for the messengers of the true gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ to be sent to them. And, to more and more of these calls that come from every quarter, the reply has been made, "We have no means to send any one to you."

Yet, brethren, the Church of Jesus Christ is commanded to do the work, and its ministers are commissioned to bear these tidings unto all men; in the prosecution of which work the whole body should be equally diligent, and all be zealously engaged, not one portion of it, or the Elders only.

And, O ye Saints, there are many men, even hundreds, who have received authority from the King of kings, and who stand ready to obey his mandates, and to go forth to labor in his vineyard, in this the hour of God's judgment, in this the last time that he will send his servants to call men to repentance before the Lord of the vineyard shall come to "give reward" to those who have labored therein.

Yes, and scores of able men now stand ready to go, if their families are cared for; and they will go forth, trusting to the mercies of the world and to the kindness of the Saints for their own necessities, if only their loved ones at home can be provided for, even Apostles, Seventies, Elders and Priests.

And, remember brethren, that this gospel of Christ so revealed by the voice of God and restored by the ministration of angels, is not only to be preached in this land of America, and in our own neighborhoods, but that it must also be presented to "every nation, kindred, tongue and people," as said by the Lord himself. Therefore men must be sent unto them, or we will not be guiltless before God at the judgment day. For there we (the Church) will be held accountable for the work we are commanded to do, and for the means, talents and powers given us by the Almighty. But, if our talents shall be used, and our possessions be tithed, then we will be justified at the great day.

And, brethren, see the blessings promised by the Lord unto his people. And are we not his people? Yea; we testify that this is the very work of God, the one spoken of by all the prophets.

And of this promise how reads the prophet Malachi, in the commandment of the Lord that contains such great assurances to his people? You need but to read it to have a witness in your hearts by the Holy Spirit that it is divine, even a covenant promulgated and freely offered to all by the power and mercy of a covenant keeping God; and the revelations of the Lord in the latter days are of the same effect.

Now, concerning the law in relation to tithings and consecrations, we believe that the whole Church is now under the law given of God to it, before its gathering. And we believe that all who have property are subject to the commandments of the Lord already given to the Church, in one way or the other; and that each and all who have not yet done so should of right pay one-tenth of their possessions, or else make a consecration of such portion or amount thereof as they may be willing to lay before the Lord, the amount paid, in either of these ways, to be considered as a beginning of tithing for them, and they thenceforth to pay one tenth of their net increase annually.

But, if some can neither pay one-tenth of the value of their possessions nor of said annual increase, without actual wrong to themselves, causing injury and privation, then let them pay such amount, much or little, as they may, in good conscience before God, feel justified in giving as an offering to him; and from time to time thereafter as they may also be justified in giving of their income, even according as they may be prospered, as the Spirit of the Lord may direct their hearts.

For we feel assured that all these things are acceptable unto God, and that he will give great blessings unto all his Saints who pay their tithes and offerings into his store-house. For these things are necessary that his work may be done, and that his people may all be justified, each one being a steward over that they have, and, as free agents for themselves, made capable by God of judging what is right, according to his law.

In the revelations on the subject it is stated that "none are exempt from this law who belong to the Church of the living God," as saith the Lord; and all are commanded to pay their dues unto him. For a portion of his words read the Doctrine and Covenants sections 42:8-10; 51:1; 70:2-3; 83:18.

Therefore, brethren, the work of the Lord must be done; and if we fail to accomplish that which is committed to our trust, where shall be our reward? And of what avail will be our faith in the doctrine, and our sanguine expectation of the coming of Christ to reign on the earth, if we do not perform the allotted work.

Truly the cause of the Redeemer needs sustaining everywhere by such means and such aid as will send into the field all who the authorities having the matter in charge, and the General Conference, may from time to time appoint as worthy and able representatives of the truths of heaven. And the work demands an extra effort from this time forth, from this the fiftieth anniversary-year of the establishing of the Church of Christ; and it is a matter greatly desired by all, that, from the coming April General Conference, or as soon thereafter as possible, those of the ministry who offer themselves, may be fitted out, and their families secured against want while they are in the field.

Some important foreign missions need to be sustained in men and means, and in our own land there is a constant need of men and of means to send them with, to answer the increasing calls that come from the North, the South, the East and the West, where people wish to hear the word of God preached, even all through this broad land. And in all these lands and countries the work must yet be prosecuted with energy and with power, in order to fulfill the commandments of the Lord.

Hence, in the name of Christ, and of the Church, we call upon its members everywhere for the aid that is needed now; and we pray, with one heart and one mind, that the Lord of the vineyard will make you both able and willing to impart of your substance for the benefit of this great and eternal work, (which is likewise for your own salvation), that it may be well and faithfully done. Then will the Lord cut his work short in righteousness and establish his peaceful kingdom upon the earth, according to his promise.

Now concerning the payment of moneys, we wish those who live in districts where there are Bishop's Agents to respect those Agents, by the paying of their tithes and offerings to them to be recorded, and by them to be sent up to the Bishop; and where there are no Agents let it be sent direct to the Bishop by the payer.

In closing this appeal to the Church we remark that we have not desired to transcend the bounds of our authority or privilege, and trust that we have not done so, nor presented anything that is not correct. We realize our imperfectness, yet, believing in this work of God, and in the teaching and practical working of the above principles of his law, and that it is a proper and good time to speak of them, we therefore present this our epistle, and these our views for the consideration of the Church.

And, furthermore, we hope that the action of all, and the response of all, will be in such a hearty manner that God's approbation and great favor may be with his people, more than ever before; and that his work may increase and shine in the earth with great power and brilliancy, even unto the glory of his name and the salvation of all who will obey his commandments.

Thus praying for and seeking that it may be done, we remain your fellow laborers in the gospel of Christ,

The Bishopric. { I. L. ROGERS,
H. A. STEBBINS,
D. DANCER.

We trust that the Agents will not fail to make their regular annual reports, closing on the first of March, as they have been heretofore requested. Send them in early that they may be examined and arranged before Conference.

By-laws.—Whereas, we, the Saints residing in Butte City, Montana, realize that great reproach has been brought on the cause of Christ in this Territory by the unwise conduct and examples of some of the members of the Church, and, being desirous to avoid the same, we do therefore adopt the following by-laws, and cheerfully subscribe to the same:

Resolved, (1) That no member can be received into this branch that has hardness of heart or any unsettled difficulty.

NOTICE.

TO THOSE HAVING IN CHARGE PROPERTY BELONGING TO THE CHURCH.

Those concerned will please take notice that the General Conference of April, 1878, adopted a recommendation of its committee, whereby it is required that all those "having charge of Church property" should "value the same and forward to the Bishop the report of such valuation, and that all property not yet deeded to the Church * * be alike valued and proper deeds made, as provided in the Church articles."

No such reports were made to me prior to the April Conference of 1879, consequently I could not present them when called upon there, nor have I received any since. Therefore, I now urge upon the attention of the brethren concerned, the necessity and importance of complying with the above requirement of the General Conference, and I request them to send in their reports by the 1st of March, 1880, without fail.

TO BISHOP'S AGENTS.

At the April Conference of 1878, it was made requisite that Bishop's Agents should render annual itemized accounts to me, for presentation to the General Conference, and yet but a few agents complied with this law. Then, in April, 1879, the General Conference further required that the Agents should not only make out itemized reports, but that these reports should be published as are the itemized reports of the Bishop, these to be published annually. The resolution reads as follows: "Resolved, that we require of the Bishop of the Church a report through the Herald, or in a supplement sheet, an itemized report of the means received and paid out by the Agents, with the names of the donors and to whom paid, and that this report be made annually."

I therefore call the attention of the Agents to this matter, and urge that they pay heed to it, all of them. From the first of March, 1879, to the first of March, 1880, every item of receipt and of expenditure should be given in their reports to me, giving names of persons or branches (if by branch collection) giving, and the names of those to whom anything has been paid. Where an Agent has resigned and another has succeeded him, the books of the former will show the facts, and the report should embrace them the same from the date named. Be prompt and accurate, brethren, and send in your reports immediately after March 1st, 1880, so that they can be arranged, copied, and prepared for presentation to the Conference, and for publication. ISRAEL L. ROGERS, SANDWICH, ILL., 20th Dec. 1879. Presiding Bishop.

OBITUARIES.—Obituary notices not exceeding one hundred words, about twelve lines, will be published free of charge; when exceeding one hundred words, five cents for each additional eight words (one line) will be charged; notices of prominent Church officials excepted. Money to accompany notice.

The Political State of Europe.

THERE is no longer any attempt upon the part of the European nations to disguise the fact that a great tumult of war, a very general engagement of the chief nations of the Old World is expected; and that, too, before long. The events and circumstances of the present are too weighty, too prophetic in their character, too mighty in their gathering and uniting force, to deny the coming storm of war, or the expected convulsion of many nations in it.

All are now forced to admit that this present and recent great massing of armies by each power, this disciplining of troops, this perfection in arms and armaments, striven for, and this general superiority sought after by each of the kingdoms over all others, so far as they can accomplish it, that these things, they confess, do not mean peace, that none of them do; and that they do not mean merely protection, neither do they give promise of the settlement of all differences between the nations by arbitration, as was so ardently hoped for and expected a few years ago; for it is too plain to all that these gigantic preparations, these immense armies and equipments, mean war, aggressive war, war to the death, to the finishing of the weaker, and their removal from the map of kingdoms, the old boundaries to be erased, and their former domains to be possessed by the victor or victors.

And, looking at the present and at its forecast for the future, these powers expect that this war to the knife will begin whenever some nation or national alliance shall become strong enough, or so consider itself or themselves, as to, take the offensive, and start out against those who oppose their plans of extension or conquest, or against those who are themselves too aggressive; and that without a flag of truce, for the motto will be "conquer or die," and all, one after the other, will be arrayed upon one or the other of the two sides in the great struggle to ensue, the victor or victors to take the spoils, and, so far as they may be able, from time to time, or as they may desire, to have the territorial sway also.

The German newspapers give as a reason for the recent large addition made to the German army, that it became necessary in order to keep peace with Russia and France, the latter of which powers has so wonderfully and so fully recovered from the seeming deadly blow given to her and to her national wealth by Germany in 1871. Compared with either of the above kingdoms the territorial area of France is small, yet last year (1879) she expended one hundred and thirty-five million dollars on her army. During the same time and for the same purpose Russia paid out one hundred and eighty million, and Germany one hundred and five million dollars, while England expended one hundred and sixty million to sustain her army and navy, the latter arm of her service being much more to her than is the same service to any other European power.

And, upon this matter of great armies and great preparations for war, and for war only, the immensity of which is best exemplified by the above figures, a writer has well said, while moralizing upon the subject, that "one of the most significant illustrations of human folly" is this act of creating and equipping vast armies at the expense of the laboring and toiling millions. Because the people of these nations, as time goes on in this nineteenth century of progress of liberty and of peace, are thereby more and more borne down,—down to poverty, to degradation, to national ruin,—because the power created to protect becomes at last the Nemesis, the agency of destruction in the hands of kings and emperors, as God foresaw would be the tendency and result, and therefore forbade Israel a king. The nations of people tax themselves, or suffer themselves to be taxed, to support and maintain that which is not only far from blessing and enriching them, but which, to the reverse of all this, is a ponderous, immovable and ever increasing weight upon all the land and upon all its people, crushing them financially, socially and morally, breaking up tens of thousands of homes, depleting the civil schools of learning, and destroying the business and other plans of untold thousands of men in every nation, while the general domain is impoverished and the arts and industries are ruined, all the life and force of the empire being turned, all its sinews strained to support the gigantic incubus that burdens the land and the dwellers therein. Thus the children are driven to other and freer countries than the fatherland, to give their force and power there, and to people it with their posterity, driven from the door of the father by his oppressive power and made to seek a more hospitable land than his, other lands than their own by birthright.

Of this national self-destruction a recent editorial in the Chicago Tribune reads: "Rapid as the progress of the world has been in the arts and sciences, and in every feature of modern civilization, its most rapid advancement has been in the creation of colossal national debts, to support vast standing armies and provide material of war in time of peace." In proof of this, we find that the public expenditures of the European nations during the past year was nearly three billion dollars, and their national debts now amount in the aggregate to twenty-one billion, six hundred and twenty thousand dollars, an amount so vast that it is beyond the comprehension of man to think of at once as to its worth and value; and we are assured that "of these vast amounts the largest proportion is spent in the military and naval service," not for the benefit and comfort of the people.

And it is also stated that these amounts "will be still further increased this year, for there is a general increase of armaments, garrisons, forts, armies, and of war material all over Europe." The Tribune editor sums it up this way: "And for this immense outlay there is no adequate return, and there is no hope for the future, because the demand for men and money will go on increasing."

He further presents the situation and the prospects as they now appear, in the following language: "All the governments of Europe seem bent on self-destruction. There are signs of a war which will involve England, France, Russia and Germany, and this clearly means the involvement of all Europe."

An extract from an editorial in the London Times reads:

"If ever there was an appetite which grew with feeding, the appetite that craves for greater armies is such an one. * * * The sole cause of the nightmare which is riding Europe down, is that each nation is striving to steal a march upon its neighbor before its neighbor's eyes."

Other extracts from the Tribune on the issue presented to the people are as follows:

"And what is the other side of the picture? General poverty, misery and distress. In Russia, millions of people are steeped in the most abject ignorance and wretchedness, scourged with epidemics, and suffering with hunger. With all her vast standing army, and the millions upon millions she spends every year, Russia can not protect her ruler from the plots of assassins, her functionaries from the assaults of Nihilism, or her public property from the torch of the incendiary. * * With disordered finances threatening bankruptcy, with her people discontented with the Government, with labor ground down to the earth, with ignorance, misery and destitution everywhere, Russia continues increasing her armies and piling up taxation. How much better off is Germany, with all her enlightenment and superior civilization? The cost of her war preparations is wrung out of the labor of her people until their substance is nearly eaten up, while in some parts of the Empire famine has settled down. * * Italy is no better off. She is hopelessly plunged in debt, almost entirely by reason of her military expenditures incurred in trying to keep up with her more powerful neighbors."

"And, as for England, a tithe of the money spent upon her army and navy and squandered in unrighteous foreign wars, would bring relief to her starving thousands in Ireland. Of all the European nations France is the only one that is not suffering from the immediate consequences of military expenditures, and the only one that is not increasing its expenditure faster than its resources warrant."

"How much longer this constant increase of armies and taxation, and this enormous strain upon the industries of the people can continue, no one can say, but it is evident that there must be a point where it will end in a crash and universal bankruptcy. The toiling masses of Europe who support this vast outlay can not do it much longer. It would seem that a general European war is the only outlet of escape, provided that war could be so colossal and so crushing as to necessitate partial disarmament, * * but the despair of the situation at present is that the people are taught to believe that war is the first object of the nation, instead of peace and the development of industry."

From the ranks of the people, from the laboring and producing class of the nations, are the soldiers drawn, and these by hundreds of thousands become consumers, idlers as it were, and the remainder of the people must support them, must feed and clothe them, and must supply the means for the government to equip them, and to buy all the attendant paraphernalia of war even in times of peace, and much more in time of war to bear the stress and strain of the national demands for men and money. Thus is it where these vast standing armies are, the most intelligent, active and helpful will, and do, gather up what they have and come to America, the land wherein "dwell the fowl of every wing," (Ezek. 17:23), the people of every clime and country.

A German historian and editor says of the situation in that country that "the moral unification of the people can not be said to be yet completed," and he speaks of the internal danger from Socialism, and of the external one that threatens both from the east and from the west,—France and Russia.

As for England and Russia it was expected at one time that Persia would be, or was already, engaged on the side of the latter country, but England, through Disraeli, has probably secured a change by a sort of bribery, namely, by giving the Persians permission to occupy the city of Herat, in Afghanistan, which city is on the great highway from Europe to the Indies, and that pleases Persia and enlists her as an ally, it is supposed, and so England has more security against the encroachments of Russia; and by the same aid England may be helped to extend her sway in Asia, for she never tires of gaining acquisitions of territory or of having dependencies and colonies to add to her revenue and to be her subjects.

But it is expected that Russia will oppose this occupation of Herat, and in that event, there will be a war upon this issue, "a costly and bloody war;" for Persia could not hold it alone, and England would have to come to her aid or give up the stratagem. Russia is already straining every energy to accumulate men and material on her eastern border to meet any emergency likely to arise, and her ablest commander, Skobeloff, is there at their head. The gaining of Persia as an ally is important, for she has over one hundred thousand soldiers, and they are on the ground near where the impending struggle between England and Russia is expected take place. ### P. Tucker's "Rise and Progress of Mormonism" Examined.

Concluded.

ON page 56 Mr. Tucker speaks further of Smith's visit to northern Pennsylvania, as before referred to and says: "The result was, that in November, [1829, see page 55], Smith went to northern Pennsylvania, as previously appointed, when he married the daughter of Isaac Hale, and was baptized after the Mormon ritual—Rigdon being the 'match-maker' and the officiating 'clergyman' in these celebrations."

As to Joseph's marriage, Mr. Tucker falsifies in three points, viz.: Joseph was married by Squire Tarbell, in South Bainbridge, Chenango county, New York, January 18th, 1827. See birth and marriage record of Joseph Smith, Sen., as published in "Joseph Smith the Prophet," page 40; printed 1853; written by Joseph's mother.

Mrs. Emma Smith, one of the parties to the marriage under consideration, about three months prior to her death, in reply to the following question: "Who performed the marriage ceremony for Joseph Smith and Emma Hale? When? Where?" as propounded by her own son, Joseph Smith, now of Plano, Illinois, answered: "I was married at South Bainbridge, New York; at the house of Squire Tarbell, by him, when I was in my twenty-second or twenty-third year." (See the Saints' Herald, number for October 1st, 1879). As to Joseph's baptism, by Oliver Cowdery, in May, 1829. See "Pearl of Great Price," page 45; "Joseph Smith the Prophet," page 131. Now while these works cited place the date of Joseph's baptism in May, 1829, Mr. Tucker says it was subsequent to November of that year; and while they say Cowdery officiated, he says Rigdon baptized him. One is the evidence of Smith and Cowdery; the other is according to the "information" of Mr. Tucker. How credible the sources of Mr. Tucker's information!

Mr. Tucker is not satisfied with having made false and contradictory statements concerning the foregoing subjects and characters, but proceeds to falsify and misrepresent the plain, unequivocal record and historical statements of the Book of Mormon itself, and hence on page 35 of his work, in referring to the translation of the Book of Mormon, says: "These translations purported to relate to the history of scattered tribes of the earth, chiefly Nephites and Lamanites, who, after the confusion of tongues at the tower of Babel, had been directed by the Lord across the sea to this then wilderness-land, where they mostly perished by wars among themselves, and by famine and pestilence, and from whose remnants sprang our North American Indians." Now, while it is true that the Book represents that the Aboriginees of America sprang from the Laman-ites alone, it does not say that the Nephites and Lamanites "had been directed by the Lord across the sea," at any time, or from any place. The progenitors of the Nephites and Lamanites never had been at the tower of Babel, so far as is now known to us through any record whatever. And we believe this statement of Mr. Tucker to be a wilful misrepresentation of the record, just like hundreds of other subjects he refers to, as we are able to make manifest.

Our reason for so believing, is because he has devoted the greater part of three or four chapters of his work to extracts from the Book of Mormon itself, and in making his selections and arranging them, it is plainly manifest that he was not ignorant of its contents. Moreover, some of the very extracts which he gives are from the Books of Nephi, and contain the history of the progenitors of the Nephites and Lamanites; of their exodus from Jerusalem, about six hundred years before Christ; as may be seen by referring to the 86th and 87th pages of the work. When a pretended author knowingly and willfully misrepresents and falsifies a plain matter of record like this, can we accept as valid and true his writings on any subject treated of by him? Enough has been culled from the work already, to arouse the suspicions of those who have trusted his veracity, and to create doubt in their minds as to his honesty as a historian. His testimony should be discredited and rejected.

On the 58th page, Mr. Tucker, in giving an account of the organization of the Church, says: "This ceremony, conducted with apparent seriousness by the prophet, supported on the right and left by Cowdery and Harris—of which it is now too late to write the full particulars from memory—took place at the dwelling-house of Joseph Smith, Sen., in the month of June, 1830. There was no praying, singing or preaching attempted, but Joseph gave various readings and interpretations of the new Bible. The senior Smith was installed as Patriarch and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints."

A glance at the above statement will detect no less than three falsities. First, the Church, instead of being organized in the month of June, was organized April the 6th, 1830. But we are sure that Mr. Tucker means to tell us and have us to understand that this organization that was effected in June, was the first and the original organization of the Church, for on the next—the 59th page—he styles it "this incipient church inauguration;" and on the next, or 60th page, "this preliminary launching of the Mormon ship" Zion—"this primeval foundation." Now if our author was at Palmyra when the "incipient" organization of the Church was effected, April 6th, 1830, and was not aware of it, nor had he learned it after thirty-seven anniversary conferences had convened, all on April 6th, in commemoration of the "incipient" organization, what does the authenticity of his history amount to? Secondly, "No praying, singing or preaching was attempted" on this occasion. This meeting referred to was the first conference ever held by the Church, and the thought expressed by our author (?) is altogether an unreasonable one. There were more than thirty persons present at this meeting, according to Mr Tucker himself. And the idea that a conference would be held and no praying, singing, or preaching even attempted is evidently untrue. Yet, he describes to us that "Cowdery and Harris" were ordained to office, by laying on of hands, and that other "ceremonious observances" were attended to. These other ceremonies are not described, but had they been, would no doubt have contradicted the statement referred to, that there was neither prayer nor song. Thirdly, "The senior Smith was installed Patriarch and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." How this statement could be made by Mr. Tucker, with the history of the Church, for and against it, for thirty-seven years before him, we are unable to explain, lest it be his desire wilfully to misrepresent and falsify. Those that are acquainted to any extent whatever, with the history of the rise of the Church, are aware that this is a clear mistake.

On page 130, Mr. Tucker repeats this same story: "Joseph Smith, Sen., the first Patriarch and President of the Church;" but, on pages 134 and 135, he informs us better, and contradicting the former statements, tells us; "Joseph Smith, Jun, was the first President," and after quoting from some of the early revelations of Joseph, as now found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants to prove this, says in conclusion: "By these exalted authorities, the prophet becomes the president of the Church." This surely entitles our author (?) to valid authenticity!

For the sake of consistency, we must quote once more from page 35: "These translations purported to relate to the history of scattered tribes of the earth, chiefly 'Nephites' and 'Lamanites,' who after the confusion of tongues at the tower of Babel, had been directed by the Lord across the sea to this then wilderness-land." And to the above annex as a part of a summary, as given on page 85. "The reader will discover a chain of events, incidents, episodes, perils, and tribulations, by wilderness and by sea, constituting the story of immigration by various Israelitish tribes, with their brazen and golden records, from the beginning of their journeyings at Jerusalem, to the consummation of the same in the promised land."

The Nephites and Lamanites referred to in the first quotation, are the descendants of but a part of one Israelitish tribe, that came from Jerusalem, six hundred years before Christ, instead of from Babel, after the confusion of tongues. Both of these statements misrepresent the claims of the Book of Mormon in some points, while they contradict each other in others; at the same time they manifest the utter unscrupulousness of the writer, as well as his disregard as to whether he states the facts in the case, or not. A writer that will falsify the historic statements of a record, will give false renderings as to its origin.

We now call attention to a lengthy statement found on the 125th page, where, in referring to the coming forth, printing, and other circumstances connected with the publication of the Book of Mormon, says:

"Indeed, it is apparent from the marked changes in style of composition occurring in numbers of instances, that emendations and additions were made by some other than the original writer's hand. Then, too, the verbose title-page—the 'preface' in regard to the translations lost by the incendiariism of Mrs. Harris—the testimonies of witnesses, and the long line of revelations that followed—which are not presumed to have been composed by the illiterate Smith, but by Rigdon during Smith's lifetime—all these are strong corroborative considerations connected with the proofs that Rigdon supplied the literary aliment needed in conforming the Spaulding production to the grand copartnership Mormon speculation. And it is not known that he has ever disclaimed the part that for more than thirty years has been publicly assigned to him in the great plagiarism and imposture."

We have italicised some words of the foregoing, and wish them to be considered. The "unity" of "style of composition" that characterizes the Book of Mormon, all through it, has been urged by many as an objection, when it is considered that it is a compilation of many books, written by as many different writers, or nearly so. But this objection has been answered by the fact that the compilation was effected mainly by one man. And were it not for this latter fact, the objection would be a valid one. The "emendations" referred to, are simply an abridgment and condensation of the parts not compiled by the compiler. As to the additions which our author (?) supposes to be found in the books, just the opposite is true, for instead of adding to the writings of those he compiled, the compiler condensed and abridged much of their writings, and what the compiler has said of himself, is no addition to their writings. As to "the title," "preface," "testimony of the witnesses," "lost translations" and "the long line of revelations," their writing, or composition, Mr. Tucker presumes they were written not by "Smith, but by Rigdon, during Smith's lifetime." As all this is presumption with no evidence to sustain it, it needs no refutation. Mr. Tucker does not claim to have been informed of all this, much less to have "personal knowledge of it. This presumption is said to be a "strong corroborative consideration connected with the proof that Rigdon supplied the literary aliment needed in conforming the Spaulding production to the grand co-partnership Mormon speculation." The "proofs" that the above allegation is true, have been examined and compared, and have been found to be contradictory and false; and this presumptive auxiliary to the "proof," is as true as the proof has been found to be. In relation to the last sentence of this quotation, we say most emphatically that "it is known" that Rigdon "has disclaimed," and most positively denied "the part that for more than thirty years has been publicly assigned to him in the great plagiarism and imposture," that he is said, (though not proved), to have committed, in connection with the origin of the Book of Mormon. As evidence of this, see his letter written to Messrs Bartlett and Sullivan, Editors of some periodical, on the 27th of May, 1839. This letter was reprinted, and published as late as 1843 or 1844; and was also published in another work published as a "History of the Mormons," and stands recorded on the 45th, 46th, 47th and 48th pages. The title page of this latter history was torn off ere it came into our possession, hence we know not the author's name, but it was written subsequent to 1849, as it contains a lengthy article from a correspondent of the New York Tribune, from Salt Lake City, July 8th, 1849, which stands on pages 310-14. This proves that Mr. Tucker writes falsely in regard to Sidney Rigdon. And we scarce believe that, when collating data for his work, he was ignorant of all this. Mr. Rigdon says:

"If I were to say that I ever heard of the Rev. Solomon Spaulding and his wife, until Dr. P. Hulbert wrote his lie about me, I should be a liar like unto themselves. Why was not the testimony of Mr. Patterson obtained to give force to this shameful tale of lies? The only reason is, he was not a fit tool for them to work with; he would not lie for them; if he were called on, he would testify to what I have here said."

Mr. Tucker gives a very lengthy account of the troubles of the Saints, while in the State of Missouri; of the arbitrations of the Saints and citizens; of the riotous scenes that followed; and on page 161, says: "Riotous scenes of violence followed. The printing office was destroyed, several of the 'saints' were tarred and feathered, and others were killed and wounded while defending their rights." He concludes his story of these events on page 166, as follows: "Perhaps the occasion should not pass without the remark, that by enlightened people the Mormons were regarded as the victims of misguided vengeance in Missouri. The ruffianly violence they encountered at the hands of lawless mobs, in several instances eventuating in deliberate murder, finds no extenuating in any alleged provocation. The due process of law might have afforded adequate redress for the criminalities of which they should be found guilty on legal trial. Such was the view of the subject rightly taken by the people of Illinois and of the world, though it may have been wrongfully applied in favor of the persecuted."

When it is remembered that the data used by Mr. T., as the basis of his history of these Missouri scenes, are the statements of the civil and military officers of the state, uttered during the excitement of those times; the foregoing are peculiarly strange admissions to be made by one so bitterly opposed to the Church as Mr. T. was. That the unparalleled persecutions of the Saints was brought on by "lawless mobs" is surely more than was aimed to be said, and ought to be duly considered, by those who hold to Mr. T. as authority.

"The due process of law," is all the Saints ever asked at the hands of the officers of the Government, as their entreaties and "petitions," and "memorials" to the State and United States governments will show. And the only reply ever received to these written instruments, were, by Missouri, "You must be exterminated;" by the Union, "Your cause is just, but we can do nothing for you."

But the testimonies of the opposing side of this question, as on others, is contradictory and conflicting. Hence on page 162, speaking of the efforts of the Saints to obtain redress for their wrongs, says: "In the interim, the Governor of the State was appealed to by the Mormons for redress, and he advised them to apply to the courts," and in their efforts to carry out this advice, and urging their suits in the courts, "a further lawless violence was thus provoked." And on page 165, represents Gov. Boggs as saying to the Legislature of Missouri, in 1840: "These people had violated the laws of the land by open force and armed resistance to them; they had undertaken, without the aid of the civil authority, to redress their real or fancied grievances."

One or the other of these statements is untrue for they are opposed to each other, and an honest historian would have ascertained which was true, and left the false statement out, if he wished to be believed.

On page 164, Mr. T. represents General Clark as writing to Gov. Boggs, in 1838: "There is no crime from treason down to petit larceny, but these people, or a majority of them have been guilty of."

Now as to the truthfulness of this communication we can better judge, by a comparison of this with a statement uttered by this same Gen. Clark in his address to the Mormons, about the year 1838, which says: "Another thing yet remains for you to comply with—that is, that you leave the State forthwith; and whatever your feelings concerning this affair, whatever your innocence, it is nothing to me. General Lucas, who is equal in authority with me, has made this treaty with you, I am determined to see it carried out."—History of the Mormons, page 111. A treaty had been entered into between the Saints and Gen. Lucas, and Gen. Clark was to see it carried out. As to the innocency of the Saints, this was nothing to him; thus admitting that he knows nothing of their innocence or guilt. But of their innocence he cares not; he simply is determined to carry out the treaty of Gen. Lucas.

Mr. Tucker's work is mainly a revision of previously printed works, as is manifest from his reference to subjects treated of by Howe and others; not only in regard to the Spaulding story, but the history of Mrs. Waite is cited; as also Introduction to Wright & Co's New York edition of the Book of Mormon, and a lengthy article written by Ex. Gov. S. S. Harding expressly for this work. And, hence, a refutation of the false statements made in this work, is an answer to all the works referred to by Mr. Tucker.

In view of the above, we see why the forged, or pretended affidavit, as gotten up by Howe, is referred to by Mr. Tucker, on the 128th page of his work, and fathered on to one Peter Ingersoll. Now we are credibly informed that this same Peter Ingersoll lives in Lapeer county, Michigan, and solemnly denies ever making oath to the subject referred to, or any other subject connected with the faith of the Saints. This affidavit is "Dated Palmyra, Wayne county, New York, Dec. 2d, 1833, certified by Thomas T. Baldwin, Judge of Wayne County, to have been sworn to before him according to law, 9th day of Dec. 1833."

In 1833, there was no such office as Judge of "County Court." Circuit Courts, Courts of Oyer and Terminer, Common Pleas and General Sessions were held for every county, but there was no "County Court." For these latter statements we are indebted to a "Mr. W. W.," of Boyne, Michigan, December 6th, 1876.

This pretended affidavit manufactured by Dr. Hulbert alias Howe, is used by Mr. Tucker as evidence against the Saints in his efforts to degrade their character, and is only another evidence of the utter unscrupulousness of Mr. T., as to the truth or falsity of what he uses as evidence against those he opposes.

An occasional anecdote characterizes the work of Mr. Tucker, but these are the statements only of "fun-loving dare-devils" and "notorious wags," and we are inclined to the idea that the greater part of his data is from a like source. See pages 31 and 80.

The "Rise and Progress of Mormonism" contains a lengthy history of the Utah Apostates, and the pretended revelation on polygamy; accepting at the same time the assumption that it was developed by Joseph Smith. As to this assumption, the only evidence ever produced to sustain it is the lone word of Brigham Young, and his word only; and though he claims that it was in existence as early as 1843, and that Emma Smith, Joseph's wife, burned the original revelation, he (Brigham) preserved a copy of it, but never considered it expedient to present it to the Church, or bring it to light, till 1852, which he then did at a special conference in Salt Lake City, asking that it be received as authority. As to the burning of the original, Mrs. Emma says, "This is a lie, made out of whole cloth." This she said as late as 1867. And in the same conversation with Elder J. W. Briggs, now of Iowa, in 1867, in reply to the question, "Did you ever see that document [the pretended revelation] in manuscript or previous to its publication by Pratt?" 1852). Answer by Mrs. Bidamon, (Smith), "I never did." This conversation is found on page 7, of "A Criticism upon the so called Revelation, of 1843," by J. W. Briggs. And he that fabricates a falsehood in regard to the pretended history of a pretended revelation, would do the same in regard to its pretended origin. There is no evidence that such an instrument of writing as this pretended revelation is, ever came through, or originated with Joseph Smith. We challenge any credible evidence.

Mr. T. is not satisfied with charging Joseph with having originated polygamy, but also with practicing the doctrine; with having "forty wives all told." Just as well tell a big lie as a little one, while he is about it. But there is not one word of evidence of the truthfulness of this on record anywhere. As our reply to this charge will conclude our investigation and exposition of Mr. Tucker's work, we shall not amplify to any great extent,—shall not here introduce the many negative proofs, as found in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, as these, with others, are extensively circulated through the medium of the tracts published by the Church, also the Saints' Herald. We shall, however, append a few questions, as propounded to Mrs. Emma Bidamon, formerly Smith, by her son, Joseph, about three months prior to her death, and her answers, "whereby though she being dead, yet speaketh."

Question.—"What of spiritual wifery?"

Answer.—"There was no revelation on either polygamy or spiritual wifery. No such thing as polygamy, or spiritual wifery, was taught, either publicly or privately, before my husband's death, that I now have, or ever had any knowledge of."

Q.—"Did he not have other wives than yourself?"

A.—"He had no other wife but me; nor did he to my knowledge ever have."

Q.—"Did he not hold marital relation with other women than yourself?"

A.—"He did not have improper relations with any woman that ever came to my knowledge."—The Saints' Herald, Oct. 1st, 1879.

This testimony was borne by Sister Emma, to her own son, only about three months before her death, and is now recorded, and consequently is of force. Just prior to death is the wrong time of one's life to bear false witness and deny the wrong done during life, or to conceal the wrongs of others with whom they have been connected. This testimony, therefore, should, with all honest people, be an end of controversy relative to this subject, and forever close the mouths of "false accusers" "of the brethren."

As we have reviewed the modern historical parts of this work, except that part which relates to the people of Utah, and as we are not "set for the defense" of those in apostasy, we now submit our effort to a candid public, asking a patient hearing, and a faithful comparison of this our review with the "work" reviewed.

C. SCOTT.

LAWRENCE, Michigan, Nov. 14th, 1879.

From Painesville, Ohio.

PRES. J. SMITH, Plano, Illinois:

DEAR SIR:—One week ago to day I arrived in this city, to look after the interests of the Reorganized Church in its action in the State Courts, to recover the possession of the Kirtland Temple property, in Lake County. The plaintiff's claim is based upon the grounds, that the Reorganized Church is the lawful and legitimate successor of the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized by Joseph Smith, jr., A. D. 1830, at Palmyra, New York, and to which the property in controversy was deeded in the year 1841. The cause was tried to the court, Judge Sherman on the bench, on the 17th inst., and is now held under Advisement. Upon the final submission of the case the Court referred to the evidence produced, as "showing a very wide departure from the laws and usages of the original church by that body of Mormons in Utah Territory," which make claim to be in the line of succession. Although no decision has been made in the case yet, plaintiff's counsel are confident that judgment must be for the Reorganized Church and ordering that they be put in possession of the property. Since my arrival, I have had the pleasure of the acquaintance of many of the leading citizens of the county, and find that among them the most tolerant spirit is manifest toward the members of the original and the Reorganized Church. And now, while I am upon the ground and have every means to ascertain the true character of the Latter Day Saints, or Mormons, who resided here from 1830 to 1838, and have been surprised myself with the facts in the case, as so widely differing from what is found in the popular histories of religious denominations of the day and encyclopedias, I have determined to submit to you the result of my candid enquiries.

So far, among the former acquaintances of Joseph Smith, jr., I have failed to find one who will say that he was not a good citizen and an honest man. "Joe Smith," say they, "was an honorable man and a gentleman in every particular, let the histories say what they may." Now, if these things are true, history greatly belies the man and in the eternal fitness of things, time must correct the false and fickle stories and vindicate his memory. My information is derived from such men as Messrs. Quinn, Storm, Burrows and Axtell, who are foremost citizens of the county. These parties say that among some of the fanatical and ignorant there is existing great prejudice and hatred against the early Mormons, and I have found in Kirtland two persons who are terribly bitter, but neither of these had any acquaintance with the parties and base their knowledge on the "stories told." One of these is the present pastor of the Methodist Church in Kirtland, and who is now under the charge of being not only a fanatic, but crazy, and his congregation ask his removal; the other, a Mr. Harvey, of Kirtland, a member of the Baptist Church, but ignorant, can neither read nor write, and abuses his own wife for differing from him in religion, and teaches his children to abuse their mother.

As a sample of my testimony I give you my conversation with I. P. Axtell Esq., a large farmer and director in the First National Bank of Painesville for many years; a man of energy and experience, and as early as 1844, a member of the Whig convention at Baltimore, which nominated Henry Clay for President. The conversation was as follows:

Q.—When did you come to this county, Mr. Axtell?

A.—My father moved here with his family in the year 1830. I was but a boy then.

Q.—What was your father's business?

A.—He was a Baptist minister, and kept a hotel then.

Q.—Did you know Joseph Smith?

A.—Yes, sir. I have seen him many a time; he was often at my father's house; and I with many young people, often went to Kirtland to see him and his people. I knew his father also, who at the time I knew him had charge of the Kirtland Temple. He took me with others through the Temple at one time; he appeared to be a fine old man.

Q.—When did your father become acquainted with Mr. Smith?

A.—In about six weeks after he came to the county he first met him; he went out of his way one day six miles to see Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon. He said he found them in Kirtland township; they had been there but a short time and occupied a small log house. He found them to be quite intelligent men, and he said pleasant talkers, and quite free to converse upon their religious views, which at that time was known as the "new sect." My father always said Joseph Smith was a conscientious and upright man.

Q.—Did you know any other persons of the new society?

A.—O, yes, a great many. I knew Mr. Pratt very well. He was a smart and a square man all around. Those men were neither knaves nor rogues; that is my opinion of them. I suppose some of them may have been. It was just as in all other bodies of the kind, there will be some bad ones, but I don't know of any that were. There were a good many stories circulated about them that I knew to be false. At one time an ox was found in Kirtland township, killed and skinned; and there was a great do about the Mormons having killed it. My brother was sheriff at the time, and with others went up to investigate the matter, and he says that there was not the least evidence which showed that the Mormons had any hand in killing the ox. Persons around, however, who hated their religion would tell that they did.

Q.—How was it that people did not like them? Were they not good citizens?

A.—Yes, they were as good citizens as those of any society. It was the fanatics in religion that tried to drive those men out. There were a great many conservative men in our county at that time who held these fanatics back, and if it had not been for this they would have gone in and killed them all. But our intelligent and honorable citizens prevented this.

Q.—What about the Kirtland Bank swindle? Mr. Axtell, you are a banker, and know how that was, do you not?

A.—Yes, I know about that bank; they started in Kirtland. These parties went into the banking business as a great many others in the State of Ohio and other states. They got considerable money out at first, and their enemies began to circulate all manner of stories against them and as we had a great many banks then that issued what was known as "wild-cat" money, the people began to get alarmed at so many stories, and would take the other banks' issue instead of the Kirtland; and so much of it was forced in at once that the bank was not able to take it up. Had the people let these people alone there is no reason that I know of why the Kirtland Bank should not have existed to this time, and on as stable a basis as other banks.

Q.—Then you think it was the fault of the enemies of the bank that it failed?

A.—Yes, I do; and it was not the only one that failed either by a good many, and with which Smith had nothing to do.

Q.—What then do you consider the prime causes of the expulsion of the Mormons from Kirtland?

A.—The ignorance and fanaticism of their accusers did it; they thought public sentiment would tolerate it and they did it. The same as Roger Williams was driven out and the witches burned in Massachusetts. My position is that no fanatic, either in religion or politics, should be permitted to hold an office of trust in this country.

The above is a fair average sample of the testimony of those I have met and talked with as to the character of the early Mormons in this county, among those who lived here and knew these people. A gentleman of Willoughby, this county, suggested to me, that another reason was, their persecutors wanted their property, and said he, "They got from them thousands of dollars worth too." After canvassing the sentiment here of these men, I feel a good deal like Col. R. G. Ingersoll when he offered the gold for the evidence of Tom. Paine's dying declarations; and I now affirm that if any of the great newspapers of the day, like the Chicago Times, Tribune or Inter-Ocean wish to test the truth of the statements and publish the facts by a correspondent through their columns; I will undertake the task of accompanying their correspondent and if the general integrity, uprightness, honesty and patriotism, of these men are not maintained by the evidence, I will forfeit to the one the one hundred dollars in gold. A letter will reach me at any time directed, Glenwood, Iowa.

My associate counsel in the case here, J. B. Burrows, Esq., is not only an able attorney but a genial gentleman. He is a brother of Congressman Burrows from Michigan, and I must say that his acquaintance has greatly raised in my estimation the favorable opinion I had already entertained of Michigan's great orator. I find many able and indeed eloquent practitioners at the bar here,—this is one of the oldest towns in the State, as well as the wealthiest in proportion to its population—and, as all well informed attorneys are, these are pleasant and honorable.

Hastily, I am very respectfully yours,

Antiquarian Cave in Ohio.

THE Ohio Valley, and this immediate section in particular, is rich in remains of that wonderful pre-historic race, the evidences of whose civilization have been perpetuated in those curious pieces of engineering from which is derived the euphonious name "Mound Builders," given them by archæologists. Within the past few days wonderful discoveries have been made in this vicinity which open up a new chapter in the history of this remarkable race, and throw much light upon their manner of living, their character, their social habits and their physical nature. In different sections of the world, and at divers times, there have been found the remains of a gigantic fauna and flora, and of human kind of enormous size. So rare and far apart have been these discoveries, however, that we have looked upon historical accounts of them as clearly constructed pieces of fiction, and been loth to believe that there ever existed a man able to do battle with a fierce mastodon or the savage megatherium. It remains for Adams county to come forward with a startling confirmation of the spiritual text: "And there were giants in those days." For in Adams county has been found not only the bones of a gigantic race of men, but their implements of warfare and husbandry, and excellently preserved specimens of their art in sculpture, painting, engraving and writing. Whether these pre-historic giants had a hand in the creation of those splendidly designed and durably constructed pieces of engineering which stretch across the country from the headwaters of the Ohio to the mouth of the Rio Grande, there to commingle with a similar chain of roads, mounds and fortifications coming down the Pacific slope, and continuing on through Mexico, Central America and the South American States, to be finally lost in the unexplored barrens of Patagonia, will be left for the solution of a wiser head than your correspondent possesses. He simply relates the facts; the scientists may build thereon the theories.

In conversation with some of the oldest citizens of this county I have been unable to learn the date of the discovery of a cave on the old Smith farm, in Tiffin township. For years it has been a place of resort for the curious, and was always regarded a great natural curiosity. The old Smith farm is on the Portsmouth pike, between fifteen and sixteen miles northeast of this place. It is now owned by Mr. Samuel Grooms and is a fertile, well-cultivated body of land. About a quarter of a mile from the house is a level field of two hundred odd acres, occupying a plateau, surrounded by lofty hills. In the center of this field is the entrance to the cave. As you near the mouth of the cave there is a gradual depression of the ground on all sides, forming what in the local nomenclature is denominated a "sink hole." At the bottom of this circular basin is a hole three feet in diameter and about twenty-five feet in depth, at which distance from the surface you strike the floor of the first chamber in the cave, a dry cavern, twenty by thirty feet, with smooth, even floor, roof and walls of freestone. Crossing this room you enter a corridor six feet in width, which connects with another chamber smaller than the first, and this in turn is connected with a third chamber by a similar corridor. The third room is about the size of the first, but it has a lofty arched dome and the walls, floor and roof are of limestone. Through the rock the water has oozed for countless ages and formed thousands of glistening stalactites and stalagmites. Nowhere else in the cave do you find these slow-growing formations, and nowhere else do you find the limestone cropping out. To gain access to the fourth chamber it is necessary to climb a steep, wet bank and squeeze through a narrow fissure in the rock, which was once a corridor like those connecting the other rooms. Some convulsion of nature has forced the sides together. In one corner of this fourth chamber is an elevation which, when once surmounted, discloses a yawning well, with a mouth ten feet in diameter and of unknown depth. Apply your ear to the edge of the well and you hear the hollow roaring of an underground stream hundreds of feet below. Beyond this fourth chamber are five others, connected by narrow galleries. The cave comes to an end against a perpendicular wall of solid rock in the ninth chamber and about five hundred yards from its mouth. The floors of all the chambers except the third one, where the limestone crops out, are dry. All are mathematically regular in shape except this one. They are of different lengths, but all are of the same width and height. It is a romantic place for a picnic and has been given up to such rural festivities for years. Every corner of the cave has been thoroughly explored a thousand times, and the walls of the limestone chamber are covered with the names of visitors and the dates of their visit. One, high upon the wall, reads: "Von Brady, 1789." Von Brady was a pioneer Indian fighter and hunter, who came here in advance of the "Ohio Company," in 1786. He was a daring man and sent many of the red men to the "happy hunting grounds."

A few days ago a party of gentlemen of this county, interested in archæological researches, visited the cave, well provided with ropes, lanterns and tools, bent on exploring the mysterious well in the fourth chamber. An improvised rope ladder, sixty feet in length, was lowered down the well. Then one of the party descended, whilst the others watched above. Ten feet from the top of the well the wall was uneven, and, by placing his feet on convenient edges, no difficulty was experienced in making the descent. About fifty feet down the explorer found the entrance to another cavern. This gallery at its mouth is ten feet six inches high and five feet four inches in width. The gallery is straight and fifty feet in length, where it enters a large room two hundred and twenty feet long, one hundred and ten feet wide and twenty-four feet high. The gallery widens gradually and where it enters the chamber measures twenty-five feet across. The roof, floor and walls are smooth and even. In the center of this apartment is a sarcophagus and mausoleum combined. The mausoleum at its base measures fifty five by thirty-five feet. It is of simple, though beautiful design, and carved out of the solid rock. Its base is paneled on all sides, these panels containing bas-reliefs which are supposed to represent the four seasons in man's life—childhood, youth, manhood and old age. At the end of the bas-reliefs are tablets full of written characters, in shape something like the Hebraic, presumed to be memoriams of the person or persons in whose honor the mausoleum is erected. The carving on the bas-reliefs is the most delicate description, and fully equal to the Grecian school of sculpture. The limits of a newspaper article will not suffice fitly to describe them. From the floor to the top of this base is six feet. The base is hollowed out at the four corners, and these excavations are covered with slabs of freestone, accurately fitted and so firmly cemented that a cold chisel struck with a heavy hammer made little or no impression on the cement. They are of uniform size, measuring five by twelve feet. In the center of the mausoleum rises a couch two feet five inches in height, twelve feet in length and five feet in width.

On this couch is extended the figure of a man. It is probably of life size, and measures nine feet four inches in length. The limbs are finely proportioned and disposed in an easy and graceful manner. The arms are folded across the breast and the fingers clasp a bunch of leaves resembling oak, reproduced with such fidelity to nature that they look like petrifications. Every vein and serration of the leaf is perfect. The figure is partially nude, a mantle or scarf crossing the breast and loins and falling in graceful folds on each side. The face is one of great strength and beauty, and the features are of a Hebrew cast. The head is covered with a winged cap, or helmet. At each corner of the couch is a vase four feet nine inches high, covered with beautifully carved flowers and leaves. They are in shape something like an amphora, except that the bottom is flat and the handles affixed to the body of the vase. The neck is thirteen inches in length and tapers gradually and gracefully. The vases are of uniform size, although the carved designs are different. They measure in circumference four feet five inches. The diameter of the neck is six inches. Suspended from the roof, and directly over the head of the recumbent figure, is a copper lamp of unique design, elegantly chased, and kept in position by rods of the same metal. At each corner of the mausoleum rises a carved pyramidal column, surmounted by caps that are unmistakably Doric. On two sides of the room are tombs of humbler design. They are side by side, of uniform size and twenty in number, ten on a side. Like the mausoleum they are carved out of the solid rock and embellished with bas-reliefs. Their dimensions are as follows: Length, 12 feet; width, 5 feet; height, 5 feet. The tops are covered with slabs, securely cemented. On the front of each is a raised scroll, covered with written characters, similar to those on the panels of the mausoleum. On the wall of the room, opposite the entrance, are painted twenty five faces, no doubt portraits of those whose bones lie in the tombs. They are faded and blurred, but still distinct enough to be distinguished. Eight of these faces are of children, five of youths, two of young men, nine of middle aged men and women, and one, in the centre of the group an exact copy of the face of the recumbent figure in the mausoleum. The colors used are red, yellow, black and white and were evidently mixed with oil. The portraits are executed in a superior manner and the anatomical proportion of the features is preserved to an exact degree.

One only of the small tombs has been opened. It contained a splendidly preserved mummy, swathed in cloth covered with a thick varnish, which emits a pleasant aromatic odor, not unlike balsam of fir. The mummy measures nine feet one inch in length and is evidently the body of a man. One of the party of discoverers cut the wrappings from the face, but did it so clumsily that the head crumbled into dust. Portions of the hair remained sticking to the cloth, and your correspondent has a piece before him as he writes. It is black, curly and of fine texture. Besides the body of the giant the tomb contained a spear-head, a hatchet, two lances, three mattocks or hoes, a spade, a cup, two plates and a small urn, all of copper. One of the lance heads and the smallest cup have been shown me. The wonderful people understood the secret of hardening copper, for an ordinary file will barely scratch the lance, and the edge of a cold-chisel turns up like lead when struck against it. The cup is of softer metal and beautifully engraved with trailing vines and wreaths. A square package at the head of the tomb, wrapped in the varnished cloth, contained a book of one hundred leaves of thin copper, fastened loosely at the top and crowded with finely engraved characters similar to those already described.

This remarkable cave is one of the most wonderful pre-historic remains ever discovered. Its builders were a race of giants, but whether they were also mound builders, I know not. The upper cave was the cellar of a house and used for domestic purposes, or as a place of retreat in case of attack on the above ground residence. In the first two chambers and in the last five, are many curious formations in the shape of tables and benches, which have always been presumed to be of natural origin. Later examinations revealed the works of chisel and pick, which were also noticeable on the floor, roof and walls. The entire excavation is made out of solid rock, and all the chambers were at one time of the same width and height. The irregularity of the roof, walls and floor of the limestone chamber is due to natural causes. In all probability this room was dry when the wonderful people who designed and built it were alive. The stalactites and stalagmites have formed since. I measured one of the longest of the former. It was five feet six and one-half inches from base to apex. Allowing that it lengthened at the rate of one inch every fifty years—which a geological friend tells me is very rapid growth

—it would have been three thousand, three hundred and twenty-five years reaching its present length. Conjecture alone can fix the date of the last occupancy of the cave. It must have been years before the stalactites began to form. I examined the mouth of the cave and discovered traces of a stairway which once led to the surface of the ground. Indeed, I found among the debris broken fragments of rock which, five or six thousand years ago, were undoubtedly parts of a broad staircase. There were also traces of a stairway which wound around the sides of the well, affording easy entrance to the lower cavern.

The owner of the cave, Mr. Grooms, has organized a company with capital, and they contemplate opening all the tombs and the great mausoleum. As soon as all arrangements are completed the cave will be thrown open to the public and an admission fee charged. In the meantime the entrance to the cave is kept closed, to keep out the curiosity-seekers, who flock to it from miles around. Mr. Grooms is anxious to have a scientist examine the cave, and a description of the discoveries, together with the engraved book and the tools found in the tomb, will be forwarded at once to the Smithsonian Institution.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.
HENRY A. STEBBINS, ASSISTANT.

Plano, Illinois, March 15th, 1880.

It is suggested to us—"Why do you make such a constant attack upon the church in Utah; your brother Mormons?"

The reasons:—Truth is both aggressive and defensive; the truth of Mormonism, so called, seriously so. The church in Utah claims to be the identical, original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830; and to be carrying out the identical measures, policies, doctrines and tenets of that church. If it is it must make good that claim against legitimate comers; and the Elders of that original church; their children, foster brothers and sisters, of the same faith are legitimate comers. We are of this class, a child of one of those original Elders, born and fostered under the influence and teaching of that same church, and when we stand with our host of co-workers and believers at the doors of Mormonism of any profession of belief, claiming consideration for itself on the ground of being that original church, we have the right to be heard, and no amount of clerical isolation, or arrogance upon the part of those within the doors shall save them from the echoes of our knocking. They may believe what they please and go to heaven, or fail of it in their own way; but they must sooner or later acknowledge the livery in which they are serving, and so help us to redeem the name of the original church from the disgrace that a departure from its constitution and laws has brought upon it.

THIS issue of the HERALD contains excellent news for the Saints, especially so to the Elders in the field. The practical recognition of the position the Reorganization occupies as a Religious Society by a legal Court before which the issue is placed, must appeal to many who have refused us credence because the Evangelical Union, constituting itself a court, decides that we are not a religious society within the pale of recognition as evangelical. Well, we are not in the Evangelical Union, and what of it? It is small matter if we are recognized of Christ as his by his Spirit; and by the courts as of humanity and entitled to humanity's rights; the Union may love its own, and if Christ does not forget his, we shall fare well enough.

Read Bro. E. L. Kelley's letter in connection with the findings of the court; reflect that from evidence presented in the open court, before a white haired and learned judge, in a county whence the Church had been expelled by force of popular opinion unlawfully expressed, in the presence of a house full of curious and anxious spectators, some of whom were living there when the Saints were dwelling there, these findings of the Court are had; and let these facts speak for us to them who will not hear us for our cause through a sense of moral right, and thus force the issue upon them. Be sober-minded and steady, brethren, the Lord rules in Zion; his promises are sure and will be kept—the waste places of Zion shall be rebuilt, and our faces shall no longer "wax pale," nor Jacob's children cower in fear, when the LORD shall build again Zion.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Chicago Tribune for Monday, February 23d, contained nearly a column synopsis of a discourse delivered by Bro. M. H. Forscutt in that city the evening before. The Danites was more especially the theme, but, connected with it, was a portrayal of the difference between the Reorganized Church and the people of Utah in the matters of law keeping, and the observance of the rules and ordinances of the land. He cited our books for evidences of our faith in all these things, and presented facts to show what the True Latter Day Saints did both teach and exemplify in morality and in obedience to the civil law. Bro. Forscutt is doing much good in that city by both voice and pen. The Times also gave about as long a synopsis of the above discourse as did the Tribune; and quite a dispatch was sent to the Cheyenne Sun, Wyoming, embodying some idea of the subject presented by Bro. Forscutt. Bro. Eames sent us the latter paper.

Bro. Scott says, "Don't send any more subscribers. He has no more type for the mailing list." But send on the subscribers. Don't fail to send them in. If we can't get any more type in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia or St. Louis, we will do like the man did that a Massachusetts farmer hired to shingle his barn. When the man came in from his work at noon, the farmer asked him how he had got along; the man replied that the barn was a very long one, and that he had not yet finished laying the first course of shingles. The farmer was astonished at this; but the mystery was solved when after dinner they went out to examine the work—the fellow had shingled two hundred feet out from the end of the barn upon the fog.—Send in the subscribers, and if we can't get type, we will print our list out on the fog. "Send 'em in, send 'em in!"

Bro. L. C. Donaldson, Riverton, Iowa, reports an improved condition in the Fremont District. A good conference held there lately, and unity and peace attended. Two were baptized.

Bro. H. R. Evans, Malad, Idaho, says: "Bro. R. J. Anthony is gradually tearing down the superstitions that have existed. The Brighamites expect a crisis, and that very soon. They look for a deliverer, but who, is the question."

Bro. George S. Hyde wrote from Mondamin, Iowa, February 23d, that all things thereabouts were favorable for the progress of the cause of Christ. Calls were coming from all parts of that country, and there is great need of many more gospel laborers than now exist. Bro. Hyde has been preaching in the Little Sioux District most of the fall and winter, finding so much to do that he has not yet been to Nebraska, as he intended. He says that he has been blest with the liberty of the Spirit, and had full houses many times. The Little Sioux Branch has elected new officers, and the Priest and Teacher are doing their duty as branch and visiting officers. We wish that all were so doing.

Bro. B. V. Springer wrote from Harrison, Ohio, February 23d, saying that he was preaching to full houses every evening. He mentions the discovery in an Ohio cave of a mummy and of parchment writings and hieroglyphics evidently of great antiquity. The New York Sun, Philadelphia Times, San Francisco Chronicle, and other papers sent us by various brethren, contain accounts of what is called an "Extraordinary Discovery," "A Cave of Giants," etc., the same being in relation to the above cave. In the first half of this issue will be found a copy. We also have a statement of some pre-historic relics being discovered in a cave near Moberly, Missouri.

The Boston Journal for February 23d, sent us by Bro. E. N. Webster, contains an account of the conference of the Massachusetts District, held there February 21st and 22d. Some were baptized. The notice closes as follows: "This church has no affinity with the Latter Day Saints of Salt Lake, believing that polygamy is a sin and a crime. This church holds forth the gospel as taught by Christ and his apostles. There was a large attendance, many being unable to gain admittance. The conference will continue to-day."

Bro. Horace Bartlett, near Harvard, Illinois, says that a number of persons about there are investigating the gospel truths held by us; so that a prospect exists of good being done, if they can be instructed thoroughly as to Christ's law.

Bro. T. R. Hawkins of Nevada, mentions that there is "a general awakening" among the Saints in that district, especially among the Elders as to their duties. Some are ready for baptism, and others are inquiring the way to salvation. Bro. Hawkins believes that the time of lethargy is over and that the Church in that region will be alive, and that numbers will be added from henceforth.

Bro. F. M. Fuller writes from Satartia, Yazoo county, Mississippi, that most of the Saints of the former Winston branch have moved to Alabama and so it is broken up. Times are very hard and much sickness prevails among the people in that country. Bro. Fuller says, however, that they are striving to live right, and they wish the kind prayers of the people of God in their behalf.

Bro. E. F. Bryant, Jonesport, Maine, expresses gratitude to God for the timely visit of Bro. T. W. Smith to them in Maine, by whose labors the Saints are renewed in faith and zeal and the cause of Christ built up.

Bro. W. H. Kelley wrote from Cadillac, Michigan, (the home of Bro. M. H. Bond), February 27th, saying that it was announced for him to speak there Sunday the 29th, and opposition was expected, but not feared.

Bro. Geo. F. Weston was in Jefferson county, Indiana, when he wrote, February 18th, and had appointments out for a series of meetings near the Union Branch, and one in that branch. He had preached fifty-four times since November 1st, showing thereby diligence and zeal.

Bro. Joseph Byous reports the effectual and welcome labors of Bro. R. M. Elvin at Clear Creek, Saunders county, Nebraska. There was a good attendance on the eleven occasions he preached. Five were baptized and others are believing.

Bro. Levi Sollenberger, of Monmouth, Illinois, was with us from the 7th to the 18th February, and having performed a vow of fasting and prayer, received a blessing and went on his way rejoicing. He was at Monmouth at last advices, and was doing well. He spoke in a school house with good audiences and hearing.

Bro. W. T. Bozarth wrote from Cameron, Missouri, February 26th, that he had been preaching in Johnson and Randolph counties. At Kirk's Mill, (former county), he spoke thirteen times in a large, new meeting house, and had attentive congregations, who also wish him to return to them.

Letter from Bro. B. B. Brackenbury, Independence, Missouri, stating that they were still striving to build up there; the poor were gathering in, but the poor "shall inherit the earth."

Sister Jane Hirons writes of the addition of several by baptism recently to the North Coon Branch, Iowa, and also of their being blessed of God in the healing of the sick.

Bro. Geo. Hatt, of Omaha, Nebraska, says that his hopes are still bright and that he believes that better times for the people of God are at hand. We hope indeed that it will be so, but trials also attend.

Sister Cox, of Shelby, Iowa, mentions a statement made in a recent Chicago Inter-Ocean that from good authority it was now quite evident that Christ was born on the 5th of April, and she asks some of the wise brethren to give their ideas, and also the reason why December 25th has so long been celebrated. She thinks that the right day should be observed. We have an Adventist argument in proof of the 6th of April being the day, and we think the reasoning is good. And we may also believe more in it for the reason that, by a coincidence unacknowledged by any Adventist believer, the Church of Christ was organized on that day and month in this last dispensation. It would be pleasing to be so assured if this be the case.

Bro. H. Gibson, of Soldier Valley, Iowa, gives thanks unto God for showing him the true gospel plan, the heaven-born truth of the latter-day work.

Bro. J. A. Stewart still labors in Philadelphia to convert souls to Christ. By his efforts last summer and fall nine were brought under the covenant of peace.

Bro. J. H. Stratton, now at LaSalle, Illinois, writes of the debate at Richmondville, Michigan, between Bro. J. J. Cornish and a Catholic man, on Church authority. The cause did not suffer. There was a large attendance and four persons were baptized in the waters of Lake Huron. That is a common result.

Bro. W. F. Clark, Pre-emption, Illinois, mentions Bro. E. T. Bryant's preaching there February 29th, by which some were made to think, and this makes work for Bro. Clark, but he feels able, in God's Spirit and grace. He believes that many honest and truth-loving people live there, but they need instruction like the eunuch of old, and that they will yet obey God's call to man.

Bro. W. S. Loar, Indian Creek Branch, Kansas, says that the cause is gaining ground there. He preaches some, and Bro. D. S. Crawley was expected there.

Sister H. H., writing from Mondamin, Iowa, speaks of her joy in reading the HERALD, and of how her mind was illuminated thereby, the Holy Spirit aiding. She desires that her life will be a testimony to her neighbors of the truth of the gospel. Her husband is out preaching and she is glad to sacrifice thus, in the prospect of an eternal reward, and wishes to bear her trials with patience.

Bro. E. C. Brand wrote, February 23rd, from Montana, (reaching us March 5th), that he expected to give a course of lectures at Bozeman immediately. He intended then to come to the April General Conference.

Bro. A. W. Glover, of Providence, Rhode Island, bears a good testimony that the Reorganized Church of Christ is indeed the true one, of which the Holy Spirit bears him witness since his baptism. The sketch of his history is very interesting. Traditioned in the Episcopal doctrine till sixteen years old, he then heard the doctrine of Alex Campbell and was three years with them, when, while in a western state, he met some Latter Day Saints and read their works. He returned east partially convinced, but opposed in his mind for ten years longer. Then he was led to visit the hall of worship in Providence, and followed on till he rejoiced in full obedience and in the testimony of God received, so that he is fully happy therein, as never before in other faiths. He mentions the progress continually made by the Providence Branch, both in numbers and in spiritual things, and he exhorts all to live lives of holiness and of peace.

Bro. Charles A. Davis of Australia sends us a copy of the Town and Country Journal published at Sidney, Australia, and dated January 3d, 1880. It is a folio paper of 48 pages, and is full of news, foreign and domestic. Of the Australian colonies for 1879 a summary of history is given, chiefly political. Much of the remainder is about the farming and mining interests, the markets, crops, schools, courts, etc., of Australia. At Sidney an Exposition of products and machinery was being held. Accidents by sea and land, and crimes committed were also noted.

Thanks to Brn. Alfred Rich, M. H. Bond, M. H. Forscutt, Thomas Henning, T. R. Hawkins, John Eames and J. M. Leland for papers received.

Sister Cassia Warren, in Mitchell county, Kansas, says they have heard no preaching and seen no Elders since last August, when Bro. Perkins was there. He made a good impression and good could be done by further labor there. They would be glad if some one would come to them.

In the letter of Bro. W. H. Kelley respecting affairs in Canada, it is stated that Bro. Joseph Luff was at one time president of the London Branch. Bro. Luff wishes us to state that this is a mistake, as he was not at any time the president of said branch.

Sister Ruth A. Turner, of Montrose, Iowa, continues to rejoice in gospel light and truth. Nothing else supplies the place of certainty in these:

Bro. W. N. Dawson, of Ione Valley, California, writes: "I humbly ask the prayers of the Saints for my poor brother, Edwin T. Dawson, who is sorely afflicted. Pray that he may be speedily restored to health and strength, both of body and of mind." We commend the petition to the attention of the Saints.

Thanks to Bro. J. A. Crawford for Central Advocate, St. Louis, Mo., and Keokuk Gate City, Keokuk, Iowa. To Bro. M. H. Bond for Cadillac, Michigan, weekly News and to some one for Signs of the Times and Lapeer, Mich., Clarion; to Bro. Blair for Daily Salt Lake, Tribune.

Bro. M. H. Bond, of Cadillac, Michigan, is out in the Cadillac weekly News, for March 4th, 1880, in a column and a quarter defence of the Reorganization, under the caption of Justice to all. Bro. Bond has made use of the occasion of Bro. W. H. Kelley's visit there to not only hold meetings, but puts in this defence in the paper to excellent advantage.

The following, taken from the editorials of the New York weekly Sun for December 24th, 1879, is strikingly suggestive. We have prayed in common with all those who believe that the Lord should call his own ministry into the field, that this very condition of things should result—that the making of ministers by men to mystify the truths of the gospel should cease. Let the good work go on, though we may regret some of the influences at work to accomplish it, we may confidently look for the Lord to care for his own. With "Pope Bob" pounding away at the foundations of orthodoxy; Henry Ward Beecher, David Swing, and others of like theology knocking at the back doors, and Thomas, Tyng, Storrs and others striking away the defences of the inner walls,—surely confusion seems to rule, and "Ichabod" is being written on the walls of creed—the salvation of the human race will soon be preached again, not for the glory of ambitious men:

WHY IS THEOLOGY SO NEGLECTED?

It is a remarkable circumstance that there has been of recent years an actual decline in the number of theological students in the divinity schools of some of our most important Protestant denominations.

The graduates from colleges are yearly more numerous, and the entering classes at our chief universities are steadily increasing in size and rendering necessary the employment of additional instructors. Harvard never had so great a body of students as now, though it has of late years very much raised its standard for admission. Yale also is fuller than ever, while Columbia is obtaining classes two or three times as large as those it instructed before the war. The throng of students at Princeton has much increased, and at Williams, Dartmouth, and other smaller colleges of the interior the faculties and trustees are rejoicing over classes remarkable for their numbers. The law schools are crowded, the lectures at the medical colleges were never before so well attended, and the mining and scientific schools are flourishing to an unusual degree.

Yet theological seminaries, though they spend great efforts to obtain students, and frequently offer them not only free tuition, but also entire or partial support during their course, must content themselves with a few young men, and these oftentimes not the cream of our youth, but the skimmed and even the watered milk.

In the Presbyterian denomination, one of the greatest bulwarks of orthodoxy and one of the strongest and richest of Protestant bodies, out of 5,415 churches 926 are without pastors. The number of churches increased last year by 146, and yet there was an increase of ministers of only 37, though 58 ministers came over to the Presbyterians from other denominations. The candidates for the ministry are this year 22 fewer than last year, and 153 fewer than in 1874.

What is the meaning of this remarkable decline in the number of theological students? Though the population has been growing steadily and largely in six years, and the Presbyterians have manifested their interest in their religious doctrines by organizing hundreds of new churches, the Presbyterian young men turn with aversion from the ministry or pass it by to undertake a more congenial career. Out of all the thousands of them, a few score only, and they by no means the most promising of these youth, are turning their attention to the study of theology. Money for the education of ministers is not lacking, and there never was an abler body of divinity professors than now. The principal churches throughout the country are anxious for pastors of eloquence and power, and are ready to pay them salaries larger than ever before. But the material out of which acceptable ministers may be made grows less in quantity, and it by no means improves in quality.

Is this decline due to the superior inducements in the way of worldly success offered by other professions than the sacred one? That can not be the cause, for a young minister especially adapted to his calling, and who can demonstrate his ability to preach to the satisfaction of a church, at once leaps into a place where he gets both consequence and a sure and ample living, while if his heart is in his work he has full employment for his powers. In other professions a young man must make his way upward by slow and arduous climbing.

Is it not rather because the zeal for the faith is getting so cold that young men have no spirit and enthusiasm to undertake its propagation? The ranks of the lawyers, doctors, engineers, and business men are gaining new recruits faster than they need, and yet orthodox churches can not keep up their supply of ministers?

THE REORGANIZATION IN COURT.

The following are the findings of the Court in which the late suit of the Reorganized Church for the quieting the title to the Kirtland Temple, was tried.

"In Court of Common Pleas, Lake County, Ohio, February 23rd, 1880. Present: Hon. L. S. Sherman, Judge; F. Paine, Jr., Clerk; and C. F. Morley, Sheriff.

Journal Entry, February Term, 1880.

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Plaintiff.

Lucien Williams, Joseph Smith, Sarah F. Videon, Mark H. Forscutt, the Church in Utah of which John Taylor is President and commonly known as the Mormon Church, and John Taylor, President of said Utah Church. Defendants.

Now at this term of the Court came the Plaintiff by its attorneys, E. L. Kelley, and Burrows and Bosworth, and the Defendants came not, but made default; and thereupon, with the assent of the Court, and on motion and by the consent of the Plaintiff a trial by jury is waived and this cause is submitted to the Court for trial, and the cause came on for trial to the Court upon the pleadings and evidence, and was argued by counsel; on consideration whereof, the Court do find as matters of fact:

1st. That notice was given to the Defendants in this action by publication of notice as required by the statutes of the state of Ohio; except as to the Defendant, Sarah F. Videon, who was personally served with process.

2d. That there was organized on the 6th day of April, 1830, at Palmyra, in the state of New York, by Joseph Smith, a Religious Society, under the name of "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," which in the same year removed in a body and located in Kirtland, Lake County, Ohio; which said Church held and believed, and was founded upon certain well defined doctrines, which were set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

3d. That on the 11th day of February, A. D. 1841, one William Marks and his wife, Rosannah, by Warranty Deed, of that date, conveyed to said Joseph Smith as sole Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, being the same Church organized as aforesaid, the lands and tenements described in the petition, and which are described as follows:

[The description of the land is omitted.—Eds.] And upon said lands said Church had erected a church edifice known as The Temple, and were then in the possession and occupancy thereof, for religious purposes, and so continued until the disorganization of said Church, which occurred about 1844. That the main body of said Religious Society had removed from Kirtland aforesaid, and were located at Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1844, when said Joseph Smith died, and said Church was disorganized and the membership (then being estimated at about 100,000) scattered in smaller fragments, each claiming to be the original and true Church before named, and located in different states and places.

That one of said fragments, estimated at ten thousand, removed to the Territory of Utah under the leadership of Brigham Young, and located there, and with accessions since, now constitute the Church in Utah, under the leadership and Presidency of John Taylor, and is named as one of the defendants in this action.

That after the departure of said fragment of said church for Utah, a large number of the officials and membership of the original church which was disorganized at Nauvoo, reorganized under the name of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and on the 5th day of February, 1873, became incorporated under the laws of the state of Illinois, and since that time all other fragments of said original Church (except the church in Utah) have dissolved, and the membership has largely become incorporated with said Reorganized Church which is the Plaintiff in this action.

That the said Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is a Religious Society, founded and organized upon the same doctrines and tenets, and having the same church organization, as the original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, by Joseph Smith, and was organized pursuant to the constitution, laws and usages of said original Church, and has branches located in Illinois, Ohio and other states.

That the church in Utah, the Defendant of which John Taylor is President, has materially and largely departed from the faith, doctrines, laws, ordinances and usages of said original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and has incorporated into its system of faith the doctrines of Celestial Marriage and a plurality of wives, and the doctrine of Adam-God worship, contrary to the laws and constitution of said original Church.

And the Court do further find that the Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is the True and Lawful continuation of, and Successor to the said original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, and is entitled in law to all its rights and property.

And the Court do further find that said defendants, Joseph Smith, Sarah F. Videon and Mark H. Forscutt, are in possession of said property under a pretended title, derived from a pretended sale thereof, made by order of the Probate Court of Lake County, on the petition of Henry Holcomb, as the administrator of said Joseph Smith, as the individual property of said Smith; and the Court finds that said Smith had no title to said property, except as the Trustee of said Church, and that no title thereto passed to the purchasers at said sale, and that said parties in possession have no legal title to said property.

And the Court further finds that the legal title to said property is vested in the heirs of said Joseph Smith, in trust for the legal successor of said original Church, and that the Plaintiffs are not in possession thereof."

News Summary.

Feb 24th.—Famine and disease are decimating the Russian provinces of Saratof, Kief, and Caucasus. These are usually among the most thrifty of the grain-producing parts of Russia. Malignant diptheria is carrying off many and its frightful extent and fatality are indicated by the statement that 40,000 persons have died of the disease since last November. In some regions entire villages have been depopulated, and many people are also dying of starvation.

A large mass meeting was held at the Exposition building, Chicago, yesterday, the occasion being the reception of Messrs Parnell and Dillon, the Irish agitators. Fifteen thousand people were assembled, and addresses of welcome were made by Gov. Cullom and others. Mr. Parnell gave an exposition of Ireland's wrongs, and of the remedy that he and his fellows consider applicable and necessary. Resolutions of sympathy were adopted by the assembly.

Prominent Russian officials have received notice from the revolutionists that they need not trouble themselves to make arrangements for an illumination on the occasion of the Czar's anniversary, as the revolutionists are preparing for such an illumination as has not been seen since Nero burned Rome!

25th.—A ship bound for Australia from England has been sunk by collision. Sixteen persons were drowned.

A St. Petersburg dispatch says there is much excitement there over the frequent acts of incendiarism, and the people are in a state of constant alarm. Numerous explosions of a minor character, fires, and outrages are frequent throughout the city.

Rumor now distinctly implicates the Grand Duke Nicholas with complicity in the late explosion and the plot against the Czar's life. Many additional arrests have been made, including a number of students.

The latest advices from St. Petersburg report the situation there as most critical, and the foreign population are in constant apprehension of an uprising. Even in Russian official circles a feeling of decided uncertainty prevails, and it is feared that in the event of trouble the Russian army can not be depended on to put down any insurrectionary movement.

A thunder storm in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, yesterday, did considerable damage, the lightning striking several buildings.

26th.—A meeting held in Armagh county, Ireland, yesterday, in behalf of the landlords was dispersed by three thousand of the Orangemen society. Twenty tenant righters were injured in the fracas.

The Empress (or Czarina) of Russia is said to be sinking rapidly, and is now unconscious.

In California the "Chinese question" is becoming serious. A workmen's meeting in San Francisco yesterday, adopted resolutions declaring that "the Chinese must go," and that that party would insist on it and enforce it. There is danger of violence from them towards the Chinese.

A murder took place in the streets of Winchester, Green county, Illinois, day before yesterday. There was another near there, three days before.

28th.—A dispatch from London says that St. Petersburg is in something like a panic. The recent explosion has produced a widespread feeling of insecurity through all classes. There seems to be very little hope of any concession from the Government on the anniversary of the Emperor's accession to the throne. Warnings have been that on the 2d of March it is intended to blow up three of the principal streets of St. Petersburg.

Of Ireland another London dispatch says: "The accounts of the increasing destitution in the distressed districts come in with sickening rapidness. The record of destitution as it exists in the County of Donegal is given. In the original list of places in the famine record, published on the 4th of February, twelve Communes only had then made public their sad condition, and had applied to the various Dublin relief societies for aid. The list of names of places in Donegal from which urgent petition for assistance have been received, includes now over forty villages and towns. A comparison of several places in the first report, and again to day, show that the increase of destitution during these three weeks has been steady and alarming. It may be said that the greater part of the distress recorded has developed during the past few weeks, or that, if the distress was developed before, the people had carefully concealed their wants until driven by absolute necessity to make them known."

March 1st.—The British, through their great diplomatist, Lord Beaconsfield, thought that they had gained a great advantage over Russia in obtaining Persia as an ally by giving the Shah the privilege to occupy the city of Herat in Afghanistan, which is on the highway to the Indies, the key as it were, and its possession a matter of importance, but Mahammed Jan of Afghanistan refuses to accept a bribe from the Shah to give him entrance and occupancy.

Aid for Ireland is being collected even in India. There is considerable feeling among some of the nations about the barbarism of England in permitting the wholesale executions that were made by General Roberts in Afghanistan. Eighty-nine were hanged after he took possession of Cabul, forty-nine of them on three consecutive days, some for actual murder, some on suspicion, some for attacking escorts and some for having property of the Embassy in their possession. As one writer remarks it is plain that he executed some of them for no other reason than that they had fought against the British invasion of their country, and responsible correspondents of English papers assert that many were executed for no other cause than their fighting in battle against the British, hanged for simply defending their country and their homes.

2d.—Very limited ceremonies are expected to take place at St. Petersburg to day, the 25th anniversary of the Czar's accession to the throne.

Prince Orloff of Russia has been threatened with assassination by the Nihilists.

The village of Bergen, Genesee county, New York, was set on fire at 2 o'clock yesterday morning and twenty-eight business houses and nine residences burned. Incendiaries had entered a store and placed kegs of powder, with trains leading to the yard outside, which they then fired and fled. No reasons are known for the fiendish act. Many people lost their homes, but the country people flocked in with food and other aid for present necessities.

As the inquiry into the causes of the Tay bridge disaster proceeds, the criminal parsimony of the railroad company becomes more and more apparent. The evidence shows that the iron used for the castings was of a very inferior description; the columns were of unequal thickness, cracked and blistered. To hide the defective condition of the pillars the holes were filled with cement and painted over. The managers of the road will most probably be held responsible, and it is quite likely that they will suffer severely for their niggardly and vicious economy.

3d.—At St. Petersburg yesterday, the anniversary was, after all previously said, celebrated with great pomp and display, decorations and illuminations all through the city. The Emperor appeared in an open carriage in the streets. Decrees were issued granting pardon to some prisoners, remitting arrears of taxes, and conferring distinctions.

Generals Grant and Sheridan reviewed the Mexican troops in their capital city March 1st. The maneuvers and marching are said to have been perfection.

4th.—Yesterday afternoon at St. Petersburg, Gen. Melikoff's life was attempted when alighting from his carriage at his residence. The bullet did not hit him, though it passed through the folds of his cloak. He prevented the man from firing again, and the latter was arrested.

The United States Government will fit out a vessel to carry the provisions and stores to Ireland. It is expected that about 3000 barrels will be sent.

The Spanish army for 1880 has been fixed at 90,000 men for Spain, 38,000 for Cuba, 10,000 for the Philippine Islands, and 3,395 for Porto Rico.

At Ashton-under-Tyne, England, 10,000 cotton-weavers struck work in consequence of the refusal of their employers to grant an advance of 5 per cent in their wages, which advance the spinners recently obtained.

The total cost of the Brooklyn bridge to the present time, including the land damages and the purchases of real estate, has been over $11,250,000. To complete the structure $2,500,000 more is asked for.

A convention has been concluded between Great Britain and Germany, securing the co-operation of their war vessels in the suppression of the slave traffic.

The United States Government has concluded arrangements by which the Utes will cede their reservations in Colorado and move to other parts. The Southern Utes will be settled on the banks of the La Plata River in New Mexico; the White River Utes will probably be settled on the Uintah Reservation, in Northern Utah; and the Uncompahgre on the banks of the Grand River, in Eastern Utah.

The completion of the work of perforating Mount St. Gothard, as announced by the foreign dispatches, signalizes the success of another great scientific feat of engineering skill. The tunneling of this mountain was the outgrowth of the success which attended the tunneling of Mont Cenis. A comparison between these three tunnels shows that the Mont Cenis, length eight miles, cost $15,000,000 and was thirteen years in building. The Hoosac tunnel, only four and three fourths miles long, cost $13,000,000 and was eleven years in building; while the St. Gothard, nine and a quarter miles long, has been bored in seven and a half years and cost $9,700,000. The St. Gothard tunnel places Italy in direct connection with Switzerland, Germany and Northern Europe, as the Mont Cenis did with France and Western Europe.

5th.—The Russian Revolutionary Committee have warned Gen. Melikoff to abandon his post as Chief of the Supreme Executive Committee of the Russian Government, which holds sway over national affairs now, while things are unsettled. The man who fired at Melikoff has already been tried and sentenced to be hanged to-day.

The storm of last night caused serious damage to property in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo, Louisville, and other places.

Douglas, the Ute Chief who is charged with having taken part in the outrages at White River Agency, yesterday made his escape from the prison at Fort Leavenworth, but was recaptured after a brief pursuit and taken back and heavily ironed.

6th.—At Hot Springs, Arkansas, the rains caused the river to overflow, and bridges were washed away, houses damaged and the valley flooded.

Vladetsky, the would be slayer of Gen. Melikoff, was hung yesterday at St. Petersburg. Other students have been arrested on suspicion of complicity.

A steamer from Boston for Liverpool lost seventy cattle overboard.

Eight men were killed and thirty wounded by a boiler explosion at Glasgow, Scotland, on Thursday. At Scranton, Pa., yesterday, one man was killed outright by an explosion of fire-damp, and nine others have been buried in the mines and are believed to have perished.

5th.—Prominent Russians are on trial before a military court for complicity in the attempts upon the life of the Czar.

The Duchess of Marlborough reports the distress in Ireland as yet quite widespread and general.

England will likely soon renew the war against the Afghans.

Twenty-three deaths resulted from the boiler explosion in Glasgow, Scotland, March 5th.

The most destructive fire ever known in St. Paul, Minnesota, occurred there last evening. The largest dry-goods house in the city was burned, and the whole business portion was threatened, but the fire-department saved it. Value of building $90,000; of goods $850,000, or nearly one million dollars altogether. Five hundred adults and children employed by the firm were thus thrown out of work.

The acreage of winter wheat in Illinois is 25 per cent more than last year.

The public debt was reduced eleven million dollars during January.

France is contemplating adding 16,000 miles to her railroad system and 900 miles to her canal and river navigation lines.

Twenty thousand immigrants settled in the Arkansas Valley, between Little Rock and Fort Smith, last year.

The emancipation of slaves in Cuba is postponed till 1886. It will then be effected in three years.

Correspondence.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
February 20th, 1880.

President Joseph Smith:—Three months have passed since our arrival in this place, and to the many who are fearing, praying and feeling anxious about us, let us "bear our testimony."

Our services began the day after our arrival, being conducted by the brethren in turn, while they remained. Bro. Derry, Denel and Anthony, left within three weeks after our arrival for their various local fields. Since that time Bro. Blair and the writer have kept the services up continually to the present. Bro. Blair is now on a three weeks tour about Malad; but expects to return and spend a week or two more before he returns to Plano.

Expressions, indicative of sympathy for "this people" were many and free at Conference last September; but it was not till our association with them in person led to a revelation of the extent and character of their bondage, that we beheld and understood how great need there was for not only sympathy, but earnest and persistent effort on the part of the Reorganization, in order to deliver and save them. While we can not find language sufficiently strong and expressive to condemn the course adopted and the means made use of by many, in order to entangle the honest and unwary in the present almost inextricable meshes, yet, as we look upon the victims of this despotism and know that their very presence in this land speaks volumes in favor of their self-sacrificing spirit and zeal, as well as their devotion to what, before God, they believed to be right, we feel moved upon to cry night and day unto God for skill and power to carry deliverance to their homes and hearts. It is not the sword of human justice that is called for; but the exercise of a mild, firm, Christ-like influence, in and through the preaching of the gospel, by those whose experience has made their hearts tender towards the erring and deceived. Had the writer lived in the days when the first seeds of apostasy were sown in the Church, he would, in all probability, have been a slave to-day, and the extent of his bondage been measured only in proportion to his zeal; but a kind providence (not his own moral superiority or wisdom) has ordered it otherwise, and fellow-feeling, love to Christ and humanity, demand that he shall illustrate the character of his Master in his labors for the recovery of those whom he ought to love. When "this people" are made to feel that love—disinterested and genuine—is the motive power that operates this mission, they will not be slow to "hear and live." There may be those among them, who have been wilfully false to every trust reposed in them, and upon whose skirts innocent blood has been and is found; but this, if true, is not to be the burden of our mission either to expose or condemn. Every heart and conscience knows its own corruption, and if heaven and God withhold judgment, who are we, that we should add to their misery? Our mission is to save.

We have no particular love for this country, though the surrounding scenery is grand. The climate is very trying to the health; but the love we feel towards the people makes us willing to abide by the standard of liberty that has been planted in this place. The interest is increasing, and if we do not mistake the "signs of the times," we are on the eve of a revival of pure and holy religion. Nine persons have been baptized by the writer, at a request of the branch president, and two others have been received into fellowship by vote, one of whom is the sister of Oliver Cowdery. Numbers express their satisfaction concerning the mission and its ultimate success, and scores have given evidence of their oneness with us in sentiment, though their connections, etc., forbid their immediate identification with us as members. Our administrations have been signally blessed in some instances, and the branch meetings are enjoyable in a more than ordinary degree. We are not over-sanguine, as a rule, but will venture to predict, on the strength of present indications, that at no very distant day many will unite with us.

On the 14th inst. we received a letter from Bingham, Utah, signed by twenty persons, asking for preaching services, and guaranteeing hotel and car fares etc. This will be attended to immediately. If the coming Conference at Plano can furnish a number more Elders for this field, we believe they would find plenty to do, bear and sacrifice. There is enough "variety" in this neighborhood to keep a man on the level. He must not be either cast iron or putty. One is too unyielding, the other too pliable. He must be prepared to believe only on the most undoubted testimony; but still be willing to give credence, when that testimony is presented.

Some of the "personal reminiscences" that greet our ears at times, move us towards belief about as far as a hair will move the temple. They generally find us at the week's end precisely where we were at the first, they pull so many ways and are about equal in strength, so that we succeed, by their assistance, in maintaining an equilibrium.

We have had frequent and favorable comments from the "Gentile" press, and are being watched intently by the Mormon, the apostate and the Gentile, and probably by the Jew; but their criticisms are "balancing." We are not keen and cutting enough in our remarks for some. For others we are too penetrating. To another class we may hopefully appeal for aid and sympathy only when we exclude the "books" and Joseph Smith from our creed. Thus, we are encouraged to labor, but preserved from the evil consequences of flattery. We hope, however to get back to our homes, without having our faith in the latter day work injured in the least. Judging by the past, we believe these experiences will confirm us in it, and qualify us for better services elsewhere if required. We have no desire to leave the field till the Conference year shall have closed, and hope to be sustained in it by the prayers of the faithful. The Saints, in the main, are active and hopeful, kind and hospitable, and we find, in this direction, every comfort and encouragement we can wish for.

Hundreds are looking for your coming to this place, but whether from mere curiosity or because of some holy desire, you must form your own conclusions. We have reasons to believe that influences are at work which will eventuate in materially strengthening (numerically) the Reorganization.

The weather has been cold and a large quantity of snow has fallen. Many tell us that this has been the most tedious winter they have ever experienced. We have not been entirely free from cold at any time since our coming, and at times have felt considerable uneasiness about the throat and lungs; but have never had occasion to be absent from service. At present a little difficulty is being experienced in consequence of a "fresh" cold. Kind regards to all in the office. Thanks to the praying Saints everywhere. May the answers we receive to their petitions never be lost upon us.

Praying for the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom among men, and subscribing myself as one of the "mite contributors" to that end, I am, as ever, yours in hope,
JOSEPH LUFF.

LITTLE DEER ISLE, Maine,
February 24th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. John C. Foss and I left Jonesport yesterday morning for this place and arrived at 2 p.m. We left the branches pretty thoroughly organized in the Eastern Maine District, and quite a good state of unity and peace. Several have given their names for baptism. I expect to return there about April 1st. Bro. Samuel O. Foss has been chosen district president, and will be efficient and faithful. I expect Sister Smith to reach here by next Saturday. Of the state of the cause here I can not as yet say, for I have seen but two families, but I am pleased to see the growth in understanding, in ability and in spiritual power, and the increase in temporal things, of Brn. J. W. Blaster and Daniel Eaton, and their families. They are both earnest young men. We will see the others soon.
T. W. SMITH.

SUMMER HILL, Douglas Co., Nebraska,
January 25th, 1880.

Brn. Joseph and Henry:—On the 7th of March, 1877, being at Naperville, Illinois, at 11 a.m. my attention was attracted by the King of kings by virtue of whom a fiery tongue came advancing in the direction where I tarried, and I heard him say: "Study the Hebrew language." In the afternoon I had a vision. I was on a mission to a foreign country and found myself on deck of a yacht on the Mediterranean sea, sailing in an eastward line to Palestine. When getting near the coast west of Jerusalem the vessel changed her course some distance north. There arrived, the passengers were immediately transferred to the long-boat, and they were all taking a seat except myself in the midships. From this standpoint I viewed all the people on board, as I looked at them and at the sea at intervals. The oarsmen were of a darkish complexion, as also the majority of the passengers who were on their return home to the house of Israel, and as I beheld a man who looked like Elder Z. Martin, only that the brother named looked so much younger when last I saw him, the time he baptized me. Safely ashore the voyagers solemnized on this occasion the first step they had set upon sacred ground in the holy land—Palestine. The same vision occurred three afternoons in succession, and ten years preparatory to its literal fulfillment.

Four months subsequent I had a dream. I dreamed I was in a wilderness and stood before a little stream in which lay the relic of a human being who was of large stature, and having a prominent forehead. At first sight I thought it was Christ, but after taking more than a passing glance at him, I saw that he was not Christ himself, but one Christ-like and he was Joseph the martyr. During this time a man apparently fifty years of age was marching down the vale, and when he had approached me he asked me "What are you doing here?" As soon as he spoke I recognized my father who died a Roman Catholic in York State six years ago. I did not answer his query and looked again at the one recumbent under the water. My father then halted close by me, and was astonished at my paying so little attention to him. Presently after he told me to keep away from that Mormon, and I had better look no more at him at all. To this I did not submit. He then seized me by the arm and tried to pull me back from the stream. He did not succeed in this and resumed his former position. Then I made a left turn facing the north. And I saw the angel of the martyr flying down from heaven to visit the relic, and the martyr rose at my right. And there was delivered unto me the Book of Mormon. And when I had opened the book I found the place where it was written: "And there shall rise up one mighty among them, who shall do much good, both in word and in deed, being an instrument in the hands of God, with exceeding faith to work mighty wonders, and do that thing which is great in the sight of God, unto the bringing to pass much restoration unto the house of Israel, and unto the seed of thy brethren."

When I had read this to my father I told him, "This is I." Then he asked me why I did not tell him this before and he believed in the book. By this his time had expired and he had to return whence he came regretting very much his departure.

FONDA, Iowa, Feb. 11th, 1880.

Dear Herald:—By way of encouragement I will tell you of some of the workings of the good cause in this part. About January 20th, Elders W. A. Carroll and Benan Salisbury came here; and, having an impression that good could be done in the north east part of Pocahontas county I took them up there. They held three meetings with good liberty, and the honest in heart (and such seemed to be all the congregation) were much interested, and wished for more from the same fountain of light. As the Master is mindful of the cries of his children he sent along Brn. Whiting and Wedlock, and with joy I welcomed them. So we three went to see those thirsty souls. The result is there will shortly be seven or more added to the kingdom of God. Kindness and hospitality were shown us all through the neighborhood. When entering it we drove up to the pleasant home of Mr. Sewel Van Alstine, who kindly cared for us. He was formerly from Illinois, and is now one of the most substantial farmers in this county. I mention the names of some others who were kind to us, namely Mr. John Freeman, Mr. Chatfield and wife and J. C. Carlson, wife and mother. The last three of whom are just as near the Kingdom of God as can be and not be in it. Your brother in Christ,
E. C. BROWN.

ST. THOMAS, Ontario, Feb. 16th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—I left home on October the 10th, 1879; not, however, at that time expecting to go into the field, but to get the district record put into some shape fit to send to the Church Recorder. I wrote to some of the branches two or three times, but instead of obtaining the desired information, I did not so much as get an answer from any of them. I therefore started out with the object of visiting each branch in turn, commencing here. I have got all the items as far as I went, so far as is possible at present to obtain information; but I found a very lax way of dealing with the several records; for instance, in each branch members have been baptized who have not received baptismal or confirmation certificates; members have removed, no one knows where, not giving dates of removal at the time; some have been expelled, no item of the fact appearing on records; others have been re-baptized, and no date given but simply leaving the original; some names not on the records at all, other names there are, but no one seems to know any thing of the parties; while to conclude, I have appealed to parties myself for information, but was told by them that they had answered these questions so often before, that I could go to the books and get my answer, but as it was not there I had to go without. Many of those who have removed have not received letters and now if they were to send for them, as there are no dates to their departure they could not be well furnished. However, I have made the best of a bad job, and have gleaned all that I can so far as St. Thomas, London, Osborne, and Carlingford branches are concerned; after which I went into the field, being so directed by both the instructions of Bro. Robert Davis and by the Spirit. Bro. Davis had gone some sixty-six miles north of our most northern branch (at the request of sister Jane Kennedy who had been warned in a dream that her parents would receive the gospel) to open a new field, and had succeeded in doing good and baptized three, Bro. Wm. Kennedy, his wife and daughter, and then he returned to Carlingford where I met him on my way north. He counselled my going north to Grey county where he had returned from. Accordingly, Bro. Robert Brown, of Carlingford, hitched up and drove me the entire distance, although it was raining when we started and it continued to rain during the two days of our travel. We started on the 11th of November, and inside of a month there were twenty more added to the three that Bro. Davis had baptized, and in that part the good seed has been sown with no sparing hand. Many more are investigating, some are believing and ready for baptising on our return. We preached in eight new places in the regions round about, meeting much opposition, but much good has also been produced by removing prejudice, and causing investigation. I had to meet three Methodist preachers and one Presbyterian in free discussion. The outcome of two of these was, that after the six and a half hours consumed between the Methodists and myself, there was a storm of rotten eggs; which, however, I escaped. They took revenge however, by pelting the houses of Bro. John Hamilton, and treating some of the sisters to an egg. And if rumor is true, the class leader who held a lantern to show the way was himself treated to a few. The names of the Methodist ministers were Rev. Buggins, Deacon, Redmond. The Presbyterian minister had come out to lecture against "Mormonism" and I was there. He of course saw me taking notes and invited me to ask questions or make remarks. He occupied two hours. I followed for another two hours; he concluded by occupying another hour, using much abusive language, and finally, a rail was provided for your humble servant, which, however, I was not under the necessity of riding. Since then I have held a two night's debate with a man purporting to be a Presbyterian elder, who came all the way from Lowell, Mass. Afterwards I had to meet another Methodist minister, Rev. Hadden, of Priceville, who made a very feeble effort. He occupied three hours after I had concluded my sermon of two hours. I have had to stem this tide of opposition alone, so far as man's help goes, as the first part occurred before Bro. C. Scott joined me; the after part took place after he went south, leaving me still in the field, Bro. C. Scott also labored very assiduously in connection with myself; in fact he did the work himself while here. The result of his labors is four more baptized at a point nine miles from Egremont, where there are also others believing who I feel confident will come in ere long. The field is a good one as the demands are more than I can fill for several months to come; in fact, at almost every meeting some person would ask to have us come and preach in their parts, which we will endeavor to do, God willing, in time. I might say much in favor of our beloved Bro. Scott, whom I love; but to say what I feel might savor of flattery in other eyes, so I refrain; simply saying, May God raise up many more like him, for his labors are keenly appreciated by those out and in the Church; may God bless him wherever he labors. We need the prayers of the brethren, for standing alone here I feel the burthen of the responsibility and if ever a weak man was thankful for aid I was when Bro. Scott came.

At another point in the township of Proton, Grey county, the kind people opened the Grangers' Hall and the result of our labors in that place is, several are believing and I have reason to think ere long will be baptized.

Since leaving home I have traveled over eight hundred and ninety miles, preached ninety-three times, besides much fireside talk, which is often productive of good results; administered to a few sick with good results; baptized twenty, confirmed twenty-two, beside conducting several testimony meetings and other duties, ordained one teacher. The branch in Egremont is not yet organized. I have received many kind favors from the Saints in the several branches; especially in Egremont, who assisted me with their means; may God reward them. This part of Canada is very subject to summer frosts, in consequence of which severe harm is done to cereals, especially this year; but there is a prospect that stock may be raised successfully, which many are now resorting to. As I have taken up too much time already, more anon. Your brother in the everlasting gospel,

J. A. McINTOSH.

SAN JOSE (Cal.) HOSPITAL,
February 10th, 1880.

Dear Bro. J. Roberts:—You have heard where I am I hope by this time. I have had no opportunity to write you, or to visit you, as I am so poor of this world's goods by having worked for a year and one-half without being paid a cent for all that time. So that you need not believe that tobacco or liquor takes all I make for I can't bear it's smell. I am surrounded on all sides by people, but by no friends and do not know of any in this world as no one writes to me; even when I ask them to do so. My burden is heavier than I am able to bear sometime, i. e., my pain or sickness, and am persecuted by Catholics and others. Hence:—

"I look away across the sea,
Where mansions are for me;
I view the shining glory shore,
My rest, my home, for ever more."

But while I am here and longing for that rest to come I hear but groans of echoes.

"Like the rough sea that can not rest,
They live devoid of peace;
A thousand stings within their breast
Deprive their souls of ease."

