EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Saints have held two services in the church at Lamoni, Sunday the 14th and 21st. Bro. W. W. Blair preached the first sermon on the evening of the 14th to a fair congregation. The audience on the evening of the 21st was much larger. There are temporary seats for nearly five hundred persons. It is going to be a commodious and pleasant room to meet in, the acoustic properties being good.

It is with pleasure that we call attention to the report of the action of the Olive Branch of Philadelphia. Brethren W. H. and E. L. Kelley have been kind and diligent, and have undoubtedly given the Saints information which was of value to them. We are pleased with the action of the branch, and commend the brethren to the kind consideration of all Saints.

Bro. Thomas M. Parr writes from Detroit City, Becker county, Minnesota, that the following recipe is sometimes effective for the relief of diphtheria: "Spirits of Turpentine one ounce, and Liquid of Tar one ounce; burn in the sick room, which should be tight, so the sick can breathe the smoke, from fifteen to twenty minutes at a time often.

As will be seen by letters from brethren H. P. Brown and Richard Ferris, the movement for a paper on the Pacific Coast is taking shape; good. The press is one of the levers which move the world of mankind in the march of progress. The times in which the enterprise starts are not peculiarly propitious; but we hope that the desires of the brethren engaged in it may be sustained by action, enterprise, and unity of purpose and effort. We trust that Truth's Expositor may flourish without the wading through difficulties that the Herald encountered at the outset

Bro. M. S. Frick, of Missouri Valley, Iowa, has succeeded in getting the Epitome of Faith published in the Harrison County News, a copy of which he sends us. He would publish the tract "What is True Orthodoxy," in the Missouri Valley Times for December 26th.

LAW ALIAS COMMON SENSE.

In discussing the right of the Mormons, or Latter Day Saints to practice polygamy some time since, we ventured the opinion that persons going out of any of the United States into territory belonging to the United States, over which the laws of the States were extended, could not legally practice in such territory what was actually, or constructively a crime in the states whence those persons came. That over those territories United States law extended at their acquisition, either by purchase, or by conquest, and that in the absence of direct statutory enactments the common law, and the general usages and customs regulating and governing society in the several states as a whole obtained in such territories. At the time of the expression of this view by us, we were politely dubbed a "constitutional lawyer" by some of those who would be adversely affected by such a theory; but being like others who have said, "I told you so," we like to see things happen that confirm views theretofore expressed; we therefore give below the result of an appeal from the Probate Court of Salt Lake county, Utah, with the decision of the points involved in the legal controversy by Judge Zane; in which views are given to which those expressed by us were similar. What the Judge gives as the result of legal training and knowledge, we gave as the suggestions of common sense.

In our Reply to Orson Pratt, a tract published by the Herald Office, referring to the statutory laws of the states of Illinois and Iowa, defining the crimes of bigamy and polygamy, we stated:

"In every state of the United States similar laws exist. Now, if there was no rule of law preventing the practice of such a doctrine in the state of Illinois, and such a practice had obtained in the church as a part of their faith, then in every state where any should go from Illinois practicing that doctrine, they must be received and their acts recognized, for such marriages would be legal; but as there was in that state a law prohibiting such practice, it could not be legally practiced in any other state of the Union on the ground of state sanction. If not in the States, can it be in the Territories belonging to the States?"

In the speech delivered by us in Farwell Hail, Chicago, February 22d, 1882, we took similar grounds and it is consolatory to find that the term "constitutional lawyer" applied in derision because of the common sense conclusion we had drawn may now apply to Judge Zane, who gives similar views as the result of legal study.

Amy Sugden, et al., vs Eliza Senior.

This is an appeal from the Probate Court of Salt Lake county. By agreement of parties a jury is waived and the case is submitted to the court upon a stipulation, from which it appears that on the third day of March, 1870, at Salt Lake City, the late Edward Senior having a lawful wife living, with her consent, married Eliza Senior, according to the form of plural marriage, prescribed by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, of which they were all members; that he lived and cohabited with both for several months, when his lawful wife died, and afterwards with the other, until the 15th day of December 1873, when he died intestate leaving the plaintiff and Edward Senior, jr., his children by his lawful wife, and Edward Senior jr. and Fredriche J. Senior, children of a son, the issue of the first marriage; that the surviving son also died in 1880, unmarried and without lineal descendants; he also left Eliza Senior his plural wife. The intestate died seized of lot No. 1, in block 58, in Plat "C" upon which he at his death resided with his plural wife and his two grandsons who were minors, but who are now of age and married. He also left other property which is not in dispute.

On these facts plaintiff's counsel claim that she inherited one half of the real estate described absolutely, the debts having been paid, and that the other half passed to the grandchildren. The defendant, Eliza Senior, claims that she was the wife of the intestate at the time of his death, and as such was entitled to share in his property.

That the formal marriage to the defendant was absolutely void, is an assertion which needs neither argument nor the citation of authority in its support. The parties to it knew that its celebration was a violation of law. When a man and woman enter into a formal marriage in good faith, not knowing of an impediment which renders it void and live together as husband and wife after the impediment is removed, the law will indulge the presumption of marriage. The intention to contract a lawful marriage in the first instance appearing, it is reasonable to presume that such intention with the conduct indicating marriage is sufficient evidence from which to infer that it has actually taken place. But when the impediment is known to the parties, when it is formally consummated, cohabitation after its removal authorizes no such inference. This is supported by Bishop on Marriage and Divorce Vol. 1st, sections 508 and 509. Other authorities might also be cited.

Counsel for defendant insists that the law of Mexico or the civil law is otherwise, and that upon the acquisition of California, of which Utah was a part, from Mexico, the laws of that country continued in force in the ceded territory, until expressly altered, and that such change had not been made in this Territory at the death of the

When territory is acquired upon which organized society exists in which the rights and duties of the people are defined and regulated by law, such laws continue till altered by competent authority. But when territory is uninhabited at the time it is acquired, and people come in from the country receiving the acquisition, they continue their usages and customs and follow the lines and rules of conduct with which they are familiar. They are not required to conform to those of which they know nothing, and which in fact have no actual existence there. It would be unreasonable to require people under such circumstances to comprehend definitions of right and duty and remedial forms and metheds to which they are strangers and which may be preserved in a foreign language which they cannot understand. At the time of its acquisition by the United States Uuah was inhabited by Indians and a few thousand Mormon settlers who had just come in from the various States where the common law existed.

In section nine of an act of Congress establishing a territorial government for Utah, approved September the 9th, 1850, it is provided that the Supreme and District courts respectively shall possess chancery, as well as common law jurisdiction. Jurisdiction is the power to inquire into the facts, to interpret, construe and apply the law. This act declares the existence of the common law so far as it relates to jurisdiction, and appears to be a recognition of its existence here at that time. The court is of the opinion that the common law has existed in this Territory since its organization. It is also claimed that the defendant has a homestead estate in the property in dispute by virtue of section 676, compilation laws Utah, 1876. That section is as follows:

"The homestead occupied by the wife or any portion of the family of the deceased at the time of his death, shall in all cases be held free to the use of the wife and family of the deceased, and shall not be liable to any claim or claims against said estate, and if there be other property remaining after the liabilities of the estate are liquidated, then it shall in the absence of other arrangements by will descend in equal shares to his children or their heirs, one share to such heirs through the mother of such children, if she should survive him during her natural life or during her widowhood; or if he has any more than one wife who either died or survived in lawful wedlock, it should be equally divided between the living and the heirs of those who are dead, such heirs taking by right of representation."

In this section the persons having a right of homestead are described as wife and family. The term wife must be held to mean a lawful wife, and she could not be a lawful widow without first having been a lawful wife. The marriage could afford her no valid right as a widow if it was void to her as a wife. In designating the persons who inherit property other than the homestead, only the children and their heirs, and the mother of his children are mentioned. The intention as expressed in this section only includes the widow and the children of the intestate and their heirs.

The term "family," as used in the statute exempting homesteads from sale on executions, is confined in terms to the section wherein it occurs, and throws no light upon the term as used in the section under consideration. The claim that the defendant was a member of the family of the deceased, and as such has a homestead right, is without warrant in law. Her association and cohabitation with him under the guise of marriage, the law characterizes as adulterous, and was nothing less than persistence in crime. The court is of the opinion that one half of the premises descended to Amy Sugden, the planintiff, and that Edward Senior and Fredriche J. Senior each took one fourth; and judgment will be ren-C. S. ZANE. dered accordingly. (Signed)

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. L. Kelley wrote from Hornerstown, New Jersey, December 18th:

Saints feeling well here. We had a fine audience last night. Snowing to-day: the first of the season for Jersey.

Bro. Peter Andersen in sending in his copy for Truth's Banner for January, 1885, says:

Last number of the Banner is very good, and I hope the paper may receive proper aid from the Saints, so as to make it a success. I don't expect to make it to the taste of all; but then, I don't care to be the first man in the world that could please everybody.

Give the Banner a lift.

Bro. Adam See writes from Adams Center, Wisconsin, that

Two Mormon Elders from Salt Lake City have been here preaching. They are very smart looking young fellows. They preached twice: once at our house, and once at the Advent Schoolhouse. They preached the first principles of the gospel.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

2.—Did our Savior mean that Nicodemus would have to be born again to see the kingdom, and then born of the water and the spirit to get into it?

A.—Our Savior evidently intended to teach that no one unassisted by the Spirit could see, recognize, the kingdom of heaven. That it was requisite that there should be a change of purpose, a "change of heart," of such a character that the "Spirit of Christ unto the remission of sins" has been given the believer, by which Spirit he will be born again, unto a newness of life, It is called being born again, because it changes the life, purposes and desires of the recipient.

Q.—To whom is the following applicable? "And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of Man it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come?"

A.—To all who sinning against the truth will be under the necessity of suffering the penalty for their transgression; he who expiates his sin is not forgiven; and will not be either in "this world, or the world to come."

Q.—ist. Is it the duty of the acting Priest of a branch when hearing the rumor of a difficulty between two members to immediately (without finding out the truth or falsity of the matter), send the Teacher to discipline the members at fault?

A.—No. He should report to the presiding elder. If presiding he should make inquiries as to the trouble before disciplining either.

2d. In a large city when there is quite a membership of the church, with ten or twelve Elders included, may such a thing be done as to have two organized branches for the sake of convenience of members to their homes and to reach the public with the gospel?

A.—Yes, if all agree to it.

WE quote from the editorial of the Chicago Tribune, one of the ablest conservators of public opinion in the north-west. the following in exposition of the rights of the people as against common carriers, of which class are the railroad corporations everywhere netting the land with their parallel lines of iron rails. It is timely, this looking after the abuses of the trust of the public, which after fostering the railway systems by town and county subsidies, grants of public land, and privileges by the States, dictate exorbitant terms for freight and passenger rates, to which the public submit. The language of the Judge is significant, and will give encouragement to many.

RIGHTS OF CITIZENS vs. CORPORATIONS.

"The surrender of the Hocking Valley Railroad in its contest with the Chicago shipper of coal whom it attempted to prevent from reaching the market, and the defeat of the Lake Shore Road in the suit brought againts it by a firm of Cleveland oil-refiners to whom it refused the same facilities and rates it gave the Standard Oil Company, are very timely and important evidences that the railroads can be made to obey the laws if the proper pressure is put upon them. The Hocking Valley Railroad attempted to refuse transportation to a coal shipper who would not join in the effort to force the miners on strike to accept the reduced wages offered. When ordered by the court to extend him the same facilities as were given other shippers, it still had the hardihood to refuse to do so. A weak man, or one ignorant of his rights might have submitted, but the proposed victim in this case was not made of that stuff. He caused the managers of the railroad to be called into court to answer for contempt for disobeying the judicial orders that had been given them. So thoroughly were the railroad managers aware that they were occupying an unjust and illegal position that they dared not come into court. They conceded to their antagonist all that he demanded, on condition that the proceedings against them should be discontinued, which was done. It is to be regretted that the case did not go on, so that a full judicial opinion could have been rendered as to the rights of all shippers to equality in their treatment by railroads; but after all, the law is so clear that this was not necessary. occurrence is a notice to business men that if they choose to submit to the unrighteous discriminations of the railroads it is their own fault. If they will stand up for their rights they will get them. The law is on their side. The discriminations and combinations of the railroads are illegal, and the railroads know it.

