A WORD FROM THE WAYSIDE.

O, reaper in life's harvest field, among God's chosen ones,
Did I hear thee say, "I'm weary now, and long to be at home;
To lay the burden down for aye, and enter into rest, Free'd from earthly toil and care, and in the Master's presence blest.

Thiakest thou, thou could'st be happy there? The reaper's busy hum

Ascending still, reminding thee of the work that's yet undone;

The Master's call for reapers more, still sounding on the air,
To reap, though it may be 'mong the tares, the wheat so bright and fair?

To know that thou had'st left the work to others weak as thou;

Had shunned the toil that will earn the crown upon the laborer's brow;

Had'st entered all unbidden, in the harvest feast to share;
The summons not yet being given, nor the feast for thee prepared?

In toiling for thy fellow man, thou'dst not so shun the work, Much less in the service of thy God—the Lord of heaven and earth;

And though at times the grain seems scant,—scarce worth the laborer's care,

The field is the Master's, thine the work, and thy reward is sure.

What though the toil and heat of day at times oppressive be,
Now is the reapers' time to work, now the Master calleth thee;

Like clouds that flit o'er harvest sky, cool shades the toilers bring,

Thou'lt oft rejoice in the peaceful calm—the shadow of His wing.

So boldly toil till eventide, then half thy joy may be,
The knowledge thou hast earned the crown that the Master hath for thee,

Hast merited the welcome words, "Well done, my child, come in."

O joy supreme! freed evermore from all sorrow, toil, and sin.

Reaper, rejoice, that yet there's time, the great reward to win,
Ere the Lord of harvest shall appear, to call his reapers in;

May I, with you, and all his Saints, join in the glad refrain,
The chorus sweet, of the "Harvest home," when Jesus comes to reign.

Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

"I INDEED have baptized you with water, but he shall not only baptize you with water, but with fire and the Holy Ghost." (John).—Mark 1: 6. Inspired Translation.

That the baptism of the Holy Ghost was promised to believers in Christ Jesus, no Bible reader will deny. That it was given as the seal of adoption can not be successfully denied; yet we find Bible readers differ widely in opinion as to whom it shall be given, and whether it shall be enjoyed in the present day. Some clamor lustily for this baptism, and contend that where this is received no baptism of water is necessary; forgetting the case of Cornelius, in Acts 10th and 11th. Most of the "Orthodox" deny that the operations of the Holy Spirit are the same in all respects as in the days of the Apostles. I will endeavor to prove, First, that the baptism of the Holy Ghost is essential to believers in all ages. Second, that it was promised to all true believers. Third, that the operations of the Holy Ghost in man were to be the same in all ages; or in other words, that the Spirit would produce the same effects. Fourth, that the baptism of the Holy Ghost does not dispense with the necessity of baptism by water. Fifth, that in the order of the gospel it was not intended to precede water baptism, but to follow it. Sixth, that the ordinance observed by the Apostles to invoke this baptism, was that of laying on of hands and prayer.

1st. Man is composed of a two-fold nature, physical and spiritual. "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." Job 32: 8. See also Luke 24: 35, 39; Acts 7: 59. The spirit is superior to the body as the man is superior to the house in which he dwells, for the body is the tabernacle of the spirit. 2 Cor. 5: 1, 4. No utterance could be more in harmony with facts than the above scripture. No better solution can be given to the problem "What is man?" than the above scriptures. They are in perfect agreement with all human experience. They fully account for the intelligence of humanity. No other scheme of philosophy can give so reasonable an account as is found therein. Man is indeed, endued with a wonderful degree of intelligence, above all other works of the Creator here below. The body partaking of the nature of the material creation forms a medium, by and through which the spirit is enabled to acquire a knowledge of all things terrestrial. It was absolutely necessary that man should be endued with power to comprehend to some extent, at least, the nature of the physical world, in order that his existence might be perpetuated, and that he might fill the measure of that existence. And when we read the divine decree that he should "subdue the earth and have dominion," it follows that he must have been made capable of obtaining knowledge by observation and experience, of all the physical world; and that such knowledge is the seal of his perfect manhood. This power is the natural endowment given to man, irrespective of virtue or its opposite; hence is not confined to the good alone, but but may be equally possessed by the vicious. This was, and is essential for the perpetuation of the race, and to justify God in holding him responsible. But the physical alone will not satisfy the wants and cravings of humanity; he can not be satisfied with a degree of knowledge that only circumscribes the narrow bounds of earth; he has a yearning for the infinite. Whence comes this? From a purely finite nature? Is it from the groveling clay? Is it a true principle of philosophy, that any thing can have aspirations higher and better than its own nature? I do not refer to our moral state; I mean the original and fundamental nature, the real essence of things. Does the lily aspire to the greatness of the oak? Do the lower animals strain themselves to become higher in the scale of being than they are? Everything in existence, but man, seems to be content to remain as it is, and seems to fill the measure of its existence, which seems to be to contribute to the pleasure and well being of man. But mankind in all lands, and in all ages, seems impressed with the fact of responsibility to some higher being, and acknowledge a governing power. They also have ideas of a future state. They are aware that this life is but a span, and they are anxious to understand the future. Man's reason tells him that the noble powers with which he is endowed were not to be chained down to the things of earth, that they must reach beyond the bounds of time in their duration, that there must be a higher scale of being than the one he now occupies; and something within him whispers of the necessity of a preparation for that holier sphere, but what that condition is, or how to prepare for it, unassisted reason can not tell. Man stands on the boundaries of the unseen, but his eye can not pierce the veil; he has no means of his own by which he can read its mysteries. He can not read his future destiny, nor can he solve the problem, who, and what, is the author of his being? "Such knowledge is too wonderful for him." And yet without it there is a void in his soul, he is unhappy, the subject of fears and doubts, and the plaything of every foul and delusive spirit. He is at sea without chart or compass. The most learned in physical sciences are no exceptions to this rule, which proves the truth of the scriptures, which implies that "man by searching can not find out God." Job 11:7. And again, "The things of God knoweth no man except he has the Spirit of God." 1 Cor. 2:11. Has the Almighty determined to leave mankind in ignorance of these things? No. He has made provision whereby all may become acquainted with him, and understand all things that pertain to the welfare of humanity, and how to prepare for the highest enjoyment in the great future that awaits us. And having made this provision he has made man responsible for his continued ignorance of these matters. And as a spur to our desires for this intelligence, He has declared, "This is eternal life to know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." John 17:3. And again, that "Christ will come, taking vengeance on them that know not God." 2 Thes. 1:8. The medium through which alone this knowledge can come, is the Holy Ghost. Jesus says, "No man knoweth the Son, but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father save the Son, and they to whom the Son will reveal himself; they shall see the Father also." Matt. 11:28. Paul declares, "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." 1 Cor. 12:3.

In order that man may have an opportunity to obtain this desired knowledge, Christ sent the Holy Ghost in fulfillment of the promise given, John 14:16, 26. It was to comfort the children of God by "teaching them all things." Verse 26. Bringing Christ's teachings to their remembrance, by testifying of Christ, (John 15:26); "guiding them into all truth," and "showing them things to come." (John 16:13). Thus we see the goodness and love of God for his creatures in opening up the way whereby they may know him, and have the future revealed to their minds, that every righteous desire may be answered, and man put in possession of the greatest gift of God, eternal life. Surely, all mankind will admit the necessity of these blessings. And will they not desire to know how to obtain such a divine teacher as the Holy Ghost, that they may be put in possession of them?

HOW SHALL WE OBTAIN THIS GUIDE?

God has not left us in ignorance upon this matter. He has instructed us by precept as well as by example. The gospel is the means of preparation for the reception of this guide, teacher and comforter. For as He is holy, we must be holy too; "He dwelleth not in unholy temples." Faith in God is the first preparatory step to this divine knowledge. Then repentance, or the forsaking of all that is unholy. Third, baptism in water for the remission of our sins; then follows the baptism of the Holy Ghost. The first example of this we find in the case of the repentant Adam, in Gen. 4:9, (Inspired Translation) Also Gen. 6:67, 69. Enoch was a subject of like baptism. Gen. 6:26. Noah taught, and of course enjoyed the like outpouring of the Spirit. Gen. 8:11. But the Son of God gives the eternal seal to the necessity of this ordinance in the commencement of his ministry, and by his example makes it plain to all. Matt. 3:40, 46. (A. V. Matt. 3:16). "And Jesus when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water; and John saw, and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon Jesus. And lo, he heard a voice from heaven, saying, "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear ye him." And in his teachings to Nicodemus, while explaining the nature of the new birth he declared, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water, and the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." John 3:5. This is conclusive evidence of the necessity of the baptism of the Holy Ghost. If it was necessary for the Great Teacher, the Son of God, certainly it is necessary for all his followers; and especially since he has declared that none can enter into the kingdom of God without it.

IT IS PROMISED.

The baptism of the Holy Ghost was promised to all true believers. I quote first the language of the Lord to Adam; (Inspired Translation), "Therefore I give unto you a commandment, to teach these things freely unto your children, saying that by reason of transgression cometh the fall, which fall bringeth death; and inasmuch as ye were born into the world by water, blood, and the spirit, which I have made, and so became of dust a living soul, even so ye must be born again into the kingdom of heaven, of water and of the Spirit, and be cleansed by blood, even the blood of mine Only Begotten; that ye might be sanctified from all sin, and enjoy the words of eternal life in this world, and eternal life in the world to come, even immortal glory." Gen. 6:61, 62, 63.

From the foregoing we learn that Adam's children were to be born of water and of the Spirit. And John the Baptist declares that Christ should baptize with fire, and with the Holy Ghost." Mark 1:6. On the day of Pentecost we find this promise fulfilled to the believers of that time. And an assurance given by Peter as follows: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is to you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even so many as the Lord our God shall call." This includes all the children of Adam if they will believe and obey the gospel. It would be impossible to make the promise broader than God has made it. It applies to all mankind in all ages, who comply with the conditions laid down. In fulfillment of this promise, the believing Samaritan received it. (Acts 8). And Peter declares God had given the Holy Ghost to them that obey Him. Acts 5:32. Paul received it. Acts 9:17, 18. Cornelius and his household received this gift of the Holy Ghost, Peter declaring, "The Holy Ghost fell on them as on us at the beginning." See Acts 10th and 11th chapters. It was poured out upon the Ephesians. Acts 19:6. Paul in writing to the Corinthians, says, "By one spirit are we all baptized into one body." 1 Cor. 12:13. To the Thessalonians he says, "God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness; he therefore that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us his Holy Spirit." 1 Thes. 4:7, 8. The Romans had received the Spirit as the seal of their adoption. Rom. 8. And Paul tells them, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his. Verses 9, 17. The Ephesians were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise. Eph. 1:13. And to cap the climax, God has pledged himself, through Joel and Peter, that "In the last days He will pour out his spirit upon all flesh." Joel 2:28; Acts 2:17. Here then we have incontrovertible evidence, that the baptism of the Holy Ghost was intended for every true believer in all ages of the world; thus establishing the fact that God is no respecter of persons, but is willing to bestow his highest favors upon all, that all may become heirs of eternal life. If we have not received this baptism it is evident that we have not obeyed the gospel, and are aliens, and not sons and daughters. Hence the necessity of speedy and full obedience thereunto, that we may be "Heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ."

ITS OPERATIONS.

Third. The operations of the Holy Spirit in man are the same in all ages, whenever enjoyed. We glean from the history of God's dealings with man, that the Holy Spirit was the medium of communication between God and man. All the prophets from Adam down, were inspired by it. Its means of communication were various: visions, dreams, prophecies by inspired utterances, where no previous vision or dream was had; suggestions of wisdom and knowledge in such forcible manner as led the recipient to realize the divine origin, sometimes by audible voice; languages of heaven or earth, as the gift of tongues, interpretation, power of discernment of spirits and influences, and the power to preach the gospel, or to record the truth for the benefit of the world; these were among its modes of communication in the ages past. It gave power over unclean spirits, gifts of healing of the sick, working of miracles when necessary in the economy of God, making the deaf to hear, the dumb to speak, and the lame to walk. It bore witness of Jesus; it took the things of God and revealed them to man; it was the seal of adoption to the child of God; it was the earnest of their inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession. It enabled them to cry, "Abba, Father." Thus it gave the comforting assurance that they were the children of God, inspiring them with the glorious hope of eternal life and immortal glory. Man stood in need of just such a comforter; these operations were essential to lead him in the way of life, and enable him to cope with all the powers of darkness, and to bear up under all the trials and difficulties through which he must pass. They were essential to enable him to know God, and come off triumphant through Him who has loved him. Man, to-day, is essentially the same being he was thousands of years ago, the creature of the same dread circumstance; alien from God, yet responsible to him, and dependent upon him for all that he has, or may enjoy. Surrounded by the same evils, struggling with like difficulties, filled with the same weaknesses, opposed by the same evil powers, possessing the same wants, has the same future of shame to avoid, the same blissful state to obtain. And like the ancients he needs the same blissful hope, unflinching faith and unflinching integrity, that he too may overcome, and enter the rest prepared for all the children of God. If man unaided by the divine influence, in the past, could not successfully cope with the evils in and outside of himself, he can not now; hence he needs the Holy Spirit with its varied operations in him, and without these the redeeming work of Christ is vain. Man must be purified, perfected and prepared for the salvation and glory provided, or he can not enter its enjoyment. It would be unjust in God to hold one age of mankind equally responsible with more highly favored ones. It would be unjust to deny one generation the privilege of eternal life, without giving it all the aids and means of obtaining it, while to other generations he has held out every inducement, giving every encouragement and help essential that they might overcome.

He has declared himself a just God, with whom there is no partiality; no respect of persons; equal in all his ways, and unchangeable; hence we may reasonably expect like favors, if, like the ancients referred to, we humbly seek to our God. To this the word of God bears witness. First, the gospel is sent to every creature; none are exempt from its saving truths and redeeming power who will believe and obey. See the great Commission, in Matt. 28, and Mark 16. The present fruits and final results of that gospel must be the same in all ages; hence we are warranted in expecting them. And Jesus has assured us that these blessings shall follow all true believers. Compare Mark 16:16, 19, with 1 Cor. 12:13, and 14th chap. Also with Eph. 4:1, 16. If these were God's means then for the work of the ministry, perfecting the Saints and edifying the Church, "Till all came to the unity of the faith and the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." Can we find a better means of perfection? If they were essential in that day, why not now? Can man by his own research find out God to-day, any more than the ancients? Verily no! Christ would not have promised these blessings to all believers if he had not intended they should receive them. This promise, the wants and necessities of humanity, the truth and immutability of God, warrant us in the conclusion that the same blessings, gifts and operations of the Holy Spirit are to be enjoyed in all ages by the true believer in Christ Jesus. They are given to perfect the child of God, to make us perfect men and women, and bring us to the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. Until this is accomplished, that Holy Spirit and its operations must be given.

WATER BAPTISM NOT DISPENSED WITH.

Fourth. The baptism of the Holy Ghost does not dispense with water baptism. Jesus said: "I have not spoken of myself, but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment what I should say." John 12:49. This settles the authority of Christ's words. Respecting the new birth, He said to Nicodemus: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water, and the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." Here God has joined these two together, the water and the Spirit. Will the unchangeable God alter his own command? Shall mortal man presume to change it. It is written, "What God hath joined together let not man put assunder." From this text it is evident that obedience to the one does not excuse us from obedience to the other. Let us search the scriptural examples. John baptized for the remission of sin in the river Jordan, but he was careful to tell his followers that there was one coming after him who would baptize them with fire and the Holy Ghost. Why did he not tell them to wait, until Christ should come and baptize them with fire and the Holy Ghost, and that would dispense with the baptism of water? They would not have had long to wait, He was there among them. John understood the divine ordinances too well to make such a blunder. Why was not Christ content to wait until the heavenly baptism came? If it dispensed with water baptism, surely He would have known it. But it appears this had to be obeyed in order to bring him the divine approval, and recognition as the beloved Son. The Disciples were all baptized with water before they received the baptism of the Spirit, and in that memorable hour, while wrapped in the divine influence, the inspired Peter says, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." No separation of the divine ordinances. The Samaritans received both. Paul, also. And he declares, "He saved us by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." Titus 3:5. But if there could be any good reason found for dispensing with water baptism it would be in the case of Cornelius. He and his household had already received the baptism of the Holy Ghost; yet Peter commanded them to be baptized in water in the name of the Lord Jesus. What! Use that sacred name in a non-essential ordinance? That must not be! Nor must that ordinance be cast aside. It is of God's appointing! For this purpose Peter had been sent to Cornelius, to tell him what he ought to do. See Acts 10th and 11th chapter. And now after the seal of heaven has been given to the acceptance of the Gentiles, the inspired man of God commands him and his to be baptized, and they obeyed. Thus we see that God changes not, and his word remains eternally the same. The gospel is everlasting; its laws and ordinances change not, nor does one supply the place of another. All are essential in their order. If any exceptions are to be made, that must be the work of the Lawgiver, not of puny man. The commands of God to-day are the same as they were eighteen hundred years ago, and to-day if we are saved it must be "by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost; for it is written, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water, and the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."

WATER BAPTISM FIRST.

Fifth. In the gospel order the baptism of the Holy Ghost does not precede water baptism. There are not more than two instances in which it did precede it, and one of these was that of Cornelius; and this was for a witness that the Gentiles were to be made partakers of the heavenly gift. It had that effect, and now it is known that the middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile is broken down, and all are alike admitted as Abraham's seed, and heirs to the promise through obedience. Thereby giving another proof that "God is no respecter of persons, but every man in every nation that feareth God, and worketh righteousness, is accepted of Him." Let each and all obey the gospel in the order He has commanded, and we shall be made heirs of eternal life.

LAYING ON OF HANDS.

Sixth. The ordinance observed by the Apostles to invoke the baptism of the Holy Ghost was, The laying on of hands. It is not likely that the inspired Apostles would introduce any forms or ceremonies of their own into the gospel order. Jesus had strictly abided by the order established by the Father. And he had as strictly commanded his disciples what to teach and practice: and had also enjoined upon them to teach the nations to observe all things whatsoever he had commanded them. Matt. 28:19. Hence we may with confidence look to the teachings of the Apostles and the ordinances they administered, as reflecting the teachings of Christ to them. In Heb. 6:1, 2, we find the principles of the gospel enumerated, and it would be folly to take one or two of those principles, and utterly ignore the rest, and at the same time expect a perfect salvation, when in fact we had not obeyed the gospel in its fulness. If those are indeed the principles of the gospel, and that gospel is the only means of salvation, it follows that it must be obeyed in its fulness if we are to receive its blessings. If faith, repentance and baptism are parts of that great plan, then also is the laying on of hands; for it is incorporated with them as "principles of the doctrine of Christ;" hence it can no more be dispensed with than the three preceding ones. The gospel being the "perfect law of liberty," must be obeyed in its entirety. We are commanded to "observe all things which Christ commanded his disciples.

In the case of the Twelve there were none who could legitimately administer in this ordinance, until they had received it for themselves, except Jesus. Luke tells us that just before His ascension He lifted up His hands and blessed them." Luke 24:49. It appears also from the same authority, in Acts 1:8, that Christ then told them they should receive the Holy Ghost, which promise was fulfilled in a remarkable manner on the day of Pentecost. Acts 2. There was this distinction between Jesus and the Apostles. It was his prerogative to baptize with the Holy Ghost. It was their duty to pray in His name that this baptism might be given. This they did, observing the ordinance of "laying on of hands." Luke says, "Now, when the Apostles which were at Jerusalem, heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John, who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost. * * * Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." Acts 8:14, 17. See also Acts 19:1-7, (the case of the believers at Ephesus): "And when Paul had laid his hands on them, the Holy Ghost came on them." Annanias was sent to administer to Saul, that he might receive his sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost. He also observed the order of laying on of hands. It is written, "In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established." The laying on of hands for the baptism of the Holy Ghost is, then, one of the principles of the doctrine of Christ; and as such was practised by his Apostles and servants; and if that doctrine changes not, it must be the same to-day and forever.

In conclusion, let me urge upon all who profess to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, the necessity of consistency in their profession. If you accept a part of his word, do not throw discredit upon him by rejecting another portion; for it is written, "Man shall live by every word of God." The Holy Ghost will not dwell in your bosoms while you reject any part of Christ's word's; for he is sent to testify of Christ, and to bring all things to remembrance whatsoever Christ has said. He is sent as a witness of our adoption; but no man can be a child of God who has not obeyed the law of adoption; neither will the spirit of truth bear witness to a falsehood. "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of God." Then, in the language of the heavenly message restored to man in these last days we say, "Believe in God, and in his Son Jesus Christ; repent of your sins, be baptized for the remission thereof, and receive the baptism of the Holy Ghost through the prayer of faith and the laying on of hands. And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, for the promise is to you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

CHARLES DERRY.

PRAY AND GIVE.—It requires considerable religion to pray, but still more to give. The prayer meeting is called the pulse of the church; the treasury is the test of its loyalty. We are commanded to honor, that is to worship God with our substance, to bring tithes into his house, to give liberally; to lay aside of our money on the first day of the week, as God has blessed us, and devote it to the service of the gospel. This is the most trying part of religion. Many are delighted with the whole of religion except its cost.

Rev. T. W. Smith Lays Down the Lines Separating the True and the False Mormons.

SATAN IN BRIGHAM YOUNG THE ONLY AUTHORITY FOR THE POLYGAMOUS REVELATION.

[From Louisville Courier-Journal].

CHICAGO, Nov. 26th.—Some time since, your correspondent gave a detailed account of the establishment of a very flourishing branch of the true Mormon Church in this city, as well as many interesting features of the work of this sect in the North and West. The system under which the clergymen labor provides for a sort of alternating or colporteur work, which brings each year, to each charge, several new clergymen. Happening to make the acquaintance of the latest acquisition here, the Rev. T. W. Smith, I secured from him some additional facts, which are of special interest in connection with the discussions now going on in the public prints regarding that foul blot upon American civilization, Utah Mormonism. The following is the substance of the interview:

"I believe, Mr. Smith, that your church is called the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints?"

"Yes; or rather the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints."

"Are you, as is generally believed, an offshoot of the Mormon Church, or the Salt Lake Mormons?"

"By no means. The men who began the reorganization, in 1852, were never identified with the church which was then under Brigham Young. Indeed we do not accept the name 'Mormon' at all. The church, even in the days of Joseph Smith, did not acknowledge that name. We claim to be a continuation of the original church."

"What was the origin of the name 'Mormon,' and how came these people to be called by that name?"

"These adherents claim to believe in the inspired character of a book called 'The Book of Mormon,' which was called so because it was compiled by an individual named Mormon, he having made a compilation and an abridgement of the alleged history of his ancestors, who, the book claims, originally came to this land from Jerusalem some 600 years B. C."

"Then the Salt Lake Mormon profess to believe in this book as an inspired work of equal authority with the Bible."

"Why, yes, they profess to accept it as such; but they do not, by any means."

"How do you explain that?"

"It is impossible for them to really believe that book as containing the law of God to them, and practice polygamy; for The Book of Mormon condemns polygamy in the severest terms, and let me explain that it is made up of various books or writings by different men, supposed to have been written at different times, similarly to the Bible. One writer, named 'Jacob,' claims to speak in the name of the Lord as the Bible prophets did; and, addressing his brethren, who had begun to practice polygamy, he said: 'For, behold, thus saith the Lord: This people begin to wax in iniquity: they understand not the scriptures; for they seek to excuse themselves in continuing whoredoms, because of the things written concerning David and Solomon, his son. Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable in my sight saith the Lord."

"But the Utah Mormons cite David and Solomon as illustrious examples of good men, prophets and inspired teachers, practicing polygamy, do they not?"

"Yes, they do; and, like these brethren of 'Jacob,' they do not understand the scriptures in seeking to justify themselves in practicing what they call the 'plurality of wives' system, which the Lord said was 'abominable' in His sight. The same writer, 'Jacob,' also says it was a 'grosser crime' than the many other gross sins referred to. But this is not all that is said on the subject."

"The language you quote is certainly pretty strong. What else is said in relation to the matter?"

POLYGAMY EXPRESSLY FORBIDDEN.

In answer to this, Mr. Smith then read the following from the "Book of Mormon."

"Wherefore, I the Lord God will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the Word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none.' This is doubly clinched by the following: 'The Lord God delighteth in the chastity of woman.'"

"Then, according to their own Bible, the plural wives of all Utah Mormons are living in adultery?"

"Exactly."

POLYGAMY IS BUT ANOTHER NAME FOR ADULTERY.

It is adultery both in name and in fact."

"And their children?"

"Are simply bastards. It is impossible that they can be considered in any other light, either morally, religiously or civilly."

"But is it not really a 'religious institution' as it now exists?"

"Unfortunately, to a great extent, yes. The fatal delay on the part of our Government, the moral cowardice of the great political parties and the amazing turpitude of all religious denominations concerning this great national crime have permitted the delusion of so great a number by wicked and designing men that the pitiable condition now existing in Utah among those honestly practicing polygamy gives the whole matter the importance of at least a quasi-religious status."

HYPOCRISY OF MORMON LEADERS.

Don't you think that Taylor, Cannon and other Utah church leaders really believe they are following the command of God, through Joseph Smith, in this matter?"

"As to Mr. Cannon and others who have united with that church since polygamy was announced as a church tenet in 1852, I can not judge; but I can not think that John Taylor really believes any such idea, or any other of the old 'Elders' or 'Apostles' who were in the church at the time Joseph Smith was killed."

"Why do you doubt this?"

"Well, in the first place, they offer no other evidence than Brigham Young's word that such an alleged covenant or revelation from God was ever given through Joseph Smith. This brilliant, able, but thoroughly bad man, Brigham Young, simply claimed that such was the case, and that this revelation was placed in his charge at Nauvoo, July 12, 1843, and kept safely locked in his desk until 1852 a period of nine years! Neither Taylor, Pratt, Kimble, Richards, nor any of the old and trusted associates of Young ever claimed that they saw, or even heard of, such an important revelation until after Young brought it to the surface at the date mentioned."

"Did Brigham Young claim that this revelation was in Joseph Smith's handwriting? and couldn't that handwriting be identified?"

"The flimsiness of the whole claim lies right there. Young merely produced a copy. No such original revelation ever existed."

"What became of the original?"

"Why, Brigham Young alleged that Joseph Smith's wife, Emma, surreptitiously got possession of that and burned it. He was ready, however, with the solemn assertion that a copy of the alleged original had been made before this light-fingered business occurred."

REVELATIONS COMMANDING POLYGAMY ABSOLUTELY DISPROVED.

"Then the whole theory of polygamy is simply based on Brigham Young's assertion that he possessed a copy of an alleged original revelation from the Lord through Joseph Smith?"

"Exactly."

"Was there no way to prove or disprove this?"

"Yes; the whole thing was absolutely disproved. Joseph Smith's wife, Emma, when interrogated concerning the matter, always most emphatically declared that she never saw, handled or heard of such a writing until after its publication, in 1852, by Orson Pratt, in a paper called 'The Seer.' All who knew her testified that she was a woman of fine mind, of strict veracity and of absolute purity of purpose and character."

"Have you any other reasons why these ancient and erratic elders of the church are not honest in this matter?"

"Yes, several. John Taylor has, on different occasions, since the date of the so called revelation (43), denied any knowledge of the existence of either a religious belief in, or practice of, polygamy in the Mormon Church. April 1st, 1844, in a periodical called the Times and Seasons, published in Nauvoo, of which Taylor was editor and proprietor, he printed, as an editorial, an 'Address to the Elders Abroad,' in answer to inquiries concerning this very matter of polygamy, which was reported in distant fields as being practiced at headquarters. He said: 'if any man writes to you, or preaches to you, doctrines contrary to the Bible, the Book of Mormon or the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, set him down as an impostor. You need not write to us to know what to do with such men. You have the authority with you—try them by the principles contained in the acknowledged Word of God. If they preach, or teach, or practice, contrary to that, disfellowship them; cut them off from among you, as useless and dangerous branches.'"

"What was meant by the 'acknowledged Word of God?'"

"The books referred to, which had been acknowledged by unanimous vote of General Conferences of the Church, and which the ministry were commanded by revelation to teach."

"What is the 'Book of Doctrines and Covenants' referred to?"

"A book containing various revelations, laws and commandments and rules and regulations for the government of the Church as a body and its individual members; and also containing church articles, not revelations, but simply agreements or expressions of ideas and principles adopted by these General Conferences."

THE BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ON THE MARRIAGE QUESTION.

"Does that contain anything concerning this marriage question?"

"Most decidedly. And there was never anything clearer written, ordered or ordained, absolutely prohibiting polygamy—previous to the alleged revelation which Brigham Young palmed off upon the Mormon Church. Here are a few things upon the subject: 'Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her shall deny the faith and shall not have the spirit.' Again, in the revelation given March, 1831: 'And again I say you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God; for marriage is ordained of God unto man. Wherefore it is lawful he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh; and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation.'

"You see that a man can not love his wife 'with all his heart' and practice polygamy. Logically, it is impossible for even Utah Mormons to have a plurality of wives without becoming apostates. That is precisely the position of these Utah leaders to-day, and it is a strange thing that the press of the country does not insist on the immediate suppression of this cursed thing, when there is neither civil nor religious command behind the iniquity to sustain it. In my estimation, if nothing else could prove the inspiration of Joseph Smith, the new fallen condition of these once strong spiritual men would sustain it. They have absolutely lost the Spirit of God in the revelation of his law. The largely developed Satan in Brigham Young was the only source of this alleged revelation."

"Can you give me some idea of the marriage formula of your church?"

"Yes; it is simply one of the church articles. It is not a command, but simply an expression of the church views. It reads thus:

"Marriage should be celebrated with prayer and thanksgiving, and at the solemnization, the persons to be married standing together, the man on the right and the woman on the left, shall be addressed by the person officiating as he shall be directed by the Holy Spirit, and if there be no legal objections, he shall say, calling each by their names: You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other, and from all others, during your lives. When they have so affirmed, he shall pronounce them husband and wife in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by the virtue of the laws of the country, and the authority invested in him.' You see the covenant made with us is that the man and wife keep themselves 'wholly for each other and from all others during their lives. They are to be married 'by virtue of the laws of the country.' "Every polygamous marriage is an illegal marriage; is an absolute crime, and is an insult of such character to the Government which permits it, that it renders the latter thoroughly contemptible. Again, another of the church articles is: 'Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication and polygamy, we declare that we believe that one man should have but one wife and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again.'"

"I notice these quotations are from an edition of the works published by the Reorganized Church. Are they found in the Utah edition, or do they issue none?"

"Yes; they have issued several editions since they have divulged their alleged 'revelation' authorizing polygamy. But, mind you, the same quotations which I have read are found in them."

"How do they harmonize these with their polygamous doctrines and practices?"

"As you and I can harmonize virtue and vice, truth and error, light and darkness. In other words, it is impossible. If the alleged 'revelation' authorizing polygamy is of God, these direct commands which I have read from the Doctrine and Covenants and the Book of Mormon are not from God."

"Perhaps God changed his mind?"

"That may be a matter for individual speculation; but such a position would not hold according to their own theories. One of the most persistently urged arguments of the Utah missionaries in preaching the gospel (for they preach a good deal of gospel truth, as no one can deny who hears them) is the unchangeable character of God. On this powerful statement they build the claim that the doctrines, ordinances, gifts, etc. belonging to the church eighteen centuries ago should stand to-day because God does not vary; or, as the Apostle James has it: 'In whom there is no variable-ness, neither shadow of turning.' Therefore, we Latter Day Saints, whatever the general public may believe, are glad to accept this thought because it assures us that after God had condemned polygamy as a crime and an abomination, he could not have subsequently authorized it as a religious duty. To practice polygamy really requires a repudiation of the Scriptures by those who practice it."

CANNON AND TAYLOR

"But I see that Mr. Cannon has publicly stated that the polygamists of Utah accept both the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants."

"Yes, and thousands of people pretend to believe the Bible, but practice squarely against its teachings. No people can believe in the Book of Mormon and be polygamists."

"What about the claim of John Taylor, chief of the Utah church, that he justifies himself and his followers in the practice of polygamy, in the violation of the laws of the country, because it was commanded of God?"

"He can have no such justification, what ever he claims. And right here the real ignorance of the general public on all this question is what, in my mind, accounts for the distressing public turpitude in this entire polygamy question. He can have no such aid. It is clear violation of the law of God given to the church, which reads thus: 'Let no man break the laws of the land; for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; therefore, be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under His feet.' This was given to the church as the word of the Lord in August, 1831. Their own acknowledged books convict them of crime. They are confessed criminals, not only under what they admit to be the laws from God, but under all social and civil laws as well."

REGARDING THE FIRST MORMON MARRIAGE."

"In conclusion, your correspondent called the Rev. Smith's attention to an article recently published in the San Francisco Chronicle, and which has had a very wide circulation, in which it is charged that Joseph Smith himself "sealed" the first Mormon, or polygamist marriage, at Nauvoo, the bride groom being one James Noble, and that when this occurred the latter also married Smith to a second wife, and asked him regarding the truth of these and other unpleasant statements contained in the article referred to. He said:

"As to the 'sealing' of James Noble to a second wife, I don't believe it can be proved. If Joseph Smith ever had two wives, but one, Emma, was ever known. She has stated on innumerable occasions that such charge was absolutely untrue. It is well, however, for the general understanding of this subject, that the marriage question, as developed by the Utah church, exhibited itself in two stages; a 'spiritual wife idea,' in which a woman was 'sealed' to a man to be his wife in 'eternity,' but not to hold that relationship here. This doctrine was taught by some just before Smith's death, as I have been informed. Out of this undoubtedly originally grew the polygamy idea, which was seized upon and subsequently developed by Brigham Young. However this may be, there is one thing supremely true: In none of the books, or writings, accepted by the church in Smith's day, nor in any of his writings or public teachings, was there the least foundation for either spiritual wifery or its polygamous outgrowth. It is no part of genuine Mormon religion. The doctrine of the church was then, and is now, that taught by our Savior. The first was a fallacy, the last, polygamy, a crime. As to the statement that Mrs. Joseph Smith married a 'Gentile' after her first husband's death, that is true. She undoubtedly had for him a proper regard, but this cuts no figure in the matter whatever. Mrs. Smith died two years ago in Nauvoo. The remarks of the writer in the Chronicle article, that the Utah faith now is that polygamous Mormons become angels, and opposing Mormon wives either suffer in hell or become subordinate angels, are undoubtedly true. It is not true, however, that such is the substance of the Mormon religion, if by that phrase the faith and order taught by Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon and others, since April 6th, 1830, is meant. Mormonism, if any thing, is the faith and practice taught in the Book of Mormon—no matter who wrote that book—whether it be a plagiarism on Solomon Spaulding's romance, or was a written inspiration from heaven. The doctrine of that book is as pure, as evangelical, and as severe on sin and folly as is the New Testament. Whether the book be human or divine, necessary or not, it teaches the same gospel, enjoins the same life and character, and denounces sin equally with the New Testament; and is simply another witness for the Christian religion, which, with common law and common decency, was never so villainously outraged as it is done in Utah under the protection, and, it would almost seem, the paternal solicitude and regard, of the United States Government."

In Evidence.

IN reading the letter of Wingfield Watson, in the Herald for September 15th, I could not but note the words, "Whether we should receive Young Joseph Smith, son of the martyr Joseph, as president of the Church." Who are the handful of Strangites that they should say, "Shall we receive him." It would have sounded better if they had said, Will the Reorganized Church receive us? Yes. By doing as I have done, repent and be baptized and forsake such abominations as Strang and many of his adherents went into. By the expressions I heard at a conference of the Strangite faction, at Voree, I thought Strang was possessed of a good spirit. In speaking in regard to the Utah apostasy he said that if a man wanted more than one curse, let him get more than one wife, and he would be sure of it. Then sister Jason W. Briggs came out with an exposure of his acts, stating that the Charley Douglass, who was then in the eastern States with Strang as his scribe, was a young female dressed in men's clothes; which statement I could hardly credit, from what I had heard him (Mr. Strang) say the year before. But such proved to be the case. He wanted another curse, and so he took another wife. I do not intimate that his first wife Mary was a curse; for I always thought her a true sample of a good and loving wife to Strang. My disbelief in Strang being so bad as represented was so strong that I went to conference on Beaver Island, commencing July 4th, 1850; and on the night of July 3d, while watching the Tabernacle with Strang and several others, he told all the history of his taking Alvira, and how that he stopped at his father's, or his wife's father's, in Ohio, and stayed a week in company with wife No. 1, and no one mistrusted that Charley was a young lady.

Also the same abomination was practiced by others on the Island. Several of my acquaintances entered into the same abomination, whose names I will not here mention, hoping that they are all ashamed and ready to repent of their abominable practices. Bro. Hickey with all the rest who was on the Island at that conference of 1850, and saw G. J. Adams place the scepter in the hand of Strang, and put a crown on his head, and crowned him king of the whole earth, can not deny this statement. I then and there told my brother, H. P. Brown, that was the most disgusting sight that I ever saw; and that either G. J. Adams had a devil or I had. I left the Island in disgust, with many regrets to leave some of my near and dear friends there to be led to destruction.

And now, my dear Strangite friends, do as I have done, repent and ask some authorized servant of the true Church of Christ to baptize you, before it is too everlastingly late, is the prayer of your friend in Christ,

E. C. BROWN.

A Dream.

Dear Herald:—I have just read the article in your pleasant, free columns, entitled "The mother of harlots," denying that the church of Rome filled the bill; and as the writer professed to have received said understanding by the Spirit; and as many of the Elders have professed to have the Spirit of God when teaching such doctrine; and in fact, the first preaching I ever heard by a Latter Day Saint Elder, this was the burden of his theme, that the Church, the organized body of Christ, became corrupt, and although still a woman, after she went into the wilderness, yet she was no longer the pure virgin, preparing for the Bridegroom, but the reverse, very foul. I will not mention how foul, lest in so doing I might offend the delicate ear; and as you have instructed us often to try the spirits, that none may be deceived by false spirits, I desire your permission to present for your consideration a vision on the subject.

In the month of February, 1872, in Fort Madison, Iowa, while meditating on the doctrine of the signs following the believer, and admitting that there were many who professed to believe in Christ, who were not of us, who apparently were as righteous as the Saints; and recognizing that every sect from Rome down called themselves the Church, the Body of Christ, the Bride; and looking at the Utah Saints, also calling themselves the Bride, and denying the right of any, only as they received through them the authority to minister in the things of the kingdom. While contemplating them all, Romanists, Protestants, Mormons, (that is, Brighamites and Josephites), a vision opened to my gaze.

A large stage, as if I was in a theater, opened before me. As the curtain rolled up, opposite my right hand stood a woman; in the center of the stage grew a strong, vigorous, healthy, pruned vine. Toward the west, near the back a pile of rocks. Just behind this pile of rocks in a bundle, were the branches, brown in color and withered, which had lately been pruned from the vine. I looked first at the woman, and asked if she represented the Bride, the Lamb's wife? My answer was, "She was the mother of harlots," representing the church of Rome. I looked closely at her. She was dressed in a brown garb, worn and much faded; she was blind in both eyes, which were open; but a white film was on the sight; her teeth had fallen out, and her chin and nose approached close together on account of the loss of her teeth. If any of your readers remember what the old country people used to term an "old hag." She was a complete representative of the specie. I said to myself, "Surely you are not an acceptable bride by any means, but the opposite. I again looked into her face, and behold, she was not only blind, but had some white cloth about the size of a quarter dollar cut octagonally placed over the eye, so that if there was a dim sight left in the eye it would be stoppered. These patches were four thicknesses or four ply thick on each eye. This was the picture she presented the church of Rome to be; and as this was the mother, her children, (daughters), must be like her, of the same stock. I looked from her to the vine in front of the stage; there it was in the freshness of Spring. A voice said, "This is the Church of Jesus Christ, the body."

And this scripture thought was repeated, only not as in the Bible: "I am the vine, ye are the branches; if any man abide in me, the same spirit that I possess he will possess also. As the branch receives the same sap that the vine possesses. If the branch is in the vine it will receive the pure sap from the vine, and will produce foliage and fruit. Likewise ye, if ye abide in me, the same gifts that I possess, the same fruit that I produce, will the branches produce; and this will continue as long as the branches abide in the vine. If any abide (or ye abide) not in me, he is cut off as a branch and is withered, and men gather them into bundles ready to be burned."

While I was receiving this instruction I was upon the stage and walked to the west; there I saw behind the pile of rocks a large pile of branches. Asking what these represented, I was informed that the Utah Saints did not abide in the vine although they were once thrifty branches and bore much fruit, yet they were cut off; men had gathered them behind the pile of rocks and they were withered.

I could then understand why it was these signs shall follow if ye abide in the vine.

Very respectfully yours, dear Herald,

J. A. ROBINSON.

The Island of Anticosti.

LETTERS just received from Anticosti gave a gloomy account of the condition of the inhabitants on the island. One correspondent says the excess of poverty prevailing is caused by the failure of the fisheries, which this season turned out a total failure. All the people who can get away are leaving. There is very little provisions on the island and people have no money to buy with. Some families of nine or ten have only two barrels of flour to feed them during the long winter months. The Government depot was recently broken into by the starving populace. The people are honest, but they had to steal to live. Whole families lived on clams for weeks. Diphtheria is also unusually prevalent on the island. Another correspondent says the cause of the distress is the failure of the fisheries and the partial failure of the potato crop. The principal food of the people has been potatoes for months, and that of the poorest watery kind as the island generally produces, and in consequence there has been a great deal of sickness—diphtheria and low fever are prevalent, consequently many deaths. The people have been recently assisted by the Government, and many lives saved from starvation. A number of families have left to join their friends in Wisconsin, and the rest of the people at the southwest point are preparing to leave for there and other parts of the Western States as soon as they can get means to go.

The True Companionship of Marriage.

WHEN man came up from the solitudes of matter, and was animated with a spiritual existence, his Maker saw and declared it was "not good for him to be alone." In his bosom's depths were crystal tides of great affections, which were the fountains of a vast race of immortal beings and powers, and the opening sources of innumerable joys and virtues. Upon these reposing affections a quickening influence was breathed by the Maker divine; but breathed through the medium or instrumentality of woman, a being kindred with man in every spiritual power and grace; a being diviner than he in tenderness, but needing the shelter of his guardian arm; holier than he in worship, but delighted with his power over surrounding existences to make them subservient to their mutual good; intenser than he in love and in every refined sentiment, but comparatively powerless without the stimulus of his strong confidence and the light of his commanding brow. With her to quicken him he is reverent and tender, strong in virtue, and sublime in sentiment. With him to inspire her, she is mighty in reserved power and all unconquerable in the majesty and might of her affections.

Regarded separately, they are but unfinished halves of the sentient creation; viewed together, they are the completed glory of moral intelligence. Moving separately, they are weak, fearful, uninspired, fickle, and unreliable. Acting together, they are strong, brave, inspired with a reliability, readiness, and force of activity, apparently superhuman in their results. Separate, they waste their powers in the cheerless solitudes of retired thought. Together, they animate the earth with their stirring presence, and people it with the human world of glad life and glorious power. No, it was not good for man to be alone, and so his Maker gave him a companion. A companion is a kindred being, a congenial spirit, who can respond to every spiritual call, and supply every inherent need. Man's companion is a being who inwardly knows his wants before they are expressed, anticipates his joys and sorrows, and with reciprocal sympathy goes to dwell in and satisfy his interior being, as sunshine flows into the opening flower to gild it with beauty and enrich it with fragrance. There is something divinely beautiful in true companionship. To see two beings of kindred mold walking hand in hand and heart in heart; kindling in each other's bosoms the glowing fires of affection, sentiments, worship, and thought; studying together the beautiful earth and glowing heavens, and rising and rejoicing in mutual admiration at what they see and learn; experiencing together the joys and sorrows, trials and discipline of life, with a mutual trust and gladdening and sustaining confidence; reposing together in the Eden of reciprocal love, with hearts melted in one, and feelings quick answering to feelings in holy and joyous response, and kneeling together in confiding and childlike devotion in worship of the Father Almighty, swelling with warm and mutual love and adoration of the Great Spirit-Fountain of all they see, feel, and enjoy, is indeed a sight to behold with eyes tearful in joy and gratitude. Such is true companionship. It is a blending of two kindred souls, like the mingling of two mountain streams, to part no more forever, but to flow on through all scenes and seasons with one movement, one purpose, and one experience. What before was two, now becomes one. What before was divided, is now united.

What before were hemispheres circling in separate and jarring scenes, now are a golden globe with a new and congenial circuit around the sun of mutual love. The grand idea of companionship is unity. And companionship is perfect just in the degree that unity is secured. This unity may extend to every faculty of the soul, to every sentiment of the mind, every desire of the heart, and every experience of life. When it does, it is a full and complete unity, and constitutes a perfect companionship. A companionship wisely entered into, and appreciatively lived, is productive of a profound and peaceful joy, sweeter, holier, and more blessed than words can tell. It charms the whole soul with the meed of full satisfaction, and pours through all the interior avenues the aroma of refreshing sweetness. And while it charms and satisfies, it inspires to action, and awakens a chaste and pure ambition for every good. Such a companionship is not a fiction of heated fancy, or an unreal vision existing only in the Elysian chambers of the imagination. It is a solid and beautiful reality which accords with the best experience of nearly all companions.

Selected.

"Blessed Are the Dead That Die in the Lord."

SAID the martyred Joseph, as he was about to go to the place of his assassination, "Who that knows anything of eternity, is afraid to die?" Jesus, the king of Saints, made but a short, though a glorious work on the earth; but he was not idle nor indifferent to the welfare of our race after his death. The apostle Peter tells us that he pushed his benevolent enterprise of salvation immediately after his death, among the abodes of departed spirits. Others, who hold under him the keys of the same priesthood, are suffered to be removed as he was, to the same field of labor; "I go to prepare a place for you." Departed Saints are no doubt co-workers with him in preparing places for those that follow. Many of the Latter Day Saints have changed their sphere of labor. How many have and would abide with the Church in poverty, yea, even in the wilderness, rather than go back to the other denominations and have all they possessed.

WILLIAM STREET.

Wealth and want equally harden the human heart, as frost and fire are both alien to the human flesh. Famine and gluttony alike drive nature away from the heart of man.

It is a very curious fact that the lapse of years, while it lessens our enjoyment of life, but increases the natural desire of living.

The chief properties of wisdom are to be mindful of things past, careful of things present, provident of things to come.

Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, January 1, 1882.

GREETING.

TO OUR patrons, the Saints and readers of the HERALD, do we offer the customary HAPPY NEW YEAR.

The circumstances under which we issue this number of the HERALD are varied and peculiar; many of them calculated to encourage and elevate our hopes of good in this life, and peace in the life to come; the speedy coming of the day of marked increase and spiritual progress; material prosperity and righteous enjoyment. Some of them are, however, sad and very trying. Many of the Saints at Lamoni are sick; fevers of more or less virulence have laid siege to the health, patience, and faith of the Saints, and some good and fair ones have died; some have recovered and are recovering, while others are still languishing either to recover after long suffering, or to pass away. In many instances administration of the ordinance of laying on of hands was followed by recovery more or less rapid: in some it came after days of painful watching and waiting; and in some, the Saints "who are alive and remain," were with stricken hearts and weary spirits compelled to carry the dead "who died in the Lord" to the final resting place of all flesh—the grave.

It almost seemed at one time that fever as an epidemic had fastened upon the community, and we can hardly say that we are safe; but houses where it had rested are now free, and it is hoped permanently so; and strong hopes are now held that the tide has had a favorable turn.

What may be the cause of this sickness, none can tell. In some instances families that have lately moved in are afflicted, numbers of them in the same house; and in other cases, those attacked have been here for years. Nor does it appear that locality is chargeable, as the high and the lowlands alike are visited; however, this may be said, that in well ventilated rooms and cleaner surroundings, the fever is lighter than in close rooms and less cleanly places.

These conditions, with the unprecedented bad weather and wet bad roads, have made the opening weeks of the office sojourn at Lamoni unpleasant. But the pleasant situation of our new office; its completeness of detail, and suitability for the purpose designed; the fact that the HERALD is better placed for usefulness to the cause, and in a region where the people may more appropriately gather and settle together, make cause for increased encouragement and satisfaction.

One thing that we sincerely regret, that the great curse of society, the traffic in intoxicating liquors has followed the settlement at Lamoni. The work on the railway, the newness of the country, the changing of the wagon route from Davis City to Eagleville through the village, the settlement of others beside Saints and strictly temperate people, led some one to open a saloon almost as soon as the town was laid out; and it is with shame-facedness that we pen it, the open countenance that some "called to be Saints" gave; together with the tacit aid and comfort that others afforded prevented the check that the better class of those belonging to the Church and those not members would have given it. There was one place where wine and beer were ostensibly sold; but where drunkards were made by that which was sold. Some time before our arrival here, an effort to incorporate was set on foot, and a decree from the Court authorizing the holding of an election, at which the question of incorporation was to be voted upon was issued. In pursuance of this notice an election was held December 19th, at which those favoring incorporating under the village laws of Iowa, were to vote "For Incorporation," and those opposing were to vote "Against Incorporation;" and we are sorry to record that on that day the vote against incorporating prevailed by forty-seven to twenty-five, a majority of twenty-two. The reasons why we are sorry for this result are, that we have good reason to believe that it was by the vote of those belonging to the Church in sufficient number to carry, they voting with those selling and in favor of the traffic, while they would have us to believe that they were opposed to such sale; and further, that we then saw and now see no way in which the vote direct as to the sale of intoxicants, or its suppression, can be had here until incorporation is effected, that such vote may be authorized. It may be that those of our brethren who voted against incorporation did not consider this effect; and we think that they did not; but that it is certain none can deny. Further, there was at the time the election was held a person waiting to put into operation a "new saloon," and waited only till the vote should be had to decide. As soon therefore as it was ascertained that the vote was "against incorporation," this new place of business was opened, so that now Lamoni may boast that it has two saloons, for its three hundred inhabitants, one for each one hundred and fifty—Saints and all.

The impression that the Elders preaching abroad, and the HERALD have tried hard to make, is that the Reorganized Church was opposed to the vice of drunkenness; and that the tippling, drinking habits of Salt Lake City were the products of apostacy, which adherence to and practice of the principles of the gospel as held by us would do away with; and some success in making this impression has been had; but it would seem that somebody had blundered in making such statements, if judgment is to pass upon the instance of Lamoni, for it is the only place which the editor of the HERALD has any knowledge of in which the policy of municipal government practically lies in the members of the Church, and when an opportunity was offered to exercise that control, it was allowed to lapse into the hands of the vendors of intoxicating drinks and their supporters and victims. We confess that we are shocked; and though we expect that this screed will possibly give hurt to some, we can not withhold.

We have been radically opposed to the use and sale of intoxicating drinks, as a beverage, since we were twelve years of age, and from fifteen years have always been engaged, in public and in private, in trying to educate against the evil. We have known many an excellent man, and spiritual, who can trace his downfall to the influence that places where drink has been offered for sale, has thrown round him; and we could now name some who are, or have nearly become victims to the insidious wiles of this enemy to sobriety. How then can Saints permit the traffic to gain a foothold where their influence may stop it? How can they permit even a remote chance to put themselves on the right side of this question escape them? How can they afford to let slip an opportunity to make the places where they dwell, the town, village, or hamlet, where they are citizens, the places where sobriety abides,—the places where no man is permitted to publicly invite the wayward and weak, the erring drinker, and the unfortunate "dipso-maniac" to his sure overthrow and destruction.

We begun this warfare a long time ago; and we shall certainly continue it. Whether we fight a gaining or a losing battle, so far as our personal influence is concerned, we shall improve every opportunity, and make use of every means in our power and right to use to oppose, restrict, overcome, and prevent the setting up and maintaining of beer, and wine, or whisky shops in any society where we live.

A Valparaiso, Indiana, teacher in the schools, lately charged the Irish people with spending $50,000,000 more, annually, for whisky than on rent for agricultural lands; which charge was vehemently denied by a Tipperary (Ireland) man; who states in support of his denial that the annual production of the still in Ireland was but 7,000,000 gallons, one half of which was exported, leaving but 3,500,000 gallons, costing $14,000,000, duty included, to be consumed by his countrymen. He states further that the Agricultural rental of Ireland is but $75,000,000; and therefore the amount paid for liquors was but one-fifth the amount of the rent of lands. But this is in Ireland, and not Iowa. True, but the county in which the capital of Iowa is located, pays a tax of over $15,000 per annum to maintain police regulations and prosecute offences caused by the whisky trade; while the capital city enjoys the privileges for making paupers and breeding crimes, that are afforded by forty-four saloons, (drinking places), which pay a city revenue of $8,800, which pays the city half of the county tax referred to, and allows $1,300, more or less, for other running expenses; nearly the entire sum of money paid for licences, and $7,500 beside, being absorbed in legal restraints and punishments, directly chargeable to the sale of intoxicating drink.

This is in Iowa, and under the statute law of the state; and Lamoni is in Iowa, and on territory once called Missouri, and under the statute law which makes it possible for such institutions to live, without municipal authority to prevent. Lamoni has sought once to secure that municipal authority, but it has been denied, and that by the act of a sufficient number of those having a membership with us to carry the vote—and we confess that we are profoundly sorry and disappointed.

The flower which we do not pluck is the only one which never loses its beauty or its fragrance.

BROTHER SQUIRE and sister Lucinda Loomis, think that if one or two "good preachers" were to come to Mount Pleasant, Isabelle county, Michigan, they might do some good to the cause there. Is not this within your field, Bro. Kelly; and is it so that some one can visit them? But why should these Saints write "good preachers?" Are not all the Elders good preachers? We never heard but one bad sermon—positively bad—from any and all the Elders we have listened to; unless some that we have delivered come under the term bad. We have always tried, and usually succeeded in getting something good from every Elder we have heard speak. It is useless to say that all are splendid speakers, for all are not. But we have somehow imbibed the notion that if a man is an earnest and honest one, wise hearers will be sure to hear something good—for time, or eternity, or both. However, Brn. William H. Kelley and his army corps are good preachers, in the popular sense of that term. Bro. Loomis says that if any one can come, drop them a line and he will meet them at the depot.

Bro. James R. Badham, presiding in the Fremont District, organized a branch in Fremont county, of eleven members, calling it Hazle Dell; S. W. Farrow, Priest, in charge.

Bro. A. J. Kennison writes that he has taken a hundred dollars stock in the Gould College, Harlan, Smith county, Kansas, and requests Elders to visit him at Gaylord, in said county, and preach in the college.

Bro. Jobe Brown was, on November 25th, at LaCrosse, Wisconsin, laboring as he best could. He writes that the Advents were getting frightened, and proposed to send for William Sheldon to come and drive him away. It might be as well for them to send him to meet Brethren Forscutt and Blair, as he has twice dodged them!

Bro. Jobe Brown wrote from LaCrosse, Wisconsin, December 17th, and was doing what he could, see his letter elsewhere.

Sisters Blair and Warnock, from Salt Lake City, called at Lamoni and spent a few days; Sr. Warnock being the guest of Bro. and Sr. John Scott, and Sr. Blair abiding with her son George, near the town. We were glad to see these sisters, who report the work as progressing quite favorably in Utah. They went East on the 15th December, Sr. Warnock bound for Boyne, Ontario and Sr. Blair for her home in Sandwich, Illinois.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert wrote us a card from Buchanan, Tennessee, December 16th. He was not well, but was doing what he could. Brn. Thomas and Scarcliff were in Kentucky, Bro. Hyde in the region near Bro. Lambert and Bro. Montague in Mississippi.

Bro. John A. Kennison writes from Cartwright's Mills, Wisconsin, that he found some willing to hear the doctrine, while some were not so inclined. He would welcome an Elder there, and thought a good work could be done.

Sisters Ida and Mattie Shifflet, near Shirfrie's Foundry, Brazil, Indiana, would be pleased to have a preacher come there to present the truth. See their letter in this issue.

Bro. G. E. Deuel baptized six Sunday, December 6th, at Tilbury, Ontario, and Bro. Lake one in London. Bro. Lake was meeting with fair success in liberty and opportunity to preach the gospel.

One baptized at Chicago, by Bro. T. W. Smith, December 11th. Bro. Smith writes: "We are doing little here except in the way of articles through the newspapers." The Chicago Times, and Louisville Courier Journal, both print Bro. Smith's articles.

THE Saints in Boston, the "too, too, beautifully esthetic" city on the east side of the Continent, have been trying for these many years to get a passing recognition in the press, other than the stereotyped paid for advertisement, and are about to reap the reward of their long waiting; and it is not passing strange either, that this recognition is brought about by contact with "them that are without." Some few years ago we met at Plano with Captain John Codman and his wife, then returning from a visiting and topic gathering tour in the west, prior to the "making of a book," in which Mormonism was to appear, as a matter of course. The book was written and published as "The Mormon Country," a copy of which was sent us as a courtesy, by Captain Codman. Apropos to this, the Boston Herald heard (newspapers have ears) that the Captain was in Boston, and sent a man to interview and report him on Utah affairs. We have not room for all the article, but select some of the salient points for the comfort of the readers of the HERALD:—

"Has there been any change in the condition of things in Utah since you favored us, a year ago, with a letter pertaining to Mormonism?"

"No, not much; for that territory does not stand on the same footing as other districts of the country. The people are more conservative, and less ready than others to adopt new habits and modes of thinking. Still, the railroads now being built and extended, are exercising an increasing influence; so are fashions, books, magazines, and newspapers. All these agents are modifying Mormonism, but are not overcoming it to any appreciable extent."

"What do you mean by modifying it?"

"Well, I mean that they are surely tending to extirpate polygamy."

"But is not polygamy the corner stone of that religion?"

"By no means. Mormonism was founded without it—indeed, with an express prohibition of it. It was not the corner stone. It is only a stone that has since been shoved under the corner."

"How did that happen?"

"Well, Smith, the prophet, got into some feminine difficulties, and he concluded that a little extra matrimony was the best way out of them. So he had a new revelation. By the by, it may be noted that his son, who is at the head of the 'Josephite' sect of Mormons in Illinois, stoutly declares that his father never had any such revelation, and his branch of the Church eschews it."

"What became of the doctrine after the prophet's death?"

"Brigham Young, his successor, re-affirmed it and preached its adoption under pain of eternal damnation."

"What was his object?"

"He had several objects, one of which, as you will readily perceive, was shown by his having seventeen wives. Next to the gratification of his own propensities came the wish to unite the people, to keep them at home, and to keep other people away, and last, but not least, to have something to be persecuted about."

"What are your ideas as to its speedy abolition?"

"Well, it is dying pretty rapidly of itself; but if you want to kick it a little insist upon a secret ballot, and if you look upon it as prostitution, which it is in a minor form, treat it as you treat that vice in Boston. Punish the women, who have less excuse than the women who go astray here, for they have more chance of honorable marriage in a territory where the male population is 5,000 in advance of the female. Except in rare instances the girls are not driven into polygamy. They come over from Wales and Scandinavia and go into the condition as voluntarily as they do at home. In these days few native-born women adopt it. As to enforcing the law against the men, you might as well try to enforce the laws against rumsellers here."

"Are these questions likely to come up in the present contested election of delegates?"

"I presume they will—at least, I hope so. Utah is a territory in which I am much interested, for my property is there, and for the last ten years I have been there a great deal. To speak frankly, I would rejoice to see polygamy abolished, but I should be sorry to have Mormonism otherwise interfered with. Any religion that teaches honesty, temperance, frugality and brotherly love, is a good one. For these qualities the Mormons are unsurpassed by any set of men that I know."

"Do the other sects have much success among them?"

"Scarcely any. If they convert a Mormon from Mormonism, they generally make him an infidel. Ingersoll may call that doing them good; I don't. If you want to try your hand on them, send in your contributions to the Josephites, and you will do more than you can in any other way."

THE following, taken from a leader in the Salt Lake Deseret News, of December 7th, is strikingly suggestive of the straits to which the indulgence in practices that the Lord calls "abominable" has put once Latter Day Saints into. The slip, together with Elder Blair's comment and argument appear in the Advocate of the current date:

"The President complains that the law [against Polygamy.—Ed] has in very rare instances been enforced. Whose fault is that? Certainly that can not be consistently laid at the door of the 'Mormons.' If officials have been tardy and inefficient, let the blame rest where it belongs. He also states that polygamy is the 'corner stone' of the 'Mormon' Church, which shows that he has not been correctly informed. The 'Mormon' Church existed for many years without polygamy. Indeed, correctly speaking, polygamy is not now and never has been even a tenet of the 'Mormon' faith. Our religious system of marriage is different altogether from that which is known in the world as polygamy. But setting that consideration aside, our plural wife system is not and has not been the 'corner stone' of the Church. It has become an essential part of our creed, but not more so than many other features of our faith. Its opponents have forced it into prominence and given it that position in the public mind, while it is in reality but one of the constituent parts of our ecclesiastical institution, not chief nor of greater importance than many others."

POLYGAMY NOT A TENET OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

"Last night in the Chapel of the Latter Day Saints on Maitland street, between York and King, an address on the 'Book of Mormon' was delivered by Elder John H. Lake, of Farmington, Ohio, a gentleman appointed to look after the Canadian mission work of the Re-organized Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints. This church claims to be the great original, of which Brigham Youngism is an obnoxious offshoot. It was incorporated by Act of American Congress in 1872, and claims to have done more to unveil the rottenness of polygamy than any other agency. Mr. Lake in repose is a grave, quiet, intelligent looking gentleman. On the platform he is quick, nervous, impassioned, and at times loud and rapid in delivery.

"Mr. Lake said the Gentiles had more Bible than they knew what to do with. They didn't think for themselves, they gave their brains to the ministers. The religious world was taught by precept, and precepts differed as men's brains differed. The great hunger of the clergy was for Right Reverend and LL. D., double D. if possible. He sketched the presentation of the Book of Mormon by an angel which came down from heaven in a light brighter than noonday to Joseph Smith, a boy of seventeen years. Parts of the book, engraven on plates of gold, which the angel ordered to be translated, were taken to eminent American scholars, who pronounced the writing to be in the true Chaldean character.

"These scholars claimed, however, that the book was sealed to them unless all the parts were produced. He then quoted Isaiah, 29:11: "The vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, read this I pray thee, and he saith, I can not for it is sealed." He said he didn't want to be put through a theological machine and marked with the stamp of a creed. The creed-followers went to their minister for an interpretation of the prophecy that the lion, or the wolf and the lamb "should lie down together," and they got an explanation something like this: 'John Jones and his wife go to a revival meeting. The wife goes up to the mourners' bench, and John stays down in the corner with the sinners. After service they wend their way to their mutual home, and Jones, as the wolf, and his wife, as the lamb, lie down together as they are legally and morally entitled to do.' The North American Indian, he said, had come from Jerusalem, and he didn't care if Dr. Wild was General Jackson and four other men, the ten tribes had gone further than Ireland. The Book of Mormon was not intended to supplant the Bible, but to go with it. The stick of Joseph was taken from the hand of Ephraim and put with the stick of Judah. He quoted many scriptural passages in support of his doctrine, dwelling especially on the 29th of Isaiah, 3d of Amos and the 85th Psalm. He was heard with the deepest interest and most profound attention throughout. His wonderful fund of Biblical knowledge is almost phenomenal. If he has not found the truth he has certainly been an industrious seeker after it.

ALL our readers are interested to know all the ways and means that may be proposed for the extinguishment of polygamy; and as we gave one, an issue or two back, we now present another, suggested by Mr. George C. Bates, at one time District Attorney for Utah. We clip from the Detroit Post and Tribune for December 6th, 1881.

"He says the saints are afflicted with rings, and that the polygamic ring includes all officers in the Mormon Church, all the local officers of the territory of Utah—sheriffs, county recorders, judges of probate, and treasurers, many of whom receive large incomes—and all those who manage the distribution of political honors and emoluments. No Mormon who is not a polygamist, he says, can become of any importance in the territory of Utah.

"Mr. Bates' remedy for all this trouble looks very simple on paper, and it only requires a vote of Congress and the endorsement of the President to take its place among the laws of the land. He proposes, as he says, to "fight fire with fire," as follows:

"Take the act of Congress of July 1st, 1862, entitled "An act to prevent and punish polygamy in the territories of the United States," and add the following section:

"SEC. 4. And be it further enacted that hereafter all persons in said territories living in polygamy, contrary to the provisions of this statute, shall be disqualified:

"1. From voting at any and all elections in any territories of the United States, either religious, corporate, municipal, territorial or federal.

"2. From sitting on juries in any of the courts in said territory, religious, municipal, territorial or federal.

"3. From holding any office of honor, profit or trust, either religious, corporate, municipal, territorial or federal in said territory.

"4. From being nominated or elected, or ever acting as Delegate to Congress from said territory.

"5. That such bigamy or living in polygamy may be proven either by common report, by the oath of the parties charged, or either of them; or by evidence of cohabitation of the parties charged; and all false swearing in such cases shall be perjury, and parties convicted thereof shall be punished for such perjury.

"6. All persons thus disfranchised may re-enfranchise themselves by going before a United States judge for said district, and furnishing him with satisfactory evidence that they have ceased and discontinued all acts and relations as polygamists, and obtaining the certificate of said judge that they are no longer polygamists. On which certificate they shall be restored to all their former rights and franchises.

THE SAINTS of the Sacramento, California, Branch are trying to build a Chapel, as set forth below:

The members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, in the City of Sacramento, California, have long felt the want of a place to meet in, dedicated to God for his holy worship, and also for Sabbath School purposes, and where they can invite the public, fearless of any annoying reflections on the vanities and probable vices, common to public halls, such in which they have long met, and for which they have paid enough to have built a "house of God; a house of prayer for all people."

A suitable site for such a building, and for so low a sum, is now offered us, that we have resolved with united effort, at the risk of sacrifice, to buy it and begin to build. We have also unanimously decided to sustain our committee of five, for the management of this business.

And to confidently request your kind co-operation, we ask your prayers, your confidence in our success, your cheerful aid, as "lending to the Lord," and your cordial influence in endeavoring to interest your friends and acquaintances in this worthy object.

Correspondence, donations, etc., can be addressed to E. H. Webb, Odd Fellows' Temple, Sacramento City, or to G. W. Harlow, Brighton, Sacramento county, California.

Agents and all who contribute to this sacred cause, will receive properly signed receipts for all offerings presented for the above purpose.

BRO. JOSIAH ELLS, writes as follows from Pittsburg, Pa., November 30th, 1881:

I am but just arrived in Pittsburg; have not yet seen the Saints. In Jackson and Meigs counties, Ohio, where I have spent the greater part of the last year, there are some earnest and wise Saints: also those who do not realize the importance of giving all diligence to make their calling and election sure. Alas for them, in that day when every man's work will be tried as by fire, if they expect a full reward for lukewarm or half-heartedness in the work of the covenant. Many do not seem to realize how often they call the Eternal Father to witness that having taken upon them the name of his son, they will keep his commandments, given that they may receive his abiding witness that all they do is right. When will the day come that all who call on the name of the Lord will be saved?"

THE Salt Lake Tribune for December 6th, has the following respecting our efforts in that place:

"On Sunday there was a full congregation at the new meeting house of the Reorganized Church on Tribune Avenue. It was the first services ever held by that sect in a building of their own, and much interest was of course manifested in the proceedings. Elder Blair, the leading missionary of the Utah branch of the Church, delivered an able discourse and showed the difference between the original Mormon Church and the Apostate crowd, who, under the leadership of Brigham Young, came to Utah and made polygamy, blood atonement, tithing and disloyalty to the Government, the conspicuous features of their false religion. The Book of Mormon was an auxiliary book to the Holy Bible and mainly a history of Israel. It was never intended to supplant the Bible, which is recognized by the Christian world. The original Mormon faith, now upheld by the Reorganized Latter Day Saints, or, as they are generally called, "Josephites," heed no tenet contrary to the laws of the land.

"The sermon was listened to with the closest attention, both by the members of the Church and many Gentiles present.

"In the evening the attendance was so large that many were unable to gain admittance, and Elder Gibson delivered an instructive discourse.

"The Church has been planted on good soil and its preachers and members propose to labor constantly to show up what a fraud and delusion is the polygamous creed of Brigham Young and the rascals who are endeavoring to perpetuate it.

BRO. M. T. SHORT, writing from Beaver, Utah, of late date says:

"We have the use of the M. E. Church here. Rev. Smith, who used to teach in Plano, when you were a school director there, is in charge, and is a noble man. The outlook is fine. Bro. Anthony sends love. He baptized two last Sunday. I feel confident that others will fall into ranks ere we take our exit for the north. The weather is grand. We are well and hopeful, and feel happy at the work. Bro. Anthony is a host—an agreeable companion, and a careful man. My address is Salt Lake City, in care of Box 417."

It is probable that the next candidate for an official firing out of the so-called orthodox church, the Congregational, is to be found in Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, of the First Congregational Church of Providence, Rhode Island. It is a wonder that the bones of the Puritans don't rattle in their graves in protest. But read what is reported of him. Send him out; the Episcopalians had a martyr in Dr. Tyng, the Presbyterians in Dr. Swing, the Methodist Episcopal in Dr. Thomas; and now it is the turn of the Congregationalists. So let them try Dr. Slicer.

"Last evening the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer delivered the second of a course of lectures on the Lord's Prayer in the First Congregational Church. The words forming the foundation of the discourse were, "Hallowed be thy name." In giving a brief resumé of the first lecture, delivered last week, Mr. Slicer said that heaven is not a place of some remoteness, to which people can go when they die, but an immediate state. God is not in heaven in the sense of being located in some far away place, but He is imminent in nature and in the things of the world. In criticising some of the teachings of Orthodoxy, the preacher remarked that nobody really believes in election nowadays. The dogma of the Deity of Christ which is so wearisomely reiterated in the creeds of the Episcopal Church, is inconsistent with the Fatherhood of God. A belief in the Deity of Christ causes Calvary to obscure and not reveal God's Fatherhood—covers it with the darkness of the clotted blood of the sacrifice. Anything that militates against the Fatherhood of God, be it the Deity of Christ or any other interpretation we may put upon His nature, must pass away with the progress of thought. Endless torment—nobody believes it, unless it is Spurgeon who said five years ago that the wicked will lie on beds of flame in hell. Perhaps he has learned better by this time. Such preaching is a medieval plan of getting a congregation and terrifying sinners. Then there is the intercession of Jesus—a thing we need no more than we need the intercession of the virgin or the saints. There is no warrant for it in the New Testament, except in the epistle to the Hebrews. Then the doctrine of total depravity, and of sacrificial atonement, alike militate against a proper appreciation of the Fatherhood of God. The preacher criticised severely the service of the Episcopal Church, which, amongst other things, provides in some services for the repetition of the Lord's prayer four times. He could not conceive of a guileless, innocent girl, or noble-hearted young man, who would be hal- lowing the Divine name by repeating after all the commandments in the communion service "Lord have mercy upon us and incline our hearts to keep this law." What son or daughter can a man send into such a service, charged with such a response, after the commandments "thou shalt do no murder," and that referring to the nameless crime, without feeling that the service is corrupting by its very suggestions. Shall they respond to these commandments, or rather scorn the suggestion, and not be made to confess for a single moment that they can, by any art of man or devil, be caught in the snare of such great sins so long as reason keeps its seat."—Evening Bulletin.

News Summary.

Dec. 12th.—A government balloon in charge of Capt. Temple, accompanied by Walter Powell, M. P. for Malmesbury, and Gardner, ascended from Bath, England, and descended at Bridgeport. The balloon struck the ground heavily and Gardner and Capt Temple were thrown out and injured. The balloon then rose with Powell, and was seen again to descend at sea. Nothing has since been seen or heard of the balloon or Powell.

Five persons were killed and thirty injured in the collision at Canonburg on the North London Railway, England.

The interior of the Congregational Church at Davenport, Iowa, was destroyed by fire, but left the walls and roof intact. The rear part of the room, including the pulpit, organ, and furniture, were destroyed, and the gallery was much damaged by water, the loss aggregating $9,000.

The new iron-mills at Bennett Station, just outside of Pittsburg, Pa., burned this morning. The old mill near by considerably damaged; loss estimated at over $200,000.

13th.—Warden Crocker has received letters warning him to remove prisoners from the wing of the jail in which Guiteau is confined, so that in the event of a dynamite explosion no life except that of the assassin will be endangered.

Two old ladies of Greensburg, Pa., were murdered in their house Sunday night. The Mollie Maguire are suspected of the crime.

Among the bills introduced in the Senate yesterday was one by Senator Edmunds providing that jurors in trials for polygamy and bigamy in the Territory of Utah may be challenged.

An elevator in a lannery at Milwaukee fell a distance of forty feet, causing the almost instant death of four employes who were in it at the time. A fifth employe escaped by jumping.

The list of the missing at the Vienna Theatre, is now reduced to 917, and the number of the bodies recovered to 480, of which only 125 have been identified.

Five boys were drowned by the breaking of the ice in Wisconsin: three at Manitowoc, and two at Sheboygan.

The steamship Bulgaria, arrived at Boston, having been twenty days on the passage from Liverpool. Two blades of the propeller were broken, and the heavy sea carried away all the starboard main deck rails, stove two of the boats, and injured another so badly as to render it useless, and also started the after house. The steering gear gave out, one man washed overboard and two others had their legs broken. On the night of the 27th a curious phenomenon was noticed. The air seemed charged with electricity, and on the top of every masthead and on the ends of the spars little balls of fire were perched, adding a terrible weirdness to the already awful scene.

There was laid on the desk of each Congressman, this afternoon, ready for the meeting of the House to-morrow, a handsomely engraved card bearing on one fold the President's message on polygamy printed in letters of gold, and on the other fold, in crimson, the admission filed by one of the parties in the pending Utah contest: "I, George Q. Cannon, contestant, protesting that the matter in this paper contained is not relevant to this issue, do admit that I am a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, commonly called Mormons; that, in accordance with the tenets of said Church, I have taken plural wives, who now live with me, and have lived with me for a number of years, and have borne me children. I also admit that, in my public addresses as a teacher of my religion in Utah Territory, I have defended the said tenet of said Church as being in my belief a revelation from God." Each card is inscribed: "Respectfully dedicated to the Forty-seventh Congress by the Woman's National Anti-Polygamy Society of Salt Lake City, Utah."

14th.—Another awful tale of the sea is told by the officers of the steamer Malta, which has been nineteen days fighting the heavy seas between Liverpool and Boston. The assistant cook and one of the stewards died from injuries received, and were buried at sea. The boatswain received severe injuries.

The Pope to-day gave a farewell audience to the prelates assisting at the canonization services. The Holy Father said: "Union is more necessary now than ever. God's Church is being attacked despite its power of bridling human passions and restraining masses in revolt. The benefits conferred by the Holy See upon the populations are denied with no less madness than audacity. May Italy one day understand that what she might do in behalf of the liberty and rights of the Pope will not bring her danger, but prosperity."

Twenty-seven bodies were discovered under the debris of the Ring Theatre at Vienna yesterday. It has been ascertained that at least fifty that were reported missing still survive, but it has also been ascertained that over fifty persons perished who have not been hitherto reported.

It is estimated that 2,000 persons died of diphtheria in Nova Scotia during the past year.

15th.—Clerical journals say in Rome the question of the Pope's departure is seriously mooted. It is stated that his Holiness had consulted the Bishops who came to Rome to attend the canonization ceremony.

The bodies of twenty-three more victims of the Ring Theatre were recovered today.

Five overdue steamships out of thirty-five arrived at New York today; one, the Somerset, being twenty-seven days out. In terrific gales her first and third officers and eight seamen were disabled. All the steamers report hurricanes, torrents of rain, frightfully heavy seas, snow and rain storms, most vivid flashes of lightning, and deafening peals of thunder.

16th.—Three skiffs containing eight men were caught in the current in the Government Lock No. 3, near Charleston, W. Va., yesterday, and carried over the dam. Five of the men were drowned.

One man in Vienna has contributed $62,500 to the fund for the relief of the sufferers by the Ring Theatre fire.

17th.—Once more Cannon, the Mormon, has received a setback in his attempt to get into Congress. As a result of a rehearing of the case, Chief-Justice Hunter, of the Utah Supreme Court, yesterday refused to modify or set aside the order previously made holding as fraudulent and void the certificate of naturalization obtained by Cannon, and in effect once more declaring him to be an alien and not entitled to a seat in Congress.

A boat containing fourteen persons left Galway Thursday for the Islands of Arran. When about midway on the passage a storm arose and all-hands were drowned.

Shallenberger, has introduced a bill into Congress to prevent persons living in bigamy from holding any office of trust or emolument in the United States Territories, also regulating marriage in the Territories.

19th.—The Presbyterian Church parlors at Fon du Lac, were robbed of several hundred dollars worth of silverware Friday night.

The Baptist Church at La Crosse Wis., built at a cost of $15,000 a few years ago, was entirely destroyed by fire, yesterday. This is the third time this church has suffered loss by fire.

The police in Dublin yesterday came upon a rich find in a house on Brabagon street, consisting of hand grenades, parcels of dynamite, rifles, revolvers, cartridges, and gunpowder—the outfit, evidently, of some Fenian organization having had a hand in the affair at Bradford. Four persons were arrested on the strength of the discovery.

The barracks at Croboy in Meath, Ireland, have been burned by incendiaries, the soldiers barely escaping with their lives, and a large number of outrages by the revolutionists are reported from different parts of Ireland. Altogether the situation of affairs has grown to be very serious, and will doubtless result in the adoption of still sterner measures of coercion and repression by the British Government.

The official list of the victims of the Vienna theatre horror places the number at 794, of whom 144 have been legally identified, the remainder being burned beyond recognition.

Storms and floods of a destructive character occurred Saturday and Sunday throughout England. Hundreds of trees were uprooted in the vicinity of London, and many minor casualties among the shipping are reported.

20th.—Another of those terrible mining accidents which are unfortunately so frequent in England occurred yesterday at Orrell, in Lancashire, causing the death of about 180 persons. The system of working the mine was purely mechanical, and the cause of the explosion can not be ascertained.

During the navigation season just closed, 13,007 vessels of 4,527,613 tons burden arrived at the port of Chicago, and 12,910 vessels of 4,223,704 tons cleared.

There were three murders committed in Cincinnati and its suburbs yesterday.

22d.—A sulphur explosion set fire to the Stanton Colliery at Mahanoy City, Pa., yesterday. Efforts are being made to extinguish the flames. Meantime 400 persons are thrown out of employment.

Several persons were recently arrested in St. Petersburg, and oranges containing dynamite were found on their persons.

A bill to confer the suffrage on all who can read and write passed both branches of the Italian Legislature yesterday.

Anna Parnell addressed 600 Irishmen at Huddersfield to-day. She maintained that the reports about the outrages in Ireland are exaggerated, and that the funds of the Emergency Committee are employed in getting up the police cases.

The ladies' land league of Dundee to-day, in a resolution, condemned the Government for attempting to suppress the Ladies' League.

Correspondence.

FARMINGTON, Graves Co., Ky.,
December 7th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—Since writing to you I have been traveling in company with Bro. John Thomas, a devoted old soul who loves the work, and is proving it, not in word only, but in deed. We received an invitation to preach near the Tennessee river in Henry county, Tennessee; but the doors of the "free house" were not open to us, and arriving in the neighborhood we were obliged to preach in a private house. Although the weather was stormy, yet for two nights the people turned out and gave us a fair hearing. Quite an interest was awakened, and a favorable impression we think was made upon the minds several.

Sunday, November 20th, we attended Parson Weston's meeting: a Baptist preacher who had an appointment at Saints' Chapel, Eagle Creek Branch. He did not talk but a few moments, but desired one of us to speak to the people. I took his place and enjoyed fair liberty; preached again in the evening. Thursday night talked to the brethren and friends at Foundry Hill. Commenced preaching at Saints' Chapel near Farmington, November 27th. Talked to the people there two Sabbaths, and every other night during one week, and held sacrament meeting last Monday.

Yesterday we started to Murray, county seat of Calloway county, Kentucky, to fill an appointment; but on the way learned that the Christian Church, which we had obtained, had been closed against us. "Certainly, you can have it," said the gentleman in charge, and a leading merchant in town, to Bro. Thomas when he applied for it over a week ago; "and you had best to have your appointment published in the paper which is issued day after to-morrow. Our church is free to all." But after Bro. Thomas left him, there arose winds adverse to the truth, and the banner of freedom that had waved over the Christian Church in Murray was lowered, and one stamped with prejudice and intolerance was raised. We shall work on, and try to do the people good, where they will let us.

My address for a month or two will be Buchanan, Henry county, Tennessee.

Your brother in Christ,
FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

BOSTON HIGHLANDS, Mass.,
December 12th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—I send you a Boston Herald that contains Captain Codman's views on the Latter Day Saints and the Utah Mormonism. It contains many good things, and will give us a better hold on the honest hearts in this city. I am glad that the Herald got hold of a man who knew the difference between Mormonism and Polygamy, as that paper would not at any time in the history of our Branch here in Boston have allowed us any space in its columns, making out at all times that we were Polygamistic, of the Brighamite type. A Herald representative came down to see Brother Webster, and had an interview with him to-night; and it looks now as though the most powerful paper in our city was going to get at the truth, and give the public the fact that we are not polygamists, but the true church, as founded by our martyred prophet. God be praised; for he has promised that our work should spread over this city, and all of the honest in heart should be brought in; and I feel that the time is near at hand. The Utah question is being thoroughly aired, and the consequence will be that the world will know that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are a wholesome body; and the mystery of our martyred prophet, Joseph Smith, shall be brought to light, and the world shall know that he was a true prophet of God.

Truly your brother in Christ,
A. N. HOXIE.

TURNBULL, Alabama,
December 15th, 1881.

Dear Herald.—Permit me to congratulate you in your more commodious and substantial quarters, to which you have gone since I last troubled you with my scribbling. When I wrote to you last, I was in Lee county, Mississippi, where I had been laboring during the summer with flattering prospects, until the enemy, with his more effective munition, comes to the front, and commences his work with greater energy on the unwary and unstable. Strange, dear Herald, as it may appear to you, this powerful munition was nothing more nor less than the confession of John D. Lee; yet so powerful was its effect, that it caused some who had testified to the truth of the gospel to fall away and desert our ranks; "seed sown among thorns" and their actions were so ridiculous, and became so widespread, that many that were, and I presume are yet, believing would rather postpone acting for awhile. And at this juncture an unlooked for opportunity presented itself for us to visit Alabama, and spend a time with relatives and friends, and I could not forego the opportunity. So we arranged matters as best we could; and with a promise to return at some future time, we boarded the train on the afternoon of October 13th for Alabama, and the next morning we were at the neat little town of Selma, where we stayed until next afternoon strolling about town, looking at many curiosities to be seen there.

At the appointed time we were again on board the train, and were soon steaming away to Pine Apple, a little town in Wilcox county, where we arrived at night, and after being jolted for two miles, (which, by the way, reminded us that we were not in the "sweet by and by," where the high places will be made low and the rough places made smooth), we were landed at the house of Mrs. Keister, my wife's sister; and I would here remark, that any Latter Day Saint Elder passing that way, will find a shelter and be made welcome at her house, though she does not belong to the Church.

Sunday morning we went to Cokerville, and stopped for the night with Bro. John Patrick. Next morning went to Bro. Daniel McPherson's, my wife's father, who she had not seen for near fourteen years. I then could not be sorry that I yielded to the opportunity to visit our native country. While visiting among relatives and friends, the time has been spent with a mixture of pleasure and sorrow. When passing the place where I was first buried with my Master, to arise and walk in newness of life, I then vainly tried to view myself as with a panorama, and see if then I had to be weighed in the balance would I be found wanting; but the different vicissitudes through which I had passed, it was not possible to comprehend all. Or, as a legend of the East, had there been a recording angel ever accompanying me, and how many times he had to turn away from me weeping, because of the preponderance of evil over good deeds. Ah! solemn thought! Again: passing the house where once the Lone Star Branch could, yes could meet in Union, and the Spirit be with them in such power, that even the walls would tremble under its power. But now, how is it? Ah, instead of union and love there are bickerings, backbitings, tattling, revelings, drunkenness, mixed with many pugilistic demonstrations. O God, look with pitying eyes upon the Lone Star Branch, and remove the darkness that now hangs over it; we are all frail beings; therefore, do not suffer more to come upon us than we can bear. Wilt thou revive that religion in this place that was once the joy of Saints and the wonder of those outside.

I have done but little preaching since I have been in this district, but have spent the time in visiting, and fireside chatting, whether to any purpose or not, time will tell. I have preached once in the Flat Creek Church, near Turnbull, which has hitherto been one of the most prejudiced neighborhoods in this country, and had an invitation to come again. Turnbull is the place where Elder W. A. Litz held a debate with Baptist divine in 1844. God does indeed "move in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

In conclusion, I wish to correct an idea that some have imbibed, in regard to some of my belief and teaching. It is being circulated somewhat, that I believe and publicly taught, that Joseph the Martyr was a "fallen prophet"—a bad man, and "died for crimes committed by him." The foregoing is a misconception of what I said; for I do not believe that Joseph died for crimes committed by him; I do not believe he was a fallen prophet. Neither have I in private or public, directly or indirectly, taught such a thing. Again: it is intimated that I taught at the same time, that the present president of the Church is a polygamist—a thing more absurd could not have originated with an idiot. My statement was this, (I was speaking of the work to be done by the Reorganization), that David was not permitted to build the Temple, because he was a man of blood, and it is my opinion that it was for the same reason; that Joseph the Martyr was not permitted to build the Temple. And as Solomon, in the stead of his father built the Temple, so I believe that the present Joseph in the stead his father would build the Temple; and tried to urge the Saints to live in peace, and establish the kingdom in righteousness.

Yours in hope,

A. J. CATO.

NETAWAKA, Kansas,

December 12th, 1881.

Brother Joseph.—We were recently favored with a visit from Brother Caffall, through whose labors we were instructed and comforted. Nineteen times he bombarded this neighborhood with gospel shots, pointing out how the pioneers coming to this country amid a vast forest, went to work making roads, or trails, leaving a blaze-tree here and there as a guide to them who should come after, and when they landed on shore the first object to look for was the first blaze-tree; and when they had found it, thus giving them courage to press forward to the next, and so on until they came to the end of their journey safe. If they were to neglect watching the guide, they would have been lost in the wilderness. So it is with us; the blaze-trees of the gospel of Christ are left on record for us, to guide us in the way of truth and righteousness. The first one we come to is faith, second, repentance, baptism for the remission of sins, laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, resurrection, eternal judgment, these are links in the gospel chain. His closing discourses were to prove from a Bible standpoint the divine calling of Joseph the Seer, coming forth of the Book of Mormon according to the prediction of prophets being a revelation to man, giving a history of the dealings of God with his people on this continent, where they came from, their destruction; proving the same beyond easy controversy to good honest thinking men. Our school-house was packed on each occasion. Don't know what will be the result, time will tell. I am fully persuaded that some are badly crippled and their wounds can not be healed without compliance to the gospel plan. Bro. Caffall has left a good influence here among Saints and sinners, so he is invited to come again, whenever convenient. Praying for your continual peace, I remain,

Your brother in Christ,
GRIFFITH GEORGE.

SAMISON, Shelby Co., Iowa,

December 15th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—It is quite a long time since you have heard from me, or from this part of the Lord's vineyard. It is not because I have not felt an interest in the cause, but I thought that there were so many others more capable of interesting the readers of the Herald than I; but as I have not written to you in so long, I thought I had better let you know that I am still struggling along as best I can, considering my health has been so bad that I have not been able to go out to meeting as often as I would like to do. I am still hoping and praying that the Lord will bless me with health and strength, that I may discharge the duties incumbent on me as presiding officer of the branch. I have had charge of the branch nearly eighteen years; and I sometimes think that a change would be beneficial, and have asked the branch to release me and choose some one else; but they refuse to do so. So by the assistance of God's Spirit I will try and do the best I can. With the aid of the branch officers, we have our regular meetings; preaching every Sunday morning, and prayer meetings in the afternoon, and sacrament the first and third Sundays in every month, with very good attendance at our meetings. We are cheered and comforted by the Spirit of the Lord. Still the branch is not in as prosperous condition as it has been, but we have no serious troubles, and think with the labors of the officers of the branch, that the cause will revive and flourish. We have not made any accessions to the branch for a long time; but I think there are some here that will obey the gospel and may God help them so to do, is my prayer.

Bro. John Leytham met with a serious accident on the 25th of November, on the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad. He got on the construction train to go to Neola, and as they went down he got on to the engine with the engineer, and going at a great speed; it ran off the track, demolishing the engine and three flat cars. Bro. Leytham fell under the cab, one of the valves broke and scalded him from the lower part of his body down to his feet, also one of his hands. His life was despaired of for many days, but he is now getting better. They expect to bring him home in a few days.

It is cheering and comforting to me as I read the welcome news in the Herald, how the cause is prospering everywhere, and pray that it may continue. I crave an interest in the prayers of all Saints, that the Lord will bless me with health and strength.

From your brother in Christ,
HENRY HALLIDAY.

ADDISON, Maine,

December 15th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—November 27th, I attended the Massachusetts Conference, at Fall River; one of the best I was ever at; more of the wisdom of God exercised than I have seen before in that district. Truly the brethren are learning their duty. The Lord remembered his promise and gave his gifts; all were highly pleased. Bro. Frank Sheehy delivered an able discourse on Sunday evening, to a full house. I left Fall River and Boston in time to meet the Saints in conference, at Brooksville, for the Western Maine District. But on Saturday no one came, outside of the Brooksville Branch. On Sunday morning I spoke to a few that came out. In the evening I spoke again to a hundred and one persons; good liberty and good attention from the little house well packed. Bro. J. J. Billings, the president of the district, being away on business, arrived there on Sunday evening, and no business was attended to until Monday evening. I make mention of this state of things for last conference no one came until Sunday, and did the business on that day. All I can say, is come, my brethren, see if you can not get to the next conference, which will be held on Little Deer Isle, the middle of May, 1882. Come one; come all; and bring your faith and confidence along, for J. C. F. is tired and sick of going to a place for conference, and find no one there.

I expect to reach Saco, Maine, again by the middle of January. Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

WEBSTER, Mississippi,

December 8th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph Smith; Dear Brother.—I am now about all that belong to the Church in this part of the moral vineyard; the rest of the members are scattered. I still have faith in my eternal destiny. I pray for the building up of the faith of God in righteousness; I also desire the prayers of the Saints for my wife. I have lost my near and dearest relatives this year; my father and brother. My brother, M. W. Eskridge, departed this life April 17th, aged thirty-eight years and a few days. My father, John Eskridge, departed April 23d, aged nearly eighty-four. All my afflictions have financially broken me up; I don't know that I will be able to take the Herald next year, but if I see that I can I will communicate with you.

Sisters Massies are yet in this neighborhood. Crops are short here. I think that next year will be the hardest year this section ever experienced. There was a great deal of sickness and several deaths in our neighborhood, though the health of the community is tolerably good at this time. As ever, your brother,

L. J. ESKRIDGE.

PROVIDENCE, Rhode Island,

December 14th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—With emotions of gratitude I am constrained to write that God has blessed this district of late with conclusive evidences that he is directing some, or all of the leading officers of the district and branches. This was signally manifest at our last conference at Fall River, which was acknowledged to have been the best in many respects, of any ever yet held within the district, for the wisdom, patience, and unity in the deliberations and decisions upon difficult matters, and the marvellous confirmations of the same by divine revelation. The entire reports showing the present status of the district gave the joyful assurance that the resources of the district both officially and financially have been wisely and successfully employed by the presiding officer, Bro. John Smith, as we think through the guidance of the Spirit. And we feel that the spiritual, intellectual and financial interests of the district are looking up to a higher plane of efficient labor for the Church. I am laboring constantly upon the Sabbaths, and about one third of the week days directly in the ministry, and am longing to be fully "in the field." I have been blessed in every locality with the prayers and the co-working of the Saints, both official and non-official, and find the work of God can not be most successfully done single-handed, but calls for patience, perseverance, meekness and unity. Having been associated with Bro. and Sr. Yerrington in the earnest labors of another Church prior to 1866, and having no family connections in Providence, I had found a welcome home with them, and for these many years since it has been the same to me, only changing to make room for the true light and work of God. I was converted to the truth by the Spirit of God through the letters and prayers of Sr. Carrie A. Thomas, and the examination of the work in 1867. Sr. Yerrington was the first one to embrace, and defend the Reorganized Church of Christ and the latter day work in Providence; Bro. Yerrington soon followed and has labored with me ever since as circumstances would permit. Their dwelling made the house of worship until the Church was fully established. We labored in Scituate and Simmonsville six years ago, and some obeyed; but the enemy fought the work sorely, and being called into other fields, the work was stayed and finally seemed almost dead—of late Bro. Yerrington opened the mission with renewed energy, persevering through heat and cold—a distance of about nine miles—until as the fruits were nearly ripening, several others volunteered their services and there have been twelve estimable members baptized in the Providence Branch from that mission. This branch has prospered under the care of Bro. F. M. Sheehy, as a patient and charitable administrator of the law and ordinances of the Church. Nineteen have been baptized here within a brief period, and our branch now numbers one hundred and seventy-four, if we mistake not. With prayers for God's blessings upon all Saints and the hastening of Zion's glory.

Yours in the work,

C. N. BROWN.

BRAZIL, Indiana,

December 12th, 1881.

Dear Herald:—After the lapse of most three years living among sectarian churches, I now have the privilege of knowing that there are a few of the Saints in this town, whose whereabouts I have not yet found out. There were two elders in this town from Utah last week; they preached at the Baptist Church. I did not get to speak with them. They preached an excellent sermon. My daughter Ida belongs to the Saints in Oregon, Missouri. My request is that the Herald will please announce my whereabouts, and if there are any Saints in the town of Brazil, I request that they will either call on us, or drop a line to me by card; my residence is south of the railroad, below the new foundry, in Mr. Shirfie's property. Any one can inquire at Mr. Shirfie's furniture store and find us easily.

I would love to take the Herald, but at the present do not feel able, as I am a widow. I broke up house keeping three years ago and came from Oregon, Missouri, to Indiana; and having the Latter Day Saints' faith, my relatives turned a cold shoulder to me; but I thank God I did not, nor ever will deny the faith. For when I first heard the Saints preach, I never shall forget, there appeared to be something before me like a dove fluttering, and I could not take my eyes off until I confessed that I had been misled. I was so overcome with the love of God and love to Christ and the Saints, that I was compelled to say, "Of a truth this is the true church." My faith is stronger all the time; O, I would to God I could live with the Saints. We sometimes think we will go to Independence, Missouri.

Good-by,

MATTIE AND IDA SHIFFLETT.

OAKDALE, Antelope Co., Neb.,

December 18th, 1881.

Dear Herald:—As I am deprived of meeting with any of our faith to worship God, to-day, I desire to spend a few moments in writing for your columns. I am at a loss to know what to say; but there is one blessed comfort to me, I am always ready to give a reason for the hope that is within me. To me the gospel is the most precious of all comforts. It promises everything for our comfort and happiness here, and then the greatest of all—life everlasting in the Kingdom of God, if we only obey his commandments. But, ah! how many times I feel to mourn over my weaknesses and forgetfulness of God's goodness to me; for he is good to all who seek earnestly to do his will; and if we err, he is willing to forgive. How thankful we ought to be for the blessed privilege of knowing that God will hear and help us. When we stumble he is waiting to lift us up. His arm of mercy is ever stretched out to help those who are willing to bow and ask his divine assistance; but there is only one channel to place ourselves in, that of humility, of child-like faith; with perfect confidence we will receive what we ask for.

But the Christian has much to contend with, for Satan seems to have so much of an influence in this world, that when we would do good, evil is present with us. But if we can only live so as to secure God's favor continually, we will have a sure guard against the temptations of the evil one. Then we say to him, as did our blessed Savior, "Get behind me, Satan." The Scriptures assures us if we will resist the devil he will flee from us.

My heart is filled with love and thankfulness to my Heavenly Father this morning and as I look out of the window and behold the things of his creation, the beautiful sun shining warm and bright, making everything around look cheerful, so also do I feel his Holy Spirit warming my heart, and speaking peace to my soul. Because my companion is in the ministry, and I am left with two little ones, I have had some to say, well you have your handsful, your lot is a hard one, &c. But they only look at one side of the picture. Sometimes when I am left void of God's Spirit to enable me to see things as they are, these thoughts will present themselves to my mind; but this beautiful Sabbath morning I think I can see both sides of the picture. I feel that God delights to bless those who are willing to sacrifice, that those who have not received the glorious sunshine, that the gospel brings, may; and my prayers shall ever be that God will enable his servants to be wise, diligent, and prayerful; seeking only to bring those that are in darkness, to obey the gospel and thereby receive a knowledge of its truth. Pray for me.

Your sister in the love of the gospel,

MRS. GEO. S. HYDE.

SAN BERNARDINO, California,

December 5th, 1881.

Dear Herald:—I congratulate you on your removal to new quarters, and hope your sphere of usefulness may very soon be enlarged, until your subscription list may be numbered by hundreds of thousands. You are our only preacher now, as we live a long way from our branch; and your visits are anxiously looked for. We are striving to hold to the "rod of iron," hoping that our lot may ere long be cast where we can enjoy the society of the Saints. Praying for the welfare of Zion, and asking an interest in the prayers of her children, I remain,

Yours in the gospel,

WM. PICKERING.

BLAIR, Nebraska,

December 19th, 1881.

Dear Brother Joseph:—I arrived in Blair to-day to hold a series of meetings. Have secured the use of the United Brethren Church. I preached here about five weeks ago, four discourses, and it seems that what was said at that time set Satan to work. When I came before to preach here, the people of the United Brethren Church insisted that I should preach in the church then, and wished me to continue preaching for them as they had no minister, and one lady said if I did continue I might get some of their members, but on account of the Spirit's direction I then went to Fremont. Since I left they have secured a minister, and their minds, it seems, have been stirred up by way of remembrance. God is working in this place, and I expect to, ere long, open the door that some may enter into the fold.

I commenced my missionary labors the seventh of November. The reason I did not commence sooner, I was making preparations for my family's sustenance, and "preparing the way before me that all things" that I had to do "might be done consistently and in order." Since commencing my labors, I have preached thirty-seven times, so that you can see that I have not had much time to play. I have preached since arriving in Nebraska, in Blair, Fremont, Pleasant Grove Branch, Valley, Douglass Branch, and at the residence of Bro. Jas. Brown, who lives about ten miles south of Blair. I will say as to my success, that I have been exceedingly blessed in sowing the seed, but have not as yet gathered any of the fruit. I have been kindly received in every place I have been, and have had fair and attentive congregations. Have had all my needs supplied. It would be useless to mention the names of those who have been kind to me, because I do not know of any who have not been so. As to the result of my labors, I will leave for others to tell, but this much I will say, that I feel encouraged to go on, in the labors of a missionary of this great work, but just begun. I expect to continue laboring in this mission until appointed otherwise, and then wherever I may be appointed, as I expect, as long as God desires my labors, to labor. Praying for the final triumph of Zion, I remain,

Your brother,

J. FRANK MINTUN.

SANDWICH, Illinois,

December 20th, 1881.

Brother Joseph Smith:—This leaves me well as usual. Hope this may find you in health and prosperity in your new location. Also those associated with you in the office, together with the Saints of the Lamoni Branch.

I came back here on November 10th on a visit. I have preached upon two occasions since here, once here and last Sabbath at school house in the Amboy Branch. I thought some of going into the eastern states again, but shall probably not go at present. I think of returning back to Independence again ere long.

I have been digging away at the carpenter work, from the last of May till the first of November, trying to get ahead a little in the way of our temporal welfare. Well I succeeded by the help of the Lord very well, so much so, I kept out of debt and have a few shillings left, enough to get back to Independence if I don't tarry too long away, and the robbers pass me by. I have not been able to preach much during the past summer, nevertheless I feel desirous to improve every suitable occasion in efforts for the cause of the Master. I forgot to mention I was with the branch at Mission over one Sabbath since here; and took part in the services with Bro. Hougas in speaking to those present. I met with Bro. Paterson at Amboy Branch and attended two of his meetings. His efforts were attended with some prospect of good being accomplished could they have been continued; but the weather and muddy roads were unfavorable, so he returned home for the present.

One of Bro. John Hook's sons, Charley by name, was buried last Saturday in Chicago. He died of small pox.

The coming Annual Conference appointed to be held at Independence, is looked upon with fond anticipation by the church there, to result in great good for the cause. I saw Sr. Blair to-day and she was well. Kind remembrance and regards to all.

Yours in Bonds,

C. G. LANPHEAR.

SAVANNA, Illinois,

December 10th, 1881.

Dear Herald:—I should be much pleased to have one of the Elders come here to preach. I see in the Herald that Bro. Whittaker is preaching as circumstances will permit; should be so glad to have him come if he preaches any where near here; I heard him at Clinton and was well pleased. The Herald is all we have here, and I the only one that takes that. Enquire for Homer Sartwell, or Jane Grayless, at Savanna, Carroll county, Illinois, and you will gladly be made welcome.

Conference Minutes.

PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT.

The conference of the Philadelphia District of the Church of Jesus Christ was held at Brooklyn, N. Y., November 26th and 27th, 1881. J. Stone, presiding; J. Squires, secretary.

J. Stone, president of the Philadelphia Branch reported in person, present numerical strength 48. W. H. Brown, of Hornerstown, reported by letter, present numerical strength 20. G. Whitnell, of the Brooklyn Branch, reported four had been baptized since last report; but had not been confirmed. J. A. Stewart, of Philadelphia, reported by letter. W. Small, of Camden, N. J., reported by letter. J. Squires reported in person.

The subject was taken up as to the appointing of a Bishop's Agent in the district, and it was suggested that Bro. Samuel Hopkins, of Hornerstown, would be a suitable person, providing he held the office of a Priest, and we hope his branch will recommend him to the next conference for that office.

Resolved that the Rules of Order should be strictly complied with at each district conference.

Elder John Stone was chosen president for the next four months; and W. H. Brown secretary.

A very pleasant and happy time was had during the day in hearing the word, and also bearing testimony to the truth of the work.

Adjourned to meet at Philadelphia, Pa., on the fourth Sunday in March, [26th] 1882, at 9 a. m.

FAR WEST DISTRICT.

The above conference convened at Delana Branch, Mo., November 26th and 27th, 1881. J. T. Kinneman in the chair; J. M. Terry, secretary; J. Burlington, clerk.

Branch Reports.—Saint Joseph 88; baptized 3; received by letter 1. Delana 52; received by letter 2, removed by letter 2. Pleasant Grove 33; received by certificate of baptism 1. Stewartville report referred back to branch for examination Starfield 39; received by baptism 1, ordination 1. German Stewartville 37. Far West report received too late for conference.

Elders W. Summerfield, G. C. Smith, S. Butler (by letter) J. Burlington, W. T. Bozarth, J. D. Craven, W. Lewis, A. J. Sesley, W. L. Booker, M. H. Forscutt, J. M. Terry, D. J. Powell and J. D. Flanders, reported in person. Also, Priests J. H. Meriam, —Neidorp, C. Paul and D. R. Baldwin; Teachers J. S. Constance and George Leech.

M. H. Forscutt and J. Burlington, as delegates from the St. Joseph Branch, reported; the latter stating that the St. Joseph Branch desired the district to share in the expense of holding a series of lectures through the district.

A committee of three was appointed to hear the statement of Sr. A. Bishop, who was present.

The appealed case of S. McKee was referred back to the Stewartville Branch.

A committee was appointed to consider the advisability of having a course of lectures through the district, and reported as follows: We, your committee on lectures, beg leave to report that we are unanimously of the opinion that a course of lectures on the gospel would be of great service to the district, and pledge ourselves in behalf of the several branches to which we belong to raise what funds we can to defray the expenses incident thereto. We further recommend that Brn. Forscutt, Burlington, and Winning, of St. Joseph, be appointed a committee to prepare a syllabus of the lectures, and confer with Brn. Joseph Smith, Z. H. Gurley and Joseph Luff, to assist in the course, and that the president of the mission, Bro. A. H. Smith, and Brn. M. H. Forscutt, W. T. Bozarth and J. M. Terry, of this district, be invited to take part in the course. We also agree to report to the Committee on Lectures what places can be secured in our several localities, and submit to their appointment as to times of said lectures. We also recommend that Bro. J. T. Kinneman be united to attend with, and assist these lectures as much as his circumstances will permit.

L. L. Babbitt reported.

The appeal case of W. E. Cadman was laid over until next conference. A resolution on representation was offered, and after some good humored debating, a substitute was offered, which was amended and adopted as follows:

That the Elders of the district meet in conference and transact business, and that each branch be privileged to be represented by a delegate, who shall be a Priest or Teacher, who may present the wishes of the branch to the conference.

The several branches were requested to take up collections to pay for the tent bought at General Conference.

The present district officers were sustained.

Moved that Priests, Teachers and Deacons, be accorded the privilege of speaking in conference but not voting.

Moved that R. Winning be appointed as Treasurer of district, to handle all district money.

On Sabbath morning the Saints met for prayer and testimony, when much of the spirit was present. M. H. Forscutt spoke at length on "Angelic Administration," to a crowded house, during the forenoon. Testimony meeting in the afternoon, with good feeling and manifestations of the gifts. In the evening W. T. Bozarth spoke to a full house with effect.

Adjourned to meet at St. Joseph, Mo., February 25th and 26th, 1882.

DES MOINES DISTRICT.

This conference was held at Edenville, Iowa, on December 2d, 3d, and 4th, 1881. I. N. White, presiding; John Sayer, clerk.

Branch Reports.—Edenville 55; received by letter 3, removed 3. Des Moines 43; baptized 2. Sheridan 54. Newton report returned for correction.

Elders' Reports.—J. X. Davis, J. S. Roth, I. N. White and B. Myers reported; Priest R. Etzenhouser reported.

I. N. White was sustained as president the next three months, and J. Sayer as clerk; and A. White & Bros., Book Agents; and F. W. Barbee, district treasurer; and J. X. Davis, Bishop's Agent.

Elders A. White and W. C. Nirk reported.

Resolved that we disorganized the Pleasantville Branch, all except one of its members having moved away.

Moved that it is in the sense of this conference that the laborers in this district labor under the direction of the district president.

Moved that Bro. Roth be appointed to solicit Bishop's Agent's funds during conference.

Moved that there be a committee of three appointed by this conference to go to the Sheridan Branch to settle difficulties that are existing there now, and report to the next conference.

Moved that the necessities of the Sheridan Branch be seen to at an early day, as the wisdom of the president shall see fit.

Report of F. W. Barbee, District Treasurer: On hand last report $34 50; paid to Bro. Etzenhouser $25; balance $9.50.

Whereas, that on the night of September 16th, 1881, the store of A. White & Bro., at Edenville, Iowa, was burglarized and burnt, and the entire contents lost, amounting to about $8,000 to them as evidence satisfactory to this conference shown; and whereas, there were $51.97 worth of Church books burnt, which made an additional loss to them of this amount, as they were the Book Agents of the Des Moines District; and whereas, this conference is unwilling to let said brethren lose the amount of those books, and further are not willing that the Church at large shall lose the amount, as we think it a dangerous precedent to set, for the Church to lose by relieving its officers as members from their obligations to the Church; therefore, be it resolved that a committee of three be chosen by this conference to solicit aid from the members of this district to liquidate said amount, and report at the next session of the Des Moines District Conference, to be held at Edenville, March 2d, 1882.

The committee chosen were R. Etzenhouser, J. S. Roth and C. F. Merrill.

Preaching on Friday evening by I. N. White, and on Saturday evening by W. C. Nirk, assisted by R. Etzenhouser; prayer meeting Sunday morning in charge of J. Sayer. Preaching on Sunday forenoon and evening by T. E. Lloyd, assisted by I. N. White, subject—Book of Mormon. Sacrament and fellowship meeting in the afternoon, after which three children were blessed by W. C. Nirk and J. S. Roth.

Moved that we adjourn to meet at Edenville, Iowa, 3d day of March, 1882, at 7 p. m.

CENTRAL KANSAS DISTRICT.

This conference convened on the 12th of November, 1881, at Netawaka, Kansas.

Branch Reports.—Good Intent 17. Scranton 29; expelled 2, baptized 3. Atchison 21. Centralia 24. Netawaka 24.

Elders J. B. Jarvis, D. Munns, W. Hopkins, G. George, A. Dodd, J. D. Jones, J. Buckley, D. Williams, and H. Green, reported. Priests J. McDougal and H. Parker reported.

Bro. J. Caffall reported having traveled three weeks in this district, preached twenty times, and by request will continue another week or two.

Preaching Saturday and Sunday evenings by Bro. J. Caffall, and on Sabbath morning by J. B. Jarvis.

Sacrament and testimony meeting on Sabbath afternoon.

Resolved that Bro. Caffall is requested to visit the Saints in Leavenworth, and after a proper consultation with them and wisdom suggests, to organize a branch there.

Resolved that the name of George Chapman, Sen., be taken from the Church Record, he having joined another religious society.

Adjourned to meet in Good Intent, the second Saturday in June, 1882.

STRING PRAIRIE AND NAUVOO DISTRICT.

The quarterly conference of the above district was held at Burlington, Iowa, 3d and 4th December, 1881. R. Lambert presided; J. Stevenson, clerk.

W. Head tendered his resignation as Bishop's Agent and District Treasurer. Accepted.

J. Lambert and J. R. Nicholas were appointed to audit Bro. Head's books.

Elders B. F. Durfee and Fred. Johnson reported.

The committee appointed to examine the books of the Bishop's Agent and District Treasurer reported: Find that the Bishop's Agent's account shows a balance due the Bishop of $3 50, which is not accounted for on the book. The Treasurer's account shows a balance due the district of $9.12, which is not accounted for on the book.

Explanation.—The above account is according to the book. The treasurer having failed to credit himself with $9.12 which he paid to me on his removal to Union county, Iowa, and which has been paid to A. W. Head, successor in office, and credited on the book. R. Lambert, president of district.

Resolved that this conference receive the resignation of the Bishop's Agent, and that the clerk notify Bishop Rogers of the same.

R. Lambert was elected president, and J. Stevenson clerk of the district. J. H. Lambert was recommended to Bishop I. L. Rogers as his agent for the String Prairie and Nauvoo District; J. Stevenson as treasurer of the district.

Resolved that the treasurer pay to J. Stevenson, clerk of district, $1 60 for fare to conference and back and for postage stamps.

Preaching in the evening by J. H. Lambert, on Sunday forenoon by J. Robinson, and in the evening by B. F. Durfee. A social meeting on Sunday afternoon.

Adjourned to meet at Keokuk, Iowa, the first Saturday, the 4th day of March, 1882.

KEWANEE DISTRICT.

Conference convened at the Saints' Church in Kewanee, Ills, on the 3d of December, 1881; H. C. Bronson, presiding; J. L. Terry, clerk.

Reports of Branches.—Kewanee Branch reports 88 members; removed by letter 3. Millersburg 47, removed by letter 1. Peoria 28; removed by letter 2. Rock Island 9; received by letter 2. Buffalo Prairie 75; removed 8. Bryant, Princeville, Canton, and St. David's, not reported.

Resolved that all the Elders in this district are to labor under the direction of the president.

Resolved that in the opinion of this conference, no branch should be organized within the precincts of this district without the consent of the district authorities, or by vote of conference of said district.

On motion, H. C. Bronson was sustained as president, and J. L. Terry as clerk.

Preaching by D. S. Holmes Sabbath forenoon, and H. C. Bronson in the evening.

Sacrament and testimony meeting on Sabbath afternoon.

Adjourned to meet at call of president.

MONTANA DISTRICT.

This conference was held at Reese Creek, Montana, November 26th and 27th, 1881. G. Reese, president, W. Worwood, clerk.

Branch Reports.—Gallatin 39; baptized 1, expelled 1. Willow Creek 24; received 4.

Report of Officers.—Elders J. E. Reese, L. Gaultier, G. Reese, W. Worwood. Priests J. Green, T. Harris, J. Pritchard. Teacher T. Reese.

Bishop's Agent, L. Gaultier, presented the following: Received since last report, for Utah Mission $15; for Utah Chapel $100. Paid W. W. Blair for Utah Mission $7; paid W. W. Blair for Utah Chapel $100. On hand $10.

The report was audited and found correct.

An appeal from the decision of Gallatin Branch by Mary Ann Gee was read by the clerk. Referred to W. Worwood, L. Gaultier and Jas. Bamber, as committee.

G. Reese, was appointed president of the Montana District for the ensuing three months, and W. Worwood as clerk.

Resolved that the president appoint a committee of three to visit the scattered members and find out their determinations, and that they report the result at the next conference, that the conference may take action on them that will not unite with a branch.

S. Gaultier, Father Reese and Wm. Worwood were appointed said committee.

That a copy of the resolution be furnished the scattered members.

Prayer and testimony in the evening. A peaceful time was enjoyed. Preaching by Elder L. Gaultier on Sunday forenoon, and by Elder Wm. Worwood in the afternoon. The evening was occupied by prayer and sacrament meeting. Testimonies rich in faith. The gifts dispensed. That happy hour will long be remembered as the grandest time had on Reese Creek.

Adjourned to meet at Willow Creek, Montana, on the last Saturday and Sunday in February, [25th and 26th], 1882, in the forenoon.

Miscellaneous.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

Having received notice from Brn. Richard Lambert and John Stevenson, president and clerk of the Nauvoo and String Prairie District, that choice has been made of Bro. John H. Lambert to succeed Bro. A. Walter Head, as Bishop's Agent, I hereby confirm said choice and appoint him as my agent in said district.

I. L. ROGERS, Presiding Bishop.

SANDWICH, ILL., January 1st, 1882.

TO QUORUM OF SEVENTY.

Whereas the Quorum of Twelve recommend, at last April Conference, that the Quorum of Seventy take some active measures in "pruning" the said quorum of inactive members, because of the present impaired condition of the same on account of the apparent slothful condition of some; and,

Whereas, many notices have appeared in Herald asking for reports from said members, (see Herald February 1, '81, p. 47), and nothing of a satisfactory nature has been received from a large proportion of the quorum; and,

Whereas, the law requires: "Every man to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence; and he that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand." And,

Whereas, we believe the time has come, and the grave responsibilities of the work demand that we take some decisive action to place ourselves in a condition to fulfill the law governing us as a quorum. Therefore, be it hereby

Resolved, that action will be taken at the Annual Conference of April, 1882, and the officers of the quorum are authorized to notify all the members of the quorum of this fact, and make a final appeal to them through the Saints' Herald to report to the quorum officers at the conference aforementioned, either in person or by letter, stating their ability or inability to labor, and their reasons therefor, and all members who are proven unworthy shall then be dropped.

J. F. McDOWELL, Sec., } Committee.
COLUMBUS SCOTT.

E. C. BRAND, Pres.

Adopted by quorum September 9th, 1881, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

OBITUARIES.—Obituary notices not exceeding one hundred words, about twelve lines, will be published free of charge; when exceeding one hundred words, five cents for each additional eight words (one line) will be charged; notices of prominent Church officials exempted. Money to accompany notice.

MARRIED.

ROSCHKE—GRIMMER.—At the residence of Bro. John C. Gardner, in St. Joseph, Missouri, Nov. 15th, 1881, Bro. Wm. Roschke and Sr. Fredericka Grimmer; the ceremony being performed by Elder Thomas Nutt, of Mound City. After partaking of supper and spending the evening in social enjoyment, the newly married couple were conveyed by hack to their already furnished home on Second Street.

"May their life be long and happy,
May friends surround their way;
May the future that awaits them,
Be as a lovely May.

MATHER—HALLIDAY.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Leland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, by Elder P. Cadwell, Thursday, December 8th, 1881, Mr. James H. Mather and Miss Elizabeth A. Halliday, all of said county and state. About seventy guests were present on the enjoyable occasion, and a large and valuable list of presents formed an interesting feature of the occasion.

LYLE—RICHARDS.—At Leon, Decatur county, Iowa, December 22d, 1881, by Samuel Forey, a Justice of the Peace, Charles R. Lyle, only surviving son of Bro. Robert Lyle, and Lin E. Richards, all of New Buda Township, near Lamoni, Iowa.

WILLIAM—LEYTHAM.—At the residence of the bride's parents at Samison, Shelby county Iowa, by Elder Henry Halliday, on Thursday, November 24th, 1881, Mr. Josiah Williams and Sr. Eleanor Leytham, daughter of Bro. Richard and Elizabeth Leytham. A large number of friends and relatives of the parties were gathered to witness the ceremony and partake of the bounteous feast prepared for the occasion. Quite a number of presents were presented to the bride at the time.

DIED.

MORGAN.—At Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, Central America, September 23d, 1880, Harriet, beloved wife of Bro. H. H. Morgan. She was born June 16th, 1825, at Lima village, Livingstone county, New York. Her parents, Jabez D. and Clara Fosdick, were early members of the old Church in the days of Joseph and Hyrum, the martyrs; went through most of the persecutions of Jackson county and Far West, Missouri, and Illinois. She was rebaptized May 28th, 1867, by Alex. H. Smith; confirmed by Elder Wm. Anderson, Sacramento, California, and departed this life firm in the faith.

PAFREYMAN.—At Jeffersonville, Illinois, November 29th, 1881, of inflammation of the stomach, Elder Joseph Palfreyman. He belonged to the old church; passed through the trials of Utah, got discouraged for a time, but finally accepted the Reorganization, was baptized in Illinois, by Elder W. W. Blair. Before his death he quietly arranged his temporal affairs, bore a testimony to the latter day work, "drew up his feet and was gathered to his fathers."

HOLLIS.—At home, in Floyd county, Indiana, November 20th, 1881, of typhoid fever, ending in quick consumption, Ellen Jane, wife of Tillman Hollis, aged forty years; also her two children, Ida Elizabeth, nine years old; and Joseph Alma, aged fourteen months; both of typhoid fever. Sister Hollis, was baptized by Bro. Wm. H. Kelley, at Marriette, Crawford county, Indiana, in 1871.

MCINTOSH.—At his home in Galland's Grove, Iowa, January 27th, 1881, of consumption, William C. McIntosh, son of John A. and Malinda McIntosh. He was born in Pottawattamie county, Iowa, October 16th, 1854, and was baptized June 2d, 1864, by his father, John A. McIntosh. He passed away with a sense of his acceptance with God, with a hope of immortality and eternal life. Funeral services by Ingvert Hansen.

BADDER.—At Grove Mills, Ontario, October 12th, 1881, of diphtheria, Jason Alma, son of Bro. Charles and Sr. Nancy Badder, aged 7 years, 7 months, and 12 days. Also at the same place, October 17th, 1881, of diphtheria, Leonard Melvin, son of Bro. Charles and Sr. Nancy Badder, aged 5 years, 10 months, and 7 days. Funeral services were held, conducted by Elder John H. Lake, who preached the sermon.

TUCKER.—At Osceola, Iowa, December 4th, 1881, Bro. Alpheus Tucker, aged 76 years, 6 months and 15 days. He was baptized August, 1878, by Elder B. V. Springer, at Davis City, Iowa. There were no funeral services, no Elders of the Church being near to obtain.

MASON.—At Birmingham, England, July 15th, 1881, of old age, sister Maria Mason, in the 87th year of her age. Sister Mason was an old-time Saint, a widow, who sacrificed her home and all that was dear to her save one daughter, and emigrated to Utah in 1854, believing that she was doing the will of God; but soon became disgusted with the iniquity she saw and returned to her native land in 1860; she was baptized into the Reorganization by Bro. G. Hatt in 1866, and remained until death a faithful Saint, and departed with a sure hope of a glorious resurrection. She was respected by all who knew her.

THE SAINTS' HERALD is published SEMI-MONTHLY, at Lamoni, Decatur Co., Iowa, by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and is edited by JOSEPH SMITH. $2.15 per year. All remittances, orders, and business communications intended for the office of publication, should be directed to Joseph Smith, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa. Money may be sent Draft on Chicago; by Post Office Order on Leon, Iowa; by Registered Letter, or by Express to Lamoni, Iowa; but there is very little risk in sending small sums in an ordinary letter.

Be Ye One.

"That they may be one, even as we are one."

—Jesus.

THE reasons assigned by the Son of God, in his ever memorable prayer, found in John 17, for desiring that those who believe in him might be one, were, first, "That the world may believe that thou hast sent me." Second, "That they may be made perfect in me." Third, "That the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me."

These reasons are worthy of the Divine pleader, and must call forth the admiration of all who read and contemplate this sublime prayer. They reveal the divine purpose in giving the gospel to man, and prove the entirely unselfish nature of the aims and ends sought; and also set in bold relief and in sublime grandeur, the immaculately pure and holy character, and the infinitely sublime and boundless love of "Him who gave himself for us." He felt that this oneness was essential for the conversion of the world, and the perfection of all believers, and that the world's trust in him as the Savior of mankind might be based upon the rock of knowledge which should enable men to smile at the fierce rage of infidelity of every form, and stand unmoved amid all the attacks of men or demons.

In the light of this truth, that this oneness is essential, how plain the duty of every child of God to seek to approximate to that divine excellence; and to labor unceasingly until we attain to the desired end. If the unity of the children of God is one of the grand evidences by which the world is to be led to believe in Christ, what a tremendous responsibility rests upon the Church! It is not enough to preach the gospel; we must prove to the world by our lives that the gospel does yield in us "The peaceable fruits of righteousness." It is not enough that we have the gifts of the spirit; we must bear the fruits of the spirit, which, combined, produce that perfect oneness that is the burden of our Savior's prayer. If the gospel in us does not prove its power to make us one, one in the bonds of love and peace, one in all that is good and great, free from all the bitter envyings, jealousies, hatred and strife of the evil world; then we have only bowed to the letter, and that in empty form, without contrition of soul, repentance for sin, and abiding faith in Christ; or we have neglected to cultivate those excellencies which would bring us to this condition. Hence, while we preach the gospel of the kingdom, our barrenness of these fruits makes the gospel appear to the world as a fable, without power to bless or to save; thus we place barriers in the way of the world's conversion, and spread darkness instead of light; and by this means are treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath. How great indeed is the responsibility resting upon us as individuals and as a church!

Latter Day Saints, to us is committed the highest duty, the noblest task and the grandest opportunity. While the earth is wrapped in spiritual darkness, upon us the light has dawned; and upon us rests the duty of spreading that light o'er all the dark corners of the earth; and of proving to the world that Jesus is indeed the Christ, sent of God, to be the Savior of the world; that in his gospel there is hope for humanity, therein is power to bless in this life, and to exalt us to eternal life and glory. The opportunity is ours to become in a certain sense saviors to our fellowmen; and it is written, "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and forever."

Yes! we have opportunity of being co-workers with God and with Christ, for the exaltation of our race. But in order to do this we must be one. Our words, our acts, our lives, must prove that obedience to the gospel has raised us above jealousies and envyings, and filled our souls with perfect love; and to this end we must cherish and cultivate those graces spoken of by Jesus in his sermon on the mount, and by Paul, in Gal. 5: 22, 23. Also by Peter in his second epistle, first chapter: "For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins." Brethren, if we all cultivated the excellencies of the gospel, and cherished them in our hearts, the fruits of righteousness would be so evident to the world that they would be compelled to confess its power, and when we met in conference, we should be enabled to present such a spectacle of love and unity that the world has never seen since the Apostolic age. None would be found impugning the motives of his brethren on account of difference of opinion; we should be slow to charge dishonest intention, and slower still to watch for iniquity, and lie in wait to catch at each others words in order to hold them up to the contempt of the assembly. We would be ever ready to throw the mantle of charity over every inadvertent word, and exercise Christ-like forbearance, reproving with meekness, where it becomes our duty. No words of bitterness would fall from our lips, because no foul suspicion would be lurking in our hearts, and we should realize the force and blessedness of that beautiful sentiment of the Psalmist, "Behold how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

To the heavens there can be no sadder scene than when the children of the Most High, purchased by the precious blood of Christ, pledged in the holiest vows to the love of God and humanity, have met in solemn assembly, to consider the interests of the cause of truth, to allow themselves to become divided in feeling and purpose, permitting suspicion and anger to rankle in their hearts, and inspire their tongues, hurling forth words of bitterness to sting like an adder, and perhaps bring spiritual death, thus presenting the sorrowful spectacle of division and strife in the armies of the living God. The heavens weep over such scenes, and hell lifts its hideous head and rejoices over its fallen prey, while the cloud over the honest seeker after truth increases in blackness, and shrouds his heart in dark despair. He had heard the good news and glad tidings that the angels have brought again to earth; had drank in the joyful sound, and came there to get a deeper draught of its blessedness; but alas, instead of brotherly kindness he sees bitterness, instead of kind words he hears invectives. In the place of perfect confidence he finds evidences of suspicion, envyings of each other instead of love; and his soul sickens, and he turns sadly away, with a shattered faith, if any is left within him, and hopes ruined, crushed out; and we are responsible! It is not enough that he heard eloquent discourses upon the kingdom of God, strong and cogent arguments to prove the truthfulness of Zion's cause. If the lips that uttered those discourses and gave voice to those arguments, now hurl shafts of venom into each others bosoms, it is no wonder if the weary heart fails, and the halting stumble from the path, having persuaded themselves because of the weakness of those who should be pillars in God's building; that the hope of humanity had failed, and therefore it was vain to serve the Lord or to search further for his truth. But where will the dread responsibility rest? On the unfaithful steward! Brethren, will the gratification of being thought smart and keen in debate, quick to take advantage of the words, or supposed weakness of a brother who differs from us, make up for the rankling wounds we have made, for the bitter estrangements we have caused, the sad disappointment of those who came asking for the bread of life while we gave them a stone? Will it answer in the the place of that welcome plaudit that will fall upon the ears of the meek and humble follower of Jesus, when the great day of awards has come? "What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord." Are we sure we have not driven some from the gate of the fold by our contention and unwillingness to accord to others the same honesty of motive we claim for ourselves? Shall we not be wiser, and extend to others that which we so loudly claim for ourselves? Will we not crush our vanity and foolish self-love, and cultivate brotherly love and Christ-like forbearance? We may never recall the wanderer whom our folly has driven from the fold, but we may lead others there, and by our true repentance regain the favor of our Father in heaven, and be saved in the kingdom of God, even though it be "so as by fire."

Brethren, I am sure we all love the cause of truth; we also desire to grow in love to God and our brethren. Yes, we desire to bless them, but we are weak, and too easily flattered by self-love, and our eyes are too easily blinded to our own weaknesses, while this perversity of vision leads us to magnify the failings of our brethren, and in our haste we condemn, as an evil, that which is a mere difference of opinion. Let us from this time humble ourselves before God and our fellows, seek unto him for strength that we may as Elders of Israel rise to the grandeur of our opportunities, and faithfully discharge our duties by lifting the veil of darkness that enshrouds the world, and spread the glorious light of the gospel, by our righteous lives as well as our preaching. Then we shall prove to the world that there is power in the gospel to make men better; to elevate them in the scale of being here, and perfect and exalt them to eternal glory hereafter; and thereby shall they be led to believe the Christ, and know that God sent him in the world to be the Savior of all men who are willing to receive his great salvation. May we rise to the grandeur of this holy calling, and become one as the Father and Son are one.

C. DEBBY.

Solemn Assembly.

"THEREFORE, verily I say unto you, my friends, call your solemn assembly, as I have commanded you." This is evidently a subject of very great interest to all who love the welfare of the Church of Christ, and has occupied the thoughts of many in the Church at times of late, as to the feasibility, propriety, nature and purposes, of calling a solemn assembly in the near future. Whether it will be considered presumptuous in us to attempt to express a few thoughts on this topic, we are not now prepared to say, but will make an effort to suggest a few thoughts, trusting for light to direct us in harmony with the truth.

The propriety of holding assemblies in all well regulated organizations or governments, whether secular or religious, will not be questioned by any intelligent person for a moment. All experience proves it to be necessary. But there is evidently a difference of no small degree in the nature and purposes of assemblies as usually held, and a solemn assembly in the Church, and in making an effort to write of the latter, we confess to a degree of reserve on account of its sacredness, that does not attend the consideration of other assemblies than these. That assemblies of a solemn character have been considered necessary in the past, during the various dispensations of the Church, its record fully attests, so far as that record has been preserved and handed down. That there is good reason for convening such convocations in the Church to-day, is evident from the provisions made for them in the law revealed to the Church.

It may be argued that our text is of specific application, and has been complied with already; however this may be, it reveals the principle anew, and illustrates the subject in its obligatory sense, that it comes to the Church of Christ with divine authority.

Circumstances attending the organization and development of the divine economy in the various dispensations of the past, have rendered solemn assemblies necessary. Whether the circumstances attending the Reorganization are of such a character as to require a solemn convocation of the quorums of the Church in the new future, may not be made to appear clear to all now. Be this as it may, yet it seems quite clear to our mind, that one of the leading events yet to characterize the history of the Church militant, is the assembling of the authorities of the Church in solemn conclave. This by promise: "In mine own due time will I call upon the seed of Joseph Smith, and will bring one forth, and he shall be mighty and strong; and he shall preside over the High Priesthood of my Church. And then shall the quorums assemble, and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be re-inhabited, as I said unto my servant Joseph; after many days shall all these things be accomplished."

The former half of this prophecy, or paragraph, has been fulfilled, and this is reason to us for looking for the accomplishment of the latter. Uniformity of action is necessary, not only in policy, but in teaching fundamentals, in order to success in any grand and great enterprise, especially that relating to man's eternal welfare; on the part of all engaged in prosecuting the great work. One of the most baneful influences to the good of humanity at work in the world to-day, is the divergence from unity of faith and practice now manifesting itself in almost all classes of society. Its tendency is to disorganize, its motor is rebellion against that which is legal and righteous.

The advocate of this evil doctrine arrests some of the most gigantic minds of the age. Its oozing perforated the surface of Dr. Thomas' religious citadel in his famous tour on continued revelation, when he remarked: "But as organizations enlarged and debates came in, men said, 'we must put truth in a mold; we must give it a form;' they were afraid to let it grow in the heart as a life and power, and hence sought to make it fast in forms of logic and philosophy, and to set it out in clean-cut definitions. And there were reasons why they did this, and some good has resulted, but the life of religion has been too often cramped and hurt, and the churches have become systems of theology, or iron bedsteads by which to try men's beliefs, rather than joyful homes of love, and song, and worship, and life. Why, I ask, should we so hedge about with rigid forms the life of truth in the world? * * * The old definitions of liberty are too small for our day."

The ideas here advanced appear to us like those who deny revelation from God to-day, in regard to Rev. 22:18, 19. Because the Lord there declares that man shall not "add" to or take from the words of that little book,—the Book of Revelation,—they, by a superficial reading of the passage, conclude that the Lord has closed HIS OWN MOUTH, and will reveal nothing more!

Because uninspired men have formulated creeds, and evolved systems of theology which are in many respects at variance with the revealed will of God, and set them "fast in forms of logic," and endeavored to express them "in clean-cut definitions, and because these systems have served as metaphorical "iron bedsteads," by which men have been tried, is that a good reason why the great "author and finisher of the faith" should not reveal his will in plainness and definiteness?

A strange position for the Doctor to occupy. While opposing one wrong and an extreme, he recklessly pushes on to the other! And while attempting to act the part of David in the tragedy, he unwittingly assumes the position of Goliath! While opposing the unrighteous liberties of men, he questions the right of the Infinite.

Uniformity of action and purpose characterize the works of the Lord in all departments of the natural world, and shall we say that the moral world is an exception? That less order is manifested in the great scheme ordained for the spiritual and eternal welfare of his rational creatures than for their temporal; or than characterizes the vegetable, mineral, or solar kingdoms? If such be the case, why reveal laws of a moral or spiritual nature at all? By the revelation of law to man, God aimed to reach his understanding, man is to "hear," "see," "understand" with his heart, said the great law-giver. The dimensions of the ark were given minutely to Noah. The pattern of the Tabernacle was specifically described to Moses, with the order of the Jewish worship, and Moses was solemnly charged to execute all in strict accordance with the pattern shown. Notwithstanding Jesus said, "straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leads to life," yet some refuse to accept as valid the transaction occurring between Philip and the Eunuch, because of the definite statement: "if thou believeth with all thine heart thou mayest." What more clear and concise than, "He that climbeth up SOME OTHER WAY is a thief and a robber?" "I am the way, the truth, and the life." "He that sent me, gave me a commandment what I should say, and what I should speak, and I know that his commandment is life everlasting." "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man is born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter the kingdom of God." "This is the way, walk ye in it." "Why do you call me Lord, Lord, and do not the things I command you?" If our "life everlasting" is in doing "the things" commanded, why should the Lord be understood as giving commands of an equivocal character?

Again, Jesus said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." "Paul says: I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth it, Christ is to be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on all those who know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." In view then of the eternal consequences to the whole world, contingent upon its acceptance or rejection of THE GOSPEL revealed through Christ; does it not appear unreasonable to conclude that God proposes to deal equivocally with, or rather reveal himself to them in many, INDEFINITE ways—to save them every way in general, and in no definite, particular way?

The idea that God panders to any and every thing called religion, or theology, and that he accedes to it as divine,—of him, has taken such a deep hold on society at large, that it is quite out of the question to convince them that God "changes not," that he is without the "shadow of turning," they supposing that in the great conflict that has been going on between them and God, he has finally yielded the question, that his ways are their ways, and his thoughts are as their thoughts, that he has prevaricated somewhat, and will finally save them by their, "own righteousness," and not by his, which is revealed in the gospel.

The experience of the world, past and present, demonstrate the fact that unity of action and purpose is absolutely necessary in any organized government, among all the agencies employed, to its advancement and success. But unity of action is based on unity of understanding, and unity of understanding is dependent on unity of teaching and instruction. And this brings us to the consideration of the teachers and their qualifications. "Understandest thou what thou readest? How can I except some man guide me?" It is requisite that men be divinely "called," that they may teach or "guide," the people with divine acceptance. "How shall they preach except they be sent." "No man takes this honor to himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron." "Pray ye therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth more laborers into the vineyard." Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you." "They that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful."

A divine call, with ordination in accord with divine provision, legally authorizes men to act and teach as ministers of the laws and ordinances of the Kingdom of God, while the revealed laws of God determine the manner of their administrations and teaching. But unity of ministerial action and teaching depends upon their being "of the same mind, and of the same judgment" touching the revealed law. "How can two walk together except they be agreed?" asked the Savior. And hence the necessity of ministerial instruction. Of Jesus the great teacher it is written: "And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain; and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying, And it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his disciples, he departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities." "For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me." "The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach, until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen: to whom also he shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God; and being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence."—Acts 1:1-5.

Jesus thus taught his disciples whom he had called, chosen and ordained, revealing the great fundamental principles of the scheme of eternal redemption, and developing the order of the divine government, of which they were the first officers and ministers on earth. To them were delivered "the keys of the kingdom," thus connecting the powers of heaven with their ministrations here among men. Through which the divine seal was placed on their righteous ministrations on earth, constituting them "laborers together with God!" Having received "the ministry of reconcil- iation," and "the word of reconciliation," they could in truth and fact, pray the world "in Christ's stead be ye reconciled to God." All acting in unity with each other.

"As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God." "And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently, and my grace shall attend you."

Christ, the chief teacher sent of God to men, fulfilled his mission to earth and is gone to the Father. He taught all they were able to bear at that time, and instructed that those who were qualified should "feed the lambs;" and provided, as we see by the above instructions, that those appointed to minister should instruct each other in "all things that is expedient for them to understand" pertaining "to the kingdom of God." But that the ministry might be more fully prepared to act in harmony with that department of the kingdom in heaven, they were promised an endowment from on high, of "another comforter,"—a divine intelligent "guide," by which they are to be filled with light, that thereby the revealed law as a lamp, might illumine the pathway of duty. It must not be forgotten that the "guide" from above is to render the path marked out by "the LAW of the" kingdom or "gospel" visible, so that all who desire to walk therein may do so, intelligently, understandingly. How beautiful the thought! Christ came, cast up the straight and narrow path; to his ministry as ambassadors, is given the word and the Spirit, which acting conjointly, constitute the celestial lamp, as they go forward as "light bearers," the light thus reflecting on the path, enabling all who desire to walk therein, seeing the light.

As a means to the proper qualification of the ambassadors of Christ, and to enable them to carry out effectually the duty of instructing each other, it has been deemed wise in the Deity to convene those of his servants whom he chooses, in assemblies, called in modern revelations "solemn assemblies." Moses, by commandment of God assembled the elders of Israel, that they might more fully prepare themselves, and be prepared to act in the duties of their holy calling. The early disciples, prior to entering upon the fulfillment of their extensive mission to the great world, assembled themselves together, where they evidently instructed each other in their sacred obligations, and while thus setting themselves in order, it pleased the heavenly Father to clothe them with power and light from on high. Being thus divinely empowered, they, with legal dignity, opened the door of the kingdom to the anxious, humbled ones, from many nations, waiting to be authoritatively inducted into the kingdom of light. The light thus beginning to be reflected among the nations, radiated with increased power for a season.

The gospel in word and authority, in the Holy Ghost and much assurance, was published to the nations of earth, with glorious success during one or two centuries. Yes, beautiful upon the mountains came the feet of the endowed, heralding the "glad tidings of great joy," gladdening the hearts of millions, waking the world from a deep sleep, manifesting light and glory, for "their sound went out into all the world," and the world rejoiced in the light for a time. "But men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." A mighty conflict of long duration occurred between the light and the darkness. Man was contested for as the trophy. The natural man prevailed in the great conflict, and after an arduous struggle the spiritual man yielded, and the light now waning receded before the triumphant march of darkness.

As admitted by Protestantism of the present day, this spiritual blindness and darkness has reigned supreme for many centuries past, with scarcely a ray of light to render the darkness visible. Men have wandered far away from the right way. They builded a spiritual tower,—a mighty Babylon of mystery has arose on the downfall and dissolution of the temple of light that graced the earth for a season. Its light failed before the shadow thrown over the earth by the "tower which the children of men builded." But their "tongue" has been confounded, their power is being divided, and their confusion increases; in their efforts to save themselves, minor towers arise to view, which tend to confuse the minds of the children of men still more, and still increase the burden assumed by them.

Is this reign of darkness to last always? Is the shadow of Babylon's tower forever to obscure the light? Is the temple light to lay in ruins, forever buried beneath debris of human tradition and the superstition of the darkened ages just past? Shall the Sun of Righteousness arise no more to illumine the the darkness, with healing in his beams? Shall not the clouds that o'erspread the spiritual horizon break away, and the light shine forth from on high? Shall not the scattered stones and fragments of the temple of light be exhumed from their buried condition, and "the desolations of many generations," and that temple be builded again? Yes. Zion's children that have been scattered shall again be gathered, by the overruling power of the divine benevolent purpose of our God. (Eph. 1:9, 10). They shall greatly rejoice when God interposes to "build up Zion," when "his servants take pleasure in her stones, and favor the dust thereof." (Psalm 102). "O thou afflicted, tossed with tempests, and not comforted; behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colors, and lay thy foundations with sapphires. And I will make thy windows with agates, and thy gates with carbuncles, and all thy borders with pleasant stones. And all thy children shall be TAUGHT OF THE LORD: and great shall be the peace of thy children." (Isa. 54:11, 13). "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. * * His glory shall be seen upon thee, and the gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. * * I will also make thine officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness." (Isa. 60). After this tenor speaks "the word of prophecy" that "shines as a light in a dark place," with reference to the erection of the temple of light—Zion—the restoration of the Church of Christ in these last days.

God has always worked through men in all the dispensations of his providence among men for their good, and it is evident that in the teaching of Zion's children according to the foregoing prophecy, man will be used as one of the agencies to perform the work; and as the gentiles are to be brought to the light of Zion, and "the abundance of the sea" is to "be converted," and as it is "the law of the Lord" that "is perfect, converting the soul," it seems altogether evident that a work of gigantic magnitude is yet before the servants of God for their accomplishment, and it is equally as certain that a great preparation on their part is necessary to enable them to do this work. Such a work as is here predicted to be accomplished, is not to be brought to pass by a ministry of diverse faith, of divided sentiments, or discordant claims. Nothing short of a well disciplined, united ministry, in full co-operation with God, will fulfill the work.

The building material of the Church, brought together from the discordant elements of the world in its religiously divided state, brings many ideas at variance with the truth; these, like the inconsistent parts connected with ores from various mines, have to be laid aside before the materials can be used to proper advantage. These excrescences must be removed, or the material is useless. Without this, the building formed possesses in itself the elements of its own dissolution. Like disease in a body, unless eradicated, brings destruction to the body infected. "Purge out from among you the old leaven, that you may be a new lump," says Paul. As no one questions that the above illustrates the facts in the case, is it not good reason for ministerial discipline? Would it not appear reasonable and consistent in the Lord, in bringing "the Church out of the wilderness" in these last days, "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, and terrible as an army with banners," to re-establish every regulation necessary to its successful development and perfection as a "holy temple in the Lord?" Prominent among these regulations, according to the revelations given, is that of the solemn assembly.

If the Levites, being born and brought up in the Israelitish Commonwealth, and expecting to minister in and for the nation, were qualified for their work through mutual understanding brought about by solemn convention; and it was necessary that the disciples of Christ anciently, solemnly consulted together, in order to be able to labor in unity for the best interests of the cause of Christ and the salvation of mankind, we can not see that it would be inconsistent with the divine economy that the servants of God should solemnly assemble together in this age, that they thereby might instruct and edify each other, and that they might be endowed with power from on high to enable them to gather and polish the gems for the crown of the Master. That they as "wise master builders" might, as instruments in God's hands, build up acceptably "the spiritual house" to God.

But to come directly to the question in its immediate relation to the Church now, several things are to be taken into consideration. Quorums once organized and favored with the high and holy privilege of assembling solemnly by special revelation, and receiving their endowment, have wandered away in to darkness, "departed from the faith," forfeited their privileges and powers as acceptable ministers of Christ, and been disorganized. A rejected church has followed them to darkness and confusion. Added to the great work before referred to, is the work of reclaiming and moulding over the rejected ones, to the furthest extent possible.

A "remnant" is being organized anew, to whom God has committed the accomplishment of the work referred to, with its necessary appendages. Are they sufficiently organized to assemble in accordance with law governing such an assembly?

"Then shall the quorums be assembled," is the word of promise. Have those expected to assemble "organized" themselves? Have they sanctified themselves by fasting and prayer? Have they purified their hearts, and cleansed their hands and feet? Are they "clean" from the blood of this generation? Have all the necessary preparation and the conditions of the law been complied with on the part of all directly concerned, to allow them to assemble acceptably to the Lord? Are we prepared for the Savior to "testify" to the Father such a testimony as will render us fully acceptable to the reception of the endowment?

Perhaps it will be wise to take into consideration the important questions of a vital character, concerning which there exists a diversity of understanding, among the various minds of the Church, if any such exist. Likewise, of a suitable place in which to assemble, surrounded by suitable circumstances.

Does any responsibility attach to the members of the Church at large, as to whether a solemn assembly be held in the Church or not? A general examination of all the bearings of this subject might develop the fact that a matter of general interest to the whole Church concerns all in some regards. I apprehend that something more than a call to the quorums by revelation is necessary to the holding of a solemn assembly. Doubtless all the Saints in all the world would be glad, and rejoice at the arrival of the day when the disabilities under which we now labor will be removed, the ministry go forth being endowed with the power and Spirit of God, "to prune the vineyard of the Lord with a mighty pruning for the last time." And all this that the kingdom of God may come, that his will may be done on earth as it is in heaven.

C. SCOTT.

Wonders of the Mounds.

DR. F. STINSON writes as follows to the Evansville Journal: Below I give the result of an archaeological search made during a two weeks' rambling through the hills and valleys of Perry county, Indiana, and Breckenridge county, Kentucky.

First, I found in the bend of what is known as Polk's bottom and Tobin's point, fire-pits, quite a number, at an average depth of ten feet below the surface. In these pits were ashes, fire-coals, arrow-heads, and stone axes. In one Mr. Tobin found a tanner's fleshing knife and two pieces of French silver coin, only dating back a little over a hundred years, showing about what date these fire-places were last used, and that ten feet of solid dirt had formed on the top of them in less than one hundred years. On the surface, above the pits or fire-places, there were abundance of signs of camping grounds, covered with flints, mussel shells, etc. Great quantities of arrow-heads have been found on the surface all over this bend. I next went in company with James J. Wheeler to what is known as Cedar Lick cave, situated four miles north of Rome, Spencer county. Here we found the aborigines had occupied this cave or rock house as a dwelling for perhaps centuries, for we found ashes and burned earth, for some three feet deep, all over the bottom of this cave, which was thirty by forty feet. Buried in these ashes had been found human skeletons, with arrow-heads, axes and fragments of flint. Some hundred and fifty yards from this rock house we found two holes drilled in sandstone, eight inches in diameter at the top, tapering to the bottom, twenty-two inches deep. These are called mortars, and by the by I learned of some seventy-five of these mortars in Breckenridge county, Kentucky, all about the same patterns. In some of these mortars were found boulders, but nowhere were pestles found that could have been used for pounding corn in these mortars. I next visited a cave situated about two miles north of Hardensburg, Breckenridge county, Kentucky, on Harden's creek. This cave or rock house was forty by twenty feet in diameter.

Mr. H. Clay Jolly dug into this cave in the year 1872, when he found eleven and a half feet of ashes all over the bottom. In the center and at the bottom was an altar, built of sandstone, based upon a stool of sandstone. The altar was twenty-six by twenty-three inches in diameter, thirty-four inches high, concave on the top and filled with ashes and fire-coals. On two sides of this altar lay a tier of human skeletons, ten in each row. Then on the top of each tier lay another one, with some ten inches of ashes between, until there were eleven and one-half feet of skeletons and ashes in depth, covering the top of the altar with ashes some seven feet—supposed to be about fifty skeletons in all, and seven thousand four hundred bushels of ashes.

Upon or over the cranium of each of these skeletons lay a flat rock, each skeleton showing signs of having been burned about the waist before interment. With the exceptions of those burned portions the skeletons were remarkably well preserved, ashes and salt-peter preserving them—their teeth round and entire, all of the incisors pointed or serrated. At the lower part of the chest were numerous relics, most of which were ornaments composed of cannel coal, shell and stone. By the side of each of these skulls was found a wisp of hair or queue some twelve inches long, and tied in three places. Then commingling with the ashes and skeletons were found great quantities of relics, such as flints, arrow heads, axes, scrapers, pelters and knives, some of which I procured from Mr. Jolly and brought home with me.

The wonderful development in this cave is very peculiar, and as yet without a parallel. Hence it is very interesting to an archaeologist and scientist.

With the above before me I arrive at the conclusion that the aborigines of America are hard to find out, and are calculated to puzzle the brain of the most eminent archaeologist or ethnologist, that it is very difficult to designate between the so-called mound-builders and Indians of the eighteenth century.

CHRIST'S CITY AND CITIZENS.
THE NATURAL AND THE SPIRITUAL.

Adapted from Robert Buchanan.

Comfort, O true and free,
Soon shall there rise for ye
A city fairer than all ye plan;
Built on a rock of strength, (2)
It shall arise at length,
Stately and fair and vast, the city meet for man! (1)

Towering to yonder skies,
Shall the fair city rise, (3)
In the sweet dawning of a day more pure:
House, mart, and street, and square,
Yea, and a fane for prayer, (4)
Fair, and yet built by hands, strong, for it shall endure. (5)

In the fair city then,
Shall walk white-robed men,
Washed in the river of peace that watereth it;
Woman with man shall meet
Freely in mart and street
At the great council-board woman with man shall sit. (6)

Hunger and thirst and sin
Shall never pass therein;
Fed with pure dews of love, children shall grow;
Nought shall be bought and sold,
Nought shall be given for gold,
All shall be bright as day, all shall be white as snow. (7)

There, on the fields around,
All men shall till the ground,
Corn shall wave yellow and bright rivers stream;
Daily, at set of sun,
All, when their work is done,
Shall watch the heavens yearn down and the strange star-light gleam. (8)

In the fair city of men
All shall be silent then,
While on a reverent lute, gentle and low,
Some holy bard shall play
Ditties divine, and say
Whence these that hear have come, whither in time they go. (9)

No man of blood shall dare
Wear the white mantle there; (10)
No man of lust shall walk in street or mart;
Yet shall the magdalen
Walk with the citizen;
They both shall have grown gracious and pure of heart. (11)

Now, while days come and go,
Doth the fair city grow,
Surely its stones are laid by Christ the Lord.
Wise men and pure prepare
Ever this city fair.
Comfort, O ye that weep: it shall arise full soon. (12)

When stately, fair, and vast,
It doth uprise at last,
Who shall be King thereof, say, O ye wise?
When the last blood is spilt,
When the fair City is built,
Unto the throne thereof, a Monarch shall arise. (13)

Hearken, O pure and free,
Seeing 'tis upbuilt for ye,
Out of Heaven He shall come again. (14)
He whose blest soul did plan
This the fair City of MAN,
In his white robes of peace, CHRIST shall arise and reign. (15)

Salvation For All.

THE subject of universal salvation and its opposite have been ventilated to a considerable extent through the columns of the Herald, but because I feel that a little more may be said which may prove beneficial to both positions as at present advanced, emboldens me to cast in my mite, praying that the Spirit of truth may guide; trusting that whatever of true principle may be contained therein may redound to the glory of God and assist in bringing about that unity of faith which will create in us as a body a full knowledge of the Son of God, thus making us perfect men in the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.

My intent is not to enter into a full discussion by quoting all the passages of scripture which might be, and have often been brought to bear to prove the salvation of all mankind; but my endeavor will be to show that those who advocate that position stop too soon in their investigations; not that I disbelieve the idea that all men have, are, or will be saved, or come into a saved condition; but that I believe that notwithstanding all men have, are, or will be saved, or come into a saved condition, that through the exercise of their own agency many will eventually be eternally and everlastingly lost, and have their portion with the devil and his angels in eternity, where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched. And further, I do not believe that notwithstanding such will be the fact, that it in the least reduces the greatness of the love, mercy and justice of God, neither will it prove that the mission of Christ will have been a failure in any part whatever. The mission of Christ was to bring good tidings of great joy to all people. The tidings he brought were embodied in a code of principles, obedience to which would produce the salvation of the whole race of mankind; therefore he said, "Come unto me all ye that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest,"—"Though your sins be as scarlet, I will make them white as snow; though they be like crimson I will make them white as wool."—"Whoever will, may come and partake of the waters of life freely."—"Whoever believeth in me shall have eternal life."—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." And as Paul has said, this gospel or code of principles taught by Christ is "the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe;" and finally we have the glorious invitation recorded by St. John: "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst, come, and whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."

Thus we see that in order that all mankind may receive salvation it is absolutely necessary that all men and women shall do something for themselves to inherit it; yet all may partake, none are exempt. It is also written, "As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." Christ also having been highly exalted and given a name which is above every name, for the purpose "That at the name of Jesus every knee should (shall) bow, and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

The question here arises, what does all this bowing and confessing mean? Does it mean merely a bending of the knee in token of submission, and a few words of confession that we then believe that Jesus Christ is Lord, and that these will be sufficient; because whenever that happens to the full extent of its meaning, then all who do so will be in a saved condition, or it would not be to the glory of God. But, it is also written, "the devils believe and tremble." They also have said, "We know thee who thou art, Thou art the Christ." We also read of several instances in which they acknowledged Christ's superiority and obeyed his mandates. Are such acknowledgments either of men or devils sufficient to save them? If so, then the whole race of mankind and devils will be saved, and there would be but very little necessity for us to trouble our heads anything about the matter until the time shall arrive when this confession shall be called for, and must be given. "Let us eat, drink, and be merry." But this I do not believe to be the true solution, for it is also written, "It is not every one that saith Lord, Lord, that shall enter into the kingdom of heaven," thus making this lip confession and acknowledgement, "but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." Thus this bowing of the knee in submission, and this confession that Jesus is the Christ, in its full meaning, embodies within itself an obedience to the will of God, and thus enhances the glory of God the Father. The will of the Father was fully exemplified in the life and teachings of Jesus, who said, "I came not to do mine own will, but the will of him who sent me."—"I speak not of myself, but such as I have received of the Father speak I unto you." Then of course the good tidings of salvation unto all men, those principles which he taught, and sent his Apostles to teach, whereby all men may be saved, were embodied in the things he had received from the Father, and as the Father is unchangeable, and as the word which has gone out from Him through His son shall not fall to the ground, but shall all be fulfilled, the only conclusion we can come to is, That as all shall bow the knee, and all shall confess that Jesus is the Lord, to the glory of God the Father, in order that that glory may be full and complete, they all must render obedience to his will; must confess and repent of their sins; must be baptized for the remission of their sins, either by themselves either in this life, or when this final acknowledgement shall be made, or by proxy, when baptism for the dead shall again by command of God become legitimate; "that they may live according to God in the spirit, and be judged according to men in the flesh," and thus each receive a glory in the kingdom of God, as his works have been, and he has lived for and can abide; provided, always, they endure unto the end. Thus the love, mercy, justice and glory of God will be magnified. And every one, all men shall do this in fulfillment of the quotation before made:

"As I live saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." "That Jesus is the Christ, to the glory of God."

"Well," says one, "you have fully established the universal salvation of all mankind; we never contended that they all would receive a celestial glory, but that all would be saved and receive a glory such as they could abide." That is true, but it is not the place for us as Saints of God, who have in this life yielded obedience to the requirements of the gospel, to stop; we are living now with the full and fervid hope of receiving a full salvation in the celestial kingdom of God, but we must ever keep in remembrance that only those who endure unto the end can attain unto that high and exalted position. We must ever remember that we ourselves are the arbiters of our future destiny; for this our agency was given us, that we ourselves might

"Choose our life and what we'll be,
For this eternal truth is given,
That God will force no man to heaven."

Still we have the promise, "If a man love me, he will keep my words, and my Father will love him—and he (the Father) shall give you another comforter, that he may abide with you for ever."

We have now arrived at the point to proceed, and find out whether any of the human race will finally be eternally lost, notwithstanding we now have them all in a condition to be saved. And who they are that will be so lost. There is no necessity to produce more than a few evidences to prove the fact that some will eventually be lost eternally, as the rule is laid down by Jesus that "By the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established." We will first take the words of Jesus himself as recorded in Matthew 12:26, 27, I. T.: "Wherefore I say unto you, all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men who receive me and repent; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come."

I am aware that there have been many efforts made in the past to prove that "this world, and the world to come," meant only this present life and the Millennium, and then they would obtain forgiveness, and end their punishment; but I fear before we get through, all the unotion and comfort to be derived from such a construction will have lost its savor. We see however, from the quotation, that there is a sin which shall not be forgiven. The next quotations are the testimony of the Apostle Paul found in his epistle to the Hebrews, 11:26, 27, I. T.: "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins. But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries." See also chapter 6, verses 4, 5, and 6. "For He (God) hath made it impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to be renewed again unto repentance, seeing they crucify unto themselves the son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame."

It will be seen from the above quotations that God hath made it impossible for such parties as are described to be renewed again to repentance, and gives us the reasons why. If then it is impossible to renew them, and the sin they are guilty of shall not be forgiven, the only conclusion is, they must be finally and eternally lost. I will now produce evidence that fully confirms the above, which will be found in the Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 76, par. 4. It is lengthy, but I can not forbear writing the whole, as it is the most plain and distinct revelation ever given to man upon the point now under consideration, that the world has ever been blessed with, so far as the records we have show. It reads as follows:

"Thus saith the Lord, concerning all those who know my power, and have been made partakers thereof, and suffered themselves through the power of the devil, to be overcome, and to deny the truth, and defy my power, they are they who are the sons of perdition, of whom I say it had been better for them never to have been born, for they are vessels of wrath, doomed to suffer the wrath of God, with the devil and his angels in eternity, concerning whom I have said there is no forgiveness in this world nor in the world to come, having denied the Holy Spirit after having received it, and having denied the only begotten son of the Father, having crucified him unto themselves, and put him to an open shame; these are they who shall go away into the lake of fire and brimstone with the devil and his angels, and the only ones on whom the second death shall have any power; *yea, verily, the only ones who shall not be redeemed in the due time of the Lord, after the sufferings of his wrath, for all the rest shall be brought forth by the resurrection of the dead, through the triumph and the glory of the Lamb who was slain, who was in the bosom of the Father before the world's were made. And this is the gospel, the glad tidings which the voice out of the heavens bore record unto us, that he came into the world, even Jesus, to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness, that through him all might be saved, whom the Father hath put in his power, and made by him, who glorifies the Father, and saves all the work of his hands; except those sons of perdition who deny the Son after the Father hath revealed him, wherefore he saves all except them, they shall go away into everlasting punishment, which is endless punishment, which is eternal punishment, to reign with the devil and his angels in eternity, where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched, which is their torment; and the end thereof, neither the place thereof, nor their torment, no man knows, neither was it revealed, neither is, neither will be revealed unto man, except to them who are made partakers thereof; nevertheless, I, the Lord show it by vision unto many, but straightway shut it up again, wherefore the end, the width, the height, the depth and the misery thereof they understand not, neither any man except them who are ordained unto this condemnation."*

Thus we behold how far reaching is the love, wisdom and mercy of our God, that it fails not. Neither has the mission of Jesus failed, nor will it fail, for the gospel, the good news of salvation proclaimed from the heavens, and declared by him upon earth, is unto all men, and through it and by it all mankind will eventually be saved, or be placed in a condition of salvation; nevertheless, not through any failure upon the part of Jesus, neither on account of the lack of a fullness of love, wisdom or mercy on the part of God the Father, but by the exercise of the agency given unto man to choose good or evil for himself, some, notwithstanding they have once entered upon the way of life, have been adopted into the family of God through the waters of regeneration, and been partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted of the good things of God, and have known his power, will by the exercise of their agency, suffer themselves, through the allurements of the devil to be overcome and deny the truth, deny the Holy Ghost and defy the power of God; and thus finally become eternally and irretrievably lost, and can not be redeemed in the due time of the Lord, having crucified unto themselves the son of God afresh and put him to an open shame. We behold then that salvation is full and complete, that there is not, nor will be, any failure in the provisions God hath made, but whoever it may be that shall be lost, the failure will be their own.

We have now arrived at the proposition, Who are they who shall thus be finally lost? This is to us as a people a very serious question, one that brings itself home to every one who has named the name of Jesus and covenanted with him and his Father to henceforth love him and keep his commandments. In view of this proposition well might the Apostle Paul fear lest having preached to others, he himself might become a castaway. I say that it brings itself home to us who profess to be Saints of God, because none others, except the covenant children of God either in this age or any past age of the world, can, or ever have been partakers of the gift of the Holy Ghost, for it is written, "The world can not receive it;" and therefore never having received it, or known its power, can never deny it. They may have heard, they may have rejected, they may be cast into hell, they may suffer its torments, but the promise is to them, they shall be redeemed in the due time of the Lord, when they shall have passed through the sufferings of his wrath, they shall be brought forth by the resurrection of the dead, through the triumph and the glory of the Lamb, who was slain; and shall, when death and hell give up their dead, receive such a glory as they have lived for and can abide. While upon the other hand, those who have been partakers of the heavenly gift, who have felt its power, and have been made partakers thereof, (and such can only be those who have become heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ), and shall deny that gift, and defy that power, can not be redeemed in the due time of the Lord, but must go away into endless punishment, to reign with the devil in eternity. In the face of such language the unctio[n] to be derived from a hope of final deliverance is extremely small.

O, then, ye Saints of God, how perilous in this life is the position we occupy! Well might the Apostle warn the Saints in his day, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." And well might Jesus warn his disciples, "If therefore the light which is in thee be darkness, how great shall that darkness be. Strive then, dear Saints to walk in the light, as he (Jesus) is in the light, if we walk in his light, we shall assuredly love him and keep his commandments, and the promise will be sure unto us that the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, which we have been made partakers of, shall be a light to our feet and a lamp to our pathway. O, may we ever escape the wiles of Satan, whose every effort is to drag us down into his eternal dominion, and may we ever exercise the agency with which God has endowed us, in the ways of righteousness, that we may realize our brightest hopes of celestial glory.

There are two opposites placed before us; eternal life, if faithful, or eternal condemnation if we deny that which we have received; and we must make our choice.

If the sophistry sometimes presented, that eternal and endless punishment as spoken of in the references herein presented, mean that a termination will sometime ensue in favor of those sons of perdition; upon the same grounds may the promise of eternal life also come to a termination, but we have not so learned Christ.

To my mind the foregoing fully demonstrates the fact that at the grand consummation of all things, when Jesus shall have put all enemies under his feet, and he shall deliver up the kingdom to his Father, becoming himself subject, that God may be all in all, it will be evident to all mankind that so far as salvation is concerned, the mission of Jesus will be complete, and that he will have done all that he came out from the Father to do; and whoever those persons may be who "shall go away into everlasting punishment, which is endless punishment, which is eternal punishment, to reign with the devil and his angels in eternity," will have no just cause of complaint, seeing they once held salvation within their grasp, but in the exercise of their own agency, and of their own free will, they cast it from them as a thing of naught, in order that they might satisfy their lustful pleasures in this life.

The Old Year in the Old World.

THE Old Year in the Old World, though it has witnessed no great wars, has been characterized by great political struggles and changes. In Great Britain, land reform in Ireland, which has now led to agitation for land reforms in England and Scotland, has been the overshadowing event of the year. It opened upon the trials of certain of the Land-Leaguers. Parliament met upon the 6th January, and on the 14th the Parnell amendments to the Address were rejected. On the 24th the Government Coercion bill was introduced and was passed late in February. In April, Mr. Gladstone introduced the Irish Land Reform bill as a Liberal measure. The Tories, under their new leader, the Marquis of Salisbury, made a vigorous opposition, but it was finally passed, and became a law in August. Its provisions, in substance, guarantee to every tenant a fair rent for his holding, to be fixed by the Land Courts or Commission, or by agreement with the landlord; the fixity of that rent for fifteen years; the renewals of rents every fifteen years; immunity from eviction or arbitrary increase of rent; the ownership of improvements; the right of the tenant to sell his tenancy; and authority to the Land Commission to advance money to tenants to enable them to purchase their holdings and become absolute owners in them. Though a large number of tenants have applied to the Land Commission for contracts, and rents in every case have been fixed at material reductions, there has been decided opposition to the bill in many parts of Ireland, manifesting itself in riots and agrarian outrages. At last the Land League became so outspoken in its opposition and advice to tenants to pay no rents, that Mr. Parnell and other leaders were arrested. The agitation still continues, but grows weaker.

In France the political interest has centered in the triumph of M. Gambetta. In the municipal elections, early in January, the Gambettist Republicans were successful, thus foreshadowing the final result, though in May Gambetta was defeated in the Assembly by the adoption of the Scrutin de liste method of voting, which he had opposed. In July the Government concluded to hold a general election in September. The canvass was a very vigorous one and resulted in an overwhelming Republican victory and the almost utter annihilation of the Monarchists. The result of this election retired M. Ferry from the head of the Ministry and made M. Gambetta Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, with M. Cazot, M. Rousseau, and M. Bert in the important department of Justice, the Interior, and Public Worship and Instruction. The new Ministry is a very radical one in some respects, and has some very heavy burdens to carry, especially the Ultramontane opposition to M. Bert and the Tunisian war, but has as yet taken no advanced steps.

In Germany, also, there has been a severe political crisis, but Bismarck, as usual, appears the master of the situation. The first Cabinet crisis occurred in January, when Count von Eulenberg, the Minister of the Interior, resigned for several reasons, among them the Government's temporizing with the persecution of the Jews, its treatment of Socialists, and his own opposition to Bismarck's unscrupulous election methods. Meanwhile Bismarck introduced certain economic reforms appertaining to workingmen, which have already been described in the Tribune, and was temporarily defeated. The defeat led up to a general election in which these economic reforms, among others, were made the issues. The Liberals triumphed and Bismarck's own party, the Conservatives, were left in a minority, but the wily Chancellor has turned defeat into victory by making an alliance with the Centre or Ultramontanes, based upon certain concessions to Rome, among them the accrediting of a German representative to the Vatican and the reception of a Papal Nuncio at Berlin.