But I do not trust in friends in the flesh, I only trust in "Him that groaned on Calvary," while I have to plow the sea of this probation. Nine deaths have occurred here since I came to this hospital (from Nov. 3rd, 1879, to to-day Feb. 10th, 1880). When is my time? Brethren Joyce and A. Haws from Washington Corners were here last December to see me; which made me very glad; as I had not seen any brethren in a long time. Bro. T. J. Andrews sent me two copies of the Herald, (No. 23, vol. 26) and (No. 2, vol. 27). In vol. 26, No. 23, page 368, is a report of Sister Fountain of Sacramento among the "died." I do not know how to express my feelings, God knows that she was a Christian—a Saint. I only can say that I shall see her on the Resurrection morning. I also noticed on page 356 the death of Sister Emma Smith. I have not been able to get the Herald in these last two years and have therefore been in ignorance of what has been going on in the Church all that time.

I write these lines for the Herald, to be sent to all the Saints in the Church, that the readers may pray for one like me without health, and in need of your prayers that the Father may not forget me in this helpless condition; but that he should heal me and bless me, that I may after I am done, have part in the first resurrection when he comes, etc. Believe me your humble brother in Christ,

J. A. STROMBERG.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 1st, 1880.

Bro. Stebbins:—We have now general good meetings in St. Louis, and the Spirit of God is felt in power and assurance to the Saints. Bro. William Anderson is doing his duty as our president like a faithful shepherd, and he is beloved of God and of the Saints. I hope to see better days for the work here, and I believe there is a bright future before the whole Church. Let us lift up our heads and be glad; for God is with us, and who can prevail against us? Ever since I was baptized in 1868 I have had the testimony for myself that this work is of God and not of man. I was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1877, and the testimony that God gave me then I can never forget—praise be to his name. Pray for me, Bro. Henry, that he may bless me till my days of pilgrimage are over. The editor of the Central Baptist says that he likes the Herald, that it is a good paper, and that we have many good and smart men in our Church. I replied to him that God had in every dispensation some such men to do his work, preserved by him for that purpose. This editor is a good man too, and he makes me welcome to his office.

Your brother,

N. J. C. OLSON.

BEVIER, Macon Co., Mo.,
February 23rd, 1880.

Brothers Joseph and Henry:—After writing from Concordia, Fayette county, Mo., I labored a short time longer and left a number almost ready for the water, and many enquiring earnestly. Went to Holden, Johnson county, and preached several times. Thence to Lexington but found no opening. Thence to Richmond and preached several times to good audiences. Bro. F. P. Scarcliff accompanied me from Holden, and labored alternately with me. From Richmond to the Carrollton and the Miami Branches, speaking a few times at each place. Learned that some ruffians disturbed the peace of the local brethren's preaching near Miami by threatening them with violence and by laying in wait on the road, but they chanced to return another road. The Saints have taken legal steps against them.

The conference here went off smoothly. I was elected vice president of the district, also president of the Bevier Branch for two months, owing to the difficulties in it. Have held two business meetings, and the condition of things has been improved. The Saints' meeting here yesterday was the best of any for a year. At the Salt River Branch found Saints feeling good. Spoke there three times. To-day brethren Scarcliff and Etzenhouser depart for Hannibal. We thank the Saints and friends throughout our travels for their kindness and hospitality.

Your brother in the gospel covenant,
GOMER T. GRIFFITH.

LAWRENCE, Mich., Feb. 17th, 1880.

Editors Herald:—After an absence of nearly three months, out on a missionary tour, I arrived at home the 14th inst. Last November with Bro. Kelley I visited Sanilac county, Michigan, and attended the meeting advertised to be held in the St. John's Branch. The anticipated district organization was not effected, but a resolution tending to that result was passed unanimously: "Resolved that we, the Elders and members in north-eastern Michigan, request that the brethren in southern Michigan and northern Indiana grant a division of the territory, and that north-eastern Michigan may be organized into a district." After visiting two or three other points in the vicinity we passed over into Canada, where we labored being greatly blessed in our efforts. I attended the London, and the Kent and Elgin district conferences, held November 29th and 30th, and December 13th and 14th, 1879. Both were very good sessions. The first named was quite largely attended, and some discussion made times real enlivening. The latter was not so well attended. The main hindrance was rough roads, but the conference was a very interesting one notwithstanding the disadvantages. I spent the greater part of January in Grey county, Ontario. A number there have recently embraced the faith through the instrumentality of Bro. R. Davis and J. A. McIntosh. The latter stood for and maintained the cause in two or three sharply contested engagements, and against great odds in point of numbers. He will continue the work. A great door is opening up in that vicinity. I baptized four in that field, and the Saints now number twenty-seven, all faithful, united and happy, but persecution has been seen in some of its very homely revelations. A good hearted people live there, but we thought that if the land was as stony the other side the "flood" no wonder the patriarchs lived so long, especially the farmers. For it would take about three of our generations to "gather out the stones," to make the land tillable. Many people live there, but we doubt whether any but the industrious could stay very long. In Perth county encountered some very aggressive opposition, some young men persisting in interrupting the meetings by talking aloud during services frequently exclaiming: "That's a lie!" "Tell us something new!" together with many insulting phrases. But we talked on without particularly noticing them. Labored some in Carlingford, London and Bayham. I baptized one (Bro. Mottashed) in London, and I trust that the good feeling manifested there at our sacrament meeting on Sunday, February 1st, will increase and remain with them. At Bayham the audiences increased from first to last. A good work can be done there, and those "Corinthians" should live in hope, with love and faith. St. Thomas was the last place I visited in Canada. Some good faithful Saints are there struggling on in the faith. Some little troubles exist which really need not, but for some egotistical self-will not yet overcome. But this is not the only branch that has trials to experience. Some wish to be "wise above what is written;" but it appears to me, that had the Lord seen it necessary to salvation to have revelation and natural science combined in one system, he would have so indicated; but, since he has not, as yet, it seems to be wise to let them remain separate. "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy, and vain deceit, * * after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ."—Col. 2:8.

For want of time I could not visit other points in the Kent and Elgin District, as anticipated; nor did I return via Sanilac county, and for a similar reason. I felt just as well and as contented while laboring in Canada, as I ever did in any field, and shall be glad to visit them again at a proper time. Since my return home word comes from Clyde, Allegan county, that the Seventh Day Adventists are challenging the world on the "Sabbath" and "Conscious" questions, and I am earnestly solicited to go there. We'll see.

As there has been some controversy in the Herald as to the means used in translating the Book of Mormon I give Joseph Smith's own testimony as penned by himself in 1842 and published in the book, "Religions of the World," published in London, England, by Charles Griffin & Co. He there wrote as follows, page 318: "Through the medium of the Urim and Thummin I translated the record (Book of Mormon) by the gift and power of God." Your brother,

C. SCOTT.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
March 1st, 1880.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I think there will be an increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in this Rocky Mountain mission.

I saw Bro. C. Derry at Ogden last week. He is in fine spirits. He will come here about March 12th to 14th to remain for a few weeks. Brn. Luff and Anthony are in excellent spirits and doing well. Their labors are very acceptable, as also those of Bro. Derry. As for Bro. Deuel, have heard nothing from him for the past six weeks. Prospects are good in many places.

On Sunday last I perfected arrangements with Henry Lawrence by which we will have the Institute this Spring and Summer, and probably for next winter. This relieves us of the necessity of building the chapel, at least till fall, and likely till one year from this Spring. H. L. hopes you may come at an early time and locate the business center of the Church here. He is sanguine in the idea that the Reorganized Church may yet "capture" the Utah Mormon Church.

Gov. Murray came last night. We shall likely soon know more definitely what he intends to do. I think to start east by the 10th or 15th inst., and be home by 25th to 28th inst. The general outlook in this mission is highly encouraging. It needs to be made available with thorough, wise effort. Yours in Christ,
W. W. BLAIR.

MAQUOKETA, Iowa,
February 25th, 1880.

Bro. Henry.—We are putting forth another effort here, and the Lord is with us. Congregations not large but interested. Our brethren in this vicinity are encouraged, and there is a much better tone to the expressions from our neighbors. On last Saturday evening we were made glad by the coming of Bro. Job Brown from Clinton, Iowa. He is alive to the interests of the work, and zealous in the defence of the truth. On Sunday evening he ably defended the position of the Reorganization. May our heavenly Father bless him in his every effort is our prayer. Bro. Lark was with us Sunday, giving us good counsel and cheering words.

For myself, I thank the Master for marks of his favor. I wish to be faithful to the covenant

I have made, and to the trust he has committed to my care. I expect to go to Iron Hill to-morrow, to which place an appointment has been sent. Yours in the gospel,

JEROME RUBY.

ALTON, Ills., Dec. 30th, 1879.

The Herald is always a welcome visitor to me and my family. I think that no person can enjoy the Spirit of the latter day work of Christ, unto a needful degree of assurance so as to exercise that firm sacrificing faith, and steady hope of celestial bliss and not read the Herald. I feel a great desire to see the printed word more widely distributed, and I am under the idea of taking the most of my back Heralds and distributing them to my neighbors with an invitation attached to subscribe. Alton is very deeply inspired with prejudice against everything claiming the name of Latter Day Saint. It is a section of country impregnated with religion and Catholic holiness. What few Saints there are here seem to be impressed with the work, but the work of regeneration is rather tardy. I suppose your brother T. R. A. will have to hustle from under a part of the load. In the year 1849 I first took hold of Mormonism and was then said to be guilty of a very foolish idea and that was for believing that Joseph Smith was a prophet. I am charged with the same crime yet, and I expect to always be found guilty. In Christ,

THOMAS R. ALLEN.

NEW TRENTON, Indiana,
February 13th, 1880.

Bro. Henry.—I am still trying to magnify my calling, but the state of the weather and roads militate against me. I baptized one in Jefferson county on Christmas day. Bro. Geo. F. Weston of Plano came to my assistance. We held meetings during the holidays at Union. Bro. J. S. Christie, of Olive, came to us New Year's day. Our meetings were well attended. The one baptized is a very intelligent young lady. January 2nd we went to Hall's Ridge; held two meetings, Brn. Christie and Weston speaking. Bad weather and roads compelled us to desist. They returning to Ripley county, I remained a week and preached three times to good congregations. I went thence to Moorefield, Switzerland county, but could not hold meetings on account of mud. On the 23rd at Vevay I took boat for Cincinnati and New Richmond, Ohio, where I met our good sister Emerson. In looking for a place to hold meetings in we applied first for the M. E. Church, and were refused; then we obtained the town hall, it being a building costing $40,000. It has about fifty lamps, and five to twenty-five bushels of coal are needed per evening to heat it. A man is employed to attend to it. Altogether it is quite expensive, but, thanks to the gentlemanly trustees, I had it free three nights. I attempted a defence of truth, with good liberty. I was invited to preach at Carthage, Campbell county, Kentucky, but the rain and mud prevented, so I returned to Cincinnati and Covington, Kentucky; thence to Grant's Bend; but because of the beautiful mud could do nothing there. Went thence to Amanda, Ohio, the 3rd instant, and found Bro. J. F. McDowell holding forth every night to full houses. I remained a week, then wandered back to Hoosierdom, and found my element. What a beautiful arrangement in the kingdom is the having of a variety of laborers peculiarly adapted to the different grades of humanity. For instance, fine places and fine people require fine Elders in fine clothes, with some kind of conveyance to move them about, and who are not expected to endure fatigue or hardships. Thus they come up through great tribulation and sacrifice. These thoughts come to my mind many times as, carpet sack in hand, I trudge along through the mud, miles upon miles, to tell the story of the cross. I do not say this to complain, by no means; I simply state facts. I rejoice and glory in the thought that I am blessed with bodily powers to endure fatigue and hardships while laboring for the Master. In this mission I have walked over one thousand miles, to bear testimony to the work of the last days. And I am willing to continue. And whenever I find myself out of place in highly cultivated society, where my dress and lack of education is likely to shock my fine co-laborers, why I will simply ask them to look charitably on my youth and inexperience, as I am only fifty-four, and have only been preaching eighteen years. I have a desire to improve in all things.

I hear that my boys (Brn. Christie and Weston) are moving things in Ripley county. They write very encouragingly of the prospects. Bro. Weston is proving himself a help indeed. May our Father bless the boys! I expect to labor in this vicinity until the 26th, then go to Jefferson county, thence to Boone county on my way to Plano Conference. My visit at sister Emerson's was pleasant indeed. I shall long remember it, and the kindness of her amiable daughter (Mrs. Roeder) and her little Hopes, and Lewy, will not soon be forgotten. I did not see Dr. Roeder, who was absent at the Ohio Medical College. I met him on a former visit and found him a real and true gentleman. In conclusion I will say that the work was never in a more prosperous condition than now. Your co-laborer in Christ,

B. V. SPRINGER.

CENTRALIA, Kansas,
February 22d, 1880.

Bro. Henry.—Three of us went to Netawaka conference, February 7th, and all was harmonious there. Indeed everywhere I meet the Saints they show by their daily walk that they are of God. Bro. Henry Green came back with us and gave six sermons in our school-house. It did much good. I do not see how people can reject the true gospel, as clearly as our Elders explain the law whereby a man must be saved. But I hope to see more here put on Christ by baptism, besides the two there baptized, George Wolverton and wife, but Bro. Green was obliged by his affairs to leave. I never saw so much interest shown before. The Catholics in particular were very attentive. The Lord has given us good encouragement by prophecy that he will bless us more abundantly. Saints, let us prove ourselves worthy of the things the Lord is bestowing on us. JAMES BUCKLEY.

RUSHVILLE, Illinois,
February 12th, 1880.

I am sorry to say that our branch is nearly gone down. We have had no preaching since Bro. Lake was with us last Fall. It seems that the work is like a fire; it always needs kindling to keep it blazing. Have not heard from Bro. Lake since our conference in December. He said he would try and be here by the first of March, and we shall look for him, or expect him to send Bro. Crawford; for they know our circumstances and we need their labors very much. Yours as ever,
WM. J. CURRY.

Conference Minutes.

NEVADA DISTRICT.

A conference was held at Genoa, Nevada, Feb. 15th, 1880; A. B. Johns, presiding; T. R. Hawkins, clerk.

Branch Reports:—Carson, Mottsville and Dayton reported having had no changes. Franktown not reported.

The district clerk requested that in the future the branch presidents, if possible, make their reports on proper blanks, and send a copy once a year to the Church Recorder.

Elders A. B. Johns, Thos. Millard, D. I. Jones, G. P. Slayton, D. R. Jones and T. R. Hawkins reported. Teacher John Walker reported.

Bishop's Agent, T. R. Hawkins, reported. On recommendation of the Carson Branch it was ordered that Priest J. Riddler be ordained an Elder. It was also ordered that Bro. E. Penrod be re-ordained an Elder.

Missions appointed: Thos. Millard, to preach throughout the State, assisted by Elder T. R. Hawkins and others; A. B. Johns and G. P. Slayton to Mason Valley and the Walker River country; D. R. Jones and D. I. Jones, to the upper country and elsewhere; George Smith to labor in Washoe county and the district at large, assisted by others. E. Penrod in Eastern Nevada and in Elko.

At 2 p.m. the Saints partook of the sacrament. The Spirit said through Bro. D. R. Jones that the acts of this conference were approved of heaven; that the Elders would see the results of their labors, if faithful and diligent in their missions, and that some present would live to see the coming of the Lord, but not all, for God would take away some to himself before that time.

Adjourned to Jack's Valley, in May, 1880, on call of the president.

ENGLISH MISSION.

The Annual Conference was held in London, England, June 1st and 2d, 1879; Elder Thomas Taylor, President of the Mission, in the chair.

In the afternoon Brn. G. S. Greenwood and Joseph Dewsnup preached, and in the evening Brn. C. H. Caton and H. C. Crump. In each case there was a good attendance of people not connected with the Church, who listened very attentively, and some questions were asked. Several openly expressed their approval of the manner in which the Scriptures had been explained, saying that they came to the meeting greatly prejudiced against our doctrine, but they must confess that it was with a very different feeling that they went away.

The president, in opening the business session of Conference, gave a short, but earnest address.

A statement was made by Brn. H. C. Crump and John Haywood about a printing press belonging to Bro. G. Haywood, which he proposes to lend to the mission, if the authorities think fit to do their own printing.

Secretary's Report of the Mission, to Dec. 31st, 1878, showed 11 branches, with a total membership of 363, including 47 Elders, 21 Priests, 9 Teachers, 8 Deacons. Thus: Birmingham 73. London 62. Hanley 38. Clay Cross 34. Stafford 9. Sheffield 16. Manchester 42. Farnworth 28. Plymouth 13. Portsmouth 7. Penston 15. Scattered: Glasgow 1. Liverpool 2. Leicester 1. Mansfield 2. Nottingham 3. Walsall 17.

Reports of Districts: Birmingham, John Seville, president, shows that there is a good feeling in the branches throughout that district. He thinks there is a good prospect for an ingathering during the present year.

Manchester, reported by Jos. Dewsnup, president. He states that some parts of the district are not in so good a condition, but he has good hopes for the future. The Manchester Branch is in excellent condition, there being no jar or discordant sound amongst them.

London, by Bro. Thomas Bradshaw, who stated that the branch is in tolerably good condition.

Elders' Reports:—John Owen, C. D. Norton, T. Bradshaw, James Gerrard, R. Kendrick, Hy. C. Crump, C. H. Caton, Joseph Gilbert, C. H. Hassal, and Joseph Dewsnup in person; also Priests Wm. Kendrick, Joseph Tankard, Erastus Allrop, James Tankard, G. S. Greenwood, John Haywood, and John Davis; also Teachers G. E. Meredith and Albert Seaport.

In each of the above reports it was clearly manifested that the brethren were in earnest in their endeavors to spread the gospel, and the time spent in hearing these reports was truly refreshing.

Report of the London Sunday School:—The school was opened in February, 1879, with only 5 scholars, and now there are 75 names on the register. These are, for the most part children of persons who do not belong to the Church. Every thing that can be done to add to their intellectual improvement is being done by the superintendent and her efficient staff of teachers.

Bishop's Agent's Report.—Bro. Thomas Taylor, Bishop's Agent, presented a financial report for the year, and Brn. H. C. Crump and Joseph Gilbert were appointed auditor; and, on their report being accepted, the Agent's balance sheet was ordered spread on the minutes.

The following was adopted by unanimous vote: Resolved that we recognize the necessity of a semi-monthly journal, in the interests of the English Mission, and that we appoint a committee of ways and means, to take such steps as by them deemed best for the publishing of the same, they to take under consideration the offer of Bro. John Haywood; and, if found practicable, to print said journal as early date as possible.

Brn. T. Taylor, C. H. Caton, H. C. Crump, Joseph Gilbert and J. E. Meredith were chosen as the committee.

The request of the London Branch that a committee be appointed to investigate certain ordinations had there, was granted, and Brn. C. H. Caton, H. C. Crump, Joseph Gilbert, Joseph Dewsnup and C. H. Hassal were appointed.

Circumstances prevented him from continued preaching during the last six months, but he had done considerable, also other missionary labor.

Miscellaneous.

FIRST QUORUM OF ELDERS.

To the First Quorum of Elders; Greeting:—As the time for our meeting, during the sessions of the Annual Conference at Plano, Illinois, is near, I respectfully request that the members report their labors for the six months ending April 1st. It is much desired that we should become active workers in the harvest field, for the demand for wise and faithful servants of the word was never greater. Please also state your willingness to work during the ensuing semi-year, and where you desire to be employed for the advancement and spread of truth. Please address,

ROBT. M. ELVIN,
Plano, Illinois.

AN APOLOGY.

To the Brethren and Sisters of the English Mission:—I feel it my duty to ask your forgiveness for not sending the minutes of our last conference to the Herald Office for publication before now. At the same time I beg to assure you that it was quite an accident. I wrote them out for that purpose the week following conference and thought I posted them along with some more letters; but, unfortunately, I filed them away with some reports of Elders, etc. Owing to sickness in my family I was prevented from attending to my church duties—such as filling up the record, etc., until a few days ago; and when I came to look among the papers filed away, I found the minutes of conference nicely folded up. I was somewhat surprised that they were not published in the Herald for August 1st, 1879; and, but for the sickness before referred to, I should have made enquiries by letter as to the reason why. I promise to be more careful in the future, and beg to hope that you will forgive my error. All of which will be esteemed a favor by your obedient servant,

C. H. CATON.

172 Balsall Heath, Birmingham, Eng.

EASTERN IOWA DISTRICT.

To the Saints of the Eastern Iowa District; Dear Brethren:—Circumstances having prevented my visiting all the branches, I employ this means to address you. There is a growing interest in the work in many localities, and this calls for a corresponding effort on the part of those who are representatives of the truth. Brethren, consider the importance of the message we have to bear—of the responsibility resting upon us who are "in the light," and let us be up and doing. Let us put on the harness and actively engage in the Latter Day Work. The calls for preaching are numerous and increasing, but the laborers are few. Those who are in the field are doing a good work. Bro. Jerome Ruby has been actively engaged preaching in the district since the December conference, being assisted by Bro. Mariner Maudeley. These two brethren are here now, and the meetings are well attended. Let us sustain these brethren by our prayers. Strive my brethren, to put away all differences, avoid strifes, cultivate a love for each other and thus be preachers of the word to your fellow men. We are the representatives of the religion of our Savior; let us see to it that our lights be not hid under bushels.

Having counseled with the Elders here, I have appointed a conference for this district to be held at Buttrnut Grove Branch, commencing on Saturday, May 22nd, 1880. I hope as many of our brethren as can will attend and give us their help to further on the good work. I shall visit the several branches in the district between now and the time appointed for the conference.

Praying that God's blessings may be enjoyed by all, I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

ERWARD LARKEY.

President East'n Iowa Dist.

MARTIN.—Born to Mr. and Sr. Ellen Martin, a daughter, February 1st, 1880; name Cora Lee.

MARRIED.

GUNSOLLY—GAMET.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Mondamin, Harrison county, Iowa, Bro. Jacob L. Gunsolly to Sr. Sarah Gamet; Elder D. M. Gamet officiating. May the spirit of wisdom inspire the happy pair.

DIED.

GREEN.—At Nortonville, Contra Costa county, Cal., December 8th, 1879, Martha Jane, daughter of Bro. Henry S. and Sr. Mary A. Green; aged 7 months and 19 days. Funeral services by Elder P. B. Cain.

Our little Mattie, darling,
Has gone from our embrace;
She gladdened all the household
With her little smiling face.
Her mission here on earth was done,
And God saw fit to call her home,
And now that we prepared may be
To meet her in eternity,
Where parting will be no more.

CAIN.—At her home in Elmwood, Cass county, Nebraska, February 18th, 1880, of erysipelas in the face, Sr. Eliza A. Cain, wife of Bro. Martin Cain; aged 53 years. She was a member of the Platt River Branch.

JENKINS.—At Malad, Idaho, January 26, 1880, of brain fever, Emma, daughter of Bro. Thomas and Sr. Elizabeth Ann Jenkins, aged 2 years, 11 months, and 15 days. Services by Elder R. J. Anthony.

CLOUSE.—At Millersburg, Mercer county, Illinois, February 22nd, 1880, of consumption, Rebecca Susan, infant daughter of Bro. Sr. L. Clouse; aged 11 months.

BENTLEY.—At 1:30 p. m. February 23rd, 1880, near Lawrence, Michigan, Bro. David M. Bentley was instantly killed by the falling limb of a beech tree. It struck him on the left forehead, crushing the skull, and entirely destroying the left eye. Both the upper and lower jaw bones were broken on the left side, and he evidently died not knowing what hurt him. He was 36 years, 10 months, and 21 days old; was baptized by H. C. Smith May 16th, 1875, and was ordained a deacon August 15th, 1875. He ever exemplified his profession and bore a faithful testimony to the truthfulness of the Latter Day Work, also evidenced an active, living faith in the everlasting gospel. He offered prayer the evening previous to his sudden departure, in the public meeting of the Saints. He leaves a wife and four children. The esteem entertained for him by the community was indicated by the unusually large attendance at the funeral, which was the largest seen in this vicinity for years. Remarks were offered by Elder C. Scott, from Rev. 14:12, 19. His sudden exit from our midst is a heavy loss to the Lawrence Branch and especially to the family, also to the community at large.

REESE.—At Reese Creek, Gallatin county, Montana, of scarlet fever, after an illness of three days, Mary Jane Reese; aged 3 years, 2 months, and 13 days. The deceased was the daughter of Gomer and Chloe M. Reese. Funeral sermon to be preached by Elder E. C. Brand, March 7th.

Our little one has gone to rest,
And with the dead is numbered;
But soon again we know she'll rise,
When the trump of God is sounded.

Now she rests on Jesus' bosom,
Free from every pain and care;
Though we weep when her tomb we gaze on,
But the Spirit whispers, "she's not there."

O, may we live that we may meet her,
When this earth is free from sin;
Then with joy and peace we'll greet her,
At the marriage supper enter in. G. R.

SMITH.—On January 7th, 1880, of heart disease, Sr. Ellen Smith, wife of Bro. George Smith. She was born in Castleton, Yorkshire, England, January 15th, 1804. She was baptized in 1842, and with her husband emigrated to this country in 1854; was baptized into the Reorganized Church by Elder Eli Wildermuth, and connected herself with the Independence Branch, Iowa, in April, 1865. She was strong in the faith of the latter-day work.

CHASE.—At Soldier Valley, Harrison county, Iowa, November 22d, 1879, Bro. Amos Chase, aged 58 years, 11 months and 4 days. He was born in Vermont, December 18th, 1820. He had been failing for a year or more, and for six months quite fast. Two weeks before he died he was stricken with paralysis. He was faithful to God's work to the end. Funeral sermon by Elder J. C. Crabbe, from Rev. 14:13.

SMITH.—Of old age, Bro. Nehemiah D. Smith, February 7th, 1880, at the residence of his son, Henry C. Smith, in Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, aged 82 years and some months. He was a firm believer in Christ for 60 years, and blessed with the prayer of faith for the sick prior to his receiving the latter day work in 1868. He died in peace, praising the name of the Lord. He leaves a wife, children and grand children to mourn his departure. Peace be to them. Like the "shock of corn that is fully ripe" this brother has been gathered in. Services by Elder Z. H. Gurley, Eccl. 12:7.

CROWLEY.—At Indian River, Washington county, Maine, February 14th, 1880, at the age of 18 years, 7 months and 12 days, Mrs. Flora M. Crowley, wife of Mr. Orrin Crowley, and daughter of Bro. James C. and Sr. Cordelia Crowley. She fully believed the gospel, but neglected to obey it. She was beloved by all who knew her, for her gentle and aimable spirit. She was one of the number who were shipwrecked two years ago this month. After being on the wreck for twelve days they were taken off by a Norwegian vessel. An account of this was published in the Herald. Funeral service was held in the Baptist Church, which was crowded to overflowing. Sermon from Job 14:14, 15 by Elder T. W. Smith, assisted by Elder Mutch of the Baptist Church.

NORTON.—At Jonesport, Washington county, Maine, February 15th, 1880, aged 13 years, 6 months, Herman E. Norton, son of Bro. Jeremiah B. and Sr. Susan M. Norton. He was a very steady, honest and truthful boy; was well liked by the neighbors, who could trust him implicitly to do any sort of business that he was capable of performing. Funeral services in the Union Chapel, Jonesport; sermon from Eccl. 12:7 by Elder T. W. Smith. Herman believed the latter day work, but did not obey it.

BLACKMAN.—At his father's residence, near Magnolia, Iowa, December 9th, 1879, of typhoid pneumonia, Bro. John Henry Blackman, son of Bro. George and Sr. Harriet Blackman, in the 23d year of his age. A local paper says: "To those acquainted with Mr. Blackman any thing we could say would be superfluous. Though young in years so true to his God, himself and humanity was he that none were his enemies and all who knew him his firm friends. The funeral services were held at the Saints' Church, in Magnolia, of which he was long a faithful member, and an interesting discourse was delivered by Elder J. C. Crabb, Presiding Elder of the Little Sioux District. It is seldom that one so young has so en

"THY KINGDOM COME."

Thy kingdom come; Almighty God,
Lift error's veil; let nations hear
The joyful sound of truth restored,
The witness that thy coming's near.
Thy coming! Grant us courage, Lord,
If we must bide the closing scene;
Let Saints the light of truth impart,
And strive the erring heart to win.

Thy kingdom come; let human woe
Dispel before thy glorious reign;
Let the long night of sin and strife
Be banished when he comes again.
He'll come again; on Olive's mount
He'll rest his feet; but, ah, the change;
As Lord of lords and King of kings,
The great Redeemer comes to reign.

Thy kingdom come; let earth rejoice;
She groans beneath the heavy curse;
Lay mountains low, let vallies rise;
Thy kingdom come, and fill the earth.
The earth that's stained with blood of saints
Brought forth the cruel crown of thorns;
Let man and nature end complaints
At the glad shout, Hé comes! He comes!

Thy kingdom come, and shorten days
That's marked with terror, crime and gloom;
Thy judgments sore enshroud the earth;
And men and nations wail and mourn.
Warm our cold hearts, thou God of love,
Let human eyes show pity's tear;
Give strength to those who cry, "Repent,"
Thy kingdom's near! thy kingdom's near!

Irish Home Rule a Sign of the Final Crisis.

BY THE EDITOR.

PREDICTIONS FROM PROPHECY MANY YEARS AGO
THAT IRELAND WILL BE LEGISLATIVELY
SEPARATED FROM ENGLAND AT THE FINAL CRISIS.

In our remarks last week on The Great Crisis at Hand, we observed that Dr. Tregellis and B. W. Newton and other expositors have long maintained that the predestined latter-day reconstruction of Cæsar's Roman Empire, in the form of a ten-kingdomed confederacy (Daniel 7:24), necessitates the separation, at least legislatively, of all the countries outside that Roman Empire from the countries inside it, and that, therefore, Britain must be by that time separated, at least legislatively, if not entirely, from Ireland and India and all its colonies.

As the Irish Home Rule agitation has lately come into fresh prominence at the Liverpool election by the Liberal candidate, young Lord Ramsay, pledging himself to vote for an inquiry into the demand for an Irish Parliament, it is appropriate to notice the exact words in which some expositors many years ago foretold from Daniel that the legislative separation of Ireland from England, and the restoration of an Irish Parliament, must precede the Final Crisis of this dispensation.

In 1846 Dr. Kelshall, in his treatise on 'Antichrist,' said, "The ten Gentile kingdoms, prefigured by the ten toes of the Image and the ten horns of the beast, into which the whole Roman Empire (as it existed in the time of the Emperor Trajan) will become ultimately divided, will make their appearance so as to be distinctly recognized. Ireland was never brought within the limits of the Roman Empire, and probably does not come within the scope of the prophecy of the Ten Kingdoms. The present course of events in that island indicates that its separation from England, which was part of the Roman Empire, may hereafter take place. Belgium was within the limits of the Roman earth; Holland was not, and in 1832 they were separated. The restoration of the kingdom of Greece in 1827, by its separation from Turkey, so as to form one of the ten kingdoms, is worthy of observation. It seems as if the ten kingdoms were gradually developing themselves."

Dr. Tregelles, in 1846, in his 'Remarks on Daniel,' published at Bagster's, Paternoster Row, London, said, in his description of the extent of the Roman Empire (pps. 55, 56 and 59), "Britain, which had been invaded by Julius Cæsar in B. C. 55, and which for many subsequent years maintained only a commercial connection with Rome, was made part of the Roman Empire by the successors of Augustus Cæsar about a century after Julius Cæsar's invasion—so far, at least, as the line of forts carried from the Clyde to the Forth. Even further north there were Roman towns. * * It seems to me we should include Southern Britain (i. e. below the Clyde and Forth) in the Roman Empire, and take as its boundary line in Europe the rivers Rhine and Danube in a general sense." Thus Dr. Tregelles does not include Ireland or Scotland north of the rivers Clyde and Forth—but only Southern Britain below those rivers—in the Roman Empire, which he of course maintains is to be divided into exactly Ten Kingdoms—five in the East and five in the West—at the Final Crisis.

In 1849 B. W. Newton published his able book, 'Prospects of the Ten Kingdoms' (at Houlston's, Paternoster Buildings, London), in which he said:—

"The two legs of Daniel's Image (Daniel 2: 32, 33), corresponding with the division of the Roman Empire into its two Eastern and Western divisions, lead us to expect that five kingdoms of the Ten Kingdoms, pre-figured by the Ten Toes of the Image, will ultimately be found in the Eastern and five in the Western part of the Roman dominions."

"The prophecy about the four horns in the eighth chapter of Daniel (verses 22, 23) places it beyond a doubt that Greece, Egypt, Syria and Thrace, with Bithynia, the four horn kingdoms, will form four of the five Eastern kingdoms. And there seems little doubt but that France, Spain and England will continue separate Kingdoms to the End, and be three of the ten."

"With respect to the dissolution of unions at present subsisting between countries, one of which did, and the other did not, fall within the limits of the Roman Empire, there are two cases to be considered."

"First, there is the case in which a country outside the Roman Empire holds authority over a country inside the original Roman Empire. Such was the relation of Holland to Belgium. But it has been dissolved. We may expect to see a similar dissolution between the German Confederation and all countries west of the Rhine or south of the Danube over which it exercises authority. Rhenish Prussia, Baden, Wurtemberg and the chief part of Bavaria are the countries thus circumstanced. We may, therefore, expect their separation from Germany, and annexation to some of the countries that fall within the Roman Empire (such as France or Austria)."

"We may also similarly expect that Russia will resign Bessarabia, and that her influence will be supplanted in Moldavia and Wallachia, that is, if the full extent of the Roman Empire is to be taken as it existed in the time of Trajan."

Secondly, there is the case where a country external to the Roman Empire is subjected to a country inside the Roman Empire. The countries thus circumstanced are Ireland in its relation to England, and the colonies of England, France, Spain and Portugal; also the central part of Hungary and Bohemia, and all German Austria north of the Danube in relation to Austria.

"I think there can be little doubt but that the union between such countries will be dissolved, if not fully, yet to the extent of distinct and separate legislatures being granted, as indeed is already done in the leading colonies of England (e.g., Australia, Canada, New Zealand). The separation of Hanover from England in 1830 may be regarded as an example of this."

The editor of the Christian Herald remarked in his pamphlet in 1865, on 'Menacing Perils in England':—"It is clear from the Book of Revelation that Ireland, being outside the Roman Empire, must become separated from England, (which was inside the Roman Empire), and be constituted an independent nation." Also, in 1866, in his book, 'Forty Coming Wonders,' on page 58 he wrote as follows:—

"The coming predestined European Congress will be closely associated with the growing development of exactly ten kingdoms within the whole extent of the old Roman Empire, as predicted by the ten horns of the wild beast, and the ten toes of the Prophetic Image in the second of Daniel, where the two iron legs of that image are universally admitted to mean the Eastern and Western halves of the Roman Empire, which was bisected into an Eastern Empire and a Western Empire in the reign of Valentinian and Valens; and the five toes on each foot show that each half is to be divided toward the close of the history of the Image in five kingdoms.*

"This will involve a complete reconstruction of the map of Europe, but it is most remarkable how even now the Continent seems to be progressing toward this final ten-kingdom shape. There appears scarcely any doubt but that the five kingdoms in the Western half will be, in the main, Great Britain, France, Spain with Portugal, Italy, Southern Austria, and the five in the Eastern half will be Tunis with Tripoli and the four kingdoms of the successors of Alexander the Great, namely, Egypt, Greece, Syria, and the rest of Turkey.

"But these leading ten kingdoms must have their boundaries considerably altered in order to include all other countries that fall within the Roman Empire, and also to exclude all countries that fall outside that Empire. The Roman Empire's boundaries comprised nearly all the northern coast of Africa as far south as the Desert of Sahara, and it was bounded on the east by the river Euphrates, on the north by the Danube and Rhine, on the west by the Atlantic, and it included Great Britain as far as the Highlands.

"In order, then, that the ten kingdoms may be completely formed, there is every reason to expect:—

"(a.) That Great Britain will have the legislative union dissolved between it and Ireland, which is outside the Roman Empire, and which, therefore, must become governmentally separate from England. The Fenian organization, which is a far more serious matter than shallow journalists imagine, has discovered and developed a state of feeling which shows what inflammable elements are at hand for a Celtic revolution. Whether this separation can be affected without scenes of bloodshed and massacre, remains to be seen. All the colonies included at present within the British Empire, such as India, Australia, New Zealand, the Cape of Good Hope, Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, the West Indies, &c., will all cease to be a part of the British Empire, on account of their being outside the limits of the old Roman earth; and they will be numbered among the Last Great Napoleon's tributary dependencies, in accordance with the prophecy 'Power shall be given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.'—(Rev. 8:7). Great political troubles may therefore be looked for to arise soon throughout the length and breadth of Britain's dominions.

"(b.) That France will push her frontier to the Rhine, and consequently swallow up within her enlarged boundaries Belgium, Rhenish

Prussia, west of the Rhine, Luxemburg, Baden, Wurtemberg, the lower part of Bavaria, and all or so much of Switzerland as may not be added to the Italian kingdom, and France will also absorb such parts of Austria below the Danube as may not be united to Italy.

"(c.) That Italy will undoubtedly recover possession of Venetia; Austria must be completely split assunder, the line of division being the river Danube; and Bohemia, Moravia and Galicia above the Danube (being outside the Roman Empire) have to be governmentally severed from Austrian territory below the Danube, as the latter falls within the limits of the Roman Empire."

Hence it is evident from prophecy that in a few years' time at the Final Crisis the Home Rule agitation is to issue in the legislative separation of Ireland and England, but this predestined fact does not justify the agitation any more than the prophecy of Christ's crucifixion justified the Jews in perpetrating that tragedy.—The Christian Herald and Signs of Our Times.

Elder D. L. Shinn on the Reorganized Church.

Editors Saints' Herald:—I often think of writing for the Herald on the long-expected union of all (so-called) Latter Day Saints. This people know not how to become reconciled to "splits" or divisions, or call them different members of "the body;" every organization must look upon the others as being of "the world."

I am more and more of the opinion that all true Latter Day Saints will come together; that all the factions will be shaken to pieces; the true organization will stand of itself and grow, but the false ones will fall of themselves. I am now ready to conclude that the "Reorganization" will be "the Church," and it will gather up all the sound material of the others.

Before I knew anything about the Reorganization really, I could always tell what they were, and show their folly; but, when I got more understanding, (for which I am thankful), I was able to see that the folly was my own. I have been blind, but now I see. I see that the Josephites are a good people, and I would rejoice to be with them. I hope you will continue growing in strength of numbers and in unity. Perfection, in the unity of the faith, is what we need; also in the "knowledge of the Son of God." I speak of these things because I am sick of division.

I hope the Saints caught the good ideas taught in the Herald by some brother, in an article on the gathering: "Saints must be perfect enough to dwell together in unity and peace, before they gather." The Jews were kept under a cruel master; "the law was added because of transgressions," and it punished the disobedient "without mercy;" but it could not bring perfection. Nothing but "the bringing in of a better hope did." "Christ is the end of the law to all them that believe." This "better hope" we have, and we are therefore free from the law. It is not unreasonable to conclude that both the strong government and the perfection are indispensably necessary to the success of such an enterprise as the "gathering of the saints," and the consequent "building of Zion." Whoever has undertaken or will undertake this, without the law or the perfection, must surely reap, sooner or later, the reward of folly.

Union and fellowship should be the leading objects in the minds of all true believers in the system of religion taught by the martyrs of "the restoration." "Long-suffering, goodness, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity," are some of the virtues which ought to be taught and acquired by diligent effort, and no time should be lost. No tree ought to be planted there until it bears such good fruit.

But perhaps I am not the one to think for others. I desire to watch myself, and to be humble. I am thankful to God for my hope, and for the refining and consoling doctrines of the gospel taught by the Latter Day Saints—the faith of the Carthage Martyrs.

But, to you, I seem as a mere spectator, an "outsider." This is the question I want discussed through the Herald, as well for myself as for others. There are others looking to me. I am as a shepherd with a little flock, one far away from the fold, trying to hold them together, and to feed them, until the Chief Shepherd shall give directions where to take them. I am as one with a little "squad" of soldiers in an enemy's country, keeping guard and doing duty, while waiting orders to move and join the main army. The question with many, very many, I am sorry to say, is, Where is the true army, and who is the true leader of it? But you must believe me that the Lord blesses us. Pray, will you, all, that we may be rescued.

Please allow me to say again to all the Saints, (and some you know not may read), that this is what I desire, that such unity and peace as we all pray for, can only be obtained through the means appointed to produce a growth in perfection. We should, therefore, use the means. Let us remember the fig-tree. The Savior would have it cut down because it bore no fruit.

Some years ago I concluded that all the factions were falling to pieces, and I was not deceived. The great shaking has continued. I have been a constant watcher. I see the drift of the times, the restless current, while the storm and its waves are dashing us to pieces, moves us, one by one, onward to a better port perhaps, where we shall have rest; yes, thank heaven, we shall rest in the bosom of the true Church, the blessed bride of the coming Lord; rest from the strife of contending aspirants, from the babble of unsound believers, and from the inconsistent professions of would-be saints, but for the reproaches that hover around the name of the Church, and around the name of the one who first suffered in these times in raising the standard of eternal truth. "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth." (Ps. 60). Let the banner be displayed, and let all that fear God rally to the standard. I am ready to "accept the situation." I was a soldier, and well I remember, when in the southern part of Virginia, how the poor slaves flocked in large numbers around the dear old flag. And all they asked was to be permitted to rest under its protection at night, and to follow the army by day, until they could secure themselves from their cruel masters. If I can not be one among you, (I feel unworthy). let me follow along behind, and come near enough to rest under the sweet influence of that banner of truth. Yes, and let me learn to sing with the Saints of God the songs of freedom, and teach them to my children.

Let "glory in the highest" be given to the God of Joseph and of the poor, dear, suffering Saints. Their torments are many and grievous in this world; but their rest will be sweet and glorious in the world to come. And if I never become worthy to dwell in the Holy City or rest at last with the people of God, let my bones be placed somewhere near by; for I know that God will call for his people in the day of the Lord, and bring up their dead bodies from the grave, that the "mortal may put on immortality," and "corruption put incorruption."

Will you pray for those with me, (called Bickertonites), that they may be all they wish to be, even Saints of God. If any brother comes this way, let him enquire for me, or for Geo. W. Pritchard or Wilber Wigner. After I hear from you, I may write again.

I am truly yours, etc., D. L. SHINN.
CLARKSBURG, West Virginia, Feb. 13th, 1880.

John the Baptist.

IN Herald of January 15th, the question again arises, "What did the Savior mean when he said, 'Among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist, notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he?'" —Matt. 11: 11.

As it has been intimated by the Editor that an exchange of views is profitable, I will offer mine upon the subject. Like my brother, I do not admire the views which have appeared up to the present time; and if mine are not in harmony with the Savior's meaning, I am willing to "stand corrected." I will suggest, however, that we strive to understand the Savior to mean just what he said.

When he said, "there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist," he meant just that very thing, without a single exception. It is argued by the brother that because John said that "there standeth one among you that is mightier than I," that John meant to say "greater than I." Well now, I do not believe that John meant any such thing, or he would have said so. He, like the Savior, meant just what he said. The Savior said that, "there hath not risen a greater than John." John understood what he meant; and when he referred to Christ, he said, "there standeth one among you, who is mightier than I," not greater, because there was no greater than John, as to position here. A man's greatness does not consist in his might, but his mission and its performance.

Now, while Christ, and probably many others, were equally as great as John, there were none greater. John was great, but Christ was both great and mighty, hence he was more excellent than John.

Now, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than John; and, if greater than John, he must be greater than Christ, for Christ and John were equal in greatness; but Christ was superior in might, for John said, "he is mightier than I."

The difference between Christ and John, as men born of women, was something like the difference between God and Christ as his Son. Christ said "I and my Father are one." And still he said, "My Father is greater than I," thus signifying that while they were one in executing power, the Father excelled in greatness as to position.

The point I wish to make is this, that the kingdom of heaven referred to was not the organized kingdom on the earth, but the celestial kingdom in the world to come. If we argue that it was the kingdom on earth organized with mortal subjects, we spoil the harmony of the Savior's teaching and mission on earth, which were to prepare men for the celestial kingdom. We will see this fact more clearly by quoting the Savior's words once more: "He that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than John." Now, if he referred to the earthly kingdom composed of mortal Saints, why did he say there is none greater than John, and at the same time say that the least in the kingdom is greater than he? They were all born of women, whether in the kingdom or not, and there was none of them greater than John among all of them, the Savior included.

Now, my views are that as the celestial kingdom of heaven is so far superior to the kingdom in its present condition that even the least there will be greater than the greatest here. Thus we see the harmony of the teachings of the Savior and John, and also that they understood each other, and that they meant to be understood as meaning what they said.

I do not think any further argument is necessary upon this subject, so I will leave the matter for criticism and correction.

If I have been the means of throwing any light upon the subject, praise Him to whom praise belongs, not me.

Praying for the prosperity of Zion and unity in understanding, that we all receive a perfect knowledge of the Son of God, I remain faithfully your brother in Christ,

M. B. WILLIAMS.

Sincerity not Enough.

THE popular adage is, "It makes no difference what a man believes, just so he's sincere." Solomon had a different saying, viz: "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." The words of the wise man hold the truth; the popular adage teaches a hurtful lie. A man's sincerity will not save him from the evil consequences of believing a falsehood. To believe a lie in moral and spiritual things is hurtful to my soul's interests, however sincere I may be. In fact, the more sincere I am, the more I shall suffer.

Look at some analogies. A man trusts a rascal with his business. He believes him to be honest, and is perfectly sincere in that belief. But that sincerity did not save him from ruin. The dishonest employee smuggled money, and left his sincere employer bankrupt. We know the result, when the United States troops lately were made to believe a falsehood, and fell into an Indian ambuscade in Colorado. They were sincere, but the massacre came.

A father believes certain associates fit company for his boy. Too late he sees that he believed a falsehood. He was sincere, but this does not save the boy.

The New Indian Policy.

THE basis of settlement between the Government and the Ute Indians, brought about by Secretary Schurz and Gen. Adams, is an important advance in the general solution of the Indian troubles. The cession of the territory held by the Utes in Colorado and the agreement to deliver the Meeker assassins for punishment are local triumphs; but the new disposal of these tribes and the new terms upon which lands and gratuities are to be dealt out to them constitute a departure from the old Indian policy which, if followed up in future dealings with hostile or troublesome Indians, will do more to civilize the red savages than any expedients heretofore used by the Government.

The first notable advantage of the new agreement with the Utes is a division of the nation into three parts, which are to be located in various and remote districts. The Southern Utes are to go to New Mexico, the White River Utes to Utah, and the Uncompahgre Utes to a reservation in the Grand River Valley. The result of this division will be not merely to impair the warlike strength of the Ute nation, but also to mitigate their warlike disposition. When 10,000 to 12,000 Indians live together in common, the sentiment of nationality is cultivated, and the young bucks, fired by the lashings of the elder Chiefs, persuade themselves by emulation in deeds of valor that they are able to cope with any other nation, even that of the United States. But an Indian nation, broken up into three parts severally cut off from intercommunication, will lose the national pride and warlike confidence it formerly cherished, and the Chiefs will begin to encourage peaceful pursuits rather than a love for war. In the new and separate reservations the Utes, already advanced to a considerable extent in civilized ways, will not have the same temptation to roam, and hunt, and fight, and the war-dance will gradually give way to more peaceful amusements.

The apportionment of the lands in severalty and in fee will also develop among the Ute Indians a new ambition of individual ownership and family emulation. They will cease to be Communists, and they will transfer their pride, ambition and energy from the tribe to the family. It will become apparent to the older Chiefs that the best interests of their offspring demand attention to individual possessions, and to the young men that the improvement of their farms will lead to greater comfort and happiness than the exploring of hunting-grounds that are now almost barren of game. The sentiment of individual ownership, supplemented by a natural desire for gain, is a powerful element in civilization. It will be encouraged and developed in the case of the Ute Indians by the future distribution of money among the families themselves, who will thus acquire an opportunity for individual discretion and energy. The Anglo-Saxon trait of competition will thus assert itself among the red men; something like society will be formed in the place of the rude traffic that has heretofore ruled, and mere primitive barter will be supplanted by something like business and commerce. The Indians need some of the selfish motives that govern white men in order to become civilized beings. These new conditions will furnish the Christian agents better opportunities for exerting the civilizing influences of education, and at the same time furnish the Indians with a safer protection against swindling traders.

The arrangements with the Utes should be the model for the future peace-policy of dealing with all the Indian tribes. To make it altogether complete, practical and effective, it should be followed by conferring upon the Indians as rapidly as possible the rights of citizenship. The treatment of Indian tribes as foreign nations is fictitious and irrational. As natives and "to the manor born," they have naturally as good a title to citizenship as any other race of men. When they shall become individual land-owners, enjoying all the property rights guaranteed to white men under the law, their civilization, pacification and education can be best promoted by the prize of citizenship, and the common interests of peace and harmony between the white men and the red men can be best assured by making the latter amenable to the same laws as the former,—endowing both with equal rights and exacting from both equal responsibilities. The hope of abiding peace with the Indians depends upon the ultimate realization of common citizenship. The agreement made with the Utes is a long step in this direction. It should be ratified by Congress, and backed up with such allotments and appropriations as will render the application of the same policy more general, and lead as quickly as possible to a recognition of the Indians as American citizens. There is no middle course between this policy and extermination as a practical and ultimate solution of the Indian troubles.—Chicago Tribune, March 8th, 1880.

The Armed Force of Europe.

In Germany, Austria, France, Russia and Italy every male adult capable of bearing arms is liable to military service. In Germany the liability extends over twenty-five years, from 17 to 42, and includes three years active service in the standing army, four years in the first reserve, five years in the second reserve and thirteen years in the third reserve. In France and Russia the liability extends over twenty years, in Italy over nineteen, and in Austria over twelve years. Russia exacts six years' active service from her recruits, Italy eight years and Austria three. The following is a statement of the standing armies of the several countries at the close of 1879—exclusive of the last classes of reserve:

Germany—Peace footing, 420,000 men; war footing, 1,300,000 men.

France—Peace footing, 502,000 men; war footing, 1,340,000 men.

Russia—Peace footing, 502,000 men; war footing, 2,190,000 men.

Italy—Peace footing, 189,000 men; war footing, 335,000 men.

Austria—Peace footing, 266,000 men; war footing, 771,000.

Thus these five nations have in time of peace nearly two millions of men in armies, and in time of war nearly six millions. England and other nations not given.

The Catholic Apostolic Church.

As a rule, I readily endorse your advice, "Do not attack contemporary religious societies." Yet I hold self-defense will sometimes demand a divergence from such a Christian rule. The writer has on several occasions listened to discourses delivered by ministers of the Catholic Apostolic Church, called, sarcastically, by its enemies, the Irvingite Church; and on each occasion the Latter Day Saints have been treated to a tirade of abuse, entirely outside of truth. And when such defamers have been called upon to prove their vituperations true, in the like public manner that they have delivered their denunciations, they have shunned that duty by making the cowardly plea, "Our church does not allow her ministers to discuss." My opinion is, any society, secular or religious, that shields their representatives from answering in a public manner those they have insulted in a public way, must be desirous of concealing from public gaze something it were well the public should be acquainted with.

An Evangelist of that church, after hurling his spleen at Joseph the Martyr, in the Birmingham Town Hall, England, in 1873, treated Bro. Mark H. Forscutt in a similar manner. (See Herald for 1873, page 177). And if by chance, which is of very rare occurrence in England, you induce a minister of that church to talk with you upon spiritual subjects, you must not show the least sign approaching to a discrediting any statement made by him, if you desire a continuance of the conversation. No, not even to prove a contradiction to the Scriptures given by him. Such is my experience.

I would ask the members of that church to answer the following: Are you afraid to investigate anything written derogatory to the presumption that your church is the apostolic church of Christ? If not, why do you refuse to do so? Again, why are you willing to allow your ministers to lead you about, as a mother will her child in leading strings, while the divine word of God may—nay, does—prove to you that those ministers are leading you astray? I appeal, throw off that cloak that now covers you up. Be men and women. Be no longer children, but use those faculties God has given you, and compare the fallacious teachings of your ministry with that divine word of God. If you do so, with a prayerful heart, you will have cause to thank God that you have done so. I can assure you of one thing, if one of your ministers will present anything, in writing, to the world, to prove the Latter Day Church wrong, every Latter Day Saint, who can lay hold of it, will investigate it, and will not be induced to refuse to do so. Because they understand that they are responsible to God for themselves. Their ministry cannot save them. Neither can yours, you. Therefore, "seek and find."

One day while passing the C. A. C., built on Summer Hill, Birmingham, I read a notice that Mr. John Sargent, styled an "Evangelist serving under the Lord's restored Apostles," would preach a sermon, entitled, "The Handwriting on the walls of Mystical Babylon." Bro. Ephraim Webb and I went to hear the gentleman, who did not complete his peroration without attacking the Latter Day Saints in a most scurrilous manner. In consequence, an audience was sought with Mr. Sargent, who consented to an interview on the Wednesday evening following, at my house. On that evening the following question was put: Will you be kind enough, Mr. S, to make known how, when and where, were authority and power obtained for sealing on those gentlemen you designate apostles, so high and holy a position?

Mr. S. answered, "That is easily done." He took up a Bible and read the 2d, 3d and 4th verses of the 13th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. Then said, "There is proof that apostles were called of God. So it follows, as apostles are neither of men, or by men, but by the Holy Ghost, and that Holy Ghost manifesting to the C. A. C. who should be apostles is proof that our apostles are called of God. From that scripture you learn, I trust, how, when, and where, authority and power were obtained to constitute those gentlemen apostles."

Reply: I have no wish to doubt your sincerity, Mr. S., but it appears to me very singular, that you should expect any careful reader of the Scriptures to accept what you have advanced as proof for the apostolic character of your church, because what you have read militates against such an assumption, inasmuch that your reading is pointed, that God—and his Christ—intended the perpetuation of apostolic authority and power in his church. And while you were reading that scriptural testimony you knew the C. A. C. has failed to fill up the vacancies occasioned by death and desertion in your apostolic corps. For at this time you have but one left of your twelve to claim apostolic power. Therefore, I now ask you how you reconcile the idea that the C. A. C. can continue the apostolic church of Christ,—if she be so now, which I do not allow,—when your remaining apostle is no more on this earth? I have a pamphlet here, issued in the interests of your church. It would be impossible for any issue to be sent forth with greater pretensions to sacerdotal authority. Its endorsement reads thus, "From the Angels ordained over churches in England by the Apostles of the Lord, with the Priests, Deacons, and people under their charge." This pamphlet, Mr. S., states distinctly that not any Holy Ghost power or authority can exist on earth without apostles, and no church of Christ without apostolic authority. I will read from the 4th page: "Paul says, God hath set in the church; first, apostles. It was in the midst of his apostles that Jesus prayed to the Father for the unity of his church. It was through the means of apostles he by the Holy Ghost effected that unity for which he prayed; unity in life and purpose; unity in doctrine and communion; unity in long-suffering and the forbearance of love. The church under apostles manifested this unity; but where are apostles now? If they are gone, if their place in the body knows them no more, how can we expect that unity will be maintained! Let us not deceive ourselves. Far from this being the case, none could now recognize the likeness of that body which come into being on the day of Pentecost, and which ought to have advanced steadily towards perfection. Marked lineaments of character have faded or disappeared; discipline has been changed; the constitution of the church as a visible body maimed and defective. Those who profess the name of Christ have for many centuries failed to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. Divided into various communities, they differ widely from each other in points of faith and practice."

Taking those statements for granted, I hold, and I think you must coincide with me, sir, that the C. A. C. does undoubtedly teach the imperative necessity for apostles being in the church of Christ, ere unity in faith and doctrine can obtain, and hence the necessity for a perpetuation of such ministry, in order that such a blessed condition might be consummated. Well then, can not you see, sir, the inevitable result of the C. A. C. falling into the like condition the endorsers of this pamphlet lament that so many other churches are in, when she herself is denuded of apostles? Please stay a short time before you answer, as I wish to call your attention to a concluding declaration from the pamphlet. Page 16:

"Successors of the bishops, whom apostles first ordained over churches, be assured that God, who ministered to them strength and comfort through his apostles, is ready now to minister, through the same ordinance, like grace to you."

I have quoted that statement, anticipating you may apply the argument therein contained to your use, on behalf of the C. A. C., from which to make it appear your apostles have ordained as successors, sufficient ministry, in the office of angels, or bishops, to carry on the work of ministration; for the consummation of that glorious state of things longed for by all good Christians, unity of the faith. But such an argument, coming from you, would be utterly worthless. Because I read on page six of this pamphlet that which will stamp such an argument as void in the least degree of respectability. Please listen while I read.

"Shall we then say that the purpose of God has been frustrated? Rather let us say, We have failed as men, and come short of the glory of God. Yes, brethren, though the confession abase us to the dust, let us own the truth. We have failed because we have been content to substitute for the ministries of apostles and prophets the insufficient devices of men. Forsaking the ordinances of God, we have walked in ways of our own choosing: and such a course, if persisted in, leads to apostasy and ruin."

My conclusions drawn from the statements read are, if those spoken of on the concluding page of this pamphlet be the legitimate successors in the true line of bishops of our Lord Jesus Christ, they must be true servants of God: Therefore in possession of that grace of God you desire them to seek your church to obtain. Under such circumstances, it appears to me the height of presumption for the C. A. C. to call upon such to leave their own communion and attend another, to receive that which they must be possessed of already. Also, in consequence of the failure of those successors (notwithstanding their strivings for more than sixteen centuries) without the aid of apostles to produce that essential unity, so will it be impossible for your bishops, or, as you prefer to designate them, angels, to bring the existing state of schism to the desired unity, when your surviving apostle is no more on earth; which, in the common course of nature, can not be long before such an event occurs; seeing that that gentleman is aged.

Mr. S.—"You have used the term 'presumption,' which I do not approve of; and, as I see no good can result from a protraction of this interview, I will bid you good night."

Such a decision took me by surprise, I assure you. I endeavored to persuade Mr. S. to stay with me longer, and give the doubter the same latitude he would expect under similar circumstances. My reasoning had not any avail with Mr. S. He simply said, "I will not stay any longer. Good night," with which adieu he left me. Thus ended my tele a tele with an "Evangelist serving under the Lord's restored apostles."

Those documentary testimonies which I am in possession of, containing information respecting the discipline and creeds of the C. A. C., I have re-examined; and in consequence have become more than ever satisfied that church is purely of man's creation. Therefore, I propose, if agreeable to you, friend Herald, to place before your readers some of those teachings which I think may be useful as a test, whether that church be of God, or man.

I have before me the catechism of the C. A. C., also by its side one issued under the favor of Cardinal Wiseman, a prelate of the Roman Catholic Church. An examination of the two shows a slight difference in discipline; but none in doctrine. Indeed it would be very inconsistent did there exist a difference in doctrine between these two catechisms; because for such a thing to be the catechism would run counter to their pamphlet, already quoted. For, on page 12, par. 3, it is stated: "They [their apostles] have added nothing to; nor taken nothing from the creeds that have been professed by the Catholic Church." After such an acknowledgment as that, surely no wonder need be expressed because those two catechisms agree in doctrine.

While examining these two catechisms, I was forcibly reminded of the gross inconsistency displayed by the C. A. C., when she, by the aid of the pen of some of her ministry, recognize in the R. C. C. the Mother of Harlots, etc., (see Rev. 17:5), when at the same time she makes the avowal that she has adopted those very creeds which, according to her writers, have brought that R. C. C. into disgrace with God, and all God-fearing Christians. Read Edward Irving's Preliminary Discourse, and Dialogues on Prophecy.

I hope I may not be deemed harsh in stating my conclusions from the foregoing, but I can not help my conviction, that the C. A. C., through accepting and teaching those doctrines which are the bane of the R. C. C., can not by any possibility be in a better condition, spiritually, than her archetype. For whatever may tend to neutralize the spiritual efforts of the one society, must of necessity act the same with the other; because the like cause will produce similar effects.

It is true that the writers of the pamphlet already quoted from, try to keep clear from such an alternative; by making the following statement, page 2, par. 4: "The church was constituted by the sending down of the Holy Ghost, on the day of Pentecost." Page 3, par. 4: "To this same church, as to our spiritual mother, we all of us belong." Such statements do not, in my estimation, affect in any degree the above conclusion; because the quotations but prove the endorsers of the pamphlet to believe in the perpetuity of Christ's church. Admitting that, for the sake of argument, what then? We can but endorse the same view of the case. For, which ever one of the numerous churches, apart from the C. A. C., be the church meant; or allowing that the language applies to all of them, still, they, or it, is the spiritual mother of the C. A. C., therefore it is truly undaughterly; nay, unchristianlike, to use such unseemly language against her own mother. And by no means, that I can see, can any better reward accrue to the C. A. C. for her teaching or practice, than to the R. C. C., or to any one of those churches called orthodox. [Daughters of their mother].—Eds.

Here is another statement from the pamphlet, which to me is a tell-tale, positive, and clear, against the assumptions of the C. A. C. to apostolic origin. The pamphlet is sent forth as an instructor to the existing religious world; therefore, by quoting therefrom, we gather some of the important teaching of that church.

Page 7, par. 2: "When schism prevails within the church, society also tends to dissolution."

Is that so? If it be the case, how stands the C. A. C.? First she declares that the church of Christ has continued from apostolic times. Then she stands forth as a distinct identity, calling upon the church of Christ to enter within her portals. Question: Does her distinctness apart from that church of Christ decrease, or increase schism?

The individuality of the C. A. C., is further proved from page 16, par. 2, of pamphlet:

"To all we affectionately address ourselves, beseeching you not to put aside this our testimony; but rather emulate that church of the 'Thessalonians,' commended by St. Paul, 'who turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God.'"

So then, all those thus called upon by the C. A. C. to enter her portals are worshippers of idols, until they leave their present mode of worship and adopt that of the C. A. C. Such language can but assist the investigator to arrive at similar conclusions as are already arrived at. It appears to me that those writers of the pamphlet seem to have lost sight of what they have written in one part of their book, while writing another part thereof; for there seems to be nothing but contradictions. First, we are informed that the church of Christ exists outside the C. A. C.; then we who are members of one of those churches are called upon to leave our adopted church and enter the C. A. C., because we are given to worship idols, while the C. A. C. stands aloof entirely from such a catastrophe. Yet her writers, seeming to forget while making such an appeal, that they have stated that her apostles under special guide of the Holy Ghost, have manifested to that church, that, under no circumstances shall she depart from any of those creeds and doctrines professed by the "Catholic Church." (Page 12, par. 3 of pamphlet). It was well said by an eminent writer, "When men attempt to place their concoctions in the foreground instead of God's, they are sure to make a bungling mess of it."

Concluded in our next.

The Beautiful Land.

TRULY the life to come is like unto a fruitful, healthy, and very desirable country, and this present life like an almost barren desert with scattering oases. We are all subject now to fears of some sort; to fears of storms, or of sickness, or of failures, etc. But we all have the chance to reach a better land. It is not safe for any of us to stop; for an enemy is on the alert, and if we take a by-way to the right or left we will either get lost entirely, or find that we have come out on the main road where we left it, having lost time, and had suffering and exposure, with no gain.

Then, fellow travelers in the true caravan let us travel on the straight road that leads across the desert, to the beautiful land beyond. Then, truly:

"Our souls by the gale from its gardens will be fanned,
When we faint in the deserts of this."

O, then, how willing we should be to bear crosses now, to forgive all and condemn none, to travel patiently onward, cultivating bright hope, and practicing oft to pray that we may not be hindered, but reach that better country.

Letter from Bro. G. F. Weston.

IN October, 1879, I left Plano for Michigan, and attended the conference at Galien in November. Then I went to Niles and into the country near, where I had visited before. Some of them advised me to travel right along, instead of trying to preach my doctrine there. But I held three meetings in their school-house, and found other friends who cared for my wants. Others, upon learning that I believed in Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, said they had no more confidence in me, and that I must be actually weak-minded. However, I prayed with them all, that they might understand the love of God.

I then went to Lawrence Branch, where I found Bro. C. Scott very busy writing an exposition of Mr. Tucker's book; so I went on alone to Paw Paw, and out in the country east, where, at Antwerp Centre, I preached three evenings, after which the door was locked against me. I found Bro. Wm. Clum near there.

Afterwards I walked eight or ten miles further, and arrived four miles west of Mattawan, where I obtained a school-house, which a society of religionists, known as Rhodites, had purchased and fitted up. Their real name is "The Church of the Living God." I stayed the first evening with the clerk, Mr. Steel, and from him and from other sources, I learned that they believed in the necessity of a restoration of the gospel and of the Church, some of the ancient ordinances and principles having been lost. They believe in revelation, and also in healing, I think, together with some other things generally rejected by the sectarian world, such as washing of feet, greeting each other with a holy kiss, etc. The society originated about five or six years ago, I believe, and Mr. Rhodes claims to have had revelations relative to the organization of his church without apostles and prophets. The society is "everywhere spoken against," and especially its founder, Mr. Rhodes. Still, several miles away, I heard him very well spoken of indeed, which, doubtless, goes to prove to him that a prophet is not without honor "save in his own country. The organization had about disappeared when I visited them, but the few members were evidently good, intelligent people, and, with their neighbors, they came out to hear me four evenings. The report started that I was a Brighamite, had five or six wives, and, of course, was looking for more; but I told them that I was not so fortunate as to have one yet. This seemed to settle the question, and even the old gentleman who had charge of the house, who seemed most opposed to our faith, gave me a warm shake of the hand when I came away, and told me he believed I was on the right track. He, with several others, seemed anxious for my return sometime during the winter, and, not then expecting positively to come into Southern Indiana, I promised to do so. Perhaps an Elder visiting them would do a great deal of good.

I returned to the Lawrence Branch, and preached twice. By the Saints there I was presented with a good overcoat, a scarf, a pair of boots, and several minor articles; and, having been advised by Bro. Kelley to go over into Indiana, I started, calling at Florence on an aged sister named Lawrence. Her son's wife has long believed the work, and has been waiting for an opportunity and for health to be baptized, but, during my visit, did not feel able. She has had a vision of the Book of Mormon, with a bright light above and around it, convincing her of its divine authenticity. She wishes the faith and prayers of the Saints on her behalf.

I next called (at Sr. Lawrence's wish) on Mrs. Tibbits, at Elkhart, Indiana. She became interested in the work. She says that her house is free to an Elder, whenever we think proper to hold meetings at Elkhart.

I came next to Green Centre, and held three meetings; then the house was locked against me. Fortunately, however, I found Bro. and Sr. Sherwood, who were baptized by Bro. C. G. Lanphear several years ago, who also organized a branch there, Bro. Sherwood as Priest. Most of the Saints have moved away, but Bro. and Sr. Sherwood still hold to the faith, and received me kindly. I stayed with them about two weeks, and held four meetings, in a church owned by the Disciples. Attendance was quite small, prejudice prevailing to a high degree. Consequently I hastened to the balmy southern-land of Indiana, where I hoped to meet Bro. B. V. Springer and labor in harmony with the instruction that the lesser priests are to be sent with the elders to be helps, that they may become strong also.

In the city of Anderson, I found a generous lady (Mrs. Hodson) who had cared very tenderly for an aged sister, Phylla Hall, who had died but a few days before, and who had been very zealous for the cause. She had left a pile of Heralds somewhere in the city with those who cared for her. I believe she had no other friends. Mrs. Hodson, who with her husband, is a member of the Baptist Church, received me very kindly, and told me about her experience with Sr. Hall. I was interested, and took notes, with the intention of making a report of the case to the Herald, but I lost my notes. Mr. and Mrs. Hodson had cared for Sr. Hall for several years, and they bore all her funeral expenses, and buried her in their own lot. Mrs. Hodson said that some of her friends complained about her paying so much attention to the "old Mormon," as they called Sr. Hall; but she felt that she had done right, and had never regretted it. Mrs. Hodson seemed very well satisfied with her religion, but was willing to learn more; and would like to hear us preach; thought there would be no difficulty in securing their church, if sometime we would like to hold a series of meetings there. Possibly also at Anderson and at Elkhart the first seed is sown, which may result in good.

I went next to Indianapolis with a buoyant heart, feeling I was going in the right direction, and my money getting short, I concluded to express my satchel to New Albany, and to walk on to Perry and Crawford counties.

I reached the Eden Branch, in Floyd county, after a walk of something over one hundred miles. I was tired out, and also I paid out the last cent I had the day I reached Eden, but I was glad to find Saints and friends once more. Stopped with Bro. Moses Scott, and in the evening went to Bro. Harbert Scott's, where the sisters treated us to some of the finest singing from the Harp that I ever heard in all my experience as a Latter Day Saint.

The next day Bro. Harbert's son, Carter, brought me nearly to New Albany, where I found my satchel all right. Stayed with Bro. and Sr. Segrist one night.

Next day came to Madison, Indiana, via the Ohio River from Louisville. Stayed over night at a hotel in Madison, and Christmas morning walked to Bro. Samuel Rector's, arriving just in time to partake of a nice turkey. I enjoyed the continued hospitality and kindness of the family during all my sojourn, and here, in Union Branch, did I at last find Bro. Springer, as expected. On the whole my experience in finding him, was something like that of "Japhet in search of a father." Here I held some meetings, beginning December 28th, assisted by Bro. Springer, who also spoke once. On New Year's evening Bro. John Christie, of the Olive Branch, gave a stirring discourse on the kingdom of God.

January 2d, I went with Brn. Springer and Christie to Hall's Ridge, where I spoke one evening. Thence, the 5th, to the Olive Branch with Bro. Christie, leaving Bro. Springer at Hall's Ridge. Arrived at Bro. Victory's, well drenched, satchels, clothing, books and all. We began holding meetings the 7th, Bro. Christie laboring with me, and preaching occasionally. He proved to be a help indeed. I hope that ere long he may be out in the work more. This district certainly needs all the laborers it can have. No less than six different places besides those we occupied sent invitations for us, and at every place the influence seemed to spread around about.

After several meetings at Olive, Brn. Christie and Victory went to Spear's School House, and I to Titusville, and afterwards joined Bro. Christie at Spear's, where I spoke for two evenings, after which we returned to the Olive Branch and held several meetings. Then on to Kingwood, seven miles from Olive, where the house was crowded throughout our meetings. After holding several, we left them to reflect on what they had heard, and returned to Olive, but again visited Kingwood and preached more. Then the Rev. Charles Renfrew, of the Methodists, who lives in that region, sent Bro. Christie a challenge. He came to our meeting and announced that he had been requested to do so, and therefore challenged Mr. Christie. He wished the house to be full, for he was going to show that Bro. Christie was a wolf in sheep's clothing.

The propositions were: 1st. That the immersion of a proper subject in water, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is the only true apostolic baptism. Christie affirms, Renfrew denies.

2d. That the Pede-baptist Church is the church of Christ, as founded by Christ and the apostles. Renfrew affirms, Christie denies.

Arrangements being made for the discussion, after a few more sermons, we returned to Olive; then again to Kingwood, where I preached on the evening of the first day's discussion, on priesthood and the necessity for revelation. Also on the evening of the second day, (Sunday), I spoke on the resurrection and eternal judgment. The house was fully crowded as at any previous time, and they gave unusual attention. Certainly the good cause suffered nothing by the discussion. On the contrary, even the members of the Methodist society admitted that they were out-generaled. One of the most intelligent said that she did not think so much of the Methodist doctrines as heretofore, and proposed sending for a Book of Mormon, and giving the work a thorough investigation. God bless all such in their investigations. I can not give particulars of the arguments used; but, suffice it to say, it was victorious for God and his truth.

I came from Ripley county to the Union Branch, and held meetings till the time of the district conference held there, February 28th and 29th.

G. F. WESTON.

The number of Indians in the United States is estimated at 250,864. The number who wear citizens dress is 127,450. The number of houses occupied is 23,060. The quantity of stock owned by the Indians 176,766 horses, 52,867 cattle and 510,674 sheep. They raised during the year 1879 266,000 bushels of wheat, 971,000 bushels of corn, 172,000 bushels of oats and barley, 315,000 bushels of vegetables, and cut 36,943 tons of hay. 6,000 Indian children attend school.

THINGS OF TO-DAY.

Burden not thy soul with sadness;
Make a wiser, better choice;
Drink the wine of life with gladness;
God doth bid thee, man, "Rejoice!"
In to-day's bright sunlight basking,
Leave to-morrow's cares alone;
Spoil not present joys by asking,
"Who shall roll away the stone?"

The Greek Government in ordering that the Bible in Greek should be read in the public schools, has specified that the original and not the modern Greek should be used.

No CHARACTER NEEDED.—The Irishman had a correct appreciation of the fitness of things, who, being asked by the judge when he applied for a license to sell whisky, if he was of good moral character, replied, "Yer honor, I don't see the necessity of a good moral character to sell whisky."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ELDER JOSE BROWN, who visited us in December, from his home in Clinton, Iowa, an Elder of the Minnesota Conference of Adventists, returned to us in January, and united with us by baptism. Soon after his baptism he was, in pursuance of a call by the Spirit, chosen and ordained to the office of Elder. He preached for us here at Plano several times, with good liberty, and won the esteem of the Saints by his straight forward manner and conversation. We lately received a card from him, in which he states that he is preaching at Clinton, and that some are believing his message. We pray for the Lord to send a host of such men to the work. He has been led, evidently these many years, toward the position he now occupies; and we feel to give the honor to whom it is due. He says some have committed themselves to seek the whole truth, and six have requested baptism. Card dated March 6th.

Bro. L. M. Sollenberger writes from White House, Pennsylvania. He is at home; but thinks of telling the people there the gospel story. He will tarry awhile, and then return to Monmouth, Illinois, where he will enter into business.

The Chicago, Evening Journal for March 6th, 1880, has an excellent and friendly notice of the Inspired Translation. Justice may go slowly, but she moves with even paces, and carefully rectifies as she progresses the wrongs that may be corrected. We have not idly trusted in Him who has promised "Ye shall find favor."

In reading the Lapeer Clarion sent us quite lately we see a notice of an historical paper read by Miss Nettie Comstock, at a Pioneers' meeting, February 12th, 1880, in which mention is made to the Rood family; from which and the pencil mark calling attention to it, we infer that the paper was sent by Sr. D. M. Rood to whom we tender our thanks for so kindly a remembrance. There is also a mention of an effort made by an Elder VanDusen many years ago, to convert the citizens of Lapeer to Mormonism. The writer of the essay gave the story a partizan coloring, but after all little to the discredit of the Elder; but much so to the persecutors of the work.

A copy of Christian Herald, London, England, for February 11th is received from some one, brother Hassall we presume. This paper is edited by Rev. M. Baxter a clergyman of the Church of England. In the number before us there is an article by the editor, in which the severance between Ireland and England is made necessary to the existence of the "ten kingdoms" of Daniel's prophecy, "In the days of these kings." That this separation will be the result from the present "Home Rule" agitation, is the conclusion of the editor.

Bro. Andrew Johnson, a Danish brother living near Miami, Missouri, is anxious for some to go to the aid of Bro. Brix. He can not well go, but is ready to assist some one to go. He has a small farm and a little personal property, but is willing to share in the matter.

The Salt Lake Tribune, Gentile paper and the Herald, of the Utah Church, reached us on the 9th, both having the decision of the Court in Ohio, respecting the Kirtland Temple inserted in their columns. So let the leaven work. The Tribune, in an editorial notice of the decision intimates that there is a further point that may reach to other properties than the Temple of Kirtland. Bro. Edwin L. Kelley, of Glenwood, Iowa, who as attorney for the Church conducted the case, may congratulate himself on having started an enquiry that may lead to queer results.

Bro. J. R. Jeffries notifies us by letter, dated La Graciosa, California, February 24th, that the Santa Maria Branch had been disorganized for special reasons; but that it was hoped that a reorganization would be effected under more favorable circumstances. We sincerely hope so.

Bro. Frederick C. Warnky has bought a home in Independence, Missouri, and writes March 5th, 1880, that the citizens there are willing and solicitous that the Saints should settle in that county.—Curious that. While the course of all factions of the Church has hitherto been to foster the animosity of citizens by an undue parade of hurts and wrongs and injuries, with the denunciation of them and the wrath of impending ruin, we have silently and persistently taught primitive Mormonism as we found the gospel of it, and are welcome to come and go. If we had failed to declare the means of salvation as it was taught by the Seer and the early Elders, we should feel sad over this welcome; but we have not so failed, and hence feel glad. O, that the Saints will now be wise and prove themselves to be worthy of trust and esteem, keeping their word and paying their contracts as they agree to do, taking no advantage of others, neither in nor out of the fold, paying proper heed to the law of the land and the good of society, that they may prove themselves to be the salt of the earth. Have no fellowship with the hidden things of dishonesty, fellow Saints, on the land of Zion, and, may God prosper you.

Letter from Bro. John Watkins, dated February 7th, states that the Lucas Branch, Iowa, was progressing fairly. The Saints keep up two appointments, one at Lucas, one at Cleveland, and a Sunday School. All are doing well. Bro. Mark Forscutt was there for a short time and good results followed. Bro. W. and others there feel much encouraged and strengthened.

Bro. Wm. L. Raby, 5th Ward, Salt Lake City, Utah, wants to know where he can find Mr. John Farrar, junior, who kept a boot and shoe store on Main street, Nauvoo, about 1845-6. He left Nauvoo for St. Louis, but returned and was at, or near Israel Clapp's store in Nauvoo. Any one reading this, having knowledge of him, will please communicate with Bro. Raby, at above address.

Bro. L. N. Brown wrote from Lodi, California, that the work was moving along well there. Elders Cook and Lowell were at Lodi during February. Bro. Brown was to start out February 28th on a preaching tour.

Bro. Blair was en route home on the 12th. The train collided with another, killing an engineer and wounding another man. The storm lately raging over the west, storm-stayed the train, the mercury marking from 20 to 32 degrees below zero. He was at North Platte 13th March, and expected to reach Omaha next day. He expected to be at Lamoni 23rd, and home by 28th March.

Bro. Mark writes: "The wheel in Chicago is too large in demensions, and moves slowly." We thank the Lord that it is moving, though slowly.

Bro. J. A. Crawford was to begin a debate with Prof. S. Palmer, at Rock Creek, Hancock county, Illinois, Wednesday, March 10th, 1880, at 2 p.m. The following are the questions: 1st. Is there evidence of the existence of a personal God? Elder J. A. Crawford affirms, Prof. Palmer denies. 2nd. Is the Bible of purely human origin? Prof. S. Palmer affirms, Elder J. A. Crawford denies.

Bro. George Mottashed writes from London, Ontario, March 5th, and rather takes exceptions to a remark in a former letter of Bro. J. J. Cornish respecting the ruling of officers. At the time that the letter was published, December 15th, 1879, we saw nothing personally detracting in Bro. Cornish's allusion, but supposed that it was meant simply in a general sense, and as such should not have been taken ill. Bro. Mottashed is of the opinion that transient Elders passing through, or temporarily laboring in branches, would better serve the peace and harmony of those branches by avoiding interference in its affairs, and refraining from expressing their opinions among the members, concerning the officers of said branches. In this it seems that Bro. Mottashed is correct, for no officer however good his intentions may be can act through a series of difficulties in a branch, without incurring some censure, either merited, or from the partizan judgment of those who feel the law's power. In either of these cases the Elders should refrain from adding to the difficulties by improper support, or injudicious condemnation of the action of the officers before the members. If they have anything to say of the action of the officers they should go to them, and say what they may have to offer to them quietly and not in a censorious way. Officers may err, and do wrong, but to meddle with them unofficially only adds to the damage already done.

Note from Bro. Joseph Wheeler, Ogden, Utah, March 3rd, states that there is not much appearance of progress there, not many if any of the people turning out to hear Bro. Derry. There is a scriptural saying that brings comfort in such a case, "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand; for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good."

Brother Joshua Armstrong, writes from South Bend, Nebraska, a very encouraging letter telling us about the good that the HERALD has done and is doing him—and that reminds us that as we have not said anything much about subscribing for the HERALD lately, we will just do so now—subscribe for it, all of you; and not only for yourselves, but for your uncles, aunts, cousins, and all your relatives; we are just anxious about it. Now don't say "can't," let the sectarians have all the can't, and you do just as we say, get all the subscribers you can. Just think of it, we have increased the list nearly three hundred in the last two months—and how nice it will be for you readers to have the HERALD weekly—but then, really, we don't know as it is best, it will make so much work at the office for Editors, Superintendent, and all hands, the "devil" included—maybe we had not better have it weekly; still if you all think we had why send in the subscribers. At the rate they have been coming in for a while we can by next volume send the HERALD out weekly, which as we now see the matter will reduce the price nearly one half, while it would double its usefulness.

We are indebted to Sr. Mary L. Ewing for a copy of the Signs of the Times, published at Oakland, California; James White, Editor. It is one of the Battle Creek Adventist papers. The number sent us contains some good things, but is chiefly devoted to a discussion of the things supposed to foreshadow the coming of Christ.

Bro. Blair writes from Malad, Idaho, February 21st, that Bro. Anthony opened a new place six miles south of that place February 20th, and that prospects are encouraging, that a good work may be done there. He further writes, "I see that Thatcher is told by the Mexican Government that polygamy will not be tolerated by it." He was to hold three services at Malad, Sunday, the 23d.

Bro. A. L. Whittaker writes us an article on the Sacrament, which we can not publish for want of time and space. The sentiment is quite good, urging as it does the necessity for the Saints to be faithfully observant of this ordinance in order to obey the command of God.

Bro. E. Penrod wrote from Elko, Nevada, that they were having a cold winter with plenty of snow in the mountains; and that the prospects were favorable for an successful mining season the coming summer. We sincerely pray that the brother's hopes for an excellent harvest of the golden products of the "everlasting hills" may be realized. We met Bro. Penrod in Nevada and was much-pleased with him.

Bro. Edward Rannie, of Fremont, Dodge county, Nebraska, sends us a letter dated March 12th containing quite a full account of the introduction of the work in that region and its growth from December, 1877, to date. The laborers were Brn. James Perkins, James Ogard, G. Derry, N. Brown, E. Boulson, R. Brown and James Caffall. During this time a branch of twenty-eight has been built up at Fremont; the work seemingly established on a firm basis, and the Saints rejoicing. The letter is an interesting one, and we should be pleased to give it an insertion, but our columns for the issue are full. O, that the HERALD were a weekly. Subscribers come in.

Bro. and Sr. Francis Federer, of Bunker Hill, Russell county, Kansas, have a small property of a house and two lots in that place for sale cheap. It would be a good locality for a shoemaker, so they write. They may be addressed in either English or German, at the above named place.

It appears from two communications received by us that in an editorial notice of a letter from Bro. John J. Cornish, in the HERALD for December 15th, we have inadvertently laid Bro. Cornish liable to be misunderstood, and therefore censured. In order that brother Cornish may be properly relieved of undue censure we wish the readers of the HERALD to understand that whatever fault attaches to the words in question lies at our door, as we took an isolated passage from the letter sent to us and printed it without explanation for a far different purpose than that of finding fault with officers in charge of the London, or any other branch, and no offense was intended; but as it has given offense we crave pardon. We hope that those who have written us and all others who have read the obnoxious sentence will not hold Bro. Cornish in fault further; he certainly intended no wrong, and we should not have subjected him to censure.

Bro. Joseph Parsons wrote from Pittsburg, Pa., March 8th, that good meetings were being enjoyed there, and on Sabbath evenings their congregations are fair in size and seem also to be interested. Their meetings are advertized in three of the papers regularly.

Bro. B. G. Watson, of Arcadia, Kansas, reports that he still labors to spread the gospel story among the people. But, now in his old age, he feels that his work is almost done, yet has faith that God's work will increase till Christ comes in his kingdom.

Bro. M. O. Howard, Gainsville, Florida, wrote February 29th, that all their branch excepting five had moved away, and others talk of going. Those left still meet together for worship, but their Sunday School had to be given up. Bro. Howard labors some among the colored people, and evidently wishes to be zealous and true to his calling.

Bro. J. S. Patterson has been at Braidwood, Illinois, and wrote from there to Bro. John Scott that he had baptized five persons March 11th.

Sister Kezzie Smith of Antelope, Nebraska, mentions the growth of that country and, therewith, the increase in the number of Saints from year to year through the labors of Brn. Thomas Dobson, Charles Derry and G. W. Galley, the latter of whom not long since organized a branch there, called the "Clearwater Branch," and now they wish that an Elder would locate there and build up the work. She advises any Saints who have no homes, or those who are in debt for those they have, to sell, become free and come out and pre-empt homesteads. The people are healthy and doing well temporarily. The land is both prairie and timber; and now is the time before emigrants take it all up, so the Saints there believe. Address J. H. Smith, Antelope, Neb.

Bro. James Caffall sends a Denver (Colorado) Daily News, which contains a short communication from him in regard to the decision in the case of the Kirtland Temple, and the value of it as proving the Reorganized Church to be the real exponent of the doctrines and faith of the Latter Day Saints. It is good to present this matter to the papers everywhere.

Bro. John Eames, of Cheyenne, Wyoming, sends a Sun published at that place, the copy sent containing a dispatch in reference to the decision, and its force in our behalf.

Father John Macauley, aged eighty—years, living north of the Chippewa river in Wisconsin, writes: "When I see calls in the HERALD for laborers everywhere I feel that I would like to run to answer them. My body is aged and feeble, but my inner man is strong and full of light—the spirit willing but the flesh is not able. I rejoice that God has spared me to see the jubilee year of the new and everlasting covenant restored, and to have my name among the trumpeters."

Bro. James Scott, Blue Rapids, Kansas, bears testimony to the evidence he has of the truth of the gospel of the last days, and that the sick are healed by the power of God.

Bro. Jesse Seelye, of Savannah, New York, thinks that much good might be done if an Elder would come and preach to the people. That branch has not been visited by the traveling ministers for a long time. Any Elders going east or coming west who can call on them would be welcome indeed.

Bro. R. M. Elvin arrived at home (Nebraska City) March 17th. He has had a busy winter in the ministry. A debate in consideration, to take place between him and Rev. Dungan of the Christian Church, was likely to prevent Bro. Robert from his anticipated attendance at the April General Conference, for he proposes to stand by the work even though at a deprivation such as this is to him in the present case. We are glad of his zeal and readiness, but would like to see him here.

Bro. Owen Owen, 1001 South Tenth street, Burlington, Iowa, enquires if there is a chance somewhere among the Saints for a brother whom he recommends to take charge of a farm, one who has had misfortune and lack of work in the city, but who understands farming well. He has a wife, and three children, one a boy of sixteen and two girls of fourteen and eighteen years. Testimonials of character will be furnished. Address Bro. Owen as above.

Thanks to the following for papers: Bro. John Ellis for Denver Tribune and Liverpool Mercury; Sister Annie E. Allen for a Sun Prairie, Wisconsin, paper; Thomas Henning for Irish World; James Caffall for Denver News; T. R. Hawkins, Nevada papers; W. N. Dawson, San Francisco papers.

We thank Bro. J. H. Peters, of St. Joseph, Mo., for a copy of the Temperance Bugle and Standard, published at St. Joseph, a temperance advocate as its name indicates. The number sent us contains some excellent articles on the subject of temperance, and urges the abandonment of tobacco as essential to reform—so say we.

Bro. Hiram Robinson, en route for Conference, was at Lamon, March 20th. He found about fifty houses already built, and evidences of more on the way. Bro. Robinson was preaching south of Chariton.

Bro. M. H. Bond wrote from Cadillac, Mich., March 11th, that Bro. Kelley's preaching there removed "a great deal of prejudice," and those who believed before are confirmed in their faith.

Bro. Thomas Galley writes from Savannah, Butler county, Nebraska, March 20th, that he has been laboring some in that region, and that a better feeling seems to be obtaining towards the word there.

Some brother in England sends us a copy of Reynolds' Newspaper, London, for February 23d, 1880, well filled with the current news of the day in London. We thank him for the favor.

BRO. ALBERT HAWS, now of Washington Corners, Alameda county, California, an old school companion and playmate in the prosperous days of Nauvoo, wrote us February 18th concerning affairs in the California mission. The letter is long, and we gather from it the following suggestions offered by him as a remedy for the distress there.

1. That the Pacific Slope Mission be dissolved.
2. That the existing mission be divided into four districts.
3. That these new districts choose their own officers.
4. And that they report directly to the General Conference, the same as all other districts now do.
5. That the licenses of all inefficient, idle, or mischievous officials be called in and revoked.

The reasons assigned by Bro. Haws for these suggestions are these: The mission idea is an unnecessary division, and ought to be abandoned; except in foreign lands; and even in foreign lands where access to the United States is easy, it ought not to prevail; district, or conference divisions being all that are necessary. The Pacific Mission is too large; the expense of delegates to and from conference, and for a traveling presiding officer, is too great to be incurred by the Saints, or defrayed by the individual out of his own resources; the distances to be traversed being too great to be gone over often enough by the president to keep the work moving. Bro. Haws does not state how he thinks the mission should be divided, but we infer that Oregon, Nevada, North and South California, would be the natural divisions, though he says but four.

These new districts being empowered, as all others are, to choose their own officers, would be freer to act in their own defence, against unwise, or unimportant and distracting measures, where favoritism might intervene to the formation of rings, cliques &c. Besides this, he thinks that no one that could be sent by the general conference could overcome the antagonisms that natural barriers have interposed to prevent the onward progress of the work. The feeling against further exercise of local presiding authority by general conference seems, also, to be against the idea of one sent from the east, or appointed of those in California as a mission president; and this helps to make the proposition distasteful.

The burden of reporting double, or first making a report by districts to Mission Conference, thence to General Conference is objected to; and implies a subordination of districts to mission authorities, rather than to the General Conference, that is irksome to many, and gives rise to serious complications that retard and hinder, that would be avoided if the districts in California were amenable to general church authorities only, as are all other districts, through officers chosen by the districts themselves.

It is thought that many officers who are confessedly, either by circumstances or by natural disqualifications, incapable of representing the work acceptably and successfully, are but loads that the Church can not afford to carry, and would do better without; these ought to be silenced, officially, and the Church relieved.

We have given above, we believe correctly and faithfully the pith of what Bro. Haws presents in his letter; and we have done it that the Elders may think about it both in the mission referred to, and in the east. In respect to them we offer no comment, except to the last one referred to, that of the idle officers. In regard to this we submit: It is by no means essential that all the eldership should be good preachers; and our experience has shown to us, that it sometimes happens that an indifferent preacher has been a good thinker, an able counselor, and a safe voter upon critical questions. We have now in mind a case in point, where an Elder who has no reputation as a preacher, and is modest enough to make no pretensions that way, turned the course of discourse and legislation upon an important question and by his counsel and vote saved the body from a very embarrassing measure. Hence we advise the supremest caution in dealing with this matter of idle officers. The Elders who sat in the gates in the time of Moses and the Judges, were not in the field but they seem to have been necessary and useful in their vocation as elders.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Do you think it wrong for Saints to play cards, checkers, authors, dominos, croquet, chess, and any such games.

Ans.—The question whether indulgence in games like those named above is criminal is one that has bothered, and is bothering many. We do not know that our opinion will help the matter much, but here it is. Whether such indulgence is wrong can only be determined in individual cases, and is then governed by circumstances. In themselves such games are not criminal, any more than running, wrestling, playing ball or marbles, or a hundred other amusements that might be named. But surrounded by given circumstances it would be wrong, because folly to engage in them. All gaming that comes under the head of gambling is wrong; hence any circumstances that make the aforesaid games, games of chance whereon money, or other valuable consideration is staked, make indulgence in them criminal; but when engaged in for amusement, or recreation from labor, either mental or physical, there can be no moral crime in them; always provided, that no duty necessary to be done is neglected, or time that should be spent in sleep and rest be wasted for the sake of indulging in such games. As for instance, sitting up late at night to play; or playing in work hours, when work should be done, then such indulgence is wrong. Or when in cases where play has become a passion excluding the putting ones mind upon work or duty, then it is wrong; because a habit is formed that has assumed evil proportions and rules a subject, instead of being itself subject to control.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," is old and true; so also is "All play and no work makes John an idle boy," and "idleness is the parent of mischief." Under proper restrictions, indulged in temperately, we can not see that games of the sort named are of themselves criminal.

We ourselves like to play marbles and ball with the boys, and now and again indulge in a game of chess, when time and opportunity conjoin to take away the circumstances of criminality. However, to them to whom such things are criminal they are crimes; as eating of meat is to them to whom it is an abhorrence.

Q.—Please answer in the Query Column, if proper, the following questions: There is before a deliberate assembly a motion, amendment and substitute. The substitute is put to vote first and lost. The amendment is put to vote and there are twenty yeas and one nay, and now comes the point of dispute. Does the above vote on the amendment prevent the motion from being put? Is it not necessary that the original motion also should be put to vote, to see if it may carry a larger vote than the amendment? Yours,

JOHN SMITH.

A.—The amendment when adopted by vote, is by that vote made a part of the original motion itself and does not supercede that original motion; the original motion must be put as amended, and may in that form be accepted or denied. The action upon a substitute is different from that on an amendment in this, that if a substitute is affirmed by vote, that vote is final as to the original for which the substitute was offered; but an amendment if affirmed only becomes a part of the original and must abide the issue of the vote upon the original motion. See sec. vii Rules of Order. A substitute is not an amendment, but is intended to put something else in the place of the whole motion under consideration; for this reason if a substitute when offered pleases the assembly better than the original, and they so declare by their vote, the original is at once disposed of and the substitute adopted, without the necessity of considering the original further.

News Summary.

March 9th.—Both houses of the English Parliament have passed the bill providing relief for Ireland.

A dispatch says that fear and consternation prevail at St. Petersburg among all classes. With the continual reports of Nihilist conspiracies, the activity of the military, and the all-pervading presence of the police, the people are kept in constant agitation. Gen. Melikoff has organized the city into ninety police districts, each district under the charge of an officer detailed for a specific purpose. All suspected parties and persons who can not give a good account of themselves are immediately expelled from the city. Efforts are made to keep the people in ignorance of the various conspiracies which are discovered, to prevent, if possible, the breaking out of a general panic. It is believed that all the provinces are seriously contaminated with the prevailing spirit of diabolism.

In San Domingo, West Indies, an insurrection broke out, but the government overcame the party, killing Gen. Castillo, the leader, and some of his band.

An explosion in the artillery barracks at Santiago, Chili, killed twenty-four persons.

10th.—A Citizen's Union has been organized in San Francisco, for the purpose of protection to life and property against Socialists, lawless workmen and incendiaries. Ten thousand gentlemen, including the most prominent merchants, lawyers, bankers, etc., have signed a pledge that reads as follows: "We, the undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to assist, in all lawful ways, the legally-constituted authorities in the preservation of public peace and the property of our fellow citizens, and for these purposes we associate ourselves together."

A Vienna dispatch reports that on the Austro-Russian frontier, near Dzikow, the Vistula River broke through a dyke and flooded thirty villages, some of which were completely destroyed. Thousands of people are without shelter or food. Many cattle were lost.

A dispatch says that Mahomed Jan, in Afghanistan, is out with eleven thousand men on the road to Cabul.

A severe gale prevailed the 8th, in the Sacramento Valley, California, amounting in some localities almost to a hurricane. At Willows, Colusa, county, much damage was done by the unroofing and blowing down of warehouses and other buildings, and reports to the same effect are coming in from various parts of the county.

11th.—The extensive weaving works in Moscow, Russia, were burned on the 8th inst. Twenty-four persons were burned to death and twenty-nine injured.

Mayor Killoch, of San Francisco, has issued a proclamation denouncing the manifesto of the Citizens' Protective Union and its authors, and defending the workmen, declaring them to be peaceful and law-abiding citizens. The general impression now is that the "Vigilantes" will be able to maintain order without resort to violent measures.

12th.—Mahomed Jan's forces in Afghanistan are said to be increasing rapidly. They are preparing for war on the English.

The Russian expedition into Central Asia has been abandoned.

It is yet uncertain whether there will be blood shed in San Francisco or not. Dennis Kearney and his "working men," who are so violent against the Chinese and declare that they "must go," are considered as a mob. It is feared that they may burn what is known as "Chinatown," and it is stated that every Chinaman in the city is armed with "a revolver, knife, or short bar of iron; and many are armed with all three of these weapons."

At Frankfort, Indiana, yesterday, the boiler of a flax mill exploded and ten men were killed, their bodies being torn to pieces and scattered about. The building was entirely demolished, and the town was shaken by the terrific explosion.

At Pueblo, Mexico, the 9th, Gen. Grant was received with the usual honors, a salvo of artillery, bands of music, a procession and a reception. He leaves Mexico the 15th for Galveston and New Orleans.

Very cold weather is just now raging in Minnesota. In the northern part the mercury stands 23 degrees below zero. All over the west to-day is the coldest one for a long time, and few days colder this winter.

Some United States cavalry had a brush with hostile Indians in New Mexico February 28th, and captured and burned their camp. They were thought to be some of Chief Victoria's band.

At the Indian Agency, Fort Buford, Dakota, February 20th, the Assiniboine Sioux and the Yanktonai Sioux declared war against each other, and a battle ensued in which about thirty were killed and wounded on either side.

13th.—Prince Bismarck, of Germany, suspects that secret negotiations are going on between France and Russia, the object being an offensive and defensive alliance against Germany.

It is said that Gen. Melikoff had on a shirt of mail, and therefore Vladetsky's bullet did not reach his body.