"In the Cleveland case of discrimination charged against the Lake Shore Railroad in favor of the Standard Oil Company the railroad chose to fight and was beaten. The Judge laid down the law with great clearness. 'The railroads,' he said, 'are common carriers, made so by law, and the public have a right to their use and benefit as such on terms of equality, without unfair discrimination; and this requirement or exaction on the part of the public does not in any manner infringe upon the equitable or legal rights of such carriers. What is equality may depend on many things. Yet it is easy to see that to discriminate between shippers at the mere caprice of the carrier, everything being equal, is unjust, unfair, and wrong. A discrimination on the part of this defendant in favor of the Standard Oil Company against the plaintiffs on the ground that the Standard furnished the largest quantity of oil for shipment, and on that ground alone, everything else being equal, would be and is unwarranted.'

"One passage in the Judge's charge is a reminder to the railroads that the verdict for a few thousand dollars given in this case is but the first small drop of a shower which may overwhelm them if they persist in their wrong doing. 'If,' he said, 'there were evidence that the discriminations of the railroad were marked by either malice, fraud, or oppression, and that its unjust charges were maliciously intended to injure, the jury is at liberty to assess such an amount of exemplary damages as it thinks right under the circumstances.' When the railroads of this country, which have thought it such sport to build up coal and oil and other monopolies, and to crush out competing interests by discriminating rates, get into the hands of juries that levy exemplary damages they will be made to pay terribly for their iniquities.

"The law is on the side of the people. The railroads have no right to issue stock that is not paid for in cash; they have no right to tax the people unreasonable rates in order to pay interest and dividends on bogus stocks and bonds; they have no right to charge one man one rate and his rival another—the State has a right to regulate their charges and methods of operating. If under these circumstances the people choose to submit any longer to the outrageous abuses which characterize the railroads of this country, it is only their pusillanimity that is to blame."

Correspondence.

St. Joseph, Missouri, December 24th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph Smith:—Of late I've been preaching in Holt and Nodaway counties, trying to cheer up the Saints and forward on the great work of God. I find good, God fearing Saints in my travels, Saints that stand to what they profess to believe. They say that Mr. Braden spoke the truth once when he said that if the heads of the Church should deny the Latter Day Work, it had got such a hold on the members they would not deny it. It's even so. Amen.

Near Ross Grove I spoke seven times in the German Baptist Church. I was kindly received and invited home to one of their preacher's houses for one night and a day. We talked up matters freely, and sold him the debate between Kelley and Braden.

At Ross Grove, the 8th, I baptized one, a lady fifty years old the day she entered the Kingdom of heaven; at Barnard the 22d one more. The day was cold and if we'd had the word only it would have been a cold time, but the spirit was with us, so we felt very comfortable. Brother Joseph, the gospel we preach I love, and the longer I live the better I love it, and feel just as anxious to see it spread as I did fifteen years ago. I received a letter from my uncle, Augustus Morse, Geelong, Australia. I wish some one near there would call on him. I go home tomorrow.

Yours truly,

J. C. Foss.

No. 911, Broadway, Oakland, Cal., December 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Last evening those interested in the publication of a paper on this coast in the interest of the latter day work, met at my office, and proceeded to organize a Board of Publication and appoint an Editor. After preliminary organization, Thomas J. Andrews of San Francisco was chosen President of Board; Geo. S. Lincoln, San Francisco, treasurer; Richard Ferris of Oakland, secretary; A. Haws of Oakland one of the Board, and H. P. Brown, Editor. The name of the paper is to be, "Truth's Expositor."

We were somewhat disappointed in not having more aid and encouragement from the middle and southern districts; but perhaps they do not need, or at least do not feel the need, of such a paper in their part of the State as much as we do in our part. We were obliged to make our paper smaller than we desired, and to issue only 5,000 copies per month, instead of 10,000. But we were bound to do the very best we could for the cause, and earnestly thank those who have so generously co-operated with us to inaugurate this infant paper. And we sincerely hope that others will see our good works, and be led to put their mites into the work; and not only double the size of the paper, but also the number to be issued monthly.

We extend a cordial invitation to our brethren and sisters to take hold with us to make it a success worthy of the cause; and to send in to the treasurer such amounts as they feel able to spare for the cause, and as fast as possible. We invite presidents of branches to furnish to me the times and places of the stated meetings of their several branches, which will be published in the paper free of charge; and to do it at once. We shall probably get our first number out about the 15th day of January, 1885.

We mean business, and the movement is in the hands of men who never say "fail." We shall push the matter forward in the interest of the work as fast as we have the means provided. Remember Davitt says, "The liberal man deviseth liberal things, and by his liberality shall he be sustained." We intend to make our paper liberal enough for all honest men; but we do not intend it to be the vehicle for propagating the private opinions of individual members of the Church, which are antagonistic to the well established and admitted doctrines of the Reorganized Church of Christ. But while we say that, we expect those who are not members of our Church shall have a respectful hearing through our columns against the attacks of our papers, or of our ministerial brethren upon the doctrines of those not in fellowship with us—as far as we are able to give them room.

Hoping and praying for Zion's cause, I subscribe myself your brother in bonds,

H. P. Brown.

No. 630, Chestnut Street,
OAKLAND, California,
December 16th, 1884.

PRES. JOSEPH SMITH; Dear Sir and Brother:-This is to inform you that the suggestion of Bro. A. H. Smith that this coast ought to sustain a paper of its own, in the interest of the Church is about to be carried out. The efforts of the brethren here being kindly encouraged by your own words as also those of Uncle Wm. B. Smith, culminated in a called meeting of those interested that reside in this immediate vicinity, though haply all are not confined to this locality, for we have letters and subscriptions from different parts of this Pacific Coast, and so far, as far east as Pennsylvania. Among the resolutions of the meeting was that of sending a synopsis of the meeting to the Herald. Suffice it to say a Board of Publication was chosen, consisting of Elders Lincoln, Andrews, and Haws. High Priest H. P. Brown was chosen Editor; Bro. Lincoln, Treasurer; Ferris, Secretary. Name of paper, Truth's Expositor,-to labor in the interests of the Reorganization, varying in nothing from the known and accepted doctrines of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; outside of that, liberal in its tone, striving to make itself interesting by a table of varied contents. We expect to start with an edition of five thousand, hoping to grow in size, power, and usefulness. A special feature of the Expositor, and which it is expected will be valuable, is the advertising of the time and place of meeting of the various organized branches on this coast; and we desire herewith to ask the brethren of such branches to send us immediately (that it may be inserted in the first number) the requisite information of that kind, as it is expected that many free copies will be circulated in the various towns where branches are located, calling the people's attention to meetings, &c. Subscriptions, donations, or communications may be sent to any of the Board of Publication, Treasurer or Secretary, for the present.

> Manassas, Colorado, December 12th, 1884.

Kind Readers:-Did you ever travel aboard a Utah Mormon emigrant train? If you never did, I will now introduce you to the inside of one. There is nothing about it different from other emigrant trains except its destination—bound westward to the Brighamite Zion, located in the valleys of the Rocky Mountains. It is a cold, rainy day, in the month of November, 1877, as we take shelter in the old dilapidated coach that has seen its best days thrice over, and has now been taken from its sidings, where it has rested for many days, as it is never called into requisition only on such occasions as this, when it is leased or chartered to the Boss Elder for a very small stipend, to enable him to return home with a purse well stuffed with script; as it is reported and generally believed, that they exact and retain from five to ten dollars on each ticket procured; consequently they are able to occupy a Pullman car and dine on the best of viands on their return. We will now take in our surroundings. Amidst the din of talking, laughing, crying and scolding, our eyes wander slowly from seat to seat, from one end of the car to the other. We survey it all, and as our glance rests for the moment on each individual, we examine their features minutely, to see if we can read their destiny; but the pages of the dark book of fate are sealed to our vision, and we can only surmise. Just opposite sits an old bald-headed sire, surrounded by his numerous offspring, beautiful in their innocence, though humbly clad. He pays no attention to his surroundings, his eyes have a vacant stare. Is he thinking of the step that he has taken? Could he but realize the dreadful consequences of his precipitate conduct! O, how his better nature would recoil from such a rash act! But his whole mind, heart and soul, are enveloped in the black shroud of religious fanaticism. It is impossible for him to comprehend the great burthen of misery and woe he is entailing on those who are, or should be, entwined among the tenderest chords of his heart. Just in front of him sit several blushing maidens, just blooming into sweet womanhood, with light hearts, faces wreathed in smiles, and joy beaming from their eyes; happy in their ignorance, little heeding, and unconscious of what the future has in store for them. How many of their pure and tender hearts will be laid upon the altar of sacrifice to the rapacious lust of their brother, man. As we gaze, our minds are busy with thoughts concerning all this pure and innocent handiwork of the great architect or the universe. Will they fill and adorn the sphere that the great Jehovah designed them for? or will they be only instruments in the hands of evil and designing men, through false teachings led astray so far, that they will ignore all the finer sensibilities of virture, modesty and female rectitude, through fanatical religious zeal, to pamper to the lusts of unscrupulous men? Great and merciful God, is it possible that these, thine innocent children, will be reared and educated to dishonor thy name by forsaking thee, and serving and rendering obedience to man, thy creature. The Lord has spoken through the mouth of his servant Jeremiah in the 23d chapter, that both prophet and priest are profane and liars, and have scattered his flock; and that he will visit upon them the evil of their doings; and that his anger shall not return until he has executed the thoughts of his heart; and that we should consider it perfectly in the latter days; for he has not sent these profane and lying prophets, but that they prophesy evil from their corrupt hearts to cause his people to forget his holy name by their lying dreams; and that he will pour out his vengeance upon them to their utter discomfiture.

To resume: The great iron horse is speeding us along over the rich bottoms of the father of waters, the luxuriant lands of Missouri, thence over the fertile plains of Kansas, till the lofty snow capped peaks of the old rockies loom up in the distance. But the irksomeness of the journey has been and is enlivened by the sweet sounds of vocal music, singing the favorite Brighamite proselyting songs:

"O Babylon, we bid thee farewell; We're going to the mountains of Ephraim to dwell." "Cheer Saints, cheer, we're bound for peaceful Zion." "O, ye mountains high," &c.

Little did we think then, how soon the sentiments of the songs would be changed entirely, and as the old saying is, sung on the other side of the mouth. But such will be the end eventually of all those who follow after blind guides. We roll up to the depot in the beautiful city of the pueblos, nestling in the foot hills of the mountains. This is our destination for the present, as the Zion in Colorado has not been located as yet. So we emerge from the warm atmosphere of the cars, to meet the chilling blast that sweeps down from the snow covered mountains, very few of us being clad sufficiently for the sudden change, with no other recourse than the opposite side of board fences to protect us from the wind, where we were kept in expectancy and suspense for two or three hours. When at last the welcome sound greeted our ears, to take up our beds and walk, we were nothing loth to do it; and after a tramp of about fifteen minutes, we were ushered into a large hall, used as a theater. Now came a scramble to see who would be the lucky wight to hold his aching fingers to the only one old stove in the room. So into this room we were crammed and jammed. It reminded me of the days of slavery in the South, when droves of poor negroes would be huddled into one solitary room as a market house. The only difference discernible was color and disposition; while the negroes were all fun and gayety, we were forlorn and wretched. Mothers worn out from fatigue and loss of sleep; children sick and crying; no fire-place or cook stove where victuals could be prepared. I saw at once that something had to be done, and that quickly, as there was muntiny brewing in camp, and more especially in my own mess. So I determined that not many nights would find me and my household in such a mixed up affair. But the next day there was an organization effected by electing for presiding officer, a very good old gentleman, whose mental caliber would not number more than thirty-two: and when the boss Elder announced from the stand, that it would be as great a sin to disobey the said officer, as it would be to disobey God himself, as he stood to us as God, or God's agent; and we must obey him, many of us could not at the time comprehend such language. But we can now; and as the old saying is, I began to smell a mouse. So I got together my own family, and my worldly effects, and moved to more comfortable quarters. And as my eyes had been relieved of one small mote, I began to see and understand matters in a different light from what I had formerly. But it took some time to remove the beam, so that I could see clearly. But I had seen enough to place me on the watch.