In Russia, the year opened with the triumph of her armies over the Turcomans, but the rejoicings were interrupted by the assassination of Alexander II., March 13th, by the Nihilists. Alexander III. succeeded to the throne, with Gen. Melikoff, a very liberal statesman, for his chief adviser, and with every prospect that he would ameliorate the condition of the peasants and make liberal concessions to the people in the matter of popular representation in the Government. Meanwhile the Nihilists continued their agitation, the assassins of the late Czar were executed, and an invitation was sent to other European Powers to take concerted action against them. In the midst of these events, the Czar suddenly abandoned his policy, and the entire Liberal party in the Cabinet, with Gen. Melikoff at their head, tendered their resignations. Gen. Ignatieff succeeded Gen. Melikoff, and the old policy of absolutism and cruelty has been resumed. With it the activity of the Nihilists has increased, and three or four attempts have already been made upon the life of the Czar. The empire is still in confusion, and the horrible persecutions of the Jews have added to the general anarchy and discontent with the existing condition of things.

The only events of interest in Austria have been the renewal of the triple alliance between Austria, Germany, and Russia, and an offensive and defensive alliance between herself and Germany; the death of Baron von Haymerle, the Premier, and the probable return to power of Andrassy; and the horrible calamity in the destruction of the Ring Theatre in Vienna, with a loss of nearly 500 lives. In Italy there has been great excitement against France over the events of the Tunisian war, resulting in a change of Ministry, and the Pope still sits a self-prisoner in the Vatican, whining because he can not have temporal power, which is farther away from him than ever. Spain has also been severely exercised against France on account of outrages in Algeria, has introduced certain important reforms in Cuba, and made decided Republican gains, under Castelar's leadership, in the recent election. Scandinavia has been very quiet until recently. A struggle has now arisen between the Parliament of Norway and the King of Sweden and Norway upon a question of privilege, and a deadlock exists, not yet broken.

Turkey has been engaged in settling up the duties imposed upon her by the Berlin Treaty. After long, and tedious, and profitless negotiations between herself and Greece, the treaty Powers at last compelled her to act, and she has given to Greece the whole of Thessaly, a portion of Epirus, and the neutrality of the Gulf of Arta. Reforms in Armenia, which were guaranteed by the Berlin Treaty, are now occupying the attention of the Powers.

Africa has been the theatre of war both at its northern and southern extremities. Early in April the French invaded Tunis, ostensibly to punish the Kroumir, who had raided upon French property in Algeria. They were soon dispersed, and the French have since occupied the country under a treaty with the Bey, and are now supervising its administration and using the army to put down Arab insurrections in Tunis and Algeria. In Southern Africa the Boers of the Transvaal declared their independence of Great Britain, January 1st, 1881, and for three months a bitter war was waged, in which the Boers won several important victories—the final one at Spitzkof, in which Gen. Colley was killed, leading to a treaty of peace, which was ratified by the Boers last October. The new treaty grants them autonomy, but secures Great Britain in suzerainty of the Queen, the British control of foreign relations, and the establishment of a British resident at the future Capitol.

In Asia there has been little of interest to note except the abandonment of Afghanistan by the English, the revolt of Ayoub Khan, the Pretender, and his defeat by Abdurrahman, the Ameer whom the English placed upon the throne of Cabul; the defeat of the Turcomans by the Russians, and the advance of the latter to Merv; the ratifying of a treaty between China and Russia by which the former regains a portion of her old territory in Kuldja and the Russians obtain important trading facilities; and the discovery of the long lost Jeannette on the bleak coasts of Northern Siberia.—Chicago Tribune.

Baby Topers.

A LADY who has given long and careful attention to the practice so common in American nurseries of giving babies opium in some of its forms—soothing sirup, cordial, paregoric—sends us an address she has written and delivered upon this topic, requesting us to bring the subject to the attention of mothers. It is certainly one of great importance. "Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined. A bias in the wrong direction given in infancy often proves ineradicable, and when the strains and pressures of mature life aggravate and intensify, it becomes an efficient source of disaster and ruin.

It is well known that the "pains of opium" exceed in intensity and severity even those of delirium tremens. The opium drunkard is more pitiable and more hopeless than the alcohol drunkard. We have letters quite recently received from men holding high positions who have been cured of the opium habit, and the exhaust language in the vain endeavor to depict the sufferings they endured while a slave to it, and the joy they experienced when delivered from its terrible power. It seems hardly credible that a loving and careful mother can fasten on her tender babe so cruel a habit as the opium habit; that she can with an opiate hush the natural cries of the child for relief from hunger, pain, uneasiness; that she can destroy its appetite for food, its appetite for knowledge, its craving for activity and play, by a drowsy sirup as potent for evil as though brewed by witches at midnight with "eye of newt and toe of frog." But the books of the druggist and apothecary show how large is the traffic in infants souls, and the careful observer sees evidences on every hand of the presence of the destroyer. When the child is two or three years old, its opiate is withdrawn, and then its greatest sufferings follow. One mother, unable to endure the cries of her child during this period, went on a trip to Niagara Falls, leaving her babe in charge of the nurse to go through its woes of recovery, and writhe in pains that quell the courage of the strongest man. She was not cruel, she was only ignorant, and ignorance is the parent of cruelty no less than of superstition.

It is a fact proven by observation that children addicted to soothing sirups in infancy when grown to adult age fall victims to the temptations of morbid appetite much more easily than children do whose early habits have been strictly normal. The mother who gives her child opium is preparing a victim for the rumseller, is creating a demand for the sale of intoxicating drinks, or for the equally destructive sale of opium. Let all those mothers who are interested in the suppression of intemperance see to it that they do not themselves plant the seeds of it in their children. One mother, whose sons as they grew to manhood became one after another confirmed inebriates, could only weep and say: "Poor boy, he can't help it; I laid the foundation of the appetite when he was in his cradle."

It has been observed by careful mothers that even the habit of sucking its thumb is injurious to the mind of a child. It keeps the child quiet, but it makes him dull and unobservant of what is going on around him. Opium is infinitely worse than that, for it puts the brain of a child into a comatose condition and prevents its activity and development. When the temporary comatose condition is past, there is an abnormal sensitiveness of all the nerves and tissues utterly inconsistent with any pleasurable activity of the faculties. The infant is thus robbed of all the pleasures of infancy; the child is robbed of the pleasures of childhood; play is wearisome, healthful curiosity as to the wonderful world into which it has come dies before it is born.

New York Tribune.

A GOOD MAN'S LIFE.

There is an energy of moral suasion in a good man's life, passing the highest efforts of the orator's genius. The seen but silent beauty of holiness speak more eloquently of God and duty than the tongues of men and angels. Let parents remember this. The best inheritance a parent can bequeath to a child is a virtuous example, a legacy of hallowed remembrance and associations. The beauty of holiness beaming through the life of a loved relative or friend, is more effectual to strengthen such as do stand in virtue's ways, and raise up those that are bowed down, than precept, command, entreaty, or warning. Christianity, itself, owes by far the greater part of its moral power—not the precepts or parables of Christ—but to his own character. The beauty of that holiness which is enshrined in the four brief biographies of the Man of Nazareth, has done more and will do more to regenerate the world and bring in everlasting righteousness than all the other agencies put together. It has done more to spread his religion in the world than all that has ever been preached or written on the evidences of Christianity.

SQUARING WITH HEAVEN.

It is but reasonable that men honor God with part of their substance. In the old Jewish law, a tenth part was required and willingly paid by every individual having an income. Many Christians in this day adopt the same rule of giving. If all would do so, the chief difficulty in running the churches would be obviated. There would be no handwriting on the walls of God's houses, reading, "Debt! Debt!" Every interest of religion could be managed with little or no friction, and the cause of God be dignified before the world by a worthy representation. A tenth part! What a small proportion when one comes to think of it! Surely, if nine parts are used for self, the remaining one can be spared for the God who makes the attaining of the others possible. And yet many refuse Him even this much, on the plea that they "can not afford it."

Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, January 15, 1882.

THE northern parts of Missouri, lying between the Iowa line and below Jackson county, are being made the homes of many of the Saints; those from distant places, both east and west moving in, buying land, making homes and occupying them. We believe that this is as it should be. We take occasion now, as we have done heretofore, to advise the Saints that the price of happy occupation of their homes will be good citizenship. If any need to be told what "good citizenship" means, we answer, that it means being a just, faithful, loving, kind and patient, son, husband, father, brother and neighbor, abiding without covetousness, or malice among the people; being sober, industrious, and diligent in business; observing to work six days, and resting on the seventh, both men and women and beasts of burden, as much as meeting together for sacramental and devotional purposes will permit. Keeping away from saloons, and liquor shops; and spending no time in useless and idle occupations, but taking recreation in innocent amusements and employments aside from daily toil, in proper seasons and under proper circumstances. Seeking for good men to serve as officers in administering the affairs of society, local, county, state and national, and maintaining such officers in the discharge of their duties in the enforcement of law.

The laws of the state of Iowa, with some few exceptions are most excellent; we believe that such is the case also with the laws of Missouri; and certainly the Supreme Court has made one most excellent decision; that if a man be sufficiently sane as to be conscious when committing crime that it is wrong, and he ought not to do it; he is of sufficiently sound mind to be held to the strictest accountability, and be punished for his crime.

Much as the Saints may have suffered in the past in the States of Missouri and Illinois, the time to complain is passed away. The last appeal to earthly tribunals was made long ago, and the case left for the final arbitrament and the decision of the Supreme Judge of the whole earth; and so far as the Saints are concerned, that case can not again be reopened and pleadings heard here; it is unwise therefore that the sufferings be unnecessarily paraded and aired. Of course the telling of the trials and sorrows incident to those days of trouble, at proper times and in proper places, may be permissible and productive of good; but to hold them subject to earthly redress is an injurious policy and can only result in further distress, possibly trouble.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Is dancing, keeping a hall and making balls for the purpose of getting gain, Sabbath breaking and swearing, together with absenting ones self from meeting, sufficient occasion for a test of fellowship?

If we understand the question, we answer Yes. One could hardly be a devoted follower of Christ and be guilty of all that.

WE are pleased to announce that since our last issue, one of the saloons, (beer shop), with which at that time Lamoni was supplied, has been closed, the keeper having found that either the moral, or financial atmosphere of the place was not favorable to its continuance. We are sincerely glad of this, because we hail it as a good sign of returning to real reason and good sound sense.

Saints should be opposed to fostering, aiding, or abetting the sale of intoxicating liquors by virtue of their covenant of baptism; and to be consistent. No drunkard hath eternal life abiding in him. Revellings, rioting, drunkenness, can not enter into the realms of peace beyond the vale; and it is reasonable to believe that all those who in any wise help to make, or are parties to the making of drunkards and rioters, will be held partially, or wholly in fault, according to the part they take, or what they leave undone in the conflict.

The times and the exigencies of the work, and of the age demand sober men; men of steadfast nerves and even, steady brain, untrammelled from vice and folly, and free from the dizziness and nerveless lassitude and stupor arising from the use of the intoxicating cup; and free from the madness of heart and brain that follow the flowing bowl. If such men may not be found among professed followers of Christ, where may the world look to find them that be "saviors of men?"

BRO. J. R. STUART, at the close of his letter, which please refer to, wishes to know, if an "unexperienced, and unprepared" man can hold his own in defending the doctrine, what might not an Elder do who was properly called and ordained to preach; the inference being clearly deducible—such a man would certainly do a great work in converting souls to Christ.

One of the peculiarly gratifying features of our work as a people is that those who properly investigate the work, and obey the gospel ordinances out of pure desings and earnest desire to do the will of God, become able to abide the instruction to "give to every one that asketh a reason" for their "faith." Unto them is fulfilled, "take no thought what ye shall say; for I will give unto you in that hour what ye shall say." It is not strange then that Bro. Stuart should be able to maintain the argument, his wife and the Bible being on his side, or with him; "If God be with us who can be against us. We remember an incident related by an aged sister, Heroine Randall, then resident at Plano, who being on a visit to her children in Michigan, was invited by a son-in-law to attend Sunday School, which she did; and being importuned by him also attended the preaching service in the evening, though she told him that if she did the preacher would be quite likely to indulge in assailing her faith in some shape, especially if it became known that she was there. In the course of his discourse he did just what she told her son-in-law that he would do; but at the close of his service he gave an opportunity for remark if any one so desired. Sr. Randall rose when a moment's silence gave time, and asked if she might be permitted to speak, being a stranger to the preacher and congregation, she was told that she might. As the audience turned to see her, she felt ready to sink into the floor, the hush and silence, and the strangeness of the situation almost overcame her; but remembering the Master she commenced, the spirit of prayer in her heart. She told them who she was, what church she belonged to, and, in as few words as she possibly could, why she held to that faith. As she continued to speak, her voice grew clear and strong, her thoughts came to her quickly and vividly, and she was so aided that she spoke like one inspired. At the close of her remarks she asked pardon for intruding, but gave as her apology that she was the only one of her faith present, and that she felt constrained to defend it. She had good reason to believe that the Lord was mindful of his own.

BRIGHAMITE TEACHINGS.

HOW THEY ARE CHANGED.

BRO. THEOPHILE GERBER, of Gerber, Georgia, sends us clippings from the Chattanooga Times; one of which is an interview between a Times reporter and an Elder Morgan, of the Utah Mormon Church, then in the city of Chattanooga with some seventy converts, collected in South eastern Virginia, Western North Carolina and upper East Tennessee, en route for Salt Lake. From this we quote the following extracts, they may be of interest, possibly instructive to the readers of the Herald.

These elders preach faith, repentance, baptism for remission of sins and the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost. They very rarely refer to polygamy, and then only in response to inquiries.

In response to our interrogatory as to polygamy, Mr. Morgan said in substance, "if any Mormon would enter into polygamy in the States, we would at once disfellowship him. The majority of our converts go to Colorado, where they could not practice it if they wished, it being strictly prohibited by the State law. I REGARD POLYGAMY AS THE GREAT BARRIER TO THE PROGRESS OF OUR CHURCH. I have preached for six years and baptized scores, and if any man has entered the church impelled by that motive I am not aware of it. By the laws of our church we are taught to look upon adultery and seduction as capital offenses, and if we had the power we would make men suffer death for that crime. The reason polygamy is one of our doctrines is that it is the command of God: yet it would be better for us if it were not, for it is the hardest trial we have to contend with, and no one knows it better than we. In Utah there is no necessity for plural marriage, as we have 5,000 more men than women in the state. It is only once in twenty that you find a man with more than one wife. One of our laws is that a man must have the consent of his first wife before he can marry a second, and if he does so without her knowledge or consent, he commits bigamy and is liable to imprisonment in the penitentiary. Our divorce laws are the same as in the States; divorces are very seldom applied for.

"We have about 1,000 members in our colony in Colorado. They are scattered into villages, that manner of location being preferred, so that they can have the benefit of schools and churches. They can pursue any vocation, except liquor traffic; any one who deals in liquor is excluded from the church. The church also looks on mining as demoralizing and does not approve of it. There are no saloons in Mormon camps. In some counties in Utah, where there are 10,000 Mormon inhabitants, no saloon exists. We would prohibit them entirely, were we not prevented by the Government; so we can prohibit them only among our own followers."

In response to the question as to the character of the converts, he said that the majority are small farmers, neither extremely rich or extremely poor. Nearly all can read or write, and bear a good reputation in their neighborhood. "We gladly court investigation as regards this."

INFORMATION FROM ANOTHER SOURCE.

The Rome, Georgia, Courier of Tuesday, containing the following contradiction to the above in speaking of three Mormon women emigrating from that vicinity to Utah:

"Recently, there has been much newspaper writing on the subject of Mormon proselytism in North Georgia; by persons who possessed no knowledge of the class of persons embracing the peculiar belief of the polygamists. As far as our observation extends, none but the most worthless people of this section have joined the Mormons—persons who are drones in any community, and their absence from this climate is considered a blessing to those remaining behind. We sincerely hope that the three females who left yesterday may succeed in getting six husbands apiece, or even more if necessary."

The second one is from the pen of Bro. Gerber himself, and is a sharp and able criticism of Elder Morgan's statement, and a good presentation of the facts in the case. It is encouraging that so many of the newspapers, both North and South, are willing to permit the truth to appear in their issues. We thank Bro. Gerber for these clippings.

In accord with this statement of Elder Morgan, is the following from Mr. Wm. Hooper, at Galena, Illinois:

"Mr. Hooper was for eight years Delegate to Congress from Utah, is immensely wealthy, and wields a large political influence. He will leave for Washington Sunday evening, remaining in Chicago two days to visit his old friend and former Galena townsman, the Hon. E. B. Washburne. He freely admits that the object of his prospective visit to the National Capital is to labor in the interest of Delegate Cannon, whose seat is contested by Campbell. Mr. Hooper speaks in glowing terms of what Mormonism has done for Salt Lake and is doing for the country at large, and SAYS THAT POLYGAMY IS PRACTICALLY ABOLISHED THROUGHOUT THE TERRITORY OF UTAH; that he apprehends no decided interference with Mormonism at the hands of the present or any future Administration; that it is impregnable established in Utah, and that any attempt to dislodge it would have the effect to intensify the feeling among its believers, and would prove utterly futile. He has been placed by the Church at the head of Zion's Cooperative Association, which does a business averaging $5,000,000 yearly, and is also President of the Deseret Bank, a wealthy Mormon institution. He is an agreeable, polished gentleman, and strongly impresses one with his superior ability."

WE commend to the readers of the HERALD the article in this issue entitled Baby Topers. It is a lamentable fact that the American mothers of the present generation are taking sure and fatal measures to fill the generation to come with weakness, imbecility, idiocy and madness, if indeed their progeny survive to maturity of years at all, in the constant practice of opium giving, either direct, or in the disguised forms of paregoric, soothing syrups, &c., the base of the majority of all these being opium. What makes this fact more alarming and deplorable, so far as our experience goes, Latter Day Saints, who confess that man was created, that in the image of God he might glorify his Creator, many of them are guilty of this fatal practice. No one need to shake the head at us, and look wise and say, "Bro. Herald, you attend to the spiritual affairs of the Church, and we mothers will take care of the little ones;" for we shall reply that some of you are taking such good (?) care of the little ones that you are laying them away in the grave yards, despoiled of the probation of earthly life, and yourselves filled with grief that should be multiplied by the thought that you by your own act assisted the destroyer. Or, if by the clemency of the Lord, your own little ones were spared, enfeebled life and powers make their existence a sad one, and your sorrow scarcely less than the loss of them would bring.

Mothers ought to know that she who drags her child with a view to cause it to sleep, that she may enjoy pleasure, or find extra time to work, is practically committing murder; for she is paralyzing the nutritive organs, as stated by the writer of the article which we commend, and pursuing the life of the child unto its death; and the blow that drives the knife to the heart, impelled by the hand that loves, kills as surely and effectively as the blow from the hand of hate.

Besides this, those who profess the faith of the Saints ought to remember, that one of the chief reasons why we are commanded to observe the anointing with oil and the laying on of hands, is that we may as a people keep our bodies free from the poisons used as remedies for the ills of men. The children of the Saints should grow up into man and womanhood free from the taints in the blood, and the derangement of the nervous forces that follow in the practice of giving narcotics of which we write. There are far too many sicknesses incident to the countries where the Saints live from which we may not altogether escape, for us to invite and make certain those which attend this stinting of life's powers. It is better, far better for mothers to stand the worry and fret of restless, uneasy children, until years give strength and vigor; than it is for them to see sad-eyed, weakly little ones, dull and lifeless in enfeebled health from the opium habit.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. BLAIR writes that the dedicatory services of the Saints' Chapel in Salt Lake City, were very pleasant and quite successful. Bro. R. J. Anthony, Wm. Gibson, and M. T. Short, of the Missionary force were present, and everything passed pleasantly. The outlook was fair. We are glad that the effort to build the chapel was crowned with success, if necessity did compel the building of a smaller edifice than would be much more satisfactory to us and others. The morale of the mission, it seemed to us, demanded a building, and it is obtained. Now, let the Saints who are able and willing, come down with the means to pay what remains due. Some few have borne the burden of the strife, let help now be extended and the burden be distributed as well as the glory of its achievement, and the good it bringeth to the cause.

The Providence, R. I., Bulletin, for December 27th, contains the announcement of the Saints' Christmas festivities, commending the remarks of Bro. F. M. Sheehy, presiding.

Bro. Albert Haws wrote us an encouraging, personal and brotherly letter from Washington Corners, Alameda county, California, dated December 19th, 1881. He has been canvassing through the country, but does not find the work very lively.

Bro. James A. McIntosh wrote from Ailliston, Ontario, that some eight or nine were waiting at Garafraxa, for baptism. He had met a Brighamite fifty years old, who had never heard of the Reorganization. It is due him, however, to state that he had only united with the Utah people quite lately.

The Olive Branch Circle, of Jonesport, Maine, send the HERALD Office five dollars, which have been credited on Press Fund, as per direction of Sr. Eliza M. Walker, Secretary. The Society will please accept their thanks for the aid rendered.

Bro. James Sterling writes from Santa Ana, California, December 16th, 1881, that his home is thirty miles from Newport, up in the mountains, in a Spanish settlement; where he, of late, though but a member only, has been teaching the Spaniards, whose language he speaks, the gospel; which some of them profess to believe and express a desire to be received in baptism. We have written Bro. Sterling that we see no reason why he may not teach his neighbors the truth, directing him to advise with Bro. Joseph F. Burton, or whoever may preside over the district, and act accordingly.

We print letters from brethren Carrico and Putney in this issue; two of the veterans of the cause in an early day in Western Iowa, but from whom we have not seen a line in many a long day. Bro. Putney's remarks in reference to seeing that the law is kept are just, and must strike every reader as words spoken in time.

Sr. Eliza France, of Kewanee, Illinois, whose father, Bro. Thomas France, has been acting as agent for the HERALD, wrote us January 4th, that owing to the many busy cares of her father, she had presumed upon the duty to solicit subscribers and make collections for the HERALD, and so far as she could to aid in that work; she says; "If asking once, twice, or thrice will accomplish the work, it will be done." We say good to that, and bid Sr. Eliza, "Good Speed." She sends us a draft for $21.75 renewals for HERALDS.

Bro. E. C. Brown, of Fonda, Iowa, has been lecturing to the citizens of his town; one of his lectures being advertized in the Gazette thus:

LECTURE.—E. C. Brown, Esq., will deliver a lecture in the M. E. Church in this city, on Sunday evening, January 8th. Subject: "True Mormonism." While Mr. Brown is a Mormon he is not a Brigham Young polygamist, by a long shot. He follows the purer teachings of Joseph Smith, as they originally were before being corrupted by the licentious apostate. He is an original thinker and an entertaining speaker. He should have a full house. Turn out and hear what the old pioneer has to say. No admission fee, no collection taken, nothing to sell, no book or map agency, no axes to grind, no nonsense or foolishness of any sort. Turn out.

WE give elsewhere a short letter from Bro. Joseph C. Clapp, now sounding the trump in Idaho; and as confirmatory of what he writes, publish the following clippings from the local paper, the Nez Percés News.

Elder J. C. Clapp, of the Latter Day Saints, has been delivering a course of lectures in Shield's Hall, and has been having large audiences, and defies refutation. A reception was held Friday evening at the Frye Hotel, which was largely attended by the friends of the Elder."

"At the same time we had quite a commotion among the Philistines, caused by a course of theological lectures, delivered here by Elder J. Clapp, a man of a great deal more ability than any that has ever visited us, but members of the different Orthodox churches think he is the 'devil himself' let loose for a season, they think so, because he has succeeded in knocking the foundation from under them, and has shown up the Bible in its true sense, at the same time showing clearly "that a man can be a christian and reach Heaven without being dragged there by any of the orthodox war horses or donkeys. The best part of it is that the Reverend gentlemen has lain down the gauntlet, and defies any to pick it up and fight him in debate on the true Church of Christ from the Bible and theology. To this date none have responded to the call, and it is your correspondent's opinion that they will have the worst cause to maintain on their hands that was ever east of the mountains.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert sends us the following card, dated December 29th, 1881:

On board cars, bound south. Bro. Scarcliff and I have started for the Florida and Alabama districts. Please publish in Herald as our permanent address, Milton, Santa Rosa county, Florida.

Saints will please notice the address.

Bro. John Smith, presiding in the Massachusetts district, writes us December 27th:

Next month, January, brethren John Gilbert and Frank M. Sheehy go out upon a mission to preach the gospel; and we desire to put forth an effort to keep one of them constantly in the field. The dream of Bro. White in the Herald, is one that ought to give encouragement to every laborer in Christ.

We give below the letter referred to in Bro. G. S. Hyde's letter from Buchanan, in word and form:

Mr Scarcliff

Sir Wee the Citizenenes of this Neighborhood have bin Informed that you have an Oppointment to Preach here to Night Wee will advise you Now if you Want to Live and Enjoy Good health you had better leave this Place before you Preach Wee Just Simple Give you this as afaif Warning and also as a notice that the People of this Neighborhood Dont Want any Mormon Preaching and More than that Wee are not Going to have it if Mild Meanes Will not Do Wee Shall Resort to Ruffer Ones

Bro. F. C. Warnky writes from Independence, Missouri, January 3d:

I am preaching to interested congregations in different parts of the county, nearly every Sabbath. It is marvellously strange how ignorant people here are about true Latter Day Saintism.

Tell them the gospel story, Bro. Warnky; the world everywhere is ignorant on that topic; "they have ears to hear, but hear not, eyes to see, but see not, hearts to feel, but comprehend not" the salvation way in Christ.

News Summary.

Dec. 24th.—The difficulties of the French in Africa are increasing. The troops which the Emperor of Morocco sent out to capture the rebel Chief Bou Amena fraternized with the rebels in proclaiming "holy war," against the French, and subsequently defeated the tribes who refused to join them. The rebellion is spreading, and the Moorish monarch is powerless.

Another revolution has broken out in Santo Domingo, and still another in Venezuela. A revolution has just been suppressed in Hayti.

Miss Reynolds, a Lady Land-Leaguer, who was charged with aiding and abetting a criminal conspiracy to prevent the payment of rent, was ordered yesterday by the local Justices at Castleton, Limerick, to give bail to keep the peace for six months, or to go to jail for one month.

A sleet storm at Albany, N. Y., broke down the telephone and electric light wires last night.

26th.—While high mass was being celebrated in the Church of the Holy Cross, in Warsaw, Poland, a thief was caught picking pockets, and in order to make his escape the wretch cried "Fire!" In the terrible panic that ensued many persons were crushed and mangled, and forty have died of their injuries, and sixty others are very badly injured some of them fatally. The thief being a Jew, intense indignation was excited against that race and a number of Jewish houses and shops were attacked and gutted by an excited mob, and it became necessary to call out the military to suppress the riot.

By a collision in Queenstown harbor between a steamer and a bark the latter was sunk and nine of her crew drowned.

A store at Green Plain, Va., burned, and two clerks perished in the flames. It is supposed the men were murdered and the store set on fire by tramps.

Fire yesterday at Rochedale, in the goods station of the Lancashire & Yorkshire Railway, caused a loss of £100,000.

Queen Victoria contributed £50 for the relief of the sufferers by the disaster at the Ring Theatre, Vienna.

An old and prominent citizen of Terra Haute, Ind., died suddenly yesterday morning in the Congregational Church, of which he was one of the founders. "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth," was being played, when he gave a sudden gasp, and, before any assistance could be offered, he sat dead in his seat. The congregation followed his remains to his house.

27th.—It is reported that the Italian Government is about to consider "the question of more efficaciously guaranteeing the liberty and independence of the Pope in Rome," in order to avoid any interference on the part of foreign Powers in favor of giving guarantees an international character.

The loss by the fire in the bonded warehouse on South street, New York, Saturday night is placed at $2,000,000. A fireman has been arrested on the charge of trying to break into one of the safes contained in the burned structure.

Phillips, Marshall & Co., of London, have purchased 1,300,000 acres of land from the State of Mississippi. The lands lie mostly in the Yazoo delta, and comprise some of the richest cotton and timber land in the South. It is the intention to improve, cultivate, and colonize these lands.

28th.—A dense fog prevailed in New York yesterday, rendering ferry travel perilous and detaining many river steamers. One New Haven boat, in attempting to pass through Hell Gate ran upon the ledge of rocks off Blackwell's Island, where she stuck fast. The passengers were taken back to New York.

A nun detained against her will in a convent at Gratz, Austria, leaped from the convent wall into a stream Monday. She was rescued. The incident has caused considerable excitement in the staid Austrian town.

A disastrous explosion occurred Monday on the West Point steamer which resulted in the total loss of the boat, and the loss of nineteen lives.

A fire broke out in the Village of Moravia, Iowa, the flames being preceded by a loud report. Before the fire could be subdued damage to the extent of over $20,000 had been inflicted. Five stores were burned and a lot of frame buildings destroyed.

Last Sunday the village of Durand, Wis., was visited by a terrible conflagration which swept away the entire business portion of the place. Loss $80,000.

29th.—The South Arklow (Wicklow), Ireland, light-ship has run down by a four-masted vessel, said to be an American. The men belonging to the light-ship were saved. Three steamers have left Queenstown in chase of the vessel which caused the accident.

At Wadesboro, N. C., seven stores were burned yesterday. The loss is estimated at $25,000.

The Indian Chief Arzate and thirty of his band have been captured and executed near Chihuahua, Mexico.

30th.—Some 1,700 persons have been arrested in Warsaw for participation in the anti-Jewish riot growing out of the church panic of Christmas-Day. The persons are mostly young men.

31st.—President Arthur is known to have expressed himself very decidedly on the Mormon polygamy question, and he will do all in his power to remove this blot from the fame of the Republic during his Administration.

The trial trip through the St. Gothard tunnel was highly successful. The time occupied in the passage of the train was fifty minutes one way and thirty-three the other way.

One coasting steamer and two steamers engaged in the Mediterranean trade are finally given up as lost during the November gales. Loss, 110 lives.

Jan. 2d.—During the Knights of Pythias festival at Shanesville, Ohio, last evening, the floor gave way, precipitating the company, numbering over 200, to the floor below. Two persons were instantly killed, three others fatally injured, and between seventy and eighty more or less injured or burned. The building took fire almost instantly, producing a scene of the wildest excitement.

New Year's Day was ushered in at Richburg, N. Y., by a terrible calamity in the burning of Abers' boarding-house and the loss of three lives, the children of Mrs. Abers. Eight or ten boarders had narrow escapes from death. Two were so badly burned that it is believed they will die. One of the servant-girls jumped out of the window with her night-clothes all on fire. Mrs. Abers was so badly prostrated by the shock that she will probably die.

The school census of Indiana, just completed, shows a total of 714,343 school children in the State—an increase of 10,785 during the past year.

3d.—By the breaking of a bridge over the Kennebunk River a passenger-train on the Boston & Maine Railroad was yesterday precipitated down a high embankment, and the cars taking fire, a scene of horror occurred. Out of the 100 passengers very few escaped unhurt. One was killed, one fatally wounded, three seriously hurt, and sixty others bruised and injured.

By a collision yesterday in Indianapolis between a street-car and a freight train at a railway crossing, one man was severely wounded, a lady was instantly killed, her body being severed at the waist.

The vital statistics of New York City for the year just closed, make a sad and alarming exhibit for 1881, if they have been correctly reported. Without stopping now to analyze them, it is only necessary to point out that the aggregate number of deaths is stated at 38,609, or nearly 7,000 more than in 1880, and the aggregate number of births at only 26,130, or nearly 1,000 less than in the previous year. There were nearly 13,000 more deaths than births, which indicates that if it were not for the influx of foreign immigrants, New York would be on the road to extinction. This is an exceptional condition of things. The great City of London, three times as large as New York, and not so favorably situated for drainage and other sanitary precautions, showed an increase for 1880 of 38,000 births over deaths, or about one per cent of its population in the number of births over the number of deaths, while New York City shows a decrease of about one per cent in the same relations.

4th.—At last the Land-Leaguers of Dublin have carried their point. The new Lord Mayor was installed on Monday, and yesterday the Corporation conferred the freedom of the city upon Parnell and Dillon.

The Roman Catholic Archbishops, Bishops, and clergy of the Province of Quebec, have withdrawn their opposition to the proposed repeal of the law prohibiting marriage with a deceased wife's sister, and a bill for the repeal will be introduced in Parliament.

The annual sale of the pews of Beecher's Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, was held to-night. The bidding was not as spirited as last year, there being a decrease of $3,988 in the sum realized. All pews worth paying a premium for were sold. Total rental, $12,083; chairs brought $804, and premiums $12,492, making in all $38,329. "The poor have the gospel."

Three brothers confined in jail at Graham, Texas, for murder, made a break for freedom, which resulted in the death of a jailor, the killing of the three brothers by the citizens, and the wounding of several citizens.

5th.—Eleven Chinamen, who were working on the Southern Pacific Railroad in Arizona, were massacred by Apache Indians.

A man at Minneapolis, after drinking a quart of whisky, shot his wife dead with a revolver.

Correspondence.

PREPARATION, Monona Co., Iowa,
December 20th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I look over the past twenty years of experience in the Church, and think of the humble simplicity in which many received the gospel; and when by earnest seeking for the Spirit the earnest of our inheritance was received, what joy filled the soul; and how near that inheritance, or rest, seemed; when the Saints should be gathered to enjoy one continued Zion, or the pure in heart. And such was the testimony of the Spirit, that it was just at the door; but past experience shows how important the delay, that all might be tried as gold in the fire. In the trial some who were strong have proved to be weak; the weak have become strong; and this has depended upon the holding to, or not holding to the rod of iron, or the word of God. Mark it: where ever you find an Elder denying or making war on the word, and making an effort to teach to or enforce that denial on the Saints, he has weakened if not fallen. But mark the man who has been content to teach the revealed word in simplicity; he has grown strong. How true the saying of the apostle: "Though we or an angel from heaven teach any other gospel, let him be accursed; (or he will be cursed). An important lesson has been necessary, which is not to trust in the arm of flesh. Another lesson is to seek the spirit of discernment, for all is not of God that claims to be. A good means of discernment is to understand the law.

Another great work that has devolved upon the Saints has been, and now is, the redemption of the latter day work from the sins which brought apostacy and dishonor. We are thankful that this has been to quite an extent accomplished; but we think that a stricter discipline in all departments of the Church is needed to gain this much desired end. From 1830 until now, the need of seeing that the law is kept, has been great. For fear of hurting one member, they have been indulged, until hundreds and sometimes thousand have been made to feel their reproch. But we do not wish to look on dark side of the picture, for we have great reason to rejoice, for God is still manifesting his love, and the Saints are rejoicing in the blessings of the gospel of Jesus, our dear Savior.

The work in this, the Little Sioux district, is in fair condition. There are plenty of opportunities for preaching, and the Elders are blessed in speaking. We have the abiding testimony that God's work commenced in the last days will triumph in its time. May the Lord hasten that blessed promise.

Yours in gospel bonds.

J. M. PUTNEY.

WEIR CITY, Kansas,
January 3d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—It has been so long since I sent any word to you from this part of the vineyard, that I think it's rather a duty that I should report the condition of affairs like others, and solicit your advice and the prayers of all, for the advancement of the work in this part of the country. On the second of November, 1881, I went out with others, to attend conference at Mound Valley, which came off on the 4th. We had good times, and I have been in the field ever since, dividing my labors in the following places: Mound Valley, Columbus Branch, Oronogo, Pleasant View Branch, and Weir City. Bro. W. S Taylor baptized one in the Columbus Branch while I was there, and there are some more ready. I have been trying to do my duty, and the result must be left in the hands of God. I preached here on the 1st and 2nd, and will this forenoon and evening, if all is well. There is one thing I would like to impress on the minds of the officials and Saints of this district, and I don't think it would hurt others; that is to have more general action in the pushing forward of the work; and to do this I will suggest the following: that every Elder and Priest (great and small) resolve in their minds to preach once at least in each month during this year; and also, that every member will make it a point to give out one tract every month through the year, and a little talk besides; and also, let all the presiding Elders of branches see that the Saints come "often" together. Now if you will do this faithfully, we will rid ourselves of the dormant and deadly feelings of inactivity, and our "dull" meetings will be "done away with, and no longer needed." "Let him that is warned, warn his neighbor," &c. And now let us take a view of the result;—we will suppose we have 20 officers, that in the year would give 240 sermons; and we will suppose we have 300 members, which would distribute 3,600 tracts, with as many good little sermons, or conversations, which would make when put together, 7,440 good sermons. "Seek first the kingdom of God," and "all other things shall be added." Let us work as a body and the Spirit of the Lord will move on the people.

PLANO, Illinois,
December 26th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I thought that I would write you a few lines, as news from here would be of interest to you, and as I think I have some that is good. You may hear of it before this reaches you. We have had our Christmas time, and a tree, and there were two hundred and ninety presents on it, to say nothing about the presents of reward to the children of the school. There was $9.10 taken at the door, and all of those that had helped to get it up were free, beside the school; so you see that we had quite a house full, and there was the best of order all through. The singing was good, and also the other performances. Everybody present felt pleased, or seemed to; and all passed off pleasantly. The next day there was the largest Sabbath School that we have had since the office moved—fifty-four present; a fair congregation in the morning, and about seventy-five present in the evening; and upon the whole, I feel greatly encouraged with the prospect in this place. Much credit is due to Sr. Abbie Horton for her service in training the children. Pray for us that we may go on in this good work.

Your brother in Christ,

W. VICKERY.

LOGAN, Harrison Co., Iowa,
December 19th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—When I lived in Nauvoo, in 1843, the Saints baptized in the river for their dead. It was before the Church was rejected. I went with the rest and was baptized and confirmed for my father and mother. I have had a long desire to know about them. In December, 1878, I had a night vision, and saw my father and mother; they stood by my bed side. They told me that they both had received the gospel in prison. I told them I was glad of it; and rejoiced to see them. They said that they had gone to Paradise. I told them that I was baptized and confirmed for them thirty-five years ago, in Nauvoo; and they would come forth in the first resurrection. They had a garment upon them, reaching from their shoulders to their feet. Their heads were bare. The room was light enough to see them plainly. After they had delivered their message they withdrew from my bedside, and went out of the room. They both died before the gospel was restored in the last days. This was not a dream,—it was an open vision; I saw them with my eyes, and heard them with my ears, and talked with them face to face. My father died twenty years before the gospel was restored, and my mother seven years; my father perished at sea by the vessel going to the bottom, all hands being lost; my mother was killed by lightning in a thunder storm; she was a member of the Congregational Church, and lived up to the light that she had received. My father was not a professor. Perhaps you will think me a visionary man. Well, I believe in visions and in dreams, and the ministering of angels, and the Holy Spirit of God being poured out upon his Saints in these last days. If I can be instrumental in the hands of God of bringing my father and mother out of prison into the Paradise of God, that they will have a part in the first resurrection, I shall feel myself amply rewarded for all my trials and perils, and the afflictions that I have passed through for forty-seven years.

Let us see what the Lord says through the Prophet Joel: "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions; and also upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit."—Joel 2: 28, 29.

We can say that Joel is a true prophet. In every age of the world, when the Lord had a dispensation of the gospel committed unto man on the earth, the Saints always enjoyed these blessings, and why should not the Latter Day Saints?

I feel to write a few words from Joseph's address in the Book of Covenants; "Now, what do we hear in the gospel which we have received? A voice of gladness! A voice of mercy from heaven; and a voice of truth out the earth, glad tidings for the dead: a voice of gladness for the living and the dead; glad tidings of great joy; how beautiful on the mountains are the feet of those that bring glad tidings of good things; and that say unto Zion, Behold, thy God reigneth. As the dews of Carmel, so shall the knowledge of God descend upon them."—D. and C. 110: 19, "Brethren, shall we not go on in so great a cause? Go forward and not backward. Courage, brethren; and on, on to the victory! Let your hearts rejoice, and be exceeding glad. Let the earth break forth into singing. Let the dead speak forth anthems of eternal praise to the King Immanuel, who hath ordained before the world was, that which would enable us to redeem them out of their prisons; for the prisoners shall go free."—D. and C. 111: 22.

Your brother in the gospel,
THOMAS CARRICO.

TUSCARORA, Elko Co., Nevada,
December 31st, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—Since I wrote to you last, I have become a member of the Reorganized Church. On the 28th day of August, I was baptized by Elder Penrod; I am the school teacher that he spoke of baptizing, of whom there was a notice in the Herald. I taught a school only about three miles from Island Mountain, last Summer, and had an opportunity to become acquainted with the Elder and some of his family, whose society I enjoyed very much. I have read the Herald attentively and carefully since I subscribed for it, in the latter part of last year, and I desire it the next year. Bro. A. P. Haws resides here, and desires the Herald also, and sends the money. So please send two copies, one for him and one for me. My object in reading the Herald is to get correct teaching in the doctrine of Christ through those who speak through its columns; and there is a question that I desire to ask the Elders of the Reorganized Church, and the question is this: In the days of Abraham there lived three very noted men, Abraham, Melchisedec, and Esaias; which of these three noted men presided over the Church of God in the days of Abraham?

Yours in the love of the truth,

G. A. DAVY.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Illinois,
January 2d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—I closed a discussion with a Christian preacher, (so called), on the 22d of December. All the points of our doctrine were tried, so far as his skill and ability could reach. His arguments were about the same as those usually brought against us. We felt our great weakness, and tried to put our trust in the Lord; and although our effort was not such as we would like altogether, we do not think the cause suffered materially; I affirmed the church to which I belonged in teaching, faith, and practice was that of the Church of Jesus Christ. He affirmed the church to which he belonged in teaching, faith and practice was that of the Church of Jesus Christ. I took three days on my proposition; he one on his; held the debate in Richland county, Illinois. Kind regards to all. Yours in the covenant of peace,

G. H. HILLIARD.

Moscow, Nez Perces Co., Idaho,
December 11th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—I have just closed a course of seventeen lectures in this city, which were well attended, and bids fair to result in good for the cause of truth. The Methodist minister undertook to review us; he gave two lectures, but his efforts were very weak. I reviewed him, and he has fled the field of controversy. The last but not least argument presented by the M. E.'s. was to remove the lamps from the hall where I was holding my meetings; but a little legal threatening on the part of my friends, brought them back without any disturbance to my meetings. The kind citizens paid for the use of the hall, and paid for our board at the hotel.

After the holidays are over, we will renew our efforts here, and after another attack on this place, we shall move on to Colfax, Wyoming Territory, and from thence to Farmington, Utah. We have many things to discourage, but the Holy Spirit is a comfort indeed.

May the Lord bless and sustain those that labor for the upbuilding of Zion.

December 19th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph. Please accept this small gift of five dollars from the Olive Branch Circle, and dispose of it as you see fit. We are working for the good of the cause; and with the blessing of the Lord we have made the poor rejoice, and assisted the cause in various ways. It makes our hearts glad to know that we have done some good in the cause of our Master; and while laboring with our hands we trust there has been that inward growth of grace that will better enable us to become obedient to all the requirements of the gospel. It is a life long work; and as the good old hymn says, that we loved to hear you sing, "There can be no furlough granted, in the army of the Lord." When shall we look for you again? How often we wish for a visit from you, and shall we hope in vain?

Deeming this sufficient at present, and hoping to hear from you on receipt of this, we as sisters in Israel wish you all prosperity, also a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

ELIZA M. WALKER,
Secretary and Treasurer.

BUCHANAN, Tennessee,
December 28th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I left home October 22d, and came to Farmington, Kentucky. There I found Bro. J. R. Lambert, laboring zealously for the cause of truth. Have been working as circumstances seemed to direct, in Kentucky and Tennessee. Am feeling well physically, and am blessed spiritually, but not over burdened financially; my needs are provided for, however. I find the Saints as a rule, kind, warm-hearted people, and feel strongly attached to them. Remissness of duty prevents some from great spiritual enjoyment. He who hath said "pray vocally, and in secret," loves the willing, and obedient. Opposition of the old sort is strong in the south. Honest debate, with God's word as the standard of evidence, is seldom engaged in, but bolts, bars, locks, and stories without a shadow for a foundation, form the chief weapons with which the pious (?) seek to oppose the great evil known as "Mormonism." When they are asked to point out the objectionable features of the doctrine we represent, they reply, "You believe in polygamy," and they prove it thus: Brigham Young believed, taught, and practiced polygamy, and he was a Mormon; and you believe in the Book of Mormon, and hence you are a polygamist." Of course we "see the point," and the point is, they are entirely ignorant of that of which they speak, or else they willfully misrepresent. Others might have said to John: "The people of Pergamos hold to the doctrine of the Nicolaitaines, and they are Christians; you believe in Christ, and hence, you are a polygamist." The leaven is working among the honest-hearted ones, who are coming, one by one, into the fold of the Good Shepherd. The labors of Brn. Anthony, Clapp, Hansen, Smith, Thomas, Foss and others have had their effect here. I baptized two in Kentucky, and four here at Eagle Creek. Others seem near the kingdom. May God give them courage to do the right, and "face a frowning world." For such there is timely, and eternal joy. I expect to remain in this region for a while, and labor with Bro. Thomas. Brn. Lambert and Scarcliff will go to Florida soon. I enclose a letter that was left on the stand for me at Buchanan, the writers supposing that the "Mormon preacher" was Bro. Scarcliff. I wish to remark that they had "Mormon preaching" that night, and I still "live and enjoy good health." The house was locked against me the next night. I remain your co-worker in the cause of Christ.

G. S. HYDE.

GLEN EASTON, West Virginia,
December 22d, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—We as a little branch are still contending for the faith once delivered to the Saints. We have had no preaching since in August; Bro. Craig was here and preached us a few sermons. We have our prayer meetings twice a week, and often enjoy refreshing from our Father, who is the giver of all good. We would be pleased to have an Elder visit us. We would try to make him comfortable. The Herald, Hope and Advocate are our preachers, and they contain much encouraging news. I love to read them all, and I love to hear from the Saints, for I love my Father's children wherever I have met them. I long for the time when we will be with the loved ones where there will be no more sorrow. I feel weak and unworthy, but my only desire is to do my Father's will, and ever be found contending for the faith once delivered to the Saints; that in the end I may be saved in my Father's kingdom.

I remain, your sister in the one faith, and in hope of eternal life,

CAROLINE WAYT.

ALLENDALE, Missouri,
December 27th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—I came to this place on the 17th inst., by request of Bro. E. M. Wildermuth. Since that time we have been preaching to good congregations with good liberty, and good feeling prevails; some are near the kingdom. If the work is properly prosecuted there will be a number gathered into the fold of Christ.

December 29th.—The interest is still increasing. We have more calls than we can fill. The Saints here are somewhat scattered, and are very kind to us. Our headquarters are at Bro. Joseph Hammer's, a man that is well worthy of the faith and confidence of true Latter Day Saints. Bro. Hammer is doing a good business, and has the good will of all who know him. He has a large stock of goods on hand continually, makes quick sales and small profits, which gives him a large trade. Although he has such a large trade he loves the truth and is doing all he can to advance the same. Would we had more such men.

Bro. E. M. Wildermuth and myself have delivered twenty-two discourses. I will have to leave here for home January 2d, on account of obligations that I have to meet. I hope that the Lord will send some one to help Bro. Wildermuth prosecute the work here. The work demands it, and if not kept up now, we will lose ground. Bro. Wildermuth is a good man and will do all he can to labor in harmony with any good, exemplary man; one that will seek to please God and stand boldly in the defense of truth. When we first came here it was hard to get the people out to hear; but thank the Lord he heard our cry, and the way opened, and now we have a house full and interest is increasing and we know that the Lord has a people here, and hence it should be kept up. The branch here needs some one to regulate her affairs, and then according to the evidence I have of the workings of the Spirit of God, there will be but few left to advocate the cause of the wicked one in this vicinity. "Well," says one, "you ought to take hold. You are one of the seventy." I have not been sent here to meddle with branch difficulties. I was requested by the one in charge of this mission to join Bro. E. M. Wildermuth and preach the gospel, and not interfere with local, or branch business; and we have by the help of God made the plan of salvation plain to the honest seeker for truth; and with all the humility of our souls we call upon the authorities of the district to come to the front and set things in order; that those who want to obey the truth may come where peace and love controls, and not confusion. I love the truth, have no use for confusion; and to this end I shall ever pray that peace may be with the people of God. I have baptized five since last Spring; preach every two weeks at home. Some are still investigating. May God's blessing rest upon all the lovers of truth, is my prayer. Wishing all a happy New Year, I am as ever,

Yours in the gospel covenant,

I. N. ROBERTS.

FONTANELLE, Iowa,
December 31st, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—I have something to say. First: About Bro. Homer C. Hoyt. You seem to me in your notice of him in the Herald, to suspect his worthiness of such a favor. I claim for him that he is a worthy brother, and I believe if you or any other wise or good Mormon, could see him, his wife and children, two daughters, who were at my house this Fall and staid one night with us, such a notice as I see would not have been put in the Herald. He is an old Mormon, was at Nauvoo as early as 1840 or 41. His present wife and children that I know, are not ashamed to confess Christ nor his doctrine, and the Book of Mormon is sweet to the taste also. Could you make yourself believe that a man that could write such an article as I sent to you for publication, was an unworthy man, or brother. Have you ever known a wicked, slothful Saint to write such a good, plain description of what is now ready to come on the earth. If you want to know who he is; he was in the dark day with Banamy; but he has never to my knowledge denied the doctrine of Christ nor the Book of Mormon, nor the work your father commenced. But if you fail to give it a place in the Herald, please return it to me, and I will esteem it a favor from you I will not, I hope, soon forget.

Now let me ask you a question. Have you seen or heard anything from Elijah the Prophet, who is now here in our own land and state; who sends his papers free to all that wish to read them; they are to my mind, worth all they claim to be. He is the character you read of in the two last verses of the Bible, and the 42d chapter of Isaiah, and many other places in the Bible. All sent free of charge.

BRIGGS ALDEN.

MARSHFIELD, Missouri,
January 2d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—We would be glad to have an Elder come to this city. I think a good work can be done here. The Baptists are holding a protracted meeting, and on hearing that a Mormon was living in town, they came for me. One of them has been preaching for fifty years, and another has been educated and trained for the business. They wanted to know what church we (my wife and I) belonged to. I told them, The Church of Jesus Christ. Well what do they believe? I presented them with an Epitome of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church; over which we exchanged views, and referred to the Bible, which I think should be our guide in this life. We were pretty well divided, and all went off smoothly; my wife, the Bible and I, against three Baptist preachers; and an audience of ten or twelve. They were kind enough to acknowledge being beat, on some points; and one young lady says that she believes the doctrine. They stayed with me about six hours, and all of the time was spent in searching the Scripture. Now, Bro. Joseph, if one like me, uneducated, unexperienced and unprepared, can hold three experienced Baptists six hours, and cause one out of ten to acknowledge that they believe, what could an Elder called of God, and ordained by the laying on of hands of those who are in authority do? If there is an Elder passing this way, please notify them to call and see us, and oblige,

Your brother,

J. R. STUART.

PROVO CITY, Utah,
December 20th, 1881.

Dear Brother: We are getting along pretty well out here, considering the circumstances that surround us. There is considerable interest manifested at our preaching. The people here have strayed so far from the truths of the gospel that they can not realize that we have the gospel which they once had; but through transgression have nearly lost it. In fact many of the old Saints out here do not realize what their first love was, hence the difficulty of convincing them of the truth of the pure gospel. There is so many mysteries connected with the gospel out here, that they are ever learning, but never coming to the knowledge of the truth. So I think that the way-faring man would stand a poor chance, and be very liable to err in this day of the world; but the gospel of salvation is more simple, and not hampered with so much mystery.

Believe me to remain,
Your brother in the gospel,
JAMES GOFF.

SANDWICH, Illinois,
December 26th, 1881.

Dear Joseph: Enclosed find report of Sunday School from organization to date; also Christmas programme. We had the finest entertainment in town. House crowded. There was over $125 worth of presents given away; among them an easy chair to Elder F. G. Pitt. From report you will see that our school is on a solid foundation; and we can, I think, safely say that the Lord is on our side.

Yours truly,
W. A. PEASE.

Conference Minutes.

MANCHESTER DISTRICT.

Minutes of quarterly district conference, held 1st and 2d October, 1881. J. Dewsnap, president; J. Baty, secretary.

Business session at Manchester on the 1st.

The president's address was then read:—

I have much pleasure in meeting your honorable body in conference capacity, and of addressing you in reference to the present condition, and the future prospects of the work in the Manchester District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Since our July Conference, I have visited the different branches composing the district, and have found a decided improvement in the spiritual and temporal condition of the said churches. We have had several additions by baptisms in each of the said branches, and I regret to add losses by death also in two of them. I allude to the death of Elder H. Boydell of Farnworth, and sister Jessie Miller of Manchester. Yet ye sorrow not as those without hope, for we believe that our loss is their gain, inasmuch as they were fully prepared for the great change. We have found even cause for rejoicing and have had pleasure in our sympathy with those most affected by the bereavement.

There appears to be a spirit of enquiry abroad throughout the district, which points in the direction of increased membership, and to the establishment of branches in one or two towns contiguous to this city. And I look forward with pleasure to the time when we shall welcome such branches to the district brotherhood.

Glancing briefly at our internal organization, I have pleasure in observing the progress of the "Saints' Burial Society." I mention this because it has become a matter of district interest, as per resolution of the last conference, and because I have gratification in seconding any effort put forth for the mutual benefit of our church and its people. There are several rules connected with the society that I believe require to be readjusted, so as to place the institution upon a more permanent and solid basis. I have been informed that the members of the Farnworth and the Sheffield branches have applied for membership in the society, and I believe steps will be taken to bring about the affiliation desired by them.

In reference to the district finance, I beg to call your attention to the unsatisfactory condition of the district funds; upon this fund depends, to a great extent, our means of spreading abroad a knowledge of our principles, as well also as a means of obtaining the necessary visitation to the branches, on the part of the district authorities, and eldership, so necessary to the building up of the spiritual condition of the churches. At present we have a fund established without any available funds in connection therewith.

I beg to call your attention to what appears to me to be the desirability of the appointment of a vice-president of the district, so that there may be one who, in virtue of his official position, may transact, take charge of, and conduct the business of the district in conjunction with, or during the absence of the president.

In conclusion, permit me to impress upon your honorable body the advisability of encouraging to the utmost extent, the cultivation of congregational singing, as a means of attracting strangers to our services; for I have learned to appreciate the value of the tones of the sweet singers of Israel, as a powerful and attractive agency in the conversion of souls.

I would also duly impress upon your honorable body the necessity for the strict advocacy of the principles of temperance upon the part of every one holding church membership in this district; for however good our precepts may be, they will find but scant recognition except they be backed up by pure example; and it is unquestionably the duty of every Latter Day Saint to make a firm stand against every thing that has a tendency to demoralize society, and by these means show that we are in earnest in our profession of the gospel of Christ.

Praying that the blessing of the Almighty God may attend you in your deliberations, and that peace may prevail, and whatever is accomplished may prove to be for the best interest of the great work in which we are unitedly engaged.

Delegates Reports.—Manchester, by Elder J. McCue, who said that the spiritual condition was very good, and that the Sunday School was going on very well, being attended by the children of both Saints and strangers; also the Bible Class is doing a good work in the branch, and the spirit of unity was manifest to a good extent in the Branch. Sheffield, by Bro. H. Hoole, Priest, who said he was glad to say that their Branch was going on in a very fair way, and that they enjoyed a very good spirit in the branch, and that the president of the branch (Elder J. Austin) is doing all he can, together with the Saints, for the furtherance of the cause and the establishment of peace. Farnworth Branch, by letter, stating that the work is progressing fairly in Farnworth, and that there had been four baptized and one deceased, and that the work is onward, others being almost ready.

Statistical Reports.—Manchester 54; baptized 3, removed 1, died 1. Farnworth 26; baptized 4, died 1. Sheffield 16; baptized 2.

Officers' Reports.—Elders J. W. Coward, J. Austin, S. Spargo, R. Baty, J. McCue, W. Armstrong, H. Greenwood, J. Baty and J. Dewsnap, reported. Priests: H. Hoole, J. Eckersley, W. Spargo, M. Haywood, J. H. Newstead, J. Furness, and H. Jackson, reported. Teachers T. Hodson, R. Dawson, reported. Deacons T. Livesay, J. Fodas, reported.

Financial secretary's report: balance in hand 2s 7d, income 6s 10d, expenditure 7s 8d, balance in hand 1s 9d.

Resolved that the recommendation of the Manchester Branch of Bro. J. H. Newstead (priest) for ordination to the office of Elder be now considered.

Resolved that this conference approve and authorize said ordination; the president naming Elders T. Taylor and H. Greenwood to attend to said ordination.

Resolved that Elder H. Greenwood be appointed as the vice president of the Manchester District, for the purpose of assisting the president in the labors and duties of the office.

Resolved that this conference express its unqualified condemnation of the use, as a beverage, of any kind of intoxicating drinks, and also the use of tobacco, especially by the officials and members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, except for medicinal purposes.

Resolved that the priesthood of this district labor as circumstances permit, under the direction of the president.

Elder Thomas Taylor, president of the English Mission, spoke in reference to the condition of the work throughout the English Mission, which he represented as exceedingly encouraging.

Resolved that we sustain all the Church authorities, General, Mission, and District, in all righteousness.

Resolved that when this conference adjourns, it do so to the 7th and 8th January, 1882, at Manchester.

Resolved that this meeting do now adjourn to to-morrow afternoon at Farnworth.

The services on Sunday were held at Farnworth; a very excellent fellowship meeting was enjoyed in the afternoon, and in the evening the meeting was addressed by Elders H. Greenwood and T. Taylor. At the close of the services, all expressed themselves as well pleased, and feeling encouraged in the work of the Lord.

POTTAWATTAMIE DISTRICT.

The above conference was held at Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, December 3d and 4th, 1881. H. N. Hansen, president; K. H. Hansen, clerk pro tem.

Reports of Branches.—Crescent City: 85 members, baptized 8, received by certificate of baptism 6, died 3. Wheeler's Grove 82; died 1. North Star 64; received by certificate of baptism 4.

Reports of Missions.—H. Hansen, H. N. Hansen, Bro. Fields, R. M. Elvin, D. Hougas, and J. R. Badham.

H. Hansen was continued in the Danish Mission. Andrew Hall was appointed district treasurer.

Andrew Hall, Bishop's Agent, reported: On hand last report $18.38, received of Bishop Rogers $50, tithings and offerings $31.75, received of Pottawattamie District $7.00, total $107.15. Paid J. Caffall $70, J. H. Hansen $35, J. Thomas $5, district clerk $1.50, total $111.50.

Report of committee of arrangement for the Semi-Annual Conference for the year 1881:—Received in cash and labor $88.35, paid out $81.35, balance due Church $7. The above $7.00 was paid to the Bishop's Agent. Committee: Andrew Hall, J. D. Haywood, K. H. Hansen.

Preaching during conference by J. R. Badham and R. M. Elvin.

H. N. Hansen was sustained president. Conference adjourned to meet at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on the last Saturday in February [25th], 1882, in the forenoon.

CENTRAL MISSOURI DISTRICT.

Conference met with the Waconda Branch, on the 3d day of December, 1881.

Report of Branches.—Carrollton 37; removed by letter 1. Waconda 43; received by baptism 2, disfellowshipped 1. Hazel Dell, Valley, Grand River, and Alma, not reported.

The building committee reported the house nearly completed, but some more little funds were necessary to purchase the lumber for seating the church.

A motion was made and sustained, that the owners of the land make their deed to the land on which the church was built to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Resolved that Elder J. D. Craven be appointed to take the deeds and have them properly recorded, and forward the same to I. L. Rogers by the 1st of January, 1882.

The following resolution was adopted as being the mind of the conference on the Representative question, as adopted by the General Conference: Resolved, that we favor the Decatur amendment to the Representation question.

There was Saints' meeting on Friday and Saturday evenings, and preaching on Sunday forenoon by Elder Ware, assisted by Elder Curtis. A good time was enjoyed by all, and God blessed us by the manifestations of the gifts of the gospel.

Adjourned to meet with the Waconda Branch, on the 4th day of March, 1882.

MAINE WESTERN DISTRICT.

This conference was held with the Brookville Branch. J. C. Foss, president; J. J. Billings, clerk.

Mace R. Cousins chosen clerk.

Adjourned to meet with Deer Isle Branch, March 4th and 5th, 1882.

Miscellaneous.

MASSACHUSETTS DISTRICT.

By appointment of the last conference of the Massachusetts District, the first Sunday in February, 1882, was set apart as a day of fasting and prayer, to be observed in the district, that the Lord would prosper his work amongst us, and bestow the spirit of wisdom and understanding upon his people. The Saints are also requested to contribute of their means to the support of a traveling Elder in the District, as we desire to continue one in the field.

FREMONT DISTRICT.

By resolution of our last quarterly conference, it was resolved that all Elders in the Fremont District are required to report at the session to be held February 5th and 6th, 1882, at Ross School-house, Fremont county, Iowa, either in person or by letter.

J. R. BADHAM, District Pres.

FLORIDA DISTRICT.

The next conference for the Florida District will be held at the Hinote Branch, Santa Rosa county, Florida, February 4th and 5th, 1882. A special invitation is hereby given to any of the traveling ministry, or any brethren from Alabama, who can meet with us. To the Saints of the district I would say, that the subject of representation at the coming conference will be presented, and other matters that we should all feel interested in, and I hope to see a good attendance.

L. F. WRST.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Sr. Mary Ann Llewellyn wants to know the whereabouts of her brother, John Badger; English by birth, cabinet maker by trade formerly. When last heard from he was in Brooklyn, New York. Saints of Brooklyn, please take notice.

Also, her brother-in-law, Thomas Jones; Welsh by birth, and vest maker by trade. When last heard from he was in New Jersey. Any one who can give any information of them, or either of them, would confer a great favor upon Sr. Mary Ann Llewellyn, widow of Bro. Daniel Llewellyn, deceased, by addressing her at Columbus, Kan.

CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

Will branch and district clerks please to favor the work of recording by sending to me the original reports of the branches that are in their hands, or else make out transcripts of the changes that have occurred since they last sent reports to me, that is giving names of gains and losses, with items of birth, baptism, ordination, removal, expulsion or death. I shall call on every branch by letter this winter with a statement of the standing of each on the Church Records and would like as prompt and full replies as possible.

H. A. STEBBINS, Church Recorder.

LAHONT, Iowa, Dec. 15th, 1881.

NOTICE TO ELDERS.

As not enough names were enrolled to fill the Fifth Quorum of Elders prior to the General Conference of September, 1881, it is desired that further applications be received for membership in said quorum, that the quorum may be organized at the first opportunity.

H. A. STEBBINS, Church Secretary.

Israel L. Rogers, Presiding Bishop, Sanawich, DeKalbcounty, Illinois.

TOBACCO.

The use of tobacco, in most cases, if not in all, is a useless self-indulgence. But if that were all, its use might be tolerated with some degree of patience. But besides being useless and expensive, it is positively injurious to the system—violative of God's law, as written in man's physical organism. It pollutes the person and garments of those who use it, rendering such persons offensive to all who are not contaminated with the poison. It is often very inconsistent. It also causes many persons to violate good manners and every consideration decency and propriety. Yet we find teachers, professors in colleges, ministers, church members high in position, and Sunday-school superintendents, practically endorsing this inexcusable abomination, thereby becoming a stumbling block to many. And is it strange that our boys are found trying to ape the follies of men with these illustrious examples before them. Parents, do you wish your boys to become tobacco sots? If not, set them a good example—thus exemplifying a cardinal virtue—self-denial.

OBITUARIES.—Obituary notices not exceeding one hundred words, about twelve lines, will be published free of charge; when exceeding one hundred words, five cents for each additional eight words (one line) will be charged; notices of prominent Church officials excepted. Money to accompany notice.

DIED.

HANDFORD.—Sister Harriet, wife of Mr. John Handford, while on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. D. F. Blanton, near Forest City, Holt county, Missouri, was taken with pneumonia fever, and died October 14th, 1881. Sister Handford was born October 17th, 1824, in Mellor, Moor End, Derbyshire, England; was raised in the Methodist faith, but became identified with the Latter Day Saints, about the year 1850; emigrated to Utah in 1855, but returned in 1856; united with the Reorganization August 17th, 1873, being baptized by Elder John Brackenbury. Funeral services by Elder Thomas Nutt.

A mother kind and true is gone to rest,
Her memory must be forever blest
By us, her children, who have known her worth;
Love like a mother's is not found on earth;
Dear mother, now we see thy vacant chair,
Thy God has called thee from a world of care,
To dwell with all the good who've gone before,
O, may we meet where parting is no more.
How deep and lasting is a mother's love,
So deep—so holy—it comes from above.
Her children are her glory, or her shame;—
How sweet the halo round a mother's name.
Oh, how she longed to be with Christ at rest,
No pain, or sorrow there disturbs her breast;
She dwells with loved ones who have gone before,
O, may we meet her on that golden shore.

MEREDITH.—At Nebraska City, Nebraska, December 27th, 1881, of cold in the head, Mary Ellen, only child of Bro. Frederick and Mrs. Anna Meredith, aged 1 month and 17 days. Funeral service by Elder Robert M. Elvin.

DIEM.—At Richmondville, Michigan, October 6th, 1881, by the explosion of a boiler, Frederick Diem. Was born at China, St. Clair county, Michigan, February 7th, 1843; was baptized February 1st, 1880, at which time he was cured of apoplectic fits, of which he greatly desired to bear testimony through the Herald, and once commenced to write it, but never sent it. His family desire it to be known to the readers of the Herald. Funeral service by Elder John J. Cornish.

STALEY.—At Leroy, Coffey county, Kan., after an illness of five weeks, Della Ann, eldest daughter of Bro. L. S. and Sr. Nancy Staley, aged 11 years, 5 months and 25 days. Services conducted by Bro. W. S. Loar.

JONES.—At Nortonville, California, September 17th, 1881, Eliza R., wife of Even D. Jones. She was born at Merthyr, Glamorganshire, Wales, July 17th, 1839, and was baptized by Elder William Henshaw in 1848, and united with the Reorganization by baptism, performed by Elder William Anderson in 1868, and was "faithful unto death." Funeral services conducted by Elder Peter B. Cain.

GILMORE.—At Medoc, Jasper county, Missouri, September 24th, 1881, of cancer in the stomach, Sr. Saria E., wife of Bro. P. E. Gilmore. She was born in Jasper county, Missouri, March 16th, 1851; was baptized at Manti, Iowa, February 20th, 1876, by Elder J. T. Kinnaman, and was at her death aged 30 years, 6 months and 8 days. She leaves two children, boy and girl, aged ten and eleven, to mourn with her husband her sad departure—but her hope was a glorious one.

LEWIS.—In the Alma Branch, Schuyler county, Illinois, November 27th, 1881, Elias Lewis, born March 8th, 1859, in Schuyler county; baptized and confirmed by Elder D. J. Wetherbee, March 21st, 1869. Also, in same place, December 25th, 1881, Julius V., son of Wm. J. and Emma Curry, aged 10 years, 3 months and 24 days. He was baptized and confirmed June 26th, 1881, by Elder J. H. Lake. He sleeps in peace, at rest with Christ.

MOORE.—At Wataga, Knox county, Illinois, of consumption of the bowels, Joseph Moore, aged 81 years and 3 months. He was born May 23d, 1800, in Washington county, Virginia; was baptized by Bro. Charles Derry.

PRETTYMAN.—At Knox, Indiana, December 9th, 1881, Curtis H., youngest son of Bro. J. B. and Sr. Mary Prettyman; aged 10 months and 6 days. Funeral services held in the M. E. Church at Knox, by Elder L. B. Scott.

CROWSON.—At her residence, North Alton, Ill., of child-birth, Charlotte, only child of Bro. George and Sr. Ann Jarvice, and wife of Elder Charles Crowson. She was born at the village of Scholes, near Rotheram, Yorkshire, England, July 29th, 1842; and was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, May 5th, 1867, by Samuel Perks, and confirmed by James Whitehead. She bore her sufferings with much patience, and died in faith of the latter day work, December 11th, 1881; being 39 years, 4 months and 12 days old. She leaves a husband and eight children and many friends to mourn her loss. She was interred in Alton Cemetery, December 12th, 1881. Funeral services conducted by Elder Joseph E. Betts, sen., from 1 John 1:2, and Ps. 116:15.

Our daughter she has left us,
Her spirit's gone to rest,
To join the ransomed of the Lord,
And mingle with the just.
She struggled hard to stay with us,
Her sufferings were severe;
Her confidence was in her God,
She never had a fear.
Her sorrow and her suffering's o'er,
Her toils on earth are done;
She's gone to join the heavenly host,
Her work has just begun.
Eight children left to mourn her loss,
A husband and her babe;
A father and a mother dear,
Approaching near the grave.
Oh! when our toils on earth are done,
Oh, Lord, our living head!
Then close our peaceful eyes in death,
For our only child is dead.
Dead, did I say? Yes, dead to us,
Yet only for a while;
For God will raise her up again,
And we shall meet our child.
Yes, meet in heaven. Oh! glorious hope,
From sorrow, death, and pain;
Lord help us all in thee to trust,
That we may meet again.

HER MOTHER.

HATT.—At Omaha, Nebraska, August 27th, 1881, Elder George Hatt; born at Charlutt, Wiltshire, England, February 21st, 1820, and at death aged 61 years, 6 months and 5 days. Baptized November 3d, 1861, at Omaha. His disease was of a lingering nature and slowly undermined his once healthy body, but his faith was unwavering in the latter day work. He went to sleep like a tired child. He was well respected by all his neighbors, and the expressions of sympathy at the funeral gave evidence of the high esteem in which our departed brother was held. Funeral services were held at the Saints' Chapel. Sermon by Elder R. C. Elvin.

NYE.—At Freedom, Outagamie county, Wisconsin, November 10th, 1881, Sr. Elizabeth Nye. She leaves a husband in the eighty-fourth year of his age; has reared six children, only one of which remains to follow her to the grave.

OYLEAR.—At Walla Walla, Washington Territory, October 21st, 1880, of diphtheria and typhoid fever, James William Oylear, grandson of Bro. James and Sr. Elizabeth Cazier of Plattsmouth, Neb. He was born October 27th, 1859.

HALLOWELL.—Near Scottsville, Indiana, August 25th, 1881, Sr. Maria A. Hollowell, aged 26 years. She united with the Church, August 12th, 1872; and until the hour of her departure, she manifested her implicit faith in the gospel, by her purity of life. She was conscious to the last, and admonished her weeping family to faithfulness in the glorious work of the latter day; her eyes seemed brighter and her voice stronger than usual; and thus passed away one of the pure and good of earth. A father, mother, three sisters, a brother, a loving husband and one child, are left to mourn her loss. Funeral service by H. Scott.

POPE.—At Salt Lake City, Utah, December 9th, 1881, Bro. Stephen Pope, aged 72 years, 8 months and 15 days. He united with the Church, September 2d, 1870; was an ardent, zealous member, and though afflicted sorely at times with asthma, was usually at his post in the congregation. He died of asthmatic suffocation, and we trust his rest is with the Saints in Paradise.

Every heart has its secret sorrow which the world knows not, and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad.

Old age is a tyrant that forbids the pleasures of youth, or pain of death.

A FRIEND.

When clouds o'er head fill you with dread
Of what they may portend;
How very sweet it is to meet
A firm and faithful friend.

When trials great do you await,
As on your way you wend,
Who then can cheer,—or banish fear,
But a kind and constant friend.

When sorrow's smart afflicts your heart,
On whom can you depend?
O, who will dare your grief to share,
But a strong and loving friend?

When slanders vile, your name defile,
O, who will you defend;
To shield your name from cruel blame,
But an enduring friend?

When foes in spite their wits unite
Affliction great to send;
Who'll then engage to meet their rage,
But an everlasting friend?

If skies are clear, no danger near,
Then many aid will lend.
When storms arise, we only prize
The tried, unswerving friend.

Then let my heart yet share a part
With those whose love still blends
With all that's pure—and will endure
Undeviating friends.

WILDWOOD.

"Is Any Sick Among You?"

THE above language of Holy writ, is very inspiring to the true Latter Day Saint, as well as to the former day Saints. And why should it not be? But because of a seeming lack in the enjoyment of the gift of faith in healing, I have thought to try to show some of the probable reasons for the blessings not following the administration of the ordinance more frequently than they do.

The blessings of the gospel are ever upon conditions; though possibly those conditions are not always expressed in connection with the promise, and may be overlooked by the applicant.

We are taught that the Lord will hear us in whatsoever that we ask, that will be for our good. So if we should ask any thing, that would not be for our good; he would very properly withhold such a thing, as it would not prove an ultimate blessing. And for the Lord to continually bless us, when living below our duty, would be to encourage disrespect for the requirements he has of us. So we should be in subjection to every law that the Creator has given, or established, that we may come into contact with, whether it is the law of the spirit of life, or the laws of nature, because we will receive from each according to our relations with the same. And there is such a close affinity with all the works of a perfect God, that we can not properly regard any part of them and disregard another. If we violate a law of nature even ignorantly, we will suffer the consequences till we pay the penalty of our transgression, or find favor through the law of the spirit of life, (which has the same author) and having to look to the same person for favor, against whose laws we trespassed we must show, or give some evidence of a reformation—repentance—a turning away from. "And if they have committed sins they shall be forgiven."

Now we have come to the law of the kingdom for the blessing, "Whatsoever you ask in my name believing, nothing doubting you shall receive," and "That which is not of faith is sin." So we both, patient and Elders should try to expect the blessing when the ordinance is administered. Not have our minds filled with medical prescriptions and doubts, and ask the Lord to perform the cure when you had already decided to show your skill in prescribing remedies. This shows a positive lack of faith, and you also commit mockery in so doing.

Give your faith one good honest trial, then if the blessing does not come, administer "herbs and mild food," judiciously, not at hap-hazard, for the Lord will not hardly change the properties of herbs to suit the requirements of the disease.

But it is argued by some that we should first do all that we can think of, (in the way of prescribing), then call upon the Lord. To say the least of this, it does seem a strange idea to me. A forgiveness of sins is promised through the administration of the ordinance, by which the sick are either prepared to live or to die; and again the science of medicine is not sufficient for the disease of the day; and the promises of the gospel are for God's children—those who love him and keep his commandments, "And these signs shall follow them that believe." "Covet earnestly the best gifts." "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him because we keep his commandments and do those things that are pleasing in his sight."

And now, dear Saints, if in times past the Lord has blessed you, when you have not acted in full keeping with his law, do not conclude that he meant to justify you in such a course, "not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance."

Let us live in accord with the teaching of our religion and enjoy the blessings of promise.

P. L. AINFACTS.

"Millions Going to Hell on Baptism."

WHAT a strange and weird-like heading is the above for an article in the Herald's columns. Yet it is exactly what the writer heard uttered by one professing to be an ambassador for Christ, and who publicly glories in a conversion to him, under a gas-light at midnight, and in the midst of a terrific snowstorm; the Rev. Harrison, widely known as the "Boy preacher" and celebrated revivalist.

The occasion when he thus delivered himself was when preaching his "celebrated Nicodemus sermon," arising from the Savior's mandatory charge to the Jewish ruler, "Ye must be born again."

This Sermon seems to be a favorite one with all modern revivalists, of special notoriety. We heard it delivered by the Rev. Moody, when laboring in California, and we particularly noticed that the water part of the new birth was studiously avoided by him, as much as common decency would allow. This gentleman did condescend to read the Savior's charge complete, water included; but in his expatiation he seems to have either forgotten, or purposely overlooked it. Whenever I hear the revivalist upon the new birth, a small still voice seems ever whispering to me, that although they neglect to show the necessity of water with it, as Christ and his chosen followers did, it by no means has escaped their memories; but is rather uppermost in their thoughts, and nothing in the subject seems to create more uneasiness and perplexity to them than it does now. I believe it to be so, and it must be quite evident to those having God's favored light, as they are continually bent on driving home their poisonous arrows at the subject, until their whole energies seemed to be blended into one bitter, angry impulse. We thought Mr. Moody exemplified the truth of this, for in a vehement outburst of declamation, he announced to his vast congregation: "Now! The gospel is divested of every outward ordinance." But let us come back to Mr. Harrison. The same part of the subject was evidently troubling him on the occasion referred to; but without the hesitation or gradual approach to the subject noticeable in Mr. Moody, he, in one sudden outburst of violent energy exclaimed: "Millions are going to Hell on Baptism."

I wondered in my mind if the reverend gentleman did actually mean water baptism. It must be so, we concluded, as there are but two connected with the new birth, the water and the spirit; and for the latter alone he was a most strenuous advocate. Those revivalists have a strange way of telling things; their utterances are bold and urgent, full of brevity at times, and void of sufficient explanation to impress their hearers with a full and true meaning of their sayings.

Our conclusion was that the gentleman's belief was that the blessed Lord had not identified water baptism with the positive plan of human redemption, and that when he so entered his protest against it, the thought was troubling him that millions of present living, human beings had settled down upon the conviction that he had, and for that reason it was hard to convince them to the contrary, and consequently were drifting to perdition for refusing to believe the revivalist's philosophy.

Is it not remarkably strange and phenomenal, that the most popular lights of modern Christianity are found arraying themselves against this the most easily proven and essential doctrine found in the divine word,—water baptism.

Jesus says: "For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." No Christ-loving person will dispute that he perfectly understood the character of such an important work; and when in delivering his last great charge to those he was about to send out to the world as his lawful representatives in the interest of the same work, he said: "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." There is no room left to doubt but that he accomplished it, and fully intended that every integral part of it should be strenuously urged by them upon unbelievers as necessary and binding as a means of salvation. To prove that water baptism was one of its main features, nothing more is needed than his own worthy example in Jordan; "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it behoveth us to fulfill all righteousness; then he suffered him." What lesson have we here? Matthew, in the seventh verse, makes John to say, "I indeed baptize you with WATER unto repentance," &c. limiting his duties, as might be seen in the reading to the administering of the ordinance of water baptism. Christ applied, and John consented to administer on the plea of the former, that it was a part of righteousness, and necessary to be obeyed.

"Ye must be born again." This is what the Redeemer of the world said to Nicodemus.

Born unto what? A newness of life. How is it to be done? John says: "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance, but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." There is the mightier one, see him go down into Jordan's rolling stream in sublime willingness; and as mighty as he was there, he displays the meekness of a child to do the will of him that sent him. To do what? To usher in the law of righteousness. This he knew was a part of it, and he was anxious to observe it, as a worthy example to all that should follow after him.

Did this righteous law cease with John? Let this mighty one answer. "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of the WATER and the spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." Here we have a most definite exposition of the new birth; a complete confirmation of the doctrine as he observed it in Jordan, himself declaring that without a compliance with water baptism, as well as that of the spirit it was impossible to enter the kingdom of God. Revivalists say that all outward ordinances are done away, baptism by water included. Well; let Christ's words stand true, though it makes all men liars, is what we say.

Now; let us see what those bearing the great commission taught concerning it. Peter, the supposed head of the Church, in his first sermon after the endowment of power from on high, seemed determined to be in full harmony with the instructions of his mighty Master; for he commanded them, the repenting Jews, to receive the two baptisms of water and the spirit. "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Modern Revivalists suggest the Spirit first, and let the water part severally alone. Why do they do it in the face of such eminent practice and teaching. Three thousand souls we are told responded and obtained the new birth on that occasion in Christ's way, the righteous way, and remained steadfast in the Apostles' doctrine.

Annianus taught it to Paul after his most extraordinary conversion, and he was baptized. The people of Samaria heard the doctrine from Philip, and were just meek and humble enough to be baptized, both men and women; and through the apostles subsequently administering the outward ordinance of the laying on of hands, received the Holy Ghost.

Philip's preaching to the traveling eunuch is a striking case in point. He had evidently so impressed his mind with the requisite means to the new birth, that immediately on seeing the water he desired its application. "If thou believeth with all thine heart thou mayest; and he answered, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." But he wanted to be born into Christ, into the newness of life to enter into the kingdom of heaven, not like a thief to climb up some other way; but by the honorable method, the law of righteousness, the baptism by water and the spirit; this was his faith in Christ, for Philip had taught him so. It was the enlightenment of his mind by a preacher whom the Spirit had sent to him, and he was anxious to show that he not only believed on the name of Christ but in his doctrine; and Philip saw that he was converted, baptized him, and he went on his way rejoicing in the actual realities of the gospel that obedience had brought him. So in the case of Cornelius, the jailor and his family, and multiplied cases that might be cited to prove beyond all doubt that the new birth can not be realized, only as Christ declared; all revivalists to the contrary notwithstanding.

If millions are going to hell because they believe it, where have all those gone who not only believed but obeyed it? Shall these also be destroyed? Away with the ignorantly blind mutterings of priestly fanaticism. Jesus obeyed it; to-day he sits gloriously enthroned at the right hand of Eternal Majesty on high. "All power is given unto me in heaven and earth," were the obedient conqueror's last assuring words to his followers. "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

They went! They preached the newness of life, by the two baptisms; and God confirmed their words in all the world, by the signs following. As a reward of their labors and their sufferings, what do we hear promised: "Verily, I say unto you, that ye who have followed me in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." And in order to eternally commemorate their fidelity to their Master and his truth, John the Revelator says he saw their names emblazoned upon the twelve foundations of the Eternal City. Now what is the gospel testimony concerning all those who have followed Christ through the regeneration. "They are the Church of the first born; they are they into whose hands the Father hath committed all things; they are they who are Priests and Kings, who have received of his fullness and of his glory; wherefore as it is written, they are gods, even the sons of God; wherefore, all things are theirs, whether life or death, or things present, or things to come, all are theirs, and they are Christ's, and Christ's are God's."

And what can be said for those who refuse the regeneration, but will not dishonor the cause of Christ, by arraying themselves against his truths. They are they who will not be deceived by the cunning craftiness of men. We would prefer to be found in their ranks in the great day of reward, than with those who are thus found fighting against God. Concerning those who deny the waters of regeneration, we can only say that the word of God will judge them at the last day.

THOS. J. ANDREWS.

Natures that have much heat and great and violent desires and perturbations are not ripe for action until they have passed the meridian of their years.

Pascal has said somewhere that the more mind a man has, the more he finds out original people. It is your commonplace person who sees no difference between one man and another.

Truth will never die; the stars will grow dim, the sun will pale his glory; but truth will ever be young.

Thoughts On Ministering.

"AND Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven, and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things, whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Matt. 28:18-20. "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe," &c.—Mark 16:16, 17. Modern clergy usually quote this commission in part in support of their position in the world as "teachers" of the people—as ambassadors for Christ, and authorized representatives of his kingdom; and all seem to take courage, and find comfort in the promise, "I am with you alway," apparently without a thought in reference to the condition upon which it was made. And strange it is indeed, that this vast theological army should differ so widely as to how few or how many of the Master's commands it is necessary for them to teach, when the commission clearly specifies that they are to teach them all in order to claim the promised blessing.

It is a wide stretch for our credulity to believe that all who make the claim are thus highly favored. Lest some should think us uncharitable however, we express our belief, that the nearer men approximate right, the more they are, and will be, blessed of God. The leading thought with every minister should be, "How can I become a co-worker with Christ, in redeeming the souls of men from spiritual bondage." Taking the Savior for an example, and his word for a guide, we notice:

1. That they are to preach the gospel. The definite article "the" limits the noun "gospel," and signifies that there is but one, and unless it has undergone a radical change, it must necessarily be the same now as when taught by Christ, and his acknowledged disciples. If a change has been made, by whom was it effected? What was the object? Has any improvement been made upon the original plan? If so, was the salvation of Christ and his first followers complete? David says, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting he soul." Then if perfect, no change has been, or can be effected without injury to it. We see none contemplated in the commission. "Go ye into all the world," "Go teach all nations," "Preach the gospel to every creature," are expressions of the Divine will, and suggest an unchangeable, and impartial gospel, to be preached to all of God's creatures, irrespective of color, station, or the age in which they may live.

2. They are to baptize the "nations," in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, which they could not do, without first "teaching them" the necessity of obedience to that ordinance; hence, the great necessity of a united effort upon the part of the ministry. And here we take liberty to note, that a commandment of Christ to his servants to baptize the nations, is equivalent to a commandment to the nations to be baptized. The act of officiating in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost is an authoritative one. Said the Savior, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you." In the absence of such appointment, who can officiate legally? "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron." Paul informs us that even Christ "glorified not himself to be made a high priest, but He that said unto him thou art my son." See Heb. 5. When one party acts in the name of another authoritatively, it is by mutual consent, and the one officiating is governed by regulations specified in the contract. Such consent can not be obtained, nor contract effected without communication, either personal, or otherwise.

3. They are to teach the people to observe "all things," whether of facts and principles to be believed, ordinances to be obeyed, or promises to be enjoyed, as set forth by the great lawgiver, Jesus Christ. Peter set the example at Pentecost, by teaching that Jesus was the Christ, the result of which was that some believed, who said, "What shall we do." He then taught them repentance, and baptism for the remission of sins, and promised them the Holy Ghost, and with many other words did he testify, and exhort." This same worthy, associated with his fellow laborer, John, taught the importance of the gospel ordinances of laying on of hands, by journeying from Jerusalem to Samaria, to officiate in that ordinance, which seemed to be efficacious for the purpose for which it was given. "Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." The record states further, that one Simon saw "That through laying on of the apostles' hands, the Holy Ghost was given."

Paul taught that the principles and ordinances already mentioned, together with the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment, constituted the "doctrine of Christ;" and John informs us, that whosoever "abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God, but assures us that "he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ," he hath both the Father and the Son." Hence we presume that such, being duly authorized might officiate in their name. Paul, in treating on the operation of the Spirit, further taught the people "to observe" that there are "diversities of gifts," namely wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues and interpretations, assuring them these manifestations are given to "every man to profit withal," being the legitimate result of the gift of the Holy Ghost, and that God from whom all blessings flow, divides them to each one "severally as he will." Questions of this character are sometimes asked. 1. Has the Savior an authorized ministry upon earth now? 2. If so, who are they, and how shall we identify them?

In answer to the first we submit; "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come."—Christ. By reference to Matt. 13 chap.; 1 Thes. 1 chap., and elsewhere, we learn that "the end of the world" refers to the destruction of the wicked, at the second coming of Christ. We deem it unnecessary to argue the point admitted by Bible believers, that we are living in the "latter times."

The Savior's statement certainly is sufficient to establish the fact that "the gospel," which comprehends the plan of salvation as effected through Christ, will be preached, signaling the event prophetically described as the "end of the world." We notice further, that the distinctive features of this latter day message are to be so marked in their character, and different from what the world has been accustomed to, and the people traditionised to believe, as to constitute a "sign," or a "witness," of Christ's coming. From the expression "this gospel of the kingdom," together with many others, prominent among which is that found in 1 Thes. 1:7-9, we infer, that this proclamation will be identical with the one that preceded the destruction of Jerusalem, and the downfall of the Jewish nation. "And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." "A characteristic of the gospel primarily, was that of giving to the faithful, and obedient, a knowledge of God, while the willfully disobedient were punished. In the text just quoted, Paul tells us of a day of retribution; one of rejoicing to Saints, but sorrow to sinners; the latter to be "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord." Surely in the justice, love, and mercy of God, "messengers" will be qualified, and sent to declare repentance to the people. Will He, who made Noah a "preacher of righteousness," and sent angels to Sodom, and Jonah to Ninevah, bring this dire calamity upon them without warning? The Antideluvians were "reproved of sin" and taught of righteousness, and a judgement to come, by the preaching of Noah; and "as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be."

Saint John, who beheld things that were to transpire "hereafter," foresaw the event variously described as "the end of the world," "destruction of the wicked," &c., and denominates it the downfall of "Babylon," and informs us that just prior to this, an angel is to bring a message to earth—a voice of warning to "every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people," described as "the everlasting gospel."

The wise in their own eyes, may laugh at the idea of a restored gospel, and jeer at present revelation; they may labor to show that one half of the gospel ordinances are "non-essential," and that the promises of Christ to be enjoyed in time are "done away;" but the glowing facts stand out in bold relief upon the sacred pages of God's word, that the glorious gospel of Christ, with all of its privileges and powers will be preached authoritatively as a "voice of warning to all people" "before the great and notable day of the Lord."

In answer to the compound question, "who are the authorized ministers of Christ, and how shall we identify them," we cheerfully submit: "and he [Christ] gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers, for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the ministry." Eph. 4. Where shall we find them? "And God hath set some in the Church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers," &c. Where is the Church? "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." See 1 Cor. 12. Paul here addresses those who are in possession of the various gifts, as promised by the Savior, and more minutely described by himself.

Dear reader, with pleasure and confidence, we offer that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is identical with the "one body" as described in God's word. In the spirit of meekness, and love, we invite you to come to Christ, to whom he honor, and glory now, and forever. Amen.

G. S. HYDE.

JOY.

O, what joy for the meek and lowly;
Jesus comes on earth again.
We shall all behold his glory,
A thousand years with him to reign.

Thou wilt give us life eternal;
With thy smiles our spirits cheer;
Then our joy will be supernal,
As thou art forever near.

Blessed Jesus, we adore thee;
For our sakes, thy blood was shed.
Now in love we bow before thee,
We thy footsteps wish to tread.

Though the way be rough, and thorny,
Leading to eternal bliss,
Thou hast trod it long before me,
Great Redeemer, none but this.

Blessed Jesus, when we meet thee
On the bright eternal shore,
O, what joy 'twill be to greet thee!
In thy presence evermore.

The Restoration of the Gospel, and Kingdom of God.

THAT there has been a baleful apostasy from the faith once delivered to the Saints, none can or will deny. "And when the dragon saw that he was cast out unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child."—Rev. 12:13. That the man child here is the kingdom of God, which is to rule the nations with the word of God, as the rod of iron is the word of God. B. M. "And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations, and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers): even as I received of my father."—Rev. 2:26, 27. This then is the kingdom of God that the woman, which is the church, had brought forth; which was the man child that was caught up unto God and to his throne. (Rev. 12:5). We see here that the woman was left, who fled into the wilderness; which is the church; she was left alone, destitute, and this because she had left the first love. "Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do thy first works, or else I will come unto thee quickly, and remove thy candlestick out of his place except thou repent."—Rev. 2:4, 5.

This being her condition, she, the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and three score days. "And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness into her place, where she is nourished for a time and times and half a time, from the face of the serpent. And the serpent cast out of his mouth, water, as a flood, after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood."—Rev. 12:6, 14, 15.

The flood that the serpent cast out of his mouth was a perversion of the perfect law of the gospel, and an institution of doctrine and the commandments of man; thus making void the law of God. This may well be called a flood; the breaking of the everlasting covenant, and a changing of the ordinance, so that men are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.

"Wherefore the Lord said, forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their hearts far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men: therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people; even a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."

We now begin to understand by what means the serpent caused the woman to be carried away of the flood. But we read, when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him; this standard is the everlasting gospel which is to be preached to all nations, and kindred, and tongue, and people. We have learned that the fear of God was taught by the precepts of men; but that God by his Spirit lifts up a standard, a fullness of truth: that which shall be a standing law to the kingdom of God; to which all nations, kindred, tongues and people shall bow. "For every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess." Behold I will lift up my hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people."—Isaiah 49:22.

We have now shown by the word of God, that by his Spirit he would lift up his hand unto the Gentiles, and set up his standard to the people. I know that some may say that this standard was set up on the day of Pentecost. I admit that this was the gospel of the kingdom; which is the law of the spirit of life; and the only law that can make a man free from the law of sin and death; (Rom. 8:2); but I have shown that this perfect law was made void by instituting doctrines and commandments of men; and that the dragon, that old serpent, called the devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world, he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him; and when the dragon saw that he was cast out unto the earth, he persecuted the woman, which is the church, that was set up by the Lord Jesus Christ when he was upon the earth; and Satan made war upon this church, and drove her into the wilderness for a time, times and half a time; which is twelve hundred and sixty days.

We will now see if we can ascertain what was her attire before she fled into the wilderness, so that when she comes out of the wilderness we may be able to identify her to be the church and kingdom of God. "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars." The twelve stars are the twelve Apostles of the Lamb; and the sun the celestial glory; the moon under her feet the mosaic,—or the terrestrial glory. We will now see if her attire has not been somewhat changed after she was in the wilderness. We turn to the 17th chapter of Revelations. Here we see that one of the angels talked with John, saying, "Come hither. So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sitting upon a scarlet-colored beast full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colors, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and jewels, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication. And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH."

I shall now show the extent of her territory. "And he saith unto me, the waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues."—Rev. 17:3, 4, 5, 15.

I think we will begin to see a different kingdom from what the kingdom of God is. In place of having the glory of the sun, and a crown of twelve stars, she has won the name mystery, Babylon the Great. And the beast that carried her, a scarlet colored beast. This beast was the Roman Empire, and the iron kingdom of Daniel that subdueth all things, and the fourth beast, as I shall bring proof to show.

"After this, I saw in the night visions and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible and strong, exceedingly, and it had great iron teeth; it devoured and broke in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it, and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it. And it had ten horns." These ten horns are the kings of the earth that give their strength and power to the beast, and by whom this woman was nourished for a time, times and half a time; and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk. (Rev. 17:2). "I considered the horns, and, behold, there come up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by roots; and behold in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things."—Dan. 7:7, 8.

I shall bring proof that this horn that had the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things, was the Pope of the See of Rome. "And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the Saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand, until a time, and times and the dividing of time."—Dan. 7:25. Twelve hundred and sixty days; but each day stands for a year.

We will now compare this with Revelation 13th. "And I stood upon the sand of the sea and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns. And upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy. And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard. (The word leopard, the meaning of this is that it was made up of all nations,—spotted). And his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion, and the dragon gave him his power and his seat, and great authority was given him."—I shall just name the principle point; "and there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things; and power was given him to continue forty and two months; and it was given unto him to make war with the Saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds and tongues, and nations."—Rev. 13:1, 2, 5-7. Those prophecies have had their literal fulfillment.

We now turn to history; Justinian, a Roman Emperor, made a decree in the year 533, by which the Pope was made the head of the church, and of the empire. The Emperor at the same time put his empire under the dominion of the Bishop. In 606, the Emperor Phocian, made a decree confirming the decree of Justinian, and made the Pope the universal Bishop; thus the empire is now under the dominion of the Pope. Now, mark you, this is the small horn which was diverse from the first; which are the kings, (or emperors). "And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand."—Dan. 7:3-25. These were given into the hand of the Pope by the emperor, when he made him the head of the church, and at the same time placed the empire under his dominion. This accords with Revelations 13, where it says that the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority. The emperor is here represented as the dragon, and when he placed his empire under the dominion of the universal Bishop, and then made the Pope the universal Bishop, it is giving him his power and his seat. This representation of the word dragon results from its having a satanic spirit; very greedy to subdue all nations. "And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them." Daniel says, "I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints and prevailed against them. He now had great temporal and spiritual power. This beast was exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron and his nails of brass: which devoured, broke in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet." And it shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down and break it in pieces. (Dan. 7:21-27.)

The residue that he stamped upon with his feet, were the rest of the nations of Europe as it had the feet of a bear, and the mouth of a lion, so as to break them in pieces, thus bear rule over them all, as I have shown the extent of her territory, that she ruled with unbounded rigor over all kindreds and tongues and nations; this I have proved by the word of the prophet and apostles; and showed the fulfillment. In the twelfth century, something near two hundred thousand (I think this is two million) people were put to the sword. This was called the church in the wilderness; this goes to prove that there were a great many that were struggling to throw off the iron yoke; until a Luther, and Calvin were born. The Reformation at last broke off the iron yoke; and the dim light began to dawn in the east. The Scriptures were given to the people to read; but they did not bring the church out of the wilderness; they only preached faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. No baptism for the remission of sin; no laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost; no Apostle, no Prophet, were found in their church organization. (Eph. 4:8-16). See also 1 Cor. 12:27, 28. The Apostles had been martyred for the gospel's sake; and the church had fled into the wilderness, and the twelve hundred and sixty years had not expired. In the seventeenth century John Wesley was one of the great reformers, but he saw the deplorable condition that the church was in then, which was confessed by him, as also that the gifts and blessings were not done away, because they were no longer needed, but that the Christians had all turned heathen again; and there were no baptized disciples like there were in the days of Paul, the apostle of the Gentiles. This proves that he had no commission from the Lord Jesus Christ. If he had, he could have baptized disciples. "How shall they preach except they be sent." If he had been sent he would have been able to organize the church; but in place of the true church of God, it was but another sect or division; and set upon sect have sprung up since, until we have nearly six hundred three score and six. This indeed looks like a flood that the serpent cast out of his mouth. All say that they are not called by divine revelation, and as Paul says no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron, and therefore I reject them all. Not because there are no honest people among them, but because there is no salvation amongst them. As long as they did the best they could, like Wesley, and many of the reformers, they could be under no condemnation until they rejected the true light; and this light is the gospel of the kingdom as it was preached by Paul with all the gifts and blessings. And therefore there was need, and must have been another dispensation of the gospel; or the kingdom of God never could be organized upon the earth. Hence, Paul says, "Having made known unto us the mystery of his will according to his good pleasure—which he hath prepared in himself; the word prepared is announced, hence the present occasion; and that is, "In the dispensation of the fullness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ; both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, even in him."—Eph. 1:9, 10. The Apostle Paul had it made known to him by the spirit of revelation, that there was yet to be a dispensation of the gospel in the fulness of time. Paul had a dispensation of the gospel delivered unto him, but this was in the meridian of time; Paul was sent in the ninth hour, and has borne the burden and heat of the day. And about the eleventh hour he went and found others standing idle, and he sent them out there where the last, which shall be first, and they received every man a penny. This proves that they were sent with the same authority; and preached the same good news, the gospel of the kingdom of God. (Matt. 20:1-14). A dispensation is a distribution; more of the word of God. Dear reader, if we can not bring forth proof, according to the law and the testimony; "If they speak not according to this word there is no light in them."—Isa. 8:20.

"The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened."—Matt. 13:33. The leaven here represents the word of God, those that are sent by the Lord of the vineyard, are the ambassadors, the men of the first rank, and ministers of the gospel of Christ. And as God set in the church, first Apostle. We shall see him come with the same gospel; and the same promise, "these signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; and they shall lay hands on the sick."—Mark 16:17, 18.

The land of Judea is the first measure; and Jesus was of the tribe of Judah; so were the Apostles. The leaven was deposited by them also in Europe. They were all sent on their mission of love; Jesus was sent by the Father, and the Apostles by him, as he said; "All power is given unto me, in heaven and in earth;" "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe whatsoever I have commanded, and lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

Where is the next measure? We read, "The scepter shall not depart from Judah; nor a lawgiver from between his feet until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be."—Gen. 49:10. Shiloh has come, and as Christ did not restore the kingdom to Israel at that time; for the apostles asked of him saying, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel." "And the Lord said unto them, it is not for you to know the time or the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power."—Acts 1:7. We read that when the angel came to Mary and announced that she should bring forth a son, he stated "And shalt call his name Jesus; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Where is the throne of David? I will bring one more witness. "For unto us a child is born; unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders, and his name shall be called Wonderful Counsellor, the mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."—Isaiah 9:6, 7; Luke 1:31-33.

Where is Jesus now sitting? Upon the throne (not of David) of God, in heaven, as it was written, "The heaven must receive him until the time of the restitution of all things, which hath been spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."—Acts 3:21. The Apostle says that which hath been spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets. So I shall bring them en court. For they are "holy men," so says Peter; I will bring one more. James says, "And to this agree the words of the prophets, as it is written, After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruins thereof; and I will set it up that the residue of men might seek after the Lord. And all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord who doeth all these things. Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world."—Acts 15:15-18; Amos 9:11-15.

And at that time when the kingdom is restored there will be a throne in Jerusalem; and it will be the throne of his father David, for the word of the angel will be fulfilled, that God will give unto him the throne of his father David.

"And at that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem; in those days the house of Judah shall walk with Israel."—Jeremiah 3:17, 18.

The house of Judah and the house of Israel have not walked together since the day of Solomon; and they will be one nation and the Lord shall be their God from that day and forever. God has foretold how he will accomplish this, that they will overthrow the thrones of the kingdoms of the heathen, and will destroy the strength of the kingdoms. Haggai 2:22, 23. This is the terrible one which then shall be brought to nought. This Anti-Christ has made the nations tremble; and ruled the people in anger.

Labor and Prosperity.

THE uncertainty of wealth is proverbial—the descendants of the rich of one generation being the poor of the next. The cause is too often apparent in the enervation, want of economy, enterprise and forethought, in the inheritors of wealth, when compared with their less fortunate neighbors. Has it ever suggested itself to you how sure is the reward of honest toil when properly directed? The wealthy, rising men of to-day, as a body, are almost without exception self made. The secret of their success, sought after by many is as plain as a noonday's sun. They do not float unresistingly with the stream of humanity, but in their separate callings struggle hard against the stream. When times are hard they are not seen on the street corners complaining of their lot; but reading the future by the unerring light of the past, know that the dark clouds on the horizon but foretell the coming sunshine. Their little savings are scrupulously cared for and judiciously invested, while the croaker comforts himself with dismal prophecies—and the result is an abundant and golden harvest. Such an occasion is the present. For three years enterprise has been paralyzed, and the most dismal prophecies have been apparently well nigh realized; but the busy marts of commerce, now deserted, shall be thronged again; the cheerful buzz of the factory, now dismal in its quietude, shall resound with honest industry. Then what will be the result? The dollar judiciously invested shall be doubled and trebled; and the poor man, unknown and unheard of, who takes stock in the prosperity of his town and nation, shall be extolled and honored. To all we say: Keep not your means idle, pay your debts, take advantage of the profitable investment now offered, whether it be in houses, lands or business enterprises, and our word for it you will not regret it. The cry of over-production is a farce and delusion. There is room enough in this broad land of ours for every honest son of toil. Hard work faithfully followed will bring success every time. The more discouraging the times of to day, the greater the revival when it comes and the sooner it will arrive.

The Eleven Commandments of Buddhism.

AMID the vast mountain of information that has been gleaned from the Asiatic regions of the world since its gates were first unbarred to the prying eyes of civilization, there is much in reference to its religious and superstitious usages. It has been learned that 300,000,000 of people guide their lives under the one religion of Buddhism, and that an idea of what this religion consists of has also been gained, with descriptions of its forms, its priesthood, its operations, etc., but not until very recently has the foundation of all this devotion—the rules upon which it is based—been revealed. Christianity has its ten commandments as the underlying stones of its structure, and, singular as it may seem, the religion of Buddha is grounded upon a similar form, different only in that, instead of a decalogue, it has what might be called an "uno-decem ologue," or to speak in more authorizable English, its eleven commandments.

By the consent of the Buddhist priests in the Island of Ceylon, not long since, a translation of the laws and precepts of their religion was made. The likeness to the ten commandments of the Bible was surprising to the translators, and a review of them will doubtless be to all Christian readers. The first precept enjoins abstinence from destroying life, in this being like the sixth commandment of our decalogue; the second forbids theft, corresponding to the eighth commandment of the Bible; and the fourth forbids lying, which covers the Biblical prohibition against bearing false witness. Commencing here, there is a departure from any similarity to the Bible demands, the Buddhist laws forbidding, respectively, the use of strong drink, indulgence in singing, adorning and beautifying of the body, using large and high couches for seats, and the cleaving to gold or silver. The last of these might be said to compare well with the closing charge of the Christian commandments, which warns against covetousness, although evidently aiming more directly against the miser's sin.

These eleven commandments, which must be repeated by all candidates for the priesthood or other position in the Buddhist temples, are avowed to have had their origin with the founder of the religion, many hundreds of years before the inception of the Christian era, the Buddhist priesthood being united in pronouncing them the product of the inspired mind of Sakya Muni himself. They are wise and reasonable precepts, with a remarkably few exceptions, and have doubtless restrained hundreds of millions of their followers from sins that, without them, would have been committed.

The Old Story.

UTAH California,
January 1st, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish you a Happy New Year. The slip enclosed [which we give below.—Ed.] entitled the Book of Mormon is cut from the San Francisco, Morning Call. You may have seen it before this will reach you. In comparing the testimony of old Father Whitmer and others, and the one of Mr. Miller; one for it and the other against the Book of Mormon; it seems to me, and I believe to any fair thinking and honest mind, that this Presbyterian Elder makes a very poor showing in comparison in regard to the Book of Mormon and the "Manuscript Found." Mr. Miller may as well say that a donkey and a jack rabbit are one and the same, because the rabbit stole his ears from the donkey. Mr. Miller calls the Book of Mormon a seductive delusion of the devil. If so, the old boy has brought forth rather a dangerous weapon to be used against himself, to destroy his own works of darkness and lies; for to live by the teachings of the Book of Mormon will surely make us enemies to the works of the evil one. No doubt this Mr. Miller has heard with his own ears the teaching of Joseph your Father; and any man who would denounce it a delusion, is either dishonest, or he belongs to the one class who lost one of his long ears, or some body in some way stole it.

In regard to the Editors who have given it a place in the columns of their papers, they are like the lawyers defending a case for the biggest crowd and purse, and to be popular. In conclusion, if the work is from God, as many do believe, who can overthrow it, for in the end the truth loving will prevail.

Yours in bonds,

JACOB HEGER.

"THE BOOK OF MORMON."

WRITTEN AS A NOVEL EIGHTY YEARS AGO, AND USED TO DELUDE THE CREDULOUS.

In the beautiful valley of Ten Mile, in the southern part of Washington County, Pennsylvania, lives Mr. Joseph Miller, Sr., now in his 92d year, with whom the Times correspondent has just had an interview. Mr. Miller is an Elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and a man of unimpeachable veracity. In answer to the question if he knew Rev. Solomon Spaulding, the author of the "Book of Mormon," he quickly turned, and his face brightened as his mind ran back to the events of the past, and he said, with considerable emphasis: "I most certainly do."

"Did you ever read a copy of the work?"

"Yes. Some years ago," he continued, "Rev. J. W. Hamilton, a Presbyterian minister, now living in Steubenville, O., presented me with a copy, which I read carefully."

"Is it your opinion that you ever read or heard read any portion of it before?"

"Yes, I am quite positive that I did."

He then referred to a passage on page 148, which, he said, was so strange that, at the time Mr. Spaulding read it to him from his manuscript, it fixed itself upon his memory, and that he had never forgotten it. He said that about 1812, Spaulding came to Amity, a small village about five miles from his present home, where he kept a hotel; that Spaulding was in delicate health, and that he (Miller) often spent his evenings at his home. "While there, upon several occasions Mr. Spaulding would bring out a large roll of papers, and read select portions of their contents to amuse us of evenings. He told me that he wrote it for a novel, and intended to have it published as a means of support for his family. He called it 'The Lost Manuscript Found,' and said that he wrote it to pass away the time when he was feeling unwell. I am confident," said Mr. Miller, "from what I know of Mr. Spaulding's manuscript and the 'Book of Mormon,' that Joseph Smith by some means got possession of the novel and made some changes in it, and issued it under the name by which it is known to-day."

Mr. Miller said that Spaulding was an enthusiastic archæologist, and that he often indulged himself in the belief that the American continent was at one time peopled by a colony of ancient Israelites, and that his manuscript was only a fictitious history of the race which had built the mounds. Mr. Miller is the only man living at this time who was acquainted with Spaulding—at least, the only person who has any knowledge of the correct origin of the "Book of Mormon" or who ever heard it read from the lips of the author. He said to the correspondent during his stay that as he neared the grave, with but one breath between him and heaven, he hoped that last breath might carry a message that would prevent people from being led into Mormonism, that seductive delusion of the devil. "Spaulding was a good man," said Mr. Miller, "and I would not cast a shadow upon his memory, for it never was his intention to create a false religion by anything that he wrote. I attended him through his last illness, and when death called him from earth, I, with my own hands, made the coffin that contained his sleeping ashes. He was buried in the churchyard of the village, and his grave remains unmarked, while the work of his idle hours eighty years ago has grown in the country he dearly loved, until the eyes of the nation are turned with horror upon its magnitude."

Union.

THERE is strength in unity, and greater strength than many people imagine. When Saints are united they can prevail with the heavens and draw blessings down upon their endeavors, and no man can hinder. How much could the union of three or four thousand Elders accomplish? How much could three or four thousand Saints demand? Union is the principal thing that binds and cements men together. When there is union there is power; it is the power of God; and the Spirit and truth of God will swell forth by it. Union is based upon law and intelligence. It is necessary for all to have a correct view in relation to the kingdom of God, and the work entrusted to our charge. It is for this purpose that there should be union of action and feeling for each other's good. Lord help us to be united, is my prayer. Amen.

We are all more or less echoes, and we repeat, in spite of our lives, the virtues, the faults, the movements, and the characters of those who are always with us.

On Trial.

Editor Herald:—Among the curious features of this last dispensation of the gospel is the divergence of views of those in authority of what the true points of doctrine are; and this is a matter greatly to be regretted, because it causes lack of confidence, or in other words lack of faith. If the trumpet gives forth uncertain sounds, who shall go forth to battle? Yea, who? For on this coast the work, in most places, has practically stopped. The Elders are home. The Sabbath question is on the boards at times;—then what are the duties of the Teacher, or Priest, or some other question, or comments sometimes severe are made upon the views of the Herald, and some openly avow that they are not satisfied with the teachings of its Editors, that they are not according to the books. Perhaps, dear Herald, you would like to know of one, or two points of teachings which are not considered orthodox. Brother Blair in the Advocate said that the greatest authorities in the Church were not above the law and could be labored with, if according to Scripture. Therefore we will deal with the ordinance of the sacrament first, and criticize according to the Scriptures, the seeming teachings of the Herald. It spoke of the Plano Branch taking the sacrament every four weeks, and at one time they were taking it Friday evening, if I remember aright. The Lord says in Doctrine and Covenants that the Church shall meet "on this my holy day (not Friday) to offer up their sacraments and oblations." "My holy day" comes once in seven days, and falls on Sunday as given in Revelation in Doctrine and Covenants, August 31st, 1837. We see, according to the New Testament, that they met on the First day of the week to break bread. Now it will not be any excuse to say where there is a branch that all can not come together so often. If a man was to make a feast and invite a number of people to come, he would have the feast whether all came or not; and when a family prepares breakfast they are not going to go without because one or more members are sick, or lay abed and don't get up in time to eat. I obeyed the gospel under the teachings of brethren Webb and Bagnall, and never knew anything else than taking the sacrament every Sunday till I came away from them. To investigate this matter more fully I have asked several old members who came into the Church during the life of the Martyr, and they say they not only took the sacrament every Sunday, but that was the teachings. Bro. Haas has a letter from Hyrum Smith on the subject, teaching the same thing; that the sacrament should be taken every Sunday.

Then as regards answer to question about dairyman and storekeeper. The answer seemed to put both in the same fix, or nearly so, as regards justification in laboring on the Sabbath. The Lord says that one "in keeping his commandments need not break the law of the land." Now what is the law of the land in California. It shuts every store, excepting retail drug stores. It allows hotels, restaurants, markets, taverns and bath houses to keep open doors every day, as also such manufacturing establishments as are in continued operation." Can a Dairyman stop milking his cows on Sunday without danger of arrest from members of the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals? And is his business not a "manufactory under continued operation?" Again: does he not in serving pure milk, clean and sweet, do good on the Sabbath; and the Savior said it was lawful to do good on the Sabbath. Very often he is serving milk to infants who may have lost their mothers, or their mothers are incapacitated in some way from nursing their children. Should he not do even as a boarding house must do, serve meals every day to preserve life. But I will weary your patience, and make too long an article. Praying always for the welfare of Zion, and knowing that "Truth is mighty and will prevail," and believing also in the motto of, "Be just though the heavens fall." I remain:

Your brother in the gospel,

A Strange Coincidence.

UPWARDS of two hundred and sixty years ago, there was seen a Dutch slave-ship sailing along the west coast of Africa. Soon villages were seen on fire, and natives fleeing from the man stealer who had landed on their shores. Many of the young were caught, and dragged amid the shrieks of anguished parents and broken families to the slave-ship, and chained in the hold of the vessel. Strange and discordant sounds arose. There were the curses of the officers, the shouts of the crew, the threats of the slave catcher, the moaning of the sea, the sobbing of the winds, and the cries of the natives on shore: when there arose, above all, the wail of sorrow from the captives in the hold to the ears of Him who hears the faintest sigh of a broken heart. But the time of deliverance was not yet, and the year of His redeemed had not come. With anchor weighed and sails unfurled, the slave-ship put to sea, and sailed to the New World, to plant slavery in the British colonies, and blast the produce and resources of her virgin soil, and spread a moral leprosy over the country. Was there no way by which this might be prevented or the leprosy removed? As Dutchmen carried the plague from Africa to America, Dutchmen were to assist in its destruction: As old England allowed its introduction to her colonies, the sons of New England were to utterly destroy it. While the above was taking place, there might have been seen a few congregations and families of the persecuted "Pilgrim Fathers" assembled in a few places in England to worship in private, for they dare not do it in public. Some of them came to the painful resolve of leaving forever the land of their forefathers, and go to the New World, where they might found a church for their God and an empire for their children. Some remained as salt to preserve Old England from corruption, and some went to save New England from slavery. That was a touching scene, where the elders and their families, fell on the Apostle Paul's neck and kissed him at Miletus, on the shore of the Mediterranean, sorrowing most of all for the words that he spake, that they "should see his face no more."—Acts 20. This was also a weeping occasion as the "Pilgrim Fathers" and their families parted on the shores of old England, and stepped on board the "Mayflower," to plant the Tree of Life in the virgin soil and verdant forests of New England. Soon both ships were seen sailing on the same sea, at the same time, and to the same continent. At length, both take divergent courses along the coast—one sails to Virginia in the south, and one to Massachusetts in the north: one to plant slavery, the other freedom. On the 22d of December, 1620 the slave ship landed at Jamestown, Virginia, and sold twenty slaves. On the same day, and at the same hour, the "Mayflower" landed the "Pilgrim Fathers," on the Plymouth Rock, who consecrated the continent to freedom and to God. One ship brought the whip, the chain, and bondage; the other the charter, the Bible, and the spirit of liberty, yet from both came the principles and powers, the elements and agencies that shook the nation, convulsed the continent, and led the nations to express their sympathy on the one side or the other as they were free or bound themselves. The monster was slain, and four millions of bond slaves were rescued from his grasp: and the nation passed through a second regeneration to purge it from the evils of the past, and set it forth on a new mission of freedom and justice.

All men are equal in God's sight.
The bond, the free, the black, the white,
He made us all, us freedom gave
God made man: man made the slave.

Food, Work and Sleep.

THE things that a man most needs in this world are food, work and sleep. He doesn't need riches, honors or office to live. He needs society because he is made for it. He must love and be loved; his life and happiness are promoted by companionship; mutual dependence and counsel enlarge hope and stimulate courage. Yet, after all, he lives if his friends die. There is no grief, no form of bereavement, but it has its consolation. The best preserver of a man's life is contentment. Nor is work destructive of strength. Men look forward to rest, to a life of ease, which to them means cessation from toil and the cares of business. They mistake the cause of weariness. It is not work; it is care, it is over-exertion, it is ambition and desire after gain that bring worn and weary feelings. All we possess we possess in life. The sooner we get through with life, the sooner we relinquish our possessions. The faster a man lives the quicker he reaches the end of life. There are three ends to life, and death is the last and least desirable of them. One end is to live. That is why we were created—to live, and live as long and well as we can. Some go murmuring and groaning on their way, as though life was a burden, and that it is a piety to put a low estimate on it. The opposite is true. A man should seek to live out all his days, and he can not accomplish it in a better way than by using every means to promote life. Among these means are the three things mentioned at the head of this article. When a man denies himself sleep, food and the exercise work give—brain and body work—he robs his life of its full term. Let him be cheerful also. He is like an engine—it will run well and long if it is well oiled. Contentment and cheerfulness are the oil which keeps the nerves from wearing out. Busy men and women think that time taken from toil for sleep and recreation is time lost. It is really the cement put in to fill up the joints, to keep out the weather and preserve the building.

Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, February 1, 1882.

IN view of the fact that Joseph's land, blessed so wonderfully in prophecy and so much more wondrously in reality, was chosen as the theater whence were to issue the mandates of political freedom calculated to destroy the kingly prerogatives and courtly despotism of the political empires of the Old World, and wherein the priestcraft and mixed state-craft and church rule of bigotry, superstition and intolerance were to be severely and finally rebuked, is rapidly being pushed to the front by all the powers of divine design and earthly circumstance and incident; the looker on and the active participant in the scenes of this life, may if they choose, discover some of the signs of the times, which need no prophetic prescience, nor gift to discern. One of these has lately occurred, and we note it for the consideration of the Saints, and the preservation of its prophecy to us.

The Germanic Confederation, after the Franco-Prussian war, has been and now is one of the strongest, (possibly the strongest), empires in the world, and under Emperor William I., the available resources of that confederation have been utilized and enlarged in an extraordinary manner. The central idea upon which this strength has been made to grow, is that Prussia, lands and people belonged, of divine right to the family of the king, and to William in person as the head of the family, and as a consequence, Germany dominated by Prussia belonged there too. Undoubtedly this was the thought in the brain of the king, when with his own hands he placed the kingly coronet upon his own head, stating that it was his by personal and divine right. The unification of Germany could mean nothing more than the subjugation of lesser rights under the domination of this greater; and the king, serving his design, the design of his family intensified in him, choose an able, eloquent, as well as an unscrupulous upholder and defender of this "right of a king," in the person of Bismarck, an absolutist in theory and a despot in practice, and made him Prime Minister—the first under the king. It was a pre-eminently wise choice; for while the good king has grown old, engrafting himself upon the German people, the Iron Hand of a cruel and crafty despotism, has been guiding and controlling the machinery of the State, cold, fatal and relentless.

But King William of Prussia, Emperor of Germany has grown old; eighty-five years with their late huge burdens of state have come and gone; and now the scepter held so stoutly in the strong hand, is seen to tremble, and points to the grave. His sturdy henchman, the man of resource, will, and power, has permitted the cares of the Empire, and the enemies of his rule to darken the wonderful political prescience by which he had so long ruled in the State, and goaded by these he has counselled his august master unwisely; in their folly have shown the beginning of the end. The king, evidently foreseeing, either by his own sagacity, or the prevision of Bismarck, that the advance of liberal political sentiment in Germany, (or the march of events), portends that the tenure by which he who succeeds William I. will hold rule as a king, will be made strangely doubtful and insecure, has caused the Crown Prince, Heir Apparent to the throne, to be proclaimed as Prince Regent; and to fix the tenure, and fasten the rule of the kingly dynasty more securely upon the people of Prussia and the Empire, has issued a Royal Decree in the form of a "rescript," in the closing portion of which the following extraordinary language occurs, showing clearly the intention to set up anew the right of the king to rule,—to draw within the family of the autocrat, Frederick the Great, under the despotism of an absolute monarch, the lives, liberties and fortunes of the people subject to the will of the king. From the article we quote, as follows:

"The right of the king to direct the Government and policy of Prussia in accordance with his own judgment is restricted, not abrogated, by the constitution. The official acts of the King require the counter-signature of a Minister, and are carried out by his Ministers; but they remain the official acts of the King in whose resolve they originate, and who in them gives constitutional expression to his will. Therefore it is not permissible to represent their exercise as proceeding from responsible Ministers. The Prussian Constitution is the expression of the monarchical tradition of this country, whose development rests on the living relations of its Kings to the people. These relations can not be transferred to Ministers, because they appertain to the person of the King, and their maintenance is necessary for Prussia. [?] It is, therefore, my will that in Prussia, and also in the legislative bodies of the Empire, no doubt will be allowed to attach to my constitutional right, or that of my successor, to personally direct the policy of the Government. It is the duty of my Ministers to support my constitutional rights by protecting them from doubt and obscurity, and I expect the same from all officials who have taken the oath of loyalty to me. I am far from wishing to restrict the freedom of elections, but the functionaries intrusted with the execution of my official acts are bound to support the policy of my Government, even at the elections. I shall acknowledge the faithful discharge of this duty, and shall expect all officials, remembering their oath of allegiance, to hold aloof, even at the elections, from all agitation against my Government."

This declaration of principles in government from the throne, in the person of an old but hitherto able and strong ruler, taken with the making the heir Prince Regent, preparatory to the passing away of the king, has stirred Germany profoundly; and it is well that it should. The opportunity for trying anew the fast receding claim of divine right in kings to reign, against the principle "all men are created free and equal," could not be permitted to pass. The old, crude, though grand and strong government of the king prayed for by Israel, and granted by God in wrath, could not consent to pass into ruin and decay before the coming of the Great King, ruling in the hearts of his people, without a protest and a struggle; and these are made from a great throne, in a great political Empire, by one of the grandest characters of modern kings, a good king, Kaiser Wilhelm, of Prussia; urged thereto, without doubt, by one of the ablest and most subtle Prime Ministers that ever ruled in State, Kingdom, or Empire.

To us, who look for the coming of the Son of Man; who are watching for the kingdoms of this world to become the kingdom of our God and His Christ, this rescript seems full of portentous shadows. It stands out like a great red bar across the pages of history, defying destiny, yet dark with disaster to the cause it was intended to serve, and livid with the fires of revolution and conflict. The men of Germany have too many Trans-Atlantic cousins and have learned too well the lessons of man's worth and destiny, to submit now to the domination of a second Frederick the Great; nor will the scene of such a reign as was his, ever be permitted to sully the record of the Prussian people; but such scenes are possible under the despotism of a race of kings born of such a dynasty; and so the storm of remonstrance and resistance which such definition of the will of the king must surely raise in the Germanic Confederation, must go far toward clearing political skies, and spread more and more widely the principles of Republicanism, a "government of the people, by the people and for the people."

We patiently wait for the next move.

HON. M. B. CASTLE, of the Argus, Sandwich Illinois, gave in an editorial in his paper, an item obtained from "Leaves from Old Journals" published in The Independent from the pen of Josiah Quincy, which we print in this issue, and commend to the readers of the HERALD, for its appositeness. Mr. Castle is well known to us, so we wrote him regarding the authority of the statement made by him, to which he made reply assuring us that we need not fear to use what we found in the Argus, as they would publish nothing of which they were not sure. He also sent us the paper, containing the article from which he had derived his information; and later still he sent us a leaf of the same journal, the Independent containing a "leaf" by the same author, Hon Josiah Quincy, entitled "Washington society in 1826;" in which article the name and character of Elisha R. Potter, of Rhode Island, a member of Congress in the last century, and who served in the war of 1812 are mentioned. Of this man Mr. Quincy writes:

"He was one of the men who carry about them a surplus of vital energy, to relieve the wants of others. The absurd inquiry whether life were worth living never suggested itself in his presence. He seemed to carry about with him a certain homespun certificate of authority, which made it natural for lesser men to accept his conclusions. Oddly enough, I have met only one other individual who impressed me as possessing the same sort of personal power, and he was one whose place in history is certain when the lives of greater and better men are covered by oblivion; for the muse of history postpones the claims of statesmen and poets to those of founders of religions, who, for good or evil, are more potent factors in the destiny of mankind. Hereafter I may give an account of my visit to Joseph Smith, in his holy city of Nauvoo. It is now sufficient to mention that when I made the acquaintance of the Mormon Prophet, I was haunted with a provoking sense of having known him before; or, at least, of having known some one whom he greatly resembled. And then following a painful groping and peering "in the dark backward and abyss of time," in search of a figure that was provokingly undiscoverable. At last the Washington of 1826 came up before me, and the form of Elisha R. Potter thrust itself through the gorges of memory. Yes, that was the man I was seeking; yet the resemblance, after all, could scarcely be called physical, and I am loath to borrow the word impressional from the vocabulary of spirit mediums. Both were of commanding appearance, men whom it seemed natural to obey. Wide as were the differences between the lives and characters of these Americans, there emanated from each of them a certain peculiar moral stress and compulsion which I have never felt in the presence of others of their countrymen. The position of Mr. Potter in his native state has now faded to a dim tradition. It was of the authoritative kind which belongs to men who bear from nature the best credentials."

The promise of an account of the visit to Nauvoo was kept in a subsequent issue of the Independent, and is the one from which the extract elsewhere appearing was taken.

We sincerely thank Mr. Castle not only for the brave defence he has long made of us as a people; but for the kind thoughtfulness, with which he remembered the probable effect in our favor such statements as these of so reverend a man as Josiah Quincy would have, and both published them and sent them to us marked. The warfare, hard and bitter as it sometimes is, is cheered and made pleasant by kind words daringly spoken by men in a manly way; and we shall certainly draw a breath of renewed energy by reason of this one coming to us.

ONE of our exchanges, the Sandwich, Illinois, Argus, of January 7th, 1882, contains the following editorial which for its uniqueness and appositeness we give to the readers of the HERALD.

JOSEPH SMITH.

The venerable Josiah Quincy of Boston, is reproducing leaves from his old journals, treating of men and times in the distant past, and among others publishes a visit to Joseph Smith at Nauvoo, in April, 1844. In a former paper he speaks of the prophet Joseph Smith as one of the most impressive persons he ever met, one in whom "capacity and resource were natural to his stalwart person." Speaking of his work Mr. Quincy says: "The man who established a religion in this age of free debate, who is to-day accepted by hundreds of thousands as a direct emissary from the Most High; such a rare being is not to be disposed of by pelting his memory with unsavory epithets." But the most important part of this paper is the testimony of this eminent Bostonian to the fact, so contrary to the assumptions of his enemies, that the founder of the Mormon church did not teach polygamy but was "utterly opposed to such practice," adding that "Mormonism minus this spiritual wife system, had, and has much that is interesting in secular aspects." Inasmuch as Mr. Smith has been charged with founding this plural wife system, so indignantly denied by the "Reorganized Church," this testimony is valuable, all the more so for being incidentally called out.

THE following Editorial from the Philadelphia Record for January 13th, current year, is so pithy and straight in regard to the question at issue, that we reproduce it. Right thoughts lead to right actions, correct laws rightly enforced, alone will prevent and extinguish crime.

"There is no power in the national Government to suppress polygamy in a State, or to prevent a Territory from legalizing that institution after becoming a State. The authority of the Union over its constituent sovereignties in regard to their local institutions is to see that the State Governments are republican in form. While Utah remains a Territory, polygamy, along with other felonies, may properly be dealt with; and it is not creditable to the wisdom and diligence of the two Houses of Congress that in all these years no effective plan has been devised and put in force for its suppression. Exactly what measure or system of measures would fully meet the case it is not easy to tell; but the resources of American statesmanship—if there is any such thing left—ought to be adequate to the emergency.

"With the Mormons as Mormons we have no right to interfere. As polygamists, however, they are proper objects of discipline. They ought to have been subjected to it long ago. But they are not all, nor even a majority of them, practical polygamists, and a mere belief in the doctrine of polygamy, unaccompanied by its practice, constitutes no offense against the laws. No human Government—none, surely, which is considered civilized—undertakes to punish its subjects for entertaining or advocating erroneous opinions so long as they do not carry them out in their conduct. The Christian gospel condemns bad principles, motives and intentions equally with bad deeds, but Christian Governments look only at what men actually do. God calls for clean hearts; Cæsar only for clean hands.

"It is of the things which are Cæsar's, as typifying the secular governing power, to punish infractions of the laws. It is of the things which belong to God, and of these alone, to punish abstract spiritual offenses not reduced to concrete acts. With Mormonism as a religion neither the Union nor the States have anything to do. If the Church of Latter Day Saints, as they call themselves, were to become Mohammedans or Buddhists, their creed would not be a fit matter for unfriendly legislation, nor is it now. No establishment of religion can be made by Congress or a Legislature, nor can either constitutionally interpose against a religion which any part of the people may think proper to establish for themselves. There are remnants of State religious establishments here and there in this country, such as Blue Laws, Sunday Laws, and so on, but they come to us from colonial times, and they are not in accord with the spirit of our present liberal political system.

"It would seem that the polygamous Mormons can only be proceeded against as individuals, and not collectively. Cognizance can be taken of their bigamy as of other crimes they may commit, but this cognizance must be judicial. If it be necessary to alter the law of evidence, so as to overcome the existing difficulty of obtaining proof of the commission of the offense, let this be done. Although such alterations of the rules of evidence, which are the growth of centuries, are not as a general thing desirable, the necessity in this instance may warrant it. But it will not do to enter upon a religious crusade. Nor can the military arm be rightly invoked against an entire community. The whole matter is one for the Courts and the Courts only. If these instrumentalities lack vigor and efficiency for the execution of the criminal laws, let the defect in some fit way be remedied. But the Mormons can not be persecuted or proscribed as a sect, any more than the Catholics, the Presbyterians, or the Quakers."

BRETHREN Z. H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley reached the Capitol City at 6:45, on the evening of the 12th of January. They found a home at Bro. Wm. L. Miller's; and will at once enter on their work. Mr. Wm. Hooper, from Utah is at Washington, in the interest of Mr. G. Q. Cannon; and it believed that Utah in some form has considerable influence at Congress, if not in it.

Bro. Gurley writes; "Our people are but a speck on the earth." How true; and yet the future of the European nations at one time hung upon the deeds of a handful of men; and our own political history as a nation, rested in a handful of men "a mere speck" on the earth, at Valley Forge, led by a man who dared to pray.

Our brothers at the Capitol may and should feel their isolation, their helplessness and weakness; other men have been there and felt the same. They are but young, and ways of intrigue and political influence are unknown to them, as they develop at the seat of Government; but if they fully believe that their cause is good; and they in the right, they can do all that is required of them. What their visit may accomplish is yet to be seen.

Those wishing to communicate with Brn. Gurley and Kelley may address them at Number 825, 13th Street, N. E. Washington, D. C.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A BARN was burned for the Oneida community, not long since, and James Vail, one of the faithful was arrested and lodged in jail, charged with setting the fire. He has been interviewed by newspaper reporters, and the result published in the Times and Tribune of Chicago. He charges Mr. Noyes, the founder of Oneida communism with the grossest immorality, and actions far more disgusting than Brigham Young was ever accused of. Would not Congress do well to appoint an investigating committee; really this is growing interesting, Polygamy in Utah, among the Mormons; in Dakato, and at the Indian Agencies; among United States Agents and soldiers and the Indians, profligacy at Shutesbury, in Massachusetts, ten miles from Athol; and the Free practices of Noyes communism, it would seem as if the Palmyra Seer had predicted truly when he said "the spirit of adultery would be poured out upon the people." The Government has a hard task on its hands.

Brn. W. W. Blair and R. Warnock started from Salt Lake City, on the 16th January for Iowa, and the east. Bro. Blair will spend some days in Western Iowa, visiting some of the branches before proceeding to Illinois. He reports the chapel done, and nearly all settled for, except some due to brethren on loans to the fund. Send in your mites to the fund at once, to Bishop Rogers.

Bro. O. E. Cleveland gives the readers of the Valley Virginian, published at Staunton, Virginia, a plain statement respecting the vitality of "pure and unadulterated Mormonism." And so it goes; everywhere that the truth has gained a foothold, its devotees are ready to defend it. Surely, he who scattered Israel knows how to care for them isolated as they are and gather them when he chooses.

Bro. J. W. Bryan held a discussion with a Primitive Baptist minister, at Elkhart, Texas, on December 1st and 2d, 1881. Each affirmed that the church to which he belonged was The Church of Christ.

The Presbyterian Assembly has petitioned Congress, upon the subject of educating the children of the American Indians. From their presentation it appears that there are about 50,000 of these children; and it is thought that the Government can more easily pay the amount needed for education, than spend so much as it does to feed, clothe and fight the uneducated. The Presbyterians are correct in this.

Sr. W. O. Clark of Dry Town, Amador county, California, writes that her husband, W. O. Clark is off on a temperance lecturing tour. She strongly commends the attitude of the HERALD of January 1st toward the liquor business.

Bro. Zenas H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley, were on the 10th instant, en route for Washington, District of Columbia, whither they go according to appointment of the Fall session of Conference. Bro. Gurley started from Davis City, on the 10th, after having made much effort to get his affairs into shape for a permanent engagement in the ministry. But not having fully succeeded he will need to return in April, or May, to carry out unfinished measures, after which he hopes to be "in the field," as he understands the term to mean sounding the warning cry continually. It is quite likely that these brethren will be heard from later on in the history of our work.

Sr. Martha Salisbury, wife of Bro. Benan Salisbury, writes from Glidden, Carroll county, Iowa, that her husband has been trying to declare the word in different places in the region where they dwell. The branch keeps up meetings, but there were not so many in attendance as she and others would wish; though there were no difficulties and no hard feelings among the members. It is quite refreshing to hear of places where there are no offenses.

Bro. Clarence St. Clair, of Chicago, has been at North Freedom, Wisconsin, and some other places. He states that he has lately been a witness to some of the most convincing testimonies that the Lord hears and answers prayer, that it has ever been his fortune to see.

We received on the 11th of the month, a most gratifying and encouraging social letter from Bro. E. N. Webster, of Boston, Massachusetts, in which he solidly commends the position taken by us on the temperance and liquor question. For this letter and a similar one from another, we thank the brethren. Bro. Webster is impressed that never before was the Church more favorably placed to make her influence felt in the deciding of the momentous questions agitating society, Church and State. He commends the labors of Brn. F. M. Sheehy, John Gilbert, John Smith and F. M. Potter in the district; all young men growing into usefulness, place and renown as messengers of the gospel of peace. May their number increase.

Bro. E. N. Webster, of Boston Highlands, succeeded in getting a two column article in a late Boston Herald, descriptive of the faith and the position of the Reorganized Church on the vexed questions.

Bro. S. C. Andes wrote from Elmira, Kansas, January 7th, that they were having a run of R. G. Ingersollism there; but the Saints were striving to maintain their integrity.

Bro. A. N. Hoxie, of Boston, sends a Herald containing a very fair presentation of our views, and the position we occupy as a religious body. We should be quite pleased to give all these various defences an insertion in the HERALD, but time, space and propriety forbid it. Bro. Hoxie also proposes that the article in the Louisville Courier Journal, by Bro. T. W. Smith would make an excellent tract for general distribution, as a means to set the distinction between us and Utah Mormons plainly before the people.

Bro. James Caffall left Dome Rock Station for Denver Colorado, on the 18th of January.

Bro. G. S. Hyde wrote from Dukedom, Tennessee, January 10th, a splendid letter; but the HERALD was full. Letters from Brethren J. Caffall, J. R. Badham, Heman C. Smith, John Gilbert, of Fall River, Massachusetts; cards from Bro. Blair, at Omaha; card from Bro. T. W. Smith, Chicago; D. S. Crawley, of Cherokee, Kansas; Ella R. Devore, of Muses' Bottom, West Virginia; R. M. Elvin, of Nebraska City, Nebraska; and A. J. Hinkle, of Green Ridge, Manitoba. are in hand, but crowded out for want of space,

Bro. T. W. Smith writes: "You are perfectly right in your position on the Rum Question in Lamoni. I heartily approve your remarks. It is a shame and a disgrace to the cause for our people where they can control the matter to permit a saloon to exist. I suggest that the place be called Rumoni instead of Lamoni."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. F. Clark writes us from Fræemption, Illinois, commending the tone of Bro. Putney's letter; and suggesting the cutting out of the hopelessly dead branches. He says:

"Brn. Anthony, Short, and Gibson, will keep the work moving till Conference makes further arrangements for this mission. The outlook was never so good. The missionaries are in fine spirits, and active. Hope you may be able to give Utah a visit for a few months soon."

Sr. Elizabeth Revell, of Nauvoo, Illinois, writes as follows, January 16th:

"Nauvoo is almost dead, but we do not wish to see it buried. We hope your family are well, also all the Saints that love their Lord and Master. Oh! Joseph, it is very lonesome to be without the preaching of the word of life; happy ought all to be that have the privilege of hearing the word preached."

Bro. Jobe Brown says,

"I am much pleased with Bro. Derry's article in last Herald. It did me good; as I hear no sound preaching except what comes in the Herald—and a little sifting in the gospel sieve greatly improves some of that."

Bro. D. M. Montgomery writes from Welecome, Minnesota,

"You have my best congratulations for the constant and continued improvements in the Church publications."

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert sent the following card, dated Mobile, Alabama, January 5th, 1882.

"Bro. Scarcliff and I left Eagle Creek, Tennessee, last Thursday, preached at Beaver Meadow, (twenty-five miles from here), on Sunday, and arrived here on Monday last. We have been trying to get an opening in this city, but have failed to get a house. Expect to go into Florida to-night, or to-morrow. Think of opening up the work in Milton, if the Lord will. So far, the mission has been hard on me. The mental strain is the hardest I ever experienced in any other field. Left Brn. Thomas and Hidy in Tennessee and Kentucky. We think of reaching East Florida and spending two months or more there, passible."

CONGRESS has its hands full if it deals with Polygamy in its fact and its travesty as indicated by the slip below.

SLAVERY IN THE FAR WEST.

Paul Boynton, in his trip down the Missouri, has run across a curious matrimonial custom that the Government should look into. One night he was entertained by a rancher named George Mince. A comely squaw presided over his household, and three pretty half-breed children called him father. To his guest he confessed the fact that he had bought this woman at Standing Rock Agency for a horse, he purchased her as a substitute for his Indian wife whom he had bought several years ago, married, overworked, and maltreated until she ran away. The squaw is kept hard at work, and the husband or master does not allow her to sit at the same table with him, and beats her whenever he pleases. What Mince had done is a common thing among his neighbors. "This system of female slavery," says Boynton, "is much more extensive than the public generally supposes. Scores of white men are accumulating wealth from the physical labor of these poor women and their children." Boynton.

ton says that a few years ago a white wood-cutter bought a twelve-year-old Indian girl for $150 at the Berthold Agency, and it was regarded there as an ordinary business transaction. As all the half-breed children are entitled to rations and clothing from Indian Agencies, the importance of this immoral slavery as to mere matter of governmental economy is self-evident. This is a phase of the Indian question that is kept in the background, but it is a fruitful source of evil and misery which demands immediate attention.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

It is possible that America may be compelled to follow in the wake of Australia in regard to the sparrow:

"A few years ago Australia welcomed with many demonstrations of joy the arrival of a few pairs of English sparrows. To day there is a premium of sixpence per dozen upon the heads of the little creatures, which have multiplied to an amazing extent amid their congenial surroundings, and are a source of great loss to fruit-growers. Before the commission appointed to inquire into the matter one witness said that in the short space of ten days the sparrows took a ton and a half of grapes. They stripped the figs off five trees, and kept low fifteen acres of lucerne during the Summer. Another complains that in the season they took £30 worth of fruit; while a third declares that he sowed peas three times, and each time they were destroyed by the sparrows. Neither apricots, cherries, figs, apples, grapes, peaches, plums, pears, nectarines, loquats, olives, wheat, barley, oats, cabbages, cauliflower, nor seeds, nor fruit of any kind are spared by the sparrow's omnivorous bill; and all means of defense tried against its depredations, whether scarecrows, traps, netting, shooting, or poisoning, are declared to be insufficient to cope with the enemy."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"Are not the ten commandments as much law to the Church to-day, as they were to the children of Israel in the day of Moses?"—Exodus 20

So far as the Decalogue was reaffirmed by Christ, either in the New Testament, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants, they form a part of the Church articles and covenants; but if the questioner means to imply that the ten commandments are enjoined upon us to-day, as they were upon the children of Israel in their day, we answer No.

Correspondence.

HUTCHINSON, Jefferson Co., Col.,
December 27th, 1881.

Dear Herald:—It is clear to my mind that you would have sustained no loss in a failure on my part to have congratulated you for success with ability to survive the startling and in some instances distressing events of the past year, with greetings and wishes for an increased prosperity during the incoming, or new year. I offer them nevertheless; as, while I write I feel an interest in the latter day work you represent, without assuming ability to foretell the condition of my mind to-morrow. For clearly is the fact demonstrated that man is vacillating; and however strange it may appear in no organization (or so I believe) is this fact so visible, as in the Church the good Lord has caused to be organized in the latter days. So far as my observations go your readers are encouraged by your semi-monthly visits, though somewhat distressed through conflicting articles which sometimes appear in your columns. But this, though the lessons may be difficult to learn, may be of benefit to those who for a time may be troubled thereby. The fiat has gone forth that the kingdom of heaven is like a net cast into the sea, gathering of all kinds, good and bad. And we can but expect to see evidence of this. It must be so, or the word of the Lord would turn to him void having failed to accomplish the thing where unto it had been sent. I would not arrogate to myself, but do feel less apprehensive of conflicting articles or speeches now, than afore time, nor do I think that different ways of expressing or writing is always evidence of contention or a desire to create strife; without attempting to decide as to the great ultimate, it can hardly be expected now, that we all shall have but one thought and a uniformity of expression. There is not so much danger in the expression of thought, as in a dogmatism or pertinacity evincing a determination to carry a point at all hazards; for this necessitates a resorting to foul or unfair means suggested by deception or a love of victory, with a determination to rule or ruin, between which and gospel liberty there exists a material difference, and a proper discrimination between the two may perhaps be difficult but most essential. Failure in this will inevitably be attended with disastrous results. If sensitiveness be a virtue there are perhaps few of your readers without one virtue at least. And if to be Mordecaious be a crime perhaps some are guilty. To determine who are or who are not, is not my prerogative; unless legitimately called to do so. But I may perhaps be permitted to say that a review of the past year furnishes proof of obstacles to the progress of the work through negligence and willfulness. And however reflective, this negligence and willfulness has been exhibited by officers; and it seldom, if ever, occurs but they are the cause or concerned, in all difficulty that arise. Discretion in the selection of officials, or appointing missions may not be effective in barring out or preventing trouble; but its exercise is very necessary, and that there has been too great a deficiency in this particular is quite clear. Very much concern either affected or real has been exhibited for, and not a little dissatisfaction because greater efforts have not been made to lengthen the cords, or open up wider and more extensive fields for the introduction of the gospel. That the spread of the gospel is an essential work, that it is the primary object, or should be, needs no argument to prove. But a constant clamor for this, without a corresponding zeal and labor, will never reach the desired end. Less prating, complaining and dictating in this direction, with study and efforts leading to an understanding of duty by member, Deacon, Teacher, Priest, Presiding Elders of branches and districts, and Elders not called to preside, embracing the opportunity each recurring Sabbath to go forth to reason with their fellows out of the Scriptures, warning them to flee the wrath to come, and reproving them of sin, righteousness and a judgment to come, etc.; backing up Sunday teachings by examples through the week, would greatly facilitate the work of spreading or opening up new and wider fields for the introduction of the word. While a continuance in the former and a failure in the latter, retards the work, as a necessity is created for the consummation of time in adjusting difficulties brought about by undue interference on the one hand, and negligence on the other. For due attention must be given to regulating the affairs of the Church by those on whom the law lays such a responsibility when a necessity exist therefor. Nor should applause lead to officiousness, or evidence of a desire to criticise or find fault, deter or hinder the moving forth, in plainly prescribed duties. Nothing new will be developed to your reader in reference to the fact that the purity of water is retained by constant moving, while that which remains in a quiescent state becomes stagnant and unfit for use. The gospel economy is prolific with instruction, showing the necessity of activity by all who accept it as their guide, and this activity or evidence of it to be given by every one standing in his place, learning and performing his or her duties; nor are we left in the dark as to the consequences in the event of a failure to learn and discharge duties. But we are somewhat different from the element of water, which can only move as it is moved upon, while we may choose and do the evil or good, but are not destined to be altogether inactive. Our time is therefore spent and strength used for weal or woe; solemn thought; but how shall he get from it? The revelation and provision of the gospel proves a will power or agency in man, or it is a farce.

Were it possible for articles to be sent from heaven condemnatory of the practice of tale-bearing that would dazzle the sight of your readers, because of their effulgence to behold, the evils of such practice could hardly have been more visibly portrayed; nor could they have been admonished in milder terms to desist or cease so ungodly and demoralizing practice, than articles that have appeared in your columns from time to time, written by the hands of mortals, and yet how little heed has been paid or notice taken of them. And why this negligence? But your readers may think this harsh. Let us see about it: "Moreover, if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him of his fault between thee and him alone." Here is a prohibition to the revelation of grief caused by the infliction of wrong to every one save him or her inflicting the wrong; and the prohibition imposed by Christ the law giver. But how often is this disregarded by a failure on the part of the offended going to the offender, and yet he is busy in exclaiming against him to every one that will hear, and every step thus taken tends to close up the avenues of peace, and in the same proportion strife, discord and hatred are increased, by which the peace of whole branches have been threatened, and sometimes torn from center to circumference. This is not the only way in which the tale-bearer works, for often his or her inquisitiveness leads to efforts which prove successful in a revelation of others' affairs, and with the same diligence these are blazed abroad. Such evils it would appear were foreseen, and hence measures suggested by which men were to be empowered by elevation to office to prevent them. Men and women through obeying the gospel are brought into near relationship for each others' welfare in a spiritual sense, which is a privilege. But it is possible to overestimate this privilege, leading to the expectation of favor not contemplated or provided for in the gospel economy. To illustrate, it seldom fails in a branch, however few, but their circumstances, earthly possession, ability and determination to increase the same, differ. All may not be equally fortunate in the accumulation of worldly possessions, but having physical strength and a sound mind all may be persevering and industrious in their several avocations, using that which they do make with economy and care. But this unfortunately, by the less fortunate is too often overlooked, and that possessed by others coveted, and not only evidence of dissatisfaction if denied is seen, but efforts made to raise prejudice against those failing to accede to the wishes of the non-industrious. This is an unwarranted liberty, and where persisted in, will lead to evil. And if the ones appointed, seeing these evils cropping out will look on, and through timidity or negligence, fail to interpose to prevent or bring the offenders to justice, the evil will increase, and by and by we shall hear of the disorganization of a branch, because of discordant elements, which would either prove the existence of no law, or a failure to enforce it. But not only has the practice obtained of members tattling to members in the church; but with a view either to ease their spirit which is wounded, or to increase or make the trouble more complicated, but non members are sought and into their ears is poured what they decide has been unjust and cruel, all of which goes to prove either a non understanding of the injury they are bringing upon themselves and the Church, or a determination to do evil.

But doubtless, Mr Herald, ere this your readers have decided that I too, am a busy body or a fault-finder. If so, having the floor, I will say, if the notation of the fact of there being too great a laxity in branch and district officials in the enforcement of the laws and church discipline, be evidence of croaking, or fault-finding, I am willing to be branded; but am not willing to say that all is well, unity prevail, prospects dazzling, when the rever. e in the case. There never was a branch where due diligence and a godly zeal by the officials was manifest to the encouraging the confiding and faithful, reproving and arresting the disorderly and willful, but enjoyed the fruits of brotherly love and kindness which were visible. Nor one where officials were careless and negligent but the reverse was the case, and a necessity growing out of this negligence, for some one or ones, at the consumption of time and money, to go and adjust trouble their negligence had caused. I am an advocate of liberty, but do not believe that official or non official, rich or poor member, ignorant or intelligent, should be encouraged in violating a recognized order, usage, or precedent of the Church. The earth is spacious and wide, and I hope if the time should come that I can not represent the Church, I will represent myself, or have done with the representation business altogether.

There may be much in the conservatism, radicalism, rationalism, spiritualism, skepticism, materialism, and many other isms of the present age to admire; but nothing in them so sublime by which the gospel and its provisions can be modified, or changed, so as to be made more palatable, or acceptable to the masses. We may refuse the gospel if we please, and take the consequence; but we can not refuse and partake of its benefits, and so with every law, human or divine. If the command to repent and be baptized be inoperative, is the injunction in the Doctrine and Covenants, which makes it obligatory on some one to prevent him that has transgressed from partaking the sacrament until he makes reconciliation for instance, less imperative? I answer not; and risk the criticism of your readers. What are we better than those who deny the necessity of apostles and prophets, should we deny or refuse to honor the labors of Teachers, Priests and Deacons, seeing the same power set both in the Church? And how can a Priest or Teacher be justified in negligence more than an Apostle, or vice versa? But we are getting such elevated notions of charity, forbearance, etc., that with many the idea has obtained that being obedient to heavenly injunctions, such as assembling for worship, praying vocally and in secret, may be done at our convenience; which state of affairs has brought about an indifference leading to negligence, to such an extent that gospel examples and their effects have in some localities almost become the exception instead of the rule; and three months such practice by a branch will do more injury to the cause than a diligent Elder can do good in three years. In the opposition that was hurled against the method of representation, something was said about the disfranchising of some of the members of the body. Now, whether a declaration against some branches being incompetent or unworthy to be longer recognized by the body, would have been tantamount to a disfranchisement, I will not stop to enquire; but believe the dignity of the Church would have been maintained by so declaring against some branches. You might as well bid the angry dashing waves of the sea be calm, as to try to convince people that our message is peace on earth and good will to man, where our people meet in conference capacity, or to do branch business, which are marked by heated, angry and tantalizing discussions, and becoming so impetuous as to invite a trial of each others' pugilistic powers, such Elders ought to be suspended from ministerial labors until at least they should give evidence of a willingness and determination to curb their impetuous natures so as to be able at least to conduct themselves in an orderly and decent manner. There is a possibility of a person having his rights infringed on so that patience may cease to be a virtue. But what is there in the business of a conference, selecting a branch president, building a house of worship, to so arouse the passion as to lead to disorderly or disgraceful conduct, or insulting or tantalizing remarks, by one to another member of the conference or branch. Absolute ruling is quite repulsive to those duly appreciating liberty, but it appears the only remedy for some.

We do not need to essay the task of improving that which God has pronounced perfect. But there exists a great necessity for an increase of godly zeal with corresponding labor to establish a moral excellence among ourselves to be brought about by members, Deacons, Teachers, Priests, Elders, Presidents, Seventies, High Priest, Twelve, Bishops, President and Counsellors, standing in their respective places, understanding and performing their duties, that we may receive that spiritual light and strength needed to properly acquit ourselves before God, and be prepared for the latter day trials and maintain the fair fame of the Church.

I left home on the 3d day of October, at the instance of Brn. Leeka and Woolsey, essayed to hold meeting within the limits of the Fremont District, Iowa. But the rains came, the wind blew, approaches to, and some bridges were no more, roads washed out, mud deep, nights dark, dismal and forbidding, so ere the days of October went out I set my face Kansasward, and up to November 20th, traveled and delivered over forty gospel discourses; can not report overflowing houses, numbers baptized; but may say had some interesting meetings, attentive listeners, some of whom expressed themselves satisfied with the doctrine who may eventually come into the church, if not the gospel will prove a witness against them. One unpleasant incident occurred on one evening after dismissal, ere the congregation had dispersed. I was interrogated thus: Do you heal the sick and raise the dead, as a test of the divinity of your mission? Which I answered in the negative. Then the interrogator informed myself and the rest, that about five years ago, Elder —, at —, essayed this work and failed; which I did not feel at liberty to deny, having reason in addition to what he offered, to believe that his statements were correct; but did not hesitate to declare that if such was the case, such Elder transcended his bounds, with other explanatory remarks. How can Elders commit such folly?

There are many openings in Kansas; a dozen Elders could find labor there, if they could be had. I regretted my inability to tarry longer, and respond to other calls. I arrived here on the 22d of December, to find no response to the appeal made to the scattered members in Colorado. I had believed, nor have I yet changed, that there are quite a number of members scattered in the State; though in this I may be deceived. Much attention is being paid to arrangement by all classes to prepare for Christmas and New Year's festivities. Building and improvements are being carried on with astonishing rapidity in Denver, while ever and anon reports are heard of new discoveries in the mining localities. Colorado is decidedly a mineral state, but the development of the mind is attended with great expense. The introduction of railroads into Leadville and other important places, has dispensed with freighting by teams and wagons, cutting off travel on the roads, rendering many places dull and lifeless, so far as business is concerned, which were lively with money flowing in abundance. The mountains have received their Winter's garment of snow, but at present not very thick; the weather is fair and pleasant. The light air, from the high altitude is trying to some new comers, but pleasant to others.

The outlook for the spread and gathering by the gospel is not very flattering at present. The natural antipathy toward the primitive religion is unpleasant to meet, while prejudice caused by apostates is perplexing; but prejudice created by the folly of our own members is terrible, and yet it opens a way for the declaration that individual salvation is only secured by individual efforts, etc.

Yours in the faith,
JAMES CAFFALL.

SANTA ROSA, California,
January 7th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—I am glad that you are pleased with your new home and that the Herald is still alive, as it is all the preacher we have. It seems that we are nearly forgotten hear in at Santa Rosa. Bro. Carmichael gives us a call once in a while, and we have a good time; but he has too much on his hands to do justice to so large a district. What few Saints there are left in Santa Rosa are strong in the faith, but rather on a stand still. Santa Rosa Branch numbers some sixty odd, but in attendance very few, caused by death and removal. I have endeavored to meet with what few there are as often as circumstances would admit, considering my age and infirmities; the 18th of this month will make me eighty years old. Bro. Joseph, as I am an old time Saint, I could mention many strong testimonies of the truth of this being the true Church of Christ; and that your father was a true prophet of God. I rejoice that I have been permitted to live to see the Church reorganized and in working order again, and I hope to remain true and faithful to the end, is my prayer.

JEREMIAH ROOT.

OAKLAND, California,
January 8th, 1882.

Dear Herald.—Being such a poor writer I thought to be slow in troubling you. But in reading your precious columns awhile ago there appeared such a splendid feeler given by our beloved president. Which is so much like what Bro. Green gave us in Sacramento. (He has gone to his rest; peace to his ashes). He told us not to be hard hearted, but for all coming time to try and appreciate the proportions of Bro. Dykes, who you will remember was in rebellion against Bro. E. C. Briggs. Question: Do you think that there is any one in the Church so far drifted into self-conceit as to lose sight of the fact that it is human to err, and that their acts need no criticising nor spies. No doubt the acts of many are better kept in the dark. But thank God it is not so with all. The acts of some are like a city set on a hill, and a light on a candle-stick.

We are getting along nicely in Oakland, about twenty added last year; thanks that the scales are falling from the eyes of some. Is it lawful to request absentees to give a written statement, (to be presented before the branch), why they don't attend meetings, but be treated accordingly. We are told that some of our number do attend other societies oftener than that of the Saints.

Love to all. Yours as ever,
T. W. V.

BUCHANAN, Henry Co., Tenn.,
December 20th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I am just recovering from a severe attack of sickness. I hope to rally once more, but it was a hard struggle. While lying on the bed in the midst of hot fever, I could not help thinking of the strong and peculiar oppositions that are waged against God's work, and that I should be rendered unable to strike one blow in defense, caused me to weep!

I have been reading the Herald for December 1st. It contains many good things, and some cheering news from the Elders in the field. But under the caption of "Editorial Items," I find an extract from a letter by Bro. Mullen, of Taittsville, Ray county, Missouri, in which there are some things I greatly deplore. It looks like a great ugly blur on a white sheet of paper! O, brethren! For your own sake; for the sake of the cause you claim to represent; for the sake of those who have shown by their willingness to labor and sacrifice under the most adverse circumstances, that they love the cause of the Master more dearly than life, do not, I beseech you in kindness, stoop so low! Whenever we resort to grave insinuations and palpable misrepresentations in order to give supposed strength to the cause we advocate, it proves one of two things: either the cause is not fit to be represented, or we are not fit to represent it. Brethren, which is it? Or is it both?

I deny that the Church has "disfranchised" anybody! But if she is guilty of this great wrong, why should the crime be charged upon the "big brothers?" In the Spring of 1860, preambles and a resolution were submitted to the Church by a Priest and High Priest, (I am informed the Priest was their author), which were adopted: and as a result of such adoption, a committee of five was chosen, and instructed to draft articles on representation and report to the body. This committee was constituted of one of the First Presidency, one Apostle, two High Priests, and one Priest. The articles submitted to the body by them exclude High Priests and Priests from voting in General Conference, unless laboring under appointment of that body, or having been sent as delegates. Therefore whatever of proscription is found in these articles, affected two of the quorums of which three of the committee men are members! Does this look like mean selfishness? What next? Well, after seeing what we have seen, and hearing what we have heard, we think it well to hope and pray for the best, and be prepared for the worst. And should it be hinted that these "big brothers," from their abundance, bribed the other three, we shall still try to abide in the faith, and do what we think to be of greatest advantage to the cause. We do not object to the Saints exercising a righteous watchcare over the leading officers of the Church, (and every body else for that matter), but think it to be essential and right; but why should it be thought or said, by implication, that these men are disposed to ignore the word of God, and run the spiritual machinery of the Church in a way of their own? Where are the grounds for such grave suspicions? Has Bro. Mullen attended the General Conferences of the Church, held for twenty-nine successive years, before these articles on representation went into operation? If not, then his "big brothers," and a few others, have been adopting measures which were made binding upon him, and every other member of the Church, without his or their consent. And now when it is proposed to give every man, woman and child belonging to the Church of Christ, a representation in the General Conferences thereof, the cry is raised, "We are disfranchised!" Strange!

This assuming premises which do not exist, and then making an argument thereupon, or appealing to the feelings of the Saints in order to convince them that they have been deprived of some God given right, has characterized much of the argument on this subject of representation, from first to last, and particularly last Fall. We do not wish to deprive any one of taking this course if he so chooses; but it is astonishing that those who have so much of this "illogical logic" to meet, in the world, would think such a course to be right. Pseudology is worse than a waste of time, and the cause of guarding well the "liberties of the people" ought to have a higher and nobler representation.

Since writing you last, I have met Brn. Hyde and Scarcliff, and we have made such arrangements for the further prosecution of the work, in this mission, as we could under the circumstances. We concluded our meetings in Farmington, and think good will result therefrom, though it may not be in the way we usually look for it. The citizens were very kind to us. Prof. Eads, Principal of the Farmington Institute, attended two of our meetings. By invitation I dined with him on Sunday. We had a pleasant talk. He had met me on the second day after my arrival in Kentucky, and with the avowed purpose of investigating our faith, began conversation at once. We were soon engaged in close combat, but with good feelings. He found, we believe, more in our faith than we usually get credit for by rumor and so called history. I regard him as a gentleman possessed of a good and liberal mind. What a pleasure it is to meet such men! They are fertile spots in the desert of bigotry and intolerance!

In this conversation, as in others, we claimed the right to represent our own faith through our acknowledged representative men, and standard works of the Church; nor do we propose to swerve from this claim the one thousandth part of an inch. Its justice must be admitted by all intelligent and unbiased persons, and its strength and consistency have put in many a would-be-champion to flight, by an exchange of a few words.

From the 3d to the 8th of November, Bro. Hyde and I held a short and interesting series of meetings, in the Saints' Chapel, near Farmington. Dr. Boyd and James H. Adair were baptized on Sunday, the 6th, by Bro. Hyde. They are leading citizens of good repute, and have been believing the gospel for years. The Farmington Branch is in rather a weak condition, as there is no officers left to take charge. We advised them to meet together regularly and hold prayer and testimony meetings.

Since November 8th, Bro. Hyde and I have been laboring in this county and state. I have preached in Eagle Creek and Foundry Hill branches, also in Paris. In the last named place (which is the capital of Henry County) I felt it my duty, for existing reasons, to make a leading effort to bring our faith before the people. The brethren of Eagle Creek and Foundry Hill, also Bro. Thomas, were alike anxious that the people of Paris should hear the message. But very few of them heard, and all this because they "would not." I was informed by a leading gentleman of the town that he had tried to get the people to come out and hear, but they said, "We know all we want to know about Mormonism." This reminds us of what a professor once stated of the three classes into which he divided all people, viz.: "1st. Those who know and they know that they know. 2d. Those who know, but they don't know that they know. 3d. Those who don't know, but they don't know that they don't know." Of the last class (found in Paris) he said, "You can do nothing with them—just as well let them alone."

At Eagle Creek three have been baptized, by Bro. Hyde. Our predecessors in this field, so far as we know, have left a clean record; and most of them have been sufficiently wise to give the adversary no pretext for speaking evil of them, or their faith. The Saints in Kentucky and Tennessee are kind, and mean to do what they can for the spread of the work; but they need to be a little more practical and self reliant, as a rule. What I mean is, that salvation is an individual matter, and the commandments "Watch and pray," "Take up the cross," "Worship Him in spirit and in truth," and many others, are binding upon all Saints as well as the Elders.

Yours in truth, and with a desire that God's people may become entirely pure, both in body and in mind.

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

ORONO, Jasper Co., Missouri,

January 4th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Once more I take the opportunity of writing, hoping that you and family are well and wishing you a Happy New Year.

Myself and family are well with the exception of my youngest, little boy, six years old; he has been very low for over eight weeks with typhoid malaria, but through the mercies of God he is gaining very slowly. I have been here in the hotel business the last year, but this is a dull town this Winter, and every thing is very dear, but still we can not complain, but would like to get to a better point for the business, if I knew where to find it. I do not enjoy myself in church capacity as I would wish; I have not the zeal I once had, but I feel an inward prompting to duty, hoping that in the sweet by and by I will feel as I once felt. I can not write my experience since I last saw you. Inclosed five dollars; send me such as is mentioned on the other page.

Love to you all.

STEPHEN MALONEY.

LONDON EAST, Ontario,

January 7th, 1882

Mr. Joseph Smith, Dear Brother.—I left home (Bevier, Missouri.) October 31st, 1881, for Canada, to labor in the mission assigned me. Stopping by the way to visit my sister and her husband at Bryant, Illinois; remained here one week as my sister was taken very sick during my stay, and I did not deem it wise to proceed on my journey, until she was better. She was considerable better when I left, thanks be to the good Lord for the same. I called next on Bro. T. W. Smith at Chicago, enjoyed the visit very much, Bro. Smith spending parts of two days in showing me over the city. Thence to London, Canada. As soon as I reached here I heard of Bro. A. Clow's death, and by request hastened to St. Thomas to attend his funeral. After which I went on a short tour to Carlingford. Had excellent times with Bro. Brown and family, where we always receive kind receptions. Returning to London, where I had the pleasure of meeting our excellent brother, J. H. Lake, and I must frankly confess it did my soul good to meet him, I had the pleasure of being with him over two weeks, and the longer I was with him the more I loved him. Bro. Lake is a good faithful worker, and will undoubtedly, by the help of the Spirit, be the means of accomplishing much good on this mission, from the fact that he is now pursuing a course which will finally bring love and peace, and that will adjust some of the present difficulties. He is a father to the erring, and a support to the weak, and a very pleasant and social companion to be with. I pray the Lord to bless him with every needful blessing. I have been confined to the house for the last three weeks, more or less, as I have been afflicted with three of Job's comforters, on the back of my neck, but I fail to see the comfort that they bring us. Have not seen Bro. Lake for a few weeks, but expect to see him soon and labor with him for some time. We crave an interest in the prayers of all God's people. With love to you and all the Saints. My permanent P. O. address London East, Ontario.

I remain your co-laborer in Christ.

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

TUNNEL HILL, Illinois,

January 4th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—We are often made to rejoice in reading your pleasant columns. It has been so long since Conference has sent an Elder to visit us that we sometimes feel almost forsaken, but, like one of old, "not cast down." I am devoting my time to the work at present, doing what I can to persuade my fellow men to obey the gospel; but I am so weak and accomplish so little that it sometimes seems to me that my effort is almost vain. It seems so, but I know it is not; for God is at the helm guiding this work, and will have it preached to all "for a witness," to save or condemn, and will therefore recognize the work of those whom he has authorized to make the proclamation. The enemies of the truth are at work here, as in other places, trying to blind the eyes of the people, but are put to shame—if not past shame—when they face the servants of God. I attended a discussion, a few days ago, in Richland county, between Bro. G. H. Hilliard and F. M. Shick of the Christian order. It commenced on the 19th of December, and lasted four days, and I think did great good, as it was in every respect "a glorious victory for the truth." Mr. Shick came claiming to know all the "crooks and turns," and "ins and outs," and all the "dark subterfuges of Mormonism," and claimed also to be prepared to meet them. He claimed to know their history from the time the Church was organized, at Kirtland, Ohio, (that was something new to us to hear that the Church was organized at Kirtland) down to the present time." But his ignorance was soon made manifest to those who were present, and his boasted assertions fell to the ground powerless and ineffective. I will here give a few specimens of his wonderful knowledge. He informed us that "Joseph Smith ordained his father Patriarch and Bishop-part-ridge of the Church," and then exclaimed, with a great flourish of words: "Who ever heard of a man being ordained to the office of Bishop-part-ridge! You can't find such a word in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary." When Bro. Hilliard informed them that Partridge was a man's name, and that he was Bishop of the Church and therefore called Bishop Partridge, it caused quite a laugh, and Mr. Shick's knowledge of Mormonism went at a discount of fifty per cent, at least. He also told us that when this Church was first organized it was called the "Mormon Church," but was afterwards changed to "Latter Day Saints Church." He read extracts from the True Latter Day Saints' Herald published by "Joseph Sheen." Guess you didn't know that man—in Cincinnati, in 1859. He then informed us that his present head of the Mormon Church (Reorganized) is up here at "Planes," Illinois. But I presume I have given enough for the readers of the Herald to form an idea of his acquaintance with the "history of Mormonism" and will just state that his scriptural arguments were as weak as his statements above—a complete failure. Bro. Hilliard acquitted herself nobly in this contest by keeping cool, and thereby gaining the confidence and sympathy of the people, by turning the false assertions of his opponent back upon his own head, by showing the fallacy of his would-be arguments, and also by giving a scriptural reason for the faith taught by the Saints. Much prejudice was removed and many friends made to the cause. Many of Mr. Shick's own church acknowledged that he made a complete failure. We had many pressing invitation to come again, some of our Methodist friends assuring us that their home should be ours so long as they had one. We felt that the Lord had a people there, so we left another appointment for the first Sunday in February, hoping and praying that God will water the seed sown and gather the honest in heart into the fold of the Good Shepherd.