15th.—No famine of late years has been so severe and protracted as that which has existed in northern provinces of Brazil, and of which we have from time to time had distressing accounts. The "famine district" lies between the Rivers Parahyba and San Francisco. The present drought—for it is not yet ended—began in 1877. The crops failed and the cattle died for want of food and water. By July of that year one third of the population were without sustenance; by November nine-tenths of the cattle in that vast pastoral region had died, and the famishing poor were without number. "The whole country was dried up so that not a green leaf or blade of grass could be seen, except along a few fertile hillsides." The drought continued through the year 1878, and then the people who had survived became frightened, and there was a great exodus, 500,000 people leaving one province alone, and at least 150,000 of them dying on the road. Great camps of fugitives were formed along the coast, and particularly about Fortaleza, a city of some 25,000 inhabitants. More than 100,000 refugees crowded into it. Fever and small-pox broke out among them, and they died by scores and hundreds, the death-rate from small-pox alone footing up as high as 808 per day. The Brazilian Government gave relief, and at latest advices was still feeding 250,000 people, who are employed in various public works, laboring for the mere subsistence it can give them. Out of a population of 900,000 in the Province of Ceara alone 200,000 have died of starvation and 300,000 of pestilence. Of the survivors two-thirds are fed at public expense. But the worst is to come if Government aid is withdrawn, as it is reported it soon will be. The Treasury has been drained and credit exhausted. The future for the surviving population of Ceara, and of other famine stricken provinces is appalling, and unless the drought is broken, or relief comes from abroad, the entire population will perish.

16th.—It is reported that the British troops have been defeated in a battle with the Afghans. A garrison was surprised, but most of the men escaped, and fled into the woods and mountains.

A telegram from St. Petersburg says: "The programme of the Dictator General [Melikoff] is not giving that peace to St. Petersburg which is so ardently desired. Though the Nihilists are less open and public in their demonstrations, it is everywhere felt that there is an undercurrent of active and vigorous hostility, liable at any moment to overleap the barriers provided for its repression. Rumors are current that a change of the cast iron policy is contemplated, and a pacification course is to be pursued."

From Northern Wyoming comes the news that great excitement exists there because of the rumors about the Indians intending to rise and march upon the whites. Gen. Miles sends word from Fort Custer that the Crows have formed a treaty with the Sioux. Settlers to the north and west of Tongue River are coming into Goose Creek Valley for mutual protection. At Big Horn Post-Office all is excitement, which increases from the fact that there are only two companies of troops at Fort McKinney.

A special from Silverton, Colorado, says that an Indian massacre occurred near Blue Mountain early this month. A number of white men (gold prospectors) were killed, whose bodies have been found, and much excitement prevails.

Of the state of unrest in Europe a Chicago Tribune editorial says: "All Europe seems to be in a state of ferment. The Nihilists in Russia, the Socialists in Germany, the religious orders in France, and the Irradentia party in Italy are keeping the Governments of their respective countries in a state of expectancy if not anxiety. Italy appears to be as much disturbed by secret political societies as Russia."

17th.—Gen. Melikoff's system of treating the people with consideration and giving personal attention to public duties, raises a question whether a reorganization on this basis of the whole European Empire of Russia might not be undertaken.

An extraordinary robbery is announced in a cable dispatch from Cape Town, Africa. The Post-Office was plundered of all the diamonds awaiting shipment through the mails, amounting in value to $375,000.

Dennis Kearney, the leader and spokesman of the so-called workingmen's party, in San Francisco, has been arrested, fined one thousand dollars and sentenced to six months imprisonment, for making incendiary speeches, in which he denounced, with much profanity, the authorities of the city and the City Council.

The following news comes from St. Petersburg: It is said that Gen. Skobeloff will lead an expedition on a limited scale against the Turcomans. The winter sowings of wheat in the South of Russia have suffered greatly from frost. A census is being made of the City of St. Petersburg, and all persons without fixed occupation or means of subsistence will be driven from the city.

18th.—The fact that the agreement between the Interior department and the Ute Chiefs does not provide for the removal of all the Indians from Colorado has created intense dissatisfaction among the people of that State, whose Congressional delegation will fight the Agreement bill in the Senate and House, and endeavor to secure the adoption of amendments whereby it will be possible to locate all the Utes in Utah. It is claimed that as the matter has been arranged by Secretary Schurz the Indians are given the cream of the agricultural lands in the Grand River Valley.

19th.—Dispatches from Europe say that trouble is brewing between the Musselmans and the Christians in Smyrna, Asia Minor. The Governor has asked aid from Constantinople, and a French gunboat started for that purpose, also an English gunboat from Athens, to help in case of need.

The unfavorable weather, which has prevailed for some time throughout Egypt, renders necessary an extensive re-sowing of cotton, and the crop for this year will be rather late, if not below the average.

The French Government has decided, so says a dispatch, to enforce the decree of 1804, which provides for the dissolution of unauthorized religious orders, therefore the Jesuits have concluded to take refuge in Spain and Belgium.

20th.—Foreign dispatches indicate the probability of an open rupture between Russia and China, concerning the occupation by the former of the rich province of Kuldja, which originally belonged to China but had by rebellion gained a semi-independence of her.

21st.—It is now announced that President Grevy, of France, has determined upon a rigid enforcement of existing laws against the Jesuits, Redemptorist Fathers, Marists, and all other unrecognized Orders. This amounts to the virtual expulsion of all these people from the country. The Pope is interposing, and has already forwarded a very vigorous protest.

A dispatch from St. Louis, Missouri, says: "The threatened strike of switchmen, foremen, and helpers on the various railroads took place at noon to-day. The strike is the most perfectly organized of any of its kind ever organized here, including the men of the class on every railroad entering either St. Louis or East St. Louis. Business in the yards is stopped save what can be done by agents and officials."

22d.—The news from London is that the Afghan Prince and his chiefs are ready to negotiate with the British General, Roberts, for peace.

Dictator Melikoff, of Russia, is growing in power there, by the will and consent of the Czar, having a corps of soldiers under his own immediate control.

Correspondence.

BRYANT, Illinois,
March 17th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Our district conference at Burlington, March 6th and 7th, passed off very pleasantly; the power of the Spirit being manifest throughout the business sessions, preaching, and prayer and testimony. Bro. J. A. Robinson of the Kewanee district was with us. Our next district conference will convene at Rock Creek, Illinois, Saturday, June 5th. I met Professor F. Palmer in public discussion, at Rock Creek, Illinois, March 10th; our debate lasted three days, of two sessions each day, each session two hours duration. Our discussion was abridged one day, by request of Mr. Palmer, as the house was wanted for a funeral occasion, one day, and he did not wish to run the debate into the following week; so three, instead of four days was occupied; one and a half days on each question. The Professor proved himself a thorough gentleman throughout; more so than any man I ever met in debate. The general verdict was that Atheism and Infidelity "wiggled out at the small end of the horn." I thank God for the assistance given me.

I am now on my way to Plano; shall go to Canton to-morrow, to remain over Sunday next; where I will steer my course from there is yet, to me, unknown. My sister and family at Carthage send you their respects.

As ever, your brother in the "One Faith," JOSEPH A. CRAWFORD.

XENIA, Nebraska,
February 27th, 1880.

Dear Herald.—At last writing I was holding meetings at Crescent City, Iowa. A deep interest was manifested by several, and some pledged to unite with us. Bad weather hindered the meetings at Downsview. At Glenwood I preached a week. Thence to Dawsonburg, where I spoke to small but select congregations. At Nebraska City I was pleased in having the privilege of speaking three times to the Saints and friends, for that was the place of my childhood, and there is where my weaknesses and faults are known, (for I have not tried to hide them), and I feel a just pride that I enjoy the respect and confidence of both Saints and friends, with a very limited exception.

January 2d, mid the perils of rotten ice, I walked across the Missouri river, only to meet with a disappointment in missing the north bound train. Lodged with Bro. E. R. Briggs, of Eastport, and breakfasted next morning in Omaha. Attended the Northern Nebraska conference. No business of any importance was transacted. There is much room for improvement, both in spirit and manner of doing the Lord's business. When SELF is the factor at quarterly conference, Christ and the gospel is clouded, strife and not love is the rule.

While in Omaha, Elders F. F. Hintze and C. H. Newman of Utah, asked for and obtained the use of the Saints' chapel, and January 6th the former preached on "Priesthood and Successorship." He is a smooth talker, and an adept at giving a false interpretation to the revelations; he was cunning in that he garbled statements of history and quotations, and declared that no argument or logic could be brought against what he presented. I called upon him before the dismissal of his meeting, to meet me upon several questions of difference between us, but he refused to enter into discussion. On the following evening I reviewed his sermon, and for two and three fourths hours I worked faithfully in defense of truth and the Reorganized Church. I sought to be kind but plain; and if there was a gap left open I am not aware of the fact. I wish to bear testimony here, that whenever I stand to declare the mission of Joseph Smith and the Reorganized Church, a double portion of the fire of inspiration fills my soul.

From Omaha to this place, and spoke a week to attentive listeners. The future promises additions in this part of the vineyard. Spent a week near Valley Station. The school-house has been locked against us there, but Bro. Nelson Brown's house is open; some are investigating. January 20th, I went home and spent two days at my own hearthstone. Thence to Palmyra, to the quarterly conference. It was the best that we have held for five years. I believe enough live members are there to carry on the work, and "laggards" too. Many have come under condemnation, by neglecting to lift up their voice," will be written upon the finding of the great court, unless there be a "shaking of the coals from their garments" very soon. Went to Wilber and preached nearly two weeks. Several gave me promise of obeying soon. My father made an opening twelve miles east of Wilber. I spoke there twice to full houses, and, in all my experience I never saw a people that so unambiguously endorsed the doctrine. I would have continued, but the house had been let for a revival meeting. I verily believe that God has a people there. With that genial brother, Dr. Levi Anthony, I went to Clear Creek, and held meetings for two weeks. This place has been pre-empted by the Christian Church, hence we earn every inch of territory we occupy. Everybody talks, and "Mormonism" filled the air; and the more they talked, the better were we pleased. February 15th, organized the "Clear Creek Branch," with six members, and on the 22d five were added by baptism. The cause has many friends in that vicinity. However, papers are being prepared for a discussion between us and the Christian Society. I thank God, that, through his grace, I know my labors have not been in vain.

ROBERT M. ELVIN.

TAYLOR, Red River county, Texas,
February 19th, 1880.

To the Saints of Burleson and Robertson counties, greeting.—When I left you, it was with a broken heart. All obstacles having been removed, I am again free. When I last bade you farewell the emotions of my heart were hard to conceal, you were then with joyful hearts, and buoyant hopes of the future. I hope you have increased tenfold since then, in wisdom, knowledge, understanding—in fact in every characteristic that should mark the Saints of God. Is that spirit that gave such joy when you arose from your watery grave in the famous old Brazos, still securely housed in the temples prepared for it? Or has it become grieved, and taken its departure? O! dear Saints, do not fail to use every means to make your "calling and election sure." Let brotherly love, meekness, humility, and godliness be some of the characteristics by which you may be known from the world; while you seek to be clothed with a mantle of charity which is a shield against evil. All who have quick tempers, try to subdue them; and in the place thereof use gentleness, and kind words. Sisters, be kind and gentle to your children, use kind words at all times, and the rod will be seldom, if ever needed. Fulfill your promises to your children, and be sure to make none but those you can fulfill. I have no new doctrine to write, but only to exhort you to steadfastness in the doctrine that you have so often heard; remembering that the day of the Lord is at hand, and soon the voice will be heard, "Behold the bridegroom cometh, Go ye out and meet him." And, as none will be admitted but those who are clothed with the wedding garment, which is the righteousness of God, or in other words doing the commandments of God; strive so to do that his Spirit may be with us, for "except ye have the Spirit ye are none of his." O, how faithful and diligent we should be that by good words and works we may prove to the world that we are what we profess to be in example, as well as precept, "He that heareth these sayings of mine (Christ) and doeth them," these are the ones that are to be admitted to the marriage feast.

Again "man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God." These words of the Savior are significant, and unless I misunderstand them, they are applicable to modern as well as to ancient revelations. That God may help us to so live that at the great day we may hear that welcome applaudit, "well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord," is the prayer of yours in the hope of eternal life,

Brother H. A. Stebbins.—By the Herald we see that Brother A. Kent has been preaching in Ellsworth and Barton counties, also in Rice and McPherson counties, at Lindsburg, just a day's drive from us. We would have been so glad to have known it. We would have gone there to hear him, and have brought him home with us, if he would come; for we have not heard one of our Elders preach for nearly seven years. All that cheers us on is the Herald and Advocate. Nearly all our neighbors have joined the Christian Church, and we are left out "with the dogs;" as their minister said that all who did not come in should remain out with the dogs. Well, for my part, I would rather have the friendship of a good dog than a hypocrite. Pray for us that we may remain steadfast in the faith, and that we may yet have a preacher of truth here.

As ever, your brother and sister in Christ,

H. ELMER.

ST. LOUIS, March 15th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Our district is in a tolerably fair condition. Some misunderstandings of the past are being better understood, and in many respects I think we are improving, but a great deal of work ought to be done, and there are very few to do it. Many of the most active of former days have passed away, some by death, others by change of location. And a few have faltered by the way and gone over to the enemy's camp. But still some are left who love the work, and who try to be valiant in the Master's cause. We very much need an able and wise Elder to labor permanently in the district one or more years. I am confident that the right kind of an Elder would cheerfully be sustained, and all his reasonable wants be supplied. We have been misunderstood in the past, because we did not encourage some elders to come and labor temporarily, and pay us flying visits. And our course has been misconstrued to appear that we did not appreciate a visit from the brethren. But the very reverse has been the case, so far as worthy and true brethren are concerned. Let such brethren as Blair, Derry, Clapp, Heman C. Smith, and many others that I might mention, come and pay the St. Louis Saints a visit, and see if we will not appreciate it. And why is it these brethren never even hint about money. May the Spirit of the Lord attend all your General Conference sessions, and may the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Church be one that shall cheer the hearts of the Saints throughout the land.

Your brother in Christ,

WM. ANDERSON.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins.—Bro. Deuel is with us now, and he is doing all he can. It is a hard place, for the people are warned to beware of "that Josephite." But they now attend better, and things look more favorable. He has not baptized any yet, but expects to soon. Some of the leading men in this place promised to meet Bro. Deuel in a discussion; but, when the time came, they did not meet him. We believe that nothing short of the power of God can throw down the strongholds in this place. Bro. Deuel has the love of all the Saints and friends.

Your sister,

BOZEMAN, Montana,

March 2d, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—I send you the result of my labors in Bozeman. I have given three lectures, to large audiences two nights, and fair turn out the third night. The Editor of Bozeman paper, "The Avant Courier," not only personally and flagrantly insulted me on my arrival, when I called upon him, but has since then indulged in frequent slurs in his paper. And as he has not only attacked me but also the Church; and he does it knowing that there is no other paper in this vicinity, I gave him a good exposure. He used to be a Methodist minister here in Bozeman, then Government Agent, during which he turned thief, and then denied religion.

The first night, in speaking of rewards and punishment, I said that reason would teach us the necessity of a place of future punishment. I referred to the jail, that many commit gross sins, yet go unpunished in this life. I illustrated by saying, Suppose your speaker should prove recreant to his trust, and, like Judas, betray his Master and his cause, rob the government and then slander better men than himself, men whom he could not meet before the public and give them no reply in his columns. Would not your speaker deserve future punishment? At the close of the meeting the gentleman arose and asked if I referred to him or to any gentleman in the congregation. I told him if the cap fitted him he was welcome to wear it. He then said that that was a sneaking, underhanded way of getting out of it, and he demanded a straight, direct answer. I replied again, "If the cap fits you, you can wear it; and if you take what does not belong to you you are not honest." He then put his hand on his hip, where he carries his revolver, and, advancing a few steps, said, "You are a liar and a coward." I replied, "Sir, you are a gentleman." The next night the hall was crowded, and the third night, when I closed, a purse was placed on the table by Colonel Chernut, as a tribute of respect, containing $23.05. Bozeman is open; an Elder can go in there now and secure a good hall, good congregation, kind treatment, and hospitality. Yours in bonds,

E. C. BRAND.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—I live ten miles southwest of Ft. Scott; have been here over twelve months; have not seen one of our faith since I came here; would be very glad if any of our faith would call on me in passing, for I feel lonely away from my kindred, whom I left in the Lone Star state, where I had lived twenty-five years, without thinking that religion would cause one to desire to move. But when I heard the Latter Day gospel and obeyed it, I like a great many others, started Zionward, seen dimly in the future by what has been written. I have floated to these parts, where the prejudice on the one side, and indifference the other are so great that I have no influence in trying to preach; yet with all this I am not discouraged, but am determined to battle on the best I can, though alone we may be, until the gathering shall come.

Yours in hope,

L. H. and S. J. EZZELL.

LONDON, England,

February 6th, 1880

Dear Sisters of Zion:—I have had a few years' experience in the Reorganized Church of Christ. Many great and marvelous blessings I have received, through the dictation of the Spirit of the Lord, through his servants and handmaids, in these the latter days. Over eight years ago, while I was at a large conference of the Brighamite Church, so called, in which I was then a member, the Lord marvelously brought me out of a large assembly of the so-called Saints by a voice that was heard in the midst of the assembly, denying a statement that had been made by one of the Elders of the Church; namely, that our martyred prophet, Joseph Smith, was the founder of that great evil that has caused so many noble men and women to fall from the truth. The voice that was heard was that of our brother Bradshaw of the Limehouse Branch, London.

Dear Sisters, although not known to many personally, I trust the time will come that we shall meet in Zion. Let us strive, dear sisters, to spend our lives for the gospel we love. Had the Lord left me to myself I fear I might now have been groping in the dark, as many still are. Dear sisters, let us strive to be determined to follow the steps of our meek and lowly Savior. Then the Lord will use us if we will follow him. Let us strive to follow him in all his ways. We are pleased to see the report of our Sisters' Society at Providence. Our society in London is led by Sister Bradshaw, and has had many struggles, but the Lord has greatly blessed us.

MARIA FURNESS.

RICHMONDVILLE, Mich.,

March 11th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—On February 21st I held a debate with a Roman Catholic on two propositions, as follows: 1st. Resolved that the Roman Catholic Church is the Church of Christ; affirmed by James Mohan and denied by John J. Cornish. 2d. Resolved that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the Church of Christ; affirmed by J. J. Cornish, denied by James Mohan. The Douay Bible to be the only standard of evidences, and each to have two twenty-minute speeches on each proposition. It was agreed that no decision should be given, as Mr. Mohan said there were more Protestants than Catholics, present.

We had an excellent chairman, Mr. Mohan's own choice. Good order was kept for such a large assembly. Mr. Mohan did not do as well as I thought he would. He brought up a few passages of Scripture to prove his church to be the church, but I found no difficulty whatever in overthrowing his theory. In reply to the second proposition he did not bring up a single verse to disprove our church, but he got off the track a little, by telling us that "Joe Smith sold the gold plates for a Grist mill," (an acknowledgment of his having had them). He exhorted the people to beware of these Mormons, because they came too late in the season, &c. Three or four days after that I baptized four, and many others are not far from the kingdom.

West of Sanilac is one of the Second Adventist strongholds. I have been doing much preaching there, and the majority are now in favor of the latter day work. Some of the Adventists told their minister (Elder Wright) that unless he would come out and prove our doctrine false they would leave him and join the Latter Day Saints, as they believed we had the truth on our side. I have been informed since, that he will stand an argument with us. I told them I was prepared.

I have been to Black River, and got a new opening among the Methodists; have baptized three there lately. The Methodist minister is feeling hurt over it, for the people's eyes are being opened; instead of paying him the salary he puts on them ($60) they only pay him $6. The reason assigned is because he don't preach the truth. He has offered now to debate with me and show we are wrong; by so doing he thinks to gain what he has lost. I have written the challenge just as he desired it, and await his time to discuss.

I have made a new opening twelve miles from Port Huron; preached once and promised to go again. Since then a Methodist minister there delivered a lecture against the Mormons. He said that he was an elephant, and that we were only ants in his sight. So I am going soon to see the elephant.

It seems that all sects, both Protestant and Catholics combined to put down the truth soon after we came around. Before that they were always in opposition to each other; but the work only rolls faster. I will not be alone all this summer; Bro. Willard Smith has commenced traveling with me. He is a young man, a Priest, and a good singer. We anticipate doing a good work this season. There are good openings. Bro. D. Wilkey is also doing a little in various places, but will soon have to attend to the farm. Bro. A. Barr has been in Canada preaching a little, and Bro. J. Simmons preaches occasionally in different places besides his own branch, and Bro. H. Campbell is not idle. In short the work in this part is onward; the Saints are lively, and more are coming. God is also blessing his people with the gifts of healing, wisdom, knowledge, &c. I expect soon to be in Canada. The field is large, the laborers are few; may the Lord of the vineyard send forth more, is my prayer.

Yours for Christ,

JOHN J. CORNISH.

EDENVILLE, Iowa,

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Lake has been with us three weeks. He and Bro. D. C. White labored in Poweshiek county for one week. Then Bro. White left for home and I joined Bro. Lake. We have been holding forth in the neighborhood where my late discussion was held. Four more were baptized last Monday and more have asked the benefit of that ordinance.

Bro. Lake spoke two evenings in defence of the Book of Mormon. The Lord stood by him giving him his Holy Spirit, and the subject was handled with great skill. When we closed the meeting an infidel arose and called the house to order. Taking the stand he said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I have been a disbeliever in this Bible (picking up one of our bibles) ever since I have been sixteen years old. I had been taught by my parents from infancy that this book was the Word of God. I have read this book and compared our religions with its teachings and found that there was no agreement—thence I turned to the study of theology and became perfectly disgusted. But I tell you, ladies and gentlemen, if this Bible is to be believed then the Book of Mormon is true. If the Bible is true then the Latter Day Saints have the gospel. The Bible never had been preached in our neighborhood until the Latter Day Saints came here." He quoted Mark 16th and remarked "that any man who would tell him that he believed the Bible and denied this declaration he did not fear to tell him that he lied." His advice was, "to read the Book of Mormon before rejecting it."

The fire is kindled and what the consequences will be we are not able to tell at this writing. We commence a series of meetings at Edenville on the 10th inst; thence to Polk county on the 17th where we expect to continue till conference convenes at Newton on the 28th, when Bro. Lake expects to go to Plano to attend the fiftieth anniversary of the Church of Latter Day Saints. The work is on the march and ere another fifty years shall have passed Zion with her blood washed throng will have entered in to her rest.

So may it be,

I. N. WHITE.

MYRTLE CREEK, Douglas Co., Oregon,

February 14th, 1880.

President Joseph Smith:—The reason that I did not report to the Fall Conference, was that I did not get to my field of labor till it was too late to do anything, (the rains having set in), so I had no report to make. I was much fatigued from a land trip of over one thousand miles, and much of the way through a hot, sandy country, the mercury often being as high as 116° in the shade, yet I began to preach as soon as I arrived, but as the rain set in my labors have been confined to this place.

I preached by the way only at Visalia, Tulare county. I found a few confiding Saints there whose confidence had been much abused, and I stayed and labored with them ten days. Held several meetings, baptized two, blessed four children, and administered the holy Sacrament to them. Left them feeling well. May the Lord keep them holy and unblameable, is my prayer. I also laid over ten days at Linden, and was kindly entertained by Bro. John Nightengale; but I was too sick to preach. I learned that the Stockton Branch was nearly if not quite dead, just as are the other branches throughout the Pacific Slope Mission.

Last week I gave four lectures on the apostasy of the ancient Church, and was to have given four on the restoration of the gospel and the kingdom, etc., but bad weather set in, so I gave but one; but I will go on with them as soon as the weather gets better.

My programme for the summer's campaign is: First, labor in Josephine, Douglas, Coos, Marion,

Linn, Lane, and Polk counties, Oregon; thence east of the Cascades to the John Days river; thence across into Idaho and Washington Territories, a big summer's work; but I hope the Lord will give me grace, strength, and wisdom to accomplish it.

Your brother and fellow laborer,
J. C. CLAPP.

FARMINGTON, Graves Co., Kentucky,
March 1st, 1880.

Dear Herald:—After writing from Moss Point, Mississippi, January 1st, we (Bro. McPherson and I) went to Bluff Creek. Found the Saints strong in the faith. We remained until January 15th. Baptized one and confirmed one who had been previously baptized by Bro. R. M. King. On the 15th returned to Three Rivers and labored until the 23rd. Bro. J. B. Porter now presides there. On the 23rd returned to Bluff Creek, held a business meeting, and Bro. Simeon Cochrane was ordained an Elder, and is to preside. I have much confidence in Bro. Porter and Cochrane, and hope they will be humble, diligent, and useful to the cause. On the 25th returned to Three Rivers and tarried till the 30th. Baptized one there the 29th. On the whole the churches in Jackson county, Mississippi, are doing well. They came from different denominations and brought some of their peculiarities and traditions with them, and have not yet emerged into a oneness in Christ, but are certainly making progress in that direction. May God watch over and bless them!

On the 30th, left East Pascagoula and came to Mobile, laid over until 11:20 p. m. While reclining in the shade of live oaks in the city park, and watching the children sporting on the green grass, I could but contrast the pleasant weather here with the probable bleak, cold time in the north. I thought that could the rich and productive soil of the West accompany the mild climate of the South, how pleasant and agreeable it would be. But, should so much vegetation as rich soil would produce, be left to rot on the ground where there is no cold to counteract its effect, it would be rendered too unhealthy for us to live in. Surely God doeth all things well!

Three o'clock a. m., the 31st, found us at Shubuta, Clark county, Mississippi, and five miles walk in the country brought us to Mrs. Weaver's, an aunt of Bro. McPherson, who kindly received us. We preached in the neighborhood a few days, which I think had good effect. We were the guests of Messrs. McPherson and Chapman, and Mrs. Weaver and sons.

February 7th arrived at Bro. Henry Ruff's, in Noxuba county, Mississippi. Though he has much opposition and is alone, yet he remains firm in the faith. Remained with Bro. Ruff until the 9th, then left an appointment for the 26th, and proceeded fifteen miles farther to Bro. Eskridge's, in Winston county. Bro. Ruff furnished a conveyance. Bro. Eskridge was the only one of the faith there, all the rest having removed. The consent of the Methodist class-leader, Columbus Ivy, was obtained, and we commenced meeting in the church, but, as we repaired to the church one night, after having held several meetings we met Mr. Ivy and five others, viz., Thomas Ivy, James Ivy, John Kinard, Wm. Wilson and Mr. Bagwell, each carrying a club, and they refused us admittance. We thought it a strange procedure, for a polite request would have answered as well as clubs. From some talk I heard I think it probable that they will be reported to the grand jury. We preached at the house of Mr. Gasper Kinard that night. Others also opened their houses, and we preached at Mr. Price's, Mr. Wallace's, and at Mrs. Moorhead's. Four shots were fired near the church during service the night before the clubs were displayed, by unknown parties.

It is just to say that the conduct above cited was not endorsed by the people; they are hurt, and feel keenly the disgrace brought on the neighborhood by Mr. Ivy and fellows. We heartily thank our friends for their kindness and hospitality; and towards our enemies we hold no ill will. On the 16th, baptized two, a widow Massey and her daughter Martha, principally the fruits of Bro. Hansen's labor. Sr. Martha has been afflicted and several predicted that her baptism would be the cause of her death, but when we left she was rapidly recovering. On the 26th we returned to Bro. Ruff's, but not a soul came to meeting except Bro. R. and family, and Bro. Eskridge and son who came with us.

The 27th, left Macon by rail, and that night stayed at Rives, Tennessee, and on the 28th came to Mayfield, and, after a nine mile's walk through mud and water, arrived at Farmington, finding Bro. Hansen and wife and child well. Yesterday preached twice in the Farmington Institute.

Bro. Daniel McPherson is improving in spirituality. We had no reply to our letter to Bro. White, so did not visit Tuscaloosa. Our finances would hardly have admitted of such a trip, any way. I can hardly say how the work is here, as I have seen but few of the Saints. Bro. Hansen reports but little progress. We think of going to Tennessee this week, then back here, and on to Conference via Belleville, Illinois, and St. Louis, Missouri. I still rejoice in the work, and am ready to sacrifice for its progress.

HEMAN C. SMITH.

STREATOR, Illinois,
March 8th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I preached at B. W. Harvey's house in Wilton Center (east of Wilmington), February 29th, and came away March 3rd. I called at Braidwood the 5th and met Bro. Patterson. I was with the branch near Piper City through January and preached on each Sabbath. The bad condition of roads prevented night meetings. Bro. Silas Rogers was getting around again, and recovering from his sickness, which had kept him confined to his house for several weeks previous. I was over one Sabbath at Bro. Lars Lewis' and preached in the school house on his place. I visited Bro. Soren Oleson before getting there. I spoke twice at the Saints' Hall at Braidwood on the Sabbath I was with them, and once the fourth Sabbath in February at the Hazelton school house, near Bro. Parks, east of Wilmington.

I came here Friday evening and preached at the Saints' Hall yesterday afternoon and at night, and have an appointment again to-night. We think there is apparent indications of improvement in the branch here; which we was glad to so find on our return this way. I have met with much kindness with the Saints and friends, who have rendered me substantial aid, so my necessary wants have been very amply supplied, for which I am thankful to the Lord, and may He abundantly bless them for their interest manifest in this glorious gospel cause.

I send you a piece clipped from the Chicago Farmer's Advance for your disposal concerning the Jews in Palestine; though you may have seen it before, but thought it quite an interesting account, and so send it.

Yours in bonds,
C. G. LANPHEAR.

FONDA, Iowa,
March 12th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—Bro. Lambert is at Coalville and will be here to-morrow evening. Bro. Whiting and Eli T. Dobson will be here on the 20th to go to Clinton township to baptize and organize a branch. I have had three letters from Plymouth county begging me to come there and preach. Sister Christy writes that one lady is ready for baptism. I have been preaching most of the time, and have used more money in traveling than I have earned, and did not think I could go to Lemars. The decision of the court in Lake county, Ohio, published in the Sandwich Argus, I have had put in our Fonda News. The editor said he would insert it if my boy Charley would set it up, and he did so.

Most respectfully,
E. C. BROWN.

Take the following as a sample of what rich men get: The income of William H. Vanderbilt last year was $30,000,000; of Jay Gould, $15,000,000; of Sidney Dillon, $10,000,000; Russell Sage, $10,000,000; James Keener, $8,000,000.

Conference Minutes.

Business resumed. A committee of two was appointed in each branch to collect means for the support of John Romack.

Adjourned to Willow Branch, Richland county, June 19th, 1880, at 10 a. m.

KEWANEE DISTRICT.

A conference was held at Kewanee, Illinois, Dec. 6th and 7th, 1879; President Robinson in the chair; J. H. Hopkins, clerk.

Reports of Kewanee, St. Davids, Bryant and Buffalo Prairie were read and approved. Report from Millersburg referred back to the branch for correction. All financial reports were read and approved.

Bishop's Agent's Report, for six months, ending Dec. 6th, 1879: "Balance due Agent last report 65 cents, received since last report $10.11. Balance on hand $9.46. R. J. Benjamin, Bishop's Agent."

Elders R. Holt, E. T. Bryant, C. G. Lanphear, J. S. Patterson, J. A. Robinson, J. D. Jones, T. F. Stafford reported in person; J. W. Terry by proxy. E. T. Bryant and C. G. Lanphear were appointed as a committee on appeals.

Whereas, objections have been raised in the Millersburg Branch to the legality of a meeting appointed by the president of the district, wherein a presiding elder was elected to preside over the branch; therefore be it Resolved that a committee of three be appointed to investigate the legality of calling said meeting.

Bro. Chisnall, Holt and Lanphear were appointed.

Whereas, there is a great deficiency in the items of the individual membership of the district, and as there is great need of a revision of the same, be it Resolved that the president and clerk of each branch be especially called upon to make out a complete report of the membership of their branch, according to the accepted form of the Church, and forward the same to the district secretary as soon as possible.

2 P. M.—The committee on the Millersburg Branch matter reported having examined the evidence, and from it that they believe Elder Robinson had a right to call such meeting and lay before it such business as he might think of benefit to the branch, it then having no president; but that they also believed that it would have been wise in him to have conferred with the Priest in charge, as a matter of courtesy. The report was adopted, and the action of the president was sustained by conference.

Missions were given to Bro. T. F. Stafford and J. W. Terry, and Bro. J. S. Patterson was requested to labor in the district as much as he can.

Preaching Saturday night by Bro. C. J. Lanphear.

Sunday:—Preaching at 10 a. m. by Bro. T. F.

Stafford; 2 p. m., sacrament and testimony meeting; preaching at 7 p. m., by Bro. J. A. Robinson.

The committee on appeals reported on three cases presented to them. 1st. In the case of Brn. Thomas Charles and Samuel Garland, the committee, on the evidence presented, agree with the Elders' court held at Kewanee, and believe that there is not sufficient cause for an appeal. 2d. As to the appeal of Sr. Reese, the committee do not find that there has been such an investigation of the matter as should have been made, and therefore they recommend that the branch take it again in hand for further investigation. 3d. In the case of C. E. Jones, the committee find that the court of elders gave him ample time to make confession, and the committee consider that he should comply with the law of the Church to again take his place in it.

All the above reports were received and approved by conference, and the committee discharged.

Miscellaneous.

AN APPEAL.

To the Saints of the Massachusetts District:—It is with deep solicitude for the work of God that I address this epistle to you, as the followers of Him who was rich, yet, "for our sakes became poor."

The cause of Christ demands not only our prayers and faith, but also our means, and as there seems to be a lethargy in the giving of our mites, I desire to bring this subject home to your hearts. I am aware that, as a rule, we are of the poor of this world, yet we have the promise of being "rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom."

Many a time, while enjoying the peace and comfort of a pleasant home, have I thought of my brethren, who, for the love of Christ, have forsaken home, wife, sons, daughters, relatives and friends, that the "unsearchable riches of Christ" might be preached to a dying world. Was it because they did not love and cherish home? Nay! but prompted by the great underlying principles of love and self-sacrifice, and inspired by the promise made by the divine Spirit, dead to the fading honors and glories of a sin-cursed world, and encouraged by the energy of soul which moved Moses when he "esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt," have, in the spirit of our Master, left all for Christ. Brethren and sisters, shall the pleadings of these brethren for help come to us in vain? Shall we refuse to listen to the call for assistance? Shall we permit the wives and children of these noble and honored men to cry for bread, and pine and suffer for the bare necessities of life, while their husbands and fathers are spending the best years of their manhood for the cause of God, without any hope of pecuniary reward? God bless such noble men.

To the sisters especially we make an appeal in behalf of the wives of these "ambassadors for Christ." Mothers, as you gather your children around the family altar, and your husband offers a fervent prayer that the blessing of God might come upon your house, think of your sister whose husband is from home, may be in a strange land, beset with dangers and trials, where he can not hear the gentle words of a loving wife, nor the prattling voice of a darling child; and while you contemplate upon this scene, remember the poor "widow" and her "mite;" and out of the abundance with which the Lord has blessed you, see if you can not freely and willingly give for the cause of Christ. In this age of pride and fashion, the wife who can follow her husband to the threshold of the door, and as he presses the parting kiss to her loving lips can say, "God bless you in your labor for souls;" and say in the faith of Christ, "He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb will care for me," deserves our sympathy and support; and cold is the heart that would refuse to help support a family in this condition. Such sacrifices can never be forgotten of heaven, but will add to their glory in the day of Christ's coming.

The work demands that we should give, and bestow freely for Zion's cause. Let us, therefore, while we pray, remember that if we can not preach, we can help by our means, and thus encourage those noble souls in the work of God.

Do not excuse yourself because the law of tithing has no bearing upon you, but give as freely as the disciples of old, who "sold their possessions and laid the money at the apostles' feet," not for six or seven per cent per annum, but for an interest that would endure to all eternity.

All money or goods which can be converted into money, sent to me as Bishop's Agent, will be strictly used for the purpose specified by the giver, and a receipt will be returned to the donor.

Come, brethren and sisters, help willingly, help freely; the smallest "mite" will be thankfully received, for the promise is that "the willing and obedient" shall enjoy the land of Zion. The poet says, "Sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven;" and we learn from holy writ that Israel withheld their "tithes and offerings" from the Lord for which they were sorely chastened, and thus Malachi says, (Mal. 3:8), "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings." This robbery was not by taking from the Lord's storehouse, but by withholding not only "tithes," but "offerings" when it was in the power of the people to give, so that they who could make "offerings" and did not, were equally guilty with those who withheld their "tithes." Remember, therefore, that,

"Time past and time to come are not;
Time present is our only lot."

And let each one of us say:

"Where'er I go, my love I'll show,
By working for the Savior."

May God bless this effort to the praise and glory of his name and kingdom, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

JOHN SMITH, Bishop's Agent, Mass. Dist.
No. 1, Alden St., Fall River, Mass.

SANTA ROSA BRANCH, CALIFORNIA.

As nearly all the members of the above branch are scattered, many of them far and wide, so that, out of the sixty-eight names upon the branch record, few meet together; and, as the whereabouts of many are not known, therefore all who know themselves to be members of said branch are requested to report to me, and, if they wish Letters of Removal, so advise us. At least please report yourselves and your present residences.

Respectfully yours,

"FORGIVE AND FORGET."

In journeying together through life's little day,
At its troubles and cares never fret;
Nor judge others faults too severe by the way,
But learn to forgive and forget.

For to err is the fate of all human kind,
And thou no exception shall get;
Then let "Charity" rule every thought of thy mind,
And learn to forgive and forget.

When thy frail brother shall fall by the way,
And a proud world shall scowl on his fate;
Be kindly and raise him again, if thou may,
And learn to forgive and forget.

The mercy of heaven all hope to attain,
When the sun of our life-day is set; [obtain,
Then show others that mercy which thou would'st
And learn to forgive and forget.

If thy brother should trespass against thy estate,
Thy person, thy friend, or thy fame;
Pursue the example which heaven hath set,
And seek not revenge for the same.

It is human to sin, but godlike to forgive,
And forgiveness we all hope to get;
Then always—yes, always, so long as you live,
Forgive—aye, forgive, and forget.

Christianity and its Enemies.

RELIGION has ever been the target at which has been aimed the poisoned arrows of Infidelity. Every measure or system, having for its object the elevation of the human family in the scale of Christian or moral development, has had to suffer at the hands of men whose only design (as evidenced by their works) has been to confuse, impede or destroy, without attempting to offer as a substitute therefor, anything that affords a guarantee of equal or better experiences.

Three-fourths of the argument and sophistry employed and intended to militate against Christianity, have only been directed in reality against mere phantoms or shadows, instead of the genuine gospel of the Son of God. This has, no doubt, resulted from a misconception or misappropriation of the title itself by those who have been sailing under it. If Christianity is correctly defined as being "The religion taught by Christ," then it is quite evident that its enemies have made a serious blunder in directing their opposition against the various creeds of Christendom—unless, peradventure, they have discovered one among the number, that has embodied in it all that Christ taught as gospel, and nothing else. We are prohibited, however, from believing that such discovery has been made by them, from the character of their opposition. Instead, therefore, of attacking Christianity itself, they have wasted their strength in dealing with the fine-spun theories of men, or with the many miserable apologies for Christianity that have flooded the world during past and present ages, which are, in themselves, nothing more nor less than standing evidences of the torture to which the genuine system has been subjected, in being riddled through the many wires of theological inquisition.

Still the intention has been the same, on the part of Religion's enemies, and no stone has been left unturned in their efforts to blot out Christianity in any and every form. They have sought to overthrow the very foundation of religion. The Bible has been handled by them as though it was the instigator of all manner of crime and corruption. The foul hand of treachery has been laid upon its sacred pages, and by inglorious manipulation, mysteries have been multiplied, and glaring inconsistencies have been made to appear, to the confusion and dismay of the unlettered and unwary believer. While thus operating, peace has quietly taken its departure, and a state of unrest has become the lot of the victim of Infidelity. What has been gained by his abandonment of religion? A pretended or imaginary freedom. An unsettled, vague idea of improbabilities. A life of toil, unsweetened by the bliss that hope inspires. An opportunity to soar high and far in imagination, and excite ambition to stretch itself forth, only to find its issue or goal in the silent grave, over which the wail of friends will be heard for a moment, then lost forever, to find his last service in yielding to corruption and supplying food for worms. This noble being who dared not extend his mission beyond the confines of this present estate, has now reached the issue of his ambition, and left behind him a name that is but a synonym of disquiet and turmoil, when mentioned among those who have been affected by his life.

If the Bible be untrue; if religion be but mere superstition; if the grave be the final goal towards which humanity are hastening; if all hopes of future life and happiness are but the results of superstition and tradition; if death is eternal annihilation; if the grave means an entire obliteration of all that constitutes man, still the Christian is on an equal footing with the Infidel, and can not fail to reap all the benefits derivable through unbelief. If Infidelity be correct in exposing error and proving the Bible a hoax, what have they to offer to meet and supply the demand of man's spirit, when they have succeeded in robbing him of his confidence in God. The Christian has all the liberty to do good, live morally, act justly, and be charitable that the Infidel claims, and if the only additional privilege "Infidelity offers is license to blaspheme Deity, destroy human hope, blast human prospects, and present a mere blank beyond the tomb, then we shrink from making an exchange.

The Christian has nothing to lose though his religion be but the result of superstition, but much to gain, from the fact that this life is made happy and peaceful by his deception, while the bitterness of departure and the gloom of the grave are removed by the aid of this superstitious hope that inspires him. All the benefit and honor of eternal unconsciousness, and all the bliss of infinite nothingness are his in future as much as though he had believed in the idea through life. And if he lives well, his works of charity will live as long and be honored as greatly as the sayings of the Infidel.

No phase of Infidelity seems to afford an atom of compensation for the immense sacrifice it demands, and if Christianity be but a mixture of the absurdities of Paganism, and all its doctrines be more or less false, yet it affords a recompense to its adherents a thousandfold greater than Infidelity possesses, while it guarantees all the future good that Infidels dare hope for.

Another foe of the gospel is found in the system known as Modern Spiritualism. The Christianity of the Bible, and the claims concerning Jesus Christ are repudiated by it. We are informed that Christ was a great reformer, a great medium. Also, that he was as perfect a man as ever lived, even superior to any of whom record has been made. We are again informed that he was a channel through whom spirits of a higher order communicated, and that such communications are to be relied on with greater feelings of security than those coming from intelligences of a lower order; yet we are asked, almost in the same breath, to accept the testimony of spirits who have communicated through channels less pure, notwithstanding the conflict between the two revelations. Jesus Christ and those who were moved upon by the Spirit he promised them, taught that God was a personal being, not a principle. If the spirits speaking through them were of the higher order of intelligences, then their testimonies can not be doubted, until we obtain a clear refutation of them from intelligences proven to be superior to those who have communicated through the acknowledged purest tabernacle on earth. If Christ was a pure medium, then his revelations ought at once to become standards of appeal, and all conflicting testimonies be discarded.

Again, if morality is the best security in an individual, against deception from false or impure, or "lower order" spirits, then Christianity, teaching, as it does, the highest and purest kind of morals, should become necessary to our preservation from deception, and to secure the favor and association of those purer intelligences.

The revelations of Joseph Smith and the Latter Day Saints generally, are spoken of as being but evidences that we are Spiritualists. Still the testimonies given through the medium of the Church are squarely opposed to those of prominent modern Spiritualists concerning leading points of doctrine, and in perfect harmony with those revealed through Jesus Christ, and we conclude that if the gospel inculcates morality of the highest and purest kind, then the testimony of the spirits communicating through its faithful adherents, are to be accepted as reliable, in preference to the others.

We have heard men lie and swear, seen them drink to excess, and yet their "familiar spirit" would follow them and communicate without any reformation being required on the part of the medium, and we have been called upon to endorse the sentiment expressed, though directly antagonistic to what has been revealed through the "greatest of earth's mediums," Jesus Christ. If it be said that these are exceptional cases, then we simply say that the spirit that manifested through the ones referred to, taught precisely the same doctrine or theory as did the spirits that have operated through Spiritualists whose doctrines have been published, or parts thereof; so we conclude that they are linked together, with one object in view, viz., to lead men away from Christianity.

Spiritualism teaches the reality of a future life, and encourages hope in its believers that they will revel amid the beauties and glories of the "summer land," after they leave the body. If there be truth in this according to their explanation of it, and our position in the order of progression hereafter will be determined by the moral tone of our character here, then Christianity affords all the necessary exhortation, counsel, stimulus and help toward a perfectly moral and pure life, and thus secures in the future for us, all the benefits derivable from Spiritualism. Some of the noblest spirits claimed to have communicated through media have been those of men and women who have been Christians, and though they have changed some of their ideas since their departure, yet they have not intimated that their adherence to Christianity robbed them for a moment of their proper sphere, or the sphere that would have been theirs, had they accepted Spiritualism while they were embodied. If the spirits we have heard from have spoken truly, the above is the case, so that the Christian is at least as safe as the Spiritualist. We have become acquainted with scores of men and women who have abandoned the gospel and accepted Spiritualism, and nine out of ten of them have failed to carry the strict morality of Christianity with them. Oaths are common expressions, the saloon is their resort. Their children have suffered from the lack of pious training, and, following the example of their parents, have become loose in their moral carriage, and look upon many things that the morality of Christianity would condemn, as being free from taint, and in no way obnoxious.

Why then shall Saints trouble their minds to change their position, when even the theories of their enemies teach that Christianity prepares man as fully and completely for future bliss as anything they have to offer can.

Spiritualism offers no encouragement that we can not find in the gospel. True, it offers us communications from the dead of our kindred, but can not prove the identity, and even though they were able to do even this, still it has accomplished nothing that is not within the province of the Spirit of God to perform. Where the spirit of true revelation is, there is no limit to its power; and when such information is necessary for the enlightenment or salvation of a living Saint, it can be imparted; but God alone must be the judge as to the propriety or necessity of such communications. There is no fact or truth on earth or in heaven that it cannot reveal; but the time and circumstances connected with such revelations (if at all necessary) must be decided by Him who will be judge of the "quick and dead."

We have listened to many of the astonishing revelations through media, and three-fourths of those within the reach of our skill to judge have prove false, and the balance useless. We have been favored with flattering remarks concerning our natural fitness, &c., for mediumistic communications, but believe, that any power or influence that requires the surrendering of any one's individuality in order to be favored with revelations &c., is our enemy. We are disposed to hold to reason, and reap the benefit of its slow processes of development rather than be ushered into a circle where reason must abdicate in order to allow some subtle power or spirit to flood us with unreliable information. We have watched the influence of Spiritualism upon the body of the medium, and have discovered it to be generally injurious. One medium informed us that he had to leave the country every few months, and free himself from all interference with the matter, or he would die, and that he never acted as a medium without injury. Others coming under our observation, are constantly being prostrated by the wear and tear upon their system.

The spirit of Christianity either in revelation or ordinary invisible operation, never fails to impart health to the body, light to the eye, and joy to the heart. We have been forced to view Spiritualism as an enemy to the gospel, being destructive of its influences, and therefore conclude that, if it offers no greater advantages, here or hereafter, than does Christianity, it is not worth a comparison with the gospel, from the fact of its evident unreliability. We have been directed, led, and encouraged by the Spirit of God as revealed through and in connection with our adherence to Christianity, and have never had reason to doubt its reliability because of failure; therefore we choose to remain, as ever, a firm believer in the truths revealed through Christ and his Apostles, and confirmed within ourselves as long and as often as we have sought to live justly and well.

The above ideas were suggested as being worthy of thought, in the event of the theories referred to as being true, which we have not yet the first reason to believe.

CONTENTMENT.

The human heart yearns for the beautiful in all ranks of life. The beautiful things that God makes are his gift to all alike. I know there are many of the poor who have fine feeling and a keen sense of the beautiful, which rusts out and dies because they are too hard pressed to procure it any gratification.

We publish two extracts from Y Drych, (the Mirror), a Welsh weekly, published by T. J. Griffiths, at Utica, New York, evidently written from Sheridan, Nevada—both of them very favorable to our work, as will be seen:

True and False Mormonism.

Inasmuch as considerable attention is given at present to Mormonism, I believe it not unimportant that the readers of the Mirror should know some little about the five missionaries that arrived in Salt Lake City, on the 22d of November, under the leadership of Joseph Smith, the President of the church known as "Reorganized Mormonism."

The missionaries names are as follows: W. W. Blair, C. Derry, J. Luff, G. E. Deuel and R. J. Anthony, and they are firmly impressed that some evident change will ere long take place, that will purify and enliven Mormonism from every disgusting element. One thing is certain, the branch of Mormons now in authority in Utah can not live, if plurality of wives is abolished. If one of their principles is abolished, the whole system must die; for the reason that they contend that the institution (or organization) is founded upon the revelations from God. And by all appearance they are in pressing trouble; as the authority of the United States will not allow them to practice the many-wife system—so the followers of B. Young must forsake (or abandon) their evil practice, or depart from that land.

But what about the Mormons outside of the Salt Lake Valley, the disciples of Joseph Smith, son of the Prophet Smith, the one that first established the Mormon Church in the year 1830? They being of that number that reside in Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa, who contend that the plurality of wives is a false and pernicious doctrine, instituted by the cunning craft of Brigham Young—contending also against all evil practices of the Salt Lake Mormons, asserting them to be contrary to the teachings of the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Covenants, which contain the laws to govern the Church, and in harmony with the laws of the United States.

After their leader, Joseph Smith, was martyred in Illinois, about 15,000 of the Mormons were scattered like sheep. One branch went to Texas, one to California, others to Minnesota, and the rest to Salt Lake Valley with Brigham Young, except the wisest of them, who tarried (or staid) in Illinois and Wisconsin; and in the year 1860 acknowledged Joseph Smith, Jun., as their President, clinging firmly to the true original principles of pure Mormonism. The church of Mormons throughout the entire world had declared that Joseph Smith, son of the prophet, would eventually come and lead the Church; and so he did in the year 1860. And the first move he made, was the raising of his voice against the principles of the Salt Lake Valley Mormons—declaring at the same time that God had called him to organize the Church, and lead it along, as it was led by, or under the presidency of his father.

And he has sent missionaries every year to Utah, with but little success, according to their intended mission, until the present; for the reason that the followers of Brigham closed the doors of their chapels against them, not permitting them to preach, only in the "Liberal Institute," the only place erected the Gentiles. But now, things begin to look more favorable in their behalf, as the people begin to see that Brigham Young was indeed a false prophet, and that it is their duty to contend for the original principles of Mormonism, or suffer the consequence, the pressure of the country, which will eventually be the destruction of the unhallowed organization of Brigham. By this we have faith that the labors of the last sent missionaries will be successful; and the church of Mormonism will awaken to a true blooming in the city and valley where Brigham reigned so high in pomp and power. Translated by JOHN D. JONES.

"Render to every mind its own judgment,
And to every judgment its fruit."

FALSE AND TRUE MORMONISM.

Mr. Editor:—Many have written from time to time, for and against Mormonism; but it has been difficult for the generality of readers to rightly conclude what is truth, as one party of writers went to excess under the influence of prejudice, and the other party under the influence of hot-headed zeal for religion; and among the one sided parties for Mormonism, we name "Ievan Ddu," who in his great zeal is doing his best to cover the excessive evil workings of B. Young—who presided over the church in Utah, the transgressions and massacres practiced under the cloak of religion. In the face of all this, permit me to write a little in defense of true Mormonism.

There are hundreds, yea, thousands of Mormons who did not follow the leaders to Utah; and did not therefore believe in their degrading doctrine of many wives, etc. Such are the followers of young Joseph Smith, who contend for the doctrines contained in the Book of Mormon, and in the Book of Covenants of the Church, which are the doctrines taught by old Joseph Smith, from the commencement of the organization of the Church in the year 1830, until his death in 1844. There is as much difference between them and the Mormons in Utah as there is between the Christians and Mahomedans, as proven by Schuyler Colfax in the last few years, counseling the Saints in Utah, as he did, to submit to the authoritative laws, condemning their evil workings from their own books, the revelations of Joseph Smith.

The people of Joseph Smith, too, have labored extensively against the evil workings of Utah Mormons, therefore, according, or from their teachings we ought to judge Mormonism.

In answer to "Ievan Ddu," I will say that I know of many that were ruined by emigrating from the old country to Utah; and I know of some of them that were massacred, when trying to return, when beholding the captivity existing there.

This was the way B. Young made his money, and no wonder that he had two millions in the Bank of England, and millions in other places. Living testators to these things can be found among the followers of Joseph Smith, such as escaped from Utah—from the threatening angels of destruction.

I am sorry for "Ievan Ddu" and many others of my fellow countrymen, that now remain in the claws of the ravenous lions of Utah. Let them read the Book of Mormon, and ascertain how God in all ages condemned the plurality of wives, especially with David and Solomon; and let them walk in the perfect law of liberty—the gospel of Jesus Christ.

"Ievan Ddu" tells us it was the Indians murdered the emigrants on the Mountain Meadows, and it was prophesying that Brigham was, when he told them that they would be murdered by the Indians. "Too thin, Ievan." It was easy to prophesy in that way, after sending a banditti of men in Indian costume to commit the massacre. What excuse, think ye, can be given for such works by Brigham and others of the head leaders, who stole so much money to live in filth and harlotism, in the past years?

Do you suppose, "Ievan," this is the true church of the living God on the earth? I acknowledge there are hundreds of honest and innocent people among the Mormons in Utah—and may the day hasten, when they will be fully convinced of the deception of their head leaders—and walk according to the rules of the true church. Yours truly."

Translated by JOHN D. JONES.

Prophecy at a Discount.

THE sudden elevation of Louis Napoleon to imperial power in France in 1851, and his controlling influence in European politics for years afterwards, furnished many Adventist and Millenarian writers and preachers a grand and convenient subject for explaining and fulfilling the prophecies of the Book of Daniel and of the Apocalypse: and the most positive declarations were made by such persons that his entire career was marked out in these prophecies, and that he would certainly fulfill them. Of course, the tragic collapse of Louis Napoleon's power at Sedan in 1870, and his death at Chiselhurst in 1873, dissipated all the predictions made in regard to him, and brought all these modern (prophets) Adventist and Millenarian writers to grief.

One sometimes finds curious things at old bookstores in cities, where all manner of oddities in the way of publications are brought together. I recently glanced over the shelves of an old book-vender, in the "city of Brotherly Love," and noticed a volume entitled "Louis Napoleon," and the "Battle of Armageddon." I quickly examined and bought the book for twenty-five cents—a large discount from its original price. It is a curiosity now, and is not for sale. It is a duodecimo of nearly 400 pages, and is full of the "seven heads and ten horns of the beast." It has eighteen full-sized engravings, and a copiously descriptive title-page, which I present here, for the benefit of your readers.

"Louis Napoleon the Destined Monarch of the World. Foreshown in prophecy to confirm a seven years covenant with the Jews about seven years before the Millennium, and (after the resurrection of saints and ascension of watchful Christians has taken place two years, and from three to five weeks after the covenant) subsequently to become completely supreme over England and America, and all Christendom, and to cause a great persecution of Christians during the latter half of the seven until he finally perishes at the descent of Christ, at the end of the war of Armageddon, about or soon after 1874, including an examination of the views of Bishops Irenaeus; Hippolytus; Victorinus; Primasius; Revs. G. S. Faber; Ed. Irving; E. Bickersteth; T. Birks; C. Maitland; Dr. Seiss; De Burgh; C. Molyneux; J. Kelly; R. A. Purdon; D. McCausland; J. H. Frere; Sir E. Demy; Major Phillips; Judge Strange; Dr. Tregelles, etc. By the Rev. M. Baxter, author of 'The Coming Battle,' 'Coming Wonders,' etc. Phila: Jas. S. Claxton. London: Morgan & Chase. 1867."

Here is a title page, which, for explicit fullness as to what is coming, "leaves nothing to be desired," as the French say. But if the title page is remarkable, as to minuteness and fullness, and otherwise, the "synopsis" of contents, and the contents themselves, are still more remarkable as it were, if that be possible. In the synopsis of chapter first, "scripture proofs," are given that "Louis Napoleon is the destined monarch of the world and the personal anti-Christ." Here are some of them.

"VI. Because, in respect to his name he fulfills the prophecy that the name of the eighth head, or Antichrist, should be in the Greek tongue Apollyon (or Apoleon) and should be numerically to the number 666. (Rev. 9:11; 13:18).

"VII. Because his Grecian extraction, his sphinx-like impenetrability of countenance, his addiction to the practice of Spiritualism, and his deceptive professions of a pacific policy, identify him with the description given of the personal Antichrist in Daniel 8:9-25.

"X. Because the end of this dispensation is shown by ten dates and four septenaries, to be about A. D. 1871-3, and as the personal Antichrist is to be revealed seven years previously by making a covenant with the Jews, therefore, at the present time (1861-2) he must be approaching the time of his manifestation, and no living person corresponds with this character, except Louis Napoleon."

Chapter second sets forth "twenty coming events arranged in the consecutive order in which they are foreshown in prophecy to occur during the final seven years and two and one-half months of this dispensation," that is prior to 1874. These "coming events" are all remarkable, and I will mention a few in the words of the synopsis, as follows:

"The renewal of the Jewish worship and temple sacrifices at Jerusalem." "The complete drying up of the Turkish Empire." "The successful invasion of Egypt by Napoleon." "The coming of Christ in the air; and the resurrection of the deceased saints, and translation; or ascension of the 144,000 wise virgins or man child. War in heaven and expulsion of Satan and his legions; flight of the many saints into the wilderness—the wilderness, very possibly, being some remote region in the United States." "The fall of Babylon, or the transformation of Popery into what may be termed Napoleonism: for the Pope will institute and establish the worship of Napoleon, and his image throughout all the earth." "Division of the old Roman Empire into ten kingdoms, viz: Great Britain, France, Spain, Italy, Austria, Greece, Egypt, Syria, the rest of Turkey, and most probably, Tripoli with Tunis, and the union of ten kings in a congressional confederation under Napoleon."

All these remarkable events, and many others which are too numerous to mention, were to occur before 1874, according to the Rev. M. Baxter, the author of this book, and of others whom he cites. The manner in which they were to occur is also quite minutely set forth, in his book, and scripture texts are cited to prove their correctness. But the time has passed; none of these events have occurred as predicted; Louis Napoleon and his son are in the grave; France is a Republic; the temporal power of the Pope is abolished; and the strongest political power in Europe now is the Protestant Empire of Germany. Here is a lesson which would be well for our Adventist and Millennialist writers to lay to heart. There have been good men in all ages since Christ, who assumed to understand the mysteries of sacred prophecies, and who have predicted the second coming, the millenium, and many other wondrous events accompanying them, all to occur in their own day and generation; yet all their interpretations and predictions have in turn proved false.

Would it not be wise, as well as becoming not to be too confident? The cultivation of a meek and docile spirit on their part would be beneficial: and the negative injunction of the apostle, not to think more highly of themselves than they ought to think. Another lesson from the mistakes of these modern prophets is, that all Christians should wait trustfully and prayerfully the unfolding of Providence and the fulfillment of prophecy in God's own due time and way, without being over anxious or curious to know "the times and the seasons," of future events, "which the Father hath put in his own power," and which Jesus declared to his disciples, just before his ascension from Olivet, it was "not for them to know."

"Judge not the Lord by feeble sense,
But trust him for his grace;
Behind a frowning providence,
He hides a smiling face.

"Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan his work in vain;
God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

Dyspeptics.

WHERE can you find a more wretched object than the confirmed dyspeptic? Life has no charms for him; the simple pleasures of eating and drinking have lost their zest; he views everything through smoke-colored spectacles; he is lachrymose and gloomy. Yet, in most cases, he has only himself to blame for this state of affairs. Who are the people that are always talking about their digestion and dyspepsia? Not sailors, nor agricultural laborers, nor mechanics, nor boys and girls, nor, for the most part, men; in other words, not those who live much in the open air, and use their limbs and muscles. But who are the people who are half afraid of their meals, and have miserably to consider what shall we not eat, and what shall we not drink? They are indoor sort of people—tailors and shoe-makers, milliners, clergymen, literary men, and nervous, fidgety people, who are always worrying themselves. Then there are people that weaken their stomachs by things which they take—not only by too much beer and spirituous drinks, but by living too much on tea, and taking too much tobacco. What can they expect but dyspepsia? If men weaken their stomachs with excessive work when they are tired it is natural that digestion should not go on well.

Mormon.

Dear Herald:—With your permission I wish to say a few words in regard to this much abused and misapplied word, Mormon. It has become a word of reproach almost everywhere, and the Latter Day Saints have so often defended it that many of them gravely assumed the name, and are willing to be designated by it; consequently we see it often in print, and hear it used by members of the Church, as being their proper name.

Now, while I am not offended when others call me a Mormon, I can not adopt the name myself—simply because I am not a Mormon. If I am, I do not know how I became so. If my memory serves me right, when I was baptized it was not in the name of Mormon, but in the name of "The Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost." I was not constituted a Mormon by that act, but adopted into the family of God and took upon me the name of Christ. Mormon had nothing to do with it.

I heartily believe that Mormon was a prophet of God, but does that belief make me a Mormon? Then I am a Moses, an Isaiah, a Jeremiah, an Ezekiel, a Daniel, a Nephi, an Alma, a Moroni, for I believe these and many others were prophets of God. I believe in the doctrine Mormon taught. Does that make me a Mormon? Then I am a Peter, a James, a John and a Paul, for I believe the doctrine they taught. I believe the Book of Mormon is an inspired record. Does this belief constitute me a Mormon? Then I am a Bible, and a Doctrine and Covenants, for I believe they are inspired. I think we are not justified in using this name to designate the church, or a member of it; because it is not true.

In this connection allow me to call your attention to the words of our Lord found in Nephi 12:3:

"And they said unto him, Lord, we will that thou wouldest tell us the name whereby we shall call this church; for there are disputations among the people concerning this matter. And the Lord said unto them, Verily, verily I say unto you, Why is it that the people should murmur and dispute because of this thing? Have they not read the Scriptures, which say, Ye must take upon you the name of Christ, which is my name? for by this name shall ye be called at the last day; and whoso taketh upon him my name, and endureth to the end, the same shall be saved at the last day; therefore whatsoever ye shall do, ye shall do it in my name; therefore ye shall call the church in my name; and ye shall call upon the Father in my name, that he will bless the church for my sake; and how be it my church save it be called by my name? For if a church be called in Moses' name, then it be Moses' church; or if it be called in the name of a man, then it be the church of a man; but if it be called in my name, then it is my church, if it so be that they are built upon my gospel."

By the above we learn that we are forbidden to call the church by a man's name.

"Oh," says one, "we only call it Mormon for convenience. We do not believe it to be the name of the church." That is what sprinkling was introduced for—for convenience. What use has the church for a name if it is not called by that name? It is a dead letter.

Though others may call us by the name of a man, or any other they wish, I think we should hold sacred the name given us, and designate ourselves by no other; nor should we call the doctrine of Christ Mormonism.

The True Gentleman.

"He is above a low act. He can not stoop to commit a fraud. He invades no secret in the keeping of another. He takes selfish advantage of no man's mistakes. He is ashamed of inuendos. He uses no ignoble weapons in controversy. He never stabs in the dark. He is not one thing to a man's face and another to his back. If by accident he comes into possession of his neighbor's counsels, he passes them into instant oblivion. He bears sealed packages without tampering with the wax. Papers not meant for his eye, whether they flutter in at his window, or lie open before him in unregarded exposure, are secret to him. He profanes no privacy of another however the sentry sleeps. Bolts and bars, locks and keys, bonds and securities, notices to trespassers, are not for him. He may be trusted out of sight—near the thinnest partition—anywhere. He buys no office, he sells none, intrigues for none. He would rather fail of his rights than win them through dishonor. He will eat honest bread. He tramples on no sensitive feelings. He insults no man. If he has a rebuke for another, he is straightforward, open and manly. He can not descend to scurrility. Billingsgate does not lie on his track. Of woman, and to her, he speaks with decency and respect. In short, whatever he judges honorable he practices toward everyone. He is not always dressed in broadcloth. 'Some people,' says a distinguished bishop, 'think a gentleman means a man of independent fortune—a man who fares sumptuously every day, a man who need not labor for his daily bread. None of these makes a gentleman—not one of them—nor all of them together. I have known men of the roughest exterior who had been used all their lives to follow the plow and to look after horses, as thorough gentlemen in heart as any nobleman who ever wore a ducal coronet. I mean, I have known them as unselfish, I have known them as truthful, I have known them as sympathizing; and all these qualities go to make what I understand by the term 'a gentleman.'"

"It is a noble privilege which has been sadly prostituted; and what I want to tell you is, that the humblest man who has the coarsest work to do, yet, if his heart be tender, and pure, and true, can be, in the most emphatic sense of the word, 'a gentleman.'"

Philosophy triumphs easily enough over past and future evils, but present evils triumph over philosophy.

The Catholic Apostolic Church.

ANOTHER quotation from the pamphlet will assist to prove the real intentions of the C. A. C., regarding those she designates "Church of Christ": "None can be ignorant of the portentous growth of deep-seated social mischief in all the lands of Christendom. It pauses not; but increases with successive generations, like the torrents of an incoming flood. No sufficient barrier is raised to stem its encroachments."—Page 7, par. 2.

I make no hesitation in believing the truth of the statement. But the question is, Can I, or any one else be brought into any closer relationship with God by entering into the C. A. C. (seeing she is in no better condition spiritually than her prototype), than by remaining where we are? I answer, emphatically, No! Because she can not offer me more than I already have. According to her own testimony, she is a part of that christendom she is animadverting upon, and is in possession of the same spirit, and, therefore, she is not able to stem the encroachments of the "social mischief" she complains of; because she can only operate under the guidance of the like power that influences those she calls her brethren. What has she done towards such a consummation, in the forty-three years of her existence, more than others have done? And forty-three years is the length of life she takes to herself. The issue of pamphlet is 1856. On page 8, par. 6, are these words: "An ample testimony to this returning grace of God was delivered to the clergy and the civil rulers nearly twenty years ago." So if we give the full twenty, up to this year of grace 1879, we have forty-three years for her existence. Should any member of that C. A. C. doubt the accuracy of such a statement, they can see the pamphlet at my house, Alexandra street, Birmingham, any evening. I say she has not done so much to bring about a better state of things in christendom as some of those whom she but copies from. Yet she has the effrontery to say to such, page 5, par. 4: "[Brethren, ministers of God, the more faithful you have been in your charge, the more ready will you be with sorrow to acknowledge how little you have prevailed to carry on the work of God in the hearts of your people." Now, I have mixed with households of every orthodox creed, and I must say, in all truthfulness, I have failed to discover in the households of devotees to the C. A. C. less levity of conduct, in young or old, or more inclination to holiness of life, which should always accompany the indwelling of the Holy Ghost, conveyed through apostolic power, than I have witnessed in those households the members of which are exhorted to enter the C. A. C., because the ministers of those churches of which those households may be communicants of, are incapable of carrying "on the work of God in their hearts." (See above).

I will give another quotation, which is very curious to me; because I do not comprehend whether I should treat it seriously or not; but I will leave all readers to draw their own conclusions. Page 1, par. 1: "To all who profess the faith of Christ, and especially to the Bishops, Priests and Deacons, and as many as exercise rule or ministry in the church of God: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. Brethren."

This endearing epithet, "brethren," was not addressed to any in connection with the C. A. C., but to those outside; therefore, those addressed were, and of course must still be, in the "church of God." Now, as I can not accept any other meaning, from the Pamphleteers, for the term brethren than its scriptural one, we will apply to the author of Christianity himself for a correct definition. Luke 8:21: "My brethren are those which hear the word of God and do it." According to such teaching, true brotherhood consists in unity of purpose, action, and thought. Therefore all the ministry appealed to by the Pamphleteers, as brethren, in order to be such must be one with them, in purpose, action, and thought. That being so, it follows, that if those apostles and their co-workers of the C. A. C. are doing the will of God, those other ministers outside the C. A. C. must be doing so likewise, or they can not be brethren. Therefore to cast the stigma on the work, or labors, of their acknowledged brethren that they have done, i. e., the more faithful they have performed those labors the more abortive have been their endeavors, is, to say the least, very much like accusing their brethren. And in what position those "Angels, Priests, and Deacons"—the endorsers of the pamphlet—will stand before the judgment bar of the eternal Elohim, they may answer, if they will. But to me it appears self-evident, that, if those they acknowledge brethren are in so lamentable a condition, then those accusers can not be in a less lamentable position; seeing the same spirit prompts the accusers that has prompted the accused, in the selection of creeds and doctrines which both parties hold to be the only true principles of salvation.

I have already mentioned the catechism of the C. A. C. We will now quote from it, in order to ascertain how far it is consistent with statements already given. Part III. contains the following:

"Q.—How are Apostles distinguished from all other ministers?"

"A.—Apostles are neither of men, nor by man; but by Jesus Christ and God the Father, sent forth immediately and directly.

"Q.—How are all other ministers set in the church?"

"A.—They are set in the church by our Lord Jesus Christ, not immediately, but through ordination by Apostles, or by those whom they have delegated for that purpose."

Now, do not let us forget the distinction made. Apostles are sent forth without ordination. No other ministers are so sent forth.

A cyclopedia of "Religious Denominations," published by Griffin & Co., of London, Eng., states in the introduction to the article under heading "The Irvingite Church," "The following article has been written at our request, by a gentleman officially connected with them." The pamphlet, on page 9, par. 4, says, "Through the word of the Holy Ghost he [meaning God] designated certain men to be Apostles." The gentleman writer to the cyclopedia is more explicit in relation. He states, "At a meeting for prayer one present was declared, by the word of a prophet, to be an apostle." I think it next to impossible for any earnest thinker on spiritual truths to accept that statement, without some further evidence than is there offered concerning prophetic right. True it is, so declares sacred history, that when God at sundry times reorganized his church on earth the authority to do so came unto those appointed through a prophet; hence the declaration, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." (See Amos 3:7). But all such to be accepted by God, were first appointed by God, through angelic ministrations, and that in such a manner that those so appointed had no need to be ashamed of revealing the manner of such calling, because they had sufficient credentials to warrant them in acting in their sacred office. But no such evidences are offered to the world by those claiming prophetic power in the C. A. C. We investigators have to depend on mere declarations and those declarations, in most instances, running directly counter with scriptural testimony, in regard to God's usual manner of reorganizing his church. In order to ascertain how far correct is the statement concerning the non-ordination of apostles, we will again refer to the catechism. Part I.:

"Q.—How did God the Son redeem mankind?"

"A.—By becoming man."

Much can be written on the folly of this answer, but it is not in my province now to do so. Again, catechism Part III.:

"Q.—How is ordination conferred?"

"A.—Ordination is conferred by the laying on of hands with prayer."

Now let us see how Christ and the catechism agree. Jesus said, while a man on earth, (see John 15:16), "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you." As I prefer to believe Jesus, I am compelled to reject those apostles of the C. A. C., who, according to the pamphlet, are the compilers of the catechism, because they have not received ordination. Therefore, I conclude, they have run before they were sent. I will now ask a question. Did Jesus after he had ascended, and was no longer man, ordain any person? In answer, I say decidedly, No! Example: Paul, when he was called by Jesus, was sent to a human being named Ananias, for advice, and his ordination was performed by man, or through human agency. (See Acts 13:3). Consequently, as no ordination took place when apostles were chosen by the C. A. C., I hold, there was no restoration by God to that church. For, had there been, all would have been in strict conformity with original restorations.

Let me suppose a case; perhaps it may help to make the matter more intelligible to some. Imagine that the only surviving apostle of the C. A. C. lost a gold-cased watch. I found it, and went to the gentleman expressing my wish to restore it to him. I presented him with the brass works only. Do you not think, reader, that the gentleman would ask me if I called such an act restoration? If I were to answer him, Yes, that is what I call restoration; do you not think the gentleman would begin expostulating, in order to show me that I expressed very feebly indeed true restoration by my act? Yet such a kind of restoration is the only one offered to the gaze of the religious world by the C. A. C., notwithstanding its complete opposition to scripture teaching in reference to pure restoration. Isaiah, in speaking of the restoring of the Israel of God, Isa. 1:24, 25, 26, 27, is at variance with the authorities of the C. A. C. Now, admitting that statement in Part III. of the catechism, "That all ministers except apostles are set in the church by apostles; or by some others appointed by those apostles," to be true, then for centuries men who have acted as ministers for Christ have been without possession of the legitimate priesthood of God; because all churches being so long without apostles had not the God-appointed power to ordain. In consequence, when our God shall choose to restore that power on earth, he will do so in the way and manner he has always accomplished such a restoration, namely, through the angels visiting those he has chosen to be his prophets. Not angels of human origin, but heavenly messengers. See Exodus 3; Matt. 1:20-24; Luke 1:11-15. The question may be put, Were Jesus and John prophets? For proof on that head read Luke 24:19; Acts 3:22-26. Also Luke 1:76 and 7:28. We have a positive declaration that when God will restore that which has been lost, it will be by an heavenly messenger. See Rev. 14:6.

We have already quoted the gentleman writer to the encyclopedia in defense of the C. A. C., who said, "At a meeting for prayer one present was declared by the word of a prophet to be an apostle." In what way or manner that prophet obtained his prophetic power he does not state. And all their literature I have read remains entirely silent concerning so important a subject. That gentleman apologist, also states, that in the year 1835 the number of apostles designated amounted to twelve, those twelve apostles withdrew from the world in company with seven prophets. Where those seven prophets received their prophethood from he is likewise silent concerning. Then the gentleman states, that in their retirement they spent twelve months studying the Scriptures, seeking to acquire the knowledge of the fundamental principles by which the C. A. C. was to be edified. What did those twelve apostles learn in that twelve months, from the advise of those seven prophets? We must not forget one important fact, in answering the above question. All true prophets were endowed with the Spirit of God, through which they spoke the mind of God. Therefore, in order that correct information may come to those twelve, through those seven prophets, God must have spoken through those seven. Admitting that, let us read the information that came to the C. A. C. from her apostles and prophets. Pamphlet page 12, par. 3. They were not to add to, nor diminish from, the Catholic creeds that have been held by the Catholic Church in all ages. A vast fund of information, certainly. I will now ask a question of that C. A. C. Were those Catholic creeds in strict conformity with apostolic teaching as contained in holy writ? If they were, that Catholic Church is certainly the church of Christ, which would prove the non-necessity for the C. A. C.

Another very remarkable statement is made by the encyclopedia writer. "At the expiration of their twelve months seclusion they were directed to separate, and distribute themselves over christendom, to deliver a testimony to those set over them, beginning with the Pope." Question: Who set the Pope over those twelve apostles? Because, if it be true that the Pope was set over those apostles, it must have been done in the purpose of God, for the position of head to be at all available in a spiritual sense.

Well then, accepting as truth the statement, the Pope was head of those twelve. Then it can not be true that those twelve were necessary for the ordaining of men to be ministers for God; from the fact, that, they could only be underlings to the Pope, therefore his subordinates; consequently that Pope held precedence in all ordinations of a sacerdotal character. Now, what force can be observed in the boast, "To them [the twelve] the mysteries of God are revealed, and by them communicated to the church. They only are competent authoritatively and certainly, to prove, discern, and give the true meaning of all spiritual utterances," when the Pope was their head? (Cyclopedia p. 5, article on Irvingism).

By way of conclusion, I will state that Gregory XVI. was the ecclesiastical monarch who sat in the Papal chair when those twelve gentlemen commenced their religious peregrinations. Gregory was a scholarly gentleman, and possessed remarkable literary talents. And it is said of him, few men understood human character better than he. Then, how he would receive the testimony of those gentlemen I can only imagine. It occurs to my mind, that if popes deign to laugh, Gregory laughed heartily, when he heard something like the following:

"We are apostles of the Lord. We have been sent forth without ordination, because apostles need no ordaining. And we have come to you as one set over us, to tell you that as a bishop in the church of God you are our brother and head. And for twelve months, in connection with seven prophets of the Lord, we have been studying the Scriptures. We have come to the conclusion that under no circumstances must we alter, or refrain from teaching those catholic creeds that have been professed by the Catholic Church in all ages of the world. Yet we, only, are the link between Christ in heaven and the church on earth. To us the mysteries of God are revealed, and by us communicated to the church. We only have the power, and right, to seal the 144,000 with the seal of the living God." Rev. 7:4. Encyclopedia, p. 5.

What do all the above inconsistencies tend to disclose? To me, either the church of Christ has been perpetuated, or it has been restored in the setting up of that C. A. C. If I accept the first, it will stamp on the escutcheon of the C. A. C., schismatic. Should I accept the second, apostate must be stamped on the escutcheon of the Roman Catholic Church; which would result in the C. A. C. being apostate likewise; because she has framed her constitution on the doctrines of that R. C. C., according to her own testimony. (See catechism). I think it would be well for the C. A. C. to reconcile her manifest absurdities and contradictions, if she be able to do so.

On p. 15 of pamphlet I read, "Mormonism has surpassed Mohamed in fanaticism." Gentlemen of the C. A. C., do you not think it would be better in the future for you to sweep your house, before you hurl your vituperations at the church of the Latter Day Saints. I think it would be much better you should do so.

Readers, I have written nothing but the truth. I have not set down any thing in malice, and I alone stand responsible for what I have written. I am prepared to answer for the same.

Curiosities of Earth.

At the city of Medina, in Italy, and about four miles around it, wherever the earth is dug, when the workmen arrive at a distance of sixty-three feet, they come to a bed of chalk, which they bore with an auger, five feet deep. They then withdraw from the pit before the auger is removed, and upon its extraction the water bursts up through the aperture with great violence, and quickly fills the newly made well, which continues full and is affected neither by rains nor drouth. But what is most remarkable in this operation is the layer of earth as we descend. At the depth of fourteen feet are found the ruins of an ancient city, paved streets, houses, floors and different pieces of mason work. Under this is found a soft, oozy earth, made up of vegetables, and at twenty-six feet large trees, with walnuts still sticking to the stem, and the leaves and branches in a perfect state of preservation. At twenty eight feet deep a soft chalk is found, mixed with a vast quantity of shells, and the bed is eleven feet thick. Under this vegetables are found again.

Pre-Historic Remains in Missouri.

In the eastern portion of Monroe County, Missouri, is a long, high, limestone ridge, lying between the north fork of Salt River and a smaller stream known as Otter Creek. The ridge is not more than two hundred yards wide; but its rocky bluffs, rising precipitously from the water's edge, prevent the commingling of the two streams, which pursue a parallel course for more than a mile, and finally diverge, to unite several miles below, where, with other streams, they form the beautiful Salt River, which flows into the Mississippi.

This ridge is known in the locality as the "Narrows," and its rocky bluffs, rising to the height of two hundred feet, present a bold and picturesque scene. It has long had a local fame on account of the many Indian curiosities found there. Indian mounds are numerous on the rocky ledge, and Indian skulls, arrow heads, flint hammers, and iron and stone hatchets have been found in considerable numbers. Tradition has it that, at an early period in the present century, a battle was here fought between two powerful Indian tribes, which resulted in the loss of most of the warriors of both parties.

A wonderful discovery has recently been made on the narrow ridge—a temple cut in the solid rock, after the manner of the Egyptian temples. It is on the north side of the "Narrows," in the bluff which rises from the edge of the north fork of Salt River. This ridge, on account of its rocky and precipitous nature, is not tillable, and is perhaps the loneliest and most desolate place in Monroe County. It is a resort for lynx, wildcats, foxes, and catamounts. James Waldron, a great lover of sport, went out early one morning for a hunt. He had been out but a short time when his dogs passed him in full chase of some animal, and shortly afterward he heard them baying on the north side of the "Narrows," and apparently deep in the earth. Swinging himself down by the aid of bush and rock and root, he came to a perpendicular cleft in the rock, which seemed to have been formed by some convulsion of nature. Preparing a torch of dry cedar, he entered the cavern which opened out before him. As he proceeded, he was surprised to observe evidences of human labor on every hand, and, pursuing his search, he came to a beautiful arch, passing under which he found himself in a sort of temple.

Such was the story that caused your correspondent to visit that region. Without much difficulty I found Mr. Waldron, the discoverer of the temple, on whose land it is situated. He proposed, as it was late, that I should remain with him during the night and walk over and see the temple in the morning. I assented, and after supper Mr. Waldron brought out some articles that he found in the temple, for my inspection. They were a bronze hatchet or hammer, having an eye and a heavy knob on the hammer portion; a rude bronze lance or arrow head, more than six inches in length; a piece of deer or elk horn, about nine inches in length, from which small branches were given off, and an elliptical piece of bronze, on which was cut in rude manner an imitation of the sun and some alphabetical characters closely resembling the Phœnician.

The next morning, with Mr. Waldron and his two sons, I set out to visit the temple. Our way lay through a low bottom covered with a dense growth of timber. We soon found ourselves before the cleft in the rock, and after lighting a torch we entered. The arch is elliptical, and for gracefulness of curve and beauty of finish, is not excelled by any of the works of the present day. Each stone is of finest granite, polished as smooth as glass, and they sent back reflections of our torches, like polished steel. The springer rests on an entablature, which is placed on the capital of a beautiful column, also hewn from the granite. The keystone of the arch projects from the inferior stones, and seems to have been finished with the view of placing an inscription thereon, but this was never done. Passing under the arch we found ourselves in a room hewn out of solid limestone, 35 feet wide, 50 feet long, 30 feet high, and vaulted to the center, the ceiling being 45 feet from the floor in the middle of the room. At intervals of ten feet are graceful, slender columns of granite, with square bases fantastically carved in imitation of some unknown plant. These shafts, like the shaft supporting the arch, are surmounted by a capital. Upon this rests a heavy entablature of magnesian limestone, which is closely fitted under the roof, and gives the columns the appearance of supporting the ceiling. The acoustic properties of the temple are remarkable. A whisper can be heard from one end of the room to the other. There are twelve columns in the temple, six on each side. Between the columns on each side of the temple, and on each side of the arch or entrance to the temple, are set into the wall blocks of polished gray and black granite; but there is no inscription on any of them. No sculpture of any kind, except the plants mentioned above, has been discovered. At the western portion of the room is a dais, or raised platform of polished limestone, which supports a huge block of granite 5 feet long and 24 inches thick. On this is laid a slab of polished and bevelled granite, smoother than marble. This slab projects over the block beneath it about 6 inches on every side, and is 6 feet long and 3 wide. Evidently this was an altar, for there are ashes scattered around. What was the character of the sacrifice? To the right of the altar is a small ante-room, which you enter through an arched doorway, evidently intended for the priest who attended to the duties of the altar. About this there is nothing destructive. It is not even certain by what means it was shut off from the auditorium. The place is wonderfully dry. The ravages of time have not in the least impaired it, and every portion retains the freshness and glow that it had when it came from the hands of the workmen.

It is undoubtedly one of the great curiosities of the age, and is attracting the attention of archaeologists. An exhaustive report is now being prepared by a committee, which is to be presented to the Historical Society of the State of Missouri. That it will add fresh interest to the study of the civilization that preceded the present Indian tribes of this country seems probable.

A Testimony on Tobacco.

ON looking over the old Heralds I read an article headed, "Watch there, watch!" in Herald of October 1st, 1871, page 584. Please turn and read. While I was reading the part about tobacco, I felt what a vast difference there is in my feelings compared with those when I was in the habit of using the weed. I have had forty years experience in the use of tobacco, and I ought to know something in regard to its effects. Like some others I have sought many ways to excuse myself, but they were frivolous. I have heard some of the old-time Saints, in speaking of the "word of wisdom," say that the brother through whom that word was given said that it was not given for the aged but for the young. Therefore I tried to excuse myself on that ground. Brethren, we all stand or fall by our own acts. Some brother may ask, How did you break off after using it so long. Brother, I did fail several times, or until September 15th, last. I am carrying on a blacksmith shop, and immediately in front of the door there was a nail driven, as a witness between me and my God, one year before that I would not use any more tobacco. You may imagine the number of days in one year, then you may guess how many times that nail gave evidence against me, and on the 15th of last September, while making a fire for breakfast, I threw the filthy weed out of doors, and said, Now for this week I will try and be master, God helping me. Brethren I have conquered so far, and I pray that I may never return to the filthy habit, or like the dog to his vomit, or the sow to her wallowing. Brethren, those of you who are in this filthy habit, please try the experiment and take my word for it that it will not hurt any of you. From a friend,

Hair as an Index of Temperament.

As long, says the author of the "Hair Markets of Europe," as girls will wear as much false hair as that naturally belonging to them, it would be puerile to attempt to read character or disposition in the fashion and character of the locks displayed; but viewed naturally, the hair is as great an index of temperament and disposition as the features. Mr. Creer, in his volume on hair, for instance, quotes the following indications of character founded upon the set and texture of flowing locks from a book recently published in Paris, entitled "Secrets of Beauty:" "Coarse black hair and dark skin signify great power of character, with a tendency to sensuality. Fine black hair and dark skin indicate strength of character along with purity and goodness. Stiff, straight black hair and beard indicate a coarse, strong, rigid, straightforward character. Fine dark brown hair signifies the combination of exquisite sensibilities with great strength of character. Flat, clinging, straight hair, a melancholy but extremely constant character. Harsh, upright hair is the sign of a reticent and sour spirit; a stubborn and harsh character. Coarse red hair indicates powerful animal passions, together with a corresponding strength of character. Auburn hair with florid countenance denotes the highest order of sentiment and intensity of feeling, purity of character, with the highest capacity for enjoyment or suffering. Straight, even, smooth, and glossy hair denotes strength, harmony, and evenness of character, hearty affections, a clear head, and superior talents. Fine, silky, supple hair is the mark of a delicate and sensitive temperament, and speaks in favor of the mind and character.

Women's Treatment of Women.

THERE is a general sentiment that women do not stand by each other, as men do by men; that we are envious, narrow and small, where our sex is concerned; that the greatest obstacles professional women have to overcome are the prejudices of women themselves; that if a woman commits a fault, nobody is so quick and ready to heap opprobrium upon her as another woman. All this is, to a certain extent, unhappily true; but it is by no means generally true. The fashion of women sneering at women is passing into disrepute; so that nowadays, no woman who expects to pass as a well-bred lady, is guilty of the bad taste of speaking disparagingly or slightly of her own sex. Now and then one does it, thinking thereby that she wins the esteem of men by so doing. She can make no greater mistake. Men admire large mindedness and large-heartedness in women, quite as much as women admire those qualities in men. The more strongly and loyally women stand by one another, the more respectfully they treat and speak of one another, the more women honor women, have faith in women, the better for us, the more credit to us. We can not expect men to honor and revere us, unless we ourselves honor and revere our own sex.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THERE are no changes made in the credits on the mailing lists of the HERALD and HOPE this issue. Those who have sent money by mail, or by the hand of any one coming to General Conference, will see that their credits are made in May 1st issue. Those not seeing their credits, will wait till May issue before becoming uneasy.

There seems to be a pretty general revival of business throughout all the states; almost every branch of trade, traffic and labor coming in for its specific share of increase. The HERALD is feeling this increase of activity in many ways, the two most striking of which are the rise in material and the increase of subscription lists; the former pinches us considerably, the latter we can bear a great deal of without suffering, or complaining. Our paper is costing several cents more per pound than before the revival of business; but while prices have raised, the same revival has helped the brethren so that they have been better able to pay their subscriptions; and buy the books of the Church—which all Saints ought to read and be familiar with.

We want a few more to subscribe—a few more and the long desired goal—a weekly HERALD will be reached. All in good time, send them in.

The War Cry, Shield of Faith and Christian Herald, reach us from England tolerably regularly, sent by some good friends to the cause over there. The War Cry, is evidently a spicy journal on conversion; the regular shouting sort of conversion. Its temperance articles are quite good. The Shield of Faith makes good defence against infidelity, in an article by J. McGregor Allan, called "Mr. Adams and Mr. Gladstone."

Bro. C. A. Hall, Burlington, Iowa, writes very encouragingly of his hopes and the prospects for great and noble enterprise offered in the gospel of peace.

Send letters for Herald Office affairs to Joseph Smith, Business Manager, Box 50, Plano, Illinois. All moneys and communications for the Bishopric, send to I. L. Rogers, Sandwich, or H. A. Stebbins, Box 50, Plano. Don't write a long letter, and at the end put in a business matter; write business on a separate sheet from an epistle to us or the HERALD. No attention, whatever, will be paid to unsigned letters, or cards, questions or otherwise.

Bro. Joseph Luff, wrote from Salt Lake, March 23rd, that he had succeeded in starting some excitement at Sandy—was to return there soon by invitation.

Bro. M. H. Bond sends us a Cadillac paper, of a late date, containing an article nearly four columns long, in defence of the position occupied by us as a people, on the subject of the Book of Mormon. It is a strong article and was written by Bro. Bond, resident at Cadillac.

Bro. W. W. Blair walked into the sanctum, March 31st, well and hearty. He reports well of the outlook in Utah for the work of the Reorganization.

A sister in Florida, whose father is in the Utah Church, sends us a letter that she received from him. In it he harshly reproves her and her husband for joining and holding to the Reorganized Church; and for not living with him and his in Utah. He is in no ways gentle and fatherly in his words, but to the contrary, says that his daughter is an "instrument in the hands of the devil" in promulgating "that damnable heresy," and assures her that while he and those who hold with him will be happy in the eternal world, she and those with her, will be "weltering for ages," that is in eternal torment, unless they repent. That is no good spirit to have and the end of the whole matter will prove entirely different from this apparently wished for result. But we wish, with our sister, that her father may see the true light and yet have the Spirit of God. She says that the above expressions of his hurt her sorely, coming from one holding such near relationship to her; and she thinks that such manifestations of hatred by the Utah people towards the Reorganized Church ought to prove to all who may see these evidences from time to time, the fact of the wide difference between the faith of the true Latter Day Saints and that of those who have so "largely departed from the original teachings of the Church under the first Joseph and now under his son, our present president, the legal successor of his father. Yes, these facts of difference, now so fully established by the court in the Kirtland Temple suit, and the spirit manifested by the people in Utah as evinced not by this letter alone, but by untold numbers of letters and speeches and acts, ought to satisfy a very great many who have before declared us all one.

Bro. J. M. Wait wrote from Binghamton, Wisconsin, March 16th, that he continues to labor in the gospel, preaching every Sunday, several miles from home. He bears testimony to the work being divine. Many of the Saints have left there and most of the others are going, all bound for Iowa and Missouri. May Bro. Wait continue faithful, and be favored and blessed of God unto the end of his days.

Sister Mollie Case, Blue Rapids, Kansas, mentions having been a member of another Church for five years at Keokuk, Iowa; but last December she visited Kansas, and there heard the Saints preaching and teaching. She then found that they held the fullness of the gospel, and she also saw the sick raised to perfect health, by God's power, through faith. Hence she was baptized February 23rd last, and rejoices in the truth. She is an orphan, but trusts in God to be cared for by Him, and by his providence.

We are in receipt of a sample copy of the Anti-Polygamy Standard, a paper lately started in Salt Lake in the interest of the Anti-polygamous theory there. It seems to be well gotten up, and is published by the "Anti-polygamous Society of Utah."

Bro. J. X. Davis mentions the good conference held in the Des Moines District, Iowa, in March. Bro. Lake preached some effective sermons during it.

Tracts in the German language, may be obtained of Bro. Ad Richter, Burlington, Iowa. These tracts have been published by the German brotherhood at Burlington, Iowa, and Stewartsville, Missouri, out of funds created by them by consecration.

Bro. J. A. Carpenter of Mill Creek Branch, Michigan, says that they are but few in number, but they rejoice in knowing the truth and in God's goodness, and they try to live right. Much prejudice and bigotry exist around them, but they still live and hope to save such honest ones as God may send. Bro. Carpenter presides, and also preaches around about.

Bro. E. C. Brand wrote from Union Fort, Utah, March 24th, and was next to stop at Cheyenne and preach the 28th, then east to Tabor, Iowa, and to the General Conference here at Plano.

We thank the following brethren for papers received: Brn. E. C. Brand and John Eames for copies of the Cheyenne Sun, Wyoming; Wm. Harris for Plymouth Star, Pennsylvania; Thomas Henning for Irish World.

Bro. W. H. Brewer, of Kinmundy, Marion county, Illinois, gives an account of his conversion to the true faith. Before Brn. I. A. Morris and I. M. Smith came there in June, 1879, he thought the Saints were a very bad people, but he went to hear them preach and finally took them to his house, and conversed, and also investigated their teachings by the Scriptures. The consequence was that the more he read the more he became convinced, but it was hard for him to believe the Book of Mormon and that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and he thought as he had once been baptized by immersion and said to be for the remission of sins that he would never go through the ceremony again. It was also hard for him to believe in the power to heal being administered of God in these days; and also he stumbled over the Salt Lake apostasy, and its evils; but he began to argue in the congregation he belonged to, and then he asked their minister if he was called to preach, and he (the minister) said that he was not. This settled Bro. Brewer's mind so far as authority was concerned; but he still doubted, yet continued his searchings for truth, and, having a dream that convinced him of God's power to heal, he sought for those having authority, and going to the South-eastern Illinois conference, March 20th, he felt the Spirit of the Lord present and was baptized the 21st, so that his trials on those points are over, he says. They hope to organize a branch at Kinmundy, as Bro. Hilliard here at General Conference also informs us. They have much opposition to face and the school houses are locked against them, but they are all filled with joy, as in the early apostles' days, because of the truth and of God's Spirit testifying to their souls of his truth, and they hope that numbers of honest ones around them will yet obey God's word, and so do we pray with them that it may be.

In Chicago the interest in the meetings and the sermons by Bro. Forscutt has been steadily increasing during the three months that he has been there, and the hall he uses is now filled to its capacity, while the discussions and disputations, as Bro. Mark says, show the depth of feeling and how the work has taken hold. Some are convicted by the truth while others withstand it and act the pleasure of the enemy of souls thereby. It is hoped that a good harvest of precious souls will yet be gathered there into the kingdom of God.

Bro. Jobe Brown wrote, March 31st, from Clinton, Iowa. He had been at Maquoketa, and delivered some lectures to interested congregations.

Bro. J. S. Christie says that the opportunities for preaching by our ministers were never better than now. Bro. Christie held one discussion with a Methodist minister the past winter and did other gospel work.

Bro. Edwin Lowe writes of the good labors of Bro. Ruby in the Butternut Grove Branch, Iowa, recently. He says: "He seems to be the man for this place. He is liked by all and is never idle. May God bless him in his labors." Two were baptized and the prospects are good for more, if Bro. Ruby can return and stay long enough to finish the work.

Bro. E. M. Reynolds, of Sac county, Iowa, (Camp Creek Branch) says that they meet every Sunday for prayer and testimony, and feel that they are growing spiritually by God's grace. Some are baptized occasionally. Bro. Reynolds would like information concerning William or David Allison who lived in Hancock or Adams county, Illinois, thirty or more years ago. If any can give such, please address Bro. R. at Grant City, Iowa. The notes of the sermon of Bro. Joseph Smith's that he inquires about were not in shape to correctly give the sermon and hence were not published. Bro. Reynolds adds that Brn. Pett, Whiting and Wedlock have visited and preached to them some the past winter, doing them good in that branch. Bro. B. Salisbury was also there.

Bro. W. N. Dawson sends a San Francisco Bulletin, containing a copy of the Chicago telegram concerning the decision on the Kirtland Temple suit. It says that the "non polygamist" Josephites are recognized as the "true Mormons" thereby. Bro. Dawson also sends a Wasp, a paper that aims at the follies, weaknesses and sins of the day, and is none too moral itself, we judge. It has a good thing however in the large picture representing "Uncle Sam" standing with his pincers ready to draw the troublesome tooth polygamy from the swollen face and bandaged head of a woman labelled "Utah Territory." He looks very determined and in earnest.

Bro. Edward Delong, of Reese Branch, Tuscola county, Michigan, gives an account of his labors during February and March. He was part of the time with Bro. Robert Davis. At Guilford they baptized six in March, making fifteen there now, but organized no branch. Bro. Delong feels that they in Tuscola county are, as it were, away in one corner, especially as they did not have the anticipated visit from Brn. Kelley and Scott, when these brethren were in Eastern Michigan last season. Probably, however they intend to make up all that when they come among those branches again. Bro. Delong feels impressed to do steady work in the Lord's vineyard, and hopes to be at it ere long. He desires the salvation of men; and, instead of being discouraged by the smallness of the number who receive the truth, he is all the more desirous of sowing the seed that will add a few to that number. That is a good thought, and worthy of emulation is the resolve to so labor. Bro. Delong says that Bro. Davis is now having unusual good health, which we are glad of, as last year he seemed nearly at the end of his active labors. His daughter, (living near Detroit), was very ill early in March, and these brethren went on call, to her, and, through God's providence, she was raised up.

Bro. J. M. Terry wrote March 24th, saying that he was laboring in Grundy county, Missouri, an entire new field, but where he finds the people very anxious to hear, and his meetings are largely attended, with calls coming from places around about, which he has not yet been able to reach.

Sister Eliza E. Mitchell, clerk of the Gainesville Branch, Florida, says that the good spirit, the Spirit of God abides with them, though their numbers are few by reason of the removal of so many. Yes, they may enjoy the Spirit just as much, if they do not slacken their zeal, though there is a pleasure in having more in number to worship with and dwell among, providing such be both true worshippers and good neighbors in the bonds of peace and love. May Sr. Mitchell and all in the faith there be cheered both by the voice of the hoped for missionary and by that of the Comforter.

A brother writes, on March 29th, quite interestingly upon the subject of all things common, or the equality of the Saints. He is impressed that some steps should be taken in this direction.

Bro. B. J. Scott of the new branch (Pleasant Ridge) in Ellsworth county, Kansas, writes that they are among the wolves, those who hate them for the gospel's sake and they need an Elder in that field to continue the work begun by Brn. A. Kent and H. R. Harder the past winter. Can any one from the North-western Kansas District go and minister to them? We have no one to send.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—It is conceded that the presiding officer of a deliberative assembly, or fellowship meeting holds control of such during their sittings. When such presiding officer invites the Elders to preach, has the said presiding officer the same control over the one invited to preach; to-wit, that he may declare remarks made in preaching out of order, or is the one preaching by invitation free and untrammelled to speak as he may be led by the Spirit, subject only to the general discipline of the Church?