The next thing I noticed, was my being ignored by the bosses, although before kicked out of the cancer I was, if not the right, I was made their left bower. But the time soon came that I was considered a good trump. I am so particular in describing these minor matters, in order to illustrate the manner in which the minds of the blind and willing dupes are fettered by priest-craft. The establishing of winter quarters for the company, minus the writer and his immediate household, was effected by erecting one wall board shanties, covered with dirt, in which the poor women aud children were forced to endure the rigors of a Colorado winter.

Here I will introduce one of the priestcraft's pet hobbies, by which they fleece their ignorant followers; viz: "The United Order," I do not wish it understood that I am an enemy to such an institution, for I am not, when it is conducted righteously for the building up of the kingdom of God, and for the prosperity of its members, individually and collectively. But the manner in which it is conducted by the Utah faction, I do bitterly oppose, because it is nothing more than a confidence game to rob the ignorant and confiding. In other words, it is a wholesale swindling concern, as the facts given to me by those who have been robbed of their earthly possessions show. One faithful old adherent of Brighamism told me, that he put into the order that he belonged to, thirteen hundred dollars in cash, and three years' work, without ever receiving even one dollar in return. An old widow said that her husband, when he joined the order, turned over to the boss three very large freight wagons, and thirteen yoke of cattle; and when the concern failed, he only received back one wagon and two yoke of oxen. Another woman said that her husband placed all that he possessed in the order, with the exception of two cows and a few chickens, which she retained as her private property; and that she saved up during the continuance of the rotten concern, ninety-five dollars, and that was all they had to start anew with, as her husband only received fifteen cents for all that he had put in and for his services during the time. I asked them what became of all the effects. They stated that the leaders took them. And as far as I am able to learn, the above is a true history of every order that has been inaugurated by their leaders. And as history generally repeats itself, so it was the case with our Pueblo concern in the short period of two months. But in this case it was an exception; for instead of the boss or president getting away with the members' money, (as they had but little to put in), so just as soon as they had eaten up his means they left him to shift for himself, and the concern broke up with hard feelings, which still rankle in their hearts, which will never be forgotten, although forgiven.

Ever praying for the cause of truth, I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

FELIX B. MOYERS.

Pomerov, Kansas, December 15th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—I feel glad to express my thanks to my Heavenly Father for the gift of the gospel, and that he has enabled me to obey the same. We are here alone, myself and wife, away from any branch of the church; but we are visited sometimes by Bro. R. May, from Independence, Mo. He has preached here for the last two years. His labors have done much good in this place and in the surrounding country.

The people now understand the Latter-day-Saints to be a different class or people from what they thought they were; and I think if some one were sent here to preach, and take in this section for about seven miles around, there would be some good done. Bro. R. May was here lately, and had a good turn out, and a good interest manifested; but he told us that he could not come here as often as he did heretofore, as duty called elsewhere. We are sorry for this, because he is acquainted with the people in this place. He has gathered large crowds to hear him, at times, and most of them have expressed themselves in favor of the gospel as he preached it, and I would be very sorry to see the good work stopped. If it is possible to send some one here, from time to time, we would be glad to do the best we can for them, and make them as comfortable as we can, hoping that this will meet with the favor of those in charge of the mission and district.

This place is thirteen miles from Kansas City, Mo., on the Missouri Pacifiic railway.

May God bless his people, is my prayer. Amen! From your Brother in Christ,

JOHN HOLMES.

Box 240, PITTSBURG, Kan., December 18th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph: This seems to be the age of debates in this part of the country. We have had three within the last two or three months-all from the Disciple Church. The last commenced on the 8th inst., at Pittsburg, between Elder Evan A. Davis of our side, and Elder Lucas of the Disciples' side. Subjects: The Kingdom that Daniel saw, (Dan. 2: 44), and Eternal Punishment, or is there a hope after death? They debated one night, and the weather got too rough, so they postponed it to the 27th January, 1885, when they are to canvass the whole matter over again. The argument was good on our side. The first speech was so full of Biblical and historical matter, and so well measured and directed, that it settled the whole question to our side, without leaving any chance for a successful contradiction; and it told visibly on the opposition in his second speech.

Another debate was held a couple of months ago between Elder Edward Wheeler and Elder Treble of the Disciple Church. This man was, and is, a young Braden, if we may judge from the quality of his stock-in-trade—dirt, dirt, misstatements, and black lies without end. But he met more than he contracted for in Bro. Ed., and was worsted a hundred per cent. in the estimation of his own members, and has left the field. Ours was a victory for the truth.

A week or two later, Elder Evan A. Davis ran across him near Columbus, and was challenged to debate, as before, How their respective churches would stand New Testament proofs of Christianity? They started in at once. I did not arrive to attend this debate until the third night; and, true to his avocation, I found Mr. Treble to his knees in mud, carrying slush and dirt to bury up Mormonism; but to no effect. His opponent was too much for him, and he had already declared that he would break the debate up that night; and Braden-like, he formed fifty or a hundred questions, irrelative to the proposition, and requested the Moderators to compel his opponent to answer, or he could do nothing with him; and of course, being that two good Campbellites were in the board, and hence had the majority, they immediately formed a cast iron rule to that effect, and that brought the debate to a close, to the dissatisfaction and disgust of the people. Who is next?

I think that these are "perilous times;"—the host of Campbellite preachers and editors are combined to enhance their own popularity, and to bring upon us not only sectional disapprobation, but national persecution if they can (no matter what means are used to bring it about); and for this reason, with others, we should particularly observe the admonition of our Master—"Be ye wise servants, and harmless as doves."

Two good men baptized in Pleasant View Branch lately, brothers Peak and R. Jones, both heads of families. We are doing the best we can to answer all calls, and reach all points, but can not do it—means of support and travel too limited. We have to attend considerably to the affairs of this world.

There is a good family of old-time Saints in the neighborhood of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, that corresponds with me, that wish some of the brethren of that district to visit or correspond with them, so that they may find out the nearest branch. Here is the address: Abram Morgan, Midway, Washington Co., Pennsylvania.

Your brother,

John T. Davis.

FRIEND, Nebraska,

December 15th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—We take this way of informing your many readers of our whereabouts. We now live three miles north of Friend, a thriving little town of about twelve hundred inhabitants, located on the main line of the B. & M. R. R., in Saline county, Nebraska. We are as yet strangers in this country. This seems to be a God-blessed land, with its bountiful crops, and with its many well-to-do tillers of the rich soil; while there are many others that make a living in other occupations, like myself. While we have all been blessed with all the earthly goods, we feel to thank our Heavenly Father for all these blessings.

There do not seem to be any of his covenant children in this part of his vineyard, although we feel that there are some that are honest in heart, and perhaps would obey if they had the opportunity.

How can they hear without a preacher? How can one preach unless he be sent. We, as covenant children, are waiting patiently for some elder to come this way, to promulgate the gospel in its purity. They will ever find protection under our parental roof. Perhaps it would be advisable for the president of the district to look after his sheep; see that they are cared for. I have got permit to hold meetings in two different school-houses, if there could be any one to preach. If this should meet the eyes of any of the elders that are on this mission, and would want to come here, they could drop me a card. I would have all things ready, meet them at depot, or they could find us three miles north of Friend. As corn gathering has been the business of the farmers for the last two months and that is nearing to a close, it seems to me if we had a little change in the way of meeting it would do well. I have been employed for the past two months erecting a church for the United Brethren. I find them quite liberal in some of their views, but somewhat prejudiced against the truth as it is taught us in the Bible. Ever hoping that the time will come that we will be privileged of hearing the gospel preached and we can unite with the people of God, we ever remain your brother and sister in bonds,

Bro. & Sr. Bowen.

Twiggs, Pleasants Co., W. Va., November 30th, 1881.

Bro. Foseph:—I will write to all my friends through the Herald. I am still firm in the faith that I embraced almost four years ago. I have a determination to press on and not give up the race; for I know the crown is sure to those who continue faithful to the end. When I look back over my past life, I wonder that God has ever been so merciful to me, and blessed me as He has. Truly God is good to all his people, and of much mercy to all mankind. While we must bear persecutions, trials and afflictions for the gospel, yet this is but little compared with what our Savior suffered, in order to place eternal life within our reach; and as the servant is not greater than his Master, we should not shrink from bearing the reproach that our Master has borne. "He that will live godly in Christ Jesus, must suffer persecution." But this can only be for a short time, for the day of redemption draweth near. Therefore we should not lay off our armor, or become careless and unconcerned; but should gird on the whole armor of Christ and press on bravely until victory is won.

I receive the Herald and Hope regularly which in my isolated condition are great helps to me. I take pride in the Herald as a church organ, and think that no Latter Day Saint can afford to do without it. I hope it may ever continue as a messenger of truth and an advocate of righteousness; and that it may be instrumental in removing darkness from the minds of the people. I will be glad to hear from any of the Saints by letter. My address is given above. I desire the prayers of God's people that I may ever live as becometh a follower of Christ, and that I may never weary in well doing, but run the race with patience to the end. I am yours in hope of life eternal, OKEY J. TARY.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Dec. 18th.—The official news in London today that there is a Frenchman in the Mahdi's camp who has organized a secret service by which he obtains from the French Colony in Cairo news of all of Gen. Wolseley's movements, and of the English doings in general, has created much indignation everywhere. The attitude of the French in Egypt has been a hostile one from the start, but the present discovery is something that has been wholly unlooked for, and is likely to provoke a diplomatic quarrel between France and England. The Frenchman in question, M. Oliver Pain, is 32 years old and a journalistic adventurer who was a leading character in the

Among the goods arriving at Dover, England, today from the continent the police discovered a tin case filled with dynamite cartridgest weighing 200 pounds. The case was furnished with a false label.

Henry M. Stanley has written a letter in reference to congo matters, in which he points out the urgent necessity of settling the neutralization of the Congo country; of determining definitely its frontier, and bringing about a general recognition of the African International Association, before the Berlin Conference has concluded its labors. If these problems shall not be settled, he thinks the Congo will only prove a tempting bait to France and Portugal. He thinks England should propose to Germany that, inasmuch as the association cannot make war, therefore war shall not be made against the association. If the conference disbands before these great questions have been settled, then farewell to the Congo basin and a long good-night to its development.

The French force in Tonquin is strongly intrenched at Langkop. The Chinese are in force four miles distant. The French anxiously await reinforcements. There are many deaths among the soldiers, and a large number are unfit for service. Operations in Formosa are at a standstill.

In the Anarchist trial today Reinsdorf confessed that he was connected with the plot to assasinate the Emperor of Germany at Niederwald, and referred in a most vehement manner to the condition of the working people. The Judges were frequently compelled to interfere and rebuke the prisoner. Reinsdorf continued, saying the task of obtaining freedom devolved upon the workmen themselves, and contests at the polls, so he believed, by Social-Democrats were absurd and irrational. The Anarchist programme of action would alone do any good. The end justified the means. There was no good in being sentimental, and he had done his duty as an Anarchist. He admitted that he had persuaded Rupsch and Kuechler to join him, and he gave them the necessary instructions as to handling and placing the dynamite, adding boldly that if he had not been sick he himself would probably have committed the assasination at Niederwald.