The work in this district does not move on as fast as could be wished for, but I think we are gaining in some parts, and this, with the influence of God's Spirit, encourages us to still persevere. We have many calls for preaching and but few to preach, so we are sometimes made to mourn on account of our inability to fill the many calls for the bread of life. I hope the time may soon come when the Saints will put forth a more united and zealous effort to live the religion of the master, that they may enjoy a greater degree of His Spirit, and show forth the fruits of the same by letting their lights shine bright enough to convince others that God is with us of a truth."

Ever praying and working for the cause of Zion, I remain yours in hope of life, ISAAC M. SMITH.

ROD EAU, Ontario,
January 11th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—We are all pretty well here at present, thank God. Bro. G. E. Deuel is here; he has labored here and up in Tilbury, baptized eight up there, and since he came back he has labored some here. There seems to be quite a good interest here at present. He is a good man and one that will do good wherever he is. He has gone out of the village to-night about three-quarters of a mile to visit a gentleman that invited him last Sunday to come some night and stay all night at his house; the man does not belong to any church at all. Up in Tilbury he revived and cheered those who had obeyed and baptized some more, and the people want him back again to preach to them. He is going down into Howard township to try and get an opening where there was some preaching done some years ago; I think he will succeed all right there. Bro. Lake was here awhile and baptized two that were awaiting baptism. I think the laborers that have been sent to this mission are good men; may God bless their labors, I thank Bro. W. H. Kelley most heartily for his efforts in getting laborers sent here. Bro. William Carnes has gone over to Hersey, Michigan, and that left us without any presiding priest. By direction of the Spirit I was ordained a priest on the 1st instant and chosen presiding priest of the branch. I think that the work here is in a pretty good condition, and if the Saints walk uprightly and do not throw stumbling blocks in the way of others by their unwise acts that there will be others added to our number here. We should be the light of the world and if not we are not filling the bill the Lord designed we should. There has been a great deal of strife and contention here, but the prospect looks better now to me than it has looked for years. Pray for me that I may fill the position I am called to fill. May God bless you and give you his Spirit is my prayer.

Yours in bonds,

RICHARD COBURN.

CARLINGFORD, Ontario,
January 4th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Bro. Lake is with us now; has been about a week; spent New Years' Day with us. Some of the Saints from Osborne were here and some of the Saints of this branch present. Had a swing erected, we had Bro. Lake in the swing and we gave him a good one. After the swinging had a great battle of snow balling. If you had been here and seen how the Canadian girls whitened him up, you would of laughed; and we enjoy his company very much.

Bro. Lake and myself are going from here to McKillop to hold a series of lectures. I have baptized one there since I wrote last.

Yours in truth,

SAMUEL BROWN.

We learn to climb by keeping our eyes not on the hills behind us, but on the mountains that rise before us.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT.

Minutes of conference held at Mt. Eden, Indiana, December 10th-13th, 1881. B. V. Springer in the chair; J. Bywater, clerk pro tem.

The president stated to the conference, that besides the usual routine of business to come before it, that charges having been preferred against certain members, in the name of the Southern Indiana District, he had called a Court of Elders, and had duly notified the parties to appear at this conference to answer; that the Court of Elders, was present and ready to act. The accused claimed a non-suit, on the ground that the court was illegally called, as the district president was a Seventy, and not eligible to the position.—Overruled. And, on motion of H. Scott and E. Flint, that we proceed to business in the matter, carried.

B. V. Springer was appointed to prosecute the case in behalf of the district.

Report of Branches.—Hope organized October 6th, 1881, by B. V. Springer, composed of ten members, including 1 Priest, 1 Teacher; Uriah Cummings, president; William Cummings, clerk. Canaan 21; received on original baptism 1, baptized 2, expelled 1. Union, Pleasant Ridge, Olive, New Trenton and Amanda, not reported.

Elders' Reports.—Harbert Scott was sent to the Semi Annual Conference at Council Bluffs, Iowa, as delegate from the district, had voted in accordance with his instructions; had preached at different points in Iowa and Missouri, in all of which he had tried to do his whole duty; and that he should hold the district responsible in regard to defraying expenses. Elders M. R. and David Scott reported. Wm. H. Kelley had labored constantly in the northern portion of this mission; was greatly encouraged in view of results attained, and the prospects for the future of the work was never in better condition in Michigan than now. B. V. Springer had labored continuously since last conference in Perry, Crawford, Jefferson and Switzerland counties; had spoken 55 times, baptized two, organized one branch; ordained two Priests and two Teachers. The interest among the people outside the branches is good and encouraging, but the work in the district is not in as good condition as it should be. Elder F. W. A. Reidel had attended the last Semi Annual Conference, was appointed one of a committee of three to translate some of our works into the German. Had translated 2000 tracts, and also published a list of our publications in his paper. Bro. Kelley made some remarks on the finance question, showing the necessity of each one doing something for the advancement of the cause.

Resolved, that this conference, appreciating the labors of Bro. W. H. Kelley, hereby respectfully request the General Conference to continue him in his present charge. Carried.

On motion, a vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. W. H. Kelley in charge of the mission, and Bro. B. V. Springer as president of the district, for their efficient labors. Carried.

REPORT OF THE COURT OF ELDERS.

Eden, Ind., Dec. 13th, 1881.—To the president and brethren of the Southern Indiana District Conference. We, the court appointed by you to examine the following named persons, viz: James G. Scott, James M. Scott, John A. Scott, Green Brown, Tillman Hollis, Barbara A. Scott, Elizabeth Brown, Albeda Scott, and Louisiana Scott, upon the following charges, viz: Insubordination to recognized authorities of the Church, in separating from an established branch on or about the 24th day of July, 1881, forming and organizing a new branch, contrary to the laws and usages of the church, beg leave to report: the charges here in mentioned were sustained.

1st. It was shown that the Mt. Eden Branch, to which a part if not all of those against whom charges were preferred belong, has never been disorganized since its first organization, and that there are now, and have been since its first organization, persons holding office in said branch. The parties accused having acknowledged the existence of said Eden branch as late as March, 1881, by making application to and being received by vote as members in said branch.

2d. The Court further finds, that had there been no branch existing at the time said new organization was effected, said new organization could not be recognized, for the reasons: (1) That previous to the day of its organization, the members residing in the vicinity of said branch, did not receive due notice of an intent of organizing at that time (See sec. 5, page 7, of Book of Rules.) (2) It was shown that the officers selected at the time were so selected by special commandment, and not by choice, as is the custom in the church; and (3) that James G. Scott, who was the prime mover in effecting said branch organization, is not a member of the Church.

We are of the opinion, however, that the accused parties acted from a misunderstanding in some degree, and that the error was one of the head rather than the heart; and we do not consider, therefore, their offense sufficiently grave to warrant their expulsion from the Church, providing they are willing to abandon their organization, and act in harmony with the authorities of the branch and district; otherwise, we recommend that they be expelled from the Church.

We further recommend, that as the cause in some degree of those difficulties are of long standing, and the parties at no time have been charged with crimes against the moral code; but as refractory, obstinate, insubordinate factions, fanatical, and of persistent following of the bent of their own minds; in all of which the claim of sincerity, devotion, and conviction of being right, is made; that a friendly and brotherly effort be made to reclaim them, and that unity and love may be secured to all, and the wayward restored to the fold.

Respectfully submitted,

Court of Enquiry, { W. H. KELLEY.
F. W. A. REIDEL.
J. S. CHRISTIE.

On motion of M. R. and H. Scott, the authorities of the district were sustained, including the district clerk, Bishop's Agent, and District Treasurer.

Preaching on Saturday evening, Sunday forenoon and evening, and Tuesday evening, by W. H. Kelley.

Bro. B. V. Springer and H. Scott were chosen delegates to the Annual Conference, to convene at Independence, Mo., April 6th, 1882.

Adjourned to meet at the call of the president.
Wm. W. CARMICHAEL, Clerk.

NORTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

This conference convened at Omaha, Nebraska, January 7th and 8th, 1882. N. Brown, presiding; E. Rannie, jun., clerk pro tem.

Report of Branches.—Pleasant Grove 23; baptized 2. Douglas, no changes. Platte Valley 31; removed by letter 1. Omaha English 63; baptized 2, received by vote 2. Union 16; received by vote 1.

Financial reports of Platte Valley and Pleasant Grove was also received.

Reports—Elders N. Brown, E. C. Brand (baptized 1), J. F. Mintun (baptized 5), J. M. L. Wihlman, J. Anderson. Priests J. Brown and E. Rannie, reported.

Resolved that each branch be called on by the president to report their spiritual condition.

J. Curtis asked to know if the Omaha English Branch had complied with the recommendation of General Conference concerning the expulsion from the Church of G. Hatt, G. Medlock, W. Ballinger, and J. Dove? The clerk read the recommendation alluded to. The request was ruled out of order.

The spiritual condition of branches were according to previous resolution, reported; and verified the word of the Lord. Wherever unity and love existed the cause was progressing; but where this was lacking, the work languished.

Resolved, that W. Rumel be associated with the district president.

That E. C. Brand and J. F. Mintun labor in the district, as they feel directed by the Spirit.

That all other Elders and Priests who wish to preach do so, under the direction of the president.

The treasurer of the District Fund requested conference to define how financial reports should be made to the conference; direct from him? or indirect by the several branches? The following was introduced and passed:

Whereas, there is not a clear understanding in the branches of the district concerning the District Fund; therefore, be it resolved that the means given by the several branches for this fund should be given to the president of each several branch, who is to disburse such means as may seem necessary, and report the same to the District Treasurer, with the amount of surplus, if any, which is to be forwarded in connection with the report, in time for the District Treasurer to report to each quarterly conference

The president and clerk of the district was sustained for three months.

Preaching in the morning and evening on Sunday by E. C. Brand and J. F. Mintun. The afternoon was devoted to prayer and testimony.

Contribution for the president, $4 75.

Miscellaneous.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' ANNUAL REPORTS.

By order of Bishop I. L. Rogers the attention of his Agents is called to the fact that the time is near at hand for them to make out their Annual Reports, according to resolution of the General Conference to that effect.

These reports should include all transactions of receipt and expenditure of Church funds during the year ending February 28th, 1882, beginning with the balance to the debit or credit of the Agent at the close of his last report. It should contain the dates of receipt and expenditure, with the names of individuals by whom or to whom paid, and the amounts, except where branch collectors are received unaccompanied by the names.

A printed blank form will be sent to each Agent in time to make out a report on the first of March, as it is desired they should do, to give plenty of time for copying and preparing the whole before Conference. These will act as a guide, and by them a uniformity will be instituted to the advantage and convenience of all concerned.

Address I. L. Rogers, Sandwich, Illinois or the undersigned

HENRY A. STEBBINS,

Bishop's Secretary.

GERMAN OCEAN ONCE DRY.

The German Ocean, or North Sea, like the English Channel, was once an inland plain or valley, raised far above the sea level. The sea has but recently invaded this depressed plain, submerged its forests, and suspended its river courses. The buried trees of its sunken forests are still standing, rooted in their own vegetable soil, although beneath the waves. Cromer forest, which dips into the water from the coast of Norfolk, is the most famous of the submerged forests of the German Ocean. The ancient woodland has been traced at low tide for more than forty miles. At certain seasons, and especially after great storms, the stumps of oak, alder, yew, and scotch fir, are seen standing upright in the water. The condition of the wood and the fir cones—some of the latter evidently bitten by animals—tells us that the sinking of the land occurred at no distant period in the history of our country. The remains of land animals, too, as well as of the forests they inhabited, are discovered in the bed of the German Ocean. In his "Physical Geography of Norfolk," Mr. Woodward tells us that in fifteen years the fishermen of the village of Happisburgh dragged up from their oyster beds as many as two thousand teeth of mammoths. Bones and tusks of mammoths have also been fished up from these watery depths. It takes us back to the time when the European mainland, instead of ending as it does to-day, with the coast of Norway and France, stretched far westward in one unbroken area, beyond the present coast of Ireland. These were the flourishing days in the forests of oak, chestnut, and alder, and yew, which are now submerged in the German Ocean and the English Channel.

MY HOME.

Through winter's cold and summer's heat,
In Zion's borders let me stay;
I have no wish to turn my feet
And travel in some other way.

'Tis not the loveliest spot on earth;
'Tis not the smoothest place to dwell;
But 'tis the people of my choice,
And in my heart I love them well.

I've often heard the question asked:
'Mong all the lands below the sky,
Why did the Lord select that spot?
I can but say, I know not why.

A gathering place He has prepared;
'Twas not our choice where it should be,
Though rolling hills, and cold, and heat,
It is a sacred place to me.

In peace and quietude I live,
Away from City's noisy throng;
And every Sabbath day of rest,
Can meet with Saints in praise and song.

No milder clime, nor clearer sky,
With pleasures rife hath charms for me,
I gladly bid them all, Good-by,
Content upon this land to be.

I know perfection is not here,
'Tis not to mortal lot assigned.
What folly then, or here, or there,
In search of that we can not find.

I would not change my humble cot,
To share the palace of a king;
E'en plenty, and a life of ease,
Away from Saints no joy can bring.

Then ask me not to go away
From this, my inland prairie home;
In Zion's borders let me stay,
Till God shall give a better home.

LAMONI, 1882.

The Book of Mormon.

"AND hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation. That they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him and find him, though he be not far from every one of us."—Acts 17: 26, 27.

In Genesis 9: 19, it is said of Noah's posterity, "Of them was the whole earth overspread." And in the eleventh chapter and ninth verse, after the failure of the Tower scheme, "and from thence did the Lord scatter them abroad upon all the face of the earth.

The claim is made by the people called Latter Day Saints, sometimes nicknamed "Mormons," that Paul uttered a literal truth when he declared God's sovereign care for, and direction of the creature whom he had created, and had appointed for the bounds of the habitations of men no less a circumference than "on all the face of the earth."

The wisdom and traditions of men, commonly give but little significance to these statements of the two notable men, Moses and Paul; and it is only in the light which the pages of the Book of Mormon unfold, that the importance and interest to the sons and daughters of men in our day, of these, with other collateral Bible statements, are revealed. That America, long prior to the landing of Columbus on its shores, was the abode of a wide spread civilization; that its ruins, sculpture, traces of records, &c., reveal man in the far advanced stages of physical development, moral, intellectual and spiritual growth, with an age, habit, tradition and religion, &c., corresponding to the formative, time, and subsequent growth of the ancient Egyptian government, are facts which people who are informed in regard to archeological discovery in North and South America, will not dispute. These ruins that speak of the first known dwellers of this great country, are stated in the volume known as the Book of Mormon, to be the monuments of a race springing from Noah's descendants; first of whom mention is made in the chronology of his forefathers, was Jared, the son of Orihah; also his brother, a man of faith, according to the record, like that of Abraham. Yet three hundred and fifty years before God made his covenant with Abram, did he say to this man, surrounded by Babel's wickedness, in answer to his righteousness and prayers: "Go to, and gather together thy flocks, both male and female of every kind, and thy families, and also Jared thy brother and his family; and also thy friends and their families. And when thou hast done this, thou shalt go at the head of them down into the valley which is northward, and there will I meet thee, and I will go before thee into a land which is choice above all the lands of the earth; and there will I bless thee and thy seed, and raise up unto me of thy seed and of the seed of thy brother, and they which shall go with thee, a great nation," &c. Pages three hundred and fifty to three hundred and fifty-six inclusive, of Book of Mormon, give in epitome the account of the journeys, of these families through the wilderness to the sea, their miraculous journey across the waters to the land now acknowledged by all the world to-day, and is as then stated to be, "a land which is choice above all the lands of the earth," the land of North and South America,—the land which God had appointed before to be "the bounds of their habitations" with those of their posterity. The history of the growth of this people, their prosperity, the luxury and wickedness following, the warning of their prophets whom God sent, that "their bones should become as heaps upon the earth"—all literally fulfilled; the terrible wars that ensued, to their final utter extinction, save Ether the prophet and maker of the record; the numerous mounds of bones, all piled together as the record states, all over this country, add their testimony to its truth. Also the record of animals whose species are now extinct, but whose recently discovered remains testify to the truth of this ancient record, called by Ether, Curoeloms and Cumoms, with elephants, &c. Diodorus Siculus, who lived nearly sixteen hundred years before Columbus landed on America's shores, wrote that, "Over against Africa lies a very great Island in the vast ocean many days' sail from Libya (northern Africa) westward; the soil there is very fruitful, is watered by several navigable streams, and beautiful with many gardens of pleasure planted with divers sorts of trees and an abundance of orchards. The towns are adorned with stately buildings and banqueting houses pleasantly situated in their gardens and orchards."

That the ancient Phoenicians found this land by the accident of one of their ships of commerce "being driven before a storm many days out of their course." No other land but the land of America could answer this description. But were these the only people inhabiting this vast country prior to its finding by Columbus? Mr. Baldwin and other explorers of America's ancient ruins, say emphatically, No! That ruins built upon ruins with difference of language in the inscriptions, style in architecture of the succeeding race; &c., &c., with numerous evidences that can not here be cited, prove clearly the occupation of this land by two distinct peoples—and separated by long periods of time, concerning which the wisdom of men have failed to reveal their origin and history. Has God said any thing of, or revealed in the word spoken by his prophets and servants on the eastern continent in the record, known as the Holy Bible, anything by which the origin of this ancient nation, or nations, may be known?

Latter Day Saints so believe. It is recorded in Genesis 48 chap., 13 to 26 verses inclusive, that Jacob, through faith called Israel, the grandson of faithful Abram, blessed his faithful and beloved son, Joseph's children, Ephraim and Manasseh, saying, "Let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth;" and said of Ephraim, "and his seed shall become a multitude of nations." This prophecy could not have had its fulfillment in Palestine's land, the land God had before covenanted to Abram and Isaac, for Jacob in the ensuing chapter, (Gen. 49) tells us, in the dying blessings placed upon his sons, speaking of the favored Joseph says, "The blessing of thy father (Jacob then speaking) have prevailed above (greater) the blessings of my progenitors," Abram and Isaac. What was their blessing? The land of Palestine. How far? "Unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills," That "his branches" (posterity) should "run over the wall" (or bounds) 22d verse. The land of America where Ephraim's posterity have indeed "become a multitude of nations" of whom our Indian tribes are a remnant, is the land that Jacob in vision saw and was promised to the seed of faithful Joseph. What kind of a land was Joseph's seed to inherit? The 25th verse answers, "And by the Almighty who shall bless thee with the blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under." And Moses, the servant of God, in Deut. 33: 13-17, in similar language repeats and confirms the great blessings upon the posterity of Israel's favored son. "And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath, and for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof." The great inherent wealth of the soil of America, the fishes in its waters, its great adaptability to all the known fruits of earth almost, its wondrous mineral wealth, what other land save that of America fulfills these promises made of God through his servants in the past.

Concerning Israel's restoration in the latter times the Lord said by the prophet Jeremiah: "Behold, I will bring them from the north country and from the coasts of the earth." Why? "For I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first born,"—not literally, but as to the blessing as before promised through Jacob. Hosea says, 7: 1, "When I would have healed Israel, the iniquity of Ephraim was discovered." And in 8, "Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be to him a sin." Ephraim with the rest of Israel at this time had become corrupted in wickedness, and ready for the vengeance of the sword and the captivity, of which they had long been warned, especially by the faithful Isaiah and Jeremiah. Yet the promises of God to Ephraim and his posterity, as with Abram, must stand; and as Jesus said, "all be fulfilled. Hence a remnant must be preserved, even if by miraculous power. Hence the consistent and reasonable claim made in the Book of Mormon, that as Abram was warned, and Lot, to flee; so this holy man Lehi, likewise, in order to preserve the seed and promises made to his progenitors, was warned to flee out of the land of Jerusalem in the days of Zedekiah, king of Judah, before the destruction of that great city, and the ensuing captivity of God's people took place. Long ere this, Isaiah, seeing their wickedness, threatened the land of Moab, and indicated the beginning of the fulfillment of Jacob and Moses' prophecies concerning Joseph's posterity.

"For the fields of Hishbon languish and the vine of Libnah the bands of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof." What were they, "for I am a father to Israel and Ephraim is my first born," "they are come even unto Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness, her branches are stretched out, they are gone over the sea" (ocean).—Isaiah 15: 8.

Remember, Jacob said, Joseph was to be a fruitful bough, or branch of the house of Israel, that his branches, or posterity, should run over the wall, or bounds, assigned by Joshua to the children of Israel, and should become according to Moses' prediction, "the ten thousands of Ephraim and the thousands of Manasseh." Now, having followed Ephraim into the land promised unto Joseph, his father, as they multiplied and grew; is it reasonable to suppose that God would not continue to guide and reveal himself unto them. The prophet Hosea, in 8: 12, speaking prophetically, says God had "written to Ephraim the great things of his law, but they were counted as a strange thing." God's pure testimony given to his people was indeed counted strange by his people, and his prophets sent to them were persecuted and slain; and although "Ephraim was planted in a pleasant place," 9: 13, yet God did finally cast them away and they have become "wanderers among the nations."—17th verse.

David says, psalm 85, truth was to "spring out of the earth." The prophet Ezekiel was commanded to take one stick (roll or book) for the house of Israel belonging to Judah's tribe, the record called the Bible; and another called the stick, or book, of Ephraim for Ephraim, companion in Israel, the record called the Book of Mormon; both were to become one in God's hand. And at this time in the world's history was God to begin the gathering of his long dispersed, afflicted and scattered people, "And say unto them, thus saith the Lord God, behold I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side and bring them into their own land."—Ezek. 37: 21. "And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and will save the house of Joseph."—Zech. 10: 6, 10. And "they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and they shall remember me in far countries." In this far country that the prophet Zechariah was speaking of, the land of America, God was to distress a people for wickedness, with a distress equal to, or as Ariel, or the city where David dwelt, Jerusalem. See Isaiah 29th chapter. Mounds and forts were to be raised against this people, their ruins are with us to day, confirming this word. They were visited of the Lord with earthquakes, and great noise; with storm and tempest and flame of devouring fire. See Book of Mormon, pages 305, 306, 333; Nephi 4; 2 Nephi 1. The speech or writings of this people were to "speak low," or "whisper out of the dust." The vision of all these were to become unto all the multitude of nations that had fought against Ariel, as the words of a book that is sealed.

Over fifty years ago Joseph Smith, an unlearned boy, claimed to have found through direction of a heavenly messenger a sealed book, sealed with rings, in a stone box in the earth. This book was composed of thin leaves or plates, of gold in appearance, and covered with beautiful engraving, but not translatable by the best linguists of the day. That he translated through means of the Urim and Thummim, found with the plates, some of the words of this book and gave them to one Martin Harris, a farmer living near the place of this alleged finding, Palmyra, N. Y.; which man, (in the original, but men in our translation), "deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee."—Isa. 29: 11. "And he saith, I can not for it is sealed." This man, Martin Harris, told the writer all the minutia of the fulfillment of this remarkable prophecy. That he did take a copy of some of the words of the sealed book found by Joseph, and did deliver them to one that was learned in ancient languages, Prof. Anthon, of New York City, for the purpose of discovering what it was; that when told it was copied from the plates, replied that he could not determine or translate what was written on that paper; that if he had the plates he might decipher the inscriptions. Harris told him that the book was sealed. He answered, "I can not read a sealed book." John Whitmer showed the writer the copy of these words of the book, and they had the appearance of symmetry and the antiquity claimed for them. "And the book (not the words of the book) is delivered to one that is not learned, (Joseph Smith), saying, Read this, I pray thee," 12th verse. Then follows in 13th and 14th verses, a perfect description of the religious state of society as it exists to-day; and of the futile attempts of the wisdom of the wise men of the world and priests with their worldly learning to account for or to destroy this "marvelous work and a wonder," called by the world "Mormonism." And about this time, the Lord says, 17th verse, "Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field?" Look at the recovery of the long withheld fruitfulness of the land of Palestine, through the blessing of the ancient former and latter rains, sent of God to fulfill this word; and the commencement of its building up again and repairing of the waste places, preparatory to the fulfilling of God's word, in the return of his long dispersed and scattered people, the Jews; and all this since the coming forth of this sealed book, as Isaiah predicted. "In that day," he continues in 18th verse, "shall the deaf hear the words of the book," "The meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord;" 24th verse. They that erred in spirit shall come to an understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine." How literally has all this been fulfilled in the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the fullness of Christ's gospel as anciently preached by Jesus and his apostles. Thousands of honest men and women, erring because of the creeds and inconsistencies of the doctrines and commandments of men, having learned the doctrine of Christ, and knowing of its truth by doing God's will as laid down in the Holy Scriptures, rejoice in and gladly testify to the truth of this great latter day work. Although despised by the world for the truth of the word of God and the testimony of Jesus, and belonging to "a sect everywhere spoken against," yet have "they increased their joy in the Lord" and ceased to be "blown about by every wind of doctrine," that men have invented and substituted for the doctrine of Christ.

Jesus said, "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established." Eleven men, disinterested, and with testimony never impeached, testify to Joseph Smith's having and showing them these plates. Three others testify to an angel visitation, bringing the book and declaring with his own voice its divine origin; and yet it has been asked of the writer, why could not more people have seen these things? I can not tell, any more than I can why it was that after Jesus was slain and hung on a tree by the pious Jews, that God did not raise him up and show him openly to all the people, but unto chosen witnesses before God," not men, among whom was the Peter who denied him, "and ate and drank with him after he rose from the dead." Acts 10 : 39, 41. It was, and is the writer's belief, that if the testimonies cited, with all the scripture and other evidences that to-day abound in proof of the divinity of the origin of the Book of Mormon will not convince honest and intelligent men and women, when they are all presented for their careful consideration, they would not be convinced if a thousand should testify, or "even though one should rise from the dead."

Again, ten thousand men and women, though ostracized and suffering many things because of the word of their testimony, declare their knowledge of the divinity of the Book of Mormon; and although, as in Israel's time, the burden of the word of the Lord is upon them, together with the sore persecutions that many yet living, with those who have gone to their rest, have endured in this generation, for the testimony of Jesus, and the truth of the gospel as Jesus and his servants taught it eighteen hundred years ago, yet as their testimony stand and to-day is reiterated and being evidenced by the spread of the truth in spite of the efforts of priests and sages, and the babble of the ignorant crowd, who seek for their justification in opposition of the great latter day work, to parade the iniquities of the apostate church in Utah, and so blind the eyes and prejudice the investigator against the claims of a sect opposing the popular systems of theology of the-day. These thousands do, as other thousands in the future will with the writer testify that indeed the Book of Mormon is

"A heavenly treasure, a book full of merit,
It speaks from the dust by the power of the Spirit;
A voice from the Savior, that Saints may rely on
And watch for the day, when he brings again Zion."

Revelation From God—A Natural Science.

THIS subject may appear, to some, as being very peculiar. Science has been considered by both Christians and anti-Christians as opposed to the Christian religion. Some have seen one side of the shield, and some the other; but neither looked far enough to see the perfect harmony existing between them. However, a new era is dawning. Truly scientific minds are beginning to revere God's word, as they see that it has been, and is in advance of their discoveries; while intelligent worshippers of God are seeing in the development of scientific facts renewed evidence that Christ's gospel is founded in truth. The writer has spent a few years in the ministry, and finds that he has the best success in planting impressions of gospel truth in the scientific mind, notwithstanding the almost universal idea that science and religion oppose each other. We may not be able to account for all scientific facts from a scriptural standpoint, nor for all gospel truths from a scientific standpoint; yet we are not justified in condemning either, for our inability to harmonize may be on account of our misunderstanding.

There are direct and indirect revelations from God. Every scientific fact discovered is an indirect revelation; because it reveals, to us, something of God's originating and ordaining power.

Not long since the writer was conversing with one who believed little or nothing in the efficacy of prayer. When I spoke of instances of prayer being answered, I was met with his personal experience, which was as follows: Though not a praying man he had impressions of sickness in his family, while seventy-five miles distant; which were so vivid that he hurried home, and found them just as he was impressed they were; though he left them well. Now, though this may be accounted for upon scientific principles, yet it was an indirect revelation from God, because he had ordained the principle through which this communication was conveyed. But why should he receive this information while many more devoted to God's service have been denied under similar circumstances? For just this reason, he had complied with the laws governing this particular case; while many who were more devoted to religious worship had not. His case was just this: He was one of those fortunate few who had married a wife whose mind was congenial with his own. Their spirits were in perfect rapport. Each was thoroughly imbued with the magnetism of the other. Their whole beings were blended in one. They twain were one flesh. So thoroughly were they magnetized with the spirit of each other, that when one was afflicted her mind turned instinctively to the other, and he, though seventy five miles distant, felt her depression of spirit, and its causes, and hurried to the relief of his loved ones. Though he may rightly account for this upon scientific principles, well might he thank, and adore God that these principles exist.

Prof. Fowler, in his work on "Sexual Science," gives several like instances, but let one suffice for this place. He says: "A devoted Jewish couple, converted to Methodism; she fell dangerously sick in Philadelphia, while he was on a circuit, preaching in Tennessee. Unwilling to alarm him, her letters did not mention her sickness, till her doctor announced, 'Madame, you must soon die; if you have any message for your husband, dictate it now.' 'O doctor!' she exclaimed, 'I can not die till I see my husband!' The day, hour, and minute of this exclamation were noted and recorded. No letter could reach him seasonably; but her spirit did, and so impressed him, that half frenzied, he exclaimed at the same hour and minute to a brother preacher away down in Tennessee, 'I must start for home by the next train, for I 'feel it in my bones' that my wife is sick and nigh unto death.' 'What! Break all your appointments on account of a whim?' He rushed to her side, while she clung tenaciously to life by mere will-power till he arrived and applied those restoratives which saved her life."

Do not be startled when I say that this Methodist minister received an indirect revelation from God. He had selected such a companion as nature required, consequently was entitled to this revelation and reaped its benefits. Laugh at this principle, ye who have not lived upon this high plane of love, but ye who have, can recall many similar personal experiences.

But this reveals nothing which surpasses the knowledge of the one with whom we commune. So the unseen world is still an unlocked mystery. We know nothing of God farther than what we have been able to delve out of nature. Consequently Christ says, "If a man love father, mother, wife, or children more than me he is not worthy of me." If this is the highest love they can enjoy it in proportion to its intensity, but are not worthy of Christ because their love is not developed in that direction. They can enjoy indirect, but not direct revelation from God.

But can direct revelation be accounted for upon scientific principles? Yes, the same principle governs this which governs the other. If two persons can assimilate, and thus become so magnetized and imbued with each other's spirit as to communicate with each other when absent, then upon the same principle, if we love God, and develop in us his characteristics as revealed in his word, thus becoming more godlike, we can be imbued with his Spirit, and hold communion with him. The more our love—our thoughts are drawn out upon him and his works, and the nearer we become like him, the deeper our communion will be. In our love for humanity our information can not be beyond the intelligence of the one with whom we commune. By exercising this principle on a higher, grander scale, we hold converse with an all-wise all-mighty being, who, knowing all things, can communicate to us through this natural principle. By the cultivation of this principle, prophets were enabled to gaze into eternity. And why not? For they communed with one who is eternal. How nicely this principle harmonizes with the declaration, "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him."—Jesus. If it is true that through the powerful influence of love absent companions can communicate, then the doctrine taught in the above quotation is true. He that accepts one must accept the other, for the same principle is involved. To such then my proposition, "Revelation from God a natural sense," is proven. Those who have not lived upon this high plane of earthly love spoken of, will cry "Imagination," but your cry will be nonsense to him who traveled seventy-five miles to be with afflicted loved ones; and to him who left his work in Tennessee and flew to Philadelphia to see a dying wife. Likewise those who have not cultivated this higher, grander, spiritual, heavenly love, will cry "Imagination," when one claims to have held communion with God. But your cry, too, is nonsense to him who has felt that divine and holy spirit by which he has held such communion. Those absent husbands did not literally see their afflicted ones; no messenger came with the sad tidings; yet they knew, and can never be made to believe that they did not know the situation. Likewise, the writer has not seen God; no angelic messenger has appeared unto him; and yet he knows and always will know that he has communed with God. They can not explain (satisfactorily to others) just how they know; nor can I. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but can not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit."—Jesus. It was upon this principle that Christ became the mediator between God and man. So wide was the breach between them, and so low had man fallen that he was incapable of drawing himself into a state of acceptance with God. Christ took upon himself the nature of man, at the same time retaining a sinless, guileless spirit, by which he was able to draw himself into direct communication with the Father; thus establishing a line of communication between heaven and earth. He says: "Henceforth I call you not servants, for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you."—John 15:15. Christ possessed a power which no other ever could; that of standing in the breach, and handing down to us those principles which purify, ennoble, and prepare us for happiness. However, some men possess this power in a greater measure than others, and consequently have been chosen as mouthpieces of God, through whom his word is communicated to others. Thus establishing a line of communication from Father to Son, thence to man, and from man to man, until all are permeated by this power; which draws them up to higher, grander conceptions, until they are brought back into the presence of God,—washed white in the blood of him who gave his life to heal the breach, and make the line of communication and exaltation complete. It naturally follows then, that if revelation ceases it is because the line of communication is broken by man failing to exercise the principle of love towards God. Consequently we are justified in teaching that so long as we continue in the love of God he will manifest himself to us.

Right here we see wherein prayer becomes efficacious. We hear the remark often: "God knows what we need whether we ask or not." Certainly he does, but unless our minds, our hearts, our love, our whole beings, are drawn out towards him, we are not living up to the principle through which he has ordained that communication should come.

Here let me say a word in defense of the prophet of this dispensation. Some who, by the force of evidence have been convinced that the doctrine is true, still have an antipathy for the instrument God used in bringing it forth. Say they: "No credit is due him, if he had not done the work some one else would. This is granted, but while it is a fact that God's work would have gone on had he refused; yet he was the man among all men whom God chose to do the work; doubtless because he possessed that loving nature, through which he could revere, adore, and love God to such an extent as to draw himself into communion with him through the Son. If God could see merit enough in him to so honor him, I can afford to recognize that merit. If God had confidence enough in him to entrust him with his oracles, I can afford to believe that he proved true to that trust. Praying that the Saints of God may advance in all that is pure and good,

I am respectfully,

OPTIMIST.

The Cure For Gossip.

WHAT is the cure for gossip? Simply, culture. There is a great deal of gossip that has no malignity in it. Good-natured people talk about their neighbors because, and not only because, they have nothing else to talk about. As we write, there comes to us the picture of a family of young ladies. We have seen them at home, we have caught glimpses of them going from a book store or a library, with a fresh volume in their hands. When we meet them, they are full of what they have seen and read. They are brimming with questions. One topic of conversation is dropped only to give place to another, in which they are interested. We have left them, after a delightful hour, stimulated and refreshed; and during the whole hour not a neighbor's garment was soiled, not so much as a touch. They had something to talk about. They knew something and wanted to know more. They could listen as well as talk. To speak freely of a neighbor's doings and belongings would have seemed an impertinence to them, and, of course, an impropriety. They had no temptation to gossip, because the doings of their neighbors formed a subject very much less interesting than those which grew out of their knowledge and culture.

And this tells the whole story. The confirmed gossip is always either malicious or ignorant. The one variety needs a change of pasture. Gossip is always a personal confession either of malice or imbecility, and the young should not only shun it, but by the most thorough culture relieve themselves from all temptation to indulge in it. It is a low, frivolous, and, too often, a dirty business. There are country neighborhoods in which it rages like a pest. Churches are split in pieces by it. Neighbors are made enemies by it for life. In many persons it degenerates into a chronic disease, which is practically incurable. Let the young cure it while they may.—Dr. J. G. Holland.

Texas Central District.

To the Saints of Texas Central District. Greeting: "May peace and the communion of the Holy Spirit be and abide with you.

As the inclemency of the weather prevented many of you from attending at the last quarterly conference, and as duty calls me elsewhere, so I shall not be permitted to meet you again soon, if ever, I thought to address you a few lines through the Herald by way of advice and encouragement.

Since the organization of the district we have become better acquainted with each other and better acquainted with the needs of the work; and now it becomes our duty to look after those needs. It is not necessary to remind those present at the organization that God sanctioned and blessed the same. We all felt assured of the fact and our hopes for the future were bright and sanguine. We have since prospered in proportion to our faithfulness. If we have not advanced as fast as we ought, we will find the solution of the difficulty in our own unfaithfulness. Then let every individual member strive to live a little nearer to duty and privilege, and the effect will bring entire satisfaction.

At our last conference your district president, Bro. H. L. Thompson resigned, feeling that age and infirmities would prevent his fulfilling the duties of his calling, and Bro. Elias Land was chosen to succeed him. Bro. Land is both competent and willing, and if he can be sustained in the field, will accomplish much good for the cause; but like many others, he is poor in this world's goods, and has a family to support. So you will now have an opportunity to test your love for the work by sacrificing something for it, and sustaining the family of Bro. Land, and himself, while he labors continually for the Master, as there is great need of his doing. Do not say, "There is no use, they will not do it;" but say, "There shall be no failure on my account, I will do as much as possible to further the measure." I feel confident that if you respond to the necessity of the work, God will bless you in temporal and spiritual things, your hearts will be made glad at the progress of the work, and in eternity you shall know you have been instrumental in enlightening and saving souls. What a glorious thought, how much can we sacrifice for the assurance! Do not wait to see what others are going to do, but each one send, and SEND NOW what they can sacrifice for the cause, and then continue to remit until not only Bro. Land, but others may be able to take the field, and push on the work until the gospel is promulgated in every neighborhood throughout the vast extent of Texas Central District, and all the honest in heart shall hear the glad sound, and hundreds of them will obey, and we will be blessed in blessing others. This is your portion of the great latter day work. Can you afford to leave it undone and meet the consequences? What will the consequences be? Your donations can be sent directly to Bro. Elias Land, Thornton, Limestone county, Texas, or to Bro. George W. Balleu, (district treasurer), Oenaville, Bell county, Texas. Each of them will keep a strict account of all moneys received and disbursed, and will be able to report at each conference. Do not wait to do some "big thing," but do as you are able.

Live according to the tenets of your religion at home and abroad, in your families as well as at church. Be honest and upright in your dealings with men. Make your word as good as your bond. Scorn to associate with the vile, the seducer, debauchee, and rumseller. While you prize the good will of men, never seek it at the expense of principle or duty. Be true to your convictions, and worthy men will respect you, and God will bless you. Let those holding the priesthood faithfully discharge their duties in meekness and sobriety; not so much with a view of reporting labor at Conference, but with a view of reporting at the tribunal of the Great Judge, and if excuses for non-performance of labor are to be rendered, let them be such as will be acceptable there. Teach and rule, not with harshness, but in love, sympathy and kindness. Let no spirit of aggrandizement, or aspiration for power or position, take possession of your minds, but trust in One who is able to exalt to the uttermost, and your labors will be crowned with success. Strive only to excel in excellency, meekness, humility, faith and patience, and may the very God of heaven bless you with all that is requisite to your present and eternal good.

Finally, brethren, farewell; your kindness will be gratefully remembered, and if we meet no more during our pilgrimage, may we meet beyond, with little to regret, and much to rejoice over!

HEMAN C. SMITH,
President of Southwestern Mission.

In Defense.

President Joseph Smith:—A word to Mr. E. C. Brown, in Herald of January 1st, 1882, if you please. Among the Gentiles if a man is assailed or censured through a public journal, especially if he is an old subscriber, he is generally allowed the right of self defense. Though not a follower, or believer in the Reorganization, I feel that I have a right to be heard, even though I be but one of a handful, of very much despised people.

1st. I take our friend E. C. Brown to be a very poor critic of what constitutes a true, or a false prophet. Had I taken his method of judging prophets while studying and believing Mormonism, I should never have been baptized into our present faith. Aye, had I believed in a tithing of the stories told me in regard to "destroying angels," "robbing the Gentiles," "spiritual wifery," etc., etc., I should, like our friend E. C. Brown, have "turned away disgusted," feeling very bad, like him, for leaving behind me so many simple-minded, (?) but honest people. Supposing Mr. Strang did actually take a young woman with him as he was honest and frank enough to tell so many that he did, in other costume than befitted her sex? What then? Are we to set ourselves up as a set of judges and without further ado conclude that, even though Mr. Strang were God's anointed, a prophet in deed and in truth, that that act in and of itself cut him off from the prophetic office and gifts, and made him at once an object of scorn and contempt from all men? Did it ever occur to you, friend Brown, that Joseph Smith, Moses, Samuel, David, Jonah, Elijah, Abraham, Jacob, aye, and a hundred other prophets so judged by your rule, would, long before they died, have been as destitute of the prophetic gifts, as the Pope of Rome? Yet the New Testament, and Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, all show us that all these still hold their prophetic, apostolic, and patriarchal priesthoods, powers, glories and honors, and are not only messengers of light and salvation, but are spoken of as "All the holy prophets since the world began," by the Lord Jesus and many other prophets. So much for Mr. Strang's ceasing to be a prophet or a member of Christ's Church and kingdom, on account of the mere disgust of E. C. Brown and that of other half converted Mormons. Though but one of a handful, I can not but think such men as our friend E. C. Brown have great need to repent, and cease to speak evil of the things he understands not, lest he perish in his gainsaying like Core, and his host.

But, Mr. Strang said, "If a man wants more than one curse let him get more than one wife;" so says E. C. Brown. Well, what of it? Does he suppose that the prophetic office does, or ought to transform a man from a mere finite mortal, or human being, to omniscience, the moment it is conferred upon him, or instantaneously? If so, what is the use of prophets having counselors, being under the necessity of fasting and praying many times, and inquiring of the Lord when there isn't enough revelation to suit the case? (Sec. 99, par. 10, Doctrine and Covenants). Why did not Moses know what to do with the Sabbath-breaker, and the blasphemer, until he had enquired of the Lord? Why was he wroth with Aaron for making a calf, as though Aaron had been the whole cause of the idolatry, and cooled down when he found out that all the people compelled him, at the risk of his life to do so? And we might ask a hundred similar questions in regard to Joseph Smith. As great a prophet as Elijah did not know but that he was the only man in all Israel that stood faithful to God till the Almighty told him there were yet seven thousand others who had not bowed to Baal. I am not, I hope, one of that class who will reject Joseph Smith as a prophet because he was a good wrestler, or could vault over a six barred gate; nor Mr. Strang because he said to a couple of young men, "That tree is going to fall across the road" when it fell the other way. Reason clearly and justly, and throw the same or even half the mantle of charity over Mr. Strang's faults, that you are constantly throwing around the prophet Joseph Smith, and I haven't the slightest doubt that he will stand as fair as ever Joseph, or Moses ever stood before God, in point of character, and veracity, as a prophet of God. I can not but think that when Micaiah said, O yes, "go up and prosper," &c., but when asked for the direct word of the Lord upon the subject, said a very different thing, was among the rest "written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the letter," should not put the same trust in the mere common-place, unguarded words of prophets, that is required to be put in the word of the Lord through them. My rule is, and I think it a very safe one for all, that where the mere word, argument, advice, or conversation of a prophet is not in harmony with, "or accompanied by 'a thus saith the Lord' as Joseph Smith wrote, and taught, we need not [and ought not] to consider it binding." (See Times and Seasons, page 102, vol. 1). The constantly dingdonging about what Joseph has said and what James has said, in mere private and public conversation, has produced many difficulties among honest, but simple-minded Mormons everywhere; and never till there is a proper distinction put between these things and the word of the Lord through the legally appointed prophets, will anything like a union among them be effected.

There were two Brighamite elders in this township last July, the eldest of whom said positively that he heard Joseph upon the stand at Nauvoo, appoint the "Twelve," a little before his martyrdom, to stand in his stead. Moreover they had some other rather strong positions for weak minded Mormons. "We only are baptizing for the dead." "We are carrying the gospel to the nations, and gathering out the Saints to a gathering place from among the wicked." "We only are building a temple, and carrying out the order of God as it was laid down by Joseph." "We hold the Priesthood as it was conferred by Joseph and it never has been taken from us," &c., &c. Yet this very man, on inquiry was only sixteen years of age at the time he says he heard Joseph say so and so, and allowing that Joseph did say something that might be construed into such a meaning, these two men are still in ignorance of any difference between Joseph's mere word and a thus saith the Lord, which most unquestionably was necessary to the legal appointment of any one to succeed him. And if the true church is determined by numbers, as friend Brown seems to think by his frowning down on "a handful of Strangite Mormons," as he calls them, why should I not join the Brighamites in preference to the Reorganization? Aye why not join the Catholics? When the Reorganization catches up with the Brighamites in point of numbers, how will it be determined which is the true church then? We can very easily conceive how if there was not a single Strangite remaining, their faith might be true, Mr. Strang a genuine prophet, and each and all the other claimants to that office merely false, and yet do no violence to Mormonism, but be in harmony with it.

Sincerely, I do not believe that prophets make a great many mistakes even in their common conversation; but they do sometimes; and the only danger there is in it is when men put the same stress upon them that we are to put in the word of God.

Sincerely,

WINGFIELD WATSON.

Years do not make sages; they only make old men, and foolish ones at that sometimes.

Eastern Iowa District.

An Epistle to the Elders and brethren of the Eastern Iowa District.—Having been unable to attend the session of our district conference, held at Clinton, Iowa, December 24th and 25th, 1881, I desire through the columns of the Herald to present to you the present condition of the work and its needs.

I would first say that I am pleased to learn, as I do from Bro. M. G. Maudsley, who presided at the conference, that sessions were characterized by a spirit of Christian love, by a desire for a more perfect organization, and a more united effort on the part of all for the success we desire.

Elders James Johnson, Sen., Jerome Ruby and M. G. Maudsley, have reported to me from the conference, and have expressed a desire and determination to prosecute their missions as faithfully and earnestly as the circumstances surrounding them will permit. From these brethren I learn that the general feeling among our people is good throughout the district; also, that there is an unusual amount of inquiry among our neighbors regarding our views and the claims of the Church. Just now much is being said in public prints respecting Mormonism; it is, therefore, a good time to press the position and claims of the Reorganization upon the minds of the people, and I indulged the hope that the Elders in the Eastern Iowa District will let no opportunity slip for showing the difference between truth and error.

In some parts of the district there is need of reform. These cases have been considered by the Elders in conference, and steps have been taken to right the wronged, strengthen the weak, and encourage those who may have grown weary under burdens that are grievous and tormenting! I hope that wherever Elders may go on such errands, they will be received as the servants of God, and be furnished such aid as may be necessary to a full and faithful discharge of their duty.

During the last conference quarter, brethren David Holmes and I. B. Larew have preached in the district, and they report having met with a kind reception wherever they have been. Bro. Larew is with us now; and, in connection with Bro. Ruby, has been preaching to good congregations during the evenings of the present week. Bro. C. C. Reynolds reported to the conference by letter. His private affairs do not admit of his going from home much; but he is desirous of doing all he can for the defense of the truth. Bro. James Johnson has been actively employed in preaching during the conference quarter last past, and again reports for continued service. He will give his attention to the interests of the work at Amber, Olin, Wyoming, and points on the main line of the railroad running north from Davenport; also, at Maquoketa and De Witt, on the branch of same road, and will aid Bro. Warren Turner at Clinton, Iowa. Bro. Johnson has the confidence of the brethren, and I pray that the Spirit of the Master may go with him as a comforter, at the same time confirming his testimony. Bro. M. G. Maudsley is requested to labor at Maquoketa, and along the line of the Iowa Midland Railroad, west to Amber, in Jones County. Bro. Jerome Ruby reports for duty until April 1st.

He has been preaching since the conference at Maquoketa, Baldwin, and here at my home. He has instructions from me to give his attention to the work at such places as his knowledge of the wants of the district may dictate. Bro. I. B. Larew will be associated with Bro. Ruby. Bro. Warren Turner, president of the Branch at Clinton, is faithfully performing his duty, and all goes well with the brethren there.

Our next conference will be held at Amber, Jones County, Iowa, March 25th and 26th, 1882, and I trust there will be a good attendance. A delegate to the Annual Conference will have to be chosen, and means provided for defraying such delegates expenses to and from Independence, Missouri.

I hope the Elders who are in the field may be met by all in a spirit of love and faith, and that their labors may be crowned with success.

My dear brethren and sisters, let us press forward in this glorious cause. The district is weak in numbers, let us see that we are not so in faith and effort. I pray that our Heavenly Father may give to all the blessing of His love, the guidance of His Spirit, and the fulfillment of their desires.

Your brother,

EDWARD LARKEY, Pres. Dist.

BUTTERNUTT GROVE, Iowa, January 18th, 1882.

The Restoration of the Gospel, and Kingdom of God.—No. 2.

THAT there can be no kingdom without a law, and proper authority to administer them, I have brought an abundance of proof. That the Church of Christ did not continue upon the earth, in its purity is quite certain; then some will perhaps begin to think that the gates of hell have prevailed against it. The question is an important one, and should be properly answered, for upon this hangs the whole superstructure. "Now therefore, ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the Saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."—Eph. 2:19, 20, 21. We will try and see if we can have the word of the Lord for this, for we will not trust in man. We turn to the Apostle Peter: "Of which salvation the prophet have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you; searching what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow, unto whom it was revealed that not only to them but unto us they did administer the things reported." 1 Peter 1:10-12. Here we learn that the foundation of the prophets is the spirit of revelation, the Spirit of Christ which was in them. Jesus said, it "shall be in you, and shall show you things to come."—John 16:13. Did it show the coming of the Lord to the prophet, and his sufferings beforehand? Peter says that it did. Paul says that the Saints are built upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, and this is the rock upon which Christ would build his church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it, (the church).

One more upon this point; last but not least. "Jesus asked his disciples, whom do men say that I, the Son of Man am? And they said, Some say that thou art John, some Elias, others Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say unto thee that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 6. The Father revealed it unto Peter by his holy Spirit; as Paul says that no man can say that Jesus is the Christ but by the Holy Ghost. 1 Cor. 12:3. And this is "the rock" the revelation of the Father; and that the gates of hell shall not prevail against it, the rock, the spirit of revelation. No language can make it "plainer." And this is the foundation of the Apostles and prophets upon which the Saints were to build, in every age of the world. Job says, "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth." Paul says, "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord but by the Holy Ghost." Job was but a man, but he was a man of God, and had the testimony of Jesus, which all the Saints of God had; which is the spirit of prophecy. Rev. 19:10. And by this spirit of prophecy God, or Christ is revealed in the flesh. The Christian world to-day deny this, and say that it is done away; hence they take from the book of prophecy and may have their names taken out of the Book of Life; for every spirit that confesses not that this Christ is come in the flesh is not of God. "And this is the spirit of anti Christ whereby we know the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error."

Now, having found that the revelations of the Father is the rock upon which Christ said he would build his church, and as there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning, the only way then that the kingdom spoken of by Daniel "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed. And the kingdom shall not be left to another people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."—Dan. 2:44. The Iron Kingdom was the fourth kingdom, which was strong as iron; which did bear rule over the whole earth. And therefore the kingdom that the God of heaven set up is the fifth kingdom, that shall stand forever. And this is after the time, times and half a time; twelve hundred and sixty years. And thus the church came out of the wilderness. "And the earth helped the woman; and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth." Rev. 12:15, 16. "Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness. Let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together. I the Lord have created it," says Isaiah 45:8. Here the earth opens and reveals something by which the flood that the serpent, or the dragon cast out of his mouth, is to become exposed and let the skies pour down righteousness. John says: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth; and to every nation, kindred and tongue and people, saying with a loud voice, fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come."

This angel came from God and brought good news, glad tidings. The gospel is again to be preached to all the nations of the earth. "Let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness and truth spring up together." This proves that there was no salvation upon the earth; at the time, times and half a time (that is in the kingdom of God). And then the skies pour down righteousness, the heavens that have been closed for centuries, once more open to commune with man upon the earth; and a ministering spirit is sent to reveal unto man the counsels of old. "For I beheld, and there was no man; even among them, and there was no counsellor, that, when I asked of them, could answer a word."—Isaiah 41:28. "Remember the former things of old; for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me. Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure: Calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel from a far country; yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will do it."—Isaiah 46:9-11. Paul says, "According to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself; that in the dispensation of the fulness of time, he might gather together in one all things in Christ." The Lord says by the mouth of the prophet Isaiah, "I have purposed it, I will also do it; I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass." Here then, are two witnesses that testify to the same. The Apostle Peter says, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts; knowing this first, that no prophecy if of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of men; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."—2 Peter 1:19-21. Hence the Lord is his own interpreter.

Now we read that the "Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets."—Amos 3:7. And as there were none while the church was in the wilderness, God will have to raise up one, a prophet; for the church can not exist without them; "mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other. Truth shall spring out of the earth and righteousness shall look down from heaven; yea the Lord shall give that which is good, and our land shall yield her increase. Righteousness shall go before him, and shall set us in the way of his steps. Ps. 85. Here we have truth springing out of the earth and righteousness looking down from heaven. What is truth? "Thy word, O Lord, is truth, sanctify them through thy truth."—John 17:17.

"Righteousness shall go before him." That is, before the Lord come; "His work is before him, and his reward is with him; and he shall set us in the way of his steps."

That the gospel is now again to be preached, and therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith, as it is written the just shall live by faith; and I have shown that the Lord would call a counsellor from a far country, a man that is to execute his counsel; to bring it to pass; one called of God as was Aaron, by revelation; for God has no other way of calling men. And as the gospel of the kingdom of God is once more restored, the standard is now lifted up, and men being called of God are ambassadors of Christ, and come instead of Christ, or in Christ's stead. And as the Spirit of Christ is to be with his faithful servants unto the end, the Spirit guides into truth, and thus declare the whole counsel of God, and thus set us in the ways of Christ's steps. He has left us an example that we should walk in his footsteps.

I said that God would lift up his hand to the Gentiles, and set up a standard to the peoples. An ambassador in Christ's stead answered the point in fine, for there is no other way than this, that God could lift up his hand, for "he that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me," and in this way God lifts up his hand to the Gentiles. Thus the church of Christ is established among the Gentiles first.

The last shall be first and the first the last. When Jesus came to his own, the Jews, but they received him not; and the kingdom was taken from them and given to a nation that brought forth the fruit thereof, meaning the Gentiles; thus they were the last. But in the dispensation of the fulness of time, the Gentiles are the first. For James says, "And then the Lord will return and take out of them a people for his name." "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek; and his rest shall be glorious."—Isaiah 11:10. The Gentiles have been seeking to this for fifty years, and their testimony is the same to-day as it was in days of old.

"Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the river of Ethiopia." This land of Ethiopia is Africa, and beyond the rivers would be westwardly; there is no other land that will answer the description but the land of South and North America; and as the prophet Isaiah says, "That God shall raise up one from the north."—Isaiah 41:25. This then is the land where the standard is to be lifted up at the eleventh hour.

"All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains." This is a mountainous country. "And when he blows a trumpet, hear ye."—Isaiah 18. "Go through the gates, prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the high way, gather out the stones, lift up a standard for the people. Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world. Say ye to the daughters of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him."—Isaiah 62:16. "For there shall be a day that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion, unto the Lord our God; for thus saith the Lord! Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations; publish ye, praise ye, and say, O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel."—Jeremiah 31:6, 7.

So you see, I must publish this, so that he that reads may run. America is to-day the greatest republic of the whole earth, with fifty million of people, and is to-day the chief of nations. "And hear the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion."

Here we must look for the next measure where the leaven, the word, is to be deposited. And that they are of the descendants of Ephraim, and are the watchmen upon Mount Zion, in the last days. And that we must look for the Zion of God, the city of the Great King. Read Psalm 48 and 50, 1, 5; Ps. 53, 6. In the next, "When he shall roar, then the children shall tremble from the west."—Hosea 11:10. The birthright was given unto the son of Joseph, the son of Israel. 1 Chron. 5:1, 2. See Gen. 48:14-19.

We will now see if we can ascertain the boundary of the land of Joseph, for if we can ascertain this, it will be no trouble to find the land upon which the watchmen of Ephraim shall cry, "Let us go up to Zion, to the Lord our God." "Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well, whose branches run over the wall." The wall is the sea, the ocean; the branches are Joseph's posterity. Their blessing is the blessing of the heaven above; the blessing of the deep; the blessing of the breast, and of the womb. "The blessing of thy father has prevailed above the blessing of my progenitors," unto the bound, no, but the "utmost bound of the everlasting hills." Abraham and Isaac, their blessing was the the land of Judah; but the blessing of Jacob had prevailed; Jacob had prevailed with God, when he wrestled with God, when his name was called Israel, "for as a prince hast thou power with God and with man, and hath prevailed."—Gen. 32:24-30. And as these blessings were conferred upon the sons of Joseph, and these blessings were great, the revelation from God, for that was the blessing of Jacob and of Abraham and Isaac.

And these are the fishers and hunters called of God, in the last days. See Jer. 16:16. And of Joseph he says, "Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dews, and for the deep that coucheth beneath, for the chief things of the ancient mountains and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth, and the fullness thereof; and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush. Let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren. His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns; with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth; and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim and they are the thousands of Manasseh."—Gen. 49:22, 26; Deut. 33:13, 17.

In the year 1830, April 6th, the Church was organized; the Book of Mormon was then published, and it was translated by the power of God. It was revealed to Joseph Smith by the angel Moroni. It contains the great things of God's love, but they were counted as a strange thing."—Hosea 8:12. See Hab. 2:2, 3.

It is the stick of Joseph; it was to be put with the stick of Judah, the Bible; the two contain the fulness of the gospel. Ezek. 37:16, 20; Isaiah 29; Zech. 2:3, 4. In the year 533, and the year 606, when the Pope of Rome, Gregory VII., was the head of the church, and the Empire was under her dominion, also. Divide the time between 533 and 606; and you will have just 569½; add 569½ to 1260, it is dividing of time, and you have the gospel restored, 1829½; and the Church again appears upon the earth; thanks be to God the Eternal Father, from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, with whom "there is no variableness, nor shadow of turning." Amen.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, February 15, 1882.

CHARLES W. Penrose, now of the Salt Lake Desert Evening News, but formerly of the Ogden Junction, has written a leader in his paper, the Utah Church organ, for January 24th, which vindicates the last reminder that we gave the Junction some months ago. We give this editorial for the benefit of our brethren who may have to meet and rebut aspersion of connection with Utah, Mr. Penrose, and his co-religionists, during the Anti-Mormon wave, just now prevailing over the country.

"ANTI-POLYGAMOUS MORMONS."

THE Cincinnati Times-Star has a leader under the above heading, in which its readers are informed that there are a number of "Mormons" outside of Utah who are "as bitterly opposed to polygamy and the polygamist Mormons, as the Gentiles are." Also that two delegates from that body have been appointed to visit the seat of government for the purpose of pressing national legislation against the Utah "Mormons."

That paper says:

"These gentlemen expect soon to be in Washington, and hope to be able to prove the fact that polygamy is not a part of Mormonism proper, and that the declaration that it is, is false. They are instructed to urge the necessary legislation to correct the monstrous crime practiced in Utah. They will especially advocate an amendment of the jury law, and will also ask that the statute of limitation (preventing investigation into and punishment for offenses committed prior to 1862) be wiped out, and that woman be held responsible for the act of polygamy as well as man."

The "non-polygamous," people here referred to are commonly known by the name of "Josephites." They pretend to be Latter Day Saints, but have no connection whatever with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and are not identified with it in doctrine, authority, spirit or communion. The majority of them are persons who have back-slidden or been excommunicated from this Church and are filled with contention, malice and hatred towards the organization which has cast them out. They are not content with holding to and advocating what they claim to be correct, but desire, like other sects antagonistic to the Church of Christ, to bring injury upon the people with whom they differ on doctrine and other religious questions.

They have never been interfered with by the Latter Day Saints. We accord to them and all other people the right, under the Constitution of our land and the teachings of our faith, to worship anything or nothing in any way they choose; to hold such tenets as seem right to them; to oppose our creeds and doings by all lawful methods; and to preach and extend their faith wherever they have rightful opportunities. But we have no fellowship for them nor for their intolerance and hatred, manifest in efforts to invoke force for the overthrow of a system which they have failed to injure by other means. We should not refer to them at all—as they amount to an almost unnoticeable faction—but for the manner in which they have been brought forward by our Cincinnati contemporary. That paper remarks on this subject:

"It is well known that polygamy was not one of the original articles of faith of the Mormon Church. It is said by those who know, that the Book of Mormon, upon which the Church was originally organized, declared in most emphatic terms that a man shall have but one wife, and that he shall have no concubines. There is a comparatively large number of Latter Day Saints who stand by the Book of Mormon, and declare that all Mormons who accept polygamy necessarily abrogate and reject that book and its teachings."

It is well known that there are a number of "articles of faith" held by the Latter Day Saints to-day, which were not embodied in the creed promulgated when the Church first organized. It is in its nature and spirit progressive. It is based on the principle of continued revelation. It is inspired by that spirit which is to "guide into all truth." Therefore "line upon line and precept upon precept" have been added to it from the day of its establishment till the present, and will continue to be as time and circumstances render necessary and consistent. The promise to the Church is that every truth formerly revealed shall be restored by the spirit of revelation, and that things hidden from the foundations of the world shall be made manifest in this great and final dispensation.

Celestial marriage was not originally taught to the Church. Neither were baptism for the dead; the law of tithing; the manner of building temples to the Most High; the powers and administrations of the Melchisedec and Aaronic priesthoods; the sealing and loosing powers of God's authority; and many other things which now form essential parts in the living, growing body of the Church, which, being in common with the source of all intelligence, will never cease to draw from the Eternal Fountain; and thus new features will be added and increased light will be obtained, in matters of science, government, social polity, etc., as well as of theology. And no people have the right to be called Latter Day Saints who do not believe in this doctrine of progression, for it is and was in the beginning one of the very foundation stones of the system, set up under the guidance of God the Father and Jesus Christ His Son, by the prophet and martyr, Joseph Smith.

The remark of the Times-Star about the Book of Mormon is amusing: "It is said by those who know, that the Book of Mormon declares that a man shall have but one wife," etc. Why does not the editor find out for himself what the book says on this subject, before writing about it? Several editors have undertaken to instruct the Latter-day Saints about the teachings of the Book of Mormon, without ever looking into it themselves. Is it not likely that we know quite as much about that record as they do?

For their benefit we will explain that the instructions in that Book concerning marriage were given to a people many hundreds of years ago, under conditions described in the Book. That they were designed for those people, and not for the Latter Day Saints. That connected with those teachings was given a plain declaration that the Lord would command His people when He wished them to act contrary to those particular commands in relation to marriage. And that the Latter Day Saints do not go to the Bible, the Book of Mormon, or any other ancient record containing the word of the Lord given to people centuries ago for rules of conduct, but to revelations given in our own age of the world, specially for the people whom they are designed to regulate.

If writers and preachers and lecturers on "Mormon" questions would only read up a little, instead of going off on a tangent on insufficient information and the rumors and say-so of ignorant or malicious informants, they would save themselves from uttering a great deal of nonsense, and from exposing their own utter lack of knowledge on the subject they assume to be wise about.

As for the impertinent and contentious persons who go about abusing the Church under the title of the "Reorganized," and pretending to be Latter Day Saints, their influence is merely that of bores, whom people tolerate while despising their presumption and book-agent style of intrusiveness, and what any of their number can do at Washington will not amount to the barking of a couple of diminutive canines.

We notified Mr. Penrose and all concerned with him years ago that we had personally a right to assail the Utah worshipers; a right from the exercise of which we should not desist. This right inheres to us as an individual by reason of being one of the sons of Joseph Smith, the putative founder of the Mormon Church, whose name and the doctrines of which Church have been cruelly disgraced and foully aspersed, by fastening upon said Church organized by said Joseph Smith and others, in 1830, the reproach and opprobrium of tenets, and practices under them, which said Charles W. Penrose, and his co-associate religionists now admit were not a part of the articles of the faith of said church at its organization, and in support of which, both as to origin and maintenance, "Latter Day Saints do not go to the Bible, the Book of Mormon, or any other ancient record containing the word of the Lord given to people centuries ago for rules of conduct."

What will Mr. Penrose have men to do with the "revelation given in our own age of the world, especially for "Latter Day Saints" which states that they shall "remember the Book of Mormon, and the former commandments, (the Bible), to do according to the things written therein."

We plead especially guilty to Mr. Penrose's charge "they are bores;" and we shall continue to "bore," until we have "bored" the hollow institution, which needs such "twisting and turning" full of holes, through which the half blind editor himself must see the fatuity of fighting against the progressive truth.

Not a man that has ever met one of Salt Lake's Mormon elders, whether that man be Jew, Gentile, or Reorganized Latter Day Saint, but what knows, and will testify that Abraham, Moses, Jacob, Solomon, David, the Patriarchs, and all that could be justly, or remotely charged with having been like themselves, have by these polygamists, been flung at them as direct and shining examples, of a rule of conduct." And Mr. Penrose knows that the victory was claimed for Elder Pratt against Parson Newman, in Pratt's appeal to the Bible. But when those persistent "bores," these Josephite "backsliders" slid straight to the front with books and the "later revelations" in their hands, and charged home the accusation, "Ye have brought shame and disgrace upon the name of Christ and his church; and have caused the "way of the Lord to be evil spoken of;" then these doughty warriors, including Mr. Penrose, take refuge in a denial of the books and their teaching as rules of conduct—infidels; those of every class whose evil acts the moral teaching of the books condemn, can do no more, nor worse than that.

We assure the Times-Star, and Mr. Penrose of the Evening News, that the Book of Mormon does emphatically declare just what the Times has been informed that it did—and we are of them who know.

We were baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by as good authority as has ever been in that church, and have an undoubted right to membership and standing therein. We believe in the "doctrine of progression;" but deny that going back to the practices of David and Solomon, of Bible fame; and King Noah, of Book of Mormon celebrity; which the "later revelations" referred to by Mr. Penrose, directly and correctly state to be "abominable" is progressive. That style of progression is entirely foreign to the "going on unto perfection" of the Apostle Paul; and positively antagonistic to the statement made in those same "revelations given in our own age," which declare in respect to the original doctrines of the Church, (of which number Mr. Penrose states celestial marriage was not one), "Whatsoever is more or less than these cometh of evil." And we feel quite sure that if the devil himself did not have a guiding and directing hand in that same celestial marriage business, as it developed in Utah, "some time after" the arrival of the Mormons in that valley, according to what Hiram B. Clawson, Brigham Young's son-in-law says of it, then he certainly had trustworthy agents for mischief of his especial selection in charge; and they did their work well.

When Mr. Penrose states that these "Josephites," "non-polygamous people," ("I thank thee, Jew, for that word"), "have never been interfered with by the Latter Day Saints," meaning the Utah Mormons; he should not forget that the difference between them and us, is one of principle, not one of personal right to believe and practice what the law will let them. That they, assuming to be the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, essay to teach and practice, and insist upon enforcing upon those who became identified with that church, a tenet and practice not provided for in the original charter of said church, divinely given; thus compelling hundreds to apostatize, or submit to be dominated by leaders whose practices they could not endorse, and whom they could neither revere, nor trust. When these offered remonstrance they were driven out of the fold by excommunication, and ostracised by the cry of apostate, apostate. But these men were not apostate to Christ; on them had fallen the spirit, offered for obedience to the gospel as originally taught; and while it would "guide them into all truth," it "reproved them of (the) sin and iniquity" and they refused to submit. In doing this they gave fair warning to these same men to whom they refused to submit, that they would not cease to war against that which had disgraced them, until the memory of the Church of Christ as originally instituted, should be cleansed from the dark and damning disgrace.

Many of these "non-polygamous people," including the two at Washington, are the sons of men and women who believed "in Mormonism as taught by Joseph and Hyrum;" but who did not, and would not accept the heresy that tainted the virtues of the people like a moral plague, that was brought in "privily." These sons, taught to believe the gospel of Christ, that Joseph Smith preached, and that the Bible, Book of Mormon and the "revelations given in our own age," contained the revelation of God's will, a "rule of conduct," have not been willing to sit idly down under the sweeping charge of apostasy, backsliding, excommunication, which these men of Utah have hurled at them. They have taken up the books, and with them the cudgels; and have preached among the Gentiles, Christ and him risen, the gospel the way of life; and among this Utah Pseudology, this celestially marrying people, the warning cry of Jeremiah, "Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest to your souls." "But they said, We will not walk therein;" we "do not go to the the Bible, the Book of Mormon," "for rules of conduct."

We have not now, nor have we ever asked or counseled Government to persecute the Utah Church; and have always decried unlawful attack upon them, or anybody else. But we have insisted from the first that the doctrine and practice which have grown up in Utah were not and could not be made lawfully parts and parcels of the faith of the Church of Jesus Christ; and have advised, counseled and asked that this distinction be made by the Government, and those who held and practiced those things should be treated as breakers of the law, in every case of violation; and we so insist now. We have persistently protested against being made party to the shame and obloquy unnecessarily heaped upon Mormonism by these Utah marrying men, and so have our co-workers; and it is quite possible that in so doing we have been to Mr. Penrose "impertinent and contentious," and have gone at him and the "polygamous people" whom he represents, in regular "book-agent" style—agents for the Books of the Law of the Lord; and Mr. Penrose and his people may just as well get ready for settling day. For whether those of our number who may be at Washington can do so much, or so little as the "barking of a couple of" small dogs, we remind Mr. Penrose, Editor, that two spies testified truthfully respecting the promised land, and entered there; the hiss of a goose saved Rome; Napoleon flourished while he respected and kept sacred his monogamic vow to Josephine, but his star of empire began to set when he disregarded "the wife of his youth;" and we shall try to keep up the din of battle, until Latter Day Israel shall cease to "deal treacherously against the wives of their youth."

THE Pittsburg, Commercial Gazette, for January 27th, contains the minutes of a meeting of the citizens of Allegheny and Pittsburg, held at the First Presbyterian Church, the object of which was the protest against polygamy, in accordance with a general uprising in many of the large and small cities and towns in the land. This meeting was presided over by Hon. Felix Brunot; and the interesting feature of the evening to us, was the presence of our brother, Hulme, of Allegheny, who by luck, or persistence, was listened to in remarks of some length, stating clearly the distinction that should be drawn between polygamous and monogamic Mormonism. It is not stated what he said, but he was heard and applauded. Good.

Thank you for the paper, brother.

Much matter of vital importance to the Church has again crowded out our News Summary.

THINGS AS THEY RUN.

THERE are queer doings abroad and at home. Herr Ilg, a presiding elder of the Mormon faith has a small flock near Nuremberg, Germany. Himself is a quiet, law abiding man, Protestant by birth and education, and using Protestant hymns in his meetings, and having about eighty persons in his flock. He was lately cited to appear before the authorities, and though stoutly maintaining that polygamy was not a dogma of his faith, and that he adhered to the marriage-law of Germany, he was told that the meetings he was holding must cease. He has applied to the Bavarian Government for recognition.

Bro. Henry C. Crump gets after the Editor of the Birmingham, England, Daily Mail, in the January 2d, number of that paper, in reply to an article entitled, "The Persistency of Mormonism." Bro. Crump draws the line sharply, thus:

"You say, sir, 'It is in violent contrast to the Ethics of Christianity.' If you mean polygamy and its concomitant evils we readily endorse your sentiment. But if you mean the pure doctrines taught by Joseph Smith—as other words in your article seem to imply—then we simply say you are mistaken.

"You also say, 'Possibly it would be wrong to say that it thrives, for we feel hopeful that the imposture has had its day.' Well, sir, if you still mean Brighamism we are glad to inform you, positively, that it does not thrive. It has had its day. But, if you mean the original Church of Latter Day Saints, we are glad to say that does thrive every day; we are baptizing into its folds all the time.

"You say, too, 'The death-blow of Mormonism will be given by public opinion.' Again, we endorse your view in reference to Utah, who shun public opinion. We court it, try to provoke it, because we are assured, if our fellows will use the reason God has endowed them with, we will be onward; but we say, if 'public opinion,' fairly and honorably expressed, can overthrow us, the sooner our house topples over the better.

"Now, sir, in conclusion, we wish to state that the true Latter Day Saints are ready at all times to do their share of lecturing against the Utah abominations; and to assist, heart and soul, in the uprooting of them.

"Please allow us to add that we have given numerous invitations to the Brighamite leaders to meet us in public or private; such appeals have been hitherto cunningly avoided; they still remain open to them."

THE Chicago Inter Ocean, in the search for news and in the interest of its readers, hunted up one of the late President Brigham Young's sons-in-law, visiting Chicago, and found him at the Palmer House. This particular son-in-law is Hiram B. Clawson, a man of considerable ability, and a prominent member and manager in Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution of Utah. We remember him well. We were schoolmates under Teacher Cole and James M. Monroe, the man whom Howard Egan is said to have killed on the plains, while leaving Utah. Mr. Monroe was uncle to Mr. Clawson, and many of the old classmates of our boyhood will remember both uncle and nephew.

After the Inter Ocean man had hunted Mr. Clawson down, he proceeded to interview him, with reportorial corkscrews; and the following extract will show what he got out of him that is interesting and valuable to the Saints of the Reorganization; for the insertion of which we must crave pardon of our readers, though why we should do so is not so clear. In answer to questions respecting Utah, her people and doc.

trines, Mr. Clawson stated, among other things, what follows in relation to the time when polygamy entered the Church:

"Mr. Colfax said in a sort of boasting way that they drove them (the Saints) out of the State of Illinois. I would have told them that page of their history would ever have a shadow over it. There were thousands of those driven out who laid their bones on the plains between their old homes and the valley of Salt Lake. Polygamy at that time was unknown among those of the Mormon faith. It was not, therefore, the practice of polygamy that caused them to be driven from Illinois in the most bitter season of the year. Mr. Colfax said that it was their intention to stop at some place on the Missouri. The truth is that they were forced to stop there, because it was almost impossible to pass through the State of Iowa in the Spring. They sacrificed their property in order to get away from persecution—persecution carried on against them simply because they were Latter Day Saints. If they were thieves and robbers then, they are thieves and robbers now, but they are not accused of being such now, and they were not accused of being such then. They were four months in going across the plains, and when they got to the end of their journey, they found nothing but a barren waste, and because they have made that valley into what it is now, it is not fair to say that they took possession of the finest valley in the United States, as was said last night."

"When was the doctrine of polygamy first promulgated among the Mormons?"

"The doctrine of polygamy was not promulgated until they got to Salt Lake; not, in fact, until some little time after they arrived there."

"To what extent is polygamy actually practiced among the Mormons?"

"I can not tell. I can only say that there are a great number who do not practice it. I think I can safely say that a majority of them do not practice it, nor do I think its practice is increasing, or that there is any tendency shown toward its increase. There is very little said about it. From what was said last night it was assumed that everybody could get as many wives as they liked. The truth is that it is a very difficult thing to get a wife at all, as those who wish to do so must first show that they are able to provide for them, and that they are men of good moral character. Every man that has more than one wife not only takes care of every wife, but of all their children, and is compelled to do so, and each wife is equally respected by the community."

It should be remembered that the ground assumed by us at a very early day of the Reorganization, was that polygamy originated after the Saints left Nauvoo; and it would seem as if this statement of Hiram B. Clawson, the favorite, and perhaps the oldest and first polygamic son-in-law of President Young, was getting very near to the throne. See how completely the evidences tally, Cannon says that it is not now, and never was an essential tenet of the Mormon church." Orson Pratt stated on August 29th, 1852, that he "introduced it for the first" time. Brigham Young said that "it was not taught until after the departure from Nauvoo;" and now H. B. Clawson, son-in-law, (multiplied), to Pres. Young states that "it was unknown among the Mormons at the time of their expulsion" from Illinois. Hon. Josiah Quincy says that there was no appearance of it at his visit to Nauvoo in April, 1844. Who will next testify. But, our ground, lest any one mistakes us again is, that whether polygamy was taught, believed and practiced at Nauvoo, and by Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith and others; or was not so taught, believed and practiced, it was illegitimate not in accord with the faith, and those who did so teach, believe and practice, were guilty of falsehood, wickedness and crime—and now, groan again ye polygamists and all its defenders.

ON TRIAL.

THERE are two letters in last issue, in each of which the difference of views on doctrines, which have, it is said, appeared in the HERALD from time to time, between the authorities of the Church; and which are by the writers of the letters deplored. One criticises the Editor for teachings on the Sacrament and on Sabbath keeping, as if ministering it on "Friday evening" were taught; whereas it was simply a statement that at one time the Plano Branch partook on that evening. The story is briefly told. The brother presiding at the time was an ardent believer that Saturday was the Seventh Day, the Sabbath of the Lord. He construed the history of Christ to indicate that the supper, the institution of the Sacrament was eaten on the Friday evening, and therefore it was fitting and proper for his disciples, even in our day, to meet on that evening and commemorate that solemn rite. After a time this brother resigned the presidency of the Branch and another was chosen. Not long after this, Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, senior, then presiding over the Northern Illinois District, heard that the Branch thus met on Friday night for the Sacrament, when he at once wrote to the presiding elder of said branch, requesting them to meet on the Lord's Day in common with the rest of their fellow Saints, which instruction they thereafter obeyed. But the brother presumes to say that the teaching of the Editor is at fault because that the books require the Church to meet on every Lord's Day, to partake of the Sacrament. Why did he not cite the statement made by the Editor that such was the custom of many branches, instead of the other part of the statement that the Plano Branch met but once a month? And why does he single that statement as an obnoxious teaching?

The plain fact in the matter is this: the law makes no specific statement as to how "often," but simply, "it is expedient that the Church meet together often "for that purpose; and when they so meet it should be on the Lord's Day;" but that they are to meet on every Lord's Day is a presumption only.

The other teaching complained of was in an answer to a question, sharply construed; which is the greater sinner, he that keeps a candy store and sells on Sunday, or he who keeps cows and sells milk? The criticism is that both were classed together; and both were offenders. Those who read the question and answer referred to are again cited to them; when it will be discovered that the Editor stated in connection with the subject that the character of each particular case must be determined by the circumstances surrounding it. A dairyman should milk his cows on all days alike, for that is a necessity, but the like necessity for him to peddle the milk from door to door does not exist as provisions could be made for keeping it over till Monday, and for a Sunday supply on Saturday. Nor is it a matter of necessity that churning must be done on Sunday because the rising of cream is a "continued manufacture," of butter material on that day.

We do not write this to condemn the dairy business; but when one man in business which seems to provide labor for the Lord's Day, presumes to find fault with his neighbor and brother, because he also is in a business that seems to provide labor for that day, it is certain to us that he should lay the stones in his hands down, and not cast them until he is "without sin." The language of our church articles on this point is found in the same section from which the brother quotes respecting the partaking of the Sacrament, and reads: "And on this day thou shalt do no other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart." And if so strict a construction is to be put upon this law, as our brother seems to think should be, that no assembling to partake of the Sacrament upon any other day than the Lord's Day would be lawful; then, upon a parity of reasoning, no other work of any kind should be done on that day except the preparing of the necessary food for that day alone. Our brother, however, would seem to set this clause aside to admit the keeping of a dairy; because the law of the land permitted certain occupations to be pursued, and "he who keepeth the law of God hath no need to break the law of the land." But this construction is evidently a strained one; because that this clause was evidently given to declare that God did not, and would not command his people to pursue any course of conduct that would make them transgressors of the law of the land. But it is no where intended that this clause should be used to sustain any practice, or business that was not in keeping with the Christian philosophy, because the law of the land permitted. As for instance, the law of the land in many places licenses the sale of intoxicating drinks, and in some places the keeping of houses for immoral purposes; but would our brother, or any other, have us to think that the law of God would permit Saints to pursue such avocations, because they would not be breaking the law of the land in so doing. Surely not.

Is it a very strange thing that men of thought and study, such as it is known the authorities of the Church are, should differ in opinion upon some points; when it is evident, from our brothers' letters that men who do not count themselves among the authorities differ from them? And is it curious, or to be deplored, that these thinking men of authority should express their differences of opinion; when thinking men, not in authority, do not hesitate to express their views? And would it not be exceedingly curious, if while these thinking men, not in authority, so unhesitatingly and freely express their opinions of difference, even criticising the authorities, that the men criticized should keep silent and not express their opinions—if they had any.

Again, is it anything which should break confidence that the HERALD should be open for the expression of differing views from the authorities of the Church; when it is apparently open for men not in authority to criticize them and the Editor, expressing differing views in such criticism? Especially when it is known that the Editor has steadily refused to become a censor of the press in connection with the HERALD, the organ of the people.

BRO. L. CONOVER says "the world is moving;" and this is what makes him say so. Rev. Dr. George, of Chicago, in his discourse on Sunday January 22d, thus disposed of a point in dispute. "Polygamy has changed the home into a harem, and God's temple of love into a brothel. There is no reason why it should be tolerated. It degrades men; it debases women; it makes children worse than orphans. The institution is strong and well organized, and like slavery it must be overthrown by the general government. * * * In the original text of Mormonism, according to Joseph Smith, polygamy was not allowed, but was the engrafting of the more depraved of later years."

The text from which the Rev. Doctor spoke is Matt. 19: 3-6.

BRETHREN William Patten, of Bonaparte, Iowa; Malmstrum of Omaha, Nebraska, George Wilson and Henry Jacobs of Keokuk, Iowa; have all been looking up the situation at Lamoni of late, with a view to settle. Brn. Henry Hart and J. Chapman, formerly of Sandwich, Illinois, and Stephen Wood, of Fisher's Grove, Iowa, have bought farms near to the town and are fixing to stay. Brn. L. Conover, W. H. Deam, and W. Crick, of Herald Office have bought places in town and will make homes. Bro. Valentine White, the one who built the first house in Lamoni, after its location, has sold, rebought just out of town and will build at once. Elder E. Banta, is preparing and will build just out of town as soon as weather permits.

Lots, called business, lots range in price from $50, to as much as any one fancies, say $150,—building lots 50x125 feet range from $50 to $200, according to location; half acre, acre and two acre lots just out of present plot from $50 to $100 per acre. Lots may be bought of the railroad company, H. B. Scott, Burlington, General Agent; or of David Dancer, agent for a number of the brethren who secured the location, by securing the right of way through the township, and some land.

There are about three hundred inhabitants; three dry goods, or variety stores; one lumber yard, dealers in hair, lime, plaster and flour, and farm machinery; one farm machinery agency; two hardware and grocery stores; one drug store; one physician, office and drug dispensary; two blacksmith shops, one a dealer in wagons, plows, nuts, bolts, &c.; one clock and watch, sewing machine and organ shop and agency; two millinery and dress making stores; one tailor; one meat market running, one vacant; two harness shops, one a dealer in boots and shoes; one shoe shop; two saloons, one open and running, one closed and vacant (thank God); one stock yard; three grain buying firms; one hotel; one wagon shop; one furniture store; one barber shop; one restaurant and eating house; one printing office, steam power, job press, books and stationery; one railroad, with necessary station, ticket office, and agent; one express agency; one livery and feed stable; one church house (small); one school house (small); three sets hay and produce scales; one wood yard; one notary public; one justice of the peace; one constable; (no lawyer, thank goodness); two well diggers; two masons and flue builders; two plasterers; two painters;—carpenters, no end to them; one brass band,—and, if there are any blessings that we have not got we are thankful for those we have; and shall devotedly pray and patiently wait for them. If any of the Saints abroad, in running the list over, have anything that we need and they will kindly ship them to us, by mail, or express, (charges paid, of course), we shall be glad—the following would suit us best, at present—an incorporated town, with trustees and ordinances; a town hall, (good size); a meeting house, or church, (large); a school house, (medium size, well ventilated), a system of side-walks and crossings; a good town well, (pump or buckets); a hook and ladder company, (well drilled, with ladders, buckets, ropes and a speaking trumpet); two parks, (with shade trees and fountains); a public library, (reading room attached);—Well, the list is too long—but send them along, including of course any number of good, upright, law abiding citizens.

THE Philadelphia (Pa.) Press and Public Ledger, New York Sun and Herald, reach us, all containing notices of the work of Brn. Z. H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley, at Washington; and favorable notices are in quite a large number of papers throughout the country. It is well enough for the Saints to know that the mission of these brethren to the National Capital, is to secure before Congress, in the event that legislation is had during, or as a result of the present agitation of the Utah problem, a recognition of the Reorganized Church as the proper and legal representative of the Faith—the Primitive, and the only Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints, and opposed to the evil doctrines and practices which have caused the "way of the Lord to be evil spoken of." We have long foreseen that the opportunity for such presentation would come; and prepared for it. We believe that the brethren sent will attend strictly to the business entrusted to them; which is not as alleged by the Utah people to "incite the Government to hostility against" them; but to secure the immunity of True Mormonism from complicity with Utah wrong doing and the punishment due therefor. As a people, we of the Reorganization have chafed too long under the ban of ostracism and social injustice, wrought by reason of a "departure from the faith," not to strike now when the opportunity offers.

BRO. J. W. CHATBURN, Harlan, Iowa, states that the sisters of the Church there are trying to raise the means to build a meeting house in Harlan; and that there are some of the brethren, (brothers), who do not approve of the sisters intermeddling in business after that style. No, of course not. What has the women to do with such business? It is too bad that these women sisters can not be satisfied with cooking the dinners and taking care of the children of the ("lords of creation,") men. There was Miriam, who wrote the song and led the singers in the triumphant jubilee at the passage of the sea; and Esther, who saved the race to which she belonged from the rage of Haman; and Jael, who drove the nail into the head of the General of the army opposing her friends; and Rahab, who saved the men from their enemies by letting them over the wall; and Mary, who watched with such wondrous care and solicitude the infancy of Jesus. But, after all this childish importunity against the supposed interference of woman in the affairs of men, what serious, sensible objection can be made to our sisters in the gospel bond doing what they can to make our work a success. If any work needs to be done, and the Elders and men of Israel are too fearful, indolent or dilatory and helpless to accomplish it, and the women of Israel can do it, they come directly under the protection of this clause of the law, "men of themselves should seek to bring to pass much righteousness, for the power is in them;" and wise men will not throw unnecessary obstacles in the way. Men are not women, but women are men, using the name in its genuine sense, (as, the race of man, means all of both sexes), and therefore women may of "themselves bring to pass much righteousness." Our sisters may of right help in every good work, and receive the praise and reward for their labor; and he is a crusty fellow who denies them the privilege to labor, and the pleasure of the reward. We say "Good Speed" to the good sisters of Harlan; may their work meet with success. We recommend them to write to Srs. E. Newberry, and Ruth Turner, of Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, and ask them about how the sisters of that place helped to build, furnish and fence the Chapel there.

ONE of the Chicago papers, the Herald, indicts that virtuous city, in the following brief but comprehensive manner:

"The city of Chicago is a strictly moral and virtuous place, so far as the law goes. Some few of the inhabitants have made such high attainments in virtue that they easily "slop over" upon outside and less virtuously developed communities. Yet public opinion in this city is in such a state that there are at the present time at least five evils active here, all of which can be killed any day when public opinion shall so change as to require their demise. These evils are so great and vital that it is scarce a question whether they do not hinder the progress of the kingdom of God more in one week than Utah polygamy does in one year. To specify:

"Public opinion in this city upholds gambling so decidedly that a jury will return a verdict of not guilty against gamblers, after five minutes' consultation, when the guilt and the law are equally decided and not even a show of defense is set up.

"Public opinion in this city is in such a state that an Alderman, in a forlorn hope of raising revenue absolutely indispensable to the general safety, proposes to tax lumber yards $1,000 a year each for license, and grog-shops $52.

"The law of this city requires saloons to be closed on Sundays; but public opinion is in a state so favorable to the gin-shop that the police and the Mayor dare not enforce the law.

"The better class of saloon-keepers would cheerfully agree to a high license, say of $1,000 a year, which would have the effect of closing perhaps half of the lowest, and would for very self-preservation devolve upon those paying the fee the duty of watching that they remain closed. But public opinion in this city is so decidedly in favor of a multiplicity of saloons, cheap whiskey and free murder, that no Alderman seems willing to submit an ordinance to institute this obviously necessary and convenient reform.

"The trade of the scarlet woman, with all its hideous concomitants of degradation and death, physical and moral, is a gross outrage upon decency as well as against the law. So of concert saloons. Yet public opinion in Chicago upholds them both so firmly that a most well-meaning Mayor dares not so much as lift a finger to abate either.

"Therefore the Herald would venture to suggest that it might not be devoid of merit for these Christian Workers, now that they have begun business, to bear in mind that right here at home, under their own eyes, is work awaiting them of more direct importance to their very selves and their neighbors than the work they are seeking to do. This with no desire to detract from the virtue of their intentions in the cause of purity as it is assailed in Utah, but to remind them that in their midst and all about them are things that need them every hour."

The Christian Workers referred to are the clergymen, politicians and men of all trades, now so vigorously hammering at the doors of Congress, shouting for the extirpation of Mormonism. These valiant men, according to the Herald, do battle against foes and evils afar, but ignore enemies to society closer by from whom resistance is certainly to be expected. Bloodless victories over passive foes; but no war where men fight back. "Let him that is without sin first cast a stone!"

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert, writes from Millview, Florida, January 18th, and sends a manuscript, written by him in defense of the Church, and setting the position occupied by us plainly before the people. It was written for the Post published at Paris, John R. Rlson, Editor, upon the promise that it would be inserted; but which was returned because the paper was "entirely taken up with other matters." The article is well written, and contains the statements from the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants.

Bro. H. N. Snively, of Keokuk, Iowa, has purchased a farm within the borders, just over the line, about three miles from Lamoni, and expects to remove and become a citizen dwelling within the sound of the Herald Office whistle.

Bro. D. R. Jones, writes January 21st from Sheridan, Nevada, that they are not often visited by any of the traveling ministry, by reason of being a little off the track of travel. The Saints will be heartily glad to receive an Elder and will bless his stay among them. We remember spending a happy week between Pleasant Valley and the approaches to Silver mountain, through the region where Bro. Jones lives, and more hospitable people, or better hearers of the word are not met with in many parts of the land.

Bro. W. W. Blair arrived at Lamoni, January 25th, from Salt Lake, hearty and well. It seems to have done him good to stand in the vanguard of the army of the Lord. He reports progress. Bro. R. J. Anthony, M. T. Short and Wm. Gibson, will keep the work moving until other arrangements are made.

Bro. A. N. Hoxie sends a Boston Herald, with an article commendatory of the Reorganized Church, and its position on Utah affairs. So also does Bro. T. J. Ayers send a clipping from a Cincinnati, Times-Star, the latter a sharp, pithy editorial, quoting from the book. Good, let the word fly abroad.

Bro. J. H. Lake was at Carlingford, Ontario, January 22d, snow bound. Bro. J. A. McIntosh had baptized four at Alliston, quite recently. Bro. Lake obtained the use of the columns of the Seaforth Sun, to answer some misrepresentations made by a writer signing himself "Yonker," which he did in good style.

Land for farms, in small and large lots, range in price from about $5, and $7, for raw land, to $15 to $25 for improved land; ranging as it is nearer, or farther away from town and market, and according to the quality. Lands are for sale and may be bought in almost any place from Lamoni, Iowa, to the Ozark Mountains in Missouri; and we advise Saints to see what they buy, before investing.

Bro. James Caffall, in Denver Republican of January 25th, gets off an excellent statement of facts and figures regarding the work, drawing the line between Utah and true Mormonism, quite sharply. The same paper as if by foreor-ordination gives the minutes of the Anti-Mormon meeting held lately at Chicago.

Sisters Laura and Flora Whiteaker write from North Freedom, Wisconsin, that they much enjoy the meetings of the Saints.

Bro. J. Caffall sends us a Denver Republican, for January 25th, Bro. John Eames a Cheyenne Sun, of the January 14th.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. C. Brown, Fonda, Iowa, writes:

Bro. Wedlock and myself went to Pilot Creek Branch on the 10th instant, and opened meetings; had good liberty and full houses; found the Saints alive in the work and gaining in knowledge very fast. Bro. Carlson is learning his duty fast, and rejoicing in the work. I am trying to sound the alarm.

Bro. C. J. Carlson, of Blooming Prairie, Pocahontas county, Iowa, offers the following for the consideration of the readers of the HERALD.

To the Saints in the Eastern States, who wish to come west, and are fearful they can not find steady employment where they can also get a small home, or farm. I intend employing from twenty to one hundred hands for the next year, to work in a stone quarry, on Blooming Prairie. It is the only quarry in this county, and the only one in one hundred miles of us, west or north. Stone masons and a blacksmith is also wanted. Land for farming can be had for ten dollars per acre, good school, &c.

Address C. J. Carlson, Blooming Prairie, Pocahontas county, Iowa.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, of Nebraska City, Nebraska, writing to us on January 26th, says:

We held services on Christmas Day, in our new quarters (the church building which we purchased lately) for the first time; we have succeeded most beautifully. Bro. Robert M. Elvin went in with me in making the purchase finally—we bought the ground and building for seven hundred and fifty dollars; paid the cash down,—so they saved the Branch from giving mortgage or anything of the kind. We sold to the Branch at the same price, in three payments $250 down, $250 in one year, and $250 in two years, at eight per cent interest on the last two payments, with a proviso that the Branch may make payments sooner than the time specified, if they choose so to do. To purchase the church we raised three hundred dollars cash, in about three weeks' time; we got the church and have got it pretty well furnished, except an organ. We had some repairs made on the house, and the whole thing cost us less than eight hundred dollars; and now we don't owe a single dollar on it except the two payments; and I feel assured that we will have no trouble in raising that. I think that our members have done right well considering that they are all poor. We intend to make some repairs next Summer in the way of fencing the ground, &c. We now lack some good, influential speaker that could spare us some of his time to help us on the good work. The health of the Saints here is generally good, but considerable sickness in the city.

FROM the Progress, published at Independence, Missouri, a copy of which Bro. F. C. Warnky has sent us, we copy the following editorial. It is a frank and candid statement, and will please the readers of the HERALD to know that even in Zion shall our God give his people favor, while He shall be praised in their good works. The Progress is a weekly paper, published by a company, Daniel Negley, Editor.

THE MORMON QUESTION.

The moral cowardice and procrastination of the two great political parties of this country and the turpitude of the various religious denominations touching the national crime of polygamy have allowed and practically sanctioned the delusion now universally practiced by the followers of Brigham Young in Utah. The followers of the Prophet Joseph Smith, have never endorsed or countenanced the polygamous feature that was inaugurated after the death of the prophet at Nauvoo, Illinois, in (1844).

Young claimed that the revelation sanctioning polygamy was placed in his charge at Nauvoo in July, 1843, which was kept under lock and key in his desk until 1852. Young simply produced a copy of the supposed manuscript, claiming that Emma, the wife of the Prophet Smith, had surreptitiously got possession of the original and burned it.

We thus see that the whole theory of polygamy is based on the mere assertion of Young, that the original revelation from the Lord through the Prophet Smith, was destroyed, and the first appearance of the dogma was published by Orson Pratt in 1852, in a paper called the Seer. The Book of Mormon, upon the subject of marriage, says: "Thus saith the Lord, there shall not any man among you have more than one wife, and concubines he shall have none. (See Jacob, 2d chapter of Book of Mormon.

We thus see that the Book of Mormon as revealed by Smith was given with an express prohibition of polygamy which has been accepted by the followers of the prophet down to the present day. The church, therefore, at Salt Lake are seceders from the original founded by Joseph Smith, and are ignored by his followers. For several years the headquarters of the original church has been at Plano, Kendall county, Illinois, where Joseph Smith, jr., son of the prophet has been recognized the Presiding Elder. Within the past two years they have moved to Lamoni, Iowa, where Smith resides and continues to be the recognized Presiding Elder of the original church. The church established in Independence, was organized under the leadership of Joseph Smith, junior, and now numbers 180 members, Joseph Luff, is now the acting Presiding Elder, having succeeded Elder F. C. Warnky a few months ago.

We do not propose in this article to advocate or condemn the claims of the organization in our city, but in justice to those here, we believe their position upon the question of polygamy should be better understood. The members of this church or organization are recognized as law-abiding and honorable citizens, and have the same rights guaranteed them under our constitution that is accorded to other religious denominations. Their condemnation of the polygamous feature of the church, as recognized by the seceders in Utah, are equally strong, as are those of the protestant churches of the various denominational names, hence, those who would couple them with the church at Salt Lake, are doing them great injustice.

From the little acquaintance we have with some of the leaders and representative men, we have become satisfied that they are in sympathy with every good citizen throughout the country to put out and blot from our fair name as a nation this foul blot, polygamy that has been a burning shame to our boasted higher civilization. We trust that the agitation of this question now going on in Congress may result in the speedy crushing out of every vestige of the doctrine of polygamy, and its practices cease for ever from the face of the earth.

We should therefore join hands, not only every Christian church or organization, but all good men and lovers of a high standard of morals, in getting rid of this infamous and demoralizing institution.

The superiority of man to nature is continually illustrated in literature and in life. Nature needs an immense quantity of quills to make a goose with; but man can make a goose of himself in five minutes with one quill.

Genuine modesty is the sense of imperfection common to the wise and good, impossible to the fool and villain.

He who will not reason is a bigot; he who can not is a fool; and he who dares not is a slave.

Correspondence.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
January 27th, 1882.

To the patrons of the Herald, Greeting:—In writing up this unique, diverse field, we scarcely know where to begin, how to proceed, or where to forbear. This people boast much of concert of action, unity of design, purity of purpose, fidelity to authorities and knowledge derived from experience, ordinances and endowments. They laud their multifarious organizations, co-operations, ordinations and associations. They have priesthood meetings, council appointments, Ladies Relief Societies, Youth's Mutual Improvement Convocations, and the tender juvenile dance. Their mercenary bishops, as also the aspiring co-laborers, eulogize the cringing devotees, flatter the vanity of the ignorant, tell how good they feel, and close with a flaming testimony; all "in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen!" With all the would-be facilities for mental, moral and Spiritual culture; gross ignorance, base passion and lying cowardice, form a three-fold cord, to shackle and bind the souls of those who should be noble, intelligent, bold, happy, free in truth and right.

The old dirty polygs, in this Zion of salt and sage brush, are fearful that the nation will pluck the apple of their eye, and bury the "celestial" thing in the Potter's Field, too deep for a resurrection. John Taylor delivered a vindictive prophecy against the Government, in the event that it would interfere with their God-given rights! He claimed that God would arise out of his hiding place and lay his hand upon this fair land. Some of "the boys in blue," from Fort Douglass were asked, at the close of the services, how they liked to face that, &c.

The elements of disintegration and decay are permeating and leavening the lump. The "Mene Tekel" of Jehovah is inscribed on the heart of the nation, while the scales of justice are trembling in glorious equipoise. Their virtue, honesty, loyalty, mercy, piety, and in fine, all their good acts and intentions will doubtless be overbalanced by the following:—1st. Polygamy, or "patriarchal order of marriage" (?) 2d. False and arrogant claims to the presidency, or successorship. 3d. Rocky Mountain Zion. 4th. Temple building, in the absence of and contrary to commandments. 5th. Tithing the unfortunate. 6th. Priestly dictation in the temporal concerns of life. 7th. Blind submission, or unquestioning obedience. 8th. Secret endowments, with. 9th. Oaths, covenants, signs, grips, penalties, &c., &c., with the accompanying tunic, to preserve the person from external injuries, or Satanic shafts, and perfect a right to the first resurrection. 10th. Disloyalty to the United States. 11th. An Opulent priesthood. 12th. Antipathy to free schools. 13th. Adam for the Deity. 14th. Lying countenanced. 15th. Blood atonement, or murder. 16th. Vulgarity and immorality. 17th. Flattery and false hopes. 18th. Illiberality and fear to investigate, or debate. 19th. A rejected church and ministry. 20th. Drinking and revelry.

I am happy to know the reign of terror, or absolute despotism, is past; but the circumscribed Spirit frets and fumes and rankles and burns. Honor and praise be to the great thoroughfares, Sectarian Schools, adventurous miners, honorable apostates, Gentile merchants, Pat O'Conor and "Little Joseph." Many of the old blood atoners would send us "over the rim of the basin," or "to hell across lots," if they had the power again. It is but just, however, to state that many of the young and rising are heartily and completely disgusted with tyranny, oppression, family broils, and crushed hopes. Careless indifference, fascinating pleasures, degrading resorts, and downright infidelity, all have their votaries here. Many of the aged are too smart, and the young too ignorant, to appreciate or weigh an argument; but still, there is a great work to be done, and a rich harvest of precious sheaves. Thousands have bid a tearful farewell to their native homes, all for conscience' sake; many have reaped ruin from the searing process, but others have redeeming qualities. It is for the latter class we toil, sacrifice and pray. To see the innocent, confiding, poor, meek and humble ones, borne down, is painful to behold. To witness their heartless greed, evil unbelief, or drunken debaucheries, is a sad sight. To "Rescue the perishing" is divine, and to "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost," is the duty of the Reorganization. "To set in order the house of God, and to arrange by lot the inheritance of the Saints," is a praiseworthy enterprise, and an absolute necessity to secure a proper recognition. Our claims must be perpetuated, the honest wanderer reclaimed, apostates and seducers reprov'd, virtue and true devotion extolled, and the kingdom of God's dear Son built up according to the Celestial law.

The authorities, generally, and many of the deluded laity, regard us as their enemies. The claim is that we are mainly an apostate rabble, fanning the flames of persecution, to distress their righteous souls, and obtain favor from and plunder with the "ungodly Gentiles." "An unclean Spirit" exclaimed "What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? Art thou come hither to torment us before the time?" We have and will ask and demand an investigation, for we feel that this is an aggressive work. Our requests have been evaded and treated with scornful contempt. We have come with the word of faith in our mouth and heart, and the standard works of the Church in our hands. Thus equipped have we said, "Come let us reason together;" but the cold rejoinder has been that "You are beneath our notice." We are making warm friends within and out side of the pales of the dominant church. Priestcraft is exacting and cruel, but light and liberty are on the imperial march. Let the good work roll on.

Bro. Blair departed for his home on the 16th instant, and Bro. Anthony departed for a southern tour to Beaver and other localities last Tuesday. The last services here were largely attended; but your humble servant was a mile north of Kaysville concluding a week's labor on that propitious day. The people flocked in and filled the new brick school-house. Our elders had been denied public houses there before. I scattered Advocates broadcast among the fomenting and contending elements. An aged person, Mr. John Sill, let me know by revelation, that I was a wolf in sheep's clothing. He undertook to tell all about the successor, but became confused and confounded. He appeared as foolish as the negro that tried to carry himself while in a basket. The interest there should be seen after, at no distant day.

Deep snows in the mountains are essential to the wellbeing of the farmer, and it is falling now. Health is good and times are fair. It is fondly hoped that Elder Blair will return in the early Spring, accompanied by Joseph Luff and Columbus Scott. Joseph is wanted here, also. Proper deportment, just dealing, united efforts, merciful hearts, and humble Spirits, are in good demand. Love, grace and good will to Israel.

M. T. SHORT.

EAST DES MOINES, IOWA,
January 16th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—The work is moving on in this city. We had preaching in the western part of the city a short time ago, at the house of a sister in the Church. At the close of the services, word came to those who were preaching, that a lady near by was sick and wished the Elders to come and pray for her. She was very sick. In two days after she was up at work. This lady did not belong to the Church. It is another testimony of the truths of this work we are engaged in. I thank God that He in His loving mercy answers the call of His children, and listens to their prayers. My desires and prayers are that I may be ever faithful, doing the will of the Father, and let my light so shine to the world, that they may see our good works, and glorify His holy name. I wish for the prayers of the faithful, for I am grievously troubled oftentimes. God being my helper, I hope to come off more than conqueror, through Him who was tempted in all points like me, and yet was without sin.

We hold our two meetings on Sunday; one and sometimes more during the week; I was spiritually strengthened on Sunday, we had the Lord's Supper; had a peaceful time,—a spirit of unity was in our midst. I felt that God's spirit was with us, and that to bless; also in the evening, only a few met, owing to the cold weather. We had a good time listening to the brethren telling their experience.

Praying this work may go on, and hasten the ushering in of the millenium day.

Your sister in the bond of faith,
LUCY B. MERRILL.

HORNERSTOWN, N. J.,

Bro. Joseph:—I thought I would write to you, just to say a few words concerning the work here. We have a hall where we hold meetings in this place. It is over a store, and has been but lately fixed up for our use. We hold meetings here about twice a month, but they are not very well attended. Bro. J. A. Stewart, of Philadelphia, comes up to preach for us the first Sunday in each month. He baptized one here on the 13th of November. If some active and intelligent elders could come here and labor among us, I think good could be done. I hear that brethren Gurley and Kelly are coming to Washington, and thence to Philadelphia, soon. I hope they will get up here.

Hoping that the time will speedily come when the work will prosper here, and everywhere throughout the Lord's moral vineyard,

I remain your brother in the gospel,
W. H. BROWN.

RENO, Cass Co, Iowa,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—You are a stranger to me in the flesh, but a brother in the one hope.

I suppose you are well acquainted with my brother, Joseph Crawford. He was once an Elder in the Church, and was called an able speaker; although I had no opportunity of hearing him, yet I know he had the ability to make a good speaker of himself. I was at Carthage, Illinois, last June, visiting my sister, who lives there. Brother Joseph was at her house. I had not seen my brother for five years before. He was talking to me about the Latter Day Saints; and in regard to himself he said that he knew he had done very wrong; and knew also that there was no other doctrine under the sun true, but the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints, as it is taught in their Church. He spoke as though he did not know whether he would ever join the Saints again. I said to him, "Well, Joseph, if I was in your place, I am sure that if I was as positive of a people being God's chosen as you say that you are, that I would go back to them." I further said to him that I always had felt fearful if I joined the Latter Day Saints, that I would not know of myself that I was an accepted child of God. But thanks be to our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, I am numbered among the Saints and am convinced also that I am a child of God; and that while I do his will and live up to the light I have, I know I shall be numbered among the blessed.

We are living about sixty miles from Council Bluffs; in a place where there are but few, very few of the Saints,—some seven or eight members, I believe. We have had preaching in our neighborhood for about five months, once a month. The brother who speaks here is Thomas Chaburn. He has not failed to come but once, or so, since he first came. Yesterday was his day to preach here but he failed to come. We felt very much disappointed when he did not put in an appearance Saturday evening, but we will look for him next month. My husband, myself, and one of our daughters were baptized by Bro. Chaburn, two months ago, last Sunday. The people in our neighborhood thought that we had gone wild, or was beside ourselves, but we were neither, thanks be to our Heavenly Father, we were convinced of our error, so what else could we do, but turn to the Lord Jesus Christ, confess our sins and be baptized for the remission of them. My husband and I were members of the Campbellite Church.

Come, all true and honest hearted Saints of God; let us be up and working while the day last. Let us be prayerful, and watchful also, lest the night cometh on when no man can work. We desire the prayers of the faithful, that we faint not, but be ever ready to do our Master's will. We look for the coming of the Herald with pleasure.

Your sister in the one hope,
HARRIET HUDSPETH.

NORTH HARWICH, Mass.,
January 17th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—Brn. Frank M. Sheehy, president of the Providence Branch, and John Gilbert, president of the Fall River Branch, have been with us for the last two weeks, and intend stopping with us two weeks more. They are able defenders of the faith, and have done much good both in the Dennis Port Branch and the surrounding villages. The multitudes come to hear what these babblers have to say—the rapt attention in which the crowd sit and listen tacitly implies that they never so understood it before, and yet received it without offense. But the most wonderful of all is, that in this proud land of fish and sand, (cape cod), two of the most opulent churches have opened their gorgeous houses of worship and welcomed these Mormons to their pulpits. This is a new thing under the sun with us. They are to preach there again soon. Truly the Lord is verifying his promise.

Respectfully yours,
WELLINGTON BEARSE.

MUSES BOTTOM, Jackson Co., W. Va.,

Dear Herald:—In October last, Bro. Thomas Matthews, of Syracuse, Ohio, and I met at Salem Church, Mason county, West Virginia, and held a few meetings. While thus engaged, a Rev. Beller, of the Disciple Order, came out on one occasion, and insinuated that we had challenged them; said that he was there to accept. We replied that we had not intentionally given any, but that we were ready to defend our faith publicly when assailed. He still insisted that we had challenged them, and not only them, but the Presbyterian and Methodist faith, yea, all, and if we would not discuss he would "publish us in the papers." He said, "I can prove from the Book of Mormon that Joe Smith was a polygamist," and requested us to "bring our greatest apostle from Salt Lake to meet them in discussion." Bro. Matthews bore testimony that we have no connection with that body of Mormons in Utah. I asked the Reverend if he would affirm the church he represented to be the only true church of Christ on earth by the faith and doctrine it teaches; King James' the standard of evidence. He answered, "I will." I proposed to deny. We then arranged the proposition; afterwards he tried to crawl fish, seeing that by so affirming he had challenged every other faith, but the people held him to his affirmation. We wished him to enter into discussion at that time, but he declined by saying, "We'll get a man." He agreed that I should set the time when I could meet them, by giving near a month's notice. Before we left Bro. Matthews baptized Bro. Moler's oldest son.

Soon after my return home, my wife and I went to Clarksburg, West Virginia, remaining until December 5th; labored conjointly with our beloved brother, D. L. Shinn; the branch was greatly revived, and five added by baptism. While there I notified the parties interested in the discussion, that it would begin on the 29th of December. Bro. Shinn accepted an invitation to attend, and act as our representative; he arrived at my house on the 24th and preached each evening until the 28th, the day we started for the scene of the coming conflict. Of our voyage on the water, the readers of the Herald will hear through a communication from him.

We met at the church at the appointed time, Rev. Beller was there, with two, or three others of their representative men; but their "champion" they had hired (we understood so) to come to their relief was not on hand; his name is Harvey—lives near Pomeroy, Ohio. We insisted that the debate begin at once, but Beller plead for more time, that perhaps Bro. Harvey would be there next day. We consented to wait until 9:30 next morning, and if he did not come, some one of them would act until he did. Beller extolled the talent and education of Rev. Harvey—perhaps thinking to intimidate us; but we were not scared, for "the wisdom of their wise men shall perish," is on record. Next morning came, Rev. Harvey was still absent, so Bro. Shinn proposed to discuss with one, two, or three of them; but they declined, still wanted more time, said they were not prepared. Beller at last consented to try it, provided that Bro. Shinn would affirm that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the only true Church, by the same rule as the other proposition. Bro. Shinn consented. While arranging the preliminaries, in came Rev. Harvey to their great joy and relief. He is seventy years of age, one of their best men, and I believe a gentleman. It was agreed by the debaters that the discussion should last four days, of three sessions each, two days for each proposition.

At two p. m. the fire was opened by Rev. Harvey; his strongest arguments were brought to the front at once, and having exhausted them, his reserve force was weak, and grew more so at every round. While the negative shot was poured in with such telling effect by Bro. Shinn that by Saturday night the Disciples proposed to stop on the first proposition, as they would not dispute on the Sabbath. Bro. Shinn consented.

New Year's Day was spent by us in prayer and fasting, that truth might triumph. In the evening Bro. Shinn delivered an excellent discourse, to a large assembly, in the church.

Monday morning came, and "our position" to be examined before the people. Bro. Shinn showed the fulfillment of the predicted apostacy from the true faith, hence a necessity for a reformation; yea, for a restoration. Unveiling prophecies relating thereto, the time and manner of the restoration; identifying this to be the Church of Christ by the ordinances, organization, authority, gifts and blessings, being built upon the Rock, every feature belonging to the Ancient Church incorporated in this; therefore, an identity is seen; it is the Church of Christ.

Rev. Harvey met these arguments by bringing Newman's Encyclopedia (I think) and Beadle's work; read extracts therefrom, that Joseph Smith had many wives; was (of course) immoral and low; that the Book of Mormon was a plagiarism of the Spaulding Romance; saying but little on the Scripture proofs, confirmatory of the faith and order of the Church; admitting this was the ancient faith and order. These written falsehoods vanished like chaff before the wind, when Bro. Shinn read Sr. Emma's last testimony found in Advocate No. 4, October, 1879; also Bro. W. H. Kelley's interview with John H. Gilbert, found in Herald of June 1st, 1881, p. 165, 166; again, from same Herald, p. 168, 169, testimonies of David Whitmer and Katharine Salisbury, then from the tract "Origin of the Book of Mormon," using the latter with such skill as to entirely silence them on that point, with many other arguments at the command of the advocates of truth found in Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. These arguments were so forcible, that when Bro. Shinn appealed to his opponent to answer whether this looks like polygamy, &c., he answered "No." The difference between the order in Utah and the Josephites was defined so clearly, that all seemed satisfied there was no affinity. Bro. Shinn spiked their heavy guns, and having nothing else to fall back on, they proposed to close the contest on Tuesday noon. Rev. Harvey claimed to be too unwell to continue longer. Bro. Shinn was reluctant to do so, as but little of the abundance of Bible testimony pointing to the great latter day work had been brought forth. Rev. Harvey commended the zeal and energy of his opponent, which he said was worthy of a better cause.

The truth did not suffer by being uncovered, but gained a decided victory; confirming the Saints, and made us many friends. Bro. Shinn is an able debater, and destined to honor his calling, but like many of Israel's noblemen, poverty compels him to remain at home much of his time, in order to provide the bread that per-isheth. We feel to invoke the blessing of God upon Bro. and Sr. Moler for their unselfish hospitality, so generously extended to the Saints from a distance; and a special blessing upon the two sisters, Moler and Devore, for faithfulness in preparing the food. We commend the Saints one and all for their noble decorum during the debate, examples worthy of imitation.

On Wednesday, the 4th, they all left for their respective homes, except Bro. T. J. Beatty and myself. Previous to the debate he had been preaching in the neighborhood, and baptized six; three having united in August and October, making nine in all, they desired to be organized. On the 8th, we met with them for that purpose; ordained Bro. James Moler an Elder, and Bro. John A. Williams, Teacher. Branch was named Union Grove. Since I last wrote you, I have preached forty times, baptized five, blessed seven children. Wife and I start in a few days for Wayne county, West Virginia, where Bro. Torrence and I labored a part of last summer; expect to organize a branch, there being thirteen members already in the neighborhood; if so, this South Eastern Ohio and West Virginia District will contain six branches. We shall remain until April, if there is work to do. My address will be Wayne C. H., West Virginia, care John W. Trout.

Your brother in the gospel,
L. R. DEVORE.

WILBER, Nebraska,

Brother Brand and R. M. Elber has been with us this month, preaching the word; by which the Saints were strengthened and outsiders have become interested. Ever hoping and praying that their labors may be crowned with success, I remain yours in bonds,

L. ANTONY.

SHELBY, Iowa,

January 9th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—As intimated in my last, I now write you the results of my labors at Edna Grove in Cass county, some sixty miles east of this place. I continued my visits each month, sometimes alone and sometimes with some other brother, whoever I could induce to go, until on the 13th of November with the assistance of Bro. David Chambers, I had the privilege of baptizing three. Bro. Hudspeth, his wife and daughter, they are a fine family and will in time, I think, be of great benefit to the Church. They are possessed of a very large tract of land, a coal mine, a grist mill, and other properties which make them one of the foremost families in that part of the country. I went back in one month from that time, Bro. Chambers going with me again; baptized one more, wife of Bro. Charles Peasley, a very fine woman.

Although prejudice is very strong and persecution rages to a considerable extent; I am satisfied there are more Saints there who only need watering to make them active members in the kingdom of our Master. I am sorry to say that from force of circumstances I have discontinued my visits to Edna, for a time at least. Let me here say in the way of a duty that I owe Bro. David Chambers, that he is as fine a companion as has been my lot to have; he preaches the word with power and effect, his sincerity, humility, frankness and genial disposition gains for him friends wherever he goes. The Saints at Shelby as a general thing are endeavoring to live to their privileges, we keep up our meetings with a very fair attendance and we think they will result in good. We have had one addition to our Branch lately, a (colored) brother by the name of "Fabor," and I think he may become a very useful accession. He is the best singer in the Branch, at present, and in that way makes "hissself" very useful. However, he has to be blown every Sunday morning and angered properly before securing the best results, yet with the satisfaction which most of us enjoy by having an organ to aid in singing, there are some foggy spirits which think we have almost committed an unpardonable sin by having an organ in the church, "Too much style," "creates a choir of a favored few," &c. such remarks, with the feelings they engender, added to the already overburdened load which one has to carry as President of a Branch, not one to aid or assist, makes one to realize the fact that he was never calculated to preside over the flock. A brain taxed with the complicated problems of life to its utmost, through all the week, and then instead of rest on Sunday to receive the frowns of brethren and sisters while preaching, because of some supposed crime, is rather hard to endure. We are willing to toil on, feeling assured that not all that say "Lord, Lord," will enter in, but those that "endure to the end," where all our works will be made manifest.

Bro. J. R. Badham was with us last Sunday and gave us two very able discourses, which were listened to with good interest by a very fair congregation; hope he may visit us again; such visits are rare but very pleasant to us.

Yours as ever,

T. W. CHATBURN.

Conference Minutes.

LITTLE SIOUX DISTRICT.

This district met pursuant to adjournment, in the Saints' Meeting House, in Magnolia, Iowa, Saturday, December 2d, 1881. J. C. Crabb, president; P. Cadwell, assistant; C. Derry, clerk pro tem.

The following branches reported.—Little Sioux 246; baptized 1, received by vote 1, died 1. Union Center 89; baptized 3, died 1. Magnolia 164; removed by letter 2. Spring Creek 47; received by letter 1. Pleasant View 18; baptized 1. Union Grove 16; died 1. Evening Star 24; removed by letter 5, received by letter 1.

The following Elders reported: D. Chambers, C. Derry, J. M. Harvey, R. Farmer, J. M. Putney, D. Maule, J. B. Lytle, E. Lanphear, E. McEwars, S. Mahoney, L. Wilson, P. Cadwell, J. C. Crabb, J. F. Mintun, E. Sherman and Wm. Cadwell. Priests B. Kester, B. M. Green, and M. Daugherty.

On motion Bro. M. Daugherty was permitted to labor as other officers in the district, by a vote of nine to five.

On motion a committee of three, consisting of J. M. Harvey, C. Derry and J. M. Putney, was appointed to draft resolutions of condolence and sympathy on the death of Brethren Hugh Lytle and Thomas Wilkins.

Replying to a question, President Crabb said that three miles had been decided on in this district as the limits of a branch.

On motion it was decided that a person can not be a proper representative of this district Church who is not a member of some branch.

Moved and seconded that when we adjourn we do so to meet at Little Sioux, Iowa, on the first Saturday and Sunday of March, 1882.

In answer to several inquiries and suggestions, President Crabb recommended that branch officers confer together, and if they feel it necessary, that they recommend district members to join the nearest branch to them.

Sunday morning, preaching by Elder Charles Derry, from revelation in 3d sec. of D. and C.

Committee on resolutions of condolence on deaths of Brethren Lytle and Wilkins, reported:

Whereas, it has seemed good in the providence of God to take from our midst, by the hand of death, since our last conference, our beloved and aged brethren and fellow laborers in the gospel, Elders Hugh Lytle and Thomas Wilkins; and, whereas, we believe them to have been honest, sincere, and God-fearing men, and able, zealous, and faithful laborers in the cause of Christ, always willing to yield themselves a sacrifice for the truth; and believing that in their death the Church militant suffers a loss, and that the world has thus been deprived of worthy examples of love for, and fidelity to God's truth; and also believing that the widows and immediate relatives of these departed ones sustain a loss that can not be supplied, we offer this expression of sympathy with, and condolence for the bereaved, and as a mark of the great esteem of this conference for our lamented brethren, believing as we do, that our loss is their eternal gain, and that God in his love has removed them from a world of sin and sorrow, to the "rest that remains for the people of God," in the certain hope of a glorious resurrection. And in offering this, our condolence, we earnestly pray that God may sanctify these bereavements to the hearts and lives of the loved and loving ones, whom they have left behind, and inspire all to emulate the good examples they have left us, and like them to live in God's love and fear. And while offering these words of comfort, we would earnestly commend the aged widows of these departed brethren, who are our beloved sisters in Christ Jesus, to the sympathy, love and care of the faithful, remembering that a part of "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions."

J. M. HARVEY.

CHAS. DERRY.

J. M. PUTNEY.

Resolution adopted and ordered spread upon the minutes and sent to the Herald for publication, and committee discharged.

At the afternoon session, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Elders J. M. Putney and John B. Lytle. A session of prayer and testimony was held in which many earnest prayers and testimonies were offered. The gifts of tongues and interpretation were given in great power, containing precious promises and assurances that God would hear and answer prayer upon the heads of his people. All felt the power of God.

In the evening President Crabb preached from words found in verse 45 to the end of chapter 6, of Luke's testimony.

ALABAMA DISTRICT.

A conference of the Alabama District was held at the Pleasant Hill Branch, on the 24th and 25th of December, 1881. W. J. Booker in the chair; George T. Chute, secretary.

Elders W. J. Booker, J. F. McPhearson, G. T. Chute, G. R. Scoggin; also, A. J. Cato, missionary, reported. Teachers S. McPhearson and W. H. Huggins, reported.

No branch reports received.

Committee reported that four had been cut off in the Lone Star Branch since last conference.

The next conference of this district will be held at the Lope Star Branch, Monroe county, Alabama, on the 1st and 2d of April, 1882.

LONDON DISTRICT.

Minutes of the London District Conference, held at Osborne, Huron county, Ontario, October 1st and 2d, 1881. Bro. John H. Lake was chosen to preside during conference; S. Browne, clerk.

Branch reports read and accepted.—Alliston, organized 6th of June, 1881, with 11 members, including 1 Priest, 1 Teacher. Carlingford 31. Egremont 42. Bayham 29. London, St. Thomas, Walsingham, Osborne, Toronto, no reports.

Official Reports.—Elders J. A. McIntosh (baptized 1), S. Browne, W. Jenkins, G. Mottashed (baptized 2). Priest E. Sparks, C. Pearson, J. Batten. Teacher John Cornish; and Deacon J. T. Reynolds.

Bishop's Agent, S. Browne, reports balance on hand and received 41.26; paid to ministry $16; balance $25.26.

On motion a committee of three were appointed to audit Bishop's Agent's books.

A committee of three were appointed to examine the difficulty existing between J. A. McIntosh and the St. Thomas Branch.

Bro. Joseph Luff wished the conference to understand that the Toronto church is sold, and most of the Saints moved away from that place; but there is still a home for any of Elders who seek the welfare of the cause in that place.

Committee on Bishop's Agent's books reported them correct.

The committee appointed to examine the difficulties existing between the book agent and the branch at St. Thomas, reported: All the evidence in the case as presented to us was ex parte, and therefore insufficient to form a basis for judgment. We therefore recommend that a committee be appointed to visit all parties interested in the case, and report to the next district conference.

The committee in the case of the district book agency, report, finding no difficulty whatever existing; the whole matter existing in a fear entertained that trouble might occur at some future time.

Moved that W. Jenkins and C. Pearson act as a committee to examine the difficulties existing between the St. Thomas Branch and their book agent.

John McKenzie was sustained as district treasurer, and S. Browne as district secretary.

C. Pearson was sustained as missionary in the district.

Jenette Pearson was appointed to act as delegate for this district, to the next April General Conference.

Wm. Jenkins was appointed to act as vice president for this district till next conference.

A motion prevails, wishing this conference to take in consideration, the act of getting the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints incorporated in the Dominion of Canada, and on motion by J. A. McIntosh and G. Mottashed were appointed a committee to enquire and find how much it would cost and report to next conference.

Moved that when this conference adjourns, it does so to meet the 10th and 11th of June, 1882, at Egremont Branch.

Prayer and testimony meeting in the morning. Some encouraging testimonies were given. Preaching in the forenoon by J. A. McIntosh, and in the afternoon at the barn of Bro. Smalls, the church not being large enough, by Bro. J. Luff. Afterwards the sacrament was administered by John H. Lake. In the evening Bro. John H. Lake preached an excellent discourse to an attentive audience.

ST. LOUIS DISTRICT.

Minutes of the St. Louis District Conference, held in St. Louis, Missouri, January 8th and 9th, 1882. President, J. E. Betts; J. G. Smith and N. Cook, clerks.

Preaching on Sunday forenoon by Elders J. E. Betts, J. Anderson and R. D. Cottam.

Afternoon session. On motion J. E. Betts was unanimously elected and sustained as president of the St. Louis District Conference for the next six months. President Betts nominated Elders W. Anderson and R. D. Cottam as his counselors, and on motion they were sustained.

On motion J. G. Smith was elected clerk for the next six months.

President Betts then made a few remarks, and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Elders J. Beaird and W. Smith.

Preaching in the evening by Elders D. Evens and J. Beaird.

On motion the presidency of the district were authorized to make the appointments of the Elders for the next three months.

Branch Reports.—St. Louis 180; removed by letter 4, died 2; cash on hand and received during quarter $184.61; expended for hall rent $20; deposited in bank $100; balance in hand of treasurer $64.61. St. Louis Branch free-will offering report: received during the quarter $34.35. Belleville Branch 77; baptized 1. Income during the quarter $3.60; outlay $6.70; in debt $3.10. Belleville Bethlehem Sunday School report: number of officers and teachers 8, number of scholars 57. Balance last report $24.77, income $3.60, expended $9, balance on hand $19.37. Alma Branch 43. Boone Creek Branch 22; seven members are scattered. Free-will offering $2.10. Whearso Branch 16. Cheltenham Branch 34; twelve members scattered. Cheltenham Sunday School report: average attendance 25. Caseyville and Gravois Branches had no reports; and the Alton and Moselle Branch reports were returned for correction.

The report of the committee in the case of Bro. Hubbard was read as follows: We beg leave to report that we investigated said case, and found that the ordination of Bro. Hubbard, to the office of Deacon, was illegal, and we respectfully ask the conference to set it aside as null and void. J. Beaird and J. E. Betts, committee.

The report was adopted and the clerk instructed to notify Elder A. S. Davison of the Moselle Branch of this action.

The committee appointed to help adjust the Caseyville Branch difficulties gave a verbal report of progress.

On motion it was resolved that the committee continue their labors and report next conference.

A petition from the Belleville Branch, asking for a rehearing in the case of John W. Thorpe was offered to the conference. On motion it was received and read.

On motion a committee of three was appointed to investigate this petition, and report at next conference. J. Whitehead, R. D. Cottam and W. Still, were appointed said committee.

A communication was received from Elder A. S. Davison. On motion, it was referred to the district president and his counselors.

Bro. Wm. Still asked the forgiveness of the conference for resigning his license as an Elder at last district conference; and also asked for a renewal of his license as an Elder.

On motion, he was forgiven, and the renewal of his license as an Elder granted.

It was resolved we sustain all the spiritual and temporal authorities of the Church in righteousness.

Adjourned to meet in the Saints' Hall, 1302 Broadway, St. Louis, Mo., the first Saturday afternoon and Sunday in April, [1st and 2d], 1882.

Miscellaneous.

NOTICE.

In pursuance of a resolution of the Semi-Annual Conference, last past, so directing, the Presidency have appointed Elder Jobe Brown, of LaCrosse, Wisconsin, and Elder Warren Turner, of Clinton, Iowa, to visit North Freedom, Wisconsin, in answer to petition made to said Semi-Annual Conference, to hear, try, and determine in relation to matters of difficulty pending there; and, if possible, to effect a settlement. Bro. Brown has notified us that he has appointed February 22d, 1882, as the time when the committee have set to meet at North Freedom. The parties will please take notice.

JOSEPH SMITH, President.

KEWANEE DISTRICT.

The next Quarterly Conference of the Kewanee District will be held at Kewanee, Illinois, March 4th and 5th, 1882. The open-hearted Saints of the Kewanee Branch will be fully prepared to entertain all who come; and it is earnestly desired that every branch will send a good representation; for remember the question of representation to the General Conference will come up before this conference for an investigation. Come, brethren, let us shew our faith and love for the cause by our works.

H. C. BRONSON, Pres. of Dist.

IONIA, Ill., 18th Jan., 1882.

TEXAS CENTRAL DISTRICT.

To the Saints of Texas Central District, greeting:—Dear Brethren and Sisters: Having received a card from the secretary of the district, notifying me of my appointment to the presidency of the district in the place formerly occupied by our beloved and esteemed brother, H. L. Thompson, I avail myself of this method to communicate to you as a body, my willingness to discharge the duties of my calling, hoping you will appreciate the same. It seems to me you have chosen the weakest of the weak to preside over you; but as our heavenly Father has chosen the foolish and weak things to confound the wise and mighty, I have no fears in taking up the sword and entering into the conflict with full assurance that victory will perch upon the banner of King Immanuel.

Dear brethren, doubtless you are aware that I have been laboring by the day to supply my family with the necessities of life, and it would be useless to tell you that I could take the field and battle successfully, independently, without the necessary aid. However, I will say, I am willing and determined to prosecute the work to the extent of my ability, trusting in our Heavenly Father's provisions.

Dear Saints, it remains for you to be diligent prayerful and upright, giving no occasion for the adversary to speak reproachfully; let there be no bickering, back-biting, harsh language, or evil surmising among you, as becometh Saints; but put these away with all malice, and live and do as the law directs. Be faithful in the discharge of your duty to God, your family, yourself, and the world. Live peaceable with all men, as much as in you lieth. Keep yourself unspotted from the world. Owe no man anything; but love one another. Put on the whole armor of God, and battle faithfully, and in fine, "be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove that which is good and acceptable with God," and be assured that victory will crown your efforts in building up the cause of truth.

We hope each official: Elder, Priest and Deacon, in the bounds of the district, will try to do something to advance the cause of truth. Let each secretary make out his written report, and submit the same to the branch for approval, and send it to conference as the law directs. In conclusion, let each one and all work faithfully, be diligent, upright, prayerful, and success is ours; otherwise we fall under condemnation.

Praying for Zion's cause, I remain your brother in bonds, ELIAS LAND.
THORNTON, Texas, January 20th, 1882.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT.

The conference of the Southern California District will convene at the Newport Branch Chapel, at 10:30 a.m., Saturday, March 4th, 1882, near Santa Ana, Los Angeles county. We particularly request the several branches of the district to present a correct statistical report; and as many as possible of the Saints to meet with us, as some important business will be presented for definite action. By order of the president,

J. F. BURTON.

N. W. BEST, Clerk of District.

CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

Will branch and district clerks please to favor the work of recording by sending to me the original reports of the branches that are in their hands, or else make out transcripts of the changes that have occurred since they last sent reports to me, that is giving names of gains and losses, with items of birth, baptism, ordination, removal, expulsion or death. I shall call on every branch by letter this winter with a statement of the standing of each on the Church Records and would like as prompt and full replies as possible. Especially do I ask for reports from the branches in England and Wales, none of which branches stand upon the CHURCH RECORD the same in numbers as they are reported to their district conferences (as published in the Herald), because those reports of the condition of these branches do not reach the Church Recorder in America nor any copy of them from the clerks of the Birmingham, the London, or the Manchester Districts in England, nor from the Eastern or Western Districts of Wales. If these officials will send me the reports now in their hands (as shown by the published minutes as having come into their possession) I will be obliged to them. I would also like the branch clerks in all these districts to send me their names and addresses so that I may correspond with them for any further particulars or corrections necessary to the record or to the reports.

H. A. STEBBINS, Church Recorder.

NORTH-EASTERN WISCONSIN DISTRICT.

As the Wolf River Branch is disorganized, and the Church Recorder wants to know the standing of all the branches, and as I have been clerk of the above named branch, and am authorized to give letters of removal to quite a number of members whose names are recorded in the branch, but not to all, and as I want to find out the whereabouts and the willingness of being a Saint or not, of all that belong to the Wolf River Branch, in North-Eastern Wisconsin District, and as God is a God of order, and consequently the Devil is a Devil of disorder, I beg the Saints spoken of to report to me as quick as possible.

JOSEPH LAMPERT, Box 320, Oshkosh, Wis.

OBITUARIES.—Obituary notices not exceeding one hundred words, about twelve lines, will be published free of charge; when exceeding one hundred words, five cents for each additional eight words (one line) will be charged; notices of prominent Church officials excepted. Money to accompany notice.

BORN.

LAMPERT.—At Oshkosh, Wisconsin, 14th January, 1882, to Bro. Joseph and Sr. S. Lampert, a son, named Joseph Bartholomew. All doing well.

BISHOP.—At 155 St. Helen's Avenue, Swansea, South Wales, December 20th, 1881, to Bro. Alma Nephi and Sr. Margaret Bishop, a daughter, which is named Edith Maud. Mother and child well.

DIED.

BUCKINGHAM.—At Lamoni, Iowa, January 12th, 1882, of disease of the kidneys, Elder John Buckingham, aged 73 years, 7 months and 9 days. He was born in Sheffield, England, June 3d, 1808; was baptized in Oregon in 1875, by Elder Joseph C. Clapp, and there presided over the Prairie City Branch until his removal to Lamoni, where he and his family arrived in October last. He left a large family, wife, children and grand-children, to all of whom his loss is a serious one, and many of the Saints joined with them in mourning his sudden departure. Funeral services by Elder H. A. Stebbins, assisted by President Joseph Smith.

GLOVER.—At Hyde Park, Massachusetts, December 28th, 1881, of diphtheria, Bertrand E., son and only child of Bro. Artemus W. and sister Julia A. Glover, aged 6 years, 11 months, 5 days. Funeral services by Elder John Gilbert.

Bertie, thou hast gone and left us,
Gone to realms more bright and fair;
Gone to join the throng of children,
Who have "passed" just 'over there."
Just across the shining river,
Has the boatman borne thee o'er,
There to dwell amid the ransomed,
And be happy evermore.

CARTER.—At Santa Ana, Los Angeles county, California, November 20th, 1881, of consumption, Moses Carter; born January 28th, 1854, in Texas; baptized at Newport Branch, 1876. He was a son of Bro. Irvin F. Carter.

WANTED.

Wanted a good, kind-hearted, middle aged woman, to keep house for and take care of two old people; one who can milk one cow and take care of the milk. Good wages will be paid by the week; to commence the first of March. One belonging to the Church of the Saints would be preferred.

Which is the Church.

JESUS CHRIST ESTABLISHED BUT ONE VISIBLE CHURCH.

It is evident from the New Testament Scriptures, that Jesus Christ established a church; that it originated at Jerusalem, and that it spread from thence into all parts of the world. From the same source it is evident that Christ established but one church; that it was not an invisible, but a visible church, having a visible membership, visible ministry, visible sacrament, visible ordinances, visible worship, and visible laws. That in that age it was everywhere known as a visible, organized body, and that it was to exist for a time, and eventually drift into an entire apostacy; and that it was to remain in that condition until the last days, when it was to be restored to its apostolic strength and beauty, preparatory to the Second Coming of Jesus Christ.

QUERIES ARISING FROM THE PRESENT STATE OF CHRISTENDOM.

In these United States there are upward of fifty visible, organized bodies, all calling themselves churches, and all claiming to be scriptural, and apostolic. Such being the case, a comparison of the present state of christendom with what was its equivalent, the religious world in the apostolic age, presents to a candid and enquiring mind serious differences. Since Christ established but one church, can it be right that there should be now upwards of fifty churches? And if the church has ceased, when did its existence terminate? And where did the churches obtain their authority to organize.

IMPORTANCE OF THE SUBJECT.

Such are some of the queries that arise in every enquiring mind, on comparing the present state of christendom with what the church was in the apostolic age. Nor can any subject be of more vital interest, since the church Christ established, with its apostles, prophets, and teachers, its ordinance of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins;^(a) and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost.^(b) And these gifts of the Holy Spirit that have always manifested themselves to the true believer in Christ.^(c) "And these signs shall follow them that believe."

These are some of the characteristics of the church, the only divinely appointed means of salvation. What can be of greater importance to us than to know whether we do belong to the true body of Jesus Christ, or have yielded allegiance to a foreign body? Surely in every thing pertaining to our salvation we need the greatest certainty—certainty, not only in regard to the doctrines to be believed, but also in regard to the church. And as but one church was established upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, and that at a time when if any different order of churches had been needed, God would most assuredly have made provisions in His law, and if He, in His divine wisdom, foresaw the necessity of a succession of authority on down until his second coming, He would so have ordered it, and prophecy and history would have confirmed it. But to the contrary, the church ceased to exist as an organization, and the gifts of the Holy Spirit entirely ceased. Other denominations sprung up claiming to be the church, and have endeavored to prove a succession of authority; viz: The Latin and Greek Churches, from St. Peter; the Episcopal Church, from St. Paul; and the Baptist Church from John the Baptist.

We do not at this time propose to trace through history the many changes of these churches, but suffice it to say that at no time of their history can they present any of the characteristics that marked the Church of Christ. At no time have they dared to call their churches after His name; but have sought names more suitable to their purpose. All the so called orthodox churches are the outgrowth of these churches, consequently have no command; neither do they claim authority direct from God.

PROPHECY AND HISTORIC FACTS ONLY CAN SOLVE THIS QUESTION.

In penning these pages our object is to set forth an outline of the prophecies of scripture in connection with the historic fact relative to the apostacy of the church. Christ declared: "From the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."^(d)

Paul forewarned his Ephesian brethren of the threatened apostacy: "For I know this, that after my departing shall greivous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock."^(e) Also, speaking emphatically concerning the apostacy: "Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and by our gathering together unto him; that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first."^(f) Also: "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils."^(g) Also: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom, preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lust shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."^(h)

Ninety-six years after Christ, when the apostle John was banished to the Island of Patmos, God, through vision, permitted him to review the church, and in announcing his researches he states that he discovered only seven churches in all Asia; and but few of these were acceptable to God. After this the future was unfolded, and in Revelations, twelfth, the church was presented to him in the form of a woman with child, clothed with the sun, (the light of revelation), the moon under her feet, (the Mosaic Law), a crown of twelve stars, (emblematical of the twelve apostles). A great red dragon, (the Roman Pagan Power, that so often shed the innocent blood of the Saints), stood ready to devour the child, as soon as it was born, (the power transmitted to the church which the Papal Roman Power, which succeeded the Pagan, claims to have received from Peter), but God caught the man child up to his throne, and the woman, divested of her authority, (administrative), fled into the wilderness where she had a place prepared for her, and in this lonely condition, divested of all authority, stripped of her beautiful crown, her precious gifts ceased. She was to remain for a specified time, and during the time of her inactivity, this Papal Roman Power that claimed to have obtained authority from Peter, steps forth representing herself as Christ's bride; but John describes her as a harlot and a mother. Hence, all who have come from her and represent themselves as the Church of Christ, but claiming some other name, are also classed as strange women. Thus the church is lost from mortal sight, and a universal reign of darkness ensues. Mosheim in his church history corroborates what Christ and the Apostles predicted. "The Christian Church was scarcely formed, when, in different places, there started up certain pretended reformers, who, not satisfied with the simplicity of that religion which was taught by the apostles, meditated changes of doctrine and worship, and set up a new religion drawn from their own licentious imagination." (h)

Infant baptism by sprinkling was admitted in the latter part of the second century, in lieu of adult baptism by immersion during the first part of this century. In the fourth century, "Constantine the Great, assumed to himself the supreme power over this sacred body, and the right of modeling and governing it in such a manner, as should be most conducive to the public good. This right he enjoyed without any opposition." (i) "Constantine began to introduce, gradually, innovations into the forms of ecclesiastical discipline, and to change the ancient government of the church." (j) "No sooner had Constantine the Great abolished the superstitions of his ancestors, than magnificent churches were every where erected for the Christians, which were richly adorned with pictures and images." The Church of England states in one of her homilies, "Homily on the Perils of Idolatry:" "The laity and clergy, learned and unlearned, men and women, and children of all ages, sects and degrees, of whole christendom, have been at once buried in the most abominable idolatry, (a most dreadful thing to think), and that for the space of eight hundred years or more." John Wesley in his ninety-fourth sermon states the same in substance; he says: "The real cause why the extraordinary gifts of the Holy Ghost were no longer to be found in the Christian church was because the Christians were turned heathen again, and had only a dead form left."

It is evident from the few prophecies we have cited, and the few historical facts we have rehearsed, that an entire apostacy has ensued; hence a restoration of that ancient order is necessary. Revelations, fourteenth chapter, sixth and seventh verses, predicts such an event. "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred and tongue and people. Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him for the hour of his judgment is near, and worship him that made heaven and earth and the sea and the fountain of water."

That such an event was seen by John to take place in the far distant future, no one will deny. An angel with the authority to commission men to proclaim the everlasting gospel. Angels were the means God used in all ages of the world to bestow authority upon man; hence, no change was, or could be expected when this angel visits earth, the work of restoration will be visible to all men. They will authorize men to organize the kingdom anew, with apostles, prophets, high priests, sevens, elders, priests, teachers and deacons. There will be sent forth to preach the same gospel that was preached eighteen hundred years ago. Faith in God, repentance from sins, baptism for the remission of sins, the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and the spirit separating, giving to each one a gift as it did anciently. The name of the body of Christ's Church, kingdom, or bride, (which are synonymous), will be called by his name, Jesus Christ. It will possess all the gifts, blessings, privileges and officers that it did in the apostles time. So by an observation, it can be distinguished from all the churches of men, who have invented their own creeds, organized after their own ideas, named their churches to suit themselves, call their own ministers, pay them their price, preaching to suit the people. How it is, that a sane man, with his bible as his detector in his hand, can be deceived by joining the old Mother of Harlots, or one of her harlot daughters, and rest satisfied with such a system of confusion and distrust, is more than I can fathom. The churches of men were popular; and their members pride themselves in speaking of their church. But to the contrary, of the Church of Jesus Christ. It has always been reproached, calumny heaped upon it, evil spoken of, no one who opposes it can tell the truth concerning it; persecuted on all sides, and from all the churches of men, in every conceivable way; looked upon as composed of the dregs of humanity and the ignorant of the world; such are some of the peculiar characteristics of the church of the despised Nazarine.

WHICH IS THE CHURCH.

The question we asked in the beginning was, Which is the Church? I now propose to answer the question. In 1829 a Holy Angel, John the Baptist, appeared to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, and ordained them to the Aaronic Priesthood; which authorized them to baptize by immersion for the remission of sins; after this, appeared Peter, James and John, unto Joseph Smith, and ordained him to the Melchisedec Priesthood, by which came the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. In 1830, by command of God, the Church of Jesus Christ was organized; twelve Apostles were called and ordained, the High Priests' quorum, Bishopric, quorum of Seventies, Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons. All these were sent forth on their respective missions, signs followed the faithful believer in the form of tongues, prophecy and seeing visions. The blind were restored to sight, the deaf to hearing, the lame to walking, discerning of spirits, wisdom, knowledge, and faith, were exercised; and every officer and gift of the gospel that characterized the body of Jesus Christ eighteen hundred years ago characterized this latter day Church. A careful comparison of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints as it now is, with what it was in the days of the Apostles, will surely convince the most incredulous that it is an exact fac simile, and the only appointed Church of God. Hoping you may see its beauties and realize its power to save you to the uttermost, I remain yours,

WM. ANDERSON.

OAKLAND, Cal., February, 1882.

Letter From Elder W. H. Kelley.

Editor Herald:—In August last I left home to attend the Semi Annual Conference, appointed to convene near Council Bluffs, Iowa, on the 1st day of September following. The weather was hot and I was unwell; but was comforted and encouraged with thoughts of duty, and that I should soon meet again with many of the Saints—fellow laborers—co-workers—united together in the truest brotherhood, where the bond of unity would be strong, and peace, smiling peace, would sit as queen, and all hearts be made glad in another great re-union of the Saints.

At Chicago I was joined by our excellent brother, George A. Blakeslee, and we were soon hurrying along on chariot wheels towards "the great west;" leaving my estimable yokesman, Bro. T. W. Smith and wife, to make further preparations before leaving the city.

We passed rapidly by and over hills and valleys, creeks and rivers, farms and wood lands; and hasted by towns and cities, flocks and herds, while sleeping, chatting and speculating about the future of so great a country. We almost caught the land mania. Thought of the "fields in the woods"—the place of the Zion—the home of the Saints—then the Millennium; something of a foretaste of the coming felicity we hope to realize, at least saintly, at the end of our journey.

In due time the conference ground was reached. It lay among the hills and bluffs, as if selected in part as a place for a defense. The tents were spread out by the river side and the children of faith stood in groups in the forest shade, chatting merrily, though some wore an anxious mood. We extended the hand of greeting, soon to be reminded that other things are found in the atmosphere sometimes besides oxygen and nitrogen; and became puzzled again over the old question as to whether there is more happiness in possession than in pursuit. True, distance lends enchantment to the view. Right here, Mr. Editor, we were about to draw a picture, but seeing that your magic pen has fairly presented the case in a recent Herald, we pass it. We rather enjoyed the Conference, however, and believe that good was done. That out of the conflict of opinions, better methods will be reached and finally, greater unity attained, until the seeing "eye to eye" is reached. It was apparent that the theory "do as you are told" has not been adopted by the members of the Reorganization, as their policy; and it was just as clear that it will never be said to one of them "depart upon the left hand" for ye had not back bone. Some would exhibit a far better Christian character however, if they would learn to differ from others without nourishing a spirit of ill will towards them; but rest all questions upon the forum of enquiry and discussion, (there conflict is expected); and in a christian and manly way accept the results, let them be for or against us. The world was not made in a day, and will not come to an end before the appointed time, just because our pet schemes are not adopted by General Conference.

Conference over, on Monday morning, September 12th, we left Council Bluffs for Independence, Missouri—the magic center. A number of the brethren were on the train, homeward bound from the Conference. All day we rode along side and down the Missouri River, with almost a constant monotone of scenery before us. Fields of poorly cultivated corn, luxuriant growths of weeds and prairie grass, hills and bluffs, until we tired of the scene. If this was all of the "Great West," quick decisions could be reached as to its future.

At the setting of the sun, we passed over the large railroad bridge spanning the Missouri River at Kansas City—the rising city of the West; and soon landed at the commodious depot of that place. All was bustle and life; and judging from the immediate surroundings, one would fancy that a young Chicago was springing into life. The depot was swarming with people. Lunch rooms, fruit stands and dining halls were plentiful. Having eaten nothing since morning, the sight of refreshments caused a leaning that way, and Bro. Luff and I soon joined the lunchers. At the close, we (I) downed with forty cents, the price per head, and then we thought again of the delicious fifteen cent meals served in our beautiful Chicago. Ten miles away lay Independence, and a half hour later we were moving thitherward, where we arrived just after night fall. Refusing the hospitality of our genial companion, Bro. Joseph Luff, we put up at the Merchant's Hotel for the night, and were soon wrapped in the sweet folds of morpheus, just a little way from the "center spot."

Tuesday, the 13th, was a bright clear day and the town and its surroundings were to be seen in all of their attractiveness. The town is built with a center square, and court house as the central building; with streets radiating. Large bodies of timber, groves, lawns, hills, valleys, rivers, creeks, rivulets and prairie lands may be seen at one view, and from a single standpoint. It stands on a beautiful eminence, variegated by small hills and hollows, thus presenting most desirable places for residences. There are no places for the accumulation of stagnate waters, and thus elevated from the low lands, we would judge that a healthy atmosphere continually surrounds it. We viewed it with interest, for striking memories clustered around the scene. Here is the place selected by the Seer, upon which a city was to be built by the people of the Lord; and the place where the finger of God pointed out the spot upon which to erect a temple to His worship. There is the spot where the Saints' printing press was destroyed by a vicious mob. It is the scene where forty-eight years ago, mob violence took the place of law and an innocent people were robbed of their rights and expelled from the country by lawless and irresponsible renegades; while the officers of the law looked on in mute silence and saw twelve hundred citizens driven from their homes in the cold month of November, to freeze and starve in the wilderness, or on the bleak prairies, unless sheltered by charitable hands. The ungodly hands still infest the land. A few days before our arrival, the railway train was stopped and the passengers robbed, just three miles from Independence.

While there, the brethren conducted us to the observatory, on the top of the Court House, where one of the finest views of natural scenery that we have ever witnessed may be had. Beautiful groves of hard wood timber may be seen for miles around. Three miles to the north, the Missouri River moves majestically eastward for some distance, and then veers to the south, forming the basin that drains the whole country. In every direction, one can see from twenty five to thirty miles, over woodlands, houses, villages, towns, creeks, &c.; while to the south extensive prairie lands come into view. Bro. Blakeslee thought he had never seen anything so grand and beautiful. Were we partial? carried away by fancy? or is this really one of the most beautiful spots of earth that the Creator has made for the habitation of man? Whatever may be said of its future, nature has most wonderfully beautified and adorned it as for a coming crown of glory; and whether pointed out by human sagacity or the Seer's vision, it stands as another proof of the matchless forecast and sagacity in selecting, so peculiarly characteristic of the Seer.

We met with a number of the Saints, among them, Bro. Warnky and family, Bro. Luff and family, Bro. Brackenbury and family, with others. At the latter place a number of the sisters had gathered at a quilting-bee, where they were spending the time in a useful way and merrily. The Saints number about one hundred and fifty-five, and they own a commodious brick church in the east part of town: They dwell with their neighbors (non believers) in peace and safety. A kindly spirit is manifest by all. Indeed, the Saints are encouraged to gather there, make homes and help build up the town and country. So much for the silent forces—ever vigilant, active and effective—bringing about the great decrees of God, to ultimate in a final preparation for the end. Another of Joseph's (?) mistakes.

In company with Bro. Warnky and Dr. Wm. E. McLellan, we visited the "temple lot" lying west of the Court House. The doctor was able to point out the identical spot where Joseph stood when he first visited it, and which is the place of the corner stone. He visited it soon after himself, when it was all covered with young poplars thickly standing. Joseph cut his way in through this thick growth of trees, brush and saplings, and marked the spot by blazing a tree near by, cutting away the under brush for a few feet around and setting up a small stone that had been picked up in the ravine below. This was all the corner stone that was ever laid upon it, and it only to mark the place of the corner.

It is a beautiful, elevated, slightly spot, and known far and near as the "temple lot." No habitation of man rests upon it; and it looks as though it had been plowed and tilled, and then sodded over. To say the least, it is a most desirable natural site upon which to build anything of magnificence and beauty.

Our short acquaintance with the Doctor while there led us to believe that he is not a very bad man after all. He is now advanced in years and strong and vigorous, and shows to have been a man of thought, high aspirations, and a student. To our surprise he had nothing to say, really, against the faith. We rather enjoyed his acquaintance. He has led rather of a strange career, but if he has any hope in God at all, it is in connection with the work revealed through the Seer. In spite of himself, he warms up towards the Saints. He is sour, however, and possesses a happy faculty of quoting the past and placing incidents and emphasizing to match, in order to make out a plausible case of his own, however severely they may reflect upon others, the truth or falsity of which can not well be determined this side of the day when the revealer of secrets shall appear, unless the Doctor's version be taken as the correct one. Judging by putting this and that together, and one would be apt to think that the Doctor is something of a monument of defeated ambition. Everybody has a story and a side.

I gleaned from him and the records in his possession, the following items: He was present when the preface to the Book of Commandments was given, and says that Sidney Rigdon wrote it down as it was dictated by Joseph. A committee had been appointed to draft a preface, consisting of himself, O. Cowdery and, I think, Sidney Rigdon, but when they made their report, the "Conference picked it all to pieces." The Conference then requested Joseph to enquire of the Lord about it, and he said that he would if the people would bow in prayer with him. This they did and Joseph prayed.

When they arose, Joseph dictated by the Spirit the preface found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants while sitting by a window of the room in which the conference was sitting; and Sidney Rigdon wrote it down. Joseph would deliver a few sentences and Sydney would write them down, then read them aloud, and if correct, then Joseph would proceed and deliver more, and by this process the preface was given.

In reply to the question, "did Joseph seem to be inspired at the time? that is, did any thing of unusual character appear to be moving him?" he said, "There was something a hold of him."

The Doctor has in his possession an old Book of Commandments (Doctrine and Covenants), published by W. W. Phelps, in Independence, Missouri, in 1833. It states, that the 17th section of the Book of Covenants was given at Fayette, New York, in June, 1830.

In the Evening and Morning Star, on page 352, vol. 2, and No. 22, the following occurs: "At a conference held in Kirtland, May 3, 1834, the following was adopted, 'After prayer the conference proceeded to discuss the subject of names and appellations, when a motion was made by Sydney Rigdon, and seconded by Newal K. Whitney, that this Church be known hereafter by the name of the Church of Latter Day Saints. Appropriate remarks were delivered by some of the members, after which the motion was put by the Moderator and passed by unanimous voice. "Joseph Smith, Jun., was moderator."

In a postscript in the Elders' Journal, page 38, vol. 1, and No. 3, which was published at Far West, July, 1838, and edited by Joseph Smith, the following is found, but there is no date to the latter: "Since Bro. Joseph came to this place we have been favored with a lengthy revelation, in which many important items are shown forth. 1. That the Church shall hereafter be called the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." The Revelation was given April 26th, 1838.

Late in the afternoon, Wednesday the 14th, we left Independence for Lexington, where we arrived late at night and remained over until morning. Large herds of cattle and swine, flocks of sheep and a beautiful country were seen on the way. But that which strikes a northern man as forcibly as anything seen in that country, perhaps, is the mixing and blending of the races. White and black as the extremes, with all shades and colors between; plaited and woven in until you can't tell where the white blood ends and the black begins. White, black, brown, chocolate color, and hues all the way through the sunflower, poplar leaf, banana skin, lemon and orange peel, &c., blended and interblended and spread out in the finest shades until one is lost for terms to express the distinction of shades. If any one can see the hand of God in thus corrupting of the races, they are wiser than we are. It portends evil rather than good, socially and nationally. It is only a question of time, when the arbitration of power will be left with the numerical strength of one of these respective shades; and amid the fires of caste and conflict, the law of force will crown the strong side king, to be warred against by a confederation of other shades and hues, and ad infinitum. Is Saul, also, among the prophets?

Early in the morning, Thursday the 15th, we left Lexington in the stage coach, crossed the Missouri River, and was landed at the railroad depot, a mile or more from the city. It was between this station and the river that the mail coach was robbed by highwaymen last Summer; and it is a most favorable place for such work, there being thick brush and woods all around. We would not have been surprised to see some ugly hand poked out of the thick brush after us, as the coach moved along. We were soon on the way to Richmond, Ray county, to visit David Whitmer, one of the witnesses. Arrived about 8:30 a. m., and breakfasted at the hotel. Here we met David Whitmer, Junior, eldest son of David Whitmer, Senior. He looks to be about forty-five years of age. Is kind hearted and is a firm believer in the Book of Mormon and in the testimony borne by his father concerning it. After breakfast we called on David Whitmer, Senior, meeting him just outside of his residence, and introducing ourselves. He invited us into the house and directed us into a small room, presumably, his own resting and sleeping apartment. John Whitmer, son of John Whitmer, deceased, and two or three more gentlemen, whose names are not remembered, were present. The women folks were house cleaning. (Just our luck). Elder Whitmer remarked that he did not feel much like talking as he had not been feeling well for some time. He appeared feeble. He is now upwards of seventy-six years of age, having been born January 7th, 1805. He is of medium height, and rather of a slender build; but this appearance may be on account of age and recent illness. He has darkish brown eyes, and his hair is white and thin. Has a good head and honest face. He talks with ease and seemed at home with every subject suggested; and without an effort, seemingly, went on to amplify upon it, so that we had nothing to do but question, suggest and listen. His intellect is far more vigorous and retentive than we expected to find. He is careful in his speech, for he studies to express himself in such a way as not to be misunderstood; and it hurts him to be misrepresented. A reporter called to see him some time ago, asked a few questions and went off and published that he had denied his testimony concerning the truth of the Book of Mormon. This hurt him so, that he is very careful, now, to have some known friends present when strangers call to see him. This accounts for the presence of others when we were there. Speaking of Joseph Smith the Seer, he said, and this is very nearly his wording: "It makes no difference what others say, I know Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and he translated the Book of Mormon by the inspiration of God from the plates of the Nephites. Some people think if they can only make it appear that Joseph's life and character were not perfect, and that he had human weaknesses, that it would prove that he was not a prophet; yet the same persons will believe that Moses who killed the Egyptian, and David who had Uriah killed, and who took a multitude of wives, and Solomon who was a polygamist and idolator; and Peter, who lied and cursed, &c., were all prophets, and should be honored and respected. What the individual life of Joseph Smith was after he translated the Book of Mormon, has nothing to do with the question as to whether he was, or was not inspired to bring that book forth."

"Do you know anything against his character?"

"I know nothing against him. I have heard some things; these I know nothing about. I have nothing to say about the character of any one, only as I know. It is not my mission to talk about the character of any. My mission is to testify concerning the truth of the coming forth of the work of God."

"What kind of man was he when you knew him personally?"

"He was a religious and straightforward man. He had to be; for he was illiterate and he could do nothing of himself. He had to trust in God. He could not translate unless he was humble and possessed the right feelings towards every one. To illustrate, so you can see. One morning when he was getting ready to continue the translation, something went wrong about the house and he was put out about it. Something that Emma, his wife, had done. Oliver and I went up stairs, and Joseph came up soon after to continue the translation, but he could not do anything. He could not translate a single syllable. He went down stairs, out into the orchard and made supplication to the Lord; was gone about an hour—came back to the house, asked Emma's forgiveness and then came up stairs where we were and the translation went on all right. He could do nothing save he was humble and faithful."

His statement concerning the vision they had of the plates and the angel was as follows: "I was plowing in the field one morning, and Joseph and Oliver came along with a revelation stating that I was to be one of the witnesses to the Book of Mormon. I got over the fence and we went out into the woods, near by, and sat down on a log and talked awhile. We then kneeled down and prayed. Joseph prayed. We then got up and sat on the log and were talking, when all at once a light came down from above us and encircled us for quite a little distance around; and the angel stood before us. He was dressed in white, and spoke and called me by name and said 'Blessed is he that keepeth His commandments.' This is all that I heard the angel say. A table was set before us and on it the records were placed. The Records of the Nephites, from which the Book of Mormon was translated, the brass plates, the Ball of Directors, the sword of Laban and other plates. While we were viewing them the voice of God spoke out of heaven saying that the Book was true and the translation correct."

We then asked him, "Do you remember the peculiar sensation experienced upon that occasion?" He answered very slowly and definitely.

"Yes; I remember it very distinctly; and I never think of it, from that day to this but what that same spirit is present with me."

"How did you know it was the voice of God?"

"We knew it was the voice of God. I knew it was the voice of God just as well as I knew any thing."

This narration was delivered in a mild, but fervent voice; and as he spoke and bore witness, and we listened, the Spirit of God rested in great power upon us like a flame of glory, or burning coal from the altar of God. It enveloped our beings and glowed in our hearts while tears of gratitude and joy flowed down our cheeks. Bro. Blakeslee who sat opposite, but near by and facing me, was so moved by this divine touch—silent and heavenly power—that he could not refrain from weeping. Despite our power of resistance, for a moment we sat speechless, uttered not a word, but with a look exchanged thoughts and read the moving of each other's heart. We were satisfied, established, confirmed. The Spirit of God that had been with me and inspired my soul while defending that Record, and the divinely appointed mission of the Seer, for lo! these many years, while standing and testifying before multitudes, large and small, now appeared and lit up my being as with a flame, as I listened to the voice of a chief witness testify of what he had seen, and heard, and felt, in relation to the coming forth of this Latter Day Work. The worthy sage testified truthfully, for God bore witness.

Whatever other men may think of David

Whitmer, it is our belief that he is a man of God; and that he is performing his part in this great Latter Day Work, faithfully and acceptably to his heavenly Father. He is respected and honored of his neighbors, and loved and admired by his relatives, of which there is a large circle there, and all in the faith. Who shall say that this man of candor, now standing upon the verge of the grave, has borne a false witness.

Conversation ended, we were soon on the way to Stewartsville, having been requested by telegram, while at Independence, to visit that place in order to meet a Disciple preacher that had made his way into that community, and was threatening our people with utter destruction. In due time we arrived in the neighborhood where our belligerent chief had taken up quarters, to find Bro. Bozarth and him hard at it. The trains having missed connection, we were a day late, and the fires of conflict burned so fiercely in this antagonist, and he swelled to such an enormous size, threatened and defied—was ready to do it right now—that it was thought wise to throw Bro. Bozarth in the breach, to save the honor of the cause, at least, until we arrived. This would be destructionist being informed of our arrival, and as ready to sit over opposite him, he quickly informed the brethren that he proposed to eat one of our men at a time and that he was not done with Bozarth. We listened through two sessions, and seeing that our cause was in good hands, and in no imminent danger, we left the hostile camp. Bro. Bozarth has my warmest sympathy, and I shall ever consider myself under obligations to him for getting in ahead of me and meeting that—chap. May fortune ever favor him.

Sheltered and cared for over night, by a good brother living near the Saints' Meeting House, on the 17th we returned to the vicinity of Council Bluffs; and next day Bro. Blakeslee took the eastern bound train for home.

In our judgment, Stewartsville, Missouri, is one of the finest and most desirable farming countries on the western slope. Having been raised in that country and acquainted with its ins and outs, we think we have a right to commend. Stranger, without a home, go to the vicinity of Stewartsville, buy a farm and be happy.

Least some may adjudge us prolix, we close

COLDWATER, Mich., Jan. 16th, 1882.

Why Is It So.

THAT there is a general spiritual depression all over the land, no one with any degree of observation can deny. A cold, luke-warm state of things seems to exist among all religious bodies, and an apparent lack of spiritual interest among those who should be alive and energetic in the great work of our Master. And this indifference does not seem to be confined to any particular locality, or to any one religious body of people, but on every hand, and in every place we see it cropping out; why is it so?

There may be many reasons assigned for this state of things; but we shall in this brief article only refer to one of the most prominent, such an one as comes to the surface and is within the grasp of our comprehension; and while we notice one of the great reasons for such a state of things, we admit that there are diversities of causes, all seeming to transpire together to bring about the one great result.

But a short time ago the writer availed himself of an opportunity of attending a religious service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in a thriving little town, which service was the closing one of quite a protracted effort. The writer, judging from the past, would conclude that the same earnest labor a few years ago, would have brought to their altar a large number of unconverted souls, but there was hardly a result worthy of notice, so much so that the minister in charge at the close of his efforts, was led to exclaim in substance, "Why is it so?"

And this may be said of many localities. We hear the same cry coming up from almost all religious bodies of people. There is one great element that comes to the surface that we feel quite willing to maintain is one great cause of this lack of interest in spiritual work, and that is the influence of the teachings of such men as R. G. Ingersoll. That his teachings have had a great effect upon the minds of many religious people no one can deny. We find to day, many heretofore live, energetic, spiritual men and women, openly and tacitly endorsing some of the teachings of Ingersollism; enough so, to show to us that they too have fallen under the dire influence of that element; and as the influence of that element spreads among the people (which it is sure to do), so spiritual interest in better things will continue to grow less. And while we admit that this element is well calculated to stir up the spirit and comprehensibilities that have so long time lain spiritually dormant in many, and has so used many heretofore bound by the shackles of priestcraft, to think, and use, and exercise the reasoning faculties that God has given them; we yet must acknowledge that the former has far outweighed the good the latter has done for man, spiritual good and eternal peace. There is at the present time, too many who are too willing to grasp and cherish any and every view that is calculated in its nature to give them an excuse for rejecting the revelations of God—the means of salvation to man; and there are many views connected with this infidel element, that seems just to fill an aching void, with those who have never known the truth, and with all such a great harm is done by this. Certainly the efforts of our Elders can in no way be better employed for a great part of their time, than in showing to the people the great contradistinctive features existing between this unconsoling, infidel element, and the solid Rock of God's Eternal Truth, that will bring to man everlasting joy, eternal peace and sweet comfort, and glory in the kingdom of our God.