Ans.—The proper rule would be that the speaker is free to follow the dictates of the Spirit; and for errors, unless glaringly opposed to the declared faith of the Church, he should be inquired of by the presiding Elder after the meeting is dismissed. Courtesy demands that one invited to speak should feel free from trammels, other than the rules of the church and faith. It would be useless to invite a man of spirit to subject himself to a liability to be publicly humiliated for a real or fancied departure from a rule existing in the mind of the presiding Elder unexpressed.

A colored brother who was considered too pompous and too voluminous in his prayer meeting exhortations was remonstrated with on account of his many inconsistencies. The official who administered the rebuke reminded him of the many sins he had committed and the disgrace he had brought upon the cause of religion by his frequent lapses into immorality. But the erring brother responded: "Yes, boss; I owns squar up; I'se done broke every one ob de commandments, but, bress be Lord I'se nebber lost my religion." This shining light was permitted to continue to blaze forth in prayer meeting with his wonted brilliancy.

A man's virtues should be measured, not by his occasional exertions, but by the doings of his ordinary life.

News Summary.

March 23d.—During the past five years, according to the figures collected by the Insurance Chronicle, over three hundred and fifty-three million dollars worth of property in the United States was destroyed by fire. In 1875 the loss was upwards of seventy-eight millions; in 1876 the loss was over sixty-four millions; in 1877 over sixty-eight millions; in 1878 over sixty-four millions, and in 1879 upwards of seventy-six millions of dollars was destroyed. Upwards of fifty-five thousand fires occurred during the five years named.—Among the kinds of buildings destroyed in 1879, we notice 90 church buildings, 58 school-houses, 384 hotels, 170 flouring and 77 grist-mills, 218 saw-mills, 30 woolen mills, 26 cotton mills, 83 furniture-factories, 67 railroad depots, 13 court-houses, 223 drug stores, 481 grocery stores, 234 liquor stores and saloons, 49 tobacco factories and store houses, 42 breweries, 30 billiard saloons, 111 blacksmith and 103 carpenter shops, 33 cooper shops, 104 wagon and carriage factories, 84 grain elevators and ware houses, 65 lumber yards, 70 iron founderies, 86 planing mills, besides lesser numbers of a great many other kinds of buildings and manufactories.

Mr. Francis Peek is the author of an article in the Fortnightly Review for February on the "Agricultural Prospects of England, Canada and the United States." He deplors the fact "that it was necessary to import 18,000,000 quarters of foreign wheat, at a probable cost of $230,000,000, to supply the deficiency of home produce. It is not pleasant," he says, "to contemplate this enormous sum of money drawn from home enterprise and the comforts of the English people to enrich other communities, especially the United States." This outflow of $230,000,000 Mr. Peek attributes partly to the want of proper relations between landlord and tenant in England. During the month of June, 1879, owing to the rapacity of the land-owners, who in this matter are certainly pursuing a suicidal policy, there was "a reduction of nearly 2,000 in the number of occupiers of land owing to so many farms having been thrown upon the hands of their owners," who wanted the farmers to continue paying high rents in a year of bad harvests, financial depression and unprepared for and unprecedented competition with the non-rent-paying American farmer. "During each of the latter months of 1879, between 500 and 600 farmers executed bills of sale as against an average of 80 for the years 1870-'73." Thus there were drawn from the pursuit of agriculture in England during the month of June last year 2,000, and, later, 600 families per month. Sheep and oxen will take the place of human beings, as they have done in Ireland, or the unoccupied farms may become game preserves, like the County of Sutherland, in Scotland, which has been cleared of its people that the Duke who takes his name from the shire might entertain his friends, the nobility and gentry.

Strikes of workmen are in vogue in all parts of the United States and in some places in Canada.

Many correspondents picture the continued distress in Ireland, many thousands being still in dire want and needing both food and clothing, but more especially now in the mountain regions, the measure for relief having availed for most of those the easiest reached.

After several weeks of comparative quiet in San Francisco, it now appears that all efforts to reach a satisfactory understanding between the representatives of the mercantile interests and those of the working men have resulted in complete failure. While there is no indication of immediate trouble, there is yet a feeling of feverishness among all classes, caused by the existing uncertainty and fear of some overt act on the part of the extremists.

25th.—The entire business portion of Samana, Island of San Domingo, was burned on the 9th inst. Many acres of buildings were destroyed; loss estimated at one million five hundred thousand dollars. Earthquakes were felt, Feb. 22d, in Yokohama and Tokio, Japan. Many houses were destroyed, but no lives were lost. A state of terror existed.

The Bonapartists are again manifesting themselves in Paris, France, and convening meetings among the artizans to show the evils of the Republican Government over that nation.

29th.—It is thought that the French Government will have serious trouble over the matter of enforcing the laws against the Jesuits and other societies.

The Chilian army has occupied another Peruvian city, and Arica has been bombarded by them for three days, much damage being done.

The Ute Indians have left Washington for Colorado, and they seem well satisfied to give up their Colorado reservation for the fifty thousand dollars annually that the Government proposes to pay them. However about this matter there is much opposition to this plan in Congress, and hence the supposed arrangement by the Secretary of the interior may fall to the ground.

There is more prospect of peace in San Francisco. Mayor Kallou is disposed to cooperate with the Citizens' Protective Union for the preservation of good order and the prevention of disturbance.

30th.—The Russians are discussing the possibility of a war with China.

The French government has issued a decree against the Jesuits and other unauthorized societies, and gives them three months to close their establishments. In Austria, also, a ministerial crisis is threatened, and the cabinet may have to be reconstructed.

It cost Spain $9,000,000 in money during the month of March to fight the Cuban rebels, and yet the revolution is not ended; that is, if highway robbery and general outlawry can be called a revolution.

The drought which has prevailed for over three months in the most fertile portions of Cuba has done immense damage. The tobacco crop in Vuelta Abajo is almost destroyed, and the plantations are unusually exposed to fire. Luckily the fires have been comparatively few. The wood on about 2,000 acres of land near South Amboy, N. J., was burned down yesterday. The fire was originated by a spark from a locomotive on the Pennsylvania Railroad. ## Correspondence.

ELKADER, IOWA, March 21st, 1880.

Joseph:—

"The latter-day gospel, preached by the Spirit.
Cuts like a keen, two-edged sword;
While all who believe and obey it
Are saved by the hearing of the word."

During my sojourn in this part of the Lord's vineyard, I have preached the word in the following places: Once at Manona, occupying the Presbyterian meeting house of that place; three times at the Stiner school house; four times at the Pleasant Grove school house; four times at the High Prairie school house; five times at the Cox Creek school house; three times at the Hampton school house; three times at the school house at Little York; three times at a place called Forestville; three times at a place called Greeley, occupying the Universalist Church at that place; also preached two discourses at Strawberry Point, having the free use of the Universalist Church of that place, a town of 2,000 inhabitants; also preached two discourses at a neighboring school known as the Stalnazer school house. I have also spoken on several occasions in the Universalist Church at Elkader, and in the adjoining neighboring school houses.

The most of the places named above are from eight to thirty miles from my place of residence. The vast amount of prejudice that has been removed in this field of my labors may be known by the increasing receipts of invitations from all parts of the country, saying, "Come over and help us." Such, then, is the "Macedonian cry." I also preached eight discourses at a little town called National, occupying a Disciple Church, a class of people known by their peculiar faith as Campbellites. I have pleasure in informing my friends and all whom it my concern that I have been so far removed from the treacherous meddlings of Brighamism and apostate Brighamite Mormons, that I have enjoyed a season of peace and quietude seldom experienced in many other places, where I have labored to preach the gospel to the people; and I trust that I have, by the help of the good Lord, made friends to the faith we preach; many of whom, when the proper time comes, will be gathered into the fold.

For this winter, matters have moved rather slow, as I have been confined within doors on account of poor health; have only preached once and that a funeral discourse on the death of one of my neighbors.

Times are very hard with me just now; my farming resources have been so much cut off, for the few years passed by the chinch bug and drought, that I have realized no surplus of means; only what necessity demands for the immediate support of my family. I have tried to sell out, that I might locate in some more favorable spot of earth; but there is no sale for property here, and I must wait the Lord's time. As I feel now, I shall regret much if I can not get to the Conference this spring.

I am yours in hopes of better days to come,
WM. B. SMITH.

SAVANNAH, Wayne Co., N. Y.,

February 25th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—In the year 1835 there came into this town a number of Latter Day Saint Elders, and among them was Jedediah M. Grant and Harvey Stanley. They preached in this region, and quite a number joined the Latter Day Saints. Among that number were my father, my mother, two of my sisters, and one brother, also a number of my neighbors. The cry by many of the people against these Latter Day Saint Elders was very bitter; crying, "delusion," "false prophets," "false teachers," and trying to make the people believe that they were really false teachers. I attended several meetings and believed their teaching; for it was bible truth. One day when I was laboring in my lot there came one of these Elders and asked me if I did not wish to join the Latter Day Saints. He said, "Your father and mother, brother and sisters are rejoicing in the Lord." He thought that I ought to go with them. I replied that I believed the doctrine with all my heart, and that I would be baptized. I was baptized by Harvey Stanley.

At the meeting that evening I was confirmed by the laying on of hands by the Elders, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Many assembled to see and hear what these false teachers and false prophets, as they called them, had to say. I made up my mind that evening to ask the Lord for the truth of the Book of Mormon, and, before retiring to bed, I knelt down and prayed to the Lord to show me the truth of the book. Then the Lord by his Spirit said to me, "The Book of Mormon is true; do not doubt, but be believing." The glory of the Lord shone round about me. O, the peace, the joy that rested upon me, no tongue can express. O, ye doubting Saints, ye that doubt the Book of Mormon, kneel down and ask your God in faith in the name of Jesus Christ and he will show to you the truth of it.

Your brother in Christ,

JESSE SEELYE.

TABOR, Fremont Co., Iowa,
March 9th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph.—The Church in these parts has partaken, in common with all the rest, of the spirit slumbering, which is nothing more than we would naturally expect, when we consider the scattered condition in which we are placed, but we occasionally have a treat in spiritual food. On the 20th and 21st of February we had one of the best conferences ever held in our district, according to my judgment. Bro. Z. H. Gurley preached on Sabbath, 11 o'clock, from Isaiah 9:6-7, setting forth the mission of Christ to the race showing his infinite wisdom in providing the means by which his followers may be elevated to a very high plane of existence.

In the afternoon Elder J. R. Badham preached from John 17:3, and in the evening Elder Gurley again treated us with a stirring discourse on political and religious liberty.

On the 7th ultimo, our aged father, Wheeler Baldwin, gave us a discourse on the vices of youth, showing forth the grades of life, youth, manhood and old age. His text was Eccl. 11:9-10. This was his eighty-seventh birth day, and he still retains his strength of mind to a remarkable extent.

Your brother in Christ,

WILLARD GRIFFITH.

DELOIT, Crawford Co., Iowa,
March 1st, 1880.

Dear Herald.—I arrived at Pilot Rock, Cherokee county, Iowa. There I did my first preaching after ordination. Bro. Goff and I visited this place last winter. They, being apprised of our coming, were out in full force, and there seemed to be a good spirit manifest. After about ten days' labor we baptized fifteen, in a measure the result of the consistent lives of the members and officers. This winter, I am sorry to say, the feeling was not so good; resulting from a lack of understanding among the officers in regard to duty. O, that Church officers would get the books that teach in plainness their duties. The Apostle mentions the officers which God set in the Church, but does not define their several duties; but God, in the restoration of the gospel, has given them in plainness. Therefore the necessity of obtaining the books and studying them. When I left there was a better feeling among officers, and a determination to try and do their duties. Held two meetings near there; attendance mostly Catholic, but one said after meeting that it sounded like the true gospel. Returned with Bro. Wedlock to his house. We then went a few miles east to the Diamond school house. While there found a couple of old-time Saints, by name of Dowding. They knew nothing about the Reorganization, but the old lady said, while tears run down her cheeks, that nothing would turn her from Mormonism, as she termed it. Held three meetings with good liberty. A revival meeting precluded any further efforts. The Methodist class leader told us that we could do good if we would stay, as there was quite an interest he thought. We started for Fonda, Pochontas county, with no special business only to see Bro. E. C. Brown, for we intended to go to Camp Creek, Calhoun county. Met Bro. Brown, as we drove into Fonda. He said that he never was as glad to see any one in his life; he had just received two letters asking him to come and preach. He had written for help and prayed for it, and believed we had come in answer to prayer. Next morning he sent an appointment to a settlement twenty-seven miles from Fonda and twenty-five miles from Fort Dodge, for Friday night. In the mean time we went five miles from Fonda and held two meetings in the Chase school house, where Bro. Lambert preached last summer and baptized one. We met a good people, anxious to hear; very different I learn from what it was when Bro. Lambert first went there. They now speak very highly of him. I think much good will result from further labor there.

Friday we started for our north-east appointment; rode across a bleak twenty-seven mile prairie. On arriving, we drove to Mr. VanAlstine's, a wealthy farmer and stock raiser, who kindly cared for us. This gentleman, I think, makes no profession of religion, but is a very kind man, and, I should judge, one of the free-thinkers. With an estimable wife, obedient children, and things comfortable around him, there seems to be nothing in the way of his happiness so far as this life is concerned. We might visit others in the neighborhood, he said, but we must remember that his house was our home. When the final account is made up, and men are rewarded for the good they have done, may he receive his reward, which promise the Lord has made.

I accompanied Bro. Brown, in calling on some neighbors. Bro. Brown once lived there for number of years, and is well known and respected in the community. We called on Mr. Carlson, not yet a member, but he seems like a brother; and he so calls us. Brethren Salisbury and Carroll of Calhoun county, had preceded us about three weeks and held some meetings awakening quite an interest. When we entered the stone school house, we noticed particularly the example of cleanliness which Mr. Waite, the teacher, set before the people as well as teaching the rudiments of book-learning. The congregation was quite large for that country. We enjoyed good liberty. They listened attentively. We held in all five meetings. Can say we were greatly blessed of the Master. On Sunday the school teacher and some of the neighbors went to Mr. Carlson's for dinner. I do not know that I was ever at a pleasanter meeting, as we talked and sang nearly the whole afternoon; in fact until I thought I would be too hoarse to preach at night, but the Lord gave me strength in proportion to the task to be performed.

On Monday night preached on the great Christian apostasy and the restoration of the gospel. After meeting was dismissed this Mr. Carlson said openly that there was one of two things for him to do, either to accept this work or to turn infidel; and the latter he could not do. This man is a Swede, was educated for the Baptist ministry, preached and baptized some in the old country; speaks English very well.

I must not omit to mention the kindness shown and the interest manifested in the truth by the families of Messrs. Freeman and Chatfield, who expressed desires to see a branch organized there. Since my arrival home have received two letters from there. Their preachers have been after them: one spoke openly against us. But brother Carlson (for so he seems to me) stood up and nobly defended the truth. I hope to see the time when he will be baptized and ordained an Elder to preach to his own countrymen. These of whom I have spoken are now holding meetings from house to house for prayer. May God bless them. They offer to pay expenses if I will come back again; I expect to go or have some one go, after our district conference, which convenes March 12th.

From Fonda came to Camp Creek, and held three meetings. Then went five miles north-east, leaving Bro. Wedlock to fill an appointment in the branch, and there I preached twice. At night the house packed with earnest listeners. A man who belongs to the Christian order came to me after meeting, "They say you are Mormons." "We are some times so termed, but our title is the Church of Latter Day Saints." He said that what we taught was the doctrine he believed. The subject was "The baptism of the Holy Ghost and its effect upon the human mind," with the unchangeability of God's character. Here, as in every other place, they treated us kindly and wanted us to come again. I pray that the Lord of the harvest will send more laborers into the field.

Next day, February 16th, I returned home to find all well after an absence of just one month. The brethren at home had looked after my interests while I was absent.

Yours for Christ,

WORDEN WHITTING.

EDENVILLE, IOWA,

March 16th, 1880.

Bro. Lake and I left Poweshiek county, March 8th. Our meetings were well attended and we had the pleasure of seeing Bro. Goreham lead eight into the waters of baptism on the 7th inst. Bro. Lake is holding meetings three miles west of Edenville. He baptized one young lady on the 14th, and more are believing. Will commence meeting in Edenville on the 19th, and continue for near a week, when will attend conference at Newton on the 27th and 28th. Bro. Lake is feeling well and leaving a lasting impression behind. We were attacked by one editor in Poweshiek county, which we took the liberty to examine through the press, and have stirred up quite "a fuss." He proposes to examine the "Mormon apostles" in his next issue. We hope the liberty will be granted for our defense.

Yours,

I. N. WHITE.

Bro. Henry A. Stebbins.—Truly the Lord has blessed my labors in this part of the land. I have baptized ten since December 28th, 1879, and there are others that are almost ready to obey. The Lord is moving upon the hearts of the people. In Coloma they sent for me and furnished a hall, where the gospel was never preached before. I had good liberty and a full house. I thank my heavenly Father that he has opened the way for his servants and prepared the hearts of the people to receive the gospel. When I came here I found a home at Sister Plumtree's, who is a Saint indeed. She had not partaken of the Sacrament for seventeen or eighteen years, but was strong in the faith. Four more sisters were baptized about eighteen months ago, who never heard a sermon preached. Sister Plumtree gave out tracts and books and had them ready for the water, so when Bro. J. R. Cook came they were baptized. Her husband is one of the noblest men of earth, although he is not a member, and his house is a home for the Elders. I pray the Lord to bless him, and hope that he will obey the gospel, with all the honest in heart.

Your brother,

THOS. DALEY.

OENAVILLE, Bell Co., Texas,

March 1st, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry.—I left home early in January and went into Hill county. I preached twice on the railroad, and stopped near Towash, at a Sister Carroll's. There I delivered five discourses. I was blessed with fair liberty. I baptized one, a Mrs. Kelley in Bosque county. I returned to my home, but started out again on February 4th. Stopped at a place in Limestone county, and preached four discourses. It was a new place, but I left a good impression. Thence went to Thornton and preached twice at Bro. Sands. The school house was refused us. Thence by rail to Kosse, where I preached twice, this time in a public hall; tendered through the favor of a Mr. Dillard, a gentleman of influence in the place. The Methodist house at that place was closed against us. From Kosse to Bremond, and was received kindly by some old friends, and preached three times. I feel that my efforts there were not without effect. Thence to Bro. Belcher's, near Harnes Station where I preached seven times. At that place February 22nd, I baptized and confirmed Wm. W. Vancleave, Samuel R. Hay and Amanda Bryant, all of Robertson county. I also blessed fifteen children. On the 23rd I organized a branch named the Texas Central Branch. Bro. Belcher I ordained an Elder and Bro. Varner a Priest. Bro. Wm. Vancleave was chosen as clerk. I left the Saints rejoicing. I went to Gange Station, where for two nights I preached. I asked if it was desired that I should return and preach again, and every one present, except the Methodist preacher, arose to their feet.

I am at home again considerably fatigued, but feeling considerably encouraged. I want you to pray for me, brethren, and for all the Saints here. We need a preacher here. How we regret Bro. Bays' departure! Yours in the gospel bonds,
H. L. THOMPSON

PAROWAN, Utah,

February 23d, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—My prayers that the hunters of Israel might find us have been fulfilled. This makes me think that the Lord has not entirely forsaken us. On January 24th Bro. Gordon E. Deuel came and preached to us nine times, and left on February 3rd. Notwithstanding it was stormy and cold, there was a few came out to hear, and it seemed that the spirit of his mission was upon him. It is no wonder the Elders call this a hard place to labor, for if I ever beheld a mob spirit in the early days of the Church, the same is manifest among this people; I believe if they dared they would murder the Elders. As one bishop said, "If Jesus Christ would come down and preach to him he would not believe any different from what he did then." Thus you see the determined spirit against the truth. It is like casting pearls before swine for an Elder to preach to such people, until the Lord shall prepare the way. But that their sins be not found upon our garments, we must keep trying until Lord shall say, "It is enough." I hope the Lord soften their hearts that we may do them good.

Yours in the gospel of peace,

L. BARTON.

WILBER, Nebraska,

March 22nd, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—The Saints of Blue River Branch are battling for the right. Bro. R. C. and R. M. Elvin have both been here during the winter, and their labors have been good, although none have yet been baptized; but some are near the kingdom and others investigating. May the gospel be heralded to earth's remotest bounds.

Yours in Christ,

LEVI ANTHONY.

ST. THOMAS, Ontario,

February 27th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—There has been twenty-seven baptized in the county of Grey; among them Bro. John Kennedy and wife; he is seventy-seven, she seventy-six years of age. He has been an invalid for twenty-five years, and for the last three has been confined to his bed, and has several times been given up as having but a few hours to live. He was spared to hear the gospel, heard it and believed with his wife. He was assisted out of the house and as comfortably seated in a buggy as possible, and driven to the water's side to be baptized; he was so infirm that it needed nearly all my effort to support him erect for a moment while invoking the heavenly blessing. Several remarked that if he was buried in baptism it would be his death warrant; the sequel proved to the contrary, for he has grown in strength; and, instead of being confined to his bed, he now sits up all day, and has continued to do so with the exception of a few days; and, to add wonder to wonder, he has been a confirmed smoker for fifty-seven years, but laid down his pipe without a struggle. None but those who know him best can imagine the change. Bro. Walter Morrison has also been a smoker for thirty-five years, but became master and not slave. He has been troubled by dispepsia, but is now recovering and needs the prayers of the faithful. Bro. A. Howison also has used it for twenty-five years, but he was enabled to overcome, for which he feels thankful and greatly rejoices in the "liberty wherewith he has been made free." The fourth is Bro. James Brown; he too has been enabled to overcome the lusts of the flesh by waging a war against the tobacco fiend and coming off conqueror.

I also mention Sr. Ann Gordon, seventy-two years of age, a widow for many years, living alone; and to add to her worldly troubles lost one of her limbs, making it difficult for her to go about; but she is a very devout, sincere sister I would request your prayers specially in her behalf.

Bro. Joseph, the prospect is not only good, but glorious here, leaving out a few local affairs in old organizations; may these new ones be spared. Send us one, or if possible, two willing workers into Canada. I am willing to help in my way all I can, and assist whoever you may send. I have invitations to go to Toronto, Guelph, Brantford, Streetsville, Listswell, besides many other smaller places; and the demand seems to burthen me. I feel a great responsibility while so many are calling, and I can not go to all at once; in fact, if it were possible for me to go at all there are now solicitations enough ahead to keep me one year, and if the interest keeps at the same rate, (to say nothing of becoming greater), it will become universal throughout the dominion. Polygamy is the hue and cry of the Pharisees; particularly the leaders of orthodoxy. Beadle figures largely in their eloquent (?) assaults; however, even that has not much weight when they come to open parley. I expect to start from home on the 2nd of March again, in company with Bro. T. A. Phillips.

May the good word prevail with others, also, is the prayer of your brother,

J. A. MCINTOSH.

LONDON, Ontario,

March 18th, 1880.

Dear Editors:—Midst all this confusion, how sweet to my soul is communion with Saints. I am hopeful that a better day has dawned even here. Greater unity exists among these Saints than has been for some time past. The gospel plan of salvation, as taught by Jesus and his apostles, is preached, and I am glad I am in the faith. By patient continuance in well doing I seek earnestly for glory, honor, immortality and eternal life. I fear too many stop short after baptism, and that some never receive the seal of their adoption into the family of God. Why so? By not proving true to the covenant made at the water's brink, and not being fully instructed. First Principles must needs be obeyed, then a going on to perfection. Can there be sent an Elder to stay among the branches in Canada, or must those sheep and lambs be scattered? I hope that conference will send an Elder among us and then we shall rejoice and thank God.

Yours in the gospel of peace,

RICHARD GOULD.

PAGORA SPRINGS, Colorado,

February 26th, 1880.

Dear Herald:—We have had very severe winter weather and an almost unlimited quantity of snow. I rented my property at Saguace, and came here to see if the use of the springs would be beneficial to my health, and I think they have, although it may simply be a temporary change. The springs are of unfathomable depth, (as yet), and of boiling temperature. They are reserved by government, for the benefit of invalids; also a Government Post is located here, and a few troops are kept. The water is possessed of thirteen mineral qualities, rendering it very useful to invalids of almost any kind, except those with lung complaints. This location is about mid way of the southern portion of Colorado, about fifteen miles from the south line. This fifteen mile strip is the Indian Reservation. During the deep snow the Indians vacated and removed to northwestern Colorado. We expect them here soon, and severe trouble is anticipated. I have hitherto been a strong sympathizer with Indians, and, like many eastern people who never witnessed any of their conduct, I believed that they were abused, but my late experience on the frontier has compelled me to change my mind. One of my neighbors, a man seventy-two years old, a retired Indian missionary, and who has spent most of his life preaching to them, says that he knows of no method of compromise with them, only to colonize or exterminate them. However, I am satisfied that a treaty can be made and perhaps will be soon. It is terrible to think of the horrible manner in which they massacre innocent women and children, without the least cause whatever. I expect to move from this part as soon as snow disappears, and will inform you of my address. Should any members of the Saints find it convenient, we would be glad to have them call on us; would be glad to attend a good old fashioned meeting; have not attended a prayer meeting since 1853.

Yours truly,

E. N. BEACH.

NEWPORT, Cal.,

March 9th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—Our conference (sub-district of Los Angeles) has just closed. We had a peaceable time, and more than usual interest was manifested in the work. I had an excellent time at Asusa, large and attentive congregations; am going again; expect to hold meetings also at El Monte. At both places quite a number invited me to return, as they wish to hear more of the gospel. At our conference we ordained Harvey Hemmenway an Elder. He is quite earnest in the work and is doing good among outsiders in the "Canyon," and also among the branch members.

Yours in the new covenant,

JOS. F. BURTON.

UNIONTOWN, Eldorado Co., Cal.,

March 16th, 1880.

Editors Herald:—On reading the Herald and seeing so many testimonies from the brethren and sisters. I feel encouraged to bear my testimony in regard to this work. Hoping that small and weak as it is, some brother or sister may read it, who, like myself, are living away in a little corner of this great world, and remember that the world may forget and overlook such small out of the way places; but the good Shepherd never forgets his sheep. I heard brother Thomas Daley preach from John 7:16, 17, and it was the best sermon I ever heard. He convinced me that I had not obeyed the gospel; that I had not done the will of the Father in order to know of the doctrine, which knowledge Christ promised to all who would obey. I was baptized December 28th, 1879, and can now testify that the doctrine is of God. Since that time brother Thomas Daley has baptized nine making ten in all, and there are more ready to obey. I can affirm that the blessings I have received, and the joy I have felt in these three short months would be worth striving a life-time for, but the Lord is faithful who has called me. He will continue to shower his blessings upon me, if I walk humbly before him, and if I ask in faith believing.

I have, while suffering with rheumatism and sore throat, been healed within one hour, through the prayers of the Saints while at Sacramento meeting. Brother Thomas Daley has been with us between three and four months, preaching and exhorting. Truly the spirit of the Lord is with him. Brother Lowell has preached here a few times. I hope that a branch will be organized here ere long. Bro. Daley is working very earnestly to spread the glad tidings. He expects to go to the Sierra Nevada Mountains in a few weeks, and will be in the Meadow Lake mining district at Carlisle.

In the last Herald I read an appeal to the Saints for assistance to send Elders to preach to the people. How I long to be able to help this cause along, and I pray that the Lord will prosper his children that they may be able to send Elders to all parts of the world. I know he will if we live humbly, and if we follow all the precepts of Christ.

Your sister in the everlasting covenant,

MARY E. BEEBE.

STARFIELD, Missouri,

March 28th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—I would not do without the Herald for twice what we pay for it. And I firmly believe it to be the duty of all the Saints to take it, and that there is not a family but what could do so if they only thought they could not do without it. There are little things that we can deprive ourselves of, and do just as well without. Now, dear brethren and sisters, try it; take the Herald and Hope, and, after you have read them, tell me if you do not feel well paid.

I could not describe my feelings when I read Bro. Luff's letter in March 15th Herald, to see what a change there has been; and I do pray for the time to come when those who are honest will return to the rod of iron, and walk by the same. And I pray that God will give his servants wisdom and power to loose the bands that bind them. As one who is willing to make any sacrifice for the gospel's sake.

I am your sister,

ANN SUMMERFIELD.

BOZEMAN, Montana,
March 15th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—We have had a glorious conference, and two missionaries are called for for this country. We also held a glorious two-day meeting in Willow Creek Branch. Three persons were baptized yesterday, thanks be to God. All the branches in Montana are united in love; not a jar; and all the branches join next Sunday in fasting and prayer for a blessing in behalf of Sister Gaultier who has been preserved only by a miracle, and for the prosperity of the work.

Your brother in love,

E. C. BRAND.

Griffiths; text Job 14:10.

Dear mother, thou hast left us,
In this world of toil and care,
To encounter all the battles—
Lord, give strength, that we may bear.
We have lost a faithful mother,
And a loving wife to cheer;
Yet there's hope that we shall meet her

Little Antie, thou hast left us,
Here on earth to mourn for thee;
Thou hast joined thy little sister,
In that world where all is free.

Oh! our loss, we keenly feel it,
And this world seems dark and drear,
But our Father did reveal it
That you could not linger here.

Oh! may God, our Father, heal us
Of the wounds we have received,
He will come, and he will have us,
If we will but faithful be.

There is joy and consolation
To our broken, weary hearts,
That our Savior will protect us,
And to us His grace impart.

To our lot we feel resigned,
And to say thy will be done;
May we ever feel we're thine
And meekly wait till the victor's won.

Then fare-thee-well, our little loved one,
Until with Jesus you'll return;
Then we'll meet our precious loved ones,

HIEROGLYPHICS.

The male mosquito does not bite, nor is he gifted with the pertinacity of the female. He has a feathery attachment each side of his proboscis which interferes with his insinuating it into anything more resisting than vegetable fibres. These antennae have delicate little fibres or microscopic feathers, and Prof. Alfred M. Myer, of this country, discovered that each fibre trembled sympathetically with the notes produced by the rapid wing motions of the female mosquito. It is an easy matter to measure the number of vibrations made in each second by an insect's wing, as we know the number corresponding to each note of music; when such note is sounded by the insect in its flight its number of beats must correspond to the note, which runs up to the many thousand impulses a second—40,000 is the limit for human audition. Many animals are supposed to hear plainly more rapid vibrations.

Obscurity and comfort are frequently friends, but popularity and trouble generally go together. The greatest friend of Truth is Time.

As the tree is fertilized by its own broken branches and falling leaves, and grows out of its own decay, so men and nations are bettered and improved by trial, and refined out of broken hopes and blighted expectations.

Wisdom is better than riches. Wisdom guards thee, but thou must guard thy riches. Riches diminish in the using, but wisdom increases in the use of it.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES.

APRIL 6TH TO 14TH, 1880.

The forty-second Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ, being also the twenty-eighth of the Reorganization, convened on the Fiftieth Anniversary of the establishment of the Church in this last dispensation, at Plano, Kendall county, Illinois, April 6th, 1880, Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair, presiding; Henry A. Stebbins, Secretary, John Scott, assisting.

The session opened at 10 o'clock, a. m., the 6th, by President Smith announcing and the assembly singing the hymn beginning, "Come, let us anew our journey pursue." Prayer was offered by Pres. Blair, and the hymn, "Joy to the world, the Lord will come," was sung, Bro M. H. Forscutt being appointed and acting as Chorister for the Conference.

President Smith stated that, unless otherwise ordered, the sessions of the Conference would be as follows: Prayer meetings at 9 a. m., preaching at 10:30 a. m., business sessions in the afternoon, and preaching in the evening; thus leaving the forenoons for quorum and committee meetings to those who are engaged in such special duties.

After this the time was given to the assembly for bearing testimony and speaking of the good work. Those taking part were as follows: Brn. I. L. Rogers, J. H. Lake, J. S. Patterson, W. W. Blair, G. S. Yerrington, H. L. Thompson, Jobe Brown, E. C. Brand, D. D. Williams, and Sisters Mary Leer, Catherine Salisbury (sister of Joseph the Martyr) and Sr. Miriam Brand. Bro. Brand related some remarkable cases of healing that occurred in Montana the past winter, as also did Bro. D. D. Williams some that he was witness of. Pres. Smith made some closing remarks, the doxology was sung, and the benediction was pronounced by Pres. Smith.

At 1:30 p. m., the hymn, "Truth reflects upon our senses," was sung, and prayer was offered by Pres. Smith, followed by singing, "Watchman, who are these I see."

Pres. Smith requested the Committees appointed by previous conferences to report as early as possible.

The Church Secretary, Bro. Henry A. Stebbins, then read the reports of the ministry as prepared and compiled by him for reading and for publication with the minutes of the Conference.

CHURCH SECRETARY'S REPORT.

I herewith submit to the General Conference, and to the Church, the written reports of nearly all of the ministry who have received appointments from previous sessions of this body, namely, to labor in the various mission fields assigned them, and from which they are now either present in person, or send accounts by letter:

MINISTRY REPORTS.

Thomas Taylor, in charge of the European Mission, writes from Birmingham, England:

I am pleased to state that the work generally in England is in a fair condition, notwithstanding the difficulties we have to contend with. About seventy have been added to our number by baptism through the past year, and the present one presents as fair a prospect; and I hope by constant and careful labor, that we shall still progress.

The brethren, as a body, are zealous and energetic; and, with such labor and the help of our Heavenly Father, we must progress. The Saints generally feel well and strong in the cause. In reference to myself, I am still desirous of doing all possible for the cause, and should you see fit to sustain me in my present position I will continue to do my best, by the help of God. But, on the other hand, should you deem it wisdom to release me, and to appoint another in my stead, I shall willingly accept it, and will render the one so appointed every assistance in the performance of his duty. I pray that the spirit of the gospel may be with you in your deliberations.

John R. Gibbs, in charge of the Welsh Mission, writes from Morriston, Wales:

I respectfully submit the following report to you. I have labored to the best of my ability since I had the care of this mission. I have visited the branches and have done my best to comfort them in the hope of the gospel. I have also done my best to preach to those that have not seen the light of the kingdom of God. Although but few have been added, yet some have given their names for baptism, and there is hope again for the revival of this mission, after the hard struggle we have had these last three years against the power of the evil one. The ex-president of this mission tried to bring into the Church the doctrines of Druidism and Spiritualism. After failing in his evil designs he is trying to form a sect of his own, and he has deceived some of the innocent Saints to believe his pernicious doctrines, by persuading them that the Lord has rejected the Church in America, and that the Church is governed by votes, and not by the Spirit of God. But I thank my Heavenly Father that many of those that he had influence over have seen his folly, and are now rejoicing with us. I feel to do all I can to further the work in this mission, but I am not able to give my whole time to the ministry because I have a large family to support, but I will be as busy as I can. I enjoy the comfort of God's Spirit. We have a hymn book all ready, but the troubles in the Church have hindered publishing it, yet we think to publish it soon. We have over £11 of the Herald money kept for its publishing for which we are very thankful to the Church, and we hope the mission will be able before long to return it. May the Lord bless you.

Peter N. Brix, in charge of the Danish Mission, writes from Aalborg, Denmark:

On March 8th I led two souls into the water, and others are believing the gospel, thanks be to God, and glory be to his holy name. I present the following questions to the General Conference:

I wish the conference would appoint a committee to help the Saints here to get dwelling places; and also appoint a place for them to emigrate to; if any particular place can be made for them, and also to take care of them so that the gospel can be preached in the Scandinavian language for the building up of the kingdom, and that good news may come here from the Saints. (Bad news has already arrived several times).

And also provide that we may get the Saints' Herald in the Danish language, once a month if not more. We are just as anxious to get that as the American Saints are to have it weekly; and it is what must be done for the building up of the kingdom. Let something be done.

I am still in hopes that some brethren will be sent here from the conference, and God and the unity of his Church will have to decide if I shall stay in the mission any longer; God's will be done. I am not called by earthly power, but by the Spirit of God through his servants, and I must be about my Father's business wherever he wants me. May the spirit of revelation guide during the conference, that you may have a peaceful and profitable session.

James W. Gillen, in charge of the Australian Mission, writes from Wallsend, New South Wales, under date of February 18th, 1880:

No doubt the General Conference will expect to hear from this mission, but were it not that I felt it a duty, I would refrain from making a report at present. Of course the mission is a very extensive one, and I have not yet had time or means to visit the various localities where the Saints are scattered. But I have done so to the extent of my abilities, and I have tried to strengthen, encourage and build them up in the glorious truths of the gospel of the Son of God.

On my arrival I found some good, faithful Saints, notable among whom were Bro. Richard Ellis and wife, who kindly furnished me a home and ministered to my wants while in Sydney. The branch had been broken up, and there had been no meetings for some time; so I concluded it would be better to defer holding any until I would be prepared to continue them, which I was not at that time able to do, as it would require more money to pay for a hall than I could command. I also thought it advisable to visit the various places where the Saints live, and revive and strengthen them, so I went to North Willoughby (six miles from Sydney) and preached. Found some good Saints, but no one to conduct meetings, nor any suitable material for that purpose. Bro. Ellis was working at his trade, about eighty miles from Sydney, therefore, I was obliged to leave them in an unorganized condition.

From Sydney I went to New Castle; found one sister alive in the work; others have a name to live, but to whom the language of Paul would be applicable, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." Went to Hamilton, about three miles from New Castle, and found three sisters. I preached in the house of sister Williams once. Besides these an aged brother and sister live seven miles from there. I went to Waratah and thence to Wallsend, and found several Saints in that place and vicinity. They had held meetings here for a time, but, for some cause, they were broken up. I called them together and held a meeting, and on Sunday again, when they proceeded to confess their faults, and asked each others' forgiveness, and, as they expressed a willingness to work in harmony together, I partially organized the branch. I returned to and preached at Hamilton again. Then returned to Sydney and preached three Sundays at North Willoughby. From there to Bungwall, Myall Lake, where Bro. John Rodger lives. The Saints there received me kindly, and I preached there three or four weeks. Bro. Rodger has a Sunday-school in his own house. I did not organize them into a branch, as there were no officers there, and I am not very hasty in ordinations. A branch was there, but Bro. Wright, the Elder, moved to North Forester, about twenty-five miles away. I went where he was, found five members and preached once. Then I returned to Bro. Rodger's and preached on Sunday, and the next day started for Sydney to meet the mail steamer, thinking that an Elder would be on board. But none came; and you may rest assured that I felt very much disappointed when I read in the minutes of the Conference that they thought not best to appoint any until they heard from the mission; for I certainly understood that one was to be sent from the fall Conference; and I thought they would keep faith with me. Well, they certainly heard from me in a few days after the close of the Conference, and no one has come yet. Why is this? Is the treasury depleted? Or has the Church come to the conclusion that one is sufficient for a country that in area is equal to the United States?

Allow me to say, that if this mission is to be continued, it ought to be prosecuted vigorously. If possible, send two efficient Elders, and in time a good work will be done here. If this can not be done the mission will languish.

But to return: I spent New Year's Day with Bro. Ellis, and, while there, received a letter from Wallsend, informing me of some difficulties existing there, and requesting me to visit them. So I came to this place, settled the difficulty, and have held meetings four times each week since. I have baptized two, a man and his wife, excellent people. If he is faithful he will make a useful man. He has been a preacher of the Adventist doctrine, a man of good abilities and very energetic. Others are believing. I intend to complete the organization of the branch before I leave, the only one in Australia, so far as I am informed. I expect to go next to North Forester again, and try to get additions and organize them. Then to Bungwall, and strive to organize them.

I think you can form some idea of the mission from what I have written. You will discover that it is in a bad condition. Drunkenness has been the great cause, and there has been too much mercy, and justice has been robbed. Crime has been allowed to go unpunished, therefore some are hardened. I think the knife is the only remedy; and I shall not hesitate to cut out the ulcerated portions from the body if a cure can not be effected. I hope that the Elder, or Elders, will be sent on immediately. Let them not stop by the way. Love to all, and may God's Spirit direct you.

William W. Blair, of the First Presidency, (present), appointed in charge of the Utah Mission, reports:

Pursuant to the call of last Semi-Annual Conference, I have been laboring in Utah, Nevada, and Idaho, in connection with Elders Deuel, Luff, Anthony, Derry, and Brand.

The mission has proved successful thus far, in all its essential elements; and the prospects for its future success are fairly encouraging.

We have found better opportunities for preaching than has been had by our elders heretofore; and the Lord has signally blessed us in proclaiming the present truth, and in ministering the ordinances.

We have had the unspeakable pleasure of witnessing not a few, who had been engulfed in hopeless scepticism, lifted up into the warm, bright sunshine of Christ's precious gospel.

Our purposes and doctrines are being better understood, and more highly valued, by all classes in the Rocky Mountain regions, and by the many government officials in Utah and in Washington.

Whilst there are many doctrines and practices had by the Utah Mormons that are contrary to Christ, yet we note with unfeigned pleasure the improved condition of that people in a moral, social, political, commercial, and religious sense, as compared with what they were in 1870 and before. Utah moves forward.

The mission needs to be wisely prosecuted with both suitable ministers and printed matter. The fruits of past efforts by the Reorganized Church continue to appear. Many and varied agencies are clearly at work for the early overthrow of priestly despotism and fanaticism, and for the general welfare of the people.

Patient, persistent, loving and spiritual efforts, with God's blessing, will certainly secure an early and glorious triumph.

Thomas W. Smith, of the Twelve, appointed to the Eastern Mission, writes from Winterport, Maine:

As there appeared in a recent Herald a sufficiently full report of my labors since last Fall Conference, I think that I need not burden you with more than report of what additional labors I have performed.

After preaching in all the branches of the Eastern Maine District, except Grand Manan, I came to this, the Western Maine District, February 23d, with Bro. John C. Foss. At Bro. John W. Blaster's, on Deere Isle, we found a hearty welcome and a comfortable home, and I preached in the school house. I failed a few times to fill appointments because of deep snow and storms. This country is bad enough to travel over in summer time, with its countless number of rocks and hollows, mountains and hills, and in winter it is ten fold worse. After preaching on Little Deer Isle we went to Bear Isle, which Bro. Peter and Jonathan Eaton own, where the people follow fishing, farming, and boat and vessel building. I spoke twice and people came from adjoining islands. We administered to Bro. Peter Eaton, who has been afflicted quite a while, and he was immediately helped, and can now do a good day's work. We returned in Bro. Otis C. Eaton's vessel to Little Deer Isle, where I spoke once more, and on Saturday, March 6th, after meeting Sr. Smith whom I left in New Jersey last December, we went to Green's Landing, where a special conference convened. On Sunday I preached the funeral discourse of the wife of Bro. Clarence Knowlton. A very large concourse of people assembled, the majority of whom had heard but little of our views. The subject interested them, and they continued to fill the house night after night. However but two obeyed. The Saints were plainly told that accessions to their number depended on their becoming reconciled and united. Confession and declared repentance are all right, but they produce no permanent good unless followed by restitution. I think that after the Saints there become united, and pay heed to the counsel given, that the Lord will add many good and faithful souls. It is disheartening to see people convinced of the truth, and yet see them restrained from uniting because of the lack of unity, and peace among the members. We left for Little Deer Isle yesterday. The day before I preached a funeral discourse in behalf of a young daughter of Bro. and Sr. Knowlton, who had been sick with consumption for nearly two years. By her own earnest request, Bro. John C. Foss baptized her last Sunday morning. She showed no evidence of being injuriously affected by the water, but endured it bravely, being so feeble, and assisted herself in changing her clothes, and experienced no chilliness while in the water or afterward. On Monday night she passed away, peacefully, without pain, and in peace she fell asleep. Doubtless her life was spared till she could have an opportunity of obeying the gospel.

There are many in all these regions worth the effort to save them; good, honest souls, who may yet be gathered out of the darkness, degradation, and ignorance. Hard, and in a measure unprofitable as this field is, I can see much improvement in personal habits, in cleanliness, and in intelligence among the Saints, and some more liberality among the outside world.

In North West Harbor, Deer Isle, where I tried to preach years ago, and where I was publicly insulted, and the house stoned, &c., a young man named Green, wild, reckless, and given to intoxication, helped me in every way he could, and he has since reformed, and is one of the most respected men of the place. A Mr. Hardy, at the head of Deer Isle, who dared to face his neighbors' frowns, and bear their anathemas, is giving us a home, and helping us to get a place to preach, I called upon, yesterday, and found that God had blessed him temporarily in an abundant measure. A certain party who openly attacked us, on Little Deer Isle when we were here before, has become an outcast, and shunned by every one; his own relatives refusing to receive him into their houses.

Bro. Foss expects to return home this week. We shall stay here, at Bucks Harbor, a few days, and then expect to go to Winterport, a new point, where Sr. Mary Mansfield lives, and about the 1st of April we think of returning to Jonesport, and, after two or three weeks in that district, expect to go to Boston about the 1st of May, and spend about a month in that District, and about the first or middle of June we trust to begin to work our way westward, via Pittsburg, Kirland, and Coldwater.

I have not kept account of the number of discourses preached, but I have in most places, preached on an average seven discourses per week, and have, with but few exceptions, enjoyed good liberty in preaching. I have baptized seventeen since last conference. I prefer to be continued in this field for another season. I find in many places an idea prevailing that one of the Twelve has the right, and that it is his duty to investigate and try to settle difficulties which branch and district authorities have failed to settle, but I prefer to let them get along without my interference, giving my opinion only when asked for; although I find this course does not give much satisfaction. It might be well for the cause if the conference would decide or explain what relationship the Twelve sustain to branches and districts; in regard to troubles which they confess inability to settle, and which they desire any of the Twelve to help settle. I, for one, am desirous of knowing, under what circumstances can the Twelve, one or more of them, take hold of difficulties in branches or districts, and try to have them satisfactorily settled; for I neither desire to assume any power or authority not lawfully mine, nor to shirk from any duty incumbent upon me, or required by the law and order of the Church.

James Caffall, of the Twelve, laboring in Colorado, writes from that field:

I desire to tell you the true condition of, and prospects for the work in this country; for exaggerated or too highly colored reports are an abomination in my sight. And I am resolved before high heaven, and so declare to you, that the Herald shall not be made the vehicle of such reports through me.

During October I preached and baptized two adults in Northern Nebraska District. Since then I have labored in Colorado; and without giving in detail the obstacles which have loomed up to prevent the progress of the work, let it suffice to say that prejudice is greater, and, so far as I have gone, I have found less interest or disposition to hear than any other region I have been in. I would be glad to add to your joy by reporting large gatherings, many accessions, &c.; but inability to do this gives no compunctions of conscience, as I have left nothing unturned that my physical strength and other abilities would allow me to do. And what expense has been incurred in the attempt to prosecute the mission, has been cheerfully borne by the Saints of the Rocky Mountain Branch, with help from one or two others. Besides the greater prejudice here it is also more expensive to prosecute this mission than one further east. I had the benefit of Bro. James Kemp's company and labor for two months. I may state that, in some localities, prejudice has been allayed and a few friends have been made. Some silent messengers in the shape of tracts have been sent forth. The effect, if any, thus produced time must tell.

Though our path has been beclouded, and obstacles have tended to prevent our progress, yet I have not thought to abandon the mission, unless in your legislative acts you should so decide. I learn that a herald of salvation should not be daunted at trifles. 'Tis ours to labor and to labor well, wisely, righteously and patiently; the increase is with Christ, and some with the people. Let me say to you, my fellow laborers in Christ, that whatever may be my discouragements in battling for the right, and the many evidences I might have given of human folly, I have peace and much joy in the thought and blessed assurance that God is in the Latter Day Work; and whether I sink or swim, survive or perish, I have put my hand thereto, and also what little else I have is upon the altar. I may recant, but I can not do so and not suffer loss.

It is thought that from one to two hundred miles south of Denver, where I have not been able to go yet, there is more interest or desire to hear. This I will prove as soon as practicable.

Being unable to meet with you, which I much regret, I may be indulged in congratulating you on the happy privilege you have in celebrating in conference capacity the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ. Yes, fifty years, or half a century, and fifty-six years since the young man, Joseph Smith, stood bewildered amid the confusion of the religious world, and only found relief after deciding to go to God. And how cheering the thought, that from the first inception of the Latter Day Work, the evidence exists of God being in it. As Pharaoh seemed to dread the young Hebrews, and Joseph was hated by his brethren, and Herod was apprehensive of the young child Jesus, so have the orthodox world hated this child commonly called Mormonism, from the time of its birth. To them it was not comely; it savored too much of primitiveness; it was not dandled upon the knees of kings and queens; it was not qualified. It was not a hot house plant, but the wind blew upon it, and storms beat against it from the moment it gave signs of life; and, though its first cries gave evidence of but babyhood, they were terrific and caused alarm. And, as was said of the former, so of the latter child, it must die. And to this end they labored. But with every plan devised to hinder the growth of, or kill this strange child, at the end of half a century, we find it like the mighty oak of the forest, against which the storms have beat but to impart additional strength, causing its roots to strike downward, giving a bracing and defiant position, so that it is so far from being weakened or moved by the storm as, through every additional blast, to be wrought upon only to pray God for additional strength to endure, as the mighty oak or every limb thereon, seems to bow when immersed with the wind as if to thank God for the storm by which they might be strong, and spread, affording shelter to man and beast.

And, O! what superlative joy filled my soul, when I read the decision of the court recognizing the Reorganized Church as a continuation of the church organized fifty years ago. How significant is the rendering of this decision, given but a few days before you meet to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the Church of Christ, brought into being in the nineteenth century, after a long night of spiritual darkness, to prepare the way for Christ's second advent. And may you, during your sittings, receive additional evidence that we are recognized by heaven's court, as well as the courts of the land; that you may go out from this conference fired anew; and that, as one solid phalanx, we may stand amid the superstition and trying scenes of the age, doing battle for the Master, ever remembering that our weapons are not carnal.

I would suggest that if you have a young, strong, robust elder, whose conscientious scruples prevent his peace from flowing as the gentle stream, unless he can lie down every night with blistered feet, having faith to induce the people to administer to his wants, who thinks traveling to preach, without a stipulated salary is the sheerest nonsense, and those who do so are desirous to escape manual labor, Colorado is the place for him; send him along.

And, as I close my report, and as my silent ejaculations ascend to God, I seem to be assured of your having a refreshing time from the presence of the Lord. And may I indulge in the hope (with other absentees) of being remembered by you.

Joseph R. Lambert, of the Twelve, (present), reports as follows:

When appointed by you, more than six months ago, to labor in the Northern Iowa and Minnesota Mission, it was my fond hope and ardent wish to do more for the spread of the work in that field than I had hitherto been able to accomplish. But circumstances which I was entirely unable to control, so far as I now know, blasted those hopes, and prevented me from taking the field for active service until February 26th, since which time I have devoted about one month to active labor in Green, Webster, Pocahontas and Calhoun counties. The work in these parts is making some advancement, though the people are slow to obey. Prejudice is giving way more and more every year, and the result is that we are being better understood, and this can not fail, we think, to result in lasting good to the cause of truth. I have received some cheering news from Grand Prairie and Lake Crystal, Minnesota. At other places the work has suffered because there has been no one to care for the flock. Since the fall Conference, I have preached twenty-nine times and ordained one Elder, besides doing other labor, such as usually devolves upon the ministry. I desire to continue in the work.

John H. Lake, of the Twelve, (present), reports as follows:

I have preached in the mission assigned me in Iowa and Illinois, one hundred and twelve times, baptized seventeen persons and blessed five children, and administered to quite a number of sick, with good results, the praise for the same be to God the Eternal Father, through his Son Jesus Christ.

Since June 1863 I have been a co-laborer with you in calling scattered Israel back to the fold of their shepherd, and inviting sinners to Christ, and preparing the way for the building up of Zion. During that time I have never enjoyed any more of the Spirit of God, nor more of liberty, light and power that it grants, than I have since your last session, and I never felt more the necessity of trying to purify myself from the dross of mortality, so that I may be a living epistle, read and known of all men, and that in deed and in truth I may be what God requires me to be and what the world might reasonably expect me to be, as one of Christ's ambassadors. I hope to be faithful in proclaiming the gospel of Christ, and help to establish his righteousness in the earth.

Charles Derry, of the High Priests, appointed to the Utah Mission, writes from Salt Lake City:

Peace be with you, and may wisdom characterize your deliberations, that God may be glorified and his cause advanced in the earth.

After situating my family, I left them to the care of God and his saints, and started with my brethren for Utah. We arrived here Nov. 22d, and met with the Saints in the Seventies' Hall on the 23d. The next day various persons volunteered their advice, which was as varied as the persons who gave it. Some advised us not to interfere with polygamy; others that we must deal tenderly with it, and others that we must strike at the root of the evil. However, all professed to wish us God speed.

On the 25th I tried to break the bread of life to the people, and Elders Luff, Anthony and Denel in turn preached the three succeeding evenings, to attentive and increasing audiences, and on Sunday, the 30th, Elder Luff and myself preached, Elder Blair having charge of the meetings.

On December 1st, the missionaries met in council and organized the mission, and I was appointed to the charge of the work in Ogden, and as far north as Brigham City, and east, including Rhodes' Valley, Wanship, Heber, Kay's Ward and intervening places.

I continued preaching in Salt Lake City, in connection with brethren Blair and Luff, until December 11th, when I left for my field. Since then I have preached in Kay's Ward, Ogden, Plain City, South Morgan, Peoa, Wanship, Park City and Kamas, and have distributed the printed word. My audiences have usually been very small, but generally attentive ones. While in Ogden I was assisted by Elder Anthony, who proved himself an able exponent and defender of the truth, and a very trusty and agreeable companion. Not having means to pay hall rent, and not being able to get a place in Ogden free of rent, we discontinued our efforts, and he left for Idaho, and I up the Weber Valley. The extreme cold, deep snows and frequent storms perhaps prevented my meetings in that valley from being well attended, but when it was fine there seemed no desire on the part of the people to hear. They seemed content with what they had, and the authorities closed every door they could. The only place in which I met with open opposition was at Wanship, where I was opposed two nights, but my opponents, finding it did not pay, ceased to trouble.

On March 13th, at the request of Bro. Blair, I came to Salt Lake City, where I am now preaching twice every Sunday, to attentive audiences.

I will now give my views of the general prospects of this mission, as far as my observation extends. In this city the prospects are brighter than in any other place I have been to in this Territory, yet they do not appear very flattering to me, even here. Yet I believe there is good being done. With few exceptions, those who come seem to be interested. I look upon this place as the key to the Territory. If we can get well established here, and can break down the fortifications of priestcraft here, we shall weaken the strongholds they have in all the smaller settlements, and, perhaps, pave the way to the hearts of the honest everywhere. But it will require mighty and continued efforts, wisely directed, to accomplish it. It is not going to be done in a year, neither will it be done without a free use of the Church treasury. Halls must be had, and money be supplied to pay for these halls, without asking the people who have no interest in the work, but to stop it, to assist in paying for those halls. As a class, the Mormon people are opposed to collections, and before you can get them to support anything, you must convince them it is true. This may take months or years to do. Yet it is well worth the trial. If we get a school-house in a settlement we feel bound, in a measure, and have to feel our way tenderly lest the house should be closed upon us, after the first night. I, at least, want to feel free, and that I have a right to the house where I am speaking. Hence the necessity of means to hire places and have them under our own control. Bye and bye the audiences will be willing to aid, and the work will be eventually self-sustaining, but until it is, we must have pecuniary aid, if any permanent good is to be accomplished. I feel that the Reorganized Church is now making its mark, and that, in this mission, is the place to engrave its name in delibily before the world, that the character and purposes of the Church may be known and read of all men. No matter if but little is accomplished with this people, we shall have forever freed the Church from the damning odium of complicity with polygamy and its kindred evils. And from the moment we have done this we can stand erect before the world and demand honorable recognition as a body of Christian people, and this fact will give us a mighty power for good.

The men needed here are those who are sound, true, faithful men, those well versed in the doctrine, laws and government of the Church, young enough to be able to rough it, yet possessing control over their passions; men who will not allow themselves to be mixed up with difficulties, only to settle them in the spirit of love and justice; men of moral courage, who will neither trail the standard of truth in the dust nor permit another to do it.

Elder Blair is the unanimous choice of all Saints here for the presidency of this mission, and we all pray for his return. Jew and Gentile have confidence in him. I believe the brethren of the mission are all in harmony with each other and the work. I expect to return east the coming August. May God fill you all with the spirit of love and peace.

Mark H. Forscutt, of the High Priests, (present), reports as follows:

At the Semi-Annual Conference last held, I was appointed to Chicago and Northern Illinois, as my field of missionary labor.

As soon thereafter as practicable, I commenced my journey, preaching en route at Omaha, Nebraska; at Council Bluffs, Little Sioux, Magnolia, Leland's Grove, Shelby, Harlan, Deloit, Dunlap, Galland's Grove, Lucas, Cleveland, and Burlington, Iowa; at Pittsfield and Sandwich, Illinois. From the last named place, I came to Chicago, where I have since labored exclusively. My labors in the first fifteen places named occupied about the first half of the conference semi-year that closes with the opening of this conference, my labors in Chicago the remaining portion of the time.

On January 8th, 1880, Bro. Charles Wickes and I came to Chicago. We spent the week in necessary preparations. After some trouble, obtained a hall, Temperance Hall, 213 West Madison Street. Assisted by Brother Wickes, who declined preaching, but rendered effective and valuable aid otherwise, I had the pleasure of preaching on the following Sabbath to small audiences, aggregating about ninety persons at the two services. The good Spirit was present, and has been to a greater or lesser degree at every service since. This is the best omen an Elder can have in a new field. I was encouraged by my brother Charles, who left me the following week for his own field of labor. God bless him, and make him as useful and as noble as he aspires to be. I missed him much.

From that time, I have continued my labors in the great city alone; yet not alone; for I have often felt how precious and near my God was to me by his ministering angel, and the blessed assurance that my Heavenly Father approved my feeble effort as a labor of love, has consoled me when adverse circumstances have thwarted and discouraged me.

The few Saints there are in Chicago are already fondly endeared to me, and solicitous for my welfare. I have not deemed it wise to yet organize them into a branch—proper and sufficient instruction should be first given, I have thought, and suitable material for building is as necessary to a good spiritual edifice as to one of coarser nature. There are but sixteen members of the Church in Chicago, that I have discovered yet, and of these twelve are sisters, rich in love of the truth, but poor in the wealth of this world. Of the four brethren, one has been out of work a goodly portion of the time I have been in the city,—and he a generous hearted man. A second is so situated that he can not attend meeting and retain the situation by which he earns his bread. A third, recently arrived, has only an occasional job to work; but he is an old soldier of the cross, and will do all he can. The fourth is not keeping house, but makes me welcome at his son-in-law's home when I go, as do all of the household proper. I have been thus explicit in stating circumstances, that you, my brethren, may be prepared to act advisedly concerning this mission.

Financially, the Chicago mission is very poor, and can at best, as you can readily discover from what I have said, do no more than merely sustain a minister with food and lodging. The Saints, however, as are all who have this work deeply at heart, are willing to do far more than they are able to do. Would to God the able were all as willing as those who are willing long to be able to do.

The expenses of the hall and the multifarious expenses of the mission have been borne by the Bishopric. For their substantial aid I thank them, as well as for their moral support and that of the First Presidency, and numbers of warm-hearted, loving Saints elsewhere.

Our hall is not suited to us; but it is the only place we have been able to secure till recently in a suitable locality. Another, and, in every sense, a better place has been offered me, but by the advice of the Bishopric, I secured the promise of the proprietor to give me the refusal of it till April 15th, that the voice of the Conference may be had upon the propriety or impropriety of continuing this mission.

Upon this question, much might be said; but as I have only a very few suggestive thoughts to offer, with your permission I will embody them in this report, that they may come before you, and be properly canvassed by the proper authority, when the subject of missions comes under advisement:

1st. Chicago, as the centre of the great Northwest, ought to have a branch of the Church of Christ, as by us represented, well established and ably represented within her precincts.

2nd. The nearly half a million souls reputed as dwelling there, represent nearly all classes and all conditions of humanity that enter into the heterogeneous mass of our common republic. The enlightenment of individuals of these varied nationalities and peoples upon the great and sublime themes of a perfect gospel, would necessarily reflect the light of truth in divergent rays, and as the preaching of the gospel at Jerusalem's Pentecostal period sowed the seeds of life that germinated and prepared a harvest in many lands, so might it do here, if we can but reach the masses.

3rd. The press is a mighty lever of power; the strongest weapon the intellect can employ. The press of Chicago is becoming famous for its potency, and is accredited by critics of the old world as being the most ably edited, excepting only those of New York and Philadelphia, of any in America. And, thank God, and honored be these able ministers of the "mightier than the sword," the press of Chicago has given me fair play and honorable mention, excepting only a scurrilous but weak attack in the Western Rural, which they have since apologized for and corrected. The four great leading dailies have given me admission to their columns, and treated me and my correspondence with gentlemanly courtesy, refusing nothing I have contributed, and voluntarily setting us upon the plane of our own accepted faith before their readers. As an illustration of the great good already accomplished, permit me to cite you to one fact: The play of "The Danites," founded upon Utah institutions by Joaquin Miller, was performed in Chicago, and to give it eclat among the religious and anti-Saint class, a hand bill was circulated by thousands, stating, in effect, that the play of the "Danites" then being performed in the city was the best sermon on Mormonism ever delivered. Some nibbled at the bait, others swallowed it whole. To counteract this, and yet take advantage of it, I advertised a discourse on "The Danites." A fair audience greeted me, and among them, gentlemanly reporters of the Tribune and Times. The following morning a very fair, and sufficiently lengthy synopsis of the discourse appeared in those papers. Tens of thousands would read the facts that distinguished between the Reorganized and the Utah Churches, though not more than a hundred, probably, heard those facts stated. This discourse was delivered February 22d; the same night its leading thought was flashed over the wires north, south, east, and west, and on the 23d, twenty-four hours afterwards, appeared in various papers thousands of miles apart. Thus that morning, while your representative seemed to be preaching to not more than a hundred, he was virtually proclaiming to millions that the Reorganized Church was the banner-bearer of law, order, and peace. By what better means can the distant multitudes be reached, prejudice removed, and the way prepared for the heralds of the cross?

4th. A foothold has been gained in Chicago. Ought it to be forfeited again? Many earnest and independent thinkers are examining our claims. The prospect is encouraging, though not brilliant.

For these reasons, in brief, I hope that the Chicago Mission will be sustained by your honorable body, and that the conference will send some better qualified man than I to represent the work here, if in your wisdom, it be thought best to release me.

The four papers that I have referred to as dealing with us in a spirit of gentlemanly courtesy and candor should not be unrecognized; they are the Inter-Ocean, Times, Tribune and Evening Journal. Nor do I think you will charge me with any but proper motives if I express the hope that the masses whom your honorable body represents will remember, in subscribing for secular papers, that the papers which manifest a desire for justice and unsectarian liberty are alone worthy the support of this people, whose love for truth and fair-play has been made conspicuous by the persecutions and wrongs they have suffered through injustice, intolerance, and falsehood.

Samuel S. Wilcox, of the High Priests, appointed last fall to the Utah Mission, writes from Shenandoah, Iowa:

For the past six months I have been trying to fill the presidency of the Shenandoah Branch of the Church to the best of my ability and I feel that I have the approval of the Holy Spirit. I regret my inability to fill the mission assigned me by the Fall Conference. If I had been present at the time I would have declined, as my financial condition would not permit. I have an anxiety to fill it at some future day, if prosperity attends me, but at present I can not go. I was very much dissatisfied with my condition, as I felt the Church wanted me to do something that I was unable to do. And, for fear I would be considered derelict, I have been ready to discharge my duty in branch capacity, by night or day, and at present must content myself with doing what is in my reach.

Crowell G. Lanphear, of the High Priests, (present), reports:

After reporting last September I preached near Davenport, Iowa, also at Butternut Grove Branch, at Maquoketa and at Smithtown, Iowa. I crossed the Mississippi, November 21st, and came to Buffalo Prairie, where I preached a funeral sermon the 24th, and another sermon the 30th. I attended the Kewanee Conference early in December and preached once. Thence to the Mission Branch, LaSalle county, and preached December 22d. I next held three meetings at Streator, and then went to Piper City Branch, Livingston county, and staid till early in February, preaching five times and having charge of other meetings. On February 8th I preached on Grand Prairie; on the 15th in Braidwood, Will county; on the 22d, east of Wilmington; on the 29th at Wilton Center, and on March 7th and 8th at Streator again. On March 21st I was with the Saints at Amboy, Lee county, and preached, and the same week I preached north of Shabbona, DeKalb county, and also on the following Sabbath, March 28th.

Since September 18th I have received moneys as follows: Of the Saints and friends in Iowa, $4.85; of Agent Benjamin, Kewanee District, $2.50; of Bro. Danielson, Leland, 50 cents, and from December to March, of the Saints at Streator, Mission, Piper City, Braidwood, Grand Prairie, Wilton Center, Wilmington, I received money and clothing to the amount of about $16.85. Also a friend (not a member) near Wilton Center, gave me a pair of boots, a very acceptable present.

I have administered to the sick and officiated in all duties when required.

Though not free from trial, yet I feel that the blessings of the Lord have been with me, and, in my weakness, his Spirit and grace have borne me up, and enabled me to make his cause honorable, which, by his help, has ever been, and I trust ever may be, my desire and purpose, for I wish to honor Christ and the glorious gospel, now being preached for a witness to all nations before the end shall come.

I desire to visit the eastern country again, (Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York,) where I have heretofore labored, and to do what I can for the confirming and strengthening the work in that direction. But I leave it to the wisdom of the conference to decide what is best to do in the matter. I have received several letters from New York desiring help and to hear again the glad tidings.

John Landers, of the High Priests, writes from Blue Rapids, Kansas:

Grace, mercy and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ be with you, that your deliberations may prove to the extension of the glorious kingdom of God on the earth. * I am now in the last half of my eighty-sixth year, and the cause is as precious to me as ever, and I am bound to do all I can to promote it. Our quarterly conference of February 21st and 22d, was one that will long be remembered by many who attended it. We began to baptize in conference time, and, up to this time, have baptized twelve; and more seem about ready to obey. Love and harmony are increasing in the Church, and the gifts of the gospel are bestowed upon us. It would give me great joy to be with you.

Robert J. Anthony, of the Seventy, under appointment to the Utah Mission, writes from Malad, Idaho:

I arrived in Salt Lake City, November 22d, 1879, and remained there until December 1st, when, having been appointed to labor in Northern Utah and a portion of Idaho, I left the city and went to Ogden. I there wandered around a few days trying to get a place to hold services in, but could get none without paying a price for it, and that we did not have. On the 7th I went to Plain City and made application for the Episcopal school house, and was refused. We then tried to get the school house from the Brighamites, and they could not give us an answer, one of the trustees being absent. We held services in Bro. Stocker's house. The attendance was small. I then went to Ogden and met Bro. Derry on the 13th, and the Liberal Hall was secured for us, to hold two services, the next day being Sunday. At the two o'clock services sixteen attended and eight at night. During the week we held two meetings in the Mound Fort school house, and the first night the congregation numbered about forty, the next evening there was about twenty-five. On Sunday the 21st we held forth twice in the Liberal Hall, there being twenty-four at the 2 p.m. services, and thirty-three at night. We then gave up meetings there for lack of money. We had to pay $2.75 for each Sunday. We then tried tract distributing. We passed them to the school children, and put them in the letter boxes. We met one of the high and mighty ones, and politely handed him an Advocate. He immediately about faced, and asked, "What is this?" Bro. Derry, gently leaning on his staff, began to explain, but he that had entered into the higher order, and had kingdoms, thrones, principalities and powers sealed upon him, remarked, "Jest so, I know all about it," waved his hand and majestically walked on. We visited Bro. Derry's old acquaintances. Some were a little shy, but nearly all gave him a kind word; but, with one exception, all referred to the joy they had felt together in other days, and how Bro. Derry had worked to build up the kingdom. Bro. Derry told them that we came with the same glad message now, to call the wanderers home; but they would shake their heads, and, with a long breath say, "O Charlie, you have apostatized and left our holy religion. Talk to us about anything but your religion; we know all about it." I speak of this that you may understand the feeling, and judge of the situation. On Sunday night, 28th, Bro. Derry spoke in the M. E. Church, to five persons. The night was very stormy, and perhaps that prevented some from coming out. I then went to Plain City, and our Episcopal friends kindly offered us the house. We published the appointment but I was unable to fill it, being severely attacked with diphtheria; Bro. Derry came and labored with them to the general satisfaction of all. There was a fair turnout, and good interest. We then separated, he to go up the Weber, and I to Malad, for the people seemed to have a fullness of their kind of religion, and did not want any other. I arrived at Malad City January 18th, and at once commenced operations. We seemed to be in a different atmosphere; the spirit of liberty was felt to some degree, and the people seemed to be somewhat interested. I have preached here, at Cherry Creek, Oregon Springs, and once in Portage. About twelve attended our meeting at Portage; that place is in possession of the Philistines. Upon the whole, in this part of the mission the prospects seem fair. A number here say that they will unite with us soon. I baptized one here yesterday. Only think, four months of earnest praying and labor, and only to get one into the fold! Yet we are not discouraged; the interest is widening, and is becoming permanent. Quite a division has taken place within the last few days in the ranks of the enemy, one that will result in great good. And it is bound to widen, unless the people surrender their manhood to a corrupt priesthood. The Church ought to sustain the Utah mission; and, if possible, reinforce it by men who will maintain the dignity of the Church, and prove true to God, and to themselves. It seems to me that it would be suicide for the Church to weaken on the Utah question now. However, the wisdom of the Church can best decide that question. None who come need expect to overthrow the strongholds in a month, or a year, but my mind is that we will have to fight a silent and entrenched enemy for every inch of ground we seek. The mission is not a pleasant one to me, yet, if you think it wisdom that I should remain here, I will do so and do the best I can; but I am persuaded that there are others who would do the Church greater service than myself. I have not been disappointed in regard to the work of the Lord in the valleys of the mountains, but I believe that the Reorganized Church will ultimately triumph. I will remain till fall if you wish.

Thomas J. Phillips, of the Seventy, appointed to labor in Missouri, writes from Renick, Missouri:

I send this as a sort of a report of what I have been doing since last April Conference. I have the charge of this branch, and hold meetings every Sunday; sometimes in Welsh and sometimes in English. I have distributed tracts all through this town to almost every house, and books also. I have been to some houses four and five times, and sometimes three and four miles out of town, besides preaching once at Salt River. I have opened a place in Elliott, a small town about three miles from here; and at Taunton I preached three times, baptized and confirmed four people, and blessed two children. I have laid hands on the sick with good effect. I feel well towards the cause, and desire to do more good if possible. I am getting along in years, and I ask an interest in your prayers.

Thomas E. Jenkins, of the Seventy, writes from Dowlais, Wales:

At a conference held in Amboy, Illinois, in 1864, I was appointed on a mission to Wales. For the first three years I labored hard and faithfully; but my constitution was a weak one, my health failed, and I had to give up continual traveling. But I did not give up attending meetings and conferences, but assisted the brethren here all I could. I never lost one particle of good feelings toward the work of God, but was always ready and anxious to do anything I could. Since I came to Wales five other good Elders have been laboring here besides the local Elders; viz: J. Seville from England and J. T. Phillips, J. D. Jones, John E. Reese, and J. T. Davies from America; all good men and true to their calling. But the appointment of Robert Evans to preside over the mission was a sad mistake, but Elder Taylor saw the evil tendency of this, and recommended the appointment of Elder J. R. Gibbs to preside over the mission. Bro. Gibbs is a good, faithful man, and I believe worthy of the appointment. He is well assisted by a young and growing Elder of promising abilities, Bro. Alma Bishop, president of the Llanelly Branch, and other local Elders. I pray that God will restore me to health and strength, that I may labor with them, to the glory of his holy name, also that from the coming Conference God will endow his Elders with greater power than ever before. May the grace of God abide with you.

Robert Davis, of the Seventy, appointed to Michigan and Canada, writes from Genesee county, Michigan:

I desired much to have met with you, but unfavorable circumstances have prevented. One of my daughters has been very sick, but is now recovering, for which I thank my heavenly Father. I pray that God may direct you for the advancement of his kingdom. I am now laboring in new places, and have more calls than I am able to attend to. A good interest is manifested, and I believe that good will result from the same. Within the last year I have baptized about thirty-five persons; preached in a number of new places; administered to the sick with good effects, and otherwise administered in the ordinances of the gospel. I desire to labor on in the work of the Lord, where the Lord and the conference direct.

John H. Hansen, of the Seventy, writes from Farmington, Kentucky:

I herewith report in relation to the church here. We are nearly on a standstill. I am sorry to write it, but it is a fact. There are many believing who, in time, will no doubt obey the gospel, but at present there is but little interest. We need a new man here, that is, some one besides myself, and in this connection I would recommend the return of Bro. Smith. And it seems to me that the South is entitled to one of the Twelve. Can you not give us Bro. Lambert? The southern air would be beneficial to his lungs, I think. If he can not come, try to send one of the others, or some one else besides Bro. Smith, but be sure to send him at least.

It will not be expedient for me to do any thing except near home this summer. I hope I will soon be able to take the field again, provided the Church desires me to do so. In the meantime I will try to do what I can near home. Bro. Smith can tell you much better than I can write it about this mission. I trust that the conference may do much to prosecute the work, and to sustain it where it is started.

John C. Foss, of the Seventy, writes from Deer Isle, Maine:

Since you assigned me to the state of Maine with permission also to labor in Rhode Island, I would state that I have labored wholly here and have not been to Rhode Island for the want of means to travel with. The way looks clearer before me for the coming year, and I think that I shall be able to do more for the gospel than I have for the past year. Also the cause brightens in this region, and the people are more friendly than before. I have more calls for preaching than I can fill. The past year I have baptized seventeen. As a general thing the Saints have been very low spirited, but now are reviving and going onward. Bro. S. O. Foss, though young, is thrusting in his sickle and is doing good. If there is any other mission you wish to assign me to you are at liberty so to do, but if not, I wish to labor in Maine, with permission to go to New Jersey.

John S. Patterson, of the Seventy, (present), reports as follows:

The field assigned me being Northern Illinois, my time has been exclusively devoted to the interests of the cause in it, laboring principally in parts of the Kewanee and Northern Illinois Districts, visiting quite a number of branches and opening quite a number of new places for preaching. As a general thing I have had a kind reception in the new places, and also received urgent requests to return. Prejudice seems to be giving way, and our true position is becoming better known than ever before. As a consequence we are gaining favor in the eyes of the people. In my travels I have met several of Utah's representatives, with whom I desired to compare notes, but, true to their past history, they declined in such a way as showed that cowardice was a leading feature of their character. But the issue will eventually come, and they must meet it or back down. As the results of my labor I have baptized eighteen persons, blessed twenty-eight children, celebrated one marriage, preached four funeral discourses, and administered to a large number of sick people, many of whom received direct and permanent evidence of God's power, in confirmation of his word of promise. In all my labors I have been blessed with renewed evidence of God's approval, and my faith in the ultimate triumph of truth grows stronger as time advances. I have forwarded to the Bishop an itemized financial report for the year; the following are the totals: Receipts from all sources, $213.67; traveling and incidental expenses, $81.80; balance in my favor for the year, 131.87. I have been received and kindly cared for by the Saints in my travels, for which I feel duly grateful. I am still with you in faith, and at the disposal of the Conference.

Edmund C. Brand, of the Seventy, (present), appointed to Wyoming, Idaho and Montana, reports:

Having been appointed a mission in charge of Idaho, Wyoming and Montana territories, I left conference on its adjournment, October 1st, and started on my journey, preaching by the way, and have preached in the following places: Iowa—Pleasant Ridge 1, Leland's Grove 3; Nebraska—Omaha 4, Valley Station 7, Fremont 3, Elkhorn 2; Wyoming—Cheyenne 3; Utah—Salt Lake City 3, Cottonwood 2, Ogden 1; Idaho—Malad City 2, Oneida 1, Soda Springs 1, Beaver Canyon 1; Montana—Ruby Valley 2, Virginia City 2, Willow Creek 10, Galatin City 1, Reese Creek 13, Helena 2, Blackfoot 3, Deer Lodge 4, Race Track 1, Willow Springs 2, Butte 4, Divide Creek 1, Glendale 5, Twin Bridges 3, Harrison 1, Salisbury 1, Bozeman City 3, total 92 discourses. I baptized in Idaho 5, Montana 7, total 12. Branches organized 3, conferences 1. Children blessed 24. Priest ordained 1, Teacher 1. Funeral meetings 2, special prayer 2, business meetings 3. Have traveled since I left my home September 5th, 4,766 miles. Since I left conference October 1st, 4,680, and out of this 1,114 miles in Montana Territory.

In Idaho there are only two branches, Malad City and Elkhorn, and as they are close on the borders of Utah, I would suggest that Idaho be attached to the Utah Mission, and that they report to that conference; also that, as there are only two Saints in Cheyenne, and the same in Carbon, and as all Elders going into Colorado have to stop at Cheyenne, I would suggest that Wyoming be attached to Colorado. At Cheyenne Elder John Eames is trying to do all he can for the cause, and he proposes to hire five men and one woman, good Latter Day Saints. He will give them good wages; and if we can send out a force of six good Saints a branch can there be organized, which will form a nucleus for the work. He will hire a clerk, cook, dish-washer, runner, chambermaid and hospital steward, if well recommended, and may, perhaps, assist them in part payment of their passage, by way of an advance.

Montana I believe to be the most important field, next to Utah. It can and will support two missionaries in the field; and, besides this has promised to assist the Utah Mission, and has already sent from one Branch $25 00. My desire is to do all I can in the cause of my Master. Should the conference retain me in the field I am willing to labor as my circumstances may permit, in south-western Iowa, or in Nebraska, till the end of August, and then resume the field, either in Montana or any portion of the Rocky Mountains where I can do the most good. I feel greatly encouraged in the prospects of the work.

Joseph F. McDowell, of the Seventy, (present), reports as follows:

Since last report I have labored in Northern Illinois, and Southwest Ohio. Opened two new places in each of these regions. Preached and lectured at Plano, Pecatonica, Kent and Amboy, Illinois, and at Amanda, Miltonville and Wooddale, in Ohio. Preached 100 times and delivered 25 lectures; assisted in settling difficulties in two branches; ordained 2 teachers; blessed 5 children; baptized 2; assisted in and confirmed 5, and administered to the sick with remarkable results. Have had many calls for preaching that I could not respond to. In all my ministrations God has blessed me. To him be praise and thanksgiving evermore. I feel firm in the faith and am willing to continue in the Master's service.

Isaac N. Roberts, of the Seventy, appointed to labor in Kansas, writes from that field:

I have just come home, and I feel much encouraged in the work of the Lord. Since last conference I have tried to prosecute that part entrusted to me, and my whole time has been spent to advance the cause. I thank the good Master for his Spirit given me. I have met much opposition, but, thank God, his truth prevails. I never felt better in my life than I have in the past six months. The Lord has been with me in all my administrations, in word, in doctrine, and in setting things in order. I have baptized fourteen into the kingdom of God, solemnized one marriage and administered to the sick with good results. I would love to be with you, but can not. I will stand at the disposal of the conference, to work wherever I can do the most good. If in Kansas, I am here; if some other place, I will go, by the help of God. I pray that love, peace, and the gift of God's Spirit may be with you.

J. F. Mintun, of the Seventy, writes from Western Iowa:

I have preached about once a week, sometimes once, sometimes twice on Sundays. On account of sickness immediately after last conference I was not able to do any preaching for nearly a month. Have administered to the sick, in some cases with great blessings following. I am yet in the hands of God, to do as he may see fit as to my future work. I desire to spend my whole time in the ministry, and can, if my family can be provided with the necessaries of life, without which I can only spend a part of the time. If the conference, should so decide, I will convert all I have into a little home, get my family settled thereon, and, with my valise in my hand, start out in the fear of the Lord to do his will, trusting to him for food and for raiment for myself. Praying God to guide you, and to bless you with his love, I am your humble brother in Christ.

William T. Bozarth, of the Seventy, (present), appointed to Missouri and Southern Iowa, reports:

Since last fall conference I have been busily engaged in the ministry in Missouri, except about one month when I was hindered by sickness. I have traveled in company with Bro. G. T. Griffith, and have preached 65 times, baptized 1, confirmed 1, ordained 1; found many interested and have many calls for preaching. I am still willing to do all that I can for the cause.

Gomer T. Griffiths, of the Seventy, (present), associated with Bro. Bozarth, reports:

During the last six months I have been constantly engaged laboring in the field, partially alone, and partially in company with Bro. Wm. T. Bozarth; have baptized one. Am still willing to labor for the Master, if the conference deems it wisdom to sustain me in the field.

Charles N. Brown, of the Seventy, appointed to New York and the Massachusetts District, writes from Providence, Rhode Island:

Since last April Conference I have been constantly occupied during the working days of the week, but upon the Sabbaths have labored in new fields in Woonsocket and Cumberland, in the northern part of Rhode Island, and of late in Hopkinton in the southern part; also, by request, with Bro. G. S. Yerrington at Jacob's Hill and in other places; and with Bro. Webster in Boston, Bro. Squires in Brooklyn, and with the Douglass Branch, and much with Bro. C. A. Coombs and the Plainville Saints. Have held about 118 services for preaching, besides sacrament and testimony meetings. Have baptized ten; attended two funerals, and solemnized one marriage. Our meetings have been well attended, good liberty enjoyed, and many calls could not be filled.

Heman C. Smith, of the Seventy, (present), under appointment to the South-Eastern States, reports:

After reporting to the Semi-annual Conference from Gainesville, Florida, I returned to the western part of the state, where I labored until November 1st, during which time I baptized three. From November 1st until December 22d I was in Alabama, and baptized two. I then labored in Mississippi until near March 1st, and baptized four. During March I preached a few times at Farmington, Kentucky, also in the Eagle Creek Branch, Tennessee. In some parts of the mission the cause has advanced some; in other parts, I am sorry to say, it has made no progress. The mission needs more ministerial labor. I am satisfied that its importance has never been fully comprehended by the Church. The mission covers a vast extent of territory, and no one man can do justice to the work. East Florida and Georgia should be neglected no longer; Mississippi needs immediate attention, while Alabama and West Florida should be looked after. A large and effective field has been opened in Kentucky and Tennessee. I learn by letter that the Alabama conference will present a petition to this conference asking that Bro. John H. Lake be sent south. I hope their request will be granted, and one or more sent with him. Bro. Hansen informs me that no missionary labor can be expected of him, so some one should be appointed to succeed him in charge of the mission, and I think the suggestion of the Alabama conference is a good one.

I am still in the faith, and ready to labor for the Master. Dispose of me as you will and I will make an effort to serve you, and for the cause of Zion I shall ever pray. For the last three-months Bro. D. G. McPherson of Alabama labored with me.

Morris T. Short, of the Seventy, (present), appointed to labor in Kansas and Missouri, reports:

Within the last six months I have held one discussion of seven two-hour sessions, on four propositions; conducted three funeral exercises; baptized a lady and a gentleman, solemnized one marriage, and preached all I well could in numerous localities. My aged father was dangerously ill and I was detained at home two months. My labors have been chiefly in the Spring River District, but I spoke twice in Independence and about a dozen times in several branches in the St. Louis District. I have been listened to, kindly received, and greatly blessed. I desire to merit the love of all that honor the truth.

Bradford V. Springer, of the Seventy, (present), appointed to Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky, reports:

I have labored almost constantly in Southern Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky, striving to magnify my calling, in presenting the gospel of Christ in plainness and kindness, by example as well as by precept. I have endeavored, always and under all circumstances, to be careful and watchful, that no reproach come upon the work, or upon the people whom I represent, by any act or word of mine. The record I have made in this mission is with the people with whom I have associated during sixteen months. I could not change it if I desired to, and I leave the field with a consciousness of having done the best I could under the circumstances. I also believe that I take with me the confidence and love of the dear Saints of the Southern Indiana District, and the good will and wishes of hundreds of friends and noble souls outside of the Church. I have succeeded in opening several new fields of labor, in which I look for good results, if the work is promptly followed up. The prejudice of six years ago seems to have melted away, like the dew before the sun's rays. The outlook is indeed encouraging, and I trust that the mission will not be overlooked by this conference, and, if at all practicable, a good man or men will be sent there to continue the work. I have organized one branch, ordained two Priests, one Teacher and one Deacon; baptized and confirmed seventeen persons between the ages of fifteen and fifty; blessed twenty-one children; traveled over 1,000 miles on foot, and preached 114 times, and am still willing to continue to exercise my powers of body and mind in any manner that will accomplish good.

James W. Bryan, of the Texas Mission, writes from Eikhart, Anderson county, as follows:

On account of rheumatic troubles and neuralgia, affecting the nerve centres, I have been physically and mentally disqualified from presenting the gospel with power, as it should be done, and therefore I have deemed it prudent to retire from the active ministry, until such time as my health may be restored, and I ask to be released from this mission for these reasons, and I hope that some more able brother may be sent here to carry on the work. I still hope for the triumph of the everlasting gospel.

Joseph A. Crawford, (present), appointed to Missouri and Southern Iowa, reports:

During the past six months I have been constantly engaged in laboring in the field.

In the Far West District, Missouri, I was at places as follows:—Jameson's Mill, Pleasant Grove School House, Stewartville Church, Court House in Plattsburgh, Starfield Church, Mount Pleasant School House, Thorpe's School House, near Far West.

In the String Prairie and Nauvoo District as follows:—Farmington, String Prairie, Keokuk and Burlington, Iowa; Carthage, Rock Creek, Cottage School House, Madison School House and West Union School House, Illinois.

In the Kewanee District, at Canton and Bryant, Illinois.

Also during the past February, I held a four days' discussion at Rock Creek, Illinois; with the Rev. Joshua Dunham, of the United Brethren Church, three days being occupied on the mode, and one day on the design of baptism.

During March I held a three days' discussion with Prof. S. Palmer, at Rock Creek, Illinois, one day and one half being devoted to the question of the existence of a personal God, and the same length of time on the subject of the Bible's authenticity.

In addition to these personal labors, I had the pleasure of assisting President Joseph Smith in a series of meetings at Colchester, Burnside and Carthage, Illinois.

As delegate from the String Prairie and Nauvoo District, I desire to report the district as improving. Many causes of discontent and variance, have been and are being removed. All public feuds have been removed, and only some minor local troubles remain, which it is hoped are in a fair way for adjustment. The local ministry have in a good measure become alive to their duty, and are trying to "sow the seed" in their local missions.

A serious fault yet remains, and that is regarding the district record, which is sadly out of order, caused by the neglect of branch clerks in failing to make regular and proper reports to the district conference.

The conferences of the district have become almost a marvel of order and promptness, and I think it only remains for the elders and members to go forward in the same order in which a majority are now moving, and the cause in that section will continue to prevail over all opposition.

During the last year a vast amount of prejudice has been removed, particularly so in Hancock county, where many new openings have been made; while many calls for labor in new localities have not been filled for want of time, and lack of laborers.

In closing this report, I feel indeed to thank God for the light and liberty of his Holy Spirit extended to me; and will say that I desire to make the cause of Christ my life interest, and am still ready and willing to do all I can for the latter day work. If this conference deems it wisdom to retain me in the field, I am willing to go and labor wherever it may with you seem wise and prudent to send me.

Joseph Luff, of the Utah Mission, writes from Salt Lake City, Utah:

Preached six times in Independence, Mo.; once in Wyandotte, Kansas; twenty-six times in Salt Lake City, Utah; twice in Bingham; five times in Union Fort, and three times in Sandy. Baptized nine persons in Salt Lake City. These are the result, in part, of the labors of all the brethren who have preached here, I only officiating at the request of the branch president.

Have met with considerable opposition outside of Salt Lake City, but am hopeful of good results, though not sanguine. The prospect in Salt Lake City is, to me, encouraging.

Am feeling pretty well in spirits, though rather poorly in body, on account of the climate. Hope to be continued in this field till fall conference, unless you shall see fit to order otherwise.

Gordon E. Deuel, also of the Utah Mission, writes from Beaver, Utah, as follows:

Since my arrival in Beaver I have preached under unfavorable circumstances. I have to travel on foot, not having any railway to go on; and, having received a hurt, I could not travel as I would have done had I not been disabled. But, thank the Lord, I feel better, and shall travel to Minersville this week, and then to Frisco. I have been to Parowan and preached nine times. They turned out well, notwithstanding the cold and stormy weather and deep snow; left some tracts for Bro. Barton to distribute. A poor sister, Wardell, strong in the faith, goes about doctoring the sick, and she is a good hand to give the tracts to the people. So the seed is being sown; may it grow and bear fruit to salvation, and to God's glory. Have preached in Beaver thirty-six times, and assisted at fifteen prayer and testimony meetings; have gone from house to house, leaving tracts and talking to the people. Many admit that we have the truth, but some are dependent on others for their living, so are afraid to unite with us, and some expect that if they stay with the Utah Church they will be delivered.

All kinds of opinions exist in these valleys; and many don't believe in any God but Nature. The Methodists are kind and obliging, and give us the use of their chapel, but the Old Mormons don't like to go to meeting in their house, so I obtained permission to preach in the Institute, and the people turned out well. More and more came to hear, and then they shut the house against me. I can have the M. E. Church at any time, and Mr. Ed. Thompson gave me the use of his hall on Sundays free of charge, so when the weather comes mild we will be all right. Had hopes of having a discussion with Philo T. Farnsworth, Bishop, but he failed me.

I was in hopes of adding some to the Church; but, owing to some disunion in the branch, it chilled some that were very favorable. Some old folks want to be baptized, but they are dependent upon their son, and it is thought best to defer their baptism, for he is opposed to it.

The branch here thought proper to elect Bro. Charles Van Vleet to preside over the branch for the time being, and by vote of the branch, he was ordained Priest, and Bro. Wm. Thompson chosen secretary. I make my home at Bro. Wm. W. Hutchings, who was ordained an Elder the first Sabbath after my arrival by an unanimous vote of the branch. His wife has been kind, and spared no pains to make me comfortable, though not a member. There are but seven families, and four out of that number but one member each, thirteen members altogether. Thanks to Brn. Van Vleet, Thompson and Bennett, and to Sr. Thimblebee, and to all who have in any way aided me since I have been here. I have received $8 in money, and sent $4.50 of that to my family in Iowa. I am not discouraged, or homesick, but shall try to work on in truth and righteousness, till I shall fill the mission assigned me. May the Lord bless you all in your jubilee conference. I feel my weakness, and ask the prayers of the Saints. I will be thankful if an Elder will be sent here, or I be changed to some other stake, where I can have some one to labor with. I do not fear any attack on the doctrine, for the Lord will give the victory. All the sorrow I feel is from within. I have blessed three children, ordained one Elder and one Priest, administered to a few sick, and the Lord blessed and raised them up.

Robert M. Elvin, appointed to Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas, writes from Nebraska City:

Having been sadly disappointed in not meeting with you, I herewith report my labors. Since the 1879 fall conference I have tried to follow the direction of the Spirit, and to dispel as much prejudice as possible, and I feel that my labors have not been sterile.

The following are the places and number of times I have preached; Iowa: Eight Mile Grove 1, Hastings 1, Farm Creek 4, Wheelers Grove 2, Crescent City 15, Downsview 10, Glenwood 7, Dawsonburg 2, Council Bluffs 4; Nebraska: Wilber 24, Mumford School-house 3, Savage School-house 1, Palmyra 4, Plattsmouth 3, Nebraska City 5, Omaha 4, Xenia 7, Platte Valley 6, Barker School-house 2, Clear Creek 12, South Bend 3, making a total of 120 times. Have travelled per train, wagon and on foot 1622 miles. Ordained one Priest and assisted in the ordination of one Teacher. In company with Elder Levi Anthony, organized Clear Creek Branch, February 15th, 1880. Baptized 5, confirmed 6, blessed 9 children, administered to several sick, with God's approval.

I feel well in the cause, and can freely certify that God has been good and kind to me. I am still willing to be a sacrifice upon the altar for the spread of truth, and if thought advisable, I desire to occupy the same field. Have not reached Missouri or Kansas, but hope to before the Semi-Annual Conference.

J. J. Cornish, appointed to Michigan and Canada, writes from Sanilac Co., Michigan:

Since my last report (April 1879) I have preached nearly every Sunday, once, twice, or three times, and, besides, spent about two thirds of my time in the field. Have baptized twenty-eight and administered in the ordinances of the gospel as duty led. I hope to spend all my time in the field, and I desire to continue in Michigan and Canada, if agreeable to you. I will be in Canada soon again.

G. S. Yerrington, (present), assigned to labor in the East, under authorities there, writes:

I have continued to labor to the best of my ability, such time as I had. A year ago I returned home by way of Pittsburg and labored with them there about eight days; then to Brooklyn, N. Y., and staid seven days; then to Bridgeport, Connecticut, and remained fourteen days. I preached several times in each of the places named, holding eleven meetings at the last named place, and baptized two. I then went to Jewett City, Connecticut, and staid about one week, but owing to the temperance meetings being held there I only had a chance to take part in those meetings; but I did not fail to improve the chances to speak of the gospel, and to give out some tracts. I got some to reading, and the result is that they are inquiring and want to hear more. I got back to my daily labor the first of June, and since then I have tried to do all I could, and have preached in Providence, Simonsville and Pawtucket, R. I., and at Douglass, Plainville, Boston and Dennisport, Mass., also at Jacob's Hill near Providence, where we have held meetings for about six months. The Lord has helped us to keep the place open, and there seems to be a good interest. He has blessed us much this year in all our labors. I hope to be able to understand the doctrines of the Church so that, while I represent her, I may live by the law and preach the gospel of the kingdom of God and to do all the good I can. The prospects are better in this part of the land than ever before. My faith in the great latter day work is unshaken. Upon its principles I am willing to risk my soul's salvation, believing that they came from the great head of the Church, Jesus Christ, and I desire to labor wherever the Church thinks I can do so most effectually. I have labored in concert with Bro. C. N. Brown, and our desire still is to be in the field as much as we can. The Saints here are all poor in this world's goods but they hope to be rich in their future inheritance.

Columbus Scott, (present), appointed to Michigan, Indiana and Ohio, reports:

Since my report to the Semi-Annual Conference of 1879, I have devoted a great portion of my time to Christ's cause, though for awhile sickness in my family prevented continual labor, but I did occasional service. And from November 20th I have been in the field continuously up to March 1st, performing labor in Berrien, Van Buren, and Sanilac counties, Michigan, and in Perth, Gray and Elgin counties, in Canada West, in connection with Elders Kelley, Samuel Brown and J. A. McIntosh.

To mention all the points visited would be tedious; and suffice it to say that in most of the localities, the interest increased, and sincere inquirers were found seeking to know the way of truth, and some possessed the moral courage to start out in the "narrow way."

Some of the branches visited were found in good working order,—officers and members striving to do their duty respectively. Where such is the case the influence on the communities is good, which is favorable to the cause of Christ. (Would that all Saints could realize this.) At other places the Saints appeared to be somewhat derelict in duty, and the effect was rather an indifference to the truth by the friends and neighbors. We believe that an occasional visit of some good faithful Elder to such places would be beneficial, and remedial, to a great extent. Culture and discipline are as necessary as planting and watering.

Looking at the work in the mission as a whole, it is very encouraging, and it is onward, decidedly so. Our greatest need is laborers; ten, at least, are necessary in this mission. Kind Saints ministered to my necessities, along with friends, during my labors among them, for all of which I feel grateful and tender my thanks.

Have traveled some 800 to 1000 miles; baptized 9 persons, and confirmed five; administered to the sick, in a number of instances with good results. I have also written out the scriptural texts of the three subjects—Law of Moses, its objects, continuance and termination; Satan, his power, sphere, emissaries, and final condition; Sunday, the Christian Sabbath, as intended for the anticipated Synopses. In all these labors I have been blessed abundantly by the assisting grace and Holy Spirit of a kind heavenly Father, and I have been strengthened and confirmed in the faith of our Savior. Am still willing to do all I can to forward the interests of the glorious cause.

James Brown, appointed last to West Virginia and Ohio, writes from Gill Hall, Pa.:

You appointed me to a mission two years ago in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia; but as circumstances over which at present I have no control, have prevented me from filling said mission, I desire that you release me from the same, and would recommend that Bro. L. R. Devore be associated with Bro. Ells on said mission. I hoped to have attended conference this spring, but failed to get the means, so will be content. I pray that you may have a good time.

Chas. Wickes, (present), appointed to Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin, writes:

As one of the appointed missionaries of the Church, I respectfully submit a report of my labors since my ordination, which took place May 8th, 1879. From that date to July 14th, I remained in Plano, preaching three times.

I then went to Michigan, under the direction of the First Presidency, visiting Grand Rapids, Jenisonville, Muskegon, Lawrence, New Troy and vicinity, and Galien. Returning to Plano, August 11th, I remained until August 25th, when, by the advice of the First Presidency, I went to Pecatonica, Illinois, to join Bro. J. F. McDowell. I remained with him until October 6th, and then I returned to Plano.

Being appointed by the Semi-Annual Conference of 1879 to travel in Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin, I left Plano, October 11th; preached in Sandwich, Illinois, the 12th, and then to Meriden, Illinois, and spoke twice. Went from there to Amboy, and attended the district conference, after which I spoke in that vicinity eleven times. From there I called off Bro. L. Cheney, at Kent, Illinois. At that place Bro. McDowell joined me, and we held a series of meetings together. We enjoyed a pleasant time, and were blessed of the Spirit. On December 24th we separated, he going to Amboy, and I to Plano, preaching once while here, and at Sandwich, on January 4th, assisted Bro. Forscutt. On the 8th, we went to Chicago, where I stopped with him one week, helping him to open the Chicago Mission. On the 18th, I bade him a regretful farewell and took train for Troy, Mich., at the invitation of Bro. Wm. Kelley. I was kindly entertained by Bro. Babcock. I preached there four times, and on the 19th went to Benton Harbor and began a series of meetings. I preached in that vicinity until February 21st, twenty-five times all told.