According to the terms of the new Sooloo treaty liberty of trade is allowed with the Sooloo Islands and Spanish claims in Borneo are renounced, while England recognizes Spain as the sovereign of the Sooloo Islands and allows liberty of trade with Borneo.

The bourse was unsettled to-day in consequence of the disappearance of Lucas Jauner, Director of the Department of Austrian discounts, and the discovery of a deficit of 2,059,960 florins (about $1,000,000). At the last examination of the bank's assets, Nov. 18, everything was right. A reward of 2,000 florins is offered for the capture of Jauner. It is rumored that he has committed suicide. Heinrich Kuffier, a broker, was arrested for suspected complicity with Jauner. The latter had discounted bad bills of Kuffier's to the amount of a million florins.

In 1847 the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad, which was chartered Jan. 16, 1836, was put under construction, and the close of 1848 found only ten miles completed. The capital stock of the company was then fixed at $100,000, with power to increase it to $1,000,000. So timid were the projectors of the road that they put a clause in the charter which authorized them to build a turnpike in case they failed with the railroad. It was in these words:

"That if at any time after the passage of this act it shall be deemed advisable by the directors of the said corporation to make and establish a good, permanent turnpike road upon any portion of the route of the railroad by this act authorized to be constructed, then the said directors are hereby authorized and empowered to construct a turnpike on any portion of the said route."

San Domingo is the latest conquest under the new policy of making treaties. The treaty reyeals a general scheme of commercial reciprocity which appears to be broader in its scope than that embraced in the Spanish treaty. Another feature, which is regarded as important, is the agreement that the gold and silver coin of the United States shall be the standard of money values in the island and that all disputes growing out of the terms of reciprocity shall be decided by arbitration. It is believed that these conditions will enable American merchants to cultivate a large trade with San Domingo, and that the harbor of Samana will become the chief coaling station in the new Nicaragua highway of the Pacific.

The thermometer sunk almost out of sight to-day. The lowest temperature in Chicago was, however, as nothing compared with that reported from Minnedosa, where the mercury went down to 39° below, and other points where cold almost equally intense prevailed. Fort Garry reported 33°, St. Vincent 30°, Berlin, Wis., 30°, Milwaukee, 23°, Rockford, Ill., 25°, and Fort Dodge, Ia., 28°. At Davenport and Dubuque the Mississippi River was frozen over; at La Porte, Ind., there was a railroad blockade, and at Lynchburg, Va., a heavy snow-storm. Leadville Colo., reported two feet of snow and all railroads blockaded. At midnight the thermometer registered 15° below zero in Chicago and falling.

More damage was done to London bridge by the recent explosion than was at first supposed. The official report of the Chief of the Department of Explosives says that the dynamite was probably suspended over the sewer-hole at the Gaze pier. A reward of £500 has been offered by the authorities for the conviction of the guilty parties.

Dec. 19th.—The report telegraphed from Melbourne today that Germany had annexed the admirality Islands, the Islands of New Britain and New Ireland, and portions of New Guinea has caused a big sensation in London. Germany has never hitherto claimed sovereignty over these islands, and they have been either in the possession of the Ocean natives or under the control of France, but they are just north of the British colonies of Australia, and their occupation by Germany looks like a menace to both France and England.

The conservative papers in London declare that the English Government has committed a breach of the neutrality laws, which may have serious results, in permitting the sale to France of British merchants' vessels to be used in transporting French troops to Tonquin. It is known that at least two of these steamers have left British ports to be used by France in her hostile operations against China, and that others are preparing to sail. The papers say that a state of war exists between France and China, and that England can not be relieved of neutrality obligations by M. Ferry's verbal juggling in calling the French attacks upon chinese ports acts of reprisal.

A powerful Anglo-Dutch company has signed a contract for cutting 15,000,000 metres of the canal on the Culebra section at a figure under eight francs per metre, the work to be finished within two years. A large force of Europeans is ordered for the work.

Although a number of bodies have already been found in the ruins of the Catholic Orphan Asylum in Brooklyn which was burned Thursday, no one knows as yet how many lives have been lost. No less than 123 of the little boys who were sheltered in the asylum are still unaccounted for, and it is feared that many of them perished in the flames.

Lucas Janner, Director of the Securities of the Lower Austrian Discount Bank, shot himself, leaving behind him a deficit of about $1,000,000.

Heaps of human bones have been found in the loft of a New York house. No one knows how they got there.

The opposition to the proposed duty on foreign cereals and live stock continues to grow in France. The extraordinary success which the organization of branches of the Anti-Corn Duty League is making in every part of the Republic indicates an overwhelming popular opposition to the duty.

It is announced from Paris that the experiments which have been conducted at vast expense in past years in what are known as the National Porcelain Works at Sevres have at last culminated in the discovery of a complete process for the manufacture of a grade of porcelain finer in all respects than the very best products of Oriental potters. The announcement has produced a sensation.

Letters to St. Petersburg give details of the recent attempt on the life of the Czar. An attempt was made upon the occasion of the recent fete of the Chevalier of St. George. The rails on the Gatschina line, over which the Czar's trains had to pass, were found loosened at a certain spot. A soldier on guard at the place where the train was expected to leave the rails was afterward found murdered.

News has just been received of the loss of the brig Belle of Windsor, N. S., which took fire the 19th inst., on the way from Glace Bay to New York, and was abandoned. The crew was saved.

Some startling revelations have been made regarding the immorality existing among the Catholic clergy of Canada. A short time ago the preacher at the Bishop's cathedral was removed from the pulpit in a helpless state of intoxication, and a few days later made a further exhibition of himself in the most fashionable street in the city. The young priest, who is a son of one of the most respected judges in the country, has since been banished to a monastery in France. No sooner had the scandal in this case abated when the parish priest of Varennes, a pretty little village on the St. Lawrenc a short distance from here, was brought into court by a prominent citizen of the place who charged his father confessor with estranging the affections of his wife, and with other sins considered by the church as mortal. A criminal action was instituted, but political influence was brought to bear upon the magistrate, and he refused to issue the warrant, and the husband is therefore compelled to seek redress before the civil courts. A little later the Catholics of the province were further scandalized by the arrest of Father Toupin, the parish priest of Antoine Abbey, who is charged with desecrating the confessional and with other offenses unfit for publication. The trial is fixed for Tuesday next, and great efforts are being made by the ultramontane party to have a special and friendly judge appointed to preside. In addition to these cases several instances have recently occurred which are opening the eyes of the educated Catholics of the province to the fact that the management of the asylums and other institutions conducted by the Sisters of Mercy is not just what it should be. The startling fact that a sane woman can be confined in a lunatic asylum for three years to gratify the vengeance of an unfaithful husband, as proved by the recent trial of Mrs. Lyman, has also had the effect of arousing the public to the dangers attending institutions conducted by the nuns, with no proper system of governmentor medical inspecttion. Further astounding revelations are promised concerning the management of the now famous Longue Pointe Asylum.

Dec. 22.—Three of the Anarchists who attempted the life of the Emperor of Germany at Niederwaid have been sentenced to death and two others to ten years' penal servitude.

The London agents of the Australian colonies now confirm the report, which was published and Bailed last Friday, to the effect that Germany had taken possession of the Admiralty Islands, of New Britain and New Ireland, and portions of the New Guinea coast. The representatives of the various British South Pacific colonies are now discussing the advisability of uniting in a joint protest against Germany's action. It is probable, however, that they will be contented if Bismarck will give a pledge that the newly acquired islands shall never be used as German penal settlements.

All the printers of St. Petersburg, are searched nightly by the police on leaving their offices to prevent the secret printing of seditious literature.

In the elections to-day the complete Autonomist list of Senatorial delegates were elected in Paris. The Opportunists were successful at Dijon and Grenoble, and the Irreconcilables at Lyons. Victor Hugo and Schoelcher received the largest number of votes. Rochefort and Guyot were near the bottom of the list.

A compilation completed by the Bureau of Statistics at Washington shows that the United States would lose $30,000,000 annually in duties if the Spanish treaty were ratified.

Gold-bearing rock is said to have been found in Ohio yielding $1,000 to the ton.

Snow has been falling plentifully during the last twenty-four hours all through the Northwest, the thermometer being quoted as low as 40° below zero.

Last summer Leander Ludd bored an artesian well on his farm four miles from Cortland, N. Y. At the depth of sixty-six feet the drill passed through a brittle black deposit eight feet thick. Specimens taken from the deposit were submitted to a geologist at Cornell University and to mining experts in Scranton, Pa. Both authorities pronounced it anthracite coal of good quality. Several mining contractors from the coal region endeavored to secure the right to sink a shaft to the vein and work it if it proved to be of any extent, but the owner of the land refused all their offers and is putting down a shaft at his own expense. If he finds coal in quantity corresponding with its quality, immediate steps will be taken to open mines on adjoining farms. Already stock sufficient to build a road from the spot to the Elmira & Cortland Railroad at Chicago Station has been subscribed for pending the result of Ladd's test. The discovery has caused a marked appreciation of real estate in the vicinity.

Dec. 23.—After being lashed to the rigging of the barkentine Ephraim Williams five days without food or water, the Captain and crew were rescued by the life-boats at Cape Hatteras.

Reports from the Monongahela River seem to indicate that the coal-miners' strike is a failure.

Dec. 24.—The Paris correspondent of the Times devotes considerable space to an account of the present state of Russia. He says: "Count Tolstoi, the Russian Minister of the Interior, is chiefly engaged in the discovery and prosecution of Nihilists. No sooner is one society of Nihilists suppressed than another springs up. Count Tolstoi is inundated with letters threatening death. He rarely attends the meetings of the Council. Whenever he stirs out it costs 500 rubles for extra police protection. While Nihilism is more dangerous than ever, the persecution of the Jews is as fierce as a few years ago, when the European press boiled with indignation at the anti-Semitic outrages which disgraced Russia. Great bankers, especially those of German nationality, who previously were interested in giving wide publicity to the outrages with a view to prevent the investment of capital in Russia, are now inclined to subsidize the press to preserve silence. They take this course for the purpose of preventing the impairment of European confidence in Russian finances, the condition of which at present is not bright, but suffering from the difficulty experienced in collecting revenue and from the persistent American competition in the grain trade, and from the ruinous expense of the Russian advance to Merv. Furthermore, the protective system, which Moscow manufacturers obtained against Silesian competition, has caused the Silesians to establish a hundred factories in Russian Poland. In these factories German operatives are employed, and the Silesians are thereby enabled to supply the Moscow market with goods at prices from 5 to 10 per cent under the prices demanded by Moscow manufacturers for precisely similar articles. Despotism is increasing and the press is coerced into silence. Russia is more and more ignoring liberal ideas and paving the way to tremendous explosions."

An Italian expedition is to start Dec. 31st for the Congo.

The Congo conference adjourned, owing to the illness of the Prussian Minister of Foreign Affairs and because of the desire of the Powers to give the African Association a chance to push its negotiations with the Powers which have not recognized it. Negotiations will be especially pushed with France.

Gen. Bullen, with sixty-four whaleboats, has arrived at Korti. The Mudir of Dongola telegraphs that a Bedouin arrived at Dongola from Omderman, the headquarters of the Mahdi's forces near Khartoum. He was fifteen days making the journey. He had been a prisoner at Omderman, with the Mahdi's uncle. The man was sent with a letter from the Mahdi to the Mahdi's Ameer at Berber. The letter stated that, at the request of the Ameer in view of the English advance, the Mahdi had dispatched seven corps to Berber. Khashmil Mons, whom Gen. Gordon sent to Shendy, returned to Khartoum with troops and boats.