Energy will do anything that can be done in this world; and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunities, will make a two legged animal a man without it.

The keenest abuse of our enemies will not hurt us so much in the estimation of the discerning as the injudicious praise of our friends.

The beginning of faith is action, and he only believes who struggles; not he who merely thinks a question over.

We hand folks over to God's mercy, and show none ourselves.

Priesthood.

Beloved Herald:—We trust that in your issue for December 15th, 1881, under the title of "Name," the Church of Christ need not necessarily be called the "Church of Christ," nothing more nor nothing less, to be his church. That it may be called many names to distinguish it from other churches, or branches of the same church; that it may even be called simply "The Church of Latter Day Saints," to distinguish it from former day Saints, for convenience, or other proper motive, if it has all the other necessary prerequisites and is indeed his church; and, as we have promised to treat on the subject of priesthood, we will now endeavor to fulfill that promise.

My Father, grant, O, grant me light,
Make free my thoughts, make clear my brain;
That I may guide my pen aright,
Thy Church and Priesthood to maintain;
Thy righteous cause may I defend,
My memory, Lord, wilt thou increase;
Thy Spirit into my bosom send;
I ask naught else, but grant me these,
That I may make this subject clear
To all who love the truth to hear.

That there is transmitted to the Church of Christ, whenever and wherever he has one on the earth, authority to act in his name, for the upbuilding, maintenance and instruction of the same; and that such authority is transmissible from one member of said church to another, under proper rules and regulations designed by Christ, we think is abundantly clear from the reading of the scriptures; for is not God a God of order, hence a God of system? Again: that priesthood and authority are synonymous terms, expressive of the same thing, is evident from the same source; or at least where there is no authority, there is no priesthood. For where there is priesthood, either of the higher, or lower order, it is by virtue of that priesthood, that the one holding it has the authority to act in all callings of the same.

Did Jesus have a mission to perform to the children of men in his first advent to this earth? If so, did he come with proper authority from the Father? Did he come in his own name, to do his own will; or in the name, and to do the will of him that sent him? And if so was he ordained?

"For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 6:38).

Again: "I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear. I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." (John 5:30)

As to whether he was ordained or not, Paul tells us of a time when God winked at the ignorance of men, but that now he commanded men everywhere to repent, because he was going to judge them; "By that man whom he hath ordained." (Acts 17:30, 31).

Unto what was he ordained? "For every High Priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins; who can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity. And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, to offer for sins."

And no man was allowed to take this honor unto himself, save he was called of God as was Aaron. No, I mistake; I have only quoted it as it should be, if no man was to hold that priesthood since Christ's day. "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is (in the present tense) called of God, as was Aaron. So also Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee. As he saith also in another place, (Psalms 110:4). "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." (Hebrews 5:1-6).

Here we not only learn that every high priest taken from among men, is ordained to officiate in their calling; but we learn, impliedly, at least, that Aaron held the Melchisedec (high) priesthood; and that no man then, in Paul's day, was to receive that priesthood or honor, "But he that is (present tense) called of God as was Aaron." Would Paul have made use of the name of Aaron to show how men were called to the high priesthood, instead of some one who held the same, if Aaron held it not? We think not.

Now, having proven that Jesus was ordained; as well as all high priests are ordained—that he came not to do his own will, but the will of him that sent him, and that he did nothing only what the Father sent him to do, we wish to show some things that he did and taught. In my first reference I wish to elucidate a principle, as well as to show what Christ taught, i. e. How I read and understand the word.

"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you." (John 15:16) How are we to understand the above text? Are we to understand that Jesus had chosen every believer, every man who obeyed the gospel? Surely not by that text alone. Are we to understand that every man who is truly called of God and legally ordained to the priesthood is among the chosen? No, not even Paul can claim anything from the text above cited. None but the twelve Apostles who were then present, at that last supper, can claim anything from that text. "I have chosen and ordained you," you twelve, who are here present. It seems unnecessary to make this comment or explanation; but there is such a habit among many to quote the Bible to prove their point, as do many preachers who want to prove that they are called of God; and then they will quote Christ's commission to the Apostles: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel;" and thus steal the Apostles' commission. When we quote any book, author or person, let us understand first, who is speaking, or writing, who is spoken to, and what is spoken of, the subject under consideration. By doing this, we shall not go far astray. What did Jesus ordain the Apostles to? Evidently to be Apostles, for that is the title by which they are and were known. But did they hold any priesthood, and if so what? Again, did Jesus hold any office but that of an high priest? Was he an Apostle?

"Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus" Heb. 3:1.

Here we learn that Jesus was not only an apostle and an high priest, but in the following verse we are told that he was faithful to him that appointed, or sent him. Now how, or with what authority was Jesus endued to do the work that the Father sent him to do? We have showed by our last quotation that he was both an apostle and an high priest, as well as being faithful to the mission he received. Hence, that was the way he was sent. Again. "Then said Jesus unto them again, Peace be unto you; as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." John 20:21. How was Jesus sent? He was sent an apostle and an high priest. And as he was sent, even so sent he the twelve. So reads the scriptures, and that without any spiritualizing or private interpretation. So now we have twelve apostles and high priests; yes, thirteen, for Jesus was both, standing at their head.

We wish now to correct an erroneous impression that is gaining ground in the hearts of many. That impression is this: that the apostles, and perhaps some others, had received the Holy Ghost before Jesus was crucified. Instance the following:

"This knowledge could not be gained by the people, because the priests that stood as mediators between them and God, could not transmit this knowledge. It could only be transmitted by the Holy Spirit, which was not yet given to the masses of believers, because Christ was not yet glorified."

And then St. John 7:39, is cited. True, the writer of the above quotation does not say that any had received the Holy Ghost, only impliedly so by the words that I have underlined, that it was not given to the masses of believers. Was the Holy Ghost given to any? Let us see. I do not like that little word, "masses." I wonder if it is in the text; if so, I will receive it. "But this he spake of the Spirit, which they that believed on him should receive; for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified." But here is an act of Jesus' after he was glorified,—no, I mistake; it was after he was resurrected. "And when he had said this, he breathed on them and said unto them, receive ye the Holy Ghost."—John 20:22. Did they then receive it? Let us see. "And, behold I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high."—Luke 24:49. What was the promise of the Father? Please read John 14:6, 7, 26; 15:26. In defense of the comments on St. John 15:16, and the assertion of the writer that there was a growing tendency by many to quote the Bible to prove their points, whether the words quoted could in justice be applied there or not; I wish to quote the following from the same writer, in which there is a fling made at the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and high priesthood.

"We see from the reading of the above that the idea is to set aside the intervention of God, through the Holy Spirit, to impart the knowledge and comfort promised by Christ; in John 14th chapter."

I have underlined the reference given to show where they get their evidence that the laity can receive all the spiritual blessings promised to the believers independently of the priesthood, or rather the officers in the church; as that word does not grate so harshly on the ears of some, as does the word priesthood. Now, I make the assertion, that there is not a single promise contained in the chapter cited by the writer referred to save in verses 21 and 23, that can apply to that objectionable word, the "masses." Every promise therein contained was made to and for "You twelve, now present at this last supper." Yes, that grand and glorious promise contained in verses 16, 17 and 26, is for you twelve apostles and high priests. "For as my Father hath sent me," Heb. 3:1, "Even so send I you," John 20:21. Is some one ready to fly to verse 12 and apply it to the "masses?" If so, let us quote it, and then analyze it a little. "Verily, verily, I say unto you." Was he here making an exception, prophetically so, of Judas, for he knew that Judas would fall and attain to none of the promises contained in this chapter? "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father."—John 14:12.

Now, when any great promise is made it sometimes becomes necessary to show their fulfillment; this we shall try to do. I never heard it claimed that every person who obeyed the gospel must of necessity receive the gift of tongues to make good the promise contained in Mark 16:17. Only that this gift must be among the believers, that is all. Just so with the promise under consideration. If we can show that the disciples did as mighty works as did Jesus, even to raising the dead; and then performed a greater work, we have gained our point. While attempting this we will say that we have read letters from J. L. Traugber and W. Watson, which we may some day take the trouble to review. But in regard to those letters, in all candor we would ask this question, Is it any more to be wondered at, that in the dark and cloudy day, when the church was in deep mourning, sorrow and affliction, on account of the martyrdom of her beloved Prophet and Patriarch, Joseph and Hyrum; with false leaders and aspirants springing up on every hand, I say is it any more to be wondered at, that the Saints should get into the dark; yes, and have dark and conflicting ideas as to where the true Church of Christ was, and who was its rightful leader, or successor; yes, and even have erroneous evidences and testimonies concerning the same, than it was that John, the greatest prophet (without any exception), that God ever had on earth, (up to his day at least); Matt. 11:11, Luke 9:28. We ask is it any more to be wondered at that Latter Day Saints should get into the dark than that John should not know that he whom he had baptized in the river Jordan; he on whom he (John) saw the Spirit of God descend in the form of dove and rest upon the Savior; he who heard that audible voice proclaim from the courts of glory: "This is my beloved Son, hear ye him." And still John, after all these evidences, must send messengers to Jesus to learn whether Jesus was truly the Christ, or whether he was to look for another. O, ye Latter Day Saints; ye who in your hot zeal had, after receiving the truth and the testimony of the same; ye who have received all the spiritual gifts ever enjoyed by former day saints, have even been visited and instructed by angels; because you have been duped and deceived by false leaders who crept into the church, in the dark and cloudy day; yes, and granted that you have borne false testimonies for those leaders; and because of this "away with all Latter Day Saintism, we want nothing to do with it;" but we are willing to believe that John was the greatest prophet that ever lived because the apostles, who all turned to their fishing nets and other occupations at the crucifixion said that Jesus said so. "O consistency, consistency."

But what did the disciples do greater than Jesus did? "Jesus answered and said unto them, go and shew John again those things which ye do hear and see. The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear; the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them."—Matt. 11:4, 5.

Which is the greatest miracle to restore the blind to sight, the deaf to their hearing, the lame to walking, to cleanse the leper, raise the dead; or by the imposition of hands to confer the Holy Ghost, that Spirit by which all miracles are wrought; who did this? the believer? Yes, but it was those holding the priesthood. "Not the masses." Instance the Savior's two Apostles and High Priests (Heb. 3:1, John 20:21), going down to Samaria. Acts 8:15-19; also 19:5, 6; 9:17. Here is a work that Jesus did not do, for after his birth the Holy Ghost was not given to "the masses" till after he was glorified; no, nor to no one else.

As we have made the assertion that the Holy Ghost was not given during Christ's mission until after he was glorified, and we trust have proven the same by John 7:39; 14:16, 17, 26; 15:26; Luke 24:49. These references show that the Holy Ghost had not been received, not even by one person during his mission; that they never received it till Acts 2:14. The last account we have of any one being filled with the Holy Ghost, prior to Acts 2d, if our memory serves us, was John from before his birth. Luke 1:15. Then his parents, 41, 67. Also Simeon and Anna, 2:25, 26, 36. And these had received this Holy Ghost some thirty years before he began his mission. But as some feel very much out of sorts about this high (Melchisedec) priesthood, but are willing to grant that all who obey the gospel and receive the Holy Ghost, old and young, male and female, indiscriminately can and do receive a priesthood, impliedly so, at least; which they are pleased to term a holy and a royal priesthood. 1st Peter 2:5, 9.

We wish to say a few words concerning this royal priesthood. No Bible believer, we trust, will deny that Melchisedec was a just, a holy, and an upright man; and as for our Savior, we know no one will call him in question. Hence the priesthood that they held must of necessity have been a holy priesthood. And as for royal priesthood, the primary rendition of the word "royal" is regal, kingly; hence, any priesthood to be a royal priesthood must emanate from a royal source, a regal personage, a king; and as Melchisedec was a royal prince, and a king; King of Salem, Prince of Peace; also, as Jesus was—is—or is to be (I care not which way you have it), both Lord of Lords and King of Kings; what priesthood could be more regal, more holy and and more royal than the high, the Melchisedec priesthood; as it was, now is, and ever will be held by both those personages. Surely none. And as for those who want all, indiscriminately, regardless of age or sex, to hold this high and holy priesthood, regardless of an ordination, let them fix that up to suit themselves. I am willing.

In my next I shall examine this subject from a Book of Mormon standpoint, as I wish to have the best of wine at the end of the feast. With the best of fellings to all and malice to none, and believing that those who preach false doctrines with their pen will come under Paul's curse, (Gal. 1:6-8), as much as the priesthood who stand behind the pulpit, I will close, hoping that it may be the means of disseminating truth.

W. R. CALHOON.

The Situation.

THE spirit of criticism seems to have taken such a wide range with the Church, that in writing for the Herald one almost feels that he must "run the gauntlet" if he attempts it, however there are a few thoughts that we wish to launch upon the great sea of public opinion, and especially the mind of the Church. Christ came as the representative of the divine will, to inaugurate the economy, the jurisprudence which was prepared and devised by the Father "before the foundation of the world." Christ had "loved righteousness" and "hated iniquity" to such an extent that it made him first in the ranks of the host of heaven; for unlike Lucifer, the "Son of the Morning," whose jealousy and love of place and power was inordinate,—he was willing to labor in the administration of the divine plan, and ascribe all the glory to Him who had devised it, and it would seem in accord with justice, that because of this he should be "anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows," and by this anointing made the presiding High Priest of that Priesthood by which this plan was to be administered, that is to say, that the authority by which the gospel was to be administered, and by which the race—whose creation was for God's glory—should be brought to a higher and better plane than which they now occupy; was given to Christ the great leader and expounder thereof, and as the Father "sent him into the world" duly authorized, the confirmation of which was by an oath, even so, in conformity with this plan Christ chose certain men and ordained them; the express and only object of which was that they might assist him in establishing and successfully bringing to pass the will of Him who had delegated this authority, and they in turn were to ordain other officers necessary to the great work before them.

Now, of the spirit that moved Christ in coming here, the manner of his life, the richness of his doctrines, and sublime truths contained therein, radiant and lustrous with justice. Truth and mercy I need not write; but I submit that no man can represent these unless God be with him, and no Elder is accepted of God who does not represent these principles. Now I do not say that they must be sent away from their homes in order to do this; but I repeat that "the field is white already to harvest," and if you are in the world you are in some part of the "field." "Thrust in thy sickle and reap," is an injunction which if heeded by all that are called Elders, would greatly assist in removing the bitterness and slothfulness found in the ranks of the Church to-day, for all can see who will, that slothfulness breeds dissension, and dissension breeds confusion and pestilence, and pestilence breeds death. "The wise man seeth the evil and hideth himself." If we are "wise" we will take the Holy Spirit for our guide, and the object of this writing is to ask Elders everywhere to go forth in the Spirit of Christ, meek and humble, and try to persuade souls to be reconciled to God; as above—"Thrust in thy sickle and reap."

It takes no far seeing mind to discover the fact that there is with the Saints both a lassitude in their individual progress in the one faith and a disinterested feeling as regards the standing or advancement of brethren in the race for the Master's reward. And is it not also a fact that the love, one toward another, which we often see manifest, is more of that kind shown forth in the world at large than the true "bond," which is so fittingly made the type of the Saints' union and feeling toward each other. "If ye love them that love you, what reward have you, do not the publicans and sinners the same?" was the language of Jesus to his early disciples; and evidently has the same force and signification to those of both earlier and later times. There is nothing so noble and grand about the simpler ties which lie between persons of the same objects, circumstances and sympathies in life, as to bring the individuals bound thereby to a near relation or semblance of the Master himself, and that unbounded, unselfish love which was and is shown forth by him toward the human family. This simpler tie is plainly traceable among all classes, and in all walks of life, and even found in the instincts of the brute creation; but the love of God—the perfect bond of Jesus to the race. The love and forbearance that should indeed be the bond of every Saint, so far excels this, as to carry one beyond the petty feelings of self-interest, reward or expectation, and, as it were, involuntarily move him out upon a work of beneficence which is of the kindest nature, because of the kindness and love which constraineth the individual himself to undertake this. It is significant of the bond which entereth in through the veil, an attribute that makes us nearest like the Son, and without which He has no (in fact) followers, whether they be called Saints or whatever the name. And herein appears the necessity of the great powers of his gospel as delivered by the Son; it is the grand means instituted to develop and bring out the affections and nobler forces of the soul, that we might be assimilated and made like Him and enjoy of the rewards in His promise.

Without this gospel we all say we could never attain to these perfections, for there is no other means and "no other name" under the heaven but that of Jesus, by which to attain to this desirable state; and contrariwise, we must say that unless we show forth in our lives the reflection of these things which are by the gospel, can we indeed and in fact, be the children of adoption therein? In other words, can we rightfully claim to be of the children of the kingdom when we have no common feelings, desires or natures of the King? For as many as walk by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." "By this the world shall know that ye are my disciples, —that ye love one another." And, "If ye love not your brother whom ye have seen, how can you love God whom ye have not seen?" "How is it brethren that there seems to be strifes, contentions and jealousies among you," for among the true Saints of God this is not so; and if we nourish and hold such, do we not also place ourselves in the state where we were before we first obeyed his commands and partook of his love? Was not this the reason for the expulsion of the churches of Asia from the bond which they had undertaken to abide but had failed, and can we, would it be right in us to expect other or better treatment? Coming down to a more practical application of these thoughts let us ask, and for the good of our souls and the Master's work, honestly and candidly ask, what are our actions and dealings toward each other and the world? Do we exercise that love and forbearance one toward another that is like to the children of the kingdom? Do we often feelingly and openly criticise a brother in his absence to his detriment or injury? Do we forget to suffer rather than do a wrong, act a wrong, or think a wrong, to a brother or sister? How often do we speak disparagingly of a brother or sister, or of their acts, through envy, malice or jealousy? Whatever may have been our condition, however we may have suffered from the poignant shaft of distrust and hatred, there can be but one true course for those who desire to "live Godly in Christ Jesus," and that is, though they suffer persecution, to say, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." This is just as true of the Saint who indulge in the foregoing practice as it was of the Pharisees who nailed Jesus to the cross. We recommend as a cure, earnest, honest, heartfelt prayer, prayer in the closet, prayer in the family circle, a continual asking by prayer for God's Spirit to guide until ye are strong enough to stand. See in conclusion and please read 5th and 6th paragraphs, 9th chapter, of Alma, Book of Mormon.

Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, March 1, 1882.

We learn, by letter from Washington, and from an Editorial in the New York Herald, that Elder George Q. Cannon was badly cross-questioned while testifying before the Judiciary House Committee. It appears that for some reason—who can guess—the manner of the man was that of one begging the question, and by no means confident that he was at home on his defenses. If the members, including Mr. Chairman of that committee, had availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by the presence of Brethren Z. H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley in the National Capital, they might easily have put the Hon. polygamic Delegate and defender into a quandary on the main point. And no wonder; when the Editor of their organ at Salt Lake City, the Evening News, so completely gives their case away, as did that official in a late issue which we published and commented upon, it is quite time that the delegate from Utah becomes alarmed, as well as others. An institution that works so unevenly and unjustly as that Celestial Marriage system confessedly does, permitting only about one in ten to be everlastingly saved by it, ought in common decency to damn with faint-heartedness not only Elder Cannon, but every other champion that essays its defense. Toll the requiem bells, and let the knell be rung.

THE most rabid and senseless denunciation of Mormonism that we have noticed at any of the anti-polygamic meetings, now so universally being held all over this country, was uttered in a meeting in Denver, Colorado, as presented in the minutes published in the Republican, of that place, for February 7th. This denunciation classes them altogether, all shades of belief in the faith enunciated at the time and by means of the Book of Mormon, are blended in one common hold as responsible for the evils, heresies, and doctrines "privily brought in." It is very strange that otherwise fair-minded men will so overlook the facts in the case. But thanks to the supervising care of the Father, the scales are being adjusted and the Law of Compensation being read. The equipoise will be found sooner or later, and we are prepared for the edict of decision, and shall be satisfied at its announcement.

How on, ye fierce preverters of the right,
The vanguard of the Faith appears;
They forward toil, but slow; yet, in their might,
The structure of Eternal Truth uprears.

BENJAMIN F. HALL, the first Chief Justice of Colorado, wrote a letter to the Editor of the New York Tribune, from Auburn, New York, dated January 28th, on the Mormon question, in which he states that at the request of President

Abraham Lincoln he visited Brigham Young, in Autumn of 1863; and he says:

"I stopped there two days, and long enough to gather from him (Brigham Young) his reasons for inventing polygamy, making it a church ordinance, and for intrenching the ordinance in his so-called Endowment House so securely that the Federal Courts with juries could not reach it."

THE New York Herald for Friday, February 10th, has a scathing editorial on the attitude of Elder George Q. Cannon, before the Judiciary Committee, from which we glean the following:

"Cannon's apology for polygamy appears to rest solely on a reference to the vices and crimes of the great Eastern cities and particularly of Washington. Because there are offenders against the law in these cities, therefore he claims that Congress shall license lawbreaking in Utah. This is puerile. It gives the whole Mormon case away. It strips it of the claim of an earnest fanaticism. It classifies the witness himself and all the Mormon people, for whom he was pretending to speak, with common criminals. If there are any genuine Mormon professors of conviction that God, speaking directly from heaven, has commanded the practice of polygamy, they must despise this man Cannon, after this apology, with an intensity which the contempt that any other persons feel for him can not begin to approach."

BRO. KENNEDY, whose name appears to the following clipping from the Mt. Forest, Ontario, Confederate, is an anxious defender of the faith; and we are pleased to note that not even in Ontario does the truth lack defenders. It is well and timely.

"To the Editor of the Mt. Forest Confederate: Would you kindly give space in your valuable paper anent an article in the evening Globe of February 2d, headed "Polygamy Questions." Now, Sir, as there seems to be a determination on the part of some of our denominations here to class the Latter Day Saints, of Egremont, or Mormons as they may be pleased to call them, or Brighamites, although we have endeavored to the utmost of our power to show the people here that we have no connection with Brigham Young's church; that we belong to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and that we are a people that look upon Polygamy as being a picture horrible in the sight of God, as the following article will show:

"It is believed that Arthur like Garfield favors a Utah legislative council bill. The President's callers yesterday included several Mormons from Decatur county, Iowa. They represent 20,000 Mormons in the United States, 5,000 of whom live in Iowa who regard Brigham Young as a heretic and his pretended revelations in regard to Polygamy as a fraud. They earnestly assured the President they and their people desire to see Polygamy destroyed and the authority of the Government exerted for that purpose. They presented to the President a copy of the Book of Mormon, requesting him to carefully examine it, and assured him he would not find Polygamy among its doctrines.

"We in Egremont claim to belong to the same church or body of people as portrayed above.

Yours respectfully,

R. G. KENNEDY."

THE Fall River, Massachusetts Sun, in its issue for February 4th, wants to know why Latter Day Saints do not drop the name "Mormon," with all that the name implies, altogether. We could safely say to this Fall River paper that we of the Reorganization have never consented to the name as applicable to us; but how shall we prevent the Sun, and other papers, and the good ministers of the churches from nick-naming us "Mormons." They constantly do it, and even do not desist when told that the name is one of reproach put on the people by thier enemies. There is no more reason to be ashamed of the name Mormon in the significance and place that the Reorganization gives it, than of the name of John, Paul, Isaiah, or any of the prophets.

Every mail that reaches us now, brings to our office papers containing notices of meetings, sermons, the sayings of this or that man, or company of men, the writing of this one or that one, more or less informed, upon the question of Mormonism and the Mormons. And these papers are from all parts of the land, from the influential city daily journal, read by hundreds of thousands, to the county weekly, read only by the few. All of them evince great interest in the ultimate result to follow the advent and career of the Seer of Palmyra; and all deploring the evil things that have been done in his name, or by him as the case may prove to be.

We did think to keep note of these papers, but their number has so rapidly increased in the last few days that we have decreed it inexpedient to do so.

The New York Herald; the Oakland, California, Times; the Pittsburgh Chronicle; the Kenton, Tennessee, Courier; the Dubuque, Iowa, Herald, and a host of others. In the Kenton, Courier, Bro. G. S. Hyde has an excellent article; in the Pittsburgh Chronicle, some of the Church there, gets in a column in defense. The Philadelphia, Record, all contain articles well calculated to set us on the record right.

At the meeting in the Opera House, Dubuque, Iowa, February 7th, it chanced that Elder J. F. McDowell, was present, and though the reporter (ignorantly of course) gave his place of residence as Utah, the following is what he said, he being permitted to speak:

"Prof. J. F. McDowell, of Utah territory, was introduced. He said in substance: 'If ever the prediction made by Paul, as recorded in 1st Timothy 4:1, 2, had its fulfillment, it surely had it in the person of Brigham Young, who 'departed from the faith and gave heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils.' Polygamy and the so-called Mormonism are distinct. I have reason to believe that polygamy never was one of the original tenets of the Mormon faith. We condemn it as a criminal after-thought of the Utah leaders. All Mormons are not polygamists, but all Utah polygamists claim to be Mormons. The revelation of Brigham Young, which was presented in 1852, superceded all gospel authority. It recommended polygamy as a panacea for all spiritual ills and qualms of conscience. Matthew 19:5, says: 'For this cause shall a man leave father and mother and they twain shall be one flesh.' From Book of Doctrine and Covenants, p. 33: 'Inasmuch as the Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication and polygamy, we declare that we believe that one man should have but one wife and one woman but one husband.' This doctrine was accepted by the Mormon Church in 1837 by a general assembly of the priesthood, at Kirtland, Ohio. The book, Doctrine and Covenants, of which the priesthood then approved, contained the following: 'Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart and shalt cleave unto her and none else.' The speaker by other scriptural quotations demonstrated that polygamy is not of biblical origin. Ten years ago Brigham Young was ready to receive a revelation from his 'deity' to the effect that God was satisfied with the grand results (?) of polygamy and give it a quietus, could he have the assurance that the honor, dignity, obligations, and title of 'state' would be conferred on Utah. President Taylor, Brigham Young's successor, stated at a tabernacle meeting: 'There is a principle connected with our social life, one of the greatest principles advanced by the Lord for the good of the human family, with which one of the laws of the United States is at variance.' Our government at present is fostering a system which its laws declare to be wrong. 'Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need of breaking the laws of the land,' is an injunction contained in the Mormon bible. The Mormons believe in the Book of Mormon. They also believe in the immutability of God and yet they profess to believe that plural marriages is a heavenly institution. History shows that polygamy has prevailed in demoralized and monogamy in civilized countries. Any divergence from monogamy is a violation of the holiest relations of the sexes and incidentally demoralizing to morals, society and religion. The most conservative polygamists stoutly maintain that polygamy is an essential principle of the Mormon creed. Utah, when Brigham Young and his flock settled therein, was not within the jurisdiction of the United States. Our government should enforce the existing laws and thereby extirpate the vile system of polygamy."

POLYGAMY NOT MORMONISM.

BRO. T. W. SMITH gets the following in the Chicago Herald for February 5th:

HE THAT KEEPETH THE LAWS OF GOD HATH NO NEED TO BREAK THE LAWS OF THE LAND.

"The Rev. T. W. Smith, pastor of the Church of the Reorganization, and missionary to Chicago by appointment of the general conference of the said church, in a letter to the Herald, says:

"The claim of the Mormons that they practice polygamy by virtue of a revelation from God is a falsehood, and the revelation is a miserable fraud; and the idea that the extirpation of polygamy by the authority of the United States Government would be persecution for religion's sake, is positively absurd. This revelation is contrary to the whole letter and spirit of genuine Mormonism, and to accept it as a revelation or command from God necessitates a complete repudiation of principles which are absolutely essential to the very existence of the name and character of the church. A man can no more be a member or a minister of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and practice polygamy and believe in the so-called revelation in which it claims to rest, than he can be a Methodist and repudiate the discipline, or a Presbyterian and ignore the Confession of Faith, or that he can be a Christian and refuse to obey the gospel of the Son of God. The doctrine of the church, from which the Salt Lake people have departed in so large a measure, and the church articles and decisions of general conferences, are no more emphatically opposed to murder, treason, theft, adultery, lying, etc., than they are to polygamy, and their language can not be misunderstood in regard to any of these crimes. It is just as fair to call polygamy Mormonism as to call it Episcopalianism, Baptistism, or Universalism, or a part of Christianity. For one, I want the citizens of Chicago and the country at large to understand that whether the revelation on which polygamy is said to have been founded came through Joseph Smith, (which we deny, and challenge proof to the contrary), or through Brigham Young (which is most likely), the inspirer of it was the devil. It is full to overflowing with contradictions, absurdities, false prophecies, positive lies, blasphemies, heretical notions and doctrines of devils generally. Joseph Smith is reported by numbers of respectable people to have said, 'If Brigham Young ever leads this church he will lead it to hell;' and the chances are exceedingly fair for his claim to prophetic ken to be admitted by the world at large, in this one instance, at least.

"The position of John Taylor and George Q. Cannon and others of that heretical institution in Utah, that they are justified in violating the laws of the land by virtue of this pretended command from heaven, is utterly untenable and pernicious. By a positive command, which the church by unanimous vote in general conference assembled, accepted as the word of God, the church was told in language unmistakable: 'Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land.'" Which means that God does not sanction treason, and that any revelation that claims to have come from him that sanctions law breaking, as this satanic revelation does, is to be considered a fraud, a miserable imposture and a daring blasphemy. If there is no hell, there ought to be one invented for men who have the impious effrontery to palm off such a tissue of lies, false doctrine, law-defying, heaven-daring sentiments as this revelation from the realms of Apollyon as the word of a pure and holy God. If the press wants a true and proper cognomen for the church in Utah let it be, The Apostate Mormon Church. And the leaders at least as Apostate Mormons. Or in the name of truth and justice, if they are Mormons, call us not so. And, by the way, we don't accept the name, whether it is an honest or a mean one."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Eliza Hunter wrote from Alton, Illinois:

"Father Whitehead preached a very able and encouraging discourse, yesterday; subject; Faith,—the necessity of us having faith, and what faith and works should and could accomplish, &c. Father Whitehead bids me send his kind regards to you, and assurance of his love and sympathy and prayers in your behalf."

Father Whitehead is an old-time Saint, and was a clerk in the office of the Presidency in the days of Joseph the Martyr. How the news that such men as he are preaching the old time faith, cheers and strengthens us. God bless them, every one.

Bro. E. C. Brand sends us some clippings, of which he says:

"I send you some clippings from Papillion Times, to give you an idea of how mad the devil has been in Sarpy county, but I think we have cropped his ears and tail; have not yet heard more of him. I am delighted with the work of Bro. Z. H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley at Washington; they are surely the right men in the right place."

Bro. A. J. Cato writes from Butler, Alabama, thus:

"I left the Lone Star Branch last week, baptized one there. I am now with the Butler Branch. I will go to Pine Apple next week, and will try to get an opening there."

Bro. J. R. Badham was still hammering away. From his letter we extract the following:

"I am in receipt of a letter from one Mr. Blew Alberty, Tahlequah, Indian Territory, in answer to a letter written to him by myself. He states there are about 60,000 Indians, not generally very well educated; they speak many different languages, and are generally an honest people; their morals are good as they regard life. As to their religion, they are largely heathen, especially the wild tribes, but Protestant under the five civilized tribes; among which are found members of the Latter Day Saints; he states he is sorry there were not more. He also wished that he had a copy of the Book of Mormon. I believe from the tone of his letter that he is acquainted with the latter day work, but perhaps of the Brighamite order. He says the tribes would treat a minister with respect and kindness. The above information I have gathered from the answer to a number of questions I propounded to this man. I feel that an effort should be made, that a mission should be established in the Indian nation, for I think that they have a work to perform in the great wheel of the latter day work."

Sr. Rebecca Dayton, who is in her eighty-fifth year, writes from Kirtland, Ohio, that she is still strong in the faith. She was visited by a Brighamite Elder, who gave her a lecture on the Godhead, new to her at least.

THE GODHEAD.

WE are sometimes asked what the faith of the Church is in relation to the Godhead, in view of the language of Abinadi, as recorded in Mosiah, 8th. And we are asked to reconcile this language with the language of the New Testament where reference is made to the Godhead.

The question is urged, upon the supposition that unless these expressions be reconciled, the one or the other must be taken as the correct one, to the exclusion of the other, if they shall necessarily differ. It is proper for us to state that it is by no means necessary to take the view that the question supposes; that is, that the language of Abinadi, in the Book of Mosiah, and that of John, in the New Testament, are widely different; nor is it essential to the harmony of the truth that they agree in terms.

The position of the Church is that there are two persons in the Godhead, the Father and the Son; and the Holy Ghost, a personage of spirit, the mind, and will, the Spirit of Truth, of the Father and the Son, their unity and force.

The statement in Mosiah is that of Abinadi, and so far as authority is concerned, stands to the reader and believer precisely as do the words of Peter, Paul, John or James, in the New Testament, and is not entitled to any more prominence in determining the truth, or falsity of the Book of Mormon, and the latter day work; than are the statements of these latter named, in determining the character of the gospel taught by Christ; and all Bible readers know that the relation of the events concerning the life of Jesus and his death do not agree in terms; nor are Bible believers expected to harmonize them, or abandon their faith in Christ, should they fail when asked to do so.

The only explanation we offer of this seeming difference is as follows: The words are the words of Abinadi, and are used by him in an effort to make the character and nature of Jesus Christ plain to them whom he was addressing; and should be so treated. The word Father, as used, is evidently intended to typify Christ in his creative character as the maker of this world; and in this sense Abinadi agrees with John, who wrote: "All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made which was made."—John 1:3.

The statement of Abinadi that "God himself shall come down among the children of men," is in direct harmony with those of John: "And the Word was God," "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth."—John 1:1, and 14. The one statement is as strong as the other, and no fault in expression can be found with that of Abinadi that may not with those of John. The statement of Isaiah is equally strong; and by the possibly emphatic and literal construction of Abinadi, may have led that Elder in Israel to say what he did: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."—Isaiah 9:6. If the language of Abinadi in endeavoring to explain the mystic character of Jesus Christ is to be taken as antagonizing, and opposed to the New Testament declarations, why not class that of Isaiah with it, as they are the same. But the proper method of examination is to not burden our interpretation by forcing the positive construction of the statement of a sentence in a discourse separated from all the rest of the same discourse and thus make it do violence to the whole. Abinadi had warned the people against continuing in their iniquity, stating that unless they repented they should be brought into bondage from which none should "deliver them, except it be the Lord, the Almighty God." Mosiah 7:8. He then teaches the mission work of Christ as the Messiah, quoting largely from Isaiah, in whose prophecies he charges the people to take comfort; and it is in this exhortation that the language we are writing of occurs; and it surely ought to occur to those who put this strained construction upon Abinadi's words, as if he should have said that Jesus Christ was God the Father of himself; that his expression should be construed by the light of the prophecies from which he was quoting, and from his explanation in connection with it; "The Father because he (Jesus) was conceived by the power of God; and the Son, because of the flesh;" (Jesus); which was begotten. Here God is recognized as the moving cause, precisely as in John's the "Word was God," and the "Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." It would be just as consistent to throw out all other references in the New Testament to God, that seem to signify two personages, as useless, being overshadowed by these, if they be arbitrarily construed, as to insist upon the arbitrary meaning of Abinadi's words, and thereby raise opposition between the Book of Mormon and the Bible that does not exist in reality. It is "straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel."

All through the New Testament Scriptures there is a distinction kept up between the Father and the Son; but sometimes the writers use terms in such a way that if one was so disposed they might hang a difference on them. One of these is found in Hebrews 1, and 8: "But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever." Another is found in Paul to Timothy: "Because we trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men."

A forced construction put upon such passages, unrestricted and unexplained by all others, led our fathers to the confession of faith found in the creed: "There is but one living and true God, everlasting, without body or parts, of infinite power, wisdom, and goodness; the maker and preserver of all things, visible and invisible. And in unity of this Godhead there are three persons, of one substance, power, and eternity;—the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. The Son, who is the Word of the Father, the very and eternal God," &c.

Now, if the fathers could so understand the prophecies of Isaiah, and the plainer teaching of the New Testament, it is not surprising that Abinadi and some other of the Mormon prophets might have put their understanding in similar form.

But it is not necessary to pursue the subject further in this strain; Abinadi spoke as he comprehended Christ's nature and character; and it is more to be wondered at that he came so near to Paul, who wrote to Timothy, "Great is the mystery of godliness; God was manifest in the flesh;" than it would be if he should have gone very wide of the truth, had he done so.

The opinion held by two of the Presidency agreed herein is, that there are two personages in the Godhead; God, the Father, and Jesus Christ the Son. That Christ Jesus was called the Father because of his creative power, holding equality of power with God; and the Father, because of the Spirit Christ which was of God, the Son because of the flesh, Jesus; and that the third power named in connection with them, is the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth, the mind, will and power of both the Father and the Son. The confession of the Church is found in the Epitome, and in Paul's letter to the Ephesians: "One Lord, (Jesus Christ), one faith, one baptism, (of the water and the Spirit), one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all and in you all." "One body, and one Spirit." Eph. 4.

In the light of this confession of faith, and the light of the words of the Savior himself, "Ye believe in God, believe also in me," John 14:1; "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father," John 14:9; "If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father; my Father is greater than I," John 14:28; "That they may all be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us," John 17:21; "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," Luke 13:46, are all the references to the Father and the Son to be understood; the preponderance of evidence being largely in proof of the duality of the Godhead. All constructions contrary to this do violence to the Fatherhood of God on the one hand, and the Sonship of Christ Jesus on the other, and create inharmony between the gospels, the Book of Mormon and the covenants and articles of the Church, which is entirely foreign to the purpose, design and genius of the christian economy.

If it be contended further that any writer of the Book of Mormon, or any teacher of the faith, now teaches concerning the Godhead, that which is contrary to the teaching of the New Testament, thus antagonizing and making void that teaching, they should be taken and treated as the statements of the opinions of men, and not authorized by the Father, the son, or the Spirit of Truth.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE following papers have noticed the Brief presented to President C. A. Arthur, the Senate and House of Representatives, by Brn. Z. H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley, now at Washington, papers sent us by different brethren: Herald and Sun, New York; Press and Ledger, Philadelphia; Herald and Advertiser, Boston; Telegraph, Dubuque; Times-Star, Cincinnati; Herald, Chicago; Dollar-Times, Cincinnati.

President Joseph Smith left home and the "Editorial Sanctum" at Lamoni, Iowa, on the 9:20 train on the morning of Tuesday, February 21st. The brother's destination is Chicago, Illinois. He goes on the invitation of the Hon. John Wentworth, to speak at the mass meeting of the citizens of Chicago, on the evening of the 22d February, to urge the National Government to pass such laws that will effectually suppress the vile practice of polygamy in the Brighamite Church, and thereby vindicate the fair name of the Reorganized Church. May success attend our brother's effort. He purposes making a short stay at Plano and Sandwich on his return.

Sr. J. E. Haney wrote from Kirtland, Ohio, rather sadly of their prospects there.

Conference minutes of the Decatur District reached us twenty-four hours after our issue for February 15th had gone to press; and as the next session will be held at Lucas, on the 4th and 5th instant, there is hardly time to get them in before the next falls due; they are therefore omitted. The Pittsburgh conference minutes also came too late for March 1st Herald, and for the same reason will not be published. The conference meets at Pittsburgh, 12th and 13th March.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith writes from Bevier, Missouri, that he has not been altogether idle; that he has of late been most wonderfully blessed with liberty in preaching, and has never seen a time when so many and so favorable opportunities for preaching were offered. He can fill only a small part of the many calls.

Bro. and Sr. Halsted would like a small family of Saints to join them at Harrow, Ontario, to aid them in taking care of the people there, making and mending the shoes, &c.

We commend the letter of Bro. W. H. Kelley, in this issue of the HERALD; especially that part of it reciting the interview of Elder George A. Blakeslee and himself with Elder David H. Whitmer, the surviving witness to the Book of Mormon. May that favored man of truth live many a year yet to tell this unfriendly generation how much God had done for them.

Sr. Clara McGrew, Chatfield, Minnesota, says, that it has been six years since they had preaching there. An Elder would be most welcome.

Bro. E. C. Brown preached five times at Pilot Rock Branch, Cherokee county, Iowa, held one Sacrament meeting, baptized two, February 2d, and two on the 3d. Bro. B. Salisbury and a Bro. Hayes assisted him. He says "I am over sixty and my night is soon coming. I am therefore most anxious to get my work all done. I am uncompromising, in the faith."

We do not know what to do with all the letters we are receiving. Many must necessarily go over. We have quite a number of long ones from the brethren in the field; which we should be pleased to put in, but can not for want of space.

Sr. Mary Leavins sends us a poem inscribed to Bro. G. A. Montague, which for want of room is laid over.

The Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Chronicle of February 6th, has a short editorial notice of a column letter by a member of the Reorganization, which closes thus: "Delegate Cannon, it will be seen, is between two fires. He has prostituted a religion, and persists in lying, when the early and present teachings of Mormonism are squarely against him."

Error in report of Little Sioux, Iowa, Branch. Read 146 members, instead of 246. By order of J. L. Gunsolly, Clerk of Branch.

Bro. Thomas Ames wrote January 30th, feelingly of the need of an Apostle to travel in Maine, and assuring us of the sure care and success of one coming there.

D. D. Babcock wrote from Neelyville, Missouri, February 16th; expected to go from there to Independence.

R. M. Elvin wrote from Wilber, Nebraska, February 14th; weather fine; some opposition, of course, but the way led upward.

Bro. M. T. Short wrote from Utah, and sent us News for which we thank him. See HERALD for February 15th, for our use of it.

Bro. E. N. Webster, of Boston Highlands, Massachusetts, writes February 15th, that the work of Brn. Gurley and Kelley, at Washington, is having a most excellent effect in favor of the Reorganized Church. Bro. A. N. Hoxie succeeded in getting an article in Boston Herald, most timely and well. Bro. Webster had been sick, but was recovering.

Bro. R. S. Salyards, wrote from Pittsburg, February 11th, and sent paper, in which he had ably defended the Church; the spirit of the fathers and grandfathers in this great work is surely resting upon the sons and grandsons. Amen. So let it be.

Bro. A. C. Inman writes from Marshalltown, Iowa, February 9th, has been suffering long from dyspepsia, and had a hard time; was trying to keep the faith, and anxious to be on the Master's business. He deems that sanctification comes by the gospel only.

Elder John Morgan writes from No. 9 Williamstown, near Merthyr Tydvil, Wales, January 8th, that he had been astray, but had returned to his love of the Church this two years back, and was now anxious to do good. He states that there are eight branches now in Wales. He further says that an Elder can go from Antyglo to Carman there, sixty miles, and labor with Saints all the time. He was going ten miles on the Sunday to do all the good he could. He wishes a Welsh Elder could come and be with them for awhile.

Bro. H. Robinson wrote from Hyde Park, Pennsylvania, January 25th. He was doing all he could to get the people to hear. At Nauticook he met an Elder from Utah, and asked him to discuss the difference, but he would not. The Spirit had warned the Saints of his coming.

Bro. D. K. Dodson writes a specially good letter from Council Bluffs, Iowa, strongly commendatory of the stand taken by Bro. C. Derry and J. M. Putney in a late Herald.

Bro. C. W. Short writes from Joplin, Missouri, January 26th, reporting that from Conference in April to date, he had preached all that his age and infirmities would permit, laboring at Chicago, Kewanee, Peoria, Sandwich, Millersburg and Henderson Grove, and preaching as often as opportunity and desire would permit, arriving at his home receiving such welcome as friends and Saints can give.

Bro. F. R. Tubb wrote from Hackney, England, most encouragingly of the work there.

Correspondence.

825 Thirteenth Street, N. E.
WASHINGTON, D. C.

February 16th, 1882.
Dear Bro. Joseph.—Yours of the 10th inst. at hand. To-day we appeared before the House Judiciary Committee, presented our argument in print, also the Polygamic Revelation, together with verbal statements, &c., &c. We also presented the Book of Mormon, and are requested to furnish the Doctrine and Covenants. Will you please send us one. We thought the committee were happily surprised when they saw the high and radical grounds we took. Mr. Cannon was not there, although the chairman said he would notify him.

Bro. Kelley got up on a high horse when questioned by one of committee, and told them plainly that the polygamic document taught murder, and asked them if Congress could condone that? I think you will understand me properly when I tell you that we "stood by our guns;" and pleasantly too. Judge McBride, and contestant

Campbell, of Utah, were present; the former speaking to the question and supporting our ideas.

The Edmunds Bill, which we favor, passed the Senate to-day. We hope to see it become a law. In order to pass this bill, the rules were suspended, &c. Some Senators thought it had been "urged" and "pressed" upon the notice of the Senate, but however that may be, it passed after a two day's struggle. I believe it will become a law, and if so, a step in the right direction has been gained.

We sent you to-day copy of bill, also copy of argument, and if agreeable would like the latter sent as Herald supplement.

Hope to visit Philadelphia and New Jersey soon; but shall not abandon this city, as we find that presence, and a constant willingness to do, helps to move machinery. We feel fully satisfied with our work so far, and only pray—God speed the plow.

As ever and in bonds,
ZENAS H. GURLEY.

HOOVER, Nebraska,
January 31st, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—Have just arrived here, and expect to begin meetings this evening. Have had excellent attendance and attention at Freeman, and while some were busy in misrepresenting the truth, friends were made to the cause of Christ. Spoke for a week at Mt. Olive School-house, and friends were gained.

I am of the opinion that the time has come for us to enter upon some plan whereby we can empty the cornucopia, and sow abroad the printed word. I was not permitted to see the Herald of the 15th inst. till last evening. I am very much pleased to see the manly position taken by Bro. C. Derry, and my prayer is that never again will any standard bearer of Christ permit the desire for victory, to blind his eyes to the just rights of others. I love investigation, but have no use for the low cunning chicanery of the politician. Nor do I believe that it would be wise to stand still and accomplish nothing, in the hope of peace. Eternal vigilance is the price of our liberty, and up and at work is the only means of gaining the knowledge that will be found so necessary in presenting and strengthening the members of Christ's coming Kingdom.

Yours in Christ,
ROBERT M. ELVIN.

STEWARTSVILLE, Missouri,
January 30th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Bro. W. T. Bozarth and I have been up in Grundy county preaching, and organized a branch of six members, known as the Mount Hope. E. Morison, Priest, presiding, and B. B. Bennett, Teacher. The heathens raged and the people imagined a vain thing. They took the liberty to lock the school house on us, without the consent of the directors or the teacher; so they were not able to keep us out, but some one was small enough to steal the lamp wicks out of the lamps; but that did not do them any good, for outsiders tore their hankerchiefs and soon had lamps burning with hankerchiefs for wicks. We were made glad that they helped us so much, for every lick they struck at us made us friends. The prospect is good there, if the little band will live the religion of Jesus Christ, others will soon come in. We dedicated German Stewartville Church the 22d of this month; A. H. Smith and myself in charge of the service; M. H. Forscutt offering the dedicatory prayer. The building is a beautiful house indeed, the brethren and sisters deserve credit for their untiring zeal. The building cost $1,400, besides their own labor; but Oh, it is so cozy; with its fine carpets and nice chandeliers and every thing in perfect order; but come and see it.

I have just got home from Far West, where we had some business to attend to. Bro. J. H. Merriam accompanied me, and preached for them last week. I have another trip to take with W. T. Bozarth, north this time; will start first of February, if the good Lord will; and hope to make it count, for Billy is a ratler and means business now, and pleasure after a while. I have not written to get my name in the Herald, though you can speak of it or publish any part of it you wish. A. H. Smith is at Bevier. Your children (McCallum's) are well, and I think satisfied perfectly. I shall work for the Herald when out.

Yours truly,

JOHN T. KINNAMAN.

BARDWELL, Kentucky,

February 15th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—Truth is disseminating amongst the people here. The interest is good, and the field widening. I have responded to four calls to preach in as many private houses. Preached three times at the Campbell School-house to more than could be seated. Have four appointments now for the Providence School-house. What the result will be, time only can tell. This much I do know, "the poor," as well as the rich, "have the gospel preached to them" by those who are aided by the Spirit of the living God. Some are believing, but whether they are those represented by "seed sown in stony ground," I of course do not know. I thank God for the call to represent so noble a cause. My experience has been that the more intelligent classes, when they learn our position, are glad to hear and welcome us as followers of Christ. It is very clear to my mind that we are standing in the breach between the people and infidelity. Let us "Rescue the perishing," and "care for the dying," for whether we "gather in time, or eternity; sure, Oh! sure, will the harvest be."

Yours in love,

G. S. HYDE.

DENVER, Colorado,

February 8th, 1882.

The long talked of Anti-Mormon meeting was held here Monday evening, the 6th, with a dozen divines, some gents, honorables, and, as per newspaper statements, 1,500 of the best citizens. Speeches were made, the famous revelation on polygamy or parts of it read; resolutions passed condemnatory of Mormonism; and in the language of some of the speakers, polygamy must be wiped out. Prejudice runs high, divines and orthodox and evangelic societies are in high glee, in the thought that Denver has spoken, and sent forth the fiat to Congress—the world; and especially to the Representative of Colorado, of the fate of Mormonism being sealed, and its days numbered. What shall we do?

JAMES CAFFALL.

QUEENSFERRY, Western Port, Victoria,
December 25th, 1881.

Bro. Joseph.—I wrote to you about three years ago, when I first entered the Church; but through various causes I have not written since. Among others, and the most cogent of all, was the fact, that we (only six of us) were left to bear the brunt of all the animosity and misrepresentation, that I can see, is vented against those who choose to obey the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, but thank God we have been lifted out of the darkness growing on us by the ministrations of Bro. J. W. Gillen among us. With the aid of the Master he has beaten down prejudice in this place, and that so effectually, that fourteen more have heard and obeyed; particulars of which you will receive from Bro. Gillen. We have just a few minutes ago organized a branch of the Church and as the mail leaves Sydney on the 29th, I have to write to night (Christmas) so that this can leave here for Melbourne to morrow morning. Ourschool master here, Mr. Read, was chosen presiding Elder, and M. A. Stewart, Priest; and I, Teacher; and we were ordained as such. We now muster twenty members, and I am in hopes that some more will eventually come in. Bro. Gillen leaves here on the 27th for Hastings, a fishing village fifteen miles from here, where he purposes staying for a week. Bro. Rodger made a good impression there, when he visited it but Bro. Gillen's time is so limited that he will not be able to do much more than send on inquiry further. He goes there by invitation from some who were favorably inclined to the work, by Bro. Rodger's efforts among them. I intend to try to get a petition signed to be sent to the April Conference, for the purpose of trying to get an Elder sent, whose mission will be Victoria; as I think there are many in this colony who will gladly obey. We as a branch will now be able to have our own meetings, so that we may sustain one another, and endeavor by God's help to lead those aright who may be inclined to err. We claim the prayers of the Church on our behalf, that we may be steadfast in the faith delivered to the Saints.

To save time and to get the books we require, I beg you will send the following books: Abbreviated Harps 12, Inspired Translation 6. Bro. Gillen has some Doctrine and Covenants and Books of Mormon, which he purposes sending through from Sydney, so that I will not send for any of those at present; till we find how many he has on hand. Trusting the gospel work will keep steadily rolling along and that we in common with the Saints will enjoy the blessings.

I am yours in the gospel bonds,

DAVID MCINTOSH.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas,

February 7th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—We have just closed a grand session of quarterly conference, and will forward the minutes promptly. We are all well and the work is still afloat. Yet we (?) have much to learn relative to legislating wisely. But experience may do for us what we can not attain by judgment and understanding of law. "Old soldiers of the cross" are still with us; I mean Father and Mother Landers, dear, loving and loved Saints. And do you know that we are proud to have them with us; God bless us in their presence. Pray for us.

In bonds of gospel,

J. D. BENNETT.

PLEASANTON, Iowa,

February 4th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I see in the Supplement to the Herald of February 1st, a copy of the revelation on polygamy, together with the evidences produced by Elder Gurley, showing that it is not any part or parcel of original Mormonism. These evidences should be conclusive; but, as Jesus says, "in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established." I wish, therefore, to briefly add one or two more testimonies, showing that the doctrine set forth in that revelation can not possibly be the doctrine of Christ, as set forth in the Book of Mormon, and as received by the Church in an early day.

I received the faith under the teachings of Joseph Smith, the translator of the Book of Mormon, and was baptized into the Church by him on the 16th of October, 1835; and I know positively that no doctrine of polygamy, or spiritual wifery, was taught or allowed to be practiced in the Church at that day. And how it is possible for any person to believe that polygamy is a doctrine of salvation, and at the same time believe the Book of Mormon, is a marvel and a wonder to me.

In addition to the passages referred to by Elder Gurley in the Book of Mormon, I wish to call attention to two or three others which show positively that the doctrine of that polygamous revelation can not possibly be the doctrine of Christ. Nephi, in the 13th chapter of the 2d Book of Nephi, sets forth clearly the doctrine of Christ, which is faith in Christ, repentance, baptism, and remission of sins, and the reception of the Holy Ghost, and the living a pure and holy life to the end of our days, and he says: "This is the way; and there is none other way nor name given under heaven, whereby man can be saved in the kingdom of God. And now behold, this is the doctrine of Christ, and the only and true doctrine of the Father, and of the Son, and the Holy Ghost, which is our God, without end. Amen."

Again, in the 5th chapter of the Book of Nephi, in the latter part of the Book of Mormon, on the 445th page, of the Plano edition, Jesus, in his ministry to the Nephites, on this land after his resurrection, says: "And this is my doctrine, and it is the doctrine which the Father hath given unto me; and I bear record of the Father, and the Father beareth record of me, and the Holy Ghost beareth record of the Father and me, and I bear record that the Father commandeth all men, everywhere, to repent and believe in me; and whoso believeth in me, and is baptized, the same shall be saved; and they are they who shall inherit the kingdom of God. And whoso believeth not in me, and is not baptized, shall be damned. Verily, verily, I say unto you, that this is my doctrine; and I bear record of it from the father; and whoso believeth in me, believeth in the Father also; and unto him will the Father bear record of me; for he will visit him with fire and with the Holy Ghost, and thus will the Father bear record of me; and the Holy Ghost will bear record unto him of the Father and me; for the Father and I, and the Holy Ghost, are one. * * * Verily, verily, I say unto you that this is my doctrine; and whoso buildeth upon this, buildeth upon my rock; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against them. And whoso shall declare more or less than this, and establish it for my doctrine, the same cometh of evil, and is not built upon my rock, but he buildeth upon a sandy foundation, and the gates of hell standeth open to receive such, when the floods come, and the winds beat upon them. Therefore go forth unto this people, and declare the words which I have spoken, unto the ends of the earth."

Here we have the true doctrine of Christ, the gospel in its fullness, which will stand when the heavens and the earth shall pass away, and there shall be a "new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness," into which those who have received this gospel, and lived according to its pure and holy requirements, will have an abundant admittance; which may be our happy lot, is my earnest prayer and desire.

EBENEZER ROBINSON.

LAMBERTA, Baldwin Co., Ala.,

February 3d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—I believe that Bro. Montague is a true and faithful shepherd. He made some warm friends while here, outside of the church, as well as among the Saints. I was baptized by him last August, with two other young ladies and my mother, aged seventy-three years, and blind. She had been a member of the Baptist Church about fifty years. I too, was a Baptist, and a persecutor of the Saints, until in the winter of 1879, it pleased the Almighty to send two Elders to preach in our settlement, we (father, mother and myself), went to hear them out of curiosity; we had nothing better to do. We were both surprised and pleased with the doctrine. We decided that if they were right we were wrong, so we opened our doors for them to preach in our house; and began from then to investigate with the result above stated. Our doors are still open for preaching; and any Elder passing this way will find a hearty welcome. We expected a call from brethren Lambert and Scarcliff, while in Mobile, but were disappointed. The Herald is the only preacher we have here now. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may remain firm and steadfast in the faith once delivered to the Saints.

Your sister in the gospel,

MARY LEAVINS.

THE CHICAGO HERALD.

Bro. Joseph.—We have in this city a cheap, newsy, fearless and thoroughly alive daily; although not old, is yet full grown, and planted on a substantial basis. It is in many respects, the fairest, and most just paper published here. I mean that it is not run in the interest of any religious party, and it is not biased by the denominational proclivities of the Editors. Nor does it go to the other extreme of making light of religious or sacred things. Its news are concise, and terse, and yet full; it is emphatically in this respect "multum in parvo." This paper does not favor any religious party, and aims to be fair and impartial toward all. It is not a defender of our faith, but at the same time it publishes articles from me, that I could not hope to get into any other here. We have of course been treated quite fairly by the Inter-Ocean and Times, and for which we are grateful. The reason I refer to the Herald, is because it is a fearless, independent sheet, and gives reliable news, and is cheap, costing only two cents, while others cost five. There is another cheap sheet published here that utterly refuses to publish a line in our behalf, and that slanders us at all times, and does all it can to keep the people from learning the distinction between our Church and that of Utah; it is an unreliable, sensational sheet. I mean the Chicago News. And the Tribune is no more friendly, but it is not quite as vicious and full of venom as the News. The Herald is printed with good clear type, on good paper, and is just such a paper as any family can read with profit, and without being abashed at its utterances. The cost of the daily is $5.00 per annum to mail subscribers, and the weekly costs but $1.00 per annum. The address is 120 South Fifth Avenue, Chicago. I am not writing this as a puff for reward, but because I believe that we should recognize those who do us justice, and treat us as human beings, and it may be that many want a cheap and reliable, and newsy journal. If any want a trustworthy, and fair, square, and honest paper, let them try the Chicago Herald.

T. W. SMITH.

GARLAND, Butler Co., Alabama,
January 2d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—Happy New Year. May faith and grace be multiplied, that we may see another new year with a better record than the present year; and that the "Glad tidings of great joy" may find its way to hundreds of homes that now sit in darkness.

The conference of the Alabama District convened on the 24th ult.; but bad weather, and Christmas jubilees prevented many from attending; consequently the business sessions were poorly attended, and not much business was done. The interest outside the Church is considerable; but the meeting and school houses are so open that there can not be meetings in bad weather, and there is not much of that this season of the year here. We have had three severe thunder storms here this winter, one about the middle of November, one on the 12th, and one the 27th of December. During the former I received a considerable shock, lightning striking a tree and entirely demolishing it not more than twelve rods from myself and wife. We shall continue to labor as circumstances will permit.

Yours in hope,

A. J. CATO.

MILTON, Florida,
February 6th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—December 8th, Bro. Thomas and I journeyed with satchels on our backs down to Bro. Snow's, nine miles from Bro. Turnbow's. We preached in that neighborhood three times and also administered the sacrament. December 13th, We commenced work in Dukedom, Weakly county, Tennessee. Dr. Wilkerson, a practicing physician in the village, and some time preacher in the Christian Church, gave us permission to preach in the church building, under his charge. We preached there three nights. The Doctor made reply each night in an ungentlemanly manner. We took notes but made no reply, reserving our fire and giving him plenty of rope, but we gave the people to understand that we would answer him some time in the future at the close of his insulting remarks the last night. At this juncture the Doctor wanted it understood that we were to devote time with him, and because we would not do this, and make, as Bro. Thomas called it, a "harum scarrum" debate" out of our meetings, the Doctor got angry and closed the door of the church against us, (another free church?) Prominent citizens came to us after meeting and told us that the Doctor's action was not endorsed by the citizens generally, and that they wanted to hear us preach. Before the congregation had dispersed a house was obtained for us, about one and a half miles from town, and it was given out that I would reply to the Doctor's remarks next night, which I did to a crowded house. The Lord was with me and the verdict of the people was on the side of truth. The Doctor was present and heard my reply, but said nothing. We preached at that the Black-armie school-house several times, and think good was done. The action of the Doctor tended to make us friends, and the doors of the little school-houses are open in every direction. We learned that the Doctor was not a representative man of the Christian Church, and therefore would not debate with him.

Christmas day found us among the Saints of Foundry Hill, Tennessee, where we preached once, 28th of December preached to the Saints at Eagle Creek, and 30th of December in company with Bro. Lambert started for this part of the mission, and labored part of the time since then in company with him, and find him a desirable companion indeed, if he does criticize very closely. Having been chosen president of the Florida District. I must with regret part with one who has benefitted me by his wise counsels and instructions. In the future may he be blessed of God and continue to be a blessing to others.

In hope,

FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

PAPETE, Sandwich Islands,
29th September, 1881.

To My Brother Joseph Smith.—Love to you, to Jesus Christ, my brother, and to all brethren. We have received the papers you set us, for which we return you our thanks. Several persons have been admitted into communion, others baptized, and others again are in a state of obedience. Believe me, that I will endeavor by every means to further our cause.

I am your affectionate brother,

DAVID BROWN.

EAST DES MOINES, Iowa,
February 3d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—The misfortune of the fire occurred (of which A. White and brother were the victims) immediately after my return from the Bluffs, and out of sympathy, I commenced to assist them in rebuilding; and as the weather continued so very unfavorable for labor in the ministry, I continued at labor as stated above. And whether my sympathy increased or diminished, the ultimatum of the affair was a very generous compensation from the brethren to me for all I had done.

I made the necessary preparations, and with Bro. I. N. White, started for our first appointment on December 8th, as chronicled by you. Since then have labored constantly under Bro. White's directions, with him and others as occasion required, in Polk, Warren, Poweshiek, Tama, Jasper, Marshall, Story, and Dallas counties. For the last month I have had Bro. J. S. Roth as co-laborer, who presides over the Sheridan Branch. We found him a genial companion and wise laborer. Our first work together was to make a new opening at Chelssa, in Tama county; we occupied the Peoples's Church, a neat edifice of fair dimensions, and had the assistance of choir and organ. We gained favor in the eyes of many,—some of them prominent. We believe the future will prove our labor not lost. While there we sojourned with Mr. George Crittenden, one of the honorable men of earth, who is brother-in-law to Bro. I. B. Larew, of Illinois. We shall ever remember his hospitality.

We also made a new opening in Marshall county, and we were the guests of a Mr. Pyle, who is near the kingdom, and a man of true hospitality. We had a pleasant furlough of two days at Edenville, and then started west, as arranged by Bro. White. Near Bro. Vice's, we had such large audiences that hardly afforded us standing room. Our labor there was cut short by arrangements for protracted efforts of others. We await our time. Calling at Des Moines, we sped on to Dallas county, where we were cheered to meet Bro. Goodrich and family from near Plano, and Sr. Bouton and husband, who guards the work with a jealous care, and assists its progress, though he does not belong. The above named Saints not having privileges of meetings, and being so strong in the faith, and alive to the interests of the work, cheered us much. We should also mention Bro. and Sr. Harvey, near Adell, Dallas county, (where we labored last, and shall return), who were much elated that they were visited after two or more years privation of meetings. We should mention many others, and labor of vicinities, but desist on account of crowded columns. Have been blessed much, extra liberty on many occasions; have felt almost impatient sometimes, to not have baptized any in this time, but shall persevere.

Asking an interest in the prayers of all, I am your brother,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

MONTERRAT, Johnson Co., Mo.,
January 8th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—I started the first of December on a tour some sixty miles south-east of here, in Morgan county, to where I had been invited to come, which was at Florence; but when I got there, they would not let me preach, nor let me stay there over night; so I was obliged to travel three and a half miles after night fall. The next day I went to the Freedom meeting house, about fifteen miles south; they refused to let me have that to preach in. The next day I went north-east about seven miles, and applied for the Hays school-house and was refused that; thence to Syracuse, some fifteen miles north; got the Washington school-house, in which I tried to tell them the Story of the Cross, the best I could. It is trying for the Elders to go out into the world, away from the Saints and friends, alone, without a cheering word; but it looks like that is the duty of the Elders. There is no reward on earth that would induce me to leave those that I love; but there is a reward that the righteous Judge can give which would induce me to leave all to obtain. I think that I will start out soon to tell the story of the coming of the Lord. With regard to all I remain your brother in Christ.

JOSIAH CURTIS.

IONIA, Illinois, February 3d, 1882.

Please correct a mistake in the last Herald in the notice of the discussion. The last word in the proposition is "Saints" in the notice; it should be "same." I go to Rock Island to-morrow to commence a series of meetings near there.

Yours, &c.,

H. C. BRONSON.

News Summary.

Feb. 6th.—Early on Sunday morning the First Methodist Church at Racine, Wis., took fire from a heating-furnace, and was entirely destroyed, the loss being over $40,000.

Fresh outrages upon the Jews are reported from Russia, and in Warsaw a renewal of the violent scenes of a few days ago is feared.

The British steamer Cosmos has foundered in the Black Sea, and the corpses of ten of her crew have washed ashore.

The snow-storm in the Eastern and New England States proves to have been a heavy visitation. In Carbondale, Pa., snow fell to the depth of three feet on a level.

A colored man in Randolph county, West Virginia, contrived to engage the affections of the daughter of his employer, and the two eloped into Pennsylvania, and were married by a Justice of the Peace. Upon their return to Randolph county the father of the bride undertook to reclaim the infatuated girl, and in the fight that followed the negro shot him dead, and himself was captured and lynched by a mob of white people.

7th.—Yesterday the House of Representatives reached a conclusion on one branch of the Mormon question by passing the bill of Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, which disqualifies polygamists from eligibility to membership as delegates from the Territories. There was not one dissenting vote.

8th.—From Chicago exchanges news is only now received that on the 10th of July an earthquake occurred in the District of Kanchow, and a large number of men, women and children were killed. The earthquake was followed by a rain storm which inundated a portion of the country and drowned several persons.

10th.—The natives burned the town of Four-carial, on the west coast of Africa, and plundered the British and French factories. Several owners and clerks are missing, and it is feared they have been killed.

The Spanish Government has resolved to prohibit the proposed pilgrimage to Rome, if it assume any other form than a religious demonstration. It is rumored the Papal Nuncio at Madrid and the Spanish Ambassador at the Vatican will be recalled.

Twenty-seven lives were lost by the foundering of the steamer Cosmos, in the Black Sea.

11th.—A Jewish refugee at Liverpool from Kiel says he recently saw a number of Jewish maidens stripped naked and flogged through the town. The police refused to interfere. A soldier from Nikoliaoff says his regiment was not allowed to suppress the riots against the Jews.

13th.—The bridge over the East Fork of the Trinity River, on the Texas & Pacific Railroad twenty miles east of Dallas, was swept away by the flood Friday night.

In order not to offend Russia, Austria has entirely abandoned the plan of the partial or temporary occupation of Montenegro.

Sparks from the chimney of a locomotive set fire to some coal oil, near Bradford, Pa., which burned 105,000 barrels of oil. Loss $114,000.

14th.—A few minutes past one o'clock, Sunday morning, an earthquake shook five seconds in duration was felt in Lake City, Colorado. The citizens were awakened and many thought the powder magazine near town had exploded.

Notwithstanding the attention of the Russian Government has been called to the atrocities perpetrated in the Empire against the Jews, they continue, and fresh outrages are continually reported. The murder of an entire Jewish family at Ananieff by the peasants is reported. Russia is heaping up a fearful score against herself which will some day be terribly avenged.

16th.—Since the middle of November the importation of potatoes from Great Britain and Germany has been steadily increasing, until now we are getting from 2,000 to 3,000 tons of potatoes a week. The high price of cabbages has led to large importations from Germany.

17th.—The Egyptian Ministry have decided upon the total abolition of slavery. Kader Pasha has been appointed Governor of the Soudan, and will take measures to suppress the slave trade in that province.

Five hundred Hungarians who arrived at Boston by the steamer Austrian yesterday were vaccinated by the quarantine physicians much to the disgust and in spite of the resistance of the Magyars.

Perseverance and Hinote branches reported; Salem, Mount Olive, Coldwater, Santa Rosa, Pleasant View and Unity Branches, not reported.

Elders J. Reader, J. Givens, J. J. Cooper, Jos. R. Lambert, Frank P. Scarcliff, reported. Priest J. Faulk reported.

Resolved that according to his request, L. F. West be released from the presidency of the district.

Resolved that F. P. Scarcliff be appointed District President.

Missionaries in the South Eastern Mission were sustained.

J. C. McCarthar not being sustained as District Clerk, W. W. Squires was appointed.

B. L. West was sustained as Bishop's Agent for the Florida District.

L. F. West was appointed District Treasurer. Resolved that the Elders and Priests be requested to preach and labor for the benefit of the cause, to the extent of their ability, under the direction of the District President.

Resolved that when Conference adjourns it does so to meet at the call of the District President.

Resolved that we send one delegate to represent us at the next General Conference, to be held at Independence, Mo.

Resolved that we send F. P. Scarcliff to represent us at General Conference.

Resolved that we request the presidents of all the branches in the district to lay before their respective branches the financial wants of the district, and forward the means collected to the District Treasurer in time to pay the expenses of the delegate to the next General Conference.

Preaching by Joseph R. Lambert and Frank P. Scarcliff.

Although heavy clouds seemed to hang over the Conference at the commencement of the session, yet they were materially lifted ere its close, and the few Saints who did attend went away with lighter hearts than they had when they came. The Spirit blessed us with its presence; and although, owing somewhat to the bad weather a day or two preceding the conference, the attendance of Saints from a distance was small, yet upon Sunday many of the citizens of the surrounding country turned out to hear the word preached.

INDEPENDENCE DISTRICT.

This conference convened at Independence, Mo., February 4th, 1882. J. W. Brackenbury, president; W. B. Tignor, clerk.

Elders F. C. Warnky, J. J. Kaster, C. G. Lanphear, S. G. Mayo, T. H. Humes (baptized 2), B. B. Brackenbury, J. Clark, S. O. Waddel, W. B. Tignor, M. A. Faulk, J. W. Brackenbury, G. W. Pilgrim, J. Luff, and C. M. Schroder, reported in person. Priests A. J. Cox, W. P. Brents, J. F. Clemensen, J. J. Vickrey, H. Hatty, R. May, and W. Clow, reported in person. Deacons W. Blatt and G. H. Hepworth reported in person.

Branch Reports.—Independence and First Kansas City Branch reports read and adopted. Wyandotte Branch, verbal report. Belton and Holden, no report.

Committee on preparation for General Conference reported in writing. Report received and committee discharged. The report was adopted as follows: We your committee to whom was referred the matter of making provisions for General Conference, beg leave and report that we met and resolved upon offering to you the following recommendations: (1) The appointment of a committee of three, who shall have authority to add to their number if found necessary. (2) That said committee shall be authorized to make diligent enquiry among Saints and others, as to their capacity and willingness to entertain members of conference during their stay in town. (3) That they arrange for the meeting of visitors at trains, and the billeting of said visitors as per information obtained by them, or as their judgment shall decide.

(4) That they be authorized to make a general call on those having teams, and direct the use of such as may be offered them in conducting visitors from the depot, and to and from meetings when necessity shall require. (5) That they be empowered to obtain the use of lumber to erect a booth at some convenient point, for the accommodation of parties desiring meals, if found necessary and practicable in their judgment. (6) That they visit the city hotels, and make arrangements for the accommodation of such visitors as shall prefer to go there, if such be found, and obtain the lowest rates possible. (7) That they be authorized to make an appeal to all the district members for aid of whatever kind may be found necessary: such as money, provisions, &c., and make a fair distribution of the same according to the demands of the emergency. (8) That they make said call, or appeal, at as early a date as possible, consistent with definite effort, and arrange all matters so as to be prepared to entertain guests from the 5th of April, 1882, until the close of the conference, to be convened on the following day. (9) That when they shall have discovered the capacity for accommodation, they be required to publish a notice in the Herald concerning the matter, for the information of its readers throughout the Church. (10) That they first see that all members of conference proper are accommodated, and then to the entertainment of visitors, if room be left. (11) That they be authorized to act independent of all interference on the part of any one, but be free to accept suggestions or advice from all sources, if found practicable. (12) That they have full authority to act in the name of the district in making all necessary provision, but not to make contracts that will in any wise bring the district into debt. (13) That they be required to keep account of all items in the form of donations, &c, received by them, and present the same at our next District Conference, together with a statement of their expenditure (if any), and the manner in which distributions were made, and to whom.

J. LUFF,
Signed, { F. C. WARNKY.
J. W. BRACKENBURY.

Treasurer's report read and adopted.
Bishop's Agent's report: Received of Bro. Hogue, $11.30.

J. Luff, J. W. Brackenbury, J. S. Page, committee on preparation for General Conference.

W. Clow, R. May, J. S. Page, W. P. Brents and A. J. Cox, delegates to General Conference.

Moved that the priesthood labor as circumstances permit. Bro. J. W. Brackenbury was chosen president, and W. B. Tignor as clerk and treasurer, for the next three months.

Preaching on Sunday forenoon and evening by Bro. Joseph Luff. Prayer and sacrament meeting in the afternoon, in charge of Brn. Lanphear and Clow.

Adjourned to Independence, Mo, May 6th, 1882.

CENTRAL TEXAS DISTRICT.

The Central Texas District Conference convened with the Elmwood Branch, January 7th, 1882. By request, Bro. Heman C. Smith presided; R. S. McManus secretary.

The Elmwood Branch report was read and received. There had been an addition of two by vote. No reports from the Central and Cheeseland branches.

Elders J. W. Bryant, Heman C. Smith and H. L. Thompson, reported; the latter expressed a desire to be released from the district presidency, as old age and feeble health rendered him incapable of performing the duties of that office, and upon motion he was released.

By resolution Bro. Elias Land was appointed president of the district.

The officers of the district were all sustained. By resolution Brn. Thompson and Belcher were continued as a committee to the Cheeseland Branch, as sickness and other hindrances had prevented them from fulfilling that mission.

Preaching on Saturday evening, Sunday forenoon and evening by H. C. Smith. Sacrament and testimony meeting in the afternoon.

Stormy weather prevented an attendance of any from a distance, and but few were present of those belonging near; but we hope good was accomplished. The faithful example and earnest exhortations to persevere, made us by Bro. Smith, always serves to strengthen and encourage.

Adjourned to meet with the Saints at Cook's Point, Bursleson county, on the 25th and 26th of March, 1882.

SOUTH WALES.

A conference of the above mission was held at the Coffee Tavern Long Room, Merthyr, Wales, January 8th, 1882.

The president, William Morris, instructed the Elders to see that the law of God is kept, and to do all they can teach the gospel.

Branch Reports.—Merthyr 14, Antyglo 6, Aberaman 25.

John Morgans, Merthyr, reports that he went to Antyglo, and he was glad to say to day that he had got up a branch there.

The following were sustained by vote, the different quorums of the Church in America, all the Saints far and near, and Bro. T. E. Jenkins as Bishop's Agent in Wales.

All the Saints felt well, and did enjoy the gifts, with great power.

Preaching in the evening by Bro. Bishop and Dan Davies.

After meeting Bro. J. E. Jenkins blest all with coffee and cake, before going home. He is poorly in health, but is a good man to the poor Saints in Wales. He is doing all he can with the Elders in the branch.

Miscellaneous.

OBITUARIES.—Obituary notices not exceeding one hundred words, about twelve lines, will be published free of charge; when exceeding one hundred words, five cents for each additional eight words (one line) will be charged; notices of prominent Church officials excepted. Money to accompany notice.

BORN.

SHEREFFLER.—At Wilson Creek, Saline county, Nebraska, November 9th, 1881, to Sister Emma Shereffler, a son; blessed January 6th, 1882, by Elder Robert M. Elvin, and named Edmond Isaiah.

HILLMAN.—At Hooker, Nebraska, September 15th, 1881, to Bro. E. R. and Sr. E. Hillman, a son. Blessed by Elder Robert M. Elvin, February 6th, 1882, and named Robert Snerman.

MARRIED.

EVANS—GRIFFITHS.—At the residence of the groom's parents, at Lucas, Lucas county, Iowa, December 25th, 1881, Mr. John A. Evans and Sister Mary J. Griffiths were joined in matrimony by Eben B. Morgan. A number of friends and relatives were gathered to witness the ceremony, and partake of the bounteous feast prepared for the occasion. May He who instituted the sacred rite bless the happy pair.

GREAGSON—EVANS.—At Willow Creek, Deer Lodge Valley, Montana, 1st January, 1882, George Greagson and Sister Sarah Jane Evans, the daughter of William and Ann Evans, Wm. Greagson is a good man, but he is not in the Reorganized Church, but sister Sarah Jane is a member of the Reorganized Church, and was baptized by Bro. W. W. Blair.

DIED.

FRUM—I was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of our dear brother John N. Frum, of Sumpson, West Virginia who was killed in the Coal Mines at Flemington, December 1st. I preached the funeral sermon in the Baptist Church to a large assembly of friends and mourners. Bro. Frum was not a preacher; but his good works and faithfulness to his religion and to the truth of the latter day work speaks louder than preachers can speak; and is that kind of logic that convinces still, after the worker has gone to rest. And notwithstanding the man be dead, "his works do follow him." Under such circumstances, what Elder could not speak with liberty? Bro. Frum leaves a wife and two children. Think of them in your prayers. Bro. Frum was born August 18th, 1853; at Smithton, West Virginia, and was baptized October 31st, 1880, by Elder L. R. Devore, confirmed by Elders Devore and Josiah Ellis at this place. D. L. SHINN.

PETERSON.—At Bagdad, Santa Rosa county, Florida, January 14th, 1882, of a burn received October 28th, 1881, William Daniel, son of Bro. George and Sr. Lucy Peterson. He was born at Bagdad, Florida, October 20th, 1879. Sermon by Bro. Edward Powell.

"Rest Darling Willie, sweetly sleep;
While angels guard thy clay,
Although for thee we sadly weep,
And miss thy childish play;
We know thou art an angel bright,
Where loving seraphs roam;
Where sin and sorrow ne'er can blight
The angel's peaceful home."

SCOVILLE.—At Fremont, Nebraska, October 9th, 1881, Emily Maud, daughter of Bro. S. Wallace and Emily H. Scoville. She lived 4 years, 1 month, 23 days, just the time that had been made known that she would live before her birth. Just before her death she said to her mother, "O, mamma, see those pretty little girls," pointing upward with her hands.

Jesus' little girl, O yes,
She told me so, so oft;
And then on one bright Sabbath morn,
He came and claimed his own.
He took her home to him,
To dwell with us no more;
But O, the joy it gives to me
To know I'll meet her there.

COOPER.—At her home, near Glidden, Carroll county, Iowa, December 7th, 1881, of typhoid fever, Mrs. Harriet Cooper, wife of Daniel Cooper. A friend to the Saints and the cause of the Master; she did good to them by whom she was surrounded, fed them who preached the word, and passed away esteemed and loved by all.

ALLEN.—Reuben H. Allen, formerly a member of Lawrence branch, Michigan, died at Wyandotte, Wyandotte Co., Kansas, September 21st, 1881, of typhoid fever.

MUNRO.—At Boston, Massachusetts, December 8th, 1881, of inflammation of the brain, Avice F., daughter of Bro. and Sr. C. L. Munro, aged five years and one month. Little Avice was a very intelligent child; all who knew her loved her. Our brother and sister feel deeply their loss. May the Lord comfort them.

In language plain her eye did speak;
"Dear parents, don't be weeping;
For I am going, going home;
Kind angels for me are waiting."
Sleep child, sleep; we will not weep,
Thou art from pain and anguish free,
Thou didst fall asleep in slumber sweet,
Sweet will thy rest ever be.

E. N. W.

WILKINS.—At his residence one half mile east of Readers, Iowa, October 28th, 1881, of typhoid fever, Elder Thomas Wilkins, aged 61 years, 3 months, and 13 days. Born in Southampton, England, July 15th, 1820, was married to Caroline Tamsley at Kingsford church, June 1st, 1846; joined the church in the year 1847, and was afterwards ordained an Elder, and remained such until his death. He came to America in 1853. The first frame store building ever built in Council Bluffs was built by Thomas Wilkins. The deceased was taken ill, October 14th, and died October 28th; he passed off very quietly. His faith in Christ remained firm to the last and he died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. He was loved by all who knew him. The funeral services were conducted by Elder David Chambers. Thus passes away another one of Harrison county's oldest and most respected citizens.

KELLY.—At Jonesport, Maine, December 26th, 1881, Rebecca S. Kelley, aged 67 years, 11 months, and 21 days. She lived a Baptist for many years; then joined the Church of the Messiah, under G. J. Adams; and on the 28th September, 1876, she was baptized into the Reorganization by Elder J. C. Foss, who also conducted her funeral service. She died a saint of God.

MARTIN.—At Jonesport, Maine, January 26th, 1882, Louisa J. Martin, aged 22 years. Funeral service conducted by J. C. Foss.

WARD.—At Chariton, Iowa, January 30th, 1882, after a short illness of the heart, Sr. Mary Ellen Ward. She was born May 10th, 1832 at Indianapolis, Indiana, and was baptized May 15th, 1881, at Chariton, Iowa, by John R. Evans; confirmed by George Spencer, May 15th, 1881. She leaves a husband and seven children by a former husband, to mourn her loss.

FRENCH.—At Jonesport, Maine, January 28th, 1882, sister Hannah J. French, aged 78 years, 6 months, 11 days. She was baptized by brother Joseph Lakeman, April 9th, 1873. Funeral service conducted by J. C. Foss.

SAMPSON.—At Fremont, Nebraska, January 22d, 1882, Bessie Belle, infant daughter of Bro. Mathew W. and Sr. Martha E. Sampson, aged 1 year, 8 months, and 2 days. Blessed by Robert M. Elvin. Funeral services by J. F. Mintun.

Our little one has passed away,
Beyond the rolling river;
Where she may in God's glory be,
And there abide forever.

PARENTS.

BROWN.—At her home near Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, November 13th, 1881, of consumption, Sr. Sarah, wife of Bro. Charles Brown. She was born March 30th, 1833; was baptized June 16th, 1878, at Montrose, by Elder Richard Lambert. Funeral services conducted by Elder J. H. Hansen of Keokuk, Iowa.

WILLIAMS.—In Salem Branch, Shelby county, Iowa, William Williams departed this life on the 4th day of January, 1882, of general debility. Bro. Williams was born in the county of Carmarthenshire, Wales, October 6th, 1813, and was aged 68 years, 2 months and 29 days. Funeral services conducted by Bro. J. W. Chatburn, to a large and attentive congregation. Bro. Williams emigrated to Utah in 1852, and settled at Brigham City, passed through the dark day of the Reformation, and the movements south on the arrival of Johnson's army; became disgusted with Utah, and came back to Iowa in 1861, joined the Reorganized Church the same year, August 27th, near Council Bluffs; baptized by W. W. Blair, confirmed by Bro. E. C. Briggs; from which time he has lived the life of a saint, and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection.

LAMPERT.—At St. Joseph, Missouri, July 11th, 1876, Elder Matthias Lampert, aged 36 years, 7 months and 2 days. He was born December 9th, 1839, in Flesch, Canton Granbuedten, Switzerland. He was a man seeking after truth with all his heart; was baptized by Bro. J. M. Wait, in Outagamie county, Wisconsin, January 17th, 1869. He was a very faithful Elder, did a great deal of good, but was three months and a day before his death overcome by the power of darkness to a certain extent, and died in the lunatic asylum, and left wife and seven children to mourn his loss, of whom one has gone to meet her dear father and my dear brother, the 18th of December, 1881. May we meet them in the Celestial glory, where sorrow is unknown.

TURNER.—At Severance, Kansas, December 22d, 1881, of diphtheria, Johnnie H., son of Matilda A. Turner, aged 4 years, 3 months, 13 days. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

OBITUARY.

At his residence, in Magnolia, Harrison county, Iowa, on Tuesday, January 31st, 1882, Elder J. M. Harvey, in his 61st year.

Deceased was born in Butler county, Ohio, February, 1821. After arriving at manhood's years he spent several year boating on the Miami and Erie canal. In 1851 he moved to Kentucky, where he married Mrs. Amanda Sagle, whom he now, after nearly thirty-one years of married life, leaves a widow. In 1852, he removed to Indiana, from whence, in 1855, he removed to Minnesota, passing a winter, en route, in Wisconsin. In Minnesota his superior intelligence speedily commanded the attention of his neighbors and fellow citizens, who, several times advanced him to positions of honor and trust. In 1863 he made his last important change of residence, removing from Minnesota to Harrison county, Iowa, where he has since resided. Since his residence here he has served acceptably several times on the Board of Supervisors and one term as County Judge. Prior to 1872 he was engaged in farming; in that year he removed to the village of Magnolia, and has since been engaged in general merchandising in that place.

In September, 1872, he united with the Latter Day Saints' Church, was ordained an Elder in December of the same year, and a High Priest in September, 1878. Of this Church he has always been a faithful and consistent member, a fearless and unflinching exponent of its principles, and an honored and acknowledged leader in its councils.

His funeral took place at the Saints' Meeting House in Magnolia, on Thursday, February 2d, 1882, and was one of the largest ever had in the village. The sermon was preached by Elder Charles Derry to a crowded house.

It is not often that a family is called upon to mourn as faithful and devoted a husband and father, or a community as upright and respected a neighbor and citizen. Thus passes away one of Harrison county's oldest, best known and most honored citizens.

MEMORIAL.

Of esteem for our departed brother, James M. Harvey, who departed this life January 31st, 1882, 10 o'clock p. m., and expressions of condolence with his bereaved companion, our beloved sister, Amanda Harvey.

Whereas, God in his wisdom hath seen fit to remove from our midst, by the hand of death, our beloved brother, James M. Harvey, and

Whereas, We deeply sympathize with his bereaved companion in her great distress, and

Whereas, We, as a Church, feel that we have lost a faithful brother from our ranks, we, the members of the Magnolia branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, desire to give expression to our deep sympathy for our widowed sister and evidence of our love and high esteem for our departed brother; therefore be it

Resolved, That while, as a Church, we humbly bow to the will of God, we feel that we individually have lost a brother and a friend, and the Church an able and consistent minister of the gospel, whose unflinching and tireless labors we shall ever remember with gratitude, and whose memory we shall ever cherish for his fearless advocacy of the right and opposition to wrong; and also for his brotherly love as manifested by his kind and generous acts whenever the cry of distress reached his ears; his readiness to give comfort to and seek relief for the sick through the ordinances of God, whether called upon in the hurry of business, or in the midnight hour, in the heat of summer or the storms of winter; and also in his ever ready response by the use of his means whenever proper appeals were made for the general spread of the gospel of Christ. And while we unfeignedly mourn his loss, yet "we sorrow not as those without hope" for we are assured that "our loss is his eternal gain" through Christ, our Redeemer. And we fervently pray that God, who alone can give comfort and consolation in such an hour of trial, will pour into the wounded soul of our sister the oil and wine of consolation by the indwelling spirit of peace; that He will be her stay and staff until death, and that she may ever realize that Christ is her Savior and God, her steadfast and faithful friend. And we further pray that she, in common with all his brothers and sisters in Christ, may so live as to be privileged to enjoy the society of our brother where God and Christ eternally dwell.

THE GENTILES.

THEIR PRAYER TO CONGRESS TO DISREGARD THE HYPOCRITICAL ACTION OF THE MORMON LEGISLATURE.

SALT LAKE, Feb. 16.—At a meeting of prominent Gentiles of Utah, to-night, the following preamble and resolution were adopted:

"Whereas, The Legislature of Utah, now in session in this city, today adopted a concurrent resolution protesting against the passage by Congress of any bill disfranchizing polygamists, but instead thereof praying Congress to send a committee to investigate the condition of things in Utah;

"Resolved, That said action is merely a polygamous bluff, a trick to gain time; that if it wins, these very men will claim it as a Divine interposition in favor of polygamy, and use it to excite the masses of the Mormon people against the just authority of the National Government; that the fact that three-fourths of this Legislature are themselves practical polygamists exposes the condition of things in Utah without the intervention of an investigating committee; that their action in this case betrays their fear that the disfranchising of polygamists will break up polygamy, and therefore indicates precisely what Congress ought to do; that we most respectfully urge Congress not to be deterred from perfecting the good work in which it is engaged by the protests of men who are acknowledged polygamists themselves, and who adopt this deferential attitude only because their ordinary attitude of defiance will not apparently serve them in a mortal emergency; that there need be no fear of a convulsion or disturbance if Congress now adopts effective measures to settle Utah affairs, but that if it does not the simplest duties of statesmanship will have been disregarded, as they have too long been, and the chance of peacefully settling Utah affairs will by this much have been placed in jeopardy."

"RESTORATION OF THE GOSPEL."

Hallelujah! Praise the Lord,
For his Gospel is restored;
Blessed gift from God again,
"Peace on earth, good will to men."

Hallelujah! now again,
Shines the olden light on men;
Light which lit the Prophet's fire,
And did tongues unknown inspire.

Blessings too, long lost to man,
Now are showered from heaven again.
Through the mercy of our God,
By the fiat of His word.

Sight restored unto the blind,
Gracious healing of the mind,
From the deadly bane of sin,
Light without and light within.

Answers to the secret prayer,
Balm unto the hidden care,
In the word of prophecy,
From the mouth of the Most High.

Wonderful and unknown tongues,
Holy Angels' heaven-born songs,
Testify that now, once more,
God is speaking as of yore.

O, thou wand'r'er, hear His voice!
God now says to thee, "Rejoice
In this light of my great love, Streaming from my throne above—"

Hear my Gospel and obey;—
Walk within the narrow way,
Till thou gain the prize and stand
Crowned and robed at my right hand."

Perfection.

"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."—Christ.

One of the many objections urged against Christianity proper, is that it enjoins upon humanity that which is simply impossible for them to perform. If the perfection enjoined in the text referred to an immediate transformation of the creature, to be brought about by their own volition, the objection might be a legal one. Nothing of the kind, however, is implied in the gospel system. It recognizes man as a fallen creature, prone to sin, but susceptible of improvement morally and intellectually. It comes as an angel of mercy, offering peace and comfort to the weary one, promising final release from the consequences of sin. Being, like its Author, perfect, it points humanity to the highest standard of purity; its object being to elevate them in the scale of intelligence and moral worth, it offers every encouragement to do right. It sets before them a beautiful city, effulgent in glory, in which perfect felicity may be realized, marks out the pleasant but "narrow path" leading thereto, and offers all needed aid, and refreshments for the happy traveler. We are thankful for a gospel so pure and elevating in its moral tendency—so fraught with mercy and love, that its opposers can only urge as an objection that its righteousness can not be attained to by mortal beings. How silently, yet strongly, does it "reprove the world of sin." Emanating from the presence of the Infinite, it breathes a sentiment that is neither appreciated nor understood by the "world that loves its own." It does not shake hands, nor compromise with vice, neither laugh at folly. With pitying, but reproofing eye, it gazes at wayward mankind, reasons, and pleads with them to turn from sin and folly, asking them to do nothing only that which will make them better, happier, and more useful to others and themselves. Truly "this is the condemnation of the world, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil."

Infidelity may laugh at the idea of a literal devil, and Sectarianism may compromise with his Satanic Majesty relative to plain gospel ordinances and promises, but the facts stand out in bold relief, that "gross darkness covers the minds of the people" to that extent that many are totally blind to their own interests. Why do men fail to discern that "to be carnally minded is death?" Does not common sense, when allowed to assert its rights, teach this? Tell me, why does the assassin commit the horrible deed that his better judgment tells him will make him miserable, both in time and in eternity, if he is not influenced by an evil and deceptive power?

What infinite love is manifest in that which is briefly termed "the gospel." How utterly devoid of selfishness does this message prove its author to be. What is he in possession of, that he does not offer to share with frail humanity? "I will give unto him that is athirst, of the fountain of the water of life freely." Having given to man his agency, making him morally responsible for his own acts, his promise of "life" extends to him upon the condition of a lawful thirsting after "righteousness." "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." That mankind are susceptible of moral, and intellectual development is a well attested fact. The gospel is adapted to the capacity of all. It addresses itself to the purer affections—to the better nature, and appeals to the intelligence of every sentient being. Its gentle cadence whispers to the inner man in language unmistakable, "Come, let me make you happy. Break off from every vile habit, cease to do that which is an injury to you." The "light that lighteneth every man that cometh into the world" leads the humble and penitent ones to follow in "the way" as "prepared" by John, and exemplified by the Savior of the world. Being "born of water, and the spirit," they become citizens of the "kingdom of God." Oh, joy! What a flood of light, and heavenly intelligence dawns upon the regenerate soul. Earth seems lovely, the sun shines more beautifully, home is made happy, love is intensified; heaven seems near, and the Bible is a new book. By the spirit of adoption they cry, Abba, Father. With Peter they can say, "Thou art the Christ," and with faithful Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," but they are still "children," capable of learning, only having "tasted of the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come," and the same law, by virtue of which they become "heirs," enjoins a "growth in grace, and in knowledge of the truth." The standard of perfection is set before them, and the righteousness to which they may attain is unlimited, save by perfection itself. Jesus Christ exemplified what man may enjoy in time, and to what he may attain in eternity, the secret of his spiritual attainments being, "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows." The nominal Christian world, has made a mistake, by limiting themselves, and seeking to limit others where Deity has not, but rather has signified his willingness to aid his children in spiritual development, so long as they abide the conditions by which his son was "made perfect." Some who fain would make us believe that gospel promises, to be enjoyed in time, are not for us now, (arguing substantially, that human nature has so changed in a few hundred years, that it is simply an impossibility for humanity to exercise the faith requisite to the obtainment of these blessings), exhibit a marked degree of assurance, by declaring their surety of heaven irrespective of gospel ordinances. "Not leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection." [I. T.] Paul enumerates these principles as being the "foundation" of the Christian character; namely, Faith, Repentance, Baptisms, (plural), Laying on of hands, Resurrection, and Judgment. This presents the gospel as a progressive system. Faith that "comes by hearing" "the word of God," finds place in the unregenerate soul. He becomes convinced that there is a God, who is the author of his being. With this, comes the consciousness of his fallen and sinful condition. He is not totally depraved. Within the human breast there is a germ of righteousness buried, smothered though it be. In some it predominates more than in others. A portion, whom Christ said were "few," when they hear the true gospel, sent from the regions from which they have become alienated, rejoice; light cleaving unto light, they struggle to free themselves from the spiritual bondage in which they feel that they are. The truly converted or convinced soul does not think to recover his "lost estate" without Repentance. A faith that leads people to suppose that they may please God without actually forsaking all that is sinful, together with conforming to every principle of righteousness, is simply presumption, and does not have its origin in true conversion to God. The doctrine of Baptisms presents itself as a means of admittance into the near relationship with God and Christ. By "abiding in the doctrine of Christ," they have "both the Father and the Son." Thus, step by step "they who were one time aliens, are brought nigh by the blood of Christ." Resurrection and final reward are attainable objects, seen with the eye of faith in the near future. The "spirit of truth" being given as a "comforter" serves as the "earnest of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession." The operations, or "manifestations of the Spirit," being "given to every man to profit withal" are diverse, God "dividing them to every man severally as he will," their object being to comfort, strengthen, and advance the child of God; "but when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." We shall then "see face to face," and "shall know even as we are known." Tongues, prophecy, and knowledge in part, shall be superceded by a fulness of God's glory and blessings. The purpose for which the "gifts" were given will then have been accomplished. The "Saints" will be "perfected," the "body of Christ" will be edified and instructed unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. "Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children, and walk in love as Christ also hath loved us;" and be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you;" "and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them," "redeeming the time because the days are evil," and "give thanks always for all things unto God the Father, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" to whom be glory forever. Amen.

G. S. HYDE.

Is There a Personal Devil?

UNTIL quite recently I had not given this subject much thought, or investigation; but having my attention called to it by one who disbelieves in a personal devil, I thought I would determine what the books said upon the subject. After some research I am convinced that a person called "the devil" really exists,—that he possesses body and parts, as really as does God himself, and the one being only a principle is as incomprehensible as to suppose the other is,—that if the scriptures teach one to be a real entity it does the other. I shall not attempt to locate the devil, or claim that he has tabernacled; or does or will tabernacle in the flesh. I will only quote a few of the many passages which have confirmed me in the belief of his personal existence.

"And I the Lord God spake unto Moses, saying, That Satan whom thou hast commanded in the name of my only begotten, is the same which was from the beginning; and he came before me, saying: I, behold I, send me; I will be thy son, and I will redeem all mankind, that one soul shall not be lost, and surely I will do it; wherefore give me thine honor. But behold, my beloved Son, which was my beloved and chosen from the beginning, said unto me: Father thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever."—Gen. 3:1-3, I. T.

It appears to me that if one of the persons here spoken of is a personal entity, the other must be. It is said of both, that they were from the beginning. Each of them came before the Father, and is represented as speaking, and suggesting a plan for the redemption of man. It may be said of principles that they speak; but this seems to be an account of a literal transaction, and we can say of the Son of God "he was only a good principle with as much consistency as we can say of Satan, "he was only a bad principle." In the first and second chapters of Job we read of Satan conversing with the Lord; of what the Lord said unto Satan, and of what Satan said unto the Lord. By what course of reasoning can we make one of these a principle, and the other a person? It is said of Satan, "He came also among them," that he was "going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it," that he "went forth from the presence of the Lord," and "came also among them to present himself before the Lord." All these expressions, it appears to me, could only be made in reference to a person. Please tell us how a principle could walk up and down in the earth!

"And the Seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject to us in thy name. And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven."—Luke 10:17, 18.

Now if this was an evil principle, and fell, (decreased in value), then evil principles must have been prized higher in heaven once than they are now. I think the only consistent conclusion would be that a literal devil fell from his position in heaven, and Christ beheld him with literal eyes. In connection with the above, let us read what seems to be an account of the same transaction:

"Wherefore because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God had given him, and also that I should give him mine own power; by the power of mine Only Begotten I caused that he should be cast down, and he became Satan, yea even the devil, the father of all lies," &c.

If Satan or the devil is only an evil principle, what was he before he "became Satan?" A good principle? If so, will some one please inform us how a good can become a bad principle?

"And behold others he flattereth away, and he telleth them there is no hell; and he saith unto them, I am no devil, for there is none; and thus he whispereth in their ears until he grasps them with his awful chains, from whence there is no deliverance; yea they are grasped with death and hell; and death and hell and the devil, and all that have been seized therewith, must stand before the throne of God, and be judged according to their works; from whence they must go into a place prepared for them, even a lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment."—2 Nephi 12:3.

Now according to the Devil Principle Theory, this evil principle shall stand before the throne of God, and all other principles seized by this principle are to be cast with it into "a lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment." Now I never heard of any one denying the existence of evil principles, so as some are to deny the existence of the devil, I infer that they deny his personal existence, and are in the danger spoken of in the above quotation.

If I can understand the import of this language, there is an entity called the devil, who shall stand before the throne of God, to be judged according to his works, and persons seized by him are to share in his condemnation. After reading this, I am not surprised to learn that some are trying to reason the devil out of existence.

"And it came to pass when Moses had said these words, behold Satan came tempting him, saying, Moses, son of man, worship me. And it came to pass that Moses looked upon Satan, and said who art thou? For behold I am a son of God, in the similitude of His Only Begotten; and where is thy glory that I should worship thee? For behold I could not look upon God except his glory should come upon me, and I was strengthened before him; but I can look upon thee in the natural man."—D. and C. 22:3.

If this language will not convey the idea to the mind that there is a personal devil, who was seen and conversed with by Moses, then how could it be expressed? Comment is useless. Again:

"Satan cried with a loud voice, and went upon the earth, and commanded saying: I am the Only Begotten, worship me. And it came to pass that Moses began to fear exceedingly; and as he began to fear, he saw the bitterness of hell; nevertheless, calling upon God, he received strength, and commanded saying: Depart from me, Satan, for this one God only will I worship, which is the God of glory. And now Satan began to tremble, and the earth shook; and Moses received strength, and called upon God, saying: In the name of Jesus Christ, depart hence, Satan. And it came to pass that Satan cried with a loud voice with weeping and gnashing of teeth; and departed hence, even from the presence of Moses, that he beheld him not."—4th par.

Moses had been informed by the Lord that he, Moses, was in the similitude of the Only Begotten, and Satan tries to represent the Only Begotten, consequently must have been a person, as literally so as Moses himself, otherwise he could have had no hopes of success. Would it not be curious to see a principle tremble, the earth shake under it; hear it weep with a loud voice, and see it gnash its teeth?

"And this we saw also, and bear record, that an angel of God, who was in authority in the presence of God, who rebelled against the Only Begotten Son, whom the Father loved, and who was in the bosom of the Father; and was thrust down from the presence of God and the Son, and was called Perdition; for the heavens wept over him; he was Lucifer, a son of the morning."—Doctrine and Covenants 76:3.

From this passage we learn that Satan was once an angel of God. Now when he was thrust down and became Perdition, did he change from a person to a principle? Or was he an angel-principle? If so, are not all angels principles, and not persons? Would it not be more reasonable to say he was a person before he fell, and remained a person after his fall? But I forbear.

If the Devil Principle Theory is correct, we would be glad to have these passages harmonized with it, and the above question answered satisfactorily. While it might be gratifying to the writer to think that there is no personal devil, providing the consequences were not so serious, yet he understands the books to teach there is, and is CRECULOUS.

Dr. Thomas on Mormonism.

"Mormonism" was the subject of Dr. H. W. Thomas' sermon yesterday morning at the People's Church, Chicago. The sermon was as follows:

"Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself; but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes."—Psalms 1:21.

Whilst some in our world have long been doubting the existence of God, and fail to find in themselves or in nature any satisfactory evidence that there is any supreme and all-controlling mind in the universe, by far the larger part of our race have readily accepted the fact, but have been equally busy in their inquiries, and often just as uncertain and as much divided as to the character of that great Being, or as to what God really is. And one of the most common tendencies of the human mind is for men to fashion God after their own ideas; is to think of Him as they think of themselves, or to form their ideas after the prevailing ideas of their age. Thus, in the ages of the great physical strength, they would think of God as strong; in the times of kings they would think of Him as a great king, as a ruler of unquestioning authority and might. An intellectual age would most naturally conceive of God as a being of thought, and in an æsthetic age, He would be thought of under the ideas of the beautiful, whilst in an age of high morals He would take the shape of goodness.

And this general fact may be noted in history, that the religion of a people has always been shaped by their conception of their deity. Many of the cruelties of old are to be traced to the cruel ideas that obtained in reference to the nature of the Divine; and many of the impure rites of the old religions grew out of their low and sensual ideas of their deities, as in the religions of Greece and Rome. And in modern times we may note that along with, or rather preceding the milder and more humane ideas of theology, there were higher and better views of God.

One of the great burdens of thought that we may perceive in the Bible, and struggling through the darkness and corruption of the human mind, is the effort to set the thought of God in a clear light; to get before men a clear and exalted conception of the divine character. And as men have approved this they have aspired to be like it; but as they themselves have become low or carnal in their desires, then they have sought to find in God and in His word a justification of such a course. And thus it is that religion in its doctrinal and practical representations, has gone up and down with the rise and fall of the thoughts and feelings of men. And this must make all the more apparent the great need of settled convictions concerning the nature of God, as a means to settled standards in morality.

These thoughts may bring before us a study of one of the many forms of religion in our land, and one that is just now causing the Nation no little concern. I refer to that form called Mormonism.

That we may have the subject fairly before us, let us refer briefly to its origin and history, and also to its leading doctrines.

Mormonism proper is the system of faith and practice taught by Joseph Smith. The Church was organized at Fayette, N. Y., April 6th, 1830, and continued under his leadership for fourteen years, or until his assassination in 1844. The name Mormon was attached to the sect, not by themselves, but by their enemies, and based upon the title of their bible, which was called the Book of Mormon. I will not now attempt to give an account of the origin of this book, but simply say that for reasons satisfactory to themselves it was received by the followers of Mr. Smith as an inspired volume, and not less than two hundred thousand of that faith have since then accepted it as of equal authority in morals and religion with the Jewish and Christian Scriptures. But the Mormons, or the believers in the Book of Mormon, have not rejected the Bible used by other churches, but claim, rather, that their faith in our Scriptures is thereby strengthened. And they claim that upon all the essential doctrines of religion the teachings of the two are substantially the same.

When the church was first organized it took simply the name of the Church of Christ, and afterward was added the title of Latter Day Saints: not, I suppose, as meaning perfect beings, but, as the term saints was a common one in the early Christian church, they applied it to themselves. And thus we have an organization, or a religion, bearing its own assumed name and also the name applied to it by others, partly in derision and partly descriptive, just as the followers of Wesley were called Methodists; and a people who believe in their own Book of Mormon and also accept our Bible.

And now let us look at the doctrines of this sect, called Mormons, or Latter Day Saints. Accepting our Scriptures along with their own, their beliefs in very many things are common to nearly all orthodox Christian churches. Indeed, they may be said to be strictly orthodox. They believe in the Trinity, the divinity of Christ, the fall of man, total depravity, blood atonement, the resurrection of the body, and endless punishment. They believe in baptism for the remission of sins, and in laying on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. They believe in a divine call to the ministry: in ordination by laying on of hands; and they recognize, as in the early church, the orders of apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, and evangelists. In so far as their beliefs are peculiar on these points, they are Baptists in practicing only immersion, and hold about the same doctrine as Dr. Goodwin and Brother Moody on the subject of the advent, or the second coming of Christ.

Holding then in common, as Mormons do, the great doctrines of Christianity, to talk of crushing out Mormonism as a religion would in this sense be the same as to repudiate the doctrines of all our other churches. But let us now come again to the history of this peculiar sect.

When, in 1844, Joseph Smith was killed, Brigham Young assumed the leadership of the church, and set out on the long way to Utah, to find a home for his followers. And now we have here several things to note. The first is that polygamy, the now distinguishing and offensive feature of Mormonism, was not then a doctrine nor a practice in the church. Indeed, the Book of Mormon most positively prohibits polygamy; says it is a "crime," an "abomination" in the sight of God, and expressly says that "no man among you shall have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none." In 1835, and several times since, the church has declared in its general conference, as a command from God, that "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shalt cleave unto her and none else; and he that looketh on a woman to lust after, [or desire her for another wife], shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit." And in 1844, John Taylor, who is now the head of the Utah church, declared editorially in the Times and Seasons, the church paper, of which he was then editor, that any man who teaches contrary to these teachings of the church, or contrary to the Book of Mormon, or the Book of the Covenants, he is an "impostor, and must be cut off from the church." And in 1850, this same John Taylor, in a public discussion in France, denied that polygamy was known to or practiced by the church; and in proof of the position, referred to the statements from the Book of Mormon that I have quoted.

And thus we see that polygamy was not originally a part of Mormonism. And the question arises, How and by what authority did it come to be admitted?

In 1852 Brigham Young made the startling announcement through the Deseret News, of Salt Lake, and the Seer, published in Washington by Orson Pratt, that he had a "revelation" that had been given to him through Joseph Smith in July, 1843, and that he had kept it securely locked up till that time. However, he confessed that he had not the original, but only a copy, the original, he said, having been destroyed by Joseph Smith's wife. But Mrs. Smith declared to her last hour that she never saw nor heard of any such paper or revelation. Nor has Taylor nor any of the leaders pretended that they ever saw the original, nor even the copy, till Brigham Young brought it out of his desk. And moreover, this pretended "revelation" is in direct opposition to the Book of Mormon, on which the Church rests, for we have seen that it forbids polygamy. And, furthermore, the leaders of the Church in Utah have claimed all the time, and claim to-day, that up to July 12, 1843, the date of this "revelation," polygamy was a crime, and was forbidden by the Almighty.

And then, to make the whole matter worse, Brigham Young, after trying to palm off this "revelation," declared in a speech delivered July 1st, 1874, and published in the Deseret News, that the doctrine of polygamy was revealed to him while in England in 1839 and 1840. He says: "While we were in England the Lord manifested to me by vision and His spirit things that I did not then understand. I never opened my mouth concerning them to any one; there had never been a thought of it in the Church that I knew anything about at that time, but I had this for myself, and I kept it to myself." And thus he pretends that, after all, the doctrine of polygamy was first revealed to him, and not to Joseph Smith in 1843, as he had before claimed.

And this more should be said, that, apart from the fact that polygamy is not a part of Mormonism proper, matrimony is a civil as well as a religious institution; and, this being so, the government certainly has the right to regulate its own civil affairs, and no church should claim the right, nor should they be permitted, to violate the laws of the land on this or any other subject. The late action of Congress, while it may seem to the leaders of Utahism severe, is undoubtedly just. And now, if Congress will provide a Board of Commissioners to govern that rebellious Territory, this crying, this disgraceful evil may in time be wiped out. It would not seem right to declare the children of previous marriages illegitimate, nor attempt to break up these homes where they desire to remain together; but it is right to disfranchise the parents, and it is right to enact stringent laws for the future.

The idea should be brought prominently before these people that it is not their religion that the Government opposes, but only this immoral and unconstitutional feature of that religion. And then, with all that can be done, it will require years of patient, persistent effort on the part of the Nation to cure an evil so long and so deeply rooted in a powerful and growing organization. But it can be done, and must be done; not in the spirit of oppression, but for the honor of the country and the good of the world. But Mormonism has a powerful hold upon many of its people. Thousands of them were brought over from Europe where they led scarcely the lives of animals. In Utah they have their little homes of twenty or forty acres of land, and if you talk to them about any other form of religion they naturally say that no other people or church ever did for them what Mormonism has done; and it is not strange that they love their church and their religion. But they can, in time, be educated away from this offensive feature.

And now there is another fact of this history to which I take pleasure in referring. We have seen that polygamy was not originally a part of Mormonism; that it was falsely and wickedly foisted it upon after the death of Joseph Smith, and against the plainest teachings and prohibitions of their own sacred books. But there was left a remnant of the original church, and this exists under the leadership of the well-known son of the original founder, under the name of the "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." Their headquarters have for years been at Plano, in this state. Their beliefs are, in the main, not unlike those of the orthodox churches. In their worship you could hardly tell them from an ordinary Methodist congregation. They are an industrious, peaceable, and law-abiding people. They are just as much opposed to polygamy as are any of the other churches. They claim to represent the original idea of their founder. They have their publishing house, and a church in this city, and have done all they could by sending missionaries and tracts to Salt Lake, but very naturally their efforts have met with determined opposition from the leaders of Utahism. And while personally, I know but little and care but little about their claims of a revelation through Joseph Smith, still I respect, and we should all respect their purity of life and their conscientious efforts to maintain their religion in its original purity, and to save Mormonism from the corruptions that have been imposed upon it by its base leaders.

And now our review of this new form of religion suggests some reflections of a general character.

1. We have an illustration of the power of the religious sentiment. The world is moved by nothing so deeply as by its religious feelings. They appeal to all the deeper impulses of life, and carry mankind with a strength and enthusiasm beyond that even of home and country. Religion approaches the sacred side of humanity, and hence its most confident and unsuspecting side. And hence impositions and abuses in religion have been so common and so easy. The poor Mormon women feel a natural and womanly shrinking from polygamous relations; but their corrupt religious leaders and teachers approach them in the name of religion, and under the guise of a divine authority. They get a leverage upon their consciences, and appeal to the rewards and terrors of a future world; and their poor victims are powerless to answer their adroit reasonings and sacred pretensions, and hence sacrifice all that is dearest on earth in the hope of avoiding a future wrath and securing a heavenly good. And it is upon the strength of this religious impulse, and the great needs of the human heart, that all the religions of the world, both good and bad, have rested. And O! blessed are the men and the religions that come to the suffering and needy hearts of our world with a religion of truth and helpfulness; and cursed, cursed above and beneath all others, are the men who, for power or gain or lust, will take advantage of what is at once the most weak and the most strong and always the most sacred in human lives.

2. We are led to reflect upon the subject of inspiration. If we deny all in-breathing, all light from above, then we are left to our senses and to reason as our only guides. If we say that all inspiration ceased 2,000 years ago, and that the human heart can know no immediate presence, no leading of the Divine Spirit now, then we have only a history of religion on which to rest, and not the conscious life of God in the soul. We have a dead God and a dead religion. But God is a living God, and religion is a present life. We must not, then, deny a present inspiration, a present leading of the Holy Spirit. But, while holding fast to the living experience of religion and the leading of the Spirit, we must have some rule or guide to save us from the wild vagaries or the false teachings of weak or corrupt men. And what is this? It is the truth that rests upon the nature of God and the nature and needs of man and society; such truth as we have in the ten commandments and the teachings of Christ. And any pretended revelation or inspiration that lowers the ideal perfection of God; that would enable corrupt men to say: "God is altogether such an one as ourselves," or that violates any of the sanctities of life, must be said, in the very nature of the case, to be false. God has given man an objective law as well as an inward witnessing or leading. And this law must not be deduced from the history of dark and corrupt ages of slavery and polygamy, such as were some of the old Bible ages; and then the character of men who practiced these wrongs be quoted as justifications: not this, but the law must be deduced from the spirit and the analogy of Bible truth, and from its final utterances. These, and these only, are binding as the rule of life. And I fear that inattention to these principles, and making too much of some portions of the Old Testament, have hurt and hindered the morality of the world. The Bible has been quoted in support of slavery, and the Mormons of Utah use to-day their debate with Dr. Newman as a campaign document. That poor deluded man of Pocasset was led to slay his own child from reading the account of Abraham offering his son Isaac. Noyes, of the Oneida Community, justified his vices on the ground of Old Testament examples, and the ground that he was inspired. And I think if all the truth could be known, that fatal Oneida and Utah heresy that men can be inspired to do evil, or what to others would be evil, and hence have immunity from law, was back of Guiteau's terrible purpose to take the President's life. Men form wicked purposes, and then, either as a delusion or as a cloak for their crimes, say they are inspired, and that God "is such an one as themselves." God can not be "such an one;" He can not inspire wrong or lust, or the violation of any sacred right.

God himself can not make wrong right, and all the revelations and inspirations on earth can never make slavery or polygamy right. Nor could 10,000 voices and visions make it right for any father to slay his child. And people must reserve the sacred right of reason and common sense as something above all the visions and revelations of a Noyes or a Brigham Young. But these deceivers claimed that God had spoken to them, and that it was wrong for the poor women to doubt. O, the cursedness of such priestly corruption in the sacred name of religion. The only salvation for these poor women is to doubt, and to deny any such inspirations; and to rise up in the strength of reason and right and God, and resist them.

3. A last reflection relates to the long patience needed to lift up and establish the true idea and life of religion in the world. Some, seeing the wrong done in the name of religion, and the slowness of its progress, may feel discouraged, or disgusted even, and say we will have nothing to do with it. But that will not help the case nor cure the evil. And then we should remember that everything good is of slow growth, and has in its turn been abused. Governments have fostered cruelty and slavery, but shall we say therefore we will have nothing to do with governments? Certainly not. Liberty has led to anarchy. Shall we therefore abandon that noble principle in the earth? Certainly not. Religions have been imperfect; priests and churches have been corrupt; but we should not therefore abandon religion, but seek rather by patience and toil and long waiting and working, to bring in the perfect day of truth and right.—Chicago Tribune.

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

THIS church is entirely distinct from that located in Utah, commonly known as the Mormon Church, and has branches located in many of the States and Territories, in Canada, England, Wales, Australia and Tahiti. There are two branches in this county, with a membership of about forty; two in Mississippi, one in Kentucky, and some twelve or fourteen in the states of Alabama and Florida. The writer is now in charge of the South-Eastern Mission, comprising Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama and Florida. So persistent and universal has been our opposition to polygamy and crime, that we challenge the world to produce one instance, where an acknowledged representative of our faith, has spoken or written in favor of these abominations. Our books and papers are, and have been, published to the world, and all who will take the pains to read them may know that we are as much opposed to polygamy, with all its kindred evils, as any other religious body. Justice demands that we should have the privilege of representing our own faith, through our standard books and representative men; and that we should be held responsible for the conduct of those calling themselves Latter Day Saints, only so far as that conduct is the result of a belief in, and practice of the well established faith of the Church. Intolerance and bigotry have cursed this fair world of ours long enough! It is high time these hideous monsters were supplanted with broad liberality and Christian love. If in the discharge of our religious convictions, we interfere with nobody else's rights, and violate no law of our country, why should we not be tolerated? Some claim they do not want to hear us, because we "are polygamists and connected with the church in Utah;" but the Utah Mormons have been more intolerant to us than any other religious body. They affirm that we are in collusion with the government against them, and "damn" the Government and us for our opposition to polygamy! What does all this mean? Are the people going to unite with the Mormons of Utah, in opposition to our faith, on the grounds that we are polygamists, while the latter heap imprecations upon us because we are not polygamists.

In support of our claims which have been presented and maintained before the world for more than twenty years, we present the following extracts from the "Findings of Lake County, Ohio, Court, in Kirtland Temple Suit. In Court of Common Pleas, Lake County, Ohio, February 23d, 1880, present: Hon. L. S. Sherman, Judge; F. Paine, Jr., Clerk; and C. F. Morley, Sheriff. Journal Entry, February Term, 1880.

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.
Plaintiff.

vs.

Lucien Williams, Joseph Smith, Sarah F. Videon, Mark H. Forscutt, the Church in Utah of which John Taylor is President and commonly known as the Mormon Church, and John Taylor President of said Utah Church. Defendants.

That the said Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is a Religious Society, founded and organized upon the same doctrines and tenets, and having the same church organization, as the original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, by Joseph Smith, and was organized pursuant to the constitution, laws and usages of said original church, and has branches located in Illinois, Ohio and other States.

That the church in Utah the defendant of which John Taylor is president, has materially and largely departed from the faith, doctrines, laws, ordinances and usages of said original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and has incorporated into its system of faith the doctrines of celestial marriage and a plurality of wives, and the doctrine of Adam-God worship, contrary to the laws and constitution of said original Church. And the Court do further find that the Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is the True and Lawful continuation of, and successor to the original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, and is entitled in law to all its rights and property."

The above is too plain to be misunderstood; but we could, had we the space, add to it the testimony of Ex-Vice President Colfax, C. F. Vent, S. M. Shmucker, Mrs. C. V. Wait, wife of United States Judge in Utah, and others, to show that the faith of the original Church (with which the faith of the Church we represent is identical) is positively opposed to polygamy and crime. In Youth's Companion for January 8th, 1880, article Polygamy, is contained the following frank and just statement: "It ought to be understood that the government has no quarrel with the Mormons as a religious body. It does not and can not interfere with any man's religious faith. But polygamy is not a part of Mormonism proper, and it could not be tolerated if it were. There is a sect of Mormons, having a more extensive membership both east and west than most people suppose, which sets its face strongly against the immoral and illegal practice."

In view of the above facts, why should any one think that a benefit has been conferred upon the community by a so called "expose" of, or supposed "check" to "Mormonism"? Does an adherent to our faith ever become a more dangerous and useless member of society—a worse citizen of town, county or state?

Yours for truth and justice,

ELDER JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

Finds near Bagdad.

Monday evening, during a discussion which took place on a paper read at the Victoria Institute, Mr. Rassam, the well known discoverer of Assyrian relics, said: "In March last I went out again to the East, as you know I was always doing for the purpose of finding out the old cities which lie buried there. As I was journeying on one occasion in pursuit of this object I met an old Arab, who told me that he knew of an old ruined city, the remains of which were to be found within five hours of Bagdad—that is to say, taking the computation of three miles an hour, the place he knew of was fifteen miles from Bagdad. As we were traveling along the route pointed out by the Arab, we came at a distance of four hours' journeying upon an old ruin that I had never seen before—a ruin of great magnitude—so large indeed, that it must be about three miles in circumference. I at first thought that this was the place of which my guide had spoken. We went onward, and at last the Arab showed me a most wonderful ruin. I set to work and excavated there, but I found nothing of any antiquarian value.

"I afterward went back to the place I had first seen and commenced a thorough search there. The result was that after digging for four days we came upon the top of some walls. This induced us to persevere with increased ardor, and we soon found that we had come upon an enormous building, in which we began to find inscriptions. I may here say that I am not an Assyrian reader. I am only a discoverer of Assyrian relics, which I send to the British Museum, where those who have made Assyriology a study, interpret the inscriptions I find. We first of all discovered four rooms, and then came upon a fifth. They were what I should call generally of the Assyrian or Babylonian order, and paved with bricks or stones; but the fifth room was paved with asphalt, the discovery of which brought to my mind Solomon's saying: 'There is nothing new under the sun.' Previous to this I had always thought that asphalt was a modern invention. Singular as this discovery was, we dug through the asphalt, and in a short time we were rewarded by coming upon a coffer, on which we found inscriptions. From this coffer we took two cylinders. These were covered with inscriptions which are supposed to be the most important records of the oldest city in the world, founded, as historians tell us, by Noah after the deluge, and where, according to tradition, Noah buried the antediluvian records. Well, I had to come home; but I left some workmen continuing the operations at the spot, and I have ascertained that they have found, after a few days' more digging, that in one of the rooms there was a channel, and inside that channel there were records inscribed on nearly ten thousand tablets. These tablets are all coming to England, but we can not, of course, as yet say what they contain. They may contain something of even greater value than anything that has hitherto been discovered in the course of our Eastern researches. It may be, indeed, that we shall really find on them the antediluvian records of which I have spoken. After I have been out there again I shall be happy to give you further information as to this interesting discovery on my return. I hope to be going out in another month, and then, I trust, I shall be able to make still further advances on what we have already discovered."—London Times.

EXTRACT FROM A SERMON IN THE "MESSENGER," OF NEW CANAAN, CONNECTICUT.

Now we must turn to a third and different topic which caught the psalmist's mind in the midst of his utterance of the glorious honor of the Divine majesty, and of the wondrous works of God. We hear him saying in the text, "Men shall speak of the might of Thy terrible acts," which he, himself avers, declares Jehovah's greatness. We have to speak this day with sadness respecting "the might of the terrible acts of God" during this eventful year. Holding to the doctrine of Providence, as we do, even the events so fraught with sorrow to the multitude must be attributed to the permission of the Almighty Ruler; in this sense are they the "terrible acts of God."

The year has been one of most momentous vicissitudes. The times seem rife with disaster. Throughout the whole year, in different parts of the globe, occurrences of the most painful nature have been experienced, and late events have so familiarized the mind with calamities that we have almost lost the habit of being shocked. The season past has been one of abnormal atmospheric subversions. Through the Western, and to some extent through the Southern portion of the States, there have swept tornadoes, the like of which for fury and destructiveness have seldom been known. In Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Alabama and Virginia many a tract lay desolate in their broad swathe and desolation. The floods, too, "have lifted up their voice; the floods have lifted up their waves." Reckless and uncontrolled as the stormy wind have the waters done their sad work. Unusual inundations have wrought mischief in several portions of our own country and abroad. Especially in Dakota was there the greatest suffering. Five hundred thousand acres of the richest farming land lay under six feet of water in many places. Most of the inhabitants lost everything that they possessed, and over 7,000 of these unfortunate people were compelled for a long time to live upon the charity of the more favored. Old Mother Earth likewise has shaken with her awful tremors and with dread intensity. The earthquakes of the year have been attended with distressing loss of life and property. Saddest of all that fearful convulsion on the island of Scio in April. Two hundred and fifty throes of earth were counted, forty-five villages were totally destroyed and the population in many large districts was entirely buried in a living grave. Eight thousand persons are known to have been killed in a moment and without warning, and over 10,000 afterward reported injuries. The play of this mysterious power has been more extended than usual throughout our States. Several of them have been startled with the terrifying detonations and the fearful trembling of the ground beneath our tread. And now, but recently, that appalling land slide, by which the Swiss village of Elm was completely overwhelmed by a falling mountain—200 persons perishing in the twinkling of an eye.

Phenomenally the year has been one of very marked characteristics—the severity of the cold and the intensity of the heat exceeding the records of many of those preceding; all parts of the country have suffered in consequence. The crops have been less abundant, though sufficient for our needs, but the scourge of fire during the long protracted drought of over 100 days in this section, has left its fearful story for our record.

Bush fires have abounded everywhere, the most destructive, that in Michigan resulting, by the official report, in the loss of six hundred lives. In twenty townships hardly a house, barn or outbuilding was left unburned. A region populated by fifty thousand persons is utterly desolate. Thousands are homeless and hopeless.

In consequence of the severe weather the world's death record has been more than usually alarming. Sickness has very generally prevailed. From all parts of our own country reports have come of the prevalence of many classes of zymotic diseases. It has been a sickly year quite generally. Typhoid fever raged in St. Petersburg; small-pox in Vienna, Paris and London. Diphtheria in Berlin and throughout Prussia, and malarial fevers generally through Great Britain. The plague, too, has not relinquished its old ravaging grounds around Persia. And so it surely seems that, if the ingenious compiler of Mother Shipton's prophecy, that the world would come to an end in 1881, can not set up for a prophet on his own account, he can nevertheless glory in having named in his rhyming mood a most remarkable year. The varied assortment of seven new comets, so as to suit all tastes; singular atmospheric demonstrations in New England; that dark day; the remarkable mirage seen off the New Jersey coast; the intense heat and cold; the widely prevalent drought; destructive floods, and winds, and fires, and throes of earth, and even the crimes of the year—from the assassination of two rulers to the detection of a twenty or thirty times married man, and the stealing of the paltry sum of only $2,400,000 from a Newark bank, etc., etc. These things have made for us all an eventful year.

To us, indeed, there is but the one occurrence of this ever-memorable year. The appalling calamity by which this nation was thrown into the depths of sorrow has wrought for us changes and experiences that certainly could not have been anticipated. The assassination of our loved President on that fatal 2d of July has awakened a universal sympathy and brotherhood of feeling that places us to-day before ourselves and before the nations of the world in a position that we have never hitherto occupied. Never in the world's history has a death produced mourning so universal and sympathy so profound. The black emblems of America's mourning encircled the world. Berlin, Paris and London put on the habiliments of grief. From the Mohammedan Sultan, the Greek Czar, the Roman Pontiff, and from the Protestant English Queen come voices of sorrow that touch the very core of the heart of this great nation. Not cold and formal state messages are they, but pure and sympathetic sorrow. Let us never forget the tender words of that noble woman who sits upon the English throne, speaking out of her heart to that other noble woman, with whom this nation bows in a common grief: "Words can not express the deep sympathy I feel for you at this terrible moment. May God support and comfort you as He alone can."

Thoughts on Representation.

It may be thought by some that representation was worn threadbare last Fall; and I have no doubt that some of the brethren feel so sore over the matter that they never want to hear it spoken of again. But, since the agitation of the question last Fall, it has been the topic of discussion among the Elders both pro and con, and from the sentiments expressed it is only fair to conclude that the opinions on both sides are of equal honesty, and entitled to respect for the integrity of those holding them; and no brother should be thought less of if he should differ from his fellow. It is a subject that affects the whole polity of the Church, and from that stand point it should be considered.

I am satisfied that some system of representation by delegation should be adopted. By observation at the General Conference of September, 1881, and the expression of the Elders at large, it seems to me that the decision on the question was premature. Although there were some technicalities indulged in by the disputants, it is obvious that there were grounds for argument on both sides of the case. It is expressed by those who oppose representation that it is placing the controlling power of the Church in the hands of a few men, and disfranchising the balance. I think this conclusion has obtained for want of a proper understanding of the matter; and to my view it will take time and patience to get the matter fairly understood by the masses of the people. We often hear brethren state that they have spent the major part of their life in the promulgation of this cause, now their voice and counsel are no longer needed, and being disfranchised there is no further use for them in General Conference; consequently a feeling of indifference prevails. I believe that it was the design of the action of the brethren in April, 1881, to protect the liberties of the masses, but the results of the discussion last Fall showed that dissatisfaction prevailed. If the system of transacting Church business from 1830 to 1881 was not the true method of obtaining the common consent of the whole body, and a change be necessary, then it seems to me that the passing of the resolution of April, 1881, was not fair; as the whole body was not consulted. And it is apparent that it can not be in mass convention; therefore some system should prevail through which the whole Church should be heard, therefore I submit the following suggestions.

First, that the system should be discussed both pro and con, with all the evidences, and an approximate result obtained. The question then submitted to the Church at large, and the presidents of each Branch, District and Quorum be required to bring it before their respective bodies for discussion; and that a sufficient length of time be given for all to obtain such information upon the subject as would be necessary. Then, in General Conference, both by mass and delegation, pass upon the matter. And, in case it was thus ratified by the body, it seems to me that a harmony might be obtained and a complete system be inaugurated; but as it now stands it is neither representation nor mass convention.

Second, Regarding who shall vote, I submit the following suggestion: That the First Presidency, Bishopric, Twelve, Seventies, High Priests, (whose standing is good), the presidents of each Quorum of Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons, and presiding elders of districts, be ex officio members of Conference; the basis of representation, as regards appointment of delegates and voting to be as it now stands.

Third suggestion: In all cases where business affecting the whole polity of the Church should be introduced, that it be submitted to the body as set forth in my first suggestion; in this way all delegates may be intelligently instructed how to vote. Then to my mind every person in the Church would have a chance to say something on all important questions, whether at home or at Conference.

Farther: I have discovered that a system of delegation will have to be applied to both branches and districts, as it is apparent to all that attend our quarterly conferences, that only a few of the Elders attend; and if any measures are adopted by the few, the many at home do not feel like submitting to matters that they have had no voice in. I don't believe it will be productive of good for the districts or branches to be left to institute their own system, for they will not be likely to be in harmony with each other. But I think a complete system should be adopted, so as to produce harmony in the body, especially among the ministry of the Church. I think that there is no brother that stops to think and look at the present condition of the Church, but what will say with me that some wholesome system of representation by delegation should be adopted.

J. R. BADHAM.

Is there not something inexpressibly beautiful in the thought that God's Spirit is imparted unto all? The rock is hard; but its hardness can not prevent the warm beam from falling upon it. The heart may be hard; but the Spirit's influence, shot like a ray from the orb of God's mercy, falls lovingly upon it, and no hardness can turn it back. There is something large and lavish in all divine operations. God is full and rich, and is not compelled to practice a cautious economy in the outgoing of his beneficence. He pours his largess down upon us as the spring rains are poured upon the earth,—upon rock and barren spot as truly as upon the fruitful soil.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We are in receipt of Bro. Josiah Ells' pamphlet on the Book of Mormon; for further description of which see advertisement. Bro. Ells has taken ground in his work somewhat different from some of the Elders; but he expresses his views fairly and gives his reasons for them. We shall keep them on sale, as requested by Bro. Ells, and those who choose may order from the Herald Office.

We are also in receipt from our German brethren at Stewartville, Missouri, a pamphlet entitled "Eine Tauffe;" one baptism. This tract is published by Brn. Hinderks and Reidel of the committee on German Tracts, appointed by the Fall Conference of 1881. The brethren desirous of securing something for circulation among the German friends, may send for these pamphlets to Temme Hinderk's, Stewartville, Missouri, or to Dr. F. W. Reidel, New Albany, Indiana.

"I am preaching every Sunday, and I think the work is gaining ground here." Willard J. Smith, East Tawas, Mich.

REV. DE WITT TALMAGE, preached a sermon lately in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, and published in the Christian Guardian, in which he alleges that the great body of Christians prayed for Pres. Garfield's recovery, while the Mormons prayed for his death; stating that the prayers of the righteous failed, but those of the unrighteous prevailed. Rather queer that. Let the infidel get hold of that statement of Rev. Talmage's, and he will reason thus: Those who believe the Bible, or profess to, believe that God hears the prayers of the righteous only; hence if the so-called Christian world prayed for Mr. Garfield to live and he died; and the Mormons prayed that he might die and he did; therefore the Mormons are righteous, for their prayer was answered. But we do not believe that the Mormons as a class prayed that Mr. Garfield would die; but we do believe that hundreds of them were satisfied that he would die. We heard some whom Mr. Talmage would call Mormons say as early as July 3d, the day after the President was wounded, that he would die; that they were impressed sadly that he was wounded to death. These could not pray "in faith, nothing doubting." The fact seems to be that Mr. Talmage tried, as many orthodox ministers did, to counteract the supposed effect of the failure of Pres. Garfield to live in the face of so great a demonstration of prayer in his behalf; the argument being that the people's prayers were answered more for the good of the nation in his death, than they would have been in his living; for that the good of the nation was the purport of the people's prayer. This may, and doubtless did satisfy some; but it would have been better to say we did pray, but for reasons known to God, our prayers were not heard. It is safer to admit failure than to evade by doubtful argument.

Bro. G. T. Griffiths wrote from Worcester, Massachusetts, which place will be his post office address for a time, that he had labored in London, Carlingford, Alliston, Corinth, Walsingham Center, baptized five at the latter named place; thence to St. Thomas and London, whence he went to his home at Worcester. He was seconded in his labors by Brn. Robert Browne, Wm. Jenkins and C. Pearson, whom he commends. He was well received and sustained by the Saints, wherever he labored; found some drinking of intoxicants to contend with, and deplores the bad effects of it among Saints. He will labor for awhile in the east.

Bro. A. J. Hinkle, son of Elder G. M. Hinkle, is at Green Ridge, Manitoba, and striving to inform himself in all the work of God. He writes February 1st, much encouraged. He knew Homer C. Hoyt when the latter was associated with Elder Newton of the followers of Elder Sidney Rigdon, at Attica, Iowa.

Sister Margaret Kelso, writing from Braidwood, Illinois, February 21st, says: The brethren here have rented the Free Gardener's New Hall. We have preaching every Lord's day at two o'clock in the afternoon, and at seven in the evening. We get good spiritual instructions from Elder John S. Keir and Priest A. Stewart.

"I hope to see the HERALD a weekly soon; it gets brighter and brighter as the Millennium day dawns. May God bless you all." W. N. Dawson, Ione, Cal.

"Saints all pretty well. Good meetings, and a lively desire with the Elders to preach the word in new fields. Prejudice is wearing off gradually. Plenty of chances to buy good farms from $20 to $35 per acre. I am ready to give any information I can to those wishing to come here." J. M. Terry, Stewartville, Mo.

Bro. A. Hines writes from Allendale, Missouri, February 19th, that no additions had been made to the Church there yet, though great interest has been created by the preaching of Bro. E. M. Wildermuth, I. N. Roberts, C. H. Jones and others. Much good was expected to result. Bro. Hines had come across the "Pearl of Great Price," printed in 1852, and containing the Revelation on the late war. The Worth county Times was about to reprint the Revelation, and comment.

"The work is in a prosperous condition around here; the Saints enjoy the gifts and blessings of God. Last Sunday I baptized two precious souls into the kingdom; there are more that I think will soon obey." A. L. Whiteaker, Wheatville, Wis.

Elder E. M. Wildermuth of Lamoni, Iowa, writes us of his travels and preaching at Allendale, Mo., and vicinity. He had spoken in a school-house at Allendale, in the Court-house, and at the M. E. Church at Grant City; and also spoke in Bro. Jacob Humstrom's house and at the school-house at Redding.

Bro. Edward Rannie writes from Blair, Nebraska, February 25th, that he had labored in Burt county, holding a discussion with a Mr. Beck, of the Christian Church, on the gifts continuing in the Church, on February 9-11, in Fairview School-house. Bro. Rannie states that one person who had been a member of the Church, but went out from among them, went into Nebraska, after being silenced, and baptized fourteen, and privately taught them that it was right to steal from the Gentiles, and that such was Mormonism. He urges strict conformity to the law requiring persons removing to obtain Letters of Removal, so that they may be known when asked for their credentials.

Bro. J. A. Stewart wrote from Philadelphia, March 1st: Bro. Gurley was there. Bro. Stewart had been in York county, and had baptized three. He states that Bro. Matthews had laid a good foundation over in that country. Bro. Gurley and he would visit Hornerstown, New Jersey, on the 4th of March; where it was expected Bro. Gurley would preach. Bro. Stewart had secured a hall in the city for Bro. Gurley to speak in on the 2d of March.

Is It Intermeddling?

THE Detroit Free Press is of the opinion, so it seems, that the Reorganized Church ought not to intermeddle in the row now going on between the Government and the Utah Church; but that, if they are apostate, we should let them alone. And, of course, all the Polygamic array are of the same opinion as the Free Press.

If the church in Utah had formally disavowed the faith of Primitive Mormonism, and assumed another name, abandoning the belief in the records, Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, and repealing the affirmation of the Church Articles as found in said Doctrine and Covenants, we should then be of the opinion that we should let them alone, only in the sense that we antagonize other churches. But, when the Utah church makes claim to be the Church of Christ, as organized on April 6th, 1830, by Joseph Smith and others, and to be preaching the same doctrines, promulgating the same gospel, at the same time making, teaching and practicing an abominable addenda expressly declared against in the books of the church as at first organized; which teaching and practice have made hundreds and thousands infidel and apostate to the faith in Christ, rendered the missionary work of the elders difficult and unnecessarily dangerous, and cast shame and contumely upon the name of the Church and the advocates of the true faith, the Reorganized Church would be recreant to every principle of right and honor, truth and fidelity, if it did not protest in every possible way.

Besides this, when it is understood that many hundreds of the Reorganized Church were members of the early church, whose faith in God, Christ, and the gospel, as promulgated by the Elders during the years 1830-1843 and 4 and the time between, had been outraged and aspersed by the introduction of said addenda; and that other hundreds are children of members and elders of the Church whose faith has been so hurt, it will be no hard thing to see that such parents and children, if they would still have hope for life and salvation in the original faith, are in duty bound to protest against the innovation of such abominable doctrine; and if need be, in so protesting, they have the right unmistakable and indefeasible to so far interfere with and molest those who have introduced such heresies that they shall be made justly accountable for the wrong done, and remove from the church into which they were received and the doctrines of truth they obeyed and love, the shame and obloquy cast upon them.

We feel quite assured that the Detroit Free Press, could those who edit its columns see the position as it shows to protesting believers, would exonerate us from blame. But whether it would or not, does not much matter to us, our work is clearly before us, and we shall try to do it.

THE "DESERET NEWS" AGAIN.

In good time the Evening News, official church paper, Salt Lake City, Utah, opens fire upon the Reorganized, the ("Josephite") Church. And from the force and vigor of an Editorial in the number of that paper for February 14th, we conclude that the "barking" of those two sent to Washington, by Fall Conference, or some other thing, has started the blood of the Utah polygamists. The article is headed "The Josephites as Persecutors," and after setting the whole thing aside by specious reasoning known so well by them, states:

"Two persons deputed by the Josephite body have been doing their best at the seat of government to fan the flame of intolerance and the fires of bigotry now burning against the Saints, and to invoke destruction upon the people of Utah."

Has it not occurred to the Evening News that there are two sides to this controversy, aside from the effort made by Congress, urged thereto by the people of the United States.

Large numbers of the Church living in Nauvoo, Hancock county, and the States of Illinois and Iowa, and other States of the Union did not remain with that body that went west; but refused to yield to the leadership of Brigham Young, and the subsequent dogma of polygamy, or plural marriage. These began a remonstrance then and there, for this opposition against that dogma began with Emma Smith, Wm. Marks, and a host of others as soon as the thing was whispered about; and resistance to the usurpations of President Young was one of the earliest sins of which the wife, and friend of Joseph Smith were guilty against the Utah hierarchy.

These persons have always declared that the practice of polygamy was foreign to the tenets as they received them, and a crime against the law of the land. We, personally, have so held since 1855; some of the "Josephites" so held and taught as early as 1851. And in 1860, twenty-two years ago, we began public ministrations in the pulpit and press, always maintaining the same view. If this be persecution, those Utah leaders have long been notified of it, and are not taken by surprise. We have from first to last, in public and in private, insisted that as citizens of Utah, territory belonging to the United States, the members of the church there should be amenable to law, that the law of the United States should prevail there, and that transgressors, polygamists included, should be punished. This has been the sinews of our persecution. Personally, we have called Brigham Young no vile names, nor abused his followers by vilification and calling of names, but we have stated facts as we saw, knew and believed them, and have insisted upon our right to do so; even though President Young said of us, "He is an apostate son of an apostate mother." If insisting upon the full and perfect obedience to the law; if insisting that polygamy is contrary to the law of the land and the law of God, and therefore a crime; if denying that it is a part of the doctrine of the church for the truth of which Joseph and Hyrum died; if denying the divine authenticity and authority of the plural marriage revelation; if refusing to be complicated with, or compromised by polygamists in their plea, "It is our religion;" if to insist upon our right to protest and declare against that which we believe to be evil and subversive of good; if to use every effort to throw the burden of blame where we believe it justly belongs; if these be to incite persecutions, to "fan the flame of intolerance and the fires of bigotry," we are persecutors. But we wish the News, and everybody else, to understand clearly that we shall not withhold because of this impotent begging of the question.

We quote again:

"We draw attention to this not to take up space in any argument against the statements of these people, that is almost unnecessary, but to let the Latter Day Saints know what kind of spirit those wolves in sheep's clothing bear. They do not aim to correct what they deem to be error, but to break up the families and homes of the Saints, deprive them of the commonest political rights, and in fact bring upon them a repetition of the troubles which they endured in Missouri and Illinois. The Josephite claim of drawing away ten thousand persons from this Church is an amazing falsehood, they have not succeeded in entrapping as many hundreds nor anything approaching such a number. Neither have they "maintained missionaries here for thirty years past." A few apostates and persons cut off this Church for gross iniquity have joined the impertinent fellows who have occasionally visited this Territory as Josephite proselyters, but they have scarcely numbered enough to make up a meeting, and it is only quite recently that they have been able to establish themselves in this city.

"The attempt to make instructions to people ages ago under altogether different circumstances apply to the Latter Day Saints, and at the same time suppress those portions of the text which prove that under other circumstances a different law would be given, is all of a piece with their general sophistry and their claim to a re-organization of that which was never disorganized. It is of the flimsiest character and only calculated to deceive the weak-minded and ignorant. The divine law under which the Latter Day Saints have received plural wives is not to be judged by directions given in other times and other conditions, any more than the gospel is to be gauged by the Mosaic law. The Josephites may reject it as they have other principles revealed to the Prophet whose son is fighting the father's works; they may preach their milk-and-water sermons, continue to blackguard good men who lived and suffered with the martyred founders of the Church; but they can not succeed in establishing their absurdities, and this effort to join in the demand for brute force to put down that which can not be destroyed by argument and scripture, ranks those people with the persecutors of the Saints of all ages, and numbers them with the villains who slew the servants of God at Carthage in '44 and drove the Saints from Nauvoo in '46. Let all good people beware of them and shun them as adders that bear poison under their tongues."

It is rather late for the statement that we do not seek to reclaim men from error, but rather to separate and "break up the families and homes of the Saints;" when it is notorious that from 1853, now lacking one year only of thirty years, the Reorganization has been steadily striving to present to the church of the Valley of Utah, the enormity of their error. "The Voice to the Captives," one of the earliest productions of the Church, was circulated largely among the Salt Lake believers, and several efforts were made from 1853 to 1863 to get a hearing among that same enlightened (?) and "tolerant" people, who now cry "persecution," "intolerance," "bigotry," &c. But such efforts were unavailing; they did not and would not listen, and in 1863 the strongholds of Utah religion were regularly invested by Elders E. C. Briggs and Alexander McCord, the latter one of the five hundred volunteers from the Saints, comprising the Mormon Battalion during the Mexican War. As to whether the liberal minded President Young and his followers were tolerant, or not, is seen in the language of President Young to Elder Briggs: "There shall no public house or place of meeting over which I have any control, be open to receive you;" which was coupled with a threat that his personal safety was in danger if he undertook to preach in the Territory. But the Editor of the News gives the key to their toleration, as follows:

"In some instances Bishops have been so weak and foolish as to permit preachers of that sect, who are always impudent, aggressive and sophistical, to speak in the meeting-houses of the Saints. But those people have never been molested even when assailing our most respected men with low vituperation and venomous falsehood."

In connection it seems pertinent to inquire why those bishops who permitted the elders of the Josephites the use of meeting houses were "weak and foolish," if there was no intolerance in the matter upon the part of the strong and the wise among them.

The News finds fault with the statement that during the past thirty years "at least ten thousand persons have been extricated from the binding corruption of polygamy," &c. But the following state of facts would go far toward making such a statement seem to be true:

"The census bureau has completed its estimate of the population of Utah territory, classified as Mormons, Gentiles, Apostates, Josephites, and doubtful. Of the Mormons there are 120,283, nearly 49,000 of whom are more than 21 years old, while 40,000 are less than 9 years old. Of the Gentiles there are only 14,156, of whom a little more than one-half are more than 21 years old. There are 6,988 Apostate Mormons, 820 Josephite Mormons, and 1,716 persons who are classified as doubtful. Of the Mormons, nearly 37,000 are of foreign birth."

Here are 820 acknowledged "Josephites" in the Territory, the stronghold itself, and 6,988 other apostates; for it seems to delight the News to claim that the great body of the Reorganization are persons excommunicated from the Utah Church, and apostates, &c.; which makes a total in the Territory alone of 7,808 that for some reason have turned their backs on the plural marriage business. Now, if the Reorganization numbers 12,000 only, (and there are more than that number enrolled in congregations), and there are but 820 in Utah, whence came the more than 11,000 making up the total. The question that might arise would be, there must be somebody else in the Josephite ranks, beside apostates and persons excommunicated from the Utah church, or else the claim for 10,000 won from that church is too small; as there are more than that number of communicants. Either the Reorganized Church is not made up of Utah renegades, "cut off for gross iniquity," (what grosser iniquity can a man commit, according to the Book of Mormon, than to be guilty of polygamy), and apostates," or the statement that 10,000 have been disenthralled is theoretically correct.

Again: there are 120,283 Mormons, now numbered in that church so wonderfully indignant at the "Josephites" and the son of the "Prophet whose son is fighting the father's works." Where are the 150,000 of believers left by Joseph and Hyrum in 1844? Where are the multitudes of worshippers scattered in a thousand cities, towns and hamlets in this and other lands? What drove the hundreds and thousands of honest men and women who were born to hope of life and peace by the preaching of the elders, for fourteen years from 1830 to 1844, without the dogma of plurality of wives? Where are the countless throngs that should have been added by the wonderful magnetism of this "new and everlasting covenant," the doctrine of polygamy? For thirty years, the life-time of the Church under Joseph and Hyrum more than twice told, have the elders of that wonderful increaser been proselyting under President Young and John Taylor; and lo, thirty thousand have been lost to the faith. Where are they? By what principle will the News, George Q. Cannon, John Taylor, Lorenzo Snow, Joseph F. Smith, and others of those who claim that Joseph Smith, son of the martyr Joseph Smith, is "fighting his father's works," account for the wholesale apostasy of so many, as have fallen away? Joseph and Hyrum built up, the work under them flourished; active missionaries were sent everywhere to preach repentance, &c. And notwithstanding the persecution raging against them, the truth that they taught held its way. Why did that work stop? What sent Brigham Young and the rest of the Twelve with him into isolation and home rule, in Utah? Was that a work of Joseph against which the son must not fight? Let it be agreed that they were driven out of Illinois—but it was not for polygamy, that is clear—what prevented them from establishing themselves in the Territories under the same rules and regulations that governed them in New York, Ohio, Illinois and Iowa; in conformity to the law given in 1831, which Orson Pratt, in the presence of Joseph F. Smith, at a meeting held in the 17th Ward Meeting House in December, 1876, stated to have been given of God to the Church as "suitable in their then condition and in the New Jerusalem." Had they done this, there would not now be any "families of Saints" (?) to be "separated and broken up" by our opposition to polygamy. Bah! 49,000 adults in Utah, (over twenty-one years of age), about equally divided, men and women, giving 24,500 men folk, priesthood and all. Of these about one in ten, 2,450, are plurally married, having from two to ten wives each, leaving 2,450 men at least to go without wives; and the News with both hands held up in horror at our "intolerance and bigotry," in insisting that this is an error, a wrong; and because we do so the News says that we are fighting against our father's work. Was that one of his works? And the News charitably (?) accuses us of wanting to "separate and break up the families and homes of the Saints." Whose home was broken up when Hagar was put away?

For our protest, and the methods we have taken, the News, presumably for all its supporters and the church of which it is the organ, says that we "rank with the persecutors of the Saints of all ages," and numbers us "with the villains who slew the servants of God at Carthage in 1844, and drove the Saints from Nauvoo in '46."

Brigham Young long since called the prophet's widow "a wicked, wicked woman;" and stated of us that we were "the apostate son of an apostate mother;" but there has been method and system in the madness of our apostacy. And we insist now as always before, that the law should be observed. We will not consent, neither for self nor people, that the pitiful wail of the News about the separation and breaking up of one family in ten in Utah, for there can hardly be more than that number to be affected by the punishment of polygamous offenders, shall deter us from insisting that it is and was a gross error, and those practicing it offenders against the law, who should be dealt with as such. We will not consent to further suffer shame, obloquy and contempt heaped upon believers in the mission of Joseph Smith and the latter daywork, because of a dogma and practice that grew up after the death of the Martyrs, in contravention of the law of the church and the law of the land, that one in ten of Utah's priesthood may revel in the beatitudes of plural marriage.

The Editor of the News once edited the Ogden Junction; and at that time he thought that Young Joseph "might as well face the music." We now return the compliment; please to face the music. We do not want a single man driven from hearth, or home; nor a single woman to be deprived of house and shelter; nor a child to come to grief by "brute force;" but we do want the majesty of the law of God vindicated, the innocent disenthralled; and we know of no way that this can be done if the guilty are left to escape. Let the laws of God and the States be magnified and observed, and we are satisfied. Until that is done we shall continue to protest and spare not.

OUR only apology for intruding our allusions to Utah and her peculiar institutions into the HERALD is that "now is the accepted time." Congress is in the act of grappling with the subject, and the Reorganized, the Church of Christ can not afford to be compromised in any legislation that may be had upon the subject; we must therefore speak to be heard in the time of the agitation. We suggest to the admirers of Elder Orson Pratt, and his wonderful reasoning, the following from the editorial columns of the New York Herald of February 13th, 1882:

"In 1870 the population of Utah was 86,786, in point of nativity thus: native born, 56,084, foreign, 30,702. In 1860 the numbers were, native 27,519, foreign 12,754. Of the total number of native born amounting to 99,969, 80,847 were born in Utah."

If it be allowed that there were in 1844, as stated by Joseph Smith, and other writers, 150,000 members of the church; and there are now only 143,907 inhabitants in Utah, some part of whom are not Mormons, there are 6,000 to be accounted for as lost to the faith, supposing all of the 143,907 are Mormons. Now take out of this number 80,847 born in Utah, again supposing all born there to have been born in the faith, and there remains but 63,060 of the original number of 150,000, including all who removed to Utah in 1847 and have lived, and all the host of them converted since.

The number of males in 1880 is 74,471, females 69,436. If all the women folks marry, and have one husband, and Paul says, let every woman have her own husband," there are 5,035 men (poor fellows) who can get no wife, and hence no exaltation, or salvation, according to the philosophy of the peculiar tenet. But suppose 100 men have 5 wives each, 100 men have 6 wives each, 500 have 3 wives each and 5000 have 2 wives each; then there will be 12,600 men without wives if the number of men and women were equal; but add the 5,035 the excess of men and there will be 17,635 men wifeless. This shows beyond a possibility of dispute that the peculiar institution works unequally and disastrously among its adherents, absolutely disqualifying nearly one fourth of all its men from fulfilling the royal command, the boast of Utah; "multiply and replenish the earth."

The following is from the Review and Herald, the organ of the Battle Creek, Michigan, Seventh Day Adventists, dated January 3d:

"MORMON DOCTRINES.—A brother sends us a little sheet purporting to contain an "epitome of the faith and doctrines" of reorganized Mormonism, and asks us to state the difference between it and the doctrines taught by Seventh Day Adventists. The trouble with the epitome is that it states only a few of the doctrines of Mormonism, keeping out of sight its more objectionable features. But certainly no Seventh Day Adventist ought to be long in bringing an issue between their teachings and ours in regard to the Sabbath, the state of the dead, and the destiny of the wicked. And their utter variance from the teachings of the Scriptures on these fundamental doctrines, to say nothing of the Book of Mormon and other groundless and superstitious notions, ought forever to guard him against all their sophistry in other directions."

Would it not be a good thing for these men of the Review and Herald to point out the things wherein we utterly vary from the Scripture on those questions which are so flippantly called fundamental. We have believed that the gospel was the fundamental principle of salvation among men? Would the Editors of the Review think it competent for us to say that Messrs. Andrews and Waggoner had not truly stated the views of the Advents, but that they held many "groundless and superstitious notions," unless we should state fully what those notions were?

W. K. LAY, Editor of the Prophet's Warning, a monthly magazine, devoted, according to its title page, to the mission of Elijah, Joshua and Zerubbabel, in the November number of that journal, closes a letter from Essex, Connecticut, dated November 7th, 1881, in the following sentence:

I wish to state for the benefit of such as think it to be time when there should be fruit from these labors, that my mission covers three periods of time of about one year each. The first period began about November 15, 1880, and is devoted to my preparation. The second closes probation, and includes such events as are connected with the revival at Jerusalem. At the end of the third period Christ will come.

In an article entitled "The First Mission of the Prophet Ended;" in which the mission of W. K. Lay, as the prophet is treated of, evidently an editorial article, which we reproduce below, it is left for the reader to infer that he is the Elijah who was to come and is.

THE FIRST MISSION OF THE PROPHET ENDED.

I wish to announce the first period of my mission now closed. As stated in the "Letter from the editor," the time of my mission is during about three years. The first period began November 15th, 1880, and ends with this (November) magazine. The second period begins now, and ends December 1, 1882. The third, beginning then, ends with the advent. During the first period now ended, I was called to be a prophet, and performed in my weak capacity such duties as my inspiration required. My very first efforts were marred by my surprise, haste, and limited knowledge of my exact duties. Uninspired, I made some grievous errors: but, as inspired of the Lord, have a good record.

People in this community who talk about my mistakes, should ascertain whether they are the mistakes of W. K. Lay, of him claiming to be inspired, or the mistakes of others. I say things inspired! and I give opinions for which I claim no inspiration! I say but little about my work outside of what I write. When I talk with anybody about these affairs, in almost every instance, he or she begins it. Some things I have said in State Centre have been misunderstood, some misconstrued; so if any one wishes to know what I really say and believe, he will find it harmoniously expressed in my writings.

My mistakes, supposed or real, in due season will be further discussed under the head of "The Mistakes of Joshua." I have been asked about things my mother has said lately; I prefer not to mention them at present, while the community may act its own judgment in connecting her sayings with mine.

I suppose there are critics who say that I write with too many personal pronouns, and not enough of the Lord, to be a prophet, but I answer that to act in the capacity of a prophet, is not to act in the capacity of an editor, and in the capacity of an editor, not that of a prophet. I appreciate the humble relation a prophet should bear to God, and perform in that relation, conflicting with my natural disposition.

During the last year I have learned, and proved, from scripture that Elijah, a young man, is to arise in the northern part of the United States; I have described his mission, and claimed fulfillment. I have better right to claim fulfillment than any person who has not proved these things, especially as these prophecies have been studied for centuries. No one can answer the arguments produced; no one has directly attempted it.

What shall we expect in the year to come? A wide-spread revival in the United States, beginning with the Jews. Is it possible to have so great a revival in so short a time? After the people have positive evidence that I am Elijah and consequently believe that probation will end at a certain time, the entire work can be accomplished in a few weeks preceding the limit of probation. When will this revival begin? Not until people have such overwhelming evidence that they can doubt no longer. When will this evidence be given? I do not know. There is plenty of time during say eight months to come. Do you think you have given people sufficient evidence to hold them responsible before God for not acknowledging your mission as divine? I do, and that is the accomplishment of my duty in the first period of my mission. What will you do until the people are given yet more convincing evidence? My magazine probably will be suspended; I will leave State Centre at once, and may not return to live here; expect to study as much as I am able, rest as much as I can endure, play as much as health, happiness, and inclination demand, pray without ceasing, and do the will of my Master as well as this sinful mortal can. Have you given the people all the evidence you have in the Bible? No; only a fraction. Much of the remainder will be very forcible when quoted in its fulfillment. Is this, then, your last magazine before the people are given the great and convincing evidence you mentioned? I can not say. I may owe some one a duty who will reply to my arguments. I have questions asked me which ought to be answered. Circumstances may make an occasional or regular magazine necessary. I have accomplished my duty in sounding the warning voice. Perhaps God will raise up other men with given duties to forward the work. I will have other duties in their now unknown time. Duty now is upon the shoulders of my hearers!

Our objects in thus publishing this article and extract are: 1. That everybody may know what the specific claim made by Mr. W. K. Lay is. 2. As he has definitely named the period in which the things prophesied of, upon which the prophetic character of the man rests; we wished to place him upon the record, in his own words. 3. The editorial is skilfully worded, and allows some room for skilfull dodging. 4. We do not know that W. K. Lay is Elijah, but we believe that he is not; and are not exercised by any fear that any disaster will happen to us, or any one else, by reason of this unbelief.

It is not surprising to us, and ought not to be to any one, that there should be prophets in the land; but this personating of the prophets that are gone, or finding in men the characters of Christ, who are to perform the things spoken of him, is too aspiring, and ought not to lead men astray. Especially ought those of the Latter Day Saints to be safe from such snares.

We make no doubt that, if the people were "convinced" that "probation" would end "at a certain time," the work of turning the world upside down would take but little time; but all Latter Day Saints know that Christ affirmed that the "day and hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels in heaven; which the Father hath set in his own power;" hence, he who sets a time, must be prepared for a serious defeat. Mr. Lay is said to be an estimable gentleman, but has put himself in the toils; and has left State Centre, the theatre of the first period, ending with November 1st, 1881, and may not return to live there. He has definitely fixed the period of the Advent to be December, 1st, 1883, now not two years. These two years will undoubtedly be crowded full of strange events; but Christ will not come in December, 1883, as those who remain till then will be able to determine, and if he does not, then some of the things spoken by this "Elijah" will be cast into doubt.

We write with no unfriendly feeling toward this man, or toward any other who may have a mission of good upon earth given of God, or self imposed; but so many good, honest souls have been led to spiritual shipwreck and ruin following after soul transmigratist prophets, that we believe it to be wise to be wary and careful in accepting any man's statement that he is Elijah, Micah, Enoch or any other of the old prophets.

Let any one may mistake us, and misunderstand our real position, we here affirm that we have not now and have never had the least objection to the Lord calling and sending whom, and as many as he chooses, into this or any other land. And we stand quite ready to accept the labor and mission of any whom we can be satisfied He has sent. Nor do we object to men, out of their own goodness, and in their own wisdom doing the work they may choose to do that does good to men; and can give to such men cordial recognition and aid; for there is plenty of room in this wide world for all workers to find something to do. Nor do we feel any disposition to disturb the work of such men, whether they be called of God or not. We much prefer to let it stand until He whose grand prerogative it is to try men's works shall appear. If the work is being done now and we are permitted to know what it is, we shall use our discretion, and the wisdom that we may have, to determine our relation to such work, and stand, or fall as we make decision. We shall watch and wait the time appointed.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. H. Lawn writes from Paicines, California, February 17th:

I am thankful to say that the spiritual condition of these parts is in a better state of prosperity than it has been for a long time; the good old motto is "Render honor to whom honor is due;" and hence I feel to say all honor, power, and glory to our God; for he has wrought a great and wonderful work here on San Benito Creek, through his aged and feeble servant, Bro. John Carmichael, president of Northern California District.

Bro. Glaud Rodger sent us a slip from a newspaper, containing the results of some Archaeological discoveries, and says:

I send an interesting slip worthy of note among the many grand things coming from the bowels of the earth in our day. Wise lips once said: "There is nothing hid but what shall be revealed." The old Bible will be well supported by and by, if the world will only receive it. All's well here. Expect to attend conference at the Swamp, on the 4th of next month.

News Summary.

Feb. 21st.—Two hundred and eight firms were burned out by the late fire at Haverhill, Mass., including 150 shoe and leather establishments.

James Johnson's house, near Halifax, N. S., was burned last night. The parents, who were helpless from old age, perished in the flames.

George Cunningham's house, at Ameliasburg, Ont., burned. Three children perished.

A fire in the Albion Print Works, on Water street, Philadelphia, destroyed the entire stock, worth $50,000, and the stock of several other firms in the same building. Loss, $150,000. The charred body of an unknown man was found on the second floor when the fire was subdued. A number of other persons are missing.

24th.—The Mormons in Utah are becoming alarmed at the anti-polygamic agitation, and yesterday inaugurated a wholesale system of preparing petitions to Congress which will be signed by every Mormon in the Territory. The names of all the school children were affixed to these petitions.

At a rousing anti-polygamy mass-meeting at Central City, Neb., to-night there were stirring speeches, songs, and music. Notwithstanding the heavy snow, it was the largest meeting this season.

A large anti-polygamy mass-meeting was held at Morris, Ill., last evening. The leading address was made by the Hon. William Bross, of Chicago, and was based upon rich and varied information gathered during his overland journey to the Pacific in 1865 with the Hon. Schuyler Colfax and others. It was a rare treat to our people.

A large and influential anti polygamy mass-meeting was held at Norwich, Conn., last evening. Strong anti polygamy resolutions were unanimously adopted at all the meetings.

A bill authorizing the Secretary of War to issue $100,000 worth of stores to the sufferers from the Mississippi overflow passed both House and Senate yesterday.

Five hundred and twenty five Russian Jews yesterday arrived in Philadelphia, and were received by a committee appointed for the purpose. Most of them are very poor, but will be provided for until they can find places to settle.

Six persons were killed or fatally wounded by a boiler-explosion at New Carlisle, O., yesterday. By a similar explosion at St. Louis eight men were badly injured.

25th.—The House Committee on Elections agreed yesterday by a two thirds vote to report Campbell was not elected as Delegate from Utah, that Cannon is not entitled to a seat, and that a vacancy exists in the representation of Utah. The Chicago Tribune, says: "Polygamy is doomed. So far as the petitions are concerned, they should not even be considered, except to be rejected as insults to decency. The people are in earnest this time."

The polygamists in Utah, fearing that Congress will pass the disfranchisement bills, have deserted their position of defiance and threat, and have now resorted to the plea of persecution to escape the law.

A house under Kesler's Peak, Big Cottonwood, Utah, inhabited by a wood-chopper named Taggart, his wife, and five children, was swept away by a snow-slide.

Mar. 1st.—In skirmishes with the insurgents in Herzegovina since the 16th February, the Austrians lost 116 killed and wounded, including ten officers.

Ten Nihilist prisoners, including one woman, have been sentenced to death at St. Petersburg, Russia. The remainder of the twenty-one will be sentenced to various terms of penal servitude.

Four fishing schooners out of Gloucester, Mass., are given up as lost. There were 53 men and boys on board. The loss makes twenty-two widows and sixty-two orphans.

2d.—A Valley Mills, Texas, special says a severe cyclone struck that place last night, almost completely destroying the town, only one business house being left standing.

Five business houses, and also the Journal newspaper office and several small shops, in Athens, Tex., burned Monday night. Loss, $35,000.

Dynamite cartridges have been discovered in the custom house at Limerick, Ireland.

A collier vessel has been wrecked off Yarmouth, England, and twenty-three persons drowned.

Bishop Ryle, of England, says that much of the Christianity of to-day is "jelly-fish religion," of which the basis is, as far as it has any, "no dogma, no distinctive tenet, no positive doctrine." He holds that, both in the Church of England and out of it, there are hundreds of ministers who have not a single bone in their "body of divinity."

3d.—Queen Victoria was shot at yesterday by a man named Roderick McLean, said to be a clerk, and a native of London. Her Majesty had just entered her carriage at the Windsor railway station, on her way to Windsor Castle, when the man raised a pistol and fired directly at her. Fortunately his aim was bad, and the Queen escaped unhurt. The would-be assassin was immediately captured, and it was only with great difficulty that he was rescued from the hands of the people.

In addition to the floods and consequent loss of life and destruction of property on the Lower Mississippi, comes the news that Vermont and Massachusetts have suffered severely by reason of too much water. Some serious railroad accidents have occurred, the result of wash-outs, and the record of disaster is a long one.

Advices from the west coast of Africa report that a ferry-boat, while crossing the lagoon, of Lagos, capsized, and forty-seven of the sixty persons on board were drowned.

Over 2,000 poles are said to have been prostrated on the Wabash Road alone, and on the Missouri Pacific nearly 100 miles of wire are rendered useless.

4th.—By the explosion of a boiler in a mill at Stone's Station, Ind., yesterday six men were killed.

Robert Jones, a white man, and William Miller, colored, were hanged yesterday at Aberdeen, Miss., for the murder of three brothers, named Walker in November last. The three Indian scouts—Dead-Shot, Dandy Jim, and Skippy—who gave the signal for the onslaught on Gen. Carr's command, paid the penalty of their treachery at Fort Grant, Arizona.

Courage is always greatest when blended with meekness; intellectual ability is most admired when it sparkles in the setting of a modest self-distrust; and never does the human soul appear so strong as when it foregoes revenge and dares to forgive an injury.