The field was entirely new, and, of course, some strenuous opposition was offered, but the Lord blessed my efforts beyond my most sanguine expectations, and the opposers' influence was ruined by the very weapons they used against me. Many are believing, and the place should not be neglected.

I went to Hartford on the 21st and spoke to the Saints there three times. On the 23rd I went to Muskegon; spoke three times during my stay there, besides holding a short discussion at a club meeting with an Episcopal Clergyman; subject: "The general merits of the Roman Catholic Church," he (Rev. Fellows) defending, I attacking their policy and government.

From Muskegon I went to Alpine, speaking twice on the Sunday I was there. From thence I returned to Plano, stopping on the way at Hopkins, Lawrence, Benton Harbor, and Galien, speaking a few times at each of these places, making a total of sixty-five sermons since October 11th. I am ready to take any mission the Church may give me, to the extent of three and one-half years.

In addition to the above reports I have some from those who are under no General Conference appointment, but who have nevertheless labored in the ministry where they have no local authorities to report to, as follows:

John Eames, at Cheyenne, Wyoming, writes that he has turned one room of his house of entertainment into a meeting room, and there preaches about three times per week to good sized congregations, and he writes that he wishes to employ saints to do the work in his hotel, if he can get them, and will pay good wages, and by that means a branch of the Church might be organized there. He has baptized one, and is anxious to do all he can.

James Kemp writes from Hutchinson, Colorado, that for three months he has been traveling with Bro. James Caffall in Jefferson, Arapaho and Douglas counties, Colorado; and, though much prejudice exists, on account of the abominations of Utah, yet he hopes to see good results from their labors, even as God may bless the seed sown and give a harvest of precious souls. The summer time will bring them increased facilities, and they intend to do all that is possible to be done, hoping that conference will continue Bro. Caffall, and also send one or two more Elders into that country.

O. E. Cleveland, in Augusta county, Virginia, writes that he has done some preaching. Prejudice is departing, and though there is no urgent calls for preaching, yet he believes that the time has come for a faithful and energetic Elder to be sent there, an able expounder and defender of the latter day work of God. Therefore, understanding that Bro. I. N. Roberts of Kansas intends visiting Virginia, his native state, Bro. Cleveland asks if he may not be appointed to come and minister to them. The Saints there will aid all they can. Bro. Cleveland can be addressed at Staunton, Virginia, or Bro. Benjamin Bowman at Dayton, Virginia.

G. F. Weston (present) reports his labors in Southern Indiana during the past winter, and especially since February 28th. He preached in the Union branch and vicinity, in Jefferson county, till March 21st; then he went to Ripley county and preached some in the Olive branch, and seven miles west of there where he was aided by Bro. J. S. Christie. Good attendance and prospects encouraging. On April 2d came to Whites-town, Indiana, and thence to Plano the 5th. He is glad to have been able during the past year to magnify his calling. Has preached 75 times since October last. He desires to be continued in Southern Indiana, but expects to be engaged during the summer in other business.

J. Lamoreaux writes from Solon, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, that he is trying to advance the cause, and he asks that the conference give him the privilege to labor in that region and also in Kirtland, as the Saints there have requested him to come.

Robert Fuller writes from Bedford, Ohio, that he has presided at Kirtland for two years past, doing what he could and also laboring around about Kirtland some. He has now been compelled to move away and for this reason and because the members are scattered and also strife and contention exist, he suggests that the branch be declared disorganized. They are in no district and hence can not report to district authorities.

Rudolph Etzenhuser (present) reports that he has labored what he could and here presents himself for missionary labor in the Church, desiring to be associated with Bro. G. T. Griffiths, if it can be granted.

I also have in hand some reports from special Church officers, such as that of Bishop I. L. Rogers, the report of the Church Librarian, and the report of the Musical Editor. I have also a report of the Plano Sunday School, and a request from Bro. M. Shaw, of Minnesota, concerning Sunday School lesson papers.

Of petitions for the return or appointment of missionaries to various fields I have the following: One from the Eastern Maine District asking for the continuance of Bro. T. W. Smith to that field, and one from Pittsburg, Pa., asking for his labor among them part of the season. One from Colorado asking that Bro. James Caffall be continued to them. One from Chicago signed by sixty-three names asking that Bro. M. H. Forscutt be delegated to labor there still longer. One from Montana asking that Bro. E. C. Brand be returned to that country. One from the Florida District and another from the Gainesville Branch calling for the return of Bro. Heman C. Smith or that some other minister be sent from here. One from Red River Branch, Texas, asking that Bro. A. J. Cato be appointed to that region. One from the Southern Nebraska District calling for the continuance of Bro. R. M. Elvin in that field. One from Johnson county, Missouri, asking for Bro. W. T. Bozarth or some other minister. One from London, Ontario, that an Elder be sent there to keep the flock together and prosecute the work. One from Staunton, Virginia, asking for a minister. Bro. J. W. Wight offers himself for an appointment, and Bro. G. H. Graves, of Canada, announces his readiness to go and minister to the colored people of the South. There are also some papers in hand relative to the Danish Mission, and Bro. J. L. Bear is prepared to go to Germany.

There are also documents in hand, for the consideration of the conference, concerning difficulties existing at Bevier, Missouri.

The Pottawattamie District requests that the next Fall Conference be held at Council Bluffs, and the Galland's Grove District asks that it be held at Galland's Grove.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

HENRY A. STEBBINS,

Secretary of the Church.

CHURCH RECORDER'S REPORT.

I have the pleasure of presenting to the General Conference the following statement of numbers of all the branches of the Church as they stand upon the General Church Record of names, so far as records, reports and corrections have been sent to me by the presidents and clerks of districts and branches. And those who have been diligent in this matter of keeping one of the commandments of God to his Church, and who have so willingly and kindly furnished lists of names, with dates and items of gains and losses are to be commended as doing a good work; and I believe that this class of workers for order and system increases in the Church. I heartily thank them for their aid. The following is the list by nations and states:

Table listing church branches by state and territory, including Australia, Scotland, Switzerland, Denmark, England, Wales, Canada, Alabama, Florida, California, Connecticut, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Maine, Montana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Michigan, Missouri, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Virginia, Texas, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

as nearly to a state of perfection as possible; and, though a large number of reports and records came in, even in the last few weeks before Conference, yet I obtained help at the writing, and brought up the books to March 28th, 1880, entering all reports that came before that date.

Of all branches marked "No Record," I would like to receive full lists of names, with items of birth, baptism, confirmation and ordination, date of organization and by whom.

The net gain stands this year 651 against 1,116 last year, but I think that we would have had a much larger net increase had there not been in practice a habit among branches of declaring by vote the removal of absent members, without any granting of letters to them to join other branches.

Therefore as this matter of either quietly dropping the names by the branch officers, or, on the other hand, voting them out, has increased greatly, I present it to the Conference suggestively, and ask if it has any pleasure or will to express in the matter.

Therefore, with these my views I simply present the matter to the Conference, and ask if it has any will or wish in the matter, or if it is willing that names of members shall still be removed otherwise than by properly taking letters from one branch to another, as the blank letters now in use provide for.

If the Conference so wishes the records of names of the Church are at their pleasure to examine by committee, as to their correctness, so far as they may be able to judge.

Furthermore, I would say that as I have injured my health by much work upon the books by night, and in extra hours when I ought not to have labored, I am willing to be succeeded by another in the Recorder's work, or, if it is still desired that I remain in the duty, I will need some one to labor under my instruction upon the books.

All of which is respectfully submitted. HENRY A. STEBBINS, Church Recorder.

The suggestion of the Recorder in regard to the dropping of names from the branches was spoken upon by several, and it was ordered that a committee be appointed to consider the matter and report. Brethren H. A. Stebbins, J. A. Crawford and John Chisnall, were appointed as said committee. Bro. Stebbins re-

In the above list there are 375 branches recorded, with names of members and their items of birth, baptism, confirmation and ordination, the net aggregate of names in these being 12,398. Thirteen branches are not recorded, whose average, according to the others, would add 429. Making a total of 12,827. Number last report in 359 branches. 12,176. Showing a net gain over losses of 651.

I have labored by night, during all the time that I could, in order to bring the Church Records fused; but, being so requested by the vote of the assembly, he consented to act.

The report of Bishop I. L. Rogers was taken up, and, without reading, referred to a committee, consisting of brethren P. Cadwell, G. A. Blakeslee and W. H. Kelley.

Bro. John Scott, Church Librarian, reported as follows:

As librarian I would respectfully report that during the past two years 54 volumes have been added by donation and purchase, making a total of 403 volumes now in the library. The titles of the most important are as follows:—"God's Plan of Salvation," "Second Coming of Christ," "Geological Evidences of the Antiquity of Man," "Travels in Yucatan," 2 vol.; "The Holy Word in its own Defense," "Mummies and Moslems," "Life of Brigham Young, or Utah and her Founder," "Conquest of Mexico," 3 vols.; "Conquest of Peru," 2 vols.; "Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History," 6 vol.; "The Douay Bible," "Domestic Manners and Customs of Asia," "Giesler's Church History," 3 vols.; "Milner's Church History," 5 vols.; "Millennial Star," vol. 1; "Sun Worshipers of Asia;" "History of the United States," 3 vols., (Bryant).

JOHN SCOTT,

Church Librarian.

Appointments for this evening and to-morrow of brethren to preach were made, and the session adjourned after singing the hymn, "Once more before we part."

At 7:30 p.m. the congregation sung, "Jesus lover of my soul," followed by prayer from Bro. Joseph Smith, after which the hymn, "Let all the saints their voices raise," was sung; then Bro. Heman C. Smith preached a sermon upon the necessity of the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Sung, "Blest privilege to mortals given," and adjourned, closing with the benediction.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 7TH.

At 9 a.m. a prayer meeting was held, presided over by brethren R. C. Elvin and J. H. Lake.

At 10:30 a.m., Bro. A. J. Cato preached, assisted by Bro. George Hicklin. It is said to have been a good discourse.

At 1 p.m., Pres. Blair in the chair, the assembly now quite large and constantly increasing, sung the hymn, "The morning light is breaking," and prayer was offered by Bro. Glaud Rodger.

The minutes of yesterday's session were read.

CHURCH SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Secretary read the following ministry reports received since the reading of those at yesterday's session:

Alexander H. Smith, of the Twelve, writes from Andover, Harrison county, Missouri:

Agreeably to the request in the Herald I hereby make my report. At last Fall Conference I was appointed (as a mission) the state of Missouri and Southwestern Iowa. Immediately after adjournment of conference, I labored in the Iowa part of my mission, holding two meetings at Galland's Grove, one at Woodbine, and a succession of nine or ten meetings at Magnolia. From thence to Little Sioux, and held three or four meetings there. Then to Council Bluffs, where I held three or four more. While there I received word of sickness in my family. Being uneasy, I returned home, and found my presence much needed. Since then I have only labored on the Sabbath as my circumstances would admit of. Have not been able to visit the Missouri part of my mission, which I regret very much, sickness preventing. Have been blessed in preaching the word, even beyond my own expectations. My observations of the work are that there never was a better time to preach the word, the people everywhere seem hungry for it. If 'tis thought wisdom to continue me in my present field, I shall do my best and try to honor the Church, my calling and the cause of Christ. My time, unless different provisions are made, must be divided, hence I can not do the good I would be glad to do in the field. For all God's blessings I render him thanks, and shall always labor and pray for the advancement of his cause.

Robert C. Elvin, of the High Priests, (present), reports:

For the last six months I have labored for the good of the work, as herein stated: I preached in Nebraska City twice, in Omaha 7 times, Moroni Branch 4 times, Wilber 13 times, McKenzie School-house 2 times, Raperville School-house 8 times, Savage School-house 5 times, Barker School-house 9 times, at other places 9 times, in all 59 times. I have been greatly assisted by the printed word from the Herald Office. The work in Nebraska, south and west of the Platte River, and west of Nebraska City, is cheering in prospects. I have visited some of the branches and find a better union among the Saints. And as my labors have been mostly outside of those branches I find that a good interest exists wherever I go, some friendly but others do all they can against us, trying to keep us from getting school houses to preach in. At the Barker School-house a deep interest is awakened, so much that a few went to the school directors and asked them to close the school house against us. The directors told them that when they closed the door against the Saints it would stand closed against all parties; and, as four parties preach there, they became afraid of censure. So I continued to preach and was blessed with liberty, yet I have had many trials the past winter, but the Lord has brought me through. I have blessed five children, assisted in confirming one, administered to a few sick, and some have recovered right away. From the Saints and others I have received $49. If I am permitted to return to my former field I will continue to labor.

Frederick C. Warnky, (present), released last fall from the Colorado Mission, and now presiding over the Independence District, Missouri, presents a brief review of his labors in Colorado during the five years he was there. For three years he prosecuted the mission vigorously, and after that as his circumstances permitted. During his stay there he baptized 39 persons, confirmed 46, blessed 28 children, organized two branches, and ordained several.

Daniel S. Crawley, not under General Conference appointment, writes from Cherokee, Kansas, that he continues to devote all of his time that he can to ministering in the Master's cause, going out from home and preaching in numbers of places. He also intends to do still more than heretofore, and would like to situate his family so that he could be in the field all the time.

A. J. Cato, (present), from Texas, reports that the disabilities that rested upon him at the last Fall Conference having been removed about the first of last January, he again begun labor for the Church, in Texas, preaching 43 times, blessing two children, and assisting the brethren in their church business, in which works the Lord had blessed him, and he hopes to be a more efficient, better and wiser laborer in the future than in the past, and is at the disposal of the conference.

H. L. Thompson, (present), from Bell county, Texas, reports having labored in Bell, Hill, Limestone, and Milam counties, Texas, opening six new places. Since the first of last January, he had preached 31 times, baptized four persons, organized one branch, (the Texas Central, in Robertson county), ordained one Elder and one Priest, and blessed 15 children. He considers that an excellent field lies open there, and the calls for ministers are so many that this conference should send some one there. He is ready to work as he may be appointed.

Jobe Brown (present) reports that since his ordination in January last, he has preached at Clinton and Maquoketa, Iowa, in all 25 times, given five lectures on chronology, baptized and confirmed four persons, ordained one Priest, and administered to the sick. Had also spoken at Plano and Sandwich a few times. At Clinton, Iowa, there is quite a great desire to hear the gospel preached. He is subject to the will of the conference.

DISTRICT AND MISSION REPORTS.

District reports received from presidents, clerks and delegates, I have copied and placed in alphabetical order by states and districts, joining the reports of the situation and progress of the work to the statistical items furnished, by which method all is seen at a glance. And it is pleasant to note the progress being made in order and system in the matters of reporting and of sending before the conference assembles the reports of branches, of districts, and of the ministry, so that they may be prepared and placed in order without delaying the business of conference to arrange, as was formerly the case. It will be noticed that only a few districts and missions have failed to report:

English Mission: The secretary of this mission, Bro. C. H. Caton, presents the names of 12 branches, 11 in England and 1 in Scotland, the names of which are found in my Recorder's Report. Bro. Caton also reports scattering and unorganized ones, as follows: At Wallsall 17, at Nottingham 3, at Mansfield 2, and at Leeds, Leicester and Glasgow each 1 member, with a present total altogether of 424, including 47 Elders, 30 Priests, 11 Teachers and 9 Deacons. He reports 67 baptisms for the year and 25 received by letter and certificate; also a loss of 21 by emigration, 5 by expulsion and 4 by death; net gain 62. One new branch organized, namely in London, known as the Lyme Grove Branch. (London, No. 2 in Recorder's Report). By this second London organization the work has a wider spread in that great city. Bro. Caton says that in most parts of that country where the Saints reside, the brethren are doing their best in the gospel work, and the chief branches are making steady progress, while at the same time the brethren and sisters in them are showing, by a praiseworthy example, the value of their faith. There are now 3 districts, Birmingham, Manchester and London, presided over respectively by Bro. John Seville, Joseph Dewsnup and Charles D. Norton. Bro. Caton speaks highly of the President of the Mission, Bro. Thomas Taylor, and his work. For further upon this mission see Bro. Taylor's letter elsewhere.

Welsh Mission: No statistical report. For account of its condition see the report of Bro. J. R. Gibbs, President of the Mission.

Danish Mission: No statistical report. See letter from Bro. P. N. Brix, in charge of the mission, for a statement of the situation of the work there.

Australian Mission: No statistical report. Bro. J. W. Gillen, in charge of the mission, gives an account of the condition of things in that country in his report found elsewhere.

Canada, Kent and Elgin District: Eight branches, besides 13 scattering members, making a total of 212, including 1 Seventy, 8 Elders, 11 Priests, 5 Teachers and 1 Deacon. Signed, R. Coburn, clerk of district.

Canada, London District: No statistical or other report from this district.

Alabama District: Four branches, total 199, 8 Elders, 5 Priests, 6 Teachers, 2 Deacons. Bro. W. D. Clark, clerk of the district, says that he has no official knowledge of the Macedonia and Brower's Creek branches, and so does not include them. Bro. Clark says that Bro. Heman C. Smith has done considerable preaching in that district, and the local ministry also, the past year. Many have been baptized, but he can not give totals of gain and loss for the year.

California, Pacific Slope Mission: No reports received, either statistical or spiritual.

Colorado District: No report except that of Bro. James Caffall, found elsewhere.

Florida District: No statistical report. Bro. L. F. West, the president, writes that there are 8 branches, and about 180 or 200 members, including 10 Elders, besides some Priests, Teachers and Deacons. During the year two branches have been organized and about 15 persons have been baptized. Little labor has been done excepting by Bro. Heman C. Smith, who has been diligent when he was with them. There is much demand for preaching, and the district asks the General Conference for the return of Bro. Smith to them. Bro. West reports that he is not able to do much himself, on account of necessary labor for his family. Spiritually the situation is not very encouraging, and the moral standing and prestige is not as good as it has been in the past. If Bro. Smith can not return, send us another good man.

Idaho, Malad District: No report, either statistical or spiritual.

Illinois, Kewanee District: Bro. J. A. Robinson, president, writes that from the lack of work being done in that district, the cause has not advanced the past year as was hoped for. He considers this lack of labor to be due to the unwillingness of the members to do their share of sacrificing in means to keep a minister in the field; but they expect that one or two Elders will do it all, and for the mutual benefit too, being satisfied if they only receive their railway fare and no more, though the district is able both in numbers and means to support an active ministry, provided they would give in a systematic way. Also some ill feelings and jealousies exist. The district has gained a few in numbers, and sufficient laborers to prosecute the work are still hoped for.

Illinois Northern District: 12 branches and 3 fragments, with 692 members; 67 baptized, 9 received, 27 removed by letter, 2 expelled, 8 died; net gain 39. The work progresses fairly well in the district, and no cases of difficulty exist that I am aware of; some branches lukewarm and not active, but the most of them are progressing, both in numbers and in spirituality. Outside of local authorities and the labor here and there in the district by Brn. J. Smith, Blair, Lanphear, Stebbins, Kier, Loftly, Pitt, Conover, Wickes, Weston, and perhaps others, we have also had ministerial labor by Brn. Forscutt and Patterson in some of the branches, both doing good work for us. H. A. Stebbins, secretary.

Illinois, Nauvoo and Spring Prairie District: 9 branches, 3 in Illinois, 6 in Iowa, 354 total membership, 1 Apostle, 3 High Priests, 2 of the Seventy, 22 Elders, 5 Priests, 12 Teachers and 8 Deacons. During the year 30 have been baptized, 9 received otherwise, 15 have been removed by letter, 5 died, 2 expelled; net gain 16. J. A. Crawford, president; H. N. Snively, clerk.

Illinois, Pittsfield District: 4 branches, including 1 High Priest, 1 Seventy, 4 Elders and 3 Priests. The North Bend Branch was organized May 25th, 1879. Net gain for the year was 13 members. Jackson Goodale, President; Emma E. Johnson, Clerk. The president mentions the unity and harmony that exist in their conferences. In one branch (Alma) some difficulty exists between members as yet not settled. Brn. Lake, Forscutt, Taylor and Crawford have labored some in the district during the year, and with good effect. The Pittsfield Branch have begun to build a chapel. Bro. Goodale says that he has labored all he could for the cause, and all his hope is centered in it. He expended during the year in his ministry $41.50 and received $28.24 towards it.

Illinois South-Eastern District: 6 branches, with a total of 256 members, including 1 High Priest, 13 Elders, 4 Priests, 9 Teachers, 4 Deacons. Dry Fork, Deer Creek, Springerton, Brush Creek, Tunnel Hill and Elm River are the branches. Spiritually the district is in a fair condition. The calls for preaching are many and laborers few. We would like to have a good Elder sent here. G. H. Hilliard, president; I. A. Morris, clerk.

Indiana, Southern: Eight branches, 189 members, including 10 Elders, 9 Priests, 3 Teachers and 4 Deacons. Harbert Scott, president, and E. C. Mayhew, clerk. The latter reports that during the two years post 40 have been baptized, 4 received, 19 have been removed by letter, 5 have been expelled and 4 have died, leaving 16 as the net increase for the two years. Bro. Mayhew refers the conference to Brn. Kelley, Springer and Weston for accounts of the condition of the work there.

Iowa, Decatur District: Eight branches, 2 of them in Harrison county, Missouri; 591 members, including 2 Apostles, 7 High Priests, 6 of the Seventy, 42 Elders, 16 Priests, 12 Teachers and 7 Deacons. During the year 83 have been baptized, 104 have been received, making a total increase of 187, and 47 have been removed by letter, 8 have died and 1 has been expelled, leaving a net increase of 133 for the year. J. S. Snively, president; O. B. Thomas, clerk. No report of the spiritual condition received.

Iowa, Des Moines District: Six branches, 242 members, including 17 Elders, 8 Priests, 5 Teachers, 2 Deacons. During the year 49 have been baptized, 9 gained by letter or vote, 11 have been removed by letter, 3 have been expelled and 2 have died, leaving a net gain of 42 for the year. I. N. White, president; John Sayer, clerk. The president says that spiritually the work stands much higher than one year ago. The local ministry are showing a greater energy, and Brn. D. C. White, N. Stamm and W. C. Nirk have done considerable work. Bro. J. H. Lake, of the Twelve, labored in the district a few weeks with good effect. Calls come from every side for preaching, and by the help of those who say they "will do all they can," it is hoped that the work will go forward.

Iowa, Eastern District: Five branches and about 125 members, including 1 of the Seventy, 9 Elders, 4 Priests, 3 Teachers and 2 Deacons. Bro. E. Larkey, president, reports that there are many calls for preaching, more than the few who can go to answer. Bro. Jerome Ruby was with him, and they were holding meetings every evening when Bro. Larkey wrote.

Iowa, Fremont District: 7 branches, 310 members, inclusive of 2 High Priests, 3 of the Seventy, 25 Elders, 9 Priests, 10 Teachers and 3 Deacons; also some scattering members not reckoned among the above; Brn. Daniel Hougas, president, and William Leeka, clerk of the district, represent the district as in good condition, with a few exceptions. The branches gain in spirituality, and the chances for preaching are many, but few of the Elders are responding. At Shenandoah the Saints are striving to build a meeting house. Bro. Hougas recently visited that branch, also Mill Creek and Plum Creek and found affairs in a good state. He has never seen a time when there was so great a demand to hear the gospel preached as there is now and the prospects are good for additions to the Church in that region soon.

Iowa, Galland's Grove District: 12 branches, (1 organized the past year), 627 members, besides 25 scattering ones, 1 Apostle, 3 High Priests, 3 of the Seventy, 49 Elders, 20 Priests, 20 Teachers, 10 Deacons; net gain of 25 for the year. Bro. J. R. Lambert, as delegate, reports that the spiritual condition of the district is good, in fact better than for a number of years past. All of the branches but one are in working order. The local Elders have made good efforts so that the truth has taken a firm hold on many hearts. J. W. Chatburn, president; John Pett, clerk.

Iowa, Little Sioux District: 8 branches, 520 members, including 7 High Priests, 5 of the Seventy, 42 Elders, 15 Priests, 15 Teachers and 8 Deacons. During the year 31 have been baptized, 48 added by letter and vote, showing 79 as the increase, while 21 have been removed by letter, 1 has been expelled and 6 have died, total loss 28, and therefore 51 is the net increase. There are also about 40 members scattered throughout the district. J. C. Crabb, president; W. C. Cadwell, clerk. They report the condition of the work in the district as being fair. Buena Vista branch was disorganized July 19th, 1879 and its members joined other branches: the Evening Star branch was organized April 20th, 1879.

Iowa, Pottawattamie District: 6 branches, 353 members, including 1 Apostle, 1 High Priest, 2 of the Seventy, 30 Elders, 10 Priests, 8 Teachers, 8 Deacons. 38 baptized, 21 received by letter and vote, total gain 59, 2 removed, 3 died, total loss 5; net gain 54. There are also about 25 scattering members in the district, including 2 Apostles, 2 or 3 of the Seventy, several Elders and 1 Priest. C. G. McIntosh, president; Frederick Hanson, secretary.

Kansas, Central District: Seven branches, 123 members, including 14 Elders, 4 Priests, 4 Teachers.—David Williams, president; William Williams, clerk.

Kansas, North-Western District: No reports of numbers or spiritual condition.

Kansas, Spring River District: Eight branches, 221 members, including 2 of the Seventy, 15 Elders, 7 Priests, 9 Teachers, 5 Deacons. A gain of 25 by baptism and 2 by letter during the year, a loss of 8 removed by letter, 3 expelled, 1 died, leaving a net gain of 11 for the year. There are also a number of scattering members in the district who are not recorded. J. T. Davies, president; J. A. Davies, clerk. The president writes that the work is in a tolerably fair condition, with plenty of chance for improvement remaining. There is no regular traveling Elder in the district, the excuse being inability to support one, but he has done what he could, considering his own temporal affairs. He refers the conference to Bro. Short for further news, as his labors have been there.

Maine, Eastern and Nova Scotia District: Nine branches, 243 members, including 2 of the Seventy, 9 Elders, 11 Priests, 7 Teachers, 1 Deacon. A gain of 32 by baptism, a loss of 3 by death; a net gain of 29 for the year. The spiritual condition of the work in this district is now improving, and the labors of Bro. T. W. Smith are encouraging, and his efforts successful in reviving affairs, and in stimulating to activity the local ministry, so that prospects are very encouraging. Samuel O. Foss, president and clerk.

Maine, Western District: No report statistical or otherwise, except as contained in the ministry reports of Brn. T. W. Smith and J. C. Foss, found elsewhere.

Massachusetts District: 7 branches, 5 in Massachusetts and 2 in Rhode Island, 445 members, 1 of the Seventy, 26 Elders, 15 Priests, 14 Teachers, 14 Deacons; 97 baptized, 2 died, 10 expelled; net gain of 85 for the year. Wm. Bradbury, president; F. A. Potter, clerk. The president says that the work seems to be advancing there, and all but one of the branches are doing well. Outside of the branches a number of the brethren are laboring, and people are realizing that there is more in the latter day work than they had dreamed of before. But not one of the ministry is laboring steadily, and so the work does not flourish as it should do. The Saints have not learned to make such practical sacrifices as the work of God demands in order for it to be preached everywhere. Bro. Bradbury has labored as president of the Providence branch, and elsewhere all that he could.

Michigan and Northern Indiana District: 16 branches, 8 of which in Eastern Michigan are not on the District Record, and Bro. S. M. Bass, secretary, requests their officers to send him full records to Lawrence, Michigan. The 8 branches on record have 309 members, and the work in the Western division is onward, and the prospect is that many will be baptized this season.

Minnesota, Northern District: 2 branches, but no statistical report of them received. In my report as Church Recorder, their numbers are given as they stand on my record. Bro. Marcus Shaw, president, says that they are neither flourishing nor have they apostatized, although no regular meetings have been held in either branch the past year, but he hopes for better times among them. They meet together and also teach their neighbors so that prejudice and ignorance of our doctrines are passing away. Bro. Shaw teaches the Bible Class in a Baptist Sunday School, and, taking his Inspired Translation with him, he has been able to create a good influence for the cause he tries to advance.

Missouri, Central District: No report of numbers or of its condition.

Missouri, Far West District: 8 branches, 396 members, including 1 Apostle, 1 High Priest, 1 of the Seventy, 36 Elders, 16 Priests, 18 Teachers, and 14 Deacons. During the year 48 have been baptized, 47 were received by letter and vote, 37 removed by letter, 4 were expelled and 5 died, leaving a net gain of 49 for the year. The Hayden Branch has been disorganized. No report of the condition of the work given. Signed, J. M. Terry, secretary of district.

Missouri, Independence District: 5 branches, (1 in Kansas), 187 members: 11 baptized, 55 received by letter, 14 decrease; net gain 52 for the year. F. C. Warny, president; C. M. Schroder, clerk.

Missouri, Nodaway District: No reports received either of the numerical strength or of the spiritual condition of the work.

Missouri, North-Eastern District: Four branches, 148 members. Three branches are progressing well, but the other one is not, yet it is hoped that the difficulties and differences will be overcome, and God's Spirit prevail to the peace of all concerned. John Taylor, president; Edward L. Page, clerk.

Missouri, St. Louis District: Nine branches, 569 members, 2 High Priests, 1 of the Seventy, 35 Elders, 23 Priests, 11 Teachers, 10 Deacons. During the year past 22 baptized, 1 received by letter, 15 removed by letter, 6 expelled, 4 died, showing a net loss of 2 members. A. W. Reese, president; Geo. Hicklin, clerk. Bro. Hicklin as delegate (present) reports that he considers the district in a pretty good condition with a few exceptions, and they are still trying to improve and get into a better one.

Montana District: Three branches, Reese Creek, Willow Creek and Butte, containing 56 members at last report, but a large increase by baptism has occurred since then. There are also many scattering members in the district. Bro. A. B. Moore is president, but Bro. E. C. Brand represents the district to this conference. Bro. Gomer Reese is clerk. Bro. Brand is instructed by the district to call upon the conference for two missionaries to be sent there, for they are needed, and will be well sustained financially. In fact the Saints intend also to aid in prosecuting the Utah Mission. The work in Montana prospers and peace and harmony prevail, and the spiritual gifts and blessings are eminently enjoyed.

Nebraska, Central District: 4 branches, 83 members, 1 High Priest, 6 Elders, 4 Priests, 4 Teachers, 1 Deacon; 6 baptized, 1 expelled, 1 died, net gain of 4 for the year, so reports Bro. G. N. Derry the clerk of the district. The Church record contains 3 of these branches with a total of 71 members, and Bro. G. W. Galley, the president of the district, reports the fourth branch of 8 members as having been organized recently. He also reports a gain of 7 by baptism and 8 by letter during the year, also a loss of 2, leaving a net gain of thirteen. Bro. Galley has evidently done much good labor in that district, both among the branches and away from them. He reports the arrival, March 14th of Bro. G. S. Hyde of Iowa, who is to labor in that part of Nebraska. Thus the prospects brighten, the Saints are growing, and the ministry finds plenty to do.

Nebraska, Northern District: The president, Bro. T. J. Smith, reports the spiritual condition of the district as being tolerably good. Some difficulty in two of the branches, but hopes of an early settlement of these things are had. 17 have been baptized and one new branch, the Lake Shore Branch, has been organized with a membership of 27. Considerable preaching has been done by local and traveling ministers, and besides those already baptized many others believe the gospel, and others are waking to an interest and inquiring and searching, so that outside of the branch difficulties referred to the prospects are flattering.

Nebraska, Southern District: 6 branches, (1 new), 290 members, including 1 High Priest, 18 Elders, 12 Priests, 7 Teachers and 8 Deacons. A gain of 15 by baptism and 4 received; 8 removed by letter, 5 died, leaving a net gain of 6 for the year. Nebraska City Branch has endured severe trials, Moroni and Plattsmouth are not very active, Palmyra and Blue River are enjoying the blessings of Christ and his gospel, and at Platte River the cause flourishes well. On the whole the state of the district is encouraging. Elders J. Caffall, R. C. Elvin, R. J. Anthony, James Perkins, G. E. Deuel, N. Brown and R. M. Elvin have labored in the district beyond branch labor. The demand for preaching calls for one or two to be actively engaged all the time. R. M. Elvin, clerk of the district reports as above, and Levi Anthony, the president, writes of his having visited most of the branches, and assisted Bro. Elvin in organizing the new branch reported above. He found some cold in the cause, but that the majority are working members. Demands for preaching come from every direction, and Bro. Anthony asks that Bro. R. M. Elvin be continued in that field, and also that another be sent to them. That district embraces 36 counties, making it a very wide field for the gospel work, with the Saints living in every part of it, and they pray for more laborers to come into those regions.

Nevada District: No report of numerical strength or of the progress of the work.

Ohio, South-Eastern District: No statistical or other reports.

Oregon District: No reports concerning this district.

Pennsylvania, Philadelphia District: Three branches, one in New York, one in New Jersey, one in Pennsylvania, 80 members, including 10 Elders, 7 Priests, 2 Teachers, 2 Deacons.

Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh District: No reports of numbers or of condition,

Pennsylvania, Wyoming Valley District: No report received.

Texas Mission: No statistical report. For the condition of the work therein see the ministry reports of Brn. Bryan, Cato and Thompson.

Utah, Salt Lake District: No statistical report. For accounts of the situation there, see the ministry reports of Brn. Blair, Derry, Anthony, Luff and Deuel.

Wisconsin, North-Eastern District: There are Saints living at Binghamton, Freedom, Seymour, Appleton, Oshkosh, Winneconne, Royalton, Waupaca and Flintville, Wisconsin, all numbered in the one branch of the district, called the Binghamton Branch, of about 40 members. At Fish Creek there are also some six or eight members, not of the branch. Hence they are all much separated, which hinders congregational worship, but Bro. W. S. Montgomery, the district president, writes that the Saints are trying to keep their covenants, except perhaps a few. Bro. Wait is laboring faithfully, the only one who does so, and has interested congregations. Bro. Montgomery has not been able in health to go out preaching this winter.

Wisconsin, Western District: 4 branches, 114 members, including 1 High Priest, 1 of the Seventy, 11 Elders, 2 Priests, 4 Teachers, 2 Deacons. Added during year 15 by baptism, and 1 lost by death; net increase 14 members. Frank Hackett, president, (present); Willis McDowell, clerk. The branches except one, are represented as prospering, having good meetings and enjoying the gifts of the gospel and the favor of the Lord. The district traveling Elder, Bro. F. M. Cooper, has done a great deal of good in the branches and elsewhere. Bro. C. W. Lange has also done some preaching this winter, and good branch labor has been done by Brn. Whitaker and Hackett. The district requests that those whose fields of labor include the region where that district is, should come and visit them, and give aid to the cause and strengthen the Saints and the ministry there.

The above is all that I have to report in addition to that submitted on yesterday.

HENRY A. STEBBINS, Church Secretary.

The report concerning the Pottawattamie District was called up and re-read, and the correctness of there being among the scattering members in that district two apostles was discussed, and it was stated that as one of those referred to had been declared by the last General Conference as rejected from the Quorum of the Twelve, therefore the report was erroneous in thus mentioning two. The chair thought, notwithstanding that act, he was still an apostle. This was differed from, and upon statement of the chair in answer to Bro. Forscutt that it could be called up hereafter if wished, was so left. [It was an error in copying the report, by which two apostles were spoken of. The original only spoke of one.—Sec'y.]

The report of the Musical Editor, Bro. M. H. Forscutt, was read as follows:

As Musical Editor of the Church, I beg to herewith submit my report, which is brief, and simply this:—As soon as the authorities of the Church are ready to publish the Harmony, I will be ready with the music. In fact, I am ready now, if the Board of Publication shall signify their willingness and ability to enter upon the work. Suggestively, I would ask, would it be improper to try and ascertain how many copies will be subscribed for at $1.25 each, and how many of those subscribing would pay in advance, so as to secure the Board of Publication in the enterprise? Numbers of very urgent letters have been received requesting that the publication be not delayed. It is hoped that some measures will be taken ere long looking to that end.

Very respectfully,
MARK H. FORSCUTT.

The report of the Plano Sunday School was read:

Herewith we beg leave to present the report of the "Rising Star" S. S., of Plano, Ill., for the year ending February, 1880. During the year 50 sessions were held, and the average attendance was 69; viz: of male officers and teachers, 5½; of female officers and teachers, 5½; of male scholars, 25½; of female scholars, 31½; of visitors, 2½; of offering, 35½ cents. Total attendance, 3,450. Total offering, $17.79; proceeds of Christmas entertainment, $16.38; total, $34.17. Paid for Hopes, books, etc., $34.06. During the past year the school has increased 248 in the total attendance.

F. G. PIRN, Superintendent.
L. CONOVER, Assistant Supt.

JOHN SCOTT, Treas. and Sec'y.

A letter from Bro. Marcus Shaw of Minnesota, relative to the issuing of lesson leaves for Sunday Schools was read by the Secretary.

A petition, signed by seven Priests, brethren Wickes, Conover, Crick, Etzenhouser, Steffe, Weston and Adams, asking that permission be granted to organize a Priest's Quorum, was read, and on motion the request was granted, with the provision that the Bishop take charge of the matter of organization, as provided for in the law.

The request of Bro. John Taylor in reference to difficulties at Bevier, together with the minutes of a council, was received and ordered to be referred to a committee. Brethren J. W. Chatburn, M. H. Forscutt and G. H. Hilliard, were appointed as said committee.

Requests concerning the holding of the Fall Conference were read: namely one from the Pottawattamie District that it be held at Council Bluffs, Iowa; one from the Galland's Grove District that it be held at Galland's Grove, Iowa; and one from the Decatur District that it be held at Lamoni, Iowa. These, together with a resolution from the Decatur District favoring the re-appointment of Bro. W. W. Blair in charge of the Utah Mission, were referred to the First Presidency and Twelve for their consideration, and to report.

The half yearly report of the Board of Publication was read and then referred to a committee of three, namely J. M. Harvey, M. H. Forscutt and I. N. White, to consider the document and report. The report of the Board reads as follows:

LAURENCE CONOVER, Secretary.

Report of the Board of Publication to the Annual Conference, April 6th, 1880.

The Board of Publication respectfully submit the following report of their operations for the past six months.

Immediately after the organization of the Board appointed by the semi-annual conference of 1879, an inventory of all property belonging to the Board of Publication was taken. The inventory of machinery, type, &c., has been based upon the actual value of the property at the present time, or what the same property could be replaced for to-day, showing a loss on valuation as compared with the inventory of February 16th, 1879, of $2084.07, and that the property represented by that inventory had been overvalued to that amount.

The Board found the stock of books on hand low, and at once set to work to replenish the stock, and are now able to report a full stock of all the Church publications with the exception of the Scriptures, which can not be printed upon the press now in use.

Your Board found upon the books of the Herald Office a large balance due the Church, arising from moneys sent as tithing, freewill offerings, &c., which had been passed to the credit of the Church account, but the money retained as a loan to the office and used in the purchase and alterations of the Herald Office building. This balance amounted to $850.00. There were also balances due Chicago firms for binding, paper, &c, $456.18. Your Board have to report that the balance due the Church has been reduced to $295. The balance due Bradner Smith & Co., for paper, amounting to $310.18 has been paid and in addition, bills of paper to the amount of $1944.40, making a total paid out for paper of $1354.18, which includes a six months' supply of paper now on hand. The balance due A. J. Cox & Co. for binding, amounting to $146.34, has also been paid and in addition bills for binding to the amount of $596.69, making a total paid out for binding Church publications of $743.03. The response to the call for new subscribers for the Herald is shown by an increase of over 500 since the 15th of December last. The larger part of these are on six months' credit as offered by the Business Manager, in December. Of them the greater part will expire in June and July, and the promptness with which the promises to pay in six months are met will determine the feasibility of issuing the Herald weekly instead of semi-monthly. Your Board being satisfied that it would result to the best interest of the Board and through them to the Church at large, for them to have the entire control of the book Joseph the Prophet, a one half interest in which had been bought by the former Board, made an offer to E. W. Tullidge for the remaining half interest which he accepted, and the entire right and interest in the copyright, plates, and all other appurtenances of the book is now vested in the Board of Publication. The work on the book is now being pushed forward as rapidly as circumstances will permit of, and will be ready for sale in the early part of July.

The Taylor cylinder press now in use, and upon which all the books issued by the Board, with the exception of the Scriptures, have heretofore been printed has become much worn in the tracks by twelve years constant use. This wearing, with the lost motion engendered by the same cause, render it impossible to obtain that accuracy requisite in the printing of books, while it will still answer all the requirements of a newspaper press for some years to come. This fact, together with the constantly increasing demand for books and the impossibility of printing such books as the Scriptures and Joseph the Prophet on that kind of press, render a book press an absolute necessity, and your Board have therefore contracted for a four roller Campbell book press, capable of producing the finest book work. The regular price of this press is $1600, but your Board obtain the press for $1300 cash and the Globe job press, valued at $175, making the total cost of the book press $1475. Of this amount there has been already donated by various brethren and sisters the sum of $350. The closing of the books of the Board of Publication on March 16th, 1880, show the net worth of the property in charge of the Board to be $9723.28. As compared with the net worth as shown by the opening of the books in May, this shows an apparent loss of $2074.07, but by a reference to the inventory of February 16th, 1879, and a comparison of that inventory with that of the present Board shows that the loss is not on the current business, but is due to the overvaluation of the property in the past, and the carrying of such overvaluation on the books. The current business of the Board shows a net gain of $858.92.

It is proposed in the future to balance and close the books every six months, so that the report of the Board to each succeeding conference will show the exact state of the business with the comparative gain or loss.

For the Board of Publication,
LAURENCE CONOVER, Secretary.

An appeal from Bro. Robert Fuller against an action of Bishop I. L. Rogers pertaining to him was read and referred to a committee, consisting of brethren Glaud Rodger, J. F. Adams and B. V. Springer, appointed by the chair.

The committee appointed last fall to audit the books of the released Board of Publication presented their report. It was read and ordered to be made the special business at two o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

The petition from Chicago (mentioned in the Secretary's report of yesterday) that Bro. M. H. Forscutt be continued by this conference in his ministry in that city, was taken up, read and considered.

It was moved that the petition be granted, and, upon request, Bro. Forscutt gave a statement of the situation in Chicago, and of the wants and necessities of the work if it should be prosecuted. Questions were asked and remarks were made by brethren Harvey, Kelley, Culver, Brand, Short, Yerrington and J. Smith, generally in favor of the work being continued. The chair suggested that the matter be referred to a committee, consisting of I. L. Rogers, G. A. Blakeslee and J. Smith. Then it was moved that the motion to grant the petition be amended by adding to it the words "that it be referred to the committee suggested by the chair." This was spoken to by brethren Crawford, Harvey, H. Robinson and Wickes, and the question being called, a vote was ordered to be taken upon the so-called amendment, and it was declared adopted. The motion as amended was called for and read, and spoken upon by brethren Short and Patterson, and it being considered that the original and the amendment were opposite in meaning, it was moved to reconsider the motion adopting the amendment, which was accordingly done, and thereby the amendment as well as the original motion were still left before the house for discussion. Then it was moved to lay the whole matter upon the table for future taking up. This was spoken upon by brethren Short and Harvey, and the question being called, the motion to lay upon the table prevailed.

A request was read in behalf of Sr. Springer, of Amboy, Illinois, for prayers, that she may receive health; and also one from Bro. Simmonds, of Canton, Illinois, in behalf of his daughter who is insane. Appointments for preaching this evening and to-morrow were made, a hymn was sung, and the benediction pronounced by Bro. R. C. Elvin.

At 7:30 p.m. Bro. M. T. Short preached, assisted by Bro. G. T. Griffiths.

THURSDAY, APRIL 8TH.

At 9 a.m. the Saints met for prayer service, and were presided over by brethren John Chisnall and G. S. Yerrington.

At 10:30 a.m. preaching by Bro. E. C. Brand, assisted by Bro. H. L. Thompson.

At 1:30 p.m., Pres. Smith in the chair, the hymn beginning "Lord of the harvest hear," was sung, and prayer was offered by Bishop I. L. Rogers.

The Secretary read the minutes of yesterday.

On the suggestion of the chair, the rules were suspended, by which the hour of two o'clock to-day was set to consider the report of the Herald Office auditing committee, and the President read a telegram from California, as follows:

San Bernardino, Cal., April 7th, 1880.
To Joseph Smith:
Mission divided: Oregon, Nevada, Northern California, Southern California. Endorse. Sent by Conference authority. Answer by telegraph.
J. BURTON.

It was moved that this conference endorse the division of the Pacific Slope Mission, as made by their conference in California as stated in the telegram.

Brethren J. M. Harvey and C. G. Lanphear asked questions on the matter, and they were answered by the chair. Brethren Warnky and W. H. Kelley spoke upon the subject, and the motion to endorse being put was carried by unanimous vote, and the Secretary was authorized to send a telegram to California, stating to the conference in session there that we so endorse.

A motion was adopted making it the rule that those who take part in discussions be limited to five minutes each, unless further time be granted by the body.

The chair then presented the question that was made the special order for this afternoon, and as both the President and his assistant were concerned in the matter under consideration as members of the Board of Publication, they vacated the stand and Bro. M. H. Forscutt was called to preside during the discussion of this question.

The report of the committee appointed to investigate the books and affairs of the Board of Publication was taken up, and Bro. W. H. Kelley stated that it had come to the knowledge of said committee that there were some errors in their report of yesterday which they wished time to correct, and upon motion being made to recommit the document to the committee for them to amend it, it was so voted.

President Smith took the chair, Elder Forscutt vacating.

The President announced having received a document from Bro. J. W. Briggs, and then proceeded to read it, as follows:

Again, and I trust for the last time, I am impelled to ask at your hand redress for wrong inflicted upon me by the late Semi-Annual Conference of September, 1879.

The facts connected with the said act complained of I will briefly recite:

At the Semi-Annual Conference of September, 1878, certain charges were made against me of teaching contrary to the belief of the Church, and an order made by said conference that the First Presidency appoint a court to adjudicate the case. To this I demurred, and gave my reasons to the Annual Conference of April 6th, 1879, and demanded, as a right, to be heard before the Quorum of the Twelve in their capacity of a presiding High Council. This was ordered by said Annual Conference, fixing the time for such investigation during the sitting of the next Semi-Annual Conference of September, 1879, at which time the quorum met, and the case was called, though the quorum declined to organize as such High Council, or to be governed by the rules applicable to an High Council. This was in contravention of my request, and the order of the said Annual Conference; and was so far, I think, a grave error, which entitled their findings to the character of a report only, and not a decision.

To that report and to the action of the said Semi-Annual Conference I now call your attention. The quorum report upon all the charges investigated, save one, either "not sustained" or find something not charged, which is equivalent, hence I regard these disposed of.

The remaining one on the Gathering, they report as follows: "We find that the brother does not believe there is any place of gathering as pertains to this Church, and holds that there is no command, now in force, requiring a gathering either into what is called the regions round about or to a local Zion or to a stake. He refers to the revelation of 1841, par. 15, as defining his position."

This finding is correct; but whether so holding is antagonistic to the view generally held by the Church (as affirmed) we will now inquire:

At the first conference of the Reorganized Church, held in the town of Beloit, Wisconsin, June 12th to 13th, 1853, the following was resolved: "That, in the opinion of this conference, there is no stake to which the Saints on this continent are commanded to gather at the present time."—Word of Consolation, page 2. As the author of this resolution I declare the intention to mean by the phrase "no stake," no place, and it was so understood; and at the Annual Conference of 1863 this same resolution was affirmed, and again at the Annual Conference of 1876. Here are three several declarations of General Conferences that there is no place to which the Saints are commanded to gather.

Further, in the report of the Quorum of the Twelve in April, 1878 upon the charge they say: "And it (the Church) particularly declared, in 1876 at the Annual Conference that there is now no place to which we are commanded to gather, and we consider the position of Bro. Briggs in apparent harmony with these positions etc."

Further, It is taught in Herald by a member of the First Presidency, (see Herald of September 1st, 1876), that there is not only now no law requiring a gathering, but that it is not "permitted." In the same article the same construction is put upon par. 15 of the revelation of 1831; viz, that the Church was exonerated from that work.

In the face of these facts and utterances on the part of the Church and its chief quorums, the Twelve report that the charge on "gathering is sustained," which implies that there is a place of gathering and a command now in force requiring it; thus contradicting themselves and all the utterances of the Church on that point.

Then follows the act of the late Semi-Annual Conference upon that strangely contradictory report, "that he (J. W. Briggs) stand rejected from the Quorum of the Twelve, and that he be forbidden to act, etc., until he make restitution to the Church."

This act is inconsistent with the several acts cited, inconsistent with its own act restoring Bro. Z. H. Gurley, who occupied identical ground with myself upon this question, which was well known to the Church. In his reasons for resignation he says: "I reject the local Zion or gathering in the Doctrine and Covenants."

It is inconsistent with its own act in adopting the report on the Decatur resolutions which report says; "We are further of the opinion, that it is not the intent and meaning of the said resolutions to make a belief in the revelations in the Book of Covenants a test of reception and fellowship in the Church."

The single issue now remaining is, I trust, so clearly pointed out and defined, that your perceptions of truth in the matter, of consistency, of impartiality, and of justice, will enable you to correct the errors and wrongs complained of. The question is not, Has there been a time for gathering, or will there be such a time in the future, but is there now a law in force requiring a gathering to a particular place?

I therefore ask the conference to pass upon this specific question, and justify me on this point, or justify my accusers. While I am not willing to anticipate God upon this, or upon any other subject, I hope to be willing to live in humble obedience to whatever may be his revealed will. And here I rest; in hope for the realization of that spirituality in religion of which Zion is and ever has been the lively symbol. All of which is respectfully and prayerfully submitted.

J. W. BRIGGS.

WHEELER'S GROVE, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa,
April 3d, 1880.

It was moved by brethren Kelley and Hilliard that it be received and considered. Bro. Chatburn asked the reason why it should be considered, and Bro. Kelley gave his reasons. Bro. Brand asked a question. Bro. Harvey thought the report last Fall was the decision of the traveling High Council, and that the case was then settled. If that was only a committee, then he and others had misunderstood the matter at that time. Bro. J. F. Adams asked a question. Bro. Chatburn did not think the petition had any right before this body, and gave his reasons. Conference by resolution had given the conditions upon which he might be restored, and he was opposed to taking up this document. Bro. Lake considered that it was not as a committee but as a council that the body having it in charge considered it last Fall. Bro. E. L. Kelley thought that the brother had a right to urge his objection to the finding of that body, and was in favor of considering his message. Bro. Crawford thought the appeal of an Apostle should be a direct one to the High Council. Bro. E. L. Kelley being allowed a second speech, said that the court did not wish to cripple Bro. Briggs as a minister, but the conference had passed such a resolution. Bro. Brand was allowed a second speech, and considered that Bro. Briggs ignored the court and erroneously calls it a committee. Bro. Patterson thought that as the brother had requested that his case be referred to his quorum, where it properly belonged, and his now calling the finding of that quorum as only the report of a committee, is a weak statement; but if there be a higher court to which he may desire to appeal, he is in favor of Bro. Briggs having the privilege. Bro. Harvey desired permission to speak again, but the question being called, the motion for privilege was denied, and the motion to receive and consider was voted upon and prevailed.

Two motions were then made; first, that it be deferred till to-morrow; second, that it be referred to the High Council. Speeches were made, or questions asked, by brethren W. H. and E. L. Kelley, H. Robinson, J. F. Adams, G. Hicklin, R. C. Elvin, J. Chisnall and J. M. Harvey, and the chair read a clause of the law from Doc and Cov. 99:13. The motion to refer to the High Council being put, was negatived, and the one to defer till to-morrow afternoon session prevailed.

The committee who were appointed yesterday upon the documents sent up concerning difficulties in the Bevier, Missouri Branch, reported:

We, your committee, appointed to examine and report on the papers forwarded from the Bevier Branch, and from Elder John Taylor, president of the district which includes that branch, report as follows:

We have carefully examined the minutes of the two meetings held at Bevier, in which the questions of disorganization, change of officers, and reorganization, were considered. We also conversed with Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths and Frank P. Scarelliff, president and secretary of the meetings referred to, from whose testimony we gather:

1st. That the members of the Bevier Branch had by these brethren and others been duly and personally notified of the special meeting called to consider the above questions.

2nd. From the authorized reports by us had, we discover that the Rules of Order had not, previous to the holding of those meetings, been adopted by the Bevier Branch. The personal notification given to its members was therefore all that ought to be demanded; and your committee is of the opinion that the absence of any number of the members of said branch from said meetings can not be properly construed into or advanced as a reason for repudiating the action of those who did attend as notified. Sec. 39, page 23, Rules of Order.

3d. That the meetings in which the action complained of was taken, was duly organized according to the rules laid down in the Rules of Order, Sec. 4, page 6, and Sec. 7, page 7.

4th. That the officers now in charge of the Bevier Branch were duly elected, according to rule laid down in Sec. 5, page 7, Rules of Order, and are therefore the legally constituted authorities of the branch.

In view of the foregoing, your committee recommend that conference declare the present organization of the Bevier Branch to be legal, and instruct the members of said branch that it is their duty to earnestly support and pray for the officers chosen, until they shall resign or be released for cause. Respectfully submitted.

J. W. CHATBURN,
MARK H. FORSCUTT,
G. H. HILLIARD.

The report was received and adopted and the committee was discharged.

The committee to which the appeal of Bro. Robert Fuller was referred, reported as follows:

We, your committee appointed to investigate the matter of an appeal to your body from Robt. Fuller, have carefully examined the matter set forth in the appeal, and find no cause existing for the same, and we therefore recommend a dismissal of the case.

G. RODGER,
B. V. SPRINGER,
J. F. ADAMS.

PLANO, Ill., April 8th, 1880.

The report was received, adopted and the committee discharged.

The Secretary also read a letter from Bro. T. J. Smith, president of the Northern Nebraska District, recommending Bro. Hiram Robinson (present) as worthy of appointment on a mission.

On motion the matter about the Chicago mission that was tabled yesterday was taken up, and the Secretary read the minutes of the proceedings then, showing that the original motion to grant the petition and the amendment were still before the house. The movers of the latter asked the privilege to withdraw it, which the body granted.

Bro. Kelley asked that if the petition was granted do we thereby commit ourselves to its continuance and to the expense of the same. Then the following was moved:

Resolved that, in the matter of prosecuting the Chicago mission, we refer the entire matter to a committee of three, composed of Brn. I. L. Rogers, G. A. Blakeslee and J. Smith, for them to take such action in the matter as they shall deem proper and practicable.

This substitute was spoken upon by brethren Chatburn, Lake and Harvey in opposition, they desiring that the conference express by vote of the body whether it wishes the mission continued or not, and if so ordered it can then be referred. The substitute was favored by brethren Elvin, E. L. Kelley, Yerrington and Blair, who thought the proposed committee were able to decide the matter in all its bearings. Bro. W. H. Kelley reviewed the matter and asked if the Church was prepared to furnish the means necessary for the proposed work. Then the question was called and the substitute being put upon its passage prevailed. Bro. Forscutt hoped that the committee would report before this conference adjourns, informing us as to their views.

The chair called attention to the fact that Bro. F. G. Pitt had not yet been ordained as a counselor to the First Quorum of Elders, as provided for last Fall and on motion it was ordered that he be ordained to said office at this session.

The following was moved:

Resolved, that in the opinion of this conference the ministry who neglect or refuse to be members of branches or districts, are disqualified for serving on missions.

This was spoken upon by Brn. Hilliard, Brand, Patterson, Harvey and H. N. Snively, in favor of, and by Brn. Jobe Brown, H. L. Thompson, Short, Elvin, Lake, W. H. Kelley, and Chisnall, in opposition, and the question being called and a vote being ordered the resolution was declared as affirmed. A division being called for, a rising vote showed 38 in favor and 12 disapproving.

Announcements were made for preaching this evening, and that to-morrow morning there would be no preaching, the whole time being desired by many to be devoted to prayer and testimony alone.

Adjourned with singing the doxology and benediction pronounced by Bro. W. W. Blair.

At 7:30 p. m., preaching by Bro. B. V. Springer, assisted by Bro. Glaud Rodger.

Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.
HENRY A. STEBBINS, ASSISTANT.

Plano, Illinois, May 1st, 1880.

THE missionary efforts made at the late conference, will, in their continuation in the field of actual labor, make demands upon the Church Treasury. And, as there is now but one recognized legal way by which the treasury may be made equal to the demand, all who can, should at once read and pay heed to the late appeal made by the Bishopric. All that the Bishopric can do is to make the necessity of the case known; and, when their appeal is responded to, to keep correct accounts of all they receive and pay away, all of which Bishop Rogers and his Counselors are doing, as is plainly seen in their quarterly and yearly reports. There is no embezzlement of funds, and no hesitancy to show the books. Such long and persistent carefulness must show to all, even the most sceptical, that the strictest integrity rules in the councils of the Bishopric; and we presume that the Saints have about concluded that we are not likely to die with millions of the Saints' moneys in our hands, for the Church and our heirs to quarrel about; for it must be seen that we do not control either the moneys of the Church, nor the Bishopric. They are men who think for themselves, and act upon their own judgment; men who are willing to confess that they are human and may err; men who are willing to counsel with their brethren, but who will not, (and may God bless them for it), submit to arbitrary human dictation, nor obey dishonest counsel. With such men the monetary interests of the Church are safely trusted; and the missionary laborers will be sustained to the extent that the treasury is supplied. Don't forget the appeal nor the necessities it presents.

WE see by late advices in the papers, that the Church in the Vallies of the Mountains under Pres. John Taylor, cancelled at their late conference about $800,000 of Emigration debts; or, more properly stating it, they have cancelled certain obligations enforced upon the poor whom the church emigrated to Utah through the Perpetual Emigration Fund, to the nominal amount of $800,000.

With us it is a question, how much of this sum was due them from fair and honorable contracts made with the poor, through the charity that should have watched over their interests; and how much was paper improperly obtained.

If all the claims cancelled were genuine, valid in law and collectable in fact, it was a very commendable act; but if they were not genuine, not good in law and collectable, the cancellation will be a sorry bid for cheap notoriety.

It is a hopeful sign, however, and clearly indicates a change of policy on the part of the Brighamite Mormons, whatever may have been the causes that have induced, or forced the change.

Joseph Young's dream about the tightening of the hoops until they burst is in process of fulfillment; and we take courage.

It is a princely sum to give away; and the hearts of the church must have warmed with generosity to have bestowed such a gift; and we hope that there are members living to whom this late generosity may be like sweet waters; but it is very late; so late indeed, that it sounds more like the closing out of bankrupt claims, than the beneficence of kindly, churchly love. Two million dollars to the heirs of Brigham Young, less than half of that sum to impecunious debtors. The world moves, and we think the Rocky Mountain Saints are waking up.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE late April Conference was signally blessed with the continuance of good weather during all its sittings. Besides the good weather, the session was characterized by a most excellent spirit. There was apparently a sort of dread over the earlier sittings, lest the Herald Office investigation might develop unduly disastrously; but when the worst became known, all this was entirely dissipated, and the freest inquiry was had. The attendance was good, probably the largest personal representation ever present in Plano. The preaching was decidedly good, from first to last; the brethren called upon to speak complying readily, and without unnecessary excuses. No bitterness of feeling was exhibited, and we believe none was felt.

An Elder of the Church in Utah had agreed to meet Bro. Luff in discussion in Sandy, Utah. We hope he will, but don't believe it, till it is done.

Bro. E. B. Mullin of Taitsville, Missouri, says that they are still battling for the cause of truth in that region.

Bro. C. E. Aldrich writes from Canyon City, Oregon, that the Prairie City Branch, twelve members, still exists, and Bro. Buckingham preaches for them. Bro. Clapp is expected in that region this summer, when likely some will obey the gospel.

Sr. Nancy V. Pearson (formerly Richardson) at Rancho, Gonzales county, Texas, writes that her husband and others would be glad to hear the gospel, and Mr. Pearson will welcome an Elder to his house. Bro. C. N. Powell, in the same county, also says that the people in his region are anxious to hear the truth preached. Sr. Pearson bears her testimony to the truth of the work we are engaged in, and expresses gratitude to God for his goodness to her, but so greatly longs for a preacher of the gospel to come there that she feels the isolation very much. We hope some one of the ministry can go to see them this summer.

Bro. J. H. Lake went to Keokuk, Iowa, the 19th of April, and wrote from there the 20th, that he was preparing for the season's campaign. May it be a successful and glorious one for him and for all true-hearted laborers.

Bro. L. H. Ezzell at Marmaton, Bourbon county, Kansas, is anxious to see an Elder come to his aid. He preaches some and thinks good people live there who need to hear more and who will do so.

Bro. Henry R. Evans writes us from Malad City, Idaho, that one J. Jones Davis, living at Provo, Utah, is out in the "Drych," a Welsh paper published at Utica, New York, challenging any "Josephite Elder" to discuss the successorship to the Presidency with him. Can not some of our brethren out there accommodate him? The challenge can be found in the "Drych" for April 8th, 1880.

Bro. Evans suggest that this elder Jones is willing to set forth his views in the HERALD if we will open the columns to him. We should like first to hear who he represents, that is to say, which party in the fight now waging.

Bro. George S. Lincoln of San Francisco, California, writes under date of April 3d, of the conditions of the Saints in that city. He states that the branch is in fair condition; and viewing things in a gospel light, they have many reasons to rejoice. They have no hall, but are meeting in private houses for preaching, prayer and testimony. Brethren are aiding in the preaching of the word, both from Oakland and the city.

Sr. Eliza J. Leason, whose address is Tollgate, Doddridge county, West Virginia, writes that she and the people thereabouts would like an Elder of the Church to visit them. She was baptized in Kansas by Bro. I. N. Roberts in February, 1879, and since removed to West Virginia. Whoever of the Elders go to answer the call from Clarksburg, as requested by the General Conference just past, Bro. Ellis, Devore or Brown, will find Doddridge county next to Harrison, in which is located Clarksburg. On the route from Ohio to Clarksburg is Glen Easton, Marshall county, where lives Sr. Caroline Wayt and her friends, who, we believe, would welcome the ministry.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn of Shelby, Shelby county, Iowa, wishes to inform those whom he has baptized that if any of them desire Certificates of Baptism and will furnish him with the items of their birth, they can have such Certificates by addressing him as above. We recommend all of them to apply that they may have in their possession these documents that attest their membership. Send your names and addresses.

Bro. Mark H. Forscutt returned to Chicago April 15th to renew the work in that city. He can be addressed at 619 West Lake Street.

Brn. Heman C. Smith, M. T. Short and G. T. Griffiths went from Plano to Galien, Mich., April 16th, to begin labor in the field to which they were assigned. Bro. Smith wrote the 20th that they had appointments out in three different localities.

Bro. L. B. Scott writes from Winamac, Indiana, that notwithstanding the fact that he has been preaching the gospel for twenty-five years, he is just as ready and willing to do so still as he has ever been. He would like some one to "come over and help" him.

Bro. James Y. A. Moffat, living at Almy, by Evanston, Wyoming Territory, writes us that he is an experienced stenographer, and would accept a situation as reporter. He seems to think some good might be done by an Elder calling there, and at Evanston.

Bro. J. D. Bennett writes from Cuba, Republic county, Kansas, April 10th. He has been preaching considerably through that region; has held two or three discussions, and was at one time threatened with a mobbing; but escaped anything further than annoying by running out and in, and whispering consultations in the house, with a stone or two thrown against the house outside. Brethren George W. Beebe and G. W. Lilly had aided him to some extent in missionary labor, especially Bro. Beebe. One of the discussions was with an Elder Case, of the Adventist faith.

Bro. Wm. H. Jones, formerly of Illinois, and now at Warm Fork Post Office, Oregon county, Missouri, says there are no Saints there excepting himself and wife, but they let their light shine, and some of their friends and neighbors are very much interested, and desire so much to hear the gospel that Bro. Jones thinks a branch of the Church could be raised up there by a due effort, and he says that they will welcome an Elder to their home, seven miles west from Clifton.

Bro. Henry Grim writes from Houston county, Texas, that he preached on the 4th of April in Angelina county, and baptized one into the Cheeseland Branch.

A Mr. George A. Davy, writes from Tuscarora, Nevada. He was raised under the auspices of Methodist influence; but has come to something of an understanding of the doctrine we teach, and bears the following testimony: "I am not ashamed, nor afraid to say that I believe that the book called the Bible, and the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and the ministry of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints were, and are, dictated by the same Spirit, even the same Holy Ghost that moved holy men of God to speak in olden times." This, from one who has had no opportunity to obey is strongly indicative of the force of the evidence attending a sincere reading of the books.

A northern minister was introduced to a colored minister, and inquired after his work: "I preach, sah, on Colonel Gordon's plantation." "How many colored people have you there?" "Well, sah, 'bout a 175." "And how many have you in the church?" "Dat 'pends, sah, altogether on de time ob de year. In de 'vival times dey's all members. In the backslidin' times der' nobody's members but Uncle Billy and old Aunt Katy."

MICHIGAN DISTRICT.

The conference for the Michigan District will be held at Clear Lake, Steuben county, Indiana, commencing Saturday, May 29th, 1880, at 10 a.m. Those attending by railroad will get off at State Line, on the Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw Railroad. This road crosses the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad at Jonesville. Ample preparations will be made to care for all visiting brethren. Brethren M. T. Short, G. T. Griffiths, Heman C. Smith, C. Scott and others, are expected to be present. Enquire for Jackson Smith when you arrive at State Line station.

Will the several branches in Michigan be so kind as to send in full reports. The official members should report in person or by letter. Shall we meet to hold the best conference we have yet held in the mission?

WILLIAM H. KELLEY,
President of District.

MARRIED.

BETTS—CROWSON.—At the residence of the bride's parents, in North Alton, Illinois, October 1st, 1879, by Elder James Whitehead, Bro. Joseph E. Betts, Jr., of Belleville, Illinois, to Sr. Florence Crowson, of Alton.

As Joseph and Florence their vows now have plighted,
In peace and in love may their lives be united;
And O may their joy, so bright and so pure,
Through sunshine and shadow for life ever endure.
Then closing their eyes in the sweetest repose,
Arise from the grave as Jesus arose,
To bask in the smiles of their Savior for aye,
Where light ever chaseth the darkness away.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES.

FRIDAY, APRIL 9TH.

From 9 to 12 a. m., a prayer and testimony meeting was held, in charge of Brn. G. S. Yerrington and Geo. Hicklin. A very excellent time was enjoyed, the Holy Spirit and its gifts being with the assembly, blessing, cheering and encouraging the Saints.

At 1:30 p. m., Pres. Blair in the chair, the assembly sung, "Men of God go take your stations." Prayer was offered by Bro. J. R. Lambert, and the minutes of yesterday's session were read.

The committee on the last half-yearly report of the Board of Publication stated that they were not ready to report, and so did the committee on Bishop Rogers' annual report.

The report of the committee of examination on the Board of Publication books and affairs, as amended by the committee since yesterday's session, as re-committed by resolution yesterday for that purpose, was read by the Secretary:

We, your committee, appointed by resolution of the Semi-Annual Conference of 1879 to examine the "Report and books of the Board of Publication, and report at the Spring Conference of 1880," respectfully submit the following:

By agreement we met at the Herald Office, Plano, Illinois, March 26th, inst, and commenced the investigation, which lasted ten days, Bro. Geo. A. Blakeslee not arriving, however, until the fourth day of the investigation.

1. We find that the Board of Publication assumed control of the Herald Office June 17th, 1872, and resigned September the 17th, 1879, having continued in office seven years and ten days, with the exception of two of its members, Bro. H. A. Stebbins, who was appointed April 1876, to fill the place of Bro. J. Smith resigned, and that of Bro. W. W. Blair, appointed Dec. 4th, 1874, in the place of E. Banta resigned. We find also that Robert Warnock was acting secretary of the Board of Publication from June 17th, 1872, until August 1st, 1874, and I. N. W. Cooper from August 1st, 1874 until May 5th, 1879.

2. We find on page one of the Ledger an entry as follows: Herald Office Dr. to sundries $5778.58, also an entry, Herald Office Cr. by sundries $18649.51. The pages of the Journal Day Book from which these items have been posted, as shown by the "page checks," have been taken out of the Journal, and can not be found. Two members of the Board have made the statement that these two items refer to the statements of assets represented by the entry of $18649.51, and liabilities represented by the entry of $5778.58, at the time when the Board assumed control of the Herald Office. Accepting this statement of the Board, the committee have collected all the items on the succeeding pages of the Ledger which represent the assets and liabilities, and find the following: That if the item "Herald Office Dr. to sundries" represents the total liabilities of the office, the aggregate of the items charged against the office—on the succeeding pages—show an excess over that item of $1039.75, while the item on the assets side show an excess of $67.05. The part of Ledger 'B' from which these amounts have been collected, is from pages 2 to 29 inclusive.

3. In Ledger 'A' page 499 the Ledger closed with "Bills Payable" to the amount of $1788.00 and the amount carried forward to page 14 of Ledger "B" and entered "By Herald Office $2000.00," showing an increase of indebtedness to the amount of $212, and nothing entered to account for the loss. One of the Board claims this account has been paid, but the books do not show it.

4. On page 133 of Journal "A" there are a number of accounts charged to "loss and gain," amounting to $261.81, and no explanation anywhere to show what those losses and gains consisted of. This is of frequent occurrence in the books, and no means of ascertaining any items included in the transactions to which the phrases refer, which shows a serious defect in the system of book keeping adopted.

5. In referring to the minute book of the Board of Publication we learn that the liabilities of the Herald Office when the Board assumed control of the same, was $5678.58 and assets $18749.51, showing a net worth of $13070.93 and at the closing of the books it was $9174.61 showing a loss of $3876.32.

6. On page 118 of Ledger "B" is an account of a transaction with a certain party and entries not having been made at the proper time upon the books, leaving the Board liable to a loss of $210.

7. On page 144 of Journal "A" accounts are balanced, books posted and $18.43 paid out more than had been received, which shows another defect in the system of book keeping.

8. Pages 765 and 766 of Journal A cash entries for Dec. 23, 1874, show a total of $61.15 on the Journal, while the Letter Register shows the amount received to be $76.25, showing a loss of $15.10 in one day.

9. On page 766 of Journal A a partial erasure of $3.00 is made, as shown by a letter received on that date from W. Whitney, also the original entries changed in various other places too numerous to mention, as may be seen on pages 704, 709, 710 and 824 of Journal A.

10. We find four hundred errors—a list of which is submitted with this report—consisting of omissions and erroneous entries in the cash account amounting to $1124.37, consisting of $935.07 debit and $189.30 credit. $194.81 was afterward refunded, which leaves a total loss of $550.96. This is partially secured by a note calling for $200, but the note being worthless the committee recommend that it be not allowed.

11. At the close of the term of the retiring Board we find that they were carrying as assets the following notes: (1) One given for $500, due April 1876, bearing interest at ten per cent, with payments of principal to the amount of $425, but on which no interest has been collected, said interest amounting to $114.37; (2) one given for $200; (3) one due bill for $40, due Oct. 4th, 1876.

12. An error occurred in the report of the Board of Publication to the Semi-Annual Conference of 1879—Herald page 326—in reference to the payment on Herald building, in that it states that $1064.34 was paid out of the current receipts of the office, whereas the facts are said payments were made with Church monies allowed to accumulate in the Herald Office and belonging to the Bishopric.

13. In the same report the statement is made that the prices of the books compare favorably with those of the same class of works and binding published by other denominations, which is thought by the committee to be very doubtful of being correct.

14. The making of the selling price of books at too great a percentage above that of the cost price was evidently a great mistake in policy; also the paying of too high salaries in some instances to employees.

15. The system of appointing Book Agents was a very loose and unsafe one, and resulted in a great loss of monies to the office, by appointing, in many instances, irresponsible agents. There was, however, some improvement made by the Board in this regard.

16. By the rules of incorporation the Treasurer is made responsible for the monies coming into the office, and your committee recommend that he be held to pay the losses that have occurred to the office so far as relates to the monies that passed through the hands of the employees of the Board.

17. We find that the Board erred against the interest of the office when discharging one of its employees by paying the full amount of his monthly wages, when they knew at the time that he was largely in debt to the office.

18. The want of care and accuracy is made conspicuously apparent by the Board in fixing the cost price of books as it appears upon their inventory at the Herald Office, a price smaller than the cost of the books being given.

19. The books do not show that any balance sheet showing the gain or loss on the business of the Herald Office was made from June 17th, 1872, until after May 8th, 1879.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WM. H. KELLEY,
G. A. BLAKESLEE,
PHINEAS CADWELL.

Presidents Smith and Blair retired, calling Bro. J. S. Patterson to the chair to preside.

It was moved that the report be adopted and the committee be discharged. An amendment was moved, that the provision to discharge the committee be stricken out, and after some speeches, it was put upon its passage and adopted. This left the motion to adopt as a whole before the house for action.

The following was moved as a substitute:

Resolved, that the report of the auditing committee be referred to a committee of seven, appointed by the body, who shall take the whole matter pertaining to said report into consideration, and report some way of settlement or action that will be in the interests of justice and equity to all concerned.

The propriety of this substitute was discussed, and the chair decided that the substitute was out of order. An appeal was taken from this decision and the chair was sustained, leaving the original motion to adopt the report as a whole before the house.

The following was moved:

Resolved, that we consider each section of the report of the committee separately.

After some discussion this was adopted, and the reading of the first section was called for. It was read by the Secretary, and its adoption was moved, and after discussion it was adopted.

The second section was read moved, and, after discussion, was adopted.

The third section was read, moved, spoken upon by several, and adopted.

The fourth section was read, moved, spoken upon and adopted.

The fifth section was read, moved and discussed. Bro. W. W. Blair was opposed to the adoption, as he said it would carry a wrong impression of the facts, and unjustly bring discredit on the Board; for, while the apparent loss alleged in this section may be real, it did not occur by any dishonesty of the Board, but by depreciation in the value of the property. Bro. E. L. Kelly said he did not wish any shielding or white-washing. Bro. J. Smith explained the discrepancy caused by wear and tear in any property that may be purchased. Brn. J. F. Adams and Forscutt spoke, and then Bro. Blakeslee stated, as one of the committee, that he had no doubt the discrepancy occurred because of depreciation in value, but the book-keeper failed to enter it upon his books of account, and they as a committee had no right to square the books by adding this loss to balance.

Then the following was moved by Brn. E. L. Kelley and J. A. Crawford as an amendment to the section:

Resolved, that, from explanations made here, it is the opinion of this assembly that the discrepancy shown in this section occurred from the failure of the book-keeper to enter upon his books the depreciation in the value of the property.

Bro. Heman C. Smith asked a question, which the chair answered, and the amendment was spoken upon, being favored by Brn. Curwen, Blair, Hilliard, E. L. Kelley, J. Smith, Forscutt, and opposed by Brn. Chatburn and Harvey, and Bro. Conover made some explanation of the causes of the difference existing. Then the question was called, and the amendment was affirmed by vote of the body, followed by the adoption of the section as amended.

The sixth section was read, followed by a motion to adjourn, which was followed in turn by a request from Bro. E. L. Kelley for the privilege to introduce a resolution and have it read, and upon motion, the rules were suspended, and the Secretary read a document on church representation to do conference business for the body, the article being introduced by Brn E. L. Kelley and M. H. Forscutt. It was laid on the table subject to call.

Adjourned by singing the Doxology and benediction by J. M. Harvey.

At 7:30 p m., preaching by Bro. Joseph R. Lambert, assisted by Bro. J. F. McDowell.

SATURDAY, APRIL 10TH.

From 9 to 12 a m., the Saints enjoyed another time of spiritual refreshing from the Lord, in prophesying by the Holy Spirit, and in bearing testimony and in praising God. The session was in charge of Brn. E. C. Warnky and G. S. Yerrington.

At 1:30 p.m., Pres. Smith in the chair, a hymn was sung, and prayer was offered by Bro. J. H. Lake.

The President called attention to and read the "Book of Rules," page 110, concerning calling members of an assembly to order for infractions of the rules, and he impressed upon the body the necessity of the strict observance of these rules.

Bro. E. C. Brand requested a suspension of the rules for the purpose of introducing new business, and, upon privilege being granted, a resolution concerning Bro. Henry H. Deam was offered by him and read by the Secretary. It was then laid upon the table for future consideration.

On call of the chair for reports of committees, quorums and other matter in his hands, the Secretary stated that he had a report from the committee on Bishop Rogers' books, one from the committee on Church Record matter, also reports from the High Priests, the Seventies and the First Quorum of Elders, and the ministry reports from Brn. Z. H. Gurley and W. H. Kelley of the Twelve, also report of the Presidency and the Twelve on the place of holding the fall conference and on missions.

The presiding officers vacated the chair, calling upon Bro. M. H. Forscutt to preside during the discussion of the question pending at yesterday's adjournment.

The sixth section was read. Its adoption was moved, and the motion to so adopt being voted upon, prevailed.

The assembly was asked concerning its further pleasure, and the following was moved:

Resolved, that the motion of yesterday to consider the report of the committee on the books of the Publishing Board by sections be reconsidered.

This was spoken upon by Brn. J. Smith, E. L. Kelley and J. W. Chatburn, and the reading of the remaining sections being called for, they were read by the Secretary, and the question being called, the motion to reconsider prevailed.

The following substitute was offered for the motion that the report be acted upon by sections, namely:

That the remaining sections of the report be passed upon as a whole.

This was spoken upon by Brn. Blair, Brand, Harvey and Lake, and an amendment to the substitute was moved, as follows:

And that the Board of Publication be permitted to accompany the committee's report by an explanation.

Questions were asked or speeches were made by Brn. W. H. Kelley, Hilliard, E. L. Kelley, Chatburn, Brand and Harvey, when the question being called, the amendment was voted upon, and declared adopted. Division being called for a rising vote showed 24 for and 13 against.

A question was asked by Bro. J. Smith, and an additional amendment was offered, as follows:

Which explanation shall be submitted to this conference for consideration and adoption before being published.

This was discussed by Brn. J. Smith, E. L. Kelley, Harvey and Hilliard, and the question being called, this further amendment was adopted.

Then the substitute, as thus twice amended, was put upon its passage and adopted.

The following was moved and adopted:

Resolved, that we now consider and adopt the committee's report as a whole, and as amended.

A subsequent motion was introduced and by vote prevailed, reading as follows:

Resolved, that any explanations made by the Board of Publication upon the report of the auditing committee be made to the conference at this session.

The Presidency, to whom was referred the matter of the location of the next Fall Conference presented their report:

The Presidency and Twelve, to whom the matter of location of fall session of conference was referred, beg leave and submit that they have examined and considered the petitions from Lamoni, Council Bluffs, etc., and recommend the following: Resolved, that the Semi-annual Session of Conference be held at or near Council Bluffs, Iowa, to convene Sunday, September 12th, 1880. Respectfully,
J. SMITH,
J. H. LAKE.

It was moved to endorse, and that the said session be held at Council Bluffs, Iowa. Other motions were made, one favoring it being held at Lamoni, Iowa; another that it be held at Galland's Grove, Iowa, and another that it be held at Magnolia, Iowa.

Those favoring the various places, being called upon, stated the benefits of each place, and a vote was taken upon each, with the following result: Magnolia 2 votes, Galland's Grove 5 votes, Lamoni 2 votes, Council Bluffs 43 votes. Then it was voted that the choice of the latter place be declared as an unanimous one, which was done.

The committee on the books and annual report of Bishop I. L. Rogers, returned said report and their findings in the matter, which were adopted unanimously. The combined report reads as follows:

Annual Report of Bishop Israel L. Rogers of moneys received and paid out by him during the year ending March 31st, 1880:

Balance in hand April 1st, 1879.....	$1,263 13
Receipts of tithings and offerings, items heretofore published in the quarterly reports..	4,716 94
Receipts from sale of 20 acres of Church land .....	375 00
Total credits .....	$6,355 07
Expended for the ministry, the poor, and for various Church purposes, as published quarterly .....	5,122 33
Balance remaining on hand...	$1,232 74

Of the forty-one Bishop's Agents appointed, thirty-four have reported to me this Spring, thirty-three of which will be found to agree with my book accounts with said Agents, though in several cases their reports were only adjusted by subsequent correspondence. The other one is incorrect and does not agree with the books kept by me. From the other seven agents I have no reports. Four of them are recent appointments, and the other three have failed to send a statement, but no balances stand charged against them on the books. The statement accompanying this will show the last balances, the receipts and the expenditures of these thirty-three Agents for the year, together with the amounts now due the Church from them or due to them. As will be seen $3294.95 was received, and $3522.12 was paid out by them, including sums sent to me during the year.

If the conference has any further instructions to give concerning the publication of the itemized reports of the Agents I would be pleased to have them.

In accordance with the wish of the Church I have called upon those having meeting houses or other Church property in their charge, to report the same and its valuation. Six chapels have thus been reported out of all the number that are now owned by the Church, or in process. They are as follows: One at San Bernardino, California, valued at $800; one at Kewanee, Illinois, valued at $1000; one at Sand-wich, Illinois, valued at $1200; one at Springertown, Illinois, valued at $650; one at Little Sioux, Iowa, valued at $800, and one at Fall River, Massachusetts, valued at $1200.

Also by the will of the Church the Bishopric have prosecuted the matter for the possession of the Kirtland Temple, and, in the Court of Common Pleas, Lake county, Ohio, a decision was rendered by Judge

Sherman in favor of the Reorganized Church as the rightful owner of said property, and as the real successor of the original Church of 1830. In this case Bro. E. L. Kelley acted ably and wisely as our attorney, assisted by two other lawyers not of the Church, and Bro. Josiah Ells was present as a principal witness as to the succession, and the Bishopric feel that these nearly all of the Saints feel more or less neglected by reason of the small amount of preaching done in the respective places visited. This, I think, can be obviated only by sending more laborers into that mission. Brn. B. V. Springer, Geo. Weston, C. Scott, Robert Davis, J. J. Cornish with myself, constitute the ministerial force who have been constantly in the field. Bro. Charles Wickes labored some months in Michigan during the winter, and Bro. J. F. McDowell for a time in Ohio, and each report a good work. We hope they will be like minded hereafter.

The spiritual condition of the Saints is improving, and at the conferences unity of sentiment has characterized all of the meetings, with a single exception, and even that not serious.

The financial side is improving, and noble and generous hearts are putting forth an effort to sustain the cause, temporally. On the whole, there has been a decided improvement in the condition of the work, and members and ministry feel encouraged to labor on.

Zenas H. Gurley, of the Twelve, writes from Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa:

In pursuance of the appointment of last Semi-Annual Conference I have maintained a regular semi-monthly appointment at Davis City, until recently, have now changed it to a monthly, but hope to be ready to renew the semi-monthly appointments soon, as the people seem anxious, and at this place the interest still continues good, as may be seen by the large and attentive congregations. It is but proper to mention here that Mr. John Clark, of Davis City, has built and furnished a fine brick church there, which he styles "The First Union Church," and it is open to all people for religious purposes. Though not a member of any church, he believes that force of association, and a proper understanding of each other's views, goes far to remove the barriers which separate those who call themselves Christian. Hence the object of a "Union Church." Our services are held in said church, and the people seem to welcome us. It was my privilege to discourse upon three funeral occasions at this place upon three consecutive days, and what seemed especially cheering in the matter was that the three persons taken (all of whom were adults) were members of other churches than ours. Instances of this kind occur frequently, in this region, and speak largely, I think, in favor of the views held by us as a people, relative to "life and immortality brought to light through the gospel." I have spoken once at Pleasanton, in the Methodist Chapel, with good audience, and was earnestly requested to return there, which I hope to do soon. Have also spoken a number of times in Lamoni Branch, and I am pleased to say, as a rule, enjoy fair to good liberty of speech. I made a flying trip to Nebraska City, touching at Shenandoah, Hamburg and Plum Hollow. Met with the Saints in Shenandoah and enjoyed the privilege of saying something in defense of our faith. At Plum Hollow I was in time for their conference, and had the pleasure of speaking twice to a packed house, and plenty of openings appeared all along the line. All around I enjoyed the association of the Saints and the pleasure of meeting with them, and hope to many times again. I called at St. Joseph, Missouri, and was kindly entertained by Bro. J. H. Peters and his amiable lady. Met Brn. Marchant and Thos. Nutt. Hope next time to be able to comply with the many urgent requests and "stay longer."

I am striving to "owe no man," and thus liberate myself for the ministry entire. Until then, however, I shall not be idle, but shall continue to testify of Jesus the Savior of men, believing as I do that God's love and truth will yet predominate over the whole earth, and Jesus reign as King of kings and Lord of lords. And to bring to pass this glory of the Father, may peace, love and truth abide with all the faithful in Christ Jesus our Lord.

The report of the Quorum of High Priests was read, also that of the Seventy, and they were laid upon the table for future consideration.

brethren did a good work. The expenses to the Church have been $211.07, and $33.15 is yet due to brethren who held the temple for years and paid the taxes on it, which the county would not refund.

We would suggest that an able minister be placed at Kirtland to preach in the temple and in the country about, and to answer the questions of the visitors who daily come there from all parts, to see the famous building, and inquire concerning the faith and doctrine of the Saints.

But nine financial reports of the ministry have been received this Spring up to April 6th, although the request was for them from all the traveling ministry.

Further I have only to say that the financial prospect grows brighter, and the Bishopric hope ere long to see the means furnished whereby laborers may be sent into all fields, and whereby all other Church duties may be attended to.

Respectfully submitted,

ISRAEL L. ROGERS,
Presiding Bishop.

Per H. A. S., Sec'y.

Your committee to whom was referred the Bishop's report, submit the following: We have examined the same, together with the books, and find them correct. Respectfully,

PHINEAS CADWELL,
WM. H. KELLEY,
G. A. BLAKESLEE.

The following was moved by Brn. Springer and Crawford:

Resolved, that hereafter no property of the Church shall depreciate in value, nor shall any member of the Church be liable to make mistakes.

This caused quite a laugh for its suggestiveness, but, on motion, it was laid on the table.

The following ministry reports were read:

W. H. Kelley, of the Twelve, (present), reports:

At the last conference I was continued in my former field of labor, embracing Michigan, Indiana, Canada and Ohio. Soon after conference I entered upon the duties of the mission, laboring principally in Michigan, Indiana and Canada. In Michigan I have visited Galien, Troy, Sanilac county, Mason county, Lawrence, Reed City, Cadillac; and in Canada, London, Carlingford, Osborne and Bothwell; also Steuben county, Indiana, and Coldwater, Michigan. In all these places I found attentive hearers and investigators. The Saints living in those places are, as a rule, earnest and endeavoring to build up the faith. This has wrought effectually in places toward allaying prejudice and inviting a consideration of the facts upon which the faith rests. The Saints are fast learning that the honor of the cause is, in a good degree, committed to them, and its worth measured in some sense by their lives, to those without, hence are growing wiser and more careful, as a rule.

The Lord is indeed opening the way, enlightening the minds, and softening the hearts of the people, so that many of the leading and local papers of the country are beginning to give us favorable notice. It is a large field and the laborers few, and the churches widely scattered; and it has been a source of great anxiety to me as to the best means of meeting the wants and demands; for

We, your committee on Church Record, find that the present style of reporting by branches, often gives a fictitious strength numerically; as many of the branches have on their rolls names of many members absent from their respective vicinities, their whereabouts being often unknown; and also believing that the practice of dropping such members from the branch rolls works injury to the cause and confusion to the Church Record, we would respectfully recommend:

1. That this conference instruct that the names of all scattered members be retained on the branch rolls; and that branch clerks hereafter be required to report the number of resident and the number of scattered members; until such scattered members be removed from the rolls according to law concerning the granting of letters of removal.

2. That hereafter blank reports for branches be so changed by adding blank space providing for so reporting.

And we further recommend that an assistant Church Recorder be appointed, or that we empower the Recorder to select such assistant.

J. A. CRAWFORD,
JOHN CHISNALL.

It was adopted and the committee was discharged.

It was moved that the document submitted by Bro. J. W. Briggs be now taken up. The motion being put to vote was declared lost. Division being called for, resulted in a vote of 25 to take up and 22 against.

The following was moved by Brn. Forscutt and E. L. Kelley:

Whereas, in his letter to this conference, appealing from the decision of last Semi-Annual Conference, a decision based upon the findings of the Quorum of the Twelve in his case, Bro. Jason W. Briggs concedes the position assumed by the Reorganized Church on the subject of "The Gathering;" and, Whereas, in so doing, he virtually recedes from the position charged against him on this question, be it hereby

Resolved, that he be exonerated from the disability attaching to him now, so far as such disability results from the findings of the Quorum of the Twelve in his case, and the action of the Semi-Annual Conference thereon, in which he was declared guilty of teaching contrary to the revelations of God and the faith of the Reorganized Church on the subject of the gathering.

Provided, that he shall in express terms, recede from the position the Quorum of the Twelve found him guilty of occupying, in antagonism to the Church.

This was spoken upon or questions were asked by Brn. Harvey, Elvin, E. L. Kelley, Brand, Chatburn and Forscutt. Then the question being called the motion was declared as having been adopted. A division being called for, a rising vote showed 40 in favor of the motion and 8 against, and the preamble and resolution thus prevailed.

Bishop Rogers made a statement in regard to the organization of a quorum of Priests, and directed the Priests to appoint a secretary and gather names for enrollment, and then notify him and he will meet with them at 9 a. m., Monday next.

Adjourned with singing, "This God is the God we adore," and with benediction by Pres. Smith.

At 7:30 there was preaching by Bro. Columbus Scott, assisted by Bro. J. A. Crawford.

SUNDAY, APRIL 11TH.

At 10:30 a. m. preaching by Bro. Joseph Smith, assisted by Bro. J. H. Lake. Bro. F. G. Pitt was ordained as First Counselor to the President of the First Quorum of Elders under the hands of Brn. W. H. Kelley and J. W. Chatburn.

At 3 p. m. the house was filled with Saints assembled for the purpose of partaking of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and to engage in services of prayer and praise. After the opening hymn three who had been baptized during the interval between the morning and the afternoon services by Bro. M. H. Forscutt, were confirmed under the hands of Brn. Forscutt and W. H. Kelley. After that the emblems were blessed by Brn. Joseph Smith and H. S. Dille, and passed by Brn. L. Conover and G. F. Weston. Then testimonies were borne by twenty persons, and the gift of tongues was manifested. Time forbade the many who evidently wished to take a part in the worship of the hour from doing so.

At 7:30 p. m. Bro. M. H. Forscutt preached, assisted by Bro. J. Smith.

MONDAY, APRIL 12TH.

At 9 a. m. the usual prayer meeting was held, continuing till 12 m. It was in charge of Brn. Geo. H. Hilliard and Jobe Brown.

At 1:30 p. m., Pres. Blair presiding, sung an hymn and prayer was offered by Bro. W. H. Kelley, and business was proceeded with, the minutes of the 10th and 11th being first read.

The committee appointed upon the last half-yearly report of the Board of Publication presented the following, which was received and adopted:

We, your committee on examination of Report of Board of Publication for the term commencing August 16th, 1879, and ending February 16th, 1880, beg to submit that we have carefully examined said report, have compared it with cash book, ledger, and journal, and find the accounts correct, with the discrepancy only of 97 cents, and this does not affect the cash receipts, nor the cash balance as shown on report of Board of Publication, the error being simply in posting so as to make the ledger account 97 cents more than the cash book calls for. Very respectfully,

J. M. HARVEY,
MARK H. FORSCUTT,
I. N. WHITE.

The report from the Quorum of Priests was read:

Persuant to call ten priests met April 12th, 1880, and, after the opening exercises, Bishop Rogers spoke upon the necessity of a quorum organization, and the duties of Priests, and manner of organizing under the law. All present spoke on the question of organization, and unanimously agreed on its necessity and propriety. On motion Bishop I. L. Rogers was chosen as president and Bro. E. L. Kelley as secretary. The president was instructed to procure a record, and the members contributed two dollars for that purpose, the secretary being authorized to act as treasurer of the quorum. The following was adopted:

Resolved that the members present be requested to present the names of Priests whom they know to be worthy to be passed upon, and the secretary be requested to correspond with and enroll them as members upon obtaining their consent.

The following names were enrolled; Rudolph Etzenhouser, Frank Steffe, Wm. M. Rumel, Chas. Wicks, D. D. Williams, Wm. Crick, Daniel McPherson, Stephen N. Adams, G. F. Weston, Lawrence Conover, Henry Roberts, E. L. Kelley.

The session was a quiet and peaceable one, and the members parted, determined to show in the future good labor for the Master.

It was adopted.

The report of the Quorum of Seventy, as read on the 10th, was reread, and it was moved that it be adopted.

1st. We, the quorum of Seventy, upon advisement with the following named brethren do hereby recommend them to Conference for ordination to office of Seventy: Columbus Scott, J. L. Bear.

2nd. The quorum having made choice of Bro. Glaud Rodger as its president, to supply the vacancy occasioned by the removal of Bro. C. G. Lanphear to another quorum, hereby recommend him to this conference for ordination to that position.

3rd. One of our quorum, Bro. J. H. Hansen, having been called from the field on account of embarrassing financial circumstances; and, whereas, we consider him an able, efficient, and worthy brother; therefore, Resolved that we ask the Conference to take some steps to liberate him and place him in the active ministry.

5th. Whereas, in the providence of God, our beloved brother, Frank Reynolds, has been removed from us by death, by which we have lost an efficient secretary, and in common with the Church, a worthy member; and, whereas, our loss has been and is in direct sense a still more serious loss to his family to whom his virtues most fondly endeared him, be it Resolved that we do hereby tender to his bereaved wife and family our sympathy and condolence, praying for them, that He who has promised to be a "husband to the widow" and a "father to the fatherless" may be their sufficient helper, defender and guide.

By order of the quorum of Seventy.

B. V. SPRINGER,
J. S. PATTERSON, } Committee.
GLAUD RODGER,

E. C. BRAND, President.

J. F. McDOWELL, Clerk.

Bro. Glaud Rodger asked a question in regard to the calling of the special witnesses and other ones named in the revelation of March, 1873. Remarks were also made by Brn. Lanphear, Patterson and Springer. The brethren of the Seventy wished to know if they as a quorum can properly and justly go outside of the three special witnesses named in the revelation of 1873, two of whom were ordained as presidents of Seventy, in making their choice as a president of the whole quorum. Bro. W. H. Kelley gave his views. It was moved that the report of the Seventy be acted upon by sections. This was lost. It was moved to refer it back to the quorum for further action. This was opposed, and, upon being placed before the Conference, it was voted down. The following was moved and adopted:

Resolved, that the names of those recommended by the Quorum of Seventy for ordination be taken up separately.

The Secretary read the first name recommended, that of Bro. Columbus Scott. On request, Bro. Scott stated his willingness to labor in that body, if he could be of more service to God thereby, and it was, by vote of the assembly, ordered that he be ordained.

Bro. J. L. Bear's name was read, and, upon his expressing a like willingness to labor in such a capacity, a motion was made that he be ordained, which prevailed.

The item from the quorum concerning the choice of Bro. Glaud Rodger as president of the Seventy was read, and his ordination to said office was ordered.

The clause in reference to Bro. J. H. Hansen was read, and, upon motion, the matter recommended was referred to the Bishopric and the First Presidency.

The above report as a whole was adopted by vote of the conference

Pres. Smith took the chair.

The report of the High Priests' Quorum was read:

The quorum has held two meetings during the present session of conference, one on the 8th, and the other on the 9th inst, and from the reports then presented we submit the following report:

There are 88 names on the Quorum Record, 36 have been removed for cause or by death, leaving 52 members as now constituted the quorum. From nine of these the quorum has no report on record. Of the 52 members now in the quorum, five are between 65 and 70 years of age, ten between 70 and 80, and five between 80 and 90, the eldest being 89 years. There are thus twenty members in the quorum, who, by reason of age and infirmities, some partially, others totally, are unfitted for duty, leaving but thirty-two members capable of duty. Of these thirty-two, nineteen are in the service of the Church, six being missionaries under General Conference appointment, three as the Bishopric of the Church, and ten as district and branch presidents. We think, therefore, that the quorum may be said to be in fair condition.

Of the six members of the quorum under General Conference appointment, and devoting themselves wholly to the ministry, C. Derry, president, is in Utah, M. H. Forscutt in Northern Illinois, R. C. B. Elvin in Nebraska, C. G. Lanphear in Northern Illinois, J. Landers in Kansas, and J. A. McIntosh in Iowa. I. L. Rogers, H. A. Stebbins and D. Dancer also as the Bishopric, H. A. Stebbins also as Branch President, and Church Secretary and Recorder.

The following ten brethren labor as holding local jurisdiction: J. Parsons in Pennsylvania; H. P. Brown and D. S. Mills in California; G. A. Blakeslee in Michigan; J. W. Chaburn, C. G. McIntosh, J. C. Crabbe, D. M. Gamet, S. S. Wilcox, and P. Cadwell in Iowa. The remaining thirteen of our membership able for duty are engaged in the localities where they reside, under local jurisdiction.

The brethren now under General Conference appointment express themselves as being willing to be continued in their present missions, or to be removed to new fields, as the Church may appoint, with one exception, resting on a contingency that may not arise, and need not therefore be named.

The Quorum also recommend to your honorable body the names of Donald Maule and of Eli Clothier, of Western Iowa, and ask that you endorse the recommendation for ordination to membership in the High Priests' Quorum.

Respectfully submitted,

MARK H. FORSCUTT, President pro tem.,
HENRY A. STEBBINS, Secretary.

It was moved to adopt the report, and, further, that the names recommended by said quorum for ordination, be taken up and acted upon separately.

It was moved to ordain Bro. Donald Maule a High Priest. Attention was called to the resolution adopted last fall, that reads, "Resolved, that no quorum is authorized to enroll a brother without his consent," and, as it was not found that Bro. Maule had been conferred with upon the matter, a motion to lay the matter upon the table prevailed.