It is reported that the Government has searched the barracks at Paris, France, and found evidence that Anarchism is spreading among the soldiers.

A dynamiter in Paris said the headquarters of the conspirators were at Paris, but the funds came from America. The explosion on London bridge was arranged at Paris three months ago by a man now in America. Two men were sent to London to execute the plot in September, but a delay occurred. They returned to Paris after the explosion and are now there.

The Novoe Vremya of St. Petersburg alleged that a complete organization of Russian Nihilists exists, under the guise of an export firm, within the precincts of the City of London, and is exporting to Russia criminal documents and explosives.

The last day of the year the United States navy will be left without a dollar, Congress having failed to provide an appropriation for its support.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.
The Manchester Guardian's commercial article says: "The market is extremely dull, and great difficulty to sell goods is experienced. There has been a further extension of the short-time movement, and in many quarters looms are quietly stopping. Prices are generally steady. Yarns are quiet and slightly in favor of buyers."

There were 305 failures in the United States last week, a decrease of eleven as compared with the previous week.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British grain trade says: "The week's rainfall materially improved the already promising autumn crops. Trade the last week was stationary. Sales of English wheat during the week, 54,917 quarters at 31 shillings 5 pence per quarter, against 57,553 quarters at 36 shillings 2 pence per quarter during the corresponding week last year. Foreign wheats are quiet and in small demand. Holders, however, seem to be in better spirits, and anticipate a material reduction of stocks at the end of the year. Maize is scarce and occasionally dearer. In wheat cargoes off coast a small business is done. Of California wheat, new crop, now at Liverpool, the grain is described as bolder and the color and quality better than in 1883. Nine cargoes arrived during the week; three sold and five remained. Trade in forward months is livelier. A fair business was done in California wheat. Thirteen cargoes sold at from 33s 6d to 35s. Business to-day was of a holiday character. Foreign wheats are quiet and steady. Flour is dull and unchanged. Maize and barley are steady."

The annual returns to the Board of Trade from Scotland and the North of England show that the extent of the shipbuilding industry on the Clyde, the Tyne, and the Wear, has been 50 per cent less during the present year than during the year 1883. The builders, however, believe that the prospects for the future are now brighter than at any previous time for several months.

Four thousand coal miners on the Monongahela River went out on strike yesterday for an advance of half a cent a bushel. The operators say they will close the mine idefinitely rather than accede to the demand.

Clearing-House receipts at the principal cities of the United States last week show a decrease as compared with the corresponding week of last year of 23.7 per cent. The decrease in New York is 29.9 per cent. In Chicago the decrease is 04 per cent.

Bombay dispatches state that heavy rainstorms are damaging the cotton crop.

The crisis in Vienna, Austria, financial circles, which was begun by the failure of the Bohemian Land-Mortgage Company and intensified by the defalcation and suicide of Director Jauner of the Lower Austrian Discount Bank, is still very serious and has increased the general depression of trade. Several additional failures were reported today, and more are expected, especially in the sugar trade. The crisis is due to overspeculation and to the bad system of backing in vogue at Vienna. English financiers complain that the Austrian Government unduly bolsters up unsound banks, and this induces recklessness on the part of speculators by the ease with which they can get worthless paper discounted.

Exports from the Port of New York for the week ended Dec. 23d, exclusive of specie, were $6,429,000, against $7,845,000 the previous week.

Ingall, Phillips & Co., wharfingers, London, have failed, with £200,000 liabilities.

Campbell & Co., lumber merchants of Lachute, Que., have failed with $60,000 liabilities and $85,000 assets.

One hundred and seventy-five men are thrown out of employment by the failure of Waad, Stantion & Co., steamboat-builders, of Newburg, N. Y.

E. E. Israel & Co., of Waterloo, Ia., clothiers, have failed, with $60,000 liabilities.

FIRES_STORMS_ACCIDENTS.

Dec. 18th.—The fast train east of Pennsylvania Road was wrecked by a broken rail at Christiana this morning. A passenger and sleeping car were partly thrown over an embankment and badly broken, and the passengers were badly shaken up, but only one was slightly injured. The morning train bound west on the East Brandywine & Waynesburg Railroad was wrecked this morning by a broken rail at Reed's Road, in Chester County. The engine telescoped and the engineer and fireman were crushed beneath it. William Baker of Philadelphia, the engineer, was killed. ond the fireman seriously injured. No passengers hurt.

Fire destroyed the Catholic Orphan Asylum for boys in Brooklyn. It is feared that some of the children may have perished in the flames. There were 785 orphans in the building.

Dec. 19th.—Fire destroyed a fruit-packing house at Baltimore. The loss was $52,000.

Mrs. Backus, an old woman of winebago, Ill., tried to light her pipe at the stove and was burned to death. Loss by fire at Melrose, Mass., $40,000. Knoxville, Ia., $3,000. Baltimore, Md., $52,000. In Russell county, Alabama, $10,000.

By the collapse of the Burke Hotel, a huge structure of iron and wood at the New Orleans Exposition Grounds, one man was killed and two dangerously hurt. The whole building fell in, burying a number of workmen in the ruins.

Two coroners and two surgeons made a careful examination of the remains removed from the debris of the orphan asylum fire, and it was determined that instead of twenty bodies having been found and removed, the bones and skulls show that twenty-two have been taken out. Of these twenty are those of children, the two remaining being those of adults.

A freight train collided with a switch-engine on a steep embanked incline of the Miami Division of the Pan Handle Road at Dayton, O., in a fog to-day. Both engines were smashed and six loaded freight cars and the freight engine were sent rolling down the embankment a total wreck. All the men on the yard engine and freight train jumped for their lives. Engineer Hopkins had his hand injured. Fireman Thos. Howlad, Brakeman William Kennedy, and Brakeman Frank Guston were badly bruised. Engineer Snell had both hips badly hurt, while Jim Bresnehan, a brakeman, had his right ankle broken and both sides seriously bruised. It is thought he is also hurt internally. The loss to the railroad is considerable.

An explosion of an oil tank in Pratt's Astral Oil Works, in East Brooklyn, N. Y., quickly followed by another, set free and ignited 10,000 barrels of oil, which was carried by a river of melted snow into every nook and cranny of the works. The result was that all the buildings and tanks, except a large brick building in which the canning is done, were destroyed, besides some long docks on the creek. The loss will reach between $500,000 and $600,000. The shock of the two explosions broke the windows of all the houses in the neighborhood and sent the people flying in terror into the street. The building of the Williamsburg Gas-Light Company on the opposite side of Twelfth street shook so violently that some persons thought it would fall. Later the building was in great danger from the spreading flames. The heat of the fire was so intense that the firemen could not get close enough to render effective service. Chief Engineer Nevins and his associates undertook to cut off the fire from the gas-house, as the flowing, blazing oil seemed to be surging that way, and were successful. The noise of the seething flames could be heard blocks away. The tugboats Brilliant, Daylight, and Duval took up positions on the river and sent their heaviest streams into the caldron of flame, but the wind veered and carried the flames out to them, and they were compelled to steam away. Then the fire had complete control of the riverside and was slowly eating its way toward First street. Explosion followed explosion, and burning masses of oil were carried long distances. Thousands of spectators stood in the slush and snow and under the heavy rain watching the blaze. A long train of Manhattan Beach cars on the track near Bushwick Creek was crowded with excited on-lookers. A dividing wall had been erected in the yard to prevent the fire from going beyond it. The great heat of the flames cracked the "safety wall," and it came down with a crash. The wind finally shifted landward and the fire boats got to work again. At the same time firemen ashore were driven away, one band so hurriedly that they had to abandon the engine, which, in the lull of wind and flames, they soon recovered. The fire-boats and firemen obtained the mastery at last. It is understood that Pratt & Co. insured themselves.

Dec. 22.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $10,000. Milwaukee, Wis., $100,000. Victor, Iowa, $7,000. Worth Branch, Minn., $17,000. Detroit, Mich, $17,000.

Dec. 23d.—One hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars' worth of property went up in smoke at Cambridge, N. Y.

Three hundred and fifty men are thrown out of employment by the conflagration which is raging in the Paintertown coal-mine near Irwin's, Pa. It may be several weeks before work can be resumed.

Harrigan & Hart's theatre in New York was burned. The loss was $200,000; uninsured.

Train wreckers threw a train from the track near New Orleans, La., killing two men.

Dec. 24.—Fire partially destroyed the Masonic Temple at Cincinnati, causing a loss of $175,000. The temple suffered $60,000 damage, $75,000 was lost by the Scottish Rite fraternity, and $30,000 by J. R. Mills & Co., printers, in whose establishment in the north-west corner of the building the fire started.

Six persons were killed in a railroad accident near St. Catharine, Ill.

Children must have love inside the house, and fresh air and good play and some good companionship outside—otherwise young life runs the greatest danger in the world of withering or becoming stunted, or at best of prematurely growing old and turning inward on itself.

The least return that we can make for favors, is to testify our gratitude to our kind benefactors.

THE POWER OF WORDS.

Think not that strength lies in the big round word,
Or that the brief and plain must needs be weak.
To whom can this be true who once has heard
The cry for help, the tongue that all men speak,
When want, or woe, or fear is at the throat
So that each word gasped out is like a shriek
Pressed from the sore heart, or a strange, wild note
Sung by some fay or fiend. There is a strength
Which dies if strethed too far or spun too fine,
Which has more height than breadth, more depth than length.

Let but this force of thought and speech be mine, And he that will may take the sleek fat phrase Which glows and burns not, though it gleam and shine; Light, but not heat-a flash without a blaze. Nor is it mere strength that the short word boasts; It serves of more than fight or storm to tell-The roar of waves that dash the rock-bound coasts, The crash of tall trees when the wild winds swell, The roar of guns, the groans of men that die On blood-stained fields. It has a voice, as well, For them that far-off on their sick beds lie, For them that weep, for them that mourn the dead, For them that laugh and dance and clasp the hand. To joy's quick step, as well as grief's low tread, The sweet, plain words we learn at first, keep time, And, though the theme be sad or gay, or grand, With each, with all, these may be made to chime, In thought, or speech, or song, or prose, or rhyme.

BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR.

THE above topics were discussed in the Herald for November 22d last, by Elder Z. H. Gurley and in such a manner as leads me to conclude he has but little confidence in the revelations of Joseph the Seer, and also that he holds very peculiar views on the teachings of the Bible and Book of Mormon. And now that he attacks what I think to be their teachings and also misinterprets the revelations of the Seer, a review of his position and proof texts seems to be demanded.

The claim is made that tithing does not belong to a gospel dispensation, and in proof reference is made to the supposed fact, that the apostles, after Christ, did not teach tithing. Suppose they did not, (but I claim they did), that, of itself, would be no valid reason against its being taught in some other gospel age. We can not find they taught the Saints to gather into one region, but only into churches; yet nothing is clearer in the Bible and Book of Mormon than that God will gather the most of his people in the last days prior to the second coming of Christ.

There is nothing in tithing that conflicts with the gospel, in letter or spirit. It is simply a methodical freewill system by which to aid the church financially. The justness and propriety of the system was seen ages ago, and honored by Hebrew, Christian, and heathen. Melchizedeck, who was the type and representative of Christ, and who was clearly a gospel minister, honored and administered it. (Gen. 14:18-20). Abraham, who evidently lived under the gospel, (Gal. 3:8, with John 8: 56), cheerfully obeyed it though he "was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold," (Gen. 13: 2), and this over four hundred years before "the law of carnal commandments" was given to Moses at Sinai. Jacob, (Gen. 28: 22), when God came near to him in special blessing, vowed to observe this same system, saying,—"Of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee." And this was nearly three hundred years before "the law was added."

Many of the ancient heathen nations practiced this same system, from which we may infer that they had received it from their fathers, even back to Noah and his sons, as they evidently had some other of the doctrines and ceremonies of the gospel.