The world is a looking glass, and gives back to every man the reflection of his own face. Frown at it, and it will in turn look sourly upon you; laugh at it and with it, and it is a jolly, kind companion.

One reason why so many people find their business at a stand-still is that they stand still themselves.

DENVER, Colorado,
20th February, 1882.

Dear Herald:—Public halls in Denver are scarce and very high rented. This has induced the few Saints of the Rocky Mountain Branch, Hutchinson, Colorado, to have serious thoughts; the result of which has been to induce them to take preliminary steps towards erecting a house of worship in the populous, fast growing, and very fashionable city of Denver. A meeting was recently held by the above members; a building committee appointed; a subscription list prepared, thirteen signatures received, by whom the aggregate sum of five hundred dollars was promised; seventy-five dollars of the amount by friends, non-members, four in number, leaving nine of the above number members of the Church subscribing four hundred and twenty-five dollars. I am quite proud that our cause inaugurates no policy whereby means are forced, or exacted from its members; so far from this, that they are to be their own exactors. But it is not a little surprising that there is so little disposition among some of the members who have and could consecrate their earthly substance to support the cause they claim so much to love. A lot 25x120 in this city, in the most central parts, calls for the thousands of dollars, while lots in the outskirts are proportionately high. Now, if a brother had three such lots, free of incumbrance, with other earthly possessions, why in the name of all that is sensible and just could he not as well donate one, on which to erect a house of worship, as an Elder can spend ten, twenty, or thirty years of the best of his manhood, with a prospect of a pauper's home when his physical strength shall fail? I once saw a bending form of a man, leaning on a staff, wending his way to a popular house of worship, and on enquiry found that he was a superannuated minister, which meant that when active he represented the people he was going to worship with, in a ministerial capacity, who in turn provided to meet his recurring wants a stipulated salary. And now he is old, and the ringing of his voice has ceased, his steps are feeble and uncertain, he was released from service, but cared and provided for. But who ever heard of a superannuated Latter Day Saint Elder in the above sense? All that I want, exclaimed a member once upon a time, is a comfortable home and wants supplied in a reasonable way, and enough to keep me when I get old, without being dependent upon any one. Just so. Quite a moderate wish; who would object?

How cheerfully we used to sing,
Sacrifice the blessings bring;
But now are often heard to say,
The sacrifice I must delay.

My farm is small, my house is poor,
I can not do as I did before,
Much my attention now does call;
The Herald, perhaps, I'll take next Fall.

The Herald, Advocate, and Hope,
How with the wicked do they cope?
And that they may live, I always pray,
And when I can afford, will pay.

The Bishop, too; of him I think,
And pray he'll give without much stint,
To Elders' families and the poor;
And when I can, I'll swell his store.

So, do not bother me, I pray,
With that subscription list to-day,
If fortune smiles in a year or so;
Some favor, perhaps, I may bestow.

That there are many liberal souls who are evidencing consistency to the utmost of their ability in helping to build up and perpetuate the cause they love, is well proven. And it is quite as evident that others are as palpably evidencing inconsistency by a failure therein.

With the facility of a house of worship, the establishing of the work in Denver will be difficult enough; while to reach this desired object without it, will be from present indications, quite impracticable. So think the Saints at Hutchinson. Though they have a cozy little house to worship in, and might excuse themselves under the plea that Denver is not within our branch limits, but they take a more liberal and wider view. Though they are sons and daughters of toil, working and sweating for their daily bread, and could find plenty of ways for their money. But in all their meanderings and discouragements, have not forgot that a willingness to sacrifice evidences a love for the cause. There are a few in Denver from whom we expect help. But the securing of twenty-five feet of sand and gravel will be the tug. Two cents and half from ten thousand of your readers, dear Herald, would be a help, five cents a lifter, while ten cents would be a boomer; and why could it not be done? I have not learned the way to beg yet, and my advanced stage of life is a barrier to the acceptance of any new theory, but would like help from abroad in this enterprise. And thinking there are some scattered members in Colorado, who have not yet reported, to them a special appeal is made. Nor shall we refuse help from any outside of the State; so far from this, that any amount from five cents to five hundred dollars will be thankfully received. And though the latter sum would greatly shatter our modesty, we should be quite pliable in such an unexpected and trying ordeal. Try us, if you please, any body.

JAMES CAFFALL.

SYRACUSE, Nebraska,
February 23d, 1882.

I am journeying homeward, after an absence of almost two months. On the 20th we had a severe snow storm, but is now pleasant again. Through the kindness of the Evangelical Church, we have the use of their neat little house of worship. This is one step in advance of a year ago, when we were refused the use of the M. E. Church house. God in his love is giving us great favor among or with the people; and I earnestly pray that we may have wisdom, and not abuse our privileges and opportunities for accomplishing good, and the removal of shame from the fair name of the Church.

ALLISTON, Ontario,

Dear Herald:—Considering the diversity of opinions, and the spirit of toleration, and freedom of liberty granted through your columns. I think it good to solicit your emphatic expression concerning the epithet "Mormon," so flippantly hurled at the Latter Day Saints, and even made use of by themselves. As it is no common thing to hear members calling themselves Mormons, and the Church, the Mormon Church, basing their authority to say so on the fact that one of the prophets named in the Book of Mormon, is called Mormon, and consequently as they profess to accept the teachings and doctrine of Mormon, that that is a sufficient ground to dubb themselves Mormons. I for one repudiate the name, for the same reason that others of the prophets and writers of the Book of Mormon are named Nephi, Enos, Jacob, &c. Therefore, if the reasoning holds good that because we accept Mormon's teachings that that is a sufficient reason to call themselves Mormons, then by parity of reasoning we may with equal propriety call ourselves Nephites, Jacobites, Joramites Or, further, if because we believe in the doctrines of Paul, Peter, Christ, David, with equal show of justice, we, or the believers in those ancient worthies might call themselves Paulites, Peterites, Christites, &c.

I have hitherto believed that the cognomen "Mormon," was in the spirit of malignity forced upon the Church by its enemies, and not adopted by the Church. If therefore because our enemies choose to call us by this name, or that name, that is sufficient cause for members to adopt the name, then how would it work with the enemies of Christ in his day who called him a deceiver? Would it of necessity follow that they who believed in him were the deceived? Or because the enemies of Jesus called him Beelzebub, were his followers Beelzebubians? I think just as good grounds for calling them so existed, as to call us Mormons, from the fact that our enemies call us so for believing in Mormon doctrine.

Dear Herald, I would not think of troubling you with so trifling a cause, but for the fact that debate and wrath have grown out of an exchange of opinions on the subject. As for myself, I am content to be called a Latter Day Saint, not that that is the name of the Church, but from the fact that I believe we are living in the latter days, or latter dispensation.

On the 6th day of April, 1830, the Church received its name by revelation, which has never to my knowledge been changed. It is THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST, and the addition of the words "of Latter Day Saints" formed no part of the name of the Church; but simply that the members of the Church of Jesus Christ were, or are Saints of the latter day in contradistinction to the former day saints. If I am wrong in the foregoing I am willing to be put right, and I sincerely request an expression of "ye editor's" personal opinion, as I am personally aware that your veto will be received with respect. In conclusion, I have no objection to the word Mormon, as in the Book of Mormon I find on page 176, par. 6, that Mormon was the name of a place, which in the language of the people derived its name from the fact that the place was at times infested with wild beasts, having been called Mormon by King Noah. That in this place called Mormon there was a fountain of pure water, and that those waters were called the waters of Mormon, whither Alma resorted privately to baptize believers, he being in dread of the wicked King Noah.

Bro. W. W. Blair, in his excellent work, "The Seer," informs us that the root meaning of the word Mormon signifies more good; and I accept it from the fact that Isaiah 29:24, informs us that when the sealed book should come forth, that they who murmured should (from that book) learn doctrine; hence learn "more good," which we have; and thank God for the fulfillment of his word, and inspiring us with hope and granting us charity through preaching to our neighbors, proving our self-sacrifice in love for their welfare.

With love to all Saints, and praying that the time may speedily come when we shall have come to a unity of the faith.

I remain your brother in bonds,
J. A. McINTOSH.

Dear Brother:—Enclosed you will find two dollars, which we send you to apply on our subscription for the Herald; you will please continue it as heretofore. I am well pleased with the manner in which it is conducted, and would not be without it for any reasonable consideration. As the cause of Zion brightens up, and her rays of light are spreading and brightening up, so the Herald keeps even pace, and becomes more interesting every year; and now the set time seems to have come to favor Zion, for the dark clouds that have been hanging over the cause these many years seem to be dispersing, so that the rays of light now reach us and make our cause look more hopeful. May these good omens continue and increase, and the cause of Zion triumph gloriously.

Your brother in the one faith,
I. F. SCOTT.

PITTSBURG, Pa.,
February 25th, 1882.

Bro Joseph Smith:—The pamphlet "Prophetic Truth" is just finished binding; and with this mail I send you a specimen copy. It is thought that the Book, after its many delays, is out after all in the right time. However that may be, it must stand upon its own merit, if it has any. I wrote it for good; and all the anxiety I have regarding it is that there will be enough of them sold to repay the publication. I suppose that will take some length of time, but I believe they will ultimately all be called for. They will remain when I have passed the confines of time as my testimony regarding the work of God in the generation in which I lived. May God bless the effort to all who read.

I am now about entering my seventy-seventh year, and although some of the weaknesses incident to age are upon me, my general health is reasonably good; but the elastic step of vigor is gone, my gait is slow, and the distances traveled on foot necessarily short, especially if the day is warm. If I had means of conveyance I feel I could do a little work yet in the good cause. I am especially blessed regarding my eye sight, which remains good.

With every True Latter Day Saint this is an interesting moment. He who when the enemy came in like a flood lifted up a standard against him, will make even the wrath of man to praise him, for with many in their meetings repudiating and denouncing polygamy; if there existed no legal restraint, would wage a war against the entire faith. But the Saints have nothing to fear, because if true to themselves in that, they are true to their God. "Their dwellings will be the munition of rocks, their bread shall be given, and their water shall be sure."

Trusting this will find you and yours in reasonable health, and that the sickness is passing away from your homes and lands. I am as ever yours in bonds, JOSIAH ELLS.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.,
March 1st, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Yours from Galien, Mich., just at hand. I arrived here Saturday night last, and have found a cordial welcome with the Saints. I spoke on Sunday forenoon, and immediately after, went in company with Bro. J. Stewart across the Delaware river to preach a funeral sermon of Mrs. Annie Levey, daughter of Bro. and sister Small, returning in time to speak in the evening. I spoke with moderate or fair liberty, and felt comforted.

I am pleased with the outlook, for the work and the Church here are in fair condition; all of them have received me kindly, and so far as I may be able to judge, have the work at heart, and will continue steadfast. I believe that a good work will be done in this region of country.

Bro. Stewart introduced me to the different editors of papers here, and was well received; he seemed at home with them. The work looms up all around. I was interviewed again yesterday, and think the Enquirer will take stalwart ground toward us; will see, and send you the issue. They seem interested in us now. I am very glad you were at Chicago, and pleased with your statements. Let them have it. Love to all.

Yours in bonds,
ZENAS H. GURLEY.

TEXARKANA, Arkansas,
February 28th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—As I am laying over here waiting for train to carry me to Red River county, Texas, I will pass the time in writing a few words in regard to the portion of the work where my lot is cast. Since writing for your columns, my desire to see the work progress has not grown less, and I have done considerable labor, though hindered much by inclement weather.

The work in Texas, on the whole, is gradually moving on, though there appears to be a spiritual stop in some places.

January 26th, I bid adieu to the Saints of Elmwood Branch, intending to call at a few points in Texas Central District, and then try the temper of North Texas, where our worthy brethren Bozarth and Wickes were treated so roughly in the past. On the 28th, arrived at Cook's Point, where I remained until February 2d; when in company with Bro. William Sherrill, went to Texas Central Branch, remaining until the 8th, and preaching four times. I spent two days with Bro. Land and family at Thornton, and found him in the spirit of the work, and anxious to fulfill the duties of his calling as president of the District. May God open the way, that he may do the good he desires. The 10th, returned to Texas Central, held five meetings, and arrived at Elkhart the morning of the 15th; found Bro. Bryan still battling away, though standing alone. His straightforward conduct, and mild but firm advocacy of the truth, has done much to allay prejudice, and lay the foundation for a work. We found a welcome at Doctor Hassell's, (our host when Bro. Thompson and I were here last Spring), and made our home with him during our stay. On the night of the 17th, we began meetings, and continued until yesterday, preaching eleven times at Elkhart School.

house, once at Mountain School-house, and once at the doctor's residence.

On the 25th, we had the great satisfaction of leading eight souls into the waters of baptism. Yesterday forenoon we met at Bro. (Doctor) Hassell's and organized the Elkhart Branch, composed of nine members; Bro. J. W. Bryan in charge, and Bro. John Hassell chosen secretary. The Spirit was sensibly felt at the organization, and five more presented themselves for baptism. We repaired immediately to the water, and baptized these five; returned to the house and confirmed them, and in a few hours Nahum's Chariots were bearing me swiftly away.

I regretted that previous appointments compelled me to leave, for the interest was good, and I felt that more were near the kingdom. But Bro. Bryan will continue the work. He is a faithful man, and will accomplish good in the future, as he has in the past. We found him alone, and left him in charge of a branch of fourteen members. May God bless him and his charge! Bro. James Peters was with us two days, and we enjoyed his company much. Though possessing some of this world's goods, he loves the cause of Christ far better than all else, and helps to advance it by wise conversation upon gospel subjects, a liberal distribution of books and tracts, as well as rendering financial aid where needed. May God bless him!

To-morrow we leave this place, to join the Saints in Red River county; praying for grace and wisdom to act well our part there. With unwavering faith, and increasing hope, I am as ever,
HEMAN C. SMITH.

MONTROSE, Iowa,
January 8th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—A few Saints in this place are still trying to cling to the rod of iron. It is almost discouraging sometimes when we meet in our little church, and there will be three, or perhaps half a dozen, if the weather is fair, that come to our Thursday evening prayer meetings. And as for preaching, it is very seldom that we have any, as this big river is between us and our president; and at this season of the year it is almost impossible for him to come over here; and we do not expect him to come; he is too old a man to attempt it. It is very encouraging to know that our heavenly father is still mindful of us and verifies his promises to meet with us, and bless us with his Spirit when we ask him in faith for such things as we need. We have a nice little Sabbath School of about thirty scholars, with an average attendance of about fourteen, with your humble servant acting as superintendent, (poor material indeed).

Brother Joseph, pray for us at Montrose, that we may not weary in well doing, but keep the faith to the end of our pilgrimage. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain yours in the Gospel of Peace,

RUTH A. TURNER.

LOUISVILLE, Ontario,
February 23d, 1882.

Joseph Smith; Dear Brother.—I have just returned from the London District; have had a pleasant time laboring in the several branches of the district. Found most of the Saints at peace with each other, and manifesting a desire to help the work on. Bro. Samuel Brown was with me in most of my labors; we organized one new branch in the township of McKillop, and left them feeling well. We ordained a Priest and a Deacon in that branch. We ordained a Priest and a Teacher in the Egremont branch. The Saints at Egremont are putting forth an effort to build them a church house, and to have it ready by the June Conference of the District, which is to be held there.

Since I came here I received a letter from Bro. Griffiths; he had just baptized five at Wolsingham. He was feeling well. I received a letter from Bro. Deuel; he was still battling for the right. He had organized a branch at Badder Town. I expect to leave here to-morrow for the Zone Branch, and so on through the district.

Since I have been away from Bro. Traxler's, a singular circumstance has happened in his family; a Crow carried off one of their children, —i. e., Mr. Crow came and married Sarah Traxler, and has taken her to his home, and he insists her name shall be Crow. And so goes life.

The weather and the roads are very unfavorable for getting around to do much preaching; a great deal of rain and plenty of Mud, Mud. And it will stick closer to me than most of the sectarian ministers will; for one can put to flight a thousand of them.

Hope to meet you at the Conference in April. If the Lord will, I am coming west this Spring, and shall try and be at the Conference. Love to you and to your family, and all the Saints and friends in the office.

Yours for truth,
J. H. LAKE.

TENANT'S HARBOR, Maine,
January 11th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—The Rockland Branch, to which I once belonged, was in a flourishing condition, but its members have most all moved away, or have been taken by death, so that we have no meetings. Some of the Saints were disobedient, and the Lord spoke to us by prophecy that they must be dealt with, or the branch would go down. We are waiting, watching, praying and talking, and the Spirit seems to say that the Lord will soon favor us again. A Methodist minister stopped with us over night. The subject of religion was soon broached, then Mormonism. Almost his first expression was, "It is a pity the earth would not open and swallow them all up." I told him the difference between the Brighamites and true Church. He wanted to know the true belief, and I read it to him; he was much surprised, fell right in, liked it much. When we parted, he wanted a paper, so I gave him two Heralds and one Hope; pointed out the ladder on the first page of the Hope, which interested him much. I think great good can be done by distributing our Epitome of Faith; I am as strong in the faith as ever, and hope to be saved with the children of Zion.

D. S. SEAVEY.

CHICAGO, Illinois,
February 3d, 1882.

Dear Brothers and Friends.—I warn and forewarn you of things that must shortly come to pass, according to the foreknowledge of God. Be it known unto all that I have sought our Father in the name of Jesus, according to the promise, day after day, that I might know the secret and hidden things of the Father, for the welfare of my brethren, that we be not caught in a snare; and at last he hath shown me marvelous things that must shortly be done.

I was caught up and carried away by the Spirit of the Lord, and placed in a large building where there were a few people. The building was situated on the east side, fronting a large body of water west. The length of the water was north and south. As I was looking west over the water, I turned my eyes south and saw a great darkness, a heavy storm coming up. And there came up from the south a great wind, which caused the waves to run on the waters apparently about sixty feet high; and when they were nearly in front of me, I looked north and there came a north wind which was at my right hand, and it caused great waves, yet they were not so large as the southern waves. They met just in front of me. When they met, it rained in what looked like swords and in what looked like cannon balls. And the southern waves were beaten to pieces in the storm, by the northern wind and waves. And immediately there were suspended from heaven, black ribbons which reached to the earth; they were about four feet wide, and not room for man to pass between them; they extended over the earth as far as I could see. The storm had not ceased but grew more severe. I looked again, and in place of the black, beheld red, white, and blue ribbons; and the storm beginning to cease. I looked again, and beheld all white ribbons, and their brightness exceeded that of the sun, and there was perfect calm over all, and everything seemed to be lightened and purified by the exceeding brightness of the ribbons.

This, God our Father hath shown me for the welfare of his people. I say unto you be faithful, lest you be numbered among those of the great slaughter. But if you will prove faithful, you shall be as I was; you shall behold all and not one hair of your head shall be harmed. This revelation was given unto me about the 21st of January.

Your loving brother,
H. R. WALLACE.

SPRINGVILLE, Utah Co., Utah,
February 28th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—Wednesday night, January 25th, 1882, I saw and conversed with Henry Jacobs, of whom it is claimed that your father sent him on a mission, and then married his wife,—which the Brighamites use as a proof that your father had many wives. On said evening I was introduced to said Jacobs, and asked him:

"Please tell me if it is true that Joseph Smith took your wife away from you while you were on a mission."

He said: "Yes, it is true." He then got quite warm over the subject for a while.

I again asked: "Did Joseph Smith live with your wife as his wife while you were on your mission?"

He said: "No, I don't know."

I asked: "Who did your wife live with after you came home from your mission?"

He answered: "With me."

Again I asked: "How long did she live with you?"

He said: "Till Brigham Young took her."

I then asked: "How do you know that Joseph Smith took your wife when he did not live with her?"

To which he answered: "I was told so."

Henry Jacob's wife, that the above conversation was about, is now known by the name of Zina D. Young, and is sister to William D. Huntington, Postmaster of Springville.

If you should choose to publish the above in Herald and Advocate you are at liberty to do so, as I can prove statements by two witnesses

Your brother in Christ,
Ch. E. MALMSTROM.

TABOR, Iowa, Feb. 3d, 1882.

Dear Herald.—You seem to me like an old and well-tried friend; for ever since the days of your youth I have been a faithful reader of your welcome pages. And believing you to have a conscientious regard for the weak and erring ones of earth, I the more readily address you.

I have been thinking this evening that perhaps there has never been a time since the principles of our holy religion were revealed from the heavens that called so loudly for the Saints to be up and doing as at the present; for do not the "signs of the times truly indicate that we are living in the days of the coming of the Son of Man? Most assuredly they do. And O, how the foe becomes more daring! Does he not, dear Saints? Answer, ye who are acquainted with his machinations. Not so much persecution now as in former years; but alas! that which if possible is worse, and a great deal more dangerous, viz: careless indifference, inactivity and stupidity. The old adversary has tried by cruel persecution to destroy the Church, and failing in his attempt has changed his tactics, and to all appearances is doing his very best to make us feel at ease and secure in our inactivity! O, Father in heaven, save thy people from his power in this hour of their danger! Surely, 't is the strength of his despairing! and for each other let us pray.

Bro. Caffall's letter in your last number, dear Herald, is full of admonition and instruction. So also is Bro. Lambert; and we should treasure up such gems of thought, and strive to profit by such counsel. I love to read the Herald; I always rise from its perusal with a heart and desires enlarged to strive to do the will of God, by keeping holy His commandments. I love the Lord and His Saints. I love the pure gospel of Jesus Christ; it is my comfort, my consolation in my declining years. We always prize that which costs us a good deal; and has not our religion cost us—well, dear Saints, I can not speak for you, but mine has called for the sacrifice of all things! But ah, the reward is even now, while journeying down the stream of time commensurate with the offering.

Dear Herald, perhaps you would like to know how our branch (Plum Creek) is prospering? Well, be patient, and I will tell you, i. e. in part. In the first place, (please excuse me), we have some of the best folks in our branch there is in all the world; and secondly, we have meetings on each Lord's day, sometimes a goodly number in attendance, other times few. There are times, (and I am sorry to write it) that even Saints grow weary in well doing, and we are so tired, foot-sore, and even down-hearted, and it may be that some of us neither pray vocally nor in secret, nor attend to our family duties. Then, during those trying times, how much we need the visits of a faithful Priest and Teacher! O, yes, how glad we would be to see them, to know that they loved us and had come to see how we were "getting along." But dear Herald, will you believe me when I tell you they do not come to see us at all. Indeed, we don't know whether the branch has those officers or not; perhaps the Priest and Teacher, if we have any, believe as some of our sectarian friends do in regard to the "spiritual gifts," that there is no need of such spiritual helps, advisors, in these days, they are "done away," and no longer necessary. Lord pity us! What can we do? Can we,—must we, live without their help? Excuse my seeming levity, dear Herald, and dear Saints, for indeed I realize that the subject demands our most sincere consideration.

With a silent prayer for the out-pouring of God's Holy Spirit; and revival of his work among the various branches of the Church, I remain your sister in patience and hope,
M. RUBY BALDWIN.

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.,

February 15th, 1882.

Bro. Smith:—According to my promise to some of the Saints; I proceed to prepare for the Herald's many readers a brief account of my tour into Meigs county, Ohio, and thence into Mason county, West Virginia, to answer a call from Bro. L. R. Devore and others, who solicited our service in a discussion with one of the Disciples, a synopsis of which will be sent you by Bro. L. R. Devore.

From Parkersburg, West Virginia, we took passage on a boat to Murryville. Landed there on Christmas eve. From which place we were taken by a Mr. Hicks in a skiff to our Bro. Devore's, three or four miles distant. Here our brother lives in a cozy little home on the banks of the great river, the Ohio. The next morning your writer walked up on the mount and "viewed the landscape o'er," of the fertile fields, and pine-topped hills, of the state of West Virginia. Who does not love the very land of his birth? I stood amazed, and in wonder reflected that notwithstanding all my hardships and suffering from youth up were inseparably connected with thy memory, thou art not entirely alienated from my affection—my West Virginia—on the shores of which state we soon expected to land to meet the man perhaps whose name might have been legion, but it was not; neither was it Belial, nor Bellicose, nor shall we tell his name on this line. When we reached him, his name was known, heard, and read of all men—Beller.

We remained with the Saints here until the 28th, and wrought in the ministry every night to small but seemingly interested audiences. But when the morning of the 28th came on, we wished to be off to Mason county. But the large boats running from Cincinnati to Pittsburg, not having heard of the debate, were not running to suit our convenience, and we were "put too it" to find conveyance to the "mouth of School-house Run," twenty miles down the river. Now there lived in the neighborhood a certain boy, who had been raised partly "in the water and out of the water," (but not amphibious, I know), who agreed to take us to the point above named in a large skiff. The number to go being six; Bro. Devore, Bro. Spann, myself, Bro. Aaron Kuykendall and son. And as if to cheer our venturesome voyage, came our missionary sister, Ella Devore, for she had heard of "that debate." Nor did "the Ohio's cold flood, or its angry waves, affright her from the shore" of West Virginia, where the brave Disciples had selected a position for the battle. And Charley, "the water boy" the brave captain of our vessel, made seven in all on board.

I suppose there were no braver hearts than my own, and old Bro. Kuykendall's. And if our knees trembled, and smote together, what about the other passengers? We were soon under headway, and our imagination became wonderfully active. We began to reason together from probabilities. I laid our plans as deep as that big river, and as broad as the distance we kept from the shore, (the weather that day only was lovely). What the thoughts of our old brother were, I could only imagine; for now and then his "face waxed pale," and his eyes would assume an anxious expression; and we both for the first time perhaps in our lives felt, and acted just alike; and we used an old proverb which had been forgotten for years, but with great force it came into our minds—that "little boats should keep near shore, while larger ones may venture more." But that young captain, to our hurt, cared no more for proverbs than he did for the prognostications of weather prophets. Also, I would say, that Sr. Devore, as good a Saint as she is, would only laugh when we (Father Kuykendall and I) wanted her to pray. And Bro. Spann having more pounds weight in him than any of the crew to push the boat down into the cruel water, was not so constituted as to appreciate the danger to which we were exposed; but was quite careless, and amused himself watching the increase and decline of Father Kuykendall's pulse, in proportion to the distance we kept from the shore. But after all Father Kuykendall and I were more generous than the rest, for when a large boat would chance to overtake us, and pass by, setting the waters all in commotion, Bro. Kuykendall and I would consider it safer for the rest that we get ashore and walk until the waves would subside. Our sister, however, not fearing the probable results, would hold her seat and seemed perfectly composed, but women have not always "the nerve" to face danger like men, and in such ventures there is, to them, something of a romantic charm.

Landing at "School-house Run," we were met by Bro. Moler, whom we saw for the first time, with whom we took lodging for the war, unless sooner discharged, who lived about nine miles from the river in Mason county. There we enjoyed the company and fellowship of Bro. Moler and family, with several other good and genial Saints. Bro. T. J. Beatty was already there, and had been baptizing some. Also, there was added to our number Bro. Thomas Matthews, of Syracuse, Ohio, "the least of all the apostles;" there we sit down to eat and rose up—not to play—but to pray, and speak one to another, and "edify one another in love." For there the blessed Lord heard and answered our prayers, and armed us with the sword of the Spirit, and with the shield of faith, and the victory was the Lords. The Disciple warrior, Harvey, was found to be an excellent old gentleman, and did the best that could be done for their cause. He made as hard a fight, I think, as can be made against the Saints. But, alas for their "Body of Christ," which we proved had no members—no, not one, hence we enquired, "Where were the body?" We captured their best gun, "the word," and turned it upon them. Two others were captured, spiked, and left on the field. Beadle's bundle of bombast, and the "American Encyclopedia." We cross-questioned twelve of their witnesses, (who by the way live in Salt Lake City). They were soon ashamed of their witnesses.

Our brethren acted nobly, and we parted reluctantly. I will long remember that, though far away from loved ones. I was made at home at Bro. Moler's. The Lord reward him. As for our sisters, we have many commendations. The Lord rewarded their kindness and faithfulness in caring for us. For our missionary sister, Ella Devore, I would say: it was right for her to go, and still right for her to go along with her husband. For her work is a good work and a needed work, and her example is of the highest and most useful type.

D. L. SHINN.

THORNTON, Texas,

February 28th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—Since our last district conference I have been praying to sell my house and lot, and to be situated among the Saints with my family, and placed in such a condition as to be justified in leaving them to tender the means for rescuing those that are in darkness, and perishing for the want of the light of the gospel. My prayer in part has been answered, in that I have sold my place. Now will the Saints join me in prayer for the fulfillment of the unfulfilled part of my prayer? Remember, "that where two on earth agree as touching anything, it shall be done."

I will leave this place about the fifteenth of March, but am not able to say where my address will be in the future; but hope to be able to inform you by the first of April. I intend to make every edge cut that will, in order to take the field, but all the edges are not under my control; therefore I can not tell whether there are edges enough in cutting order to let me into the field unincumbered or not. I can not take the field with my mind divided, partly on a support for the loved ones, and partly on the Master's work; if I should do so, then I would be a "double-minded man," and hence, "unstable in all my ways;" a pretty looking specimen for a minister of God! Eh?

But, Dear Saints, let this be as it may, I shall continue to pray for the way to be opened up for all in this district to have the privilege of hearing and obeying the principles of the gospel.

May the work prosper everywhere, until all the honest in heart are gathered home in Zion, is the prayer of yours in bonds. ELIAS LAND.

CHERRYVILLE, Kansas,

January 5th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—On September 1st, myself and companion left our home, at Platte Valley Branch, Nebraska, started for Southern Kansas, to visit relatives, and with a desire to advocate the principles of eternal life. We left Semi-Annual Conference and went on our way rejoicing. Called on Bro. William Hawkins, at Oregon, Holt county, Missouri, where we had a good time with the Saints there. Arrived at Garnet, Anderson county, Kansas, where we met our relatives. I was soon invited to preach our doctrine; I did so, holding meetings one week; the people were impressed that our doctrine was true. From thence we came to Cherryvale, which is our stopping place, with a brother of mine, whom I hope to bring to the knowledge of the truth. We had the pleasure of being at the Spring River District conference, which convened at Mound Valley Branch. We found good Saints alive to the principles which they teach. I visited the Indian Creek Branch; found only eight members left there. They are so scattered that they do not hold any meetings. Bro. Loar president of said branch, lives at Longton, ten miles from the branch; and is confined as clerk in a store. Bro. Loar and myself held meetings near Longton. I also held meetings at the branch; I am going to open up a new field near Cherryvale, and shall labor all I can in this part of the district for six months, if the Spirit directs, then longer. The laborers are few here.

Your brother in Christ,

E. BOLSON.

FAIRMONT, Minnesota,

Editor of Saints' Herald:—Please publish of the death of S. H. Briggs, which took place June the 21st, 1881. He suffered many long months, from gravel in the gall; he was strong in the faith, and a good man; he left a wife and four small children. Before he died he requested me to send his death to you for to be published.

Conference Minutes.

WELSH MISSION.

The Semi-Annual Conference of the above Mission was held at Aberaman, Wales, October 30th, 1881. J. R. Gibbs president, B. Davies clerk.

W. Morris reported the Eastern District, saying that most of the Saints in the District were in a good feeling, and that the officers were doing a little for the upbuilding of the Church. J. R. Gibbs reported the Western District, saying that the Saints possessed a good feeling.

Bishop's Agent reported: Received from the young members of Llanelly Branch 15s; from Merthyr Branch, T. E. Jenkins, £1; total £1 15s. Sent to Bishop Rogers £1 15s. Received of W. Morris 1s; on hand 1s.

J. R. Gibbs reported the book account from April 24th, 1881: In hand £16 16s 5³d. Paid to Bro. D. Lewis for writing and arranging hymns 8s, paid for printing 500 hymn books £18 10s. Balance to the printer 15s; paid out £2 1s 6³d more than the sum in hand.

Met at 2 p. m.—The authorities of the Church in America were sustained in righteousness; also, T. Taylor, president over the European Mission; J. R. Gibbs over the Welsh Mission; T. E. Jenkins of the Seventy and as Bishop's Agent; W. Morris president over the Eastern District of the Welsh Mission. All the presidents of branches, with all the Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons.

The meeting then was given free for testimony, and the brethren bore strong testimonies of the latter day work, with good feeling, and the Lord manifested his will through the gifts of his Spirit with much power.

Moved that Bro. T. Morgans of Merthyr Branch, should be ordained to the office of an Elder.

Met at 5:30 p. m.—Elders D. Lewis, W. Morris, J. Evans, T. E. Jenkins, A. N. Bishop, D. Williams, J. Jones, J. Morgans, J. E. Hughes reported.

Preaching by Elder A. N. Bishop.

Adjourned to meet at Llanelly, Wales, April 30th, 1882.

NORTH-EAST MISSOURI DISTRICT.

Report of conference held at Bevier, Missouri, February 4th and 5th, 1882. G. Hicklin, president; J. T. Williams, clerk.

Resolved that we authorize George Hicklin to represent the North-East Missouri District at the Annual Conference, and the secretary to write him a certificate to that effect.

Resolved that this conference request the General Conference to continue A. H. Smith in this mission.

Bishop's Agent Report: On hand December 4th, 1881, $37.80; expenses $15; on hand, $27.80.

Sabbath morning the Saints met for prayer. Preaching in the forenoon by Elder Merriam, from Stewartville, with good liberty. In the afternoon the sacrament was administered, and a goodly portion of the Spirit of God felt, while the prayers and the testimonies were uttered. In the evening Bro. A. H. Smith occupied the stand.

Adjourned to meet at Bevier, Missouri, subject to the call of the president.

NORTH-WESTERN KANSAS DISTRICT.

The quarterly conference convened at Blue Rapids, Kansas, February 4th. A. Kent in the chair; J. D. Bennett, secretary.

Branch Reports.—Blue Rapids 56 members. Gaylord 22. Elmira 26; baptized 2, removed 1. South Logan 16. Goshen 36; baptized 2.

Elders Landers, Shute, Mason, Hoyer, Beebe, Kent, Goble, Bennett, Hall, M. Smith and Sears, reported. Priests Reynold, Harder, Taylor and Decker, reported. Teachers Case, T. Cockran and Scott, reported. Deacons Reynolds and Ervan, reported.

The president reported Solomon Valley and Pleasant Ridge branches as not being in lively working order. The former disorganized and record destroyed, and members given over to recklessness and riotous pleasures.

On motion John Landers, George Shute, A. Kent, J. O. Goble and J. D. Bennett, were appointed as delegates to Annual Conference, and authorized to cast the entire vote of the district untrammelled by instructions.

President and secretary were sustained in their respective offices.

Adjourned to meet at Goshen Branch, Kansas, May 27th, 1882, at 10 a. m.

FAR WEST DISTRICT.

Conference convened at St. Joseph, Missouri, February 25th and 26th, 1882. J. T. Kinnaman president; J. M. Terry clerk.

Branch Reports.—Stewartville 108; received 2, removed 2, expelled 2, died 1. German Stewartville 45; baptized 3, received 5. Pleasant Grove 32; received 4, removed 5. Breckenridge 15; died 2. Far West 56; removed 5, expelled 2. St. Joseph 89; baptized 2, removed 1. Delana 55; baptized 1, received 2. Starfield 39. Center Prairie not reported.

H. Hinderks, J. McIntyre, S. Butler, G. C. Smith, W. Summerfield, W. T. Bozarth (baptized 4), I. N. Roberts, T. Hinderks (baptized 6), J. H. Merriam, L. L. Babbett, D. J. Powell, M. F. Bevins, G. Graham, D. E. Powell, W. Lewis, J. T. Kinnaman, J. M. Terry, J. Burlington, M. H. Forscutt, E. T. Dobson, A. H. Smith, A. J. Seeley, (by letter), reported. Priests L. Niedorp, C. Faul, F. Uphoff, Sparks, Steffe, R. Winning, Gardener; and Teacher J. Dempsey, reported.

S. Butler, H. Hinderks and D. J. Powell, were appointed a court to try the continued appealed case of W. R. Cadman from the Far West Branch, who reported the Far West Branch sustained in its action.

Moved that the Bishop's Agent be requested to take the valuation of all Church property in the district, and report to the Bishop before General Conference.

Resolved that the conference instruct Bro. A. Bishop, either himself or through Bro. J. Caffall, to forward at once the money ordered by the court who sat on his case, to Bro. Henry Hinderks; who is hereby also instructed to then at once return the note and bond for a deed held by him as agent for Bro. Lupe Havenga for indebtedness of Bro. A. Bishop to Bro. Lupe. 2d. That this conference does hereby instruct Bro. Hinderks to notify the St. Joseph Branch immediately on receipt of the money. And lastly, that this conference, on receipt of Bro. Hinderks' notification to the St. Joseph Branch that the money has been paid, does hereby instruct said St. Joseph Branch to take cognizance of the case and forward such Letter of Removal as justice shall demand. And finally, should Bro. A. Bishop refuse or fail to comply with this demand within fifteen days from this date, that the St. Joseph Branch take final action for the expulsion of said brother, Albert Bishop, from the Church.

Moved that at next conference we take up the question: "Can a parliamentary body disfranchise its own members without giving previous notice of its intention?"

Bro. E. T. Dobson delivered a very logical sermon from Rev. 14:6, on Sunday forenoon. Sacrament and social meeting in the afternoon, some very strong testimonies were born. I must not neglect to mention the Sabbath School, which held a session, as being a model one. Saints encourage the Sabbath School cause. Bro. A. H. Smith preached in the evening, with such good liberty that it took him near two hours to get through.

Brethren J. Burlington, S. Butler and George C. Smith, were appointed as a committee to investigate the advisability of returning Bro. R. A. Marchant his license.

J. D. Flanders was sustained as Bishop's Agent, with instructions to visit the branches and urge the law of tithing. Bro. R. Winning was sustained as district treasurer.

J. H. Merriam, W. Lewis, D. E. Powell, W. T. Bozarth and J. T. Kinnaman, were selected as delegates to General Conference of April next.

Adjourned to meet at the German Stewartville Branch, on May 27th and 28th, 1882.

Good and bad men are each less so than they seem.

Miscellaneous.

ANNUAL GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Independence District Conference, held a few days since, appointed a committee to make inquiry and preparation with a view to providing for the coming General Conference, to be held in this town; instructing them to publish certain information in the Herald. Said committee have done their duty as far as time has permitted; and hereby give notice of the following facts:—

1. That conference instructions forbid our sending any visitors to houses of the Saints until all the members of conference proper are accommodated.

2. That our inquiries thus far have resulted in the discovery of houses and accommodations for about one hundred persons.

3. That hotel accommodations can be had by parties for from 25 to 50 cents per meal, and lodging at same price. We have four hotels—their prices ranging according to class. The aggregate sleeping accommodations to be had in them will be for about fifty persons, and meals for about one hundred and fifty. The above rates have been made specially for the Conference.

4. Reduced rates have been secured from omnibus lines for conference people from the depots to their houses and return.

5. The committee will be in attendance at the depots, and give all instructions to Saints upon their arrival as to their stopping place, &c., and see them provided for as per above instructions.

6. The committee have agreed to wear a white ribbon tied to the coat button hole, as a badge, by which to be recognized by Saints at depots.

7. The accommodation capacity may be greater at the conference time than now, but our discovery thus far does not justify us in declaring it to be more extensive than the above figures show.

Communications received from different points—not distant—convey the idea that the holding of a conference in Zion, or the center stake, is to be considered a grand occasion for visiting the promised land, &c., intimating that whole families, and in some cases branches, intend coming. To all who so think, the committee respectfully offer this suggestion: That they bring with them, if they come, bed, board, and shelter. Judging from the Spring Conferences of the past, we feel justified in stating that our accommodations will be ample.

JOSEPH LUFF, president.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Feb. 21st, 1882.

FIRST QUORUM OF ELDERS.

To the Elders of the First Quorum, Greeting:—In the peace of the covenant of salvation I salute you, personally and collectively, trusting that your earnest efforts are reflecting heavenly light to the path of those seeking the way of life. Your attention is herewith called to a resolution, adopted by the Twelve, and found in the minutes of the Semi-Annual Conference of 1881. Those who are ready and willing to labor, can address Bro. T. W. Smith, secretary of the Twelve, at 619 West Lake street, Chicago, Illinois. It is desirable that every member report to their quorum, either in person or by letter, at the coming April Conference, at Independence, Missouri.

Yours in Christ,

ROBERT M. ELVIN,
President Quorum.

CENTRAL KANSAS DISTRICT.

Bro Henry Green, secretary of the Central Kansas District wishes to correct his error in saying that the next conference of that district would be the second Saturday and Sunday in June, 1882, in the Herald for January 1st, 1882. He intended to say May.

UTAH CHAPEL.

We are preparing an itemized report of moneys and means received for the Salt Lake City Chapel; also, a statement of expenditures for the same, and hope to publish it by April 15th or May 1st.

Trustees { W. W. BLAIR,
I. L. ROGERS,

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

To the several branches of the Southern Nebraska District.—You are herewith requested to prepare and present at the quarterly conference, to be held at Nebraska City, April 2d and 3d, a complete statistical report, covering all changes, since the time of your last report. The object of this is that our records may be correct, and our representation truthful. The priesthood members of the district should make an effort to attend, as is required in Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 17, par. 13. And we would be pleased to have all scattered members report themselves.

Yours in the work,

ROBERT M. ELVIN,
District Secretary.

SISTERS OF ZION BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

The sisters of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ met at the Chapel, Fall River, Mass., January 17th, 1882, to organize a sister's society, which was given the name of the "Sisters of Zion Benevolent Society." Sr. Pucell was chosen to preside at the meeting, which was opened with prayer and singing, and then proceeded to elect officers. Sr. Mary McKee was chosen president, Sr. Mary J. Rogerson vice president, Sr. Mary J. Boswell secretary, Sr. Ann Granger treasurer. It was voted to have a fee of ten cents per month. Voted to hold meetings once in two weeks; business meetings once a month. Voted to hold meetings at the houses for the present. The sisters are hoping to do much good by these meetings, and what their hands find to do for the work of Christ and his ministry.

MARY J. BOSWELL, secretary.

SALT LAKE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The conference of the Salt Lake District will be held in the Mission Chapel, Salt Lake City, Utah, April 6th, 1882. We hope the Saints will attend; all are invited.

WILLIAM M. GIBSON, president.

SPRING RIVER DISTRICT.

A conference of the Spring River District will be held at Pleasant View Branch, Cherokee county, Kansas, May 26th, 1882.

J. A. DAVIES, District Clerk.

OBITUARIES.—Obituary notices not exceeding one hundred words, about twelve lines, will be published free of charge; when exceeding one hundred words, five cents for each additional eight words (one line) will be charged; notices of prominent Church officials excepted. Money to accompany notice.

BORN.

ANTHONY.—At Wilber, Nebraska, June 30th, 1881, to Mr. Isaac T. and Sister Mary Anthony, a daughter; the same blessed by Elder Robert M. Elvin, February 19th, 1882, and named Emma Alice.

CARLSON.—At Blooming Prairie, Iowa, January 23d, 1882, a daughter to Bro. C. J. and Sr. Mary Carlson; named Minna May.

MARRIED.

MUETZE—BOENLEIN.—Sunday, December 17th, 1881, at the house of Bro. Charles L. Muetze, 318 Aberdeen street, Chicago, Illinois, Albert Muetze, his son, and Miss Anna Boenlein by Elder T. W. Smith. A very excellent young couple, well liked by all that knew them.

PEGLEY—MORTIMOR.—At St. Louis, Missouri, at the residence of William Pegley, by Elder William H. Hazzledine, January 16th, 1882, Bro. Francis Pegley and Miss Elizabeth Mortimor. Many relatives and friends were present, and it was a peaceful time. May joy attend the happy pair.

DIED.

EVANS.—At Malad City, Idaho, December 19th, 1881, Sarah Ann, daughter of Bro. E. J. and Ann Evans, aged 16 years. Funeral services conducted by Elder J. Lewis.

THOMAS.—At Malad City, Idaho, 13th January, 1882, Griffith Thomas, aged 66 years.

WILLIAMS.—At Malad City, Idaho, the 19th day of January, 1882, John H. Williams, aged 51 years. The funeral services were conducted by Elder John Lewis.

CLOTHIER.—At his home, near Galland's Grove, Iowa, October 2d, 1881, Bro. James W., son of Bro. Eli and Caroline Clothier. He was born in Welland county, Ontario, November 15th, 1853; and baptized at Galland's Grove by Bro. W. W. Blair in 1861. He leaves a wife and two children, besides parents and many friends to mourn his loss. Funeral services by Brn. John A. McIntosh and Ingvert Hansen.

MILLER.—Elizabeth C. Miller was born March 4th, 1807, in Seaton T. P., New York; baptized and confirmed in New York, December 24th, 1843, by John Lane; she was received on her original baptism, and died suddenly in Salt Lake City, Utah, February 5th, 1882. Funeral discourse in the new Chapel on the 7th of February, by Elder M. T. Short; Elder T. N. Hudson assisted.

MITCHELL.—At North Freedom, Wisconsin, December 7th, 1881, Lewey, daughter of Bro. William and sister H. Mitchell, aged 6 years, 4 months and 19 days. Funeral at Saints' Hall, by Elder J. L. Pride, in which words of comfort were spoken to the bereaved parents and sympathizing friends.

We'll close the door of her little room,
For now, alas, she is gone;
Yet we trust and pray to meet her soon,
In a brighter, happier home.
For though we miss her in our hearts,
The parting will not be long;
As Christ will give our darling back,
In the resurrection morn.

PEGLEY.—Washington Pegley was hurt in one of Russel's clay pits, by a heavy weight of clay falling on him; and after living in great agony for sixty-seven hours, he departed this life January 3d, 1882; he was twenty-three years old. His mother was getting better from a severe sickness, and when they brought him home it was a great shock to her; he was a loving son. God blessed him with his senses to the last; he was reconciled to God when he was departing. Funeral services were conducted by William H. Hazzledine.

"We could hear his song of gladness,
He was singing as he went
Over the lone and silent river,
To those waiting ones at home."

HOLCOMB.—At his residence, Galland's Grove, Iowa, April 2d, 1881, after a long illness, Bro. Oliver E. Holcomb, Sen. He was born May 22d, 1809, in Essex county, N. Y., and baptized September 8th, 1861, at Galland's Grove, by Bro. John A. McIntosh. He passed away in peace, with a hope of attaining to a resurrection with the just. Funeral services by Brn. Joseph R. Lambert and John Hawley.

KINYON.—At Plano, Ills, February 14th, 1882, of chronic diarrhea, Mary A., wife of Mr. Hosea Kinyon. She was born at Newberg, Minnesota, November 15th, 1854, and was the daughter of Bro. Mad Madison, and sister of the wife of Bro. Joseph Smith. She buried from the Saints' Chapel, Elder F. G. Pitt, of Sandwich Branch, delivering a most excellent and effective sermon.

HAYNES.—Sarah Haynes was born in the State Virginia, Caroline county, in the year 1796; came to California in 1859. She was a religious woman all her life, and had been a member of the Methodist Church for about twenty years; but she heard the true gospel, and was baptized in 1873, and passed to eternal life on the 28th day of November, 1881. Funeral sermon by Elder John Carmichael, to a large and sympathizing audience.

BROWN.—At Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, November 13th, 1881, of consumption, sister Sarah Brown, wife of Charles Brown. She was born March 30th, 1833, in the state of New York; was baptized at Montrose, Iowa, June 16th, 1878. Was a great sufferer, but bore it very patiently, and her faith was strong in the gospel to the last. Funeral sermon by Elder J. H. Hansen to a large and attentive audience.

EVANS.—At Malad City, Idaho, the 14th January, 1882, Edward D. Evans, aged 71 years. Elder J. Lewis conducted the services.

The Unchangeableness of God.

IT IS recorded in Malachi, chapter 3, verse 6: "For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore, ye sons of Jacob are not consumed."

In all the works of God,—that man has cognizance of, whether in the physical or spiritual world,—when we come to dispassionately consider them, we find the above character of God sustained and established. It is essentially requisite that the Deity should possess this attribute, for the good order and consequent perpetuity of all His works. To change implies an imperfect being; imperfect in judgment, knowledge, and understanding. If he had been in possession of these attributes in perfection, he would have known the end from the beginning, and consequently so acted that there be no necessity of a change of mind.

Is there an astronomer who has made the starry heavens a life long study, that would not render a verdict to the effect, that a Being infinite in wisdom, knowledge and understanding, must have given and established laws that govern the motions of those twinkling orbs? He perceives they move in their regular order around their several centers, all working together in harmony, without a single clash, and myriads are their number!

Now order and harmony pre-suppose law, and law pre-supposes a law giver, and a time when the law, or laws, were enacted. This being the case, there must have been a time when the starry heavens were created and made subject to the laws established by an intelligent Creator for their future government. But suppose, for the sake of the argument, that the Creator was subject to change, as man is,—our text says: "For I am the LORD, I change not;" signifying that he was not man that he should change,—and the laws He had given for the government of those planets should be changed from time to time by Him, would there be the order and harmony existing then as at the present time? Or would there not be disorder, and confusion, and a wreck of worlds?

We come to this earth on which we live, observation and experience (the evidences our skeptical friends allow) shows to us that Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter, and day and night, have always succeeded each other in their regular order, as far back as our knowledge extends; neither is there any record of a change in this respect from the earliest dawn of creation until the present, that we have any knowledge of. This being the case we readily perceive that there must be fixed laws governing the motions of our planet. But suppose again that He who established those laws was subject to change, and should take it into his head to give us only one of those seasons, say Winter, for a few years, (or for that length of time), at the expiration of that time how many of the human family would have a being here? We think they would be very scarce!

We might extend the thought in the physical world to the animal, vegetable and mineral creation, and establish the fact that they also are produced and preserved by fixed laws; but we think we will let what has been said suffice for evidence to establish the position taken. From the foregoing we conclude that if God has established fixed laws for the government and perpetuation of the physical world, he certainly, to bring about his great designs, would be no less mindful of the spiritual world, and establish wise and wholesome laws for the government and perpetuation of the same.

We have more particular reference—in this connection—when we say spiritual world, to the kingdom of God established upon earth for the salvation of mankind. The Savior says: "My kingdom is not of this world." How was the Savior's kingdom not of this world? He did not mean that there was no visible organization extant upon the earth, as some of our orthodox friends have conceived; but his meaning may be derived from the saying to his disciples, "Ye are not of the world; if ye were, the world would love its own; but as ye are not of the world, the world hates you."

If the sentence "My kingdom is not of this world" was carried out, it would corroborate the above idea expressed to the disciples: "for if it was, my servants would fight." It is the disposition and practice for the world to fight; but the citizens of Christ's kingdom are forbidden to do so; hence we perceive in what sense his kingdom is not of this world; its citizens are separate and distinct from the world; they have come out from the world; are no more sowing to the flesh, but to the Spirit, that of the same they may reap life everlasting.

The work then is a spiritual one, and those engaged in it may be considered spiritual, and in that sense as breathing a different atmosphere, and living in a different world.

There is a fixed law that governs man's entrance into the natural world, so there is a fixed law that governs man's entrance into the kingdom of God, or spiritual world.

Man by reason of the fall is an alien from the kingdom of God! To become a citizen of that kingdom, must do so by yielding obedience to the law of adoption, or as the Savior declares, "he must be born again!" How born, Jesus? "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." John 3d chapter. Was this your Father's will that you should establish such a law of adoption? Yes; my Father gave me a commandment what I should say and what I should speak, and I know that His commandment is life everlasting. John 12th chapter. And "I came not to do my own will, but the will of Him that sent me." John 6th chapter. So then you were promulgating the law of your Father, in telling people they must, and how they must be born again? Was this law of adoption general in its nature and a fixed one, or was it limited to a certain portion of the human family and susceptible of change? As the Father sent me, so sent I them, for I gave them the word which was given unto me. John 17th chap. And I commanded them to go and preach the gospel in all the world to every creature, and he that believeth and was baptized should be saved; but he that believed not should be damned. Mark 16th chap. Did your disciples understand and preach it as you did? Peter told those enquirers at the Pentecostal feast to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, and told them they should then be baptized by, or receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. This was in accordance with the commandment I received from my Father, and the one I gave to them; and all of the disciples assembled in council understood it in like manner, for after Philip had been preaching and had baptized repentant converts at Samaria, (Acts 8th chap.), they sent unto them Peter and John of their number to administer by the laying on of hands, that those baptized by Philip might receive [or be baptized of] the Holy Ghost. Annanias sent by me to Paul understood it, for he told Paul not to tarry, but to arise and be baptized, and wash away his sins; and he also told him that the Lord had sent him [Annanias] that he [Paul] might be filled with the Holy Ghost. Paul, in Romans sixth chapter, says that the Saints in Rome had been buried with me in baptism; and in his first letter to the Corinthians, and twelfth chapter, tells them: "By one Spirit are ye all baptized into one body." They all understood the law well, and dare not under pain of my displeasure, preach to the contrary. Was it understood by your servants who lived on the earth prior to your advent on it? Yes; Abel was a righteous man and obtained his righteousness through obedience to the gospel, for the righteousness of God is revealed therein. Romans 1st chap. Abraham had the gospel preached unto him. Gal. 3rd chap. And the children of Israel were "all baptized unto Moses, in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock which followed them, and that Rock was Christ." 1 Cor. 10th chap.

We see by this testimony adduced that there has been from time immemorial a fixed law for a fixed purpose, viz., that of the adoption of the human family into the kingdom of God, becoming citizens thereof, entitled to all its privileges and blessings. The mind of God has been revealed unto man concerning the form of government of his kingdom on the earth, and that form is a fixed fact. It is recorded in 1st Cor., 12th chap., 28th verse, that God hath set in his church certain officers and gifts, and the same writer declares in Ephesians 4th chap., the purposes for which those officers and gifts were given. The word set, in this connection, as rendered from the Greek lexicon, signifies fixed, established; as for instance as contained in Genesis: God set two great lights, as well as the stars, in the firmament, that they might give light unto the earth in their times and their seasons. He also set his bow in the clouds. God set these lights in the firmament for the purpose aforesaid, the end of which purpose will be accomplished when "The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory."—Isaiah 60. He set those officers and gifts in the church for the purposes enumerated by the apostle in Ephesians, and when the time comes for those purposes to be accomplished, we shall see no more through a glass darkly, but then face to face; we shall no more know only in part, but know as we are known. 1 Cor. 13 chap. Our orthodox friends think that the Latter Day Saints are somewhat demented and tintured with lunacy, because we teach that God, who revealed his will anciently to his people, will do so as long as he has a people on the earth serving him, fulfilling in this particular his declaration that he changes not, and his servant Peter's saying, He is no respecter of persons.

But if it was true, as our orthodox friends declare, that this order of church government was changed,—as they virtually declare when they say that apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers, with the helps, governments, diversities of tongues, are done away,—then we conceive that it would need direct revelation from God to the human family, at the time of such change, in order that people might not continue in the old way and be lost; but avail themselves of the change, and be saved.

There would not only be a necessity for direct revelation at the time of such change, but as people in subsequent ages, holding the New Testament in their hands read that Christ's Church was organized with all those aforementioned officers and gifts in it, they would need in each successive age direct revelation from God stating such change. They would also have to be made acquainted, from the same source, with the fact that the ordinance of baptism had been changed from immersion to sprinkling, or pouring, or whether it was non-essential as some claim; they would also have to know about the changing, or ignoring altogether, "the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost;" they would also have to know about the cessation of the signs that Jesus said should follow the believer; they would have to receive from heaven the word that there was to be no more communication therefrom, neither by angel, or vision, or inspiration of the Spirit, or in any manner whatever; God's mouth was sealed, or they would, holding the word of God, and reading of his manner of dealing with his children, as recorded there, and believing the same, importune him that they might receive like blessings. If such change has been made in the mind of Jehovah, how could our orthodox friends know it without he revealed it? How could he sustain his character for justice and not reveal it? How could he condemn those who refused to obey anything but what had been revealed? God has never revealed—that any one has been able to find any record of—that he would at any time in this probation change the order of his church government; that he would change the gospel; that he would make any change in the promised gifts that his people have always enjoyed. But he has revealed that he changes not; that he is no respecter of persons; that he is more willing to give good gifts to his children than an earthly parent is to give to his; that "who-soever will do his will shall know of the doctrine," &c.; that "he that hath my commandments and doeth them, he it is that loveth me, and I will love him, and will manifest myself unto him;" that "it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, that I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; your young men shall see visions and your old men shall dream dreams, and upon my servants and upon my handmaidens will I pour out of my Spirit, and they shall prophecy." But time would fail us to enumerate what God has said he would reveal in the last days. So that our Christian friends will perceive that their own position (in things just stated) as well as ours, warrants continuation of revelation from God, and that a believer in direct revelation is not such an imbecile as at first thought from unweighed assertions. In view of the changes having been made in church government, in the gospel, in the promised blessings which follow obedience to the same, &c, which church government, gospel, &c, were established by God for the salvation of man, and those changes being made without his sanction, it is reasonable to conclude that man of himself hath made the changes, and consequently departed from the God-given plan, apostatized from the faith, and hence a restoration of that plan given of God, was necessary for man's salvation. To show the necessity for such restoration, and to defend the position of the Church in which we have the honor of a membership, as a consistent one, has been our main object in writing this article. That such a restoration has been made (is claimed by the Latter Day Saints) by divine appointment, God having sent his angels, who clothed men with power to organize his church according to the ancient pattern; who restored the gospel in its ancient purity, and commissioned men to preach it in the name of Jesus Christ, and that the same blessings should follow the obedience to the gospel now as anciently, and to these things thousands of living witnesses do testify.

POLYGAMY.

A DIALOGUE

ON THE

DELECTABLE DOGMA;

ITS

DIVINITY DISPUTED AND DEVILISHMENT DEMONSTRATED.

A Truth Seeker, a Polygamist, and a Latter Day Saint, Examine the Revelation on Polygamy.

LATTER DAY SAINT.—Mr. Polygamist; my friend Truth Seeker is desirous of learning what are your grounds for practicing what you call plurality of wives, or what is commonly denominated polygamy. Can you inform him?

POLYGAMIST.—Certainly; I am glad to form your acquaintance, Mr. Truth Seeker, and will soon convince you that we are built upon a solid foundation in this matter.

TRUTH SEEKER.—I wish to ask you, in the first place, do you accept the Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, as authority with you?

P.—Well, yes; we have lately resumed that position. There was awhile that we were led by Brigham Young to think that the books were of "no more use than the ashes of a rye straw;" but since we have issued an edition of the Doctrine and Covenants containing some of Brigham's revelations, and the glorious and soul-enchancing revelation given through Joseph Smith in 1843, we endorse that book, and we publicly say that we believe the Book of Mormon.

T. S.—I wish to ask you another question before I learn your reasons for being a polygamist, and that is; did not your Elders always teach, and do thy not now teach when abroad engaged in missionary work, that God is unchangeable, that in him is "neither variability nor shadow of turning?"

P.—Why, yes. We depended upon that idea to convince the people that the Church ought to have all the officers, gifts, ordinances, principles, or doctrine, that distinguished the Church of Christ eighteen centuries ago, and which made it the "one body" of Christ. Yes, we argued strongly, and do now when proselyting that God and Christ and the Holy Spirit and the gospel are unchanged and unchangeable.

T. S.—Well, that is a correct position, certainly.

L. D. S.—Permit me to state that the very first revelation given in these latter times, through Joseph Smith, affirms the same grand truth. I will quote it: "The works and the designs and the purposes of God can not be frustrated, neither can they come to naught, for God does not walk in crooked paths, neither does he turn to the right hand nor to the left, neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore his paths are straight, and his course is one eternal round."

T. S.—Well, I believe all that, and can readily accept that as the word of God, no matter who was medium or through whom it came.

P.—Yes; that was the doctrine of the Church for many years; in fact till a long while after Joseph Smith was killed, in 1844.

L. D. S.—It is the belief of every true, consistent believer in the doctrine taught by Joseph Smith, and which constitutes true and genuine Mormonism. The idea of God's changeableness leaves no ground for faith or hope, for if God will change his mind in one point in the great scheme of human redemption, he may in any and all others, and what may be essential to salvation to-day, may be altogether worthless in that connection to-morrow; and what would please God to-day may displease him to-morrow; and if he changes to-morrow, he may also again the day after; and still vary from the position of that day, on the day after that. His own view of the case is: "I am God, therefore I change not." The Book of Mormon asserts that "He changeth not; if so he would cease to be God." Again: "For I know that God is not a partial God, neither a changeable being; but he is unchangeable from all eternity to all eternity."

T. S.—Well, as we seem to be agreed upon this point, please inform us what are your grounds for practicing polygamy.

P.—Certainly. In 1843 the Lord gave us a revelation through Joseph Smith, commanding us to enter into what he was pleased to call "a new and everlasting covenant;" and that those who entered into it should be saved, and be exalted in the world to come, even to be Gods; and those who rejected it should be destroyed, &c.

T. S.—Why, I thought that Christ came to introduce a "new and everlasting covenant," or the gospel, eighteen centuries ago, and said that whosoever believed and obeyed that should be saved, and whosoever believed it not should be damned. And Paul taught that upon the introduction of the new, the old covenant, the Mosaic law passed away.

Can there be two conflicting covenants in force at the same time.

P.—Certainly not; the latest supplants the older.

T. S.—Then the gospel is done away with, and why do your elders preach the gospel and baptize people who believe it, and promise forgiveness of sins to such, and the gift of the Spirit, and finally salvation to all who believe and obey it; and now you have another "new and everlasting covenant," and make that essential to salvation."

P.—Well, they may be saved, in a measure, that is, have a lesser glory.

L. D. S.—The Lord showed in a vision to Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, that those who received the highest glory, and who were to be kings and priests, and sit upon his throne, &c., were those who believed the gospel, who repented and were baptized, and who received the Spirit, and who lived righteously all their days. And this so called, "new and everlasting covenant" must and does supplant the gospel.

T. S.—Well; when did this new covenant, as you call it, come forth?

P.—It was given in 1843, in the month of July, and on the 12th of the month.

T. S.—Where was the church at that time?

P.—The main body of the church was living in Illinois and Iowa.

T. S.—Why, how could it obey the new covenant in those States, when their laws forbade it; making bigamy, and of course polygamy, a crime?

P.—In the language of our president, John Taylor, or according to his teachings, it is our duty to obey God rather than man.

L. D. S.—Yes; but the church was expressly forbidden to break the laws of the land.

T. S.—Is that so?

L. D. S.—Yes; hear what God had commanded the church. "Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore, be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right is to reign."

T. S.—Why, that is quite loyal doctrine, whether it be a revelation or mere human counsel. And it is just what Paul taught. So according to that, a revelation claiming to come from God can not be genuine, for it would be inconsistent for God to command the Church to obey the laws of the land and then give a law that not only required a violation of the laws of the States where the Church was chiefly located; but his own law likewise.

L. D. S.—Certainly not; and besides that, the Church had not contemplated going away from these States at that time, nor until years after, and the idea or faith was that they would return to Missouri if they went any where, and there they could not practice polygamy any more than in Illinois and Iowa. But that is not all.

T. S.—Why, what else is wrong?

L. D. S.—Why, only twelve years before, God had expressly forbidden polygamy. He gave a law in February, 1831, which says: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else." And also said in another revelation a month after: "And again, I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation.

T. S.—Do I understand that the earth was to be made to answer the end of its creation by the one wife system of marriage?

L. D. S.—Certainly; that is what is meant. The command was to "multiply and replenish the earth," and that by one wife for one man. The first case of polygamy, or bigamy rather, was when Lamech took two wives, and it seems that he had to murder a man to get one of them, "for in the beginning God created them male and female." Murder and polygamy are generally intimately associated. And when God sought to re-people the earth after the deluge, he did it by the one wife system, there being just four men, and four women.

P.—But we believe that when Adam came to this world he brought Eve, one of his wives with him.

T. S.—What a strange idea?

L. D. S.—Strange, and unsupported by any proof whatever. And false, because following what I just quoted, comes the words, "That it [the earth] might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made."

T. S.—But when was this revelation of July 12th, 1843, brought to light and taught as a command from God?

P.—It was brought out of obscurity by Brigham Young in 1852, and was first publicly declared in the Deseret News, of Salt Lake City, and in the Seer, at Washington, D. C., of which Orson Pratt was Editor. Brigham said he had kept it safely locked in his desk.

T. S.—This was the original, I suppose, that he got from Joseph Smith?

P.—No, it was a copy; the original was destroyed.

T. S.—Why, who would dare destroy a revelation from heaven?

P.—Emma Smith, Joseph's wife, who burned it.

L. D. S.—Emma declared up to her dying hour that she never saw or handled or heard of the thing till it was publicly proclaimed in Utah by Brigham Young, in 1852.

T. S.—Well, either one or the other has told a falsehood, that is certain.

L. D. S.—It will not take any one long to decide that point, who intimately knew both of them. Emma always bore a most excellent reputation for truthfulness and honesty.

T. S.—Why should Emma Smith burn the document?

P.—Why, she would not receive its teachings; she rebelled against it.

T. S.—Why? Did it directly affect her?

P.—Yes. The Lord said if she did not receive those women whom he had given to his servant Joseph, she should be destroyed from off the earth.

T. S.—Did she accept them as associate wives, or did she refuse, and was she destroyed?

L. D. S.—No; she did not receive them, and she died just thirty-six years afterward, in Nauvoo; and died calmly and sweetly, in full faith of the gospel, and with every evidence of being accepted of God.

T. S.—Well, that's a curious fulfillment of the threatening. But tell me what is meant by the words, "Whom I have given unto my servant Joseph?"

P.—Why that's plain enough; the Lord had already given Joseph Smith other wives.

T. S.—What? before the revelation was given granting the right to have more than one wife?

P.—Yes; it so appears.

L. D. S.—But what said Orson Pratt in his sermon on "Celestial Marriage," delivered in the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, October 7th, 1879?

P.—Why, he said "That if the members of the church had undertaken to vary from the law given in 1831, to love their one wife with all their heart, and to cleave to none other, they would have come under the curse and condemnation of God's holy law."

T. S.—How long was that "holy law" in existence, or in force, and binding upon the members?

P.—Up to the 12th day of July, 1843.

T. S.—And God had given Joseph other wives prior to the 12th of July, 1843?

P.—Yes; the revelation says so.

L. D. S.—And lies.

T. S.—What did that holy law of 1843 say of those who disregarded it?

P.—That they would "deny the faith," or apostatize, and should "not have the Spirit;" that is, would be deprived by the Lord of his Spirit; and as Orson Pratt said truly, "They would come under the curse and condemnation of God's holy law."

T. S.—And Joseph Smith varied from that law it seems, and hence apostatized, lost the Spirit, &c., and yet was favored of God to the extent of receiving a revelation from him, through his Holy Spirit. I can't see into that.

L. D. S.—Nor I either; and further, it is too unreasonable and absurd for any one to believe. It makes God falsify his word, and forces candid people to either believe that God never gave the so called holy law of 1831, or if he did, that of 1843 is a miserable fraud.

T. S.—Did we not all agree a little while ago that God was an unchangeable being?

L. D. S.—Yes; the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, all testify alike on that point, and I am now reminded of what John Taylor said in the "Times and Seasons," a paper published in Nauvoo, of which he was "Editor and Proprietor."

T. S.—I should like to hear it.

L. D. S.—He said, in an Editorial, April 1st, 1844: "If any man writes to you, or preaches to you doctrines contrary to the Bible, the Book of Mormon, or the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, set him down as an impostor. You need not write to us to know what you are to do with such men, you have the authority with you. Try them by the principles contained in the acknowledged word of God; if they preach or teach or practice contrary to that, disfellowship them; cut them off from among you as useless and dangerous branches."

T. S.—Did John Taylor truly say that? If he did, then he must be an impostor, for he declares against the doctrine of the unchangeableness of God, which these books plainly teach, in that he claims that God has commanded what he once forbade, and thus varies from his word, thus making God to be a liar.

L. D. S.—But that is not all that he said, for in the 1st of May number of the year 1845, over a year after, he said: "For once let us say that Cain, who went to Nod, and taught the doctrine of "plurality of wives," and the giants who practiced the same iniquity; and Nimrod who practiced the common stock system * * * when the reward for every man's work is given—this will be the answer to all sects, sorts, and conditions, from Cain down to Christian Israelites: "I NEVER KNEW YOU."

T. S.—Why bless me, he calls plurality of wives "iniquity." He has greatly changed his views since then. When did he change his mind so radically?

L. D. S.—Since 1850; for at that time he held a discussion in France, and when accused of believing in polygamy he indignantly denied it, and referred to the doctrine of the church on the subject, and particularly to a church article on the Marriage question.

T. S.—What was that? Was it against polygamy?

L. D. S.—Yes; squarely against it. He referred to the marriage formula, where the man and woman to be married are required to say: "You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition."

T. S.—What were they?

L. D. S.—"That is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other and from all others during your lives."

T. S.—Why that covenant makes polygamy utterly impossible.

L. D. S.—Of course it is; but he quoted more: "Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication and polygamy; we declare that we believe that one man should have one wife, and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again." It seems that up till 1850 he did not know of any revelation of 1843 authorizing polygamy, or else he acted the hypocrite.

T. S.—Mr. P., what was the occasion of this revelation of 1843 being given?

P.—Why the document says that Joseph had inquired of the Lord to know why he justified Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, Moses, David and Solomon, in having many wives and concubines.

T. S.—Why I never heard before that Abraham had more than one wife and one concubine; or that Isaac ever had any wife but Rebecca, and no concubine at all; or that Jacob had but two wives and two concubines, and one of these wives was forced upon him against his wishes. I never heard that Moses had more than one wife living at the same time.

L. D. S.—No; and Joseph Smith never heard of anything different to that. It is simply a lie. Joseph well knew that God did not justify any of these men in polygamy, that is, such of those named who did practice it.

P.—Why Joseph knew that David and Solomon had many wives and concubines, and that God approved it, and that is one of our principle reasons for practicing it, as I wish Mr. Truth Seeker to understand.

L. D. S.—Yes; Joseph knew that they had had many wives and concubines, and he knew another thing too.

T. S.—Pray what was that?

L. D. S.—That the Book of Mormon, which he claimed to have translated by the gift and power of God, had condemned the course of David and Solomon.

T. S.—In what way?

L. D. S.—Why it says: "David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord."

T. S.—Do you suppose he remembered this when he asked the Lord why he justified David and Solomon?

L. D. S.—It is not at all probable that he forgot it; and if he had, is it at all likely that God had forgotten it, and would have answered him and gave his reasons why he justified them, when he had positively said that he did not justify them, but that their acts were "ABOMINABLE" before him? And was God so ignorant that he did not know that Abraham, and Isaac, or even Jacob, did not have many wives and concubines? God never gave such a revelation, and for another good reason.

T. S.—Pray what is that?

L. D. S.—Why it says: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, if a man marry a wife according to my word, and they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, according to mine appointment, and he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood—yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter into their exaltation."

T. S.—Do I understand this to mean that if a man or a woman enter into polygamy that they may commit any manner of sin except shedding innocent blood, and any manner of blasphemies, yet they will be saved at last, and lose no future glory?

L. D. S.—Yes; that is what it means. All that a man need do is to violate the "holy law" of God, and do what the Book of Mormon calls iniquity, and a crime, and abominable before God, and take a wife or two additional, and he may lie, or steal, or commit adultery, or treason, or anything but shed innocent blood; he can blaspheme against God and Christ and the Holy Ghost, and yet be saved.

T. S.—I thought that blasphemy against the Holy Ghost was not to be forgiven in this world or the world to come.

L. D. S.—Yes; that was what Christ said; but you must remember that this is a new and everlasting covenant. Old things have passed away, and all things have become new.

P.—But you neglect to notice that several times this revelation condemns the "shedding of innocent blood," it ought to receive credit for condemning murder. It even calls the shedding of blood "blasphemy against the Holy Ghost."

L. D. S.—Yes, I know it does, and a ridiculous and false statement that is. But let us see what they mean by the shedding of innocent blood, and we may learn that instead of condemning murder, Mr. P., it justifies that same crime.

T. S. and P., in one breath.—How can you make that appear?

L. D. S.—Easily. First let us see what they mean by blood that is not "innocent." Mr. P. well knows that Brigham Young, J. M. Grant, D. H. Wells and others, have taught that there were some sins that Christ's blood could not atone for, and that the transgressor's own blood alone could atone for. And that sometimes it was necessary to spill a man's blood to save his soul. And in the Endowment House Covenants, does he not know that men and women swear to be willing to be killed if they break their oaths, and to kill each other for violating them; and do they not swear to avenge the blood of Joseph Smith upon this nation, and of course that includes all the people of the land who are not in good standing in the Utah Church. In plain words the only innocent blood that polygamists understand to exist within the bounds of these United States is that of the faithful among the oath-bound members of the "New and Everlasting Covenant," entered into in the Endowment House in Utah. At the command of the Priesthood the blood of any other man or woman can be shed, without sin being committed, because their blood is not "innocent." Therefore, I say, that the revelation justifies murder, and in order to protect the "fraternity," shedding of their "innocent blood" (?) is made to be the unpardonable sin; even the "blasphemy against the Holy Ghost."

T. S.—Well, this is truly horrible; but then polygamy and murder seem to have always been very intimately related, as in the cases particularly of Lamech, Gideon and David; and with cruelty and treachery as in the cases of Abraham and Jacob; and with idolatry, as in the case of Solomon, and all of these devilties, as in the case of Utah polygamists, as I have learned. But does the Book of Mormon say anything farther about polygamy?

L. D. S.—Yes. It speaks plainly, thus: "No Man among you shall have save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none."

T. S.—Did John Taylor know this when he said if any man teaches or practices contrary to that book, "set him down as an impostor?"

L. D. S.—Yes; and he doubtless had this very passage in mind, for it was about plurality of wives that he was writing. But alas! he now teaches that it is perfectly proper to have more than one wife in the face of what the Book of Mormon says.

P.—No; he takes the ground that this was the word of God to the people to whom it was addressed, or the ancient inhabitants of this land, but it is not in force now, for the Lord said: "For if I will, saith the Lord of hosts, raise up seed unto me, I will command my people; otherwise they shall hearken unto these things," and he has commanded us in the revelation referred to.

L. D. S.—That is, if the Lord concluded to raise up seed—or a people—for his name and glory, he would command them to do differently to that which he commanded the Nephites; and if he did not command them differently, they should observe the commandment given the Nephites, you mean. But had he not just said that he had led them out of the land of Jerusalem to this land, for the purpose of raising up seed, or a righteous people, and that he gave this command against polygamy for that purpose? How then could he design to raise up a righteous people, at another time, and then order polygamy as a means to this end, and be at the same time an unchangeable God?

T. S.—I understand that God said that polygamy was "abominable" in his sight, and if so, must he not have changed greatly, that he could select it as a means to raise up a holy people?

L. D. S.—I understand him to mean simply that when he desires to raise up seed to himself, or to have a people to serve him, he would command or rule them; but if they would not be commanded, or would not obey him, they would surely observe these things—the things written concerning David and Solomon; or in other words, they would go into polygamy. The reason being that he would withdraw his Spirit from those who would not obey him; and hence they would follow the dictates of their carnal natures. The history of the Church in all ages, and on every land, shows that as soon as they began to treat lightly God's commands, and turn from his precepts, they always went into polygamy. And the testimony of many truthful souls, and the revelations of God to the Church, and its open conduct, and public teachings, with the fulfillment of threatenings against them which the Spirit gave; prove beyond chance of doubt that the Church was under condemnation, even at the time of Joseph Smith's death, and that it has departed more widely from the faith, and has gone deeper and deeper into sin since then. But one thing need be said concerning this vain attempt of the polygamist to make it appear that God has commanded the Church in 1843, contrary to what he did his people in the Book of Mormon time, and that is that it is utterly irreconcilable with the very nature or character of God for him to ever approve as a holy or righteous and saving act what he at one time declared to be an abomination to him. And he gave a very weighty and just reason why he forbade polygamy to the Ancient Nephites.

T. S.—What was that?

L. D. S.—That it was because he delighted "in the chastity of women."

T. S.—Then of course if he now commands or approves of polygamy, it is because he no longer delights in that women are chaste or virtuous.

L. D. S.—That appears to be a legitimate conclusion.

T. S.—How about these secret marriages in the Endowment House?

L. D. S.—That is also contrary to the order of the church, for in the Church Article on Marriage referred to, it is expressly declared that marriages should be "solemnized in a public meeting, or feast prepared for the purpose."

P.—Well; all that I have to say is that "David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines."

L. D. S.—Yes; "WHICH THING WAS ABOMINABLE BEFORE ME SAITH THE LORD."

T. S.—And with Paul I conclude that "Nevertheless to avoid fornication let every man have his own wife and every woman her own husband."

L. D. S.—And let us all conclude that the so called revelation on polygamy is a despicable fraud, and was concocted by Brigham Young to blind the eyes of the people and lead them to think that his licentious practices were fathered by the Almighty, and that having lost the Spirit of God, and had been rejected of him as his servant, he was too blind to see the absurdities, falsehoods, contradictions, false prophecies, and blasphemies, and ignoring of God's truths. And that it is unmistakably the work of seducing spirits, and contains the doctrine of devils.

T. S.—I do truly so believe.

P.—As it is contrary to the doctrine of the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, I must reject it or be "SET DOWN AS AN IMPOSTOR." But how could such men as Taylor, Pratt, Hyde and others, be so blind as they evidently are?

L. D. S.—For this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie, that they all might be damned, who believed not the truth, but had "pleasure in unrighteousness."

P.—There is only one point more that I would like to understand, and I am ready to go back to the old paths and renounce this and all other departures from the faith, such as worshiping Adam as God, paying a tenth of all a man has or raises or earns, instead of a tenth of his interest or increase or gains, annually; and "blood atonement," or shedding a man's blood to save his soul; and of blindly obeying the priesthood in all things, even to the extent of breaking God's commands and the laws of the land, and other heretical dogmas and practices of the Church here; and that point is, if Joseph Smith did not receive the revelation we have discussed so much, who did?

L. D. S.—I will quote from Brigham Young's speech of June 21st, 1874, which you will see in Deseret News of July 1st of that year: "While we were in England (in 1839 and '40) I think, the Lord manifested to me by vision and his spirit, things that I did not then understand. I never opened my mouth to any one concerning them until I returned to Nauvoo. Joseph had never mentioned this; there had never been a thought of it in the Church that I ever knew any thing about at that time. I had this for myself, and I kept it to myself." Again he says: "The revelation was given in 1843, but the doctrine was revealed before this." That is he meant that the doctrine of plurality of wives was revealed to him four years before the date ascribed to the polygamous revelation. As there is not the slightest proof that Joseph Smith ever wrote it; the conclusion is to my mind that Brigham was the author of the revelation which he shamelessly sought to palm off on Joseph Smith.

T. S.—I have heard that he denounced polygamy as a sin after this date, (July, 1843), is that so?

L. D. S.—Yes; just about four months before he was murdered, he published a notice in the Times and Seasons of February 1st, in which he openly denounced a certain Hiram Brown for teaching polygamy in Michigan, which Joseph speaks of thus: "Hiram Brown has been preaching polygamy and other false and corrupt doctrines." For this work said Brown was cut off from the Church. Either

Joseph had not known of this revelation seven months after it was said to have been received by him, or else he was a miserable hypocrite. For one I believe that he never knew of such a revelation, and that Brigham originated it.

T. S.—And so do I.

P.—And so do I.

T. W. SMITH.

Notes from the Newspapers on the Issue.

THE Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints must not be confounded with the Utah Latter Day Saints who believe in polygamy, for although they accept the original principles of Mormonism as taught by Joseph Smith, yet they discard polygamy, the one man power, compulsory paying of tithes, and other obnoxious tenets still held by the followers of Brigham Young. And while they are not prepared to subject the Book of Mormon as Solomon Spaulding's romance, yet they are willing to join in a righteous warfare against the impious hierarchy that rules in Utah, and wish only to cling to what is pure and evangelical in Mormonism.

It is our purpose in the near future to give an outline of the history of this sect, and more especially of the operations of its missionary labors in Utah. We believe that the mission is doing a great work in the interests of virtue and morality, and we also believe that it reaches a class of people that could not be reached by any other agency. There are many people who were converted to Mormonism years ago and who never heard of polygamy, blood atonement, etc., until they came to Utah. They are loath to give up all faith in the doctrine that has brought them away from their far-off homes, and their moral senses revolt against accepting the hideous excrecences appended to it in Utah. This class can be reached by weapons in the hands of the Reorganized Church, which other denominations can not consistently use; such as the Doctrine and Covenants, which expressly denounce polygamy, as well as the former teachings of the Utah leaders themselves. Although we differ with them in regard to the origin and early history of polygamy, and have sometimes been censured by their organs for denouncing Joseph Smith as its author, yet we recognize in these Saints a power that is battling bravely and successfully against the errors of Utah Mormonism, and we stand on a common platform in reference to polygamy and its kindred evils in this Territory.—Anti-Polygamy Standard, Utah, March, 1882.

But it does not follow, because some of the opponents of Mormon schemes are bigoted and intolerant, that they desire "the destruction of the people of Utah," and when the News says that they do, it says what it knows is untrue. No one, not one, seeks the destruction of the people of Utah. All that is asked of them on any hand, at least all the law is invoked for, is to conform their practices to those of the other States and Territories, especially as touching the institution of marriage, which lies at the foundation of society. They call upon the National Government to arrest at all hazards the further extension of the practice of polygamy, and there they stand and propose to stand. If that means the destruction of the people of Utah, it is because they will have it so. In resisting the decree of Fate that this shall not be a polygamous continent, the people of Utah may involve themselves in destruction, but they need not. If they had been wise they would long ago have submitted, but whatever they do, the decree will not be altered. Polygamy shall not be the form of marriage of this continent, or of any part of it. That is what the "burning flames of bigotry and intolerance" intend. That is all that is sought for in a Legislative Commission for Utah appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. It is not to take away one single right of the people of Utah, except the right to establish polygamy in the United States against the will of the people of the United States. Were a Commission as above created it would not interfere with the body of the laws of Utah. It would direct its energies and devote its power to the single task of placing polygamy "in the course of ultimate extinction," as Lincoln said of slavery. There would be no bigotry or intolerance, there is neither about it or in it. Polygamy is wrong to the national conscience, and therefore it must not be. It matters not who thinks it is right, nor on what grounds. And if it can not be hindered in any other way it will ultimately be withered into smoke and ashes by the fiery breath of society resolved into itself—a society all eyes, all ears, all hands, all law, at every point, clearing its system of such an intolerable blood poison as a matter of course and by the most direct and effective methods. It depends solely on the people of Utah whether they involve themselves with the inevitable destruction of polygamy or not. They can give it up and live, or hold to it and die, just as they please. There is not the slightest reason to suppose that they will choose the latter course. Disfranchise polygamists and in ten years they would have practically passed away, and the Deseret News will then deny that they have ever been.—Tribune, Salt Lake, Feb. 19th

Knowing as we do the career of the Mormons in minute detail, having studied and reported it with a care unsurpassed in the secular press, we can not testify too earnestly our conviction that moral reform needs to accompany legal coercion in Utah if the people of the United States would avoid the peril of the termination of polygamy there in a bloody catastrophe. The thousands of pulpits which have been engaged every Sunday since the new year in hurling fierce invectives against Mormonism had better be employed henceforth in recruiting the practical means of such a reform. It is reasonably sure that Congress is aroused to the duty of furnishing all the legislation that is needful. Now let the people apply themselves to the duty of furnishing all the money and the missions that are needful for the Gospel work, which is quite as important as the machinery of law.—New York Herald, Feb. 20th, 1882.

There is no doubt some confusion in the minds of many people, on the Mormon polygamy question, and especially so among people living in Shelby county, where the number of communicants to the Mormon Church outnumber all others, but the fact is, there are two kinds of Mormons—the good kind and the other kind. The other kind are called "Brighamites," and practice polygamy away out in Utah, while the Mormons we have in Shelby county are as moral, upright, industrious and law abiding citizens as one can find anywhere, and the equal in intelligence of any other class.—Harlan Hub.

THE Avant Courier, Bozeman, Montana, of February 9th, says:

There exists a strong anti-polygamous element in Utah, outside and independent of the so-called Gentile population, that has heretofore been either overlooked or greatly underestimated. It is that branch of the Mormon Church designated, for short, "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." The members of this branch of Mormonism, aside from their belief in the original Joe Smith and the Book of Mormon, do not differ materially from other Christianized human beings, and are certainly a decided improvement on the lecherous Brighamites, who are a standing disgrace and menace to the Nation, and a blighting mildew on the fair Territory of Utah. We have a small colony of those same "Reorganized Saints," or "Josephites," in Gallatin county, and barring the little peculiarity of extreme sensitiveness in a few of them, touching their somewhat peculiar religious dogmas, they are very excellent citizens. They are industrious, attend to their own business, are in favor of free schools, free speech, and, so far as we know, a free press. At all events, we have any number of Gentile residents who will not bear favorable comparison with the peaceable and industrious followers of St. Joseph Smith.

The Massachusetts District Conference of Latter Day Saints met in their Chapel at Dennisport, Saturday; Elder John Smith, of New Bedford, President. About forty of the ministry were present from different sections, comprising Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Their meeting to-day was held in Ocean Hall, West Harwich, which seats five hundred persons. A large audience was present. At 10:30 o'clock this morning there was preaching by Elder John Smith, of New Bedford, on "The Conversion of Our Men." At the close the following resolution on polygamy was read and adopted by a rising vote of the audience:

Whereas, There is at the present time general agitation throughout the country concerning polygamy as taught and practiced in the Territories by the so called Mormon Church in Utah, and

Whereas, We, as people bearing the name of Latter Day Saints, are intensely interested in having this agitation continued, for we believe the public have become enlightened upon the subject, as they should be, and properly discriminate between us, the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints proper, and that pseudo apostate and law-defying institution in Utah; and further, we hail with joy the upspringing of the American people in their dignity, to maintain and execute their laws against crime, even if enshrined in the garb of religion, which is simply a subterfuge for that corrupt hierarchy in Utah; and we endorse the sentiment that polygamy and kindred evils shall no longer be a foul blot on our escutcheon, but consigned, with its twin sister, slavery, a relic of barbarism, forever to oblivion; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Reorganized Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints, in the District Conference assembled, representing the Church in the States of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, do hereby vote that we are in sympathy with the present movement to extinguish polygamy from the land, and hope the General Government will not cease its efforts until this shall be accomplished.

At 2:30 this afternoon an able and eloquent address against polygamy was made by Elder F. M. Sheehy. This evening the session was opened by singing a solo, "Are you coming home to night?" by Elder John Gilbert, and another solo by Mrs. Shaw of New Bedford, followed by preaching by Elder John Gilbert from Mark 1.—"Rest of the kingdom of God."

These meetings continue Monday at their chapel.—DENNISPORT, Mass., Feb. 26th, 1882.

Passage of the Edmunds Bill.

THE Edmunds Bill for the suppression of polygamy in Utah, and other territories of the United States, passed the House of Representatives, March 14th, 1882, in precisely the form that it came from the Senate, by a vote of 199 yeas to 42 nays, an unexpected event, gratifying to many, but unpleasant indeed to the Utah Church.

This bill we give in this issue that all may see the scope of it. If it be now signed by the President it becomes a law.

Be it enacted, &c., That section 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows, namely:

"Every person who has a husband or wife living who, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, hereafter marries another, whether married or single, and any man who hereafter simultaneously, or on the same day, marries more than one woman, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, is guilty of polygamy, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 and by imprisonment for a term of not more than five years; but this section shall not extend to any person by reason of any former marriage whose husband or wife by such marriage shall have been absent for five successive years, and is not known to such person to be living, and and is believed by such person to be dead, nor to any person by reason of any former marriage which shall have been dissolved by a valid decree of a competent court, nor to any person by reason of any former marriage which shall have been pronounced void by a valid decree of a competent court, on the ground of nullity of the marriage contract."

Sec. 2. That the foregoing provisions shall not affect the prosecution or punishment of any offense already committed against the section amended by the first section of this act.

Sec. 3. That if any male person, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, hereafter cohabits with more than one woman, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $300, or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 4. That counts for any or all of the offenses named in section 1 and 3 of this act may be joined in the same information or indictment.

Sec. 5. That in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation under any statute of the United States, it shall be sufficient cause of challenge to any person drawn or summoned as a juror or talesman, first, that he is or has been living in the practice of bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation with more than one woman, or that he is or has been guilty of an offense punishable by either of the foregoing sections or by section 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, or the act of July 1, 1862, entitled "An act to punish and prevent the practice of polygamy in the Territories of the United States, and other places, and disapproving and annulling certain acts of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah;" or, second, that he believes it right for a man to have more than one living and undivorced wife at the same time, or to live in the practice of cohabiting with more than one woman; and any person appearing or offered as a juror or talesman, and challenged on either of the foregoing grounds, may be questioned on his oath as of the existence of any such cause of challenge, and other evidence may be introduced bearing upon the question raised by such challenge; and this question shall be tried by the court. But as to the first ground of challenge before mentioned, the person challenged shall not be bound to answer if he shall say upon his oath that he declines on the ground that his answer may tend to criminate himself; and if he shall answer as to said first ground, his answer shall not be given in evidence in any criminal prosecution against him for any offense named in sections 1 or 3 of this act; but if he declines to answer on any ground he shall be rejected as incompetent.

Sec. 6. That the President is hereby authorized to grant amnesty to such classes of offenders guilty before the passage of this act of bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation before the passage of this act, on such conditions and under such limitations as he shall think proper; but no such amnesty shall have effect unless the conditions thereof shall be complied with.

Sec. 7. That the issue of bigamous or polygamous marriages known as Mormon marriages, in cases in which such marriages have been solemnized according to the ceremonies of the Mormon sect, in any Territory of the United States, and such issue shall have been born before the 1st day of January, A. D. 1883, are hereby legitimated.

Sec. 8. That no polygamist, bigamist, or any person cohabiting with more than one woman, and no woman cohabiting with any of the persons described as aforesaid in this section, in any Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, shall be entitled to vote at any election held in any such Territory or other place, or be eligible for election or appointment to or be entitled to hold any office or place of public trust, honor, or emolument in, under, or for any such Territory or place, or under the United States.

Sec. 9. That all the registration and election offices of every description in the Territory of Utah are hereby declared vacant, and each and every duty relating to the registration of voters, the conduct of elections, the receiving or rejection of votes, and the canvassing and returning of the same, and the issuing of certificates or other evidence of election in said Territory, shall, until other provision be made by the Legislative Assembly of said Territory as is hereinafter by this section provided, be performed under the existing laws of the United States and of said Territory by proper persons, who shall be appointed to execute such offices and perform such duties by a board of five persons, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, not more than three of whom shall be members of one political party, and a majority of whom shall be a quorum. The members of said board so appointed by the President shall each receive a salary at the rate of $3,000 per annum, and shall continue in office until the Legislative Assembly of said Territory shall make provision for filling said offices as herein authorized. The secretary of the Territory shall be the secretary of said board, and keep a journal of its proceedings, and attest the action of said board under this section. The canvass and return of all the votes at elections in said Territory for which members of the Legislative Assembly thereof shall also be returned to said board, which shall canvass all such returns and issue certificates of election to those persons who, being eligible for such election, shall appear to have been lawfully elected, which certificate shall be the only evidence of the right of such persons to sit in such Assembly: Provided, That said board of five persons shall not exclude any person otherwise eligible to vote from the poles on account of any opinion such person may entertain on the subject of bigamy or polygamy, nor shall they refuse to count any such vote on account of the opinion of the person casting it on the subject of bigamy or polygamy; but each house of such Assembly, after its organization, shall have power to decide upon the elections and qualifications of its members. And at or after the first meeting of said Legislative Assembly whose members shall have been elected and returned according to the provisions of this act, said Legislative Assembly may make such laws conformable to the organic act of said Territory and not inconsistent with other laws of the United States, as it shall deem proper concerning the filling of the offices in said Territory declared vacant by this act.

Contend Against no Church, Save it be the Church of the Devil.

HAVING just received a letter from a prominent minister of the Church who quotes the above text and asks me to "instruct the ministry through the Herald" to give earnest heed thereto, I do so most readily; because I, too, have felt something of the kind was much needed.

The writer has known of great harm being done to the Church, people well disposed to the work driven away, by some unseemly and uncalled for attack upon the sects, or their ministers. Such attacks are utterly repugnant to fair-minded persons of all classes, and they revolt, in feelings at least, whenever they see them.

I well remember when I was first investigating the faith, in 1851, an able, talented minister ridiculed the mourner's bench, six months' probation, and the common methods of making conversion, and notwithstanding I favored the doctrine of the Saints, this was almost too much for my forbearance. From that time forward I have detested all attempts to disparage and ridicule the weaknesses of others.

If persons would but bring the matter home, and ask themselves how they would like to have their supposed or real errors, weaknesses, and evils, held up to public view, they could then judge how others feel under the same treatment.

There is a perfectly proper way to reach the errors and evils of mankind, and that is to portray clearly and patiently something better. Present to them that which is pure and true and good, and they, if they have sense enough to be responsible, will compare the one with the other and make their choice. God has given us to know what the deportment and teaching of his ministers should be, and that they are neither to denounce their fellow men, nor undertake to render odious and ridiculous whatever they may hold as religious truth. God's light reveals error and evil. The Lord proposes to reach and regenerate the race through their reasoning and affectional natures, and this not in a coarse, rude, sarcastic way; but in love, in gentleness, in purity, in sobriety, and by the force of truth and righteousness aided by his Spirit. The work of salvation must be conducted with sobriety and seriousness. The ministry should not condemn, nor force, but rather teach, build up and lead.

"For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved."—John 3:17.

"The goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance."—Rom. 2:4.

"Thy gentleness hath made me great."—Ps. 18:35.

Paul said to Titus; "In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works; in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech, that can not be condemned."—Titus 2:7, 8.

Jesus authorized his ministers to "Preach the gospel;" and Paul said to Timothy, "Preach the word; be instant in season, who are out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine."—2 Tim. 4:2.

Alma commanded the ministry "that they should teach nothing save it were the things which he had taught, and which had been spoken by the mouths of the holy prophets," and "that they should preach nothing save it were repentance and faith on the Lord, who had redeemed his people." Alma 9:9. In carrying out this mission intelligently and faithfully, they "did preach against all lyings, and deceivings, and envyings, and strifes, and malice, and revilings, and stealing, robbing, plundering, murdering, committing adultery, and all manner of lasciviousness, crying that these things ought not to be." Alma 11:8. Now, inasmuch as the devil is the author of all these evils, when the ministry preach against them, they "preach repentance," and they contend against "the church of the devil."

The Lord said to Hyrum Smith, May, 1829, "First seek to obtain my word, and then your tongue shall be loosed; then, if you desire, you shall have my Spirit and my word; yea the power of God unto the convincing of men." * * * "Study my word which hath gone forth among the children of men, [Bible], and also study my word which shall come forth among the children of men, or that which is now translating; [Book of Mormon]; yea, until you have obtained all which I shall grant unto the children of men in this generation, and then shall all things be added thereunto."—Doc. and Cov.

The Lord said to the Elders, December 27th, 1832: "Teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently, and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the Kingdom of God, that are expedient for you to understand; of things both in heaven and in the earth, and under the earth; things which have been, things which are, things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home, things which are abroad; the wars and perplexities of nations, and the judgments which are upon the land, and a knowledge also of countries and of kingdoms."—Doc. and Cov.

The Lord said, December 1st, 1831, to Joseph and Sidney: "Open your mouths in proclaiming my gospel, the things of the kingdom, expounding the mysteries thereof out of the scriptures, according to that portion of spirit and power which shall be given unto you, even as I will."—Doc. and Cov.

And to the general ministry it was commanded February 9th, 1831: "The Elders, Priests, and Teachers of this Church shall teach the principles of my gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fulness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings, as they shall be directed by the spirit; and the spirit shall be given unto you by the prayer of faith; and if ye receive not the spirit, ye shall not teach."—Doc. and Cov.

Now, in all these instructions there is not the least authority nor license for the ministry to preach directly against other churches or their ministers, yet there is a wide scope given for their studies and preaching; but they are restricted in their gospel teachings to the authorized "Scriptures."

Christ's ministers are called "fishers," and "hunters" and "shepherds." These terms imply carefulness, skill, wisdom, patience, perseverance, persuasion, gentleness, and the like. They are also called, "The Saviors of men." This implies love, and power. The ministry should think of these things, and act accordingly. I can not better conclude this article than by quoting the instruction given to the Elders by Joseph the Seer, at the dedication of the Temple, and the "endowment," at Kirtland, March 30th, 1836. He said: "I made the following remarks—that the time we were required to tarry in Kirtland to be endued, would be fulfilled in a few days, and then the Elders would go forth, and each must stand for himself, as it was not necessary for them to be sent two by two, as in former times, but to go in all meekness, in sobriety, and preach Jesus Christ and him crucified; not to contend with others on account of their faith, or systems of religion, but pursue a steady course. This I delivered by way of commandment; and all who observe it not, will pull down persecution upon their heads, while those who do, shall always be filled with the Holy Ghost; this I pronounced as a prophecy, and sealed with hosannah and Amen."—Mill. Star, vol. 15, page 727. I have no doubt much of the persecution which came upon the Elders, and the Church, in the times of the Seer, was because the ministry failed to heed these instructions; but would go beyond their duties, intermeddle where they had no right, and become "busybodies in other people's business." The Reorganized Church has seen too much of this in some of its ministers, and has suffered much because of it. It should be stopped by all who offend in this direction, and those presiding should prevent it.

Ike McCullough and his boys were digging on their farm near Weldon, Decatur county, Iowa, when they came upon some Indian relics in the shape of bones, teeth, earthen saucepans with handles, flint arrow heads, chunks of copper ore, &c. Ike thinks there must have been a great battle fought there among the red men years ago. He is going to excavate a little more and will perhaps unearth something of value.—Journal.

He who has not learned the lesson of resolute self-help has made little progress toward real manhood.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

AFTER the organization of the Board of Trustees of the town of Plano, last December, an application was made to the Board for a license to deliver beer, ale, porter, &c., by wagon, in the village. When the vote was taken on the motion to grant the license two voted for, two against; this tie forced the President of the Board to cast the decisive vote, which he did against the license. We feel especially good over this, as he was a member of the choir in our Plano Chapel, and is yet singing in that choir, loves the gospel, and has been a temperance advocate during our stay in that village. We commend him for the act of decision that saved the town from the beer wagon.

Bro. D. S. Crawley was, on March 7th, 1882, busily speaking every Sunday in the regions about Columbus and Weir City, Kansas. He expected to be busy while the health and strength permitted—time short—laborers few, sheaves lying ungathered. He has been favored by the Kansas City Journal, in the publication of several articles defensive and explanative of the faith. The Journal has treated us quite fairly.

Bro. Gurley preached at Philadelphia, Sunday 5th, and Bro. H. Robinson was expected for the 12th. So wrote Bro. W. H. Harrison.

Bro. Charles A. Hall is at Ottumwa, Iowa, and is anxious to see an Elder put in an appearance there.

Bro. M. O. Mathews writes from New Park, Pennsylvania, that Bro. J. O. Stewart had been there, excited considerable interest; and that some were likely to unite at his return to them.

Bro. Jobe Brown and Warren Turner, committee appointed to visit North Freedom, Wisconsin, report their labors closed. Report sent to Conference for final action. They report a better feeling apparent there; may the Lord grant it to continue.

Bro. R. J. Anthony was at Beaver, Utah, February 23d, and was meeting the fate of them that walk amid turbulent elements. The Utah Church is quite exasperated against the Reorganization, and of course give vent to their indignation, in such a way that Bro. Anthony feels it. We have expected that when the time came that the matter should come to adjustment the cause we hold would come in for wrath—but then we shall not be driven from our purpose because of that.

Bro. Albert Bishop wrote February 8th, from Hutchinson, Colorado, that the Saints were going to try to build a church house at Denver, the same that Bro. Caffall wrote of. Much agitation was being stirred up about the Utah affair; Bro. Bishop sent Denver paper containing minutes of a mass Anti-Polygamy meeting in the city.

Uncle William Smith is having the use of the Universalist Church at Elkader, Iowa, where he resides, in which he is and has been holding meetings, with a fair hearing. They, (somebody), fearing for the fate of creeds have sent for a Presbyterian minister to dispose of Mormonism, against Uncle William. But as the cause has seen a hundred such battles, and Uncle William is the survivor of many a one, we shall not be fearful till after the din of warfare is over.

Bro. E. L. Kelley writes from Washington, that Messrs. Hooper, Smith and Sharp, i. e., William Hooper, John Henry Smith and Bishop John Sharp, of Salt Lake City, were there and doing what they could to forestall the action of Congress against polygamy. Lobbying is one of the forces of legislation in this free land.

Bro. C. G. Lanphear wrote from Independence, Missouri, March 8th. He was well; had visited Sandwich and Kewanee, Illinois, and Lucas, Iowa. The prospects at Independence were fair for considerable building and other improvements this Spring.

Bro. C. G. Gould writes from Battle Lake that his wife had been wonderfully blessed in being healed by the laying on of hands quite recently.

Sr. Clara C. Smith, wife of Bro. David H. Smith, wrote from her home at Sioux Rapids, Beuna Vista county, Iowa, that things were moving along in that part. Measles were quite prevalent there and at Spencer, not far away. A narrow guage railroad had been laid across their farm, much to their annoyance, but for the country's good, as it is supposed.

Sr. Electa Stratton, in charge of the Temple at Kirtland, Ohio, gave a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, signed Gary, a full account of the faith and people lately, which appears in that journal for February 17th.

Bro. James Caffall succeeded in getting a two column defense into the Denver, Colorado, Republican, for February 20th, 1882.

The Philadelphia Enquirer has had the benefit of an interview with Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, on the question of his and Bro. Kelley's visit to Washington; and has published the result. It is a fair showing for us.

The Index, Boston, gives us a favorable notice in its issue of March 9th, 1882.

An Anti-polygamy meeting was held in Waverly Hall, Fall River, Massachusetts, February 17th, 1882, over which Bro. John Potts presided. The Evening News gives it a fair notice, saying that it was held under the auspices of the Reorganized Church.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt, in an article in the St. Joseph, Missouri, Democrat, for February 18th, 1882, completely riddles the late letter in the Spaulding Romance being the origin of the Book of Mormon, written by a Mr. Miller, so extensively published of late.

Bro. Whitehead, and his daughter Alice, would be much gratified if an Elder would call on them, three miles south of Mexico, a station on the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg R. R. Can not Bro. Hiram Robinson visit them?

Bro. W. H. Brown states that Bro. Z. H. Gurley had been at Hornerstown, N. J., and had made friends to the cause by his sermons.

Bro. James T. Reynolds of St. Thomas, Ontario writes that the branch is breaking up, the Saints are moving west, and intend making homes somewhere in that indefinable country—the west

Bro. Daniel Hough, of Port Carling, Ontario, is anxious for some one, an officer in the Church to visit him at home. He wants instruction. Will some of the London, or Kent and Elgin district take notice of this call.

Bro. I. N. White writes from Edenville, Iowa, that the efforts of Brn. Nirk, Goreham, and himself had been well received in Grundy county. The local paper contained a letter from a "Spectator," which gave our people great credit. Some alarm is entertained by some and Rev. H. McMeekin, of the Presbyterian order was to make an effort against the work. What the result will be remains for further development.

Bro. John H. Lee writes from Myrtle Creek, Oregon, February 6th. They had had no preaching for twenty months, since Bro. J. C. Clapp left there. Sr. Lee wishes the prayers of the Saints in her behalf for recovery of her health. Bro. Buell is too old to take the field, but the desire for labor is excellent.

The Sain'ts at Hyde Park, Pennsylvania, are anxious that Bro. Z. H. Gurley shall visit them. They will meet and defray the expense attending the visit. A card from Bro. John W. Morgan so states.

Bro. James N. Simmons wrote from Oil City, Ontario, February, 1882, that he was, with many others waiting the time and opportunity to enlighten the people. He visited one place where a M. E. minister was to speak, but the one expected did not come, and he was invited to speak, which he did. He and Sr. Simmons were feeling well in the Lord.

Letters from Sr. Lucy J. Richards, Ferris, Illinois; Sr. Harriet Hudspeth, Reno, Iowa; R. Warnock, Salt Lake, Utah; D. S. Crawley, Cherokee, Kansas; T. W. Smith, Chicago; James Caffall, Denver, Colorado; Bro. Frederick Ursenbach, Paris, France; and several others are left over for want of room.

Bro. James Caffall succeeded in getting in a most excellent article in a Denver daily, which was copied into the Council Bluffs Globe.

Should an Elder visit Oneida county, Idaho, call on Sr. Martha A. Miller, at Iowa Bar.

Bro. W. W. Blair returned to Lamoni, Monday, the 13th of March, and has been doing missionary work there and at Davis City, lecturing at both places on Utah and her affairs; and at Lamoni on temperance, besides.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith informs us by card, dated March 18th, that he and family were en route for Independence, Missouri, where his address will be until further advices. He is to make Independence his home for the future.

Bro. A. J. Cato was to start from Whistler, Alabama, for Bryan, Texas, March 21st, if prospered, to assist Bro. Heman C. Smith in the missionary work there. He goes at the express request of Bro. Smith. The Presidency consented to the request, and sent Bro. Cato letters to that effect.

A sister writes from Salt River Valley, Idaho, that she was a member of the Church in the Martyr's day, and now with some eleven or twelve others wishes to unite with the Reorganization.

Bro. Albert Bishop wrote from Hutchinson, Colorado, that Bro. James Caffall was doing all he could to move the work forward in that wild country. Bro. Bishop says that "Bro. Caffall is a good worker, and helps to push things ahead."

Bro. J. T. Kinnaman and W. T. Bozarth, of the Far West, Missouri, district, put in an appearance at the Herald Office, March 20th, on their way home from Redding, Iowa, at which place they had been assisting Bro. Eli M. Wildermuth, who has been preaching there this winter. Eight were baptized there on Sunday the 19th, as the result of the effort of Bro. Wildermuth and other brethren.

Elder T. B. H. Stenhouse, the author of Rocky Mountain Saints, a book of eight hundred pages, written against Mormonism, after the author had been driven to apostacy by the acts of Pres. Brigham Young and other leading officers of the Utah Church against him, died about March 6th, in San Francisco, California, after a few days illness. His wife wrote an Expose of Utah Mormonism, and we think a later work called "Tell it all." Elder Stenhouse was esteemed as a scholar, had an eventful career as a Mormon missionary; was at one time a polygamist; an ardent admirer of Brigham Young and Heber C. Kimball; attained to high honors and place among the Utah people, apostatized, wrote a book, and died a correspondent of the New York Herald, which paper held him to be an able journalist and a scholar. We saw him in 1876 in San Francisco, in company with his wife; of the two, we thought his wife the better and most sincere. Let him rest.

Brn. S. Mayo and F. C. Warnky are in the Real Estate business at Independence, Missouri. Any of the Herald readers wanting to buy lands in Jackson county, will likely do well to correspond with them.

Bro. T. T. Hinderks of Stewartsville, informs us that it is Bro. Henry Hinderks who has the care and sale of the German Tract, "Eine Taufe," at Stewartsville, and not Temme Hinderks. We beg pardon for our error.

Bro. D. K. Dodson, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, took the letter of Bro. James Caffall, published in the Denver paper, to the Globe newspaper, and they published it, so that Bro. Caffall's friends and the Saints in that city had the reading of it. It was a good, straight forward letter, full of good thoughts; and we were glad that the Globe gave it an insertion.

I have been holding some meetings about eight miles from here; quite an interest is manifested, which I think will result in the baptism of some before long. Speak there every two weeks. M. B. Williams, Middletown, Ohio.

The committee appointed by the Independence District, to ascertain the facilities of the branch to care for visitors to Conference at Independence, have reported. The notice contemplates two classes of visitors, those who are delegates and proper representatives of the Church and those attending as visitors only. The committee certainly mean well, and the Saints of Independence, according to their ability, will do all they can to take care of the brethren who come to Conference; but it is manifestly unjust to expect a handful of poor brethren, toiling for bread that perishes, to feed and lodge an innumerable number of whose coming they have no foreknowledge, or notification. It is therefore quite requisite that those who go to the Conference see that "the way is prepared before them." Nor is it the intention of the committee to offend any, nor should any offense be taken; but the custom has grown up from the small beginning of a few assembling in the early days, for everybody that had leisure and means to get there, to attend Conference, to be housed and fed by local brethren. The good fellowship exhibited by both visitors and hosts, was fair and pleasant to see; but the discomfort of some of the hosts came afterward, when settling the debts that an increased household made necessary. Many visitors always take their welcome with them and remunerate those with whom they stay, for the expense incurred; but Elders, on foot and without purse or script can not do this; nor can many who may be chosen as delegates do this; but all who can ought to do so.

As the matter now stands, all officers who attend the Conference are members of it; and have equal claim on the Saints for hospitalities.

The Citizen Soldier, of Washington, D. C., for February 11th, 1882, has the following:

We believe that Brigham Young originated polygamy, and that the present Joseph Smith tells the truth in the controversy which existed between him and the late Brigham Young as to the origin of the barbarism. Joseph Smith, son of the founder of Mormonism, says that Young originated it in doctrine and practice.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Sophus Holsteen, of Burlington, Iowa, writes:

I mail to you this morning a Burlington Hawkeye, on the third page of which I have marked an article, "The Messiah of Israel," to which I wish to draw your attention. Who is there that wants to and does not see the signs of the times.

In the same paper sent by Bro. Holsteen, is the notice of the retirement from the postal service in the Burlington office, of Bro. W. D. Morton, sen., who has filled a thirty years' term at the sorting of letters and delivery of them to the citizens of Burlington. He is highly spoken of for his unquestioned honesty; and the good will of the patrons of the office is bespoken for him in business within the post office; news, stationery, stamps, &c. Bro. Morton is one of the Nauvoo Saints, and who never bowed to the Baal of Pres. Young's authority.

Bro. James N. Simmons, Oil City, Ontario, February 27th, 1882, writes:

I would like to know the reason that the Church is not incorporated in Ontario. The question is often asked me, and I am unable to answer.

The only reason that we can assign is that no congregation of the Saints in Ontario, have seen fit to procure a copy of the Articles of Incorporation and file them in the proper court for record. This can be done at any time that it is deemed necessary for the safety or well being of any congregation, or branch.

Bro. T. T. Hinderks wrote, February 28th, 1882:

Our German flock is still increasing. We are enjoying the blessings promised to the faithful. I labored a while in Iowa among the Germans with good success, have baptized four; left the work in good condition; had many calls to come back. The German Saints have erected a meeting house in this place. If I think back to the time when our branch was organized with six members, and the Lord spoke by his Spirit that if we lived faithful he would bless us and add to our number; thank the Lord we were permitted to see the promise fulfilled. To-day we number forty-five, and some are on the way coming to this place. We also have 2,000 tracts printed in the German language; the tract was translated by Bro. F. W. A. Riedel; it is "The One Baptism; Its mode, subjects, pre-requisites and designs; Who shall Administer? We offer these tracts for sale to all the German Saints, and desire that they will distribute them to their German friends, in order that they may receive a knowledge of the doctrine of the Church. The title of the German tract is, "Ein Herr, Ein Glaube, Eine Taufe, (Ephesians 4:5.)

Die, eine Taufe, die art—wie und die Personen, denen sie ertheilt werden soll; ihre vorbedingungen und ihr zweck, so wie eine Ceant wortung Derfrage: wer sie verwalten oder er, theilen soll, aus dem Englischen, übersetzt.

Her aus gegeben von dem deutschen Zweig der Reorganisirten Kirge Jesu Christi der heiligen der litzen tage bei Stewartville, De Kalb Co., Mo., 1881.

These tracts are for sale, 10 cents each, or three for 25 cents. All those wanting tracts must send their orders to Henry Hinderks, Stewartville, DeKalb county, Missouri.

Bro. F. C. Warnky, Independence, Mo., says:

We are all well; meetings very good, both here in the branch, and out where I preach at different places. Business is quite good, and nearly all the Saints are doing well and trying to do right.

Bro. D. Nichols, Malone, Franklin county, New York, writes as follows:

If there are any Elders sent this way we would like to have them call here. This is quite a large village, containing seven churches. I think there could be a good work done here. We are three families of Latter Day Saints, and would gladly welcome an Elder or more.

Mr. J. C. Wilson writes from Paige, Texas, March 9th:

I attended a discussion last November, between Heman C. Smith and I. A. Lincoln; subject found in Mark 16:16, 17, which I with many others, think resulted in an overwhelming victory for H. C. Smith; who while with us conducted himself in such a manner that his enemies can not say aught against him.

Sr. Emily Wells, Elvaston, Illinois, wrote, February 17th, 1882:

We have not heard an Elder since last Fall. Bro. Richard Lambert preached at Bro. Mark Phelps', and we had only one prayer meeting. We are hoping that the time will speedily come that the work will prosper here, and throughout the vineyard.

Bro. Elisha McEvers, writes, February 20th:

I have been preaching this Winter in the vicinity where I live, and by the help of God I shall continue to labor for the cause of Christ as my circumstances will admit.

News Summary.

Mar. 8th.—Wesley Cobb, his wife, and seven children, living at Thomaston, Ga., were poisoned by eating biscuit mixed with cotton-seed oil.

By the will of Miss Sarah Burr, of New York, nearly, $3,000,000 will be distributed among the benevolent and religious societies of that city.

The Austrian troops in Dalmatia have an epidemic of small-pox more fatal than fighting.

The City of Mexico has been visited by a storm which demolished a market and killed several people.

About a thousand strikers paraded the streets of Omaha, Neb., March 8th, with banners and music, and then proceeded to the B. & M. track, where seventy-five imported laborers were grading, under strong guard of special police. A rush was made and the laborers and police driven from the grounds. A good deal of clubbing was done, but no one was seriously injured.

Tidings of disaster caused by the flood on the Lower Mississippi grow gloomier as the days go by. Towns have been swept away, plantations destroyed, and whole counties in Arkansas and Mississippi laid under water. The destruction of life and property has been great, and it is feared that the horrors of famine will be added to the list before help can reach the unfortunate people.

A fire broke out in the Methodist Church, at Prince Frederick, Md., and nearly the whole town was burned; two shanties and the jail are the only buildings left standing; loss $60,000.

Four men were blown to atoms by an explosion in the powder mills near Marquette, Mich.

10th.—The steamer Apollo was sunk off Ushant by a collision. Six persons were drowned.

Thirty Jews, possessing an aggregate capital of $5,000 rubles, have just left Kieff for Palestine, to engage in farming.

13th.—The militia and the strikers at Omaha came to blows yesterday, and two of the strikers were bayoneted. Two more of the chief rioters have been arrested, and the authorities seem to have the upper hand.

14th.—A correspondent at Killarney says he believes matters are rapidly mending in Ireland. Numbers of tenants are coming forward to claim the advantages of the Land act.

Six persons were killed by an explosion of fire-damp in the coal mines at Belwez, Spain.

Advices from Port Au Prince, Hayti, state that the entire country is in mourning in consequence of the terrible ravages caused by the small-pox epidemic, which is still sweeping over the land. Large numbers are dying daily, mortality for the last four weeks averaging 300 per week.

The St. Louis Distilling Company's building was destroyed by fire. One thousand barrels of whisky were consumed. Loss on building $25,000, and on stock about $100,000.

The Highland House and Sea View House Biddeford, Me., were burned this morning. Loss, $90,000.

15th.—Montenegro has mobilized her army, and the danger of war is considered imminent. A suggestion is made that a European Congress shall be called by England to consider the situation.

The shaft of the Lumley Colliery, Durham, Eng., has fallen in and 150 miners are imprisoned. They were afterwards rescued by another shaft.

16th.—A young man named Williams was overtaken by a blizzard and frozen to death near Grafton, Minn. He started from his claim with a yoke of cattle, and had wandered about thirty miles before death came.

Fourteen horses were burned to death in a barn at a lumber camp in Roscommon county, Mich.

Two stables burned at Fort Leavenworth, with thirty horses, most of them belonging to the Seventh Cavalry; seventy of the one hundred horses that the stables contained were taken out.

18th.—The Secretary of War estimates that about 85,000 persons have been rendered destitute by the overflow of the Mississippi and its tributaries. Of these 30,000 are accredited to the State of Mississippi, 20,000 to Arkansas, and 25,000 to Louisiana. It is believed that the necessity for relief will continue from thirty to sixty days.

Fifteen hundred letters have been destroyed by fire at Madison, Wis., many of them known to contain drafts and money-orders.

20th.—The report of a snow-slide at Genoa, Nevada, is confirmed. Mr. and Mrs. Nimrod Bowen and Miss Borlin and a number of Indians, variously stated at from seven to fifteen, were killed. All the bodies have not yet been recovered.

Late dispatches from Dutch Flat, Summit, Truckee, and other points along the railroad, state that a heavy snow-storm is prevailing and the blockade continues. It is the heaviest snow fall on the headwaters of the mountain tributaries of the Sacramento river for ten years. The lateness of the season makes warm rains and a rapid snow-melt and damaging floods in the Sacramento Valley almost inevitable. The road is impassable between Carson City and Reno from snow drafts. Neither stages nor teams can reach there.

About 600 men are working west of Blue Canon trying to keep the road open. The storm raged furiously last night, the snow drifting badly. A snow-plow is stuck west of Blue Canon, and another blockade seems imminent.

21st.—It is estimated that the overflow of the Mississippi and its tributaries has inundated six thousand square miles of land.

By a snow slide in Lake Canyon, Cal., four miners were buried under forty feet of snow. Over forty slides occurred in Lake and Mill Creek Canons between Wednesday and Saturday, burying in all thirty-eight persons.

Correspondence.

363 Stella Avenue, PHILADELPHIA,
March 14th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Yours of 7th inst., at hand. I send you one copy of "Argument," would like five hundred copies sent to Washington at once—we need them to put with polygamy revelation; shall send to various newspapers and individuals, especially in the south. Your effort in Chicago was appreciated and strengthened us as it placed you on the record with us and against the "twin relic." It was providential for you, and opportune for the Church. The issue has in no case at Washington reverted direct to what your father or uncle may have done, except with editors, lawyers, &c. As a rejoinder in all such cases I have shown the testimony of those Elders who stoutly denied the practice and the acts which decried the doctrine as pernicious upon both continents, together with statement of Joseph and Hyrum, and I have in no case undertaken to say positively what was or was not done—but the evidence cited has satisfied all that, whatever weaknesses those men might have been guilty of, yet the doctrine was not declared by them as true, hence not responsible; but that Brigham Young et al were, as they inflicted it upon the body deliberately.

Returned from Hornerstown Saturday—had splendid time there; splendid interest manifest, good feeling prevails, branch in fair condition. Bro. Hopkins took me to Long Branch, Elberan, &c.; the scene is grand—lots of "glitter." Had fair liberty in speaking there and here Sunday last. Blessed also in administering to the sick. General outlook good. Our work at Washington is killing the prejudice of the sects, (bad isn't it?) Kelley is well. I am asked to "bring Joseph and come again;" consider it. I shall try and be at Conference. Think the Brighamites will be driven from last ditch. I go to Washington this week to work. News from the Edmunds Bill of hot time; think it will pass. Have interview this morning with Charles B. Thompson, the "Shiloh;"—(old Mormon).

ZENAS H. GURLEY.

P. S.—Just had quite a talk with Thompson; these "old timers" are great thinkers—some good ideas, some seem not so good.

BOZEMAN, February 14th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—I have sent you the Bozeman Avant Courier, for February 9th. It contains an article that I wish you to read, concerning the Josephites as a people. It is from the pen of the very editor that treated E. C. Brand so indifferently when he was out here two years ago. It appears he has got a better opinion of this people now than he used to have. He speaks well of our people. It is the result of their living in unity and love, and attending to their own business, allowing others to attend to theirs as best they can. I have been to see them only once, their place being fifteen miles from here.

We had a two days' meeting; but such a meeting, or meetings! I wished that all could have been there, to see and hear for themselves. Every heart was melted; the Spirit was there in power. The Saints present missed one of their number, he being sick. They all prayed for him. The next morning—Sunday—he was there with them. He spoke and told them he was better; that he got better about three o'clock the previous day. We all knew it was the time it was said through the Spirit that the prayers of the Saints in his behalf were heard. Bro. Brand was there, and I with him; and I can testify to what I saw and heard. I do not know if this event has been mentioned before. Last night it entered my mind to write to you; and to-day fulfill a promise made to you many years ago, when you asked me to write to you, (when parting at Florence, Nebraska). Now I have as good a reason for writing to you as I ever have had, or perhaps ever will have. I could write many things—a long letter—but let this suffice for the present. I may write again.

From a friend to the cause,

MARTIN LUDWALL.

A WONDERFUL CHANGE.

Bro. Joseph:—We take it back, and make the "amende honorable." The Chicago Tribune has concluded to do us justice. The Chicago News likewise. The Tribune gave your speech in Farwell Hall fuller and more correctly than any other city paper. The Herald was very correct but not so full. The News had a brief, but quite correct as far as it went. The Inter Ocean made a bungle of it, and the Times did not do much better. The Tribune copied an article of mine in full from the New York Herald, and has since spoken a good word for us. And as I denounced it and the News for their illiberality which was the simple truth at the time, I wish to say as publicly that since the meeting in Farwell Hall, these papers have been very fair toward us, and we rejoice in the fact, and praise them for it. Your visit and speech in Farwell Hall, have done the cause an immense amount of good. As has Bro. Gurley and Kelley in their work at Washington. If any of the brethren want to read the fullest and most correct report of your speech, let them send for a copy or more of the Chicago Tribune of February 23d, and if they are out of them, the next best report will be the Herald of same date. Please insert this as early as possible.

T. W. SMITH.

SHELBY, Shelby Co., Iowa,
March 5th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—It has been a long time since I last took up the pen to write you a line; so long, indeed, has it been, that inquiries are being made as to whether I am dead, or whether I only sleep. In this age of progress all is hurry and bustle, and a man may lie down and quietly sleep (i. e. remain idle) yes, and even die, and he will scarcely be missed, save by a few of his most intimate friends. His place will soon be filled by another, and a few brief years will suffice to obliterate the memory of the man who was known among his fellows for his zeal and activity in a cause which he esteemed to be of paramount importance to his fellow men. Comparatively few men in this world of thought and progress, are so fortunate (if it may be considered fortunate), as to perpetuate their names beyond the generation in which they live. To perpetuate one's name, then, should never form an incentive to action. Why waste time to secure an end so difficult to reach, and when reached is of no earthly benefit to any one? Rather let the divine light shine out in every act of life; let the works of a well spent life be such as to be felt by generations to come. Then when the goal shall have been reached, the name, though forgotten here, will be written in the Lamb's Book of Life. Men should labor only with the view to make the world better for their having lived in it. Work to do good. Work to improve the character of those around you; and be careful to perform not an act, or speak not a word that will in any way tend to injure your neighbor. A word maliciously or thoughtlessly spoken may work an injury that it will take years to efface. Let us be careful.

The world needs to be reformed; it needs to be moralized, spiritualized, and saved from the blighting effects of sin; and this can be accomplished only by work, persistent, earnest, honest work. Who, then, can afford to sleep while so much remains to be done? All men have their trials and difficulties, and I have not been without mine. These, doubtless, have retarded my progress, but they have not entirely obstructed my pathway. Now and then an additional ray of light illuminates the way, and I am encouraged to press forward, though careworn and fatigued. I hope the light may be sufficient to enable me to keep my feet in narrow gospel way. I love the gospel of Christ; I know of nothing so good, so pure, so ennobling, so elevating, so superlatively divine, as the gospel of the son of God. It is a divine eclecticism, and includes everything, either in morals or religion, necessary for the development, progress and salvation of a fallen world.

It is not sufficient for its condemnation that it does not treat of physical sciences. Jesus, its author, did not proclaim himself a scientist. He came as a moral and spiritual teacher. He well knew that, without the elements of morality and spirituality, the sciences could benefit the world but little; but aided by these moral elements, the sciences might work miracles. We esteem science and the true christian religion as being in perfect harmony with each other. The physical universe proclaims the existence of a supreme Architect, the "Creator of heaven and of earth." The gospel declares the same thing. If both are from God they must agree, and may be considered as "prime factors" in the great problem of a world's salvation.

D. H. BAYS.

IONIA, Ill., February 23d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Our debate closed last night; and I am still alive and sound in the faith. I know the Lord was with me, and am quite sure that the cause has not suffered. Some outside of either church claim a complete victory for us. Mr. Adair is a good debater, and a perfect gentleman in a discussion. We parted after the debate with a better feeling towards each other than when we commenced. He is a resident of Leon, Decatur county, Iowa; he tells me that he contemplates stopping off the train some time when passing through Lamoni, and calling on you in your new quarters. There are four candidates now offered for baptism, which will be attended to soon. Our conference will convene March 4th and 5th, at Kewanee.

Bro. Clark of Preemption, Mercer county, is arranging for a discussion between myself and a Presbyterian minister. Do not know how it will be. I shall go again into Rock Island county, holding meetings, for a while after conference.

Love to all Saints,

H. C. BRONSON.

February 19th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—It is with much pleasure I take my pen in hand to inform you how we are getting along in Provo. Considering the circumstances under which we are laboring, we are doing tolerably well; but taking into consideration that we are supposed to be among those who claim to be Saints of the latter days, I am bound to conclude we are doing very badly. That is in converting people to the truth of the latter day work, for they profess to know more principles than was ever in the gospel. But some few begin to see they are in the dark and have lost the spirit, and are willing to retrace their steps and seek their first love over again; but those that love darkness rather than light, will need something more than the gospel to make them do right, but it is only necessary to gather the wheat from the tares and leave the tares to their fate.

I remain your brother in the gospel,

JAMES GOFF.

MILTON, Santa Rosa Co., Florida,

February 20th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—About six weeks ago I commenced preaching in this district. I must confess that I have been greatly disappointed. Spiritual apathy, lack of interest, and in some cases open transgression, are painfully apparent in the district. We have been trying in every way known to us to save the work from general ruin; but how well we shall succeed, God only knows. The Saints, as a rule, evidently mean well; but their wisdom is greatly at fault when they allow themselves to be so grossly imposed upon by the enemy of souls. I have labored and preached at Molino, Millview and vicinity, most of the time since coming into the district. At Millview, four have been baptized, (Bro. Faulk officiating), and the Millview Branch organized, consisting of nine members, Bro. James S. Faulk (Priest) chosen to preside, and Bro. George W. Boon ordained to the office of Teacher. A number of others are believing, in this place, and we hope they will obey before long. I spent two days in the Perseverance Branch, Alabama, and spoke three times. Very few came out. Conference was held in this county, on the 4th and 5th inst., when we had a pleasant and, we trust the future will show, profitable time. Bro. F. P. Scarcliff was chosen to preside over the district, Bro. West being released by his request. This seemed to be the best we could do at the time, and we hope good will come out of it. Preached my first sermon in this place yesterday; am to continue through the week, if the people will come out and hear. Warm weather may drive me out of this field; I hope not. I shall try to do what I can.

Yours in gospel bonds,
JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

MANDEVILLE, Mo., Dec. 6th, 1881.

MR. JOSEPH SMITH,

Dear Sir:—I herewith send you a brief communication, for the Herald, and, though it is pretty radical, you should not take any offense, as you are not called in question. I wish you to publish my proposed test and make any comments thereon you feel disposed to make. But if you do not publish it, please forward to the Salt Lake Tribune.

Respectfully,

J. L. TRAUGHBER, Jr.

A PROPOSED TEST.

Editor Herald:—In your issue for November 1st, 1881, I find an article headed "SKEPTICISM," and signed "CREDULOUS," in which the writer refers to what he is pleased to call a test of the validity of the revelations contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, which reads something like this:

"Now seek ye out of the Book of Commandments, even the least that is among them, and appoint him that is most wise among you, or if there be any among you that shall make one like unto it, then ye are justified in saying that you do not know that they are true; but if you can not make one like unto it, you are under condemnation if you do not bear record that they are true."—D. & C. 67:2.

Our "credulous" friend considers this a "fair test," and goes so far as to say that an impostor would not give such a test, no matter whether this test was inspired or not. I shall not try to counterfeit the "Lord's" language, as I was not one of those to whom the above language was addressed, and who had no more moral stamina than to allow the "Lord" to thus browbeat them into silence; but wish to propose a counter-test to our credulous friend, or any others, who may feel disposed to avail themselves of this opportunity to defend the word of the "Lord" of Latter Day Saintism against the assaults of "apostates" and skeptics in general. Here, brethren and sisters of the Kingdom, is a sentence from one of the revelations, which you profess to believe:

"And all those who come not unto this priesthood, which you have received, which I now confirm upon you who are present, this day, by mine own voice out of the heavens, and even I have given the heavenly hosts and mine angels charge concerning you."—D. & C. 83:6.

My test is this: If there can be found, in all the Latter Day Church, of any faction, a man of good common sense, no manner how illiterate he may be, who can not dictate a sentence of equal length, with more sense in it than is to be found in the last sentence (?) of the 6th paragraph of the 83d section of the Doctrine and Covenants, then Latter Day Saints may, in some sense, perhaps, be justified in pretending to believe that the Doctrine and Covenants is a true book, and that its 83d section was a revelation of Jesus Christ to Joseph Smith, Jr., and six elders.

I think my test is at least fair, and much more liberal than the "Lord's" test. And, right here, I ask every Latter Day Saint, who has any knowledge of English grammar, to read the sentence I have quoted, from the Doctrine and Covenants, and try to parse it, or get any sense out of it. Let me frankly admit, Mr. Editor, that I am by no means credulous enough to believe in and worship a "Lord" whose memory is so poor that he can't finish a sentence after he has commenced it.

J. L. TRAUGHBER, JR.,

MANDEVILLE, Mo., December 5th, 1881.

ANSWER TO PROPOSED TEST.

In examination of the matter proposed, the writer suggests the following method:

Therefore as I said concerning the sons of Moses and also the sons of Aaron shall offer an acceptable offering and sacrifice in the house of the Lord which house shall be built unto the Lord in this generation upon the consecrated spot as I have appointed and the sons of Moses and of Aaron shall be filled with the glory of the Lord upon mount Zion in the Lords house whose sons are ye and also many whom I have called and sent forth to build up my church for whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken and the magnifying their calling are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies they become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham and the church and kingdom and the elect of God and also all they who receive this priesthood receiveth me saith the Lord for he that receiveth my servants receiveth me and he that receiveth me receiveth my Father and he that receiveth my Father receiveth my Fathers kingdom therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him and this is according to the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood therefore all those who receive the priesthood receive this oath and covenant of my Father which he can not break neither can it be removed but whoso breaketh this covenant after he hath received it and altogether turneth therefrom shall not have forgiveness of sins in this world nor in the world to come and all those who come not unto this priesthood which ye have received which I now confirm upon you who are present this day by mine own voice out of the heavens and even I have given the heavenly hosts and mine angels charge concerning you.

A similar sentence to 22, paragraph 9, closing sentence, the relation of the different parts of which have evidently been disturbed, or destroyed, by misapplication of the punctuation marks.

If Mr. Traughber will permit a person reasonably skillful in disarranging what another may write, to punctuate his letter, and compel the parsing of the sentences thus disarranged according to the science (so-called) of the English grammar, as understood by the usual student, and he will be obliged to admit that he has written some parts without meaning. To illustrate this, read Luke 2:4, 5, King James' version where the placing of a comma makes had rendition of what is a plain statement of itself.

Richard Grant White, one of the ablest of English scholars, is credited with saying that there is no such thing as a Grammar of the English language. Nor can there be in the nature of things. It is made up of all languages, is being constantly added to, taken from and revised. The language, or ideas of the section being examined constitute the revelation, but the marks of division, the mechanical construction of the printed page, are the work of the compiler, the type setter, the proof-reader; and the original meaning may, or may not have been kept by them; or it may have been obscured or lost.

The writer is not aware that Latter Day Saints claimed infallibility for the Book of Covenants; or that they claimed to believe the book to be free from all errors, real or constructive; or that every letter, word, sentence, verse, paragraph, section, title, preface, and finis, were the work of inspiration. Any one who should make this claim will need to answer Mr. Traughber.

Mr. Traughber in his haste to throw distrust and discredit upon the Doctrine and Covenants, as a whole, assumes that those to whom this "test" was given were without the "moral stamina" which he himself possesses. It would appear from the history of those men that they had plenty of "moral stamina" for their day and time, and one of them, present at the time the revelation and the test were said to have been given, was an excellent scholar, according to the day, and is yet for that matter. He and some others had the "moral stamina" to oppose Joseph and Hyrum, while these and many hundreds since had the "moral stamina" to bear the great burden of shame that co-religionists laid upon them, and some even died for their profession of faith. The writer has never learned that those to whom this test was offered ever attempted to repudiate it by writing a revelation like to any given one named. The bit of bravado which Mr. Traughber indulges in overleaps itself; the sentence is finished in the book, and may have conveyed the meaning intended to those to whom it came; but may have been spoiled for critics and skeptics, by the friends of the book as a whole.

It is a wonder to the writer that men like Mr. Traughber do not decry the wisdom of God, and the whole creation, because they discover crooked, distorted and broken things, out of harmony even to human discernment.

In conclusion the writer suggests that each reader punctuate the section quoted as it may sound best to him or her.

BELIEVER.

204 Pleasant St., FALL RIVER, Mass.,

February 20th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—We are all alive in this place as you see by the papers which I have sent to you, and we are hoping through the blessing of our God to reap this field. Some have obeyed this year and some others are about to obey; there were two who manifested to the Church yesterday that they desired to serve God and covenant with him by baptism that they would serve him. There may be more to be baptized when these go. Last Friday we had an Anti-Polygamy meeting, as you will see by enclosed circular, and I issued twenty-five special invitations to the clergy of the city; but only two were gentlemanly enough to notice them and they could not be present, so we had no speakers but Latter Day Saints. This did not discourage us for we did our duty, and our Father unto whom we look for our reward gave us good liberty, and yesterday we had a great outpouring of the Spirit of God which made our hearts to rejoice. Our spiritual condition is now quite good and we hope it may soon be much better, for the brethren whose duty it is to visit from house to house are doing that duty well, and I know that when this is done as the law directs that there is no branch of the Church but what will prosper. Some seem to look to the presiding elder to bring all things to pass; but I think that the Priest, Teacher and Deacon are just as much needed as he is. I do not care how good a man, or preacher he may be, if these others do not do their duty, his labor will not amount to much; and this I believe is the only reason why so many branches do not prosper. And now Bro. Joseph, could you not write up this particular subject with that same plainness that you did that rum subject at Lamoni. It is what the Church needs.

Praying that this may soon come to pass, I remain your brother,

JOHN POTTS.

SANDWICH, Ills., March 6th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—The Saints will be pleased to know that when I left Salt Lake City, January 16th, the general mission was in a prosperous condition; also, that our Chapel was completed, furnished, and dedicated. They will likewise be glad to know that it is nearly paid for.

Since reaching home I have been looking up my business affairs and attending upon my ministry as occasion offered. I was called by telegram, February 21st, to visit Sr. Ella, daughter of Bro. and Sr. George A. Blakeslee, who was lying ill; but when, at 1 p. m. the 22d, I reached Galien, I found she died at 11 that morning. It was a sorrowful time with many, as Sr. Ella was extensively and most favorably known in all that part of Michigan, also in parts of Illinois and Indiana. The Monday before I left, I had the pleasure of baptizing three persons, and of having the testimony of God's Spirit that he approved our work. Others are near the kingdom at Galien.

Bro. C. Scott came in Monday the 27th, ult; and the next day we rode together to Michigan City; he to go to Southern Indiana, and I to Sandwich. Bro. Scott is all alive in the work.

W. W. BLAIR.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,

March 15th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Yesterday the House of Representatives, after a skirmish and clatter of several hours, passed without amendment the "Edmunds Bill" for prohibiting bigamy and polygamy in the Territories of the United States. Thus after two months of anxiety and labor, the friends of morality and law and order are rewarded with seeing brought about one step toward the abolition of the vile monster, Polygamy, which has so infamously insinuated its loathsome form into the homes of many honest people; and which, with brazen mien, even strove to exalt itself to a chief seat in the Temple of God; and, Satanic like, impiously claim that it (the monster) was the religion of Jesus of Nazareth.

The loathsome relic has failed in its unholy effort to despoil and deface the religion of the Messiah, as taught by Nephi, Mosiah, Alma, Mormon and Joseph Smith, by thrusting its form upon the world through the mediation of men who once preached the same gospel, and of making the show that it, (the monster) was genuine Mormonism. This vile creature, which wormed itself into the Brighamite schism of the Church; and which then sought to fasten itself securely through the abominable role of "tradition mongering," to trace its mark into the ranks of the original church, and thus bear to the people the appearance of a decent conception, again sought to hide its deformity by declining controversy and making the old cry of all false religions of, "Let us alone; we are satisfied with our religion, and it is unchristian to trouble us." But thanks to the Giver of all Good, it has received a deadly wound, and must go the way of the transgressor.

The fight toward the last seemed to take the shape of a political contest, after all the professions of good faith on the part of the Democrats; and whether justly or not they would have had to shoulder the load of polygamy as a party, had it not been for the timely work of Bayard and Garland in the Senate. To me there is one of two things quite evident, and that is that in the House there are either no real managers worthy the name on the democratic side, but a good many soft ones who imagine themselves leaders, or else they really had a desire to help out polygamy. A few of them toward the last made open opposition, on the ground that the bill would defeat Cannon. This you will see from reading the "Record" which I forward you.

As to the part the Reorganized Church took in this legislation, it needs no encomium from either friend or foe, but stands for itself. It has kept a committee here on the ground for the past two months, urging the importance of the legislation upon Congress as a body, and with such of the members individually as the committee could meet in an honorable and christian-like way; and now none need be so ignorant as not to know that polygamy is as foreign to Mormonism proper, or the faith of the Latter Day Saints, as it is to the blessed shores of eternity. Time will tell how honorable, these Honorable gentlemen shall prove in the future, by making that true distinction between the Latter Day Saints in fact, and the apostate polygamists who hold falsely to that name.

One thing I noticed, in all of the debates by members, that they manly recognized the fact that it was the "Utah," and "Polygamous" Mormons that they struck at. This is all we ask. Give the facts, and the Reorganized Church will soon prove to the world that it is not a whit behind the first of the land in the inculcation of morality, sound doctrine, and decency. And if it does not bring forth this good and noble fruit, it ought not to have an honorable place.

Bro. Gurley arrived from the Philadelphia field this morning in good spirits, and from the report in the newspapers of that city, not without having done much good for the Church. May the good leaven continue to work. To-morrow we shall both go to Philadelphia, and hereafter please direct all communications to 362 Stella Avenue that city.

The work of amending the laws to some extent in the territories so as to further stamp out Polygamy must yet be done, but we do not feel to remain here longer at the present time. Ever wishing for justice to return and install truth in its own forum,

I am in bonds yours,
E. L. KELLEY.

WELLMANVILLE, Ness Co., Kansas,
January 25th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—It is with a heart full of thankfulness I write to you. I came to western Kansas very near three years ago, from Alton, Illinois, during which time I have not seen a Saint in Kansas. But to my great surprise, a few weeks ago I found a family who were baptized in Switzerland, some twenty years ago. They were taught that Brigham Young was your guardian. Just previous to their coming to this country, the Elders began to teach the Saints they must not believe all that was written in the Bible. It caused a great deal of trouble, and about twenty withdrew from the Church, they included. Since which time they have not heard anything of the Church until I met with them. There is the old gentleman, his wife, two sons, and one daughter. The oldest son has a wife, and six children. He seems somewhat indifferent to the cause on account of the trouble above mentioned; notwithstanding previous to his being baptized he was compelled to use crutches. His wife, not in the Church, manifests a great desire to hear the gospel preached. The daughter has a husband and two children. I have not spoken with her; but her father and mother seem to have no fear concerning her. The youngest son, rather proud, but he said he would come and hear. Their prayers have been that God would send some one into their midst, that they could have the gospel preached to them, and they seem very anxious.

There are my wife and three children making a total of nineteen souls out on these plains, without a shepherd. Bro. Joseph, I am a member of the Alton Branch; was ordained to the office of a Deacon under the hands of Brn. James Whitehead and Samuel Perks. I speak German and English, but am more competent in the English, though a German by birth. I came to this country when seven years old, am now thirty-one. The nearest branch to us is ninety miles north-east from here. I live on section 4, town 20, range 21, west.

ERNEST H. EBERT.

MALAD CITY, Idaho,

February 14th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—The excitement here caused by the presence of Brethren Gurley and Kelley, at Washington, is perceptible, and, of course, they consider that they are rank enemies because they are there to show up Mormonism as it should be, as it was; and I hope as it shall be. The few Josephites in this place have woe hanging over their heads, and "when we come to our power," they say, "you will suffer." This was told me by our own Bishop. Of course, the Josephites will suffer in all things. Were this person the only one in Malad to represent the people of Malad, certainly it would look very serious; but since he don't represent anybody in particular, there is no fear. Besides, there is no question but what thousands in these valleys will welcome any legislation by Congress to suppress their polygamy, as a great many are sick and tired of it,—I mean the commoners. The greatest number of polygamists have a position that they want to keep,—and will claim that anything that will promote their personal interest is right; and expect the laity to stand by them. However, the prospects are very good all over the country, and some of the people are beginning to consider the matter, and if Congress will enact against their practices, many will give up at once, from the fact that the leaders have always taught that they never can be legislated against, as God is on their side; so if the reverse is proven, they will conclude that the leaders have spoken falsely. "Oh my people, they that lead thee cause thee to err, and destroy the way of thy paths." I consider I am as safe here as I can be in any part of the United States.

Respectfully,
H. R. EVANS.

KENTON, Tenn., February 4th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—No accessions to the Church were made at Bardwell, but the cause has gained some substantial friends. I found a good home with Messrs. Adair and Turnbow, who are both friends to the cause. The wife of the former desires to obey, but circumstances over which she seems to have no control prevent at present. Preached last night in the Presbyterian Church at this place to a small but attentive congregation. Shall extend my labors here as long as seems wise. The weather is beautiful; peach trees are blooming, flowers are blossoming, and all nature is donning her green mantle, while the bright hued songsters break the stillness by their melodious warbling. It seems easy, and pleasant, to worship God when surrounded by the bountiful things that please the eye, gratify the ear and taste, and gladden the heart of man. With David we say "Praise ye the Lord." Prejudice is abating and justice and truth are asserting their rights among the intelligent.

Yours in bonds,
G. S. HYDE.

KINMUNDY, Illinois,

February 18th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Hilliard and I have just closed a series of meetings in the vicinity of Prairie Hall, Richland county, Illinois, the place where Bro. Hilliard held the discussion in December last with Mr. Shick. The people there still seem to be interested and seeking after the truth. Last Friday morning Bro. Hilliard baptized seven, three of whom formerly belonged to the Christian Church. At the confirmation the Spirit was present, and we felt that God was with us, indeed and in truth; not only we, but outsiders also, seemed to realize the presence of the Spirit to such an extent as to cause great solemnity to rest upon them while we were administering the ordinance; and the silent tear which stole down the cheeks of some, told of the working of the Spirit upon their hearts. The house was full and it was the first time they had ever witnessed anything of this kind; but there was no making fun, nor pointing the finger of scorn, all seeming to feel the solemnity of the occasion and to bid us God speed. Many more are believing the word, and I think the time is not far distant when others will obey—indeed, several have so expressed themselves. May the Lord help them in their search for truth.

Since the discussion two of the members of the Christian Church, besides the three baptized by Bro. Hilliard, have had their names taken off their church record, and another said she aimed to unite with us; so I still think the truth lost nothing by the ventilation it received, but, as it is in almost all instances where truth and error are compared, seemed to show the superiority of the gospel of Christ over the creeds of men. The work seems to make some progress and we feel encouraged, but would like to see it move faster and take greater hold upon the hearts of men, if the Lord so willed it. This, however, is not the work of man, and we therefore labor, and wait patiently for the Lord to give the increase, realizing that he is able, and that he will direct it right. Hoping and praying that God will plead the cause of his people, and bless them with the spirit of union and love, I remain,

Your brother in Christ,
ISAAC M. SMITH.

TAITSVILLE, Ray Co., Mo.,
February 18th, 1882.

Brethren J. R. Lambert and J. Smith.—I do esteem you as officers in the Church of Christ; but, while I do so, I do not want to see or hear of new ideas brought about that causes so much contention in the Church. "Well," says Bro. L. "You are no Elder; nor counsel to us."

"Just so. But, see here. See Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 83, par. 21. 'Therefore, let every man stand in his own office, and labor in his own calling; and let not the head say unto the feet, it hath no need of the feet; for without the feet how shall the body be able to stand? Also the body hath need of every member, that all may be edified together, that the system may be kept perfect.' So, you can see at a glance, if you wish to do so, that the church can't go along without the feet, and all the members are needed to keep the system together."

"Well," says Bro. L., "that is not the thing. You called us bigger brethren."

"Just so; you can see that I am part of the feet, and do honor you in your office and calling, and say may the Lord bless you; but here to the point, I do not honor the idea of tramping down, or depriving the Saints of their God-given rights."

"Well, brother, we don't mean to do so"

"Well; I hope you do not."

"We are only trying to represent the whole Church."

"Well; I am glad of that; but while you are trying to do so, your new theory is causing contention. I have witnessed it as well as you could tell it. But here, take the Lord's plan and all will be well. See Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 17, p. 25. 'It shall be the duty of the several churches composing the Church of Christ, to send one or more of their Teachers to attend the several conferences, held by the Elders of the Church, with a list of the names of the several members uniting themselves with the Church since the last conference, or sent by the hand of some Priest, so that a regular list of all the names of the whole Church may be kept in a book by one of the Elders; whoever the other Elders shall appoint from time to time, and also if any have been expelled from the Church, so that their names may be blotted out of the General Church Record of names.' But we want a new way of Representing. So, so. If the Church has run well for twenty-nine years, can't it still run so, and do well. I would not give the Lord's way of representing for all that the officers of the Church could get up. I am about eleven years older than Bro. L., and have not attended the Semi-Annual nor General Conferences, yet I wonder if he has attended the twenty-nine himself, he being about thirty years old.

Celestial law or common consent, have all things common amongst you; or if anything is brought up and is to become a law to the Church, it must be by vote from the feet as well as the head, to be common consent. Just so. The Elders are to meet in conference to do such business as may come before them. It is not certain what kind of business may come up before them; and it is as apt to be brought up by the feet as the head; but if the Saints are deprived of voice or vote, then it stands a matter of fact that they have no right to self-protection; therefore, all things can not be by common consent, otherwise then by voice or vote. If old Bro. Joseph always got along with the Saints and got their consent, and this church has run for twenty-nine years, and done well, how is it that it still can't run and do well. Oh, we have witnessed some of the reasons. Well; tell us if you know. We will try, the Lord being our helper. First, it is my business to work hard and to try to tend my own business.

A VISION.

But, about three months ago, I saw brethren J. Smith and Blair. We were glad to meet, and exchanged thoughts. The same night Bro. J. D. Craven saw them also. I was building a barn for him. Says he, "Bro. Mullin, I saw Bro. Joseph last night."

"All right," says I. "What was he doing?" "Well, he was in the stand trying to preach, but failed. His clothes consisted of shirt and drawers. No other clothes. He came down out of the stand and gave three sisters a pair of nice shoes apiece. Also he had no hair on his head, save around even with his ears."

"I am sorry to hear that, Bro. Craven. It is bad," was the remark.

Next, I in company with some other brethren went to Far West to conference. There I witnessed some of the things I had been reading about. "What?" The Representing business, or question. A High Priest had much to say on that point. The more he said the darker we got in the puddle. I finally thought, perhaps he wanted to get into another joint stock company. "To the law and to the testimony, or there is no light in them." Coming home from Far West, we enjoyed a good Saints' meeting, nine in number. The Holy Ghost seemed to fill the whole house. All was joy and peace; tongues and revelations. One tongue and interpretation seemed to have lasted fifteen minutes at least. Amongst the interpretations, there were designing men in the Church, trying to strip Joseph; but "I, the Lord God, will not suffer it. For I, the Lord God, will remove them before they shall have power to do so."

At Far West we were voted the privilege of taking part in the conference; but before the close we were deprived of that privilege any more. The same from other districts. But the High Priest wanted to have it so that Bro. Joseph, could have a say; as though he was better than any other Elder. The Saints of that district were deprived of a vote, also the Priests, and Teachers likewise. Oh, brethren! Oh, brethren! Is this not disfranchisement? Is this common consent? Oh, Lord, if this is, do remove me from the earth. For I so thought, that by common consent I have given them money; also given them the bread and meat to eat, that thou didst give me. But, alas, the cry comes, "Don't stoop so low to say disfranchise." But Oh, Lord Jesus, if they deprive my brethren, also they do me. And if they fail to give me a cup of cold water, the same is done unto thee.

Bro. Lambert, if you were sitting by and saw me burn my finger, you could not tell me better than I would know it myself. I do not trust in the arm of flesh, but in the Most High; and so long as I can have the privilege of seeing, once and occasionally the four that did tarry, I shall be proud. I have seen them; they have ministered unto me. I thank the Lord that I have learned the truth. I don't mean to offend any of my brethren by speaking plain. I am a plain man, and do love you all.

With respects,

ERI B. MULLIN.

Revelation is my law through the proper officer, the Seer.

"The Elders are to meet from time to time," means all; but some have squirmed from the law and wants the High Priests and Apostles alone. Is that law?

P. S.—Bro. Joseph, I requested you to print my letter; but to suit your own ideas you only put in part, then published two columns that suited your fancy, against naked truths that I told. Is that free? Is that honest? Don't be offended at my plain talk, Bro. Joseph; I want to do good rather than offend. I send another; you can do as you please; publish, or let it alone; but if you do publish, print it all. If not, please send it to Bro. Lambert.

I request its publication.

The Elders are going without purse or scrip, yet it seems that the railroads and other expenses, are costing about $2 a sermon. Is it law? I don't begrudge what I have given.

ERI BENTON MULLIN.

Kewanee branch reported 90 members. Millersburg 47. Rock Island 15, (4 added by letter). Truro, Canton, Buffalo Prairie, Peoria, Princeville, St. David's and Henderson Grove branches, not reported.

Elder Thomas Stafford reported by letter.

To the Saints and Elders of the Kewanee Dis trict: The following preamble and resolution was brought out and passed at our conference, held at Kewanee, March 4th, 1882, for the following reasons: One reason, and a good one too, was that out of about twenty-five Elders in the district, there was barely two, aside from the resident Elders of Kewanee, and those two were the president and secretary of the district. Another reason is that out of ten organized branches there were but two branch reports aside from the Kewanee branch. Think of this ye Elders of Israel. A representation of the president and Secretary, where the Lord has said ye shall meet every three months, or from time to time, to transact such business as shall come before them. Now brethren, this ought not to be, and must not be if we ever expect the work of the Lord to prosper in the district. The following is the preamble and resolution passed:

Whereas it is known to all that we lack in discipline in regard to a proper representation at our District Conference when in session. Therefore, be it resolved, that all the Elders be notified through the Herald that they are requested to come together at our next session of conference, to be held at Buffalo Prairie, the first Saturday and Sunday in June next, to take into consideration the propriety of bringing about a more perfect representation for the prosperity of the branches of the district, and the work in general. Bro. H. C. Bronson was elected to represent the Kewanee District at the Annual Conference.

Preaching on Sabbath morning, afternoon and evening by Pres. H. C. Bronson.

Adjourned to meet at the Saints' Church, Buffalo Prairie, Illinois, June 3d, 1882.

The Court of Elders in charge of the S. P. Beckstead case, reported the charges not fully sustained; forgiveness asked of the brethren and granted.

Bro. J. Good, District Treasurer, reported and was sustained.

Resolved that the president and clerk of this district notify all Elders who fail to report themselves from time to time to this conference, and who entirely fail to magnify their office, to report themselves either in person or by letter to the next convention of this conference; and that all failing to do so will be then and there dealt with according to law,—to wit, that if they belong to no quorum they will be considered no longer worthy to stand, and will be dropped from office as Elders to the position of members; and, if members of quorums they will be officially reported to the same.

J. R. Badham was sustained as district president, and as delegate to General Conference.

Adjourned to meet Saturday, May 6th, 1882, 7 o'clock p. m., at the Keystone Branch.

MASSACHUSETTS DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Dennisport, Mass., March 25th, 1882. J. Smith president, F. M. Sheehy and F. A. Potter clerks.

The following Elders were present and reported: C. A. Coombs, A. Nickerson, L. E. Howes, E. Small, N. Eldredge, L. B. Chase, H. H. Thompson, J. Gilbert, F. M. Sheehy, J. Smith, F. A. Potter. Priests present: A. W. Glover, S. D. Stacy, J. Halstead, J. Hilton, J. H. Long. Teachers present: J. F. McKenna, W. Talbot, R. Burgess, N. Tripp. Deacons: N. B. Shaw, A. C. Chase, C. Holms, and D. Joy. Elders by letter: W. Bradbury, S. H. Morse, C. E. Brown, J. Woodward, N. C. Eldredge, E. N. Webster, J. Poits, G. S. Yerrington. Priests by letter: T. Whiting, T. H. Moore, M. C. Berg; and Teacher: C. D. Seelye.

A communication from Plainville was read and referred to a committee of two: J. Gilbert and F. M. Sheehy.

Preaching by A. W. Glover, C. A. Coombs and H. H. Thompson.

The following report from committee was adopted: Your committee appointed to examine the document signed by C. A. Coombs and C. D. Seelye, in which a request is made to conference for a mission to be given C. D. Seelye to Wonsocket, report that they have examined the matter and advise as follows: (1) That Wonsocket and vicinity be annexed to the Plainville Branch. (2) That such annexation would give Teacher C. D. Seelye the right to labor in Wonsocket under the direction of the Plainville Branch. And further your committee do not report.

Bro. Howes by vote was considered in full fellowship as an Elder in the Church.

A committee was appointed to enquire into the official acts of Bro. J. Hilton.

F. M. Sheehy, J. Gilbert, J. Smith, F. A. Potter and C. A. Coombs, were appointed a Court of Elders on charges against C. W. Young.

J. Smith was sustained district president.

Met on Sunday in Ocean Hall, the Saints' Chapel not being adequate. Preaching by Elder J. Smith; and in the afternoon by Elder F. M. Sheehy, subject Polygamy vs. Mormonism; after which a resolution approving the action of Congress in regard to Polygamy [Heretofore published by us.—Ed.] was adopted by a rising vote.

In the evening had service of song; solos were sung by Mrs. Shaw and Bro. Gilbert; after which preaching by Elder J. Gilbert; subject: Kingdom of God vs. Church and State. Then followed a series of short and pithy speeches by Bro. Thompson, Potter, Glover, Halstead and Coombs. These meetings were well attended, part of the time the hall, the largest in the place, was densely crowded, with scarcely standing room.

On Monday morning, convened in the Saints' Chapel.

Resolved that we request the General Conference to release all persons holding mission in this district, and appoint Bro. Frank M. Sheehy in the same.

F. A. Potter was sustained as district clerk.

Resolved that Bro. J. Gilbert be continued in the field.

Committee on Branch reports reported, and the following were received and accepted: Dennisport, Fall River, New Bedford, Brockton, Boston, Plainville and Providence. South Yarmouth was returned to L. B. Chase.

Report of District Treasurer and Bishop's Agent were received and referred to auditing committee.

Report of Committee of case of Bro. Hilton was accepted, and a copy ordered sent to and be read before the Douglas Branch.

Resolved that the South Yarmouth Branch be and is hereby disorganized, and the members be given Letters of Removal.

Resolved that the District President be authorized to ascertain if we can use the free-will offering in our possession for missionary work in the District.

Moved to endorse the action of the Semi-Annual Conference on representation. After some discussion the vote was taken: 10 yeas, 6 nays.

Moved that the vote be recorded and sent to the General Conference.

The Court of Elders to whom was referred the case of C. W. Young vs. G. Small, W. Beans and L. E. Hawes, beg leave to report as follows: (1) That inasmuch as C. W. Young, during the consideration of the case, tendered to the court his license as a Priest, and insists upon its being received, we recommended that it be accepted by the conference. (2) That during the examination of the case the said C. W. Young admitted that he had made statements damaging to the character and reputation of officers of the Church, and still acknowledges a belief in the same. (3) We find that the said C. W. Young did not take the lawful course provided by the law of the Church, and is thereby censurable for his conduct. (4) We recommended that the said C. W. Young be not received into full fellowship in the Church until he has made acknowledgement of the wrongs he has done. (5) Said acknowledgements are to be made in a regular church meeting, and that publicly, and that he shall refrain from such a course in the future. (6) We would further recommend that the charity which "covereth a multitude of sins" be exercised, and that henceforth and forever the Saints endeavor to dwell together in love and peace.

A prayer and testimony meeting was then had. Preaching by Bro. Gilbert, after which the sacrament was partaken of.

Adjourned to meet at Douglas, Mass, June 3d, 1882, at four o'clock in the afternoon.

NODAWAY DISTRICT.

The above conference convened at the Ross Grove School House, Holt county, Mo., the 25th of February, 1882. T. Nutt, president; J. Flory, secretary.

T. Nutt was chosen as delegate to represent the district at the General Conference.

Preaching by Elders J. Flory and T. Nutt. Sacrament was administered, followed by prayer and testimony in the afternoon, during which the spirit's presence was manifested. At the close of the meeting, a donation of $7 was made for the benefit of the District President.

Adjourned to meet at Guilford, Nodaway county, Mo., Saturday, the 27th of May, 1882, at 10 a. m.

MONTANA DISTRICT.

Minutes of the above district conference, held at Willow Creek, Montana, February 25th and 26th, 1882. G. Reese in the chair; W. Worwood, clerk.

Branch Reports.—Willow Creek 20; removed 4. Gallatin 36; removed 2, expelled 1. Butte, no report.

Reports.—Elders L. Gaultier, J. Bamber, J. E. Reese (by letter), G. Reese, W. Worwood. Priests J. Green and J. Pritchard. Teacher T. Reese.

Bro. R. J. Anthony was invited to come and labor in the district, and the clerk instructed to forward means to defray expenses of his trip.

Elders G. Reese was sustained as president, W.

Worwood as clerk, and L. Gaultier as Bishop's Agent.

L. Gaultier, Bishop's Agent, reported paid to Utah Mission $25.

Whereas some of the scattered members of the Montana District have brought reproach upon the Church; therefore, be it resolved that this conference empower the officers of the branches of said district to labor and deal with them according to law and justice.

Preaching in the evening by Elder W. Worwood; subject: Polygamy, and false and true revelation. On Sunday forenoon by Elder Gaultier. In the afternoon by Elder Worwood. In the evening the sacred emblems were administered. Prayer and testimony closed the peaceful session of conference.

Adjourned to meet the last Saturday in May [27th], 1882, at Reese Creek, Montana.

The Miraculous Signs.

I WISH to write a few thoughts upon the very important subject of the miraculous signs, For what were they given? What design did the Lord Almighty have in making such a promise to the children of men; as, "These signs shall follow them that believe?"

His design evidently was to fulfill the promise, for no one will dare say that the Lord ever made a single promise to his children but what he was willing to fulfill, and would do so upon conditions of their obedience. Then the question is: why did he wish to manifest such power among the children of men as the fulfilling of this promise would necessitate him to do? "Why," says one, and his answer represents the belief of almost every church of the present day, as well as that of almost every individual outside of any church, "he made the promise to those who lived in that age, and intended to fulfill it to them only, for the positive convincing of those who saw them that he was the Christ; they never would have believed on him without them, consequently they were given to establish Christianity." To this I reply by asking: "Where is the passage of scripture that reads: These signs are given to establish Christianity, and when that is fully established they shall be taken away, and be no longer in the Church?" And if no such evidence is produced, I have a perfect right to pronounce it a man made idea, having its sole origin in his own brain. And shall I, who am searching for the truths of heaven, accept it as being the Lord God's decree? God forbid! "But, you certainly do not believe that Christianity could ever have been established without them?" No I do not believe that Christianity could have been established without them, neither do I believe they were given to establish Christianity, for I do not believe that Christianity can exist in perfection, without them. To say that Christ could ever have been acknowledged the Savior of the world without such manifestation of power is preposterous; for we read in Luke:

"And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised."—Luke 4: 17, 18.

We discover then that they belong to his mission, and by being recorded by the prophets concerning him hundreds of years before his advent, they become in fact a test of his mission. No man could have stepped in and have proven himself to be the Christ; for in failing to fulfill the prophecies concerning him, he would be a known impostor. But Christ has come, and he proved himself to be the long expected Messiah to those who witnessed his wondrous works. And after his ascension to heaven, he still continued to prove himself the Son of God to those who believed on him, but had never seen him personally, by fulfilling unto them the promise of "these signs shall follow them that believe." And if his mission was so strongly put to the test during the days of his sojourning on earth in the flesh by the prophecies concerning him, how much more strongly is it put to the test after his ascension to heaven by his leaving on record the promise from his own lips: "These signs shall follow them that believe;" together with all his other promises recorded in the New Testament, which he has never yet repealed.

We think the absence of any revelation from the Lord abrogating his promises and commandments, is sufficient proof that they are in force, and will remain so until he gives the command rendering them null and void. We think this one point is sufficient to prove that his promises are for this age as well as any other. Certainly the Lord can not condemn us for believing this when he has never told us they should be done away.

I have now a few passages of scripture that I wish to present under this idea of the Lord's repealing his own promises. And I wish to show thereby, if possible, the design which our Heavenly Father had in making to us poor mortals of earth, some of the peculiar promises which he did, and that because of this design he can not necessarily repeal them until that design has been accomplished. I will only introduce two or three as samples of many.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."—Mark 16: 16-18.

We discover here two promises: one of them relating to our eternal salvation in the world to come; the other to this life only. Now one is just as plain as the other; the Lord has limited one just as much as the other; and if he fails to fulfill the one, what assurance have we that he will fulfill the other? If he fails to fulfill unto us the one relating to this life, what hope can we have that he will fulfill unto us the grander promise of immortality and eternal life?

"Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God."—Matt. 5: 8.

"Is any sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him."—James 5: 14, 15.

Here we have two more promises: one awaiting its realization in the world to come; the other to be realized in this life. They both stand on an equal footing; both made by the God of the universe to his children.

Again we say, if he fails to fulfill the one when we have come up to the conditions he requires of us,—for conditions are attached to all his promises mind you,—we can have no assurance that he will the other; but if he fulfills unto us the promises relating to this life, then indeed have we the glorious assurance that he is the God of our salvation, our Savior, and our Redeemer, and in him can we trust. And this looks to me like the design which the Almighty had in making some of his peculiar promises serving for this life only, i. e., that he might give the necessary assurance to his people that if they held out faithful to the end, he would do greater things for them. We might continue further to examine the promises of the Holy Scriptures; but we think our position is understood. There are perhaps as many promises relating exclusively to this life, as there are relating exclusively to eternal life; and all his promises which the Lord has not repealed are for his people in this age as much as any other. "God is no respecter of persons;" he is not a partial God, but esteems all men on an equality before him, and if any man has sufficient faith to stand the test, he can test the Lord and his promises by his faith. There is a test in both cases.

I wish to add still another passage of scripture in favor of the continuance of revelation and all the spiritual gifts and blessings had in the church eighteen hundred years ago being the order forever in the church of Christ.

"And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the first born from the dead; that in all things he might have the pre-eminence." Col. 1: 18.

A very significant fact is couched in this little verse, the apostle, under the inspiration of the Almighty, undoubtedly used a fit representation when he compared the church to the human body, and Jesus Christ to the head of that body. Here I say is a remarkable illustration of the union between Christ and his church; just as closely connected as the human head is to the body, so is Christ connected to his church; and as the human body can not make one intelligent motion without first being directed by the head or mind, neither can the church make one intelligent move without first being directed by Christ. And if by any means communication is cut off between the human head and body—when the head is severed from the body—that body speedily becomes a dead body, then when communication is cut off between Christ and the church, that church will speedily become a dead church. Although it still remains in existence it has no life power in it.