Bro. Eli Clothier's name was then taken up, and, for like reason, was disposed of in the same manner.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt, as a question of privilege, asked that either the President, or one of the Twelve, whoever he may appoint, (Bro. Forscutt said that he preferred Bro. Lake), preach during this conference on the subject of the Priesthood, and tell us where, either in ancient or modern revelation, we are taught that every member of the priesthood should be called by revelation.

The request of Bro. Robert Fuller that the Kirtland Branch, Ohio, be disorganized, was referred to Bro. W. H. Kelley, who is in charge of the mission that includes that State.

The request of Bro. M. Shaw, in regard to Sunday-school lesson-leaves was referred to the Board of Publication.

The following was moved by Brn. E. L. Kelley and Forscutt:

Whereas, the extended growth of the Church in the various States and Territories of the United States and in all parts of the world, separates its membership by distances of hundreds and thousands of miles from each other, and renders any one place of meeting in a body for the transaction of general Church business impracticable, and

Whereas, by reason of this and other obstacles, it is impossible to secure the presence of members and officers at the general Church gatherings in such numbers as to obtain the consent, and a fair and true expression of the will of the entire Church on questions which arise in the transaction of the business of the same, and

Whereas, the only General Assembly of the Church as at present represented are its General Conferences, which fail to afford an effective means of ascertaining the general wishes and expressions of the Church at large, by reason of the danger of advantages being taken to defeat the will of the body as a Church by persons unscrupulous or ambitious influencing the masses who form the majority of the present voting membership in the localities where such conferences are, or may be held, and

Whereas, it is necessary and desirable to obtain the full and free expression of the entire Church membership upon all questions of general interest relating to the transaction of the business of the Church and thereby maintain inviolate the great principle held sacred by all free men, viz: "Action by common consent under the law," and

Whereas, under the laws of the Church we recognize the right of the body to adopt such rules and regulations in the calling and organization of General Conferences as shall tend to subserve the general good and advance the highest interests of the whole body, therefore be it

Resolved, by the General Conference now assembled at Plano, Illinois, That all conferences and assemblies which shall hereafter be held for the transaction of business for the Church as a whole, whether such conference or assembly be special or annual, shall be composed of members having one or more of the following qualifications: (1) Persons ex officio members of such conference or assembly. (2) Members made such by reason of their being under appointment from General Conference. (3) Delegates to General Conferences. Provided however, that nothing herein contained, shall relate to, or prevent the calling of a conference of the quorums of the Church for the transaction of business as authorized by the laws of the Church, the general assembly, proper, and provided further, that nothing herein shall prevent any quorum of the Church transacting such business as may legally come before it and the right to present the same to such general conference or assembly for its action thereon.

2.—Resolved that a committee of five (of whom the President of the Church shall be the chairman) be appointed by the President of this Conference to arrange and report a system of representation in accordance with the foregoing preambles and resolution.

A motion to defer was made and amended, the whole reading as follows:

Resolved, that these preambles and resolutions be spread upon the record, and their further consideration be laid over till the next meeting of conference, but the committee shall be appointed at this conference, and requested to report at the next fall conference.

A motion concerning the Concordance to the Book of Covenants was made and amended, reading, as finally adopted, as follows:

Resolved, that the Board of Publication is hereby requested to have the "Concordance and Reference Guide" revised and printed in or bound with the Book of Covenants, omitting from said Concordance, etc., only such revelations as were ordered by the last Fall Conference to be hereafter added to the Book of Covenants.

The following was moved by Brn. Brand and McDowell:

Whereas, a revelation was given in 1853 through Bro. Henry H. Deam, instructing the Church how to organize, and

Whereas the history in the Herald fails to name or give credit to the person receiving so important a commandment, and

Whereas, others are supposed to have received it, and being desirous that the truth should be known, therefore be it

Resolved, that this omission be corrected in the history now being published.

After some testimonies being received upon the matter, it was by motion referred to the First Presidency.

Adjourned with benediction.

At 7:30 p.m. Bro. Wm. T. Bozarth preached. He was assisted by Bro. M. H. Bond, who also followed Bro. Bozarth with a few remarks.

TUESDAY, APRIL 13TH.

The usual prayer meeting was held from 9 to 12 a.m., being in charge of Brn. J. H. Lake and R. C. Elvin. A very great degree of the presence of the Holy Spirit was felt, and all hearts were comforted and confirmed.

At 1:30 p.m., President Blair in the chair, "All hail the power of Jesus name," was sung, and prayer was offered by Bro. E. C. Brand.

The minutes of yesterday's session were read.

The report of Bishop I. L. Rogers was read, as found in Saturday's minutes.

President Smith took the chair, and made an apology for a remark of his yesterday that was taken by some as being made in a hasty spirit.

The suggestion of the Bishop in regard to placing a minister at Kirtland, Ohio, was read, and it was moved that Bro. Ellis be appointed to that duty.

Bro. McDowell spoke upon it, and it was moved that the matter be referred to the First Presidency and Twelve for their consideration in connection with the subject of missions. This was spoken upon by Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelly and M. H. Bond, and, being put to vote, the motion to refer prevailed.

Bro. Forscutt asked a question concerning the amount of $2500 which was paid out by Bro. Russell Huntley in repairing the Kirtland Temple. The chair answered. The subject was spoken upon by Brn. E. L. Kelley, M. H. Forscutt, and President Smith, and there rested.

The following report of the First Quorum of Elders was read:

The quorum met April 8th, 1880; F. G. Pitt chosen president, and J. A. Crawford, secretary, pro tem., opening prayer by F. G. Pitt. Minutes of the previous meeting read and approved. Case of A. G. Weeks represented to the quorum by Alex. H. Smith. On motion Brn. Bond, Chisnall and Hilliard, appointed committee to recommend action in the matter. The following brethren reported by letter: Thomas Nutt, James Perkins, Daniel Hougas, O. B. Thomas, John S. Kier, Robert Lyle and J. R. Badham.

The following brethren on recommendation and motion were chosen as members of the First Quorum: H. N. Snavely, Jobe Brown and I. M. Smith.

The following brethren were recommended for missions: J. A. Crawford, ready and willing to devote all his time in the field, wherever Conference may direct. E. P. Scarelliff, willing to de vote all his time in the field, prefers to be associated with some experienced Elder. G. S. Yerrington, desires a mission in Massachusetts and New York in connection with Charles N. Brown. J. L. Bear is ready and willing to labor in Germany and Switzerland, if deemed wisdom.

Committee on case of A. G. Weeks, reported as follows:

"We find that the charges and evidences are not full and explicit enough to enable any decisive action being now taken, and we recommend that the case be referred to W. T. Bozarth, and that he be and is hereby authorized to adjudicate the case according to law." Adjourned.

F. G. PITT, Pres. pro tem.

J. A. CRAWFORD, Sec. pro tem.

It was moved that the report be adopted. Brn. Brand, Patterson, and Bozarth objected to the clause whereby one of the Seventy is placed in charge of the matter as named in the report, and Bro. Bozarth personally objected to the case being placed in his charge, but others favored it. It was then moved that the name of William Lewis be substituted for the name W. T. Bozarth. It was next moved that this be amended by inserting the words, "district authorities where said person resides," in place of the name of Bro. William Lewis. This amendment prevailed by vote. A further amendment was moved reading, "providing that such district authorities are not parties to the suit, personally." This amendment was put upon its passage and declared as adopted. A division being called for, a rising vote showed twenty-five for and two against it, Bro. Brand voting in the negative and requesting his vote recorded. Then the report of the First Quorum of Elders as amended, was adopted.

The following additional report was presented by the Quorum of Seventy:

Whereas, in the case _____, the course of procedure and decision of the quorum was not sustained by Conference, but was referred to the quorum for further action and reconsideration, we, the quorum of Seventy do hereby notify the Conference that, after duly reconsidering the case, and by investigation, present to your honorable body, not prematurely, our re-affirmation of former decision and act in aforementioned case.

E. C. BRAND, President.

J. F. McDOWELL, Clerk.

It was moved that it be adopted, and then a substitute was moved that it be spread upon the minutes, no reference being made to adoption. It was suggested that the matter be postponed till Fall Conference. The mover of the substitute explained his reasons for moving it, and afterwards it was put upon its passage and adopted. A division being called for, a rising vote showed 14 for, and 9 against the substitute.

The chair read two letters from Elder D. L. Shinn, Clarksburg, West Virginia, and the following was adopted:

Resolved, that Elder Josiah Ellis be instructed by this conference to either go in person or send Elder L. R. Devore or Elder James Brown, at an early day, to answer the call of Bro. D. L. Shinn, at Clarksburg, West Virginia, and to labor in that State and in Virginia as they may find it practicable.

The Board of Publication reported through President Smith that it was ready to present its explanations in connection with the report of the auditing committee, and Bro. Forscutt was called to the chair, and the Secretary read by sections the report of the committee, and the Board presented their remarks and explanations upon each section, the whole of their article reading as follows:

The Board of Publication offer in explanation on item 1 of section 2, of report of examining committee, that no member of the Board is advised as to how, why, when, or by whom the leaves of Journal Day Book, containing pages 13 to 16 inclusive, were taken out; and that they were not removed by or with the knowledge or consent of the Board or any member of it.

In regard to item 2 we have to say that the statement of the two members of the Board referred to, was made with regard to the balances appearing upon the pages of Ledger B. and not to the items of current accounts; and that the excesses of $1,039.75 and $67.05 are made up from said items of current accounts and are elsewhere accounted for; as, for instance, items entered on Ledger B. on pages 2 to 29 inclusive, show an aggregate of $1,234.28 upon the Dr. side of these current accounts, and of $1,225.28 upon the Cr. side leaving a gain of $9.00, resulting from a failure to credit job work with the amount charged to Herald Office, as we believe.

These amounts added to the findings by the committee of the balances at heads of Ledger accounts, make the totals of debits $19,883.79 and the credits $7,003.86, leaving the total of assets $12,879.93, an excess of the $9.00 above referred to, over the total of assets as entered upon page 1, Ledger B.

In regard to the item named in section 3, of $1,788.00. It appears that the $2,000 named enters into the statement of assets and liabilities found on page 1 of Ledger B. and the Board have not had time to trace its connection; and that it being a transaction before the Board assumed control, the Board does not feel that they should be held to explain under this report.

In reference to section 4. A large number of accounts had accrued on the several books of account, which by reason of errors, the death, or incapacity of the persons against whom they were charged, were considered not collectable; and were ordered closed out by cancellation. See order of Board on Minute Book for September 3d, 1873, page 18.

In regard to section 5 the Board offer that one item of said aggregate of assets was that of "accounts receivable of doubtful value" amounting to $3,013.13, cash on hand $168.41; inventory June 14th, 1872, $15,567.97 making the total of $18,749.51. An inventory taken November 16th, 1874, shows that the Editorial Room had in valuation $142.35; Sales Room and Book Department $1,936.17; Press Department $11,825.08; making a total of $13,903.60, and in February 15th, 1879 shows Editor's Room $137.14; Sales Room and Book Department 2,436.00; Press Department $10,329.88; making a total of $12,903.02.

The discount in Press Department in 1874 was $1,251.12; in 1879 it was $1,147.78. These two inventories compared show a loss on Press Department by discount of $2,398.90. On February 15th, 1873 there was reported a loss by uncollectable debts of $503.55.

This showing, being all that the time permits us to examine and report, may explain satisfactorily how the loss named has occurred.

In regard to section 6. This being a liability to loss only, needs no explanation.

In regard to section 7 no explanation is offered. Sections 8 and 9 are evidently included in section 10, and for the findings of the committee the Board offer no explanation other than that such commission of errors was discovered by the Board and an investigation begun prior to April Conference of 1879; and that such investigation was not completed in time to report at said April Conference; and that believing that discretionary power to correct, and adjust such errors as were found, lodged with the Board, such correction and adjustment was effected during the summer of 1879 and before the change in the Board at last Fall Conference. That the note referred to as being worthless is not due till June 1st, 1882; and therefore whether it is good or bad remains for time to determine; therefore we are of the opinion that such reference to said note should be stricken from the report of the committee before publication.

In regard to section 11, we submit that the note of $500.00 was given to Israel L. Rogers, and by him transferred to the Board, and that the endorsements of payments on said note do not specify that such payments were made on the principal, but on the note as an entirety, as is usual in cases where amounts more than the accrued interest are paid; and we are of the opinion that said note is a valid and good asset, and that the item in the report referring to it should be stricken from the report before publication.

In regard to the note of $200.00 referred to as an asset. This note is not due; and no proof of its worthlessness appears in the report; and therefore we are of the opinion that the Conference should not so declare, but leave its collection to the Board when it becomes due, or its worthlessness becomes apparent by non payment; and that said reference to it in section 11 should be stricken from the report before publication.

In regard to the note or due bill of $40.00. This note was for an amount due upon settlement, and was made necessary by the exigency of the case, as we at the time believed; we are therefore of the opinion that reference to it should be stricken from the report before publication.

In regard to section 12, we submit, that there was an account current with the Bishop running upon the Herald Office Books, upon which settlement was made with the Bishop from time to time; and that the moneys referred to as paid out of current receipts were paid out without reference to the Bishop's account, as were all other moneys paid out in the Herald Office business.

Section 13 As to the prices at which books were sold at the Herald Office the Board of management were, at the time of affixing the prices and are now of the opinion that said report complained of in the committee's report, was correct, and we believe that our examination of the matter and our facilities for judging of it, warrant us in such statement.

Section 14 we think is sufficiently explained by our reply to section 13; except that which relates to the payment of too high salaries to employees by the Board; and in this regard, in the absence of specifications on the part of the committee, we submit that we believe that under the circumstances and conditions of the work, we did the best we could.

The system of appointing Book Agents of which complaint is made in section 15, originated before the Board took the management, and was rectified as rapidly as possible.

Section 17. We submit that the payment referred to, we believe was justifiable, as no final examination and adjustment had been had, and investigation was still pending.

Section 18. In regard to the fixing the invoice price of books at less than their cost; we submit, that it is usual to assess assets at what they might sell for if forced to sale—not what might be realized upon them if time for sale at retail were permitted.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH SMITH,
W. W. BLAIR,
JOHN SCOTT,
HENRY A. STEBBINS,
ISRAEL L. ROGERS.

April 13th, 1880.

The following was moved:

Resolved, that the explanation of the Board of Publication be and is hereby received and ordered spread upon the record, and published in connection with the report of committee.

This was spoken upon, and an amendment was moved, that the following words be added:

Provided that the conference does not adopt the recommendations to strike out.

The reading of the parts whose striking out is asked, was called for, and discussion followed, taken part in by Brn. E. L. Kelley, Patterson, Crawford, and questions were asked by Brn. Harvey, E. L. Kelley, Chatburn, Pitt, I. N. White and Yerrington. Bro. J. Smith said that the Board could give their reasons for asking that the items spoken of be stricken out, if the assembly required it. It was moved that they be requested so to do, which motion prevailed, and Bro. Smith presented the reasons on each point.

It was then moved to amend the amendment with the words, "With the exception of the names of the makers of the notes."

This was spoken upon by Brn. W. H. Kelley, Cadwell and Lake, when the question was called, and, on separate motions both amendments were adopted, and also the original as amended.

Pres. Smith took the chair.

The following was presented by the auditing committee:

The expenses of the committee appointed to examine the report and books of the Board of Publication for railroad fare and board is as follows: P. Cadwell $36, G. A. Blakeslee $11, and W. H. Kelley $16. What shall be done about it? This includes fare to and from Plano.

It was moved that it be paid by the Bishop, and a vote being taken the motion was declared to have been lost, but, by a rising vote when a division was called for, there were 17 found voting in favor and 10 against the payment of the bill.

On motion that the Board of Publication be sustained, Brn. Rogers and Blair said that they would much prefer to be released from the Board, but, by vote, the Board was sustained as now constituted.

[Some mission appointments were read, which will appear with the others.—Sec'y].

Adjourned with benediction pronounced by Bro. J. H. Lake.

At 7:30 p.m. Bro. Jobe Brown preached, assisted by Bro. F. P. Scarcliff.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 14TH.

At 9 a.m., the conference assembled for business. The hymn beginning, "The fulness of the gospel shines," was sung and prayer was offered by Bro. J. S. Patterson.

The minutes of yesterday's session were read and amended, during which remarks, questions and statements were made concerning the Kirtland Temple property.

It was moved that Bro. Clarence St. Clair, of Chicago, be ordained an Elder. Bro. St. Clair expressed his willingness to labor for the Lord if it be required of him. The propriety of this ordination was discussed at considerable length, not upon the merits or demerits of the brother, but upon the matter of ordaining men recently received into the Church, or those who may not be sufficiently instructed in the doctrine and laws of the Church. Then the motion providing for his ordination prevailed.

The hymn, "O thou in whose eternal name," was sung, and the following ordinations were attended to, after prayer by Bro. W. W. Blair: Bro. Glaud Rodger was ordained as the president of the Quorum of Seventy, Brn. Columbus Scott and John L. Bear as members of the Quorum of Seventy, and Clarence St. Clair as an Elder, under the hands of Brn. W. H. Kelley, J. H. Lake, and M. H. Forscutt, Bro. Kelley being spokesman in the case of Bro. Rodger, Bro. Lake in that of Bro. Scott, and Bro. Forscutt in ordaining Brn. Bear and St. Clair.

Geo. F. Weston, W. H. Kelley's field.

During the appointment of missions it was moved that Bro. J. H. Lake be sent to Australia. Bro. Lake expressed his views that, unless the Spirit of the Lord plainly directed that he should be sent, he did not consider that he ought to be sent by the conference, nor would he consider himself under obligation to go on this distant and important mission without a divine authorization for his being sent. He thought it was time for more of this kind of direction in the matter of missions, so that the right men might go to the right place, as God may himself direct.

In considering the name and mission of Bro. D. H. Bays, Bro. Joseph Smith gave the following explanation:

In regard to Bro. D. H. Bays, it is due to him to state that the inquiry provided for last fall, upon the releasing Bro. Bays, has been made, and the result of such enquiry exonerates Bro. Bays from censure in leaving the Texas Mission; for the statement made by Bro. Bays that he was driven out of that field by the drouth that prevailed in that region, and that he was literally starved out and could not stay, is fully corroborated by others. Bro. Bays answered all questions without hesitancy, and, though Pres. Smith had felt that Bro. Bays was in fault for leaving the field without a recall by conference, he having agreed to stay from two to three years, his feelings were changed, and he believes that Bro. Bays was not to blame, and takes pleasure in stating such fact, that no further misconception to the prejudice of Bro. Bays may be had, for he fully believes that Bro. Bays was compelled to leave the field by circumstances over which neither he nor the church held control, and that Bro. Bays should not be held censurable in the matter, and that he be free to exercise the functions of his calling in the field, as wisdom, the Spirit and opportunity may direct.

Bro. H. L. Thompson, of Texas, confirmed the statement in regard to circumstances having forced Bro. Bays to leave, and he thought that Bro. Bays did extremely well in remaining even as long as he did.

Pres. Smith also gave an explanation regarding Bro. A. J. Cato and the action of the last General Conference concerning him, stating as follows:

In behalf of the Presidency to whom was assigned the duty of making inquiry respecting Bro.

A. J. Cato, silenced by the act of last conference, to report to his quorum, he at once instituted the necessary inquiries, and by a correspondence with Bro. Cato and with the persons aggrieved, the matters complained of were properly arranged, Bro. Cato making proper acknowledgments, which had been accepted and forgiveness extended; upon which adjustment Pres. Smith had returned Bro. Cato's license to him and directed him to labor in the field, as wisdom might direct, until conference should sit. Pres. Smith further stated that he felt it to be due to Bro. Cato to state that he has borne the ordeal like a man, and had answered freely all questions asked him, had not attempted concealment or evasion, but had done all that he could to facilitate a proper inquiry and adjustment of the matter complained of; and, what was very rare, he had not in his replies recriminated any one else, or found fault with any one regarding his difficulties, for which he certainly deserves credit. In Pres. Smith's experience it was a rare thing for one accused of wrong doing to refrain from self-justification, and counter accusations, and he felt to commend such an instance when it occurred. He felt that Bro. Cato had done what he could to make proper restitution and should be held free from further blame.

President Smith stated in regard to the matter of appointing an officer to preside over the Pacific Slope Mission, that the Presidency considered the matter and decided not to appoint any one, for no one could be appointed who would be satisfactorily received except one, who declined the appointment. It was therefore left unfilled.

On separate motions the Conference sustained the authorities of the Church, namely, the First Presidency, the Quorum of the Twelve as a quorum of the Church, the High Priests' Quorum (including the High Council as far as organized), the Bishopric, the Quorum of Seventy, and the several Quorums of Elders as well as the general body of Elders not yet enrolled, the Quorum of Priests now organized and the Priests as a body, also the Teachers and Deacons. Bro. Henry A. Stebbins was sustained as Church Secretary and Recorder, and Bro. John Scott as Church Librarian.

In regard to the mission to the Society Islands, the chair stated that affairs there were not very encouraging; also, that Bro. William Nelson wishes to get away, and promises to reimburse the Church if it will advance the means for him to return to America. Another letter from there does not speak favorably of his work and influence there.

Upon motion this joint matter was referred to the Twelve and Bishopric for consideration and action.

A vote of thanks was given to the citizens and Saints of Plano and Sandwich for their hospitality and deeds of kindness to the visiting brethren and sisters during the Conference.

By permission Bro. M. T. Short made a statement to the assembly which reads as follows:

I own a farm of 130 acres in Labette county, Kansas, within seven miles of Oswego, the county seat, where the great Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad crosses, at right angles, the St. Louis and San Francisco Road.

It has an orchard, two houses, besides out-houses, a well, a pasture and about eighty acres under the plow. It has plenty of timber, rich soil and is near a village in which is a fine mill, a post office, stores, etc., etc. It has a mortgage of $700 00 running at 8 per cent interest, which will be due in 1883. If any one will pay into the coffers of the Church $1,000 I will make them a war-rantee deed, clear of all incumbrance except the one above named.

It being called for, the Secretary read the preambles and resolutions adopted two days ago about conference representation to do business for the Church, and the chairman appointed as the committee provided for in said document, Brn. H. A. Stebbins, E. L. Kelley, M. H. Forscutt and J. R. Lambert with President Smith.

A question was asked regarding the progress made in the Synopsis of the Scriptures, which was answered by Brn. Blair and Stebbins, who stated that some of the Elders called on had rendered the aid asked of them and some had refused, while others had neglected to or not found time to attend to the requests for assistance. All that had been received was in hand, and it remains with the Board of Publication to finish the work and publish on opportunity.

The following was adopted:

Resolved, that the recommendation of the Musical Editor respecting finding out how many will purchase the "Harmony" tune book, when printed, be adopted, and that he be instructed to secure the names of those who will.

Being permitted, Bro. F. C. Warnky made a statement regarding the meeting-house at Independence, Missouri, as follows:

The Saints have commenced to build a house, 36 by 50 feet, of brick. The walls are up and paid for; also some lumber for the roof. But the Saints are poor and not able to finish it; therefore I am sent here to see if the Church and also members of it will contribute so that the building may be finished and become Church property. All who wish to aid in this matter can send their mites to J. J. Kaster, Bishop's Agent, Independence, Missouri.

Bro. W. W. Blair gave some instruction to the Elders in regard to preaching, advising that they preach in simplicity and in plainness the first principles, presenting the milk and not the meat so much, not the deep and distant things. He also urged upon the ministry the living of pure and spiritual lives; such were most successful in their work, and they should avoid the abstruse things and the perplexing theories, and then those who come to hear once will come again. Bro. Forscutt asked a question on the subject which was replied to by Bro. Blair, and further remarks were made by him as to using discrimination in preaching to the world and to the Church, and according to the wants or needs of the people.

Following this a motion to adjourn to the time and place provided for prevailed, namely, to meet at Council Bluffs, Iowa, Sunday, September 12th, 1880.

The closing hymn was "The time is far spent, there is little remaining," and the dismissal prayer was offered by President Smith, in which he invoked the blessing of Almighty God upon the Church and its authorities, and upon the ministry who are about to go forth, or who are already in the missionary fields to which they have been assigned or continued.

In the evening Bro. F. C. Warnky preached to those remaining, assisted by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, and thus closed the April General Conference of 1880.

The Original Indians.

In an article in the current number of Potter's American Monthly, General Brisbin attempts to prove that the Indian is of Asiatic origin. In summing up his facts he says: "Perhaps the strongest proof that our Indians are from Asia is in the fact that the nomadic tribes of Alaska are related to the Kamtchatkans, and even now pass and repass Behring Straits. A tribe has lately been found in Alaska, speaking the same language that is spoken in Kamtchatka; and still further, as if to remove all obstacles to the belief that the North American Indians is from Asia, I am assured many tribes on both sides of the straits are identical in manners, habits and customs. While the geography of the western hemisphere was unknown, the origin of our Indians could not be otherwise than a matter of conjecture; but now that the locality of tribes and the characteristics of our country are known, we can with almost certainty establish the nativity of the Red Man. It is not within the scope of this article to enter into further particulars concerning this interesting subject, but I will remark that sixty-nine authorities examined, all point to the same conclusion, and it can be satisfactorily proved our Indians are Asiatic: First, by their similarity of features and complexions. Second, by similarity of languages. Third, by similarity of religion. Fourth, by similarity of dress and ornaments. Fifth, by similarity of marriages. Sixth, by similarity of methods of making war. Seventh, by similarity of dances. Eighth, by similarity of sacrifices. Ninth, by similarity of funeral rites. Tenth, by similarity of festivals and beliefs concerning dreams. Eleventh, by similarity of games. Twelfth, by similarity of practice in naming children. Thirteenth, by similarity of dwellings. Fourteenth, by similarity in forms of government."

The Mohammedan Religion Making Headway.

DR. DOLLINGER, authority in such matters, makes this interesting statement:

"At Sierra Leone, Africa, a Moslem university is flourishing, in which are being educated a thousand young men whose lives will be as absolutely surrendered to the cause the school represents as were the lives of the early soldiers of the Crescent, who counted it joy to fall in its defence on the field of battle. In China the followers of this ancient symbol have increased beyond computation, 50,000 residing in Tonquin alone. Among the Malayans and the islanders of the eastern archipelago it is reported that 18,000,000 have been won over to its support; and still one-fifth of the dwellers on the earth are enrolled as its army, of whom 50,000,000 at least are subjects of her Majesty Queen Victoria."

In thy silent wishing, thy voiceless, unuttered prayer, let the desire be not cherished that afflictions may not visit thee; for well has it been said: "Such prayers never seem to have wings." I am willing to be purified through sorrow, and accept it meekly as a blessing. I see that all the clouds are angels' faces, and their voices speak harmoniously of the everlasting chime.

CHAPEL BUILDING.

AT our late Conference, there was presented for the consideration of the brethren assembled, and for the brethren at large through the HERALD, the fact that the Saints at Independence, Missouri, had begun to build a house of worship, and were now at a standstill for lack of means to proceed, and an appeal was made to the Saints elsewhere for aid to this enterprise. This, in addition to those already presented for aid heretofore, makes some four or five that are in a similar condition; either in process of erection, or done and in debt. We might mention them all, but cite only one, that at Salt Lake City. This was begun by consent and direction of the Conference, and was deemed a necessity to the success of the mission. It is not yet built, but is dragging along. The expenditure of Church moneys, that is from the funds in the Bishop's hands, whenever there happens to be any, for such purpose, must be upon a specific order of Conference, or the Bishop would not feel warranted or safe in expending it. The brethren, of course, may pay individually what they may choose, and to which of the several calls they please. But it is decidedly bad policy for the Saints to set to build a house, and trust to luck only to get through with it. The commencing should be a matter of forethought, and any failure of means to finish be the result of an accident, something out of the control of those engaged in the matter of building.

There is nothing unlawful in presenting the claims of such and such an enterprise to the Saints, but the precedent is not a good one; it is multiplying the calls upon the resources of the people and encouraging carelessness in calculating the chances of building in given localities. To begin to build, and trust to an appeal to the general church to finish, is to create a probability of overloading the treasury with claims that can not be liquidated, or making a liability to build churches where they can be used only for a season and then be abandoned; or to ensure certain losses of the amounts put in at the beginning, with a loss of credit to the general Church by a failure, or a denial to aid as expected or desired.

The law makes provision for the expenditure by the Church of moneys for building, &c., but in every case before a building is begun an express order from the Conference should be obtained, or an understanding and agreement with the Bishopric be had. The Bishop is under no obligation to heed a call made for help for such building purposes unless he is previously advised with, and consents to the necessity and feasibility of its erection; nor will any amount of local distress or special pleading avail with him, his bounds are set by the law and we believe that he will not transcend them, nor do we think he should.

We sympathize with the brethren at Independence in their financial distress, as we do with all the Saints elsewhere similarly situated; but our sympathy can not be estimated in dollars and cents, for these we have not; nor can we coin our tears and sighs and groans of distress into money and buy things and labor to build with.

It must be seen with half a moment's consideration, that the chances for help to any, or all of the local enterprises, from the general purses of the Church is not very good from the very nature of the case; so constant and urgent are the calls for the missionary arms of the service.

We do not intend this as a censure upon any one, and we hope no one will for a moment think so; but we do intend it as a word of caution to the Saints, and especially the Elders. We teach that men must be honest and pay their just debts according to contract; and that no man is justified in contracting a debt without known reasonable provision for its payment. If this is true, and we believe it to be sound principle, it is strikingly out of character to contract debts for buildings devoted to the worship of God, without adequate provision for payment; to our mind it is as reprehensible to run in debt for God and neglect payment as it is to run in debt for self and do the same thing—indeed it is much worse, for in the one case it not required by command or necessity, but in the other it may possibly be. It is as bad to rob for God as to rob from him.

In all the cases coming to our knowledge, no intentional wrong has been done by the brethren; they are simply mistakes in foreseeing and providing for contingencies that were likely to occur.

THE WORD MORMON.

BRO. R. SCOGIN, writes from Cokerville, Alabama, April, 1880, stating how much need there was of returning Bro. H. C. Smith to the South-eastern Mission. He also wants to know whether the Church believes in Mormonism. Is that the name of the Church, Mormon Church? What is the meaning of Mormonism? Ought the Elders to preach Mormonism to the Saints? and if so why did not Christ preach Mormonism.

Mormonism means the doctrines of the Mormons. We are not Mormons, and therefore do not believe in Mormonism, in the sense of that definition. The name of the Church is not the "Mormon Church." The Elders ought not to teach Mormonism, so called, to either Saints or sinners. Christ did not teach Mormonism, so far as we comprehend the meaning of the word in the spirit in which these questions are asked.

We sometimes use the word Mormonism as applied to the doctrine and faith of the Church to indicate its connection with the Book of Mormon, at the first; or as we sometimes say, "primitive Mormonism," but we do not use this term as properly belonging to us or our faith.

THE WORK IN CHICAGO.

THERE is now quite a favorable opening for the preaching of the gospel made in the City of Chicago. An excellent hall in a good locality, close to Union Park, has been secured at a moderate rental, and a year's effort will be maintained if nothing transpires to prevent. The leading papers gave notice of the dedication of the hall, and nearly a hundred and fifty persons were present at the services. Bishop Israel L. Rogers led in prayer at the opening, he pronounced the sermon and Bro. M. H. Forscutt, in charge, offered the dedicatory prayer. Bro. George A. Blakeslee, from Michigan and some thirty or forty Saints and their friends, all friends to the cause, were present. A good spirit was present, and the opening was auspicious. Mr. Castle, the owner of the Hall, converted to Christianity not many years ago, was also present, and was invited to a place upon the stand, and gave at the close of the services a short account of his being led to Christ. The hall fell into his possession not long ago, and was used for almost all sort of miscellaneous gatherings, but he feels now that it has fallen to better uses, and will help the Lord's work. He will attend services there and give his influence to make the effort a success. The hall is located on West Lake street, number 619, and not far from Union Park. Saints visiting the City to stop over Sunday will have opportunity to worship with their brethren. Bro. Mark's address is at the hall.

FROM ENGLAND.

THE following notices we clip from the Staffordshire, England, Sentinel, of March 22nd and 30th, respectively, sent us by Bro. C. H. Hassall, will explain themselves:

"Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.—On Saturday and Sunday, 27th and 28th March, 1880, the Birmingham District Conference of the above church will be held in the Saints' Meeting Room, near Daniel's Limekiln, Pelham street, off Litchfield street, Hanley. On Sunday, the 28th, at 2:30 and 6 p. m., discourses will be delivered by preachers of the gospel from various parts of the country. All are kindly invited. Seats free. No collection. Bring your Bible with you, and compare what you hear with the Written Word.—N. B. Services are held every Sunday; time and place as above. Seats always free. Never any collection."

"Latter Day Saints Conference.—The Birmingham District Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was held on Saturday and Sunday in the Saints meeting room, Pelham street, Mr. John Seville, of Birmingham presiding. Officers from Stafford, Birmingham, and Hanley, presented encouraging reports of the different branches, and likewise of personal effort. The business of the district was got through so as to admit of preaching twice on Sunday. The attendance was fair, and addresses were delivered by Thomas Taylor of Birmingham, and G. S. Greenwood of Stafford. Mr. Caton preached in the evening. On the motion of the Conference the boundaries of the district were enlarged to include Derbyshire."

BRO. JAMES COLLIER of Connecticut, sends some newspaper clippings, among them the following, dated New York City, April 23rd. We suppose it is quite a fair sample of a modern evangelist's way of doing what they think to be the Lord's work, but it does not happen to be the Bible method, nor the Apostles' doctrine that he preached:

"AN EVANGELIST'S METHOD.—Mr. Talmage introduced to his congregation at the Tabernacle, last night, Thomas J. Harrison, a young evangelist, who was formerly a pupil of his. He took his text from Joshua, and Mr. Talmage smiled from ear to ear as he saw his pupil rushing up and down the pulpit platform showing how Joshua rode up and down the line of his army and noted the number of deserters. Mr. Harrison told what sort of helpers he wished during his protracted meetings in Brooklyn. 'I want,' he said, 'all the Baptists here to be dipped and all the Methodists to be fired up, and all the Episcopalians to be formalized, and the Presbyterians to be strengthened. Ah, now how we are going to enjoy ourselves! We will open the meetings at six o'clock, and keep on until we stop. To-morrow afternoon we have a meeting. We want a crowd, and by Sunday night we want this place so that not another one can get in. Now, all you who will pray for me, raise the hand. Ah, how good you all are! Next week I shall start my two praying bands—one of young men and one of young women. Now I want you to raise your hands if you want to be saved. Ah, there they come! One—two—six—ten. Ah, how they come! Now, just one more in this left tier—there it is. Oh, I'm in clover, I am! What a meeting we are having! I can't help running about. You'll soon get used to that. It'll improve your eyesight to watch me. Let me see. Some one raised their hands at the rear end of the church, under the gallery there! Ah, I see you, my silvery-haired old friend, and you, dear young man! And now for two minutes of silent prayer."

"DISORGANIZATION."

UNDER the above caption we have the following from Elder Edward L. Page, secretary of the North-east Missouri District:

"Brother Stebbins:—While laboring in the affairs of Bevier Branch, the question of disorganization and reorganization, has been much dwelt upon by some, as a panacea for all evils; and it has occurred to me, that if it be a measure of Church polity, that is to obtain currency, it should be authoritatively set forth, so as to be properly understood by the Saints. I for one, would like to have light from the proper source. What is disorganization? Is it not a return to the original elements either by a speedy or slow process; leaving no appearance of the organized structure, either as applied to the body corporate, or the body physical? In other words, death. If this be true, and a branch of the Church puts itself to death, or commits suicide, does virtue remain in the particles, through which they may assume organic proportions, without the intervention of an overruling power?

"If this is to be established as a precedent, what is to prevent a branch from disorganizing and reorganizing every full moon, in order to get rid of real or fancied impediments. Would it not be well to give the Saints instruction in this matter through the Herald, before mischievous results follow its frequent application?

"I would like to see the above, with editorial comments in the Herald; for it foreshadows an evil that crops out, and which, in my judgement, should be nipped in the bud, lest factions in other branches, as well as Bevier, make confusion worse confounded."

The evil complained of is a grave one, namely that of the disorganization of branches for the purpose of getting rid of offending or displeasing members, and then reorganizing without them, perhaps many of whom are just as honest and good as the others, though differing from them on something that causes a division of sentiment, and not appearing at the time and place which the disorganizers set, because they do not believe in this summary way of doing, and hence are thenceforth "counted out," and have no rights or privileges in common with the majority.

This custom, if inaugurated, would be a very dangerous one for the interests of the Church, as well as for all parties immediately concerned, being subversive of law and order, which properly grants the right to all men of being heard, the minority as well as the majority, with no ignoring by simply setting aside. And we state that the authorities of the Church have ever been strongly opposed, and still are so, to such movements, believing, as they do, that this method is an entirely unnecessary one, and that it is uncalled for and unwarranted by the law of the Church.

There is a legal way to deal with all real transgressors and recreant ones (if they can not be reclaimed), and division of sentiment and feeling, difference of views on any matter, and personal animosities or ill will, should never be allowed to go to the extreme that two parties are created, antagonistic to each other, and ultimating in the stronger one effecting such a change as the complete overthrow of a branch organization and the reorganizing of themselves into a separate branch, ruled and governed to suit themselves, and to the disregard of the minority whose names they take from the record that belonged to the body, namely the old branch as a total. So likewise, were this the correct thing, might they do towards all thus left off the record, as regards a chapel, or other Church property in branch use; and, without a hearing and without a chance to be heard, unless they subscribe to the views of the party in possession, are the minority literally "left out in the cold," untried for offenses or unjustly accused, as the case may be, but all summarily "dropped," with their hearts wounded, and feeling sore, irritated and, perchance, despairing, waiting the time when they may have an opportunity, through the intervention of higher authority, to be heard, and the time when the adjustment of the branch may take place, in that order and system that is according to the letter and spirit of the law.

Hence we publish the above from Bro. Page, supplemented with an earnest protest against any further action of this kind anywhere, and also in hopes of seeing the special matter referred to properly re-adjusted, and all things once more working harmoniously, with all wrongs righted and with good feelings and good fellowship restored, and none lost from the fold.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE itemized reports of the Bishop's Agents will probably appear in a supplement sheet with the HERALD for June 1st.

Changes in the mailing lists will not be made until next issue.

Bro. J. D. Bennett wrote from Cuba, Kansas, April 23rd, quite cheerfully concerning the labor and prospects of the cause there. He is of the opinion that his late opponent, Rev. M. T. Case, is a lover of the truth. Bro. G. W. Chute, and G. W. Beebe both aided the work to the best of their ability. In three localities threats of mobbing have been made, but as yet no breach of the peace has been committed.

Bro. G. W. Pilgrim writes from Independence, Missouri, that the Spring is opening fine in that country. Wheat, grass, fruit are all looking fine and promise bountiful things. Wind did a great deal of damage through the "regions round about" lately, "fences and fruit trees blown down, and one church demolished."

We record elsewhere the death of Sr. Angelina Robinson, an early and always fervent disciple in the Latter Day Work. Those who have long known Bro. Ebenezer Robinson, will feel to sympathize with him in his loss of so long time a companion. A life-time of joys and sorrows passed together make a severance of companionship a loss indeed.

Bro. John A. Scott, of Scottsville, Indiana, wrote us April 24th, announcing the death of Bro. Vardemon Scott, after years of suffering. Bro. Scott states also that there is great need of some one to work in that field. He deplores the influence that sectarian teaching has upon the minds of some of the Saints.

Bro. Wm. Hart of San Francisco, Cal., has suffered some loss by taking the notes of those who should have been his friends, and honest, but who have failed to keep faith with him. Bro. Hart is not alone in this sort of affliction, by any means. There is a grain of comfort, however, in the thought that sometimes honest men are by stress of circumstances kept from keeping their contracts to the letter.

Bro. James Collier at Bridgeport, Connecticut, writes that, as a laboring man in these trying times, he has but little chance to go and proclaim to the people the everlasting gospel as it ought to be done to impress them and fix their attention, but he does what he feels he can, and thinks that if one could come and do some steady service in a course of sermons, good could be accomplished, and he feels anxious to be visited by the traveling ministry. We hope that some one can and will go.

In the minutes of the General Conference in the last issue, the name of Thomas J. Phillips as one of the Seventy reporting, should have been John T. Phillips; also, the same change in a credit in the Bishop's quarterly report, April 15th HERALD.

Sister Hettie E. Hess, at Eureka, Nevada, (daughter of Bro. John Cobb of Lake county, California), thinks that part of Nevada would be a good field for our ministers to labor in. A few of the Utah believers are there, but none of the Reorganized Church besides Sister Hess, so far as we know.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser writes from Eldenville, Iowa, that he was well pleased in laboring with Bro. I. N. White. Since their arrival there from Conference, they have been out on one tour and baptized six, the fruit of former labors. They were to go into Powesheik county, May 7th. We are glad to know of the activity of these brethren, as well as of many other laborers for Christ.

Bro. Chauncy Loomis of Madison county, Nebraska, does what he can for the cause, and hopes to be at liberty this summer to do considerable more. May he so do, and rejoice in accomplishing much.

Bro. Joshua B. Prettyman, living in Stark county, Indiana, writes of having done something in that county in the way of telling the people what his faith is concerning the gospel, though he seems to have forced the laboring oar with the hands of Bro. Francis Earl whenever he could, but we would like to hear of his having to take it himself frequently, and like a good many others, be compelled by circumstances and by the promptings of the Spirit, to be actively engaged. May he be encouraged to press onward, and be blessed in so doing. There is evidently a wide field there that needs a cultivating and seed-sowing time.

A late letter from Bro. Roderick May, dated at Kansas City, states that Bro. William Newton has met with quite a loss by the blowing down of a two story frame building, in process of erection upon a twelve foot high stone foundation, belonging to him. Bro. May states that the Saints are trying to live becomingly before God, in the "regions round about."

Bro. Thomas Millard of Carson City, Nev., sends us a number of notices of his efforts in that city, cut from the several local papers. They indicate an awakened activity in Bro. Millard that we are pleased to see. May he ever increase in the knowledge and power of the Spirit.

The Atlantis, Glendale, Montana, gave Bro. E. C. Brand a most impudent and scurrilous editorial notice, in which it is stated that the only difference there is between "Brighamites and the Josephites, is that the one comes out above board and defies the laws of civilization, while the other sneakily professes obedience to them. One set is made up of bold outlaws; the other is a band of double dealing knaves. Both oppose free government, and advocate by secret oath, theocratic government. The least objectionable feature of Brighamism, is polygamy, and Lord knows that is bad enough. Josephism possesses all the other criminal phases." Very comforting—and yet the Josephites meet no opposition; O, no!

Bro. A. J. Cato wrote from Oronogo, Jasper county, Missouri, April 30th, that he expected to begin the active ministerial labor for the season on May 1st.

Bro. E. L. Kelley sends us a copy of the Glenwood Opinion, Iowa, dated April 17th, which contains a notice of a lecture by Mrs. Ann Eliza Young in that city. In it the editor says of Mrs. Young: "We do not understand that she attacks Mormonism as a religion in any manner, and in that she is wise. It is that which, as we understand it, has attached itself to Mormonism like a barnacle, and now claims a right to existence as a part of their religion, polygamy. * * * Her

'In and out of Utah' will be an important factor in creating a tide of public sentiment in favor of the abolition of sensual slavery in Utah, and we wish it may."

Brethren C. Scott and M. T. Short wrote from Lawrence, Michigan, May 1st. They had been engaged six nights in a debate, and more of the same kind of work is to come. Having truth on their side, and being defenders of the gospel of Jesus Christ, as preached by him, these brethren rejoice in having the armor on.

Bro. Isaac Harris of Deer Lodge county, Montana, gives assurance of his love for the gospel, and hopes to be ready for his coming Lord.

Bro. John Pett of Galland's Grove, Iowa, mentions his labor in the ministry throughout the past winter, and says that he has enjoyed fair liberty and has been blessed and encouraged in all his labors. He speaks of the new chapel they are building at Galland's Grove, near the old one, and which they expect to finish this summer. May Bro. Pett's faithful work in the ministry and as district secretary and recorder be amply rewarded.

Bro. Willard Smith writes from Port Sanilac, that Bro. Cornish and himself have been laboring together in the field thereabouts, and that good success was attending their efforts. Bro. Cornish was contending against great odds, so far as humanity goes, but the spirit of the work was aiding him.

Bro. Hiram Robinson wrote April 24th from Ellwell, Pa., that he found on his arrival there some people desirous of hearing the word of God preached, and the evening before he had a good sized congregation.

Bro. Moses R. Scott of Clark county, Ind., says that he is striving for the advancement of the work of the Lord as much as his circumstances will allow of his doing, and he feels assured that God is with him and the Saints in that country. He has preached at various places around about, and though the ministers of the Methodist and other orders warned their flocks not to hear or investigate, still the gospel news spreads, and some believe that they ought to "prove all things" before condemning. We hope that Bro. Scott and the Saints of Southern Indiana will prosper, and the cause increase greatly in that country. They need some traveling ministers all the time.

Bro. Arthur Lovell, of the Chariton Branch, Iowa, says that they are blessed by the Holy Spirit's presence, and find some who are interested in the gospel message, and some who acknowledge that it is the truth; but they are slow to obey. It devolves upon the laborers in the Lord's vineyard to wait patiently for the result, as well as to work for it.

Bro. John Edmunds, president of the Wyoming Valley District, Pennsylvania, writes quite an account of his labors in the ministry in the Wyoming Valley District, from February 14th to March 29th. He rejoiced with the Saints in the manifestations of God's Spirit at their conference, held in Danville, February 21st. After that he was at Scranton, and reorganized that branch, so that now they seem in good working order. At Plymouth he labored to confirm the members and to build up the work of God. In both branches excellent meetings were held, and peace prevails. We regret very much to hear from this letter of Bro. Edmunds that Sr. Mary Howell of Hyde Park, Pa., is dead. She died of a fever very suddenly, some time in March last. The Saints will remember her telling articles upon the doctrines and practices in Utah, of which we published some and copied others from eastern papers that she wrote for. Bro. Edmunds expresses his thanks to all who so kindly cared for him during his circuit through his district. May much good result.

Bro. Eli T. Dobson speaks of the labors of Bro. W. Whiting and himself in Pochahontas county, Iowa, late in March. Mr. Carlson and Mr. and Mrs. Chatfield, mentioned in former letters of the brethren, were baptized this time, and Bro. Eli thinks that others will obey and a branch be organized ere long. May their hopes be realized.

Bro. G. T. Griffiths and Heman C. Smith are still laboring in and around Galien, Michigan, and along the lake shore west of there. Bro. Griffiths baptized one on April 26th and three on May 3d, near Galien, and there is a prospect for more to follow. Rather of a new interest seems to be awakened in that region.

Bro. Aaron Brintnell of Sanilac county, Michigan, rejoices in the truth of the gospel, and in the power of God through which, since he received the word of salvation, he was healed instantly from a severe illness, for which mercy he praises his Redeemer, and desires also to do good in his cause.

On April 7th last we received the minutes of a conference held in the city of London, England, December 12th and 19th, 1879, for the purpose of organizing the London District. This was effected, and the presiding elder and the secretary were called by the voice of the Spirit through other Elders of the body, and unanimity and excellent feeling appears to have prevailed throughout. It also seems by the intimations of the Holy Spirit that a good work is likely to be done by that district, and as though many people may be added to the present numbers. Charles D. Norton was chosen as president of the district, R. Kendrick as secretary, and Thomas Bradshaw as treasurer. An adjournment was had to March 10th, 1880. It is pleasing to note this evidence of the spirituality and zeal of the London Saints, and we pray that indeed their membership of true and noble ones may increase greatly.

We thank Bro. O. E. Cleveland for a copy of the Valley Virginian, Bro. T. R. Allen for a Pittsburg Telegraph, Bro. T. R. Hawkins for Nevada papers, Sr. Eliza E. Mitchell for a Salt Lake Tribune and Herald, and Bro. W. Rumel for an Omaha Republican and a News. The News contains a notice of a lecture on "Mormonism" by "Rev. Dr. H. D. Fisher, who has been stationed at Salt Lake City." He gave a description of Utah and one of the Mormon people and their faith, justly giving the evil doctrines introduced after the first founding, but ignorantly and unjustly charging that "Mormonism is the result of deep-laid schemes of wicked designing men." He also repeated the same old false charges against the character of Joseph Smith, like all others who do not take pains to inform themselves of facts, repeating the story of some one else, unproved and unprovable, and telling it as truth. They give histories of the "rise and progress" of the latter day work from the same hearsay, from prejudiced and enigmatical persons and books, while they themselves are ignorant, personally, of anything whereof they affirm, although they may have had some acquaintance with the perversions of the faith and doctrine, as visible in Utah. Bro. Rumel did not know of the lecture so as to be present. The Republican contains a sermon on the theory that is extant, that the year 1881 is to be a time of great physical disturbance, sickness, drouth, pestilence, etc., highly favoring the said-to-be scientific views looking for these things "to come upon the earth."

We call especial attention to the action of the April General Conference of 1880, found in this issue, concerning the names of absent members of branches remaining on the records instead of being removed by voting them off because of absence. It is well to advertise absent members that the branch would like to hear from and of their faith, and if these absent ones live near other branches they should be advised to take letters, or, with their consent, they may be sent to them to join other branches; but otherwise according to the resolution, they should be left upon the branch record, and in each quarterly report a statement of how many absent members there are can be given, so that none need to over-rate the resident membership of any branch in reading of its total membership.

We have received several papers of late sent us by Bro. W. R. Calhoun, of Cortland, DeKalb county, Illinois, for which our thanks are hereby tendered.

Bro. John Pett wrote from Dow City, Iowa, May 3d, mentioning some of the conditions of things now that mark the signs of the times, as follows: "We are having a very dry time; there has been but little rain for more than a year, grass and grain are beginning to need it now; the trees, too, put forth their leaves very slowly, sloughs are dry, streams are very low and wells are beginning to fail. Men's hearts begin to fail them, and a feeling of anxiety and uncertainty seems to rest upon them. How different now to what it was a few years ago, when a person could make his calculations almost to a certainty. How unmistakably can we see the word of the Lord fulfilling continually in the events that should precede his coming. May we be prepared."

Bro. Henry Grim of Cheeseland Branch, Texas, feels that the Saints there are growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth.

News Summary.

April 6th.—Later reports from the Kansas cyclone of Friday night show its effects to have been more destructive than at first reported. At Ottawa a number of buildings were destroyed, and many persons injured. The appearance of the cloud is pronounced to have been fearful in the extreme, and the noise made by the tornado struck terror to the hearts of all observers. Six miles east of Marysville, Missouri, a tornado struck the house of Martin Doran, completely demolishing it. Mrs. Doran was carried about twenty yards away and dashed to the earth, killing her instantly.

7th.—A block of buildings was totally destroyed at Minneapolis yesterday. The loss is estimated at $166,000. The insurance is $82,000.

Twenty-seven vessels bound down are lodged in the ice at the Straits of Mackinaw.

A dynamite explosion at Downeytown, near Reading, Pennsylvania, killed two men and seriously injured 12 others.

8th.—Three flour mills and one flax mill were burned at Dixon, Illinois, yesterday. By an explosion in one mill two men were killed and seven others seriously wounded. Loss of property about $150,000.

10th.—A steamer on the river Danube has been sunk by a collision, and 11 of the passengers and 5 of the crew perished.

Gen. Grant is at Vicksburg on his way north from New Orleans.

11th.—On yesterday a furious gale did great damage to property at Buffalo, New York. The waters of the lake rose perceptibly and were dashed over the stone piers with such force as to submerge many low-lying districts beyond. A train of cars, approaching the city, ran into four feet of water and was abandoned.

Reports from Cincinnati indicate that the fruit tree buds throughout Kentucky, Southern Ohio, and Southern Indiana have been severely injured by the frosts of last week.

12th.—A dispatch from Rangoon, Burmah, reports that 700 men, women, boys, girls, priests, and foreigners have been buried alive under the towers of the city walls as a sacrifice for the restoration of the king's health. The panic in Mandalay is frightful, and hundreds of people are leaving the city. The king's illness is said to be leprosy.

13th.—The Liberals in England have gained 106 seats in Parliament, and the Beaconsfield ministry will go out of power.

14th.—A dispatch from Berlin, Germany, says:

From the 4th to the 11th inst., 5,800 persons left Bremen for England and the United States. The emigrants come from all parts of Germany, and include many skilled workmen. The decided increase of emigration is evidently connected with the new army bill and entails a very serious loss upon the country.

Eleven persons were killed by a creosote explosion in London, England, yesterday.

Osborne and Smith counties, Kansas, have been terribly scourged by prairie fires, destroying property, cattle, and human lives. One fire extended nearly twenty miles around and traveled faster than a man on horseback.

In our News Summary of April 1st, we noticed the chances for war between China and Russia. It is now said that the former power is extremely anxious to avoid a war.

A severe shock of earthquake was experienced at San Francisco, yesterday noon. Buildings rocked, but no serious damage is reported.

16th.—The destructive fires which have been raging since Tuesday in the forests of New Jersey are still beyond control, and are lying waste some of the finest parts of the state. Although fires in the forests are not uncommon at this time of the year, yet nothing like the present conflagration has taken place within the memory of the oldest inhabitants. Miles upon miles of valuable timber land, mostly pine, oak, and cedar, have been turned into vast ash-beds. It is estimated that in Ocean and Monmouth counties 27,000 acres of timber land have been destroyed.

A British steamer was scuttled at the mouth of the River Elbe, Saturday last, to prevent an explosion, the vessel taking fire, and having 100 tons of powder as part of her cargo.

At Sedalia, Mo., Wednesday night, a cattle drover who was about to take the train was assaulted by four men and robbed of $5,200 in money and a draft on a Chicago bank for about $2,000. The victim had some $2,500 more in money, checks, drafts, and notes representing $15,000, which the robbers did not discover.

At a meeting of the Dublin Mansion House Committee to-day letters were read showing that the distress was increasing. The Lord Mayor said that if more money was not received they would have to appeal to the Government for aid.

Some seventeen students have been convicted of political offenses at Odessa, Russia, and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment at hard labor. The trials took place before a court-martial.

The Jesuits are not the only persons the French Government are desirous of driving out of France. The Socialists are also giving trouble, and nineteen of them have been obliged to leave the country.

17th.—Forest fires have done very serious damage in Sussex, Chesterfield, Dinwiddie and Prince George counties, Virginia.

Wheeling, W. Va., and some of the neighboring towns were yesterday visited by a violent wind-storm, which did considerable damage to buildings, blew about signs indiscriminately, and leveled trees and fences with the ground.

18th.—Lord Beaconsfield, the Prime Minister of England, and his colleagues in office at the head of the Government of England have sent in their resignations, as the Liberal party will come into power. It is thought that Mr. Gladstone may become the Prime Minister of England now.

20th.—The blockade caused by the recent snow-storm on the Union Pacific Railroad has ended, and trains are now running on time.

Murderous outrages are becoming frequent in Lewis county, West Virginia. The dead bodies of two victims have been discovered since last Friday, and several cases were previously reported. The people of the district are talking of forming vigilance committees, but are yet at a loss as to whom to bring to justice.

Manufacturing machinery, stock, and the buildings containing them, were destroyed by fire at Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, yesterday. Loss $400,000, and 200 men thrown out of employment.

On Sunday afternoon and evening, the 18th, a terrible storm of wind, rain and hail extended everywhere over the Western States, doing fearful damage to life and property in various places. Marshfield, a Missouri village about twenty-eight miles from Springfield, in that State, was almost entirely demolished by the storm. About eighty persons were killed and 200 wounded. The houses were leveled with the ground, trees torn up by the roots, and havoc spread in every direction. In a place of twenty-five hundred inhabitants not twenty buildings were left standing uninjured. In several places the ruins caught fire from the stoves that were in the destroyed houses, and this added terror to the scene that awful night, when the whole place was filled with lamentation and woe. Along the James River, in the same region, six persons were killed and twenty-five were wounded. Also at Findley twenty-nine houses were destroyed, and a few people were killed and wounded. Pineville and Cassville were also damaged, and throughout the country great destruction of life and property ensued. In the vicinity of Janesville, Wis., the storm played general havoc with dwellings, barns and out-buildings. Cattle and horses were killed by the score, fruit trees rendered perfectly worthless, and pieces of growing timber reduced to kindling wood. The storm also visited Rockford, Champaign, and Clinton, in this State, and Milwaukee, Manitowoc, White-water, and Beloit, in the State of Wisconsin.

21st.—Further news comes to hand about the great storm of last Sunday evening. At Marshfield, Webster county, Missouri, at least eighty-five people were killed, and it is thought the number will reach one hundred by the time all are found. The legs and arms of others have been amputated. Many of the wounded have been sent to Springfield and elsewhere, and a car load of provisions have been sent in, also freight cars for the people to live in temporarily. Along the James River more damage was done than was known yesterday. Also at Flat Creek six people were killed, and at Crow Creek settlement ten were killed. Barnettsville, Morgan county, was torn to pieces and some were killed and wounded, and houses, barns and all other kinds of property destroyed along the track of the tornado. Licking, Texas county, was nearly destroyed and several hundred people are homeless, and one man was killed and others were injured. At Shawnee Mission, Kansas, injury was done. Fayetteville, Arkansas, was nearly wiped out, and numbers of people were killed and wounded. Thus the path of the storm was a very long one and everywhere it is a scene of devastation and ruin. Cattle, horses, hogs and sheep, lie dead everywhere.

22d.—Additional news of the storm says that El Paso, Arkansas, was also destroyed, and eight persons were victims.

The English have met with another reverse in Afghanistan. The garrison of Dabruj has been annihilated by native bands, and the determination of the Afghan tribes to fight England to the bitter end is made more clear every day. Some 12,000 native troops are now massed in front of Gen. Hughes' army, and only wait the arrival of a reinforcement of 6,000 Sepoys before commencing the attack. As it is the desire of the Liberals to withdraw the English troops from Afghanistan as soon as they can honorably do so,—at least so the Spectator says,—it is likely that the pluck and spirit exhibited by the Afghans will be rewarded with ultimate success.

The walls of a large building in New York City gave way yesterday and three persons were killed and twelve wounded. A hospital fair was in progress, and forty couple were dancing in the hall.

The city of Hull, on the Ottawa River, Canada, was nearly destroyed by fire yesterday. Eight hundred buildings were burned and about four thousand people are homeless. Loss in property about half a million dollars, and it is thought that two or three people perished.

Seven men who left Point St. Ignace, Mich., in a sail boat were drowned in the severe gale on Monday.

23d.—Queen Victoria has accepted the resignation of Beaconsfield and his ministry. Lord Hartington is called by her to form a new cabinet.

During a gale yesterday on the Scottish coast nineteen fishermen were drowned.

Trains on the Central Pacific have been blocked again by a heavy fall of snow among the mountains.

A boiler explosion near Memphis, yesterday, caused the death of three men. The unfortunate victims were frightfully mangled and died in the most torturing agony.

A heavy rain-storm prevails in the lower Sacramento Valley, California, and an equally heavy snow-storm prevails on the adjacent mountains. The river and its tributaries are rapidly rising, and a serious flood is threatened. Already considerable damage has been done, and it is feared that, should the rain and snow continue, the injury to property, if not life, will be unprecedentedly great.

24th.—Lord Hartington declined to undertake the responsibility of forming a new cabinet, and the Queen sent for Mr. Gladstone, the acknowledged leader of the Liberal party, and he has accepted the task. The speculation as to who the honored ones will be, equals that in this country upon the election of a new President as to who his counselors shall be in the nations affairs. Enthusiastic crowds greet Mr. Gladstone at this added honor done to him.

It is reported that Gen. Stewart, in command of some British forces in Afghanistan, has sorely defeated a body of fifteen thousand and slain one thousand in battle. The English at Bombay think it the end of Afghan resistance to England's iron rule.

The Montenegrins are invading Albania, and a severe battle has taken place, resulting in the defeat of the invaders. Both provinces are in western Turkey, along the Adriatic Sea.

The Pope intercedes with President Grevy and the French Government in behalf of the Jesuits and other expelled societies.

The son of Mayor Kallouch of San Francisco, (who was so seriously wounded August 23d, 1879 by one of the De Youngs, editors of the Chronicle), has now shot and killed Charles De Young, thus avenging his father's wound. Much excitement exists in that city and probably the end is not yet.

25th.—A tornado occurred in Macoupin county, Illinois, last night. Some people were killed and many cattle and hogs, and much property was destroyed.

Correspondence.

JONESPORT, Maine,
April 15th, 1880.

Brethren Joseph and Henry:—Three weeks ago I arrived home from the Western Maine District. I was there with Bro. T. W. Smith and wife five weeks. While at Green's Landing I baptized two, Joseph Eaton and Lovina Knowlton. The former is the head of a family, and he bids fair to make a useful man in the cause. May God bless him. The latter, since baptism, has passed away into the great beyond, dying with the consumption. I have visited all the branches in Eastern Maine since I arrived home, and I find them striving for the kingdom of God.

I visited the Sea Side Branch two weeks ago. I must say they are happy members. One old brother, whom I baptized last fall, (a cripple), has received deliverance in a great degree of his lameness, and he praises the God of heaven for the blessing. He related a vision that he had recently. He has doubted Joseph Smith being a prophet, and the Book of Mormon being a revelation from God. He said:

"As I lay upon my bed at midnight, my wife being asleep, I was praying to my heavenly Father that if Joseph Smith was a prophet, and the Book of Mormon a revelation from heaven, then I wished for him to let me know these things in his own way. Just then I saw a light in the shape of a star, between the two front windows. I looked at it, and it was very bright. Then I saw a very bright rainbow, which encircled the star, and inside of this rainbow appeared a half bow. I then saw a handsome, dark complexioned man, having a scar on his left cheek.

He was standing in one corner of the room. He held in one hand a book close to his bosom. In his other hand he held something else. The star moved along toward him, also the bows, until the star rested over his head, and the bows encircled him. He said to me 'Fear not; for the cause you belong to is of God.' Then I spoke to my wife, that she might see the lovely sight, but it then disappeared. I never shall forget the sight, no never, thank God."

I expect T. W. Smith and wife on next Saturday boat, from the Western Maine District.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

Dear Herald.—Since December, 1879, I have been here. The branch numbers twenty-four members, and they meet twice a week, and we are all encouraged realizing that God is with us by his holy Spirit. But we are surrounded by those who love to speak all manner of evil. It has been said that a mob was ready to wait on any Elder of the Latter Day Saints that would come into these parts again. But since that time my husband has been preaching here unmolested. Yet there is so much misrepresentation and prejudice, that it is hard to get a congregation together. We have just been attending a series of lectures delivered by a Christian minister named S. R. Ezzell, who claimed that faith, repentance, and baptism are all that are now essential to salvation. We got some good ideas, and heard a great deal we could not endorse. He says that he has a brother in Kansas who is an Elder of the Latter Day Saints, with whom he has labored very hard, trying to turn him, but with no effect. We listened to a learned clergyman of the Christian Church on last Lord's day upon the gifts of the gospel, and it was a complete failure. He claimed that faith, hope and charity have taken the place of the gifts, and that miracles and signs were given to produce faith in the unbeliever, but that they were not needed now; faith, hope, and charity having taken their place, and these are now working their mission. After he closed Bro. Billingsley announced that he would be at that place next Lord's day, to reason with them from the Scriptures upon the same subject. This made quite an excitement. Some claimed that Bro. B. had broken the peace, but others were in favor of hearing all.

I write these lines that all the Saints may sympathize with and pray for those whose lot is cast in a country where there are but few to cheer. I thank the Saints and friends for kindness to me during our travails.

Your sister in the gospel,

S. S. CATO.

MALAD CITY, Idaho.

April 26th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I returned to this place on the 23d, inst. Most all the Saints have moved out of town to their farms, some six miles away. We met yesterday at the usual hour; the attendance was small, yet we had a spirited meeting. At night I spoke to the people the congregation was not large.

John Taylor's move at the last conference has had a wonderful effect upon the people; the donations to the poor, throwing off the tithing and emigration, all has the desired effect. It seems generous, but most likely in time they will find it a burden they have not realized before. When they pay the salary allowed the Twelve and other church officials a few years, and keep up the revenues of the church, I think they will only find it removing the burden from one shoulder to the other. I am of the opinion the measure will militate against us for a time at least, but we shall not be discouraged if we do but little here; it will, in my opinion, have an influence abroad; every stroke we make here for good will be felt wherever our Elders may go.

I attended the discussion between Bro. Luff and Elder Rupert Brown, of the Utah Church, held at Sandy, the 17th and 18th, inst; the subject was "Polygamy; naturally, socially, and scripturally." Bro. Luff met him on every proposition and completely refuted every argument he advanced; in fact the truth prevailed. I never saw a more complete victory. The attendance was large, and the clear and forcible arguments of Bro. Luff, supported by Scripture, was felt in a very marked degree. Our young brother did nobly. I pray God he may retain his influence, and that he may have the favor of the Master, that his usefulness may increase for good for ever.

I expect to remain in this valley for two or three weeks yet. The brethren want me to remain here during the session of court that will convene the second Monday in May. They think good may be done at that time. I shall then try to make an extensive trip, and for that I would like to be supplied with an assortment of tracts suitable for the occasion, as I think that they will do more preaching and better than I can do.

We had a pleasant time at our conference in the city; the preaching was very good, I thought. We all felt loth to separate; it seemed good to meet, and we all felt that it would be good to travel two and two together.

R. J. ANTHONY.

ROD EAU, Ontario,

April 26th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph.—We are doing some better here now, and my prayer is that we may continue until that perfect day does come. On the 11th, three were baptized, and yesterday two more, and I think others will come soon.

Your brother in Christ,

SAMUEL C. REYNOLDS.

EDENVILLE, Iowa,

May 3d, 1880.

Bro. Joseph.—Bro. Etzenhouser and I commenced our two-days' meeting in the Valley Branch, April 24th, and continued to the 28th. Bro. Knox assisted us during Saturday and part of Sabbath exercises, when he was called home on account of sickness. On the 25th, two gave their names for baptism, and Bro. Etzenhouser attended to the ordinance, it being the first of the kind he ever done.

On the 29th, commenced meeting in Warren county, and continued up to May 2d, and Bro. Etzenhouser had the pleasure of baptizing four more. We returned to the Valley Branch and held three more meetings. We had a good time, and our Father was with us by his Spirit, which indited our minds and gave force to the word spoken. Many have said, "I am sorry to see them go." We leave to-day for Marshall county, where we will preach on the 7th, and go to Powesheik county, and commence a series of meetings on 8th. Commence a two-days' meeting on the 22d at Walnut Grove, in Powesheik county. Brn. Nirk, D. C. White, Knox and others have offered to assist when called upon. We can see a greater determination on the part of local authorities, and hope by these timely "helps" to keep the good cause rolling in our district.

Yours in the faith,

I. N. WHITE.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,

April 26th, 1880.

President Joseph Smith.—Debate came off on the 17th and 18th, in Sandy, and I feel satisfied. I wanted the Elder to fulfill his promise by coming to Salt Lake City and repeating it, but he said that he had been considering the matter since making that promise, and circumstances forbid it at present. He postponed it indefinitely. I arose and offered him two months in which to make good his promise, during which time, I would hold myself in readiness to appear at his call, and re-discuss the subject—Polygamy.

Hoping for ultimate success, I remain as ever, yours in bonds,

JOSEPH LUFF.

GAINESVILLE, Florida,

April 25th, 1880.

Bro. Henry.—I cordially invite one or both of the brethren who were assigned to the southern states, to visit us at as early a period as possible. They will find at my house a home as long as they will stay. Come brethren and revive us. I will also be glad to talk to you through or by the pen. Address

M. O. HOWARD.

SPRINGERTON, White Co., Illinois,

May 4th, 1880.

Bro. Henry.—I have preached here in the Saints' chapel four times, and I for one, have realized the fulfillment of the word received in conference, that we "should receive the Spirit as never before." We had fair congregations, and close attention was paid by many, and we believe some were impressed, but there is a great deal of opposition among certain parties, yet it is of that character which we like sometimes to see; for, when men noise the matter around by using flimsy arguments and unsound reasoning, the work is kept before the people, and then when we present the truth the contrast is seen. I am happy to say that there are noble-hearted Saints in this locality, those who love the cause they have espoused; and, although through the noble efforts of Bro. G. H. Hilliard and others, a good work has already been done, there is yet more good work to be done. Much depends upon the faithfulness of the Saints in showing by "a good walk and conversation," a practical illustration of the truths we preach. Kind regards to all.

Your brother in Christ,

FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

BRAIDWOOD, Ills., May 5th, 1880.

Bro. Henry.—I am still trying, by precept and example, to let the people know that there is more in life than what is seen, and though many times since coming to this place it seemed as if my efforts were in vain, yet now and again fruit would appear, and so I was encouraged. Last week I baptized five, four men and one woman, the youngest twenty-one years old. I have the names of two more, a man and woman; will go to the river this week. All well. My trust is still in the Lord, and I feel very thankful to him for inviting me too.

Your brother in the knowledge of the truth,

JOHN S. KEIR.

ELKADER, Iowa, April 4th, 1880.

Joseph, Dear Nephew.—It is always good to commune with friends, and more especially if they are Saints by practice as well as by profession.

I notice in the last Herald a letter from Bro. William Anderson, of St. Louis, Missouri, in which he states that he thinks that they of the St. Louis District have been misunderstood as it regards elders coming into that district to labor. They do not want flying visits from brethren abroad, &c. As to the misunderstanding that has gone out, the conference held last October will explain. And what of the resolutions that were passed at that conference. I do not demur particularly against what Bro. Anderson has written, but enquire why my name was referred to in connection with the finances of the Church in St. Louis. And laboring, as I am, under the impression that many of my friends may form some erroneous ideas about the matter injurious to my influence among the Saints abroad. I also ask to have this misunderstanding corrected.

If there was anything in my department, or preaching, distasteful to the Saints in St. Louis while I was there, I am ignorant of it. My visit to St. Louis last Spring was mainly to visit a niece living in that city; but on being introduced to Bro. Anderson, he being the presiding Elder of that branch of the Church, I was requested to speak to the Saints, which I did accordingly; preaching three discourses, and as I supposed from the friendly spirit manifested that all were well pleased, as several invitations were extended for me to remain longer in the city. But as I had been from home on a mission, in northwestern Missouri, some five months, and the time drew nigh for my return home; and as I had exhausted nearly the last dollar in expenses coming down from Far West, I did not think it improper to speak of this subject before the Saints, asking them to assist me in my expenses to my home. If this is my offending, I will say to the Saints in the St. Louis District, that if I ever come that way again, that I will try to do better next time, and say nothing about money.

I will say, however, for the credit and kind generosity of the Saints at St. Louis, and in other branches of the Church that I visited in that district, that in their contribution for my expenses I had no reason to complain. And as to my cordial reception among them, I could not wish to enjoy myself better, or to meet with more kindly spirits than I found in the short time I was with them; and I hope dear Herald, that the publication of this letter will correct mistakes about this matter, and affect a restoration of good feelings again, and I wish further to state that to the Saints in the St. Louis District, and at St. Louis, for their kindness and for the generous aid which the Bishop's Agent handed me on the morning I left the city, my thanks are extended. May God, the father of all mercies, bestow most abundantly of his grace and spirit upon all those generous hearts.

I am truly yours in gospel bonds,

WILLIAM B. SMITH.

MONMOUTH, Illinois,
May 10th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—Bro. Sollenberger rented the Temperance Hall for four evenings. Friday and Saturday evenings we had limited audiences. Yesterday, Sunday, at 5 p.m., I spoke on the corner of the public square; three hundred people out; talked for nearly one hour. The audience was an intelligent one. Made an announcement to give my Utah Mormon lecture at the Hall to-night.

I was invited to speak in the 2nd Colored Baptist Church last night and did so. A goodly number of white people followed and gave us another hearing. Some stir is now made. The chapel is a neat structure, very tastefully arranged within, and cleanly. Some students from the United Presbyterian College go there once in a while and chat to the colored friends. There is some talk of the "Liberals" letting us have their hall free. They want me to stay a time and talk to them, the people in general.

J. F. McDOWELL.

CAMERON, Mo., April 7th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—As I sit down to write I think of God's servants being assembled in General Conference, and my heart yearns to be with you. But I will try to patiently wait until I shall some other time enjoy the pleasure of attending one. I still labor for the spread of the cause, and, having some spare time, I accepted an invitation, and went into Grundy county, Missouri, some sixty-five miles away, into an entirely new field. On Saturday, March 20th, I arrived at the house of Mr. and Sr. McVay, where I was received with warmth. Sr. McVay is a sister of I. N. White.

We decided to commence on Sabbath evening at their school-house. There were to be Baptist meetings in the neighborhood on Saturday night and Sabbath morning, and on Saturday night we attended the Baptist service. I was introduced to the minister, and he invited me to take a seat with him. Among the first questions asked was, "Are you a Baptist minister?" I told him what body I represented, which no doubt surprised him, and the next day I had the privilege of remaining with the audience, and listened to quite an interesting funeral discourse. I was accorded the privilege of announcing our meeting, and you may judge of the ignorance of the people when I tell you the first inquiry made concerning me was, "How many wives has he?"

Sabbath evening came, and with it a good houseful of anxious listeners, and the following night brought an increased audience, people coming for six or seven miles to hear the "new doctrine." I held nine meetings at the same house, and most of the time was listened to by crowded houses of attentive listeners. Being alone, I had no other reliance for strength than upon the great Author of the work, but that source was all-sufficient, and God blessed me in telling the "old, old story." And, seeing the anxiety of the people, I felt to cry out, "Lord, send forth more laborers, that the ripened grain may be reaped." During my stay several urgent calls came for labor in other localities, only one of which I responded to, believing that a concentration of labor was more advisable. I was treated with the greatest hospitality. Mr. McVay and family showed me especial kindness. Mr. Robbins, an old-time Methodist, and his family, Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, and others, are worthy of mention as showing great kindness. May the Lord bless them. Circumstances demanded my attention at home, so I came away. However, I spoke once in a Methodist Church in another neighborhood, and to an attentive audience. With an earnest desire for the welfare of the cause, I am yours for truth,

J. M. TERRY.

WILBER, Nebraska,
April 14th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—The cause of my disappointment about being at the General Conference, is now past. I do not write of the merits of the discussion; I will leave that for others. But I give some notes that may be overlooked by others. I find the following pen-picture of Elder D. R. Dungan, (in a pamphlet sold by him), "Is a bilious, sanguine, vital temperament; *** a large gentleman, and possessing more of the motive. *** He has a pleasant expression of countenance. He has keen perception, large order, is intuitive, self-complacent and self-reliant, a pleasant talker, cool, careful, and a clear reasoner."

The foregoing is a fair representation of the ablest debater of the Christian Church. He stated that he had held nineteen public discussions. No truth was compromised or the faith of any Saint weakened, while friends were made for the cause, which fact will appear hereafter. The evil and bad reported about Joseph Smith was the main line of warfare. The New Translation, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, were held up to ridicule in every speech. After the close of the debate I permitted my mind to rest, and dismissed the question from thought as to the particular result, and on the evening of the 12th arrived and lodged in Lincoln on my way here. That night I dreamed as follows:

I saw a very large and beautiful stone building, several marble steps leading to the front door. There was a burglar-proof lock on the door, such as are upon safes. In the face of this lock was an open space, about three by five inches, and in this open space was seen an "Inspired Translation;" and to every one who was entitled to enter the house was granted a key. But there came a man who did not have a key, but he had a very sharp knife, and he undertook to cut the book to pieces; and take it out of the lock, for when this would be accomplished any and every one could go in and out at pleasure. While the keen edge of the knife passed clean through the book, it was strange to me that the incision would close, as if the book had been water, and the effort to remove the book was in vain.

I have used the Inspired Translation in preaching for two years, and am confident of its purity and acceptance, with God's approval, and am continuing in the right. In haste,

ROBERT M. ELVIN.

LEADVILLE, Colorado,
April 26th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—I am well and still feel an interest in the latter day work. I left Council Bluffs two weeks ago in the interest of a mining company of Council Bluffs. I intend to stay in this country six months, to prospect, and locate claims. While thus laboring for the things that perish, I hope I may not forget the cause of God that I love. I do not know of one in this great city of the mountains who is of the same faith that I am. This city contains thirty thousand inhabitants, and hundreds more are coming every day. I have attended one meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association. The one who had charge requested that if there was a minister present he would come and take the stand. No one responded, and the meeting was made free to all who wished to take part. I felt moved by the Spirit and I rose up and bore my testimony to the gospel, and said that there was enough evidence in the prophet who prophesied of the coming of the Savior to create a faith in God's word. The Sabbath here is only respected by a few. The stores and saloons are open, and also the mills, but there is an effort being made to close all places of business on the Sabbath, and I hope it may succeed.

DANIEL K. DODSON.

ANTELOPE, Antelope Co., Neb.,
April 11th, 1880.

Dear Brethren:—I wrote a letter to the Herald which was put in April first, concerning homestead land, etc. I have had letters from several Saints making inquiries concerning it, and I thought to write an account for the Herald. To the Saints at large, all who wish homestead, pre-emption, or timber claims, now is the time, for people are coming in very fast. While Uncle Sam gives land so cheap, I would like to see the Saints benefitted as well as others. Our branch is small, only eight members at present, and we would welcome all who desire to locate with us. Our land is a black, sandy loam, mixed with clay. There is no timber here to be taken under the homestead law, but wood is cheap, $3.50 to $4 per cord; cedar posts 12cts each, and plenty of coal. Railroad is within nine miles of us. Plenty of water; a very healthy and good stock country. We also raise all kinds of grain. The grasshoppers have not been here for three years or so.

Your brother,

J. H. SMITH.

KEWANEE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

To the Saints of the Kewanee District, Brethren and Sisters:—Please remember that our conference meets at Henderson Grove Church, first Saturday and Sunday in June. I hope the branches will all be represented. Can not you make an effort in that direction? I also hope the clerks of branches will have correct reports made out, and submitted to the branches for their approval and forwarded, according to the law, to the conference. Finally, brethren, come with zeal, tempered with wisdom, and bring the spirit of peace and love with you, J. A. ROBINSON, PEORIA, ILL., May 5th, '80. President of District.

KENT AND ELGIN DISTRICT.

A conference of the above district will be held in the Wellington Branch, June 5th, 1880, as per adjournment. A report from all the branches in the district is herewith solicited. Brethren, be prompt. Be sure and put in all items of birth, baptism, etc., as it will save time hunting up afterwards. RICHARD COBURN,

Secretary of District. ROND EAU, Ontario, April 26th, 1880.

FIRST QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Allow me to state to Elders Eli Clothier, B. B. and J. W. Brackenbury, George Walker, John D. Jones, James Kemp, Charles Williams, and C. C. Reynolds that their reports were forwarded from Plano to my home address; and as I was prevented from attending the General Conference, and during its session I was engaged in discussion some seventy miles from home, their reports were not presented to the quorum. I thank them for the spirit expressed toward me and the cause. I hope they will be able to stand firm and continue to the end, doing much good, is the prayer of their fellow laborer in Christ.

ROBERT M. ELVIN.

MARRIED.

VORCE—POWELL.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Easton, Clinton county, Missouri, February 29th, 1880, by Elder Wm. Lewis, Mr. Isaac Vorce and Sister Martha Ann Powell.

SHAW—PETT.—On Thursday, March 18th, 1880, at the residence of the bride's parents, near Dow City, Crawford county, Iowa, Mr. Frederick N. Shaw to Sister Mary Ann Pett, Elder John Hawley officiating. May peace and love be ever theirs to enjoy.

LEACH—WOOD.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Stewartsville, Missouri, March 21st, 1880, by Elder Wm. Lewis, Bro. George W. Leach and Sister Mary Eliza Wood.

DIED.

ROBINSON.—Near Pleasanton, Decatur county, Iowa, April 8th, 1880, Sister Angeline E. wife of our esteemed brother, Ebenezer Robinson, a veteran in the latter day work. Sister R. was born at Aurelius, Cayuga county, New York, August 22d, 1814. She taught school in Kirtland, Ohio, in 1835, received and obeyed the gospel the same year, though very much opposed by her father. The gift of prophecy was here enjoyed to a remarkable degree, and discernment also was her endowment. She proved faithful to her trust through the days of persecution and darkness, and never allowed the family altar neglected for want of a supporter. She was an invalid forty-four years, and patience seemed to have its perfect work. She continued firm in the faith of the Lord Jesus to the end of her days, and departed perfectly resigned to the will of God with his smiles of peace resting upon her.

[Selected.]
ONLY A WHILE.

Only a little while to work,
And a long, long time to rest;
Then drive the cloud from the aching brow,
The sigh from the troubled breast.

Up! with a strong and hopeful heart;
Up! with a sunny face;
Shoulder your trouble cheerfully—
Bear it with patient grace.

Only a while—what matters it
If our life be short or long?
If we only sing a few faint notes,
Or the whole of the changing song?

The missing notes will all be found,
And the song will be wholly sung
In Heaven, where God's own hand will tune
The harp He has unstrung.

The Two Covenants.

"But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the Mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises. For if the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second. For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah, not according to the covenant which I made with their fathers, in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel, after those days, saith the Lord: I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts, and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people: and they shall not teach every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest."—Heb. 8: 6-11.

Although the Jews rejected, and still reject, (as a nation) the new covenant, yet Paul, in writing to them, gives them to understand that a new covenant has been made, and that Jesus Christ is its Mediator. John says that Christ "came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God;" which power is the Holy Ghost, promised in the new covenant. "For as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." Thus becoming the members of the one common family of God. "Heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ." Jesus called and ordained his servants, and their first mission was only to "the lost sheep of the house of Israel." But the commission that was given by the Lord after his crucifixion and resurrection, was, "Go teach all nations." "Go and preach the gospel to every creature."

From the preceding quotations, we learn: Firstly, That the gospel is a covenant.

Secondly, That it is a covenant that God designs to make, and has made with all who will enter into it.

Webster defines the word covenant as being "a contract," or "an agreement." The terms of the new covenant, so far as the ministry are concerned, are, "Teach the people to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." And upon the strict observance of the terms are the promises made, "And I will be with you always, even unto the end of the world." If those servants that were sent out eighteen hundred years ago realized the fulfilment of the promise made, it is an evidence that their teaching was in harmony with the instructions given. "And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."

The teachings of those men were as follows: Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."—Acts 16: 31. Repentance: "Repent and be baptized every one of you."—Acts 2: 38. Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." "Know ye not so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."—Rom. 6: 3-5. "Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins."—Acts 22: 16. Baptism of the Spirit: "And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2: 38, 39. "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal."—1 Cor. 12: 7. The laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Heb. 6: 2; Acts 19: 1-7; Acts 8th chapter. Resurrection of the dead. 1 Cor. 15; Rom. 8: 11; 1 Thess. 4: 15-18. And eternal judgment. 2 Cor. 5: 10; 2 Pet. 2: 4-17.

It is certainly through a strict adherence to these principles that the promises are made. The apostle says that the "new covenant" is made upon better promises than the old; the "old" only promising temporal blessings, such as "entrance into the land of Canaan," "triumph over their enemies," "good crops," etc.; while the new promises a "knowledge of God." It promises that we "shall know of the doctrine." "These signs shall follow them that believe."

We find by tracing the history of that people, with whom the "old covenant" was made, that when they complied strictly with the terms of said covenant they realized the fulfillment of every promise made them; but when they ignored the terms of said covenant they brought sorrow and distress upon themselves.

Dear reader, can not we who are living under the covenant that was established upon "better promises," claim every promise made therein, if we only comply with the requirements of said covenant?

Some people have taken the responsibility of saying that the promises were made only to those living in the apostolic age. But this assertion is without scriptural proof. To the contrary, the teachings of Christ are, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached unto all nations and then shall the end come" "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. * * *. And these signs shall follow them that believe."

What do the theological teachers of the day mean? Do they want us to believe that Christ was an impostor? Do they want us to believe that he has made promises that he can not, or will not fulfill? O! ye blind guides! Why do ye seek to establish your own righteousness, and not the righteousness of God. Does not the apostle Paul teach us to believe that God is true, although it should seem to make every man a liar? And the idea that the gifts of the gospel are not needed in this enlightened age is a false one, not according to God's word. The Scriptures warrant us in the conclusion that the promise of them was only a reiteration, and the enjoyment of them was only the fulfillment of the promise made in John 7: 17: "If any man will do his [God's] will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."

Surely there never was a time when the people of God needed the promised blessings more than now. We are living in the day when there was to be "perilous times;" when there were to be people "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; when there were to be "strong delusions," and "false prophets," and "false Christs." Are the honest in heart to be left at the mercy of these delusionists, with nothing but a belief to cling to?

The so-called "Christian world," look upon the infidel with an expression of mingled scorn and pity, as one without hope and without God in the world. And yet they tell us that the God whom they profess to love and adore, will not give us the "sure anchor" that he gave to others; but that we must remain at the mercy of the conflicting creeds and doctrines of men, with nothing but a belief to shield us from the ten thousand temptations of this corrupt world. And if our frail bark of belief should be upset, we are consigned to a state of endless punishment. Thomas Paine says: "Infidelity does not consist of belief, or unbelief; but in professing to believe what you do not believe." The theological teachers of the day ask us to believe the Bible, and tell us that it is God's will to man, and where a class of people believe and advocate the doctrine it teaches they regard them as fanatics and deceivers. They extol the name of God, as a being who is full of love, justice, mercy and truth; they tell us that he is no respecter of persons, and a being who can not lie; and, at the same time, the doctrine they teach make him out to be a "respecter of persons;" an unkind father, and a covenant breaker. And like the Pharisees of old, they tell us that "God heard Moses and some of the prophets, we know; but he will not hear us."

Dear reader, let us take the Lord at his word; let us conform to every principle of righteousness; let us comply with every requirement made in the "new and everlasting covenant; and He who is faithful can not deny himself.

GEORGE S. HYDE.

A Common Error.

SOME of the brethren and sisters as soon as one offend them, go and tell it to every one but the right one, and if they go to them they are offended because of the way they have acted towards them. Now, the Doctrine and Covenants says, on page 147, par. 23:

"And if thy brother or thy sister offend thee thou shalt take him or her between him or her and thee alone; and, if he or she confess, thou shalt be reconciled; and if he or she confess not, thou shalt deliver him or her up unto the Church, not to the members, but to the Elders; and it shall be done in a meeting, and not before the world. And if thy brother or sister offend many, he or she shall be chastened before many; and if any one offend openly, they shall be rebuked openly, that he or she may be ashamed. And if he or she confess not, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of God. If any offend in secret, he or she shall be rebuked in secret, that he or she may have opportunity to confess in secret to him or her whom he or she has offended, and to God that the Church may not speak reproachfully of him or her, and thus shall you conduct in all things."

There are many in the Church who do not read the Doctrine and Covenants, and for that reason they do not know what their duties are. Now, brethren and sisters, you who have any hard feelings toward one another, in the name of the Lord, straighten it up, and start a new year with a new leaf, and God will bless us more. Stop that pulling back. The eyes of the world are on you watching every move you make. If you step aside they are ready to cry, "There, I knew that he or she would not stay very long!" "That is a good Latter Day Saint for you!" Look out for Satan. He is on every hand to tempt you. Be careful in your conversation with each other, and especially with the world. In the name of the Lord would I exhort you to reconcile yourselves to one another, and go to work in earnest. The Saints are a peculiar people; they have peculiar ways. Lay aside your backbitings and slander, and push the work on to Zion. Do not let the wheels become clogged with the black mud of calumny.

That is pulling the sectarian churches down to-day. If troubles round you gather take it to the Lord in prayer. He will every comfort give; he will strengthen you, and lead you on to heaven. Now, brethren and sisters, let us be up and doing. To-morrow may be too late.

Commending you the care of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, I remain your brother in hope of a resurrection.

L. N. BROWN.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March, 1880.

The M. E. Church.

CINCINNATI, April 27.—Churchmen of the genius Methodist seem to have a monopoly of the name Conference. Find them where you will, and they have it. Throughout the world, the annual gatherings of their ministers are known by that name. In Australia, India, Canada, and the United States there are nearly a dozen General Conferences of as many branches of the Methodist stock. Then they have a Quarterly Conference in each pastoral charge, a district conference in many Presiding-Elder districts, and ministerial appellate courts known as judicial conferences. Evidently, if there be discord it is not for lack of conference.

There are of actual enrolled members about 4,700,000 Methodists in existence. About 3,500,000 of these are in the United States; and, if figures were given of population, as in the case of Lutherans, Roman Catholics, and others, this 3,000,000 might safely be multiplied by four.

The Methodist Episcopal branch reports about half of all in the United States,—out of which about 11,500 are pastors, while the lay preachers number 1,000 more than the pastors, and of these nearly 1,400 have pastoral charges.

The general conference of this great church meets in this city next Saturday, and will probably continue in session about a month.

In October, 1766, the fruitful seedling of this remarkable religious development was planted in New York by a local preacher and five adherents. In 1773 the first conference was held in Philadelphia, ten preacher comprising the entire force. The church continued to grow rapidly, and by the close of the War for Independence it had multiplied into eighty-three preachers and about 15,000 members. Soon after,—1784, at the Christmas conference,—at the suggestion of Mr. Wesley, under whose direction the work had been prosecuted up to that time, they organized themselves into the Methodist Episcopal Church. There were then three Annual Conferences. That Christmas Conference in 1784 was the first General Conference.

As the denomination continued to spread and important matters arose, the need was sorely felt of a central body to examine and determine. This was attempted to be supplied by a council, proposed by Bishops Coke and Asbury,—the latter being especially favorable to it. This council was composed of the bishops and presiding elders. They were to "have authority to mature everything they should judge expedient" for the unity and progress of the work; but only its unanimous decisions were to be presented to the Church, and these were to be binding "in any district" only when approved by a majority of the conference held in that district. The bishops were to have authority to convene the council at their pleasure. A majority of the preachers approved the plan, and two sessions were held in 1789 and 1790; but so decided became the opposition to this attempt to rule the church with a heavy Episcopal hand,—for the presiding elders were the creatures of the Bishops,—and to organize diversity, if not disunion, that the session appointed for 1791 never met, and the next year the Bishops were compelled to consent to a general conference. This was the second such gathering in the history of the Church, and was held at Baltimore, Nov. 1, 1792. All Methodist preachers in full membership in the Annual Conference were entitled to seats in the General Conference. About nineteen years had passed since its first conference in Philadelphia. Then it reported six circuits, reaching along a narrow line from New York City to Petersburg, Va., manned by ten preachers. It now reported 126 circuits, extending from beyond the St. Lawrence—for Methodism was permanently established in Nova Scotia and Upper Canada—to Savannah, Ga.; and from Lynn, Mass., to the most western settlements of Kentucky and Tennessee. Seventeen conferences were held this year, and twenty were appointed for the next, at least five of them west of the Alleghenies. The membership of the church had swelled to 66,000, its pastors to 262. Thus the great pioneer work spread.

This General Conference of 1792 arranged for regular successors to be held every four years; and so they have continued to be held ever since. In 1808 the membership of the church was over 150,000, and, with the 540 ministers, was scattered over seventeen States, besides the Canadas and several Territorial settlements. The General Conference of that year was held at Baltimore; and, as it was evident that it could no longer be a mass convention of the ministers, it was arranged that henceforward the conference should be a delegated body. Under six restrictions it clothed its successors with plenary power to make "rules and regulations" for the Church, and decree that it should meet on the 1st day of May every four years in perpetuity. At the first session under the new order, there were ninety members on a one-in-five basis of representation.

In 1836 the first General Conference ever held in the old Northwest Territory convened at Cincinnati; and since then, or during forty-four years, no other session of this body has been held here. Naturally the recurrence of the event suggests a few comparisons. Cincinnati was then a city of about 36,000 inhabitants; it now has probably about 300,000. About one-third of the population of the city at that time were Germans; probably two-thirds are Germans to-day. Then Methodism had a membership here of 1,600; now it has nearly 6,000. Then there were 147 members of the conference, on a representation of one to fourteen. There will now be 250 clerical members on a basis of one to forty-five, besides 150 laymen. Then the leading topic of discussion was slavery. This question had agitated the church from the beginning. For fifty years there had been nothing but uncompromising hostility to the institution, though brought constantly face to face with it. The pro-slavery party at the Cincinnati conference had risen to the strongest position they had ever occupied. Two representatives from the New England conference attended an anti-slavery meeting, and were rebuked by vote of the conference,—the foulest blot on this subject that was ever made in a general conference. This very action, however, served to rekindle the opposition. The next conference in Baltimore in 1840, saw vehement resistance to the further advance of the slave-power; and at the conference, in New York in 1844, rather than longer submit to its dictation, they suffered a rent of the church, whereby was lost over one-third of the membership, and the Methodist Episcopal Church South was organized. Now, thank God, that wretched subject is dead, buried, and stinketh!

Among the multitude of important subjects that will come before the approaching conference may be mentioned the proposed extension of the pastoral term. At present this is limited to three years. Many favor the removal of all limit save the judgment of the appointing bishop. This, however, is so improbable that few openly advocate it, and these are compelled to support their positions by the arguments for the settled pastorate which for over a century have been voted a non-sequitur by nearly every shade of Methodism. It is, however, urged with considerable force that the time-limit be extended from three to five or six years. Some, who do not see the need of any change, say they are willing to accept this, if the voice of the church lay as well as clerical demands it; but, in order to know its will, they favor the submission of the question to a popular vote. Others acknowledge the need of an extension in rare cases, and are willing to lend pliability, so as to permit the bishop to extend the time, by annual appointments, as now, up to six years, on the request of three-fourths of the quarterly conference, of the church desiring the services of the minister, and also two-thirds of the Annual Conference of which he is a member. Even then it would only be a "may appoint" with the bishop, who would still be free to refuse. This is surely a homeopathic dose; and yet even for this they have to go to the ends of the earth, as it comes from Melbourne, Australia. It is probable that the advocates of a broader measure may spurn this; and so those who fear even this very "thin" end of the wedge, though willing to yield it, may shut down and refuse any change whatever. At the first, changes were made most every two years, while some changed every six months, or even every three. In 1864 the limit was extended from two to three years. The drift is to change again before long.

Until 1872 the General Conference was composed wholly of ministers. The resistance to admitting laymen had more or less entered into several of the schisms which have befallen the church. After a heated controversy, and on a singularly immature plan, the measure of lay representation at last received the necessary majority, and at Brooklyn, in 1872, the laymen were admitted to membership in the conference. Wherever an annual conference is entitled to but one or two delegates; there the lay delegates are of equal number; but, if an annual conference be entitled to six ministerial, it is still restricted to two lay delegates, as two is the highest number of laymen admitted from any conference. This causes the disparity in numbers at this session already mentioned. It is now urged that laymen must be admitted to membership in the annual conferences, even though, as at present constituted, these have no legislative powers whatever. It is not probable that this step will be taken with quite the precipitation of the other, as is indicated by the last general conference referring the whole matter to a committee to report at this session. This report will, of course, bring the matter squarely before them; and, as a majority of the committee at least will almost certainly favor some measures of acquiescence in the clamor, it will cause probably one of the liveliest debates of the session. From present prospects, it is likely to receive favorable consideration to at least a homeopathic extent, like the extension of the pastorate; yet, like that, its friends fight chiefly for the privilege of getting the camel's nose into the tent.

The matter of making district conferences universal and obligatory will be presented and pressed by the national local preachers' association. The measure has in it, if wisely arranged and used, immense power for good in working up new territory in old fields, and in increasing the efficiency and usefulness of the over 12,000 local preachers of the Church.

At the last session of the New England conference, the recommendation of Miss Annie E. Oliver—the sprightly, fascinating, and devout pastor of a snatched-from-the-grave Methodist church in Brooklyn—for ordination was presented in due form by the presiding elder. The presiding bishop refused to put the motion, as it was outside the authority and business of the annual conference. It should be explained that no person can be ordained to the ministry unless first elected to the order proposed by an annual conference; and, when so elected, it is the duty of the bishop presiding to ordain the party so elected. In the present case, when the bishop refused to put the question, the presiding elder appealed from his decision to the general conference, which alone can review a bishop's decision on a law question. This carries the whole question of the ordination of women to the ministry to the General Conference; and this, too, will no doubt be the occasion of some music.

The probabilities are, that the old question, whether the presiding elders shall be elected by the conferences, or, as now and heretofore, appointed outright by the bishops,—which has with varying fortunes been up for eighty years,—will not have much of a hearing. Lately the church has been in a pro-Episcopal oscillation, and it is in no way certain that, far as it swung in that direction at the last conference, it has yet reached the maximum. Some indeed think they see public signs of a return to the historic position. A month or even five weeks from now, the keen-eyed world will be better prepared to judge. This much is certain: there seems little reason to look for any serious change in the mode of appointing presiding elders while they form at least two-thirds of the clerical members of the body that must make the change. And yet the ground swell of sentiment that broke down the old council project in 1791 may be repeated, and even at no distant day.

The probability is, that four or six new bishops will be elected at this conference. The names of parties favorably mentioned would indicate that at least a hundred could be chosen without exhausting the material. After Foss, Hurst, Warren, Fowler, Mallieu, and others East, and Hatfield, Walden, Ninde, Fuller, and a dozen others West, there are some, not now so often named, that may, about the 16th of May, show a support that will be a surprise. In this list let Dr. J. H. Vincent be noted; then don't forget Dr. Reid,—both well known in the North-west,—the latter as the recognized leader of the Sunday-school work of the land, and the other formerly as editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, and latterly as missionary secretary. Another in this list is Dr. Kynett, of the Upper Iowa conference, and now secretary of the board of church extension.