Brown in his Dictionary of the Bible says:—"We suppose God suggested to the ancient Patriarchs his claim to the tenth of their gain or product. * * * Multitudes of Greeks, Romans, and other heathens, devoted the tenth-part of their income to the service of God." And while he thinks there is not "any warrant for demanding them to the clergy under the Christian dispensation," yet he says—"As the Patriarchs before Moses devoted their tithes to the Lord, I suppose it is still proper, if possible, to assign the tenth part of our income to the Lord, for the relief of the poor, and other pious uses; nor can I believe there would be much difficulty with most in so doing, if all luxuriances in our victuals and dress were laid aside."

William Smith in his Dictionary of the Bible says:

"Numerous instances of the use of tithes are found both in profane and also in biblical history, prior to or independently of the Levitical tithes under the law."

All this shows that the system of tithing did not originate with Moses' law, neither was it confined to Israel; and, further, that it was ordained of God to be a systematic method by which to provide temporal means in aid of God's work—the church.

The abuse of the system is no argument against its lawfulness, or propriety. When Israel had departed from God's law, their leaders oppressed them by a perverted system of tithing; for Josephus informs us that they collected three tithes—one-tenth was to be given to the priests and Levites, one-tenth was to be applied to the feasts in the metropolis, and that a tenth besides these was every third year to be given to the poor.

The system ordained of God is not oppressive; it is a just and wise way, an ore derly and equal way, to supply the treasury of God's Church.

Of this system, as taught by the Latter-Day-Saints, the Pacific Methodist says:

"There is a principle in this matter of giving tithes to God, which involves the Christian character of every member of the church. It ought to be diligently taught, and when it is as well understood as some other principles of our religion, there would be less 'begging' done than now. Preachers would be paid, missions supplied, church extension carried on with increased vigor, the poor of the church, the superanuated preachers, and the widows and orphans would be supplied as their needs demand. Our church or ganization needs money to do its work, and no man or woman should enter it and receive its privileges without having the opportunity of paying their share into the treasury. As the case stands at present there is a large class in the church who either never have the opportunity or never feel the inclination to give anything to assist in building up the kingdom of God."

That is good, sound, practical sense; and the latter half of the quotation should be read and honestly considered by some who call themselves Saints; for certain it is, that any person who can aid in building up the cause of Christ, and yet does not so aid, is sorely at fault, and not worthy of Christ and his blessings, neither in this world nor in the world to come.

That the apostles after Christ held to and taught tithing, if only in a limited way, is to my mind clear, from the fact that Paul, when reasoning with the Hebrew Saints as to the fact of another and a superior priesthood than that of Aaron, says: 'And here men that die receive tithes; but there he (Christ) receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that he liveth." Heb. 7:8. (This text is the same in at least six different versions.) If it be inquired how Christ our great high priest, who has "entered into that within the vail" can receive tithes, my answer is, he can receive them through his people on earth, on the same principle that "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. 25: 40. Again, when Saul persecuted the Saints, he persecuted Christ. (See Acts 9:4). Christ receives kindnesses when his disciples receive them; and he receives persecution when his disciples receive it; so also he receives tithes when his disciples receive

If we consider how he ancient Saints after Christ had no special country, city, nor town they could call their own, and how they suffered ten general persecutions and innumerable minor ones, by Jew and Gentile, being scattered, and driven, and peeled, till the church went into rank and complete apostacy, losing many of their records, it is not surprising that but little was said or done among them about tithing, nor that there should be wanting now a full and definite account of what may have been taught and practiced by them in regard to it.

When so high an authority in priesthood as was Melchisedec, administers in tithes; when such enlightened and righteous persons as Abraham and Jacob willingly observe it; when, further, we find Christ teaching the Jews that they ought to obey it, and that he never opposed it; and, when we find, still further, that Paul says Christ

"receiveth them," I think we have found enough in the Bible to sustain the system as being one suited to, and designed for, the work of God under the gospel.

Turning to the Book of Mormon, we learn that the Nephites, up to the time of Christ, kept the law of Moses, yet nothing is said directly of their system of tithing. But it will not do to say that they did not practice it; for we know they could not have kept the law of Moses unless they did, for it was incorporated into that law. In no place in that book is tithing specifically mentioned, except in the eleventh chapter of the Book of Nephi, where Christ recites to his disciples the prophetic words of Malachi, telling them it was wisdom in God "that they should be given unto future generations." In this prophecy God's people are charged with having brought upon themselves "a curse" by not bringing to the Lord their "tithes and offerings;" and the Lord commands them, saying, "Bring ye all the tithes into the store house, that there may be meat in my house; and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room to receive it." Let it be borne in mind that Christ gave these words to his disciples for their instruction, and for the instruction of "future generations" from that time.

Does not Christ here endorse the principle of tithing? Does he not also enjoin it? And, in view of the fact that he had done away with the law of Moses, and had introduced the gospel in its fullness, must not this principle be carried out under the pospel? We think so?

And inasmuch as Joseph the Seer introduced the fulness of the gospel and organized the church by the direct commandments of God; and inasmuch as he was God's "choice Seer;" was "great like unto Moses;" (2 Nephi 2:2); is it not reasonable that he would lay the foundations of the gospel work aright, and like Moses receive and teach revelations truly and properly in respect to the financial affairs of the church? we think so. And inasmuch as the Lord commanded the "choice Seer" to organize the church; (D. C. 1:4, 5; 17: 1; 19: 1; 32:2); and inasmuch as he commanded the church the very day of its organization to "give heed unto all his (Joseph's) words and commandments which he shall give unto you [the church] as he received them, walking in all holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith," (D. C. 19:2), is it proper, is it safe, to reject his professedly inspired teachings to the church on tithing? we think

The matter, to my mind, stands about thus:—the Bible foreshows the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, (Isa. 29: 9–18; Ezek. 37: 15–29, etc.), the introduction of the gospel, Rev. 14: 6–14; Matt. 24: 14; Rom. 11: 25–29, etc.), the founding of the church and kingdom of God in these last days. (Dan. 2: 34, 44; Isa. 11: 10–16; Jer. 16: 14–19; Matt. 13: 47–49, etc.); God chooses Joseph Smith to translate said Book of Mormon, and to organize his church; and in that book he makes known Joseph as a "choice Seer" and "great like unto Moses," saying, "that Seer will the Lord bless; and they that seek to destroy him shall be confounded;" 2 Nephi 2: 2, 3; (which clearly refers to his official ministerial—capacity, rather than to him as a person); and in founding and building up the church, Joseph, professedly by revelation from God, reveals the fact and the system of tithing as administered under the priesthood of Melchisedec anciently, pointing out its details and requirements. Here is an unbroken chain of evidence, each link fitted to the others in such a manner that, to break one of them is to impair the integrity of the others.

But if Joseph gave to the church false revelations when founding and building it up, he would not compare well with Moses; neither could it be said of him that he was "a choice Seer," nor that he would be worthy to be blessed of God as was promised; but rather cursed. The foregoing promises concerning the Seer forever forbids the idea that God would suffer him to give false revelations to the church, (and that, too, from almost the beginning of his ministry), whereby to corrupt and mislead the church. God has graciously promised to protect his church against a possible false revelation through those whom he ordains and appoints to stand as his mouthpiece. (See Deut. 18: 20-22; 13: 5; Jer. 28: 1-17; Ezek. 14: 9-These texts teach, that if God's prophet's give even one false prophey, they shall die for it, and that speedily; and, that the Lord does this in order to protect his people from being led astray by a false revelation from such a high, authoritative source. In this is seen the justness, the wisdom, and the goodness of God.

Persons called of God to be his prophets, seers and revelators may sin in their personal conduct, even to the extent that Moses did, (Num. 20: 12, 24; 27: 12-14; Deut. 32: 48-51; Ps. 106: 32: 33), and to the extent that others did both before and after Christ, and still live and serve in their official capacity for many years; but if they give even one false revelation to any one of God's people, they are doomed of God to die for it, and that speedily, in order that they may not corrupt and mislead the Lord's people with their false revelations and prophecies.

Elder Gurley holds that, if tithing is binding upon the church, it must and ought to be collected as taxes are—by constraint if necessary.

This is forcing a construction on the law that is contrary to the teachings and usages of the church in the times of the Seer, as "every man must be his own judge, how much he should receive, and how much he should suffer to remain in the hands of the bishop" under the order of consecration as taught by the Seer, so every person must be their own judge as to whether they will comply with the law of tithing. The wisdom and charity of Christ should actuate those who administer the law, and the love and faithfulness of true disciples should actuate the Saints in obeying it. When this is done, the financial arm of the church will be placed in a condition to bear off the work of the church in temporal things successfully.

In conclusion; when the tithing law of 1838 provides, among other things, that tithing monies should be applied to "pay the debts of the Presidency," it does not refer to the personal debts of Joseph, Sidney, and Hyrum; but to debts contracted by the Presidency, in and for the interests of the church. The language itself signifies this, and nothing more; and this view is confirmed by the facts of the history of those times, as found in the church records.

AROUND THE WORLD.

I HAVE lately had the pleasure of attending lectures delivered by Ex-Governor Lewis, of the state of Wisconsin, who has lately returned from an extended trip around the world; he has been a resident of this state for thirty-eight years, and is known to be one of the most reliable of men. His lectures on the different countries, and the nations inhabiting them, were the most interesting that I ever attended, especially the one on Palestine. The Ex-Governor took ample time to visit the places of great note among the different nations through which he passed; and took special pains to note the various forms of government, modes of worship, images, beasts, and even serpents that they worship. Mr. Lewis was accorded an interview with many of the crowned heads of the old world, and was everywhere treated with the respect due a citizen of a great nation. The Ex-Governor is strong in the faith that this nation is far in advance of any of the nations of the earth in everything that is calculated to make a nation great, intelligent and happy.