Now the special means by and through which the Lord communicates with his church or people,—indeed, the only way he can communicate with them sufficiently to give a thorough understanding of all doctrinal points, and the manner of organization, so “that there shall be no schism in the body,” or man-made creeds, for the order of government are: revelation of himself, visions, gifts of prophecy, tongues, ministering of angels, &c. Now these things I find are denied to exist in this day and age of the world by all churches (so called) that I have ever heard of, under the whole heavens, except one. Well, that proves to me conclusively that they are not the church of Christ. They are not related to him as the human head to the body. They do not have these signs follow them, consequently they can not do otherwise than deny them; they can not claim to have them when they do not, for their deception would speedily be found out by those who entered their church with honest intentions. No; if no individual man could step into Christ's place because of the fearful test of his mission, no church can take the place of Christ's church because of the test that church would have to undergo. There was only one church in ancient times that claimed the “miraculous signs;” there was only one that dared to do so. There is only one in this age that claims the same that that did; it is the only one that dares to do so.

I think I have produced enough evidence, at least until the passages of scripture which I have presented are proven to mean differently from that which I have represented,—to prove conclusively that the “signs” were not given for the special purpose of establishing Christianity; but for a broader and a grander reason. That because of his wondrous love God gave and gives them—first to convince, then to guide, cheer, and protect all who are humble enough to obey him in all things. And I will venture to say, that the days are coming when all churches and individuals who deny revelation, like the army in battle which loses communication with its commanding general, will be utterly overthrown, and the enemy will have gained a complete victory over them; for they have removed from their belief the very principle that would save them. The most vital part of the religion of Jesus Christ they have destroyed, and are ignorantly following the siren voice of their adversary, saying, “The Lord will manifest himself no more.”

A moment's work on clay tells more than an hour's labor on brick. So work on hearts should be done before they hear den.

What wait we for? There's work to do
For every heart and every hand,
In this wide world of want and woe,
Where sin has blighted every land.
Let each go forth while yet 'tis day,
Fearless with heaven-inspired might,
To wage a warfare 'gainst the wrong,
And battle bravely for the right.

Ancient and Modern Revelation Compared.

Editor Herald:—The claims pertaining to Revelation, made by the Church of Latter Day Saints, are broad claims, indeed. If these claims be warranted, if God has revealed himself to men in these latter days, there ought to be, and is, no doubt, abundant evidence of this fact. The people who are out side of your organization are entitled to this evidence.

But word-warfare justifies, right here the query, on your part, what is satisfactory evidence of revelation? Judging for myself, I should say it must be a positive kind, amounting to open demonstration. Such always has been the character of testimony attending revelations in the past.

What was the nature of the evidence offered the world that the revelation brought by Jesus was true? Need it be said that it was the most convincing and conclusive? The conception of the Savior, and the wonders connected with his birth, were well calculated to commend the doctrines which he afterwards taught. But it was in the life and work of Christ that the doubter of revelation saw the mightiest demonstrations of Divine power. In broad and open day, out upon the wide streets in sight of multitudes composed of all classes, the lame were healed and made to leap for joy, and the blind restored to sight. But lest some should doubt, the dead were raised. I say, lest some should doubt. To attest revealed religion seems to have been the office of these miracles. To the certain knowledge of his enemies, Jesus himself was resurrected on the third day after his death. Every one will admit the grand and unequivocal character of this evidence.

When God revealed himself and law to Moses, he left not only the Jews, but all who knew them, without reasonable room to doubt.

Pharaoh had no ground on which to stand, while disbelieving that the Israelites were the children of the Lord. So miraculous has been God's manner of making his laws known. As long as men are men, there will exist a stern necessity for such demonstrations.

It is said that God revealed himself through Joseph Smith. To the detriment of the doctrine taught by him, the train of wonders and miracles usually accompanying revelators, was, it may be safely said, entirely lacking. But perhaps it may be said that the old means of sustaining revelations have been discarded; that men are now required to believe through the soul rather than through eyes and ears. Or it may be said, men must obey the mandates of the latter day revelation before Divine proof of its genuineness is given them. If this be true, then the millions who live content in other creeds can never be reached. For they will not leave the organization to which they belong and join another, simply because some one tells them they may find revelation and its proofs there. So that but few indeed will be saved by it, and it will have been made in vain.

Inasmuch as the Latter Day Saints impute blindness to all who refuse to accept the doctrine they hold, this myriad army of sightless beings are entitled to something more than accounts of wonders performed in your church.

If the acceptance of this latter day doctrine be essential to men's salvation, men have a right to require and receive the thundering logic that has always been used to open the eyes of those who doubted the institution of a new order of things by revelation. If it be said here that your revelations are only repetitions of the old, then they are useless, and no man could justly be condemned for disbelieving them.

If you will publish this letter and answers to it, you will greatly oblige

INQUIRER.

RENO, Iowa, March 17th, 1882.

An Open Letter to my Friends in Utah.

WHEN I was with you last Fall, I saw much to admire in your industry in opening farms and building beautiful homes, rail-roads and temples, and in your family devotions, and I was often asked how I did not come and live with you. But when I see how far your leaders have departed from the teachings and laws of the Church, as contained in the Book of Mormon and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, as must be well known to all of the older members. How proud we old-time Saints were to testify to the world that our God was unchangeable, and that his law and gospel and covenant of redemption was the same from Adam down to the latest of his posterity. But you have now added much to the good old law of the gospel. “And you have made the law of no effect with your traditions.” Independence of thought and action are hereditary with the Scotch, and they have done more to preserve civil and religious liberty, than any other nation. I was surprised when I found so many who adhered to Brigham Young after he usurped the presidency of the Melchizedek Priesthood. And then to produce that abominable revelation, and palm it off in the name of Joseph Smith, who had been dead eight years. And whosoever received it, it bears its own condemnation before all the moral and virtuous of the world; it is so inconsistent with the character of a just and Holy God. Wherever it came from, the Twelve are responsible, and will be held accountable. There is no infallibility in the Church, and the Twelve, instead of hiding it away when Joseph got it as they claim he did, they should have labored with him, and if not withdrawn, their duty was plain. Book of Covenants says:

“And inasmuch as a president of the High Priesthood shall transgress, he shall be had in remembrance before the common council of the Church, who shall be assisted by the Twelve Counsellors of the High Priesthood. And he shall be dealt with according to the law of the Church.”

This blind following of the priesthood into what is not in accord with the well known word of God, has brought the people into despotism and darkness in all ages of the world. Whosoever you obey, his servants you are. Brigham Young has denied the Lord who bought us.” He proclaimed to all the world that Adam was our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we will have to do. When Mary had conceived the child Jesus, the Father had begotten him in his likeness. He was not begotten by the Holy Ghost. And who is the Father? He is the first of the human family. What blasphemy. The Lord Jesus Christ is our Savior, and the God with whom we will have to do. He is the son, because of the flesh; but equal with the Father in power and glory. The creator of heaven and earth, men and angels, the everlasting and eternal God. That is what the Bible and the Book of Mormon teaches, and what we believe.

I was often asked why Joseph Smith did not come to Utah and receive the Church from B. Young? And if he got any revelations? I will give you his own account of his call. When the Holy Spirit moved him to begin the work of God, which was appointed unto him from the beginning. He put the question: Why not go to Utah? "I turned my gaze slightly upward, and saw descending a cloud; it was luminous, and of such a color and brightness that it was clearly seen, though the sun shone in its Summer strength. It descended rapidly, and settling upon and over me, enveloped me completely, so that I stood within its radiance. As the cloud rested upon the ground at my feet, the words, 'Because the light in which you stand is greater than theirs,' sounded in my ears, clearly and distinctly. Slowly the cloud passed away, and the vision closed. During the year 1859, the question of my connection with my father's work was finally determined. I became satisfied that it was my duty. The queries heretofore referred to were one by one being settled, until the final one, where and with whom should my life labor lie? was the only one left. This was determined by a similar manifestation to the others that I had received, to this effect: 'The Saints reorganizing at Zarahemla and other places is the only organized portion of the Church accepted by me. I have given them my Spirit, and will continue to do so while they remain humble and faithful.' In January, 1853, the Holy Spirit gave to the Church the following: 'Polygamy is an abomination,' in the sight of the Lord God. It is not of me. I abhor it. I have given my law. I change not. My law is given in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. My word is the same yesterday, to day, and forever."

The Reorganized Church is the same in all standards and doctrines as the church of 1830 and 1844. The movement of Godbe and Co., in Salt Lake City, in 1869, did not represent the Reorganized Church. Only those who have been sent as missionaries had authority from the Church. W. W. Blair, who is now with you, and those with him, are the only ones who are authorized to speak in the name of the Reorganized Church. We have a chapel now on Tribune Avenue, Salt Lake City, where you can hear and judge for yourselves.

At the time of the martyr's death, it was well understood by the Church as a body, who would be the successor. There were from 150,000 to 200,000 names on the church record, in good standing at that time; and about twelve men led factions in as many directions. None of them at that time claimed to be Joseph's successor. It was well known that Joseph's seed would lead the church. The Lord said in 1841: "For this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall be put upon the head of his posterity after him." B. Young said, after the death of the Prophet:

"You can not appoint a prophet and president of the church. God would reject you if you did." But soon all was changed. In a council of the Twelve on the 5th of December, 1847, Orson Hyde then moved that Brigham Young be president of the church, and that he nominate his two counsellors to form the First Presidency. Wilford Woodruff seconded the motion. B. Young then nominated Heber C. Kimball and Willard Richards, which was seconded and carried unanimously. (Life of B. Y., page 188). Three years before, Brigham Young declared that God would reject the church if they filled the presidential office. O but will you say that God spoke and ordered B. Y. to fill the presidency, as claimed by Orson Hyde in 1860. Wilford Woodruff's journal at that date contained no account of God calling B. Young to the presidency, and Mr. Woodruff was asked about it, he said it was not true, or no one heard it but O. Hyde. In 1868, while in Williamsburg, Orson Pratt was questioned in regard to the testimony of O. Hyde: "You were present in all the councils. Did the Lord himself speak to you?" O. Pratt answered, "If he did, I did not hear him." Here are two witnesses and the journals, who say there was no call from God.

The revelation on polygamy comes in conflict with all that has been previously revealed to the church. Orson Pratt, in his sermon introducing this revelation, August 29th, 1852, said, when male and female are restored from the fall by virtue of the everlasting and eternal covenant of marriage, they will continue to increase and multiply to all ages of eternity. Here we have two new and contradictory points of doctrine. We are restored from the fall by marriage, instead of the merits and the atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ. And Lehi, in the Book of Mormon, said if Adam had not transgressed he would not have fallen, but would have remained in the Garden of Eden, and they would have had no children. Adam fell that men might be, and men are that they might have joy. In a revelation given February, 1831, suitable then and in the New Jerusalem, occurs the following: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and cleave unto her and none else. And he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit. And if he repents not, he shall be cast out."

In March of the same year, the following was given:

"And again I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man, wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh; and this that the earth might be filled with the measure of men according to his creation, before the world was made." It was well known that polygamy was unlawful in the United States and in all the nations of Europe. And we were taught to obey the laws of the land; if we disobey we are without excuse. Doctrine and Covenants says: "Behold, vengeance cometh speedily upon the inhabitants of the earth; and upon my house shall it begin, and from my house shall it go forth, saith the Lord." "Lo your enemies are upon you, and you shall be scourged from city to city, and but few shall stand to receive an inheritance." After much tribulation, and the tribulation of your brethren, cometh your redemption and the redemption of your brethren." What advantage has this false revelation been to you as a people? All whom I asked said they had made no converts by it, and they had not preached it to the people outside of Utah. It has caused the way of truth to be evil spoken of; everywhere we go we have to meet it, and contend with it, and be accused with it. And wherever Mormonism is mentioned, it conveys the idea of polygamy to the people. I pray you therefore, to renounce it now, and give the enemies of the gospel of Christ no more occasion to speak evil of the way of life; and become law-abiding citizens of the United States, and of the commonwealth of Israel.

Yours in the gospel of Christ,

JOHN MCKENZIE.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., December, 1881.

Elijah.

A PROPHET has arisen in State Center, Iowa, who tells us that this is the last year of grace; that all who don't repent before the First of December, 1882, will be permitted to go their own ways unchecked by the pleadings of the spirit; that very soon a sign will be given that will convince all who are watching for the sign of Christ's coming; then commences the great battle that shall conquer 20,000,000 souls for Christ; that Zion shall bring forth her children, and a nation be born in a day, (a year). He calls upon Christians, Jew or Gentile, to come to the United States to escape the impending woes; pleads with God and the angels that hold the four winds to stay the fires until signs are given to convince, and until the servants of God are sealed. He claims to be the Elijah of the restoration, the Joshua who shall lead Israel gloriously, and Jerubbabel whose hands have laid the foundation of the Millennial Church, an whose hands shall also finish it. Essays to prove his prophecies by scripture, old and new, and by the Apocrypha claims that Esdras is inspired, supports his claims by logic, equal to the first elders of the church, answers his assailants by satire, which reminds one of Elijah to Baal's prophets, teaches a very high and pure code of morals, sends out his glad tidings to the meek, and his warnings to the wicked, free to all, "as God gives light, aside from merit or from prayer." In short, acts in every way about like some of the saints would expect a prophet to act, i. e. natural and exactly like the world would not expect him to act, and his teachings so nearly coincide with those of our martyred Seer, that it is easier for me to reason with the few points of difference than to understand how any youth of the M. P. Church could put together so much gospel truth that his church couldn't hold him, but ordered him out of her ranks into the boundless field of truth, that holy prophets have explored and set him almost free.

Almost any one conversant with Latter Day Saint arguments could invent something of the kind; but for one born and reared under different ideas, it is unaccountable, without a high degree of inspiration. But whence comes his inspiration? Bro. J. W. B. once wisely wrote: "It is too flimsy and transparent, to say of inspiration, mine is genuine, yours is spurious; mine is from above, yours from beneath; mine is of God, yours from—the other person." We read in the Book of Covenants that whatever invites and intreats to do good is of God; and the only perfect teacher said: "Forbid them not, for he that is not against us is for us, and there is no man can do a miracle in my name that can lightly speak evil of me."

This young man claims to have a message from God to us. It is the part of wisdom, as well as courtesy to pause and listen, lest we be found to fight against God. If prayerful investigation, or the failure of his predictions prove him to have mistaken, there will be nothing in it for any decent man or woman to laugh at, for all of us have made some mistakes. The warning will harm no one, for saints should be always ready to meet there Lord, and sinners are always called upon to repent. If the call has come at the wrong time, in the wrong place, in the wrong way, and from the wrong person, it will do us good to wake up and see if we can find out when is the right time, the right place, the right way, and who is the right person to raise the midnight cry. Joseph Smith gave the eleventh hour call, and we have thought his son would give the midnight cry; but if we wake up at midnight and find that some one else has called us, it will do no hurt to trim our lamps any way, since the more they burn the brighter they become.

If the trumpet give forth an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle?" There is nothing vague nor uncertain about the warning of this prophet. If true, it is a plain and positive truth; if false it is a positive lie. No type, nor shadow, no figure, to hide behind. Nothing in case of failure for the prophet to do, but to come square out and say: I asked for bread, and received a serpent; I asked for the Holy Spirit, and received a—what is it?

I recommend a prayerful reading of the Lord's preface to Book of Covenants, also sections 34, 65, 105. Note all that was promised to us as the people of God; the condition upon which He has promised to be with us till he comes in person; and answer to God and our own conscience whether we have or have not obeyed. History repeats itself from generation to generation. If Israel had believed it, Moses would have led them into the promised land. If Israel had received it, John Baptist was the Elias that was to come. If Latter Day Saints had from the heart believed unto righteousness, Joseph Smith was the Elias who should restore all things; but if they did not,—what then? History repeats itself. We know that God spake unto Moses, but this fellow we know nothing about, is a fiddle string too near worn out to make music. There is one command in Book of Covenants which the new prophet obeys without ever reading it, viz, contend against no Church except it be the church of the devil. (Book of Mormon.)

History repeats itself; Joseph Smith kept aloof from all churches, saying: they have all gone out of the way; and they said "he hath a devil." W. H. Lay requests the co-operation of all who love God, and wish to lift men "up to Him," and they say, "he is a crank." I have read his writings enough to satisfy me that he is neither a crank nor an impostor, but further I can not yet say.

Since writing the above, I have received testimonies that convince me that he is all that he claims to be; I can not say I know, for "this knowledge is too wonderful for me;" but blessed are they who have not seen and yet have believed. With the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and now I wish to bear my testimony for what it is worth, that if I am capable of judging between truth and error, light and darkness, the spirit of Christ, and the spirit of a fanatic, I believe with all my heart that every prophecy uttered by the Seer of State Centre will be fulfilled; and so believing, I rejoice that the prayers that have ascended to God for more than half a century, (till they have become almost like the wail of expiring hope), are about to be answered. I rejoice that the year of the Lord's release is come, when he will finish his work, and cut it short in righteousness. I rejoice that He who hath trodden the wine press alone is about to seek that which is lost, and bring again that which was driven away. I rejoice that the veil which separate us from God and from each other is about to be removed, for when we know each other better, we shall love each other more.

"Far lingering on the distant dawn,
My triumph shines more sweet than late,
When from these mortal mists withdrawn
Your heart shall know me,—I can wait."

MORMONIA.

Something for all.

It is the instruction found in the first Psalm of David, but before essaying upon these wise instructions, I wish to excuse myself somewhat for my inability to write most instructively. Being a tiller of the soil, just at this time of the year we farmers anxiously looking forward, preparing and providing for the necessities of our humble livelihood, our thoughts are more or less engaged therein; but today (March 21st) there is a tremendous gale sweeping over the great west, so we try to gratify this indulgence.

Yes, truly blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly. Then in all our wants or trials, we should avoid the counsel of any ungodly person or persons; for such are sinners, and their ways are the ways of death, and should we ever be called on for counsel, let us be very careful, being assured that God knows our hearts, we may ask Him to help us in our decisions, for should we give evil counsel we then stand in the way of sinners, and can not be blessed in the sight of God.

"But who would scorn his humble fellow?
For the coat he wears, for the poverty he suffers
For his daily cares? Would you, brother,
No you would not if you would, not I."

O, how hurtful to sensitive feelings is a scornful person. Let no evil communication proceed out of your mouth, but let our delight be in the law of the Lord; for the blessed are they who meditate in his law day and night. Some will say what is blessedness? David says "And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season, his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." Then in this short probation we are compared to a tree in a goodly place, each day of labor, toil and pains we may be adding jewels to our cross of Christ. O, my brothers and sisters, remember the opportunities last are lost for ever. If our flowers and fruits of goodness are wasted, no one else will ever be able to bring them to perfection, it is the live fish which swim up stream. "And what so ever they do shall prosper." Though we may be martyred, the cause for which we suffer shall prosper. Truth is mighty, though crushed to earth yet will rise again; so it is with the righteous, their works do follow them. The ungodly are not so; but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away (and at the rate it blows today it soon would be seen no more forever.) "Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the ungodly shall perish."

Let all the readers of the HERALD learn to memory this beautiful psalm and not only so, but forget not that it is the practical use of things by which we derive their benefit. I remember to have offered a fine chromo, "Our Young Continental" to a certain lady if she would get the first psalm, but I never knew if she really got it or not, but I am sure she got the picture. But I must quit for this time.

"How blessed and happy is the man
Who walketh not astray,
In counsel of ungodly men
Nor stands in sinners way."
"Nor sitteth in the scorner's chair,
But places his delight,
Upon God's laws, and meditates
On his law day and night."
"He shall be like a tree that grows
Set by the river's side,
Which in its season yields its fruit,
And green its leaves abide."

GEO. MARSHALL JAMISON.

SANDYVILLE, Iowa, March 21st, 1882.

Love.

LOVE is essential to true happiness. Without its elevating influence, sentient beings are but little above the bestial clan. It has its origin with God. As he is the fountain of power, wisdom, and intelligence; so is he the source from whence flows the happifying and purifying principle of impartial affection. How consoling to frail, erring humanity, is the thought that the Being upon whom they are solely dependent is incapable of selfishness in the least degree. Imagine for a moment that we are dependent upon one who is utterly devoid of love for others than himself, who cares for nothing but self aggrandizement, and the gratification of selfish passions, and how hopeless seems our condition. All nature proclaims its author to be the very embodiment of perfect and undying affection. The sturdy oak, as it bends to and fro in the forest, stretching its giant arms heavenward, speaks in language more forcible than words, the might power of God. The foam-crested wave, as it rolls upon the bosom of the deep, breathes a warning to humanity to keep their feet upon the solid soil of honor, virtue, and moral uprightiness; while its mother sea sighs and moans for those who drown themselves in the waters of unrighteousness. Blooming fields and waving grain bespeak the watchcare of him who sends rain upon the just and unjust, as the smiling flower whispers its accents of love, cheering the weary traveler, and gladdening the heart of rich and poor who discern in its tiny but wonderful structure, the loving hand of an All-wise Being. The calm and peaceful river, as it flows gently toward the sea, seems typical of the sweet peace and gentle quiet of those who are surely passing on to the ocean of eternal bliss. The music of rippling rill and laughing fountain lends a charm to all the handiwork of Him who delights in the happiness of all his creatures. Who but the unappreciative will gaze upon nature's diversified picture, and not say that "God is love?" He who made nature's laws, adapted them to the physical and spiritual wants of all; and methinks the course of eternal felicity, in the realms of the blessed, is only marred by the vision of unappreciative souls and unrighteous acts by fallen creatures. How poorly we appreciate the sentiment, "God so loved the world."

This overflowing effervescence, goes out to every creature in the universe, tacitly encouraging and generating an instinct, teaching humanity that there is a being upon whom all depend, to whom all are amenable, and by whom all will be judged. True love, unsullied by animal passion, does not blind the eye, physical nor spiritual, but rather heightens the perception, and gives strength to the powers of discrimination. It does not form a veil, obscuring the imperfections of others, but causes one more clearly to discern them. Neither does this passion teach us to countenance wrong, even in those endeared by the nearest ties; but rather prompts to reprove them in meekness, even at the risk of giving temporary offense. It subdues the baser passions; elevates and purifies the moral character; develops the intellect, and in short, is a refiner of the soul, and "without which no man can see the Lord."

Of what paramount importance it is in the domestic circle. Like an angel of mercy it goes about, healing the wounds inflicted on humanity, while traveling life's rugged and uneven road. Burdens too heavy for mortals to bear without it, are made light by its glorious influence. Remove this healing balm from the household, and the picture is too sad to look upon. With it there is peace, joy, and hope; without it sorrow, misery, and despair, take possession of their unfortunate prey. O, thou angel of mercy! Truly thy mission on earth is most glorious and fair. Withdraw not thyself from our embrace. May we court thy presence, that thou mayest make our hearts thy dwelling-place; permit us to dwell eternally in the sunshine of thy presence, and thy reward shall be our happiness and praise.

Love is the fountain from whence springs every pure emotion of the soul. As the clear, cool waters flow from the mountain's side, cooling the parched earth in the valley below, so love emanates from its generous fountain, giving life and happiness to humanity, making fertile the green fields of human affection. How cheering the thought that the world to which others have gone, and toward which we are tending, knows no other law. Contention and wrong doing have no entrance into the rich domain. No inharmonious or discordant sound break the spell of perpetual peace. Then, and not until then, shall we comprehend the height, depth, breadth and magnitude of the love of God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

GEORGE S. HYDE.

The Priesthood Again.

Beloved Herald:—In your issue of March 1st, 1882, the writer there promised to show the teachings of the Book of Mormon on the subject; which promise he will now endeavor to fulfill.

If we have a more sure word of prophecy, (2 Peter 1:19), than that contained in that book from which the Gentiles have taken away many of the most plain and precious parts, inasmuch that an exceeding many do stumble; and if the Book of Mormon has been given to supply or replace that loss, then if we can glean anything definite touching this priesthood question, it will in the light of its reliability if nothing more, be "the best of the wine at the end of the feast."

While it is true that the sentences from the Book of Mormon are longer than those from the Bible, and will require more space in your columns to insert the same, yet we think that the quotations that we shall make, and the citations to which we may refer the reader will not be time nor space thrown away; especially to those who are so strenuous as to claim that the Book of Mormon and that alone is to be our law in relation to Priesthood, name of Church, etc. In the Book of Mormon we learn that Alma become both a proselyte and a proselyter to the teachings of the prophet Abinadi; and after gathering his converts together, he said unto them:

"Behold, here are the waters of Mormon; for thus were they called. And now as ye are desirous to come into the fold of God and to be called his people, and are willing to bear one another's burdens, that they might be light: yea and are willing to mourn with those that mourn: yea and to comfort those that stand in need of comfort, and to stand as a witness of God at all times, and in all things, and in all places that ye may be in, even until death, that ye may be redeemed of God, and be numbered with those of the first resurrection, that ye may have eternal life. Now I say unto you, if this be the desire of your hearts, what have you against being baptized in the name of the Lord, as a witness before him that ye have entered into a covenant with him that ye will serve him and keep his commandments? That he may pour out his Spirit more abundantly upon you. And now when the people had heard these words, they clapped their hands for joy, and exclaimed, This is the desire of our hearts.

And now it came to pass that Alma took Helam, he being one of the first, and went and stood forth in the water, and cried, saying: O, Lord, pour out thy Spirit upon thy servant, that he may do this work with holiness of heart. And when he had said these words, the Spirit of the Lord was upon him, and he said: Helam, I baptize thee, having authority from the Almighty God, as a testimony that ye have entered into a covenant to serve him until you are dead, as to the mortal body; and may the Spirit of the Lord be poured out upon you: and may he grant unto you eternal life, through the redemption of Christ, whom he has prepared from the foundation of the world. And after Alma had said these words, both Alma and Helam were buried in the water; and they arose and came forth out of the water rejoicing, being filled with the Spirit. And again, Alma took another and went forth a second time into the water, and baptized him according to the first, only he did not bury himself again in the water. And after this manner did he baptize every one that went forth to the place of Mormon: and they were in number about two hundred and four souls; yea and they were baptized in the waters of Mormon, and were filled with the grace of God: and they were called the Church of God, or the Church of Christ, from that time forward. And it came to pass that whosoever was baptized by the power and authority of God, was added to his church."—Book of Mormon. 177:7, 8.

I have underlined the Church of Christ above, showing that the Church of Christ, and the Church of God is in a Book of Mormon sense they are veritably, synonymous terms, meaning the same thing. In the above we learn that Alma besought the Lord that he might have his Spirit that he might do what he was about to do in an acceptable manner; that he took Helam, went forth and baptized himself and Helam and then came forth, and they were both filled with the Spirit of the Lord. Then he went forth and baptized over an hundred others and they were all filled with the grace of God, showing that the Lord endorsed his work, that the church then established was in truth the Church of Christ. We can trace this Church of God, or of Christ, all the way down from Alma till Christ manifested himself unto the Nephites in person, though at times nearly extinct through their wickedness and backslidings; but thank God, there was always the germ of life left, that when the people began to repent of their sins and turn to the Lord, there was always authority to reestablish the Church of Christ amongst them, and to induct members into the same. And it was by the authority of the Priesthood, that this was done. Ah, here comes the objectionable word that these great sticklers for the Book of Mormon stumble at: high priests and low priests, as they have more than once (and with a spirit of irreverence) applied to those holding the two priesthoods, which the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints profess to believe in. But, if we can show that both these priesthoods were in the Church of Christ; or that high priests and then, merely, priests lacking the first objectionable syllable, have we not gained our point. We have already showed that Alma established the veritable Church of Christ; but by what authority did he do so?

"And it came to pass that Alma, having authority from God, ordained priests; even one priest to every fifty of their number did he ordain to preach unto them, and to teach them concerning the things pertaining unto the kingdom of God."—Book of Mormon 178:9.

Now, this was not a priesthood created for the purpose of officiating in the Mosaic rituals, or to speak more understandingly, those four men whom Alma ordained at the waters of Mormon were not ordained priests to officiate in the law of carnal commandments, but they were ordained priests, (not high priests), unto the Church of God, to preach the gospel unto them and to the unconverted, and to officiate in all the ordinances of the same that came within the purview of their calling. Not the high priesthood that was held by Melchisedec, Alma, Jesus, and many others; nor again that royal priesthood that some seem to think will be conferred on all who are truly Saints, irrespective of age or sex; for this priesthood was only conferred on one in every fifty of the household of faith. Now we will pass down till we come to Alma the son of Alma.

"Now it came to pass that Alma began to deliver the word of God unto the people, first in the land of Zarahemla, and from thence throughout all the land; and these are the words which he spake unto the people in the church which was established in the city of Zarahemla, according to his own record, saying: I, Alma, having been consecrated by my father, Alma, to be a high priest over the Church of God, he having power and authority from God to do these things."—Book of Mormon 215:1.

Mark the expression: "To be a high priest over the Church of God." Note still further: "He, (Alma the first), having power and authority from God," to ordain or consecrate me an high priest over the Church of God, or of Christ, which is synonymous. Do you need proof? If so, here it is.

"I can of mine own self do nothing; as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."—John 5:30.

Again:

"For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."—John 6:38.

Here we learn that Jesus came not to do his own will, but the will of his Father; then if the Church of Christ and that of the Father are not one and the same church, then as Christ did establish his church, and as the Apostles preached the gospel of his church or kingdom, to build up the same; then wherein did Christ work the work, and do the will of the Father and not his own will? But as we have shown that Alma established the Church of Christ at the waters of Mormon; so we learn from Acts 20:28, 1 Cor. 10:32, and 11:22, 1 Timothy 3:5, 15, these five references, that the church is called the Church of God. Surely I have proven that the Church of God and that of Christ are synonymous; one and the same. Then if it was necessary to have both priests and high priest in Alma's time, to labor in and watch over the Church of Christ, when were they done away with?

"Now it came to pass that after Alma had made an end of speaking unto the people of the church, which was established in the city of Zarahemla, he ordained priests and elders, by laying on his hands according to the order of God, to preside and watch over the church."—Book of Mormon 221:1.

Hear it, O ye, who are at variance with the Church of Christ, because that church has priests and high priests within its order; yes, and to preside over the branches, the districts, the stakes, and the whole church at large; ye who say we are going contrary to the Book of Mormon. We have now got Elders in our catalogue of officers and for the same purpose, viz: to preside over, and to labor for and in the interest of the Zion of God. O, how in harmony and keeping with the Book of Mormon is "the house of God, which is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth," 1 Tim. 3:15, under the regime of Joseph, son of the martyred seer. Or, vice versa, if you prefer; how the Church of Christ tallies with the Book of Mormon. O, what a rich treasure has God put within the reach of every Latter Day Saint when he gave them that precious record, the Book of Mormon. How plain it is on this priesthood question. The reader will do well to read the whole paragraph from which I shall now quote and the two first from the chapter following:

"And again: my brethren, I would cite your minds forward to the time when the Lord God gave commandments unto his children; and I would that ye should remember that the Lord God ordained priests, after his holy order, which was after the order of his Son, to teach these things unto the people; and those priests were ordained after the order of his son, in a manner that thereby the people might know in what manner to look forward to his Son for redemption. * * * Now they were ordained after this manner: Being called with a holy calling, and ordained with a holy ordinance, and taking upon them the high priesthood of the holy order, which calling, and ordinance, and high priesthood, is without beginning and end; thus they become high priests forever, after the order of the Son, the Only Begotten of the Father, who is without beginning of days of end of years, who is full of grace, equity and truth."—Book of Mormon 240:6.

In the first clause of the paragraph just quoted from, we are told that the Lord God ordained priests, (evidently by his authority through others), after the order of his Son, to teach the people the plan of redemption, through Christ; and in the last clause quoted, as well as the first, that they were ordained to the same identical priesthood that Jesus had received. How in perfect harmony is this with the claims made in a former article on this subject, that the Apostles held the same priesthood as did their Master; "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you."—John 20:21. But we must pass to our next reference.

"Yea, and the same God did establish his church among them; yea, and the same God hath called me by a holy calling to preach the word unto this people, and hath given me much success, in the which my joy is full."—Book of Mormon 282:12.

The reader will do well to not only read this whole paragraph, but the one going before and the one following after. The holy calling here referred to is this high or Melchisedec priesthood of which we have been treating, by which authority he claimed to administer in the cause of Christ all the way down. But let us see what more we can learn from the Book of Mormon, or the Golden Bible; that record that was translated by the power of God, from plates of gold. Then as gold is more precious than silver, and as the Book of Mormon was given to restore in part those things that had been taken from the Bible, (the stick of Judah), and as the primary meaning of Bible is "book containing sacred scriptures," or sacred writings, then I know of no book more deserving of the title, "Golden Bible," than the Book of Mormon. But let us see what more we can learn from that book on this priesthood question.

"And now it came to pass, that the sons of Alma did go forth among the people, to declare the word unto them. And Alma also, himself, could not rest, and he also went forth. Now we shall say no more concerning their preaching, except that they preached the word, and the truth, according to the spirit of prophecy and revelation; and they preached after the holy order of God: by which they were called."—Book of Mormon 316:1.

What was the holy order of God here referred to? We have quoted from 282:12, that Alma was called by a holy calling to preach the word; even here we do not learn what that holy calling was only that it was necessary that they have the same to preach the word. But on page 240:6 we learn that the priesthood after the order of the Son of God; and this priesthood we know to be after the order of Melchisedec, even the high priesthood. Next we find that Helaman and his brethren who were preachers, and had the watchcare of the Church of Christ, for they were high priests; not merely to administer in the ceremonies of the law. (Mosaic) but high priests over the Church of God, 325:6, and on page 328:15. Helaman the high priest did maintain order in the church for that was the calling of this priesthood. But we must pass on.

"And it came to pass in this same year, there was exceeding great prosperity in the church, inasmuch that there were thousands who did join themselves to the church, and were baptized unto repentance; and so great was the prosperity of the church, and so many the blessings which were poured out upon the people, that even the high priests and the teachers were themselves astonished beyond measure."—Book of Mormon 385:6.

Now we have found teachers, as well as elders, 221:1; also priests, 240:6; and high priests in nearly every reference. To show that these lesser officers (priests and teachers) were not merely incidental; nor again that they became such regardless of sex, age, qualification, calling, or ordination, as has been claimed by some, from 1st Peter 2:5, 9, we will refer to Book of Mormon 533, 534, showing that the Apostles who were called elders; also the manner or form of ordaining priests and teachers. To show that I have not done violence to the English language, nor yet to the Book of Mormon by calling the twelve disciples on this Continent Apostles; we will see how Webster defines that word:

"Apostle, a messenger sent to execute some important business; one of the twelve disciples sent forth by Christ to preach the gospel."

How this harmonizes with that book, (so objectionable to some of the over-fastidious), the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. An apostle is an elder; 96:8. Yes and priests, high priests and elders, are for presiding officers in the church, as well as to expound the word, or to administer in the ordinances of the same. (Book of Mormon 275:1, 221:1). That high priests are a necessary, a proper, and a legitimate office in the Church of Christ, even after his ascension, is evident from Paul's teachings in Hebrews 5:4. That no one was to receive that priesthood, (then in the present tense) except he was called as was Aaron. It seems needless to extend this article longer, as we think that we have proven beyond a successful refutation that the high priesthood is in the Church of Christ as a necessary adjunct, wherever that church exists in a perfect and complete organization. Also that the lesser priesthood has its proper and legitimate place. Nor does it matter whether we call the first the high priesthood, or whether we prefix to it the name of Melchisedec, or the Son of God; nor of the latter, whether we merely say priests, or whether we designate it by Aaronic, or the lesser priesthood, as these prefixes are merely to distinguish one from the other, and nothing more. That what I have written on this subject may be the means of removing some of the stumbling blocks that may have been thrown in the path of some of the Saints who are not posted in the Book of Mormon and the Bible, on this subject; also of removing the rubbish that has been piled at the door of the Doctrine and Covenants, is the sincere prayer of your brother in Christ.

Bro. Crabb's Letter Weighed.

IN my former communication I said nothing about a third priesthood in the Church. An Evangelist is one of the appendages of the Melchisedec priesthood; and old Father Smith as patriarch, from whom Hyrum Smith received the office of patriarch by "blessing and by right," stood in the direct line of lineal descent of this evangelical priesthood, of which the Book of Covenants speaks coming down from "Adam," handed down from father to son. As to Timothy, or the seven Aaronic priests that helped Philip break bread to those poor Grecian widows, that Bro. C. speaks of, it has nothing to do with this question of the Patriarchate in the church of modern times. No doubt Timothy was a good gospeler, as all bishops ought to be; and if he made full proof of his ministry, he would still be more worthy to do the work of an evangelist.

Will Bro. C., or the Herald, please to answer the following questions: 1. When the Church was rejected was the pattern given by revelation for the building up of the church also rejected?

2. If any one of the offices belonging in the church was rejected, were not all of them rejected upon the same principles?

3. If a legitimate priesthood, whether of limited claim or otherwise, can legally administer in all of the ordinances of the gospel while in apostacy and under the rule and government of the apostates' church now in Utah, why is not the apostate church in Utah the legitimate Church of Christ?

4. Is not apostacy a transgression?

5. Will not the sin of transgression take away the right of office from any man who persists in that transgression? And if so, how can Hyrum Smith's son be an heir to the Patriarchate office, while he remains in the sin of apostacy?

6. If the Church of Christ is not perfect without all of its officers and members in order; is it a justifiable christianity to wait a term of years before filling up the deficiencies in the church, made by apostacy?

Bro. C.'s seven bishops again with Philip feeding those Grecian widows in the daily ministrations. The number of those poor Jerusalem Saints, as described by Bro. C., reminds me of the story of the boy that saw five hundred squirrels on one tree; but when the story was simmered down a little, there were only five squirrels, instead of five hundred. There is no record that there was a single bishop on the ground at the time of this daily ministrations. If feeding the poor made bishops, then the whole Pentecostian Jerusalem Church were bishops. Those Jerusalem saints had all things in common, and went about from house to house breaking bread and did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart. (Acts 2:46). It would also seem that this general distribution of the means of the church would obviate the necessity of many bishops, as the whole number of them that believed was only about five thousand. (Acts 4:4). We quote again: "And all them that believed had all things common and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men as every man had need."—Acts 2:44, 45. And from Acts 4:32: "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul, neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and great grace was upon them all. Neither was there any among them that lacked, for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold and laid them down at the apostles' feet; and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need."

And now in consideration of this state of things, seven bishops would have been like a fifth wheel to a wagon, a superfluity. If seven bishops were needed, while this breaking of bread was going on from house to house, so that no one lacked anything, I think that N. K. Whitney, of old Nauvoo, could have beaten those Jerusalem saints five to one, for at one time in Nauvoo he had the care of over fifteen thousand Saints, and all the poor among that number to care for, and I do not think that Jerusalem at any one time had that number of saints.

Query. Was this Pentecostian Jerusalem Church a perfect model of the Church of Christ? And is the Reorganized Church of these modern times a pattern after that model? And if so, why do not the twelve apostles of the Reorganized Church take the keys of the treasury of the Church, instead of giving it into the hands of a bishop? Will Bro. Crabb answer.

The apostles themselves in the days of Pentecost, it appears from the record, were the principal treasurers of the church; and it was a dangerous thing for any of the Jerusalem saints to withhold any of the moneys that their possessions had been sold for. As per example see Acts 5:5, 6, 9, 10; a most horrible fate that befell Ananias and his wife, Sapphira, for withholding a part of the price. In this case referred to, Peter, the great apostle, was the officiating priest and bishop.

After reviewing the foregoing testimony concerning the great supply that the Pentecost Church was so abundantly blessed with, as it regards means to supply the wants of the poor, we can find no place in this Jerusalem Church to give our Brother Crabb even one single bishop, much less seven of them, until after Paul's day. If then, we do not give that office to Timothy, I am at a loss to know where we shall find a bishop to grace our apostolical church with; unless the apostles themselves continue to assume the functions of that office, which it appears they had a most perfect right to do. Perhaps our Brother Crabb can give us some light on this subject, by telling us what became of his seven bishops, after Philip went down into Samaria and preached the word. Philip himself was not a bishop, nor was he an evangelist. He was called an evangelist in the light of his mission as a gospel minister; all of the apostles were evangelists upon the same principle, as preachers of the gospel, yet none of them had been ordained evangelists. It is well understood by the elders of the Reorganized Church that Philip was a priest of the Aaronic order of priesthood, and it was for this reason that some of the apostles came down from Jerusalem to lay hands upon and confirm the disciples that Philip had baptized, as Philip did not have the authority thus to confirm, which proves that Philip was neither a bishop, nor an evangelist. One who is a bishop, or an evangelist, has a right to administer in all of the ordinances of the church. I will mention here, that I have read the scripture lesson that Bro. C. wished me to notice, and I find nothing in it that disapproves of the idea of a bishop being a local officer. It is nothing strange that a bishop should get out of his big chair sometimes, and visit a neighboring town where there are some scattering branches of the Church, to attend upon charitable missions, and to settle up estates bequeathed to the church; and if our bishop, I. L. Rogers, does not have some of this kind of work to do, it will be strange to me.

Bro. C. very exultingly speaks of his nice fits in his application of Scripture revelation. We will give the following as a specimen of one of his nice fits, which to me borders more upon error than it does gospel truth. We quote from Bro. C.'s letter: "But suppose we again read: 'Make full proof of thy ministry.' What ministry? 'Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery,' Tim. 4:14. What gift? And he gave some evangelists," Eph. 4:11."

Now, this application of Timothy's gift, with the 4th of Ephesians, is a stretch entirely beyond a correct application as I conceive it. I deny that the presbytery, or that the laying of Paul's hands upon Timothy bestowed any gift upon him, but an outward title. The gift that was in him was a gift that Timothy inherited from his grandmother Lois, and his mother Eunice; and neither the presbytery, nor the laying on of Paul's hands could have bestowed a gift that Timothy inherited from an honorable race of ancestors. Queer logic this, that a council of elders could bestow a gift upon Timothy which he already possessed before hands had ever been laid upon him. We give the following testimony in proof of our statement; and quote 2 Tim. 1:5, 6, Paul's testimony of Timothy's gift: "When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice, and I am persuaded that in thee also. Wherefore, I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God which is in thee by the putting on of my hands."

It will be seen then, that Paul's object in putting his hands upon Timothy was not to bestow gifts, but to stir up Timothy's remembrance of the gift that was in him. That Timothy had been ordained a bishop by the presbytery, I do not deny, but that he was an evangelist I do deny. And had Bro. Crabb made a correct application of Timothy's gift, it would have saved us the trouble of showing the weakness of his argument on this point.

Now concerning the ordaining of bishops or evangelists. It was so well understood by the church previous to the death of the prophet, that evangelists were patriarchs, that the twelve apostles, immediately after the death of the martyrs, began the work of ordaining patriarchs, and to this day keep up the practice in all large branches of their church organizations. And as to the twelve ordaining bishops, there was no such example set in the church prior to the death of the prophet, and here Bro. C. is at fault in the application he makes of the duties of the twelve apostles.

Setting in order the churches. This duty did not include the ordaining of bishops. And concerning the ordaining of evangelists, the explanation given by Joseph Smith, in regard to the office of the patriarchate held by his father, and his brother, Hyrum Smith, gives ample proof of the prophet's teachings on this subject. And if the ordaining of "evangelists in all large branches of the church," does not refer to patriarchs, then Joseph Smith taught an incorrect doctrine, and I am a witness to the facts. A bishop is also an auxiliary to the first presidency; and one of the right hand men of the prophet of the church; and Bro. C. may twist the revelation out of all manner of shape to make a "fit" to his liking, still the facts established by the teachings of the prophet Joseph Smith, will remain, irrefutable in all coming time, wherever the primitive doctrines of Mormonism are known and understood. For one I do not thank Bro. C., nor any other professed Latter Day Saint, for their compliments in disputing testimony which has been learned by years of experience in the society of the man whom God appointed to build up his church. A man that never saw Joseph Smith, nor never heard a word of the teachings that fell from his lips, makes but a poor show of consistency when he places on a par his judgment against a life-long experience and teaching, in remembrance of what was the rule (law) in matters pertaining to the duties of the various officers that belong in the Church of Christ; whether of apostles, prophets, bishops, or evangelists; when, and how, and by whom ordained. Who, we ask, should know more perfectly than the man whom God appointed to hold the keys of this latter day dispensation? And no revelation that Bro. C. can conjure up from the Book of Joseph Smith's revelations will contradict those facts. One other mistake in point I wish to notice. It is in one of Bro. C's conclusions on my logic," when a man has to borrow a proposition to gain a point, he proves himself a trickster in argument. I said nothing in my letter on the patriarchate that Timothy should remain "idle" while he was not doing the work of an evangelist. Surely, if Timothy was a faithful servant of Jesus Christ, whether bishop or evangelist, no one would suppose him an idle minister in the duties of his calling. Weighed again in a balance, Bro. C., and found wanting.

A third priesthood in the church. We are at a loss to know how to make a sober reply to such an allegation.

In our brother's debate with that apostate elder, had he given the subject a sober second thought, he might have known that all of the offices in the Church of Christ were of the order of the evangelical priesthood, from the prophet and the patriarch down to the least officer in the church, for such is the fact. Joseph Smith taught that his father was a prophet before he was, and that therefore that father Joseph Smith's patriarchal priesthood centered back, not to Judah but to Jacob, Joseph, Abraham, Melchisedec, Mathusalem, Jethro, Abel and to Adam, the Ancient of Days, and the patriarchal head and prophet of the whole human family; and after that order of priesthood that was without father, mother, beginning of days, or end of life; purely of the Melchisedec order, thus ends the story of Bro. C's man of straw and his scare of a third priesthood in the Church, of which the Book of Covenants says nothing. This subject of the patriarchate has already become stale and heart sickening to me, and what I have written has been with a desire to correct some errors, which like a cloud has spread over the Church greatly to its hindrance of spiritual life and progress, as well as Sainly enlightenment. Before concluding this epistle, I have a few more questions to ask that I wish brother C. or the Herald to answer. 1. If the Church built up by Joseph Smith was the Church of Christ, at the time that revelation was given in 1841, concerning Hyrum Smith holding the keys of the patriarchate, by what authority do the elders of the Reorganized Church reject the office of patriarchate, and still claim to be the true, legitimate Church of Christ?

2. If the keys of revelation given to Joseph Smith are to be held by a successor, why are not the keys of the patriarchate given to Hyrum Smith to be held by his, or a successor in office, also upon the same principle.

3. Why receive the one, and reject the other?

4. Was the revelation given in 1841, concerning the patriarchate a revelation from God? or was it from man.

Will Bro. C. answer.

We have the whole thing now in a nutshell. As a sum of this whole matter, as follows: either Joseph Smith was a true or a false prophet. Any man that will teach a false doctrine is a false teacher, whether he be prophet, priest or king; and this fact no man can deny. Is it not all the criticism that Bro. C. or any other Latter Day Saint can make on Joseph Smith's revelations that could make me believe that Joseph Smith was not a prophet of God.

Paul's instruction to Timothy on the office of a bishop, is proof to me that Timothy was a bishop,—see 1 Timothy 1: 2, 7. Ignorance of many, causes blindness in the Church. An evangelist proper is an ordained officer in the Church, we especially ordain an evangelist and set apart to his special mission, &c, as patriarch to lay hands upon and bless God's people, and such was the teachings of the martyr, Joseph.

A MORMON OUTRAGE.

On the night of March 23 a dastardly outrage was perpetrated in Fillmore, Millard Co., Utah. The building in which a school is conducted by the Presbyterian Mission, was attacked by a mob of Mormons and damaged considerably. Twenty-nine window lights were broken, the beautiful organ defaced, and the walls broken and disfigured by heavy rocks which were thrown at them in all portions of the building. Now let George Q Cannon make another statement in regard to the peacefulness and toleration of the people of Zion.—Anti Polygamy Standard.

Christ's whole life was a cross and a martyrdom, and dost thou seek rest and joy for thyself?

THE POLYGAMIC ISSUE.

THE original teaching of the Mormon Church was a purely monogamic doctrine. As early as 1844, while the Mormons were still at Nauvoo, Joseph and Hyrum Smith, the leaders of that singular body, are found upon record as denouncing and excommunicating members for the practice of polygamy, and from that time up to 1852, there is a mass of evidence that polygamy was regarded by the Mormon teachers and leaders as an abominable crime. Ten years sufficed to introduce heresies and to foster the growth of polygamy until, almost simultaneously, the abominable practice, so hotly denounced hitherto, was adopted as a tenet and usage of the Mormon faith in a "revelation" which Brigham Young presented to the Utah Mormons, through Orson Pratt, August 29th, 1852, and a division took place in the Mormon Church, by the secession from Brigham Young's leadership and authority of a large body who refused to sanction the immoralities of polygamy and held fast by the original teachings of the founders of their religion. Thenceforward, the Utah Mormons openly taught and practiced polygamy, while the Reorganized Church put itself into an attitude of stout protest against the practice, as a heresy and a great social evil. By all judicial rulings, this latter body, that exists in considerable numbers in several of the Western States, is the true Mormon Church, inasmuch as it accepts and maintains the fundamental doctrines of the original body. And it further commends itself to popular and official favor by the important fact that while the Mormon leaders in Utah have steadily encouraged and promoted a spirit of contemptuous disloyalty toward the United States government, teaching their people to despise and disregard it as impotent to enforce its own laws, this Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints teaches and enforces loyalty to the civil authorities as a high religious duty.

In this way, the profession of polygamy as a religious observance and the repudiation of it as an abominable heresy and immorality, alike unchristian and un-American, took shape, side by side, now thirty years ago. For thirty years the American government has trifled with the issue of polygamy, indifferent to the violation of law, the demoralizing effect of it upon society, and the spirit of disloyalty which has grown out of Federal toleration and indifference. It has suffered this miserable relic of barbarism to live and thrive long after its twin monster, Slavery, has been grappled with and crushed beneath the heel of enlightened freedom. The features of Polygamy are as odious and ugly as those of Slavery, and yet there is far less reason why it should have been suffered to live thirty years on American soil than that Slavery should have been permitted to flourish for two centuries. Its field has been comparatively so narrow; it has represented so small a part of the population; it is of such recent growth; it is so bare of any excuse or palliation; it has been so easy a matter to root up, and the eradication is so devoid of any danger to any American institution that, after uprooting the giant oak of Slavery, this country ought to look upon and deal with the nuisance of Polygamy as a mere rank weed to be torn up and thrown upon the dunghill, almost without a serious thought.

The true Mormon Church may be full of theological errors and open to many objections; but if it is so, it does no harm to the world around it, and it teaches and demands from its followers nothing but a pure morality, in striking contrast with the miserable abominations maintained by the Mormon hierarchy in Utah. And it teaches and practices, besides, a loyalty to the government under which it lives, in striking contrast to the pernicious influences of the corrupted branch of Mormonism that is now resisting with all its might the movements in Congress looking to the extirpation of polygamy. The anti-polygamic sentiment existing among the people who have retained the doctrines originally taught by Joseph Smith is a powerful aid to the legislation that is so much needed at the hands of Congress. These Reorganized Mormons are intensely interested in vindicating their own faith and in protesting against what has brought that faith into such general disrepute. Their representatives are doing Congress substantial service in furnishing information as to the history of the crime of Mormon polygamy which could not easily be obtained elsewhere, and their visits to Washington can not fail to help forward the Edmunds bill, which only needs the adoption of the distinctive features of the Willitts bill, which looks to the absolute breaking up of the Territorial Legislature in Utah, and the conduct of its government by a council appointed at Washington, until the whole polygamic issue shall be completely disposed of.

The Government has been pitifully and censurably remiss in its duty toward Mormon polygamy, and thirty years have been allowed to a monstrous social evil that ought to have been crushed out long ago. Laws that have been passed have been evaded, trifled with and suffered to fall into complete inactivity. They have generally been insufficient, even had they been honestly and vigorously enforced, to meet the evil, and the legislation now pending is of a sterner and better sort. The Utah polygamists are evidently alarmed at the prospect, and are leaving no stone unturned that may impede Congressional action. They are sending memorials to Washington purporting to come from the woman of the Territory, but evidently concocted by the leaders of the Church, and presenting the most absurd pictures of the beauties and blessings of polygamy as viewed by the woman of Utah. These paper manifestoes will have no more influence on Congress than they deserve. Utah has set the United States Government and the civilized dency of the world at defiance long enough, and it is to be hoped that this session of Congress will not pass away until it has wiped out polygamy and brought the Mormons of Utah into real obedience to the laws of God and man.

Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The foregoing editorial contains the issue now before the American people so tersely, and withal so nearly correct, that we presume it will bear repeating.

Whatever Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum may have been in personal observance of the rules of society and the law of the land, and and whatever other errors or false notions there may be in the theology of the original Church of Jesus Christ, in the faith of which these men lived and died, it is now becoming fairly understood by the world at large that Polygamy, "twin relic with Slavery," was not taught of them; nor did it have place in the theology of the Church, as stated by the Bulletin, until 1852. This is now conceded by our Utah antagonists, as we have before shown. What remains for us now is to see to it that the personal errors of Joseph Smith, if any are charged and proved, are not permitted by us to create and sanctify alleged doctrine. For, if we contend that men may have been prophets in olden times and have done wrong, as did Moses, Aaron and David, which wrong doing did not destroy the work of God nor defeat their claim to be prophets, we must not forget to admit that their errors did not become truths, or create doctrines to be observed in their day, or followed in ours. A wrong act is just as much wrong done by Solomon, David, or Joseph Smith, as by any other man; nor could the acts of those men, if wrong by the laws of God, or the laws of the land, become lawful and right simply because they were done by them; their personal position nor character could sanctify evil and wrong. Let this be fully and fairly comprehended now and always.

The Pittsburg Telegram, of 27th March, gives a good synopsis of nearly a column in length of Elder Z. H. Gurley's sermon in that city on the day previous. We take the following clipping from the editorial columns of the same paper, and thank the Telegram for its fairness.

"Until recently little attention has been paid to the fact that on the marriage question the two branches are hopelessly divided. The members of Reorganized Church will not, indeed, recognize the other as a branch, but denounce it as apostate, and blame it for creating prejudice against the true church, which, Elder Gurley says, is perfectly loyal to the government. The interest awakened in the affairs of Utah makes the subject timely."

"LET it be remembered that the Christianity of this age did not adopt monogamy from reflection, from choice, it is not the creation of enlightened(?) modern thought, or modern statesmanship, or modern religious teaching; it is so to speak, but an inherited accident, a tradition (good may be) but for its goodness this generation can claim no credit, and were that order to be righteously and closely observed this fact would still remain. However, the lapses are so numerous, so common, so generally winked at, that suspicion is prompt in response to assumptions of fearful 'Mormon' depravity, and it will either be said, 'Physician, heal thyself,' or the conclusion will come, inevitably that present apparently impudent discrimination is 'but sound and fury, signifying—nothing!' And there is nothing in monogamy to which the Mormons are strangers; they are intelligent noters of its good aspects, but they are not blind to its evil and injurious ones. So in regard to polygamy, they from experience know its good, yet fully realize that its beneficial action is often marred by inherited thought, and inherent tendency, born of the vicious habits of many generations, springing from the ignorant past. Here can be seen theory on one hand, experience on the other; cumulative pressure from a narrow standpoint and an unwarranted conclusion that simple disobedience to the dicta of overwhelming numbers is proof of such moral turpitude and social delinquency as can only be outreached by pains and penalties or overthrown by conclusive extermination."—Deseret Evening News.

So far as the foregoing is an argument in favor of polygamy it is a failure to the Utah people. That monogamy is not the "creation of modern thought," and so on, but the result to the generation of an "inherited accident," is a very strong plea in its favor and defense. It shows almost conclusively, to them who think, that the accident so inherited was an "accident" only to the knowledge and foresight of man as a race, but was a design of God. Latter Day Saints who accept the Scriptures, Old and New, the Book of Mormon and the "later revelations" of the Church Articles and Covenants, should have no difficulty in accepting this conclusion. For the history shows that at its institution, marriage was monogamic; at the re-peopling of the earth after Noah, it was renewed monogamic, according to the Old; and was taught and enforced by Christ, as monogamic, in the New. It was also instituted on this land by command of God in the persons of Lehi and his sons, and taught as a precept by the teachers of the Book of Mormon; according to that book, and was renewed to the Church by command in 1830-1. If all this does not evince design, and so far as God is concerned relieve his purpose from the charge of accident, it would be very difficult to show a design in any of his creations. "Wherefore it is lawful that he (man) should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made."

Here the statement is clearly made that the monogamic marriage was designed of God as the means chosen by divine wisdom by which the earth might answer the end of its creation, and it is neither good sense, nor sound argument, to say that any other system would be better adapted to serve this grand purpose. If God did not know how to arrange for the peopling of the earth, after he had been wise enough to design it in all its wonderful relations to all things in it, and around it, there is not much room to call the creation of it a wise thing. The argument is irresistible that the means devised as stated was the best, the very best to accomplish the end designed; and our Utah religionists will gain no credit by assuming to know better what is best adapted to bring to pass the designs of God, than does he.

However much authority and power may have been conferred by the bestowing of the "Everlasting Priesthood" upon the Elders of the Utah dispensation, one thing is certain to us and everybody else, outside of Utah, no power to think and design for the Almighty, or to abrogate his laws, was never given them; hence, the institution enacted by him, though called by them an accident, is the rule of conduct that should prevail.

It is a strange thing, an extraordinarily strange thing, that these Utah propagandists can not see the discrepancy in their plural marriage rule, so called, for which they claim so much wisdom, beauty, grandeur, and goodness, that in its practice permits but one in ten to reap any of the benefits; while all the rest of its devotees, in theory, are obliged, whether they will or not, to endure all the danger, and disability, and evil, attaching to the one wife rule of the good designer of the earth and the ends of its creation.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SOME one has sent us a copy of the Indianola Herald, Iowa, in which we see the epitome of the Church published in full, which they say was furnished them by a friend. That's right, brethren, send the news abroad.

Presidents Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair, and Elder Phineas Cadwell left Lamoni to attend General Conference on Saturday the 1st April, staying at St. Joseph, over Sunday. On Monday morning, the 3d, Bro. Geo. A. Blakeslee, and wife and daughter, of Galien, Mich.; and Bro. W. Crick and wife, left Lamoni for conference. And on Tuesday morning Bro. L. Conover, John S. Patterson, and several local brethren left for conference.

Sr. Melvina L. Hevener, Piper City, Illinois, wrote March 19th, that they were having a spiritual famine there, anxiously waiting for some one to come, and half scolding because some have not come who were requested to do so.

Elder John S. Patterson called at Lamoni on his way to General Conference, and spent a few days hunting up his many old acquaintances, and in seeing the country.

We learn by letter and newspaper clippings that Bro. C. St. Clair has been out in the field, and that it was his intention to attend General Conference.

Sr. Pluma A. Martin, formerly Pluma Alexander, writes a good long descriptive letter from Jefferson, Park county, Colorado, which because of lack of room we do not publish; she visited California and heard several of the Elders there: Burton, Rodger, Mills, and returning to Colorado, where she is now located. Her friends wishing to address her, do so at Jefferson, Colorado.

The following brethren have kindly sent newspapers to the Office, from some of which we have made clippings: William Anderson, the Oakland, (Cal.), Times; A. B. Johns the Genoa, (Nev.), Courier; E. C. Brown the Dubuque, (Iowa), Telegraph, three copies; William Hopkins, the Atchison, (Kan.), Champion; A. J. Cato, the Mobile, (Ala.), Chronicle, and another Alabama paper, which we have mislaid; in both of which we see notices of Bro. Cato's meetings at Whistler, where there is a branch of twenty members. George M. Jamison, the Indianola, (Iowa), Herald, containing the epitome of faith. We have also received the Iowa State Leader, Pittsburg Telegraph, and Pittsburg Chronicle.

By the courtesy of some one in England, we have received a copy of the Revised Rules of the Manchester District Latter Day Saints' Burial Society. Also a copy of the Second Annual Report, which shows balance from previous report and receipts as £14 4s. 11d.; expenses 3s. 6d.; leaving £14 1s. 5d. on hand.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

President Joseph Smith: As you may be aware, some of the enemies of the Church declare that the following passage justifies stealing, and that it was evidently so intended: "Behold, it is said in my laws, or forbidden, to get in debt to thine enemies; but behold, it is not said at any time, that the Lord should not take when he please, and pay as seemeth him good."—Doctrine and Covenants 64:6. Does this passage with its context so teach?

We do not so understand it. It appears from the context that Brn. Whitney and Gilbert contemplated selling out and removing. This was deemed impolitic; but it was necessary that some way should be provided by which the tide of distress might be legitimately met, and the counsel is apparently given that they, for the time being, secure by loan what might be needed, and the seeming discrepancy between the command not to get into debt and the permission, is removed by the statement that the "Lord might take when it seemeth him good." The measures to be taken by these men, whatever they might be, were to be "according to the will of the Lord," and when so done, it was the "Lord's business." Now, unless those who claim that this passage in the Covenants sanctions theft, admit that stealing, or what is its equivalent, borrowing with intent not to pay, is according to the "will of God," they must concede that there was not any open, or covert license given to steal, or defraud. It has been stated by some who have feared that this section was construed to sanction theft, that it was so acted upon in Missouri. Of this we can not say; but the revelation was given at Kirtland, and "liars" and "hypocrites" are both condemned in terms, and an exhortation is given in the same paragraph, said to have been so construed, "wherefore be not weary in well doing." If stealing, theft, robbery, deceiving, are according to the will of God, then it is possible that men might have held the idea that they were to enrich themselves at others' expense. But it is clear that the language does not warrant such construction; and whoever construes the passage in a way to sanction theft does violence to its obvious import, whether he be friend or enemy. If a friend to the cause, and he permits the enemies of the work to put a false and perverse construction upon the Church articles, or covenants, and adopts such construction as his own, it is a decided weakness, and not defensible; it is unreasonable and unjustifiable from any stand point. To allow an enemy to define our faith, and construe our law, is destructive and reprehensible.

Does the law require that we should partake of the sacrament only in private meetings?

No. The rule requires simply that the Saints shall meet together for the Sacrament; and they shall partake monthly. Read Doctrine and Covenants, section 46 and paragraph 2.

Is it right for Elders of Christ's Church to encourage people in frolicking and dancing, by playing on the violin and drinking an occasional dram, and the smoking and chewing tobacco?

No.

Are conference districts recognized by God's law, or precedent?

Both.

Are there any circumstances that will justify the appointment of a lay member to the district secretaryship in preference to an available Elder?

Yes. An Elder might be available, but not receive the support of a majority.

Has a Priest of the branch the right to withhold the bread and wine from a member when he states he has a hardness against the branch, and refuses to make reconciliation?

Yes. Such an one should be reconciled, unless he shows the branch to be in error.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. A. McIntosh, Alliston, Ontario, writes, March 29th, 1882:

I am encouraged by the tone of the Herald when I read the onward march of the gospel banner in the various parts of the field, and also to see that the clouds are bursting. Truly

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."
"The bud may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower."

Bro. John Smith, 73 Linden street, New Bedford, Massachusetts, writes, March 31st:

Bro. G. T. Griffiths has done a good work with his labors in the Boston Branch. During his ministrations four have been baptized.

Bro. Ole Lee, Xenia, Iowa, writes:

I would like to give my testimony on tobacco. I have been a slave to it for the last ten years, and during that time it has almost destroyed me.

I want to ask any one how much good has it done? I answer, none at all. Dear brethren, let us put this evil away, and put the money where it will do some good.

A GOOD word for J. J. Strang:

"Col. De Land, of the Saginaw Herald, was in the legislature as clerk and reporter when "King Strang" was there, and says of him: "We knew Strang well, and knew that he was a far better man than he has sometimes been painted to be. As a legislator he was vigilant, careful, and just, and some of the best laws of those days were made by his pen and influence. In politics he was a democrat, as all Mormons always are, but if that church never developed worse men than Strang their sins had not so well found them out in these latter days."

News Summary.

March 22d.—Nine polygamists, out of eleven members composing the City Council of Ogden, have resigned, and it is said that the vacancies have been filled by the Mayor by the appointment of others who are not polygamists in practice.

A company of Englishmen have bought sixty thousand acres of land near Jamestown, Dakota, and propose to break up about five thousand acres this year.

By the strike and lockout at the Pacific mills, Lawrence, Mass., there are stopped 135,000 cotton spindles, 25,500 worsted spindles, 4,500 looms and other machinery, throwing fully 5,300 employes out of work.

A fire near Northampton, Eng., yesterday destroyed twenty-five houses and rendered one hundred persons homeless. Another at Emsl, Hungary, destroyed three hundred and fifty houses and caused the loss of nine lives.

Three strong shocks of earthquake were felt in in Scios. People have taken refuge in tents.

23d.—Ripon, Wis., has been visited by a disastrous fire, which destroyed all the buildings on the west side of the public square. The loss is estimated at from $125,000 to $150,000.

A work-train, having some sixty men on board, broke through a bridge over Sweetbrier Creek, seventeen miles west of Bismarck. The accident being caused by the breakage of a wheel. One of the cars took fire and eight men were either killed by the fall or burned to death. Twenty-three others were more or less injured.

The twenty-fourth annual report issued by the Board of Trade shows that the approximate value of farm produce shipped from Chicago in 1881 was $340,675,000—an increase of over $35,000,000 over the shipments in 1880, and this too notwithstanding the unfavorable state of the grain trade during last year.

24th.—An invitation to Moody and Sanky to spend a year in London in evangelical work has been signed by three hundred persons of prominence in Great Britain.

Longfellow, the poet, is seriously ill with inflammation of the bowels.

The Proctor house, at Kearsage mountain, New Hampshire, valued at $75,000, was yesterday swept away by flames.

Mr. Blaine asserts that Peru is being despoiled for the joint benefit of Chili and the English speculators who furnished her money and iron-clads for the conquest.

A loss of $75,000 was incurred at Leavenworth, Kansas, by a flour-dust explosion in the Novelty mills. Five men were seriously burned.

By a vote of 387 to 42, the British House of Commons granted to Prince Leopold an additional annuity of £10,000, and a pension of £6,000 yearly for his widow in the event of his death.

In the harbor of Philadelphia, yesterday, the boiler of the tug boat Henry C. Spratt exploded, killing five men. Great damage was done in all directions, pier No. 8 having been burned and the tug Ella sunk.

25th.—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, America's most distinguished poet and sweetest singer, passed calmly and peacefully from earth yesterday. He died at his home in Cambridge, Mass., at the ripe age of 73, and the event, though not unexpected, will bring a thrill of sorrow to the hearts of millions.

Seven murderers paid the penalty of their crimes yesterday. Two were hanged at Harrisburg, one at Pittsburg, one at Clearfield, one at Middleburg, Pa., one at Angelica, N. Y., and one at Rock Island, Ill.

The small-pox rages throughout Hayti. In Port au Prince and environs alone 4,478 deaths have occurred.

The Protestant Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, New York, was damaged by fire $50,000.

27th.—The steamer Toronto, at Liverpool from Halifax, lost 113 head of cattle.

Four colored men were drowned by the swamping of boat near Layton's Station, Pa.

A life-boat rescuing a ship-wrecked crew in a gale was capsized and two crews of nineteen persons drowned, near Havre, France.

A very destructive conflagration occurred at Richmond, Va., yesterday, resulting in the loss of property worth between $500,000 and $600,000. The fire had its origin in the southern end of a railroad bridge. After burning a large four-story tobacco factory the flames with wonderful speed enveloped and destroyed several other tobacco factories and stemmeries, the Vulcan Iron Works, a gristmill, twenty tenements occupied by poor people, 300 feet of railroad trestle-work, many freight cars, and small buildings, and quantities of coal and lumber. One life was lost and there were several minor casualties.

28th.—Lightning struck the dwelling of James Kumberd, of Wahoo, killing that gentleman instantly. No other inmate of the house was injured, although the family was quite large. The wind was furious and the thunder and lightning terrific.

The coasting steamer Pelton foundered in the British channel yesterday and eighteen persons were drowned.

Sixty houses and fifty out-buildings at Baeszenfa and 248 houses at Paks, Austria, burned. Several hundred families are in destitution.

A curious phenomenon was observed yesterday afternoon, during a thunder shower in Atchison, Kansas. While the rain pattered steadily a shower of pebbles, ranging in size from a pea to a hickory-nut, fell almost over the entire city. They were round, as if having been worn by water.

A gunpowder explosion at Oakland, Cal., yesterday caused the death of eleven persons.

During a severe gale this afternoon at Evansburg, Pa., a three story brick house in the course of erection was blown down, one man was killed, two were fatally injured, and five others slightly hurt. A similar accident occurred in Pittsburg, this afternoon, the wind blowing down a frame house and fatally injuring two workmen.

29th.—A violent hurricane swept over Monroe, La., destroying much property.

News from Winnipeg, Minn., says another storm has entirely blocked the railroads and prevented the running of trains. The snow is now on a three-foot level along the Canadian Pacific, and there can be no traveling until mild weather.

The storm in Southeastern Alabama blew down the house of R. J. Richardson, killing him. P. Redding, near Cuttburt, Ga., and Mrs. Pond and Mr. Martin, near Brown's Station, were killed. Numbers of people were badly hurt and many houses demolished.

A cyclone passed near Loachapoka, Ala., doing great damage and killing two men.

Forty cases of small pox were reported today, and five deaths. This is the largest number yet reported in one day at Cincinnati. Six new cases of small pox were reported yesterday at Chicago.

Six hundred Irish girls were landed at Castle Garden, N. Y., last night from the steamer City of Montreal. The oldest one is only 23. Not a male passenger came on the ship with them. They were sent here by agents of a society who make a speciality of caring for females, and each one has a place provided for her.

31st.—The Sicilian Vespers commemoration begins tomorrow at Palermo, Italy. Garibaldi is exerting himself to maintain tranquillity. Garibaldi, in a letter to the people, reminds them that "To them belongs, as masters of the art of expelling tryants, the initiative in expelling from Italy the prop of all tyranny—the Papacy."

The Mississippi River packet, Golden City, from New Orleans to Cincinnati, was burned at Memphis early yesterday morning. She carried a crew of about sixty, and forty cabin passengers, including fifteen ladies and nine children. It is believed that at least thirty of the passengers were lost.

Severe washouts have occurred along the line of the Central Pacific Railroad, caused by the melting of mountain snows. All trains are stopped, and the road will not be open to traffic for several days.

The Governor of Maryland has approved the bill establishing the whipping-post as a punishment for wife-beaters.

Serious labor troubles exist in Spain, and a state of siege is threatened in Catalonia. Strikers at Barcelona have proceeded to overt acts of violence.

Consideration of the proposed bills for the reduction of letter-postage will be had by the House Committee on Post Offices and Roads today. It is claimed that a reduction of letter-postage to two cents would only cause a small and temporary diminution of the revenue, and would ultimately result in a large increase thereof.

April 1st.—Pueblo, Colo., was the scene of a lynching affair Friday night, two young horse-thieves being taken from the jail and hanged in the public street.

The steamship Greece, from New York, to Liverpool lost 154 head of cattle on the passage.

A large three story brick building, a safe factory, and five brick dwellings burned at Pittsburg, Pa.

A large fire in Forest City, Ark., destroyed a block and a half of business houses.

Three men were legally hung for murder yesterday: one at Chatham, Va., and two at Selma, Ala.

3d.—During a furious storm at Reading, Pa., a number of persons sought refuge in a shed adjoining the city reservoir, the wall of which was blown over on the shed, and three people were killed, one fatally wounded, and two seriously injured.

Fire broke out yesterday afternoon in the wooden building temporarily occupied as the Dakota Territorial Insane Asylum at Yankton, and four of the inmates were burned to death. There were fifty patients in the institution.

Cornelius J. Vanderbilt committed suicide at the Glenham Hotel in New York, by shooting himself through the head.

The steamer Lake Winnipeg, from New York, lost fifty-five head of cattle on the voyage.

Dynamite was placed on a window-sill of the police barracks at Limerick, Ireland, to-day and exploded, destroying neighboring warehouses.

An ocean disaster of a serious character, and probably involving a large loss of life, is reported. A Spanish steamer on the way from Liverpool to Porto Rico collided off Cape Finisterre with the Royal Mail Company's steamer Douro, from Brazil, and both vessels were sunk. One hundred and forty-eight of the crews and passengers were picked up in boats, and fifty-one are missing. The Douro had £53,000 in specie on board.

A great sensation was created this morning by the announcement that Jesse James, the notorious bandit, had been shot and killed in St Joseph, Missouri. When people became assured of the fact the excitement grew intense, and crowds of people gathered at the scene of the shooting. In a small frame cottage in the southeast part of the city Jesse James had lived with his wife since November. Robert and Charles Ford, two of his gang, have made their headquarters at his house, and Charles, it is said, has lived with him since November. Robert arrived about ten days ago, and the three have been making preparations for a raiding expedition on which they were to start to-night. James and the two Fords were in the front room together, about nine o'clock this morning. The former took off his belt and laid it on the bed preparatory to washing himself, when Robert Ford stepped up behind him and sent a bullet through his brain. The ball entered his head at the base of the brain, coming out over his eye.

The Fords at once made known what they had done, and gave themselves up. They are now under guard at the court house. The body of James was conveyed to an undertaker's where a photograph was taken. His wife telegraphed the news to his mother. A number of men have identified the body beyond question.

4th.—A great snow-storm has been raging at St. Johns, N. F., since 12 last night, and there are no indications of its cessation. The steamer Nimrod has not yet arrived. She is deeply laden, and fears are entertained for her safety. The harbor Grace fleet is still jammed in the ice, which is sixteen feet thick at the mouth of that harbor.

Half the business portion of Dayton, W. T., burned last night.

A fire at Otter Lake, Mich., yesterday, which was started by tramps sleeping in a barn, destroyed 4,500,000 feet of lumber belonging to S. J. Murphy and others, and burned some twenty buildings. Fourteen families were rendered homeless. Loss, $75,000.

A negro was lynched in Kansas City last evening. In resisting arrest, he had shot and killed a police officer.

Correspondence.

FALL RIVER, Mass.,

March 27th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—At our last monthly business meeting, our worthy president, John Gilbert, gave in his resignation as President of the Branch; it was accepted, and Bro. John Potts was appointed in his place. Bro. John Gilbert has been president for several years, and we the members of the said Branch, do pray that God will bless him in all his labors of love. He has been appointed by the Massachusetts District to labor in said district, from conference to conference, as the President of the District shall direct.

Bro. John is capable to preach the everlasting gospel before any community in the world, where the English language is understood. As a brother he is worthy of the prayers of all God's people, he has been with the branch in Fall River since its organization; he has labored with its members for good since that time up to the present; and as a brother he is loved by us all. He has a noble heart; the gospel to him is the Pearl of Great Price; he has left all for its sake; and we hope, may we know that God will bless him, and all that has done the same. We pray for the welfare of Zion, and ask an interest in the prayers of her children.

We remain yours in the gospel of peace,

JAMES HALSTEAD,

Clerk of the Branch.

NEWPORT, Cal., March 14th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—We have had another good conference of three days' session, where the Saints enjoyed themselves in the gifts of the Spirit, and peace and unity reigned. Another strengthening time for the weak and the wavering. There are some good Saints in this Southern District, and some good people believing the work; but laborers are few. One strong spoke in the wheel, Bro. J. F. Burton, leaves us for a mission elsewhere, as General Conference may direct. He will be much missed by many who feel the loss. And who shall supply the place? Can the General Conference send a man? An Elder sent here will be well cared for, and the field is wide. Bro. Burton leaves with the faith and good wishes of the Saints throughout the whole district,—his faithful labors and kind words will long be remembered in Southern California. Your humble servant could never wish for a more faithful traveling companion than Elder Burton. May the protecting hand of the good Lord ever be over him and his most worthy companion, Sister Burton, wherever their lot may be cast in the great vineyard of the Lord. The watchcare has fallen to my lot for the time being, but my intentions are to return homeward during the Summer, if all is well. While I remain I trust to be guided by the good Spirit, that the cause may not suffer.

I am pleased to learn from Bro. McIntosh's letter, from Australia, that some of my kindest friends while there, have come into the Church; Brn. Reed, Stewart and McIntosh, are all good men, and will make their mark in the world in favor of the great latter day work yet. I hope Australia will be remembered at the Conference sitting, and good men sent to aid the work there, as Bro. Gillen may soon return. The work on the Islands seems to prosper, if properly and truthfully represented. One mistake I see in David Brown's letter. It is headed "Papeete, Sandwich Island." There is no such place in the Sandwich Islands. Papeete is the principal port of the Island of Tahiti, one of the Society Islands. I am sorry they are so far out of the line of steamers running from San Francisco to Sydney, or they might be visited by brethren going to Australia. They are an honest, innocent, good people, and can be easily led by a proper shepherd, and among them are men of faith. May they be remembered in the prayers of the faithful.

This district are all pleased with the Herald, and it is earnestly expected in due time. The interest is growing, and many old-timers are waiting the result of Congress on the much marriage system of Utah. Who are so blind as those who won't see—and if the blind lead the blind, can they escape the ditch.

May this find you well prepared for the hard toil of another General Conference, and may you have a good time, and much good be accomplished to the satisfaction of the many,

Is my prayer,

G. RODGER.

LITTLE DEER ISLE, Maine,
March 11th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—Thirteen years ago to-day, I obeyed my Heavenly Father's call, on the Isle of Grand Manan, New Brunswick, under the hands of Elder T. W. Smith. I was a class leader in the Methodist Church, when my brother found me. I was not altogether satisfied with the Methodist order, and I was not sure that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints were right; and as I listened to my brother's first sermon, and viewed it from a prejudiced standpoint, I thought the worst of all had come at last; but as I listened with delight to the two following sermons, and although much surprised to think that a people everywhere so much evil spoken of, should hold to so much of a God-like principle, by the force of his argument I was compelled to confess and offer myself for the Kingdom of God. I entered immediately into the ministry, and to-day I can say that since I obeyed the gospel there is a great difference between the experience I had in the Methodist Church and the present one. The Lord promised that his aid and power should be with any and all that would obey his order, and I testify before God, angels and man, that for the past thirteen years, I know God has blessed me, and made full proof of my ministry; for I've seen by the prayer of faith, children that were given up to die, restored to health, so that inside of one half hour they were playing on the floor. I've seen the eyes of the blind made to see, and thank God can see to-day as well as most of people. I've seen those of quick consumption given up to die by skillful physicians, and to-day are well. I have heard many a Latter Day Saint speak in tongues, and give the interpretation thereof; have heard them speak in prophecy, and see the revelations have a fulfillment; I've seen the waves of the sea calmed down, and the mighty winds that were blowing, stopped as quick as an express train could stop her mighty speed. By prayer I've seen the rain stop its falling streams till all arrived home from meeting, and then rain all night. I've seen the mighty power of God displayed in various ways and at different times, and have been blessed in the gifts of the gospel myself. And notwithstanding all the trials of the past thirteen years that I've been called to pass through, God has blessed me abundantly. When others have forsaken me, I've held to the rod of iron, and looked to my Lord for help. Although I've baptized over two hundred people, but out of that number I find many of them striving to enter the kingdom. And may God bless my children begotten in the gospel. I've traveled day and night that I might not be chargeable to any, notwithstanding, the Saints have helped me on my way many a time, to whom I offer my heartfelt thanks. And although I look over the past thirteen years of my life, and verily feel to regret that I've not lived nearer my God. And what I may be called to pass through for the next thirteen years, God only knows, and I've only to wait and see the fulfillment of what may approach; but still I pray God help me to stand fast in my liberty, and not be moved out of the way of right. I will try by the help of him that sitteth upon the throne of his glory.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

MT. PLEASANT, March 27th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—We received the little paper with great pleasure, and have read and re-read it with care, and thankfulness to the sender, as it is the first we have ever received, and in fact the first word we have ever heard from any of our brethren in a good many years. We appreciate it very highly, hoping we may hear from some of you soon again. We once belonged to the Saginaw Branch, but we moved up here among strangers, on a new place, and having Irish Catholics for daily companions and neighbors, being very weak, we forgot our God; but he had not forgotten us. For eight years we worked for the pleasures of this world, and very little we found; but now we are trusting in that great God, the giver of every good and perfect gift, to order the remainder of our lives to his name's honor and glory; and through his love and mercy, may obtain eternal life in his kingdom. We are all alone here; there are a good many different sects and denominations, but none of our faith, and a great many never heard there was such a church as the Church of Christ, and I think a good many, if they could hear, would believe; but God in his own good time and pleasure will bring everything around right, if it is so to be. I will put my trust in God, hoping that something may be done for this place yet, and that we may become strengthened.

Yours in love, faith and hope,

LUCINDA LOOMIS.

Dear Brother Joseph.—As my wife was writing, I thought I would write a few lines to you, to let you know that I am not a stranger to Israel's God, nor to the faith of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; but I am as Daniel of old, waiting to see the salvation of the Lord. We have been hungering for the bread of life, and the baptism of the Holy Ghost, that we may be guided in the way of all truth, and have my vessel filled with new oil, and put on fire by the Holy Ghost, that I might be a light to the blind, and preach deliverance to the captives, and be no mocker, that my hands should be made strong. I believe in a God of power, and a God of love, and a God of revelation. I do not believe in putting our light under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and I bare witness that God has a people here, but not according to knowledge. The cry comes from Macedonia, come and help us.

Yours in love,

SQUIRE LOOMIS.

MAESTEG, January 29th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Having faith in the latter day work, I am anxious that the members of our faith should increase. I joined the Reorganization in Merthyr Tydvil, Wales, at the time when the first missionaries came, and from that time till now I have been as a wandering sheep; that is, that I have not been near a branch of the Church, so that I could be instructed in its laws and ordinances; and as I am without the Book of Doctrine and Covenants or the Book of Mormon, I can not defend our faith as I would. I have long desired the former book with the revelation on the American war. I have said that I joined the Church, or in other words, am a sample of the fruit from the seed sown by the first missionaries of the Reorganized Church in Wales; do those sowers ever think to come to this part of the Lord's vineyard again. Please excuse me for asking such a question, but I should like to see some able one come this way, and I don't think that a great deal of increase in members will be among us until such an one comes. I do not despise those in charge of the Welsh Mission, but am willing to support them in all good works. The seed is liable to fall in different soils, and without care, die, then I say with care they might be kept alive. That some has fallen as it were upon a rock in Wales is evident; for branches have been broken up, and its members scattered because they were not cared for.

The Brighamites are very busy in Wales, some having come this way of late, and changing views with others not of our faith.

BAINBRIDGE, Ross Co., Ohio,

March 23d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—I left Stewartville, Missouri, about two months ago, and came here to help take care of my sister, who is much afflicted. I had a faint hope that I would find some Saints here, but have not met one since I left home. The people here seem to know nothing about the Saints, or they think they are all just like the Salt Lake Mormons. I have been doing considerable talking on the gospel, since I have been here; but I am such a weak instrument. I do pray the Lord to send some Elders here to teach these people. Some are interested, and say they wish to know more about these things, and wish some Elders would come this way. I feel very unworthy trying to instruct these people on the latter day work, for I have a great many questions to answer, and I feel that I have need that some one teach me. I hope to have an interest in the prayers of all the Saints in this my time of need, that my faith fail not, and that I may be able to discharge my whole duty in the fear of God. I miss the society of the Saints very much, and think of the precious meetings we had at Stewartville; but I am not discouraged in this good work; my faith is stronger than ever before. How I do hope some Elders will come this way soon.

Yours in the faith of the gospel,

HANNAH HOFFMAN.

PAIGE CITY, Iowa.

Dear Herald.—I have just read Mother Baldwin's letter, and my heart swells with love, and sorrow, and fear, for the branch of which I am a member; living over forty miles away, I can see the danger like one out on picket guard. I see the enemy with all his army surrounding the camp, while the officers are all asleep. Well, I believe I will risk one shot, and try to warn the army; but alas, dear old mother and sister, you are too weak to awaken Plum Creek Branch; but we will try. God has said he would take the weak things of this world to thrash this nation. Now if the priesthood is weary of reaping, let us weak things go to thrashing, and we may save a good lot of grain by it. No; I would just as leave thrash Fremont District, as there is where my interest (selfishness, you know) is. In the first place, God was displeased with the branch, because they did not build a house of worship. I expect the poor Priest and Teacher were discouraged, as I know their Deacon was, trying hard to keep one of Satan's houses in order, or for the Lord and his Saints to meet in. Well, they tried four years ago to build a house; four members offered them one acre of land. Some wanted it to be deeded to the branch, and others to the district; but many times I have heard predicted that the branch will go down if they did not build a house to worship in. Now sisters and little children, let us try and build a meeting house in Plum Creek Branch. Just read the fifth chapter of Nephi on the 37th page of the Book of Mormon, and if your faith is weak, think of him commanded of God to build a ship, with not so much as tools or fire. See him rubbing the rocks together to get fire. Not much wonder his brethren laughed and called him a fool. Well, maybe they will call us the same. Let us plant a piece of ground in something to sell, or raise some chickens, or anything in our power to raise money to build a house; and have it deeded to the Church of Jesus Christ, asking God's blessing on our weak efforts; and let the glory be to his dear Son. Let us all help Bro. Caffall build the house in Denver, and in return ask his prayers in our behalf. But stop, I guess the prayers needed most are dollars and cents. So, forgive me, dear Saints.

I remain in the kingdom,
SARAH JANE GISH.

WILMINGTON, Delaware.

Bro. J. Smith.—Bro. Joseph Stewart preached in my house once since I have been here; but Bro. Gurley tells me that he hopes that there will be some one through here to preach the truth to us in the future, which I pray there may be. We try to be faithful all the same, but we are at a loss, for we have no church to go to here. We sometimes go to Philadelphia, but not often; and we would like to have a branch here if we could have one. Mrs. Neeld has been a member since she was sixteen years old, and she often wishes she could have a branch here to attend. I am afraid I shall weary you with this my first to you, so will close, asking your prayers in our behalf that we may continue in the bonds.

Your brother and sister in Christ,
S. and M. W. NEELD.

CUBA, Kansas, February 5th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—While preaching in Jewel county, this State, I was holding meetings in a place where our doctrine was new to the people; many came out to hear, opposition ran high, it was my first among entire strangers, only the Spirit and the word could I claim as old, tried friends. God blessed me. The fourth day I visited the school. While there a stranger came and called for me. I went out, he reached his hand, gave me a warm greeting, and said, "I heard you were a Latter Day Saint." I told him I was trying to be; (still holding his hand, "But who are you?" Said he, "D. L. Smith, a United Brethren." "But," said he, "I know all about you folks. I lived right in the Buffalo Prairie Branch. O, they teach the gospel taught of old, and they have got it too.")

He loved the Saints, but he did not know it until he had left them. He carries the Doctrine and Covenants with him, and had come a long way to see me; had to return and take a hired team back. Came back a foot to meeting that night, went with me to the next appointment, eight miles away. He seemed like an angel sent to cheer me; and that the Saints of Buffalo Prairie sent him by their faithfulness is clear. O, Brethren, cheer the Elders on by faithfulness. He testified that the gifts were ours, and that he had heard the Saints speak in tongues. Saw the sick that were healed. He believes the doctrine. I would love to tell the Saints much that he told me, that strengthened me for the work; but lest I weary your patience I will forbear, by telling a dream of his. A messenger came to him and took him by one arm and led him into a Saints' Chapel, gave him a hymn book and said, "Preach." He lined a hymn, the people sang, and 'twas the sweetest music he ever heard; he preached, and was filled with joy unspeakable; closed the meeting; the people left two by two, up a beautiful lane that led direct to heaven, only wide enough for two to walk side by side; and as they passed along that gentle ascent, they kept praising God continually. How differently this man felt to what he would had the Saints ill treated him. Let us put on the whole armor of God, "and have your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace."

Your brother in gospel bonds,
G. W. BEEBE.

DENVER, Colo., March 31st, 1882.

Dear Herald.—You will please grant a corner, to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from the members of the Edenville Branch, Iowa, in response to my letter. Said letter contains twenty-three names of the above branch, giving to aid in the erection of a house of worship in Denver: 15 Lifters, 75c.; 12½ Boomers, $1.25; total, $2.00. And permit me, in behalf of the working Saints of Colorado, to offer thanks for this generous offer and evidence of interest, by the kind Saints of the above branch, in the contemplated project in this land; ready and willing, and first to respond to the appeal. And they may rest assured, of being duly credited, and when success shall have rewarded the arduous labors, which will be indispensable to reach the object, and the Colorado Saints shall be privileged to worship within the hallowed walls of their own house, they will remember the noble and generous-hearted Saints of Edenville. Nor can I fail to appreciate the confidence reposed in the writer by them, as is evidenced in the fact of their willingness to aid on the strength of the appeal he made. For confidence of, and respect from those who are thirsting for righteousness, and thereby striving for the promised rest, is far more valuable than gold. For where and by whom it is enjoyed, bringing forth legitimate fruits as evidence of its existence, there is peace, sweet peace, so cheering to the soul that its recipients, whether in affluence or poverty, can sing as none others can:

"Mid scenes of confusion and creature complaint,
How sweet to my soul is communion with Saints."

To live in each other's affections and confidence is but the reasonable service of Latter Day Saints. But, alas! in this imperative, heaven imposed work, how slow we move?

And yet how fast and sure we go,
While struggling in the flesh below,
To share the rest God will bestow
On all that shall his wisdom show.
Or hear the sad and dread decree,
Far from my presence you must flee.
O! awful thought, and is it so,
Must I secure while here below,
By patience, zeal, and constant care,
The precious gift, that Saints shall share?
O, then, thou God of love, I pray,
Help me to fear thee day by day.
Fear, did I say; O! what is this?
Must I have fear, to reach the bliss
God will impart to a soul that's cleansed;
Strive then, my soul, for grace God sends,
That when thy work on earth shall close,
Thou may'st rest in sweet repose.
But, hark! my soul, what hear'st thou here?
Man; crying aloud; you needn't fear;
For fear will not you elevate,
Science alone will make you great;
Come, then, unto our school, I say,
That wiser you may grow each day.
Must then I climb the dizzy heights,
At which science points, and man invites,
Then where! Or how! Shall I gain rest?
For how can I this science test?
O! cheerless thought, is there no balm
But thee, the troubled soul to calm?
Then let me into despair go;
Why tarry longer here below?
But stay, thou fleeting soul, I pray,
For light may come as bright as day.
Hark! hark! to thee a voice doth speak.
Who is it, tell me, I entreat?
'Tis Jesus Christ, the mighty one,
Who long ago his work began,
To save all men from Satan's power,
Who firm shall stand to the last hour.
Then turn from science, so complex,
And study well the golden text,
That peradventure you may find
Food that's adapted to thy mind.
For Christ, the mighty one has said,
To all who in the straight path tread:
Peace, knowledge, joyful life, shall flow,
What'er's thy station here below.
The gospel is the science of life,
And 'twill keep all men from strife,
If they for strength shall look to heaven,
For its fundamentals are just seven.
The strength of which are not in books,
Nor in too straight and saintly looks.
But faith and works must be combined,
And then a heaven we shall find.
Go on then, Saints, at Edenville,
For you have caused our souls to thrill
With heaven's true, electric fire,
Which comes to none but do desire;
But ere I close, I would entreat
Ye Edenville Saints to rise and speak,
That we may know why thou dost send,
Thy gifts to us, thy far off friends.
Thy faces, few of whom we've seen,
And of such love did hardly dream,
That fifteen lifters, and twelve boomers
Has caused in us, thy far off brothers.
But stay, to speak we would not trouble,
For you have thought all things are bubbles,
Save God's blessed gospel plan;
And this has made your souls expand.
Receive our thanks, for nothing better
Can we offer in this short letter;
Save that our prayers to God ascend,
That he may be your lasting friend;
That when you shall have fought the fight,
You may behold him in his might.
And now to readers do we say,
Lifters and boomers will us pay.
A lifter is five cents, a boomer's ten.
So send them in, and don't contend,
By fifties and hundreds as fast as you can,
For such lifters and boomers we surely can stand.
JAMES CAFFALL.

MAGNOLIA, IOWA,

March 10th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—When I last wrote I was at Blair, Nebraska, a beautiful town lying among the hills near the Missouri. I had the privilege of the United Brethren Church, and although I would post up notices, yet many did not hear of the meeting, because about as soon as I was out of sight of the notices, some one or something tore them down. While there I stopped in a barber shop to get my hair shingled, and by some means was led into conversation upon religious matters. During the conversation the barber asked me a few questions, which were answered, when he began to converse quite freely and told me his feelings on the Spirit communication with man, the resurrection, and on the eternal judgment, which were identical with the views of the Church. He said he had begun to tell his views to others, and that he had been laughed and sneered at, until he thought he would not say anything about them to anybody. This talk seemed to be somewhat convincing to him, and he said he would investigate further concerning our faith.

Since laboring there, I have labored at Fremont, the Union Branch, at the Pleasant Grove Branch, and at the Everett and Johnson School-houses, north-west of Fremont; also, in Saunders, Sarpy, and Douglas counties. At Fremont I baptized five persons, most of which, I think, will be shining lights to the Church. One of those baptized, Bro. E. Thomas, enacted a scene at his baptism that I never witnessed before, and know not as I ever shall again. As he came to the edge of the water, just before entering, he held up his right hand, within which he held two pipes and a piece of tobacco, saying as he did so to those upon the bank: "Brethren and sisters, and friends: I desire this day to commence my life anew, and I desire with the rest of my evil habits, to cast these aside, and ask you to pray for me that I may by the help of God live a new life."

He then came into the water, and just before being immersed, dropped the pipes and tobacco into the water. And the last time I saw him, although he had been a great user of tobacco in the past, he said he had not wanted to use the pipe nor tobacco since.

A good work can be done near North Bend; some quite anxious that I should stay longer with them when I was there. In Saunders and Sarpy counties, I found many quite friendly to the truth. I found in Sarpy county quite an excitement, but I think it will,—by wise doings and saying among the Saints there, and those who may go there,—result in great good to the truth. The wise man has said: "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." There is a principle in this saying, that is in my opinion, well to be remembered in this case as it now exists, and probably in a hundred just such cases now existing in the world. You will probably hear more of the particulars sometime in the future, by one who is better, and more intimately acquainted with the facts. It was referred to in Herald of March 1st, page 73.

In speaking of the general outlook of the work in Nebraska, I can say it is improving in most places I have been. In fact as far as getting a hearing, it is good. Sorry to say though, that there is a sad neglect on the part of a few of the branches in not assembling themselves often together, and each bearing a part of this great work of the latter days. In others of the branches there is a good example set, and a great desire on the part of the branch to let their light shine. I had been associated in my labors with Bro. Nelson Brown, president of the Northern Nebraska District, whose all is in the work; and Bro. G. M. L. Whitman, president of the Union Branch, who is a kind and faithful companion. I have been kindly entertained by Saints and friends wherever I have been, and by this means express my thanks for the same. The labors I have done have strengthened me in the knowledge of the truth and the hope of eternal life. The sacrifices and privations I have made and been called to pass through have not discouraged, but have encouraged me to move onward in this labor of love. The outlook is that the stigma which has hung upon the fair name of the Church, by which the way of truth has been evil spoken of, will soon be removed.

Praying for the weal of Zion's cause, I subscribe myself:

A laborer for the promotion of truth,
To redeem man from the fall,
In which he's plunged himself through sin;
And through truth, God's children recall.
J. FRANK MINTUN.

ROD EAU, Ontario,
April 3d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—Since I last addressed you we have had quite an interesting time. There is a Reverend Divine living in the village here, by the name of Pomeroy; he has been abusing and scandalizing the Latter Day Saints a great deal, and finally gave out a lecture in Buckhorn for March 20th, on the Book of Mormon; a printed synopsis of which I have seen, and must say it is the worst lot of falsehood and misconstruction I ever saw on paper.

Bro. Deuel and Bro. John Shippy attended, and after the lecturer got through, he gave the privilege for any one to correct any mistakes, or show where he had misconstrued anything. Accordingly Bro. Deuel went up to the stand, and wished to make a few remarks, but was prevented by the Reverend gentleman, who threatened that if he did not get out of there he would be brought before a magistrate. So you see that he had no show there.

The next day Bro. Shippy and Deuel got bills printed for a reviewal of the Reverend Pomeroy's lecture in our church here, to come off the next Friday night (24th), and distributed them around pretty well. When the time came, our church was full, and quite a number had to go away, because they could not get in. The subject was ably handled, and many seem to think that the Rev. D's lecture got a good airing. They did not have time to finish that night, so it was announced that Bro. Deuel would finish it on Monday, 29th.

Here permit me to go back a little in my story. I had sent for Bro. Deuel to administer to my oldest child, on Sunday the 19th, that is how he happened to be here at the time of the lecture in Buckhorn, about four miles from here. The child was very sick, and was administered to four times before the fever abated; and thanks be to God, he got better without the aid of a doctor. By the time the Monday night lecture came off, this was pretty well known through the village, and it seemed as though Satan was raging about it.

About the close of Bro. Deuel's remarks, he was interrupted by a man asking him if we believed in raising the dead, which was replied to. From that began quite a controversy, which lasted about two hours, and amongst other things one man wanted to know if there was any present that were ever healed by the power of God. In answer, quite a number of the brethren and sisters arose and testified to the same. There was some there that tried to prove that the signs were to make believers; but they were confounded in that. I think on the whole we are gaining ground, as there seems to be some investigating the truth, and I hope they will find it. Pray for us that God may bless us, and add more good honest people to our numbers. One man remarked that Bro. Deuel had converted his wife, he also has borrowed the Book of Mormon to read.

Your brother in Christ,
RICHARD COBURN.

EPISCOPAL LAY-WOMAN.

The extraordinary spectacle is to be presented in the Diocese of Minnesota of two women as lay readers in the Protestant Episcopal Church. Bishop Whipple has declared his intention of licensing them, because men are not to be had. Lay readers in the Episcopal Church have not the functions of the clergy, but are simply licensed by the Bishop to read the services and such sermons as he may put into their hand, for such purpose. Lay readers do not generally wear the gown, but in this respect these good sisters are already equipped.

Conference Minutes.

POTTAWATTAMIE DISTRICT.

The quarterly conference of this district was held at Council Bluffs, Iowa, February 25th and 26th, 1882. C. A. Beebe, president pro tem. K. H. Hansen, clerk pro tem.

Reports of Branches.—Council Bluffs Branch contains 127 members; baptized 3, removed 4 Crescent City 85; received by letter 1, died 1.

Official Reports.—C. A. Beebe, Hans Hansen (baptized 1), R. M. Elvin, H. N. Hansen.

Report of Andrew Hall, Bishop's Agent: Due Agent last report $4 37, paid to sister Caffall $45, received in tithings and offerings $52.90, on hand $3 43.

Bro. Andrew Hall was released from the office of District Treasurer, and Bro. L. Davis was elected.

Brn. C. A. Beebe, H. Hansen, A. Hall and H. N. Hansen, were appointed delegates to the General Conference, and instructed to request the Conference to adjourn to meet in the vicinity of Council Bluffs.

All Elders and Priests desiring to preach were instructed to consult the president of the district.

F. Hansen was sustained as clerk, and H. Hansen was elected president for the coming quarter.

Preaching during conference by Brn. Andrew Hall and H. N. Hansen.

Adjourned to meet at Crescent City, Iowa, on the last Saturday in May [27th], 1882, at half past ten o'clock.

LITTLE SIOUX DISTRICT.

The quarterly conference of the above district was held at Little Sioux, Iowa, March 4th, 1882. J. C. Crabb, president; P. Cadwell, assistant; W. C. Cadwell, secretary.

Pres. Crabb made some remarks and suggestions in reference to the present state of the Church, both as to its spiritual condition and its relation to the United States Government and the world; also, as to the apparent lifting of the cloud of opprobrium that has heretofore attached to us as a people of the reorganized body by reason of the sinful practice of the Utah Church. Was satisfied that it would ultimately be established to the satisfaction of all, that the objectionable features of so-called Mormonism is wholly chargeable to the latter day apostasy.

Phineas Cadwell thought that there appeared to be a providence in the scattering of the Saints, especially in relation to the stand they were taking in opposition to the Utah iniquities. Referred to the favor shown recently to President Joseph Smith, and otherwise to the Church; and read some newspaper extracts commendatory of pure Mormonism, as distinguished from Polygamous Mormonism.

Branch Reports.—Union Grove 17; received by letter 1. Spring Creek 45; removed by letter 2. Evening Star 19; removed by letter 4, died 1. Little Sioux 144; no changes, except error of 2 in former reports, being more than should have been reported. Magnolia 163; received by letter 6, removed by letter 4, died 3.

The following ministerial reports were made: Elders J. W. Wight (by letter), E. McEvars, G. Outhouse, B. Lewis, J. B. Lytle, J. M. Putney, R. Farmer, C. Derry, D. Maule, R. Cobb, W. Conyers, W. C. Cadwell, D. M. Gamet, P. Cadwell and J. C. Crabb; Priests J. C. Johnson, W. H. Bradford, G. Conyers and B. M. Green.

J. C. Crabb, P. Cadwell, D. M. Gamet, J. M. Putney and W. C. Cadwell, were appointed as delegates to General Conference, and were authorized to cast the full vote to which this district may be entitled.

W. F. Fallon was elected to succeed J. M. Harvey as Trustee in Trust of the Magnolia meeting house.

J. C. Johnson was appointed a mission to Evening Star Branch.

C. Derry was requested to spend as much time in Magnolia and vicinity as he feels to be consistent with his other duties.

J. C. Crabb and W. C. Cadwell were requested to preach in Magnolia as often as possible.

At the evening session an interesting season of prayer and testimony was enjoyed by the assembled Saints, and much strength and encouragement derived therefrom.

Preaching on Sunday morning by C. Derry.

Committee appointed yesterday to draft resolution of respect and condolence on the death of Brn. Harvey and Carico reported.

Moved and motion prevailed that report be received and adopted and a copy of same placed upon the minutes.

In the afternoon the sacrament was administered by D. M. Gamet and J. M. Putney.

Preaching by Elder J. M. Putney on the Apostasy and the need of a restoration; by Charles Derry on the necessity for continued revelation from God.

Adjourned to meet at Magnolia, Iowa, the first Saturday and Sunday in June [3d, 4th], 1882.

SOUTH-EAST ILLINOIS DISTRICT

Conference was held at Springerton, White county, Illinois, March 4th and 5th, 1882. I. M. Smith, president; G. H. Hilliard, secretary pro tem.

Branch Reports.—Dry Fork 21; died 1, baptized 1. Springerton 59; baptized 4. Alma 15. Tunnel Hill 73; baptized 1, suspended 5. Brush Creek, Deer Creek and Elm River, not reported.

Elders T. P. Green, J. F. Thomas, W. H. Brewer, E. Webb, M. R. Brown, I. M. Smith and G. H. Hilliard, reported. Teachers B. H. Taylor and W. Webb reported.

B. S. Jones was released as Bishop's Agent for this district, and ordered to turn over the funds in his hands to the Bishop.

Brn. Thomas and Walker were appointed to visit Deer Creek and set the branch in order.

By request of Elm River Branch, it was disorganized, and the members requested to unite with the Deer Creek Branch.

Missions: Brn. Thomas, Brown and Walker, to Springerton; Hilliard, Morris and Henson, to Richland county; T. P. Green, to Brush Creek and Dry Fork.

I. M. Smith was sustained as president, and I. A. Morris as clerk of the district for the next quarter.

Adjourned to meet in the Brush Creek Branch, at the Caudle School House, on Saturday, May 27th, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

WESTERN WISCONSIN DISTRICT.

Conference was held at the Wheatville Branch, Crawford county, Wisconsin, February 4th, 5th, 6th, 1882. A. L. Whiteaker president, W. A. McDowell clerk, G. W. Squire assistant.

Branch Reports.—Wheatville 18. Excelsior 8; baptized 1, died 1.

Elders F. M. Cooper, F. Hackett, J. Bierline, A. L. Whiteaker, reported in person; C. W. Lange, by letter. Priests W. O. Clarson and J. Deatz, and Teacher J. W. Whiteaker reported.

Whereas, according to Rules of Order where there is a question pending relating to the legality of the act, or action of individuals, and as the pending branch report is a report of a branch, the legality of which is questioned, and as such act of branch organization was affected by the mutual act of members present; while we give them the privilege of being present, with the privilege to defend such act. Be it resolved, that such parties according to law have no right to vote on the pending question, because if they did it would make them judge and jury to sit and judge and decide the legality of their own act.

English German Freedom Branch report rejected, and another report made with like result.

Whereas, there is difficulty existing in the English German Branch; and whereas, under present circumstances, it seems impossible for the members of the branch to meet in a worshiping capacity, so as to enjoy themselves together as a whole; therefore, be it resolved that this conference grant to Bro. Hackett the right to appoint preaching and prayer meetings for the benefit of those holding to his side, until such times as those troublous shall be brought to an issue, either by arbitration or before a Court of Elders; after which this right shall end.

Resolved that this conference authorize the president of branch to give a Certificate of Baptism to those members of the branch where the Elder that baptized them can not give it.

Resolved that W. McDowell and G. Squire be appointed a committee to labor with Sr. Jane Hasart, and report at the next conference.

Resolved that we sustain A. L. Whiteaker as president, and W. A. McDowell as clerk of the district.

Preaching during the session by Brn. S. H. Whitaker, F. Hackett, J. L. Pride and F. M. Cooper.

Adjourned to meet at the Saints' Hall, on Saturday and Sunday, June 3d and 4th, 1882, at 10 a. m., at North Freedom, Sauk county, Wisconsin.

PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT.

The above conference met at Philadelphia, Pa., 26th March, 1882. J. Stone, president; J. A. Stewart, acting secretary.

Statistical Reports.—Philadelphia 48 members. Hornerstown 21. New Park 15. Brooklyn no report.

Elders Reports.—J. A. Stewart (baptized 4), J. Squires, J. Stone. Priests: W. H. Brown, G. Whiterall and W. H. Harrison, reported.

Resolved, that the New Park Branch, York county, Pa., be received in the Philadelphia District.

That Bro. A. Cameron be elected District Treasurer.

That Bro. E. Lewis' license be returned to him. That J. Stone be sustained president, and J. A. Stewart secretary for the ensuing quarter.

That this conference adjourns to meet in Philadelphia, Pa., on the fourth Sunday in June [25th], 1882.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT.

To the Saints of the Southern Indiana District, Greeting:—As the time of my departure is near at hand, I desire while taking my leave of you, to offer a few words in reference to the present status and prospects of the work. During the fifteen months that I have been laboring in the mission, I must say that we have not made the progress desired and hoped for, and have come far behind our expectations in increase in numbers; and to one who is unacquainted with all the facts in the matter, it would seem indeed discouraging; but when we consider that there has been little or no labor performed by the local ministry, and the extent of the field, and only one weak instrument to labor, it is not to be wondered at, that so little has been accomplished; another drawback is emigration of so many members to "the borders," which, while it is for their best interest, it certainly has a tendency to cripple the work here. One branch has been entirely broken up by this means, and others are very much weakened. The removal of members from a branch seems to discourage those who remain; a feeling of apathy comes over them; they become inactive; and as a matter of course, those out side lose interest. But I am not sure that the Saints are justifiable in excusing their inactivity for the above causes, or reasons; in fact I seriously doubt the right of any Latter Day Saint to throw off the responsibility that rests upon him to be alive and active under any and all circumstances; and if he is left alone in any locality, he should accept the situation and "hold the fort," and form a nucleus about which others might rally; and thus keep up the interest in the great work.

So you see, dear brethren, the hindrances to the progress of the work in the district, for the most part, we are responsible for. Shall we continue so? Shall we who have borne testimony of the truth of this great work, and struggled through the past years to establish it at such a sacrifice, and against such opposition,—shall we now, after having done so much, borne down the tide of opposition, and opened up a great field, whose "golden grain is waving, inviting us to reap,"—shall we now lay down our armor, and stultify ourselves; because, forsooth, some one of the members have moved away, and we feel lonesome; and again some member is not doing right. No; a thousand times no. Rather let us arouse to a sense of our duty. Let us awake and act as valiant Soldiers of the Cross, which implies action in its very nature. Let us by precept and example show to the world that the Gospel of Christ is a system of facts (not fancies), and that we shall reap that which we sow. Up, brethren; up!

For myself, as a missionary, and as your President, I need say but little. My record among you is made. You all know me; know just what I have done, and what I have not done. I can only say that I have acted in all good conscience toward God and my brethren; have tried to deal kindly and lovingly with all; and yet I trust, promptly and fearlessly. In all probability, most of those with whom I have so long and pleasantly associated, will see me no more in this probation, as it is unlikely that I will be sent here again. It is due to you, and the work in this field, that one abler and better than myself should occupy the field. I go invoking the blessings of the Father upon you. I go with none but the kindest feelings toward every one; all the kind tokens of your affections for me, in all the years of associations, have lodged in an appreciative heart, and will be retained as sweet mementos while life lasts; and I indulge the hope that the old man will not be forgotten.

As my last act as District President, I hereby give notice that the next conference for the district will be held at Union Branch, Jefferson county, Indiana, commencing on July 1st, 1882, at half past ten in the forenoon.

B. V. SPRINGER,
President of the District.

OBITUARIES.—Obituary notices not exceeding one hundred words, about twelve lines, will be published free of charge; when exceeding one hundred words, five cents for each additional eight words (one line) will be charged; notices of prominent Church officials excepted. Money to accompany notice.

BORN.

MARTIN.—At Jefferson, Colorado, July 8th, 1881, to Mr. Henry J. and Sister Pluma A. Martin, a son; name, Henry Raleigh.

STUBBART.—At Glenwood, Iowa, 29th March, 1881, to Bro. J. M. and Sister M. A. Stubbart, a daughter. Blessed June 28th, 1882, by Bro. R. J. Anthony, and named Effie Louisa.

DUNDSON.—Near Bartlett, Mills county, Iowa, September 3d, 1880, to James and Sr. M. Dundson, a daughter. Blessed by Bro. Wm. Leeka, February 5th, 1882, and named Virtue Ann.

BENEDICT.—In Cass county, Nebraska, September, 24th, 1881, to Bro. Fenton and Sr. Mary Etta Benedict, a son. Blessed, February 5th, 1882, by Bro. J. R. Badham, and named Charles William.

MARRIED.

PHELPS—DEGROAT.—At the residence of the bride's grandfather, Bro. A. Carpenter, in Arcadia, Lapeer county, Michigan, by Elder James A. Carpenter, February 18th, 1882, Bro. Levi Phelps, of Reese, Tuscola county, Michigan, and Sister Anna M. Degroat, of Dorchester, Elgin county, Ontario.

DIED.

WARD.—Sister Martha Ward died February 22d, 1882, at Neola, Iowa; was born December 24th, 1817, at Cheshire, England; joined the Reorganized Church in 1862. She fell asleep in full faith of a glorious resurrection,—a subject upon which she loved to muse when she would meet with the Saints and loved ones gone before her, where strife is ended, and all is peace. She leaves one daughter and two sons to mourn. Funeral service by Elder D. Chambers, assisted by Elder William Chambers.

She's gone! Her work on earth is done;
Her battle's fought, her race run;
'Tis the path she trod,
For she espoused the glorious cause,
In prompt obedience to the laws
Of the Eternal God.

ROSSER.—At Carbon, Clay county, Indiana, March 5th, 1882, of inflammation of the brain, William Rosser. He was baptized at North Mines Branch, Indiana, July 4th, 1875, by Elder Heman C. Smith. He leaves a son and daughter.

BOYD.—At the residence of Bro. J. W. Salter, Pleasant Ridge, Shelby county, Iowa, March 13th, 1882, of general debility "from old age," Sr. Eliza Boyd. Sister Boyd was born June, 1804, in Belfast, Ireland, being at time of death 77 years and 9 months old. She was baptized by Elder Frank Reynolds, and confirmed by Joseph Smith, jr., 21st July, 1876, at Harlan, Shelby county, Iowa; died in full faith of the Latter Day Work. Sermon by J. W. Chaburn to a large congregation of friends and neighbors.

CLEMENSEN.—At Independence, Mo., February 1st, 1882, of pneumonia, Bro. Charles Samuel Clemensen, aged 26 years, 10 months and 6 days. He had been a member of the Church for about nine years, and was useful as a teacher, and consistent as a member. He leaves a wife and child to mourn over their loss, besides father, mother, two sisters, and the Saints generally. Funeral sermon by Elder Joseph Luff.

LEWIS.—At Bevier, Macon county, Missouri, February 10th, 1882, Sister Mattie, wife of Bro. John Lewis, aged 21 years, 3 months and 1 day. She left a babe two weeks old. She died in full faith of the Latter Day Work. After her death she was brought to Stewartville, and funeral services were held in the Baptist Church; Elder A. H. Smith officiating. She was buried in the Saints' Cemetery, two miles north of the city, mourned by all who knew her.

Mattie dear, thou hast gone and left us
Here alone thy loss to mourn;
Thy tender babe left to us, is dear,
Yet it filleth not thy vacant chair,
Nor drieth up thy husband's bitter tear.
He knew thee but to love thee;
Oh, how soon our transient comforts fly,
And pleasures only bloom to die.
Death has snatched away our darling,
'Jesus, while our hearts are bleeding,
O'er the spoils that death hath won,
Help us that we may meet her
In the resurrection morn.
Then, Mattie, fare thee well!
It will not be long till with the Lord
You will come again;
Then in a sinless world
With all the Saints, we'll greet thee
At the supper of the Lamb.

SISTER J. H. MERRIAM.

JOHNSON.—Near Lamon, Iowa, March 31st, 1882, of congestion of the lungs resulting from a relapse after having the measles, Bro. George J. Johnson, aged 51 years, 6 months and 26 days. He removed to this part of Iowa from Crawford county, where he had been a member of the Church since May 4th, 1871; baptized by Bro. R. R. Montgomery. As a husband and father he was faithful and attentive to their interests, and as a citizen he is spoken of as having been one of the most honest among men, and as a diligent, hard-working one all his days. He was the father of thirteen children, all of them living, ten of them at home with their mother, and all stricken by this sudden and great loss. May God comfort her and them. Funeral sermon by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

HOPKINS.—At Lamon, Iowa, March 25th, 1882, of congestion of the lungs, caused by the measles, William W., only child of Bro. Frank and Sr. Ada Hopkins, aged 2 years, 6 months and 28 days. A very heavy loss, and coming suddenly and unexpectedly upon those desolate hearts thus tried for the first time by such a loss. Funeral services at the house at the time by Elder W. W. Blair, a storm preventing full services, which were afterwards attended to by Elder H. A. Stebbins in the Saints' Chapel.

PEMBERTON.—At Central City, Nebraska, November 12th, 1881, Addie May, daughter of Bro. Charles and sister Sarah Pemberton, aged 5 years and 7 months.

BRACKENBURY.—At Independence, Mo., February 17th, 1882, Ethel, infant daughter of Bro. John W. and Sr. Samantha Brackenbury, aged 21 days.

BRACKENBURY.—At Independence, Mo., February 23d, 1882, of pleurisy, Sr. Samantha, beloved wife of Elder John W. Brackenbury; she was born near Nauvoo, May 7th, 1842; was baptized into the Reorganization; in San Bernardino, Cal., in 1866, by Elder George Sparks, and remained a member thereof until death. She was beloved by the Saints, and much esteemed by the acquaintances she formed outside of the Church. She has left a husband and nine children to mourn. It is a sad bereavement, indeed. May heaven afford commensurate grace, is the prayer of the entire branch, we believe. Funeral service by Elder Joseph Luff.

JONES.—Hyrum O., son of Bro. Seborn and Sr. Miriam Jones, near Milton, Santa Rosa county, Florida, January 24th, 1882, aged 8 years and 12 days. He had just carried his father's dinner to him, and was walking behind a log that was being rolled down a decline on skids, when by some means he fell, and was suddenly taken over the log, falling on one of the skids, the log passing over him and killing him instantly. JONES.—Ella A., daughter of the above, January 30th, 1882, aged 2 years, 4 months and 23 days. A funeral discourse was preached in memory of these little ones in the Saints' Chapel at Cold Water, Santa Rosa county, Florida, March 19th, 1882, at 11 a. m., by Elder Joseph R. Lambert. "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

HONORING EDMUNDS.

In view of the passage of the Edmunds' Bill, the ladies of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Ogden Methodist Church have determined to send a tribute of their appreciation of the earnest efforts of her husband to Mrs. Edmunds. A beautiful silk quilt is to be made, with the name and full official title of Senator Edmunds embroidered in the centre. Around this will circle the name of Utah. Within this circle will be embroidered the names of all residents of Utah who will send them accompanied by fifty cents. It is hoped that the names of nearly all, if not all, the Gentiles of Utah may be obtained. Outside of this circle will be placed the names of those not residents of Utah, grouped in States and Territories. Names are to be solicited from the whole country. Whatever amounts are received will be devoted to school work in Ogden.—Ogden Pilot.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The Forty-fourth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ, being also the thirtieth of the Reorganized Church, convened at Independence, Missouri, April 6th, 1882; President Joseph Smith chosen to preside, assisted by Elder W. W. Bair, Counselor to the President of the Church; Elder H. A. Stebbins secretary, assisted by Elders T. W. Chatburn and R. M. Elvin.

The hymn "Redeemer of Israel" was sung, and prayer was offered by Elder W. W. Blair. A committee on credentials of delegates was appointed, namely: J. W. Chatburn, E. Robinson and P. Cadwell.

Presidents Smith and Blair addressed the assembly, giving words of advice and instruction, that were edifying and comforting.

At half-past one o'clock in the afternoon, "Jesus, I my cross have taken" was sung, and prayer was offered by Pres. J. Smith.

CREDENTIALS—COMMITTEE REPORT.

The report of the Committee on Credentials was received as follows:

J. W. CHATBURN,
PHINEAS CADWELL,
E. ROBINSON.

Bro. Z. H. Gurley was requested to give an account of the results obtained by the prosecution of the mission in Washington, D. C., and he did so in a clear and concise verbal report, telling of the success won, and of the present condition of affairs there, that relates to our work.

B. L. Scott, Jacob Blatt, W. H. Blatt, A. J. Cox and J. J. Vickery, were appointed to act as ushers during the Conference.

G. A. Blakeslee, P. Cadwell, and J. W. Chatburn, were appointed as a committee on the Bishop's books, annual report of his accounts, and those of his Agents.

W. H. Kelley, E. C. Brand and I. N. White, were appointed as a committee on the Board of Publication report, and on the report of the Board of Location.

It was resolved that the President of the Conference make the appointments for preaching during the session.

In the evening Pres. Joseph Smith preached, assisted by Pres. W. W. Blair.

FRIDAY, APRIL 7TH.

A prayer meeting was held at nine o'clock in the morning.

In the forenoon E. H. Gurley preached, assisted by D. S. Crawley.

Business session was opened in the afternoon by singing "The warrior Saint, behold him stand," and J. H. Lake offered prayer.

A portion of the minutes of the General Conference held last Fall were read.

CHURCH SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The report of the Secretary of the Church, H. A. Stebbins, was read and received as follows:

Having prepared everything in the way of reports and documents for conference as far as my busy time on Recorder's and Bishop's business would permit, I send by the hands of the brethren all, including the books and report of the Bishop, the annual summary of his Agents' reports, and thirty-two pages copy of their itemized reports for publication.

For enrollment in the Fifth Quorum of Elders the following have applied since last fall, namely:

W. W. Belcher, A. N. Bishop, Thomas Bradshaw, John Carmichael, Wm. Chapman, Thomas Daley, A. S. Davison, Samuel Davis, Dan Davies, W. H. Garrett, J. A. Gerrard, J. S. Goble, C. H. Hassell, James Houston, T. H. Humes, Wm. Kendrick, J. H. Lawn, J. H. Lee, Francis Loft, Wm. Morris, C. D. Norton, F. W. A. Reidel, John Richards, (Kan.), J. S. Roth, B. T. St. John, E. A. Shelley, J. V. L. Sherwood, making a total of sixty.

The First Quorum of Priests will be filled at this session and be ready for organization, if thought proper. I send them a list of their members, also to each quorum of Elders a statement of losses, that vacancies may be filled by such quorums as may convene for business.

In addition to my labors as Church Recorder during the past year, I have taken time to copy, in alphabetical order, the list of over fourteen hundred Elders whose names I had previously copied from the Church Record, and now, in a book by themselves, give the page of each book, A, B, C and D of the Church Record upon which they can be found. Of the number I have record that 154 are dead, 92 have been expelled or released from office, and 35 have been ordained to higher offices, leaving still upwards of eleven hundred in branches or scattered abroad, some of them and their dwelling places now unknown.

I have also alphabetical lists of the Priests, Teachers and Deacons, that I have gathered from the Church Records, and thus am able to tell in a moment the name and location of any official in the Church, if he has a location among us. From the book containing a record of each organized quorum in the Church, each one of these can be posted as to their membership, my record being constantly under correction from the entries upon the Church Record, as made by me. And still further time should be taken to perfect the matters, whereby we may in time be able to tell the exact condition of the Church, officially, numerically and progressively, from year to year, or at any time necessary.

Early in the past winter the Census authorities at Washington called for a list of all the branches of the Reorganized Church in the United States, with name and address of the pastor and other chief officer in each. It seemed good to accept this chance (the first) for us of the Reorganization to be represented in a proper light, and although not able to give as good a report as I could now, I sent names of branches, officials, addresses and the membership in each so far as I could gather, the work taking some time, and the report occupying sixteen pages, a line each to a branch. How many branches filled out the blanks they subsequently received from the Census Office, I have no means of knowing.

CHURCH RECORDER'S REPORT.

The report of the Recorder, H. A. Stebbins, was received, reading as follows:

I have the pleasure of presenting to the Church through this conference, the cheering fact that after several months of steady labor, the record of the branches throughout the world is the nearest complete and the most perfect that it has ever been. To my mind it is a matter for congratulation, and I return my thanks to the Saints to whom I have written, for the nearly general and quite prompt replies that have come to me. During the past four or five months I have written three hundred and thirty-two letters and cards about the records of branches and districts. In nearly every case I sent a list of names, in order that each one appealed to might have the best chance to correct the Church Record, by knowing just what I had, and therefore what I did not, and yet needed. For the Iowa branches this was not often necessary, because of the records of the branches in this state a larger number I found to be correct than was the case in any other state.

Australia is the only country or region from which I have had no reports. All other parts have been well reported, and replies to my letters are still coming in and probably will continue to do so for months to come.

In the appended list of branches by states I have inserted the names of many fragments of branches, and counted the numbers still on the Church Record as members of the Church and formerly of those branches, because I do not like to have them lost in the enumeration of the Church, believing that till district officers or some other one reports them as being dead, expelled, or having joined other branches, they should be counted. One thing I think should be had, in order to stop the loss of many from the record, and that is an alphabetical book, upon which should be enrolled all scattered members, and also the many that are dropped by branches because of absence, whereby they are virtually lost to the Church in enumerating its membership. All these should be searched out from the records and reported from every district, and scattering ones never before on record should be placed thereon, and when they join branches they can be so marked.

I have labored on the record for the last time, I think, in the manner that I have been doing for years past, namely, mostly at night, until this winter, and I trust that at some time the Church will have this work done regularly and in season. I have so labored simply from a desire to see order and system brought to pass, but it has materially affected my health each year, and I do not see how I can do more than I shall be able to do in proper hours when not at other business, until such time as the Church shall take a greater interest in this work.

Thirty new branches have been entered on the record the past year. In the mean time I have had notice of the disorganization of about fifteen branches, but one-third or more of these disorganizations took place prior to the past year, hence the increase in branches has been about the same per centage as the increase in membership. There are 439 branches and fragments in the list here given, and the footings show the aggregate and the increase for the year just past over all losses reported to me up to March 25th, 1882.

The list of branches by states is given below, as the branches stood upon the Church Record, March 25th, 1882. The stars (*) denote that the branches have been disorganized, either by action of district conferences or by the moving away of officers and members:—

Total 14,541. Total last year 13,695. Net gain 846.

This is a good increase over losses, being a net gain of a trifle over 6 per cent. The above list embraces 388 branches, and 51 fragments of branches.

Believing that the foregoing will be a satisfactory exhibit to the Church, and that many will think the labor to get at the standing of the Church, from year to year is not in vain, and hoping that the good work of order and system may go on until all departments of the Church can render full accounts.

It was resolved that a book be furnished, as asked for by the Church Recorder, in which may be alphabetically arranged and recorded the names and items of scattering members.

A motion that the Bishop furnish the traveling Elders with books of certificates of baptism and confirmation and a pencil, wherewith to write and issue such certificates to those they baptize, the stubs of said books to be sent to the Church Recorder when the leaves are used up, was lost.

BISHOP'S RESIGNATION.

The resignation of I. L. Rogers as the Bishop of the Church, was read, as follows:

Thinking you would expect a report from me, I will give you a few thoughts as they may come to me. My mind is turned back twenty-two years, when my house would have held the whole Church and more. I could feed the whole, and took pleasure in doing so, and that feeling has not gone from me yet. But when I follow the Church from year to year, I can take pleasure in stating that it has been a steady growth, although the weather has looked cloudy sometimes, but thank God the clouds are breaking away and the sun begins to shine. May the clouds that darken the past never be permitted to darken in the future, but the light may grow brighter as we advance from year to year, till the perfect day. This I hope to ever be my prayer.

For the last six months I have been looking at the importance of the work, and feel that the time has come when the Church must have men to represent her according to the spirit of the gospel. The law says let every man learn his duty, and I have examined myself, and I find that I should not be in the way, or be a stumbling block to the great work of the last days. Believing that the Bishop's office should be near the printing press, and as I am in my sixty-fourth year, and not willing to begin anew to build me a home, I therefore offer this my resignation as Bishop of the Church of Jesus Christ. Praying that the Spirit of God may be with you in all your deliberations, and teach you his will in the different quorums, that all may work together for the good of the cause and the glory of God, and hoping to be engaged with you in helping to carry on this great work, I subscribe myself your unworthy laborer.

It was moved that the resignation be accepted. A substitute was offered that it be laid on the table subject to call. To this an amendment was moved that the matter be referred to the Presidency and the Twelve, to which a further amendment was moved that the High Priests be included, but the final disposition of the subject for the day was an action whereby it was deferred, and made the special order for next Monday afternoon.

RESIGNATION OF BISHOP'S COUNSELORS.

The resignations of Henry A. Stebbins and David Dancer as counselors to Bishop I. L. Rogers were received as follows:

In accordance with the intentions formed by us and expressed to Bishop Israel L. Rogers some months ago, we hereby present to this Conference, and ask for record of it and acceptance also, our resignation as his Counselors. We do not so ask to be released because we wish to evade any duty placed upon us by the Lord or by his Church, and only by reason of our belief that it was our duty have we served as long as we have. But, with the views that we hold, we feel that we can not conscientiously serve in that capacity any longer, whether the resignation of our chief is accepted or whether he be retained, unless the Spirit indicates that it is the duty of one or both. We are fully aware that should his resignation be accepted then our time expires by limitation, and we are content therewith, for we trust that it may be God's opportunity to manifest his own will and choice in the matter as to who shall be our successors, if the Church shall so express to God their desires that his wisdom, and not their divided wishes, shall guide in the choice.

While thus aware, as we have said, that the tenure of our office depends altogether upon your action regarding the Bishop, we wish to present to the Church the fact that our purpose in this matter and our reasons for so resigning lie further back than the recent action of the Bishop in writing his resignation. Our belief is that the Bishop should occupy the position and fully take upon himself the responsibilities and duties that are outlined in the law of God as belonging to him, becoming the active manager of all the financial interests of the Church, or, as specified in the words of the Lord, that he should "govern the affairs of the property of this Church." By this word we understand that nothing is exempted from his supervision and that he can not exempt himself from having the oversight and control of the temporal things of the Church of God, nor justly permit any to do duty in his place, whether his counselors or others, except wherein the right may be properly theirs and that it does not take from the duties and responsibilities given to him by God and the Church, that are his alone.

Furthermore, it is our daily prayer that in due time the Church may be ready to ask at the hands of God such men as he may designate, through the President of the Church as being the men of His choice to teach and minister in this calling, and to take the active supervision of all the matters that belong to this quorum, having no wish or will of our own in the matter, only that our brethren may come to the same feeling. For we believe that God's word is true wherein he says that he is willing to make known his mind to the Church through the man whom he has appointed, which way he has commanded us to honor and to come unto, whenever our wisdom fails or the portion given us is not sufficient to bring harmony and unity of action. Therefore we would that the present might be the opportunity both of the Church and of God to bring about a portion of the necessary change for the better in this our common cause.

And praying that the Lord may in due time so indicate concerning whatsoever he will, and that he may bring about the peace and harmony in your present assembly that shall invite a still greater presence of the Holy Spirit hereafter, until that time shall come when the authorities and ministers and people of the Church shall be fitted and prepared for the promised endowment of spiritual power and wisdom to accomplish under God the great work that he has commanded and ordained to be done.

These resignations were also deferred to Monday afternoon for consideration.

Appointments were made for preaching this evening, to-morrow, and on Sunday.

Preaching in the evening by Elder Joseph F. Burton, assisted by C. H. Jones.

SATURDAY, APRIL 8TH.

A prayer meeting was held at nine o'clock, of which E. H. Gurley and A. J. Cox were placed in charge.

The sermon during the forenoon was by F. P. Searcliff, assisted by John Landers.

Business session was called to order by singing, "Lift up your heads, ye scattered Saints." Prayer was offered by Bro. Alex. H. Smith. The minutes of yesterday were read, amended, and approved.

REPORTS OF THE MINISTRY.

The following reports were presented in writing, and read by the secretary and clerks:

Elder T. W. Smith, of the Twelve, present, reports:

Since last report I have confined my labors to Chicago, excepting a couple of weeks' stay in the neighborhood of Stewartville, Mo. The interest shown the work by the outside world did not warrant attempts at preaching during the week in the hall leased by the Church, and we did not feel justified in hiring halls in other parts of the city. Preaching was done therefore on Sundays. The attendance has been variable: sometimes very few would come, sometimes quite a goodly number; but not more than thirty persons not members have been seen in attendance. I think that the principal reason for this is found in the fact that the Hall is located in a neighborhood of churches and so-called Orthodox people—the latter thinking it beneath their dignity to go to a meeting of Mormons; and I truly believe that had our place of meeting been in some other part of the city, much better results would have followed the efforts made.

I have not been idle however, for I have been preaching to tens of thousands of people, through the press of the land. I have succeeded in getting quite full and explicit statements of our views, particularly on the Utah Question, in a number of leading papers of the Country: such as the New York Herald, Cincinnati Times-Star, Louisville Courier Journal, Chicago Times, Inter-Ocean, Tribune, Herald, and the News. The Tribune and News have until recently been unwilling to say a word in our favor; but the News has recently published an article for me, and the Tribune copied an article of mine, full and ungarbled, from the New York Herald, and gave the fairest and most complete report of Bro. Joseph's timely and most important Speech in Farwell Hall, February 22d.

I furnished Rev. Dr. Thomas a number of points of a historical character, mainly affecting the relation of the Reorganization to the Utah Question, to be read at the first Anti-Polygamy meeting held in Farwell Hall in March; but not being called upon to speak, it was not used, but afterwards he used the items in a discourse preached before a very large audience in Hooley's Theatre.

Thus while doing but little in the way of preaching from the pulpit, I think that considerable has been done by preaching by the pen, through the medium of the public press. We have got rid of the hall used by us for two years, and in this I am glad, for I have been bound hand and foot as far as missionary work in the pressing cares that the charge thereof entailed upon me. Hereafter, whoever may go there will have a far better chance to do missionary work than I have had. Two were baptized since last report. It is positively necessary that an efficient man be appointed to superintend the work there, for while there are a number of good men there personally, yet there are none who are qualified sufficiently well to leave in charge of the work, or under whose care it can be expected to succeed. Another place of meeting has been secured where the Church can meet on Sundays, and the missionary sent there, will have no other care than purely ministerial work. The receipts from the Hall have been sufficient to meet its expenses, and also to help us in personal needs, so that but little was called for at the Bishop's hands. My opinion is that the well being of the work requires that the mission should be continued. The branch there can and should pay the expenses of the hall now available, but the expense of sustaining the missionary will have to come from the general funds.

Elder James Coffall, of the Twelve, present reports:

You have already been apprised through the Herald as to how and where a portion of my time has been spent since the Fall Conference. I came to Colorado about December 21st, and if success is to be measured by the numbers baptized (as some are wont to do), it has been but poor, having administered baptism to but one person, a young lady, who up to last December had never heard the gospel. She bids fair to become a worthy member, and it is not improbable that others of her family may enter the fold. I may say some others are betaking themselves to investigate, but these are comparatively few, that are willing to be convinced, or will admit of any difference between us and Utah Mormons. Orthodoxy has taken deep root here, especially in Denver, having every facility for its continuance. Nor is there any lack of skepticism, unbelief, &c., so that from the present prospects there is no evidence of a great work being accomplished without vigorous and continuous efforts. All that savors of that commonly called Mormonism is locked upon with suspicion, and though our members are few, they are narrowly watched. I am glad to know by observation that many seem in other parts to understand the Reorganized Church better than they do in Colorado. The few members here have not only to struggle financially, but must give evidence of a moral excellence among themselves to obtain favor or live down prejudice that exists.

To report to you with any degree of certainty as to what the future may develop in favor or against the cause, is not within my power; but it may perhaps be said that for gathering only two of a family and one of a city, is as promising here as any part I know. Primitive religion has no charms for skeptics, while the dazzling light of modern orthodoxy renders it obscure. That there is a liberal element in Colorado I believe, though religious bigotry and intolerance are not altogether crushed out. The evangelicals and orthodox are a unit in exclaiming against and trying to exterminate Mormonism, and to show or evidence a consistency, persist in declaring that it means polygamy, etc.

There is some prospect of erecting a 40x24 feet brick building for a house of worship in Denver. We hold a bond for a deed for a lot, for which we get a warrantee deed conditionally, viz., that a house is erected worth $1,000 within the present year. The location is not such as we would have chosen had we a thousand or two dollars at command.

There are many openings for preaching in Kansas and Nebraska, with better prospects I think than in Colorado; and quite a necessity for activity among officials in branches and districts; too much precious time in the past has been consumed in endeavoring to straighten what has been made crooked by over zealousness, or by prostituting power to unholy purposes. It would seem that many Elders would do good under local jurisdiction who would work mischief if sent abroad. In my opinion appointing missions has received too little attention, and they have been acted upon too hurriedly and far too much time consumed at conferences on technical questions, parliamentary rules, sharp practice, etc.

Elder A. H. Smith, of the Twelve, present, reports:

After the Fall session, being continued in my former field, I returned to my home and entered into the work as fully as I could under the circumstances, and have continued to labor since. My time was somewhat occupied with the moving of my family, yet I could not have done much more had I been far from home. I have labored at Bevier, Cameron, St. Joseph, Stewartville, north of Stewartville, in the German Branch, dedicated or assisted in dedicating the German Chapel in DeKalb county, also labored in the Pleasant Grove Branch, at Wyandotte, Kansas City, and Independence. I have acted in fellowship with local officials in ministerial labor with fair success and excellent liberty. I was unavoidably kept at home for a season, preparing the house my family passed the Winter in, making it tenable, but while doing this I was laboring for the Church, as the property belongs to the Church.

The mission so far as reported to me is in good condition. Those assigned to labor under my direction will report their labors. I may say I love those men, and I wish they may be continued in my field; and further, I wish they may be sustained better as to the support of their families. I regret the fact that their best efforts are crippled by reason of want standing in the door at home. But if a sufficient interest can be taken in the families of those men that they can give their entire time and talent to the work; they will cheerfully give all their time and talents and rejoice in the gifts; but I fear if a change is not made, evil will result to the work. For myself, I wish no larger nor better field than the one I now occupy. Should it be thought wise to continue me in the present field, and my family receive a reasonable sustenance, I am desirous to remain in the field. If it be thought wise to change my mission, and the change be properly made, I am still at the service of the Church. I expect to spend my remaining days in the ministry.

Elder W. H. Kelley, of the Twelve, present, reports:

At the last session of Conference I was assigned to Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and western New York, with a kind of general associate connection with Bro. T. W. Smith in the Chicago Mission. Soon after the Conference I entered upon the duties of the mission, with Brn. C. Scott and B. V. Springer as the only constant associate laborers outside of Chicago. This is the numerical strength of Bro. "Kelley's corps" that is so impressive, beautiful and striking on paper. I have been necessitated to travel more extensively in the mission than at any time previously, by reason of existing exigences and demands from the brethren, hence have had a better opportunity to get an insight into the needs of the work. Where I have visited, the work has been strengthened by the mutual effort of the Saints, and in some places the cause is prospering. It is not difficult to get a hearing; prejudice is still on the wane—and friends are gradually being raised up to the cause; and although they may not in large numbers unite with the Church, they befriend it on the general principle that justice and fairness should be extended to all. To the spiritual beholders God is moving the secret springs to the accomplishment of his purposes, in spite of the wrath of man, and even our once accusers come with words of peace. With many it is a question of religion or its negation; and if the former be true, the Latter Day Saints have it.

Unity prevails among the Saints so far as I know, and no difficulties exist save in a single section, and this is under way to be adjusted. The field is widening. We are in great need of more laborers to fill the calls for preaching. The Saints in many places are to be praised for doing so well with so little ministerial aid to help them.

A recent visit to Northern Ohio, at Kirtland and vicinity, impressed me as being an important field and should be supplied with constant laborers. If any have imagined that the people of that country fancy that the faith of the Saints has spent its force, they mistake the facts. Back of and under the popular pressure, there are friends and sympathizers who will show themselves with a good opportunity. The people view our cause with a kind of wonder and awe and some with admiration. The stories told by the old prejudiced class (old fogies) don't quite satisfy the young. The facts of history are sought after and will be relied on finally. The people have a belief that the flag of the Saints will be raised there again, and that Kirtland will spring into life—an active and live town. The imposing Temple stands on the hill as a reminder; and it is looked upon with something of admiration, and visitors stand with uncovered heads as they view this house of God, built by a handful of people in poverty. The very existence of that Temple exerts a potent influence in favor of the Reorganization. I believe with a good Elder in Kirtland, with proper effort the Temple could be filled with hearers. I felt well while preaching there, and was listened to with consideration. Further; I wish to remind the Conference that the Temple is sadly in need of repairs, and should receive an appropriation to re-cover it, in order to protect it, or else turn it over to some one who will, for our own credit.

I had not quite time to reach western New York. Chicago has had one constant laborer, Bro. T. W. Smith. I have aided him what little I could, which necessarily was in a general way. We did not succeed in turning the hall over last Fall, as we anticipated. The owner would not accept it, and we had no way of compelling him; hence it has been on our hands all Winter. It has been rented during the Winter, but I had nothing to do with the receipts or expenditures, hence not responsible for anything relating to it. The mission should be sustained. We have now turned over the large hall to the owner, and secured one for $12 per month—and it lighted, fueled, and furnished. Bro. Smith will report the particulars of the mission. The lifting up wave that has swept over the country this Winter has helped the cause with us. One good old Methodist brother when advised with reference to the position taken by us on the Mormon question and the labor done, shouted "Glory hallelujah." The Reorganization should renew its energies, accept the opportunities, and push out and stand for the honor of the cause. I find that the lives of faithful Saints tell everything for the cause. Our cause then is onward, and we are still in the faith, with hope and confidence of seeing it triumph in the final end.

Elder J. H. Lake, of the Twelve, present, reports:

I have been laboring in charge of the Canada Mission. Traveled in the London District and preached in Carlingford, Egremont and Usborn Branches with good liberty, and found them in a peaceful condition. Bro. Samuel Brown was with me most of the time that I was laboring in the above named branches. I found him a pleasant companion. We organized one new branch in the Township of McKillop: Bro. George Brown presiding Priest, Bro. Judkins Deacon. We ordained a Priest and Teacher in the Egremont Branch. The London Branch I trust is in a better condition than it was when I went there. They need more unity of feeling, and the spirit of love and forgiveness. Bro. G. T. Griffiths has done a good work in the London District. Bro. G. E. Deuel has labored in the Kent and Elgin District most of his time. He has done a good work. The branches in this district are in a peaceful condition, so far as I have learned,—the Buckhorn Branch is the most active. I have preached in some new places with good liberty of the Spirit, and prejudice is giving away. The winter has been very unfavorable for preaching, as there has been scarcely any snow, and the roads have been almost impassable; but I have preached as much as circumstances would admit of. Have preached in the last year 161 times, 92 in the States, 69 in Canada; baptized 20 in the States, 15 in Canada, blessed 25 children: nine of them since I came to Canada. I helped to ordain two Priests, one Teacher, one Deacon. Have administered to quite a number of sick, and in some instances with marked results. The above is my report for the last year, and with the good, doubtless I have erred. I hope the good, God will bless; the wrong, forgive. I hope to continue my labors for the Lord and for his Church, so long as life may last; and to this end I ask your prayers, that God may bless me with his Spirit to enable me to live, love, serve, and obey him to the end of life. I hope the Conference will remember the Canada Mission when the missions are given, to have more laborers sent there, as there is great need of them. The calls for the gospel are many.

Elder J. R. Lambert, of the Twelve, writes from Milton, Santa Rosa county, Florida:

Having been appointed to take charge of and labor in the South-Eastern Mission, I herewith report. I found the branches in Kentucky and Tennessee in a weaker condition than I had expected, but was most bitterly disappointed to witness the languishing condition of the work in the Florida District. One cause of spiritual decay has been the want of laborers. Many branch and district officials, I am sorry to say, have been little more than officials in name. I need not tell you the result. I know but little of the work in the Alabama District as yet, but report says they too are in a bad condition. I learn from Bro. Montague that the work in Mississippi is moving on quite well. In some parts of the mission there are quite a number of opportunities for preaching, and more that might be made. Little local labor has been done in this District for some time past, and the prospect for the future is not flattering. For the want of more laborers in some parts of the mission the work has lost ground. It will require time, patience, and for those of my mental and physical construction, great sacrifice to bring the work into anything like a fair condition. Those who know me will not expect me to see only the bright side of the picture. However, I am glad to say that things look brighter than they did, and we have witnessed some good results from labor done. The majority of the saints evidently wish to do what is right, and we shall therefore look forward with hope.

I left home for this mission September 27th, 1881, and in connection with Brn. Thomas, Hyde, and Scarcliff, labored in Kentucky and Tennessee till near the close of the old year, at which time with Bro. Scarcliff, I came to this District, where I have been laboring till the present time. God has blessed me with his spirit in preaching the gospel, and upon some occasions with such a large degree of it that I have been enabled to leave a strong testimony with the Saints and people in support of the truth. My trials have been many and severe, but this is only my common lot. I have organized one branch, ordained one Teacher, confirmed eight, and assisted in the confirmation of others, administered to the sick a few times, had charge of quite a number of prayer and confirmation meetings, and have preached 95 times since last conference. I have endeavored (but realize that my efforts have often been weak) to point all people to the "Lamb of God," and to instruct and confirm the saints in the faith of the Lord Jesus Christ. The mission needs help. It must have it, or suffer great loss. May the wisdom and blessings of God be with you.

Elder Z. H. Gurley, of the Twelve, present, reported:

In accordance with your appointment, in company with Bro. E. L. Kelley, I visited Washington, D. C., and after preparing a memorial were presented to the President of the United States by the Hon. John A. Kasson of Iowa, to whom as well as to the residue of the Iowa delegation in Congress, we had letter and vouchers from friends in Iowa. President Arthur received us with courtesy and kindness, listening to our statements with interest, and seemed surprised and pleased when we stated the fact that "the Reorganized Church of Christ affirmed the original faith of the Church, and because of their adherence to that faith, were they the uncompromising opponents of polygamy." We presented to him the Book of Mormon, and showed that it was the thesis, together with the Bible, upon which the Church was builded; and to abrogate or deny its teachings was to deny Mormonism proper; the fact being patent that polygamy was inhibited in this book, as also in subsequent and special revelations to the Church, made the position of the Reorganization at once formidable and impregnable to anything which polygamists could bring against it. While the President was properly non-committal, we felt satisfied by the manner in which he accepted the Book of Mormon and our memorial, as also his treatment of us, that the Reorganization would receive proper recognition, which we have reason to believe did take place at once, as shortly after this we were invited before the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives.

These facts and documents were also placed before the Congress in general, by placing a copy upon the desk of each member, together with a copy of the revelation on polygamy, (so called), and by these, Congressmen were enabled to judge of the claim set up by polygamists that it was "their religion," &c.; and the acts of Congress in passing the anti-polygamy bill is sufficient evidence that they were convinced of the hollowness of said claim, as by this act the issue, so far as it relates to the condoning or toleration of polygamy, is fully settled, as also that it is no part of the Mormon faith.

We received special aid from Hons. J. C. Burrows and Edwin Willetts, of Michigan; Hons. J. A. Kasson and Col. Hepburn, of Iowa; as also advice and counsel from Senator McDill, and many others.

In every instance it seemed as though an open door awaited us in our work; and by the press and many individuals, congratulations and wishes for our success were extended us, and from the general publicity which has been given to the position occupied by the Church, it places us fairly and firmly on the record,—for all of which we feel thankful to God. Believing as we do that the clouds of darkness disappear as the rays of truth begin to penetrate, and the honest and true who have waited long and patiently, now feel that their reward and comfort has appeared, as the line of distinction is being fully drawn between Mormonism and wickedness; or as one Congressman put it: "Mormonism as taught by the Reorganized Church of Christ is a consistent, reasonable, Christian religion; while that taught by polygamists is a curse and stench to the race, and means despotism and tyranny." In this expression is embodied the sentiment so frequently expressed in both houses of Congress during the debate on the question, viz: that the passage of the bill was not an attack upon Mormonism as a religious faith, but was an attack against the loathsome encumbrance upon this faith; by this, one is recognized as a religion, the other a crime; which is quite satisfactory to us.

After our departure from the Capital, we visited Philadelphia, and found a little band of faithful Saints; some difficulties and trials had been upon them as a church, but no serious breaks had yet occurred, and from the outlook we believe the work will triumph there. We also visited Hornerstown, N. J., held a series of meetings with good attendance and attention, and so far as we are able to judge, believe there will be an ingathering soon. We met some old-time Saints there and elsewhere, some with us and some not; but have reason to hope that all will become united with us ere long—"God speed the plow"—as they are worthy, noble souls; having through all these years of darkness and despair still clung to the original faith, and like the rod of iron, it will bring them to the tree of life at last.

Returning to Philadelphia we labored there for a few days and then passed on to Pittsburg, where we met the Saints in their "hired hall;" had good attention, and found good feeling manifested all round; assisted here in the ordination of Bro. George H. Hulmes to the office of an Elder. Bro. Josiah Ells resides at this place, and though now too aged to travel much, is recognized as the pioneer of the work here.

Bounding along toward the far sweeping west, we reached St. Louis in time for their district conference, which in company with them we enjoyed. Their hall, during Sabbath services, was packed, and the Spirit of the Lord present. Bro. Betts presides well. We visited the Saints at Belleville, Illinois, and spoke one evening, baptizing one at close of service. Here, as at St. Louis, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Homerstown, and everywhere in our mission, we were met with fair success and loyal hearts, who received and treated us kindly; for all of which we not only feel thankful to them, but in sincerity ask God to bless and reward them all for their goodness to us. Praying that they all will seek to keep the unity of the faith in the bond of perfectness.

Elder Charles Derry, of the High Priests, writes from Little Sioux, Iowa:

In pursuance of my duty, I sent this my report of my labors during the six months past. While I can not report that I have accomplished any great amount of good, I may truthfully say I have tried to do good, and have endeavored to fill the mission assigned me. However, my labors have been confined to a part of my field in North-Western Iowa. I have not visited Nebraska, not because I lacked inclination, but because circumstances have not favored my going there. The calls for my labors have been more than I could fill. If permitted I shall visit Nebraska and do what I can there. My desire is to labor for the good of God's cause, and as I know of no better way in which I can labor for the same than in preaching the gospel, I desire to spend my life in that work. I can testify that God blesses me in laboring, if others are not blessed by my labors. All my interest is in the Kingdom of God, worldly wealth or worldly honors have no charms sufficient to lead me from the path of duty, which is to me indeed the path of safety. I pray that wisdom may govern your councils and conference, and that unity and peace may prevail, unto a firm and steady growth of the Kingdom of God.

Elder Glaud Rodger, of the Seventy, writes from Newport, California:

May the peace of God and the Holy Spirit be and abide with you through Jesus Christ our Lord. Since my last report I have continued my labors in California, mostly among the branches of the Southern District, where I have had considerable liberty in the proclamation of the word, and in aiding the brethren to build up and strengthen the faith of the Saints, I hope acceptably to the Master, whose hand has hitherto led me and to whom be praise forever more. If agreeable to the Spirit and council of the conference, I wish to be released from this mission, that I may return home for a season.

Elder R. J. Anthony, of the Seventy, writes from Salt Lake City, Utah:

Since your last session I have labored principally in the settlements south of Salt Lake City. The winter has been long and very cold. It has been one of the most unfavorable for missionary labors that I have experienced. The severe weather militated against us some, but nothing to compare with the Anti-Mormon agitation. After the passage of the Edmunds Bill by the Senate, many that were favorable seemed to grow indifferent, or quietly stand still, waiting and watching, as many express it, "to see what will be done." To all appearance a crisis is at hand. Hundreds are now watching developments. The cable chain of the Church in Utah must be severed, or made stronger than ever. The Reorganized Church has urged the idea that Polygamy was not and is not now a doctrine of the Church. That was the tree that scattered the seeds of apostasy, and thus many have become shaken in their faith and the doctrine of Polygamy. Congress has declared it to be a crime, and it is but reasonable that men and women will now closely watch the issue. The Church here, as confidently as ever, publicly and positively affirm that the Lord will not suffer the Government to interfere with them. Should the authorities of the Government fail to enforce the laws, all parties will testify it is of God, and on the other hand many will admit that it is not divine. The majority of "the faithful" in Utah look upon the Reorganized Church as the bitterest foe they have. The efforts of Brn. Gurley and Kelley at Washington fully confirm them in that belief, and some that were favorable to us have expressed themselves that we ought to let the Government and them settle that question.

It now remains for the Reorganized Church to strengthen this Mission. My mind is that now is the time to stand true and firm. This would be a poor time to raise a white flag. Nothing now but an unconditional surrender will satisfy the demands of eternal truth. Some have already begun to advise the pouring in of oil and wine, and that contested questions should not be urged so strongly, and that it is unmanly to strike a fallen foe. My mind is: Send on reinforcements, well armed with the sword of justice, and the Spirit of truth; and when the enemy strikes his colors, then minister the oil of gladness. Then words of tenderness and love will be appreciated. They will fall then like showers from heaven upon withered plants, and when we show this people that it is only transgressors that should be dealt with, then we can plead successfully the cause of the deceived and wronged ones.

I have been as far south as Beaver, and I am pleased to report in all this contest we have lost none, but have gained a few, and the branches that I have visited are in a better condition than I have ever seen them. The Lord has of late comforted the Saints with spiritual blessings, in healing the sick and other ways. Bro. John Lewis writes from Malad: "After severe chastisement the Lord has comforted us much." It is the same in other places. Bro. Blair will no doubt be with you, and can represent the wants and needs of the mission much better than I can. The prospects are better than ever before for doing good here. Our meetings are now well attended in the city, and the Saints see the day dawning, that many of them have long looked for.

Send us some men that can sympathize with the erring, but honest ones,—yet be firm, kind, and generous,—those who can speak at the proper time, and also hold their peace when advisable. "This is a peculiar people."

Do with me as you think best at present. I am your servant, if you think me worthy. May the Master bless you with wisdom, and may he manifest himself to his people in the "center place," to the joy of all.

Elder B. V. Springer, of the Seventy, presents, reports:

During the six months past, I need only say that I have accomplished but little compared with what I desired, and what perhaps the conference has reason to expect of me. I have, however, labored to the best of my ability to magnify my calling, and to manifest my faith in the work, by availing myself of every opportunity to do good. And while my most sanguine hopes in the way of progress have not been fully realized, yet knowing that the reasons therefor for the most part were beyond my power to control, I find consolation in a consciousness of having done the best I could in the mission. One of the principal hindrances to the progress of the work in the mission is the state of unrest manifest among the Saints; a spirit of gathering seems to have taken possession of them, which has been effectual in taking quite a number to the "borders," which no doubt will result in their good temporarily; but it cripples the work very materially. I have neither favored nor opposed this gathering mania, as the good attached is too evenly balanced. I have organized one new branch, ordained 3 Priests, 2 Teachers; baptized several; blessed several children; presided over the district to the best of my ability; opened up several new fields of labor. In short I have done all I could to forward the cause of truth, and in leaving the field I am vain enough to believe that I take with me the love and confidence of all the saints of the Southern Indiana District, besides those of a host of friends. May God bless them. I trust this conference will take measures to have the mission supplied with an efficient man, abler and better than myself; and although I consider the field a hard one, on account of the wear on the physical man, yet the people have become endeared to me, and I feel a deep interest in their welfare. May the Spirit of the Father direct in the matter, and pervade your assembly.

Elder John S. Patterson, of the Seventy, present, reports:

In the six months now ending, my time has been exclusively devoted to the ministry, embracing every opportunity offered for the preaching of the word, and the strengthening of the Saints, where my lot was cast; being privileged to preach in quite a number of new places, where formerly we had only been known by reason of our unfavorable reputation. In many places prejudice was removed, and a desire to investigate was manifested, which we trust will result in good for the cause. Having by special request accepted, temporarily, the charge of the Northern Illinois District, I have sought to visit the various branches thereof and to regulate their affairs, as far as possible. The northern portion of said district I have not yet been able to visit, and hence can not speak of the spiritual condition thereof; but the Southern part, comprising Leland, Sandwich, Plano, Chicago, Braidwood, Mission, Piper City, and Streator branches, with one exception may be said to be in fair spiritual condition, and the officers of those branches, with the above named exception, are striving nobly in the interests of their several branches and the cause generally; and I doubt not the results of their labors will ere long appear to comfort, cheer, and reward them for their faithfulness. Through the efforts of the brethren at Leland, I was permitted the use of the Norwegian Methodist Church for two evenings, but the minister in charge refusing to permit us further use of said Church, the brethren rented a hall in town, where we gave a series of discourses, also one on a subsequent occasion. Our meetings were well attended, and it is believed that the cause was materially aided thereby. In all my efforts I have been well sustained by the local brethren and sisters, and my temporal necessities have been kindly remembered, for which I feel grateful, and hope to ever prove myself worthy of.

The district contains 15 branches, with a membership of 687. Elder W. W. Blair and myself were appointed to represent the district at this conference.

Elder John C. Foss, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since the Annual Conference I have been actively engaged in the ministry, preaching in twenty-six different places, and I was kindly received in all places. I have attended 166 meetings, during which I preached 102 sermons, baptized sixteen, blessed several children, and organized one branch. The branches west of Maine (in the Eastern Mission) are in a fair condition, so far as I know. But the fifteen branches in Maine are in a very low spiritual condition. As troubles exist that must be settled, it would be well to send one of the Twelve from this Conference, whose right it is to set in order the Church of God. Many of those branches do not hold services, as is required in the law of God. I have advised the Elders and members what to do, but all in vain. Where troubles exist I have tried to have the Elders work with me and settle them; but upon investigation I find that in many cases the Elders are to blame; whereas if they would themselves see that the law was kept, all would go well. On my leaving home I was asked by a brother to come to his place, if I came back east, and baptize three that want to obey, and organize a branch. Several others are ready and will obey, on my return, if so be I'm appointed to labor in that mission till Fall. There are good Saints in Maine, and they should be looked after and cared for, and many of the officials will not do their duty. I was asked in many of the branches to request the First Presidency to send one of the Twelve to the east to assist them; and brethren, will you do it? The past year has been a trying one to me, and sometimes I thought it more than I could bear. But realizing what I am called to do for the salvation of souls, I have come to the conclusion that let others do as they may, I will try and be found at my post.

Elder John Thomas, of the Seventy, present, reports:

On my appointment to the South-Eastern Mission I left home October 12th, for the field assigned me. Met with Bro Lambert at Farmington, Kentucky, thence to Henry county, Tennessee, to meet Bro. Scarcliff, with whom I continued to labor for about five weeks, under the direction of Bro Lambert, preaching in various places in four counties, with fair success. After Brethren Lambert and Scarcliff went South, I continued with Bro. G. S. Hyde for about three weeks, mostly in new fields. The calls for preaching became so frequent that we separated; after which I continued alone as circumstances required, until March 26th.

Elder George Montague of the Seventy, present, reports:

Immediately upon my appointment to the South-Eastern Mission, I made arrangements and left home May 10th, for my field of labor. Arrived in Whistler, Mobile county, Alabama, May 18th, with Bro. E. W. Cato. We made an effort to obtain the use of the Methodist Church, but failed. Obtained the Old Fellows' Hall for two services, at a cost of three dollars. Had a poor hearing. We then went to Beaver Meadow, where we obtained the use of the Union Church, and there labored six weeks, and baptized six persons, among them the pastor of the Baptist Church, Bro. A. E. Carrington, whom we ordained an Elder. On July 6th I left Bro. Cato to continue the work, and came into Baldwin county, Alabama, where I continued until August 31st, baptizing four. With Bro. Reader I went to Florida and labored till September 12th, then returned to Baldwin county, where I had appointments for two-days meeting. At the close I organized the Salem Branch, of sixteen members, Bro. J. H. Givens president. I next attended the Alabama District Conference, and labored till November 2d. Thence to the Florida District, and attended conference, and remained in that district till December 3d. Thence to Beaver Meadow, Alabama, and afterwards into Jackson county, Mississippi, where I continued to labor till March 15th. The results are seven baptized.

The prospects for the work in Mississippi are quite good. With a proper effort, no doubt a good work can be accomplished there. To sum up the results: baptized fifteen; ordained one Elder and two Teachers; preached 125 discourses, and attended 48 other meetings, in which I have taken part. I feel that the promises of God have been fulfilled, and I have been blessed with the liberty of the Spirit, as a general thing.

Elder Heman C. Smith, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since the Semi-Annual Conference I have labored in the field assigned me (the South-Western Mission) almost continually, and have met with some success. I have preached in Bexar, Wilson, Fayette, Bastrop, Bell, Blanco, Burleson, Robertson, Anderson, and Red River counties, Texas, and in Sevier county, Arkansas. In most of these counties there are openings for good, and many other places have extended invitations for labor. I have baptized twenty persons, and held one debate. The debate, in the opinion of all fair-minded persons, was a complete victory for truth, and did the cause much good. My opponent, though naturally intelligent, betrayed unusual ignorance of the subject debated.

Hitherto the cause has languished for want of laborers, and the prospects are no better at present, unless this Conference can make some provisions; which I confidently hope and expect them to do. I am well satisfied that there is no field which promises a greater harvest of souls than the South-Western Mission; but laboring alone, and having to look after so large a field, has made it practically impossible for me to make the advancement I had hoped to do; however, I think we stand on a firmer basis than when I first visited the mission. We are better organized and better understood by the world. Now if we could have several laborers, say one in Western Texas, one in Central Texas, one in Eastern Texas, and one in Northern Texas and Arkansas, we would soon see glorious results. There should also be an effort made to prosecute the work in the Indian Territory. If this can be done, the mission will be a success, and a benefit to the Church, while souls will be brought to a knowledge of the truth to rise up and call us blessed. But if one must labor alone in that large field, he can wear out his life with hardships, and yet the result will hardly be perceptible. Prejudice is vanishing, and in places where mob violence once ruled, we were enabled to preach in peace. If the Saints resident there, as well as those who may visit them, will be wise, discreet and humble, no more danger need be apprehended from the mob. This must not be understood to reflect upon my brethren who have preceded me. I can not see that it was in their power to avert the persecution they suffered; but circumstances have changed in ways which make it possible for us to proceed unmolested.

The Saints in the South-Western Mission as a rule are kind hearted, generous, and devoted to the work; but some trouble has arisen from persons being received into communion who have never been converted. These have needed nursing continually, and in some cases even this has proven ineffectual; but I am persuaded that a large proportion of them will yet outlive the storm, and reap the reward of victory.

My policy may not be approved by all, as I have counselled the Saints there not to be in a hurry to move, but to build them homes, live in accordance with their profession, deal honestly and virtuously, and build up the fair name of the Church in their own land.

Bro. A. J. Cato expressed a desire to labor in Texas, and so I gave him an invitation to come. He has done so, and I hope it will meet the approval of the Conference.

My confidence in the work is still strong, and of its ultimate triumph I am assured; but looking from my standpoint, there have been movements made in the Church which are both premature and unwise. I am willing, however, to do what may be required of me to make the work a success. The Lord has greatly blessed me in my labors, and as often as dark clouds have hovered over me, his Spirit has inspired my heart with hope; and to-day I rejoice as much in the assurance of final triumph as I ever did.

Elder E. M. Wildermuth, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Pursuant to action of Semi-Annual Conference of September, 1881, I have since December 7th, been laboring continuously in the ministry, under the direction of Bro. A. H. Smith.

Began my work at Allendale, Missouri, enjoying the hospitality of Bro Joseph Hammer, and by his assistance procuring places to speak in. Spoke every evening and on Sunday till December 17th, when agreeably with my request, Bro. I. N. Roberts of Hopkins, Missouri, joined me. He delivered several discourses. December 19th, we went several miles north of Allendale, to the Adam's School-house, where for two weeks we preached consecutively, returning to Allendale on Sunday 7th, but continued my labors, save spending a few days at home, where sickness and business had called me, and labored alone till January 22d, when Bro C. H. Jones came to my assistance. We held meetings in Allendale, and Grant City, Brn. Himes and Hammer defraying expenses. January 26th, Bro. Jones left me, and the next day Bro. Himes conveyed me to Redding, Iowa, where I began preaching the word, and in two or three places about there, speaking almost every evening, mainly to attentive congregations. Up to March 15th, I labored without an assistant, then Brn J. T. Kinnaman and W. T. Bozarth, came to my aid and gave me a short respite, remaining five days only; but long enough to cheer and encourage the little band of Saints there, eight of whom I had the pleasure of baptizing. After Brn. Kinnaman and Bozarth departed, I continued working through the day and speaking in the evening, till March 26th, when I baptized two more, and organized a branch of thirteen members, called the Redding Branch. Left March 27th for Lamoni, preparatory to attending General Conference. A number more near Redding are fully convinced, and a grand opening is presented for preaching there and in the surrounding country.

My four months' campaign, though attended with sacrifice, toil and trial, has brought the blessing of the Spirit with its comforting strength and liberty of speech, and also the kindness and hospitality of noble hearted Saints; among whom are Brn Hammer, Himes, Pinkerton, Burk, Huntsman and their families.

There is a large field of labor that I have left, and a mission in that region, if thoroughly prosecuted, would redound to the glory of God and the converting of more precious souls, if my observations are correct.

In my weakness, realizing the weight of my calling, I am heart and soul devoted to the cause, and willing to do all I can in the promulgation of the true gospel, and will continue in the field if you so direct.

Elder Columbus Scott, of the Seventy, writes from New Albany, Indiana:

Have labored in Chicago and in Michigan, with some labor recently done in the city of New Albany and vicinity, my time has been quite labor occupied to the present with ministerial fully according to appointment. I note with much thankfulness to our Father above, the moving of events and influences, both of a local and general character, operating for good to the cause, and hope not to be disappointed as to the righteousness and godly integrity of some of the instrumentalities used by him in directing those good influences and events.

We rejoice most heartily that the Saints may now assemble with the utmost freedom and worship in localities where once they were forbidden. Truly time and good vindicates "right."

We hope the assembling at the "center place" now, is not immature. Expect those in charge of our mission to represent its condition, needs, success, improvements, &c.

I have been greatly blessed in my ministrations of word, doctrine, and the ordinances. Have baptized four, confirmed some four or five, solemnized one marriage, and blessed some children. Of the acceptance of my labors I will let others speak. I am anxious above all things else to see the cause of Christ move onward to final triumph, and if found worthy, before God and men, am still willing to labor to the extent of my ability, as divine wisdom directs, to usher in the triumphal morn.

Elder E. C. Brand, of the Seventy, presents reports:

Since General Conference, last September, I have labored in Fremont District, Iowa, and Southern and Northern Districts of Nebraska, as far as my health and strength would permit; have opened up some few new places; been blessed by the operation of the Spirit, both in preaching the word and administering to the sick. The openings for preaching daily increase, and that in every direction where I have traveled. God certainly has given us much grace and favor in the west during the last six months. I have preached 80 public discourses, besides other meetings, as follows: Platte Valley 6, Valley Station 3, Fremont 2, Cedar Bluffs 2, Palmyra 3, Plum Creek 2, Shenandoah 1, Plattsmouth 6, Omaha 4, Papillion 3, Buffalo School-house 12, Xenia 6, Keystone Branch 14, Ross School-house 2, Wilber 5, Midway Bridge 1, Elkhorn 5, Stringtown 1, Hancock 1; attended 5 district conferences, ordained 1 Elder and 2 Priests, blessed 6 children, organized 1 branch, baptized 3, traveled 1,413 miles.