There are about twenty-two offices in the gift of the Conference, besides the episcopacy, the various boards of managers, fraternal delegates, and book and missionary committees—making altogether rather a formidable array, and suggesting some reasonable apprehensions for the ability of the average delegate to avoid the curse of politico-ecclesiastical trading in electioneering. It is a sober question, well worthy of consideration, whether many of these officers might not more safely be filled by local Boards.

There seems just now to be a strong tendency to have the General Conference take action unifying the educational work of the church. It is a surprising fact that to-day the thirty-four colleges or universities and eleven theological seminaries, besides the multitude of female colleges and seminaries of this church, are practically independent of all general conference control. This will not much longer be so. Here is a fine chance for some man, as secretary of the board of education, to distinguish himself. The missions of the church will be another fruitful subject for this conference; but it is not possible to mention more than half that will absorb its attention. It is one of those gatherings that it will pay one to carefully follow.

INDEX.

The London Missionary Society has over a thousand congregations in Madagascar, and 45,000 children are taught in the mission schools. Paris has upwards of eighty-eight Sunday-schools, 8,400 scholars, and 760 teachers. London has 951,063 scholars and 103,669 teachers. The United States has a Sunday-school membership of over 7,300,000. If every member would contribute one cent a week, we should have an annual income of three and one-half million dollars. Boxes are to be procured, and each Sunday-school asked to give this amount to establish similar schools all over the world. The money can be sent to C. B. Davenport, Treasurer, 487 Broome, St., New York, or to Albert Woodruff, President of the Foreign S. S. Association, 130 State St., Brooklyn.

Elvin and Dungan Debate.

ON Tuesday evening, April 6th, 1880, a debate was begun at Clear Creek, Saunders Co., Nebraska, between Elder R. M. Elvin of the Latter Day Saint Church and the Rev. D. R. Dungan, of the Christian or Campbellite Church. The subject discussed was: "Resolved that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the only true church;" Elvin affirming, Dungan denying.

The general rules of debate were read by the chairman, Mr. Runyan; also the articles of agreement between the speakers, in which the Bible was to be the standard of evidence, and Webster's Unabridged Dictionary was to settle the meaning of English words.

I will not attempt to give the discussion in full, for I have but a few brief notes to write from; neither will I attempt to follow the order of the discussion, or to give the language of the speakers, but will briefly give, as I understood them, the points aimed at and made by the speakers. I have numbered them for the sake of convenience.

ELVIN'S POINTS.

1. The law of the Lord is perfect.—Ps. 3: 10; 19: 7-10.
2. That law is the end of all religious controversy.—Isa. 8: 20; John 5: 39.
3. There is but one true church.—Eph. 1: 22; 4: 4-6.
4. Its foundation is revelation.—Matt. 16: 18; 11: 27.
5. Its laws are Faith, (Jude 3; Heb. 1: 6). Repentance, (Acts 2: 38; 17: 30). Baptisms, Heb. 6: 2; John 3: 5.
5. The laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost, (Acts 8: 14; 19: 6); for the healing of the sick, (Mark 16: 17; Jas. 5: 14); for ordination, (Num. 27: 18-23; 1 Tim. 4: 14). A belief in the resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment, (Heb. 6: 2).
6. Baptism is necessary, (Matt. 3: 13; John 3: 5). Its object, (Mark 1: 4; Acts 2: 38).
8. Its mode, (Col. 2: 12; Rom. 6: 3-4).
9. There is a baptism of the Spirit, with its accompanying gifts of tongues, healings, prophesyings, casting out of devils, etc., (John 3: 5; Joel 2: 28; Mark 16: 17).
10. The officers God placed in this one church consisted of High Priests, (Heb. 3: 1; 8: 3); Apostles, (Matt. 10: 1-4; Eph. 4: 11); Bishops, (Phil. 1: 1); Seventy, (Luke 10: 1); Elders, (Tit. 1: 5); Teachers, (Acts 13: 1-3), and Deacons, (1 Tim. 3: 10).
11. These officers were to be continued, (Acts 1: 23-26; 14: 8; 1 Thess. 2: 6).
12. There was a baptism of the dead, (1 Cor. 15: 29).
13. A blessing of little children, (Matt. 19: 13-15).
14. A washing of feet, (John 13: 14, 15).
15. The Eucharist, or Lord's supper, (Luke 22: 19, 20).
16. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is identical with that established by Christ, having the same officers, the same laws, performing the same ordinances, and manifesting the same fruits.

DUNGAN'S POINTS.

1. The whole question depends upon the character of Jos. Smith, and the books he produced.
2. The character of Jos. Smith is bad, as recorded in history, and as proven by the Kirtland Bank swindle, and the many other bad acts of his life.
3. He was a false prophet, as demonstrated by the failure of his predictions relative to the Jackson County Temple, and to himself in a sermon in Nauvoo, when he said, "They can't kill this chicken." 4. The Lord never deals in abbreviations, as, "My servant Jos. Smith, Jr." Jos. Smith was a polygamist, he had, "twelve adopted daughters." His wife, Emma, once left him on their account. 6. Records of baptisms for the dead were strictly kept to prevent baptizing for the same person more than once. 7. There was a secret order of Danites in the Church. Had seen a copy of the oath they took himself. It was found in a trunk in Iowa. The party taking the oath swore by his neck, ears, nose, mouth, arms, etc., to stand by J. Smith, right or wrong. 8. Mrs. M. Harris burned 116 pages of the manuscripts of the Book of Mormon. Jos. Smith was afraid to re-translate, because he knew he could not produce the same again. 9. The Book of Covenants was not of God, because it encouraged the saints to steal.—B. of C. 64: 6. 10. It made J. Smith head of the church instead of Christ.—B. of C. 104: 42. 11. It is a grammatical botch. 12. It contradicts the Bible in saying that John, the beloved, should tarry on earth. 13. It could not be of God, because it says, "Barley is for mild drinks." 14. It takes two paragraphs (11 and 12, sec. 85), to tell us that the sun shines by day and the moon by night. 15. In 76: 7, Esaias and Isaiah are spoken of as two distinct persons. 16. It contradicts the Book of Mormon and the Bible, in saying that it did not matter if certain persons were baptized an hundred times, they could not be saved.—Sec. 20. 17. The Book of Mormon is a miserably patched up job. It is ungrammatical in its language, and contains over 5000 errors. He could trace the writings of three persons in it, S. Spaulding, S. Rigdon and the bungling, dribbling style of "My servant Joseph Smith, Jr. Sidney made some splendid hits upon the questions then agitating religious circles; said he loved to read after him. 18. It speaks of baptism and has men performing it, ages before Christ instituted it. 19. It contradicts the Bible as to the birth place of Christ, locating it in Jerusalem instead of Bethlehem. 20. It states that while coming to this continent in the barges a certain person had said to his sons that "they would bring his hairs in sorrow to the dust." Bad place for dust. 21. Joseph' translation of the Bible is a terribly tinkered up affair. Gotten up expressly to have evidence for the Book of Mormon, as shown in Isa. 29. It shows the same bungling hand as the Book of Covenants and parts of the Book of Mormon; that of "My servant Josph Smith, Jr." 22. God never inspired any man to write such a chapter as Gen. 1, where the words "I God" are repeated thirty or more times. 23. It changes many facts in Bible history, as also the meaning of many passages of Scripture. 24. There is no original text to warrant such a translation. 25. The foundation of the whole structure is the Solomon Spaulding romance, as proven by Mrs. Spaulding's letter to the Boston Recorder.

DUNGAN'S REPLY TO ELVIN'S POINTS.

4. Revelation was not the foundation of the Church of Christ. Christ himself was that foundation.—1 Cor. 3: 11.
9. There is but one baptism as proven by Eph. 4: 5. The "baptisms" spoken of in Heb. 6: 2 is only a repetition of the one. Being "born of water and the Spirit" is but one operation. When a person is born of water he is also born of the Spirit.

11. There never was to be but twelve apostles. The twelve foundations of the New Jerusalem were named after them. No one took the place of James when he was killed. Paul took the place of Judas. The original meaning of the word "apostle" was "sent," and when it is applied to persons other than the apostles of Christ, it simply means "one sent." The church of Christ was built upon apostles and prophets, but Latter Day Saints have built their church and then thrust in the apostles as a foundation as they are needed. There was an order of High Priests, but never but one acting at a time. When Christ took his seat at the right hand of his Father, he entered upon his High Priesthood, and there were to be no more on earth. All members of the church constitute a priesthood in one sense.—1 Pet. 2: 9.

12. All there is about that baptism for the dead is: "If there is no resurrection of the dead then are ye baptized for the dead, but if there is a resurrection of the dead, then there is no need of it."

14. The "washing of feet" was merely an act of Christ to teach humility.

16. If the members of the Reorganization would work miracles he might accept their claims, but would rather see more and hear less about them. Why did not my opponent heal his brother's eyes yesterday. Christ worked miracles whenever there was a demand for them. Mormon logic is like this, (linking his two little fingers together, then turning his hands from side to side), we are the Church of Christ because we work, miracles; we work miracles because we are the Church of Christ.

ELVIN'S REPLY TO DUNGAN'S POINTS.

He would not attempt to reply to all that his opponent had said, for many of his arguments were outside of the agreed rules of the discussion; however, justice demands that some of them be noticed.

1. Joseph Smith's character was just as good among his enemies as was that of any of the ancient prophets or apostles. Those histories referred to were works of his enemies. Such a course of reasoning would destroy the entire Bible. Look at what is recorded of many of the principal actors in the Bible. Bad deeds are related of many of them, not only by their enemies, but by their friends. Abraham was a polygamist, as was also Jacob. Jacob swindled his father-in-law out of his herds. Lot became drunk and so did Noah, and both did unclean things. David, the man who at one time was after God's own heart, became a murderer, polygamist, and a cruel and tyrannical king, (2 Sam. 12: 31). Moses, "the meek man," the great law giver, and the one through whom the Lord revealed the ten commandments, which are to day the basis of all ecclesiastical and political governments, killed a man, and, at times, was cruel and vindictive. Solomon, the wisest man of ancient days, What was his conduct? Peter denied his Savior, with cursings, and Paul aided, by his testimony in killing the Saints. The enemies of Christ said of him that he was a deceiver, a Sabbath breaker, a wine-bibber, a glutton, and an impostor generally.

Now if we reject Joseph Smith on account of what his enemies say of him, what shall we do with this array of ancient worthies? Consistency would say to reject them too. (In refutation of the bank swindling story, the testimony of a prominent banker in Kirtland was read from The Saints' Herald).

2. There is plenty of time for the prediction concerning the Jackson county Temple to be fulfilled yet, as there are upwards of forty years of that generation still remaining.

5. Emma Smith's dying testimony was read to offset the story of Joseph Smith being a polygamist and having adopted daughters;" she knew nothing of the kind.

7. There was an order of Danites in the Church, but not by order or sanction of Joseph Smith. There were many secret societies during the rebellion to assist the government, but not by command or approval of the government.

10. Christ is the head of the Church, Joseph Smith was only at the head here on earth, and received such blessings as had been received by Christ the head.

11. Grammarians differ widely as to what are the true principles of the English language. There are, at least, a dozen authors all contending for different rules. If revelation must be strictly grammatical, which one of the various authors would the Lord adopt? And if he did speak according to either one of them, could not the others find the same fault with him, as my opponent does with Joseph Smith?

16. This section refers to persons coming into the Church on baptisms performed outside of the true Church, which amounted to nothing.

17. The Book of Mormon is just as grammatically written and contains less errors than the Bible. The Dunkards claim to have found 144,000 errors in the latter.

18. The Bible is abundant in proof that baptism had been performed ages before Christ came. Paul declares (Gal. 3:8) that the gospel had been preached to Abraham; that it had been preached to the Israelites in the wilderness, (Heb. 4:2); that they were all baptized unto Moses in the Red Sea (1 Cor. 10:2).

The Book of Mormon does not say that Christ should be born in Jerusalem, but at Jerusalem. One meaning of the word "at" is "near by." In this sense it is to be used here. The prophet was a long way from Jerusalem at the time of the prophecy and as it was a noted place and Bethlehem unnoted, the language is perfectly appropriate. I live at Nebraska City but not in Nebraska City. My opponent has read over two dozen texts where the word at means in, and he defies me to find one where it means "near by." In Luke 9:31, we are told that Christ should die at Jerusalem. He did not die in Jerusalem (John 19:20) but "near by." Again Jesus came to his disciples as they sat at meat, (Mark 16:14). According to Bro. Dungan's rendering they did not sit "near by" the meat but in it. And as breeches were not invented at that time it must have been a palatable dish.

21. Smith's translation of the Bible a terribly tinkered up job! Well, I will take his translation and read certain passages, if my opponent will take King James' and read the same; and let the congregation judge as to which is plainer, more chaste or reasonable.

22. The first chapter of Joseph Smith's translation is no worse than the one hundred and thirty-sixth Psalm, King James'.

24. That Joseph Smith had no original text to translate from is very true, from the fact that there is no original text in existence, I am informed none earlier than the tenth century. These manuscripts being very incomplete, (having been changed to suit the fancy of the transcriber).

In reply to my opponent's remarks concerning miracles, I will say that the devil was the first individual asking a miracle. A wicked and adulterous generation seek a sign. I do not know why my brother's eyes could not have been healed; probably they could. I know they could if he had had the requisite faith. But as he was raised in the Campbellite school his faith no doubt is weak. Paul had a thorn in his flesh and left Trophimus at Miletum sick. Why was he not healed himself with this sick brother? If Christ worked miracles whenever there was a demand for them, why did he not come down from the cross when the Jews said they would believe on him if he would? My opponent has spoken against the continuation of apostles and prophets all through this discussion. There is, however, one kind of prophets he firmly believes in, and is very willing to have continued. It is not spelled like the other, but this way, "profits." (Mr. Dungan got $12 50 a day for his labor in this debate).

The debate was largely attended, good order prevailed and a gentlemanly spirit manifested between the speakers. As to the result, who can tell? None but the great searcher of hearts. Mr. Dungan is a highly educated man. Probably the best debater his church can afford, having had nineteen public discussions in his time. The opinion we formed was this: If there is any virtue in sticking to a person's subject, going by the rules agreed upon, and abiding by the testimony of those books to be taken as evidence, the affirmative speaker was victorious; but if there is no virtue in such things and the testimony of Tom, Dick, Harry, Beadle, Ann Eliza and the dogmatic, sarcastic, bombastic "I say so" of the speaker is to be considered, the negative certainly had it. A pretty fair idea of the effect can be drawn from an expression made use of by a Mr. McKay, one of the staunchest members of the Christian Church in Clear Creek, "Robert, you did well in a poor cause."

The debate lasted five nights with an extra session on Saturday afternoon, being six sessions of two hours each, divided into half hour speeches made alternately. Bro. Elvin wanted to continue the debate, but Mr. Dungan was "tired."

We have thus presented the subject matter of this debate and have done the best we could in presenting the arguments used by the speakers. If there are mistakes, they are of the memory and not from design.

THOMAS J. SMITH.

Nothing is easier than fault-finding. No talent, no self-denial, no brains, no character are required to set up in the grumbling business. But those who are moved by a genuine desire to do good, have but little time for murmuring or complaint.

If by losing any thing we gain wisdom, we are gainers by the loss.

The Tongue.

THE most influential member of the human body is the tongue. The overthrow of nations have been started by a single word from the tongue. Many a name has been ruined, and many are the hopes which have been blasted for ever by a single word from the tongue.

But my tongue is not of the character of any of these. O, no! I do not say anything disrespectful or hurtful of any one. I bridle my tongue; it is some one else who does the talking, the slandering, the backbiting. Thus thinks almost every one.

But we must not lay every thing to the tongue after all; for it would not have uttered a thought if the mind had not first presented it to it. So the mind is first to blame, and we must first govern the mind, and that will govern the tongue.

If persons allow themselves to do so, they can always find fault with some one. There is, to my knowledge, at least one sure way to prevent this thinking wrong of others. I would not say that I am any better than any one else, but I will tell you my experience in this matter: I was never much of a talker—that is I never said much—but used to think a good deal. At one period in my life, I was always thinking of something some one else had said or done, and that I wouldn't do as such an one had done, etc. One day, in thinking of something that another had done, I stopped and thought, "Do I do right in all things? Have I not my faults as well as they? And perhaps they can see something in me just as distasteful to them." Thus I reasoned with myself, and then I resolved that, whenever I found myself finding fault with others, I would ask myself these questions. And then came to my mind the words of Jesus: "Judge not, that ye be not judged." Since that I have always tried to remind myself, and have endeavored to keep from thinking of others failings. But after all, even if I have made this improvement, probably I do my share.

What does the Bible say of the tongue? James says:

"Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth! And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity; so is the tongue among the members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell. *** But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison."—Jas. 3:5, 6, 8.

And we may see how our own tongues can defile our whole bodies, and may witness that the tongue can indeed set on fire the course of nature, which fire is from hell; and, being from such a source, we must have a nature of hell, or the devil in order to be thus controlled.

By the following event in Jesus' life it may be plainly seen who has the right to judge or condemn:

"And the Scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman, taken in adultery; and when they had set her in the midst of the people, they said unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act. Now Moses in the law commanded us that such should be stoned; but what sayest thou? This they said tempting him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not. So when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him cast the first stone at her. And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground. And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out of the temple, one by one."—John 8:3-9.

And when the accusers had departed from the temple, and none had condemned her, Jesus said, "Neither do I condemn thee;" and he told her to "go her way and sin no more." Thus we see that all that was necessary was a repentance on her part; she did not need chastisement. How forgiving we should be, when we know of a wrong; and how much more we should be free from judging a brother or a sister. But if we think they are in the wrong we should try and lead them in the right way.

OBSERVER.

Pre-Aztec Mexico.

In about ten days the expedition for the exploration of Mexico and Central America, planned by Mr. Pierre Lorillard, the expense of which will be borne conjointly by that gentleman and the French Government, will start for the plateau Anahuac. M. Desire Charnay, who is in charge of the expedition; will be accompanied from here only by his secretary, M. Albert Lemaire, and one American assistant. The needful help in making the excavations will be secured on the spot, and as M. Charnay is an expert in the arts of photography and molding he dispenses with the services of special artists in these departments. The main object of the expedition is to search by excavations for traces of the race of people who preceded not only the Aztecs but the Otomies, Chechimeques, and Olmeques. M. Charnay, being specially commissioned by the French Government, will make the best terms he can with the Mexican Government as to the sharing with the French of any movable relics of a bygone age and people that may be discovered. Models will also be carefully made from the originals, and of these the French Government and Mr. Lorillard will each receive duplicate sets.

Mr. Charnay, the leader of the expedition, is a well known savant and explorer. He is a member of the geographical societies of Paris and Lisbon. This will not be his first visit to the scene of the projected excavations, as he visited Mexico in 1858 and again in 1860, in the interests of the French Government. It is but ten months since he returned from a protracted tour of exploration in Australia, New Guinea, and Java, whence he took back to Paris valuable collections illustrative of the flora and the fauna of these far away lands.

On inquiring for M. Charnay, at the Brunswick hotel last evening, the Herald reporter was introduced to a sturdy, middle-aged gentleman with a carefully trained gray mustache, who was seated in the corridor engaged in conversation with a young Frenchman, M. Albert Lemaire, who, while acting as his chief's private secretary, is also an expert draughtsman, having studied at the Ecole des Beaux arts, in Paris. M. Charnay, who speaks English fluently, in reply to a request for information as to the objects and prospects of the expedition said: "There are six provinces, in all of which I propose to search for traces of the unknown people who existed there long before the time of the Aztecs, or, indeed, before those other races or tribes known as Otomies, Chechimeques, and Olmeques, about whom traces hitherto found have been most vague and fragmentary. I go to Washington, I think, to-morrow, where I shall confer with the President and others, and in ten days I think we shall make a start. My outfit, scientific appliances, etc., are already en route. When I was there in 1858-'60 I marked various spots on the plateau Anahuac as likely to prove valuable in my researches, and at these points the first excavations will probably be made." In answer to an inquiry as to the length of time expected to be engaged in his search M. Charnay went on to say: "We may be away from eighteen months to three years. The length of time will greatly depend on the success that attends our labors. I will make no suppositions as to what we may discover. I have, of course, high hopes, but until we have commenced our labors I am as much in the dark as yourself as to what we are likely to discover. With regard to the disposition of relics we may find I shall make the best treaty I can with Mexico. I will take one-half, or one-third, in fact, all they are willing to give. But I shall prepare accurate models of everything discovered both for the French Government and for Mr. Lorillard. He is a great and generous man on this question. The expense is borne about equally by France and Mr. Lorillard. If there is more money on one side there is an equivalent. I mean the French Government have furnished the outfit. In about two or three weeks' time will be published, I expect simultaneously in France, Germany, England, and America, a detailed statement of our projects. Beyond what I have told you, I really myself am not in a position to say any thing more at present."

Mr. Pierre Lorillard was found at his house at Thirty-sixth street and Fifth avenue. "Oh! you have seen M. Charnay, have you?" said he; "well, I was just going to refer you to him. This has been a pet project of mine for ten years past, and I should have carried it out long since but for the difficulties encountered in the search for a suitable man to conduct the affair. When my friend Mr. Rice, of the North American Review, went abroad recently I asked him to look out for some suitable man; he heard that M. Charnay was then negotiating with the French Government, and as I had resolved to put my long cherished ideas into shape, and M. Charnay appeared the very man, after some negotiation, we joined forces rather than have two expeditions in the field. All preliminaries will be settled on M. Charnay's return from Washington, and he will start at once. With regard to the expense, which, as at present estimated, will be about $60,000, the French Government and myself share it about equally. If I find more cash than they do they furnish the outfit, so that equalizes matters." In reply to an inquiry as to whether or no Mr. Lorillard contemplates accompanying the expedition, he smiled and said: "Oh, no; I don't think my engagements will possibly admit of my doing so."

The actual relics discovered that revert to the French Government will be deposited in a separate department of a museum in Paris, which department, as a graceful act of courtesy in recognition of Mr. Lorillard's liberality and enterprise, will be known as the "Musée Lorillard." Articles on the progress of the expedition will appear from time to time in the columns of the North American Review, and any books that may be written by M. Charnay on the result of his labors will be published by Mr. Lorillard and Mr. Rice.

Suggestions of Reason.

MAN in the scale of created intelligencies occupies a position paramount to every other creature associated with earth life; this pre-eminence was given him in the creation. But while his superior endowments made him the lord of creation, they made him also the most responsible of all created beings; and as a sentient being he became amenable to law—divine law.

We conceive that law is essential to the preservation of order, and perpetuity of government; and in the conflict between right and wrong, its presence is necessary to the detection of wrong, and to oppose the negation of evil. The power to discriminate between good and evil, has, and always must exist pre-eminent in the mind of the Infinite.

Without the revelation of law, defining the boundaries of right and wrong, man would be shut out from the light and certainty of truth—a helpless mariner upon a shoreless sea, tossed to and fro, by the wind and waves of uncertainty—engaged in endless conflict—attended by all the evils accruing from a benighted condition. And in the eternal fitness of things, this condition must ever exist, in the absence of correct principles of government. God's government is, therefore, essential to true happiness. Its products are unity and love; and these elements are essential factors in the constitution of happiness, whether applied to angels or men.

The cause which has disturbed the equilibrium of Jehovah's government, has been a breaking away on the part of the creature from the obligations of divine law, which has resulted in a condition of things in this lower world over which Jesus and angels have wept.

God's government is founded in justice, love and mercy, and these three principles have a claim upon all mankind. When the claims of justice are executed upon sinful creatures, in their punishment, love and mercy plead their pardon and deliverance. The boon they ask is given, because their claims are founded in the Infinite and are a part of his nature. Love then leads the freed captive from a state of condemnation and degradation to a higher plane of moral purity and goodness, their dross is all washed away, through the atoning merits of the Redeemer, and his love has set them free; and they will enjoy (i. e. all mankind) the indwelling of Christ's love in eternity.

These three qualities, justice, love and mercy, constitute a trinity of heavenly principles, standing out in every part of God's government. They accompany the administration of his laws in every part of the universe, and they must stand or fall together. If the sinner goes "where hope and mercy can never reach him," he is consequently cut off from divine justice, love and mercy; for these principles are inseparable as existing in the Deity.

If the destiny of those who die unregenerated is to be annihilated, or to suffer the pains of endless punishment, it must be a terrible God indeed, that executes this sentence. Such doctrines transform the character of God from a being of justice, love and mercy, to that of the most hideous monster which does, or can exist. His injustice would excel that of a Nero, or the most degraded despot that ever ruled a throne; and justice, love and mercy would be banished from the universe. Justice and love constitute the basis of divine punishment, hence punishment is administered as a corrective, and under the influence of justice, love and mercy, it is redeeming, and purifying. Hence its application to fallen man is essential to the removal of the errors and evils which sin has engendered in his nature.

Divine punishment is clothed with infinite capabilities. Thus it will be able to accomplish the end for which it is administered; after which all of its subjects purified and cleansed will rise to a higher plane of life consonant with the laws of divine government. In the final consummation, there will be nothing lost by the fall. Infinite wisdom looked through and beyond the gloom of sin and death, to a world redeemed and purified. The "fall" was permitted; and grand will be the results accruing therefrom. Man, with a regenerated and redeemed nature, possessing an enlarged and nobly developed mind, will be able to hold in endless contrast the results of good and evil. His experience in earth-life, as well as his experience in the spirit-state, in an unregenerated condition, will clothe his mind with the fadeless gems of knowledge and truth, which would have been forever beyond his reach, if he had never fallen. He will then have progressed to that degree of knowledge which will enable him to live forever in consonance with those laws which are essential to the continuity of his happiness and glory. Temptation can never invade the domain of man redeemed; the object for which sin and death were permitted to disrobe him of his primal purity, will have been attained. His mind will be inspired with a love for the pure and good; he then will appreciate God's love and redeeming grace. And in the end love's golden chain will bind all hearts together in a union which will be immortal. With earnest longings in our souls for that higher and better life, we can say in the language of the poet:

"Our longing hearts cry out, O, come!
Creation groans for thee;
The weary pilgrim sighs, O, come!
Bring immortality."

I Wish I had Died When a Child.

Its not unusual to hear some folks express themselves when in trouble, thus: "I wish I had died when a child," and it can be heard once in awhile by some when they have no particular reason other than they would not have so much to answer for in the day of judgment. It is evidently a very unwise expression. The expression itself indicates either ignorance or guilt. It is true that we have many trials to bear and griefs to endure, but the man who lives uprightly before the world, pays his debts, and does all the good he can to his neighbors, endeavoring to make the world better by his being in it, has no reason to wish he had died when a child; for, if he has fought a good fight, being a good husband, a kind father, a wise counselor, and has sacrificed for the salvation of others, he has done a work that will give him reason to thank his God that he was privileged to manifest to the world that he was a benefactor indeed, and especially if he assisted in bringing souls to Christ. ### Letter From California.

Dear Herald:—Materials for a first-class letter are rather scarce, but I hope what few items I can find will be of interest to your readers. This month has been unusually wet—for April—so unusual that the oldest inhabitants say, "they have never seen the like." Over twelve inches of rain fell in forty-eight hours, and in some parts of the State there were fears of floods; but, so far as heard from, the damage from rain is very light, in proportion to the amount of good done to the crops. The farmers are jubilant over the bright prospects, and the indications favor a prosperous year.

There is a mistaken idea prevailing outside of California; that in mining and agriculture we find our greatest success. Such is not the case. California's manufacturing capacity is unequalled. True, it is not as far advanced as some of the older states; yet, in proportion to population and age it is in the lead. Woolen, paper, rolling, and other mills are constantly being erected, giving employment to thousands of men, and making us independent of imported goods.

"HARD TIMES."

I suppose our Eastern friends think our situation rather dubious; for I see by the New York and other papers that we are in danger from riot, etc. There has been a great deal of noise and bluster made by chronic growlers and office seekers, and that is all. Most of the complaints of "hard times" come from San Francisco, from the so-called "unemployed." You can see how much confidence can be placed in this complaint by reading the following extract from a letter of David Bush's, founder of the fund to give work to the unemployed:

"To the Editor of the Chronicle, Sir:—As the subscriptions to the 'Golden Gate Park Labor Fund' have all been collected, it perhaps would not be out of place for me to give an account of my stewardship. My object was two-fold. First, to help the truly deserving and needy that would try and help themselves when the opportunity presented; and, secondly, segregate them from the turbulent and noisy agitators who have so disgraced our city for the past two years, in order to show to the people of our own state and our Eastern friends how few in number they are, and how hollow are their professions. The total number of those who have applied for work is nine hundred and seventy five, of which number only about six hundred can probably be credited as belonging to San Francisco, not a large number considering we have a city of over 300,000 inhabitants, and I doubt very much if there is any city in this country of like population which can present a more satisfactory exhibit in this respect."

ACCIDENTS, ETC.

We hardly began to realize the fearful loss of life and property from hurricanes east of us, when an explosion at the Giant Powder Works, at West Berkeley, this county, occurred, killing twenty-five persons and destroying over twenty thousand dollars worth of property.

The shooting of Charles DeYoung, of the San Francisco Chronicle, by the Rev. I. M. Kalloch, son of Rev. J. S. Kalloch, mayor of San Francisco, has been the general topic of conversation since its occurrence. The sympathy of the community, generally, is on the side of the Rev. shootist, except, of course, the immediate friends of the deceased. The shooting was the natural outgrowth of a bitter family feud. The Stockton Independent, referring to it, says:

"If this dreadful example ends the unbridled license of the press in San Francisco and elsewhere, it will be well. Many a man of honorable record and many a shrinking woman of spotless life, has had reason to deprecate the shafts of editorial malice; repeated and more venomous if defied. No honest or decent aim of journalism is subserved by such vituperation. It is foreign to the legitimate sphere of a newspaper, a curse to the community, and a blight to the defenceless objects of Bohemian wrath or cupidity; and when it ends as in this instance, it is not alone the mob who hastily collect at the news who approve the deed, for many thoughtful and conservative men will say, or think, 'It could not have ended otherwise.'"

The California conference having divided the Pacific Slope Mission into districts, the next thing on the programme will be the calling of conferences for permanent organization. In the election of presidents it behooves the Saints to be very careful in their selection; for it needs men of executive ability and intelligence, and those who will do their duty without fear or favor. In the Northern California District, (the one I am particularly interested in), there are several men of known ability. There is a better feeling prevailing among the outsiders towards the Reorganized Church, than at any former time. They begin to see the difference between the true Latter Day Saints and the so-called "Latter Day Saints" in Utah.

Proper Burials.

Good Company, a New England magazine, says that the clergy of one of the Eastern cities recently passed the following excellent resolutions: "1. That burial services be limited, so far as practicable, to Scripture reading, singing and prayer. 2. That we deprecate the appointment of funeral services for Sunday. 3. That we also deprecate the public exposure of remains. 4. That before the arrangements are made as to the time and place of the burial service, the convenience of the officiating clergyman should be consulted." All these recommendations, says Good Company, are wise; especially the first one. The extreme difficulty of making "remarks" at funerals which shall be at once acceptable, truthful and profitable is often felt by every conscientious minister. If the deceased is not spoken of at all the omission is sometimes felt to be a disparagement; eulogy is seldom wise, and a discriminating estimate of the character can scarcely be uttered on such an occasion.

It would be vastly better if the funeral services were uniformly limited, as the resolving ministers advise, to Scripture reading, singing and prayer. Above all the horrible custom of exposing the face of the dead ought to be at once and forever abolished.—Selected.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

At Lucas, Iowa, on April 30th and May 1st and 2d, brethren Z. H. Gurley and Joseph S. Snively held a series of meetings, and had a pleasing time of grace and peace from above in declaring the gospel and in associating with the Saints, among whom hospitality abounds, and an excellent spirit exists. Also among the people without there was a manifest desire to hear the truth preached. The branch appeared to be in good working order, as well as spiritually alive; and in administering to the sick the faith that prevails with God was found. The above items we received at the Herald Office, on May 15th, from Bro. Gurley, who came to Sandwich, from Lamoni, Iowa, the 11th, upon the sad errand of burying his brother Samuel, whose body was that same day laid to rest by the side of his first wife, his father, brother and two sisters, in the Fox River burying ground, where so many of the Saints await the resurrection day, and the coming of their Lord. We mourn over the departing, as one by one they go; but not with the thought that this endeth all, for He "shall swallow up death in victory," and the graves shall give up the dead, whose glowing, living forms of immortality shall abide forever with each other and with God.

Bro. Blair baptized three married ladies at Galland's Grove, Iowa, on the 8th May. He expected to reach Salt Lake City the 20th.

Bro. G. T. Griffiths wrote from New Troy, Michigan, May 12th, that he baptized three others on the 9th, near Galien.

Bro. F. P. Scarelliff reports that he preached twice at Tunnel Hill branch, Johnson county, Illinois. He was at Marion, Williamson county, when he wrote. His health was improving.

Sister Mary E. Beebe sends a clipping from the Record-Union, of Sacramento, Cal., concerning a sermon preached by "Joe Smith," the "Apostle Joe Smith," upon the notorious Porter Rockwell. We suppose it to be the funeral sermon delivered at the time of the death of the man. Sr. Beebe wishes to know the meaning of the reference to Joseph Smith. We reply, that the "Apostle Joe Smith" mentioned by the Record-Union is Joseph F. Smith of the Utah Church, and one of their Twelve, and that it was not Joseph Smith, the President of the Reorganized Church, who delivered the sermon eulogizing Porter Rockwell.

Bro. D. L. Shinn of Clarksburg, W. Va., writes cheerily of his hopes, and says: "I have great confidence in the power now ruling to move all things into proper shape. We see the fulfilling hand in every event of our times. Let us hail the signs with gladness, the coming better day."

Sister Martha Billingsky, living at Webberville, Ingham county, Michigan, formerly of London, Ontario, expresses her gratitude for God's goodness to her, in both spiritual and temporal ways. Notwithstanding trials she feels strong in the faith, especially because, in answer to the prayers of the Saints, she was raised from a bed of sickness unto health, some months ago. But one other member is there, but the people promise to attend and hear, if the elders will come and preach to them. Will some of the ministry who are appointed to Michigan please try and call when passing east or coming west. Lansing is in the same county. Address her as above.

Bro. F. P. Scarelliff wrote from DeSoto, Jackson county, Illinois, May 17th, speaking of having the pleasant companionship of Bro. Isaac M. Smith, and they had been preaching in Williamson and Jackson counties, where large congregations listen to the word, and some believe but are not yet ready to obey. May the spirit of truth and peace go with these brethren, and to those who hear them.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn writes from Shelby, Iowa, as follows: "We have as cosy a little chapel as there is in the country, and it is paid for." On both these accounts we are glad, and congratulate the brethren, hoping that peace and love may ever have their home within its walls and with the body of disciples that shall worship therein.

Bro. Charles Wicks wrote from Taylor, Red River county, Texas, May 17th. He had arrived all right; but found that Bro. W. T. Bozarth had gone from there, under the pressure of a notice, a copy of which is elsewhere given. Bro. Wicks was referred to in the notice as a "pet;" but thinks he will remain for a time. The branch is in fair condition; the Saints feeling well, and enjoying the truth. Bro. Wicks preached to them, and held sacrament service with them.

Bro. N. Stamm wrote from Exira, Iowa, May 18th, where he had been called to visit a lady, sick nigh unto death. He had been preaching at Des Moines, and elsewhere, with good liberty and some success. He asks that the saints remember him in faith.

A Cadillac (Michigan) News for May 6th, is received. In it is a letter from Shortsville, Ontario county, N. Y., written by Rev. C. C. Thorne, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Manchester, N. Y. From the reading of this letter we conclude that it is an easy thing to darken a man's character from the hearsay evidence of respectable, reverend enemies. The letter was written in reply to one from Rev. A. Marsh, we presume of Cadillac. We really wonder at the logic of it: Joseph Smith and his relatives were bad; they became exponents of the gospel, according to the New Testament, according to the world called Mormonism; therefore, Mormonism is false and Joseph Smith and others imposters.

Bro. W. T. Bozarth wrote from Hearne, Robertson county, Texas, May 20th, that he was preaching there. The branch was organized sometime during the past year, and Bro. Bozarth is laboring to instruct them and build them up in the faith and doctrine of the Church. May he and they rejoice and be edified together by the Lord.

We thank W. O. Thomas for a copy of the St. Louis Republican. Thomas Henning for copies of the Irish World. C. D. Seely for a copy of the Christian. B. F. Boydston, for a Christian Messenger, of Bonham, Texas. William Street for a Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Card from Bro. Nicholas Stamm, May 20th, states that he baptized one at Exira, Dallas county, Iowa, Monday the 17th, a lady, so ill that she was carried to the water; but who bore the fatigue of the baptismal ordinance well. Bro. Stamm states that at the confirmation she received the Spirit and felt at peace.

Bro. Richard Ferris writes from West Oakland, Cal., but is not yet assured that the division of the mission into districts will be so productive of good results as it was supposed.

A bundle of English newspapers received from Bro. C. H. Hassall, on the 18th May, for which we thank him.

Some one sends us copies of the National Citizen Soldier, published at Washington, D. C., and is the organ of the citizen soldiers of the United States. It is devoted to the interests of the soldiers; is monthly, and twenty-five cents per year.

Papers are received from Br. B. F. Boydston, Rockwall, Texas, the Christian Messenger, containing a letter from Bro. B. T. St. John, replied to by the editor, on the spiritual gifts. Joseph Smith and his spurious revelations are the usual arguments against our view.

Bro. Thomas W. Smith, wrote May 21st, from Boston, that he had baptized three at Jonesport, Maine, recently, two young women and one an elderly man. The cause was in fair condition in the Eastern Maine District. His present address is 191 Hampden street, Boston Highlands, Massachusetts.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—To whom does the term, "Sons of God," occurring in Gen. 6:1, 2, refer, seeing that Christ is called the "only begotten son of God?"

Ans.—It means the people of God who lived upon the earth in those days, and who are there spoken of as turning away from the body so far as to affiliate with the families of those who were not numbered with the people of God by the acceptance of the gospel, and obedience thereunto. This intermarriage marked a stage of apostasy from the pure ways and godly government of Adam, Abel, Enoch, and men like them, and the culmination of this was a time of great wickedness and unbelief that preceded the deluge. The Inspired Translation gives a plainer history of those times and events. The term, "sons of God," is used in numbers of places in the Old and New Testaments to designate the Lord's people. In John 1:12 we are taught that Christ's purpose at his personal advent among the Jews was to give power unto men whereby they might "become the sons of God." In 2 Cor. 6:17, 18, we are given this commandment and promise of God: "Come out from among them, and be ye the separate, * * and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." See also Romans 8:14, 19. Gal. 4:5, 6. Phil. 2:15. Heb. 2:10; 12:7. 1 John 3:1, 2. Job 1:6. Hosea 1:10. Paul speaks of the spirit of adoption whereby they are made the "sons of God," and can cry "Abba, Father," to him.

Q—In the Book of Mormon, Ether 1:8, it reads that the Lord said unto the brother of Jared, "And never have I showed myself unto man whom I have created; for never has man believed in me as thou hast." Yet we read that he appeared unto Abraham, and also to Isaac, as recorded in Genesis 17:1, and 26:2, 24. One disputes the other. Which is correct?

A.—There is no contradiction between the two books in this matter, for the Lord's interview with the brother of Jared occurred hundreds of years before Abraham's day. From the tower of Babel, at the time of the confusion of languages, went out the people of Jared, led by the Lord's revelations, as related, and they had been established on this continent long before Abraham (who was the tenth generation from Noah) received the visit from God that is recorded in Genesis seventeenth chapter, which, according to the generally accepted chronology, occurred about four hundred and fifty years after the deluge, or 1898 B. C., the deluge having been 2348 B. C. Thus the word of God to Jared that he had never before shown himself to mortal man we find no reason to disbelieve from the history of Abraham, who lived so long after the confusion of languages and the days of the scattering from Babel.

Q.—Is the city spoken of by John in Revelations 21:2, as coming down from God out of heaven, to be a literal city, or is it a figure of speech merely?

A.—We have understood, by the written word and by the assurance of the Spirit, that the city spoken of will be a literal city, "a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God," as says Paul of the one that he expected to inhabit, and which John thus saw in vision, as something that was to be "hereafter," as the angel at the beginning informed him. It is to rest upon the redeemed and glorified earth, and the glory of God "shall lighten it."

Q.—What was done with the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated, and with the Urim and Thummim, after the translation?

A.—They were taken by the angel of God, with the promise that, in the due time of the Lord, and when the people should be righteous enough to receive and be benefitted by them, the sealed portions should be made known to them. Until that time comes, they are hidden from men, according to the will of God who gave his reasons for so doing as follows: "That I may preserve the words which thou hast not read, until I shall see fit in mine own wisdom to reveal all things unto the children of men."

Q.—Is it right for a Priest, or any officer of the Church to serve as a jurymen?

A.—Yes, as much as it is the duty of any other citizen. Though it may not be pleasant yet it is one of the duties appertaining to citizenship.

We have two questions concerning whether it is right to give the sacramental emblems to those not of the Church, some desiring to partake, and some having companions in the Church, who can partake, while they themselves are forbidden. To these we reply that the emblems are only for baptised believers, those who have been baptized for the remission of sins, and who, by the Spirit, discern the virtue and power in these emblems; and who by the same, look forward to Christ's tangible and real coming again to the earth, to meet and dwell with his Saints, and to partake of the fulness of the blessings of the redeemed and glorified earth with them. The withholding it is not done because of assuming to be better or worthier as individuals, but because of the commandment being from God to his Church and people, not to those who refuse or neglect to comply with the means provided by Him. Hence it is not a matter for which the ministry are responsible to men, but a kindly explanation may be given before administering the bread and wine, so that no reasonable person can take offense, or feel slighted.

BRO. W. T. BOZARTH received the following notice to quit the country, sent him while he was at Taylor, Red River county, Texas. It speaks for itself.

BRO. M. H. FORSCUTT wrote from Chicago, May 17th, as follows:

"The interest is certainly increasing, and the prospect is quite encouraging. There is a demand for tracts, and I have several applications for the Book of Mormon, but I have none to loan. Our prayer meeting has doubled in number. Commence Bible lectures, followed by Bible class next week."

THE following, sent us by Bro. Collier, is a dispatch dated at Evansville, Indiana, April 19th, 1880. It shows the tendency of modern beliefs (unbeliefs) in Christ and his gospel. The churches have no criterion of truth, no demonstration of it, and not the light and the knowledge that Jesus promised through the Holy Ghost to the obedient. See how infidelity works in the pulpits and everywhere else:

"LOSING HIS FAITH.—Last night, Rev. George Chaney startled his congregation by incorporating in his resignation the statement that he was not a Christian. The condition on which he would remain was that he should not be expected to pray or pronounce a benediction. He recommended the sale of the hymn books for waste paper. The sermon which preceded is quite as remarkable as the resignation. It renounces all supernaturalism, and declares the worship of God, as usually conducted, as much idolatry as bowing down to a stick or stone."

FROM the Cincinnati Commercial, of Sunday, May 16th, 1880, we clip the following in reference to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now in session in that city.

"The Committee on Place and Entertainment of the next General Conference submitted their report, stating that the estimate for entertainment was usually made on a basis of about $46,000.

"Report No. 1 on the Book Concern was submitted. They recommend that the deficiency in the Episcopal Fund be charged to profit and loss at the request of the Agents. Governor Evans moved to distribute said deficiency among the Conferences, and raise the same and pay back to the Book Concerns. Dr. Lanahan said: "You might as well distribute among the moon and stars," and moved to lay on the table, and it was quickly done.

"The deficiency is a pretty big thing, amounting in the aggregate for both Book Concerns to the neat sum of $120,000.

"Philadelphia was fixed upon as the place for holding the next Conference, and resolutions were adopted calling on Congress and the President to enforce the law against polygamy in Utah."

The paper was sent us by a brother.

THE following from the Laramie Times, for May 18th, shows how a man with vim in him may work for the cause he loves, if he will.

"Mr. Eames, from Cheyenne, gave the citizens of Cummins City three lectures, or sermons, on Sunday. A large and attentive audience listened to his remarks with pleasure. He is an agreeable speaker, and advances convincing arguments, and is evidently sincere in his statements. Mr. Eames has erected a large and commodious hall, which he proposes to use for school purposes, and which is to be open to all speakers, irrespective of religious beliefs, previous condition of servitude, or otherwise. He is one of Cummins City's most enterprising citizens."

A BROTHER sends us the Pittsburgh Dispatch for May 18th, 1880. In it the reasons for the existence of unemployed preachers are given in an editorial summary taken from the field of discussion of the different religious convocations being held in the United States.

The following editorial, cut from the same paper, bears its own comment on the face of it.

"Some of the outsiders who attend the Methodist General Conference, at Cincinnati, criticize the brethren for their lack of devotional habits. It is said that during the hour when the Conference engages in prayer and praise, there are from eighty to one hundred and fifty of its members in the lobby, chatting on miscellaneous matters; and it is further said that just before the election of bishops, most of these brethren were lobbying and pulling wires for their favorite candidates. This being done, they could cheerfully go inside and join in asking the Lord to direct the casting of the vote, so that it might result in the selection of men who would be acceptable and well-pleasing in His sight. Many of the brethren are unhappy over the way the election has resulted, especially as the four new bishops are all from the east, instead of being taken from the central and western states. It is thought that there may yet be another election for three or four bishops. The colored people are clamorous for a bishop of their own complexion, and the Germans want one of their own nationality."

It is not what we earn, but what we save, that makes us rich. It is not what we eat, but what we digest, that makes us fat. It is not what we read, but what we remember that makes us learned. All this is very simple, but it is worth remembering.

Chemists tell us that a single grain of the substance called iodine will impart color to seven thousand times its weight of water. It is so in higher things—one companion, one book, one habit may effect the whole life and character.

News Summary.

April 26th.—A steamer arrived in Baltimore, yesterday, having on board nearly two thousand emigrants from Germany, Austria, Sweden and Norway. They are bound for Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska.

Another destructive cyclone, this time in Mississippi, at Macon and vicinity, on Sunday night, 25th. At Macon eighteen people were killed and the rail-road depot, machine shops, round houses, and many dwellings were blown down. Tennessee and Alabama were also visited by storms that did much damage and destroyed some lives. On Saturday night the 24th in Christian county Illinois, a terrible wind destroyed property, killed four people and wounded thirty two others, and at Decatur, Carlinville, Clinton and elsewhere in Illinois, the storms damaged much property, the lightning aiding in the work. The Saints' chapel at Sandwich was struck the same evening and damaged $100 to $150 in value. In various places churches were completely destroyed.

Cleveland, Ohio, has contracted for an electric light of 10,000 candle power to be placed in the dome of the county court house. It will cost $1,800, and is warranted perfect.

27th.—Premier Gladstone does not progress fast in forming the Cabinet. The advanced Liberals are rather hard to satisfy and demand of him as many of their kind as is possible to have. The following appointments have been made: Earl Granville, Secretary of State for the Foreign Department. The Marquis of Hartington, Secretary of State for India. H. C. E. Childers, Secretary of State for War. Lord Selborne, Lord High Chancellor. William E. Forster, Chief Secretary for Ireland. Lord Northbrook, First Lord of the Admiralty.

The Afghans are considered to be now thoroughly whipped into submission.

Last night eighteen stores and residences were destroyed by fire at Adrianville, Ky. The losses are very considerable.

28th.—Famine and pestilence are raging throughout many of the Russian provinces, and hundreds of the peasantry are dying daily. The granaries in some districts are all empty, and there is neither money nor food. The condition of the unfortunate people is dreadful to contemplate, yet the Government has not taken any steps to alleviate the distress. Its time is taken up with political trials and schemes for territorial aggrandizement.

An earthquake at Yokohama, Japan, on the 22d of February is accounted the severest which has occurred there for many years. Several buildings, including the United States Naval Hospital at that point, were seriously damaged.

Theebaw, King of Burmah, is not dead, and more's the pity. His disease is very peculiar, and on some occasions he has all the appearance of being dead, but it turns out that he is only unconscious. During one of these trances, which lasted three days, the priests who prescribe for the Royal patient recommended that 225 virgins be sacrificed to the gods in order to procure his recovery. The recommendation was carried out, and the reverend gentlemen of Burmah doubtless take due credit for their prophetic insight.

An enormous deficit of fifteen to twenty million dollars has been discovered in the English government accounts in the East India. Of course the outgoing government is charged with the blame. Just how it will prove is yet uncertain.

7th.—Destructive fires are raging in the oil region in the neighborhood of Bradford, Pa. The fire originated by an oil well overflowing and catching fire. The fire spread rapidly, and six distinct fires, covering an extensive territory, are now in progress. The tackle of 900 wells, consisting of engines, engine houses, boilers, tanks, belt-houses, and derricks, has been already destroyed. Each tank contains about 250 gallons of oil, and most of them were full at the time. Rew City, a village of some 500 inhabitants, in the oil region, was entirely destroyed, and two women and five children were burned to death.

and jeopardizing the liberty of John Taylor, President of the church.

10th.—James Redpath, who has recently visited Ireland, is lecturing in New York City upon the want and misery that exist in that country. A telegram from Europe says that a hail-storm has devastated the greater part of West Hungary. Almost all the windows and roofs of houses in towns and villages were destroyed, and vines, fruit trees, and green corn crushed to the earth.

PAICINES, San Benito Co., California,
May 3rd, 1880.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Believing that I have good news to communicate, I write to say that we are not yet forsaken of the Lord in this part. I left home April 13th, and returned the 30th. I held meetings on the 13th and 14th at San Juan, in the Plaza Hall; participated in a Saint's meeting at Watsonville on the 15th, and preached in their chapel on the 18th. Again on the evening of the 22d had another feast with the Saints there, in a prayer and testimony meeting. The 25th I preached three miles south of San Juan, being assisted by Bro. Richard Smith. He preached at Watsonville on the 18th. On the 25th I again spoke in the Plaza Hall, San Juan. On the 26th, held a meeting at Bro. Silas Twitchell's, and on the 27th baptized six into the kingdom. We enjoyed a good time at the confirmation, sacrament and testimony meeting following. The Saints of San Juan have taken hold of the work with renewed energy; and, although the little flock is surrounded with strong opposition, yet I feel that if they are faithful they will be able to overcome the adversary in whatsoever form he approaches them. Others there are about ready for the water. I am to meet with them again the 9th, if nothing prevents. I had good liberty in presenting the truth, for which I bless his holy name. He leaves us not alone, if we put our trust in him. I am pleased with the division of the Pacific Slope Mission. Now, if each of the four missions is blessed with a good energetic president, I think the work will move rapidly onward. Crops are looking well, prospects bid fair for a bountiful harvest.

Yours in the covenant of peace,
J. H. LAWN.

GALIEN, Berrien Co., Michigan,

Dear Herald:—Since writing for your columns some changes have taken place, and I will again report progress.

After writing from Farmington, Kentucky, I preached a few times in that vicinity. Though the spiritual condition of the branch there is not very flattering, yet there are some noble people in that country, both in and out of the Church. As far as I was able to judge, Bro. Hansen has nobly done his part, but his labors have not been attended with as much success as he and others might wish. He is surely entitled to credit for much patience, for laboring so long and earnestly with so little encouragement. He loves the cause.

With Brn. D. G. McPherson and I. N. Gore I visited the Eagle Creek branch, in Henry county, Tennessee, where we had a very pleasant time, and did what we could for the advancement of the cause, I seldom find so generous, warm-hearted Saints. Their kindness will not soon be forgotten.

We returned again to Farmington and vicinity, and March 18th, Bro. Jefferson Turnbow took Bro. McPherson and I to Fulton, where, with Bro. L. P. Clapp, we took train for Belleville, Illinois. Soon we were crossing the Ohio River, the boundary line of my mission. Many and I trust profitable have been my experiences since I crossed the line into the mission, November 6th, 1877.

I do not regret the two years and a half I spent in the South. And O, how sweet was the consoling assurance that God had accepted my work there. May God bless the dear Saints of the Southeastern Mission, who nobly helped and encouraged me in my arduous labors. And to them I would say, Let us not slacken our endeavors until all obstacles are surmounted, our labor is over, and we peacefully enter into our rest, to reap the fruits of our labor. May God bless our worthy brethren Crawford and Scarcliff as they go to lift the standard of liberty in the South, and may they find the same warm hearts to cheer and help them that made my mission tolerable there.

Arriving at Belleville we received a hearty welcome from the Saints whose kindness of two years ago was still fresh in my memory. We found them as kind and genial as ever, and enjoyed a week's labor among them, and then on to the great city of St. Louis, where we met again generous hearts and congenial minds, who welcomed us, and did all they could to make our stay pleasant and agreeable. I do not just see how heaven could be all it ought to be if we could not meet there those we have associated with here. We also visited Gravois, Alma and Cheltenham, where we were kindly cared for and found a warm-hearted people. While in St. Louis District we met Brn. M. T. Short, and A. J. Cato, and heard them speak. We also heard the great evangelist, Moody, and, at the risk of being unpopular, I must say I could not pronounce him a reasoner nor an orator. He is simply a wild, rattling talker. Sankey is a superb singer.

April 4th attended conference in St. Louis, and after having a very pleasant day, we left them at 8 p. m., and at 8.40, Brn. Short, Hicklin, Roberts, McPherson and I took train for Plano, arriving the next day. Met many familiar faces, and made the acquaintance of some new ones.

It is needless to say that I enjoyed the conference, after my long isolation from the body of the Church. I had a pleasant and agreeable home at Bro. Conover's during conference, where I roomed with my companion of former years,

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert. I could not have been more favorably situated or more kindly treated. Bro. and Sr. Conover know just how to make one feel at home.

After conference, Brn. M. T. Short, G. T. Griffiths and I came to this place, and commenced work in our new field.

Bro. Short remained a few days and labored acceptably. He then joined Bro. Scott in Allegan county. Bro. Griffith and I have been laboring at Galien and vicinity. He has preached once at Green Bush and I five times at Troy. We have been blest with the Spirit and have good interests in different localities. Bro. Griffith has baptized seven.

I am making my home at Bro. Blakeslee's, visiting other Saints in town, and occasionally spending an agreeable time at Bro. Thurston's in the country. At Troy I was well received by Saints and friends and have been well treated by all here. My stay has been quite pleasant. I begin to feel the spirit of the mission.

I will stay awhile and then go home, and tarry until fall conference. Will the Saints pray for this mission and its laborers. In the faith as strong as ever, I am

HEMAN C. SMITH.

COLDWATER, Michigan,

May 11th, 1880.

Bro. J. Smith.—Some seem to have not found out my address. Can you announce in the Herald for an issue or two that the address of Wm. H. Kelley is Coldwater, Branch county, Michigan, Box 596?

I spent Sunday the 9th, in Steuben county, Indiana. Held two meetings with an excellent attendance. The Saints have their church house inclosed. It will be ready for conference if not entirely completed. Everything is favorable here for an abundant crop. Saints well.

"Sebastos" of Cadillac is out again and James is after him to-day. He and Bro. Bond are trying to surround the "varmint" and they have driven him back among his sympathizers and friends here; he has fortified, and invites battle in a weak way for the third time.

May 17th.—Though now late, I communicate a few items of experience that may be of interest to some of the Herald readers.

February 7th, last, I left home to visit the north-west part of Michigan. At Grand Rapids I met with friends, and was kindly received. Five miles out from that place I held one meeting, and had a pleasant visit at the brothers Norton, all of whom either belong to, or are in sympathy with the faith, and are indeed a pleasant and happy family. At sundown, on the 13th, I arrived at Custer, Mason county, and, leaving my valise at the depot, started north in search of the Saints, one of whom was said to live three miles away. I soon found myself out in the woods, without a road and enveloped in the darkness of the night. It is said that bear frequent those woods but I did not see any. Toiling on, I arrived at Bro. Vanbront's, where I met a kind reception and rested for the night. They were in deep grief, however, having buried that day their only child, died of the scarlet fever. This disease was raging in the neighborhood, the families of Brn. Baily, Shelly and Drown being afflicted. Several, mostly young people, died from its effects in the neighborhood. On Sunday the 15th I held two meetings with a small but attentive audience. The circumstances being unfavorable, on account of the contagion, we thought it wise to postpone further efforts. The brethren there are in the faith and devoted to it. Their surroundings, however, are not the most inviting and cheering. I did not have time to revisit them.

Monday the 16th, I returned to Reed City and stopped with Sister Elizabeth Trout and family, where I was made welcome while in the city. Bro. Wheaton's family reside there and stand for the faith. They and others cared for me. I arranged with the trustees for the use of the Baptist church, and made announcements, but, a few hours before the time of meeting, the preacher in charge publicly announced, "There will be no preaching in the church to-night; that fellow is a Mormon, and we want no such in there."

A large number came out to find the church closed against them. You will not be surprised to learn that this preacher's name is Wolf. What a surprising fitness there are in things! I could not procure a hall for less than $5.00 an evening. So, fixing Mr. Wolf in my mind for future consideration, I went to Hersey, where I was kindly received by Bro. Joseph Shippy and the Saints. I held a number of services in their very neat and pleasant place of worship. A good interest was manifest. The Saints there are mostly from Canada and are putting forth a commendable effort to make themselves comfortable homes, having gone there for that purpose. They are respected by their neighbors, some of whom are becoming quite favorably impressed with their religious views. Bro. Shippy is in charge of the flock of believers, and is highly respected by all classes as an honest and industrious man and devoid of that little selfishness peculiar to most men. On the road to success these brethren have only to live their profession, be consistent and industrious, in order to win honor and respect for themselves and the cause they represent. I am indebted to some of the citizens as well as the Saints for manifest interest in my welfare. Thanks.

Bro. Saleda Shippy procured the use of the Court-house and I preached three evenings with fair interest. The Saints paid for the use of the hall. I enjoyed my visit among the Hersey Saints.

Thursday 26th I went to Cadillac, and was kindly received by Bro. Bond and household. Bro. Bond and I called on the Methodist and Presbyterian ministers, and we passed a little time agreeably. Mr. Barrett, the Methodist minister occupied a cozy apartment, was trimly dressed, sociable, liberal, and did not object on his own account to us using his church. This was the feeling of a number of the Methodist friends; but some of the more superstitious, less enlightened and irreligious ruled us out of the house. We found the Presbyterian minister, Mr. Marsh, in his study, with his morning-gown on. He is more reserved and guarded, but sociable, and is a de facto Presbyterian. We discussed the nature of the inspiration of the Bible, he affirming that it was wholly inspired, from Genesis to Revelation. I called his attention to the statement of Paul, "I have no commandment of the Lord," "I give my judgment," etc., 1 Cor. 7. To this he replied that he believed the historian was inspired to write that Paul wrote on the occasion referred to without inspiration. As Bro. Springer says, "Here light began to dawn," and, considering the bottom knocked out of the theory opposed to the plenary inspiration of the Bible, after referring him to 2 Samuel 24, and 1 Chronicles 21, which were explained in the same easy manner, we bade him good day, receiving an invitation to call again.

We also attended the Free-Methodist quarterly meeting. Some dozen ministers were in attendance. After listening attentively and watching the manner of conducting services, we concluded that if eccentricity of speech and manner, incoherent expressions, noise, and loud cries of "Amen," bordering on tumult, were indications of religion, they were the most highly endowed of any class of worshippers we have yet met. We requested them on one occasion to announce our meeting, but they refused to read the notice, saying they would rather have the devil in their pulpit than one of our faith. We thought that it was because they were better acquainted with that gentleman than with us, and knew they could dwell together in unity. After some effort, Holbrook and May's Hall was secured at an expense of $5.00 an evening. We occupied it five evenings, and an intelligent and attentive audience was present every evening. When the weather was favorable the hall was full. As a rule, the Cadillac people try to pass upon questions upon their merits, and are not controlled by the prejudicial influences so common in older places. A few tried to influence the people (so we learned) not to attend, but they came after all and listened attentively. Some aided in meeting the expenses of the hall, but the main burden fell upon Bro. Bond, who is ready and willing to do much to move the cause and get the truth before the people. Himself and wife are the only Saints who live in the town, and their lives have been such as to coin respect for the cause. Bro. Bond is in business in Cadillac, and has his share of trade from both professors and non-professors. They esteem him as a man of honor whatever may be his peculiar religious faith. So Latter Day Saints can live among Gentiles, (for Bro. Bond takes pleasure in telling people what he is), and in business, have their confidence, and socially, their respect, of course allowing a margin for religious bigots and the superstitious. For the bold stand taken by Bro. Bond for the truth, and for the sacrifices made for its success, he deserves not only favorable mention but the esteem of the Saints.

Mr. Chapin, editor of the Cadillac News, gave notice of our meetings. Since I was there Bro. Bond and Mr. Marsh, the Presbyterian minister, have kept up a discussion through the columns of the News, the editor giving both parties equal chance. It is not necessary to say that such an editor deserves respect and his paper patronage.

With Bro. Bond, I visited and held meetings in two places in the country and had a respectful hearing in each place. A good work can be done in that vicinity, with proper effort, for the people want to hear. I am indebted to Mr. Sandage and his kind lady for a home part of the time while at Cadillac. Thanks.

Having procured the use of the Lutheran church at Reed City, (where Mr. Wolf is in charge of the Baptist flock), on Thursday, March 11th, I returned there and held five services, Bro. Bond being with me over Sunday, the 14th. Prejudice ran high, but, under the circumstances, we had a good hearing. A number are favorable to the faith. We dined on Sunday with a Mr. Martin, Free Thinker, who is much of a gentleman. Himself and lady attended our meetings.

On the 16th I returned home and commenced meetings on the evening of the 18th in the Court House in Coldwater. Held four services, with a respectable attendance. Some became quite interested in investigating the faith. On the 22d I preached the funeral discourse of a Mr. Buck in Steuben county, Indiana. He was killed on the railroad. A large audience was present, and I enjoyed talking on the future state of man.

Friday, the 25th, found me in Plano, Illinois, and Bro. P. Cadwell and I entered upon the delectable (?) task of examining the books of the Herald Office. On Saturday following, went with President Smith to Hinckly, twelve miles from Plano, where he had two appointments for Sunday. Just as we started, one of the horses became frightened at a passing train—stuck his ears straight out in front—the driver reined them down another street, but that horse kept pulling on the bit and prancing up and down in the mud, and finally gave a lunge forward, snapped the whiffle-tree, then the other horse followed suit, and in a twinkling President Smith was going headlong over the dash board into the mud. He held on until he made his impression, for two rods, then let go the lines. I call that a pretty gritty president. No serious injury having occurred, a team was arranged and all ready, we made the trip safely to Hinckly, where we were pleasantly entertained at the home of Alexander and Emma McCallum, son-in-law and daughter of President Smith. On Sunday President Smith preached a pleasant discourse in the morning and I preached with some difficulty in the evening. The audience was small.

Monday morning we returned to Plano by a new route, passing over a beautiful country. I enjoyed my trip. This brings us to April, 1880.

As ever,

WM. H. KELLEY.

OAK ISLAND, Bexar Co., Texas,
April 1st, 1880.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins.—The outlook for crops is much better this year than for the last two years, and we are in hopes that we will be able to pay a preacher to come here this fall, for we do want to hear some preaching again. I feel our poverty so much now when it debars us from the company of an elder. With best wishes I remain,

Yours fraternally,

JOHN BARBER.

FARMERSVILLE, Merrick Co., Neb.,
May 10th, 1880.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins:—Perhaps you, with others, thought it strange that I did not report to conference. I had hardly realized that a report was expected from one apparently doing so little in the kingdom of God.

I have been endeavoring to prove faithful to the trust that God's Church has reposed in me. I came from Iowa to Nebraska in March, and I have been trying to do my duty as one holding the priesthood of God. I have visited the Columbus, Cedar Creek, and Clear Water branches. The former were in a slumbering condition, judging from their own testimony; but they are a band of noble hearted Saints, and I love them. They seemed blessed by my presence, which was and is a testimony to me that I am doing the work of a loving father. The Cedar Creek branch seems to be improving some. The "Mormon" question has been agitated there considerably in the past winter, infidels and Christians (?) joining hands in the conflict. The latter, upon seeing that a close examination of the books was going to prove disastrous to their belief, deserted the ranks, leaving their colleagues to fight the battle alone. (No doubt they aided them with their prayers).

Agreeably to the advisement of the March conference, and by consent of the branch, I ordained Bro. Hyrum Smith to the office of Elder. He hopes to make the ministry a vocation for life. I believe he desires to be a meek bearer of the cross. May God bless him. I was favored with his company while visiting the Clear Water branch, where a few noble souls are struggling for the mastery. (Two of them are daughters of the deceased Thomas Dobson). We ordained Bro. James Smith to the office of Priest; and he was chosen president of the branch, their only officer before being a Teacher. On the 6th and 7th I came to this place with Bro. C. H. Derry, and have officiated in the marriage ceremony that joins him and Sister Katie Pemberton.

May their happiness flow as a river,
And their courage be as a wave of the sea;
May they look unto God as their Giver,
And from all evil practices flee.
Be with them, our Father, forever;
Direct them, and guide them aright;
May none, those sacred bands sever,
But fill up their lives with delight.
And when time's warring dial,
Shall point to the time of their rest,
May they bid farewell to earth's trial,
And go to the home of the blest.

I intend to remain in Nebraska until harvest time, unless conference has otherwise ordered. I expect the company of Bro. Smith while here. Since the Fall Conference I have only baptized one. I feel that I am one of the least in the kingdom of God, but I have the assurance that my offering is acceptable. God has blessed me with the Spirit and illuminated my soul. I desire to be a meek and humble follower of the Lord Jesus Christ, and I intend to thrust in my sickle till the harvest is done. Thanks, Bro. Henry, for your kind advice. May God bless you, is the prayer of your brother,

GEO. S. HYDE.

BOSTON HIGHLANDS,
May 12th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—The Church in Boston is, I am happy to say, growing in grace, numbers and a better knowledge of the ways of the Lord, and He is blessing us. Bro. T. W. Smith labored with us some three weeks, which was productive of good. One young man, a Mr. Townsend, who with his wife has been baptized, dates his conviction of the truth from his preaching. Bro. Chas. N. Brown has preached for us a number of times. Brn. Yerrington and John Gilbert have been with us one Sabbath each; also Bro. Glover of Providence, (Priest), once. The labors of all these brethren have been gratefully received and were productive of good. May the Lord reward them. We have a hall number 176 Fremont street; services at ten and a half A.M. and two and a half P.M.; prayer meetings at our houses Sunday, Wednesday and Friday evenings. Also Sabbath School at one P.M., Sundays. Pray for us.
Your brother,

E. N. WEBSTER.

MERTHYR Tydvil, Wales,
April 12th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—The work goes on fairly in Merthyr and Aberdare. There are some good meetings; the Spirit of God and the manifestations thereof are enjoyed. There is some preaching done with interest increasing; prospects brighten a little; some are added to the Church by baptism; others revived and joined the above branches; likewise the Saints are steadfast in the work of the Lord; and are willing to do their endeavors to roll on the little stone that was cut out of the mountains, so that it may prosper through the land and souls saved in the kingdom of the Almighty, and the seed of Ephraim be gathered to the land of their inheritance; so that they may worship the true and living God unmolested. This is the desire of your humble brother in the bonds of love,

J. MORGANS.

GAINESVILLE, Alachua Co., Florida,
May 15th, 1880.

Bro. Stebbins:—I have long been looking for news concerning an Elder coming to visit us, but I fear that my expectations will be blighted, for I hear nothing encouraging. We hold prayer meetings at my house, and the blessed Spirit comes and revives us, thank God for it. One thing I am satisfied about, and that is the doctrine of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is perfect and pure, that it is right and true. This I have witnessed by the power of the Spirit. Dear brother, pray for me, that I may be an instrument in God's hands in doing good in his blessed name, and that in the near future a good Elder may visit us. Bro. W. L. Booker of Missouri wrote some time ago as though he thought strongly of moving here. Will you try to encourage him to do so. May God bless you and all those who have taken hold of the cross, that they may bear it meekly and endure to the end.

Your brother in the one faith,
M. O. HOWARD.

HARTFORD, Michigan,
May 17th, 1880.

Bro. Henry:—Thank the Lord for the light which is revealed through the gospel of the Son of God, in these latter days, to lead men from darkness to light, from error to truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

Brn. C. Scott and M. T. Short have been preaching in Hartford and vicinity, to good and attentive congregations, who appeared to be well pleased. Some were deeply interested, while some, since the meetings are over, have said all manner of vile and wicked slanders about us, and especially about Bro. Short. But thanks be to the Lord, these things do not move us. As a little band we stand united and firm in the faith that was given eighteen hundred years ago, and, if faithful we expect by and by to dwell with our blessed Lord and master in that kingdom that he has prepared for the faithful. Pray for us that we may live in obedience to all the laws and commandments of our Savior Jesus Christ.

Your brother,
H. O. HATCH.

ELWELL, Bradford county, Pa.,
May 1st, 1880.

Brn. Joseph and Henry:—I have held five meetings, and the interest increases. I have some opposition, but the majority are well pleased. Some came to me after meeting and said, "You have the truth, stick to it, you have friends here."

May God's work prosperis the prayer of your brother,
H. ROBINSON.

COLUMBUS, Kansas.

Bro. Joseph:—I arrived here at Bro. W. Taylor's, on my way westward, last night. Expect to preach at school house "63" to-night and to-morrow night. Also at the branch place of meeting over Sunday, and go west on Monday. Bro. Taylor will go also. For a long time I have been compelled to work at home, doing but little, as it were in the ministry, but this summer I hope to put in the most of my time. I am glad

Bro. A. J. Cato has come. Shall try all I can to push the work forward. Reviewed a slanderous discourse of Elder Claine (a Campbellite) last Sunday, at Pleasant View branch; good liberty and good effect. Myself and family are enjoying good health and hope and think by united effort to devote my time mostly to the ministry. Our kindest love to all.

Your brother in one hope,
J. T. DAVIES.

SYDNEY, Australia,
April 23d, 1880

Bro. Henry:—I have hired a hall here, and have delivered six discourses. The attendance was small, although I advertised the meetings in the daily papers. But I shall continue them as long as I can get the money to pay for the use of the hall, providing that some one has been sent to my assistance. Kind regards to all in the office, and believe me as ever,

Your brother in the gospel,
J. W. GILLEN.

HUTCHINSON, Jefferson Co., Colorado,
May 12th, 1880.

Dear Herald:—Into the dashing cold waters of Colorado, on Sunday, May 9th, 1880, we led and baptized Bro. H. Ray, a very promising young man, and four children; others thereabouts declare they believe. Though cold the water, and somewhat disagreeable through a pelting snow-storm during baptism, we were much warmed and cheered at the confirmation meeting in the afternoon, for heaven seemed near. The Saints rejoiced and some friends were affected. What a precious boon is the gospel. Why do we not better appreciate it.

In hope,
JAMES CAFFALL.

SAMISON, Shelby Co., Iowa,
May 11th, 1880.

Brn. Joseph and Henry:—I hope this may find you well and rejoicing in the gospel. I feel to rejoice in the good work, and feel thankful that I have heard the sound of the everlasting gospel. I wish to do something for the good of the cause. I am poor in this world's goods, but desire to do what I can in keeping up the Church publications. There is a Sunday School organized in our school district. It is mostly composed of Campbellites and Disciples, and they invited me to take a part with them; so I told them I would do all I could to help people rightly understand the Scriptures. In choosing Sunday School papers I was one of the committee to get papers and books, and we divided the papers, half and half. I am not inclined to hide my light under a bushel, but what little I have I feel like imparting it to others, and then if I can not persuade them to see the gospel in its purity, it will rest between them and God. But I think the Sunday School will result in good, for all have a right to ask and to answer questions. Pray for me, brethren, that I may have the Spirit of the Lord to direct me in all that I may say or do.

Yours in the covenant,
W. F. D. BRANDON.

AUGUSTA, Wisconsin,
April 9th, 1880.

Dear Saints:—I am one of the lonely ones, but I write to express my increasing affections for the Saints. Although I am a good ways from any of them, my prayers are that if I do not have the privilege to be with them in this life, that I shall be in the life to come. We live over one hundred miles from a branch, and we hear no preaching. All we have to comfort us is the Herald, Bible, and Book of Mormon. We wish some good Elder would come up here and preach. Some good might be done.

Your sister in Christ,
CATHERINE WHITAKER.

Elder Edward L. Page arriving at this period, made his report, and assumed his duties as clerk.

The clerk read a letter from Pres. John Taylor, regarding the difficulties in the Bevier Branch, and then addressed the Saints on the unfortunate condition of affairs. He referred to the views expressed by the district president in his letter, regarding the action of certain members of the Bevier Branch, and his refusal to endorse them.

At 7 p. m., Bro. Thrutchley exhorted the Saints to work together for the good of all, and not to encourage strife, but to sustain each other in love and harmony. He expressed his desire that the time might come when all the Saints in Bevier would dwell together in harmony.

Reference being made to a former letter from Bro. Taylor in regard to the late action of some of the Bevier Saints, wherein he stated that, "according to the statements he had received, he saw nothing wrong in their proceedings." Bro. Page was called upon to explain, which he did by saying that Bro. Taylor had said to him that he had since become satisfied that he had not been fully informed in the matter.

Criticism was indulged in by some, when Bro. Page spoke in vindication of Bro. Taylor's course as a man of God, and of his reputation as an honorable and just man, and his long services for the good of the cause. Some confusion ensued, when a motion was made to adjourn.

The district president will appoint time and place for holding the next conference; of which due notice will be given through the Herald.

The Mason's Grove report was reconsidered, and, after some discussion, it was tabled, to be taken up after the appealed case of J. D. Newcomb is investigated, to attend to which Brn. J. W. Chatburn, I. Hanson and D. H. Bays were appointed.

A series of two-days' meetings was appointed.

At 7 p. m., the committee in the case of J. D. Newcomb reported. ### NORTHERN MINNESOTA DISTRICT.

A conference of the above district met at the house of H. Way, Oak Lake Branch, December 20th, 1879, and proceeded to organize the conference, but as the brethren, for fear of prevailing sickness, did not attend, it was thought best to adjourn. While administering to the sick one of the brethren had a vision of an angel, and the Lord bestowed great blessings. The conference adjourned subject to the call of the president.

The Earthquake Catalogue of the British Association contains between 6,000 and 7,000 earthquakes between 1606 B. C. and A. D. 1842. The one occurring in Calabria, in 1783, caused the death of 100,000 persons; in Lisbon, in 1755, it is thought that 60,000 persons perished within the space of six minutes.

OBITUARY.

Elder Jesse W. Nichols, was born in North Dartmouth, Mass., May 17th, 1791, and died April 30th, 1880. In his childhood he became interested in the subject of religion, having the fear of God in his heart. An instance showing his unselfishness I will relate: When he was thirteen years of age his father was sick and the physician pronounced him past recovery, Jesse could not endure the thought, believing that God would hear his prayer, went into the orchard and kneeling down poured forth his soul in prayer, telling the Lord that they could not spare their father as the family was large and they needed a father's care, but "I am young and can be spared, therefore take me in the place of him;" only asking a few days for preparation. Returning to the house he found his father much better, and he soon recovered. Bro. Nichols said, "I as much expected to die at the end of the time appointed as I ever expected any thing in my life." About this time he united with the Christian Baptist Church, and afterwards became a deacon. Yet he was not satisfied. Early in life he went to sea, and before he was twenty-five years of age he became master of a vessel in the merchant service. He crossed the ocean a number of times; sailed up the Mediterranean, visiting many places of interest, and was able to teach navigation thoroughly. Leaving the seas he became commander of a military company, and rose to the office of colonel, and was also chosen by his townsmen to represent them in the state legislature. Studying medicine he became a very successful botanic physician, and settled in Newport, R. I., where, near the year 1840, he heard, for the first time, the fullness of the gospel. He then found what his heart had so many years desired; he believed, was baptized, and rejoiced in a full salvation. He was ordained an Elder, and was ready to leave all the honors of the world to be a messenger of salvation to his fellow men. Following the guiding of the Holy Spirit he went forth administering to the sick, who oft times saw him in vision as an angel of mercy coming, and, led by the Spirit, he would go to them, no matter how long and wearisome the way, and, laying his hands upon them in the name of the Lord, they would be healed. The palsied have been restored; those having inward tumors, such as the art of the most skillful could not reach, were healed by the power of God through his ministrations; while many others, in and out of the Church, having various diseases, were made to rejoice in the power and mercy of God in being restored to health. After the death of Joseph and Hyrum when the apostasy began to show itself, our brother would not endorse the pernicious doctrines, but faithfully proclaimed against them, for which he was cut off, but not legally so; for the same heavenly blessings continued with him.

Then, for long years, he watched and waited for the restoration, believing the time would come when Zion's scattered children would be gathered, and when the Reorganized Church was established in Massachusetts, Elder Nichols was among the first to unite himself with it, and immediately he began to labor for the advancement of the cause. No sacrifice was esteemed too great, no labor too wearisome. Even when the weight of eighty-five and more years was upon him, he still went to do the Master's work. Only this last summer, when in his eighty-ninth year, he preached to us an excellent discourse of over an hour's duration. Bro. Nichols was of a singularly firm nature, and he could not be turned from the path of rectitude, and, through all the vicissitudes of the Church, his name remained untarnished. He was twice married. Of his first wife I can not write, only have heard him say she was a most excellent and devoted woman. His second wife was one of those whom heaven sends to administer comfort and consolation to earth's afflicted and sorrowing children; ever found at the bedside of the suffering. Bro. Nichols had quite a large family, seven or eight are now living, who are most excellent members of society, and noble representatives of such honorable parents.

About the first of last November our brother was stricken with paralysis, from which he partially recovered, so that he was able to visit his children, who tenderly and lovingly ministered to his every want. I visited him some three weeks before he died, and found him cheerful and happy. His mind was clear, and all his faculties good; he could read without the use of glasses. His conversation was principally upon the gospel. The latter day work was as dear to him then as at former times; the fire of the Spirit burnt upon the altar of his heart. As he approached the end, the Spirit manifested to him that his time was short, and he sent for his eldest daughter to come and see him, for he wished to communicate to her his wishes. She being sick, sent word she would come on the morrow. He said, "I am sorry, for tomorrow I shall not be able to talk." Hearing this, she ordered a carriage and went to him. He conversed freely of all he wished, told them he should not live till May, even indicating the hour of his departure. The next day he received another shock, and as he had said, he was not able to converse, and at 6:30 Friday evening he calmly fell asleep in Christ. Bro. Albert Nickerson of Boston was with me. The Church will miss him, and at our conferences there will be one aged and loved form missing, and we shall feel it. His children will now contemplate the teachings of one they so ardently loved, and we may hope that they will yet embrace the truth. And may the lessons taught by the faithfulness of our aged and honored brother, teach us like faithfulness and trust.

Bro. Nichols died at the house of one of his daughters in Fairhaven, Massachusetts, where he has lived many years. E. N. WEBSTER.

OBITUARY.

Elder Samuel H. Gurley died at Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, at 3:15 p.m., Saturday, May 8th, 1880, of bilious typhoid fever, aged 49 years, 1 month and 21 days. He had been failing for several months, and was confined to his bed for the last five weeks of his life. He passed very easily and peacefully away, having the full possession of his mind to the end. The funeral sermon was preached at Lamoni, on the 9th, by Elder Henry C. Smith, and the body, accompanied by his widow and brother Zenas, was brought to Sandwich, Illinois, and laid in the burying ground three miles south-east of that place, by the side of his first wife, his father, his brother and two sisters, as he had requested. Thus after two years of congenial married life his wife (a daughter of Bro. B. V. Springer) is left to feelings of desolation and grief.

Bro. Gurley was born March 17th, 1831, in Canada, and, in 1838, went with his father and mother to Missouri, where they passed through the trials incident to that time, and in 1839 they settled in Hancock county, Illinois, where Samuel was baptized the same year. In 1850, while the family was living in Lafayette county, Wisconsin, he went to California, and from there in 1852 to Australia, whence he returned to Wisconsin, late in the year 1853. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1854, and was ordained as one of the Seventy, October 7th, 1855. In 1856, by the call of the Spirit, he accompanied Bro. E. C. Briggs to Nauvoo, to interview Bro. Joseph Smith concerning his feelings as to the position and work of the men seeking a reorganization of the Church, with himself at its head, as revealed to them from God that so it should be.

His last illness was borne with marked patience and resignation. Two days before his death he made disposition of his affairs, and from that time failed rapidly. About noon of the last day he fell into the sleep of death, from which he was aroused by the lamentations of his wife. He spoke words of comfort to her, and requested her not to weep. His brother Zenas asked him if he realized his situation, and he replied, "Yes, perfectly." "Have you any fears?" He smiled and said, "None whatever; I am fully prepared to go." He conversed with his friends till nearly three o'clock, when he fell off into sleep again, from which he was again aroused by his wife pleading for him to speak to her. He looked up, his eyes lit up with fire, and he seemed re-energized. He said, "Don't cry, Mollie; it does me no good and can not benefit you. * * I have tried to do the best I could under the circumstances surrounding me, and have tried to do some good. * * My father preached this gospel; I have preached it, and if my life was spared I would preach it again, for I know it is true; but if I live, I live unto God; if I die, I die unto him; so, whether I live or die, I am his. I have told you the truth and why should you weep?" Then Zenas asked, "Samuel, do you feel that our faith concerning the future is true, and have you an assurance that when we say farewell to you here, that angels and those gone before will meet and welcome you?" He replied, "Yes, I do," and then spoke several successive sentences, words confirmatory of the faith of the Saints, adding "Amen!" at the close of each one, and also to the words of Zenas when the latter commended his soul unto God. He also spoke other words, but too faintly to be understood in plainness, and at the last said that the righteous Judge would give a just reward to every man, closing again with the word, "Amen!" and with this sentence, he yielded up the ghost.

Thus has passed away another one of those whose family name is so intimately associated with the history of the Reorganized Church, as well as partially so with the former days before the dispersion and apostasy that followed Joseph's death.

DIED.

ROGERS.—At State Center, Iowa, April 30th, 1880, of dropsy of the heart, George L, son of George W. and Lydia Rogers. He was born at Earlville, LaSalle county, Illinois, April 14th, 1877. He retained his faculties till the last; and wished to die and be at rest. W. C. Nirk preached funeral sermon.

HANKINSON.—Charles Robert Hankinson, son of William and Sarah Hankinson, born March 9th, 1877, died December 5th, 1879. Funeral services by E. C. Brand. Also George Alfred, son of the above, born November 4th, 1872, died December 11th, 1879. Funeral sermon by Elder Spencer.

FABUN.—At San Bernardino, California, April 27th, 1880, of heart disease, Clark Fabun, aged 63 years, 8 months and 25 days. He was born August 2d, 1816, in New York state. Funeral services by Elder H. L. Holt. Illinois and Michigan papers please copy.

PATTERSON.—At Newton, Iowa, April 16th, 1880, Sr. Agnes Patterson, aged 67 years, 6 months and 1 day. She was the wife of Bro. Wm. Patterson; was born at Lanark, Scotland, Oct. 15th, 1812, and came to this country in 1856. She was baptized April 4th, 1869, by Elder G. Walker, and has proved a faithful Saint.

FAUL.—Near Stewartsville, DeKalb county, Mo., January 13th, 1880, Bro. Jacob Faul. He was born December 9th, 1854, at Buffalo, N. Y.; was baptized December 16th, 1872, by Bro. Matthias Lambert, at Appleton, Wisconsin. He leaves a wife and child. Funeral sermon by Elder W. T. Bozarth; text Job 14: 14.

HECKLER.—George E., infant son of Bro. Jacob and Sr. Mary Heckler, departed this life March 31st, 1880, aged 11 months and 20 days. Another "light in the window" to guide their weary feet to the mansions above. Services by W. S. Loar.

WILEY.—Robert Wiley, who emigrated from Scotland in 1853, breathed his last on April 29th, 1880. The last two weeks of his life were rendered bitter by the disease known as pneumonia. A goodly number gathered to pay respects to his remains. Services by Elders Caffall and Kemp. He expired at the house of Bro. John Ellis, Hutchinson, Colorado, where he had resided many years, (being a brother of Sr. Ellis). Nothing that mortals could do, or money purchase, was withheld, but, despite all efforts, death triumphed. No dazzling or costly monument may designate the spot where he sleeps, but, 'tis believed that during the seventy-six years he sojourned on the earth as a son of toil, through virtue, honesty, sobriety, temperance and integrity, as a church member, he made a record which will shine when monuments, and other works of men's hands will crumble and decay. He leaves two sisters, a brother, with many friends to mourn his loss. Nor is their sorrow increased through evidence that any suffered through wrong doing during his earthly career. So far from this, that they believe that the Church has lost a worthy member, and the world an honest citizen, whose aspirations were to live by honest toil, loving mercy, doing justly, and walking uprightly.

JAMES CAFFALL.

KLAPP.—Died in Oxford, Goodhue county, Minnesota, March 8th, 1880, Bro. David Klapp, aged 78 years, 1 month and 4 days. He was born in the county of Gilford, North Carolina, February 4th, 1802; baptized in the town of Geneva, Jennings county, Indiana, October, 1835, by Elder Joseph C. Rose. He was always found a faithful witness for Christ, and died in peace, praising the name of the Lord. He leaves a wife, two children and a number of grandchildren. Like the "shock of corn that is fully ripe," this brother has been gathered in. "Praise the Lord all ye Saints; praise the Lord."

DAVIES.—At Carbon, W. T. January 24th, 1880, Elder Thomas R. Davies, (formerly of Nortonville, California), from an accident received by the falling of coal in the mines, aged 59 years 1 month and 18 days. Leaves a wife, nine children, and nine grand children. He was first baptized by John T. Philips at Myrther, Wales, in 1846; emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1848, where he labored under the direction of Elder Dan Jones, and with Elder Thomas Richards. They were earnest workers and baptized many. In the year 1853 he went to Utah, where he remained three years; became disgusted with their practices and went to California, where he remained, not identified with any order until he was convinced of the truth of the Reorganization, by the preaching of Orrin Smith. He was baptized November 15th, 1868, and was ordained an Elder, and presided over the Nortonville Branch; was much loved by the Saints and respected by the world. In his last hour he bore testimony to the truth of the cause, and that he was not afraid to die, but was prepared to meet his God; admonished his sons to be kind to their mother, and desired that his body be taken away from there for interment; in compliance with which wish he was brought to Lucas, Iowa, and buried January 28th, 1880, Funeral discourse by Elder John Watkins, Sen.

EVELAND.—At Vincennes, Lee county, Iowa, March 30th, 1880, after a protracted illness of lung disease, Sr. Clarinda, wife of Bro. Jasper Eveland, aged 39 years, 9 months and 26 days. Funeral services by Elder John Matthews.

WALKER.—Near Oberlin, Decatur county, Iowa, April 28th, 1879, Bro. James R. Walker, son of Bro. Charles and Sr. Harriet Walker aged 19 years, 9 months and 3 days. He was baptized by Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, confirmed by Brn. Samuel Ackerly and Zenas H. Gurley. The Lord gave and the Lord has taken; blessed be his holy name.

GORDON.—At Nebraska City, Neb., April 24th, 1880, of inflammation of the brain, John William, son of Bro. Jackson Gordon, aged 6 years, 7 months and 24 days. Funeral sermon by Elder Robert M. Elvin. Text, Hosea 13: 14.

RICHARDSON.—At Montrose, Iowa, April 19th, 1880, of lung fever, Mary F. Richardson, wife of Smith O. Richardson and eldest daughter of D. D. and Eliza E. Babcock, aged 23 years, 9 months, and 20 days. Funeral discourse by Elder R. Lambert. Her illness was quite protracted, of some three months duration, but her time of dislocation was most quiet and peaceful, passing away without a struggle. Shortly before her death she expressed a willingness to go, if it was the will of the Lord, and expressed also having a hope of coming forth in the resurrection of the just. She leaves a husband, two children, parents and other relatives to mourn.

FORGET ME NOT.

I once had money and a friend,
By both I set great store;
I lent my money to my friend,
And took his note therefor.

I asked my money of my friend,
He said he had forgot;
I lost my money and my friend,
And sue him I would not.

If I had money and a friend,
As I had once before,
I'd keep my money and my friend,
And play the fool no more!

Dedicated to my particular friend.

P.S.—I have no doubt but what this will meet a great many more cases than mine. W. HART.

Conference Minutes Supplement.

By request of Bro. M. H. Forscutt the following questions, answers and remarks, which were made during the late General Conference, at the time the subject of the Kirtland Temple was under consideration, are published. They ought to have appeared in their place in the minutes of April 14th, as found in the third column, page 149, HERALD for May 15th, 1880, but were not received in time, the writing for them to Bro. Forscutt having been overlooked. They therefore appear supplementary to, but as a part of the minutes.

Brother Forscutt inquired whether it was a legal measure, and if legal, whether it was morally right to institute a suit against parties whose residence was known, and yet never notify those parties of such suit?

The attorney, Bro. E. L. Kelley, replied that he had taken the steps required by the laws of the state of Ohio, in which the property was situated, and advertized in the papers there of the intention to institute such suit. He had notified the other parties interested in the suit; but did not know whether he had notified Bro. Forscutt, or not.

Bro. Forscutt stated that he had received no such notification; that if he had known of the suit, he should have felt it to be his duty to interpose objections, as his honor was partly at stake in the disposal of the Temple. He owed money which he was expecting the sale of the Temple to enable him to pay, and had given a note to a brother for $100, said note being payable when the Temple should be sold. For the Temple to pass out of his hands, and he make no effort to prevent its passage, make no claim upon it, looking to the liquidation of debts promised to be paid when it should be sold, laid him open to suspicion of wrong intentions, or carelessness, unless the facts were made known. Besides this, the party who owned the Temple before it came into the possession of those from whom the Church now obtains it by decree, had expended twenty five hundred dollars in repairing it; and as his rights were vested in his successors, Bro. Forscutt thought it morally wrong and unjust to him and to them to take the Temple from them with such repairs made—repairs necessary to its preservation, and such too as that had they not been made, would have left the temple useless to the Church now—he thought the least the Church could in justice do would be to remunerate the recent holders of it for the expenses incurred in its preservation. In his case, it was necessary to free him from debt and reproach. He did not regret the decision of the Court decreeing the Temple to the Church, and the Reorganized Church to be the Church; but he thought a church of twelve or fifteen thousand members could better afford to pay for repairs which the Court decrees was made on their property, than either the former holder, Bro. Russell Huntley, Bro. Smith, or he could. His proportion of such repairs was twelve hundred and fifty dollars, and after giving nearly all his life to the ministry of the Church, and being now almost penniless, he doubted both the wisdom and the justice of a policy that should take what little he thought he had in reservation in that property, without at least returning the amount expended by the former holder to preserve it from destruction. The legal aspect might be all right; but now and hereafter the moral aspect will certainly be bad. In conclusion, by permission of the chair, he asked the Bishop to state whether any measures had been adopted or contemplated looking to reimbursement for this outlay.

Bishop I. L. Rogers said no measures had been taken with this view, further than to reimburse Brethren Smith and Forscutt for the amount of taxes they had paid on the building.

Also, it was probably noticed, in reading the reply of the Board of Publication to the auditing committee, as found in the Conference minutes in HERALD, page 150, that the names of David Dancer and Elijah Banta did not appear with the other signatures of present and former members of the Board, and it has been thought proper to state that Bro. Dancer had returned home before the reply was written. Bro. Banta was not present during the Conference, and so had no opportunity to be acquainted with the legislation on the matter.

HENRY A. STEBBINS, Church Secretary.

The Jews in Germany.

Professor Heinrich von Treitschke, the eminent German historian says that the Jews are much more numerous in Germany than in the other countries of the West. In 1871 there were in Spain 6,000 Jews; in Italy, 40,000; in France, 45,000; in Great Britain, 45,000; in Germany, 512,000. The rate at which they have increased during the present century is very striking. In 1816 there were in Prussia 124,000 Jews. In 1846 there were 215,000; in 1875 there were nearly 340,000. Notwithstanding 8,000 conversions to Christianity the proportion of Jews to the whole body of inhabitants in Prussia rose between 1816 and 1846 from 1 in 83 to 1 in 75. At Berlin there was in 1816 1 Jew to every 59 inhabitants; in 1846, 1 in 49; in 1871, 1 in every 23, and now there is probably 1 in every 20.

Nor do these figures give any adequate notion of their influence. The average of wealth among them is very high, and the average of education still more remarkable. In 1875 the proportion of Jews in the Prussian Gymnasien was 1 in 9.5, and in the Real-schulen of the first class, 1 in 10.26. It is notorious that quite a disproportionate number of Jews are members of the learned professions, and that the press in Germany is almost wholly in their hands.

There is further, it is alleged, an important difference between the quality of the Jew in Germany and in France, Italy, or England. The German Jews are very largely immigrants from the Slavonic East, while the Jews in other Western countries are in great part descendants of the Spanish and Portuguese Israelites—in other words, of the aristocracy of the race. The fact of this superior quality causes them to be treated with more respect, and this respectful treatment reacts on their own feeling toward the countries they live in. A Jew in England, France or Italy feels himself an Englishman, Frenchman, or Italian; while a German Jew, Herr von Treitschke declares, feels himself simply a Jew, not a German at all, and looks on his Teutonic and Christian fellow-citizens with aversion and contempt.—London Saturday Review.

THE JEWS IN PALESTINE.

The land of their promised inheritance is becoming their own in fee. If we compare the present time with eighty-three years ago, when the Sublime Porte permitted only three hundred to live within the walls of the Holy City, the change is remarkable. Forty years since the Porte modified this order so that a large number could abide there; but they were shut up in narrow and filthy quarters, next to the dog and leper quarters, the objects of contempt and cruel oppression. But even this quarter restriction was removed ten years ago. And now the ruling power is in the hand of Great Britain, and the sceptre itself is in the hand of an Israelite, and Baron Rothschild holds a mortgage on Palestine as security for two hundred million francs loaned to the Sultan of Turkey. It looks very much as if accomplished fact had put itself in place of prophecy.

The Jews, after the quarter restrictions were removed, bought all the land which could be obtained within the gates, and have built entire streets of houses without the gates. With the improvements inevitable from liberty and the possession of homes have come kindred progressions in provisions of charity for the destitute and afflicted. The German Jews have sixteen of these. Two journals have been started, and in the Rothschild and other Jewish hospitals six thousand patients are under constant treatment. The Venetian Jews have given sixty thousand francs to found a school of agriculture; and, in evidence of a progress that shows divine care and intervention, the number of Jews has doubled in about ten years. In 1869 there were not more than seven thousand Jews, shut up in their quarters, and though a vast improvement on the past, still they appear to us wretched enough to make the most careless sigh over the mighty fallen. But in the five succeeding years they increased to more than thirteen thousand.—Selected.

LATTER DAY SAINTS HYMN, No. 49.

From the old Hymn Book.

What fair one is this from the wilderness traveling,
Looking for Christ, the beloved of her heart?
O, this is the Church, the fair bride of the Savior,
Which with every idol is willing to part.
While men in contention are constantly howling,
And Babylon's bells are continually tolling,
As though all the craft of her merchants was failing,
And Jesus was coming to reign on the earth.

There is a sweet sound in the gospel of heaven,
And people are joyful when they understand.
The saints on their way home to glory, are even Determined by goodness to reach the blest land.
Old formal professors are crying, Delusion;
And high-minded hypocrites say, 'Tis confusion;
While grace is poured out in a blessed effusion,
And saints are rejoicing to see priestcraft fall.

A blessing! a blessing! the Savior is coming,
As prophets and pilgrims of old have declared;
And Israel, the favored of God, is beginning
To come to the feast for the righteous prepared.
In the desert are fountains continually springing;
The heavenly music of Zion is ringing;
The saints all their tithes and their offerings are bringing;
They thus prove the Lord, and his blessings receive.

The name of Jehovah is worthy of praising,
And so is the Savior an excellent theme;
The Elders of Israel a standard are raising,
And call on all nations to come to the same.
These Elders go forth, and the gospel are preaching,
And all that will hear them, they freely are teaching;
And thus is the vision of Daniel fulfilling—
The stone of the mountain will soon fill the earth.

Bennett and Johnson Debate.

SYNOPSIS of debate between Elder J. D. Bennett, Latter Day Saint, and Rev. Cyrus Johnson, Congregationalist, held in Clay county, Kansas, March 1st, 2d, 3d, 1880. Reported by H. R. Harder.

Question:—Resolved, that Joseph Smith, the founder of the Latter Day Saint sect, was not a true prophet and saint, but an impostor, polygamist and thief, and that his immediate followers were no better than himself.

Mr. Johnson was the framer of the question, and, no doubt, thought himself a competent composer of debateable questions.

The question being divided into three heads, Mr. Johnson led off with the assertion that he did not propose to arraign "Joe" Smith for trial, nor to introduce that class of evidence which would convict him or his followers before a court of justice. He then read his review of the history of the rise and progress of Mormonism, stating that Joseph Smith was born December 23d, 1825; and, after repeating the threadbare medley of contradictions about "low cunning," "superstition," "well digging," "indolence," "water witching," "divining stones," etc., he stated that Joseph was ordained by John the Baptist in 1829, (four years after birth), and in answer to prayer got his sins forgiven, which the speaker thought an absurdity!

He next arraigned Joseph for digging up the plates where he had previously buried them, and from which the Book of Mormon is claimed to have been translated, but which is finally proven to be the production of Solomon Spaulding. This remarkable book was to reveal unknown (?) truths. It is very explicit in denouncing polygamy, and it refers to the Indians as the remnant of an intelligent race of beings once inhabiting this continent, but, because of their sins, cursed with dark skins, etc. The book is verbose in style, and contains some six hundred quotations from the Old and New Testaments. Its coming forth was announced in 1813. It repudiates the ancient ordinance of infant baptism. The three witnesses and Sidney Rigdon confess the "golden bible" story to be a fraud. In 1838 the Mormons fled from Kirtland, Ohio, to Missouri. In 1838 an army was organized contrary to law, Smith placing himself at the head. Smith was "General," "Mayor," "Prophet," "Seer," and embodied in his person all the titular dignities of the highest rank of nobility. Jesus never assumed any titles.