The Ex-Governor entered Palestine at the old, renowned city of Joppa, on the Mediterranean Sea, which was a city of great importance in David's and Solomon's day; but dwindled to almost nothing after the Hebrews were dispersed and carried away from Canaan; but is again rising rapidly from the ruin of ages; and has now a population of some thirty thousands. Mr. Lewis visited the places of note in and around Joppa, not forgetting to take in the house of Simon the tanner, by the seaside, where Peter lodged, which still stands as of old. The hills around Joppa for miles are the most beautiful hills he ever saw; they are all terraced and planted to orange trees, lemons, and tropical fruits, which are in perpetual bloom the year round, and laden with fruit in every stage, from the fragrant flower to the large, dead ripe orange. Mr. Lewis was very particular to secure guides to take him to important points mentioned in the Bible; especially in and near Jerusalem; such as the site of Solomon's Temple and many other places of great interest in Jerusalem; the place where the Savior was born, and saw the manger which he says is in a good state of preservation; was on the ground where the Savior was crucified, was in the tomb where Christ was laid, which is cut in the solid rock about eight feet square, with a platform or shelf cut on one side about two and one half feet high and two feet wide, on which the Savior was laid; in this tomb lamps are kept continually burning, and it is guarded all the time. He was also in the Garden of Gethsemane across the brook Kedron, where Christ oft resorted. It is still used as a garden and kept well enclosed. Was on the spot where St. Stephen was stoned to death. Was in the tomb where Lazarus lay when Christ called him to come forth. Was on the Mount of Olives and on the spot where it is said Jesus Christ ascended from, and a cloud received him out of their sight. Was at the house where Mary and Martha lived, which is still standing, but not inhabited. Visited the Pool of Siloam which has recently been fixed up in good shape. Went to the Dead Sea and had quite a pleasant swim in its dark waters. The water of this sea is very salt, consequently very buoyant and easy to swim in; and very bitter. Which seems unaccountably strange, seeing that the River Jordan is continually pouring in its great volume of pure fresh water, as well as many smaller streams, into this Dead Sea without any visible outlet; yet always keeps at the same stage or hight; and were it not for the fact that it is two thousand feet below the Mediterranean Sea and all other large bodies of water with which it might be supposed to have a subterraneous outlet; but its being so far below all other large bodies of water would make any connection with them an inlet. Mr. Lewis' description of the city of Jerusalem was the most interesting and minute in detail of anything I have heard or seen in this generation. The city is very regularly laid out, but its two principal streets are entered through the Joppa and St. Stephen's gates and run through the city at right angles, dividing the city into four nearly equal parts, or quarters. The Jews occupy one part, the Mahommedans another, the Christians another; and the other part is inhabited by a mixed multi-The city within the walls contains over thirty thousands inhabitants and is being built up very rapidly as no regard to hours in labor seems to be thought of; only do all they can. The walls of the city Mr. Lewis says are twenty-two feet high, and eight feet thick on the top; and has twelve gates, or large openings to accommodate its inhabitants. The land he describes as being very productive since the return of the early and the latter rain. Nearly all the labor of cultivating the land in Palestine is done by hand, as there are very few horses, or farm implements in that country; and when introduced are looked upon with disfavor, as innovations on old usages. Ex-Governor Lewis says there is only one good wagon road in Palestine, and that is from Joppa to Jerusalem; and when he passed over that they were grading and repairing it in many places, and all the moving of dirt was done by men, women, and even children, carrying it in baskets and boxes on their heads, for which they receive from twelve to about twenty cents per day. While passing over this ancient highway he was shown many places of great interest, such as the many places of great interest, such as the on his harness; you get aboard and off place where the prophets Job and Samuel you go making about as good time as we dwelt; but the ancient stone buildings are heaps of ruins. Mr. Lewis also visited the spot where the people think they have positively found the place where Moses was buried and they are now erecting a large church over the place, to the memory of the great deliverer of Israel. He also went to see the place where Joshua and the hosts of Israel passed over Jordan on dry ground at the command of God, over against Jericho. He says the river is very deep at this place and the current swift.

Mr. Lewis related a singular circumstance that has recently taken place in Jerusalem. It appears that a Christian living there claims that Christ appeared to him in person and told him to go to work and organize his church there and prepare a people to receive him at the time of his coming, for the time was at hand. The man replied; "How can I organize the Church of Christ?" The answer was; "I will instruct you from time to time as you may need instruction." So he has gone to work and organized a church called the Church of Christ, and is gathering in members quite fast; amongst whom are several influential persons from the United States that have gone to Jerusalem to live.

As a church they are regarded as honest, intelligent people. In matters of doctrine, and expounding the Scriptures they claim to be governed by direct inspiration, or manifestations of the Spirit; as for instance, in their public assemblies the person appointed to conduct the services should read a passage of Scripture that is not properly understood, he is immediately stopped by supernatural power, and can not go on, or utter a word further, until that Scripture is explained by revelation through the Spirit to some person present; then the reader's tongue seems to be unlocked and he can read on until a similar thing occurs. The peculiar claims of this Church have created a great excitement in Jerusalem and the country round about. The Ex-Governor in speaking of the Jews now gathered in Terusalem gave them a very good character for honesty, and remarkable sincerity in their religious worship. They are strong in the faith that the time of the coming of their Messiah is very near; and they are watching closely the signs of the times; and the great changes that an overruling providence is causing to be brought about for their restoration to the land of their fathers; and with weeping and lamentations they beseech the Lord to restore unto them Jerusalem the Holy City; and the land of Canaan, which he covenanted with their fathers to give them for an everlasting possession.

Mr. Lewis says he found no trouble in going to any place that he desired; as for instance, on reaching Japan he wanted to go to any place in the interior, all he had to do was to go to a Hotel, or Public House, and there he could find plenty of strong men with nice two wheeled carts cushioned and fitted up in good shape with canopy to protect from the sun, which the Japanese call a jinrickiche. A man puts do here with a good horse. In this way can go any distance you wish at the rate of about a cent a mile. In other countries they use the sedan chair attached to two poles, and carried by two or four persons as you may desire, at nearly the same rates per man. And to get the money in use in the different nations through which you may pass; all you have to do is to go and deposit the amount you expect to need at the Rothchilds' Bank in New York; and their agent there will give a check and document on which can be drawn the amount needed in the currency of any nation the world over, a very convenient arrangement. The Ex-Governor returned home through Ireland; and while in Belfast was asked by a beggar woman for a little money to buy food for her child, to which he complied and she in thanking him said, "God bless you; and I hope your honor will be in heaven a thousand years before the devil finds out that you are dead." "SPIRITS IN PRISON."

"The wicked is driven away in his wickedness; but the righteous hath hope in his death." -Prov. 14: 32.

Editor Saints' Herald:—A few copies of the Herald were recently loaned me which I have been reading with a good deal of interest. Under date of September 20th, I notice a communication from Willard J. Smith, headed as above. He says: "It is a subject of deep thought for the candid mind, as to how the righteous hath hope in the death of the wicked; as the prevalent idea existing among modern christians is, that there is no chance for a reform, or a repentance, after death.

A long argument is based on the interpretation given. Now, I seriously question such a position. The text declares that, "The wicked is driven away in his wickedness." When? Where? Evidently it refers to the judgment day. If then he is driven away by God, how can the righteous have any hope in his death? Or does it mean that he is driven away at death? Driven where? Evidently from the presence of God—that is, cast out from His loving favor. Now, if thus driven out, how can the righteous have hope in his death? It is a strange kind of a hope.

But the righteous has no such a hope. He does not hope in the restoration of the wicked, because God has him in hand and has driven him away.

Then what does the text mean? Of whom does the righteous have hope? Notice particularly the language. There is a contrast drawn between the wicked and the righteous. The wicked is cast away by God—has lost all hope.

But the righteous has hope in his death. Whose death?—his own death. The latter part of the verse does not refer at all to the former part; hence the entire argument on this passage by Bro. Smith fails.

The doctrine of future restoration must be built up on something more substantial than this passage, as it will fail to convince the skeptical publish anything from a Gentile minister; but I shall send it all the same, and you can do what you please with the article.

FACTS ABOUT MUSIC.

I wish to impress upon the mind of all who have a talent for music not to neglect it. Music is a beautiful and useful science, that sustains mortals in sorrow, soothes and causes them to think of high, pure and noble things. The effect of music can never be overestimated; all its beauties are indescribable. Music is a chief stay to civilization. Melody will soften and melt hearts that had seemed to have turned to adamant. No doubt but many who read this can testify, as can I, of being blessed by having heard the singing of angels. Oh, what joy it gives! and oh, such sweet melody! A few months after I entered the church of God, the sweetest song I ever sang or heard, I helped to sing with a band of these sweet singers, in a vision. The words of the verses were presented to me by the Spirit, and failing to write them down, the words have passed from my memory now. My mother says she often hears me sing at nights, in my sleep, more strong and clear than when I am awake. Weakness of my vocal organs prevents me from singing now; yet I am a lover of music. Under the soulsoothing strains of music, many have pressed forward to enter their names as children of God, to have them in the Lamb's Book of Life." I will give you what is said to be the history of one of the beautiful hymns, now sung in every land.

Mr. Bennett, a poet, and Mr. Webster, a music writer, were intimate friends. Mr. Webster was subject to melancholy. He came in one day, where Bennett was at his business, while under depression of spirits. "What is the matter now?" said Bennett, noticing his sad countenance. "No matter," said Webster; "it will be all right by and by." "Yes, that sweet by and by," said Bennett. "Would not that sentiment make a hymn, Webster?" "Maybe it would," replied Webster, indifferently. Turning to the desk, Bennett wrote the three verses of the hymn, and handed them to Webster. When Webster read them his whole demeanor changed. Stepping to his desk he began to write the notes. Having finished them, he called for his violin, and played the melody. In a few minutes more he had the four parts of the chorus jotted down. It was not over thirty minutes from the first thought of the hymn before the two friends, and two others who had come in in the meantime, were singing all the parts together. A bystander, who had been attracted in by the music, and had stood in tearful silence, remarked, "That hymn is immortal." (Se-

The Lord employs many means (often unexpected) to accomplish his designs. God will raise up workers for him; and music is a means of doing much good; and all who have a talent for music should atrive to improve their talent; and we should also improve all our God-given talents for good; yet, let us bear in mind Paul says, "Strive earnestly, yet lawfully." Christ said, "What I say unto one, I say unto all, watch." There is a wrong way of working, even for a good cause; so let us all watch, and strive lawfully to improve our talents for the good they were designed, in a manner well pleasing to God.

THE FINAL ABODE OF THE SAINTS. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."—Matt. 5: 5.

When we make the statement that the earth is to be the abiding place of the people of God, we are laughed at by those professing to be Bible believers. The popular thought is that heaven is somewhere,

"Beyond the bounds of time and space, Where the human mind can never trace, The saints' secure abode."

We should think it would be secure; for God, man nor Satan will ever be able to reach it. Nothing can dwell where there is no "space;" nothing can move without having space to move in. God and man move in space now; and if we are to dwell hereafter where there is no space, we will have to be annihilated, reduced to nothing, cease to exist after death. This is just the claim made by the infidel, and we are driven to this conclusion if we accept the doctrine of the orthodox world as right. Let us see if we are to be reduced to nothing after the resurrection; and if we discover that we are to retain our identity our individuality, and therefore still to be composed of substance, we think that it will destroy the idea that our dwelling place is to be afar off in that spaceless place. John says: "And it does not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."—I John 3:2. We learn by this that we can not tell what particular office we shall hold then; but we will have a body like his, a body that can be seen, felt—one that can move about, eat, drink, etc. Has Jesus such a body? For remember we are to be like him. We are told by the word that he was born of woman as we are. That he grew up among his brethren. He was called the carpenter's son; and when he became about thirty years of age, he entered upon his mission. He was subject to like passions, just as we are. He died, was buried the third day. He arose again with the same identical body; for when the woman came to the tomb, looking in found nothing there but the linen clothes rolled together, and she began to weep, Jesus stood before her alive with the same body. He spake unto her, she recognized his voice to be that of her Lord. Here was the same body that was laid in the tomb, only changed from mortal to immortal, animated with Spirit instead of blood. That same Jesus appeared to the disciples while in the ship. They thought that he was a spirit; and he said to them, "Handle me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have."-Luke 24: 39. He appeared to them again. He sat down and ate with them. John 21: 12; Luke 24: 42, 43; Acts 10: 41. When he shall appear to the people of Israel in the last days on the Mount of Olives, he will have this same body; for he will have the same marks of the wounds received on the cross. Zech. 13:6. Then they will know that he is the same Jesus whom they crucified. This is enough we think to show beyond a doubt, that Jesus has a body of substance. The apostle says that we shall be like him. Then we will have a body like his most glorious body. Rom. 8: 11; Phil. 3: 21. We are to retain our identity for the apostle says that we shall see as we are seen, and know as we are known. I Cor. 13: 12. With these facts before us, we are forced to the conclusion that we will dwell somewhere in space; so that we can live, move and have a being. Another idea entertained by the orthodox world is, that we are to sit upon a great, high throne, with palms in our hands, singing psalms forever and ever, having nothing else to do. If this was the case, we would be a lazy set. No wonder that there are so many saying that they are going to heaven. Just such a life would suit many of them; for they don't believe in doing anything here, and they are glad to think that they will engage in the same business there; but it is not so.