Elder John T. Davies, of the Seventy, presents reports:

Since last conference I have labored in the field assigned me, most of the time, preaching at different points with a good degree of liberty and good feeling; plenty of openings for preaching. The district is in good condition, with some exceptions.

Elder M. T. Short, of the Seventy, writes from Salt Lake City, Utah:

I have labored diligently in the interests of the Church, and have watched developments with prayerful solicitude. I have beheld the raging of fanatical bigots, and listened to the vindictive boasts and the dark mutterings of polluted priests and corrupt allies. I have had foul execrations heaped upon me, and brandishing threats have disturbed my equilibrium. I can not tell what will be evolved from this seething caldron of lying villiany and systematic adultery. These apostles of lust and the lecherous bishops are beyond the pale of redemption; but their powers are waning. Last evening I heard a Mr. Thurman, at Lehi, call the Congress of our glorious nation "an infuriated mob." I hope the car of progress will roll over the rotten institution. It has wrecked the fairest hopes of mankind, and furnished premature subjects for the undertaker. It has crazed the brain, soured the temper, poisoned the spirit, and damned the soul. This hierarchy has robbed virtue and insulted innocence, and now the cry is, "Let us alone." I am ambitious, combative, and aggressive in my make up, hence we fancy that we are well adapted to the field here. Many warm friends greet us while we bear down the enemy with cogent reason and intrepid zeal. Many inquire after "Little Joseph," and I would be pleased to see him put in an appearance, unfurl the flag, and make a long, strong, personal effort. Saint Brigham came forth with an imperial edict against Mother Smith's History; the "elect lady" was branded with apostasy; the "plants of renown" were classed with mobocrats, while they love the martyr well enough to outrage every principle of purity he enunciated. I do feel well in the van, and I hope to see the missionary force increased here. In many respects this is a very inviting field, for the Saints are kind and hopeful, and the way is opening up for effectual work and a rich harvest. I have baptized a lady in Beaver, one here and five persons at Santaquin. I think about twice that number will obey when additional ministerial labor will be performed at the last named place. At other points they appear to be "almost persuaded," and state their intentions to obey soon. There was an intense excitement at Springville recently, and I took advantage of the occasion and spoke on polygamy for an hour and a half to about six hundred. The half-fare dated from today, and a large train was thronged with conference people. We touched some of them on the left side, and drew the "Mormon fire." We have enjoyed elegant utterance, great power, good health, divine love, and cheering words from home. I importune the Supreme Being for the work here, throughout the union and all over the world.

Elder J. L. Bear, of the Seventy, writes from Zurich, Switzerland:

Since my last report I have labored in different parts of Switzerland, was very busily engaged, can say to the very minute, in traveling, bearing testimony of the work, preaching and writing. Have distributed somewhere about three hundred pamphlets, have copied the polygamy revelation, and sent it to some of the Brighamites, with a criticism on the same of several pages, so with some of the other tracts for them I did likewise. In short, the work was rather overwhelming for one alone, and especially as my health gave way considerable several months back and is very poor at present. I have baptized eleven, ordained one Elder, and one Priest, and blessed three children. Have also baptized eighteen since I came here very near two years ago; and several more are believing, which I hope through constant labor and good care will join before long. This mission needs yet a constant laborer to spread the work and keep the Saints alive to their duties. But as I mentioned in my report to the Conference at Council Bluffs, necessity compels me to return home early in the Spring. Have also mentioned the same in my letter to the Herald, so I hope Conference will not rebuke me for so doing. I wished to have stopped longer, but the loss I would have sustained through staying would be ruinous to me in the things which we all need for to sustain our mortal frames. Consequently I leave here in a few days if nothing happens. Have left the work in charge of Bro. John Bossard, of Thurman, till another is sent from the Church in America, which I hope will be taken in consideration by you, as the mission needs a faithful, experienced Elder, who is willing to suffer persecutions, and is well forbearing.

I hope the brethren will not think that I desire to withdraw from laboring for the cause of Christ. O no, and inasmuch as the Lord strengthens my feeble body again, (which is very much broken down at present), and blesses me again with the blessings I am in need of, both spiritual and temporal, I shall be ready again as soon as I can situate the family so that they can spare my presence, I shall offer my service again to be at the disposal of the Conference, to labor where I may be called.

The ministers of the different denominations here are somehow the bitterest enemies to the cause of truth, as one warned his flock in words like this: "Be watchful and careful, there are two anti Christ's going round to deceive the people." The same minister told me to my face, in the presence of others, that he would persecute me till death, and would not spare anything in doing so. Other threats are also made like this: "If this man Bear does not leave soon, he shall not come alive to America again." It is like in the days of Christ and the Apostles, as the people said: "Those who turn the world upside down have come hither also." But God's work will triumph in spite of all the opposition Satan is able to bring. I rejoice and glory in my Heavenly Father when I suffer persecution for the sake of Christ.

I can say God has blessed me in my weakness since I came here. February 19th, I delivered my farewell sermon to the Saints. It was rather a time of weeping. Every heart melted, and indeed it is hard to part from those who are in the fold of Christ; but I pray God that he may be with them with his divine Spirit, to lead and guide them in the paths of truth and righteousness for Christ's sake. May the Divine Spirit assist you, dear brethren, in counseling together for the welfare of God's Church and spreading his word among those who are yet in darkness.

Elder W. T. Bozarth, of the Seventy, writes from Cameron, Missouri:

Since last conference I have labored all that I could. I have been quite unwell a good part of the winter, having taken cold in September, which settled on my lungs and confined me to the house for about four weeks, and most of the time to my bed. I am much better now, but have not entirely recovered. I have tried to labor all that I could under the circumstances. I held one discussion that lasted seven days, in which I think many saw the truth. I have baptized four and confirmed six. I traveled in Grundy, Macon, Gentry, Worth and DeKalb counties. In most places found good openings for preaching the word. Bro. J. T. Kinnaman has been with me about four weeks this winter, and I found him ever willing and ready to perform his part in any thing that was necessary to be done. We organized one new branch in Grundy county. I think a good work can be done there, if it is properly cared for. Brethren, will you pray for me, that I may have my strength of lungs as I had before. I can preach three or four times now, and then I am so tired and sore that I am compelled to rest. My prayer to God is that he will bless and assist his servants in the preaching of the word, and so inspire his people that they may see eye to eye.

Elder George S. Hyde, of the Seventy, writes from Kenton, Tennessee:

It seems unnecessary to reiterate what has been stated in the Herald in relation to my labors. In and about Kenton I have preached in five different public places of worship. Congregations usually are large and well behaved. This locality abounds with Churches and school-houses, and as a rule, the spirit of freedom and toleration predominates among the people. There are however exceptions to this rule. I have just closed a series of four meetings at a church, known as "Caleb's Kingdom," alias Bell's Chapel. I have been enabled to make many friends here, and have reason to hope that good has been done for the noble cause we love so well. I expect to introduce the gospel in its fulness at Dire, (a town on the Ohio and Mobile R. R.) soon. My introduction to labor in this mission, was a series of trials, such as I had not before experienced, the result of which has been the development in knowledge of the weakness of self, and a moderate growth in wisdom, I hope. The fatherly advice and timely hints of brother Lambert have had a salutary effect upon our ministerial men. The desire, and hence the call, to preach the gospel, accompanied a knowledge of its truth; the work is progressive we expect to learn.

I have set no stakes as to how long I am willing to remain in the South. At present I am at the disposition of the conference. My desires are to devote my life to the cause of Christ. I regard life as a field for voluntary labor, promising rest at its close, commensurate with the work performed. The climate, diet and people, of Tennessee (with some exceptions), are congenial to my nature; and if it will be any inducement to the Elders of Israel to take missions South to know that they will be called to dinner by the exquisite title of "Parson," I take pleasure in furnishing the information. Have preached seventy-seven times, baptized six (chiefly the fruits of others' labor), confirmed four. I pray that the Spirit of God may be given, that love may dwell in your hearts.

Elder J. F. Mintun, of the Seventy, writes from Magnolia, Iowa:

I started on my mission November 7th, 1881, since which time I have attended 114 meetings, 100 of which were preaching meetings, of which I was speaker. I have baptized 9, confirmed and assisted in confirming 10, ordained one Elder, blessed 14 children, and attended to all other duties of a minister of the gospel as they have been presented to me, and especially in the administration of the word, and administering to the sick have I been greatly blessed. To God be the praise. And instead of the privations and sacrifices made in my labors discouraging me, they have caused me to grow in the knowledge of the truth, and given me encouragement in the final triumph of this—the work of God. I pray that God may guide you and that peace may prevail in your assembly.

Elder G. T. Griffiths, of the Seventy, writes from Boston, Massachusetts:

As one of the appointed missionaries of the Church, I respectfully submit a report of my labors since the Fall Conference. I have labored to the best of my ability in the mission assigned me, (Canada), and labored some by permission of the Twelve near Emerson, Iowa. As circumstances called me East, I have preached some few times in Boston, Providence, and Douglass. The Spirit of the Lord has attended my weak efforts, for I have been quite successful in most places. I was highly pleased with Bro. J. H. Lake. He acted the part of a father toward me. I believe Bro. Lake has accomplished much good in Canada. I have baptized thirty-three since September 11th, forty-nine since the first of August; confirmed twenty; blessed ten children; ordained one Priest; helped to organized one branch; have also administered to a number of sick, with some good results. I am now willing to labor wherever the First Presidency and the Twelve may deem it wise to send me, as I fully believe that the time has come that the Seventies should honor the command, that says the Seventies should labor under the direction of the Twelve. Hence in view of this fact, I have no preference of field to make, as I am subject to the powers that be. I pray our Heavenly Father to bless those who shall participate in the Conference, that they may manifest the spirit that characterized the Master.

Elder R. M. Elwin, present, reports:

I herewith submit the following report covering the period from September 1st, 1881, to March 31st, 1882. God has been very kind to me and mine, so that I have been permitted to devote my whole time in the field. I have preached as follows: Nebraska: Liberty School-house 7, Nebraska City 8, Morgan School house 3, Dr. Levi Anthony's house 16, Bro. J. C. Tripp's house 1, Wilber Court House 6, Pleasant Valley School-house 2, Bro. D. A. Wilson's house 4, Bro. H. P. Savage's house 2, Savage School-house 2, Barkey School-house 8, Xenia School-house 7, Omaha 1, Hyatt School house 6, Mumford School-house 15, Mt. Olive School house 6, Hooker School-house 7, Syracuse "Evangelical Church" 6. Iowa: Shenandoah 5, Council Bluffs 4, Crescent City School-house 8, Schick School-house 7, Wheeler's Grove 2, Emerson School-house 11, Downs ville School-house 4, Garrison School-house 4. Total number of times 152. Have also held quite a number of prayer and sacrament meetings, to accomplish which I have traveled 1488 miles; baptized 26; confirmed 22; blessed 18 children; ordained 1 Priest and 1 Teacher; united two couple in the bonds of wedlock. The present outlook promises well, for the spread and increase of the gospel. The people manifest kindness and willingness to investigate the doctrine we advocate. I am deeply interested in the prosperity of the work, and willing to show my faith by labor.

Elder F. P. Scarcliff, present, reports:

Since my last report I have traveled in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Florida; preached 71 times, and baptized one, administered to the sick with good results, and have been blessed in my labors generally. I desire to continue in the service of the Master.

Elder A. J. Cato writes from Cook's Point, Texas:

Since my appointment by your honorable body in September last, I have labored continually in the field assigned me, until March 20th, in the following localities: in Lee county, Mississippi, where I baptized two, next in the Alabama District, where by request of Bro. J. R. Lambert, I remained until March 20th, laboring in connection with local authorities; baptized four there, and ordained one Priest. Outside of the church there are many openings, and the people seem anxious to hear. Many say that they have been fed on sectarian food until it has become stale, and no longer satisfies them, persecution and prejudice are on the wane, but they are not dead. In the church there is a lack of zeal on the part of some, and some are for Paul, and some are for Apollos, some for Cephas, and some for Christ. The clerical knife has also been freely used, and in some instances a compliance with the law "take thy brother between him or her and thee alone," accompanied with brotherly love and a few kind words, might have saved them.

I think, all things considered, the church is steadily gaining ground, and I expect to see the day, should I attain to three score and ten, that it will not be considered a dishonor to be a true Latter Day Saint. Since Semi-Annual Conference I have preached 45 discourses, baptized 6, ordained one Priest. You may want to know why I left the mission assigned me. I received letters from Bro. H. C. Smith requesting me to come and help him, I also received letters from some of the Saints, stating that my labors would be a great help here. I then stated the case to Bro. Joseph Smith, and was authorized by him to come here; I also asked Bro. Lambert's advice in the matter, which was to come by the president's consent. I am still ready and willing to labor as the conference may think best. I pray that the Holy Spirit may guide you in your deliberations.

Elder Hiram Robinson writes from Pittsburgh, Pa.:

After my report August 7th, 1881, I spoke twice at Galland's Grove. The Saints there manifested appreciation of my labors by providing for my temporal welfare, for which I am ever thankful. I went from there to Mt. Washington and Dodge counties, and labored till the General Conference at Council Bluffs. After conference went to Sarpey county, Nebraska, and labored about one week, then started for Pennsylvania. Arrived in Philadelphia December 25th, 1881, visited Hornerstown, N. J., thence to the Wyoming Valley District, and labored to the best of my ability till the last of February; then returned to Philadelphia, came here in time for the conference the 11 and 12 of March, laboring as wisdom seemed to direct. There are many calls for labor here, and I intend to fill them as fast as possible. I met with Bro. Ells yesterday; he is feeling well in body and spirit, for which he thanks the Lord. He has plenty of work for me, and that is just what I desire. I intend to do all I can for the advancement of the work in which we are engaged in. I am willing to labor if found worthy, wherever your wisdom and the Spirit directs. I pray that the Spirit may direct your deliberations.

Elder G. W. Shute writes from Blue Rapids, Kansas:

At the Semi-Annual Conference you appointed me to labor in Northern Kansas and Southern Nebraska. I have not traveled any from home, my wife being confined to the bed most of the time. This has rendered it imprudent for me to be from home. The hard times and the expenses naturally incurred will oblige me to remain inactive for the future. My heart is in the work, but as long as there are no provisions made for the families of Elders by the Church, and a spirit seeming to predominate in many that it is not right to give to or support any ministry, only through the Bishop; therefore Elders must provide for themselves, so I am in hope it will be productive of good in some way, if possible. And while I remain at home and silent, I shall ever pray for the welfare of Zion, the building up of the cause of Christ, and that the aspiring spirit too often seen among officials may be banished, and love, peace and joy be established in its stead.

Priest G. H. Graves writes to Pres. Joseph Smith from London, Canada, as follows:

After a long time waiting for an answer to my last letter that I wrote to you about six or seven months ago, I thought that I would write again to you, to let you know how I feel in regard to the work of the Lord. I am just as strong in the work as ever, in regard to my belief. On the 27th day of February, I held a debate with a Baptist minister, very near all day. He took his Bible and I took mine, and we went from reference to reference, and at last he confessed that the Latter Day Saints had the best grounds to go upon. But he did not ask me to preach at his house, so we departed in peace. I am now ready for the field again; and if you can give me an appointment at your April Conference, I would be very glad to go. I have been working since last July, and I think that I ought to go forth again. After June conference last, I thought that I would travel a little through Canada and preach; but the people would not receive the Letter of Recommendation that you sent me for the Southern Mission. It was no good to me after you released me from the South; so that was the reason that I sent it back to you; I trust that you will send me license, so that I can preach anywhere I go in Canada, or out of Canada. Do as you are moved by the Spirit of the Lord. I am still in the faith. Pray for me. My family is well at the present. Our regards to all the holy brethren and sisters in the Lord.

MISSION AND DISTRICT REPORTS.

I hereby present to the Church a condensed account of the statistics and spiritual condition of the Missions and Districts:

English Mission: There are 15 branches, containing 414 members, besides 34 members at various places in England and Scotland. Thomas Taylor president, Charles H. Caton secretary. The secretary reports: From letters received from the various districts and branches, it is to be seen that as a rule the mission is in good order. The priesthood-bearing portion of the members are losing no opportunity for preaching the gospel of Christ, while the Saints generally are endeavoring to live so as to be examples to those who know not the ways of truth. The opening of the work at Burton-on-Trent is one of the best that has been made in this country for some years past. Not one of their number has ever been connected with the Brigham Young faction, and yet when we set them to the gospel plow they work as freely and as easily as though they had been born and reared in the faith. By letters received from there a few days ago, we learn that they have struck out into another town, and have already signs of some being baptized. Bro. J. Potts has been a "local preacher" for one of the sects for some years, but has now taken the sword of truth in his right hand, and by the blessing of God, will do good. What we can say of him may also be said of the whole of the brethren and sisters there. Bro. Joseph Dewsnip and his staff of co-workers in the Manchester District have also been extending their labors, and as will be seen from the report, good results have attended them. I have done my best to get the district and branch secretaries to attend to the recording of names of those added and lost, and in the main have been successful; would liked to have been earlier with them. Have no doubt that before Midsummer I shall be able to complete the record of the mission, so far as possible. A little more patience with regard to the requirements of the mission. I am of the same opinion I expressed last year. Conference will best consult the interests of the Church and this mission by sustaining Bro. Thomas Taylor as president.

Welsh Mission: Its condition is reported by Bro. J. R. Gibbs, president of the mission as follows: The dark clouds of trouble that have been hanging over us have disappeared, and the sun of unity and love is shining over those that strive for the truth. I have labored with the brethren in trying to strengthen the Saints in the hope of the gospel, and in bearing testimony of the truth to them that are in darkness. I am happy to inform you that the Lord is with us, and his blessings are enjoyed by those that are Saints indeed. Our labor among the world in the past has been very little, and our increase is but very few, yet there are some obeying the gospel. A new branch has been organized at Nantyglo, through the labor of Bro. J. Morgan and others of the Merthyr Branch. A remarkable case of healing has been manifested in that new branch; a woman that had been given up by the doctors to die, has been healed by the laying on of hands and prayer of faith. I am happy to inform you that there is a good feeling among many of the Elders to make a strong effort this Summer for the advancement of the work in Wales, and by the Fall Conference I hope that we will be able to send you more encouraging news. I am glad to inform you that we, after careful and busy labor, have published five hundred copies of Hymn Books of 240 pages, containing 393 Welsh hymns, and 33 English hymns. We have selected the best hymns out of the old book, and many have been composed by members of the Church in Wales. We intend sending one hundred bound copies to the Church in America as soon as possible. May the blessings of God attend your assembly.

Canada, Kent and Elgin District: There are 9 branches, containing 231 members; 12 baptized, 2 received by letter, besides one new branch (Baddertown) organized with 18 members by Bro. G. E. Deuel. A loss of 14 by letter, 1 by death, 2 expelled. There are 16 scattering members in the district.

Canada, London District: There are 10 branches, with 302 members; containing 5 Elders, 8 Priests, 7 Teachers, and 4 Deacons. William Jenkins vice-president, Samuel Brown clerk. The former reports that he has not been able to visit many of the branches, and as the traveling Elders have not reported to him, he can not give much of a statement of the situation. Bayham is in fair working order, and so are other branches; but some are not. The work has been improved by the labors of Brn. Lake and Griffiths. They hope for the return of Bro. Lake to the Canada Mission.

California, Northern District: The president, Bro. J. Carmichael, reports that the spiritual condition of the branches is improving; also there is some increase of membership. Many of the officers are doing all they can to advance the work. If an Elder is sent from the East it is believed by some that Bro. A. H. Smith would have as much influence as any one. Bro. Carmichael has labored three months in the ministry away from home, and the other three (since Fall Conference) at and near home, and says that he has been sustained by the Spirit, and has tried to do his duty.

California, Southern District: Bro. J. F. Burton, delegate, reports that the work there is moving slowly on. It was expressed at their late conference (March 4th) that one of the causes of the lagging of the work may be attributed to the fact that the faith of the Church seems to have been called in question by many of the Elders, through the Herald, and thereby their faith and confidence has been somewhat unsettled. And it is not thought that it will be settled till the brethren, either in General Conference or in a General Assembly, affirm the faith of the Church. It is also thought, as another cause, that the authorities of the Church have not been properly respected and honored. The district requests the General Conference to send one of the Twelve to labor in that district. Elders going there will be received and listened to by large and attentive audiences. There is a lack of Elders who will preach in branches and their vicinities, also a lack of presiding officers. Bro. Glaud Rodger is laboring very acceptably, and is now president of the district.

Florida District: Bro. F. P. Scarcliff, president, reports that little labor is done there excepting by the General Conference missionaries. The resident Elders have to labor for their daily bread, and none can devote much time to the field; but some of them have made commendable efforts in their own localities. There has also been great neglect on the part of branch officials, for which cause the work has declined for years past. But the faithful ones think that they can see the silver lining to the clouds now, and are hopeful for the future. The interest outside is good. Bro. George Montague has endeared himself to the Saints there, and it is desired that he be returned to that mission.

Illinois, Kewanee District: H. C. Bronson president reports 10 branches, 404 members. In some parts the work is improving, in others it is not in a flattering condition; but on the whole the cause is gaining. Those outside the work are beginning to realize what Congress has done, and they have read the sermon of Dr. Thomas in the leading papers. Hence we lift up our hearts and rejoice that God's hand is over his work for good.

Iowa, Decatur District: There are 9 branches, containing 768 members, including 1 of the First Presidency, 1 Apostle, 9 High Priests, 7 of the Seventy, 60 Elders, 20 Priests, 19 Teachers, 7 Deacons. During the year there has been a net gain of 132 members. O. B. Thomas president, J. V. L. Sherwood clerk.

Iowa, Des Moines District: There are five branches, 269 members, including 19 Elders, 11 Priests, 7 Teachers, 4 Deacons. During the year there has been a gain of 19 and a loss of 10 members. Difficulty exists in one or two of the branches, which has hindered the work in those localities. Some favorable openings have been effected in Dallas and Grundy counties. Brn. Nirk, Roth, Goreham and others, have assisted. Bro. R. Etzenhouser's labors have been of great benefit to the district, and many wish for his return.

Iowa, Fremont District: There are 7 branches, 343 members, also 65 scattering ones; including 2 High Priests, 2 of the Seventy, 43 Elders, 12 Priests, 15 Teachers, 7 Deacons. There has been an increase of 75, and a loss of 20, during the year, leaving a net gain of 55 members. Bro. G. T. Griffiths and R. M. Elvin from other districts and missions have labored in the district, and also we have had the labors of D. Hougas, J. R. Badham, and E. L. Kelley of the district; also some of the other Elders preach here a little. There is a great need for Church labor; there is too much slackness, too little discipline. Saints go their own way (or the way of the world) too much. There is some spirituality, more among new than among old members. There is a great lack of financial aid. J. R. Badham president, J. M. Stubbard clerk.

Iowa, Little Sioux District: Contains 8 branches, 518 members, including 1 Bishop, 4 High Priests, 6 of the Seventy, 39 Elders, 11 Priests, 10 Teachers, 5 Deacons. During the year there has been a gain of 37 and a loss of 47, making a net loss of 10 members. J. C. Crabb president; W. C. Cadwell clerk. The district is reported as being in a fair, but not in a flourishing condition. There are at present no serious difficulties to be adjusted. The deaths of Brn. Condit, Lytle, Harvey and Wilkins, caused a sense of loss to the branches and the whole district.

Iowa, Galland's Grove District: The president, Bro. J. W. Chatburn, reports as follows: When I reported six months ago, we had some difficulty in the district; but I am glad to say that it has been settled to a certain extent, and I hope will soon be entirely so. Very little labor has been performed since last report, except by local elders; but what has been done, has been well done, and it has had a good effect. Bro. Charles Derry has labored with good effect, and I think that he is the right man in the right place. At our Conference six months ago, we adopted the plan of dividing our district into sections, and assigning an section, to oversee the work and make that part of the Elder to each section, district his special field, he to report to the president of the district from time to time his labors and the condition of his field. This has worked well; in selecting those Elders their location was taken into consideration, as well as their qualifications for that work. We have found that an Elder assigned to a special duty feels a certain amount of responsibility, and is likely to have some pride in doing his work well. We had the very best quarterly conference at our last meeting; the Lord gave us his Spirit, and not an angry word was spoken; but all tried to work for the good of the cause. We planned a good work for the next six months, and I feel satisfied it will be done, if the same spirit still continues with us, as I pray that it may.

The district contains 13 branches, 644 members; including 1 Apostle, 3 High Priests, 4 of the Seventy, 49 Elders, 19 Priests, 17 Teachers, 6 Deacons. During the year 29 have been added by baptism and letter, and 27 been lost by letter, death, and expulsion. There are also 17 scattering members in the district. J. W. Chatburn president, John Pett clerk.

Iowa, Pottawattamie District: Contains 7 branches, 407 members, besides 30 scattering members; including 2 Apostles, 3 of the Seventy, 27 Elders, 9 Priests, 10 Teachers, 7 Deacons. During the year there has been a gain of 56 by baptism and letter, and a loss of 19 by letter and death, leaving the net gain 37 members. Hans Hansen president, F. Hansen clerk. Spiritual condition reported as being fair, and no difficulties existing. Many members are careless, and seem to be indifferent. All mean to do right in their conduct, but some seem not to realize the importance of the work. Opportunities are numerous, but few officers are laboring.

Iowa, Spring Prairie and Nauvoo District: There are 5 branches in Iowa and 3 in Illinois, containing 324 members; including 2 High Priest, 1 of the Seventy, 16 Elders, 4 Priests, 7 Teachers and 6 Deacons. A gain of 7 by letter and baptism, and a loss of 22 by letter, by death, and by expulsion. R. Lambert president, John Stevenson clerk.

Massachusetts District: Contains 9 branches, 546 members; including 1 Seventy, 29 Elders, 21 Priests, 18 Teachers, 16 Deacons. The work in 1865 started with 8 members, and this the result, and still the good work continues. The district is trying to keep an Elder in the field. John Smith president, F. A. Potter clerk.

Kansas, Spring River District: Contains 8 branches, 233 members, including 1 of the Seventy, 16 Elders, 7 Priests, 9 Teachers and 5 Deacons. A gain of 7 and a loss of 3 during the year leaving a net gain of 4 members. J. T. Davies president, J. A. Davies clerk. The latter says that he understands that a branch has been organized at Arcadia, but has no record of it.

Minnesota, Northern: Bro. M. Shaw, the president, says: It will be remembered that this district is composed of two branches; I live in the Oak Lake Branch, therefore I have more of a personal knowledge of affairs here than in Hope of Zion Branch. Our present number in the Oak Lake Branch is 15, former number 34. We are not disorganized, but we are spiritually dead. We do not have any meetings and in some cases not that neighborly love that ought to be. Now there may have been causes and circumstances that have brought this about, and each one may think to justify him or herself, let the Lord be judge not me. We are quite badly scattered from the two extremes of settlers 20 miles. As to the Hope of Zion Branch, I think they are about the same as we are here; they have no meeting, and as a result are cold in the work. They have no man in that branch that feels able to preach. If we are usually blessed this coming season we can well sustain by our means one Elder three or four months in this district. I hope we may be thus blessed to have an Elder visit us this Summer. I believe that God has some chosen ones in this part of the land, and I trust the way may be opened for them to be more active in the work. I hope you will not consider us broken up as a branch or branches or district, but only asleep, needing something to arouse us.

Missouri, North-East District: 4 branches, 181 members, including 17 Elders, 7 Priests, 8 Teachers and 3 Deacons. George Hicklin president, J. T. Williams, clerk. The district is reported as being in a fair condition, but not as much preaching has been done as was necessary. Many places are open for the work. Bro. Hicklin says that he is ready to labor in the field.

Missouri, Far West District: Contains 9 branches, 460 members, including 2 of the Twelve, 1 High Priest, 1 Seventy, 37 Elders, 22 Priests, 20 Teachers, 13 Deacons. The secretary, Bro. J. M. Terry, reports that the spiritual condition of the district is good and that peace prevails.

Missouri, St. Louis District: There are 10 branches, 519 members, including 2 High Priest, 30 Elders, 20 Priests, 8 Teachers, 10 Deacons; 23 baptized, 9 received; 19 removed, 10 died; net increase 3 members. J. E. Betts president, J. G. Smith clerk. The situation is reported to be improving.

Montana District: Contains 3 branches, 74 members; including 8 Elders, 4 Priests, 2 Teachers, 1 Deacon. During the year an increase of 17, and a loss of 13 members. The district is said to be in "very good condition, with a few exceptions." Two of the three branches are active, and the other is not, owing to unfavorable circumstances. There are good opportunities in some places where an interest is manifested, and patient labor would be rewarded. Gomer Reese president, Wm. Worwood clerk.

Nebraska, Northern District: This has 9 branches, 255 members, 9 scattering ones on record, and probably 30 in the district. Hans Nielson clerk.

Nebraska, Southern District: Contains 7 branches, 290 members, including 1 High Priest, 16 Elders, 13 Priests, 8 Teachers, 7 Deacons. During the year there was a gain of 41, and a loss of 11, leaving 30 net increase. Levi Anthony president, R. M. Elvin clerk. The latter reports that there has been a marked improvement in nearly all parts of the district, and the future looks brighter than it has ever done before. One very encouraging thing is that the people who are now obeying, and others who are investigating, are of the class that add stability to the work. District and branch authorities seem to desire and seek for the advancement of the work. The willingness of the Saints to support the work is shown by the fact, that during the year ending February 28th, $644.49 was paid in tithings, offerings, for support of the work in the district, for the Utah Chapel, and to sustain the work in Nebraska City. The above report is from Bro. R. M. Elvin, and delegate J. B. Gouldsmith.

Nevada District: Contains 4 branches, having 103 members, including 1 of the Seventy, 11 Elders, 1 Priest and 6 Teachers. T. R. Hawkins clerk.

Central Texas District: Bro. Elias Land, president, reports that new places for preaching are opening up, and the people desire to hear the gospel preached. The district desires the return there of Bro. Heman C. Smith and W. T. Bozarth, and so petition.

The following was moved, and by unanimous vote adopted:

Whereas the Edmund's Bill, originating in the Senate of the United States, has become a law, by which it is intended on the part of the Government to extirpate the practice of polygamy, which practice is by this act recognized as a crime and not as a religion; and

Whereas, in the discussion and consideration of this question in Congress it was frequently stated by Senators and members of the House of Representatives that the object of this measure was not intended as an attack on Mormonism, but against the evil practices in the territories of the United States, enjoined by the loathsome incumbrance upon that faith; therefore, be it

Resolved that we, the Reorganized Church of Christ, do hereby tender our sincere thanks to President Chester A. Arthur and all the Senators and Members of Congress who took an active part in passing such laws, by which the "twin relic" is to be removed from the institutions of the country, to the honor and dignity of the nation, and to the especial good of all true Mormons, who abide in the original faith of the Church.

The adoption of this was followed by a motion whereby President Joseph Smith was authorized to telegraph the same to President C. A. Arthur, and to the President of the Senate, and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

The application of Calista R. Conant to be received into the Reorganized Church upon her original baptism. May 15th, 1842. certified to by Bro. and Sr. E. L. Page of Hannibal, Missouri, was read, and she was received by unanimous vote of the conference.

Letters were read from Bishop I. L. Rogers and Bro. J. L. Bear, in relation to the latter's return to America, and it was Resolved that Bro. J. L. Bear be released from his mission, and that the Bishop furnish him with sufficient means to pay his fare from Switzerland to his home in America.

President Blair reported the condition of the Rocky Mountain Mission, especially the work in Salt Lake City and its requirements.

It was ordered that the report of Bro. G. H. Graves be referred to a committee; and it was therefore committed to Brn. A. H. Smith, James Caffall and T. W. Smith.

The committee on the books and report of the Bishop was read, and a motion made that it be adopted; but objection being made, it was referred back to the committee, the brother objecting being asked to meet with the committee.

The committee appointed at the last Semi-Annual Conference to draft and present resolutions on the subject of Sunday Schools, reported as follows:

We, the committee appointed by the Semi-Annual Conference held near Council Bluffs, September, 1881, on the subject of Sabbath Schools, beg leave to report as follows:

1. That we recommend the establishment of Sabbath Schools in all the branches of the Reorganized Church of Christ, as far as the same can consistently be done; as Sabbath Schools are evidently calculated in their very nature to direct the mind in its search for truth, and make it better acquainted with the word of God, which is truth; and inculcate a reverence for and a better observance of the Sabbath day; the keeping holy of that day being a direct commandment from our Heavenly Father.

2. We consider that for the better accomplishment of this object, some uniform system for conducting Sabbath Schools should be adopted, which can be made universal in its application. To this end we recommend the following:—(1) In its organization the officers to consist of a superintendent, assistant superintendent, secretary, treasurer, and leader in music, (as we consider the practice and culture of singing a great auxiliary in Sabbath Schools), together with as many teachers as the number of pupils may require. (2) The school to be opened by singing and prayer. We would advise reading the lesson of the day preceding the prayer.

3. We recommend the adoption of those selections of scripture for lessons which are commonly known as the "International Lesson System" to be printed on slips as a supplement to the Hope, one lesson on each side of the slip, something after the following order: (1) Two or three questions, and a review of the preceding lesson. (2) A short statement of the connection between the two lessons called the "connecting link." (3) The lesson of the day itself, portions of which (to be designated by brackets) to be committed to memory. (4) Explanatory remarks, giving corroborating passages from the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and history, when applicable. (5) A brief selection of the leading thoughts and truths contained in the lesson, with an appropriate text called "Golden Text." (6) We recommend, in addition to the slips that a small portion of the Hope be devoted to Sunday School work, known as the "Sabbath School Department."

All of which is respectfully submitted, and your committee ask to be discharged.

E. ROBINSON.
WILLIAM CLOW.

It was received and the committee was discharged; after which the matter was discussed, and finally the report was tabled.

Through the president of the Independence Branch, Bro. Joseph Luff, the sacramental emblems were offered to the conference, to be partaken of on the morrow, and a resolution accepting it, and appointing the time to morrow for such sacrament meeting was adopted.

There was preaching in the evening by Bro. W. W. Blair, assisted by Bro. J. S. Patterson.

SUNDAY, APRIL 9TH.

In the forenoon, at the Opera House, Pres. Joseph Smith preached, assisted by Bro. Joseph Luff. At the same hour Bro. E. L. Kelley spoke at the Chapel, assisted by Bro. John Hawley.

In the afternoon, sacrament was administered. Brn. G. A. Blakeslee and P. Cadwell presided and blessed the emblems, and Brn.

A. J. Cox and T. Hatty passed them to the congregation. The house was filled, and only a small number of those who apparently wished to do so could have time to bear testimony. During the session nine children were blessed by Brn. Gurley and Caffall. After the meeting closed, those who were sick remained and were administered to by Brn. J. S. Patterson, J. T. Davies, Heman C. Smith, C. H. Jones, E. H. Gurley, J. Luff, and J. F. Eurlon.

There were services in the evening at the Chapel, Bro. C. H. Jones preaching, assisted by Bro. G. F. Weston. At the Opera House, Bro. Z. H. Gurley preached, assisted by Bro. W. H. Kelley.

MONDAY, APRIL 10TH.

The morning prayer meeting was in charge of Brn. J. T. Kinnaman and E. H. Gurley.

During the forenoon, Bro. M. H. Forscutt preached, assisted by Bro. E. Robinson.

Business session was opened by singing "Mid scenes of confusion and creature complaints," and prayer was offered by Bro. John Hawley.

The chairman of the Music Committee reported that its work was in statu quo.

The further enrollment of ex-officio members of the conference was made. The following were found of the various grades of officials who are entitled to voice and vote in the conference, besides the delegates heretofore noted.

Of the First Presidency: Joseph Smith and Wm. W. Blair—2.

Of the Apostles: Alex. H. Smith, T. W. Smith, James Caffall, J. H. Lake, W. H. Kelley and Z. H. Gurley—6.

Of the High Priests: John Landers, E. Robinson, M. H. Forscutt, P. Cadwell, C. G. Lanphear, J. W. Chatburn, G. A. Blakeslee, and H. A. Stebbins—8.

Of the Seventy: J. S. Patterson, E. C. Brand, J. C. Foss, J. T. Davies, E. M. Wildermuth, John Thomas, B. V. Springer, Andrew Hall, C. H. Jones, I. A. Bogue, Heman C. Smith, George Mantague—12.

Of the Elders: Levi Anthony, Wm. Anderson, W. N. Abbott, S. V. Bailey, Nelson Brown, James Buckley, W. L. Booker, John Beard, J. F. Burton, J. W. Brackenbury, B. B. Brackenbury, C. A. Beebe, J. R. Badham, J. D. Bennett, Josiah Curtis, E. W. Cato, sen., Wm. Chambers, David Chambers, Emsley Curtis, J. T. Clarks, Frederick Campbell, D. S. Crawley, T. W. Chatburn, B. F. Durfee, J. R. Evans, R. M. Elvin, John Eames, Hiram Falk, E. H. Gurley, Henry Green, S. W. Hogue, Henry Halliday, Wm. Hopkins, T. Hindirks, John Hawley, Hans Hansen, H. N. Hansen, George Hicklin, J. J. Kaster, J. T. Kinnaman, Alma Kent, Wm. Leeka, Wm. Lewis, Joseph Luff, Wm. Newton, Thomas Nutt, David J. Powell, David E. Powell, David Powell, G. W. Pilgrim, Clarence St. Clair, F. P. Scarcliff, C. W. Short, W. B. Tignor, S. O. Waddel, F. C. Warnky, I. N. White, J. W. Waldsmith—58.

Priest: E. L. Kelley.

The resignations of Bishop I. L. Rogers and his counselors, the consideration of which was made the special order for to-day, were presented and the resignations were read. The motion to accept the resignation of the Bishop that was so deferred on Friday, was before the house, and the following was moved as a substitute:

Resolved that the resignation of Brn. H. A. Stebbins and David Dancer, as counselors to Bishop I. L. Rogers, be accepted, and that action upon the resignation of Bishop Rogers be deferred until the next General Conference.

A motion to divide the question and take up the resignation of the counselors first was made, but a vote being taken, the motion to divide was lost, and the substitute was put upon its passage, with a result of 266 votes for and 359 against, as follows:

Yeas: Ex-officio vote 35, London District 22, Fremont 25, Pottawattamie 25, Northern Illinois 44, North-East Missouri, 11, St. Louis 32, Nodaway 8, String Prairie and Nauvoo 18, Northern Nebraska 21, North West Kansas 15, Central Texas 7; Red River, Silver Hill, and Delaware Branches, each 1 vote—266.

Nays: Ex-officio votes 43, Southern California District 23, Florida 18, Decatur 47, Des Moines 16, Little Sioux 37, Galland's Grove 42, Southern Indiana 11, Spring River 17, Far West 29, Independence 12, Southern Nebraska 22, Three Rivers 2, Farmington, Eagle Creek and Foundry, each 1 vote—359.

The substitute was therefore declared lost, and the vote on the original proceeded, the result being the acceptance of Bishop Rogers' resignation, by a vote of 347 for, and 283 against, as follows:

Yeas: Ex-officio: W. H. Kelley, A. H. Smith, Z. H. Gurley, J. Caffall, C. G. Lanphar, John Landers, E. Robinson, P. Cadwell, G. A. Blakeslee, J. W. Chatburn, E. M. Wildermuth, C. H. Jones, I. A. Bogue, Geo. Montague, Thomas Nutt, John Hawley, J. F. Burton, J. W. Brackenburg, R. M. Elvin, I. N. White, E. Curtis, Joseph Luff, J. W. Waldsmith, F. Campbell, F. P. Scarcliff, W. N. Abbott, J. T. Kinnaman, J. Curtis, J. R. Evans, E. W. Cato, H. Halliday, E. H. Gurley, David E. Powell, L. Anthony, W. Lewis, T. W. Chatburn, D. S. Crawley, S. W. Hogue, G. W. Pilgrim, E. L. Kelley. Yeas by delegates: Southern California District 23, Decatur 47, Des Moines 16, Galland's Grove 42, Little Sioux 37, Florida 18, Michigan 38, Southern Indiana 11, Far West 29, Nodaway 8, Independence 12, Southern Nebraska 22, Three Rivers Branch 2.

Nays: Ex-officio: Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, J. H. Lake, T. W. Smith, E. C. Brand, J. S. Patterson, J. Thomas, J. C. Foss, J. T. Davies, H. C. Smith, A. Hall, B. V. Springer, J. F. McDowell, H. Falk, S. V. Bailey, S. O. Waddel, C. W. Short, J. Buckley, N. Brown, D. J. Powell, H. Green, W. L. Booker, W. Hopkins, W. Chambers, W. Anderson, J. Beard, T. Hinderks, D. Chambers, H. Hansen, H. N. Hansen, G. Hicklin, W. Newton, A. Kent, E. B. Brackenburg, J. J. Kaster, J. R. Badham, J. T. Clark, W. Leeka, J. Eames, J. D. Bennett, B. F. Durfee. Nays by delegates: Fremont District 25, Pottawattamie 25, String Prairie and Nauvoo 18, London 22, Northern Illinois 44, Spring River 17, North-West Kansas 15, North-East Missouri 11, Saint Louis 32, Northern Nebraska 21, Central Texas 7, Red River, Silver Hill, Farmington, Eagle Creek and Foundry, and Delaware Branches, each 1 vote.

A motion to accept the resignations of the counselors of the Bishop was laid upon the table by vote of the Conference.

The following, being the feelings of many present, was moved and adopted by unanimous vote of the body.

Resolved that this Conference before proceeding further to choose a successor in the office of Bishop of the Church, made vacant by the resignation of Bro. I. L. Rogers, unite severally our prayers and faith before the Lord, putting away all selfish feelings and motives, and in full confidence ask the President of the Church to present the matter before the Lord, and ask that the Lord may, in his great love to his people, designate the name of the person whom he would have placed in the office of Bishop of his Church, and make and give such other manifestations of his will to us as may be his pleasure so to do with regard to his work.

The Conference voted thanks to Mr. Wilson for the use of the Opera House on Sunday, and to the Christian Church for the use of the baptismal font in their meeting house.

COMMITTEE REPORT ON BOARD OF LOCATION.

The report of the Committee on the Board of Location report was read as follows:

We your committee appointed to examine the Report of the Locating Board Report:

That we have examined their report, and find it correct so far as may be determined from any thing placed in our hands. We call attention however, to the following items found on page two of the report that will need some explanation further than is given in the report, when it shall be published, viz, the loan of $110 by Elizabeth Swarthout, and when refunded there were but $100 paid, leaving the Board in debt $10 to said person. The loan of $543 50 by Sarah Chester, which was refunded, yet there is a statement that it was given to the Church. The loan of a $100 by Mary A. Lewis, which has not been refunded, but which the board is yet liable for.

We recommend the acceptance of the report and the release of the committee, when they shall point out some satisfactory way of refunding the $110 not yet paid should it be called for.

BOARD OF LOCATION REPORT.

The report of the Board of Location was read, as follows:

The Locating Board, under direction of resolutions of your honorable body, adopted April 10th, 1876, and subsequently, report:

1. That the location of the railway through Decatur county, Iowa, having been finally made; your committee met November 9th, 1880, and decided to remove the business center of the Church and the publishing department from Plano, Kendall county, Illinois, to Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, that place being in the south-west part of the said county, as before reported by us.

2. At such meeting the vote for removal was submitted and received a unanimous support of all the Board.

3. That by nomination and vote, properly made and taken at said meeting, Bro. David Dancer of Lamoni, and Joseph Smith of Plano, were made an executive committee of the Board to execute said order of removal with discretionary powers to select and determine the site, and to erect a suitable building for the Herald Office business, in said town of Lamoni.

The executive committee in pursuance of this vote, secured by one of its members, (the chairman of your committee), sale for the farm known as the Location Farm in New Buda township, in said county of Decatur, to a Bro. Thomas France of Kewanee, Illinois.

4. That in the Spring of 1881, the Executive Committee proceeded to purchase a parcel of land in Lamoni, deemed eligible by them; a brick yard was made, brick burned, lumber bought, workmen hired, under the charge of the chairman of said Executive Committee, Br. David Dancer, and a building 30x65 feet in size, two stories in height, with an engine room 16x16 feet square attached, was erected at a total cost to the date of report of publishing committee, submitted to this session, to which reference is here made for items touching costs of material and labor, and your Honorable Body cited thereto, of $5,541.14, with an additional estimated cost of $400, to finish said building and enclose the grounds with suitable fences, &c.

5. That in keeping with the spirit of said resolutions, the real estate property acquired by the Herald Office in Plano was sold; the Herald office and fixtures, together with the several employees of the office were successfully removed from Plano to Lamoni, and the building placed in charge of the committee of Publication on October 18th, 1881. A copy of the Articles of Incorporation were filed in the Office of the County Clerk of Decatur county, Iowa, aforesaid, February 3d, 1882, by the secretary of the Church, Bro. H. A. Stebbins, and the removal of the business center as contemplated fully accomplished. See Herald Office Report to which reference is here made.

6. That in pursuance of the duty imposed upon your Locating Committee by resolution of Conference aforesaid, your committee have through their executive committee done the best that they could to carry out the wishes of your Honorable Body as expressed in the resolutions passed by you at your different sessions; and herewith submitting a financial statement from the Secretary of the Locating Board for examination and record; ask that the labors of your committee be officially recognized and endorsed by you, and your committee be released from further responsibility under the aforesaid resolutions, and until further exigency arises.

7. That in the efforts to carry out your resolutions, your Locating Board have received aid and support from the Committee of Publication, through its President George A. Blakeslee; also from the Bishop I. L. Rogers, Treasurer; and H. A. Stebbins, Secretary of Locating Board; and from the Bishopric, through the chairman of the Executive Committee, Bro. David Dancer.

JOSEPH SMITH,
Chairman of Board of Location.

Respectfully submitted,
HENRY A. STEBBINS,
Secretary of Church and of Board of Removal.

The secretary made the explanations asked for, showing that when Sr. Chester took the loan from the Board she transferred it to the Bishop as tithing, the $110 remaining as it was till it should be called for.

The report of the committee was received, the recommendation to accept the report of the Board was adopted and the committee was discharged.

COMMITTEE REPORT ON BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

The report of the committee on the Board of Publication report was read, as follows:

Your committee appointed to examine the report of the Board of Publication respectfully submit the following as their report:

We find the report correct, so far as may be determined from the face of it. The press has been removed from Plano, Illinois, to Lamoni, Iowa; land bought, wages paid, material bought, a building erected for the publishing department, of which we have the items in the report; but we have no means of determining as to whether wisdom and economy has been manifested in all of this outlay or not.

A building for the publishing department was erected in part by D Dancer and Co., at an expense of $4,858 78, which was completed by the Board of Publication at a cost of $687.36, making a total cost of building $5,541.14. It is obvious that your committee has no means of determining anything with reference to these transactions, save as may appear from the presentation of the report itself. We recommend that the report be read and accepted.

I. N. WHITE, E. C. BRAND,
WM. H. KELLEY, Committee

The report was received and the committee was discharged.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION REPORT.

The report of the Board was read as follows:

The Board of Publication respectfully submit the following as their report of business done since the Fall Conference.

The office building at Lamoni having been sufficiently far advanced, the removal of the office from Plano was successfully accomplished in October, 1881, the Board taking possession on the 18th of that month.

The work of completion has been carried on through the winter, and is now nearly done, at a cost including lot of ground 120x300 feet of $5,541.14, including suitable outbuildings.

It will require from $300 to $400 additional for the completion of the building, erection of fences, &c., bringing the total cost of the property up to $6,000.

An itemized statement of the material used in the construction of the building, wages paid by Dancer & Co., together with the amount of wages paid by the Board since October 18th, is herewith submitted, marked "Exhibit A."

The building is 30x65 feet, two stories twelve and eleven feet respectively, and engine and boiler house 16x16 one story. The building is heavily framed, and sheathed inside, and veneered with eight inches of brick outside. It contains a fire proof vault large enough to contain the safe and all the electrotype plates.

Being unable to obtain sufficient power from the engine in use at Plano, your Board deemed it advisable to procure a new one. The old one was sold for $181, and an eight horse power Ames Portable engine bought at a cost of $650.

The Herald subscription list shows satisfactory improvement, both in increase of subscriptions and prompt payment of the same. The increase amounts to 15 per cent during the past six months, and unless unforeseen contingencies should arise, the Herald will be changed to a weekly at the close of the present volume.

The sale of all the books published by the Board has been very large during the past six months, and the demand seems steadily on the increase.

The extra expense incidental to moving the office to Lamoni,—amounting to some $350, together with other extra expenses unavoidable in fitting up and adapting the machinery and material to their new quarters, premium on insurance, &c.,—have somewhat reduced the net gain on the business for the year. But in the face of this, your Board are gratified at being able to show by the balance sheet, a gain in the value of the property, and some reduction of the total indebtedness. The balance sheet, "Exhibit B," shows a net gain of $3,659.63; but of this $3,184.44 represents the amount received from the Location Fund and used in the construction of the building, leaving the actual gain on the business for the year of $478.19. A statement of receipts and expenditures of cash since August 16th, 1881, is herewith submitted, marked "Exhibit C."

For the Board of Publication,
LAWRENCE CONOVER, Secretary.

LAWRENCE CONOVER, Secretary.

The report was accepted, after some inquiry and remarks.

It was stated that Bro. W. W. Blair had been called home by telegram, Sr. Blair being sick. He left on the evening train, the prayers of the Saints going with him.

In the evening Bro. Joseph Luff preached, assisted by Bro. Thomas Nutt. Four were confirmed who had been baptized during the day by Bro. F. C. Warnky.

Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, May 1, 1882.

THE General Conference at Independence was a success, both as to the numbers in attendance, and the general spirit manifested.

The kindness and respect shown to the visitors by the citizens were remarkable; and exemplified the fulfillment of the prophecy, "Ye shall find grace and favor in the eyes of the people."

There has been a great change of sentiment wrought in that part of Missouri; either by the change of inhabitants, by the fair living of the Saints who have gone in there, or by the agency of the unseen forces which the Lord employs to bring his purposes to pass. Whatever may have wrought the change, the Saints would be very unwise if they failed to see it, or to accept it as providential for the development of the work they have in hand to do.

The Saints there have built a commodious house of worship, seating some four hundred people. The number of delegates and ex-officio members of conference was quite large: the business sessions were harmonious with scarcely an exception, and it really seemed as if the one thought uppermost in the minds of all was, what to do for the best interest of the work and how to do it. This spirit prevailed.

The business that gave rise to the most concern and anxiety was the resignation of Brn. I. L. Rogers, as Bishop, and David Dancer and Henry A. Stebbins, as counsellors. It was feared that to accept the resignation of brother Rogers would possibly not be pleasing to the Master; but the letter of resignation seemed to breathe a desire to be released from the care and anxiety of the office, and it was accepted. The matter was made a subject of prayer, and in due time the Spirit's answer set all hearts at rest. Bro. George A. Blakeslee was appointed and ordained to the office of Bishop. Brn. E. Banta, of Lamoni, and Edwin L. Kelley, of Glenwood, Iowa, were nominated by Bro. Blakeslee as his counsellors; the last named being present and accepting was ordained; Bro. Banta not being present, action upon his nomination was deferred until Fall. Thus passed one of the peculiar crises to which the work is subject.

The subject of Representation, upon which it was feared much acrimonious debate would occur, was disposed of pleasantly and harmoniously; and a far better feeling took the place of the grief-producing one which the subject had given rise to, heretofore.

Bro. W. W. Blair was called home before the session closed, by news that his wife was quite ill; but letters from him received to date of the 18th, state that she is recovering.

Brn. Lake, Caffall, Alexander Smith, T. W. Smith, Gurley and Kelley, of the Twelve, were present; and letters were received from Brn. J. W. and E. C. Briggs, Josiah Ells and J. R. Lambert. Of these, Bro. J. W. Briggs reported a serious lapse in his health. He was proposing to travel in the west to derive what benefit he could from change of climate and scenery. We hope that it is not too late to apply such remedy. Bro. Ells is quite aged, but from advices received, was still teaching Christ as the Savior of men. Bro. E. C. Briggs was intending to be at conference, but was prevented. He reported himself ready for the field again.

Bro. J. R. Lambert was doing duty in the South, and deemed it hardly wise to leave the field to come so far to return if it should turn out that he should be retained.

There were thirteen of the Quorum of Seventy present, and a concourse of Elders. The ex-officio vote was a little above eighty, and the vote by delegates gave a total of near seven hundred, the largest vote ever cast at a General Conference in the Reorganization.

The Saints at Independence did all that they could do to entertain the brethren and sisters from abroad; and if any were neglected it was unavoidable in the rush and hurry of the first days of the session.

The use of the Opera Hall was tendered by Mr. Charles Wilson, the owner, and the hall was occupied for four services, two on Sunday and one on Wednesday and Thursday night each. These services were well attended and well received.

It is evident that much good will result from the assembling at Independence. The fact that a conference of Latter Day Saints was held in the place whence that people were driven in 1838, unmolested by word or deed, will speak in unmistakable tones in approval of the policy adopted by the Reorganized Church, in defending the truths, but denouncing the errors of Mormonism. Now let our people be wise, live uprightly, deal justly, and on to victory.

On April 4th, Bro. W. W. Blair, Phineas Cadwell, James H. Peters and the Editor, visited Richmond, Ray county, Missouri, for the purpose of paying our respects to David Whitmer, Senior, the surviving witness to the Book of Mormon. We found an aged man, born in the beginning of the year 1805, and now past seventy-seven years of age, still erect in frame though slightly bowed, with eyesight and hearing good, and a memory astonishingly preserved.

We were kindly received by Father Whitmer and his family, David, Jr., a nephew, Judge Jacob Whitmer, a daughter, Mrs. Schweisch, and a grandson and daughter. We were permitted to see the manuscript copy of the Book of Mormon; and the examination we gave of them satisfied us that there was never but the one copy made, and that one is the one kept by Father Whitmer. It bears unmistakable proofs of having been in the printer's hands, and is well preserved. The aged and faithful custodian of these records deserves the deepest respect for the unyielding fidelity with which he has discharged the trust reposed in him to preserve and keep this manuscript record. He has been and is now poor, but money has not tempted him to part with a single page of that confided to his keeping so long ago. And we who were permitted to see them and talk with their keeper, could not fail to be impressed with the fitness of the charge. Latter day Israel should rest satisfied that the records fell into so good hands; and now when the opportune time came, to have so strong a witness left to tell the wondrous story of the revival of the Lord's work, in the discovery of the Book of Mormon. As for our part we could not help but think that the hand of God had been over those written records and the one to whose hands they were confided so long ago, and with whom we found them. Nor could we wish now that another had them. Let them remain with him who has so long held them in sacred keeping; and may his already long life be further prolonged for good to the truth which he loves.

In answer to questions by the brethren he recited with graphic distinctness the scene in which he received the testimony he bore many years past and still bears to the Book of Mormon; and averred anew that the statement made by him as published in the book is true. No one who listens to him can doubt the sincerity and truthfulness of the man. Bro. W. H. Kelley's letter but faintly describes the effect his words produce. He states that Elder Sidney Rigdon was not known to the Elders of the Church until long after the Book of Mormon was issued; and that of his knowledge Elder Rigdon had nothing to do with the manuscript of the Book of Mormon; that he was familiar with Joseph Smith, the methods of translation, and the circumstances connected with it and the publishing of the book, and from this acquaintance knows that the Spaulding manuscript story is false and without a shadow of truth in it.

We went on our journey to Conference wonderfully refreshed and strengthened for further conflict for the spread of the truth, by this visit to David Whitmer, senior.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THOSE of the Saints desiring to communicate with the Bishop of the Church, or who may have business to do with him will please remember that he is Bro. George A. Blakeslee, and Galien, Berrien county, Michigan, is his address at present. All remittances for the Church should be sent to him.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith is temporarily away from his home in Independence, Missouri, being called to attend upon Bro. Arthur and Sr. Lucy Millikin, relatives of the family, at Colechester, Illinois, both dangerously sick.

Elder J. H. Lawn writes from Hollister, Cal., I held three meetings here yesterday, in the Plaza Hall; fair attendance; kind attention and good liberty of the "Comforter."

The work in Germany and Switzerland will be in charge of Bro. John Bosard, of Thurgau, until some one goes from America to take charge of the mission. Bro. John L. Bear has returned to his home in Agency City, Missouri, and this necessitates the naming of some one to look after affairs there locally.

George Q. Cannon in his hour's defense, in the House of Representatives, put in a beggarly plea, in the course of which he states in reference to polygamy, that God revealed it to the Saints that marriage might be elevated and that inducement to prostitution might be removed. If the theory and practice of polygamy had not stultified the natural common sense of this delegate elder, he could see that if the intention of the Almighty was as stated by him to remove inducement to prostitution, then if the intent is carried out in Utah, the inference is fair, that one in ten of Utah's elders is a lecherous fellow, and to save him and his possible victims, he is muchly married; or what is equally damaging, the system can save only one in ten of its devotees, and therefore, partial to them, and damning to the rest who can not marry.

The Conference for the Northern California district was held at Oakland, April 6th and 7th. The reports were full and good. Ten were baptized at the close of the session. The Oakland Evening Tribune published the minutes in full.

In questions and answers for April 15th, the types make us to say in answer to a question on the sacrament: "The rule requires simply that the Saints shall meet together for the sacrament; and they shall partake monthly." For the word "monthly," please read worthily, thus; and they shall partake worthily."

The Progress and the Sentinel, published at Independence, Missouri, both gave the Conference favorable notices; the Sentinel of April 15th, containing two columns of condensed conference minutes.

Bro. George S. Hyde sends us a Gibson county, Tennessee, Mirror, containing a column and a quarter in defense of the Church, written by himself, a very good and successful one too.

A Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Republican, contains a list of the business men and firms of Rhoades—Edenville, among them we notice the firm of A. White and brothers, composed of Brethren A., I. N. W., and D. C. White, and F. M. Barbee. Bro. A. White is both postmaster and a Justice of the Peace.

BRO. OLE SEE sends an American Sentry, New York, containing an article of interest, about the earth growing old, from which we quote the following:

"The earth is growing old and will most undoubtedly come to an end in the course of time. It will never be suddenly destroyed by a comet. Meteors and comets may drop in upon us and help to increase our mass, but we need have no fear of their destructive power. We shall grow old by the laws of nature. The atmosphere of the moon has gone, and that of the earth has become already a very thin affair. If the whole atmosphere were of the same density throughout as it is at the earth's surface, it would only reach to a height of a little more than five miles above the sea level. The highest peaks of the Himalaya range of mountains would have no atmosphere. There is no water on the moon, and geological facts warn us that the water of the earth is gradually "drying up." Our "advancing civilization" is rapidly exhausting fuel, and the millions of artificial fires necessary to our present comfort are slowly having their deleterious effect on the air we breathe. The earth is "growing old" as surely as its vegetable and animal life are growing old. The earth will at some time "die" as surely as all its organic life dies, but it will not be a comet that will "kill" it. It is, therefore, to be hoped that June will give us a grand cometary entertainment."

SR. JANE HIRONS sends a Carroll Herald, from which we clip the following.

The country between North Coon river and Purgatory creek is a good one to live in. Excellent neighbors, good schools and church privileges. Make a Paradise of Purgatory. The Methodists have a neat church building here, and the Latter Day Saints have a flourishing branch. If any man is so ignorant as to believe that the Mormons of Iowa are at all in sympathy with the apostate and polygamous church in Utah, we think a few days sojourn among these law abiding citizens would show him his error.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Is the clerk of a branch or district, because of his clerkship, an officer of the Church?

Yes, but not a member of the priesthood.

Correspondence.

BEECHERVILLE, Idaho,
April 9th, 1882.

Mr. Joseph Smith; Dear Sir:—Having received the New Translation of the Bible, Life of Joseph the Prophet, the Saints' Herald, and the Advocate; and feeling anxious for more reading matter, you will please send me the Book of Mormon, Turkey Morocco, $1.75; the Saints' Harp, Hymn Book, $1.50, and the Doctrine and Covenants, $1.75; Poems by David H. Smith, $1.50; complete set of Tracts, 75cts; Voice of Warning, 50cts; Concordance to the Book of Covenants, 10cts; Joseph the Seer, by Wm. W. Blair in reply to Elder Sheldon, 75cts; and such other matter as you may think would do an old apostate Brigamite good; you will find enclosed a ten dollar bill. I am now sixty eight years of age; I embraced the gospel in 1839, in Springfield, Illinois, being baptized by A. W. Babbitt; went to Nauvoo in 1840, and was one of the last to leave in 1846; went to Ohio, thence to Wisconsin, thence to Utah in 1854, worked at Millwright work for Brigham Young four years, because I was counseled to, he setting his own price of wages, one half what I could have got elsewhere. I wanted to do right and took everything that was said to be right; but when I came to investigate for myself, I found I was following a strange wagon, and I left. I have been counseled, from Brigham to Bishop, to embrace Polygamy, but could never see it right. Jesus said, "He that hungereth and thirsteth after righteousness shall be filled;" I have got my fill of Brighamism. I know him to have been an imposter according to the principles that I embraced. I feel a sympathy for your cause; the principles which I embrace I believe in them still, and think if some good Elder would come here they would be kindly received and might do good for the cause. I met with Z. H. Gurley three years ago, I respect him very much. Please give him my respects. As I am a sympathizer with your sect, I have been classified with those of the murderers of Joseph and Hyrum, and those who drove the Saints from Nauvoo in 1846; and yet am one that was driven. How is that?

My respects to yourself and all Saints,
RANSOM A. BEECHER.

[For precisely the same reason that the brother writing the above letter is classed with the persons referred to, we and the Saints of the Reorganized Church are accused of being in league with those who murdered Joseph and Hyrum, and those who drove the Saints from Illinois; because the usurpation of priestly power and bad practices were not endorsed and approved by acceptation and practice; but were ignored, or denied in terms. However, brother, we extend the sympathetic hand to you; "Stand fast in the liberty wherewith God hath made you free.—Ed.]

CHURCH HILL, Trumbull Co., Ohio,
March 27th, 1882.

Brother Joseph:—I attended conference at Plymouth, Pa., the 26th and 27th of February; we had a very pleasant time; had the privilege of preaching to some of the leading men of the town in the morning and evening. Went from there to Philadelphia; met brother Gurley, well and earnest in the work. His labors in connection with brother Kelly, is having its effect here. Prejudice seems to be giving way, and the people are anxious to hear the truth. I came to Pittsburg in time for their conference. As there was no one to travel in this District, and many calls, my presence was very acceptable. Meet brother Ellis feeling quite well in body, and strong in the faith. He desired me to go to Mount Vernon, Knox county, Ohio, stopping by the way at Church Hill. I have spoken here in the Town Hall four times, once in Sodom, and preached one funeral sermon. Our efforts here have been crowned with success; all of the leading men of this place came and were well pleased. In Sodom the house was full; one minister there spoke well of us next Sunday. Some who had spent their Sabbaths playing cards have quit. The Lord seems to be at work here, and we believe more good will be done. The Saints at Church Hill have very good meetings, and also a first-class Sabbath School, which works much good to the cause. I will start for Mount Vernon to-morrow; will return here soon, and improve the opportunities offered.

Your brother in the hope of eternal life,
H. ROBINSON.

SOUTH BEND, Nebraska.

Bro. Joseph:—Since I wrote you last, I have been about all the time in the ministry; and I have many ups and downs, and many things to bear which are hard. At this place last Sunday the 9th, to which my girls brought me, they returning home, I made for the ferry across Platte River, intending to cross to meet an appointment in Sarpy county. I failed to meet the appointment. I had been crossing regularly once a month; but it seemed that I must stop such nonsense. I was met at the waters edge and told plainly that this must be stopped and that such preachers could not cross; I turned and went back to town and hired two boys to row me over in a skiff; but I was too late for meeting. This is one among many that I meet and expect to meet.

All is well,
J. ARMSTRONG.

EAST DES MOINES, Iowa,
April 16th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—We are working in our little branch. Our numbers are not increasing; but some are coming in; three have moved away, and three have lately been baptized; one an old man, another a young man, and my son, nearly eleven years old. I am very thankful to my Father in heaven that he has heard and answered my prayers, and his Spirit has led my son to yield obedience to the gospel; pray for him that he may be kept from the evils that are around him. We are having very good meetings. I think there are more that will come in soon. We are making an effort to build a Church here; I believe we shall succeed, God helping us.

At one time during the past Winter my husband was building a house for rent; one of our neighbors said to him: "Mr. Merrill, if this fine weather continues, I shall think God blesses you people." We know God blesses us inasmuch as we labor for his glory and honor. My desire and prayer is that I may ever be faithful, humble and watchful, to do the will of my Father. Bro. Longbottom preached a short discourse to us two weeks ago, in which he said he hoped to come forth in the morning of the first resurrection, did not wish to have to wait until noon. I pray it may be the happy lot of all the Saints of God to come forth in the morning, not wait until the day is partly spent. That it may be the privilege of all who have obeyed God's law, to be caught up to meet the Savior at his coming, is the prayer of,

Your sister in the one faith,
LUCY B. MERRILL.

ELKO, Nev., April 17th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I saw part of the conference minutes in the Ogden Pilot, published by E. A. Littlefield. He (Littlefield) once published the Elko Post in this place. Some time ago we took occasion to write to him, about his unfairness in classing all believers in the Book of Mormon, as what was known as Mormons in Utah. He noticed and published it on the 3d of January last, with some favorable comments. I am thankful that many of the papers are taking the right view in showing fairness. May God reward them. The feelings towards the true Latter Day Saints has changed wonderfully of late in this place. Brn. Johns and T. R. Hawkings', sermons here in February, 1881, made friends to the faith; and although there is no preaching here, we all try to live so as to compel all to respect us. May the Lord give us wisdom to continue. We distribute our books and papers; the more they are read the better they are liked. There is a good feeling in the Elko Branch, although there are but two members in Elko besides our family. I have been sick this winter, taken about the 1st of February with congestion of the brain; this is the fourth day that I could write; am very nervous, and shaky yet; so you must excuse bad composition &c. The Fraternity of Odd Fellows watched over me about two weeks, which greatly relieved and assisted my family; so we see although a non-religious body there is good in it, at different places, and under different circumstances things would be different. I hope and ask as a favor of any of the Elders, or Saints going through by Elko to stop here for awhile; if only for an hour, a day, or month, or year; they will find a home with us, and can get the court house to preach in and a good congregation of as intelligent people to preach to, as could be wished for.

If any should stop, inquire for Penrod's place, and any one will tell him, we live close to the public school-house and not far from the university. Our too youngest children are going to school to the latter place. I will go to the mines, as soon as strength permits, but my family will remain here. Blessings to you, and all Saints,
E. PENROD.

THREE RIVERS, Miss.,
April 16th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—I have been thinking about the difference between the church and the nations of the earth. We claim to be contending for the faith that the saints once had. Christ once rebuked his disciples for their unbelief when they wanted to take food with them on a certain occasion, and asked them if they did not remember the five loaves and two fishes. Another time he tells them to seek not what they should eat or drink, &c., for all these things do the nations of the earth seek (and to be not of doubtful mind.) Now, if God calls me to preach and I stop to inquire, or tell the Church that I will obey the call if the Church will support my family, will I be seeking first to do his will, or will I be seeking first what my family shall eat and wear. We often excuse ourselves thus: We have married wives, and the laws of the country require us to support our families. Now Christ told how servants who had no faith would talk. Some would have wives and families and some one thing and some another. I saw in the Hope and somewhere else, that some one says that there was no laws eighteen hundred years ago to compel people to sell all they had. Now, God said to repent and be baptized; but did not compel people; and he said also to sell their possessions and to prepare bags that waxed not old; and that they should have treasure in heaven. Can we have treasure in heaven without doing likewise? Through faith the widow's oil was increased, and through faith the violence of fire was quenched. I am contending for the faith once delivered to the saints.

Conference met at Cook's Point, Burlinson Co., Texas, March 25th and 26th, 1882. House called to order at 10 a. m. by the President. A. J. Cato clerk pro tem.

Elders H. L. Thompson, W. W. Belcher and Elias Land, present; H. C. Smith, J. W. Bryan, H. Grim, and S. P. Sherrill, by letter. Priest Edwin White (colored) reported in person.

Branch Reports.—Central Texas, 15 members, 5 scattered. On motion the organization of the Elkhart branch was ratified, and said branch reports accepted. It was organized by H. C. Smith with 14 members, J. W. Bryan president. Elmwood reports no changes. Cheeseland branch report referred back for correction. Bishop's Agent reported $5.20 on hand.

The Elders are requested to labor in their present fields, or as circumstances will permit.

A petition was read from the Elmwood branch requesting the General Conference to send Brn. H. C. Smith and W. T. Bozarth to this mission to labor together. On motion it was adopted as the wish of this conference.

Priest Edwin White was requested to continue his labors among his own race as opportunity permits.

Resolved that Bro. W. M. Sherrill represent this district to Annual Conference, and that he be instructed to oppose the Crabb resolution and sustain that of Gurley.

Whereas, Bro. A. J. Cato has come here by order of the President of the Church; be it resolved that we sustain him in connection with those other brethren that may be sent by the General Conference.

A letter from S. P. Sherrill to the conference was read, asking pardon for wrongs committed, but also making threats against some of the brethren. It was then resolved that a committee of two be appointed to investigate Bro. S. P. Sherrill's case, and report to the next quarterly conference. Brn. Cato and Belcher that committee.

Preaching in the evening by Bro. Land, assisted by Bro. Cato. On Sunday forenoon by Bro. H. L. Thompson, assisted by Bro. Belcher. In the evening by Bro. A. J. Cato, assisted by Bro. Thompson.

Adjourned to meet with the Central Branch, Texas, June 10th and 11th, 1882.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

Elders' Reports.—J. F. Mintun, J. Armstrong, J. Thompson, J. Cazier and R. M. Elvin (baptized 6), by letter. K. Johnson, (baptized 1), J. W. Waldsmith. Priests: J. Everett, (baptized 4), M. Cain, A. Buchanan, H. Thornton, J. B. Gouldsmith, verbal; J. L. Spurgin by letter. Teacher: N. Trook by letter. Deacon: J. L. Tempest, verbal.

Branch Reports.—Nebraska City 108; received by vote 2. Blue River 65; baptized 5. Financial report of the Blue River Branch: collected $37.18. Paid R. M. Elvin $32.93. District Treasurer $4.25. Platte River 83; removed by letter 1, died 1. Palmyra, retained for explanation. Moroni, retained for correction. Plattsmouth and Clear Creek, no report.

Zion's Hope Sunday School report was read.

Report of committee appointed to labor with negligent Elders received and committee discharged.

J. B. Gouldsmith was appointed a special committee to visit Clear Creek, Plattsmouth and Moroni branches, and seek the improvement of the same; to have permission to select help in said work.

Moneys received for expense of delegates to General Conference: James Cazier $1, Platte River Branch $10, Nebraska City Branch $8, Blue River Branch $4.75, John Everett 50c., total $24.25. J. B. Gouldsmith, R. M. Elvin, J. W. Waldsmith and L. Anthony were duly appointed delegates to the General Conference. Instructed to vote against the Crabb resolution and Gurley amendment.

Adjourned to meet at the McCaig Grove, Cass county, Nebraska, July 2d, 1882, at half past ten in the forenoon.

GALLAND'S GROVE DISTRICT.

Conference was held at Deloit, Iowa, March 3d-5th, 1882. J. W. Chatburn president, J. Pett secretary.

Reports.—Elders J. Hawley, C. E. Butterworth, W. Jordan, I. Goff (baptized 1), B. Salisbury, F. Rudd, W. Carroll (baptized 1), Jas. Wedlock, R. Montgomery, J. W. Chatburn, B. F. Wicks, John Pett, W. Whiting, in person; Thos. W. Chatburn (baptized 10), and E. C. Brown (baptized 4), by letter. Priests: J. Dobson and C. Dobson; and Teachers: J. Turner, D. Hain, W. Galland and N. Brogden, reported in person.

Bishop's Agents Report: Cash on hand October 7th, 1881, $15; received since, $115; paid out, $90; balance on hand, $40. District Treasurer's Report: Cash on hand, $6.50.

JOHN PETT, Agent and Treasurer.

Resolved that this conference endorse the view expressed in the Herald, that any member of the Church living within the jurisdiction of a branch be amenable to that branch for their moral conduct.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn's request to hold a two or three day's meeting at Edna Grove, in the Pottawattamie District was granted, subject to the approval of the authorities of said district.

A petition was presented to the conference by W. Lackey and wife, (late of the Boone County Branch, now disorganized, and signed by Bro. Wm. McBurney, president of the Boonsboro Branch), requesting to be restored to fellowship in the Church; the petition stating that they were illegally cut off the Church. The facts in the case as understood by some of the brethren were stated, and on motion William Lackey and wife were admitted to full fellowship in the Church.

The committee appointed to ascertain the boundary lines of the district reported as follows: Boundary lines of the Little Sioux District were established by action of General Conference of April, 1876. West line of Galland's Grove District runs directly north from east line of Harrison county. Pottawattamie District includes three counties: Pottawattamie, Cass and Adair. East line I have not yet discovered.

J. R. Lambert, C. E. Butterworth, Com.

The report was accepted and the committee continued.

J. W. Chatburn, J. Hawley, E. T. Dobson, W. W. Whiting and T. W. Chatburn, were appointed delegates to the Annual Conference, and instructed to cast the vote of the district for the Crabb resolution.

A series of two days' meetings were appointed. J. W. Chatburn was sustained as President of the District, W. W. Whiting and B. Salisbury as his assistants.

A prayer meeting was held in the evening, and many encouraging testimonies given.

Preaching on Sunday forenoon by Bro. C. Butterworth; in the afternoon by Bro. J. W. Chatburn, and in the evening by Bro. W. W. Whiting. The chapel was well filled on all occasions; excellent attention given, and a good interest manifested.

Adjourned to meet at the North Coon Branch, on Friday, June 9th, 1882, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Plano, Illinois, April 18th, 1882; J. S. Patterson president, G. F. Weston clerk.

Report of Branches.—Plano 167; baptized 1, received by letter 1, removed by letter 26. Mission 109; removed by letter 1. Chicago 66; baptized 2, received by letter 2, expelled 1. Sandwich 76; baptized 10, received by letter 4, removed by letter 3, died 1. Leland and Braidwood reports returned for items. No reports from Janesville, Burlington, Pecatonica, Amboy, Marango, Piper City and Batavia branches.

Elders St. Clair, W. Vickery, O. Jacobs, I. L. Rogers, J. Brighthouse, S. J. Stone, W. W. Blair, F. G. Pitt, and J. S. Patterson; and Priests A. Hayer, Henry Warbie, G. F. Weston and C. Wickes reported in person; also, Teacher A. Wilcox.

District Treasurer: receipts $9.74, paid to district president $5, on hand $4.74.

Resolved.—That we request the president to visit the Streator Branch, and all other branches of the district wherein bitterness and evil doing exist, and take active measures to suppress such wrongs.

Bro. Patterson was re-appointed president of the district for the ensuing four months.

Secretary Weston offered his resignation. Accepted, and a vote of thanks was tendered.

C. Wickes was appointed secretary of district. Resolved that the president of the district be authorized to appoint missions for all the circulating ministry in the district.

Brn. W. W. Blair and J. S. Patterson were appointed delegate to General Conference.

On motion Bro. Rogers was requested to dispose of district buggy and harness to the best possible advantage for the district.

All necessary expenses of secretary of district to be paid by treasurer on application of secretary. The treasurer to pay out such moneys for district expenses as his judgment may direct.

In the evening a good sized audience was made glad by a strong and able discourse from Elder F. G. Pitt, on the fruits of the gospel.

On Sunday morning Bro. Blair expounded the 14th chapter of Revelations, to a deeply interested audience of the Saints in his usual clear and spiritual manner. In the afternoon the Saints met to partake of the emblems, and a joyful season was experienced. In the evening Bro. Patterson ably addressed the people on the subject of "Temptation."

Throughout the entire session, a spirit of harmony and peace prevailed. Strong testimonies to the work were borne, and the Saints separated strong in the faith and more deeply convinced than ever that it is indeed "Good to be a Saint in latter days."

Adjourned to meet at Braidwood, Illinois, on the first Saturday and Sunday succeeding the full moon in June, 1882.

Miscellaneous.

JEWISH EMIGRATION TO PALESTINE.

THE popular impression in England that the Jews are reluctant to return to Palestine receives a striking contradiction from the report of a Russian correspondent of the Jewish Chronicle. "To this pass," he says, "have our 4,000,000 of co-religionists in Russia come. They have been actually shown the door! Israel must once again take up the staff of the wanderer, and abandon the graves of his ancestors, and this, too, at the close of the nineteenth century. Where are the poor people to go? This question they have themselves answered. The greater portion have determined to proceed to Palestine, to the scene of our former glory and independence. It would be unjust on the part of the English Emigration Committee were it only to assist those who wish to go to America. Every one should be allowed to choose the country in which he desired to fix his new home, and aid should likewise be given to those who are anxious to settle in our promised land." Here, then, the Mansion House committee seem to have their work cut out for them. If the greater part of 4,000,000 of people desire to go to Palestine they must inevitably starve there unless the emigration is checked, directed, and controlled. For this purpose it is evident that a more effective organization than the existing committee should be devised, and that serious steps should be taken for the selection in the first instance of agriculturists from the Jewish colonies in Russia, for the purchase of lands in Palestine, and the general supervision of the emigration.

CURE FOR SCANDAL.

The following cure for scandal was handed up for publication by a person who claims that this terrible disorder is now raging in this vicinity:

"Take one ounce of good nature; one ounce of an herb called mind your own business; mix it with a little charity for others, then two or three sprigs of keep your tongue between your teeth. Simmer them down in a vessel called circumpection, when it will be ready for use.

APPLICATION.

The symptoms are a violent itching of the tongue and mouth, which invariably takes place when you are in company with a species of animals called gossips. When you feel the fit of the disorder coming on, take a teaspoonful of the mixture in your mouth and hold it there till you get home. It's a sure cure, and on the slightest symptoms repeat the dose.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS IN 1882.

The American Newspaper Directory contains the names of 10,611 periodicals in the United States and Territories, which is a gain of 344 in the year just passed. The number of daily papers has increased in a somewhat larger proportion, and is now represented by a total of 996 against 921 in 1881. The largest increase has been in New York—10 dailies, 29 of all sorts. Illinois and Missouri show a percentage of gain which is even greater, while Colorado leads all others in the percentage of increase, both of daily and weekly issues. California, Nebraska, Nevada, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont, and West Virginia have fallen behind 1881 in the total number of periodicals issued. In Georgia, Maine and Massachusetts the suspensions have exactly counterbalanced the new ventures. In every State not mentioned above, and in the Territories, there has been an increase.

OBITUARIES.—Obituary notices not exceeding one hundred words, about twelve lines, will be published free of charge; when exceeding one hundred words, five cents for each additional eight words (one line) will be charged; notices of prominent Church officials excepted. Money to accompany notice

BORN.

WILSON.—At Elmwood, Cass county, Nebraska, December 7th, 1881, to Bro. and Sr. Wilson, a daughter, named Mamie Aletta.

HARRINGTON.—At Armstrong, Kansas, April 15th, 1882, to Bro. George E. and Sr. Mary E. Harrington, a son.

HOWARD.—At Hilliard, Nassua county, Florida, March 13th, 1882, to Bro. M. O. and Sr. Sarah Howard, a daughter, named Sarah. The mother passed over the river, leaving the little one without a mother's love to care for it.

MARRIED.

LINCOLN—DAY.—In San Francisco, California, by Elder T. J. Andrews, March 15th, 1882, Elder George S. Lincoln to Miss Emily C. Day.

DIED.

HAWKINS.—At San Francisco, California, January 12th, 1882, and buried at Genoa, Douglass county, Nevada, on the 18th, Bro. John Hawkins, aged 68 years. Funeral service by Rev. Delamitar of the Methodist Church.

SLAYTON.—At Sheridan, Douglas county, Nevada, March 9th, 1882, Bro. G. P. Slayton, aged 59 years. Funeral service by Elder A. B. Johns.

WALKER.—At Florence, Los Angeles county, California, December 21st, 1881, Sr. Mary E. Walker. She was born in Dumfries, Maryland, in 1823; baptized by Elder H. Falk, at Feather River, Sutter county, California, in 1866; and at her death was a member of Newport Branch, of Los Angeles. She was the relict of Bro. Eli D. Walker, who died in 1869.

SYLVESTER.—At Stockton, California, March 29th, 1882, of consumption, after a long and painful illness, Malvina, wife of H. W. Sylvester, and youngest daughter of Bro. and Sr. G. W. Oman, of Petaluma, California. She was born October 15th, 1851, in Utah, and united with the Church when thirteen years old. She continued faithful until the Dykes difficulty, when she became dissatisfied, and remained cold until during her last sickness, when she became conscious of her demise, made the necessary preparations for the impending change, and said the Lord had accepted her. She called her mother to her the morning she died, and said, "I am going home,—I die this day," and added that she had no other faith but that she received in her youth. Two children and a large circle of relatives and friends mourn her loss.

HUMPHREY.—Gone to rest on the 21st of March, 1882, Sister Jane M. Humphrey, of Dennisport, Mass., aged 47 years, 10 months, 11 days. She died firm in the faith, beloved and respected by all who knew her. Funeral services were held in the Saints' Chapel, by Elder John Smith. The large number who gathered at the service, showed that she was held in high esteem amongst the living.

"Dearest sister, thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,—
He can all our sorrows heal."

SHORT.—Bernice, daughter of William and Martha Short, born March 30th, 1876, took sick with membranous croup, November 5th, 1879, and died the 9th, at Moberly, Missouri; therefore, was 3 years, 7 months and 22 days old.

For though we miss her in our hearts,
The parting will not be long;
As Christ will give our darling back,
In the resurrection morn

HATTIE.

HOWARD.—At Hilliard, Nassua county, Florida, March 21st, 1882, in child bed, Sister Sarah, beloved wife of Bro. M. O. Howard. She was baptized August 14th, 1879, at Gainesville, Florida, and remained faithful to her vows, and went to her rest in hope of a glorious resurrection.

STUBBART.—Near Glenwood, Iowa, February 24th, 1882, Bro. Elerander, son of Bro. Matthew Stubbart, aged 12 years and 28 days. Funeral sermon to be preached by Elder Henry Kemp.

CLARENCE.—At Liberty, Cass county, Nebraska, September 3d, 1881, of whooping cough, Eliza E., daughter of Mr. William and sister Ruth Clarence, aged 25 days.

LUCHSINGER.—At her father's house, Bro. D. J. Powell, near Easton, Mo. March 21st, 1882, Sr. Hannah M. Luchsinger, wife of Mr. Joseph Luchsinger, aged 27 years, 2 months, 15 days. Over sixteen years of her life was spent as an earnest follower of Christ, having united with the Church in January, 1866. She leaves a husband, three small children, father, mother, brothers, sisters, and a large circle of friends to mourn her untimely death. Funeral discourse was delivered by Elder M. H. Forscutt, to a large concourse of sympathizing friends and relatives.

PLUMTEAUX.—At Oakland, California, November 24th, 1881, Sr. Julia M. Plumteaux, aged 37 years, 8 days. Funeral service conducted by Elder William Anderson.

MITCHELL.—At Henniferville, Summit county, Utah, January 2d, 1873, Rose Emily, aged 5 years, 3 months and 5 days. At Park City, Summit county, Utah, March 13th, 1882, Rhoda Ella, aged 1 year, 9 months, and 19 days; daughters of William L. and Sarah Ann Mitchell.

GRIFFITHS.—On August 17th, 1881, Margaret, daughter of Evan and Margaret Griffiths, aged 2 years and 8 months.

DRAKE.—At Scranton, Kansas, March 27th, 1882, Sr. Mary, the wife of Joseph Drake. Deceased was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1836; baptized at Scranton in 1879; and at her death was 46 years and 21 days old. She has been a devoted worshiper of the Lord; her hope kept looming up brighter and brighter; as long as she could speak she bore a faithful testimony to the work of the Lord. I talked with her as to her future prospects; she said all was clear, and rejoiced in hope of eternal life. She was firm in the faith she had espoused. She encouraged the Saints to be faithful. She felt the Lord was blessing her abundantly with glorious prospects for her future happiness. She desired Bro. Jarvis should preach her funeral sermon, which he did with good liberty of spirit, to an overcrowded house, kindly offered us by the M. E. Church.

MICHIGAN DISTRICT.

The Conference for the Michigan District is appointed to be held at Goodland, Lapeer county, Michigan, commencing on the 27th day of May next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon. Goodland is about twelve miles east of Lapeer City, and six miles to the north of Imlay City. Brethren attending by railroad will be met with teams at Imlay City. It is a town on the Grand Trunk Railway.

It is to be hoped that there will be a good representation of the Saints of the district present. Reports from all of the branches of the district, and officials will be expected. We hope to have the best representation at this conference that has ever been had in the district. Don't wait too long before making out your branch reports; please be prompt and send them in time. The Bishop is expected to be present, with a number of Elders, including, we hope, Brn. J. H. Lake and E. Gurley of Canada. Let us come together, not for pleasure or pastime, but for duty—mutual benefit and to serve the cause. Come not with thoughtlessness, but with faith, prayer and humility—trusting in the Lord, that the presence of His Spirit may be with us, that we may transact business in the spirit of unity, and enjoy a spiritual feast and blessing in the gospel. Inquire for Brn. James Carpenter, E. Delong, DeWolf, and others of the Saints residing there.

This appointment is early, but it is thought to be the best time, all things considered.

Anything sent by mail for consideration of conference, address to William H. Kelley, Coldwater, Michigan; or Imlay City, in care of James Carpenter.

The Annual General Conference has just closed, which was an extra peaceful, pleasant and profitable one,—giving great comfort and encouragement to all present. Let us not be a whit behind our chief in adhering to these virtues.

Respectfully,

WM. H. KELLEY,
President of District.

ADDRESSES.

Bishop George A. Blakelee, Galien, Berrien county, Michigan.
Joseph F. Burton, Delhaven, King's county, Nova Scotia.
C. G. Lamphear, Independence, Jackson county, Mo.
Alexander H. Smith, Independence, Jackson county, Mo.
H. C. Bronson, North Henderson, Mercer County, Illinois.

Man—Inspired.

"There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."—Job. "MAN," as used in the text, seems to refer to the physical tabernacle as a building, or tentement, in which dwells the spiritual essence sometimes denominated the soul. Considered with reference to his entire being, man is a dual creature—physical and spiritual. The spirit entity, in turn, seems divided into several departments, or in other words, is possessed of various attributes, namely: intellect, volition, sensibility, affection, desire, &c. Dispossess a man of any of these, and he could not be happy; and without his happiness God is not glorified. Without intellect he would not exist. Deprive him of volition, and, at best he could be but a mere automaton. Had he no sensibilities he could have no pleasure. Disrobe him of affection and what would he be? Mere animal. Nay, worse, for throughout the brute creation this attribute is profusely displayed. Remove from him desire, and he is stripped of every incentive to action; he wants nothing, and hence does nothing; there is no object in living; life is a farce.

Doubtless, the prime object of the physical structure is to utilize and enhance the vital powers of the spiritual being. The idea that a material body is a clog to human happiness and progression, is erroneous, we think; and we believe further, that human felicity will not become complete until a material body that is incorruptible, and hence adapted to the continued uses of the immortal spirit, shall have been given.

That the soul can think and act, and perhaps progress, independently of the body, we do not doubt, but if humanity were better conditioned for intellectual and spiritual advancement with respective bodies, we do not see why they should have been given. The Savior "had power to lay down his life and take it up again," which he did in the act of the resurrection of his material body, thus exemplifying "death" to mean separation, and "life" to be its opposite—eternal life, the continuation of all the conditions that promote happiness. Why many mistake in relation to this matter is because when "sin entered the world" the seeds of death, or dissolution were planted in humanity and we think all flesh as well—and its effects, which are sickness, pain, &c., are visible through life; but it should be remembered that while the body suffers from the effects of sin, the spirit does likewise, and that the gospel (who can comprehend its worth) promises to both a final release from all the baleful consequences of sin, by virtue of a reuniting of the immortal spirit with the body made immortal. By the power of the Father, the Savior conquered death, hell and the grave, prospectively at least, and it is only a question of time when men will be redeemed from him who "hath power over death which is the devil."

The foremost and governing attribute of man is the intellect. Its province is to direct and manage all the affairs of this wonderful piece of Divine mechanism—man. It sits upon the throne, passing judgment as to the right and wrong, wisdom or improvidence, of the diversified appeals made to it by the subordinate attribute—Desire. The position is a responsible one, for "'tis high to be a judge," and doubtless it will have to render account to the "Father of spirits" for the manner in which its judgments are rendered. Desire may be ever so clamorous, if it presents no lawful reason for its petition being granted, Intellect should refuse. The balances must be equitably adjusted, and every desire of the heart carefully weighed, and the judge who sways not the scepter of righteousness is unworthy of his exalted position. While Intellect decides and directs, Volition must execute, and Sensibility tells whether the result is pleasure or pain. The propensities of the spiritual man are so numerous that human sagacity can hardly classify them. The writer is a believer in the science of Phrenology, from the simple fact that reason seems to teach that any and every function of the spirit man requires its counterpart in the physical structure, as an organ through and by which its powers may germinate and develop. As the brain is the seat of intellect, so the vital organ, the heart, is the residence of the affections. "From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—Christ. That is to say, if a man's heart is full of hatred toward his fellow beings, the sentiment will find expression through his words; or vice versa; if he loves them, his language will so indicate. "By their fruits ye shall know them," "for the good man, out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is good; and the evil man, out of the evil treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is evil." We believe the spiritual man is the exact counterpart of the physical, and were we able to discern it, we should discover the same analogy running between all the spiritual and physical works of God.

One striking proof of the gospel's divinity is its remarkable agreement with the known laws of nature. The former teaches no lesson but what may be substantiated by the latter. We have at least two books both declaring the same wonderful truths; both far beyond the comprehension of finite minds to learn at once; but each contains lessons adapted to the practical use and comprehension of the weak. We may call them respectively the Book of Revelation and the Volume of Nature. These emanate from the same source and must agree. Our position is, that should inharmony seem to exist, it is either the result of men's mistakes, or their failure to comprehend the facts in the case. Both relate a few circumstances difficult to reconcile with our understandings of right. To those who profess to be for Nature, but deny Revelation, we offer that the former presents problems quite as difficult to solve as any found in the latter.

The law of Adaptation is written upon Nature's scroll, and exemplified in the gospel of Christ. From the smallest molecule up to the mammoth animal species, as also in the vegetable and mineral kingdoms, a wonderful harmony is seen to exist, as to demand and supply; in other words, as to the means provided for the accomplishment of certain ends. Scientists tell us there is no demand in Nature without a corresponding supply. How beautifully this sentiment is carried out in the plan of salvation. It is the lot of humanity to long for happiness; the gospel—blessed gospel—promises a fulness. The anguished mother, as she gazes for the last time in this life, upon the beautiful form of her dead child, mourns for what? The loss of the spirit and body of her offspring. Could the desire of her mother-heart be granted, she would see her darling once more in the flesh. Weep not fond parent. Nature and Revelation chime in harmonious strains the joyful song of redemption, your wish shall be granted. The tender blade and the bursting bud proclaim the power of the Resurrection. The supply is bountiful, and commensurate with Nature's demand. Lift up the drooping head, and still the throbbing heart; be comforted in the promise of Him who hath said: "Though a man die, if he believe in me, yet shall he live again." He who clothes the lilies feeds the fowls of the air, and gives bread to the eater and seed to the sower, does so by virtue of divinely appointed means—Nature's laws. While Amplitude is written upon every page of the physical universe, one lesson beautifully elucidated in Nature's volume is, that notwithstanding its various and apparently unlimited productions are a "free gift," and strongly suggestive of "grace," or "divine favor;" yet an effort is required upon the part of every creature to avail themselves of, and be benefitted by these bounties. If there is an exception to this rule we know not where to find it.

LABOR is the watchword of creation. Nature and Revelation alike declare "the idler shall not eat the bread of the laborer. Honest and faithful labor is an imperative requirement of God's laws. "These things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men."—Titus 3-8. Which argues that without works, and good works, men are spiritually impoverished; an increase and continuation of which brings spiritual death. Amplitude and Adaptation are as clearly portrayed in the gospel economy as elsewhere. It is designed to amply supply all the spiritual wants of man's complex nature. Its object is to do him good—to save him soul and body. "Save" in this relation means to preserve from all the conditions that make unhappiness, and to supply every facility promoting human felicity. It should not be regarded as an untimely and unjust subpoena, issued by order of a tyrannical Judge; but rather as a joyful proclamation of the existence, power, wisdom, love, and mercy of an infinite God, who cares for all his handiwork. Man, though a fallen creature, is susceptible to the requirements and uses of this plan, which is addressed to his affections as well as his intellect. Two things are eminently essential to the conversion and salvation of the soul. The Intellect must be instructed and convinced, and the affection must be courted and won—the sympathies must be enlisted, by which a desire is created to forsake evil and to cleave to all that is good. It is possible for the mind to be convinced, while the heart remains unconverted. This shows salvation to be pending upon the desire of the creature; hence the wisdom, mercy, and impartiality of God is evinced, in making it not so much dependent upon the capacity of the brain as upon the desire of the heart.

This brings to view the beautiful analogy running parallel between the gospel and nature. In the latter, we have reverted to the fact that where a demand exists a supply is found. For examples: we thirst, there is water to drink, an abundant supply, and just adapted to the quenching of thirst. We hunger, there is food suited to ten thousand different tastes—the supply is fully equal to the demand. We require fresh air, the globe is encompassed with it, &c. Any one will see at a glance that the bounties of earth only benefit us as a means of supplying and gratifying our actual wants and desires; and without desire no necessity is created. If the physical system is so deranged that the stomach is nauseated at the sight of food, this supply, no matter how bountiful, can not benefit the individual. The condition of actual hunger and thirst is essential to the enjoyment of these benefits. "Examine yourselves" and you will find that true pleasure and happiness are but the gratification of a lawful desire. This presupposes that desire must exist before happiness can be realized. The pleasure of eating at the table spread with the bounties of earth, lies in the fact that we are hungry. The pleasant sensation created in swallowing the sparkling draught, is due to the satisfaction of an actual demand—we thirst. This brings to mind the text "Blessed are they who do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled."—Christ. Amplitude and generosity are portrayed here, but the inference can not well be drawn from the text, that the blessings of the gospel will be forced upon any one. Indeed such a thing would be foreign to the wisdom displayed in all the works of God. The choicest of viands may be repulsive to one when not hungry. If we desire to be endowed with the righteousness of God, we must hunger and thirst for it. It must be the prime object of our pursuit, and the foremost desire of our lives. Indifference and carelessness are condemned. The terms "hunger" and "thirst" are indicative of the strongest desires of which we are capable. They are the cravings for that which sustains life, and the incentives by which men are led to toil their life long. If the thought is entertained by any as to why there is not more spirituality among the religionists of to-day, or in other words, why the Spirit of God is so meagerly given, we offer that the text last quoted gives a solution of the problem. We insist that that which a man actually "hungers and thirsts after" he will work for—it is the apple of his eye; other things are of secondary consideration with him. If we are "of the world" we will love its pleasures. If our "treasure" is in heaven, we will "seek those things that are above, where Christ sitteth upon the right hand of God." The reason assigned by the Savior for the people's rejecting the truths enunciated by him was, that they "loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil," which desire for "darkness" he declared to be the "condemnation of the world."

Men are not to blame for the original state of darkness, or ignorance, in which they are relative to the things of God; neither for being mentally incapacitated to worship him; but wrong certainly attaches where no attempt is made by them to free themselves from the condition of ignorance.

In view of past individual experience, and what we read and observe, we are of the opinion that Infidelity is not so much a disease of the brain as it is an affection of the heart. It is not so often the verdict of an unbiased mind as it is the expression of an inordinate desire. As a rule it does not originate in careful, thoughtful, and shall we add prayerful investigation; but in a superficial, hasty self-defense. An infidel never was made by going to God with an honest, contrite heart, asking him for light and deliverance. If a child disavows having parentage, it is only an evidence of his estrangement from them. Infidelity is an ungainly worm, feeding upon the flowers of human progress and happiness. It has no certain hope itself, and wants others to be made like it, and share its unhappiness. Like a cloud of mist, it hangs stubbornly over humanity, shaping itself according to the forces brought to bear against it; hence it is hard to define. It's death-like influences have penetrated to the very heart of society, spreading vice and gloom in their pathway. Its baneful effects are visible out of the churches, and in them as well. Unbelief in God and his word is stamped upon the people and nations.

The creature, Infidelity, appears in so many and in such a variety of forms, it is extremely difficult to describe. We give our version, however, as being the result of observation, and should it be deficient, others may take from or add to at their pleasure. It is that which believes, or claims to believe, in a God infinite in power, wisdom, love and mercy, who can not, or will not change nor suspend for a moment any force of nature, even though such change or suspensions should benefit a world of suffering beings; whose blind eyes, deaf ears, and obdurate hearts, are alike invincible to the supplications of dependent and needy creatures; and who deals so carelessly with his creature man, as to give him no law by which he may be governed, and does not hold him responsible for his acts in life. Some men of fine culture and bright intellect style themselves, and are called by others, Infidels. As a rule, we think these have discerned written upon Nature's page, Design, which asserts invariably the existence of a Designer; to this they assent,—the deduction being a product of the brain. In the construction of the material world and its appurtenances, there may be seen a manifest display of the attributes, power, wisdom, goodness, &c., all of which the intellect easily discerns; but nothing short of a proper condition of the heart inspires true love, reverence, thankfulness, confidence, and secures to man a true conception of the nature and character of God. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness" is true. Our infidel friends claim to hold in disdain the Being whom the Bible calls God, preferring to believe that the true Deity never made himself known to man only through the visible works of creation, endeavoring to support this view: first, by alleging that revelation further than is given in nature is unnecessary; and second, by ridiculing the Deity of the Bible.

As to the first proposition, we would suggest that God himself is the proper one to determine whether revelation to his creature man is necessary or not. In regard to the second, we offer that the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, will compare as favorably with the infidel's Deity, as will light compare with darkness, or love and mercy with cold and heartless indifference. Atheism seems the next retrograde step to infidelity. The latter recognizes the existence of the First Great Cause, but refuse to worship him; but many hesitate not to take his name in vain, claiming that the former is work only not required, but is almost degrading, while the latter does no harm. Atheism fails even to discern that architecture proclaims the existence of an architect; design, a designer; creation, a creator; and law, a law giver.

We do not wish to reflect upon the intelligence of those who hold to atheistic views, believing as we do, that they may have as good mental faculties as others who think differently; but we do read in the good book of those who "have eyes, but see not; and ears, but hear not; and hearts, that comprehend not; neither do they understand;" the prime reason assigned for these impaired faculties being a chronic love for darkness,— "the evil heart of unbelief."

In view of the existing evidences so copiously displayed, demonstrating the fact of a benign Creator, we can but think that actual unbelief in His existence is an effusion of the heart rather than a product of the brain. David seemed to so understand. Hear him: "The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God." Doubtless the noun "fool" as here used, is to be taken with some latitude; the attribute "foolishness" referring more to a depraved nature, than to a demented intellect. The duty, privilege, and power of Saints, is to show to the world that there is a God. Jesus, our mediator, by virtue of his love, sympathy, charity, wisdom, obedience, and good works in general, demonstrated this important fact; it is ours to perpetuate the example.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES.

TUESDAY, APRIL 11TH.

The morning prayer meeting was placed in charge of Bro. R. M. Elvin.

Preaching during the forenoon by Bro. J. T. Kinneman, assisted by Bro. William Leeka.

At the usual hour business was resumed by singing "Behold, the great Redeemer comes." The minutes of yesterday were read, corrected, and accepted.

The committee on the Bishop's books and accounts reported as follows:

We your committee on Bishop's books, beg leave to report as follows: Money in hands of Bishop I. L. Rogers, April 1st, 1882, $1,895.61. In hands of Bishop's Agents March 1st, 1882, $664.85. Total due the Church, $2,560.46.

After proper explanation from Bro. H. A. Stebbins, we find the books in our hands correct; but your committee would recommend that in the future, all books of entry be placed in the hands of the committee for examination.

Furthermore, your committee recommend that a committee be appointed by this conference to make a final settlement with Bishop I. L. Rogers. All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. W. CHATBURN,
G. A. BLAKESLEE,
PHINEAS CADWELL.

The Bishop's report and summary of Agents was received as follows:

* $65 95.

† 95c.

The itemized reports I enclose to the Conference for publication as usual.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

ISRAEL L. ROGERS,

Presiding Bishop.

The report was accepted, the recommendations were adopted, and the committee was discharged.

It was moved that the committee consist of Brn. G. A. Blakeslee, J. W. Chatburn, and P. Cadwell. An amendment was moved that the name of H. A. Stebbins be substituted for that of P. Cadwell. It was further moved that the motion be amended by adding the names of W. H. Kelly and P. Cadwell. The second amendment being put to vote was lost. The first amendment prevailed, as also did the original as amended.

The committee to whom was referred the subject of Priest G. H. Graves, and his wish for a mission, reported as follows:

We, your committee, respectfully report that we believe that the brother is not worthy of an appointment by this body, on the ground that he refused to acknowledge himself a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, but claimed and advertised himself as a minister of the Missionary Baptist Church, and therefore recommend that his application for a mission be not granted to him by this body.

A. H. SMITH,
T. W. SMITH,
JAMES CAFFALL.

The report was approved and the committee was discharged.

GERMAN TRACTS.

The committee on translation and publication of German tracts reported:

In behalf of the committee, I would respectfully report that we have thus far succeeded in translating and publishing the tract called "The One Baptism," also the "Epitome," which is bound with the other. We are now waiting the completion of a tract which Bro. T. W. Smith was to prepare, it to have a general character, by an understanding with the Committee on Tracts. We urge that the tracts which have been translated be obtained by the Saints and circulated among the Germans near whom they may live, or whom they may be acquainted with. Respectfully submitted, in behalf of the committee.

T. T. HINDERKS.

The report was received and the committee was continued.

The report of the committee on the North Freedom, Wisconsin, Branch case, as appointed by President Smith, in accordance with the resolution adopted in September, 1881, was read, also their findings and decisions, and the confessions of certain parties in reply to those findings.

The report was received and the committee was discharged, and it was ordered that the balance of the bill be paid.

It was moved that the whole matter be referred to a committee, consisting of Z. H. Gurley, H. C. Smith and Joseph Luff. A motion to lay this on the table was lost, and a substitute was moved to adopt the report of the committee, which prevailed.

The report of the committee on the case of Rocky Mountain Branch vs. Bro. F. C. Warnkey was presented and referred to Brn. Wm. Leeka, Geo. Montague and J. T. Davies, to examine and report.

An appeal by Bro. R. M. Elvin vs. the Southern Nebraska District was referred to Brn. George Hicklin, I. N. White and Hiram Falk.

The expense of $13.45 paid for messages to Washington, D. C., as sent on the 8th inst., was ordered paid by the Church.

Report of the Quorum of Seventy was read, and at the request of the quorum, returned to them for amendment.

FIRST QUORUM ELDERS.

The First Quorum of Elders reported as follows:

The First Quorum of Elders have held two meetings; R. M. Elvin in the chair, J. R. Badham secretary. Minutes of last meeting read form Herald.

The following reported by letter: G. H. Hillard (baptized 7), M. B. Oliver, I. M. Smith, James Kemp, J. D. Craven (baptized 4), J. M. Stubbard (baptized 8), J. S. Keir, Robert Lyle, F. G. Pitt, (baptized 7), O. B. Thomas, J. D. Bennett (baptized 8), J. R. Badham (preached 50 times, baptized 5), R. M. Elvin (preached 152 times, baptized 26), Geo. S. Yerrington, Jobe Brown, G. Walker and J. Ruby.

The following brethren reported verbally: A. Kent, (labors have been confined to branches, baptized 1); Hans Hansen, preached to the Danish people, baptized 2. Wm. Anderson, President of St. Louis Branch labored constantly; H. Halliday, labored principally in the branch; G. Hicklin has done considerable preaching, baptized 3; J. J. Kaster, had labored in branches; S. O. Waddell, labored in branches; S. P. Scarcliff, missionary, baptized 16; S. V. Bailey, preached some; John Beard, preached some, baptized 1; C. A. Beebe, has charge of branch; T. Nutt, has labored constantly, baptized 5; J. W. Brackenbury, preached considerable, baptized 2; B. B. Brackenbury, done some preaching.

In pursuance of report of committees on cases of Anthony Metcalf and J. W. Mather, it was resolved that their names be dropped from the Quorum. Case of E. W. Tullidge was tabled for the present. Committee on case of Samuel Wood reported; the brother desired to remain in the Quorum. Committee in case of H. W. Pomeroy was continued, and J. R. Badham was added to said committee. H. Halliday and Jarius M. Putney were appointed as a committee to visit W. W. Wood. The Secretary reported one loss by death. Amount received $6.45, paid out $3.90; balance due Quorum, $2.55. Petition of I. N. Beebe was presented, to be received in the Quorum. It was resolved that under the present existing state of his domestic relations, we herewith decline to receive Bro. Beebe as a member of the quorum. The following brethren were enrolled to fill the vacancies occasioned by the death of J. Perkins and the dropping of A. Metcalf and J. W. Mather: Moses R. Scott, William Newton, and Joseph F. Burton. The number present at Conference was 17. The officers of the Quorum were sustained.

There has been baptized by the Elders of this quorum 124 persons since they last reported to the quorum.

R. M. ELVIN, President,
J. R. BADHAM, Secretary,

PRIEST'S QUORUM.

The First Quorum of Priests reported as follows:

Pursuant to notice, the Priests present at the Conference belonging to this quorum and others, met upon the 7th day of April, 1882, and from time to time thereafter until the 11th day of April, when the quorum organization was perfected, by the addition of names sufficient to make the quorum full, and the election of a permanent president to preside over the same. Bro. Lawrence Conover was chosen to act as the presiding officer of the quorum.

The following is the complete list of the members of the quorum including the new members received into the same during the meetings above referred to.

| 24 J. C. Johnson, | 48 Barnett M. Green. |

Bishop I. L. Rogers, the first president of the quorum, was not numbered with the quorum after the complete organization. The quorum thus organizing and completing its organizing under his advice and direction; and the names of E. H. Gurley, E. McEvers and J. H. Merriam, were dropped from record, having been ordained to higher office. Bro. J. C. Tripp of Nebraska died. The following resolution was adopted by the quorum in memoriam of Bro. Tripp, deceased:

Whereas, it hath pleased God to remove one of our number, Bro. J. C. Tripp, by the hand of death; and whereas, we desire to express our sympathy toward the bereaved, and show forth our esteem; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do as a quorum most sincerely express our feeling of loss in the death of this our brother and fellow laborer, and extend to the members of his family and friends our heartfelt sympathies in their loss.

J. B. GOULDSMITH,
RUDOLPH ETZENHOUSER,
GEORGE F. WESTON.

During the meetings, reports were either read or made in person from E. W. Banney, W. Rumel, F. Steffe, E. B. Morgan, L. Conover, W. Crick, G. F. Weston, J. J. Vickery, J. B. Gouldsmith, J. F. Clemensen, M. M. Ballinger, F. M. Dennis, E. Sparks, W. Clow, R. Etzenhouser, A. W. Glover, N. N. Cook, and E. L. Kelley.

A committee, consisting of Brn. Conover, Etzenhouser and Gouldsmith, was appointed and instructed to prepare an outline of the duties of Priests, their authority and rights, and report the same at the Fall meeting of the quorum for action.

The action of the quorum in electing a president from its own numbers was afterwards presented to the conference, and ratified and reported back to quorum by committee.

The secretary and treasurer reported the financial condition as follows: on hand at last report $5.95; received from N. N. Cook $1, R. White $1, total on hand now $7.95.

LAWRENCE CONOVER, president,
E. L. KELLEY, secretary.

The secretary of the quorum, Bro. E. L. Kelley, presented the following for action of conference:

The Quorum of Priests has elected Bro. Lawrence Conover to preside over them, and would present him to the conference for ordination to act in such position.

SECOND QUORUM ELDERS.

The Second Quorum of Elders reported:

The quorum met at the house of Bro. Warnky. Prayer by the president, William Chambers. I. N. White, secretary pro tem.

Brn. G. W. Shute, J. Condit, G. Berline, P. Armstrong and John Smith, reported by letter. William and David Chambers, F. C. Warnky and I. N. White, reported in person. All the brethren reporting seem thoroughly engaged in the work. The quorum is not in as good working condition as desired. There seems to be a lack of energy on the part of some. Hence the numbers present took into consideration the practicability of urging every member in the quorum the great necessity of reporting his labors, or intention to labor, that a full standing of the quorum might be had at an early date.

GENERAL CONFERENCES.

The following was moved:

Whereas, the holding of two General Conferences each year is attended with great expense, and in our judgment is unnecessary; therefore, be it

Resolved, That when this conference adjourns, it does so to meet April 6th, 1883.

After some remarks upon this, it was moved to defer the subject, to which an amendment was sought, that the deferring be until the Fall Conference. The subject was discussed by several, and the following was moved as a substitute:

Resolved, That when this conference adjourns, it does so to meet this Fall, notice being given through the Herald in regard to the change of time from Semi-Annual to Annual Conferences, presented by the foregoing resolution, that districts may instruct their delegates in this matter.

After discussion the question was called, and the substitute prevailed.

REPRESENTATION.

The following was moved:

Resolved, That it is the judgment of this body, that the sense to be conveyed in paragraph 4, of "Rules on Representation," beginning with line 61 and ending with line 68, that the aggregate of members in districts shall be counted, from which the product of the number of branches, multiplied by six, shall be taken and the remainder divided by twenty, in order that no fractional vote may be lost in any branch of the district.

Reasons were asked and explanations were given, and the motion was adopted.

On motion the hour for business to-morrow was changed to nine o'clock in the morning, to which hour the conference adjourned.

At the evening hour, Bro. Heman C. Smith preached, assisted by Bro. E. M. Wildermuth.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12TH.

At nine o'clock the conference convened for business, and hymn "Burst ye emerald gates and bring," was sung, and prayer was offered by Bro. W. H. Kelley. The minutes of yesterday were read and approved.

INFORMAL COUNCIL OF ELDERS.

The minutes of an informal council of Elders, held 8th April, were read, containing the following resolutions, adopted by them:

Whereas, It now appears that there is a lack of energy among many of the members belonging to the several Quorums of Elders; and whereas it seems expedient that some measures should be taken to the end that a yearly report should be had from every member of each quorum; therefore, be it

Resolved, That every Elder be required to report to the president of his quorum on the first of April of each year all his labor and his willingness or non-willingness to labor, and a failure so to do will be prima facie evidence to each quorum of the unfaithfulness of such members not so reporting.

Resolved, That in confirmation we believe every Elder should be very careful to conform themselves to state clearly the name of the Church, and likewise the bestowal of the Holy Ghost.

QUORUM OF SEVENTY REPORT.

The Quorum of Seventy report was read as follows:

As a Quorum we have held six sessions. The following named persons reported personally, and by letter: J. Thomas, H. C. Smith, J. C. Foss, B. V. Springer, J. S. Patterson, G. Montague, C. H. Jones, A. Hall, I. A. Bogue, E. M. Wildermuth, E. C. Brand, J. T. Davies, J. F. McDowell, M. T. Short, D. H. Bays, W. T. Bozarth, C. Scott, G. S. Hyde, R. J. Anthony, and J. F. Mintun.

The following named members were released as inactive: G. W. Harlow, W. White, C. F. Stiles, G. Outhouse, A. B. Alderman, J. Burgess, S. Ackery, G. W. Shaw, D. Wilding, T. Job, W. H. Hartshorne, H. B. Lowe, J. Speight, R. W. Briggs and Samuel Blair. The following named are dead: R. H. Atwood, W. Ostrander and W. D. Lewis.

M. Fyrando was expelled.

Resolved, That this quorum will not take notice of any name for admission to its body unless such be recommended by proper authority.

The president of quorum, G. Rodger, is authorized to call for licenses of all those whose names have been dropped as inactive.

E. C. BRAND, president pro tem.
J. F. McDOWELL, secretary.

ADJOURNMENT.

On separate motions the following places were presented as points for the meeting of the Fall Conference of 1882, and the vote being taken upon each, the result was as follows:—Galland's Grove, Iowa, 18; Davis City, Iowa, 6; Council Bluffs, Iowa, 12;

Independence, Missouri, 14; Lamoni, Iowa, 19; St. Louis, Missouri, 9; Magnolia, Iowa, 3; Sydney, Australia, 1. The two places receiving the highest vote (Lamoni and Galland's Grove) were then put before the body, and Lamoni received 39 votes and Galland's Grove 32 votes, as the places of adjournment, which decided the matter in favor of Lamoni.

GERMAN TRACTS.

The following was moved:

Whereas, There are certain German tracts written and published which are not in harmony with the doctrines of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ; be it,

Resolved, That all tracts be submitted to the German committee, appointed by conference of September, 1881, for correction.

An amendment was moved, that all of the preamble be stricken out that follows the word "published." This was discussed, and the following was moved as a substitute for the whole.

Resolved, That this body does not acknowledge tracts published in the German language which have not been examined and approved by the German Tract Committee, as appointed by the General Conference of September, 1881.

Discussions followed, and the question being called, the substitute was put to vote and declared lost. Then the proposed amendment to strike out the said portion of the preamble in the original was likewise lost, and the original resolution as first presented was adopted.

The following was moved:

Resolved, That all changes that differ from that rule which has governed the Church heretofore, shall be presented to the several districts and branches before action upon such change shall take place.

This was by vote laid upon the table.

REPRESENTATION.

The following was presented:

Whereas, The General Conference is now acting under the system of delegation, and for the reason that a common consent can be obtained; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this conference appoint a committee to draft a system of representation to apply to Branches and District Conferences, that uniformity may prevail.

This also was laid upon the table.

What is known as the third resolution of the Gurley and Robinson amendment, as deferred by the last conference to this for consideration, was presented,—reading as follows:

Resolved, That paragraph four of the "Report of Committee on Representation" be amended by substituting the word "six" for the word "twenty," wherever it occurs.

The question being called, and the yeas and nays asked for, the secretary called the roll, and the vote stood 428½ yeas and 201½ nays; as follows:

Yeas: Z. H. Gurley, J. C. Foss, J. T. Davies, C. H. Jones, P. Cadwell, J. W. Chatburn, E. Robinson, C. G. Lanphear, J. F. McDowell, F. P. Scarcliff, C. St. Clair, J. T. Kinnaman, J. Curtis, E. W. After this the Crabb resolution, as deferred from last Fall to this session was taken up. It reads as follows:

Whereas, The right of franchise is embodied in, and forms a part of the constitutions of the several States; and also of that of the United States; and

Whereas, Said constitutions must first be adopted, and afterward amended, if amended at all, by the voice of the people, obtained at their several places of election by ballot, and

Whereas, This precedent in law, as well as in fact, was established by those "wise men whom God raised up to frame the constitution" of the United States, and to "free this country by the shedding of blood; and

Whereas, The right of franchise in the Church as established by the founders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has been changed by the last Annual Conference held at Plano, Illinois, in April last; without submitting said change to the people according to the above precedent; therefore be it

Resolved, That such action be and is hereby declared null and void.

A motion was made that this resolution, with its preambles, be laid upon the table. It was spoken upon, and being put upon its passage, the motion was defeated, by a vote of 194 in favor, and 468 against, as follows:

Yeas:—J. Smith, A. Hall, P. Cadwell, J. W. Chatburn, E. Robinson, C. G. Lanphear, H. Falk, S. V. Bailey, H. Halliday, E. H. Gurley, W. L. Booker, W. Chambers, D. Chambers, T. Nutt, J. Hawley, H. An adjournment was had to afternoon.

Business was resumed in the afternoon by singing "We hear thy voice, our Father," and prayer was offered by Bro. E. Robinson. Part of the minutes of the forenoon session was read.

The committee to whom was referred the subject of the Rocky Mountain Branch vs. Bro. F. C. Warnky, reported.

Upon a motion being made to adopt the report, Bro. James Caffall protested, and stated that the committee did not receive him before them, but did the defendant. It was moved to refer back to the committee, which was followed by a substitute, that it be referred to a new committee. This substitute was lost, and the motion to re-commit prevailed.

HIGH PRIEST'S QUORUM.

The report of the High Priest's Quorum was read and adopted, as follows:

The quorum has held two meetings during this session. Reports were read from M. H. Forscutt, H. J. Hudson, G. Derry, S. S. Wilcox, D. S. Mills, J. Parsons; and E. Robinson, C. G. Lanphear, P. Cadwell, J. Sanders, G. A. Blakeslee, H. A. Stebbins and J. W. Chatburn, reported in person. The following was reported:

Whereas, We consider that in the departure from earth of brethren Hugh Lytle, J. M. Harvey and Thomas Carrico, of the High Priest's Quorum, that the Quorum and also the Church at large has lost three good and faithful men; therefore,

Resolved, That we hereby give expression to our regret and grief that they have gone from our midst; but confiding in the love of the All-wise Father, we submit, and hereby extend to their families our sympathy in their sorrow and loneliness.

A matter of inquiry was presented and acted upon, and Bro. H. A. Stebbins was appointed to correspond with the brother.

The spirit of peace and good will was present with us, and there was a feeling that the "set time" to favor Zion is near at hand, and that the efforts of the quorums and of the Church to bring about order, and to act with a greater harmony of spirit is pleasing to God.

E. ROBINSON president pro tem.
H. A. STEBBINS asst sec.

The committee on the appeal of Bro. R. M. Elvin vs. the Southern Nebraska District, reported as follows:

As your committee appointed to examine the appeal of R. M. Elvin, vs. Southern Nebraska District, we report that having examined the copies of minutes that came from the branch and district, from which the appeal originated, we feel warranted in sustaining the appeal.

H. FALK.
G. HICKLIN,
I. N. WHITE.

The report was adopted by vote of the Conference.

THE BISHOP OF CHURCH.

President Joseph Smith said that he had received that which he considered was sufficient evidence upon which to nominate a Bishop for the Church, and he presented the name of Bro. G. A. Blakeslee to the Conference. He called Bro. Z. H. Gurley to the chair, and many spoke upon the nomination that had been made, testifying to and sanctioning the choice.

Hymn seventy was sung, and ordered published entire.

We thank thee, O God, for a Prophet
To guide us in these latter days;
We thank thee for sending the Gospel
To lighten our minds with its rays;
We thank thee for every blessing
Bestowed by thy bounteous hand;
We feel it a pleasure to serve thee
And love to obey thy commands.

When dark clouds of trouble hang o'er us,
And threaten our peace to destroy,
There is Hope smiling brightly before us,
And we know that deliverance is nigh;
We doubt not the Lord nor his goodness,
We've proved him in days that are past;
The wicked who fight against Zion
Will surely be smitten at last.

We'll sing of his goodness and mercy;
We'll praise him by day and by night;
Rejoice in his glorious Gospel,
And bask in its life-giving light:
Thus on to eternal perfection
The honest and faithful will go;
While they who reject this glad message,
Shall never such happiness know.

A motion being made to endorse the nomination, it was adopted unanimously, as being the will of the Spirit.

The following was moved:

Whereas, Bro. E. L. Kelley is appointed to labor with me in mission assigned us by the General Conference, and believing him to be called of God to the office of an Elder, and worthy of that calling and our support; therefore, be it Resolved, That he be ordained to this office.

Z. H. GURLEY.

The consideration of it was deferred till to-morrow.

The following was moved and adopted:

Whereas, A general challenge to the Church appears in the Kansas City Journal of the 12th inst, in which we are invited to defend publicly the Book of Mormon, &c.; and whereas, Bro. D. S. Crawley is so occupied that he can not attend to the matter at present; therefore, be it Resolved, That we ask Bro. E. L. Kelley and A. H. Smith, to take charge of and attend to this matter.

KIRTLAND TEMPLE.

The subject of the suggested repairing of the Kirtland Temple presented in Bro. Kelley's report was referred to the Bishop and the one in charge of the mission that includes that region.

The suggestion in Bro. Gurley's report, concerning the appointment of a committee to attend at Washington, D. C., in case our interests as a Church should demand it was acted upon by the Conference choosing Bro. Joseph Smith, Z. H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley, to act in such case.

After appointments for this evening and to-morrow had been made, the Conference adjourned till to-morrow morning.

In the evening, Bro. Z. H. Gurley spoke in the Opera House to a large congregation.

THURSDAY, APRIL 13TH.

Business was resumed this morning at nine o'clock by singing, "Now let us rejoice in the day of salvation," and prayer was offered by C. H. Jones. The minutes of yesterday were read and approved.

ORDINATIONS.

The subject of the ordination of Bro. E. L. Kelley as an Elder was taken up, and it was ordered by resolution that he be so ordained. After that the ordinations of Brn. G. A. Blakeslee and L. Conover, as heretofore ordered, were provided for to be attended to at this session.

The ordination hymn, "O, thou in whose eternal name," was sung, and the ordination prayer was offered by Bro. A. H. Smith. Bro. G. A. Blakeslee was ordained as the Bishop of the Church, under the hands of President Joseph Smith and Brn. A. H. Smith and W. H. Kelley, the former being spokesman. Bro. E. L. Kelley was ordained an Elder, and Bro. Lawrence Conover as the President of the First Quorum of Priests, by the same brethren, Bro. A. H. Smith being spokesman for the first named and Pres. Joseph Smith for the latter.

Afterwards, Bishop Blakeslee nominated Brn. E. L. Kelley and Elijah Banta as his choice for counsellors. Action upon this was deferred.

The committee on the case of the Rocky Mountain Branch vs. F. C. Warnky reported as follows:

We, your committee to whom the case of the Rocky Mountain Branch vs. Bro. F. C. Warnky was referred, beg leave to report that after a careful, and as we believe an impartial examination of the evidence presented in the case, feel constrained to say that in our opinion there is nothing in the evidence to justify an action against Bro. F. C. Warnky. We therefore recommend that this conference exonerate him from the odium that may have been fastened on him in consequence of the pending of this investigation, and that the case be dismissed.

W. LEEKA,
G. MONTAGUE,
J. T. DAVIES.

The report was received and approved and the committee was discharged. *

THIRD QUORUM OF ELDERS.

The report of the Third Quorum of Elders was received and read:

The quorum has held four sessions. Members present and reported: J. T. Kinnaman, T. W. Chatburn, L. Anthony, J. W. Waldsmith, J. Hawley, W. N. Abbott, D. J. Powell, W. Lewis, C. W. Short, D. S. Crawley, E. W. Cato, sen., J. Curtis, J. W. Sykes. On motion and for "cause" J. W. Johnson was dropped from the quorum. After investigation by committee Bro. J. W. Sykes was silenced and his license withheld, until reparation and restitution shall have been made to brethren injured by him. The following brethren were admitted as members of the quorum: C. W. Short, E. H. Gurley, D. Brown and D. S. Crawley. Number of baptisms reported: T. W. Chatburn 10, E. W. Cato 4.

* We are directed, by Bro. James Caffall, to state that an appeal will be taken from the decision of the committee in the case of the Rocky Mountain Branch vs. F. C. Warnky.
JOSEPH SMITH, President of Conference.

On motion, and by unanimous vote, the secretary of quorum is requested to notify all members thereof through the Herald and by card, that all members not reporting by the next General Conference, and at each General Conference thereafter, shall be dropped from the quorum, after neglecting so to do for one year, unless good cause shall be shown for such neglect. The quorum is full and in fair working order; while all of them are laboring more or less, many of them are laboring with that zeal which is commendable and are magnifying their calling.

JOHN T. KINNAMAN president.
T. W. CHATBURN sec'y pro tem.

The name of Catherine Steadman, who was born June 18th, 1831, in Leeds, Leeds county, Canada, and baptized June 10th, 1848, in Bureau county, Illinois, by William B. Smith, and confirmed by John Landers and W. B. Smith, was presented, and after some consideration and argument upon the matter of persons being received on baptisms administered between 1844 and 1853, she was received as a member of the Church.

The report of the Presidency and Twelve upon Missions was presented, read, and action upon it was deferred till the afternoon session.

A vote of thanks, expressed as follows, was tendered to the retiring Bishop and his Counselors.

[No copy of the resolution was furnished by the secretary of the Conference.—ED]

It was adopted by a rising vote and was unanimous.

The hymn commencing "Peace be to this congregation," was sung, and Conference adjourned till afternoon.

Business was resumed in the afternoon by singing, "How beautiful are their feet," and prayer was offered by Bro. James Caffall.

It was moved that Bro. Henry A. Stebbins be sustained as Secretary and Recorder of the Church, and on invitation of Pres. J. Smith, Bro. Stebbins gave a statement of the work he had sought to accomplish in bringing about order and perfection in the records, and also in the duties that he considered belonged to Secretary to have ready for the use of the Church.

The motion to sustain was amended by the following:

And that a committee be appointed to examine how much labor is necessary to be performed by the Secretary and Recorder of the Church, and to ascertain the necessity for a place of safety for the Church Records, and for an office; also the amount of compensation for said service, said committee to report at the Fall Conference, with a recommendation for action.

A committee of three was ordered, and Brn. G. A. Blakeslee, J. W. Chatburn and Phineas Cadwell were appointed to attend to the above business.

The motion to sustain the Secretary and Recorder was adopted.

MISSIONS.

The following was presented for action and adopted as amended and here presented.

Report of the Council of the First Presidency and the Twelve, concerning Missions: W. W. Blair, in charge of the Rocky Mountain Mission.

J. W. Briggs, without definite appointment, his present state of health not justifying it; but permitted to travel and speak as circumstances permit.

A. H. Smith, continued in present field,—Missouri and Illinois.

T. W. Smith, released from the Chicago Mission at his own request, and to labor till Fall Conference as counselled by the First Presidency.

Peter N. Brix, sustained in Scandinavian Mission.

J. L. Bear, released from German Mission.

The Australian Mission to be supplied by the First Presidency and the Twelve.

J. R. Gibbs, sustained in present field,—Wales.

R. Etzenhouser, recommended to the Des Moines District for ordination as an Elder, and to labor under local authority.

Bro. Andrew Hall is intending to visit Utah; we therefore recommend that he be referred to Bro. W. W. Blair for labor.

(Several Elders have applied for Mission appointments since the foregoing list had been agreed upon, whom we would be glad to designate fields of labor, but do not feel authorized to do so, in view of the condition of the Church treasury, and because of rule of conference heretofore obtaining. These are Elders C. W. Short and E. W. Cato, and C. G. Lanphear of High Priests Quorum.)

In addition to the above the following appointments were made:

Charles Derry, to present field.

Joseph Luff, to South-Western Mission.

W. C. Cadwell and T. W. Chatburn, to Shelby, Harrison, and Pottawattamie counties, Iowa.

BISHOP'S COUNSELORS.

The nomination of E. L. Kelley as Counselor to the Bishop was made unanimous, and he was ordained under the hands of Brn. Joseph Smith, Alex. H. Smith, and G. A. Blakeslee.

Because of the absence of Bro. E. Banta, action on his nomination as counselor to the Bishop was deferred to Fall Conference, that he might be consulted concerning it.

On request of Bro. J. Caffall, the papers in the case of the Rocky Mountain Branch, vs. F. C. Warnky were returned to him.

The Board of Publication was sustained as at present constituted.

Resolved, That the Bishop be instructed to obtain from the retiring Bishop the moneys and properties belonging to the Church and receipt to him for the same.

The doxology was sung, benediction pronounced, and the conference adjourned to meet at Lamoni, Iowa, September 20th, 1882.

The Healing Power of Faith.

THIS healing power of faith, which doctors are day by day admitting more as a reality, throws light on the popularity of the miracle wells and healing shrines on the Continent, and forbids us to condemn as mere random lying the tales that are told of the astonishing cures effected by them. There are many such pilgrimage wells in Scotland cited by Mr. Gregor, although their healing efficacy was supposed to be an inherent virtue in the water, and not dependent on the favor of a saint. Some of these wells are surrounded by stones shaped like the several parts of the human body, called the "eye-stone," the "headstone," and so on; and it was a necessary part of the treatment, after washing with water, to rub the part affected against the stone that bore the same form. This is a superstition of the Vul stone in the New Hebrides. Some offering was always left behind by those who tried the curing powers of the waters, even if it were only a rag from the patient's clothes. These tributes were hung up near the well, and every one abstained from disturbing them, as it was believed that whoever did so would get the disease that had been cured in the former patient. Just the same sort of thing was done as early as the time of the Romans. Votive offerings of hands, feet, and almost every part of the body, have been excavated in the island sacred to Esculapius in the Tiber. The mode of cure in vogue then, however, was for the patient to go to sleep on the sacred spot, when it was revealed to him in a vision what he must do to insure recovery. Among the cures for the whooping-cough, which are very numerous and improbable, we do not observe one which was to favor in some parts of Scotland. This was in sew a living caterpillar between two pieces of flannel, and wrap it round the patient's throat, leaving room for the animal to crawl round. By the time the grub died the whooping-cough was cured. Three roasted mice were an infallible cure for the whooping-cough. The same remedy is still much esteemed in Norfolk. There, however, swallowing one mouse is considered enough.

The charming of warts is one of those perfectly unreasonable modes of cure that often prove efficacious when medical treatment fails. Dr. Carpenter cites as an instance of this strange truth the case of a girl who was cured of twelve warts by a friend who merely counted them, and then with an air of importance wrote the number down on a paper, assuring her that by Sunday they would all have disappeared. And so it proved. By the day named they were all gone, though the girl's father, himself a surgeon, had before tried to remove them with caustic and other applications in vain. If so very simple a prescription was enough to charm away a dozen of these unpleasant excrescences, we can not wonder that the more elaborate forms of exorcism here enumerated should prove equally efficacious. In Switzerland the approved mode of charming a wart is to rub it with a snail and then put the snail on a thorn bush. Indeed, charm cures for other diseases are not by any means obsolete. In Yorkshire it is still believed that a set of mole's feet tied in a bag and worn round the neck keeps away cramp. And it is quite accepted as a fact by some persons that to carry a potato in the pocket secures immunity from rheumatism. These cures, like the miracle wells, prove the power that the will, if concentrated in sufficient force, has to cure any local effect of the body. The most remarkable case of this on record is the way in which the Prince of Orange cured the garrison of Breda of the scurvy by sending them a small phial of a decoction of camomile, wormwood, and camphor. It was diluted with a gallon of water to every three drops of the tincture, and served out as a medicine to the sufferers, who from that day began to recover.

London Saturday Review.

A MAN who attempts to build up his own business or reputation on the ruin of others, has built upon a rotten and shaky foundation, that will surely sink beneath the superstructure some day, and let him down in the dust. This is a world-old truth, yet men continue to practice it. We have but a few years to live on the earth at the best, and the world was not all made for us. There are several millions of people here that must live too, and who belong here in the world as much as we do. Then why not accord to them their rights of life and property and happiness, and mind our own affairs, and attend to our own duties. Why should we be ever seeking to make a fellow mortal wretched by pulling him down, that we may climb a step higher? In a few years we will climb out of the world entirely. While we live here, if we are careful and frugal, we can always have enough, without taking unjustly anything from those in whose company we are thrown — Genoa, Nevada, Courier.

JOSEPH SMITH, EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, May 15, 1882.

HOW TO SEND MONEY.

AFTER the issue of this notice, we request our subscribers and all others sending us money, when sending by Post Office Order, to have the order made PAYABLE AT CHICAGO. Send the order to JOSEPH SMITH, Box 82, LAMONI, Decatur Co, Iowa, the same as before.

We call especial attention to this change, as it is made with a view to facilitate the business transactions of the office in Chicago.

Send all letters, Registered or otherwise, to the above address, making the directions plain: Joseph Smith, Box 82, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Please Take Notice, that we can not pay any attention to a request for change in Post Office address unless the old ADDRESS IS GIVEN as well as the new.

PROHIBITION.

GOVERNOR ST. JOHN, of Kansas, has certainly some very strong arguments on his side of the Liquor war, now raging in that state. Facts and figures are positive things, and no amount of special pleading can dispose of them, though they may be sometimes covered by sophistry.

We commend the following to the dwellers at Lamoni, specially; and to the Saints and readers of the Herald everywhere, generally.

The town of McPherson, in McPherson county, containing about 2,000 population had 48 cases in the Police Court the last ten months of license (the only period of licensed dram shops they have ever had in the county, notwithstanding it has been organized over ten years,) against only four cases the first seven months and eighteen days of prohibition.

The city of Newton, in Harvey county, containing about 3,000 population, had not a single case of drunkenness in the Police Court from the 1st of May (being the date that the prohibitory law took effect) until the first day of October; and the District Court that convened there about that time, for the first time in the history of the country, found not a single case upon the docket.

Emporia, situated in Lyon county, and containing about 6,000 population, had during the last year under the license system, 229 cases in the Police Court against 33 cases the first seven months of prohibition.

Winfield, in Cowley county, with at least 3,000 population, had 24 convictions in the Police Court for drunkenness during the last five months of license, against only three the first five months of prohibition.

Independence, in Montgomery county, with about the same population, had 18 cases in the Police Court the last five months of license, against five cases the first five months of prohibition.

Parsons, in Labette county, with a population of about 5,000, had 47 cases in the last five months of license, against only 10 the first five months of prohibition.

Olathe, in Johnson county, with a population of at least 2,500, has no policeman, and needs none, the City Marshal alone performing all the police duty, which does not require half his time; and there is rarely a case in the Police Court, and the calaboose is without inmates. What is said of the success of prohibition in the city of Olathe holds good throughout the county of Johnson. Under the old license system, the city script of Olathe was worth only from sixty to eighty cents on the dollar; now it is at par, and money is in the treasury to promptly meet every obligation. In the days of dram-shops, there was paid as revenue into the city treasury of Olathe two thousand dollars per year; one thousand five hundred dollars of that sum was required to build a calaboose in which to imprison, and furnish rooms for a Police Court in which to try drunkards.

Ottawa, containing about five thousand population, situated in Franklin county, makes equally as good a showing, and the foregoing cities present no better record than may be found in scores of other towns in the state. Kansas was never more prosperous than she is to-day.

The first ten months of 1880, under free whisky rule, sent to our State penitentiary 264 convicts, against only 148 the first ten months of 1881, after the adoption of the prohibitory amendment.

At Salina, recently, a rum-seller was convicted in the District Court on thirty-three charges, the fines amounting to $3,500 and costs, and thirty days in the county jail. This man is undoubtedly convinced that prohibition is not a failure.

The internal revenue tax is a good index of the manufacture and sale of liquors. The amount of such revenue per capita is as follows: Illinois, license, $6.50; Kentucky, license $4.50; Iowa, half prohibitory, $0.30; Ohio, license, $4.50; Missouri, license, $1.30; New Jersey, license, $1.27; Kansas, nine months of prohibition, $0.12; Vermont, prohibition, $0.05 and in the grand old state of Maine, after thirty years of prohibitory failure, only two cents per capita is paid for internal revenue.

The Warden of the Southern Illinois Prison states that Edwards county, of that state, has had no saloons for seventeen years; that during that time only one convict has been sent to States Prison from that county, and that the pauper and criminal expenses are a mere trifle; and finally, that but three mortgages are upon record in the county. Whisky-shops mortgage the farms; prohibition cancels them.

There is one spot in Kansas where the state has lost emigration on account of prohibition and that is within the walls of the Kansas penitentiary. During the first eleven months of 1880, under free-whisky rule, there was sent to that prison 286 convicts against only 175 in the first eleven months under prohibition—a difference of one hundred and eleven.

The foregoing statements are gleaned from a speech delivered by Governor St. John, of Kansas, at Des Moines, Iowa; in the course of which speech he made two points that we do not remember ever to have seen or heard before; they are as follows in substance:

The Government of the United States has always enacted and tried to enforce stringent laws against the sale and barter of intoxicating liquors with and to the Indians, the Nation's Wards. Why? Governor St. John asks: "I ask you to tell me, if you can, why we should extend the protection of prohibition to the wild savages of the west and withhold it from the civilized white men of this country?"

The Legislature of Iowa, have enacted laws by which neither whisky, wine nor beer, is allowed to be sold to, or used by convicts in the Penitentiary. "If," says Gov. St. John, "the prohibition policy is good for the thief, the robber, and all other criminals, inmates of the penitentiary, is it not good for the honest and good men out of the prisons?"

The Chicago Tribune, in favor of the License system, in a late editorial, gave its case away most beautifully, as can be seen from the extract given below:

There are at present over three thousand five hundred saloons in the city, each of which pays the ridiculously small license-fee of only fifty-two dollars. But it is to the same saloons, which collect from the people nearly twelve million dollars a year, that the necessity for the maintenance of a police force arises in great part. An overwhelmingly large portion of the crimes against person and property are due to the saloons. There it is that the bummers and vagrants, the thieves and the murderers are made. Men who would otherwise be decent, respectable, orderly members of society, earning their living by the sweat of their brow, get into the habit of going to these places, abandon their labor, and unable to pick up a living in any other way, resort to crime for it. Yet, notwithstanding this enormous burden, which is thrown upon the city yearly by the existence of those saloons as they are at present managed, they are called on to contribute only one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars to the City Treasury. Since the liquor shops originate and foster most of the vice and crime of every city, the license fees on those establishments ought to be raised to a price which will yield revenue enough to support a police force of sufficient strength to preserve order, arrest criminals, repress crime, and protect the lives and property of law abiding people.

Governor St. John states also:

The assessment roll for 1881, under prohibition, showed that the valuation of personal property alone was $10,246,000 greater than it was in 1880 under free whisky rule, and a little over $4,000,000 greater increase than any previous year in the history of Kansas. Now we want to be ruined in that way. Iowa will not object to be ruined in the same way. The next cry was that immigration had stopped, and it was ruining the railroads; so I concluded I would make some inquiry and see whether there was any truth in the assertion or not.

As I was leaving Topeka, I applied to Mr. C. C. Wheeler, the General Manager of the Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad company, one of the largest corporations in the West, for a statement showing the earnings of the road under our old license system and free whisky. He informed me that in round numbers the year 1880 showed earnings of that road to be $8,556,974.94 against $12,484,549.51 as the earnings of his road under prohibition, an increase of nearly 50 per cent. in a single year. All the railroads in Iowa would like to be ruined in the same way.

It certainly would seem worth while for Iowa to try the prohibition policy for awhile at least.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SOME of the Saints have written to the Office asking for the Index to the HERALD for 1881. No Index to that volume was made. We were behind time with the HERALD, and did not think it of sufficient importance to delay further about; and so printed without indexing. This will answer Bro. P. N. Brix and several others.

In the last Bishop's Report, Bro. and Sr. M. O. Thomas are credited with $200, tithing, as from Pennsylvania; it should be Missouri, as they reside at Cheltenham, Missouri.

Bro. C. A. Hall is at Ottumwa, Iowa, and anxious that some Elder will come in and give them the benefit of some labor there. Bro. Hall is a young member, but a live and ready worker. He will see that a hall is secured, and the Elder who comes properly cared for. Whoever goes should write Bro. Hall beforehand. C. A. Hall, Box 1110, Ottumwa, Iowa.

B. F. Durfee, is president of the Nauvoo and String Prairie District, instead of R. Lambert, as stated in Conference Minutes; HERALD, page 137.

Bro. A. J. Kennison writes from Eagle Rapids, Smith county, Kansas, April 22d. Times are pretty tough for some of the settlers there. He heard the gospel four years ago preached by Bro. James Perkins; and after hearing it and examining it, he obeyed it, and has had great reason to rejoice in the testimonies he has received, concerning the word.

Sr. E. E. Mitchell writes from Daytona, Volusia county, Alabama, that a Sr. Elizabeth Farrand, was sick at St. Augustine, and wishes the prayers of the Saints in her behalf; so also does Sr. Mansfield, of Winterport, Maine. Sr. Mitchell is of the opinion that an Elder could get good opportunities to preach in the region where she lives.

Bro. A. J. Hinkle states under date of April 23d, that the country along Red River, Manitoba, is deluged. Lake Winnipeg is still frozen, and the ice gorged at the mouth of Red River, overflowing for many miles back and doing great damage.

Bro. Thomas Hailey having just arrived home from conference in Independence, Missouri, writes to say that he bought the next block west of Bro. Warnky's gallery, running west on Kansas City street, which he offers for sale.

The relatives of Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths, in Pennsylvania and Ohio, who read this, are requested to correspond with Gomer, addressing him at No. 21, Mulberry Street, Worcester, Massachusetts. He will do some labor in the states named.

Bro. O. A. and T. L. Richey are somewhere on the North Platte, North Platte post office, and are doing all they can to get ready for the blowing of the gospel trumpet, when the times open a propitious door. Any one of the Elders traveling up there will do well for the cause to call and see them.

We have received No 1, Vol 2, of Tullidge's Magazine, for April, 1882, published in Salt Lake City, Utah, by Bro. E. W. Tullidge. The number in itself is a gem, and the promise it gives of future usefulness in aiding the civilization of the Great West, the magazine deserves praise. May he who conceived the project live and be prospered to carry it to completion, the making a magazine of the West rival the best ones of the East.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. M. B. Williams of Middletown, Butler county, Ohio, writes April 27th:

Last Sunday I had the privilege of baptizing two, a man and his wife, who reside near Jacks-sonsborg, Ohio, about eight miles from here. I spoke of this place in a former communication. A very good spirit is manifested in that neighborhood. I think that others there may obey at some future time. I preached once at West Elkton, about thirteen miles from this place. I occupied the M. E. Church; the result seems favorable; I go there again next Sunday.

Sr. Albert Page wrote from Jefferson, California:

We are having splendid rains, and indications of an abundant harvest, but the first part of the season was dry. Father Fales died last week, of cancer in the breast; he was in his eighty-sixth year. Bro. Carmichael has been from home for about two months or more, preaching. He preached in the San Benito School-house several times, to quite large audiences; many came to hear that formerly would not come. The people are becoming interested.

Sr. M. A. Whipple wrote April 7th, from 22 Ramsay street, Baltimore, Maryland:

I read in this morning's Baltimore Sun, of a conference now being held at Independence, Missouri, I never knew that there was a branch so near there. Although strangers to you, it is sufficient for me that we are of one hope, one faith, and one baptism. We were with Elder James J. Strang; and perhaps some of the dear Saints of that day are with you; if so, they will remember Brother and Sister Whipple. Oh, how my heart longs to be with you, and all the dear Saints, to be able once more to hear the gospel teaching from a pure source, in all its beauty and sublimity.

Bro. R. May, of Kansas City, Missouri, says:

We have good meetings, and enjoy the gifts, good interest by outsiders. Three baptized this week, others at the door. We have rented the Opera House for a year, for $100 (Sundays only); it will seat about 700 persons. T. W. Smith and Sister Smith were with us for the past week; went home to-day.

THE Ogden Pilot has the following, which we commend to the reader for its clear-headed view of the subject.

ANTI-POLYGAMOUS MORMONS.

There is no class of people in Utah who more sincerely rejoice over the passage of the Edmund's bill than the anti-polygamous Mormons, and especially the members of the organization of dissenters from Brighamism, known as Josephites. These people are, almost invariably, sincere, devout and law-abiding. They are loyal and patriotic, and content to enjoy their religious belief, the same as the members of other denominations, without proscription to others and without seeking ecclesiastical control in political matters. They believe in the Book of Mormon, and in all of the doctrines of the Church as originally taught and understood. They live up to the tenets of their religion and the teachings of the text-book above mentioned, which expressly commands that a man shall have but one wife. They withdrew from what is now claimed by its members to be the regular Church, because of its adoption of polygamy in defiance of the prohibition of the fundamental law, which was, they believe, the inspired work of the founders of their religion. In short, they believe in the inspiration of the Book of Mormon and reject the polygamy "revelation" which nullifies one of its commandments. The Josephites have taken no part in the outrages committed with the sanction, and by the orders, of the leaders of the polygamous branch of the Church, but have, in fact been subjected to even worse persecution than the most pronounced and radical Gentiles. They are to-day more bitterly hated than the latter by the members of the dominant organization, because, worshipping under the same general name and claiming the same origin, they refused to follow their associates into the by-paths of polygamy, treason and murder.

With the Mormon religion, as a creed, neither the Congress of the United States nor the Gentiles of Utah have any disposition to interfere. The anti-polygamous Mormons who are true to the principles of our government, will go on as they have heretofore, worshipping God according to the dictates of their own conscience, with none to molest, and none to make them afraid. There is nothing in the Mormon religion per se, at variance with the principles of morality, patriotism, or which conflicts with any duty that a good citizen owes to the community in which he resides. A person has as good a right to believe in the Divine inspiration of the Book of Mormon as the Methodists, Baptists or Catholics have to attribute the same sacred quality to the New Testament. No one, as we are aware of, outside of the polygamous Church, has any intention or desire to restrict, proscribe or molest any person in his religious belief. It is the abuses and infamies practiced under the pretense of religious authority which must be rooted out. The nation must be no longer insulted and disgraced by the open violation of its laws, in the practice of an indecent crime and the usurpation of political power by the leaders of the treasonable Church.

All anti-polygamous Mormons, "apostates," those who wish to free themselves from the slavery of the tithe eaters, Gentiles of all and no denominations, everybody, who desire to rid our fair land from the blighting influence of an infamous institution, and to wrest the political power of the Territory from the hands of those who have so long abused it; let all such join in a common cause in the formation of a Liberal political party which will place our Territory within the Constitutional, as it is within the geographical, boundaries of the American Republic.

WHEN Joseph Smith told the story of his bad treatment by those who took him from his bed at night and cruelly beat and abused him, he stated that his spirit, the inner man, stood above and aloof looking down upon his disfigured and unconscious body, as it lay at the mercy of his assailants. Much ridicule attached to his relation of the circumstance; but it would seem as if it might be true, if it was told by him; for if this Dr. Fisher, of California, could live out of the body, so also could the Martyr.

OUT OF THE BODY.

Paul speaks (no doubt of himself) of knowing a man who had seen wonderful things when probably "out of the body." Is not such a condition or state reasonably supposable within the experience of certain persons in this life? Materialistic science denies its possibility, since the soul or spirit of man is not substantial—is nothing, in fact, but the physical motions of the smaller particles of the corporeal body itself. Hence, there is nothing as a conscious entity to be or exist out of the body, or in the body, for that matter. There is an incident recorded by Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald, editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, in his sketch of the late Rev. Dr. Fisher, of California, which forcibly impresses one with the truth of man's substantial duality. The incident is worth reproducing here:

He lived in the atmosphere of the supernatural; the spirit-world was to him most real.

"I have been out of the body," he said to me one day. The words were spoken softly, and his countenance, always grave in its aspect, deepened in its solemnity of expression as he spoke.

"How was that?" I inquired.

"It was in Texas. I was returning from a quarterly meeting where I had preached one Sunday morning with great liberty and with unusual effect. The horses attached to my vehicle became frightened, and ran away. They were wholly beyond control, plunging down the road at a fearful speed, when, by a slight turn to one side, the wheel struck a large log. There was a concussion, and then a blank. The next thing I knew I was floating in the air above the road. I saw everything as plainly as I see your face at this moment. There lay my body in the road, there lay the log, and there were the trees, the fence, the fields and everything, perfectly natural. My motion, which had been upward, was arrested, and as, poised in the air, I looked at my body lying there in the road so still, I felt a strong desire to go back to it, and found myself sinking toward it. The next thing I knew I was lying in the road where I had been thrown out, with a number of friends about me, some holding up my head, others chafing my hands, or looking on with pity or alarm. Yes, I was out of the body for a little, and I know there is a spirit-world."

HERE is a good answer to some of Mr. Ingersoll's faith, or the want of it, sent by Bro. John Burlington, of St. Joseph, Missouri:

Mr. Ingersoll, in his reply to Talmage, remarked: "There is no evidence that God has ever interfered in the affairs of man. The hand of earth is stretched uselessly toward heaven. From the clouds there comes no help. In vain the shipwrecked cry to God. In vain the imprisoned cry for relief. The world moves on, and the heavens are deaf and dumb and blind. The frost freezes, the fire burns, slander smiles, the wrong triumphs, the good suffer, and prayer dies upon the lips of faith." Mr. Ingersoll has devoted a large portion of his time to denunciations of the preachers for their "dogmatism." If any preacher has evinced greater dogmatism than is embodied in the remark we have quoted we have not observed it. What right has Mr. Ingersoll, in whose creed a thin theism is scarcely discernable, and who says he does not pray or believe in prayer, to assert that "the hand of earth is stretched uselessly toward heaven," and "the prayer dies upon the lips of faith." Against that desolate and despairing assertion is arrayed the triumph and satisfactory experience of a mighty host of praying people of the ages—people as intelligent and more intelligent than Mr. Ingersoll, who know that they have not prayed in vain.

Correspondence.

BROCKTON, Mass.,

April 27th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—I left home last December, since which time I have been constantly engaged in the ministry in the Massachusetts District, and in my experience as one of the heralds of the cross, I find some things to discourage, and many things to encourage. Since our last conference at Dennisport, in company with Bro. F. M. Sheehy, we labored in Douglas with the branch there, where we found things not in as good condition as we could wish, in consequence of division and strife, which, dear Saints, is invariably the work of the enemy of our souls, the work which we love has in a great measure been retarded. But we pray that a brighter day may yet dawn upon the cause there. While there we made a visit to Worcester, where I met for the first time Bro. G. T. Griffiths; and together with his estimable wife we spent a few happy hours. By the blessing of God, Bro. Griffiths' stay in Worcester may be the means of opening up the work there. From Douglas we visited the Plainville Branch; Bro. C. A. Coombs president. Here we found the people very much excited over the Mormon question. A Rev. Mr. Northrop, of Providence, had been engaged by the Lyceum to lecture on Mormonism, for which they paid him the moderate sum of $35. He claimed to know all about it, for he had lived in Hancock county, Illinois. He had stood on the exact spot where Joseph Smith was shot; and Joseph was at one time the smartest and shrewdest and cleverest man that ever lived; and then he was the laziest, the most indolent, shiftless and vicious rascal, that ever existed. At one moment, he says, Joe would be down on his knees praying like a saint, and the next hour be stealing his neighbor's chickens out of his neighbor's hen roost; and when brought to account for it, he would swear he had never seen a chicken in his life. He declared Mormonism a fraud, a humbug, a delusion, &c. He advised them to drive it out,—do everything to put it down; don't go near them; talk about them; what are going to do with it boys, &c.; is the return the Lyceum got for their money. Such bombast to me is like the bursting of a bloated wind bag. It is the noise of an empty sound. As a rule this is the kind of argument we have to meet, which shows it is all they have got. The Lyceum was fair in one thing, however; they gave us an invitation to review the lecture, which we did; Bro. Sheehy taking one part of the evening, and I the other. A great many expressed satisfaction; others were dejected; while the Saints rejoiced.

From there we went to Cumberland, and preached in the house of sister Burlingame; congregations not very large, but very attentive. Bro. Sheehy occupying the first evening, I the next; and had excellent liberty. Sunday, Frank returned in company with Bro. Coombs to Plainville, to preach there. I stayed behind and preached in the afternoon and evening. Some seemed deeply interested, and were thinking of obeying.

Monday, I started for Chapel Corners, a distance of three miles, to solicit the use of the Universalist Church. I went to a Mr. Carpen-ter's, and told them my mission. They seemed to be a little shy at first; but after some talk, it was agreed that we could have it for one evening at least, and if they wished to hear more we could have it again. I then started for home to Fall River, going through and stopping over night in Plainville, and sent Bro. Sheehy out there, where he preached two evenings, and left a very favorable impression, and the place is open for us again.

I arrived home, when I found wife and baby well. Oh, how pleasant it is to get home, after one has been away battling with the world, endeavoring to spread the truth. And how fleet the time, and how swift it flies. Four days are gone, and I find myself off again. Through the great city of Providence to Scituate, Rhode Island. Here are some Saints belonging to the Providence Branch; they are eight miles away from the branch, so it is called a mission; they have hired an old farm house and let up stairs, and occupy below for a meeting house. Brethren Pothel and Perry are with us, and help. We followed Bro. Pothel in the afternoon, and in the evening had excellent liberty in preaching to an overflowing congregation. I preached again, Monday and Tuesday evenings. Several there are on the verge of obedience; so they expressed themselves to me. I had appointment out for Wednesday evening, two miles away, at Bro. Searle's; but was prevented from going by a storm. Went Thursday, and preached to a good and attentive congregation. This is a new place, and some said they had never heard anything like that before. Went back with the Saints that night to Scituate, and left appointments for Bro. Sheehy, and started again for home, so as to fill appointments made for me by our worthy District President, Bro. John Smith. While at home I attended a tea party, given by the branch, and had a very pleasant time. What a transformation scene has been wrought since I left home five weeks ago. The Saints' Chapel has been cut in two, the back part moved back seventeen feet, being built up in the middle; it has also been remodeled in every way. And it is to be newly seated; so that I scarcely knew it was the same place. I pray God that his blessing may follow the efforts made by his people here, and that the heart of the Presiding Elder, Bro. John Potts, may be made to rejoice in seeing the fruits of his labor manifested.

Sunday, the 23d inst., in the midst of prayers and tears, I again bid good bye to my family, and arrived on the early train at the growing young city of Brockton. I was met at the depot by our faithful brother, Isaiah L. Chase, and conducted to his home. I met with the Saints and friends in Good Templars Hall in the forenoon, and essayed to break to them the bread (word) of life as the spirit gave utterance, and again in the evening; also, on Monday evening at the same place. Congregations not large, but attentive. There is some interest manifested here by a family of the name of Ames, who was with G. J. Adams, and made the journey with him to Palestine. And while I am much interested, as they recite to me with what power Mr. Adams preached and convinced them of the gospel, of their journey across the ocean, and of their establishment as a colony at Jaffa; yet I am sorrowful because of the evil that has been wrought in consequence of the disappointment and disaster which followed the breaking up of that project. Some men appear to be so gifted, either to accomplish a great amount of good, or else in the other extreme, a great amount of evil. These brethren seem honest and desirous to know the truth, while they acknowledge that they were deceived in Mr. Adams and the Palestine scheme; yet they say they probably would never have heard the gospel had they never first heard him. All that hinders them seems to be in having to be again baptized to join the Church; but they are willing to submit the matter to the Lord; and if it is his will they will yield. I pray God that their duty may be made plain to them. I am to preach in one of their houses this (Thursday) evening, the Lord willing. The little band of Saints here presided over by Bro. Chase (Priest) is struggling to maintain the cause against great odds. May God bless and strengthen them, by adding to their numbers such as shall be saved; and that they may yet see that their labors have not been in vain. So the spirit signified in our little meeting last evening, and may the promise be abundantly realized.

As a laborer for Christ in the great harvest field, striving to win the souls of men, I desire the prayers of all God's people, that I may fully realize and enjoy the spirit and power of my calling, that the Spirit of God may accompany me in my labors. And for Zion's welfare, and the prosperity of the latter day work, I shall ever pray.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

JOHN GILBERT.

COOK'S POINT, TEXAS,

May 4th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—I have been a member of the Church nearly three years, and I feel it a duty as well as a pleasure to write to you and bear my testimony of the work. I have never doubted the work to be of God. I think it is so plain, that "a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein;" but some are so blinded by the world, that they can not or will not see. I live in a neighborhood where the sectarians think the very name of Latter Day Saint a disgrace. They say our Church is only a branch of the old Brighamite Church; that our Elders are "wolves in sheep's clothing," and they warn their members to beware of them, that they be not deceived. And if their members come to our meetings, or go to hear our Elders preach, they will turn them out of the church; and they call this a free country. Bro. Cato preached three nights at Caldwell, in the Court house, last week; the first night he had a good many hearers, but the last two nights, the Methodist and the Temperance had a meeting in opposition to him, and the consequence was he had very few hearers. But I was not surprised. Of course, his Satanic majesty is doing his best; "It's the strength of his despairing." There is no branch here, and I sometimes think the prospect of ever getting one here is very gloomy, but I will live in hopes. There is some few believing, but hesitating to obey, some fearing persecution; some think the doctrine is good, but they fear there is something behind. Others are investigating, and seeing for themselves, and I think the prospects are brighter than they were. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your sister in bonds,

AMANDA J. SHERRILL.

Bro. Joseph:—We have no meetings in our branch now, of which Bro. Pierce is Teacher. We are so scattered that when we have meetings but few attend. I try to improve my talent whenever I have a chance, by fireside preaching; and they say it is the truth and they can not get around it unless they deny the Bible. I have had them to say that it was a Mormon bible when it was King James' translation; some even say "It aint in my Bible." So pray for me.

Your brother in Christ,

A. WELLS.

MOBILE, Alabama,

May 4th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Since writing last for the Herald, I have been north to conference, and had a short visit of eleven days at home. I left Mobile in company with Bro. George Montague, March 29th, and the morning of May 3d found me back to my field of labor again. My health has been better than common during my visit north, and I enjoyed myself very much. I thank the brethren and friends with whom I visited, for their acts of kindness and love shown to me. I feel encouraged and strengthened for the battles that may have to be fought in the future. I shall try to work for the Master. It was hard to leave the dear ones again. We go forth with heavy hearts, with cheeks tear-stained, and ah how often we have to sow in tears. God help us, brethren, that we may reap in joy. Dear Saints, remember me in your prayers. Your brother in Christ,

FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

SALT LAKE CITY,

April 10th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Our conference closed last night. It was the best in many respects that I have attended in this place; a deeper interest was manifested in the business session than before, and quite a number of visiting Saints from different settlements were present. The first two days were very stormy, so much so, as to discourage many; but the storm clouds passed away, and Saturday and Sunday were pleasant and fair. We held preaching services each night during the session; the attendance was about as good as we expected during the stormy times. The preaching was considered good to fair. The spirit of love and peace ruled in all hearts; not one unkind word was spoken during the entire session. During our Sunday services a heavenly spirit prevailed. In the evening, Bro. M. T. Short delivered a most excellent discourse. It was very appropriate, and presented in kindness. At the close of the session all felt strengthened, and returned to their homes stronger in faith, and with a brighter hope than before; all felt that the Lord is now favoring Zion. May the Lord pity the erring ones,—their lamp is growing dim, and is almost gone out; while the day-star of the Reorganization is growing brighter. Victory is clearly inscribed on its banner; truth is its guiding star.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Although alone, as regards fellowship and communion with Saints, I am still striving for the one faith, and doing all I can in my weakness to hold it in full light to the world, that the honest who will, may receive it. The signs all around plainly indicate the final consummation of all things near at hand. O, how those who are remaining idle and at ease, contending and gendering strife, had better arouse, arouse to a full sense of their duty. Surely God will require it of all who are responsible. I have lately visited and talked with the few remaining Saints of the Monroe Branch. They are very much scattered. It filled my heart with sorrow to see how careless some of them had grown. Some say their tribulation is unbearable. I know it can not be worse than I endure. Why the record plainly teaches we are to go up through much tribulation, and the grace of God is all sufficient. If we do our part we have his word—he is bound. As for myself, I feel to praise God for the knowledge of the truth, and for the great blessings he has and does bestow upon me. O that all who have entered the sacred covenant would be faithful, and receive his blessings that rejoice the soul, even in great tribulation. To gain eternal life is a conflict, one that calls for valor. Those who have enlisted can not sail into port on flowery beds of ease.

Dear Herald:—We are only a few in number, but we are trying to live in discharge of our duty; we have preaching every Sunday, by W. J. Smith, who is an active laborer in the field, and highly esteemed by all who know him. We had sacrament meeting this afternoon, a goodly portion of the Spirit was present, and we felt strengthened and encouraged on our way. We are not without persecution here, as some who are too prejudiced to come out and hear, readily denounce us as Mormons; but we read in the good book, that "They who will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution;" hence, when the finger of scorn is pointed, it only confirms us in the faith. We think the work is gaining ground; and we pray that the day may soon dawn, when others of our surroundings may see the light of the gospel of Christ and go forth in obedience to the same; for I feel to bear testimony, that since I have embraced the "Perfect law of Liberty" that it has been the happiest part of my life, as the blessings of God's holy Spirit has attended me, and I have been led to rejoice "with joy unspeakable and full of glory;"

and my prayers are ever for the spread of the gospel, and the redemption of God's people; we would earnestly ask the prayers of the Saints elsewhere, that we may let our light shine, and be enabled at the final restitution of all things, to enter into the Marriage Supper of the Lamb.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—The Herald I have not received since November the fifteenth, the Advocate comes; what is the cause of it, I know not. Please continue it, and I will pay soon as I can. I am eighty-two years old, to-day, April 14th. I have to get my living by chopping wood, and garden work. I joined the Church in forty-four, in Pennsylvania, Crawford county. I am brother-in-law to James Blakeslee; am the first white male child born in Jefferson county, New York. When about twelve years old, I saw one of the Nephites that tarried. He told me all about the treasures hid up to come forth to build the Temple in Zion. He said the curse would be taken off, and he would see me again in this generation.

Dear brother Smith; Sir:—Being a true Latter Day Saint in my creed and religion, and living in this part a miner, where there are none to be found of the same creed, and not being contented to be thus deprived of association and communion with brothers and sisters of the same faith, I ask any brother in the faith to inform me where I can find a place to earn a decent living for myself and family, somewhere where there is a true established church of the Latter Day Saints; so as I can be among my fellow brethren in the Lord Jesus Christ. Please communicate through letter, as I have no other means to obtain knowledge. Yours truly,

JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

April 15th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—In behalf of the members of the Rocky Mountain Branch, Col., will you be so kind as to express our thanks through the Herald to the members of the Edenville Branch Iowa, for their generous offers of Lifters and Boomers, for the erection of a church building in the city of Denver, Colorado. Though small, it is an encouragement to us to think we are not alone and is an inducement to persevere.

Though we are few in number and not richly endowed with much of this world's goods, our trust is not in our own strength, but in One who has enough and to spare to those who have the willingness to do. The help of all the willing Saints through the land will be as cheerfully and thankfully received. Yours in hope of success,

G. O. KENNEDY.

Dear Herald:—I often feel like writing and thanking you, for the good you do me; but knowing that your space is limited, I have hitherto refrained from doing so; but this beautiful Easter morning, while all nature seems engaged in praising God, as I have no opportunity of meeting with His people to worship, I will claim a little of your valuable space. Your visits have cheered many a lonely hour, and I wish they would become weekly. I have just been reading Bro. Blair's instruction to the ministry, about contending against the churches, and I think they are words fitly spoken, and that all would be blessed by giving heed to them.

How many times I have seen good, honest souls turned away from investigation, just by this unwise course, of holding up the religious views of others for ridicule; when much good might have been accomplished by presenting the gospel as commanded. There is a power and beauty in the gospel, when preached in meekness and love, that carries conviction to the honest in heart; but the same truths, when presented in any other than a spirit of love, repels rather than draws people to Christ. We never lose anything by being courteous, or "doing as we wish to be done by." There is another command to the Saints that I fear is not heeded as it should be, and that is for them to "study and learn, and become acquainted with all good books," "yea seek you out of the best books, words of wisdom." Surely if we do this, our sphere of usefulness, will be enlarged; for the broader views we take of life, the more are our sympathies drawn out to our fellow creatures. We must not fall into the error which we often meet with (and complain of too,) in others, and not accept anything as truth except it is found in the church publications. The means and facilities of the church for furnishing us with literature is very limited, consequently she can not publish everything that would be to our advantage to study and learn; therefore we are commanded to "seek wisdom out of the best books," and although the command may be especially to the ministry, it will do us all good if heeded.

Let us show our thankfulness to our Heavenly Father for all his blessings, by obeying all His commandments.

M. J. MARCHANT.

PITTSBURG, Pennsylvania,

April 3d, 1882.

Dear Herald:—In the last month I have opened three new places, preached seventeen times, seven reverends have been present, three have opposed, not to their advantage; have had good liberty most of the time; have visited the Bickerton people, attended their conference last Sunday. They gave me liberty to speak, and our remarks seemed to remove prejudice and convinced them that we were people of God. They had a good meeting and are earnest followers of Christ. They are going to build a church; they asked me to come again, and said we will soon be one. May God speed the day. The Saints in this district have supplied my financial necessities, and all seems to be working together for the advancement of the work. I will start to-morrow for Belmont, Ohio. My address will be No. 9, Hazle Avenue, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

HIRAM ROBINSON.