Bro. Bennett replied by reading parallel facts of history from Lardner's work, vol. 1, page 240: "That, besides Atheism or impiety to the established deities, they [ancient Christians] were charged with having their wives in common, with promiscuous lewdness, with incest and cannibalism; * * * that they were generally hated for their wickedness." And Mosheim vol. 1, page 73: "That they were said to be unsupportably daring and arrogant, enemies to public tranquility, and exciters to civil wars and contentions; haters of mankind," and their doctrines were called "a destructive superstition." Lardner, vol. 9, page 225, represents them (ancient Christians) as "worse than heathens, with only a shadow of virtue." He says, vol 8, page 19, that Jesus was born of "a poor woman, who subsisted by the labor of her hands, condemned of adultery, cast off by her husband, wandering about in a shameful manner, and giving birth to Jesus in an obscure place; and he, [the child] being in want, served in Egypt for a livelihood. Becoming familiar with some Egyptian charms, he returned home and set himself up for a God." Then "taking to himself ten or eleven vile publicans and sailors, he went about getting his living in a base and shameful manner."

The speaker showed the harmony in historical facts between the first planting of the gospel and its restoration in the last days, and then thanked the gentleman for having represented persecution's cause so well.

Leaving the affirmative to untangle his own knotted skein of dates, Bennett read from O. Pratt's Work the description of "digging" the plates. ("Remarkable Visions," pages 4 and 6). Then taking the affirmative's strong witness, (Beadle's "History of Mormonism"), he read therefrom the prophecy of Joseph Smith given December 25th, 1832. He analyzed carefully its import and fulfillment, thereby proving Joseph's prophetic mission from a witness of the affirmative, much to that gentleman's disgust. Then turning to the last half of paragraph 10, page 270 Doctrine and Covenants, and paragraph 12, page 271, he read the sequel to the revelation (on the war) which proved to be the controversy of Zion.

If Joseph's answer to prayer, resulting in forgiveness of sins, is ridiculous, what shall we say of our Orthodox friends, who claim to obtain pardon in the same way now a days?

As for the Book of Mormon, it is no addition to the Bible, but is, as it purports to be, the history of God's dealing with a people who descended from the house of Joseph, who left Jerusalem some six hundred years prior to the birth of Christ, and who settled on this continent. Consequently it bears the same relation to that people that the Bible does to the Israelites, or that the New Testament does to the Christians. Hence, as these people were of the Israelitish nation, and had some of the Israelitish records in their possession, it is not surprising if "six hundred quotations" should be swelled to thousands.

The reference to Revelations 22: 18, 19, can not refer to anything beyond the Patmos writing, for the present form of the Bible was not then known. Similar language occurs in Deut. 4: 2, and must be equally imperative. And if it referred to all the books, in their present form, then Ezekiel 14: 6-12 would condemn the author as an interpolater and would anathematize the author of John 12: 49, 50, and 13: 34, as well as the Revelator and all the New Testament writers.

That Mr. Smith held more honorary titles than Jesus is far fetched and lacks foundation in fact. "Mighty Prince," "Immanuel," "Lord," "King of kings," "Son of God," "Son of man," etc., are some of the titles which he bore; nor are they insignificant in point of import. Mr. Smith held no titles beyond those authorized by the statutes of his country.

Mr. Johnson claimed that Joseph Smith was an impostor, and complained that the negative "had not sifted the evidence as a man who dealt with facts. The subsequent action of the three witnesses in apostatizing shows much, and goes to prove that the Mormons were a low licentious set of beings. In proof of which he produced the written testimony, under guise of affidavit, of a Mrs. Ann Eliza Windsworth, who claimed that "Joe Smith was a thief because, after holding a meeting in New Lisbon, he did steal, abduct and carry away from her home a Mrs. Cross."

Moses Snider testified that "Joe" Smith had attempted to walk on water, but a concealed plank being removed; or misplaced, the miracle ended abruptly, discomfiting the modern prophet to the great amusement of the spectators. He did not remember positively where this occurred. "Joe," as per previous appointment, on another occasion, placed himself close to the outer wall of a very high building and called out, "Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly dove," but the dove didn't come. Presently a loud whisper from an upper window conveyed the discomfiting intelligence that "the cat had caught the dove."

Joseph was a powerful mesmerist, and this was the secret of his success as an impostor. He was arraigned for murder and other irregularities.

Mr. Gibson was then called up to testify. At Mr. Johnson's request witness was sworn, by his moderator administering a sort of non-descript, evasive oath, under which he testified that Smith was a bad character; that the Mormons would steal, etc. Witness was called upon to help hunt horses that had been stolen. Persons had been lurking near the premises just before the theft. "We went toward Nauvoo. When within half mile of the city, saw some men and horses ahead, the objects of our pursuit. Lost sight of them. Went to Smith and asked aid to hunt property. Smith hesitated; owner became indignant and wordy. Smith gave them limited time to leave the city." Wheat and wagon near Versailles had been stolen by the Mormons. With these testimonies concluded that Joseph Smith was an impostor.

Bennett replied by quoting Doctrine and Covenants, page 93, par. 1, that the Church was "organized and established agreeably to the laws of our country," which demands that the organization, in claiming the privileges and protection of the government, shall respect and be subject to all its requirements.

On page 177, par. 5, we read, "Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land." This was and is an imperative command to the members of the Church, given by Joseph the prophet. "Wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, until he subdues all enemies under his feet."—D. and C., page 177, par. 5. "The powers that be," are the laws we live under, and under which they were living, to wit, general, state and county laws and governments. "Until he reigns whose right it is to reign," has reference only to Jesus Christ, who shall be made King of kings and Lord of lords. The quotation here from the Doctrine and Covenants (or Latter Day Saints' discipline) are the laws of God to the Church, whether in the States, in Utah, or in foreign lands.

We will now examine Rev. Johnson's witnesses! First Mrs. Ann Eliza (No. 2) Windsworth, upon being called for cross examination, refused to respond and reported "Not present." On inquiry the woman reported to have been stolen (Mrs. Cross) was found to have been over fifty years old, and, consequently, old enough to choose her own course. Further, if stolen, as represented, she must have been kidnapped, an act contrary to the law, and for which the kidnappers were amenable to the laws of God and man. Mr. Snider's statements of such an unreasonable character that the writer will not give it notice.

Bennett then called Mr Gibson and had him sworn before the audience by a Justice of the Peace, for cross-examination. He testified as follows: "Lived sixty miles from Nauvoo. Was some acquainted with Mormonism. Had heard his neighbors say Smith and followers were bad character. Horses had been stolen in witness' neighborhood, and suspicion rested on men who were "seed" in the neighborhood about the time of the theft; did not know whether they were Mormons or not. Witness went with others in pursuit towards Nauvoo. When near the city saw men and horses about half a mile ahead of them, which they thought were those sought. Pursuers demanded of Smith to assist in search. Smith hesitated; the party became indignant and wordy, whereupon Smith gave them limited time to leave the city. Thought Smith ought not to have done so. Did not know who stole wheat and wagon; supposed Mormons did. Had heard Smith preach; had never heard him use unchaste or improper language or doctrine; was not personally acquainted with him.

Mr. Johnson arose and said that, concerning J. Smith as a polygamist he should quote nothing but authentic history. Even our school-books teach us of the abominable practices and teachings of J. Smith. He then quoted largely from "Belcher's History of All Denominations," as evidence of the general opinion on the subject of Mormonism, then from Ann Eliza Young as his chief witness, stating that she was born of honest and conscientious parents, though deluded in Mormonism. She, herself, was a conscientious woman, born at Nauvoo; consequently she was a competent witness of the abominable doctrine of spiritual wifery and polygamy, taught and practiced at Nauvoo by Smith and followers. Emma, Joseph's wife, discountenanced these principles from the first, which was the cause of no little difficulty between her and her husband. In consequence of his prostituting Julia, the adopted daughter, and bringing in others as spiritual wives, Emma became indignant, and said that these women had got to leave the house or she would, and Joseph said that she might go. She then, at a late hour of the night, left the house. No sooner had she left than he relented and followed after her, persuading her to return, and turned the others out. He said that Joseph began to teach polygamy in 1840. About this time J. C. Bennett, a prominent man among them, (did not know whether his opponent was the man or not; if so had changed the C. to a D.), became an earnest advocate of the new doctrine, and, by some means was teaching it to a lady whom Joseph thought to reserve to himself. This resulted in a quarrel, which ended by severing Bennett from the Church. In retaliation, Bennett exposed the whole thing. Joseph still persisted in advocating the spiritual wife doctrine. Emma opposed and this caused frequent and bitter quarrels between them, which so wrought upon her mind as to reduce her to an almost helpless condition. These are facts that neither Joseph nor his brothers, the sons of the dead prophet, have ever been able to controvert. Had Joseph but shaken his little finger he could have put an end to all this confusion.

Bennett answered by stating that Belcher only wrote as he had been "told," or that which he "believed." Consequently he had presented the idea of those not intimately acquainted with the Saints. As to the testimony of Ann Eliza, she was too young to be a competent witness, and her conscientiousness and chastity we shall question, because, in order to place her father in a position of comfort, she consented to become the nineteenth wife of Brigham Young, contrary to the laws of both God and man, thereby selling her virtue for a mess of pottage for her father to lap. And, further, to her absurd statement that J. Smith counselled a man to go down the river and steal lumber to make coffins and raft it up to Nauvoo, as if the Mormons had such mesmeric power as to cause lumber to float up the rapids, against a current of six miles per hour.

Now we ask, Which is the most competent witness, Ann Eliza or Mrs. Emma Smith? Ann Eliza claims to have been born in Nauvoo, hence she could not have been more than five years old at the time of Joseph's death in June, 1844, as the city began to be built in the spring of 1839. Now we will compare the testimony of this mere child (at most) with Emma Smith's, who, in her last testimony, declared that there was no revelation on either polygamy or having spiritual wives; "nor was any such doctrine publicly or privately taught before my husband's death, that I have now or ever had any knowledge of." She says that her husband assured her "that there was no such doctrine, and never should be with his knowledge, or consent." "I know that he had no other wife or wives than myself, in any sense, either spiritual or otherwise." So much for her testimony about the teaching and practicing of polygamy. And in answer to the question, "Were you in the habit of quarreling?" Emma answers, "No; there was no necessity for any quarreling. He knew that I wished for nothing but what was right, and as he wished for nothing else we did not disagree."

Now for J. C. Bennett's testimony: Under date of May 17th, 1842, he made the following oath before Daniel H. Wells, alderman of the city of Nauvoo, namely, "That he was never taught any thing in the least contrary to the strictest principles of the gospel, or virtue, or of the laws of God or man, under any circumstances or upon any occasion, either directly or indirectly, in word or deed, by Joseph Smith; that he never knew the said Smith to countenance any improper conduct whatever, either in private or public, and that he never did teach to me in private that an illicit intercourse with females was, under any circumstances justifiable, and that I never knew him so to teach others. John C. Bennett."—Appendix to O. Pratt's Works.

The Saint Louis Times-Journal for Sept. 22d, 1879, contains the following: "I believe that, up to this time, [Joseph's death], polygamy was not openly practiced among them. Brigham Young advocated the doctrine, but it met with no favor at the hand of the prophet and leader, Joseph Smith, who, I am informed by good authority, never advocated the doctrine nor practiced it during his life."

Again, we see in Times and Seasons of February 1st, 1844, less than five months before his death, a notice citing Hiram Brown to appear at a special conference to answer to charges for preaching "polygamy and other false and corrupt doctrines," in the county of Lapeer, Michigan. Signed: Joseph Smith.

In Doctrine and Covenants, page 101, par. 3, we find: "And again I command thee, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife." Also page 142, par. 7: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else, and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit, and if he repent not, he shall be cast out."

In section on Marriage, page 330, par. 2, appears the following ceremony: "You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other and from all others during your lives." Again, in par. 4, same section: "Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication and polygamy, we declare that we believe that one man shall have but one wife, and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again."

Also Rigdon's testimony, Times and Seasons, Sept. 15th, 1842, as touching the character of Joseph Smith. Elder Rigdon observed "that there had been many idle tales and reports abroad concerning himself, stating that he had denied the faith, but he would take the opportunity to state that his faith was and had been unshaken in the truth. It has been rumored that I believed that Joseph Smith was a fallen prophet. In regard to this, I unequivocally state that I never thought so; but declare that I know he is a prophet of the Lord, called and chosen in this last dispensation, to roll on the kingdom of God for the last time. Signed, S. Rigdon."

Rev. Johnson said that a follower of Mormonism was an enemy to Christianity. Mormons and Ku-Klux are alike as to evading justice. He claimed the two churches, Brigham's and Young Joseph's, were still only one. Delusion is robbery, by taking a man's intellect. Who is responsible for all the suffering? Quoted from Ford's History, representing that there was a feud existing between the State authorities and J. Smith and followers. He was indicted for murder. Called young Joseph the dumb prophet; only two revelations! The Book of Covenants represents that the earth, and the fullness thereof was the Lord's, hence the Saints claimed the right to take things where they found them, and appropriate them to their use.

Bennett read extract from the Juliet Courier, Monmouth county, Illinois, from the Appendix to O. Pratt's Work, page 48, as follows: "Since the trial I have been at Nauvoo on the Mississippi, in Hancock county, Illinois, and have seen the manner in which things are conducted among the Mormons. In the first place I can not help noticing the plain hospiality of the prophet Smith to all strangers visiting the town, aided as he is in making the stranger comfortable by his excellent wife, a woman of superior ability. The people of the town appear to be honest and industrious; engaged in their usual avocations of building up a town and making all things around them comfortable. On Sunday I attended one of their meetings in front of the Temple now building, one of the largest buildings in the State. There could not have been less than 2500 people present, and all as well appearing as any number that could be found in this or any other State. Mr. Smith preached in the morning, and one could have readily learned the magic by which he has built up this society; because, as we say in Illinois, they believe in him and in his honesty. I wanted to hear Elder Rigdon, of whom so much has been said by the talkers and slanderers of this society. His name is closely identified with Mr. Smith as one of the persecuted and builders up of the Mormons, a word I am happy to learn is no longer a word of reproach in this free land. It has been a matter of astonishment with me, after seeing the Prophet, as he is called, Elder Rigdon, and many other gentlemanly men, any one may see at Nauvoo, who will visit there, why it was that so many professing to reverence the sacred principles of our Constitution, which gives free toleration to all, have slandered and persecuted this sect of Christians."

This shows that the Latter Day Saints did nothing but what was open to investigation, while the Ku-Klux do theirs in secret. "He was indicted for murder." Yes, thirty-nine times for various things alleged, but was every time honorably acquitted.

Then quoted from Rev. Mr. Caswell's History, as found in "Appendix" to O. Pratt, page 49, showing how J. Smith was sometimes tried and who by, as follows: "A court martial was next held upon the prisoners, under Gen. Lucas, the members of the commission consisting of nineteen militia officers and seventeen preachers of various sects, who had served as volunteers against the Mormons."

In answer to the charge that "the Saints claimed the right to take things wherever they found them, and appropriate them to their own use," Bennett quoted Doctrine and Covenants, page 269, par. 9, "Let not your gathering be in haste, nor by flight; but let all things be prepared before you; purchase all the lands by money which can be purchased for money." Also par. 10: "And let honorable men be appointed, even wise men, and send them to purchase these lands." Also page 271, par. 12, entire; and page 331, par. 1, 3, 5, 6: "We believe that governments are instituted of God for the benefit of man, and that he holds men accountable for their acts in relation to them, either in making laws or in administering them for the good and safety of society."

"We believe that all governments necessarily require civil officers and magistrates to enforce the laws of the same, and that such as will administer the law in equity and justice should be sought for and upheld by the voice of the people, (if a republic), or the will of the sovereign."

"We believe that all men are bound to sustain and uphold the respective governments in which they reside, while protected in their inherent and inalienable rights by the laws of such governments; and that sedition and rebellion are unbecoming every citizen thus protected, and should be punished accordingly; and that all governments have a right to enact such laws as, in their own judgments, are best calculated to secure the public interest, at the same time, however, holding sacred the freedom of conscience."

"We believe that every man should be honored in his station; rulers and magistrates as such, being placed for the protection of the innocent and the punishment of the guilty; and that to the laws all men owe respect and deference; as, without them peace and harmony would be supplanted by anarchy and terror; human laws being instituted for the express purpose of regulating our interests as individuals and nations, between man and man, and divine laws, given of heaven, prescribing rules on spiritual concerns, for faith and worship, both to be answered by man to his Maker."

To the charge that "because the earth was the Lord's the Saints claimed right of possession," Bennett quoted Doctrine and Covenants, page 144, par. 14: "Thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive." Also page 146, par. 21: "And it shall come to pass that if any persons among you shall kill, they shall be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness; and it shall be proven according to the laws of the land." Also par. 22, same page: "And if any man or woman shall commit adultery, he or she shall be tried before two Elders of the Church, or more. * * * He or she shall be condemned by the mouth of two witnesses, and the Elders shall lay the case before the Church, and the Church shall lift up their hands against him or her, that they may be dealt with according to the law. * * * And if any man or woman shall rob, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. * * * And if he or she shall steal, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. And if he or she shall lie, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. If he or she shall do any manner of iniquity, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law."

Bennett then asked the reverend gentleman to state to the congregation when his authentic, conscientious, honorable witness Ann Eliza Young, was born, that they might judge her worth. Mr. Johnson refused, but showed the place, and Bennett read her own statement, as having been born in September, 1844, some four months after Joseph Smith was killed. (Much laughter).

FRUIT CROPS.—The value of fruits in the United States is estimated by the government Statistician at about $140,000,000 annually, or about half the value of the wheat crop. The value of the annual crop of Michigan is put down at $4,000,000. California has 50,000 acres of vineyards, producing 10,000,000 gallons of wine annually, besides vinegar, raisins, brandy, and fresh grapes. The other States produce 5,000,000 gallons of wine annually. The single port of Norfolk, Va., reported 3,000,000 quarts of strawberries last year. Illinois, whose fruit growing is of recent origin, now has 320,000 acres of orchards.

The Blues.

Who is there that has not had them? Like all other epidemics, they affect different people in different ways. There is one kind that preys upon those who are subject to this weakness in cloudy or stormy weather, not confined to any particular season of the year. But the kind I have reference to is more prevalent at this season of the year; in fact it is periodical in its attack, but not so regular in going off.

I am sorry to say, I have heard of instances, where this malady continued to pray upon and afflict the patient all the year round. In such cases the victim bears up under this troublesome disorder with wonderful fortitude, and some even with cheerful contentment, persistently disregarding, or turning a deaf ear to all the hints or suggestions that are made concerning their relief. Perhaps this is because they are Saints; for this species of blues is peculiar to the Saints. "What! Saints have the blues?" It does sound rather strange; and may be something of a confession too; nevertheless, there are many strange things in this world.

I can truly say that I am sorry for all who have "the blues," and I can sympathise with them, that is, with one class, those who droop most under the affliction and exert themselves most to get rid of it. For I, myself, have had several attacks. It is true they were of short duration; but, oh, how depressing and annoying they were! How they crushed out or blurred over every ennobling thought or aspiration! Often, while reading or meditating concerning the great and glorious work of the latter days, in which every Saint should be engaged, (not simply members of), my heart's desire would go out towards it; and, with renewing zeal, the determination would spring up in my mind to do my part towards building up the kingdom. Yes, I would sacrifice, and suffer if need be, for the good of the work; but my good resolutions never benefited me very much, so long as I had the blues; for there was always a secret whispering within, "Be consistent; don't talk of doing or sacrificing while you have the blues."

Yes, the inward monitor never failed to make me painfully aware of that fact; and all my determinations were to me as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. So they were crowded back, and I was left to the reflection that I never could take the second step until I took the first one, namely, to rid myself of this thralldom that held me captive, that made me feel so mean and uncomfortable. And, if I am willing to sacrifice, begin now and make the sacrifice that is necessary to throw off this shackle, the which I believe deprives many of the blessings they might enjoy. This is my own experience, but perhaps all are not wrought upon in the same manner.

"Blues" would not be so much dreaded if they were confined to the parties afflicted, but others are always made more or less uncomfortable; and I suppose there is no shade of this disorder that affects others so materially as that of which I have been treating. So brothers and sisters, for the comfort and peace of others, as well as the duty to ourselves, let all who are thus afflicted seek the remedy. But, says one, can not this state of things be avoided? Yes, I believe, in almost every instance it could be, if the necessary precaution were taken. Perhaps, with some, it would call for the sacrifice that we often hear Saints speak of as being so willing to make.

Now for the remedy: Since it is allowed to be much easier to give medicine than to take it, all will agree with me that the terms are easy, simply to give instead of take, a small decoction of not "Iron drops," but silver, and the cure is complete, for these, the worst of all blues is a blue mark on your Herald and Hope.

E. B. BURTON.

Our Cyclonic Visitors.

USUALLY the first accounts of disasters are more or less exaggerated, but in the case of the recent cyclone the latest developments are the worst. The deaths at Marshfield—counting those already dead and those whose injuries are likely to prove fatal—will hardly fall short of one hundred; while other towns, with isolated settlements, will probably add twenty-five or fifty more. The number of persons permanently disabled can not be estimated, nor is it possible to calculate the loss of property. Enough is known however, to justify the statement that it is the severest calamity of the kind that ever visited this country since the European occupation, and no flood or fire in this country has ever caused such loss of life. We must go to the tropical regions to find a parallel for it, either in meteorological peculiarities or in destructiveness.

The Republican, in its notices of former cyclones, has taken the ground that their frequent occurrence indicates important changes in what may be termed our atmospheric surroundings; but the assumption that cyclonic visitations are more frequent has been disputed by some whose opinions are entitled to high respect. It is claimed that the seeming frequency is due to the more thickly settled condition of the rural districts, enabling us to hear of everyone that occurs, and that the occurrence of many unreported ones is proved by the "windrows," or areas of fallen timber, often discovered in the virgin forest. This objection, we think, is deprived of much of its force by the fact that the sections in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas, where cyclones have latterly been so disagreeably abundant, have been at least tolerably thickly settled for twenty-five or thirty years. During that period there have always been enough people scattered through these localities to know what was going on; and a cyclone, whether near or remote in its point of attack, could not be overlooked or forgotten. Tradition, if nothing else, would have transmitted the story. But up to 1860, the stories are very few and very far between. Our files from 1808 to 1860 do not furnish a dozen; but since the last mentioned year, when a cyclone struck Alton, they have been numerous, so that now scarcely a season passes without two or three disturbances of this sort—not all of them serious in their consequences, but all having the same distinctive and unmistakable characteristics. Previous to 1860, gales or hurricanes sufficiently strong to blow down fences and unroof houses were not uncommon; but the funnel-shaped cloud with its vibrating tail whirling trees, stones, buildings, animals and men into the air, and sweeping the earth like a demon of wrath, was never seen or heard of in northern latitudes.

Therefore we think there can be no reasonable doubt that our atmospheric surroundings are changing, or have already changed—and not for the better. Whether the scientific investigation which the Marshfield calamity may provoke will throw much light upon an obscure and all-important subject, is extremely doubtful. But any light, however small and feeble, is better than total darkness; and we trust the investigators—who ought to have the aid and encouragement of the federal government—will do their work as thoroughly as possible.—St. Louis Republican, April 25.

St. Paul's Old Age.

WHEN Paul the aged said, "I have kept the faith," he was remembering how, from the time his Master called him, he had served that Master all his days. As he wrote it, he must have seen Damascus and the open sky again. The voice of Jesus must have been once more in his ears. From that time on, he had served and loved his Lord. "What wilt Thou have me to do?" had been the question of all his life.

His faith in Christ he had kept only by obedience to Christ. If it is impossible to keep a conviction, still more is it impossible to keep a feeling, a personal devotion, without setting it into action. You can keep a faith only as you keep a plant, by rooting it into your life, and making it grow there. So it undergoes the changes that belong to growth, and yet continues still the same.

It was a noble end, certainly. Men lose their love and trust and hope as they grow old. Here was a man who believed more, and not less, as he knew more of God, and of himself, and of the world. His old age did not come creeping into port, a wreck, with broken masts and rudder gone, but full-sailed still, and strong for other voyages in other seas. We are sure that his was the old age God loves to see; that the careless and the hopeless and the faithless are the failures. To such men as Paul alone, is God's promise to David fulfilled: "With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation."

JACKSON COUNTY.—The county of Jackson, that contains Glendale, Kansas City and Crisp, owes a duty to the rest of the State. Law-abiding people who inhabit the rest of Missouri are compelled to bear the odium of Jackson county robbers. That is the county in which Gen. Ewing issued his Order No. 11. It was then the hiding place of Quantrell. The people were friendly to the guerillas, and fed, harbored and sheltered them. Since the war the same county has been the rendezvous of the James Boys and the Younger Brothers. These wretches sally out and rob railway trains and shoot innocent travelers, and then find protection and welcome in the jungles of Crisp. But we do not expect any aid from that county. The large rewards offered by railroad and Express companies may lead to the arrest of the last band of cut-throats and bushwhackers, but the "power of the county" is only too happy when a Yankee safe is broken open and plundered.—St. Joseph Herald.

WE present the following letter from the correspondence column of the Christian Standard, a Cincinnati, Ohio, religious paper; and offer an opportunity for some one to examine the how the other side regarded their evidences in the late Elvin, Dungan debate. Bro. E. Rannie, jun. sends us the clipping.

Debate on Mormonism.

For something more than a year the Reorganization of Latter Day Saints, has been represented in our town and community. During this time tracts were freely distributed, the first principles were thoroughly preached, and miracles were shown to be within the easy reach of the representatives of the "only true Church."

Last winter a protracted meeting was held here by Elder Robt. Elvin, of Nebraska City. In this meeting, as in others, success attended their efforts. Nightly, the man of holy calling challenged the Christian people to furnish a man to meet him in public debate.

This challenge was accepted, and in a reasonable time thereafter, Bro. D. R. Dungan, of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, was booked to meet the valiant knight, April 6-10. The proposition was as follows:

Resolved, that the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints is the only true Church of Christ.

The debate has just closed. To give even a synopsis of the argument pro and con would be impossible. Elvin seemed to evade the subject from first to last. He read copious extracts from the scriptures, most of which had no bearing upon the topic. He only approached their peculiarities on the subjects of laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Spirit, the ability to work miracles, and a very slight attempt to find their priesthood in the word of God, including a continuation of the apostles.

It was clearly evident from the first that Bro. Dungan was intimately acquainted both with the doctrines and history of Mormonism. Indeed it would appear that he knew more of the teaching of their books than the defender of the faith himself.

The following is an outline of Bro. Dungan's negative argument:

1. Joseph Smith is the head of the Mormon Church (D. C. p. 110, 273). But Christ is the head of His Church (Eph 1:21, 22; Col. 1:17, 18).

2. Christ is the High Priest of His Church (Heb. 3:1, 7, 12). But Joseph Smith is the high priest of the Saints' Church.

3. Christ's Church was built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief-corner stone (Eph. 2:19-22; 3:5; 4:11-13; 1 Cor. 12:28). But the Mormon Church has apostles stuck into its building all the way up to the top. Besides the organization at Kirtland, Ohio, April 6, 1830, had no apostles for two years.

4. The Constitution and By-Laws for the acknowledgment and discipline of the Church of Christ, were to be found in all the things that Christ had taught the apostles, and the additional truths taught them by the Holy Spirit. The Spirit was promised to guide them into all truth. The scriptures announce that the whole counsel was made known by them (Acts 20:20, 27; Rom. 15:24). These scriptures being true, all valuable truth was revealed through them (2 Tim. 3:16, 17; Jas. 1:25.)

But the Mormon Church has given us two new volumes of revelation, and, in addition, has greatly changed and corrupted the Bible itself—which it now publishes with its subtractions and interpolations. The following points were made against these pretended revelations:

1. Sinister motives are almost everywhere apparent. How to tithe, collect money, get a house built in which the prophet should have a share, to start a bank, get Martin Harris to shell out his money into the hands of the bishop, that Sidney Rigdon should live as seemed to him good, and that the Lord would, by his people take when he please and pay as seemeth him good—were among the evidences produced from their own revelations, with power.

2. False Prophecies. Many of the prophecies had been suppressed; but of those that remain that looked to the future for fulfillment, many had been untrue. The Lord had promised too many Zions, and had not kept one of his promises. See Deut. 18:22.

3. The style of the communications. Bad grammar, made words, words used in another than their authorized meaning, circumlocution, and senseless drivel, were exposed to view in a way that was very amusing, and showed that the Lord had nothing to do with those things. The Book of Mormon, page 156, even has the Savior born at Jerusalem.

4. False Doctrine. The spirit and body make the soul; Esaias and Isaiah being two different persons; feet washing as an ordinance; the Lord had kept many of his records back, contrary to Paul's statements in the matter; a miserably inspired interpretation of 1 Cor. 7:14; John had a promise that he should never die, contrary to John 21:21-23; baptism for the dead; beer or light drinks to be made from barley and other grains, etc.

5. The character of Joseph Smith proves that he was not a man of God. Bro. Dungan indicted him for theft, fraud, robbery, plundering, house burning, murder, adultery and polygamy, etc., etc. His proofs were direct, and many of them not even challenged.

6. Their Book of Mormon and their more recent work in interpolating the Bible, were examined without mercy. In their publication of the Bible, many chapters are taken out and many others inserted in their place, making it another book than the one God gave to the world.

7. They do not have the same officers and church polity that Christ established in his Church. Here Mr. Elvin made no show of response.

8. They differ in the ordinances, as already seen in false doctrines.

9. Their discipline is low and unwholesome to spiritual purity. Especially was this true under the guidance of the founder of the movement.

They have added two hundred and ninety-eight words to the Book of Revelations, and have subtracted eighteen or twenty therefrom, entirely changing some of these prophecies, and bringing upon those who did this thing, and those who are upholding it the anathema of the Almighty.

The debate passed off pleasantly, and has done for the cause of truth here a great deal of good. There was a complaint that their man was not a match for Bro. D.; but this was their own fault, as they had warning of it before hand. Besides, as he is a presiding Elder over ninety-six other elders, he ought to be regarded as a fair representative of their views.

Love.

I think there will never be any thing that will cause my love for the work and for the Saints to cease. We should all love one another. Nothing contrary to love can live in that holy place. All ranks and orders of celestial spirits are full of love, both to God and to one another; and that love has no interruptions, no foolish partialities, and no decays. Heavenly charity, or love, never faileth. It runs on in a sweet and even course, and will run on forever. "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."—1 John 4:16.

"Both angels and Saints live in the elements of love, and constantly enjoy all its salutary and balmy influences, and it is to them a perpetual source of sweetness and the highest delight. It is the distinguishing quality of their nature, communicated by the God of love, to promote and establish their everlasting felicity; and it will remain with them while life, and thought, and being last, or immortality endures."

And, as it is an essential property of their being, they could not exist without it in the blissful region of eternal day. There will be no fraud, no injustice, no oppression, no cruelty in heaven; for love will produce pure affections, sweet concord and mutual good-will, widely extending to every individual in the great family of God. The reign of pure love makes heaven a happy place. Who would not desire to dwell in the courts above, where the pure fire of celestial love burns and glows in every heart; where, like the fire on the Jewish altar, it will never go out.—Lev. 6:13. Surely such a place must be happy beyond description.

O how this world sinks when compared with that! What are all its riches, all its honors, or all its pleasures but vanity and vexation of spirit. We talk of the pleasures of religion, but where love is wanting all is an aching void. But love is found in perfection, and pleasures are perfect in the realms of glory. These observations on love are verified both by the Old Testament and the New. Moses commanded the children of Israel to love the Lord their God with all their hearts.—Deut. 6:5. Jesus assures us that the two great commandments of the law are love to God and love to our neighbor.—Matt. 22:37, 39. And Paul affirms that love is the fulfilling of the law.—Rom. 13:10. All religious sects have their favorite dogmas, but there is no real religion without love. I feel very lonely and would like the correspondence of some brother. Ever pray for me that I may grow in grace and in the love of God. May our names be written in the Lamb's book of life.

In Search of Knowledge.

ON my return from Coon Creek church I found my wife Betsy, waiting to learn the result of my visit. After supper, and while she was wiping the dishes, she said, "Phil, tell me what you saw to-day?"

"I saw some things which you can explain better than I, as women can understand many acts of their sex which men can not explain."

"And what did you see in the conduct of the women that is such an inexplicable mystery?"

"Well, when I reached the house of worship, by mistake, I entered on the ladies' side, and found quite a number of sisters with their heads together in earnest conversation. Supposing that they were discussing some important measure to advance the interests of the church, or perhaps speaking of the goodness of God in delivering them from some impending danger, a subject well calculated to awaken devotional feelings ever proper in the house of God; judge of my surprise when I found them talking of dresses, ribbons, jewelry and bonnets. Now, Betsy, I want you to tell me why it is that dressing and external ornaments have taken such a hold upon woman's heart that they predominate over her nobler instincts, even in the courts of the Lord."

Knowing that Betsy was a woman of thought and that she was always ready to put a reasonable and charitable construction upon the conduct of her sex, I feared that her reply would put me to my wits to answer; so I was not surprised to hear her say:

"Phil, you must make some allowance for constitutional tendencies. It has pleased the Creator of woman to imbed in her inmost soul an earnest longing to appear attractive to the opposite sex. Away down in the innermost recesses of her heart lies concealed this insatiable desire which can only find its appropriate expression by adorning the body in tasty dressing and showy ornaments. No man can long love and respect a woman who has no regard for her personal appearance. Go where you will on the face of the whole earth and wherever you find a woman, you will find one fond of external ornaments. So universal is this that it may be laid down as an axiom that women and ribbons are inseparably connected. With this sovereign desire ever present in woman's heart, it is not so surprising if at times it should express itself even in the courts of the Lord."

"Well, Betsy, you make out a strong case for your sex. I suppose you justify the conduct of those sisters who made an emporium of fashion out of the house of God. How can persons be in a proper frame of mind to worship God who up to the time the minister announces his text, are engaged in discussing the latest fashions?"

"You do not understand me, Phil. I do not justify them but make some allowance for constitutional tendencies when I was called upon to judge them."

"And I," I replied, "would never censure woman for having a regard for her personal appearance. Nice, neat dressing is all very proper, but the ornaments most to be desired by a Christian woman are the graces of the Holy Spirit. So thought both Peter and Paul. Says Peter speaking of Christian women, 'Let their outward adorning, not be in plaiting the hair and wearing of gold and putting on apparel, but the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.' And Paul says, 'Women should adorn themselves in modest apparel with shame facedness and sobriety, not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array, but with good works.' Mark you, a meek and gentle spirit are the good works. These are the ornaments with which Christian women are to adorn themselves that they may be accounted daughters of Sarah."

"True," said Betsy, "these graces should be assiduously cultivated as the proper ornaments of female character; but woman has no right to neglect her personal appearance. Now as we have settled this point tell me what the men were doing before preaching commenced."

"Well, Betsy, they too had yielded to the impulses of constitutional tendencies, as they were talking of wheat, corn, cattle and hogs."

"And do you see anything in those subjects to awaken reflections?" enquired Betsy.

"By no means, and those who make one side of the house of God an emporium of fashion and the other a merchants' exchange ought to be driven out with the whips of the Divine Master, just as the money changers were driven out of the courts of the temple."

"Phil" said Betsy, "I fear your indignation has carried you beyond the bounds of Christian propriety."

"Perhaps so, but a minister might as well preach to the whistling winds as waste his breath upon an audience whose minds are converted into millinery shops and marts of trade. No, Betsy, God's people can only be benefitted by the services of the sanctuary when they come to its courts with praying hearts and a devout frame of mind."

"Let us leave this topic" said Betsy, "for I perceive you are becoming excited."—Central Baptist.

Retrenchment.

"PLEASE stop my—what? Times are hard, money scarce, business dull, retrenchment is duty—Please stop my—beer? No. Times are hard, but not quite hard enough for that; but there is something that costs me a large amount of money which I wish to save. Please stop my—tobacco, cigars and snuff? No, no; not those, but I must retrench somewhere;—Please stop my—ribbons, jewels and nameless trinkets? Not at all; pride must be fostered if the times are ever so hard; but I, really,—I can see a way to effect a quite a saving in another direction.—Please stop—my tea and coffee, and other needless unhealthy luxuries? No, no, no. These I can not think of doing without. Such a sacrifice—no, I must have something else—Ah, I have it now, my Herald. That two dollars will carry me through the panic easy. I believe in retrenchment and economy; especially, in brains."—Hamilton Freeman.

If a man can have everything, it takes a great deal to make him happy. The appetite is dulled when the table is overloaded with delicacies. When, on the other hand, a man is so poor that he can't have anything, it takes very little to make him happy. An enormous appetite and humble fare is better than the choicest viands when dyspepsia sits at the head of the table.

Unknown Peoples.

Of that vast dark continent of Africa little is really known. It is a mystery to the rest of the world that explorers have only just lifted the veil of. It is of such immense extent, inhabited by so many different nations, and its topography so completely a matter of guesswork that gaining of anything like accurate information of its population, its history, and the habits of its people is all but impossible. Some guesses, however, are made at the number of inhabitants, which though not reliable are pretty intelligent estimates and will give an idea of the immensity of the population. Some authorities accord to Africa not more than 100,000,000 inhabitants; others less still. German geographers suppose that Africa contains somewhat more than 200,000,000 inhabitants; the latest English publications estimate the population at 186,000,000, which for an area of 11,500,000 square miles, gives an average of sixteen inhabitants per square mile, or a specific population 11½ times less than that of France. Africa, which has 57 times the area of France has scarcely eight times the population. The suppression of the slave trade and the influence of European civilization may lead to an increase of population very rapid and very great. According to Behns the negro regions are by far the most populous parts of the continent. If the populations are sparse in the desert parts, they are very dense in other regions. Thus, in the Soudan the population is estimated at 80,000,000, or about 53 per square mile; the town of Bida, on the Niger, has a population of 80,000 inhabitants. The population of Equatorial Africa is estimated at 40,000,000. One of the latest authorities divides the population of Africa as follows among the great families into which ethnologists have divided the peoples: Negroes, 130,000,000; Hamites, 20,000,000; Bantus, 13,000,000; Fulahs, 8,000,000; Nubians, 1,500,000; Hotentots, 50,000. This would give a total population of 172,550,000. These figures are, of course, only approximate, and may be much modified by new and more precise information.

THE SINS OF THE DAY.—If we were called to point out the most alarming sins of to-day—those which are most deceitful in their influence and most soul-destroying in their ultimate effects—we would not mention drunkenness with its fearful havoc, nor gambling with its crazed victims, nor harlotry with its hellish orgies; but the love of money on the part of men, and the love of display on the part of women. While open vice sends its thousands, these fashionable and favored indulgences send their ten thousand to perdition. They sear the conscience, incrust the soul with an impenetrable shell of worldliness, debauch the affections from every high and heavenly object, and make man or woman the worshippers of self. While doing all this, the poor victim is allowed by public opinion to think himself or herself a Christian; while the drunkard, the gambler, or the prostitute, is not deceived by such a thought for a moment.

LEARNING FROM A DOG.—"I wish I could mind God as my little dog minds me," said a little boy, looking thoughtfully on his shaggy friend; "he always looks so pleased to mind, and I don't."

Sun-spot Cycles and Epidemics.

It may be safely asserted that, from the earliest ages, no subject has filled the minds of men with so much astonishment and terror as that of the frequent and awful epidemics which have so often depopulated empires or ravaged the known earth; and it is not a little curious that in the very dawn of medicine they should have been attributed to the wrath of the sun.

It is generally known that spots of rapidly-varying shape and size occur on the sun's disk; that these increase and diminish periodically; and that they are simultaneous with changes in the solar activity as felt on the earth. In a very valuable article in the Nineteenth Century for November, 1877, Messrs. Lockyer and Hunter show that these variations are periodical, recurring in cycles of eleven years and a fraction; that they differ as to amount in different cycles; and that they are coincident with terrestrial cycles of variations in—

1. Terrestrial magnetism and electric activity;
2. Temperature;
3. Wind-disturbances, hurricanes, and cyclones;
4. Rainfall, with which the writers show that all the famines in India during this century have been connected,—the famines following after a drouth occurring at the minimum of sun-spots.

The increased heat, rainfall, and electrical activity occur, then, periodically with the maximum of the sun-spot cycle; this, of course, means, in Temperate Zones, mild but stormy winters, damp, stormy springs, and unfruitful summers,—the rain falling seldom, but, if at all, in large amounts. That article suggested the thought that the irregularity of the seasons of such a year would coincide closely with that described by Hippocrates as the Second Epidemic Constitution; and, a priori, one would suppose that such weather would be very favorable for the development of germs of low forms of organic life, and very unhealthy for man, and disastrous for crops.

Here, then, are four series of pestilences showing a marked periodicity of about eleven years, and a decided tendency to fall on years near what we suppose with reason to have been those of sun-spot maxima. The apparent exception of the epidemics of the sixth century is easily explicable. If we take 529 for the first maximum, although apparently three years too late, it is not more so than 1529 and 1829,—one of which we know and the other of which we suppose, to have been a maximum year. This year was followed by great floods, etc., during which it is fair to suppose that the pestilence was generated which reached Constantinople in 531-542, Germany in 552, 53, Gaul in 565. Looking at all the other great epidemics of the plague, and comparing the calculated data of sun-spot maxima with the historical accounts of the natural phenomena, the weather, heat, storms, floods, etc., recorded in connection with these epidemics, the coincidence becomes very striking, and it seems clear that the great epidemics of the Oriental plague have appeared, increased, and diminished coincidentally with the tides of solar energy corresponding with the maximum years of the sun-spot cycles.

Now, what can these general influences be,—this general cause,—this morbid influence of an unknown nature? Does the earth itself change periodically? No. Does the mass of the air or water change? No. What can change, then? The force, the heat, the energy which is derived directly from the sun. Does this change regularly, periodically, and at intervals corresponding with those of this pestilence? It certainly does; and all these strange natural phenomena which we have seen to have been observed in all ages as the forerunners or accompaniments of epidemics are now known to depend on, or at least to coincide with, the changes of solar energy corresponding with the sun-spot cycle. Here is certainly the post hoc, shall we not admit the propter hoc?—International Review.

Saint Margaret.

A tramp was passing through a little village in the night, and seeing a cat in the street he knocked her over with his walking stick and threw her into a gentleman's yard. In the morning the man was highly incensed at finding a dead cat before his front door, believing that some neighbor had thrown it there to insult him. So he carefully concealed the carcass until the next night, and then carried it to his next neighbor's doorstep, where another angered man found it the following morning. Thus the dead cat was passed along from night to night, until she had lain at nearly everybody's door, and had become a stench in the nostrils of nearly the whole village. Every man had become at first suspicious of, then angry with his neighbors. Sweet smiles, and pleasant words had given place to frowns and expressions of hatred. These led to quarrels, sometimes to blows, and from these to law suits.

At last the loathsome carcass of the dead cat was left at the door of a good widow. This lady was a Latter Day Saint. The only person of the faith in the village. What did she do with the cat? Did she pass the carcass along to her neighbor? Not she. She was astir in the morning while most of her neighbors were yet in bed. Going to the door she saw the miserable object upon her threshold and said, "So, poor pussy, you have visited me at last. You have caused a world of trouble in our little village; but the fault was not with thee, but with those who carried thee. I will find thee a quiet resting place; and hide thee away forever." So saying she dug a little grave under the shade of her rose bushes, and, taking the evil-looking, and loathsome cause of evil upon her spade she gently laid it in its last resting place and said: "Rest, poor creature, at the roots of my rose-tree; enrich the soil and cause this bush to thrive and yield hundreds of fragrant flowers, and when they bloom I will send a bouquet of roses to every family that has been mortified by thy visits."

A week later, a man at the post office said to a few of his neighbors who were present: "I have not heard of any one being angered by a visit from the old cat for the past few days. Where was she last?"

None could tell. At last a little boy came in, who a few mornings before had started early to drive the cows to the pasture, and had chanced to hear the widow's soliloquy, and related it as well as he could remember. "Just like her," said the deacon of the village church; I have heard that that woman never speaks evil of a neighbor; but she is ever ready for any deed of kindness or charity. I will tell my wife to visit her and learn the cause of her being so very different from most of her neighbors."

That evening the good deacon and his wife both called upon "Aunt Maggie," as the widow was familiarly called by both old and young in the village. After friendly greetings and a few common place remarks, the deacon finally alluded to the troubles that had of late existed in the village, and then said "I hear, Aunt Maggie, that you hid the cause of all these ill feelings beneath your rose bushes. I also heard your soliloquy of that morning repeated, probably almost in your own words.

"Well, now," said the good widow, "I had almost forgotten that I said anything. I wonder who has been peddling my nonsense?"

"No nonsense, I assure you," replied the deacon. "I took the lesson home to my heart, and now I have come to ask where you learned it."

"I learned it," she replied, "from my discipline, and God's Spirit bears witness with my spirit that it is true;" and turning to Sec. 42: par. 7, Book of Covenants she pointed to these words: "Thou shalt not speak evil of thy neighbor, nor do him any harm."

"Would to God," cried the deacon "that all the world might live by that item in your creed. I must look deeper into your faith and become better acquainted with your doctrines. What denomination do you belong to?"

"I am a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; but were you acquainted with our members in general I think you would find them far better than myself, for most of them enjoy privileges which I do not."

Happily, the deacon was not aware that the name "Mormon" was ever applied to the Church to which "Aunt Maggie" said she belonged, or it might have soured his mind; but he replied, "Well, sister, I really like the name and wish to know more of the doctrine. Come and visit us. Good night."

On the way home the deacon said to his wife, "It is too bad that such a good christian woman should be called "Aunt Maggie," she ought to be called "Saint Margaret," for, if there is a saint on earth, she is one."

"And 'Saint Margaret' we will call her" replied his wife.

A few days after our sister called upon the deacon and informed him that an Elder of the Church of Jesus Christ wished to preach in the village and asked for the use of the chapel over which the deacon had control.

"With all my heart," he replied, I long to hear a doctrine preached that brings such blessed principles home to the soul."

The result was the deacon and his wife with many others heard, embraced the work, a branch was raised up, the deacon ordained an Elder officiated as president.

A few years later he preached the funeral sermon of the good widow; and then erected a stone to her memory upon which he caused to be engraved these words.

"Sacred to the memory of 'Saint' Margaret

Elwood, who died June 12, 18—, aged 65 years and 3 months. She was beloved for her many virtues; and these are the golden texts by which she lived, "Thou shalt not speak evil of thy neighbor, nor do him any harm;" and "Behold I tell you these things that ye may learn wisdom; that ye may know that when you are in the service of your fellow beings, ye are only in the service of God." ### EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE visited Nauvoo, Montrose and Keokuk, last month, being gone from the office for a little over a week. We had business at Nauvoo, but took occasion of the opportunity offered and spoke to the Saints of Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, in their own neat chapel, on Wednesday and Friday evenings of the week we sojourned at Nauvoo; on the Saturday and Sunday, May 15th and 16th, met the Saints of Keokuk, Iowa, in a two days meeting, also held in their own house of worship. We preached to them twice on Sunday, with some degree of liberty. There was a fair attendance; and we were permitted to renew some of our old-time associations with those who bore the brunt of the battle in Hancock county, Illinois, and Lee county, Iowa, during the years 1860, 1-5, when there were heaps of scorn and contumely, and but little consideration for Latter Day Saints. We boasted a little, but of this the Saints there will forgive us; as we are but human, and not over much given to wisdom. Warm hearts and bright faces of welcome greeted us both at Montrose and Keokuk. At Nauvoo, one, a most excellent man was baptized during our stay there, Bro. Thomas Revel performing the rite of baptism. One, the son of Bro. S. Farris, was baptized at Keokuk during the two days' meeting.

We saw a notice, a day or two since, of the sickness of Ex Governor Wood of Quincy, Illinois, which sickness it is believed would terminate in death. Gov. Wood is, we believe, the man, who as Mayor of Quincy, at the time the Saints were driven out from Hancock county and were congregated on the Iowa side of the Mississippi river sick, destitute and helpless, visited them; and at his own expense distributed a large quantity of flour among them, relieving their most urgent necessities. Now at the age of eighty-one, he is passing on to his reward; and having done more than to offer the "cup of cold water" to perishing disciples, we can but express the conviction that his reward shall be consistent with his unsolicited and timely charity. No Saint, nor child of a Saint who remembers the distress of those trying times can fail to do Governor Wood the honor of grateful remembrance. Since the above was written, we notice that he died on June 4th, 1880, aged eighty-two. So pass the honorable men of the earth.

Bro. E. T. Dobson writes from Deloit, Iowa, May 24th, concerning a tour of his into Pocahontas county. He baptized five adults, all of the best class of citizens, the results of the labors of brethren Whiting, Carroll, Salisbury, Brown and Dobson. More will follow if further labor can be done. Bro. Dobson by accident met a Baptist minister, (some of whose flock are now of the true fold), but the man was not willing to discuss the questions of doctrine upon which he took exceptions to our faith, and so nothing serious came of the encounter. It is a pity how often such ones are pressed for time somewhere else!

Bro. J. C. Clapp, wrote from Brownsville, Oregon, May 24th, that he baptized three there that day, and two a few days before; also, three or four more were intending to be baptized the following Sunday. That is good news from his field, which all are pleased to hear, and from Bro. Clapp too.

Bro. Briggs Alden, Fontanelle, Iowa, writes that Bro. N. Stamm gave a series of discourses at that place early in May, and they were enjoyed very much. Bro. Alden states, the Saints only regretting that Bro. Stamm could not stay longer.

Bro. J. B. and Sister Mary Fisk live at or near Guide Rock, Webster county, Nebraska, which county adjoins Smith and Jewell counties in Kansas. They are the only ones of our faith there, and have aroused an interest in the minds of some, so that they greatly desire a visit from a gospel minister. One gentleman offers to entertain one as long as he can stay. Can some one in Northern Kansas or Southern Nebraska go there. For further tidings address as above.

By an error the General Conference minutes for April, 1880, failed to show the appointment of Bro. Joseph Luff to the Rocky Mountain Mission in connection with the other brethren under charge of Bro. Blair. The error was in copying, for which we, the Secretary, hereby apologize to Bro. Luff.

Bro. Thomas Matthews wrote from Syracuse, Meigs county, Ohio, May 27th, that during the month eight had been baptized into Christ, one by Bro. David Hopkins and seven by Bro. L. R. Devore. Early in the month brethren Matthews and Devore held meetings at Reedsville, Meigs county, where live Bro. and Sr. Spann, when two were baptized and confirmed. Then, on May 22d, 23d and 24th, they, with Bro. T. J. Beatty, preached at Morgan Center, Gallia county, where they received special marks of favor from the Christian society of worshipers, in whose house our Elders preached, and who otherwise showed their generosity and kindness, for which the brethren express their thanks, and the event we are glad to record. The house was also filled full by an attentive band of listeners on each occasion, of one sermon on Saturday, three on Sunday, and one on Monday. They also administered to a sick one who called upon them to do so, and good appeared to be done thereby. The brethren mention all as being very kind, and especially Elders Smith and Eblin of that society. May much good result.

Bro. Hiram Robinson wrote from Plymouth, Luzerne county, Pa., May 28th, that he came there from Bradford county, to attend the Wyoming Valley Conference, which he says was a good and spiritual one, and his joining labor with them was very acceptable to the Saints. In Bradford county the interest had continued to increase prior to his leaving.

Bro. James Buckley writes of the excellent state of affairs in the Centralia, Kansas, Branch of the Church. They are united, and seem to be spiritual minded, as also they enjoy the gifts of the gospel of Christ, such as prophecy, revelation, tongues and the interpretation thereof. The district (Central Kansas) held its quarterly conference there, May 22d and 23d, and a good season was enjoyed in business, in preaching, and in other meetings. Bro. David Williams preached an effective discourse, followed by Bro. Henry Green. The Holy Spirit's power was manifested in the promised ways, and all rejoiced under these various blessings.

Bro. W. S. Taylor wrote from Columbus, Kansas, May 29th, that Bro. John T. Davies and himself had been to Mound Valley, and also into Elk county, where Bro. Davies preached five times. Bro. W. S. Loar has charge of the Indian Creek Branch there, and appears to be doing a good work, resulting in occasional baptisms. The people were kind and hospitable to the visiting brethren. Bro. Taylor considers that Elk county is a very fine country for live stock, having rich valleys, and being well watered. They returned home via Montgomery county and Mound Valley, and then attended conference at Columbus. Bro. Taylor reports that Bro. D. S. Crawley is very ill with a lung affection, which we much regret to hear, and we pray for his recovery.

The Standard, a Clarksville, Red River county, Texas, paper for May 7th, 1880, was received by us, supposed to be sent by J. P. Branahan. Thanks.

There will be a conference of those saints who held and now hold to the teaching of James J. Strang, held at Manchester, Jackson county, Wisconsin, near Warren and Rudd's mill, on the railroad that runs from Chicago to St. Paul, on July 8th and 9th. Should any of the Saints wish to attend said conference, they will know from this where and when it is to be held. The time and place are given us by L. D. Hickey, of Coldwater, Michigan, in a letter dated May 29th, 1880.

The Dallas Daily Herald, of Texas, sent us by B. F. Boydston, contains a lengthy and interesting account of a cyclone that destroyed the town of Savoy in Fannin county, that state on Friday night, May 28th. It was an awful time of ruin, of darkness and of death. About twenty persons were killed or mortally wounded and some forty others were injured, many severely so. Churches, business houses and dwellings were torn to pieces, all within five minutes time.

Bro. T. F. Stafford, of Lewiston, Illinois, still continues to preach in the country round where he dwells. He wrote very cheerily on June 3d of his work in that region.

Bro. Jobe Brown is away again at Maquoketa, striking stalwart blows for Christ. He feels well in the work. Card from him May 27th.

Bro. N. Stamm wrote on June 2d that the lady whom he reported as having been lately baptized, departed this life on the 23d May, in full hope of the life beyond.

Bro. Thomas E. Thompson, of Chauncy, Lawrence county, Illinois, writes that the people are anxious for more preaching and to have Bro. Isaac M. Smith come to them again, and he was expected this month. Bro. Thompson says that there will be an uncommonly large wheat harvest in that country.

Bro. Denslow Loomis writes from Sheffield, Franklin county, Iowa, that he has not seen any of the Church for about ten years. He says: "It is so lonely that I almost despair. Can you not send some elder this way? There are hundreds here, I may say thousands, who never heard the doctrine preached. I live at East Sheffield, on the Iowa Central Railroad." Can some of the brethren go to see Bro. Loomis and family? He is not so very far from some of the scenes of labor of brethren I. N. White, N. Stamm, E. T. Dobson, W. Whiting and others, or perhaps Bro. J. R. Lambert in passing from Iowa to Minnesota, or on his return, at some time may be able to come that way and stop awhile.

Cheyenne Sun, sent by Bro. John Eames; please accept our thanks. Also, a copy of the North Missouri Register, from Bro. W. Pond, containing a terrible prediction of horrors yet to come, because of the conjunction of the planets, a prophecy by Prof. A. C. Grimmer.

We express thanks to the following brethren for papers received: John Ellis for Liverpool Mercury; T. R. Hawkins for Territorial Enterprise, of Virginia, Nev.; Joseph Hammer for Kansas City Times, daily and weekly copies; D. K. Dodson, for Leadville Democrat; D. W. Thomas, Davis City Commercial; William Street, Parish Visitor and Christian Herald; a brother in Plymouth, England, sends Christian Herald, Banner of Israel, and Reynolds' Newspapers.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

WHAT shall be done with members who will not come to meeting; when there is nothing to hinder?

The loss of absenting from meeting is clearly that of those staying away, and we see no good in compelling attendance. However, members should be visited and labored with, and enjoined to attend meetings. The addition to the question would seem to make the questioner the judge as to whether there were anything to hinder, which is not always safe. It is always presumed that members absenting themselves from meetings have good reasons for so doing, until the contrary is shown.

FROM INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

A PAPER called the Christian, sent us by Bro. H. R. Mills, of Pittsfield, Illinois, published at St. Louis, Mo., in its issue for May 27th, 1880, contains a letter from one signing himself J. W. Monser, who gives account of a visit made by him to Independence, Missouri, this Spring. We infer that his home is at Warrensburg, Mo. In his letter occurs the following paragraph, which contains some remarkable statements, as will be observed. He says:

"Independence is a city of some four thousand inhabitants, most picturesquely situated, and thronged with good schools and commercial enterprise, although but ten miles east of Kansas City. The Mormons have a prophecy concerning this city, that here the Lord is to descend and make welcome his saints. They will not relinquish the expectation that, by some means, the magnificent homes of the Gentiles there, will shortly fall into their possession. They rent the best of houses, annually, expecting that before the year expires, rent-paying will be swallowed up by victory. They have their site selected for the descent of the Lord, and the building of His temple, and they have been seen to wander about that sacred spot, kissing the earth with fervid rapture."

It is an impossibility for any one to calculate just where these falsifiers in the pulpits and public prints will prevaricate, or what next they may tell for truth that has no foundation in fact, but one would suppose that that last statement would have been considerable too much for any one to have believed, much less to have been so credulous, (if nothing worse), as to have written it for the reading public.

BRO. H. J. HUDSON sends to us a copy of the Omaha Republican for May 30th, which contains an editorial on "The End of the World," in which the editor reviews the various ways whereby theorists say that the earth may be destroyed. But he gives reasons against the possibility of such an annihilation, or its absorption by the sun. The following concerning the great wars and calamities so noticeable this century, and that are signs of the near coming of the "day of the Lord," will be interesting to our readers as a summary of events of the dispensation in which we live:

"At the commencement of the present century Napoleon devastated about half of Europe and probably over a million men lost their lives from the single first cause of the war; and then the South American states took up the bloody profession, and from 1820 till now there has been an almost uninterrupted succession of frays and revolutions.

In 1830 disturbances in France and Germany.

In 1848 disturbances throughout all of Europe.

In 1854 the Crimean war.

In 1859 the Italian, Austrian and French war.

In 1861 to 1865 the civil war in the United States.

In 1866 the Austrian and Prussian war.

In 1870 the Franco-German war.

From 1876 to the present there were Russo-Turk disturbances accompanied by epidemics and famines. In this resume we have taken no notice of the incessant wars in Asia and Africa, although scarcely a year passed without some European power being engaged in them. The record for famines and pestilences would be found to be similar if we had the data at hand. We need but mention the epidemics of cholera, yellow fever, eastern plague, etc., that within the present century have claimed their countless victims. In 1877 a famine scarcely heard of in Europe carried off half a million in India; then followed the Chinese famine, and a terrible famine is devastating Persia. Let the faint-hearted, therefore, remember that a comet can not possibly make the coming year more pestilential, more bloody, more a year of famine than have been many of its predecessors without comet or sun spots, and that human vices, carelessness and neglect produce more misery every year than have all the comets in untold ages."

26th.—Forest fires near East Saginaw, Mich., burned two million five hundred thousand feet of pine logs last week.

The European Powers have agreed to act in concert in demanding that Turkey shall enforce the provisions of the treaty of Berlin. Force will be used if necessary to impress on the Porte the propriety of complying. If the European Powers will now combine to compel Russia to carry out needed reforms in Poland, Austria to do likewise in Hungary, and Great Britain in Ireland, it will do away with the idea that the Powers are prejudiced against Turkey because it is weak.

A meeting of prominent citizens of Topeka, Kansas, was held yesterday for the purpose of taking steps to relieve the inhabitants of Western Kansas, who are suffering on account of the continued drouth.

27th.—A fierce tornado swept over portions of Carroll, Ida, Sac, Calhoun, and Hamilton counties, Iowa, doing great damage to farm property, demolishing many houses, and severely injuring several persons—two fatally.

The thermometer stood 94 in the shade at New York yesterday. The intense heat and long continued drouth in the city and vicinity are doing great damage.

No rain has fallen in the region around Pittsburg for two months, except a slight shower about ten days ago. As a consequence the ground is so dry and parched that farmers and gardeners have lost all their early crops, water is becoming quite scarce in the rural districts, and grass, grain and fruit-trees look as if they had been singed by fire. The drought region extends into the adjacent districts of Ohio and West Virginia. The thermometer for the past month has ranged high in the nineties, and an unusual amount of sickness, particularly among the children, has been the result.

Yesterday was one of the hottest days ever experienced in New Hampshire and Massachusetts. The thermometer ranged from 92 to 102 in the shade.

In Illinois the rains are thus far abundant, and though we have some hot weather, yet, generally, the air has been invigorating and refreshing.

28th.—Four women Nihilists have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from fifteen to four years by the St. Petersburg authorities.

Deaths from sunstroke occurred in Jersey City, Newburg, New York, and Brooklyn yesterday. The heat in all these cities was intensely oppressive.

About 2,000 striking miners paraded the principal streets of Leadville, Colorado, yesterday.

A large band of Indians have appeared in the vicinity of the North Park, Colorado, about one hundred miles from their reservation. It is generally believed that they have already killed two men. Great consternation prevails among the settlers in the vicinity of the Park.

29th.—A most disastrous rain-storm visited Brackett, Tex., yesterday and continued all day. The rain came down in torrents, flooding the streets, so that towards evening the ground floor of every building in the town was from five to eight feet under water. Houses were swept away by the torrents, and in many of them were human beings. At least twenty persons are known to have perished in the floods. The storm also visited Calvert, and did serious damage.

The boiler of a sawmill at Toronto Canada, exploded yesterday, completely wrecking the structure, killing three men outright, mortally wounding two, and seriously injuring about five other persons.

31st.—The Chilians have taken Tacna, Peru, and are marching on Arica.

June 1st.—The newspapers are nearly all taken up with political news, the excitement among the Republicans over the contest being intense, one part being for General Grant as president of the United States, and the other part being bitterly opposed to it. Yesterday's Chicago Tribune, containing fifty-six columns altogether, had thirty-two on political matter, twenty columns of advertisements, and four (the remaining ones) of foreign, domestic news, marine matters, etc. An editorial note on it reads as follows, a very well put truth: "It has been a long-time custom of the Tribune to print in the Monday's issue the sermons of the leading Chicago ministers. To-day, and under the circumstances, we award that space to Satan and the politicians."

By reason of a four page supplement the paper to-day has one or two columns of news more than yesterday's issue had. But, as it has been for some time past, so, until after the presidential election, there will be but little but political talk in the papers. The National Republican Convention meets at Chicago to-morrow, and there seems to be a crisis in the affairs of that party, a large number of prominent statesmen and others, as well state delegates, favoring General Grant as the candidate for the next President, and perhaps an equal number opposing him, and favoring neither Messrs. Blaine, Washburn, Sherman, or some other, these three being the most talked of. The choice lies not directly with the people but with the delegates, and it is altogether impossible to say who will be nominated, though there seems a large chance that the portion who favor General Grant have got the best of the matter, in which case a "bolting" party is likely to be formed that will convene somewhere and nominate one of the others.

The insurrection against Turkish rule in the Bagdad District has assumed very serious proportions, and it will take a considerable force to put it down. The insurgents demand self government under the protectorate of England. Mussulman rule does not seem to be more popular in Asia than in Europe.

A very severe hail-storm visited the country in the neighborhood of Clinton, Illinois, yesterday, doing great damage to the growing crops and the fruit-trees.

An Indian massacre is reported from Southern New Mexico. The dead bodies of five persons, including that of a driver of a stage-coach, were found in Cook's Canon, near old Fort Cummings, horribly mutilated, the Indians having tried to burn the bodies. The savages were attacked by Major Bird and a party of settlers whom he rallied to his support, but the redskins succeeded in making good their retreat towards the Florida Mountains. The latest accounts intimate that they are being hotly pursued by some companies of United States troops.

The people of New Mexico and Arizona claim that General Hatch's campaign against the Indians is a failure, and that his reports to headquarters of success have not been truthful ones. They claim that once recently he might have taken Victoria and his band, had he co-operated with another officer of his command, as requested. The Indians are spreading destruction and death. The whites in their protest state that two hundred and fifty people have been killed by the band within the past few months, twenty-two in one valley recently. Volunteer companies are being organized, armed and mounted for offensive and defensive operations.

At Texarkana, Arkansas, a few days ago a white man and a colored man had a fight about some property, in which the later was worsted. He afterwards assaulted the former's wife and was arrested and put in jail. A body of whites marched to take him out and lynch him, but were opposed by negroes, and bloody fights followed. Several negroes have already been killed or severely wounded.

Another Cuban insurgent leader has surrendered with thirty followers.

Excessively warm weather still continues at New York and vicinity. Seven persons were prostrated by the heat yesterday.

Yellow-fever has broken out at Havana, Cuba. Ten deaths from the pestilence occurred at that city during the week. Nor is yellow fever the only affliction from which the city is suffering. Eighteen deaths from small-pox have also occurred there at the same time.

3d.—About 250 persons have died in the provinces of Kurdistan and Armenia of starvation. Some 40,000 persons will have to be supported for the next two months if they are to be kept alive.

By the flood at Brackett, Texas, reported May 29th, it is now found that not less than twenty-five persons were drowned. Several hundred sheep also perished and crops were destroyed. At Brackett $75,000 worth of property was destroyed, many poor people suffering great loss.

4th.—Sir Charles Dilke of England said in the House of Commons yesterday, that Egypt was taking stringent measures for the suppression of the slave trade, and that Great Britain would do all in her power toward the same end. A caravan of slaves recently arrived in Upper Egypt were liberated by order of the Egyptian Government.

The Empress of Russia died yesterday morning, aged about 56 years. She was the daughter of a German Duke.

Statistics show that, from April 1st to May 15th, 1880, in the United States there was the enormous loss of twelve million dollars worth of property by fires, exclusive of the one million dollars worth of timber and other property destroyed by forest fires in New Jersey.

The Porte is about to issue a circular to the European Powers promising to carry out the reforms demanded by the terms of the Treaty of Berlin.

5th.—Yesterday (Friday) was the third day of the National Republican Convention, and the interest and excitement of the occasion is illustrated by the fact that the chief dailies are nearly filled with the account of the proceedings each day. For instance, the Chicago Tribune and the Times of yesterday each contained about forty columns of space besides that occupied by editorials. No nominations have yet been made, the time being occupied in debating and in discussing the majority and minority reports of the committees on rules and on credentials of those delegates the legality of whose election is questioned, or whose seats are contested by just or unjust claimants. The convention of 755 delegates sat till 2:20 o'clock this morning before adjourning.

It is reported that in Kurdistan the Chinese have driven the Russians out of some of their hold on the country by capturing many villages.

Two German emigrant vessels brought 2,500 passengers to Baltimore yesterday. The great bulk of them left immediately for the west.

St. Louis was visited by a terrific windstorm yesterday morning, which caused damages amounting to some $250,000, the death of one man, and serious injury to about a dozen others. The storm was only of a few minutes' duration, but in that time it played pretty freely.

Ex Gov. John Wood, of this State, died yesterday at his home at Quincy, of which he was the founder, at the advanced age of eighty-two. He was the son of a captain of the revolutionary army, and he himself served in the Blackhawk War in 1832.

7th.—Two Russian iron-clads, carrying one thousand infantry, will leave Cronstadt in a few days for China, without its being intended to put into any port on the way. Other important shipments of troops will follow. War with the Celestials is considered certain here.

During a violent wind storm at Mount Cory, Hancock county, Ohio, the roof of a church fell in, covering the entire congregation. Twenty people were injured, three of them fatally.

The convention at Chicago began balloting today. The first vote stood, U. S. Grant 304, J. G. Blaine 284, John Sherman 93, E. B. Washburn 30, G. F. Edmunds 34, William Windom 10. These were all nominated at Saturday evenings session. To day 28 ballotings were had and with very little change from the above figures.

8th.—The news from Chicago to day, by telegraph direct, is that being unable to unite on either of the candidates previously nominated, enough of the delegates, principally those for Blaine and Sherman, united and have chosen General J. A. Garfield, of Ohio, as the Republican nominee for President of the United States, by 399 votes, the Grant men still holding 306 to the last ballot, the thirty-sixth one made.

All Jesuit establishments in France will be closed this month, by order of the French Government. The Jesuits seem likely to contest the matter in the courts.

A hurricane has destroyed $75,000 worth of property in Scott county, Iowa.

High water continues on the rivers of Wisconsin. At Chippewa Falls twenty thousand dollars worth of property destroyed, and at Eau Claire three million feet of logs lost by the rise.

Gen. Hatch reports a fight between Maj. Morrow and a band of Apaches on June 5th, in which the troops were victorious, killing three savages, one of them a son of Victoria, and driving the remainder from the field.

Hon. C. A. Arthur of New York was nominated by the Republican Convention for Vice President.

Correspondence.

OENAVILLE, Texas,
May 26th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph and Henry:—On my return home from Conference I found all well, and after a few days of preparation for my mission field, I left on the morning of May 5th, at the dawn of day. As the sobs of tender, little voices went out in the air, it took all the courage I could muster to turn my face toward the south, but I breathed a silent prayer that God would bless and protect them and us.

Took train at Cameron, Missouri, at 6:30 a. m., and, without any hindrance, sped on to this state, arriving in northern Texas on the 7th. Preached one discourse there. Found the Saints well and trying to do the best they could, but the enemy was raging and threatening us with violence. So, all things considered, we thought it best to withdraw, for a time, to another field, as we were directed by the Lord to do. May He bless the Saints there and keep them from all harm. As for the mob, the Lord will reward them. I came to Robertson county and preached five times and baptized three good Saints; also left quite a number deeply interested, and I hope they may obey when I return. I had the help of Bro. Belcher and H. L. Thompson. Expect to preach in this vicinity until about June 15th and then go south to Bandera and Stockdale, if all is well. Bro. Thompson is to accompany me. I would say to the Saints of this mission that I shall try to visit as many branches as possible, and to aid them all that I can. I would like to hear from them, and especially from the Elders, and to labor with them for the best interests of the cause. My address will be Oenaville, Bell county, Texas, until further notice. The calls here are many, but only a few to fill them.

Bro. Wicks has arrived in the state. We have not met yet, but hope to soon. We find in Bro. Thompson a father and a friend, and one who is alive to the cause. We hear the best reports of Bro. D. H. Bays here, and both Saints and outsiders are fully convinced that he can do more good here than any other one man, for he has the full confidence of all. I love to follow such men, and shall try and not leave any stain on his good work.

We need tracts here, for one can not go into every place, and as the drouth injured the country last season they are not able to buy. So if any help can be furnished in that line we would be truly thankful.

Will all the Saints pray for us, and help us all they can; for I am satisfied that a good work will be done here in time, if wisely conducted. We have plenty of room here for Bro. Kelley and the army of Elders that he took from Conference. Bro. Gomer, we have not heard from you yet, nor from Bro. J. A. Crawford. How I long for your help, now, or the help of any others in the great cause. May the Lord bless his people, prosper his work, give strength to his laborers, till all can sing "Zion is redeemed." Yours in hope,
W. T. BOZARTH.

MOSS POINT, Jackson Co., Miss.,
May 30th, 1880.

Bro Henry:—On Tuesday May 18th I bid Bro. I. M. Smith good-by at DeSota, Jackson county, Illinois, and went to Cairo, and took a boat for New Orleans the same day, which I reached on the 24th, thus finishing my thousand mile trip down the father of waters and took the train for Mobile at 7:30 a. m. I was reminded by the scenery that I was in the "Sunny South." The impressions were pleasing. The grounds of some residences in the city were so adorned by nature and art as to be unsurpassed in beauty and loveliness by anything I had ever seen before.

We whirled rapidly along so that I only caught a glimpse of a few scenes, and then we were in the midst of the great salt swamps, twenty-five or thirty miles in width.

At the Bay of St. Louis, about fifty-two miles from New Orleans, I got off from the cars, and, after a variety of experiences, I reached, in the evening of the next day, the Saints living about sixty miles from the bay; and, at the home of Bro. John Porter, I was kindly welcomed. The Saints here are for the most part "striving for the faith," although they know what it is to be despised and misrepresented.

It has been raining every day since I arrived, in consequence of which we have not held any meetings, but expect to commence work as soon as practicable, as considerable interest is manifested to hear the word. However, we will be obliged to labor under difficulties, as the Saints have no meeting house and services will be held in private houses. May God's blessing rest upon this glorious latter day work, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,
F. P. SCARCLIFF.

AUSTIN, Nevada,
May 23d, 1880.

Editor Saints Advocate:—I am on my way to Oregon. I was born and raised in Utah, and lived in Beaver City, when I subscribed for your most valuable paper, (Mr. Wm. W. Hutchings, a member of the Reorganized Church has been sending it to me since I left there, last fall), but I fell out with the Utah Church there; and as apostates are not at all liked, I thought I would leave and get out of reach of their sneers and abuse. They hate me worse because I was raised, or rather dragged up in their midst, and then would not adhere to their abominable doctrine.

I love the Advocate for its truthfulness and plain way of speaking concerning the wickedness of the church leaders in Utah. I fully realize that the system practiced in Utah is erroneous in the extreme. I hate the system. I hate those impostors who have wronged so many, and committed such awful crimes before God. If I was a scholar I could write you some horrible truths, not murder by shedding of blood, but fully as bad, if not worse. May you live to accomplish the great work you have undertaken—you and Bro. Joseph and your associates—and may I live to be a co-worker with you.

This is the prayer of yours,
D. A. LEBARON.

THOMASTOWN, near AKRON, Ohio,
May 16th, 1880.

To W. W. Blair:—Dear brother, Although a stranger to you, I take the liberty of calling you such because of our religious views being the same. My object in sending a few lines to you is to see if I can get the Saints Advocate sent to my address, with a price list of Book of Mormon and Hymn Book, and so forth. I may here state to you that it is not quite two years since my return from Salt Lake City. I went there in April, 1878. We were ten in number, and I was there three months without work. I had an opportunity of finding out the ways of the leaders of the Utah Church and the Saints in general. I found to my sorrow that we had been deceived, besides losing all we had. My wife begged of me to come again to Ohio, while she with the family would remain until I would be able to send for them. I left my wife sick with one dollar to keep a starving family on, and God only knows how I suffered while parting from them. I am a coal miner and our trade was very dull on my arrival home, and I found that I could do nothing towards their deliverance. Many of my well wishers advised me to get up a subscription list to help my family home. Being so persuaded, I started out with my paper and obtained about one hundred and fifty dollars. This sum was raised to three hundred dollars by borrowing, and a portion of this still remains to be paid. But I feel to thank God that my family is all home again and enjoy health and strength, and where the influence and effect of polygamy will not be likely to reach us. I may say likewise, that my daughter came home from Salt Lake City last Christmas, bringing with her the Saints' Advocate, and that excellent work entitled Joseph the Seer, the Divine Calling of Joseph Smith, defended; also Brigham's mode of tithing. There are churches in Thomastown, and in Akron, about four miles off, there are about sixteen churches, and yet none of these please me. I should like very well to see some of your traveling ministry come in these parts and let the people hear the true gospel of Jesus in plainness.

I am a native of Scotland, but I live in a Welch settlement in Thomastown. Please answer as early as you can, by letter, with instructions how to send the money. I remain yours affectionately, a well wisher, LUKE SHARP.

ORONOGo, Missouri,
May 18th, 1880.

Dear Herald.—I thought that I would answer letters from various correspondents and write promised ones to others, but a few words through your columns may suffice for all; and I hope that all will be satisfied therewith.

When I last wrote to the Herald I was in the great "Lone Star" state. After that I was with the Red River Branch until March 25th, when I started for the General Conference. I stopped two days at Little Rock with two of my cousins; then to St. Louis, where I arrived the 31st, and that evening went with Brn. H. C. Smith and M. T. Short, to fill appointments at Caseyville and Alma. At Alma I addressed a large and attentive audience. On April 1st at Caseyville I listened to a good discourse from Bro. M. T. Short, and on the 2nd we returned to St. Louis. In the evening I started for Plano. And if Bro. Anderson's letter has a literal meaning, it is good that I did not stay longer; for it appears from his letter that if certain Elders come that way they will be welcomed by the Saints. From this I infer that while others may be treated courteously, they had better be some where else. But I can say that I never had better treatment by any people than I received from the St. Louis Saints. Therefore I do not believe the Saints are partial, notwithstanding the letter conveys that idea.

I arrived in Chicago on the 3rd, and found Bro. M. H. Forscutt who kindly invited me to tarry in the city until Monday, and I had the pleasure of listening to Bro. G. S. Yerrington on Sunday morning and to Bro. Forscutt in the evening. While in the city I visited Lincoln Park with Bro. C. Scott and wife, and Brn. Bond and Yerrington, and also the water works, where we saw the huge engines at work pumping water all over that great city to satisfy the thirst of thousands. Mr. Brooks, (a son of Z. Brooks who essayed to lead a portion of the Saints after the death of Joseph the Martyr), kindly piloted us to see these things. I hope ere long to hear that he has obeyed the gospel.

On the 5th, with Bro. Mark and several brethren and sisters from the east, I came to Plano, and was welcomed by the Plano Saints; also received many hearty shakes of the hand from visiting brethren. Conference convened on the 6th, and, as the time passed, I continued to feel better spiritually, and the society of such noble brethren as composed the conference, made me feel more at home than at any place I was ever in before. But on Saturday it pleased the Dispenser of all things to permit me to be afflicted, and I was deprived of meeting with the brethren any more except for about two hours. And I will state that I do not think that either time or adversity can ever erase from my mind, or cause me to cease to be thankful to the brethren and sisters for the kindness shown me during my hours of affliction, and especially Bro. Joseph Smith and family, at whose house I staid. The many faithful prayers that ascended in my behalf seem to be still fresh in my mind.

Upon the whole my visit did me good in many ways. Instead of having the cold shoulder turned upon me because of previous reports, the words of the "Wonderful Counselor" seemed to be, yea, were spoken by the actions of Saints. Yes, Saints! "As ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them." Again, the prayer says, "Father forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those that trespass against us." Then the good Samaritan who took the wounded man on his beast and carried him to the nearest inn and dressed his wounds. These are some things that are not only remembered but practiced by Saints of the Reorganized Church.

I left Plano on the 16th though I was still suffering with pain in the head and other parts of my body, yet fortune favored me, and I got a seat in one of those reclining chair coaches at Chicago, and did not have to change until I got to Kansas City. Arrived at Joplin on the 17th, and was made welcome by Bro. and Sister Ellis Short. My health continued to improve, and on May 1st I began a series of meeting in the Methodist church at Oronogo. Continued there until the 4th. Went to Galesburg the 5th and held three meetings. Returned to Oronogo on the 8th, to fill an appointment that I had left, but the evening was so stormy and the people so badly scared that we could have no meeting. There was fierce lightning and the most terrible noise that I ever heard in the heavens. And what added to the confusion was that large hailstones began to fall, and then the people took to the cellars, like so many rats to their holes. After the storm passed I could not help being a little amused to see so many of all ages and sexes emerging through the cellar doors and looking around, as if they were expecting another hint from the same source.

On Sunday the 9th I preached at 11 o'clock, and then we repaired to the creek and I led one down into the water and buried her with our Savior Jesus Christ. Preached again at night and also the following Tuesday and Thursday. On Saturday I had an interview with the Methodist minister and he told me that if I would come to his meeting on Sunday evening he would show me where I was wrong. I then asked him if he would divide time with me and let me show where we were not wrong. He said he would. The time came and I went. He fired his gun, but it bursted, and, instead of hitting my errors, the shot flew in other directions and hit the "Mountain Meadow," "polygamy," "bogus miracles," "old Joe Smith," "the false prophet," &c., &c. But he didn't divide time; of course he forgot that? That is I think he did. But I reminded him that I would like to talk a little, and the right being granted, I spoke about ten minutes. The meeting resulted in good for us, i.e., the doctrine of Christ. Many believe, but we can not tell yet what will be done. The burden of the expenses here rests upon Brn. Sutherland and Hayton. They act nobly, and have nothing too good to sacrifice for the spread of truth.

Desiring the prayers of all God's people, I am still your co-laborer in the great cause of truth,
A. J. CATO.

UNIONTOWN, California,

June 1st, 1880.

Brn. Joseph and Henry.—I am rejoicing in the work and hoping for it to go on. I now bear my testimony, as I have been strengthened by those of other brothers and sisters through the Herald. I hope mine will prove the same to those who read it. I was suffering terribly with a felon on my finger and I was administered to, and the pain left immediately and never came back. My hand is well, and not a scar on it. At another time I had a very sore throat and I was administered to at night, and my throat began to be easy right away, and in the morning it was quite well. O how I do rejoice in the work of God our heavenly Father. Your sister in the everlasting covenant,

MARY A. McBEATH.

GAYLORD, Smith County, Kansas,

May 27th, 1880.

Bro. Stebbins.—This part of Kansas is very dry; we have not had one rain to wet plow deep. Winter wheat is nearly all dead; farmers are plowing it up and planting the ground to corn.

The Saints here have come to the conclusion that it is high time to take (in full earnest) Christ, the model man, for their example and guide in all His characteristics, and so be virtuous, peaceable and industrious, thereby qualifying themselves to be gathered with the Saints in Zion and be protected from the disasters which are going forth and will continue to go forth over the earth till the coming of the Son of Man,—of whose approach everything bears witness.

The work here is progressing gradually. Two of our noblest citizens, Wm. Dixon and Wm. Young, were baptized into the Church four weeks ago, and both bid fair to be very useful. Others are investigating. We have preaching every Sunday, prayer and sacrament every other Sunday evening. I am still hoping and praying for better health, that I may work constantly in the Master's cause, but if it is not so to be I shall continue to bear testimony to the truth, so long as I can make a distinct sound, and when I can not do so I will praise God for the privilege of dying a true Latter Day Saint. My health is much the same as in the past. Your brother in Christ.

JAMES PERKINS.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
May 25th, 1880.

President Joseph Smith.—Having reached the field of labor assigned me by the last Annual Conference, I undertake to inform the Herald readers of the "situation," so far at least as I am connected with it, and also some of my views as to the outlook for the future.

April 23d left home for Kewanee, and preached same evening, to small congregation in that city on our work in Utah. From here went to Burlington, Iowa, 23d, and called to see Bro Wm. D. Morton, by whom I learned that a two-days' meeting was to be held in the city on the 24th and 25th insts., and that my services were likely to be in demand, as it was not certain any other Elder from abroad would be there, I staid, and was pleasantly surprised in meeting Elders Lake and Crawford, whom I assisted in conducting services. Our meetings were pleasant, spiritual, and, I trust, profitable. Here the Lord, through prophecy, spoke good to us concerning our mission to the west, informing us that He was pleased with the mission, and would raise up aid, and friends, and helpers. For all this we shall labor and pray.

We next called at Lamoni, Decatur county. Here we saw increased evidences of enterprise and thrift. We found the Saints increasing in numbers, and dwelling together in unity and love. Another branch of the C. B. & Q. railroad was being located south from this vicinity, to finally reach St. Joseph, or Kansas City. It is likely to be builded at once.

My visit here was marred by the somewhat protracted and fatal illness of Bro. Samuel H. Gurley. He was endeared to me by the tender ties of brotherhood in Christ, and by the further fact that he, (with Bro. E. C. Briggs), was the first to bring to me in November of 1856, the tidings of the Church of Christ Reorganized. While the Church, and society at large has sustained loss in his death, let us fondly hope he now enjoys the priceless association of "the spirits of just men" in the paradise of God. Oh, blessed hope! treasure richer far than gems and gold and earthly honors!

I was delayed at Lamoni till May 5th by loss of a satchel; recovering it, I went on that day to Cleveland, where I preached to a full and attentive congregation, and the next night preached in a new store room at Lucas, to a large number of respectful listeners. My next point was Harlan. Here I spoke twice, and at Pleasant Ridge, near by, once. Scarlet fever was quite prevalent and fatal here. The family of Mr. Davis, near the city, lost the mother and three daughters within a few days; the two remaining daughters, young ladies, at the same time were stricken down with it and by the physicians given up to die. At this juncture our noble brother and sister J. W. Chatburn, took the latter into their own home, at the peril of their own health and lives, and, by such care as they aided by Sr. Dennett, gave the suffering ones, they rapidly recovered to the joy of all. This is "pure religion, and undefiled."

From Harlan I went to Leland's Grove, where I spoke twice to congregations worn and wearied with farm labors, yet they listened patiently and intently, from half-past eight to near ten p. m.

I spoke at Galland's Grove on the 13th and 14th insts., to the usually large audiences there, and baptized three married ladies.

On the 15th at eight p. m., spoke to the Saints and friends at Crescent City, also at half past ten a. m. on Sunday, the 16th. In the evening of same day preached in Council Bluffs. Made brief call at Omaha, and on Tuesday 18th, met my daughter, Mrs. Nicholson, on her way to join her husband (who is located in business in Salt Lake City), and taking train at fifteen minutes past twelve p. m., proceeded on our way here, a distance of near eleven hundred miles. Oh, how wearisome and distressing must have been the slow journeying of the poor hand-cart companies, as they toiled and hungered and thirsted and suffered, from wind and frost and snow, as they wended their way over these miles of rugged mountains and desolate plains!

Were those who planned this movement—this cruel, slavish servitude—were they inspired of God! or even by humanity and good common sense! The masses of Utah will yet answer, and in terms that shall cover with infamy the names of both those who planned, and they who abetted it. The just Lord will reward.

Well, we are here in our mission-field, and never felt better in the work of the Lord. The Elders connected with the mission are feeling well; and they are sanguine of more or less success. Many powerful influences are at work to break up and sweep away the priestly despotism whose chief seat is in this city, and which falsely claims to be the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Work is needed—faithful, patient, loving work. The people, the masses, are zealous, industrious, orderly, and religious. That many of their religious notions are false and hurtful must be admitted, but they are such only as have been grafted on to a once pure faith—they are the warp and woof of the spider's web that poisons and wounds the leaf and fruit of God's Church-tree; the foundation, the root, is sound and good. Pruning and purging are needed; charitable and patient culture is needed as well. To this, under the guidance of heaven, the ministry in this mission stand committed. Help us, then, with prayers and all needed aid. W. W. BLAIR.

ORNAVILLE, Bell County Texas,
May 20th, 1880.

President Smith.—In looking over the minutes of General Conference we see, with surprise and regret, that Elder Bays had been resting under censure for having left Texas without being released by Conference. We know more fully than does Bro. H. L. Thompson, our father, the circumstances connected with Elder Bays' case, his most effective labor being in the neighborhood in which we lived at that time, and that before his family were brought to Texas.

If a fault was committed it was on the part of the Saints and friends, in their persistent solicitations (but unwise and unfulfilled inducements) for him to bring his family. Understanding, as we all did, the capriciousness of Texas crop seasons, and, realizing at that very time how very light our purses would be if there was a failure, we southern people (owing to the climate perhaps) are either too sluggish or too enthusiastic, and, under the excitement of the occasion, we were impulsive enough to think we could and would do anything to insure his return to Texas. Unacquainted with the people and their circumstances, and over-persuaded, he came. All know the sequel. Among the thousand regrets from both saint and sinner that followed his most uncomfortable manner of departing from Texas, we, belonging to the latter class, will venture to affirm that not one was unjust enough to blame him in the least, but think rather that he had the best reason to feel hard. Believing that you have heard the saints' side of the question, we thought it not improper to give you the sentiments of some who are not members. Very respectfully, &c., R. & FRANK McMAINS.

BOSTON HIGHLANDS, Mass.,
May 31st, 1880.

Bro. Joseph.—

We had an excellent conference May 23d and 24d at Providence. All the branches in the district were largely represented except Dennisport. Two were baptized on Sunday by Bro. Bradbury, president of district, and three by Bro. C. N. Brown. One was baptized on Wednesday night by Bro. Bradbury. For a branch as large as Providence Branch is, there is an excellent degree of unity and peace.

On Monday morning a few assembled at the house of a brother who had met with an accident, in order to pray with and for him, others came in, being led, they said, by the Spirit to come, until thirty-one were present, and the Spirit of God was poured out in a remarkable manner. Some ten spoke by inspiration of the Holy Ghost, and some twenty-six distinct revelations were given in tongues, interpretations and prophecy. A number were administered to, for divers diseases and afflictions. Some were immediately helped, and others have been rapidly getting better since. Among the testimonies borne, were several concerning unmistakable evidences, given in different forms, of the approval of heaven of the present presiding officer of the Church, that he is being led by the divine hand and has the care and teaching of angelic visitors, and will lead the Church safely, and honorably. The Elders of Massachusetts District are so circumstanced that some can not give more than Saturday afternoon for business in the conferences, and many can not get to the conference till Saturday evening, and the time devoted for business is so short that much of it has to be done on Sunday nights, after other services, when every one is tired, and indisposed to give the time and thought that should be, to the transaction of important business.

T. W. SMITH.

PILGRIM LAKE, Gonzales Co., Texas,
May 22d, 1880.

Bro. Stebbins.—Those few of the faith who live here are trying to keep in the unity of the Spirit, and are striving in defense of the religion of our Lord and Savior. Many in this part seem to be anxious to hear our doctrine. I give my testimony to all who inquire of me and strive to let my light shine, both by word and precept. I desire the prayers of all, that I may be strengthened by the Spirit of God and blessed with wisdom. I also hope that a zealous and able Elder will come and preach here, where souls are perishing for the lack of truth. A church-house is open here for an Elder, and our house will be a home for him, and if our crops prove good, I hope to do something to spread the gospel. Your sister in the cause of Christ,
NANCY V. PEARSON.

SHELBY, Iowa, May 23d, 1880.

Dear Herald.—With heartfelt thanks to the Giver of all good, and in order that others may also be thankful for the blessed promises received from our Master, do I write.

On May 17th I received a telegram from my brother William living at this place, saying that he was very sick and desired my presence immediately. I started on the first train and found him very low with some unknown disease. I remained with him until the 22d, without any marked change occurring. At times he would seem wild and very nervous. The disease seemed to be mostly in his mouth and lower part of face. Once he said that the Lord had done a wonderful work for him, in taking off his face and mouth, piece by piece, and scraping and cleaning them and replacing them all right again. On the 22d he seemed to be a great deal worse, and became very nervous indeed. His tongue began a serpent-like motion and moved wonderfully fast, and his eyes were wild and glassy. Being alarmed, I went down to Bro. T. W. Chatburn's and requested him to come immediately. He dropped his business, and, as soon as he stepped into the room, he seemed to take in the situation. He requested those present to come to order while he should administer to him. Bro. William put up his hands and beckoned him to desist from administering to him, and he said "Wait, Tom; wait, Tom; I want to talk to you." Bro. Chatburn paid no attention to this but asked Bro. David Hall and myself to lay our hands on with him, and then raising his hand to heaven, he rebuked that spirit and commanded it in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of him and trouble him no more. And from that moment his tongue ceased its serpent like motion, and the muscles relaxed, and he rested.

Shortly after this one of my brother's best calves was seen running and bleating in the adjoining lots. My attention was called to it and I went to see what the cause was. To my surprise I saw that the calf was entirely crazy, running against the wire fence, knocking itself down, jumping and bleating, and its tongue had the same serpent like motion; that my brother's had. I watched the calf in its frantic motions until it fell and expired, with seemingly all the agonizing and excruciating pains possible.

This is my testimony, and I lie not, God being my witness; for I was an eye-witness to all that transpired. This evil spirit was cast out by the power of the living God, and it entered into the calf and destroyed its body.

Dear brethren and sisters, is not this good power the same spirit that manifested itself in Christ's day, and the same that was enjoyed in the days of the former-day saints? And, as this power and blessing was a characteristic of God's people in those days, what an evidence it is that Latter Day Saints stand in the same relation to God as they did of old. Then we can lift up our heads and rejoice in the glorious gospel of Christ; for we know it is the power of God unto salvation to all those who will believe and obey it. Yours in the bonds of peace,
R. GOREHAM.

SPRINGVILLE, Utah, May 25th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph.—

On Sunday I organized a branch of seventeen members here, fourteen of whom were baptized by Bro. Deuel. There is some prospect of more good being done. I received a letter from Bro. Blair yesterday, he arrived in the city on Friday I think. I preach in Provo to-night, and perhaps more, in M. E. Church. My health is now good, thank God, I am doing what I can by pen (privately) and by tongue publicly. With love to yourself and all in the office, I remain your brother,
CHARLES DERRY.

MONTROSE, Iowa, June 4th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph.—Have been here one week, preached seven times, full houses, audiences increasing. Have received names of some for baptism which I will attend to after I return from Rock Creek Conference. Closed the series until next Tuesday eve, when will resume. Have a band of singers called "Donors" to sing in our meetings, have sister Newberry's organ in church, quite a stir is made, if any more come we shall have to go to a larger building, which we have been requested to do.
J. F. McDOWELL.

Rensimar by Salt Lake City Branch." This was adopted, and a notice of appeal to General Conference against the decision was filed later in the session.

On the second case, the following was unanimously agreed upon, as a substitute for committee's recommendation: "That Bro. Thos. Robson be requested to remain silent until next district conference, and that he then and there present his defense in person or writing; also, that the witnesses for the prosecution be requested to appear on that occasion."

The president appointed Brn. Monckom, Nightengale and D. J. Phillips as a committee on complaints and grievances, and Brn. Potter, Haws and Huntley as a court of Elders.

Elders Brown, Anderson, Potter, Canavan, Haws, and Phillips reported, also Priest Nightengale and Teacher Monckom.

At 7:30 p.m., preaching by Russel Huntley.

March 21st, 9:30 a.m.:—Brn. Haws, Hart and Lincoln were appointed a committee to audit the account of the Bishop's Agent.

On resuming the discussion of the resolution concerning dissolving the mission, a substitute for the original was presented and adopted, wherein the General Conference of the Church and the Pacific Slope Mission Conference were requested to take immediate action dissolving this mission and dividing it into four separate and distinct districts, Oregon and Washington Territory to compose one; Nevada, one; Northern California, one; and Southern California, one; and also that they instruct the different districts to convene as early as possible for the purpose of completing and perfecting the district organizations.

The resignation of H. P. Brown was duly accepted, and it was resolved to defer choosing a sub-district president until the action of the General Conference, and until that time that H. P. Brown be upheld and sustained as president of the sub-district, Bro. Brown, under the circumstances, consenting to act.

A resolution asking the Mission conference to rescind its resolution prohibiting Elders from traveling and preaching at large without the appointment of said conference or the president of the mission, was indefinitely postponed.

At 2 p.m., a sacrament meeting in charge of Brn. Phillips and Bryan, after which business was resumed.

Bishop's Agent's report read. Report of Committee to audit Bishop's Agent's account received and adopted, and committee discharged. Report of Bishop's Agent was found correct and adopted.

Preaching by T. J. Andrews; an interesting and instructive discourse.

On the whole, it was a very good conference, and about all seemed strengthened and determined to work for the cause. The principle of individual right, of private judgment, seemed accorded to all, and all had the privilege of ventilating their feelings.

Adjourned sine die—subject to call of sub-district president.

The Butler, Lone Star and Flat Rock branches reported. [No statistics given.—Eds.]

Resolved that we do not recognize any branch in this district denominated the Brewer Creek Branch.

The court of Elders previously appointed to adjust difficulties in Flat Rock and Pleasant Hill branches reported, and the items were taken up separately. The recommendation that the case of Ezekiel Jones and W. J. Booker be dismissed was approved, and the recommend that Ezekiel Jones, Sarah E. Jones, Wm. H. Jones and Roxana Jones be expelled, according to their requests, was approved, and they were accordingly expelled, as were also Elizabeth Quinby and George Elder. The recommend that the case of G. T. Chute be dismissed was approved, and the report as a whole was approved, and the court was discharged.

Bishop's Agent's Report:—“Received $21.75; Paid to Heman C. Smith $21.75. Franklin Vickery, Agent.”

Miscellaneous.

MASSACHUSETTS DISTRICT.

To the Saints:—Being unable to comply with the request of Elder John Smith, of Fall River, Bishop's Agent, to unite with him in preparing an address to you on matters connected with his office, I take this opportunity and mode of endorsing his appeal, and of exhorting you to comply with the advice given. As I write this without his knowledge, no one will take offense at the testimony which I can truthfully bear of the strict integrity, honor and prudence, of Bro. Smith. I am confident that your moneys will be safe in his hands, and that your accounts will be carefully kept, and the financial interests of the district will be jealously guarded by the agent; let none, therefore, hesitate in putting into his hands all that the law of the Church, the necessities of the cause, and your duty, requires at your hands.

Forget not that “the liberal soul shall be made fat,” and that “the Lord loveth a cheerful giver.” “Freely as ye have received, so freely give.” This is a day of sacrifice and tithing. Those who do not observe the command to bring their tithings and offerings into the store-house of the Lord, can have no inheritance in Zion; and there is no promise of escape from destroyers of your orchards, your vineyards, your grain fields and your gardens, unless you observe the command to give of your temporal things, to help in carrying the gospel to those who sit in darkness, and who know not the truth as it is in Christ. Having received of the gospel through the liberality and sacrifice of others, in turn be liberal for others' good.

Your fellow laborer,

T. W. SMITH.

TO SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

In the progress of the work in the city of Chicago it has become necessary to organize a Sunday School. Some of my hearers are anxious that their children should learn the same truths they are receiving with joy, and desire me to organize a Sunday School here. Have you not in your libraries a number of books which you could donate to help in this work? If so, please send them to me by express, addressed to No. 619 West Lake street. Please also pay the expressage, if you can, as I have to pay twenty-five cents for the delivery of each parcel, and sometimes have not that much. Your brother,