VASSAR, Michigan,

April 25th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—In December last when on my way from Reese to Goodland, with Elder Carpenter, to spend the winter with the brother at his home, we stopped here, and enjoyed a visit with brother and sister Barnes, and sister Gould. They were the only Saints here, and were much derided. Bro. Carpenter preached several times to very attentive audiences, removing somewhat the idea that we were connected with the Polygamists at Salt Lake. We left the Saints much strengthened, hoping we would soon return. I came back this Spring, making this place my home; my wife and self increasing the number of Saints here to five. I holding the office of Teacher, we have our meetings regularly on Sunday and Wednesday evenings. I have been much blessed while endeavoring to teach the little band their duty, and in presenting the doctrine of Christ to those that attend our meetings; and there seems to be a good interest manifested. On the 16th, Elder DeLong, of Reese, preached here. The brother and myself were invited to a meeting of the United Brethren,—how they are united is more than I can tell;—it is not in doctrine nor brotherly love. After preaching, their minister invited all that loved the Lord to stay to testimony meeting; so we tarried and gave our testimony. After meeting their preacher, Mr. Cyprus, came to us and introduced himself, and said he was glad to know that we enjoyed religion; and asked of what persuasion we were of; and when informed, one might think from the change of his countenance, and the alertness he exhibited in leaving us, that we were some deadly poison. I afterwards learned that he had warned his flock to keep away from us. We found one among the members of his Church, an aged gentleman by the name of Hays, who informed us that he was in Kirtland, a year after the Temple was built, and was well acquainted with Martin Harris, Oliver Cowdery, and other old time Saints. I questioned him concerning them, and he said that he never knew anything against any of the Mormons at that time; had heard some evil reports, to which he paid no attention. Also that they preached nothing but Bible truth. Mr. Hays is like a great many others who think "We are right, and so are you, and every one else; and all are branches of Christ's Church."

Bro. DeLong left us on 17th, with a promise soon to return and hold meetings. Our prayer is that there may be fruits come from his labor. Gladly would we hail an increase in our number here. If any of our Elders pass this way will they call on us. Your brother in gospel bonds,

LEVI PHELPS.

NORTH LACROSSE, Wisconsin,

April 20th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—I am visiting among my acquaintances and talking up and explaining the gospel, and preaching as opportunity offers, and investigating other (pretended) prophets and teachings. I have found an old Saint here by the name of Sly; I think he is a Strangite, or has been; he has been taking the Herald for some time past, and seems to favor our position more than any other now. He has Strang's Book of Law; I have read and investigated that. He has also a volume of the "Truth Teller," G. Hedrick, Editor. I have also investigated that. He has also several numbers of the "Gospel Monitor." I have investigated that. I have also investigated W. K. Lay's "Heaven's Argument," and can truly say I have found them all wanting. I have "the balance."—the Bible and the Book of Mormon, and it is a safe balance to weigh things in. And I have one more teacher that has arisen still later under investigation, and I think he promises to be of great use to the Church in the near future, if he is only obedient and faithful; and through it all the Lord has brought me, and I am yet sound in the faith, according to our laws, but not according to the traditions of the Elders. When is God's word to be fulfilled, I would ask? When judgment must begin at the House of God. "And if the righteous scarcely be safe, where shall the sinner and the ungodly appear."—1 Peter 4:17, 18. And again: "Some that are holding their offices in unrighteousness shall be shaken out, and that soon."—Joseph Smith, Plano, Illinois, 1880. What need of these and many other similar predictions from the mouth of the Lord, if the house of God does not need cleansing. But I am satisfied that the work of cleansing has commenced and the Lord will carry it through.

I see that W. K. Lay is approved quite warmly by the Gospel Monitor, of March, 1882; and I also saw quite a lengthy commendation in the Herald of April 15th, 1882. The writer says: "Bro. J. W. B. once wrote, 'It is too flimsy and transparent to say of inspiration, mine is genuine, yours is spurious; mine is from above, yours is from beneath; mine is from God, yours from the devil.'" (I suppose he means).

Now, Mormonia, dear friend, I care but little how old a Mormonia you are, I wish to disabuse your mind a little in regard to inspiration, in reference to individual or personal inspiration for instruction in individual and personal matters, or local matters under their control or authority, the inspiration from God is permissible. But when any individual sets himself up for the mouthpiece, or Prophet of God to the Church and the world, it is quite a different thing. It seems to me very much like, at least, a lack of confidence in our present position and authority. Is it so that no man taketh this honor unto himself except he be called as was Aaron; or have we some new version of this scripture. Again, Mormonia commends waking up and trimming our lamps. That of itself is all right. But to inquire whether the true Church of Jesus Christ of some other organization or individual is to give the midnight cry is all wrong, and unless this Church is rejected of God, there is no question as to who is to make the midnight cry, and all other true cries until the Savior comes, at least. This Mormonia admits W. K. Lay may be mistaken, and adds that "there will be nothing for any decent man or woman to laugh at. No; but if we connect ourselves with him as a teacher from God, and believe "he is all that he claims to be," very many unstable men and women will have much to mourn over, when their disappointments overtake them; while those that are directed by Christ's properly commissioned officers of His kingdom, will not be moved about by every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, whether it is cunning craftiness, self deception, or fanaticism. (Eph. 4:14). We are certainly in the surging of the billows, breakers, and fogs of the last days, (if not the last day), and our only safety is to "hold fast to the rod of iron," "which is the word of God." I hope and pray that Mormonia and all others that are in Christ may come out all right, by holding to the Rod of Iron; and that this criticism must be received in the same spirit in which it is sent, which is in love and correction of the wavering, and the establishing of the truth in Zion. Hoping that all things in the present Conference may be done under the guiding of the Holy Spirit, and to the good of Zion, and that you may be guided, sustained and comforted in all your arduous duties, with wayward Israel, in all the different quorums; and that you especially remember me, that I faint not.

Yours in bonds,

BUTTSVILLE, Mo.,

April 25th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Brother Kinneman and myself arrived at this place about one week ago. Found the little band of Saints here still striving to do their Master's will. Notwithstanding the rain and bad roads, we have been holding meetings here, and trying to sow the good seed in this land. I baptized three on the 25th inst. I think that there are others that are not far from the kingdom; but it is hard for some to give up even when they are convinced. There are nine Saints here now, and are organized into a branch called the Mount Hope Branch. This is twelve miles north of Trenton in Grundy county, and about twenty-eight south of Pleasanton, Iowa. I hope that any of the ministry traveling this way will call on them. Bro. Springer has promised me that he would call on them soon; so come along Bro. B. V. and give them some old fashion gospel. Bro. I. N. White stopped here on his way to Independence in this month, and the people say he set them a fire up north of here; come again Bro. I. N. and bring all the fire you can of that kind, may you never be without it. Bro. Kinneman is with me now, he is safe and will teach nothing that he does not understand thoroughly. We will watch and wait, ever praying for truth to prevail. I will patiently labor,

W. T. BOZARTH.

MOON, Michigan,

April 30th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—My request for instructions on the word of wisdom to help me gain the full promised reward, does not yet come, through the Herald nor otherwise, and with what I have I do the best I can. I find by abstaining from meat in hot weather, and using very sparingly all other times, except in cold, or Winter, it can be used as a remedy for colds. Last Winter I greatly overtaxed with heavy labor, and caught a hard cold, so I could scarcely breathe, or move a muscle without pain. I made beef broth of the fattest beef without skimming the grease off, as the habit of most people is to do, and I took broth as the only internal remedy, and bathed with camphire a little diluted with water, all the fore part of the day; just at night I ate a little bread with the broth, and the next morning I was able to labor without pain. Perhaps faith in the Lord was the best part of it, so let him have all the praise. Notwithstanding my poor health and great afflictions of the past, I am now able to do a goodly day's labor without wearying, and the Lord has granted knowledge from sources I least expected, even while separated from my brethren in this secluded place, among scorners. In my lonely home, in the midst of my sorrow, my heart has been compelled to rejoice. So while man fails to give, in due season, the Lord does not forget me. I wish to bear testimony to my brethren in the Church, scattered in all nations, that the blood of the righteous that has been shed because of sin among the first builders, is crying from the earth for redress of their wrongs, and the Lord will yet answer that cry, and then the very few that are wearing the white robe, watching the light among you, fighting the battle of the just; will have no more fighting to do; for ye workers of darkness will fight among yourselves, for a rofe, for a space beyond the majesty of the Just One. How soon this will be, I do not know; believe it will be very soon. The Lord will certainly enable the righteous to keep the light brightly burning till that time, against great odds; so do not think to gain a victory because of great numbers. O for the word of the Lord as the lamp, and the Spirit as the oil thereof; and the holy burning in the heart that will open our eyes to the heavenly ones and waft our souls into eternal bliss.

Your brother,
M. N. COLE.

HATFIELD, HARRISON Co., Mo.,
April 19th, 1882.

Pres. Joseph Smith.—On last Lord's day, the 16th, we were baptizing in Big Creek, near the Lone Rock Branch, because there is much water there. Seven entered into covenant relation with the Lord, and truly it was a time of rejoicing to the church here. Two of them were from the Baptist Church, the rest from the world. There seems to be a growing interest in different places to hear the gospel as taught by us. Bro. Charles H. Jones has opened up the work south of here, seven miles, near Eagleville. I have assisted some in the work there, and I think that good will result; we feel thankful for the prospect before us, and especially for the Lone Rock Church. It has had a hard struggle for existence from the date of its organization, its progress has been slow, but a brighter day has dawned upon us; our prayers have been heard; we are acting in love and harmony, and the spirit of peace prevails. We have a Sabbath School organized and confidently look for better results than we have realized heretofore. While the Redeemer's cause is looming up throughout the earth, betokening a speedy work, we feel that we have been admonished to renew our diligence and to assist in sounding the alarm in God's holy mountain. We only regret the necessity that binds us at home; but still feel justified in laboring as circumstances will permit.

Hoping and praying for the advancement of the gospel of Christ I subscribe myself as ever in gospel faith,
I. B. BAGGERLY.

LETTER FROM ENGLAND.

Dear Herald.—It is a long time since I sought a chat with your readers. Yet I have been a constant reader of your pages, and I have derived great pleasure in marking the varied thoughts expressed by your contributors, manly and lucid, equitable also, when the law of God has been the theme. Law should always be held a sacred instrument. No man can in justice be a law unto himself; when such a calamity happens that man becomes a tyrant, and is sure to be deprived of his pseudo authority to his own disgrace. Every organization must be governed by laws, whether of a secular or religious character. Conceive a people without laws, what would your mind conjure up but a perfect chaos? Yes, every one would be trying to carry out their own particular whims, without the slightest consideration for the rights of others. Ah, even in well governed communities much litigation is caused by some trying their best to override the rights of others; as a result, legislatures are continually aiming to create such laws as will give the greatest security to the rights of the subjects, being aware that without protection of the kind, enervation would ensue to their governed, and the inevitable decay of their prosperity would result. For instance, no people could long maintain a tendency to progress were there not among them the law of permutation of capital for labor, and the worker protected, that he may receive his fair share of that wealth created through labor; and therefore the need of a common law giving protection to both capitalist and worker. But should the workers not receive sufficient for his immediate necessities there would be evinced a lamentable lack of statemanship on the part of administrators, because such a state would be sure to beget discontent, criminations, and most likely ending in a lamentable outbreak of passion on the part of the workers which sometimes is not allayed until much unwarrantable destruction of property takes place, and worst of all calamities, the spilling of blood. I do not intend to lay down any pet theory of mine on the mutual interest of capital and labor; abler minds have done that, as I believe, to the advantage of the toilers. My real object being to draw the attention of your readers to the one great fact that all rulers, whether of a secular or religious character, should respect law and justice, because unless the rights of others are respected, not any upright administration of justice can take place. It appears to me that one great cause of the various apostacies from God has been the result of ignoring the one sacred right accorded by the Father of light to all his creatures, a mutual protection of poor and rich, bond and free, under the fostering laws God made for all. Yes, the last conspicuous one—the Utonian—culminated in the dreadful dogma, Brigham chief god, his Utah emissary gods under him, and therefore all their governed must do as they are told. For if their fiat was not at once complied with, severance from fellowship took place, which resulted in the forfeiture of God's salvation. What nonsense, to suppose, or teach. What is the relative truth regarding man and his Maker? Why! When a man is baptized, efficaciously, it is into Christ, whereby he makes a direct covenant with God; and only so long as the man keeps that covenant unsullied does God bestow blessings upon him, and all must know that when God withdraws his help from a man, that man's case is pitiable indeed. Can man help him in such a strait? Can man restore what he has lost? No, indeed, neither can he in the first instance deprive the erring one of the favor of God. Therefore, so far as one man's power to debar another from God's salvation is concerned, whoever indulges such ideas holds to but a wild chimeria. For neither prophet, priest, nor king, has power to do any such thing. Therefore it is mere balderdash to talk of cutting off from God's communion. And it is grievous to know that such spiritual darkness, and bondage, is the calibre of some men's minds. Now, we must not forget that such a height of folly was not attained but through a series of steps, and each step leading on to the one end, i. e., absolute control over the minds and bodies of unthinking members, by the Utah hierarchy. Fancy, The district president being recognized as the God of his district. The branch president being also the God of his branch. Therefore to do, in any way, outside the fiat of their Godships would be sure to bring God's curse in its train, no matter how good the man might be, how energetic, or what good influence he may cast around him, their exalted highnesses being offended with him was sufficient to taint him as a contravener of authority. How vastly different the teaching of the martyr? Which same teaching, thank God, is continued by his son. My knowledge of that saved me from much unhappiness, more than once. Yes, that knowledge has given me power of mind to wait the blowing over of the storm, and the genial sun of intelligence again shines forth and stills the tempest, so shall it continue to be until ignorance of God's laws will be a thing of the past. Pray God hasten that time.

I was much pleased to read the decision come to by the Kewanee District Conference, contained in your issue for January 1st, 1882: i. e. "Resolved" that no branch organization would take place in that district without its consent. A step in the right direction say I, and according to the spirit and letter of the law. In the above recited, and truthful, phase in the Utah apostacy, the district president was, so to speak, a law to himself, outside the conference. The branch president the same in his branch, under such regulations conferences were, and can only be, a sham. But when we take the course of the Kewanee district, that forces the president into his proper place, so that instead of his being the ruler and dictator, the conference becomes the power by its majority vote to decide on matters relative to its own affairs, while the president is lawfully allowed his true position. See book of rules on president's duty.

It will be well, I think to recite a circumstance that came within my experience, which will help to illustrate the validity of the course taken by the Kewanee District. The case to which I allude will be seen, I think, to be a step in the ladder that led to the dastardly course taken by those Utah Gods. A few, above the required number were desirous to form a branch in the part of a large district where a branch did not exist, and where the needs of the gospel was required. Well, those thus desiring took what your readers will consider as the only legitimate method to attain that end. So I firmly believe; but the president imagining otherwise, was the cause of much annoyance to, and injustice being done the applicants for distinct branch organization, so you shall now learn. In the first place—so considered those applicants—they held a preliminary meeting to ascertain how many in the immediate vicinity of the place selected would like to join in the new branch, and also to learn how many would hold themselves responsible for payments that necessarily occur. Having become satisfied on that head, they then elected one of their number to make the proper solicitations to the branch they had been fellowshipping with, for notes of removal; that was done in order that the district president might be satisfied as to their fitness for organization. Of course all was done through the medium of the president of the branch, as courtesy demanded; however, the two presidents combined to consider themselves slighted, because those applicants did not make their intentions known to them before they sought to move in the direction of organization; and the result was that those applicants were refused notes of removal, unless they humbled themselves to ask pardon. When they asked for what they were to ask pardon, they were told not because they were unworthy members of the branch, but because they had contravened district and branch authority. Mind you, that charge would not have been made had those applicants, before they dared to move in the matter, happened to have made those two presidents aware of what was contemplated, so that the charge really resolves itself into this, the time of application making their course a crime, or in other words had they have acted as foolishly as some others act, i. e., making a great noise of intentions before being prepared to act, and procuring materials to carry out professed intentions, all would have been well with them, and no charge would have been preferred against them. Well, those applicants refused to ask pardon for doing what they conceived to be a right thing, and they argued thus, It would look very pretty for a few manufacturers in any grain district to apply to the English Government for a charter of incorporation before they had become assured that sufficient material was at had to justify them in so doing. Because there are laws requiring certain conditions to be complied with, before such application would be entertained, two of them being a certain number of inhabitants and a sufficient proportion of wealth to guarantee the carrying out the provisions of incorporation, therefore it is clearly visible that promoters of any scheme would only frustrate their own designs if not prepared to show the possibility of carrying out their proposed measures; consequently had those applicants referred to, acted as those presidents unwisely contended they ought to have done, they would have proved themselves as unwise as those who taught them. However, all argument proved futile, and the charge of contravening authorities was made and sustained.

Well, readers, those applicants next took right ful action by applying to district conference under the form of an appeal, against such unjust and cruel charges, and in order not to afford any loophole, they petitioned the president to allow their appeal to appear on the conference agenda, he flatly refused to permit any such thing. Some may say it was unwise to propose such a measure seeing the president himself was implicated; in one sense it was, but when the desire of the applicants is understood to have been not give any reasonable excuse for refusal it will be seen to have been the best course for them to have taken. Now, after the refusal of the president the next step taken was to send a delegation to conference, to force upon the attentions of that assembly their case; an uproar was the result of that step, and it ended in the sending of the case back again to the branch that had previously passed sentence against those applicants, and those two presidents were the chief witnesses in the affair. You will, no doubt, say what a farce. Yes, I think so too. Now, had the Kewanee understanding of the law been carried out, the appeal from those applicants would have been accepted by the conference, which was the true court of appeal, and conference would have adjudicated upon the case, and decided the same justly, on its merits. I ask, if conferences are not courts of appeal, of what use are they? None whatever, only mere shams.

In conclusion, I maintain that in the Church of God there is not a law for rich or high in office, and another for poor, or low in office, but the one set of laws that were framed by the great harbinger must govern all. It therefore follows that it is the imperative duty of all officers in the Church to see to it that a strict dispensing of the laws justly, characterize their conduct to all placed under their jurisdiction. For if respect of persons be allowed, then those words of Paul appear in full force. Romans 3:9: "Are we better than they? Nay, in no wise."—The Utah Hierarchy.—

The committee to adjust the Caseyville Branch difficulties were called upon. Elder J. E. Betts, one of the committee, reported the low condition of the Caseyville Branch, and stated that the parties who had had difficulties agreed to forgive each other, and that their former difficulties are now amicably adjusted and disposed of. Approved.

The committee to consider the petition of the Belleville Branch for a rehearing in the case of J. W. Thorpe, reported: We conclude that we can not alter the decision previously given. If not satisfactory, we advise them to appeal to General Conference; but we think it would be better to let the matter rest. Adopted.

The Joseph House and Moselle Branch case was next taken up, and it was recommended that he make to the Saints of the Moselle Branch an humble confession of his sins, and after complying, that he be forgiven and restored to the full fellowship of the Church. Approved.

The committee in the case of Wm. O. Thomas and T. Hotchkiss reported: The matter is amicably settled. Accepted.

Delegates to the General Conference to go with-out any instructions from this Conference.

Report of Branches.—Aberaman 23. Merthyr 15. Nanlyglo 7. Rhendda Valley 12. Ogemore Vale 16.

Moved, That we recommend Bro. A. N. Bishop to General Conference that he be authorized to visit all the branches and set all records in order.

Moved, That we recommend Bro. J. Evans to General Conference that he be permitted to preach in Cardiganshire and Carmarthenshire.

Resolved, That this conference advise the Elders to have a license, and that every Elder report himself every three months, and send his license to every quarterly conference to be endorsed; and those that will not their license be taken from them, until they report themselves.

Bro. T. Taylor was sustained as president of English Mission, and J. R. Gibbs as president of Welsh Mission.

Resolved, That we hold our next General Conference in Swansea, instead of Llanelly.

Adjourned to meet for our district conference, in Ogemore Vale, the second Sunday in July, [9th] 1882.

This was the best conference that we have had for some time. It was a very enjoyable day. The spirit of peace did reign in our midst. The preaching was by Brn. T. Hardee, A. N. Bishop and J. Evans.

News Summary.

April 22d.—During March 14,697 emigrants left Hamburg, most of them for the United States.

According to the last assessment there are 7,718 horses, 500 mules and asses, 8 working oxen, 20,989 cows, 19,182 other cattle, and 57,245 head of swine in Decatur county.

A serious riot occurred at Ruabon, Wales, owing to a strike of colliers. The rioters did great damage to property.

Four executions under authority of law took place yesterday in different parts of the country.

A cyclone ruined twenty-five houses at Carrollton, a suburb of New Orleans, and injured fifteen persons.

Seven hundred and thirty-four families, consisting of 3,892 persons, were evicted in Ireland during the first quarter of 1882.

The death of Charles Robert Darwin, the eminent scientist, is announced.

23d.—A cyclone struck Cairo, Ill., Saturday afternoon, demolishing the new African M. E.

Church and several small dwellings, unroofing buildings, and disabling the telegraph wires so that all communication was cut off. In Kansas much damage was done by a heavy storm of wind and rain; in Georgia wind, rain, hail, and lightning damaged buildings and crops; in Mississippi a railroad bridge was blown down. In Brooklyn fire destroyed the Mansion House stables, and Stephen Curry, a hostler, and twenty-six horses were burned alive; in Newark, N. J., a boarding-house was burned, and a man perished in the flames; in Salem, Mass., a bagging storehouse burned, with a loss of $80,000; and in Cochranton, a Pennsylvania village, incendiaries set fires in three different places, and the village narrowly escaped total destruction.

A plot for the assassination of the Egyptian Minister of War has been discovered at Cairo, and many Circassian officers have been arrested for complicity.

The French are irritated at the occupation of various Tunisian points by Turkish troops.

The grand jury at St. Joseph, Mo., indicted Robert and Charles Ford, who killed Jesse James, for murder in the first degree. They were sentenced to be hanged on May 19. Governor Crittenden granted full and unconditional pardon, and the prisoners were set free. Robert was, however, soon after arrested on a warrant charging him with the murder of Wood Hite, whose body was recently found in a well on the Ford farm.

Thirty-five lives were lost by an explosion in the Blockhouse colliery, at Sunderland, England.

Advices from Siberia are to the effect that the steamer Rodgers, which went in search of the survivors of the Jeannette, has been burned and sunk, and that Lieutenant Berry and his officers and crew, numbering thirty-six, are near Cape Serdge.

24th.—The white people on the Labrador coast are literally starving, and the Indians are swarming down upon the settlers.

Michigan has just experienced the heaviest snow-storm of the season.

26th.—Three thousand men of the Chilian army of occupation are down with fever at Lima. Stringent sanitary measures have been adopted.

Three negroes were hanged at Greenville, S. C., under the law passed four years ago making incendiarism a capital offense.

The thriving town of Brownsville, Saline county, Mo., was destroyed by a tornado, and ten lives lost. The tornado passed south of Marshall, destroying houses, barns and uprooting trees. Several lives were lost in the country.

Agrarian outrages reported in Ireland, during March, numbered 551, including two murders, twelve cases of firing at persons, seven of aggravated assault, and thirty of arson.

A cyclone which ravaged the northern portion of Fayette county, Pennsylvania, killed three persons, fatally injured six others, and destroyed property valued at nearly $100,000.

After a thorough investigation of the soil of Florida, a sugar-planter in Cuba announces his intention to remove to that state and employ five hundred hands.

May 2d.—Canon Farrar in his sermon at Westminster Abbey eulogized Darwin. He said there was reason to believe the attacks made upon religion in his name were contrary to his solemn convictions. He maintained that religious faith rests upon foundations which no physical discoveries can impair.

4th.—A careful summary shows a total of 141 whites and Mexicans killed by Indians during the past two weeks. Five hundred head of stock was killed and captured, and the destruction of over $75,000 worth of property.

The law against the use of musical instruments in the United Presbyterian churches has been repealed. The vote of all the Presbyteries is as follows: For repeal, 616; against, 606.

Burglars broke into the Oberlin Post-Office, Ohio, blew open the safe, stole $350 and $2,000 worth of postage-stamps, and escaped without arousing anybody.

6th.—From Engineer Melville, of the Jeannette, comes the melancholy news, dated at Lena Delta, March 24th, that the dead bodies of Lieut. De Long and his party have been found, and with them all their papers and books. The information will excite no surprise, as all hope of the survival of the party had long since fled, but it will none the less be received with a feeling of pity for the awful sufferings and mournful fate of the brave explorers.

The court-house at Pittsburg, Pa., which cost nearly $250,000, was partially destroyed by fire yesterday.

Racine, Wisconsin, has had a great fire of seven and a half acres in extent, at a loss of $600,000. The number of buildings burned was forty, and ten million feet of lumber. Fire engines were sent by special trains from Milwaukee and Chicago.

8th.—A terrible tragedy occurred at Dublin, on Saturday evening. Lord Frederick Cavendish, the new chief secretary of Ireland, and Mr. Thomas H. Burke, the under secretary, were assassinated in Phoenix Park. They were attacked by four men wearing slouched hats. It is supposed that Mr. Burke was first assailed, and stabbed through the heart. Lord Cavendish attempted to defend him, but he too was stabbed by the assassins. They repeatedly plunged their knives into the breasts of their victims, and having cut their throats, they got on a car and drove rapidly from the park. Lord Cavendish had only arrived in Dublin that afternoon, along with Earl Spencer, the new lord lieutenant. He had been present at the installation ceremony in Dublin Castle, and left there with Mr. Burke, his fellow victim, early in the evening, to walk over to the chief secretary's residence to dinner. When the bodies were first found, Lord Cavendish's lips were moving, as if he was trying to speak, but he showed no further signs of consciousness. In addition to his other injuries, his left arm was broken. Robbery could not have been the object of the assassins, as nothing on the bodies was touched.

Miscellaneous.

MASSACHUSETTS DISTRICT.

The Saints of the Massachusetts District will please remember and try to observe the fast day, which was appointed at our last conference to be held Sunday, May 28th, 1882. Conference will meet in Douglass, June 3d, 1882, at 4 p. m.

JOHN SMITH, President.

NANVOO AND STRING PRAIRIE DISTRICT.

The above district conference will convene at Rook Creek, Illinois, June 3d and 4th, commencing at ten o'clock in the forenoon. We request all the Elders in the district to report. Also, all the branches in said district to send in a statistical report, and hope to see the several branches well represented.

B. F. DURFEE, President.
J. STEVENSON, Clerk.

ADVOCATE PROSPECTUS.

Having been re-appointed to the presidency of the Rocky Mountain Mission, and knowing the importance of the Advocate in that mission, especially in Utah and Idaho, we have determined to continue its publication.

We have distributed free, from 500 to 5000 extra copies each issue, and it has proved a valuable means of informing all who read, as to what the original doctrines of the Church of Christ were, and what they always must be. It has persistently pointed out the facts of the great latter day apostacy, and shown the only way of reformation, reconstruction, and consequent redemption. "Truth is immortal," and the Advocate has sought to reflect its light upon the past, the present, and future of the Church. How far it has succeeded in this, it remains for its readers to judge. From the many encouraging words received, we have reasons to believe a large proportion of its readers appreciate and endorse it.

That it has done very much to loosen the bands and lighten the burthens of the Brighamite Mormons, we have good evidence. That it has done important service in enlightening all classes of non-Mormons and in removing much prejudice, we have reason to know. And now that the time is at hand for the complete destruction of Brighamism, and for the most perfect and thorough vindication of genuine Mormonism, we are anxious our little Advocate shall live and do valiant service till the final victory is gained.

To this end we ask its former patrons to sustain it, and to extend its circulation so far as they can. Officers of missions, districts and branches, also traveling ministers, are respectfully requested to aid us in this direction.

Finally, we solicit subscribers—paying subscribers—and if we succeed in getting them, shall strive to make our paper all that its patrons can reasonably ask.

Send subscriptions, as formerly, to Joseph Smith, Box 82, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa. Terms 50 cents per year, in advance, except otherwise provided. Eleven copies for $5.

W. W. BLAIR, Editor.

TEXAS CENTRAL DISTRICT.

Dear Saints.—The time to convene the next conference being misunderstood by our last conference, and placed much earlier than desired and intended, through mistake, I take this method to correct the mistake, and place the time as intended and desired by conference. Our minutes as sent up to the office places the time of meeting too early to insure a proper and full attendance; and as I have consulted the most of the brethren, and find that there is a universal desire for me to correct the error, and place the meeting of next conference at the proper time; Therefore, remember that on Saturday the twenty-fourth (24th) of June next, conference will convene with the Central Branch. Come one, come all, and remember and do the law of God in all things.

I remain your brother in bonds.

ELIAS LAND, President District.

CALDWELL, Burlington Co., Texas,
April 27th, 1882.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

The attention of the Elders and Saints in the above district is called to the fact that the next quarterly conference will be held at Braidwood, on June 3d and 4th, 1882. All who can attend are urgently requested to do so, that we may have a representation from all parts, and a live, good session.

J. S. PATTERSON,
President District.

KENT AND ELGIN DISTRICT.

Conference of the above district will be held in the Buchhorn Branch, commencing on Saturday, June 3d, 1882. A report of all the branches would like to be had if possible.

RICHARD COBURN, Dist. Clerk.
ROND EAU, Ontario, April 29th, 1882.

MITE SOCIETY.

Treasurer's report of the Saint Louis Mite Society, of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, for quarter ending March 12th, 1882: Balance, cash on hand, January 15th, 1882, $12.45; received during quarter $49.50; Total $61.95. Paid out during quarter, $12.80; cash on hand March 12th, 1882, $49.15.

ELIZA A. COWLISHAW, Treasurer.

SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT.

Clear Lake, Indiana, April 17th, 1882. Yesterday, the Saints at their church in this township, met for their Sabbath School at the usual hour, and for the reorganization of said school. After the usual services, they proceeded to the following business, report of secretary, which was as follows: The Saints' Union Sabbath School of Clear Lake, organized May 1st, 1881; average scholarship 23 weeks (Summer) per day, 63; 22 weeks (Winter) per day, 30; Total average per day, 47. Average of teachers: Summer 7, Winter 4. Cash received $7.17. Verses committed to memory by scholars and recited 740. Bible lessons No. 1 and 2 classes 90. Two Testament classes 90. Primmer 86, total 266, by classes.

A. PATTERSON, Secretary.

The school then proceeded to elect officers for the next year. For superintendent, Bro. D. B.

Teeters; assistant superintendent, Bro. G. A. Smith; secretary, Bro. A. Patterson; treasurer, Bro. Peter Smith, Jr.; chorister, Frank McElhenna; librarian, Bro. Wilson Teeters. Teachers.—First Bible Class: Bro. G. Strough; assistant, Sr. Priscilla Smith; Second Bible Class: Sr. Ella Housman; First Testament Class: Miss Mary McElhenna; Second Testament Class: Bro. S. Smith. Primmer: Sr. Mary Strough and Bro. Peter Smith.

Moved and carried that the proceedings of the meeting be published in the Angola Herald and the Steuton county Journal and the Saints' Herald.
A. PATTERSON, Secretary.

CHURCH LIBRARY.

On behalf of the Church, we thank Bro. Joseph F. Burton, for two books donated to the Library, while on a visit to Lamoni, when en route from his late field of labor in Southern California to his new field, Nova Scotia. The books are "The Plan of Creation," and "After Death—What? or Hell and Salvation considered in the Light of Science and Philosophy."

JOHN SCOTT, Librarian.

Money to accompany notice BORN.

GRIFFITHS.—At Worcester, Worcester county, Massachusetts, April 28th, 1882, to Bro. G. T. and Sr. Hattie Griffiths, a son, named Gomer Edwin; mother doing well, but the child has passed away.

COLLINS.—At Plattsmouth, Nebraska, April 5th, 1872, to Bro. James R. and Sr. Nancy Collins, a daughter; and blessed April 30th, 1882, by Elder Robert M. Elvin, named Mamie.

MARRIED.

HARRIS—FIFE.—At the residence of the bride's parents, at Hennefer, Summit county, Utah, by Squire Jarvis Bromley, March 15th, 1882, Bro. D. R. Harris to Sr. Jennet Fife.

DIED.

ERVIN.—At Liberty, Cass county, Nebraska, October 12th, 1881, of whooping cough, Melissa, daughter of Bro. James and sister Anna Ervin, aged 6 months and 20 days.

HINKLEY.—At Indian River, Maine, April 22d, 1882, Sr. Martha Hinkley. She was born in Columbia, Maine, May, 1802; was baptized March 26th, 1872, by John C. Foss; she lived faithful until her death. Funeral services held in the Baptist Church; sermon by Elder Aaron W. Kelley.

BAILEY.—Near Davis City, Iowa, April 10th, 1882, of puerperal fever, Sr. Susan H., wife of Bro. George H. Bailey, aged 37 years, 6 months and 14 days. It was a great and sudden loss to her husband and children. Funeral services by Elder H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Priest A. S. Cochran. She was buried at the Lamoni cemetery.

SHOCKLEY.—Andrew Jackson Shockley, born in Highland county, Ohio, September 20th, 1828; baptized at Canton, Lee county, Iowa, January 9th, 1870, by R. Warnock; was killed four miles east of Hillsboro, Iowa, March 23d, 1882, while at work on the Ft. Madison and North Western railroad, caused by the flat car he was on leaving the track and turning over, crushing him to death under it. His remains was given to Bro. Emerson Brown for burial (with instructions to do as he would by an own brother, and the Rail-road Company would pay expenses) and he, Brown, requested that Bro. John H. Lake come to Farmington and preach a funeral sermon the first opportunity he had, and give notice through Herald when he would do it, as Bro. Brown wants to come, and lives some distance from the branch.

NICHOLS.—At Malone, Franklin county, New York, March 28th, 1882, of paralysis of the heart, our beloved sister, Lona Nichols, aged 16 years, 6 months, and 8 days; daughter of Bro. Silas and Delia Nichols. Her dying request was to see all her friends, and to all: "Be good and follow her to her home in heaven," of which she spoke as seeing; also her little angel sister, Jessie, she said had come for her, and was waiting. Her parents are comforted by the strong, bright hope expressed on her death bed. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. S. T. Fankam, pastor of the Baptist Church of Malone.

Gentle Lona sleeping sweetly,
In her little snow white bed;
But her spirit is in heaven,
Where no parting tears are shed.
Fairer forms than father, mother,
Are her bright companions now;
Lovelier flowers than rose or lily,
Twine around her lovely brow.
Safe at home, she knows no sorrow;
There no tears will dim the eye.
On her ear falls sweeter music
Than a mother's lullaby.

BEVINS.—At his home near Stewartville, in Clinton county, Missouri, April 11th, 1882, suddenly, of heart disease, Elder Frances M. Bevins; aged 51 years, 1 month and 13 days. He was baptized October 17th, 1869; ordained to the office of an Elder the same date, in which office he has ever been faithful. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn his loss. As a branch we miss him too. Funeral sermon by Elder W. Summerfield.

MALONEY.—At Oronogo, Missouri, February 8th, 1882, David Alexander, son of Stephen and Mary J. Maloney, of typhoid malaria, after a lingering sickness of ninety-four days, aged 6 years, 3 months and 6 days. Funeral services by Elder C. W. Short.

David thou art left us,
With a sore and troubled breast
Thou art gone to meet thy sisters,
In the land of light and bliss.
May we who linger after,
Have God's Spirit to light our way,
To the land of light and glory,
And there meet our loved ones,
On the resurrection day.

PHILLIPS.—At Kingston, Missouri, November 14th, 1881, of diphtheria, Hannah M., daughter of Bro. R. and Sr. Mary C. Phillips, aged 4 years, 10 months and 14 days. She was a loving child; while we much regret parting with the loved one, we hope to meet her in a world of bliss, where parting is no more.

JOHNSON.—At Carrollton, Missouri, March 14th, 1882, of pneumonia, Bro. Andrew Johnson, aged 36 years, 11 months and 22 days. He was baptized January 1st, 1876, and remained in the faith to the end. He leaves wife widowed, and four children fatherless.

VIA SOLITARIA.

[An unpublished poem, by Henry W. Longfellow.]

Alone I walk the peopled city,
Where each seems happy with his own;
O friends! I ask not for your pity—
I walk alone.

No more for me you lake rejoices,
Though moved by loving airs of June;
O birds! your sweet and piping voices
Are out of tune.

In vain for me the elm tree arches
Its plumes in many a feathery spray;
They gaze on other fields than ours—
And sunlit day.

In vain your beauty, summer flowers;
Ye can not greet these cordial eyes;
In vain the evening starry marches
On other skies.

The gold is rifled from the coffer,
The blade is stolen from the sheath;
Life has but one more boon to offer,
And that is—Death.

Yet well I know the voice of duty,
And, therefore, life and health must crave,
Though she who gave the world its beauty
Is in her grave.

I live, O lost one! for the living
Who drew their earliest life from thee,
And wait until, with glad thanksgiving,
I shall be free.

For life to me is as a station,
Wherein apart a traveler stands—
One absent long from home and nation,
In other lands;

And I, as he who stands and listens,
Amid the twilight's chill and gloom,
To hear, approaching in the distance,
A train for home.

For death shall bring another mating,
Beyond the shadows of the tomb;
On yonder shore a bride is waiting Until I come.

In yonder field are children playing,
And there—O vision of delight!—
I see the child and mother straying
In robes of white.

Thou, then, the longing heart that breaketh,
Stealing the treasures one by one,
I'll call Thee blessed when Thou makest
The parted—one. Sept. 18, 1863.

Now that our best and sweetest poet has left us, rending by his departure the veil of that sanctuary—his inmost life and feeling—it may not be unlawful to publish what would have been sacrilege before, the above touching poem, not written for the public eye, but simply to give utterance to his heart-crushing sorrow after the death of his wife, in 1861. It was sent to me by a friend in Boston some years ago, after my own great affliction, and has, therefore, a double sacredness to all who have passed through a similar sorrow. It will be read by many with tearful eyes when they remember how long and patiently, with what brave and uncomplaining heart, he has waited at the "station" till now, at last, "the parted" are made "one."—H. M. Goodwin, in N. Y. Independent.

Utah.

Editor Herald:—In considering the Utah Problem, and the untiring efforts of the Reorganization to solve the same, it is advisable I think, to recollect and keep before the public mind the fact, that while in 1852, at Salt Lake City, the Mormons under Brigham Young first proclaimed polygamy publicly and endorsed it as a tenet of their religious faith, the identical same year there was held at Beloit, Wisconsin, a conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which conference then and there passed nine distinct resolutions—prominent among which is the first one as follows:

"Resolved, That this conference, regard the pretensions of Brigham Young, James J. Strang, James Collen Brewster, and William Smith, and Joseph Wood's joint claim to the leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as an assumption of power, in violation of the law of God; and consequently we disclaim all connexion and fellowship with them."

This conference appointed a committee consisting of Jason W. Briggs, Zenas H. Gurley, Sen., and J. Harrington, to write and publish a pamphlet entitled "A Word of Consolation to the Scattered Saints"—setting forth the position of the Reorganization; and in which at page 21 we find them declaring against polygamy as follows:

"We can not forgo this opportunity to raise our voice against an evil which has well nigh completed the overthrow of the Church;—which, Sampson like, hath lain hold upon the very pillars of society. And instead of order, it has produced anarchy, instead of union, division; in short, instead of confidence and love, distrust and hatred. We refer to the system of spiritual wifery, taught by Brigham Young."

Then follows various quotations from Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and the Bible, to show that the doctrine and practice of polygamy are condemned of God; and what seems to me a happy coincidence they took the same position that was taken this winter before the Government, that if Mormons believe these laws quoted to be divine, let them at once abandon polygamy—but if they do not, then in that case let them abandon the name Mormon and act consistently for they are not Mormons but polygamists. In this was involved the principle of "returning" and "remembering" "the new covenant even the Book of Mormon," and the Government and the public to a large extent are becoming satisfied and willing to admit that those people of Utah called Mormons are apostates and not Latter Day Saints, as presumptuously claimed by them. I thank God that He inspired those men in the inception of the Reorganization to thus solemnly enter their protest before high heaven and the world, against the loathsome encumbrance upon their faith. And, fortunately for us that the laws of the land hold that in all cases of schism, or division in a religious body, they shall be recognized as the legal successors to the original church who hold to the tenets of faith as they existed prior to the division; and numbers does not decide the case, or have anything specially to do with it. This of course makes it, or will probably make it rather interesting to the Brighamites of Utah, as well as to us. And now, with the light of thirty years of experience we can, I think, see with clearer vision the wisdom which moved the fathers of the Reorganization to entrench themselves in so strong a position; and when we add the 5th resolution they passed, viz.:

"That we believe that the Church of Christ, organized on the 6th of April A.D., 1830, exists as on that day, wherever six or more Saints are organized, according to the pattern in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants."

And that these same elders had gone forth and legally, according to the authority conferred upon them of God, baptized and so "organized" churches. And that they held unquestioned right to organize, according to the pattern, into church capacity six or more members of the Church wherever they found them;—when we consider these potent facts, and that the whole object and intent of the movement was to reorganize the Saints who had been scattered "in the dark and cloudy day," we may justly conclude that so far as Mormon theology may be concerned, the position of the Reorganized Church was and is invulnerable.

The record made in 1852 by the Conference above referred to, will stand I think in any competent court of the land, against the unlawful claims of polygamists of Utah, and against the loathsome encumbrance polygamy, —which is evidence to me that it was ordered of the Lord.

It might be well, in conclusion, to notice one point which Congressmen asked us at the Capital, viz.: "Could not Utah Mormons have accepted the supposed revelation on polygamy to the exclusion of all others?"

To this we answered, "Yes, upon the same theory that the devil rebelled in heaven."

"But," said they,—(we mean)—and be good Mormons still?"

"To this we answered that, "Like Paul the Apostle, we must say, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you . . . let him be accursed.'"

These gentlemen knew that the Mormon text books forbade polygamy; but when we showed them that the revelation of 1831, see sec. 58:5, (Old Ed. 18 sec.), made it incumbent on every Latter Day Saint to "keep the laws of the land;" and to be subject to the powers that be "until Christ comes; then the conclusion was soon reached that polygamists of the territories must take the consequences of their overt acts, as no excuse was admissible; and if there is any polygamist who believes that God gave the document called a revelation, by which the practice is enjoined, we recommend to such the hope expressed by Senator Sherman during the discussion of the Edmunds Bill, this Congress, "That their God might give them another revelation revoking this one; and thereby let them out of a very tight place." And really in the light of reason it would seem but just as he got them into a trap he ought to help them out,—but like Baal's, "He's asleep or on a journey," most likely.

As ever, for truth,

LAMONI, Iowa, April 2d, 1882.

AMERICUS SYMMES, Esq., Dear Sir:—

I WRITE to you again about the North Country. I, and many others who have been looking that way with strained sight for many years are disappointed in the results of the Jeannette expedition. Nares reports paleocrystic ice beyond where Morton and Hall saw the open sea. I have read a synopsis of Norjensjould's discoveries, and found nothing relating to Hebrews; so upon the whole I conclude that the account republished by you from the London Times was a hoax. I shall send and get "The Voyage of the Vega." All the other facts in your pamphlet remain, and are unanswerable except upon the Symmes' Theory. And, too, the Jeannette party found a warmer climate at the farthest latitude reached than that passed through; and report that no icebergs are formed on the northern coasts of the arctic lands.

The laws of motion and gravitation necessitate the assertion that there is a great polar basin. There being no centrifugal force at the pole, the sea must recede, forming a funnel shaped depression, and the shape of the earth at that point (and also at the South Pole) must be like the stem end of an apple. During half the year the side of this concave farthest from the sun, would receive its perpendicular rays direct, and the heat would need be as intense as at the equator; and so I am prepared to hear a report from there of "figs and bananas." Proctor says there is a bright spot on the pole of Mercury, indicating an opening through it. Wilford Hall, author of The Problem of Human Life, and Editor of The Microcosim, has asserted that the earth is hollow. There is no greater living authority than he. Please let me have your latest data.

Respectfully,

S. F. WALKER.

SYMMZONIA, near Louisville, Ky.,

S. F. WALKER, Esq., Dear Sir:

YOURS of the 2d inst., was received in due course of mail, and I took much pleasure in noticing how in earnest you seem in relation to my father's theory. You do not seem to think that the weather varies in the north as it does here; and think that what one man finds there should be found by all. Capt. Tuttle, who had many years' experience in sailing north after whale and seal, says that every fourth year is open weather, and it is fair to believe that Capt. Hall struck such a year when he was up there; for he went farther north in a shorter time than any other, and accomplished more to prove the truth of the Symmes' Theory in three months than any other explorer ever did in three years. In precisely two months from the day he left New York City, he reached his highest northern point, 82° 16', and was within sixty-four measured miles of the Open Polar Sea, and would have steamed out into that open sea if it had not been for that old, lying, drunken murderer, (as I believe), Captain Buddington; and would have found the same country that Norjensjould, Wiggins and Tuttle did; and would have set to rest the truth of the Symmes' Theory. He opened up the way for those last mentioned explorers, who report and confirm the paper read by Mr. Seabolt before the Art Society of London, which was certainly no hoax. Wm. Morton of the Kane expedition must have hit upon such a season as Hall did; but Nares must have struck one of the very cold Winters, such as we had here in 1880-81; the river frozen up for two months—last Winter not frozen up a day. The Jeannette experienced some moderate weather, as is reported; as she found it 42 and 44 degrees above Zero, when in the extreme north; and she was drifting and not steaming, as I understand, when she was crushed. There is a Captain Smith from England, who is out now in the north, and was expected to return last October. The chances are that he made his way out into the Open Polar Sea, and has found the same country that Wiggins and Tuttle found. They call the country they found Siberia, but they did not find it by sailing north after they had passed 80° north latitude; but they were going south by their compass, as the needle changed its position after passing the magnetic pole at 80°—as had been well proven by Parry it would. Now where Siberia should end and Symmzonias begins is a question. I insist that Symmzonias should begin after passing 80° north, and the needle begins to point south. The same should be the case in Greenland; and if the wild animals that come down into Greenland from the north were followed when they return, they would certainly lead into Symmzonias, where the climate is warm and genial. In Dr. Kane's work does he not say they found a country with water fowls plentiful, and that they gathered as high as twelve hundred eggs in a day. It certainly proves that the Newtonian theory can not be true. There are two or three other exploring parties out now, that I hope to hear from in June. If you see anything new on the subject please inform me. So will I you.

Yours truly,

AMERICUS SYMMES.

Intemperance.

INTEMPERANCE cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength and age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affections, erases conjugal love, blots filial attachments, blights parental hope, and brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave. It makes wives, widows; children, orphans; fathers, fiends; and all of them paupers and beggars. It feeds rheumatism, arouses gout, welcomes epidemics, invites cholera, imports pestilence, and embraces consumption. It covers the land with idleness and crime. It fills your jails, supplies your almshouses, and demands your asylums. It engenders controversies, fosters quarrels, and cherishes riot. It crowds your penitentiaries, and furnishes victims for the scaffolds. It is the blood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman, and the support of a midnight incendiary. It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer. It violates obligations, reverences fraud, and honors infamy. It hates love, scorns virtue, and slanders innocence. It incites the father to butcher his helpless offspring and the child to grind the parental age. It burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God and hates heaven. It suborns witnesses, nurses perjury, defiles the jury box and judicial ermine. It bribes votes, disqualifies voters, corrupts elections, pollutes our institutions, and endangers government. It degrades the citizens, debases the legislature, dishonors the statesmen, and disarms the patriot. It brings shame, not honor; terror, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness; and with the malevolence of a fiend, it calmly surveys its frightful desolations, and unsatiated with havoc, it kills peace, poisons felicity, ruins morals, blights confidence, slays reputation and wipes out national honor, then curses the world and laughs at its ruin. It does that and more—it murders the soul. It is the sum of all crimes, the mother of all abominations, the devil's best friend and God's worst enemy.

The Evidence of Miracles.

Editor Herald: In the Herald of April 15th, is an article from the pen of "Inquirer," setting forth what he believes should have been the nature and character of the evidences, which should have accompanied the teachings and mission of Joseph Smith in order to have established his claim to a divine mission and calling. "Inquirer" concludes that "To the detriment of the doctrine taught by him, the train of wonders and miracles usually accompanying revelators, was, it may be safely said, entirely lacking."

We believe that "Inquirer" has taken a too superficial view of the subject he is writing upon. In the first place, prophets do not always give proof of their divine mission and calling by showing wonders and miracles to convince the people. Of John the Baptist the Savior said: "Among those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist."—Luke 7:28. Yet it is written of him that "he did no miracle." John 10:41. What proof, or "train of wonders and miracles" did Jonah give to the Ninevites that he had a divine message for them, and that God intended to destroy their city? Will "Inquirer" please answer.

Were we to take a superficial view of Jonah's mission to Nineveh, we might conclude that he was a false prophet, from the fact that his predictions did not come to pass. But to those who have searched for wisdom as for a hidden treasure, it is evident that Jonah's proclamation that Nineveh should be overthrown in forty days, was on conditions, implied, if not stated. Compare Jonah 3:10, with Jeremiah 18:7-10. There you will find a principle that perfectly harmonizes the apparent failure of Jonah's prediction.

In the second place; Joseph Smith has not spoken and proclaimed to the world that he has received a divine call and mission from God to man, and left them without a test whereby the genuineness of his claim can be either established or else overthrown. He declared that all Christendom had gone astray from the perfect law of the Lord; that God did not recognize any of the churches as his own church; that God had authorized him to again organize and establish his church upon the earth, and that all who would accept of the terms of the gospel should be blessed by "signs following" of the same nature and character as those which the church of God in ancient times enjoyed. And, notwithstanding all Christendom, (so-called), declared these things were done away and no more needed; and cried "delusion," "false prophet," &c., thousands can and do testify that they have tested the matter and have proved that his promises were true; and thus to them this is evidence that his call and mission were of a supernatural origin.

But "Inquirer" thinks that there must be "something more than accounts of wonders performed in the Church to convince those that are not in the Church; and that "men have a right to require and receive the thundering logic that has always been used to open the eyes of those who doubted the institution of a new order of things by revelation."

What more "thundering logic" does "Inquirer" want, than the fact that Joseph Smith did teach the very same gospel that Christ and the Apostles taught, and made the same promises that they made, and always appealed to "the law and to the testimony" for proof to sustain his position. If his teachings do not correspond with the "law and the testimony" of teachers of the gospel of ancient times, then we have the evidence that there is no light in him; if they do, then there must have been light in him; and to us it should be proof that he was called to establish the truth upon the earth again in these the latter days.

But we have other proof to establish his claim to a divine call. In a work now before me, called the "Pearl of Great Price," published in Liverpool in 1851. On page 35, I find the following:

A revelation and prophecy by the prophet, seer, and revelator, Joseph Smith, given December 25th, 1832.

"Verily thus saith the Lord, concerning the wars that will shortly come to pass, beginning at the rebellion of South Carolina, which will eventually terminate in the death and misery of many souls. The days will come that war will be poured out upon all nations, beginning at that place; for behold, the Southern States shall be divided against the Northern States, and the Southern States will call on other nations, even the nation of Great Britain, as it is called, and they shall also call upon other nations, in order to defend themselves against other nations; and thus war shall be poured out upon all nations. And it shall come to pass, after many days, slaves shall rise up against their Masters, who shall be marshalled and disciplined for war: And it shall come to pass also, that the remnants who are left of the land will march themselves, and shall become exceeding angry, and shall vex the Gentiles with a sore vexation; and thus, with the sword, and by bloodshed, the inhabitants of the earth shall mourn; and with famine, and plague, and earthquakes, and the thunder of Heaven, and the fierce and vivid lightning also, shall the inhabitants of the earth be made to feel the wrath, and indignation and chastening hand of an Almighty God, until the consumption decreed, hath made a full end of all nations; that the cry of the Saints, and of the blood of the Saints, shall cease to come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, from the earth to be avenged of their enemies. Wherefore, stand ye in holy places, and be not moved, until the day of the Lord come; for behold it cometh quickly, saith the Lord. Amen."

We will now test the above prophecy by the test which we find in the Bible and see if we can not find proof of a "positive kind, amounting to open demonstration," that Joseph Smith was what he claimed to be. In Jeremiah 18:9, we find that "the prophet that prophesieth of peace, (or war either), when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the Lord hath truly sent him." Deuteronomy 18:21, 22, teaches the same principle, or test by which a true prophet may be known. And we will venture the assertion that a more perfect and minute fulfillment of prophecy can not be found than history records of the one above quoted—so far as it has been fulfilled. And consequently we have proof of the very strongest kind to warrant us in believing that Joseph Smith was truly inspired and sent with a divine mission to mankind; and if we lightly reject it, or look for unwarranted and unpromised wonders and miracles to cause us to believe, we may find ourselves occupying the same position as Abraham told the rich man concerning his brethren: "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."—Luke 16:31.

The manifestation of great wonders is not always proof of a divine calling. The sojourners of Egypt did many wonders. And we learn in Revelations 13:13, 14, that miracles and wonders will be performed for the purpose of deceiving the children of men. So that we think that the kind of proof we have had is sufficient to at least warrant us in accepting the message that Joseph Smith has proclaimed to this world. And in following his teachings we need not reject any portion of the revealed will of God as contained in the Bible, for his teachings harmonize with the Bible. And if in the end, the revelations given through him as to the special work of God to be performed in the latter days are realized, then blessed will we be; but if we reject his message and are then disappointed, our disappointment will certainly be a serious one.

Ever praying and hoping for the triumph of truth, I am, yours truly,

JOSEPH FLORY.

MOUND CITY, Holt Co., Missouri, April 22d, 1882.

Christianity.

TO MY mind there is upon earth nothing so potent for the welfare of mankind, both for this life and the life to come as the principles of Christianity, as manifested in the lives and teachings of Christ and the Apostles. The history of the primitive Christians, of their terrible persecutions and sufferings for Christ and the gospel, is enough to cause tears of sorrow to flow even now. The fortitude of the martyrs under tortures the most cruel for their faith in Christ, is a picture of faith more sublime than the world ever witnessed. This was christianity before it was corrupted. Even in the days of the reformers there was exhibited much of the ancient spirit of the Martyrs. Christianity even in its feeble and divided condition has been a blessing to the world. Christianity as unfolded by Joseph the Seer, has in it all the elements of grandeur and beauty; all the saving power and divine attributes of that which was promulgated by the apostles.

The gospel, now as then, the power of God unto salvation; the Church coming out of the wilderness clothed in her former beauty and loveliness; Christianity is being redeemed from the blots and stains upon its fair name. Again, as in the ages past, when the pure principles of the gospel begin to be taught, a free and full salvation offered through Christ, the spirit of persecution began, and he whom the Lord had chosen to bring forth his truth was despised and hated, his life sought, being in continual danger, being hunted and traduced by those who professed to be the followers of Jesus, but had not received of his Spirit. The world with envenomed hate persecuted to the death the followers of the Lamb. All of this only strengthens our faith in the gospel renewed and Christianity restored. Christ the head of the Church; its name his most glorious name; its offices, gifts, powers and blessings as of old; its members called to be Saints.

The mission of the Reorganization is to unfold to the world Christianity in all its grandeur and saving power, and gather into the fold all the children of God. Believing this, as I most assuredly do, I fail to see the propriety of calling the doctrine of Christ, Mormonism; or the Church of Christ, the Mormon Church; or its members Mormons.

E. N. WEBSTER.

A Few Thoughts on Local Work.

WITHOUT looking too far back in the past for an example or pattern—not farther than past and present failures serve as experience—let us consider the different means in order to ascertain the best mode of carrying on successfully the spiritual work in local organizations. We, as a church, ought to be progressive; and I see no reason why we should not progress in the adoption of ways and means for a greater advancement in ministerial labor, for the ingathering and salvation of those who are around and with us; inasmuch as that advancement does not overstep the bounds of the revealed law of God.

I fear that we may possibly be too cautious at times when tempted to consider some of these important matters, and prejudice is often taken for caution, and is, therefore, not wise. Let us take a look at the spiritual work and spiritual condition as it really is in too many districts and branches. At the present time how many reports come to the General and Quarterly Conferences from those trying to have an oversight of the flocks, that such and such branches are not in so flourishing a condition as they would like to see them. Others report a great lack of interest, on the part of the members as well as those outside of the church; indeed, if there is not the proper interest taken on the part of the members of the church, how can we reasonably expect those outside of the church to become interested in its welfare. This lack of interest with both is one great obstacle in the way of advancement in spiritual work in the several branches of the church. The great and only reason that may be assigned for this lack of interest may be stated in a few words, viz., the lack of that which would make the spiritual work in the branches interesting. The all-absorbing question is, How shall this be done? If by any means we can find out how this can be done, and then go to work and do it, we may then look forward with joy and anticipation to a more glorious day, a happier time, and more glorious results.

We will start out as God's detectives and detect if we can the cause of all this trouble. First we will take a ride down to the ——— Branch and quietly make some inquiries and see how things look there.

"Good morning, Mr. Brown."

"Good morning, sir."

"Mr. Brown, how many churches have you in this place?"

"Two."

"What are they?"

"Methodist and Presbyterian."

"Are there no Latter Day Saints here?"

"Oh, yes, I believe there is some of them here, but I hardly ever go to their meetings, so don't know much about them."

"Don't they have regular preaching here?"

"Well, yes, I guess they have what they call preaching."

"Who is their minister here?"

"Why, let me see. Oh, I guess it is Bill ———. Bill is a good fellow, but then he is too common here. You see, we have always known Bill, and we never saw any thing in him very interesting. I don't think he ever reads much, and of course don't have much to tell that is of interest. But I believe if the Latter Day Saints would get some one to come here that is not so well known; I mean by this, not so common, and one that could present their views in a proper light, that the people could see had made it a study, and would show by his walk and conversation that he was an exemplary man, that they would have good congregations; and people would look to him as a leader and one to be respected."

"I believe you are right, Mr. Brown. Where can we find Bill ———?"

"I think you will find him up at the store. He is most always there. I saw a lot of fellows there talking a while ago."

We will go up to the store and see if we can find Brother ———, the presiding Elder of the Branch. We will not let him know who we are for awhile; but wait and see what kind of an appearing man he is, and see who is to blame, he, or the people for not taking more interest in his spiritual labors. We enter the store. Here we find eight or ten men and boys, all perched on the counters, laughing, talking, and jesting; each one willing to contribute his share of tobacco juice in order not to leave a spot on the floor untouched. We listen to the conversation going on, for awhile, which savored strongly of the indecent and degrading, in which all seemed to take a part. We have about concluded that we had made a mistake in the store described; but to be certain about it, we step up to the man behind the counter and ask him if Mr. ——— is there. Bro. ——— is at once pointed out to us, but I must confess I felt a little delicate in making his acquaintance right there. So we waited, and presently the crowd dispersed, each going his own way. We watch Bro. ——— and follow him to his house, and there we are invited in. We make ourself known to Bro. ———, presiding Elder, who seems quite glad to see us. We at once open up the conversation with Bro. ——— talking about the spiritual condition of the work in his branch. At first he seems lost for something to say; it being evident to us that the contrast was so great in emerging from such conversation and such influence as the brother was in but a short time before, that he really felt embarrassed. After a little talk in a general way, we say to him:

"Bro. ———, how is the work progressing here in your branch? Are the prospects good for an ingathering to the church?"

"Well, no, I can't say that they are; the work ain't going on here like I'd like to see it."

"What seems to be the trouble, brother? Haven't you got a place to meet?"

"Oh, yes, we have a good place to hold meetings; but the people won't come out. There don't seem to be any interest manifested. They won't turn out unless Brother Joseph, or some of those big fellows come, and then they all come."

"Well, Bro. ———, do you read, study, meditate and pray for God's Spirit to be with you, and help you, that you may be able to so talk, preach, and instruct in such a way that you will be able to create an interest and make it interesting for others to come and hear?"

"Well, yes, what time I have to spare. You see, brethren, I don't get much time to look up these things; and then I don't believe much in studying to preach. Bro. ——— used to tell me that if I would just open my mouth, God would fill it, and I am kinder following that way. You see, brethren, the people are growing harder all the time; it seems as though they are bound not to know anything."

(I must confess I am puzzled to decide which knows the most, the people or Bro. ———.)

So we leave Bro. ——— and start for home, perfectly satisfied where the trouble lies in that branch.

The picture may be overdrawn, but it is a fact nevertheless, that in some branches the work lags for the want of some one at the head, to "go ahead," with a sufficient amount of understanding, spirituality, vim, energy and moral character calculated to stir up a lively interest among the people. It is a miserable mistake to think the people are altogether to blame. It is to a great extent, our fault. How can we consistently expect people to come out and take an interest in that which we have but little interest in ourselves. Or to expect people to come out to hear that which would be interesting to them when they know very well that we, for some illegitimate reason are unable to furnish what would be interesting. We can not expect it. And as long as this condition of things exists little work will be done and few souls saved, and we shall be to blame.

I would suggest as a remedy in part for all of this. First. Where there is a branch that does not possess a male member with the necessary qualifications, and has not sufficient time to so qualify as to command the respect and attention of the people, and make the branch meetings interesting for both Saints and unbeliever, that their District Conference (if said branch be in an organized district) appoint some one so qualified to preside over that branch. Second. Let it be the duty of the branch, or the Saints composing the branch, to look after the temporal wants of the one presiding, that he may not become embarrassed and destroy his usefulness in his spiritual work. Not that I would for a moment indulge any one in laziness; but past experience and present observation force me to say that no one, let him be President, Apostle, High Priest, or Elder, can successfully build up the work by which a proper interest must be created, both with the people and the Church, without giving nearly all of his time to the work under his charge; but with the assistance the branch might and ought to give him, he would be able to properly discharge all those spiritual duties enjoined upon one who is so called to have the watchcare of the work in that branch. Third. I would suggest farther, that the one so appointed be limited in time to one year. And then that some other one, qualified, be appointed in his stead, and the first one be appointed to preside over some other branch, where he is needed. The fact is that Elders are apt to become too common-place if permitted to remain too long with one charge, and lose their influence for good in that branch.

It is an old saying, but nevertheless true, that "A new broom sweeps clean." And so it is with the preaching of the word and building up of the kingdom of God. We must have prestige, we must have respect, and we must have recognition in order to make ourselves useful in creating a lively interest among those with whom we labor. And if we remain too long in one place we become too common, too well acquainted, and lose our influence for good. "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country."—Jesus.

There are localities that need energetic and thorough spiritual work, and it will require energetic and thorough Elders to do that work. An Elder who can spend two-thirds of his time loafing around stores, shops, and places of amusement, or on the street corners, telling anecdotes that are degrading in their character; those who can chew over one pound of tobacco, or smoke one dozen cigars in one day; those who can talk about everybody they ever saw or heard of; those who know everybody else's business better than their own, are not the men to do the needed work. But what these branches from which comes these reports of coldness, and lack of interest in the work need, is some able, energetic, live Elder, who will, like the General in the army, with sword in hand, take the lead in every thing that is virtuous, noble, and right, and say to the people, every where, "Come." B.

Michael Servetus.

THE MAN WHO ANTICIPATED HARVEY'S GREAT DISCOVERY, AND WAS BURNED BY CALVIN.

MICHAEL SERVETUS, the Spaniard whom Calvin burned in Geneva, discovered the circulation of the blood, or rather half of it; for in this case the process of discovery was very gradual. Moreover, he records his discovery in the very book, "Restitutio Christianismi," the publication of which was the immediate cause of his being put to death.

William Wotton, "that prodigy of learning," says, "The first I could ever find who had a distinct idea in this matter was Michael Servetus, who was burnt for Arianism at Geneva, one hundred and forty years ago. Well had it been for the Church of Christ if he had wholly confined himself to his own profession! He clearly asserts that the blood passes through the lungs from the left to the right ventricle, and not through the partition which divides the two ventricles, as was then believed. How he introduces it, I know not, having never seen his book myself. Mr. Charles Bernard, a very learned and eminent surgeon of London, who did me the favor to communicate this passage to me, could inform me no further, only that he had had it from a learned friend of his, who had himself copied it from Servetus."

How a prodigy of learning, who at four years old read Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, and who in his "Observations on the Tale of a Tub" measured swords with Swift, could be satisfied with hearsay, it is hard to tell. But so it is; the fact has been repeated in every English biographical dictionary since Wotton's day. Servetus deserves something more than this. Had he not been cut off in his prime, he might very probably have either completed the grand discovery or have guided the Paduan anatomists, Vesalius, Colombo, and Cesalpinus, who each came a little nearer the full truth than his predecessor, but had not courage or good luck to "finish the circuit," as the English pupil of Fabricius of Acquapendente did.

Servetus' is a sad story. When quite young, a student at Toulouse, this enthusiastic Navarrese got hold of the religious doubts that were in the air. Southerners, Spaniards, and Italians, in the lands where the new faith was soon to be stamped out, were going in generally, like Bruno, for nothing more than heterodox doctrines; among Dutch and Rhinelanders the new views tended to Socialism, sometimes of a terribly practical form. Servetus, bred up in the South, traveled northward, and purposed going the round of all the German Universities. At Basel he published a tract, "De Trinitatis Erroribus." It was very youthful, and in a subsequent work on the same subject he candidly confessed that, though not wrong, he had been hasty, and had written crudely. The Reformers fell on him like a pack of wolves. Melancthon was specially indignant, called him crafty, confused, and (worst epithet of all for a scholar and a theologian) homo levis, a man wanting ballast, as we say. Servetus was astonished that those who claimed the freest right of protesting against what they held to be Popish errors, should deny him the like freedom in arguing against what he deemed errors about the Trinity. But, though the Germans gave him a very cold shoulder, his works were eagerly read in Italy; so much so that Melancthon wrote to the Senate at Venice, begging them to beware of such horrible and soul-destroying heresies.

Unappreciated in Germany, and, moreover, poor, Servetus came across into France and practiced as a physician, partly at Lyons and partly at Vienne, keeping up for sixteen years a friendly correspondence with Calvin, sending him a tract now and then to ask what he thought of it,—a frankness which the "inexorable logician" repaid by bringing out at the trial private letters and papers which had come to him in this confidential way.

He became very successful in his practice, but could not keep his hand out of theology; and publishing, in 1553, at Vienne, his "Restitutio Christianismi," he was clapped into prison, and would assuredly have been burnt had he not managed to escape. As it was, he was burnt in effigy along with five bales of his books. Naturally he turned to Italy, where he had already many mind-children; but the high road to Italy was through Geneva, and as soon as he arrived there Calvin denounced him to the magistrates and had him taken up as a dangerous heretic.

There is some doubt whether Servetus asked and Calvin refused a "safe conduct." This he would hardly have thought necessary from the old correspondent who had so long been affectionately trying to convert him. It is too true that Calvin wrote to Farel (Grotus saw the letter)—"I hear he's coming. If I have any power, I shan't suffer him to escape unscathed" (there is a doubt whether it is salvus or vivus; it comes to much the same thing). The trial was a solemn farce. Calvin had determined not to let his adversary get off. Some of the charges were simply ridiculous. Servetus, long before, had published an edition of Ptolemy's Geography, in which he had said, "Judea is not the miracle of beauty and fertility which it has been described. Travelers tell us it is poor, and barren, and unpleasant." This, said the accusers, convicts the man of blasphemy; he goes out of his way to make out that Moses is a liar. Amadeus Gorrius alone, of the whole Genevese Council, pleaded for a fairer trial,—for bringing the accused before the Assembly of Two Hundred. The Geneva magistrates sent round for advice to the magistrates of all the other Protestant cantons; but all agreed that the heretic ought to die, and he was burned at a slow fire on October 17th, 1553, fulfilling more literally than he expected his own prophecy, "Good God, what tragedies these questions, Whether the Word and the Spirit are persons or substances, will cause by-and-by!"

Servetus' religious views were not openly advocated in Italy. There reformers could not expect the immunity which he at Basel had thought was his right among protesting Switzers and Germans. But in Italy, at that time the home of science, his scientific theologies had taken deep root; the Restitutio had been in MS. since 1540, and had doubtless been shown to many Italian sympathizers. A thousand copies, too, had been struck off in 1553; and, though many were burnt at Vienna and Frankfort, and one MS. copy was put on the pile on which he suffered at Geneva, many must have escaped. These were studied to some purpose; and, two years later, Vesalius, in a new edition of his own book, quietly inserted one of Servetus' great discoveries—that the septum of the heart (membrane between the ventricles, through which every one since Galen had said the blood flowed) is really imperforate. Vesalius uses the very words of Servetus, but he takes care not to name him; it would have been a mortal sin to say that he was beholden for the discovery to a condemned heretic.

Before long, in 1559, Realdo Colombo described pulmonary respiration so exactly that, by and by, when Primrose fell foul of Harvey, he accused him of bringing forward without new proof the opinions of Colombo. But Colombo, like Vesalius, uses the very words of Servetus, though he adds, "No one has hitherto described this, or even hinted at it." The fear of the Inquisition made him disloyal to him whose opinions he had not scrupled to appropriate.

This is the limit of Servetus' discoveries; that the septum is imperforate, and that the blood passes from one ventricle to the other by way of the lungs, thereby getting changed in color from black to red. From this is the complete circulation; there seems only one step; but that step took a long time.

All the Year Round.

More men grow old from having nothing to do, than from overwork. The running machine will keep bright for years—the idle machine will soon rust out.

If you desire to be miserable look within. If you wish to be distracted look around you. If you desire to be happy look to Christ.

Letter from W. Watson.

President Joseph Smith; Dear Sir:—In the 15th of April Herald last, there appears a small paragraph, headed "A Good Word for J. J. Strang," by Col. DeLong of the Saginaw Herald; wherein it is said "as a legislator he was vigilant, careful and just, and some of the best laws of those days were made by his pen and influence." This sounds to us very strange; in fact very much like a similar remark in favor of Joseph Smith would some ten or twenty years ago. So great is the prejudice of man against prophets, and so hard is it to be overcome. But then time does work the prophets of God into notice, and mostly when they can do the people little or no good. I believe it was Horace Greeley who once observed that all great truths had three stages to pass through before they come into general favor. (1) "It is contrary to the Bible;" (2) "It is contrary to the Constitution;" and (3) "Everybody knew it before." Temperance, anti-slavery, telegraphy, steam engines, and a hundred other things in this generation, which people now regard as blessings and benefactions, have all had pretty much to pass through such opposition and prejudice. Among these the claim of being prophets of God, must of necessity meet this nearly universal opposition, and unpopularity.

"O, you would do first-rate in your preaching, if you would only leave Joe Smith and the Book of Mormon out of the question; that's what kills your preaching." Among many others, I have had this thrown in my teeth more than once; so ignorant are most people, they do not know that when we preach, well—better a great deal than their highly learned professors—we are doing it through the inspiration brought to light by the very man they condemn as the meanest of impostors. In the midst of all this, it is no great wonder that Mr. James J. Strang should be covered for a time in the oblivion of modern prejudice. But as your father had many high encomiums bestowed upon him, by now and then one of the great men of the earth, so it was with Mr. Strang. We could give more instances of this than you would like to print in the Herald, in a single issue; but you will, we hope, be kind enough to insert a few.

"Mr. Strang is confessedly the most talented and ready debater in the House. He seems equally ready on any subject, political, financial, judicial, educational, or any thing else within the range of legislation. He is clear and forcible in argument, and never fails to make himself understood."—Temperance Advocate, Feb. 10th, 1853.

"We went into the House to hear the arguments upon the contested seats from Newaygo county. 'King Strang' pleaded his right in a masterly and convincing manner. He is a talented man, equal to any other man in debate and general information."—Jackson Citizen, Feb. 10th, 1853.

"Mr. Strang's course, as a member of the present legislature, has disarmed much of the prejudice which had previously surrounded him. Whatever may be said or thought of the peculiar sect of which he is the local head, throughout this session he has conducted himself with a degree of decorum and propriety which have been equalled by his industry, sagacity, good temper, apparent regard for the true interests of the people, and the obligations of his official oath."—Detroit Advertiser, Feb. 10th, 1853.

"There is no one of the advocates of a general law able to measure swords with Strang in debate, and they all know it, so they fight him indoors and out, by low insinuations about 'Beaver Island.'

Such a mode of dealing with one who ever treats every member like a gentleman, without intruding upon them or the House his peculiar religious views, is not exactly 'on the square'; but he is able, and will take care of himself."—Detroit Advertiser, Feb. 5th, 1853.

"The case of James Barton contesting the seat of the Hon. James J. Strang, is yet undecided. Mr. Strang presents and argues his case in person, with a force of reasoning, energy, and eloquence, which, whatever may be the result, will leave a most favorable opinion of his personal qualifications for the position he claims."—Michigan State Journal, Jan. 10th, 1853.

"The Mormon prophet, Strang, more familiarly known as King Strang, was yesterday arrested on a bench warrant. Strang claimed his privilege as a member, and sustained his position in an able speech. His arrest he attributed to malice, and the position was sustained by strong proof. The House discharged him from arrest, in spite of a strong and powerful prejudice against him. Today, Messrs. Barton and Southerland, who are contesting the seats of Messrs. Strang and Hoyt, (the former of Emmet and the latter of Saginaw), made their argument before the committee on elections. The prophet was again on hand, and in a speech of much strength, shrewdness and tact, maintained his right to be enrolled among the Honorables of Michigan."—Pontiac Jacksonian, Jan. 11th, 1853.

Mr. Strang's Senatorial career has been an eloquent and an honorable one."—Detroit Free Press, Feb. 14th, 1853.

These are a few of the notices of the press during the time of Mr. Strang's membership of the Legislature of Michigan. Many more could have been added in relation to his character, eloquence, patience, self-denial, talents, perseverance and gentlemanly decorum, &c., both before and afterward, that can not be now written.

Without any doubt some of the best laws now on the statute book of this State have been made at his suggestion, and through his influence. Much of the prosperity and progress of this Grand Traverse region, both of the white people and the Indians of the present time, is due to his labors, energy and foresight, while a member of the Legislature. The very roads which he proposed to have made by the State to open up this country to settlement, which were then opposed, sneeringly, as a "Mormon measure," had long after in the necessity of things, to be built as he proposed. There was hardly any of the territory of this State north of Big Rapids then organized; but at that time it all, I believe, became organized; and it is doubtful but for that Winter's labor of Mr. Strang, that the present time would have been much of an improvement upon the past; when only here and there along the shores of the mainland, and the islands, a low doggerly and trading post could be seen, where the Indians were most shamelessly robbed, and their wives and daughters corrupted and debauched.

As the New York Sun said some years ago, we might go on and show that Mormonism has been at the bottom of many remarkable events in these modern times. From what we learn from some historians, the Mormons were at the bottom of the discovery of gold in California, the building of the Pacific Railroad, and the opening up of all the great western territories. We may say that the development or introduction of modern Spiritualism was a natural result of Mormonism. As we are required to write and speak with great care, we can not of course say how much the Mexican war, the United States civil war, the giving of free homes to actual settlers, was due to Mormon teachings directly and indirectly; but my own private opinion is that the writings of both Joseph and James had no little to do with these things. I never remember to have either heard or read a single idea that the destruction or preservation of timber on the hills and mountains had anything to do with the drying up of springs and streams of water, till I read it in the Book of the Law of the Lord, brought forth by Mr. Strang from the plates of Laban, as claimed by him. "What in the world," thought I, "can the timber have to do with the water one way or the other, either in preserving or drying up springs?" But I have had patience, and now I find that great statesmen and philosophers, in their annual addresses and investigations, give overwhelming proof that the destruction or preservation of timber on mountains and hillsides do greatly affect the volume of spring or running waters; that many springs dry up soon after the destruction of timber, and burst out new where it is for the first time planted, &c. Some few men perhaps might have known or observed that certain waters lessened in volume at the destruction of the timber; but it is my very sober opinion that this knowledge was limited to a very few. At any rate, Mr. Strang has given it as God's law, and its truth or falsity involves the claims of Mr. Strang like all the rest of his revelations and translations,—under the rule "false in one thing, false in all."

Let me say here, that I know of no limits which God has set to the revealing of useful knowledge. There are a thousand things which are as necessary in our secular affairs in their proper time and places as any other thing is in its time and place. I wouldn't give much for a religion that is merely concerned with the hereafter; would you? If a whole population in the course of a few months or years can destroy its own supply of water, an article so necessary to life, and all its enjoyments; and if in a dry and barren waste, a population can on natural principles make springs burst out in the desert, I certainly see no impropriety in the Almighty revealing so grand and glorious a truth. Can you? In the Church of England, in which I was brought up, I have on certain occasions heard read in most solemn tones, the creed of St. Athanasius, and its most solemn denunciations against all who would not most firmly believe in it. I felt sure that if I died then, that I should roast and boil and bake to all generations, for I felt that I could not believe that creed! How Jesus Christ could at once have been his own father, begotten and unbegotten, and had bestowed himself before all world's were made, I confess was a little too much for my poor cranium either to comprehend or believe, and for years I felt sad and broken in spirit on account,—not of the folly of the creed, but of my inability to believe it. Who Mr. St. Athanasius is or was, is to me now a matter of no consequence. I presume, however, that he was an old bachelor of the Romish Church, who used to pour the wine of the sacrament down his own pious throat, while he required the congregation to look on in the belief that he drank it all for their especial benefit.

In the chapter in the Book of the Law upon

"The True God," written, as it is claimed by Mr. Strang, by inspiration, the relationship between the Lord Jesus and the Almighty is very clearly stated, and is the only just solution of the long and vexed question between Trinitarians and Unitarians that we know of. And so of many other questions. Mr. Strang's revelations are not at all at war with either the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, nor with the well known principles of nature or philosophy. Let those who doubt try, and either publicly or otherwise give us the result of their investigations.

In the month of March last, Harper's Magazine had an article of some six pages of that journal devoted to an account in brief of Mr. Strang's life and prophetic career. In the same article your father is represented in his former life as "an obscure and illiterate man; born in poverty, nurtured in vice, and profligate in life." Divested of the natural bias which swings nearly all unbelievers in our faith to the dark side, and attributes every act to the worst motive, the article so far as Mr. Strang is concerned, would really be unobjectionable. As it is, it is as well as we could expect. A fac simile of the plates exhumed at Voree, Wisconsin, and a very poor wood cut of Mr. Strang's portrait, accompanies the article.

Sincerely and respectfully,

WINGFIELD WATSON.

P.S. I hope no one will suppose that I regard Spiritualism as one of the good things that has arisen or grown out of the coming forth of Mormonism. I regard it as good only in that it is sent forth to make the bands of those strong who have rejected the present dispensation. It is a strong delusion, as well as a witness that God has given a dispensation.

The Aymara Tongue.

A GREAT PHILOLOGICAL DISCOVERY.

RUDOLPH FALB, a German Professor, recently arrived in San Francisco, after spending two years in South America, and now on his way back to his native country, authorizes us to announce that he has made discoveries of great interest to ethnology and philology. While in Bolivia he studied the Aymara tongue, which was in use before the Spanish Conquest, and is older than the Quichua, which was spoken by the Incas and their subjects in Peru. This Aymara language, still spoken by 8,000,000 people of the aboriginal blood, bears an unmistakable and near affinity to the Semitic tongue, in which the radical form of every verb has three consonants. The Arabic and the Hebrew are the leading languages in this class, and the relationship of the Aymara to them is strong and unquestionable throughout.

If this discovery should prove to be well founded, it will have an immense influence on the opinions of the learned world. Some of the most interesting researches of the present century have been made in the same direction. The discoveries that the Sanscrit, Hindostanee, Persian, Afghan, Armenian, Caucasian, Slavonic, Teutonic, Celtic, Latin, and Greek tongues all belong to the inflected class of languages; that many of their principal words, such as father, mother, brother, daughter, horse, ox, fire, sun, sky, light, dark, come, go, see, hear, eye, ear, hand, mouth, and so on, have similar sounds in these different tongues; and that ideas of later origin, connected with a high degree of civilization, such as pen, ink, paper, gun, pistol, and so on, are different—these discoveries have proved that the Aryan nations, as they are called, all sprang from a common stock in Central Asia, whence most of them migrated to Europe. By examining the Sanscrit, the oldest of these tongues, and comparing it with the others, we can tell much of the intellectual, industrial, political, and social condition of the early progenitors of these people, which races first left the common stock, and how much progress was made before the separation. The word for daughter—differing little from the English and German words—in the Sanscrit means milkmaid, and therefore, while the ancestors of the Germans were still living with the ancestors of the Hindoos, in Asia, they had cows. By the same method of reasoning we know that they had plows; that they had religious ideas and forms of worship; that they had political rulers, military training, and so on. We know, further, that the people who speak the agglutinative languages, like Magyars, Turks, and Tartars, and the monosyllabic languages, like the Chinese, are of a different blood. Ethnologically, the Semitic races—the Phœnicians, Hebrews, and Arabs—are clearly distinct from the agglutinative stock, but whether they are to be classed as belonging to the same blood with the Aryans is a question about which philologists and ethnologists are not agreed.

If now the Aymara is a Semitic tongue, the learned world will have a hard task to determine whether Asia or South America was its original seat, and how the transfer was made without leaving any large mass of its active and imperious blood on the long road. Was the high plateau of South America the cradle of the Semitic, as that of Asia was the original home of the Aryan kindred? If we understand Prof. Falb correctly, he would answer that question in the affirmative; and, if he establishes his point, we do not hesitate to say that he will take a place among the greatest discoverers and stimulators of thought and research in our age of unparalleled and unapproached intellectual activity. There may be no money in it, but there is an immense educating and refining influence in tracing back the history of man through the different steps of his natural progress from the lowest condition of savagism in the Stone Age, before he had yet learned to make metallic tools, to his present enlightenment.

Four miles south of Lake Titicaca, 13,000 feet about the sea, in Bolivia, is the ruin of Aymara temple, with a large stone covered with carved hieroglyphs or figures. These hieroglyphs Prof. Falb claims to have interpreted, and he finds in them the proof that this temple was erected as a memorial of a great flood. One of its principal figures contains Masonic signs, which mean the light, the thought, the word, the beginning; and the signification and history of these signs, after having been lost for thousands of years, are now again to be brought within the general comprehension. Figures, used as religious symbols in very remote days, were preserved long after some of their meanings were forgotten. The philological world will look with interest for Prof. Falb's revelations.

Christ Descended from David.

WHEN Gabriel announced to Mary the birth of a son he declared that “the Lord shall give unto him the throne of his father David.” Of the Davidic descent of Joseph, the reputed father of Jesus, there has never been any doubt or dispute. But as Jesus did not spring from him according to the flesh, it becomes a legitimate matter of inquiry how Jesus was the son and heir of David. Was it simply by legal inheritance or by actual descent?

The writers of the Christian Church until the time of the Reformation treated the tribal and Davidic descent of Mary as a matter of very little importance. They view the claims of Jesus from a Jewish legal stand-point, and as Joseph had an undisputed title to the heirship of David, and as Jesus stood in his stead as his putative son, that made him the legal heir of all the covenants of promise. Africanus of Emmaus in Palestine wrote upon this subject in the early part of the third century, and chrystalized the faith of the Church. He contended that the Scriptures were silent upon the matter of Mary's parentage and tribe, but by two genealogies they proved beyond cavil the legal heirship of Jesus through Joseph, and that that was enough; that Matthew gave the actual or blood relationship of Joseph to David, and that Luke gave another, a merely legal relation, in which a nephew or a grandson or a son-in-law may have inherited the rights of an extinct branch, thus making Joseph the actual son of Jacob and the legal son of his uncle Heli. This was the prevailing belief, not only of the early Church, but has been strongly advocated in our day by Fairbairn, Da Costa, Alford, Barnes and many others.

Why there should be two genealogies of Joseph, one actual and both legal, and yet no actual one of Jesus, is a mystery which these writers do not clear up. We would take a higher ground, and claim very much more than a mere legal relationship of the man Jesus with David and Abraham. God through his prophet Nathan, promised David, "I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels." Peter in his pentecostal sermon declared "that of the fruit of his [David's] loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." Paul says, "Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh." Again, "Remember Jesus Christ of the seed of David," &c. Such language unquestionably calls for Davidic blood as well as Davidic rights and honors, and if so, we must look for it through the ancestry of his mother, Mary. If she was of the tribe of Levi, because Elizabeth was her cousin, then the blood of Judah and of David ran not in the veins of Jesus of Nazareth.

The fact and the necessity of two genealogies of Jesus can be easily explained. As the putative and legal son of Joseph, it was necessary to give Joseph's genealogy as evidence of his legal rights, while as the son of Mary and without any earthly father it was equally necessary to record her lineage so as to show his Davidic blood. Matthew has done the first and Luke has done the second. Matthew was a Jew and wrote especially for the Jews, and possibly in their language, and viewed everything from their standpoint. His object was to prove that Jesus of Nazareth was the Messiah promised to their nation, and for this purpose refers them to the predictions of their prophets, and produces his genealogy and shows that it satisfies the Jewish law in every respect which traced legal rights through the paternal ancestry. He shows that by the male line Jesus was the legal son and heir of Abraham and David through the royal branch of Solomon.

On the other hand, Luke was a Gentile by birth and early education, and wrote particularly for the Gentile world, and was never careful to view things in a Jewish light. He gives Christ's miraculous conception and birth and his baptism, and then proceeds to give his genealogy in the only way in which it could really be given—through his mother; for it was through her that he was made man, and it is through her that Luke traces his true ancestry up to Adam. That Mary's name is not given is no objection; for women's names are not preserved in such tables, and Joseph's true relation to Mary and to Jesus had been narrated, so that there could be no misunderstanding by giving Mary's male representative. If Heli was Mary's father and Christ's grandfather, then Joseph was his son-in-law, and such relationship was frequently and familiarly designated by son and daughter. Saul repeatedly called his son-in-law David "My son," and Ruth called her daughters-in-law "My daughters."

The two genealogies of Christ are in harmony with the scope of the gospels in which they are contained. Matthew presents Jesus as the heir of David, because the legal son of Joseph; Luke presents him as the seed of David according to the flesh, because he is the son of Mary. Matthew begins with Abraham the father of God's covenant people, and descends through David the king to Christ the royal heir, in whom all the national covenants are fulfilled. Luke begins with the second Adam, the only begotten Son of God, and ascends to the first Adam, the son of God by creation. Each gives the view that best suits his purpose; the one shows him to be the Messiah of the Jews, the other that he is the Savior of the world.

POLYGAMISTS AROUSED.

THE following is a leader from the Deseret Evening News, Utah, for May 13th, 1882, and prefaces the Chicago Tribune's version of the speech made by the Editor of the HERALD, February 23d, last:

JOSEPH SMITH, OF PLANO, AS AN ANTI MORMON.

AT one of the anti-"Mormon" meetings held in Chicago during the excitement that preceded the final passage of the Edmunds bill, Joseph Smith, son of Joseph the Prophet, addressed the audience. We present herewith a report of his speech as it appeared in the Chicago Tribune of February 23d, as we think that it should be placed on record, and that the Latter Day Saints should be made acquainted with the fact that the leader of the so-called "Reorganization" is allied with the enemies of his father, and of the Church which was organized by that martyr for the truth, and that he is in league with those who counsel violence as the proper means of settling the "Mormon" question. He would have force applied where argument fails; and although possessed of positive information, proving beyond the possibility of a doubt that his lamented father introduced and practised the system of plural marriage now held by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, he still, in the spirit of a lawyer and against the spirit of a gospel teacher, technically disputes and virtually denies his father's connection with that principle and attempts to attribute its origin to Brigham Young.

The most atrocious thing in the speech is the vile and filthy falsehood about the contamination of women by "Mormon" Bishops. It is a lie the blackness of which can not be painted. No one but a depraved and corrupt being, whose conscience is seared as with an iron heated in the infernal pit, could utter such calumny. It is hard to believe that one who knows something of the sanctity which attaches to the relations of the sexes in this Church, could descend so low in the scale of mendacity as to utter such a gross and uncalled for libel upon "Mormon" men and women.

Thus this man not only seeks to deceive the public upon an important point, and, as will be seen from his address, attempts to misinterpret the teachings of the Book of Mormon on this subject, but he descends to the level of the liar and defamer, and joins in an endeavor to bring trouble if not destruction upon the people who live but to carry out the revelations of God received through his father as the mouthpiece of heaven.

He was introduced as "Bishop Smith" by Hon. John Wentworth—a nice specimen of Chicago morality—as "a man who has suffered more in the cause to be discussed than any other man on the face of the earth." It would have greatly puzzled Wentworth or any other man to show wherein "Bishop Smith" had suffered anything whatever in that cause. Here is the report of the speech: (Here followed the speech.)

Some of the statements made by the Editor in the speech, complained of by the News, are not given in the Tribune's report as they were uttered. This is the case with the one referring to the "contamination of women by Mormon Bishops." The statement as made by the Editor was this; that while in Salt Lake City, in 1876, he became acquainted with an unmarried man, then thirty-nine years old, whose youth and early manhood had been spent in Utah. The Editor asked him the question why he had not married, and he gave in reply substantially, that he did not know where to go in the territory, to get a wife; that it was not easy to find young marriageable women who were not already married into polygamous families, or were bespoken for some Bishop. This man further stated that he was not alone in being unmarried for the same cause, the contamination of polygamy. We believe the statement made by him was true; but the Tribune's report gives the Editor as the author of the saying. If the condition of things has amended since 1876; or if the circle in which the Editor of the News moves is free from evidences for making such a statement, we are certainly glad of it. But how can he speak for other circles in which he does not move.

The legitimate result of the teaching of plural marriage is practically, in the language of the man of Proverbs, a little changed: "Get understanding, my son; but with all your getting, get wives, my son, get wives, for thus shall you be exalted in the kingdom." Exaltation being made to depend upon the married state, it is to be expected that all faithful devotees should strive diligently to enter in to that state. This would put the sexes at a disparity in numbers, and the more men there were plurally married the more men would be unmarried. It is a foregone conclusion, and the News can not escape it, that the Bishops would be the first to care for themselves.

One thing the News omits, whether it was in the Tribune's report from which the editorial was reprinted or not, and that is, the statement made by H. B. Clawson, son-in-law to Pres.

B. Young, that polygamy was not known among the Mormons when they were driven out of Illinois; and not till some time after they arrived in Utah; also the one made by Pres. Young to Hon. Schuyler Colfax, that polygamy was not practiced by them until after they settled in Utah.

Besides this, the News makes a typographical blunder, either purposely, or without design, in putting the publication of the tenets of Mormonism by Hon. John Wentworth in 1854; it was in 1844, before the death of Joseph Smith, the Martyr, otherwise there would have been no point to the argument.

Joseph Smith, the Editor of the SAINTS' HERALD did go to Chicago, at the invitation of a committee of citizens, of that city, of whom E. F. Cragin was secretary; and did in Farwell Hall, address an Anti-Mormon meeting so called. At the close of that address, the position assumed by the speaker is as clearly defined as words can make it, and is as follows:

"I am not in favor of persecution, but there is a great difference between persecution and honest demand for honest obedience to law, and it is that demand that all good people want to see made and enforced in polygamous Utah. Congress has the right to do this, and the people should insist on the exercise of that right."

It is not a new position; but is the same that we have constantly been presenting for over twenty years; and we are glad, very glad that at last it has dawned upon the Deseret News, editors and readers, that there is mischief for their pet doctrine in that position.

In plain language, the Utah Latter Day Saints, Brigham Young, John Taylor, George A. Smith, Heber C. Kimball, George Q. Cannon, and others at the lead, have made Joseph Smith, Jr., (the founder under God, of the Church of Jesus Christ, these last days), to be the author of one of the most damnable doctrines and practices that has ever cursed its believers since the days of Nicholas; one distinctly and in terms denounced by the Book of Mormon, which contains the Gospel of Christ, and forbidden in the Church Articles and Covenants; and because they have done this, and sought to fasten it upon Joseph Smith's legitimate sons, as one of his measures, for the redemption of man, those sons taking the words acknowledged as the gift of God to the church founded by the instrumentality of their father as the basis and ground work of their faith, openly deny such alleged origin and authority for the abominable heresy, and with hundreds of others, believers in the original faith, and children of them who suffered for its establishment, challenge these men to answer for corrupting the Church of God. And what is their defense. Why, "Joseph Smith, of Plano, is an Anti-Mormon." That he is "allied with the enemies of his father;" and "in league with those who counsel violence." "He would have force applied where argument fails." This is the argumentative defense offered by the News. Is the News informed as to the time and place where argument between the Reorganization and the Utah Church, upon the doctrine of Polygamy or Plural Marriage has failed. Will the Editor please to state, if he knows, when and where the champions of the two organizations have held joint discussion upon the subject at issue, in which discussion argument failed. The fact is, the Utah elders, except here and there an isolated case, have all declined, from Orson Pratt and John Taylor, clear down, to meet the leading Elders sent to Utah to invite the attention of the people to the issue raised. These men who now raise this cry of "persecution," "persecution," because we demand the just enforcement of law, in Utah as elsewhere in the United States, persist in saying that we seek to "bring trouble, if not destruction upon the people who live but to carry out the revelations of God received through" Joseph the Martyr; when they have the printed refutation of such charge on record in the very speech, which to them has proven so offensive. If the "enforcement of law in Utah as elsewhere in the United States," is the persecution referred to, we must plead guilty; but in no other sense have the Elders of the Reorganized Church sought to bring persecution or trouble upon Utah.

How happened it that it took Brigham Young eight years and two months to discover the alleged revelation? How happened it that it was not until August 29th, 1852, that the alleged revelation on plural marriage, said to be from God to Joseph Smith was presented to the Church? How happened it that then it was not presented to the First Presidency; then to the Twelve; then to the Seventy, in solemn conclave assembled to consider it? How happened it, that when it was presented, it was at a Special Conference, held at an unusual time of the year; instead of at a General Annual or Semi-Annual session, on the legendary days of April 6th, or October 6th? How happened it that when presented, President B. Young accounts for its possession in such a dogmatic and suspicious way? How happened it that Elder Orson Pratt distinctly affirmed that he presented the doctrine for the first time? How happened it that then, the people who were to be affected for good or evil by the change in the Church polity, were not permitted to examine the document claimed to be a revelation from God to them, and declare for or against it, as they might have been moved to do? How happened it that John Taylor denied the existence and teaching of the doctrine in France in 1850, as stated by O. Pratt in his works? How happened it that in Denmark, Wales, Scotland, and in many parts of England the existence of the doctrine and its practice in Utah were denied? How happened it that Pres B. Young admitted to Schuyler Colfax in 1865, that polygamy was not introduced till after the removal to Utah? How happened it that Hiram B. Clawson, son-in-law to President B. Young, stated in Chicago in February, 1882, that it could not have been for polygamy that the Mormons were driven out of Illinois? For it "was not known among them then;" and in fact not "till some time after their arrival in Utah?" All these questions and many more would need to be answered in an examination of the matter of plural marriage as having been properly a measure introduced by Joseph Smith.

The statement as given in the Tribune's report, and which the News denounces as an "atrocious lie," was not made as stated. The Times and Herald each published a report, and neither of them got the remark in the form given by the Tribune. As given, it is a harsh remark, of which we do not object to the News finding fault. The remarks as made by us were made upon the authority of a man whose name we can give, when necessary, and to whom we referred when making the statement in the speech quoted from.

Joseph Smith, as an invited speaker at the Farwell Hall meeting, February 22d, 1882, was not responsible for the statements of Bishop Fallows, who succeeded him as a speaker; nor for the introductory remarks of Hon. John Wentworth, who introduced him to the audience. He was there to discuss his side of the question at issue before Congress and the American people. He was there to defend the memories of a father and his compeers in refounding the religion of Jesus Christ, against calumny and opprobrium resting upon them; because of a gross departure from the original faith, that departure sanctioned by an alleged revelation, which he believed then and believes now was not given of God, nor to his father. He was there in the interest of the truth as he and many hundreds of believers in the doctrines of Joseph Smith as taught from 1830 to 1844; and to set before the people of Chicago there gathered to hear, what he believed then and what he believes now to be necessary to the well being of society and the good of those called Latter Day Saints. He knew then, as he knows now and knew twenty years ago, that the issue would be made and the principle of plural marriage, polygamy, be left to stand naked and deformed, shorn of its fictitious supports, to the gaze of an aroused people.

THE fact that in some of the votes taken at the late Conference some of the delegates and members were of one opinion, and voted yes; and some were of another opinion, and voted no; there are some who were and some who were not there to see, (mostly the last), who ask, "Do you call that unity, peace and love? We call it contention and strife."

We have often alluded to similar expressions; but it would seem that the idea we desired to convey was, either not clearly stated by us, or was not understood.

Is it anything astonishing that four hundred people should gather together from different parts of the country, many of whom have never seen each other, though all have the same faith in common; and that upon subjects more or less important to them and the whole body which they essay to represent, a difference of opinion should exist; and that when such subjects are being discussed these men should speak out manfully what their opinions are; and when the vote is asked for that they should as fearlessly vote yea, or nay, as their opinion might be? And if they do this, is there anything in the acts of thinking, speaking and voting themselves that exhibits hate, malice, envy, contention, or strife? Is it not entirely possible for men to think, speak and vote oppositely to each other upon questions of policy, doctrine and government, and still love each other? Is there any evidence in a vote so taken that in itself indicates that any one of the voters holding different opinions, and so speaking and so voting, has "got the spirit of the devil in him;" or that he is "lacking the Spirit of Christ?"

Let us see; one of the writers lately writing to us on this subject of want of unity in the Conference, very plainly states that some things which he sees in the HERALD; and some things he knows we personally hold and state, he believes to be erroneous—that is—he has opinions quite to the contrary. Now, who is it that has a contentious spirit, and who is in strife; the writers of the things he sees, and the editor of the HERALD, who hold and state the things he sees, or he who sees them, believes them to be errors and so writes to us contradicting them? Which of these parties has the spirit of the adversary? Which has the spirit of strife and contention? We are sure that if we said that he had, he would at once have and express the opinion that he had not; and we are equally sure that if he said that we had, we should at once hold and express the contrary opinion. Would it not be doing him a wrong and an injustice to say that he is contentious because he expresses his opinions fairly, and it is not in harmony with ours? We certainly think so, for we believe that he has the cause in which we are engaged as much at heart as we can do; and has made grave sacrifices for it; and would again. Hence, the expression of differing opinions between us does not disturb the harmony of regard—Christian love, if it please the reader—that exists between us for each other. Nor does it lessen our respect and esteem for him, the fact that he holds opinions opposite to ours; and if we suffer in his regard because we do not see as he does on the things upon which we differ, we are sorry but can not help it.

It is said that in the Martyr's day this was not so; that there were no dissenting votes; that there was greater unanimity of opinion, &c. If this is true, how shall we account for the division among the brethren at Kirtland, in which many were estranged and were not finally reconciled to those who remained? How shall we account for the difference of opinion openly expressed, frequently, during the Missouri and Illinois sojournings, among those too, who remained steadfast to the faith? How shall we account for the instruction given by the Martyr Joseph, at a special Conference held at Nauvoo, in which he stated that in considering matters before the several quorums, the majority of the votes cast should be taken as the decision? This fact of a majority carries the idea of a minority vote possibly existing in those quorums, and being expressed,—provision was made for it. How shall we account for the further fact that in the appointment of the High Council, and the making of the rules by which they were to be governed in, the consideration of matters brought before them for examination and decision, it should have been provided that the councillors should be equally divided, six for, six against; and each half was expected to speak on the side upon which his lot fell; and there is no reason to believe that there was ever a council of the kind held in the Church, that such division was accounted as strife or contention; or that it was to be so sadly deplored as marks of unchristian feeling and conduct.

It is very curious that men can deplore differences of opinion and the expression of such difference, and yet be the first to dissent from the expressed opinions of others. Very curious indeed that such men and brethren should charge this difference as evidence of want of unity in love and good fellowship. To us, one of the most comprehensible evidences of good-fellowship that any people can show, is the ability to abide in co-labor, conscious of each others opinions and tolerant of them. If it was Godlike for Christ to endure patiently the "contradiction of sinners against himself, it is Christ-like, at least for friends to bear the contradiction of friends in their own house.

THE Ogden, Utah, Daily Pilot, publishes in its issue for April 26th, a characteristic letter from Bro. Emanuel Penrod, of Elko, Nevada. In the preface to the letter by the Editor, E. A. Littlefield, he states of Bro. Penrod:

"He now belongs to the sect known as Josephites, and if all "Mormons" were like him, there would be no necessity for an Edmunds Bill or any other Congressional action, aside from the ordinary course of legislation."

In the letter itself, occurs this excellent sentence:

"I hope in the interest of religion, humanity and decency, that the foul blot will soon be wiped out—not that I would see the people exterminated or the fundamental principles of true Mormonism, for they are eternal—but evil in every shape should be removed, and it is none the less deserving of condemnation because it seeks to hide its hideousness behind the cloak of religion."

DR. HIRAM W. THOMAS was, no doubt, unconscious and undesigning in the fair and frank statement that he made respecting Mormonism, its origin, and the Reorganization, in his discourse in the People's Church, Chicago, last February, and did not perhaps realize how far the echo of his words would reach, nor to what regions they would be borne in the interest of the truth. But had he taken thought respecting it, and surmised where his language would be quoted, and by whom retold, we trust in the integrity of his convictions and his manhood, he would still have said what he did. His statements were born of honest conviction; and having felt the sting of calumny, tasted the bitterness of clerical and religious partisanship, and known the intolerance of bigotry, he was prepared to do others, suffering from the attacks of falsehood and ostracism, the justice he could not have rendered them had he not suffered also. He certainly did what the great army of pulpitiereers have not the courage to do, to speak in defense of those whom their compeers regard as heretics and proper subjects for dislike. Not one in hundreds, possibly thousands, would care to face the frowns of co-workers in the Salvation Army, in defending so unpopular a phase of the religions of men, as that known as Mormonism, however much satisfied that such defense might be made in truth. But Dr. Thomas had dared the issue once and drawn the fire of the popular religious pulpit; and hence, could not, in any event, so far as the clerical forces of the, so called, Evangelical churches were concerned, suffer more than he had done. There was not in the Pandora's box of the ruling churches, another ill that could be poured out upon his ministerial head—he had been deposed, and a mark set upon him, that branded him as a heretic, the clerical Cain's brand by which all orthodox Christians were to know and shun him. He therefore could afford, and can now ever rejoice to stand in frank and fearless defense of whatever he may find as truth, coming to him in any guise; and our sincere hope for him is, that whenever his researches, or thought bring him conviction as to any of God's truths he will give them to the people.

A brother Samuel Browne, at Carlingford, Ontario, sent us the Mitchell Recorder, published at Mitchell, Ontario, for April 14th, containing an extract from Dr. Thomas' sermon referred to by us, including all that part appertaining to Mormonism. The Editor of the Recorder states that the object for inserting the extract is to set the people right on the subject of the faith held by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, and of original Mormonism. He closes with this significant statement:

"With the remainder of Dr. Thomas' sermon we have nothing to do in this connection. Neither have we at present anything to do with the truth, or falsehood of Mormonism, whether as taught by Joseph Smith, its founder, or corrupted by Brigham Young. Our only object is to correct a popular error which confounds all Mormons with the followers of Brigham Young, and represents them all, as polygamists in faith and practice. It can do no harm to let the truth be known even in regard to Mormonism. Our purpose in this behalf is fully accomplished by reprinting Dr. Thomas' statement, which we believe to be true in all respects."

THERE is a great deal of rhyme, on a variety of topics finds its way into every printing office in the land, ours not excepted. Much of this rhyme, called poetry, is very crude, and when read grates harshly on the ear. Some of it is in memory of the departed ones, dear to the writers, and senders of the lines; but is scarcely ever read by the general reader of the Herald. It is a difficult, and sometimes a painful task to refuse to insert the lines sent in connection with some notice of death; painful, because the hearts of those who have written the lines, or who send them, are sore from the pain and grief of their recent loss; to them the death has been an important, sadly important event, and it would seem that it must be to every one else; but want of space, the sameness of the poetry; sometimes the length of it and sometimes the nature of it, compels the editor to refuse to print it.

Rhyme does not in itself make poetry. Poetry must not only be smooth, according to the measure employed, but it must have the elements of elegance, good language, and good sense. Poetry is only the art, or science, or faculty, of clothing ideas in beautiful language; of presenting thought in beautiful form; giving force, or grace in all their variety to the plain things man chooses to say.

We have doubtless offended some is discriminating in favor of some, or against other pieces; but unless that which is sent has original merit, we feel justified in excluding it, whatever the subject or design.

BRO. E. L. KELLEY wrote from Glenwood, Iowa, his home, May 9th:

"I leave this evening for Independence to do a little work there prior to discussion. After that is over, return home and then go directly East, stopping at Lamoni a day or two if nothing prevents. In examining closely Bro. Blair's work, "Joseph the Seer," I find there are many more good ideas and suggestions therein than I had before been aware of. It will do the Saints good to procure it and carefully read and devote time to the latter half. We are not all well, and have not been since my return, but better."

From the following, clipped from the Kansas City Journal of May 12th, it will be seen that Bro. Kelley was attending to the discussion named in conference minutes, resulting from a challenge by D. Eccles, of Kansas City:

The discussion on the Book of Mormon attracted a respectable audience at Armory Hall, Grand Avenue, last night, notwithstanding the threatened inclemency of the weather. Both debaters open their arguments with much confidence, and seen to have a vast reserve store. Our space forbids a synopsis at present, but at the termination of the debate we may present our readers with the heaviest points made on either side. To-night a hot time may be expected, as the last speeches raised issues of weighty import. Our citizens can find few entertainments equal to the refreshing excitement of this debate.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A BROTHER "in the field," (the ministerial field), writes: "I feel as if I was in the place where God wants me." We are of the same mind, and shall certainly pray that the watchcare of the Master may be over that brother wondrously for good to men.

Bro. Aaron Fenton wrote us from Reese, Michigan, concerning the Tares and the Wheat, of one of the Master's teaching. He thinks that the Lord is imparting much knowledge by revelation, concerning his word.

At last advices, Bro. Blair's sick folks were rapidly recovering, and he on the way to Utah. Address him care of Box 417, Salt Lake City, Utah. The times are ominous, and we should all pray that the right and the good may prevail.

In Bro. George S. Hyde's letter the following sentence occurs as published: "The fatherly advice and timely hints of Bro. Lambert have had a salutary effect upon our ministerial men;" the last word should be "mien;" as Bro. Hyde referred to himself, not to any of his co-workers.

We publish this issue a beautiful poem credited by Mr. Goodwin to H. W. Longfellow, deceased; but since putting in type we have seen it denied as the work of that author, and attributed to some other. Whoever wrote it, it is excellent.

Card from Bro. Blair, dated Omaha, May 16th, announced him en route for Salt Lake City and the mission.

Letter from Bro. John H. Lake, Louisville, Ontario, May 11th, states that Brn. E. H. Gurley and G. E. Deuel were at Zone, making arrangements for a united effort at Thamesville. Bro. Deuel had given good satisfaction at Chatham.

In correcting the proofs of the conference minutes, 137th page, second column, a mistake was made in the report of the Galland's Grove district, two or three lines being badly mixed up. It should read: "At our conference six months ago, we adopted the plan of dividing our district into sections, and assigning an Elder to each section, to oversee the work and make that part of the district his especial field, he to report to the president of the district from time to time his labors and the condition of his field." It was our fault, and we apologize for it.

The Greenville, Butler county, Alabama, Advocate, for May 11th, contains a splendid article from the pen of Bro. Joseph R. Lambert, written at Greenville. The caption is "Stamping Out Mormonism." The scope of the argument is in defense of the faith as first promulgated, and descriptive of the work of the Reorganization.

The town of Stewartville, DeKalb county, Missouri, in and near to which many of the Saints have of late years been settling, was on the morning of the 16th of May, destroyed by fire; that is to say, all the business portion of the place was burned, one business house only, escaping the flames—thirty-seven of them being reduced to ashes in a little over two hours. The loss is estimated at $140,000, one half being covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to be the result of an accident, and originating in a store owned by a Mr. Sheldon.

Bro. N. Stamm reports by card from Des Moines, Iowa, that they are having good meetings, and he is blessed with good liberty in preaching. He had baptized six quite lately, making eleven in six months.

Bro. Henry Palmer, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes that he is feeling well in spirit notwithstanding his afflictions.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. ALEXANDER H. SMITH, returned to his home at Independence, Mo., May 10th. In a recent letter, on family affairs, he incidentally writes:

"After I left Colchester, I visited Keokuk, held some meetings, baptized one, assisted B. F. Duffie in baptizing two others; also, visited Bevier conference of the North-East District of Missouri; confirmed one, baptized by Bro. George Hicklin. So the good work goes on. I got home Wednesday evening of the present week, having been away from home one day less than four weeks."

Bro. R. M. Elvin writing from Emerson, Iowa, May 15th, says:

Bro. Badham baptized five here on the 8th inst., and I one on the 14th. There is a deep interest manifested, and a full house every night: Farmers about done planting. Has been very cold, but is pleasant now.

BRO. McDOWELL is at Clinton, Iowa, and at work. The following is from the Daily Herald:
THE CHURCH OF CHRIST.

Editor Herald.—The Rev. J. Frank McDowell, of the above named church, has come to Clinton by special appointment of the late General Conference of said society. Mr. McDowell is here as a missionary, and will labor exclusively in the interest of pure christianity, as taught by Christ and his Apostles. The doctrine is strictly orthodox, the church purely evangelical.

Mr. McDowell claims, as a representative of the Church, that faith in God, Christ and the Holy Spirit, is essential to salvation, in connection with repentance, baptism by immersion for remission of sins, and the Spirit's guidance into all truth. He believes in the resurrection of the body, and eternal judgment.

Mr. McDowell is a graduate, a young man of good ability, and an earnest and eloquent speaker. He is to make an effort to procure a house of worship in this city for regular services. At present he would be pleased to have the audience of friends on Sundays at their hall in Dunbar block, at 10:30 a. m. and 7:45 p. m.

THE Frederick, Maryland, Times, of May 12th, contains the following:

Elder J. A. Stewart, of the Mormon Church, yesterday baptized Laura J. Crouse, Sallie Cook and Emma Boyer, of this city, and admitted them to membership in that Church. The baptizing was done in the mill race at Brunner's Mill."

Bro. Stewart is of Philadelphia, and has been laboring at Hornerstown, N. J., Frederick, Md., and other points adjacent to Philadelphia, for some years. He evidently believes in the scripture, "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand; thou knowest not which shall prosper, this or that."

Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips.

Correspondence.

KENTON, Tennessee,

May 1st, 1882.

Editor Herald.—With heartfelt gratitude to God for his mercies and blessings, I write. The work is onward here; many are inquiring, and our church publications are eagerly received. Bro. Rosson had quite a file of old Heralds, which I have distributed judiciously, I trust. The poet sang "O, for a thousand tongues to sing," &c. Sometimes I have thought, "O, for a thousand tracts descriptive of the glorious gospel of Christ." Some of the Saints do not realize how much good they might do by spending a part of their "pin money" for something to enlighten the minds of their neighbors. I have preached two successive Sundays to large and attentive congregations, who seemed eager to hear the truth at "Possum Pond" School-house. What gave rise to this symphonious appellation was the sorrowful circumstance of the martyrdom of one of these quadrupeds at that place. Poor Possum! And yet should we pity thee! Premature death hath enshrined thy memory in the hearts of the people, and thy name shall be perpetuated from generation to generation. Thy fate after all is only such as is common to all earth's creatures, with the distinction that some by heroic deeds and noble acts give perpetuity to their memory, while others do not. Life is a drama, death is a tragedy; and when the final reckoning day shall dawn, all will receive accordingly as they have done.

It is difficult, and nearly impossible, to hold protracted efforts in the country now, as all are so busy at work. I have several invitations to visit and explain, to which I will respond. At Yorkville, nine miles from here, I obtained the use of the Masonic Hall and announced appointment for Sunday next at three o'clock. As curiosity seem strife, I hope for a large concourse to gather to hear the "Mormon." There is no use of talking, Brother Joseph, we must sail under this ensign. I frequently tear it down and hoist the Latter Day Saint banner, but the people wont have it so, and so I meekly submit to be called a "Mormon."

Oh worldly fame, how sweet the name
To mortals here below;
But now, alas, it's come to pass
That I must stoop so low,
And bear the name that men defame,
The truth of God to show.

Well, I do not complain nor murmur. Mormonism proper makes us "children of God" and "joint heirs with Christ," to my certain knowledge and I intend that by the grace of the Lord, others shall become acquainted with this truth; and if strength may be given, never shall the cause that has redeemed me from sin and made my life happy and peaceful, be dishonored by my immoral actions. I hope to labor until the name "Mormon," or Latter Day Saints," as the people may choose, shall become as fair as the sun and clear as the moon. I find it necessary to say but little about Utah in preaching. When I am enabled to preach to the people a better, higher, purer, and more powerful gospel than ever saluted their ears before; prejudice vanishes like a vapor before the sun's brighter rays. Truth indited by the Spirit of God commands the respect of good and evil, and enlists the sympathies of the honest. Many years ago, near Yorkville, there were several families of Saints, the most of whom went to Nauvoo, and subsequently to Utah under Brigham, so I understand. Recently I took dinner with Mr. Joseph McCorkel and family, whom I found to be excellent people. His father once belonged to the Church, and named his son Joseph, after your father. He went to Nauvoo and bought a lot, but became dissatisfied with matters there, and came back and united with the Christian Church, to which he had formerly belonged. May Zion's glorious light, which once made glad the hearts of the obedient, but is now bowed and weeping beneath the sin and disgrace of apostasy, rekindle and turn with a brighter luster in the hearts of their posterity.

Believe me, brother Joseph, I am getting in earnest about this latter day work. I love it more and more as I discern its beauties and comprehend its moral worth. Never did I feel more encouraged and anxious to labor, than now. Timidity causes me to naturally shrink from public gaze; but onward is the watch-word, and I have learned that the Lord loves and will protect the brave soldier. Better to sacrifice self, than the truth that makes us free; so whether I be placed at the front or the rear of the battle, I intend to stand to my post. Accompanying the knowledge of gospel truth, came the desire to preach it. My ideas were crude, but I loved humanity and longed to tell them what God had done for me. I thought of standing before stately Kings and royal Queens, with hand uplifted, telling them with undaunted mien, the glorious gospel of Christ—blessed gospel, that had made me free. I felt a willingness to sacrifice my all upon the gospel altar; and though I have passed through some trials and made many crooked steps—yes and unintentionally have wronged my brethren, yet I love them dearly, and am quite sure that love finds response in the hearts of all the Saints of God. I have felt sometimes like Peter, to go out and weep bitterly over my weakness and folly. God knows my heart, and in mercy has preserved me. In the crucible of experience I have learned wisdom. I only ask that I may continue to learn and improve. Tears, born of the Spirit of God, have washed many "motes" from my eyes; and perhaps I never felt to "love my brother dearer" more than now. "Tis enough for me to be as my Master, and labor and wait for the world's redemption." I am solicited by the Henry county brethren to visit the Eagle Creek Branch, and attend the lecture of one, Mr. Winn, a Reverend of the Baptist fraternity, and reply to his remarks, to which I will seek to respond in wisdom. My experience here has been enriched by forming the acquaintance of one who seems to me to be a REMARKABLE PERSONAGE.

On a pleasant farmstead in Gibson county, Tennessee, resides the intelligent and affable family of Mr. H. Bush. One of his daughters, "Miss Clara" as she is familiarly called, is the person referred to. Her childhood days were such as are common to all children, until at the age of nine, a strange illness came upon her, and for nineteen years she has been confined to her bed. Many physicians have attended her, but none can understand the disease nor prescribe a remedy. During the first six months of illness, she suffered intense pain, which narcotics, such as morphine, &c., would not alleviate for a moment, but finally got easier, yet has always suffered constantly with more or less pain. She has not taken a drink of water in six years. She thirsts, but dare not drink, as the least bit of water taken causes intense agony. Sometimes eats only a little fruit for weeks together, and this taken but once a day at the hour of nine o'clock in the evening. Sleeps only about three hours in twenty-four. Though her body is wasted, yet her face is plump, round, and very beautiful. The hair is dark brown, eyes blue, and complexion nearly as white as the pillow upon which her lovely head rests. She is a devout Christian, though belonging to no church, and to be in her presence makes one think of heaven and angels. She has often dreamed of being in heaven and seeing the Savior. Her patience in suffering, gentleness, and purity, are a strong reproof to infidelity. Though apparently so helpless, yet her life has been a useful one. The lilies "do not spin," yet they perform their important part in life's drama. They please the senses of those who love the beautiful. Her presence has laden the moral atmosphere of her parents' home, with the rich fragrance of Christian love and purity. Though compelled to constantly lie with head but slightly elevated, her labors are quite wonderful. Large drawings, flowers, and wreaths, &c., of her making, adorn their pleasant home. And though receiving no instruction in these arts, such remarkable taste and skill are displayed in some of these productions, that they are only appreciated when seen. I believe that perhaps only nature's hand can surpass them in artistic skill and loveliness. A wreath formed of the kernels and hulls of three chestnuts, and having forty-seven leaves and twenty-six flowers, fashioned with a pen knife, also a wreath made of the feathers of a humming bird, every leaf, and the petal of every flower being shaped with scissors, and a cluster of flowers made of the cuttings of her finger nails, are objects so novel, and display such exquisite taste, ingenuity, and skill, that a mental picture of them can not be drawn without having previously seen them. Premiums are always awarded at the fairs where her work is taken. In the realm of poesy, "Miss Clara" is at home, having composed over an hundred poems, which together with her biography, will form a book to be published soon. Physicians call her illness "an anomaly in pathology." I would name her poetic genius "an anomaly in the realm of literature;" not so much on account of the superiority of these productions, as by reason of the peculiar manner of composition. When the subject is given, she composes the whole poem let it be short or long, rapidly, and without effort, before writing a word; and one of these poems comprises sixty-nine verses.

Her letters are composed and written in the same manner, which shows a wonderfully retentive memory. "Peace" and "Eternal" rest were subjects given by a Knoxville paper, upon which to write poems. She was awarded the prize for both. History, biography, and poetry, are her favorite literature. Many from different parts visit her, and she is beloved by all. She is particularly fond of flowers, and, when they can be obtained, always has them by her bedside; also, little children are much beloved by her.

Daily I am confirmed in the idea that God deals with humanity as nations, communities, and families, and that he exercises a special watchcare over us individually; and furthermore that foreknowing our dispositions and what we will do, without interrupting our agency, he places us in the world when and where we will work out his purposes, the grand object being the mutual benefit of all. I do not believe we are left at the mercy of blind forces and fortuitous circumstances, while the God of the universe is asleep. And although illness, temporary or protracted, is often the result of transgressing nature's laws, yet the loving hand of God figures conspicuously in these events, and in a higher sense than is generally comprehended by the term "nature's laws," it is "in Him that we live, move, and have our being." It seems to me that any other view than this, savors of a disposition to limit the power, wisdom, and love of an Infinite Being. I can not command language sufficient to express my gratitude to God for the actual knowledge I have gained by practical experience, in relation to his power and willingness to give physical as well as spiritual blessings to those who try to love and serve him, and I think that thousands of the Saints will bear testimony to the same truth.

Beloved Saints, can any sacrifice that God requires be too great for those who have obtained such knowledge? If I know the sentiments of my own heart, they are to live, endure, and if it should be required, to die for the cause that has turned me from darkness to light;—from a life of unhappiness to one of joy;—and from uncertainty and almost despair, to a condition of firm security, and sweet hope.

Blessed gospel! Thou hast driven bitterness, strife, and worldly ambition from my heart, and hast filled the vacuum with the oil of gladness. Thou art my friend, my redeemer; and in thee do I trust. O let my life be spent in thy service. Though my path-way should lie through the fiery furnace, or the lion's den, or across the briny deep, Thou wilt be there to cheer and save. Then wherever duty bids me go, thither will I tread. Should the Master call me to Europe's clime, there will I journey; or to the Islands of the Sea, they shall become my resting place. That thy blessings may distil upon earth's children, as the morning dew, is my earnest solicitation.

G. S. HYDE.

Dear Herald:—I feared at the time of penning the lines in acknowledgment of the receipt of money from the Edenville Saints towards the erection of a house of worship in Denver, it was possible that some misapprehension might obtain, and as subsequent development prove my fear to have been well grounded, I wish to state that when I thanked the Edenville Saints for their response and liberality, I meant just that; for I perceived they had caught the suggestion made in the Herald for March 1st or 15th, which run thusly: "If ten thousand of your readers would subscribe two and a half cents, it would be a help; five cents a lifter, ten cents a boomer." Now, twenty-two Edenville Saints send us $2; let ten thousand, or nine thousand nine hundred and fifty-eight other members follow their noble examples, and what a wonderful result will follow. But, such results are not seen through a lack of interest. The mite system seems to many too insignificant, and hence, we often fail in bringing to pass great results. And between the unwillingness of the wealthy to give of their abundance, and the tardiness of the masses in co-operation to donate their mites, we drag slowly along, when we might go at a more rapid rate, if faith and works better agreed. Yes, yes; we were earnest indeed in thanking the Edenville Saints; and let nine thousand nine hundred and fifty-eight other members follow their examples, and that simultaneously, that one acknowledgment through the Herald may suffice.

JAMES CAFFALL.

IRON HILL, Iowa, May 9th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—It has been so long since I sent any word to you from this part of the field, that I think it a duty that I should report the condition of affairs here. My health has been very poor, the past Winter, but am feeling much better now. We had our regular sacrament and testimony meeting here last Sunday. Brother James Johnson and Sister Kelsall attended. It being the first meeting Sister Kelsall has attended since the death of her husband; she felt rejoiced for the privilege of meeting with us again. Good feeling prevailed, and all enjoyed the meeting. On account of poor health I have been unable to visit the different branches, for the last four or five months. I have written to Clinton and Buffalo in regard to the conference, but have had no reply as yet. The Saints here are anxious to have the conference here, and it was left for me to decide, and have concluded to hold it here.

I received a card from Bro. Jobe Brown; was glad to hear from him. He still continues in the work. He expected to attend conference. My health prevented my attending the quarterly conference, and we failed in sending a delegate to the Annual Conference. We are having beautiful weather now; it has been rather backward, but it seems the Lord has smiled on us once more, and we have good prospect of crops again. My prayer is that the Saints will live for the cause, and "Seek first the Kingdom of God," and all other things shall be added. We have the abiding testimony that God's work commenced in the last days will triumph in its time. Pray for us that we may go on in this good work.

Your brother in Christ,

EDWARD LARKEY.

HARWICH, Ontario, May 11th, 1882.

Dear Brother:—Last Fall we were visited by Bro. John H. Lake, who preached three times in our school-house, comforting and encouraging us greatly; he has done great good at the places we hear. In January, Bro. Gordon E. Deuel visited us; and indeed I can say he is the very one that is needed to awaken the slumbering Saints to a sense of their duty. He is a valiant soldier of the cross, ever ready to fight for truth. He is Deuel by name and duel by nature; he courts the favor of no person; he preached several times at McKay's Corners, and gave great satisfaction, as the enclosed clipping will show; but Satan found his craft was in danger, and sent one of his ambassadors by the name of Pomeroy,—a lame limb of the Methodist persuasion, and he hopped about from pillar to post, till like Noah's dove, he found no place for the sole of his foot, and he had to return to the ark of his master. Another one was sent by the name of Davis, and the first night he preached in the Methodist Chapel at the same place; the class-leader named Graves, who had been doing all he could against us, struck a young man in the Chapel, and jumped on his back, and bit his ear through in three places; and the young man bit his thumb off; and this all occurred on the Sabbath evening; so you see if the Reverend gentleman had taught his members that the fruits of the spirit was love, joy, peace, and so on, they had not observed it, or they had forgotten it. But I do believe that it will result in good to us. People say if that is Methodism they want no more of it. Since then some one has stolen the lock off the Chapel door, and they have to fasten it with a chain and stick of wood. Alas! how are the mighty fallen. The Reverend D. Pomeroy and his class-leader may sit down together and mourn their temerity.

We are glad to hear that you remembered the Canada Mission at Conference. We have not seen Bro. Gurley yet, but we hope soon to see him and hear him speak the word of life. "How beautiful on the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings." Oh, may God bless them and their dear ones they have left behind. And I hope that they with whom they sojourn, will endeavor to do all they can to comfort and assist them; not merely giving them a cup of cold water, but something else to support and encourage them, lest they grow weary and faint by the way.

I remain your sister in Christ,
J. LEATHERDALE.

KEOKUK, IOWA, May 8th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Bro. A. H. Smith spent a week with us, and was appreciated very much by all the Saints. He did some preaching, and three were baptized while he was here, and the members are in good spirits and quite renewed. He left us Saturday morning to return home, and Bro. J. H. Lake came Saturday afternoon. We went to Montrose; held four meetings, administered to several of the members, blessed two children and left the Saints feeling well.

Yours in Christ,
B. F. DURFEE.

Conference Minutes.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT.

This conference convened at West Oakland, Cal., April 6th, 1882. John Carmichael, president; J. R. Range, clerk.

Branch Reports.—Watsonville 51 members including scattered members. Santa Rosa 70. Oakland 59. Stockton 44. Sacramento 84. Mount Diablo 18. San Francisco 27.

Reports.—Elders W. Potter, E. H. Webb, D. J. Phillips, W. Anderson, P. B. Cain, J. P. Daly, J. Carmichael, T. J. Andrews, J. Vernon, J. B. Price, J. Edmond, G. W. Harlow, G. Lincoln, R. Smith, J. M. Range, D. Brown, and G. Oman, reported their past services and express their hopes and good intentions for the cause in the time to come. Priests R. Ferris, C. W. Hawkin, Owen Dinsdale and W. M. Dawson, reported their labors and good desires for the cause. Teachers C. Monckom, R. M. Phenegar and L. E. Hutchings reported their labors.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That this conference grant the request of the Mount Diablo Branch, and that Bro. Clark be ordained to the office of an Elder.

That Bro. Clark's ordination be postponed until the October conference, and that he attend for that purpose.

That we approve of Bro. J. Carmichael's labors as President of the Northern District of California, and tender him our thanks for his faithful services performed while acting in that office.

That we re-appoint John Carmichael as President of the Northern District of California for the term of six months.

That we re-appoint Bro. D. J. Phillips to the office of Vice President of the Northern District of California.

That we appoint Saturday, the 29th day and Sunday the 30th of April, 1882, for a two days' meeting at H. Law's, on the San Benito.

That each Branch report to the recorder of the district a full report of their condition, at least once in every six months.

That this conference return its thanks to the editor of the daily Tribune, of Oakland, for articles published by him from our conference minutes.

Bishop's Agent reports, money received as tithing and offerings for March 1st, 1881 to March 1st, 1882, $261 93; disbursements, $138; balance on hand, $123 93. John Roberts.

Utah Chapel Fund: From San Francisco Branch, $25; G. I. Young, Livermore, $10; remittance to Israel L. Rogers, $35. John Roberts.

District Fund: Total received, $23.30; disbursed, $16 50; on hand, $6 80. John Roberts.

The afternoon session of the 9th was devoted to testimony and sacrament, conducted by Elder D. Brown and G. W. Harlow. The Saints were fully alive to the occasion, and breathed forth their unflinching desires and hopes for the cause. The Spirit was present in a goodly measure, manifesting in tongues and general testimony.

By the courtesy of the officers, H. P. Brown, formerly associated with latter day work, and lately with the Reorganization in California, embraced the privilege to set himself squarely before his old friends and the Church in general, touching his present status and the latter day work. He said that he wished to be distinctly understood by all that he had not apostatised, at the same time was not connected with any organization new claiming to be a part of the same; could not harmonize his views with any; wished all success, because he believed there was righteousness in all, and hoped that soon the latter day work would be better understood, and perfect harmony prevail.

The conference was a good one. This was the unanimous feeling; and the pleasant hope is entertained and generally expressed, that our cause is emerging in its general aspect from the dark cloudy night into brighter days. How we have hoped for this day, when it shall be universally known that there is a religious present truth in the world, a revealed religion in existence under God's immediate supervision. What a hope it will be for humanity to rely on.

Adjourned to meet at Oakland, Cal., October 6th, 1882

WELSH MISSION.

The quarterly conference of the western district of the above mission was held at the house of Bro. E. G. Davis, Llansamlet, March 25th, 1882. Elder J. R. Gibbs president, B. Davis clerk.

The president read from the Doctrine and Covenants the duties of the different officers in a branch, when Bro. I. Samuel of Llanelly Branch, stood up and stated that he and the other Elders of Llanelly Branch understand the law a little different in regard to the branch order; that is, that the Priest, Teacher, and Deacon have not the authority to take the lead of the meetings in the absence of the Presiding Elder, when there is any other Elder present; and it was proved that that was not the right order; but that the Priest, Teacher, or the Deacon of a branch have the authority in the absence of the Presiding Elder to take the lead.

Elder J. Samuel, for the Llanelly Branch, asked for the opinion of this conference in regard to ordaining Bro. J. Edwards to the office of a Teacher, but it was deferred till the annual conference. Also, of ordaining Bro. T. Williams to the office of an Elder, and the opinion of this conference was that he should not be ordained at present.

Elders J. Samuel, J. R. Gibbs and B. Davies, reported.

In the afternoon, Elder A. N. Bishop was called to speak, which he did for a short time. The meeting then was given free for testimony and to desire the spiritual gifts, which were enjoyed.

Resolved that we sustain by our faith and prayers the different quorums of the Church in America in righteousness.

Also: T. Taylor, President of European Mission; and J. R. Gibbs, President of the Welsh Mission; T. R. Jenkins of the Seventy and a Bishop's Agent; W. Morris, President of the eastern district of the Welsh Mission; and all the Elders Priests, Teachers, and Deacons, with all the other members of the mission. Moved and carried, that all the Elders should attend the different conferences if possible, and that they should have their license.

Moved and carried, that Elder A. N. Bishop be re-set to be president over this district.

Moved and carried, that Bro. D. Williams be released of being the secretary of the district, and that Bro. D. Lewis be set in his place.

Moved and carried, that the next annual conference be held at Swansea.

Preaching by Elders J. Samuel and A. N. Bishop. Adjourned to meet at Llanelly, June 25th, 1882, at 10:30 a. m.

Miscellaneous.

TO THE SAINTS.

At the last session of the Annual Conference of the Church, it pleased the kind Master, who is our head, and the director of all his saints, to place upon me the responsibility and anxiety of taking an active oversight in the temporal affairs of His Church.

Heretofore, this work has fallen upon and has with great watchcare and patience been borne by our esteemed brother, Israel L. Rogers; and the duties of the office not only under his charge, but now, my brethren must realize, are those wherein a great delicacy of feeling arises in their faithful performance, as they involve the consideration of the question of the charities of the Saints; of their beneficence as applied to their assistance in temporal things in sustaining and promoting the Spiritual work of the kingdom; and the teaching and administration of that law of the necessity of life here, which quickens the judgment and animates the heart that the good thereof may be developed, with regard to present things, and so prepare each for the well ordering of that greater trust to be bestowed when the Lord shall come.

And, notwithstanding the fact that I, too, with you, am pressed with a deep sense of your delicacy; yet, having been sustained by your voice, and made accountable to you for all my acts and doings in this office, as well as to Him to whom all must render a faithful account of their stewardship; and further, being privileged to bear toward you all that intimate relationship under the law of Christ of a brother and a helper in His work, I am determined to come to you in confidence, and love in the execution of the trust confided, and unreservedly and without hesitation, undertake to do my duty well, and to ask of you a general co-operation in the same, that this arm of the service of Christ for the establishment of his kingdom shall not fail, or lack, and that as a people we shall not be found wanting in our support of the worthy and distressed, and of that other branch in His service, that hath neither time nor opportunity under their duties in teaching the word, to serve tables.

Under the law, the faithful in Christ (as was the case with faithful Abraham) will conform as readily and cheerfully to the law of proper temporal offerings, as of spiritual; for under the same law both are recognized, and a person could as well or acceptably to our Lord, fail or refuse to teach or comply with any part of the spiritual law, or that relating directly to duties which are in their nature spiritual, as that pertaining to the temporal; and the blessings promised the believer under the gospel are just as much dependent upon the faithful keeping the law pertaining to temporal things as any part of the law bearing upon spiritual. Not only this, but it is true to a great extent, that as we show forth in our work a compliance with the law relating to things before us, we also reflect the relationship, we in fact bear in our progress under the spiritual duties.

Referring to the necessity of carrying out the provisions of this law of temporal duties, the prophet declares:

"Bring ye all the tithes into the store-house, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room to receive it."—Mal. 8: 10.

"Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine."—Prov. 3:9, 10.

Is not the Lord as sure in these promises as He is in any that he has made to His people? Now, it does not appear under the law that there should be a consecration of all properties, as was undertaken by the early church, as recorded in the second, fourth, and fifth chapters of the Acts of the Apostles; but on the contrary, the just and reasonable system of a tithing as practiced by Abraham. The instruction of the Lord is, "To consecrate of thy properties," &c. This does not mean all, but of a reasonable and just part. Again, He says: "It is a day of sacrifice and a day of tithings of my people."—Doc. & Cov. 64:5.

And the "day" spoken of was the extending period from the time that this was given, 1831, "till the coming of the Son of Man"—and certainly relating to the Church now—and the promise is: "he that is tithed [not giving the whole, or an unjust proportion] shall not be burned [at His coming];" showing also, that the tithing spoken of was to be of a voluntary and free will offering on the part of those complying with the law; for who can suppose the protection spoken of would be extended to persons who were forced to make these offerings, or who did not make them from choice? The idea is further exemplified in paragraph seven of the same section.

Referring to this matter of consecration, tithes, &c., we read: "Behold the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind, &c.; and it is clear the Church could never be built to the Messiah by any other kind of properties, although they might be millions.

As with the obedience to the principles of the law relating to spiritual things, it is necessary to "obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto us;" so in the ministration of the law having regard to temporal things, it must be from the heart, cheerfully, willingly, prayerfully; and when so done, God will bless the doers with the things of this temporal life, and with the greater riches of his Holy Spirit.

To carry out such a ministration of the law, the Lord said in instruction to his Saints, October 7th, 1861: "The Twelve will take measures in connection with the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing;"—and I apprehend that if it is to be "executed" (ministered), it must be taught as a law necessary for the Saints to obey if they would and cloth you, receive the rewards promised—being an essential thing—and as it is taught, believed, and a willingness shown to comply with it, to minister the same, and as in the case of the law of confirmation, or of the sacrament after baptism, or of any other necessary and legitimate law and work to seal therewith its blessings. For do we not read among the other things which the faithful in Christ are to do, that they are to "remember in all things the poor and the needy, the sick and the afflicted, for he that doeth not these things, the same is not my disciple."—D. & C., sec. 52:9. And also: "Whoso receiveth you receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money. And he who feeds you, or clothes you, or gives you money, shall in no wise lose his reward: and he that doeth not these things is not my disciple; by this ye may know my disciples."—D. & C., 83:16.

This imparting in a proper and consistent manner is not only a worthy thing on the part of members, but also of those who are not: but of the members of His Church, the Lord has seen fit to intimate to us what would by pleasing to Him in their gifts, by the calling of the attention of those professing to follow Him, and to walk by the guiding influence of the divine Spirit, to the systematic law of tithes; which has to commend it besides the great fact that God is the revealer. The further features:

That it is just in its provisions.

That all under it are held equal.

That all may comply with it without injury.

And that its rewards are to those who keep it.

Now, not only the justice of this law presses upon our consideration, but, I remember that the same conference at which I was appointed to specially minister in this temporal law, there were sent forth of our brethren, men everywhere,—to preach the gospel; and these men, true to their charge, have already entered upon their respective labors, believing that those who sent them were indeed of the disciples of Jesus, and that they would not hesitate to obey the law of temporal things any more than that of spiritual, nor withhold of their means to relieve the necessities of the dependent ones entrusted to the care of the Church; and in their work, you and the Master who sent them, will hold them accountable for teaching the whole of the law. How will it be with the Bishop; will he not also be held accountable in the same way, for as industriously and impartially teaching and administering—of "executing"—the law of temporal things? You will all doubtless answer that he will, and believing this, and believing in you, and that the Lord is faithful in His promises unto the children of men, and that "man should not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God," I come to you in full faith and confidence in His work, and urge upon you, each and all, upon officers and members, men and women, everywhere, to put forth an effort to maintain and keep this law, and to consecrate to the service of Christ such a portion, a tithe, a tenth, of his or her yearly income, or of surplus properties as each shall under the law find to be just and equitable. And as the Lord has said to those who have in hand the execution of this law, so it may be properly said unto you, that "In the manner ye execute this matter, so shall ye be judged in the day of judgment."

To faithfully and impartially carry out the provisions of this law, and to prevent mistakes and losses of whatever nature, and to render the system of accounting on the part of agents easy and practical, there will at an early date be kept by the Bishop, and also placed in the hands of his agents, a book of receipts with blank stubs: these receipts to be given to parties paying in funds to the Church, and when the book is filled, or otherwise may be necessary, the stubs to be returned to the Bishop to be kept for reference.

Receipts will be given:—

1st. To those paying tithes and donations under the law.

2d. To persons who receive and forward free-will offerings and collections in the various churches.

3d. To traveling agents upon rendering an account of funds received, &c.

Until such time as proper arrangements for receipting can be made, due memoranda will be kept of all properties and offerings, and receipts returned therefor in due time.

Those persons, in all places, who now are filling the position of "Bishop's Agent" under the authority from the former Bishop of the Church, will continue to act and be recognized as agents of districts, unless others should be appointed and due notice thereof given.

In the payment of moneys, so far as practicable, parties entitled to receive at the hands of the Bishop, will be supplied through their district agent; application for the same first having been made known to the Bishop, that all things may be done in order, and that one person may not receive more than his just proportion of church funds. This will not prevent the Agent in urgent cases of exercising his judgment to a certain extent,—as his acts, if proper, may be ratified and approved by the Bishop, the same being at once made known to him by the agent. The agents should as good ministers of the law, take pains to call the attention of the Saints to the law, and to teach the same, but not in a compulsory or offensive way. And all Saints should recognize and help the Agent in his work and duties, as they would the minister who speaks to them of spiritual things.

Those sending moneys, &c., to the Bishop, will do so by Draft, or Post Office Order, and direct to Galien, Berrien county, Michigan.

As the law requires of me, it will be my pleasure to meet with the Saints in the different churches and districts at as early a time as possible, at which time I may be able to answer various questions, and objections that are in the minds of many, and learn better my own duties also; but now, let us take a step forward, and put forth a helping hand to the establishing of the truth and His Kingdom; and without deceit, without contention, and without grudging; but with proper love and good will for the Master's word and work, and for each other, let each strive to do his whole duty under the law,

And the God of love and peace bless you, is my prayer.

G. A. BLAKESLEE.

Bishop of the Church of J. C. of L. D. Saints.

AN ADDRESS

TO THE SAINTS OF THE SOUTH EASTERN MISSION.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:—It is with a strong desire for your timely and eternal welfare, and to aid the missionaries in their labors of love and sacrifice in your midst, that I address you these words. Many of you I have not seen, some of you I may never see, in the flesh, but I trust this short epistle, though weak and imperfect, will bring us nearer together in the one glorious faith; and to this end I indulge the hope that it will be read, or considered, or both, by every Saint in the mission.

It is very plain that if we are ever made partakers of the things which "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard," nor heart felt, except as revealed by God's Spirit (1 Cor. 2:9), we must also be made partakers of the work, sacrifice, and trials of God's people, in this life (Rom. 8:17, 18; Matt. 10:37, 38). Nor are we to suppose that the path unmistakably indicated by Divine wisdom will necessarily be the one freest from difficulty and trial. As a rule just the reverse of this is true. Trials are God's pruning-hooks with which the human tree is deprived of its useless and dangerous branches. While this is being done, we suffer pain, but afterwards, enjoy the peaceable "fruits of the Spirit" (Heb. 12:11; Gal. 5:22-24). It is, then, both wrong and foolish to shun duty because of trial. The path of duty is the way marked out by the Divine being, and is the only way of safety. So long as we walk therein, God will protect and bless, for he has pledged himself to do so; but when we wander from it, he is no longer with us, we are no more his friends, hence are left without God in this life, and without hope for eternity. And this terrible condition is not because God's mercy and love cease, or depart, but because we wander away from him. True, he will come to us occasionally, in order to point us to the "old paths" from which we have strayed, but he can not and will not remain, till we return.

God has given a law for the government of his church, and none are exempt from its demands; male and female, learned and illiterate, wise and less wise, are all under solemn obligations to obey this law (D. C. 41:1, 2; 85:5, 8). Some excuse themselves for certain departures, because of their difficult and, supposed peculiar surroundings. These are unpleasant, at times, I know; but where the will is sufficiently strong to do right, the moral obligations of God's law may be kept, no matter where we are nor what the circumstances surrounding us. To lie, steal, cheat, commit adultery, kill, do our neighbors any harm, refuse to become reconciled to, or live at peace with each other, are sins for which no good excuse can be found; and he who is guilty of any or all of these will be sure to receive a just retribution from him who has not spoken in vain, unless he quickly and sincerely repents (D. C. 42:6, 7, 21, 22, 23; 59:2).

From the sacred books of the Church, Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, we learn that is one of our leading duties to keep covenant with each other, and with God. There is nothing more unpleasant and damaging to the work than to have our confidence shaken, or destroyed, in our brethren, because they do not, and will not, keep their word. I am sure God can have but little confidence in those who do not keep covenant with each other. Just as he will not forgive those who refuse to forgive each other, so he will not trust those who do not, and will not do as they agree with each other. The practice of uncautiously making appointments and then putting forth little or no effort to fill them, indulged in by some Elders, is what we might term criminal carelessness, and is sure to work out disastrous results to all who are guilty of it, as well as to the cause. Let this practice cease at once.

Non performance of duty, by branch officers, is what has permitted the cause to languish in the Florida and Alabama Districts, and, to some extent, elsewhere in the mission. It is truly alarming to find presiding Elders and other branch officers doing so little of that work which is made binding upon them by virtue of the positions they hold in the Church. Dear brethren, we do not come into the Church of Christ to be nothing, much less to have the holy priesthood conferred upon us that we may sit down in idleness, and apparent ease, while the duties of our calling are left undone, and spiritual ruin is lying all about us. "Arise, thou that sleepest, and Christ shall give thee light."

There needs to be more of the spirit and practice of prayer among the Saints in general, and, so far as our observation extends, those of the South Eastern Mission in particular. Do you say, "I can not pray." But can you not learn to pray? Remember we do not pray to be heard of men, but because we need blessings from God. "Can not pray," and yet expect to go into the presence of God and enjoy his glory. Ah! dear brother or sister, if you do not work, and pray, and commune with God, by his Spirit, you can not be numbered with the Celestial multitude, "clothed with white robes," (the righteousness of Saints), and with those having "harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of Saints," (Rev. 7:9-17; 19:8; 5:8). The worship of these will be perfect and glorious; and if we have never made the attempt to worship God, in prayer, while in this life, how can we expect to join with them in these heavenly exercises? Surely, if we see ourselves as we are, and have a conscientious and strong desire to do only that which is right, and realize that we need blessings, such as God only can give, there can be but little doubt but what we will pray.

In addition to those important duties that are binding upon all Saints, the Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons are required to teach the Saints and the world, every man according to his ability and calling. Nor do we consider the excuse offered by some local Elders sufficient. After six days of labor and toil, you are tired, without doubt; but is it more difficult or a greater sacrifice, for you to go five, ten, or fifteen miles, preach to the people and then return to your family (if you are so fortunate as to have one) than it is for the traveling Elder to tear away from the embrace of these loved ones, year after year, and, for the gospel's sake spend the most of his time away from the endearments of home? If we wait for that supposed good time when there will be no crosses to bear, or difficulties in the way, we will do little or nothing for the cause; and, as a matter of course, receive little or nothing for reward. Priests, Teachers and Deacons, should take sufficient time to do their part of the Lord's work. (See D. C. 17:8-11; 42:5). God foresaw that it would become necessary for the work assigned these officers to be done; hence, when it is neglected, He is displeased, and great spiritual loss is the result.

In the administration of God's law, great care should be exercised, and especially when dealing with offenders. As a rule, branch officers are entirely too slow to labor with delinquents and transgressors, but when once undertaken, are entirely too quick to expel them from the Church. This is wrong, just the reverse from what it should be, and very disastrous to the cause. Promptness to labor with those who are out of the way, in wisdom and love, will often remove the difficulty and save the individuals. Expulsion should be the last resort. It is the special duty of those who are made Elders to the Church by virtue of appointment, or ordination, to see that the law of God is honored and kept; (D. C. 46:7; 41:1, 2); therefore branch and district presidents are under this responsibility. District presidents should make it a point to see that the presidents of branches do their duty; and branch presidents should see to it that Priests, Teachers, and Deacons do their duty, as enjoined in the law; and if all these officers faithfully do their work, there will be but little danger of the work going down. How grand, to us, are the provisions of Divine wisdom for the establishment and perpetuity of God's work, when we obey them, and thereby receive the evidence.

There is another duty I wish to bring prominently before the Saints, the importance of which, to a great extent, has been overlooked. No organization can be perpetuated among men without the use of means; and to this rule the Church of Christ is no exception. If God intended the work to be carried on without money, as the constant speech of some would imply, why do the revelations given to the Church contain such ample provision for the paying, reception and disbursalment of tithes and offerings? The families of those who spend their time in the ministry of Jesus Christ must be fed and clothed, and in due time, homes must be provided for them. This work devolves upon the Church; and a failure upon her part, will cause many hearts to bleed that have sacrificed for the work that which next to life itself, take many good men from the field, instead of placing more therein, and cause the work of God to languish. Dear Saints, can we afford to answer to God in the day of judgment for such results as these? The work in the Florida and Alabama Districts requires the entire time of their presidents. Do you say, "We are so poor down here." Yes, I know you are, and the same cry comes from every quarter where the Saints are located. God's people are poor, as a rule, but he only requires them to do what they can, but he does require them to do something. If the Saints would lay aside the use of that which God's word says "is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises, and all sick cattle," the use of which involves the constant necessity of breaking that commandment which says, "Let all things be done in cleanliness before me," and put the means that are now wasted, and worse than wasted, in the coffers of the Church, there would be sufficient to supply the present demand; besides this, untold benefit would accrue in other directions. Some have done nobly, but, as a rule, the burden has rested on a few. Saints have excused themselves too long, entirely too long for their own good and the good of the work, because they could do but little. Do what you can, all of you, and God will bless you, and the work will move. Strive to do something every year for the spread of the work. Where there are organized districts, Bishop's Agents are the proper and legal custodians of all money intended for general Church purposes. Means designed to be controlled by the districts should be placed in the hands of district treasurers. I conceive it to be the duty of the Saints to support the general work first, the benefits of which all are supposed to share equally, and then do what they can for work at home.

The signs of the times unmistakably indicate the second coming of Christ, and hence the day of our redemption is at hand. How near we can not tell, nor does it matter, if we are but prepared. Times of trouble and disasters are at hand, when none but God's hand can safely guide, and naught but his Spirit administer the comfort we shall need. The cup of iniquity held in the hands of the wicked is nearly full, and the day of retribution is at hand. But a glorious rest awaits the people of God. Are we prepared? Should the Savior make his appearance now, would we meet him with joy and gladness of heart, or would we shrink from his holy presence?

Will the presidents of districts and branches see to it that this epistle is read to the congregations of the Saints. May God bless you with strength, a disposition to lay aside every evil, and individually and collectively engage in the work that is now before you. "By our own works we stand or fall." Be chaste and pure in thought and deed, and cleanly in all your habits. In the the very nature of the work we have received, it is, if worth any thing, worth every thing to us. Let this thought find continued place in your minds. And now may the blessings of God attend this effort for your good, and bless you unto eternal life, is the prayer of your co-worker for Christ,

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT,
Pres. of S. E. Mission.

GREENVILLE, Alabama, April 21, 1882.

EASTERN IOWA DISTRICT.

The next quarterly conference of the Eastern Iowa District, will be held at Butternut Grove, June 24th and 25th, 1882. We will try and accommodate all that will come. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Butternut Grove is two miles north of Iron Hills.

EDWARD LARKEY, Pres. of Branch.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT.

Notice is hereby given; that at the conference of the Southern Indiana District, to convene at this place, Union Branch, we request all the officers of the District to be in attendance, as there will be some matters of importance to be brought before the conference. We will try to make all comfortable while here. We request also that as many Saints as possible will be in attendance. Come with the spirit of meekness and humility, and let us try to have a good time from the presence of God.

SAMUEL RECTOR, Elder
VARDIMON BAGGERLY, Priest.

LONDON CONFERENCE.

Brethren and friends, desiring to visit the London District Conference, coming by railroad, will take their tickets for Holstein, Grey county, coming from the south or west; those coming from the east, take the Toronto, Grey, and Bruce railroad to Mount Forest, and thence to Holstein, about five miles, where brethren will meet them with teams, to convey them to the branch, about two miles from Holstein station. Conference is on June 10th and 11th, 1882.

J. A. McINTOSH, pro tem.

CENTRAL MISSOURI DISTRICT.

The above conference met at the Waconda, Branch, on the 4th of March, 1882. J. D. Craven in the chair; M. A. Trotter, clerk.

Adjourned to meet at the same place, June 3d, 1882.

The minutes were not sent direct to the Herald Office, but we received them through Bro. Stebbins, too late for publication.

INFORMATION WANTED.

David M. Drury, 431 Grand Street, Williamsburg, L. I., wants to know the post office address of Elijah Betts, and George Worstenholm. Can not these brethren tell him where they may be found.

ADDRESSES.

Bishop George A. Blakelee, Galien, Berrien county, Michigan.
W. W. Blair, Box 417, Salt Lake City, Utah.
Until further notice, the address of Bro. Henry A. Stebbins, will be Sandwich, DeKalb county, Illinois, not in care of Bro. I. L. Rogers, but Post Office address only, as they may have to be forwarded.
Heman C. Smith, Oakdale, Antelope county, Nebraska.
Clarence St. Clair, Independence, Missouri; formerly Chicago, Illinois.
Hiram Robinson, 9 Hazle street, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

OBITUARIES.—Obituary notices not exceeding one hundred words, about twelve lines, will be published free of charge; when exceeding one hundred words, five cents for each additional eight words (one line) will be charged; notices of prominent Church officials excepted. Money to accompany notice.

BORN.

ALLEN.—At Sandwich, Illinois, April 14th, 1882, to Bro. Ira and Sr. Mary E. Allen, a daughter; blessed at Sandwich, April 16th, 1882, by Elder F. G. Pitt, and named Emma Maud.

FENDER.—At Keystone, Iowa, October 30th, 1881, to Mr. Absalom and Sister America Fender, a son; blessed by Elder James R. Badham, May 8th, 1882, and named Frederick.

MYERS.—At Keystone, Iowa, March 16th, 1882, to Bro. James L. and Sister Ina M. Myers, a son; blessed by Elder James R. Badham, May 8th, 1882, and named Harry.

MARRIED.

CRUMB—VANFLEET.—At the residence of the bride's parents, in Noble Town, Dickenson county, Kansas, May 3d, 1882, by Priest Samuel H. Eye, of South Logan, Bro. George A. Crumb and Sister Mary E. Vanfleet, all of this county. They intend to make their future home in California. The best wishes of their many friends will attend them.

BETTERMAN—GILLILAND.—At the residence of the bride's parents, in Shelby, Iowa, May 4th, 1882, by Elder John H. Lake, Mr. Oscar C. Betterman and Sr. Jessie E. Gilliland.

Kind Jessie journeyed on her way,
Content to dwell in Gilliland;
When April changed to flowery May,
So Jessie changed to Betterman.

DIED.

BUTRICK.—At Glidden, Iowa, March 24th, 1882, after an illness of two weeks, sister Martha, wife of Wilson Butrick, aged 39 years, 6 months and 6 days; she was born in Hamilton county, Indiana; was baptized by Elder Thomas Dobson, February 7th, 1871; she leaves a husband and ten children to mourn her loss.

MORGAN.—At Bevier, Missouri, February 22d, 1882, William, son of John W. and Sarah Ann Morgan, aged 3 months and 14 days. Funeral services by Elder George Hicklin.

LEWIS.—At Bevier, Missouri, on the first of March, 1882, Alma, son of Joseph R. and Susannah Lewis, aged 6 months and 13 days. Funeral services by Elder George Hicklin.

MATTHEWS.—Near New Park, York county, Pennsylvania, on the 12th of April, 1882, Mordecai, son of Bro. and Sr. M. O. Matthews, aged 7 years and 15 days. Funeral sermon by Joseph A. Stewart.

BUTRICK.—George, infant son of Bro. W. C. and sister M. Butrick; born May 14th, 1881, died March 21st, 1882.

Its mother like a lily pale,
Stood by that coffin's head,
And bending o'er it told her tale,
And many a tear she shed;
Yet off she cried amidst her pain,
My babe and I shall meet again.

MILLIKIN.—At Colchester, McDonough county, Illinois, April 23d, 1882, of rheumatism of the brain, Arthur Millikin, aged 64 years, 11 months and 14 days. Bro. Millikin was the husband of Lucy, the youngest sister of Joseph and Hyrum; he was born at Scooko, York county, Maine; joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in his eighteenth year, and was with the Saints as boy and man for forty-seven years. He was with the Saints in the Missouri troubles, was drummer boy in the Crooked River fight, and was shot through both legs above the knees during that fight. He escaped death, however, and removed to Illinois, with the many who were driven out of that State. On March 4th, 1840, he and Lucy Smith were married by the martyr, Joseph Smith, Jr., and for over forty-two years has their married life ran, fraught with more peace and happiness than usually falls to the lot of men. As a member of the Church he was always a calm, consistent man, full of faith, but never demonstrative. When the Church broke up at Nauvoo, he removed with his family, including Mother Lucy Smith, to Knoxville, Illinois, whence he returned to Nauvoo, and thence to Colchester, where he died. He leaves his companion and eight children, four of whom are married, to mourn his departure. The funeral obsequies were conducted from the Christian Church, Bro. Alexander H. Smith preaching the sermon. The worth of Bro. Millikin as a citizen was fully attested by the large attendance at the services. His illness was painful, his death peaceful, his life one of industry and carefulness. He was "faithful until death."

COOPER.—In the town of Excelsior, Wisconsin, January 12th, 1882, Laura Ann, wife of Bro. F. M. Cooper. She was born at Geneva, Wisconsin, March 28th, 1854; leaves a husband, three small children to mourn her absence; she was baptized in 1868 by Bro. Reuben Newkirk; although young, she enjoyed the gifts all through her short life, and had the full confidence of all Saints who knew her. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. We know she is taken from the evil to come.

SPINNINGS.—Elder Daniel U. Spinnings, born January 3d, 1817, at Lee, Oneida county, N. Y.; baptized August, 1842 by—Pettigrew, confirmed by Joseph and John Smith, died March 11th, 1882, at his old home in Chickaming, Michigan. Funeral discourse preached in Blakeslee's Hall, Galien, Michigan, by Elder T. W. Smith, March 14th, to a large and sympathizing audience.

ROBERTS.—Near Plum Hollow, Fremont county, Iowa, August 28th, 1881, of congestion of the brain, Elder James V. Roberts, aged 49 years, 6 months and 22 days. He was baptized November 20th, 1871, by Elder E. C. Brand, and ordained to the office of an Elder February 1st, 1874, by Elder William Redfield. Before uniting with the Church, he had for many years belonged to the Christian Church, and was a minister therein. Funeral service by Elder W. T. Bozarth; there was a large attendance. He leaves a wife and twelve children, three children having gone on before.

HART.—At Oakland, California, May 4th, 1882, of typhoid typhus fever, Susannah May, beloved daughter of Bro. William and Sister Francis Mary Hart, aged 4 years, 3 months and 7 days. Funeral services by Elders J. B. Price and T. J. Andrews.

Susie is an angel, up among the blessed,
On the Savior's bosom, ever more she'll rest.
He who loves the children, calls the dearest home
When freed from mortal ills, in Paradise they roam.
Little brother met her, just inside the gate;
They will gather heavenly blossoms,
While for friends they wait.

BLACKIE.—Killed by a rail road accident, Sunday, April 9th, 1882, near Cheltenham, Missouri, while on his way to preach at the above place, Stephen Blackie. Elder Blackie was born at Edinburgh, Scotland, August 10th, 1822; baptized at St. Louis, March 5th, 1865, by Elder W. Smith; He leaves a wife and three children to mourn over their loss. Funeral service at the house, and sermon at the Saints' Hall, by Elder W. Still.

BENNER.—In Ross Township, Fremont county, Iowa, June 4th, 1880, of old age, Henry Benner, aged 80 years and 17 days. In 1824 he left his native state, Pennsylvania, and located in Ohio, where he received the gospel in 1832, under the hands of Elder Thomas Tripp; was one of the company of young men that went up to redeem Zion, and passed through the sufferings with the Saints. (His brother, Elias, was one of the victims at Haun's Mill). He journeyed with the Saints to Illinois, and thence to the place of his late home in 1849. For many years watched the course of the Church, and on the 23d of May, 1880, received baptism under the hands of Elder Daniel Hougas. He leaves a wife and nine children, and a large circle of other relatives and friends, and a name untarnished, which was manifested by an unusually large funeral, which was conducted by Elder E. C. Brand.

COOPER.—On March 4th, 1882, Margaret J., daughter of William and Matilda Cooper, aged 7 years, 7 months, and 14 days.

We loved her as we loved our life,
We begged of God, to let her stay;
But in the morning of her youth,
The angels bore her soul away.

ROE.—At Alton, Illinois, April 2d, 1882, from the effects of falling on the sidewalk January 10th, dislocating her hip, after eleven weeks of intense suffering, Anna, the beloved wife of Bro. John Roe. Deceased obeyed the gospel when young, in England, came to America with her first husband, Elder Samuel Church, and settled in Alton, Illinois. After the death of her first husband, and her subsequent marriage with Bro. Roe, she passed on to Utah, was soon convinced of the apostasy of the Brighamite Church, felt disgusted, and returned to Alton; heard the gospel as proclaimed by the Reorganized Church, and was baptized by Elder Samuel Perks, May 23d, 1875, and remained until her death a faithful and true friend of the gospel of Jesus Christ. She leaves a kind and devoted husband to mourn a wife, and two sons and three daughters to mourn the loss of their mother. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Heman C. Smith, assisted by Elder Scarelliff, in the Unitarian Church, and was attended by a large number of Saints and friends.

WHITE.—At Tekamah, Nebraska, February 18th, 1882, Ida A., daughter of Mr. Fred E. and sister Maggie A. White; aged 2 years, and six months. She told her mother two weeks before she died, that her little pet Birdie was going to die.

BUTLER.—At Crawfordsville, Oregon, of dropsy, March 3d, 1882, Joseph Carlos, son of brother Jason P. and sister Mary C. Butler, aged 4 years, 2 months, and 19 days.

WIGHT.—Near Ridgeway, Harrison county, Missouri, April 19th, 1882, Bro. Orange Wallis, son of Bro. Lyman L. and sister Eliza Wight. He was born at Fredricksburg, Texas, the 29th day of July, 1860, and baptized at Galesburg, Missouri, May 25th, 1871, by Elder B. V. Springer. If virtue, honesty, integrity, and devotion to principles of righteousness receive their reward, his rest must be glorious. Funeral sermon by Elder B. V. Springer.

JONES.—At Bevier, Macon county, Missouri, March 19th, 1882, after a long illness, Bro. William Jones, aged 36 years, 7 months and 19 days. He was born at Merthyr Tydvil, Wales; was a Teacher in the Church, and superintendent of the Sunday School at his death; he was a good man, kind husband and father; and leaves wife and two children mourners.

BASS.—March 29th, 1882, Lovina, daughter of brother Jacob and sister Nancy Bass. Song and prayer at their residence, and also at the grave, conducted by W. H. Bruer. She leaves many a friend to mourn her loss.

AN EARNEST LIFE.—Earnestness does not always move with a clatter. There are other things in this world which are quite as pleasant and edifying as the rub-a-dub dub of a snare drum. In fact, this kind of melody is not generally the highest kind of music. Have you never known a man bustling and officious, clamorous and loud, but who did not weigh heavy after all?—a thing very well understood by every one except just the man who might have profited by that piece of information. And have you never known a man quiet and unostentatious and faithful, and who was a perpetual blessing—a golden man, deep souled and true, whose memory lingered long after he was gone, like light upon the hills after a gorgeous sunset? The shallow stream rattles along its course; but when it is met and drowned by the majestic tides rolling in from the sea, there is silence on the hills. In the great tide there is the power of more than a hundred rivulets, yet its coming is almost as quiet as the celestial forces that bring it. The tide flows down and shallow grows the stream, and again the empty chattering goes on. And this is what we wish to say, that things most potent although demonstrative, as indeed they must be from their effects, are not necessarily noisy. A strong, earnest life need not make what some people are in the habit of calling "a fuss." It is better known by the lead that strikes than by the gun which sends it.

STRANGE.

A curious natural phenomenon is creating some excitement in Schuyler and the south portion of McDonough county, Illinois. It was found that a tract of land in the former county had sunk directly downward some forty-two feet. The tract was a piece of timber land on the side of a hill, and has an area of about five acres. It is situated one and one half miles north-west of Ray Station, on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, and a half mile from the residence of John Pittinger. Some trees two and three feet in diameter were found split wide open from top to bottom and others were still standing, with their tops level with the surface of the solid ground. No mining is known to have ever been done in that section, and the cause of the sinking seems inexplicable. It is not of the nature of a land slide, as the ground settled straight down, leaving vertical walls on every side.

You can always gauge a man's character by noting the kinds of jokes which make him laugh most heartily.

Never shrink from doing anything which it is your duty to do. The pleasure of doing your duty should be a sufficient reward.

THE SAINTS' HERALD is published SEMI-MONTHLY, at Lamoni, Decatur Co., Iowa, by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and is edited by JOSEPH SMITH. $2.15 per year. All remittances, orders, and business communications intended for the office of publication, should be directed to Joseph Smith, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa. Money may be sent Draft on Chicago; by Post Office Order on Chicago; by Registered Letter or by Express to Lamoni, Iowa; but there is very little risk in sending small sums in an ordinary letter.

A BRIGHTER DAY.

TUNE.—"Arlington."

What though our trials and troubles seem
So hard for us to bear;
A brighter day at length will beam
Upon us everywhere.

For soon the Lord of heaven will come,
With Saints to earth again;
And we shall see him as he is,
When here he comes to reign.

Dear Saints, then let us each and all,
His precepts here obey;
That when he comes again to earth,
With joy we'll hail the day.

Then our Redeemer's name we'll sing,
In songs of loudest praise;
And chant the anthems of the blest,
With Saints of former days.

Then let us each perform our part,
Our Master's word obey;
That we may in the faith press on,
Unto the perfect day.

RICHARD COBURN.

Death, Hell, and the Resurrection.

As there seems to be a difference of opinion among some of the brethren with regard to the place and duration of the punishment of the wicked, I desire to give my views concerning the matter, and also the doctrine believed and taught by the Saints generally. I am a firm believer in what the world pleases to call Mormonism, consequently I can not longer hold to doctrines generally taught by the sects, of hell and the eternal punishment of mankind. Religious fanatics have often scared me with their ideas of a never ending hell, and mankind suffering in flames of fire, forever and ever, &c. I have learned better now. That there is a hell I fully believe, and also a devil. Isaiah and Ezekiel and others, place hell in the heart of the earth, and the book teaches me that Christ went and preached to the spirits in prison, and that he was three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. Peter in his sermon on the day of Pentecost has reference to Christ being in hell, when he quoted the words of the Psalmist. Why was he there, and why should he preach to the spirits? Did it do any good? If not, why was it done, and how came the spirits to be in prison? Now we believe the words, Prison, Pit, Hell, are synonymous terms; all mean one and the same place? But how came the spirits of men to be in such a place? Was it not because they had disobeyed the commands of God? Yea, and by their disobedience they brought themselves under the bondage of sin, and they gave the devil power over them, and thus they are imprisoned.

Our first parents sinned, and sin brought death, and this imprisonment is a part of that