The people of God in every age of the world looked forward to the time when they would possess the earth; when they would cultivate the ground and eat the fruit thereof; build houses and inhabit them. God made a covenant with Abraham that he would give him the land of Canaan for an everlasting inheritance; but he has not yet realized that promise. The Lord did not intend that he should possess the land in his earth-life; for the apostle says: "By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."—Heb. 11:9-13. Although the land was given to him, yet it was in the hands of his enemies, and is to this day. The prophet Stephen, while contending with the Jews upon the resurrection, said that Abraham died without possessing one foot of it, thus showing that it was not to be realized until after the resurrection. This promise was not confined to Abraham, but applied to his seed after him; and that his seed should become as numerous as the stars, and the sand on the sea shore, (Gen 22:17), and Paul represents all who are in Christ as being the seed referred to, Abraham being the father of the faithful, (Rom. 4:16). Paul says further, that the children of the flesh are not reckoned as the seed; but the children of the promise are counted as the seed. The promised redemption is to all the true believers in Christ. The word does not say that all these will dwell in the land of Canaan, or Palestine; for all the people could not dwell there. The blessings of the Lord are not confined to that land; for we find great promises made concerning the land of Joseph, (America). Jacob in blessing Joseph said: "Joseph is a fruitful bough * * * by a well, whose branches, [seed], run over the wall," [sea],

Gen. 49:22; and it seems that the blessings of Jacob were greater than those of Abraham; for he says that his blessings had prevailed above the blessings of his progenitors, unto the remotest bounds of the everlasting hills," (verse 26). Moses speaks of this land thus: "Blessed of the Lord be his land." Read the 33d chapter of Deuteronomy, 13th to 16th verses. There we have the land of America described most clearly. Out of Zion (America) shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, (Isa. 2:3); for in Mount Zion (America) and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, (Joel 2:32). "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth," does not mean the people and the land of Palestine alone. That the earth will be the final abode of the Saints, and that God will dwell upon it in the midst of his people, the Scriptures plainly teach. Jesus prayed to his Father, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Matt. 6:10. This prayer has not yet been answered, as all will admit. In the beginning, when God created all things he pronounced them very good. All was peace. Man and beast dwelt together in perfect safety. The Lord came often and talked with man face to face, even as one man speaks to another. Could the heart of man wish for more. He was not idle, for he had a charge given him, which was to have dominion over the beast, and to dress and keep the garden, which must have required labor, more or less. The earth was to bring forth in its abundance. But a terrible change took place by reason of the transgression of law. Man was no longer permitted to behold the face of and converse with his Maker, for a vail was placed between them. The earth was cursed for his sake. He was driven out upon the barren, sin-cursed earth, there to earn his bread by the sweat of his face. The earth ceased to bring forth its increase; thorns and thistles was it to bring forth; enmity arose between man and beast; confusion took the place of peace; the whole condition of things was changed; and thus has it remained until the present time. But this state of things was not always to exist. The apostle Peter speaks of a "restitution of all things spoken of by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3:21. Nothing can be restored to man unless he first possessed it. That all things are to be restored, argues that all things have been taken away, or have been changed. Then man will be restored to his innocent state, as he was in the beginning. The vail that hides him from his maker will be removed; says the prophet, the Lord "will destroy the face of the covering, and the vail that is spread over all nations." Isa. 25:7. The earth will yield its increase. The land will all be fruitful; for the curse will be taken away. "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain; and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together."— Ișa. 40:4.

Amos in his ninth chapter tells us that the "Plowman shall overtake the reaper," so fruitful will be the earth. "They shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens and eat the fruit of them;" and all this will be done in their own land, that was given them by promise of their fathers. This is not to take place upon some far-off region in that heaven beyond space; but here on the earth. Then shall the earth yield her increase, and God will bless us and all the ends of the earth shall fear him." Ps. 67: 6, 7. They shall not learn war any more; therefore they will have no more use for their "swords and spears." So they will make plows and pruning-hooks out of them; instead of fighting and destroying one another, they will cultivate their fields. Isa. 2:4; see also 68:21. These show that we will have something to do here. It will be no place for the do-nothing class. The wild savage nature will be taken from the beast. "The wolf and the lamb shall feed together. The lion shall eat straw like the bullock; nothing will hurt or destroy in all my Holy Mountain, saith the Lord." 25 verse. John saw the earth in its perfect and sanctified state, and it appeared to him as a "sea of glass mingled with fire." Those who had overcome stood upon it, Revelations 15: 2. When this takes place, God will come and dwell upon it with his people. The Prophet Ezekiel says that he saw in vision the House of the Lord. The Spirit showed him every part of it; and when he came to the spot where the Lord will sit, He said, "Son of man, the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel forever, and my Holy name shall the House of Israel no more defile." Ezekiel 43:7; also 37:27, 28. Surely the earth will be desirable to live in, when this glorious time comes. We will plant our fields, and no weeds will spring up to choke or hinder the seed from growing; no fierce storms will come to blight the tender plant; no more of these pests to devour the fruit of, the earth. No more disease will trouble our flocks and herds, taking them from us. None will speak evil of his neighbor, no lying, none trying to take the advantage of others. All these evils will be destroyed from the earth. All human governments will be destroyed; all rule and law contrary to the law of the Lord will be put down. "He," the Lord, "will rule them [the nations], with a rod of iron [the word of God], as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers." Rev. 2: 27. Christ will reign over all the earth as king, whose policy will be "Peace on earth, and good will to men." Those who shall rule as officers under him, will be those of his humble followers, those who were not ashamed to own him as their Lord here in this life. Matt. 19: 28. The laws that shall govern will be the gospel law of liberty, which gives equal rights unto all men; and all things are to be restored as it was in the beginning, there will be but one pure language, that they all may call upon the Lord to serve him with one consent. Zep. 3:9. Will not this be heaven enough. God proposes to bring all this about by the preaching of the gospel. When it has gone into all the world, to every creature, then will come the end of sin; then will the Spirit of God be "poured out upon all flesh." Joel 2: 28. Then will "the knowledge cover the earth as the waters cover the mighty deep." Isa 11: 9. This glorious picture thus presented in the word, enables us to labor and toil with patience, looking forward to the time when we shall join in singing the anthem, "Thou art worthy to take the Book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth. Rev. 5:9, 10. W OMAHA, Neb., November 24th, 1884. W. M. RUMEL.

INDIFFERENCE.

Now and then we hear a great stir in the social circles of the world of infidelity and unbelief, as if some way, through scientific researches had been found out, as if all Christianity were going to suffer, and the word of God brought to nought. Sometimes it is an attack upon the five books of Moses, called the "Pentateuch;" now and then a proposed prayer test, sanctioned by some prominent persons; then a scheme of a destructive criticism on some part of the Bible; and once in a while, a trial test on the God-head, and on the divinity of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Timorous people are apt to take alarm at these things, and oftentimes think that the foundations, and the pillars of the church are falling. Fifteen years ago, when I was young in the church I used to think so too; but since it has pleased God to give me testi-monies of his goodness, clenched with others for the good and prosperity of his work in these last days, such storms of unbelief, infidelity, and spiritualism, have left a clear, blue sky. And now it is not hard to face a follower of Tom Paine, or David Hume, or a disciple of Mr. Ingersol.

These sudden attacks against the church come with a kind of periodicity, and attract more attention than they are worth; but I think there is an evil threatening the cause of religion, to which all Saints are not quite awake, and which the most timorous Saints seem to dread; viz: "Indifference." It works more harm to the church, and to the cause of religion, than an infidel foe. This evil from the enemy is always longing to be present; always working amongst men and women somewhere to be indifferent to the duty devolved upon them. They like to "assemble themselves together as the manner of some is." to chat in company, to dress, to go in pursuit of bubbles, or to visit vanity fairs for pleasure. The world to them is real, and the cause of religion is afar off. There are many in this world who have position, and it is hard to move them. A compressed foe you can resist, or else open gospel fire with him; but indifferent people don't Where infidelseem to even care to fight. ity is dragging its tens and hundreds, indifference is dragging its thousands from the Bible and from all that is virtuous and

Differences of opinion may unsettle the minds of the world; but there is one established fact, the system of the universe, and all its grandeur and parts, were fixed long ago, and never have been, or never will be subjected to a popular vote. If therefore man's opinion runs contrary to the laws of God, as expressed in his divine word, either physically, morally, or intellectually, the result must be man's defeat in any attempt to overthrow the Divine government. Here goes a theory and there goes a theory, up against the walls of the citadel that has stood for ages; trying to batter it down with cyclones and hurricanes of words; and attempting to impair what is, and what we are told the "very gates of hell shall not prevail against;" viz: "gospel truths." Let the winds and creeds of doctrines blow. If they are adverse to the everlasting gospel they will be broken as they blow. Comforter will impart the truth, and confidence to the faithful; showing them things to come, &c. It is not the numbers that count in the kingdom, but those who are faithful to the end, and live to continue in the grace, wisdom, and knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. must always remember that when difficulties and differences, although they may be many and varied, seem to suggest that success is out of the way, and when you are deceived by your earthly friends, there is always one way open, and that is heavenward; no one can hedge up the way to the mercy seat. Faith is the gift of the Holy Spirit—an heavenly gift; and unless that spirit reveals to you the truth as you read it and hear it, all will remain cold, heavy, and be as alienated as ever. You must not be offended because the Scriptures recommend love so highly; for he that commands the daughter, commends the mother; for love is one, and faith the other, one floweth from the other, vet we must consider their offices. "Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." What you see requires no faith. I think there should be no difficulties of trusting such a God as ours—one as high as the heavens; and can stoop so low as to pluck a brand from a burning. If you come to the four cross-roads, viz: poverty, adversity, tribulations, and sorrow, as the writer has done, enter your closet and ask him who guides the stars to guide you; and he who hears the ravens when they cry, and marks the sparrow's fall. will not turn a deaf ear unto you, if you ask in faith believing,-remembering with God all things are possible, and that difficulties can not be too numerous or hard for him to remove. And I am sure you will rise in ecstasy, giving songs and praises to Him who is remembering Zion; and then your testimony will be, "Come and see what God hath wrought."

RESTITUTION AND ORDER.

No. 2244, Ridge Ave., PHILADELPHIA, Pa., December 16th, 1884.

Minutes of a meeting held in Grist Hall, at above number, December 16th, 1884; Elder William H. Kelley in charge. After the discourse by Bro Kelley, he referred to the action of certain members in the branch, as published in the Herald for November 15th last, nearly all of whom he had personally visited and labored with. He stated that there was no rule or law by which persons were enabled to resolve themselves in or out of the body at will, either by vote in branch or district conference capacity. That members by their action might place themselves in the attitude of rebellious or unruly members in the body, and thus lay themselves liable to be dealt with as provided in the law of God; and finally in this way be severed from the body, unless restitution was made; but until the church took such legal action they were not severed from the church, but members to be held accountable for their actions.

That in visiting the various members he thought he had observed a universal sentiment to the effect that what was done by them contrary to the rules of the body was on account of a misapprehension of the facts in the case, brought about by the tales and gossip of certain persons. That while the church was liberal and patient in its work, it proposed to be just, and the members formerly affected had the right and privilege of freely expressing themselves upon the matter.

The meeting was then formally organized by calling Bro. Absalom Grist to the chair; and on motion of brethren John Stone and John Wesley, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted by a unanimous vote:

Whereas, action was taken, and a resolution passed by certain members of the Olive Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, on the 27th day of October, 1884, looking toward a separation of said branch from said church;

And whereas, we the said members of said Olive Branch, after a full and free investigation of the supposed reasons for our action at that time, have become fully satisfied that the step was a wrong one, and that our reasons for said action were not well founded, and our step at the time wholly unwarranted;

Therefore, be it resolved, that we hereby rescind the resolutions passed by us asking for a separation from the said Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, and that we acknowledge our error in taking such action, and that we take such measures as shall restore whatever of wrongs we have done said church by our action.

2. Resolved that this resolution be sent to President Joseph Smith for publication through the Saints' Herald, so that whatever injury resulted to the body, by reason of our wrong action heretofore and its publication, the same may be properly restored; and that we ask the patience and forgiveness of said Reorganized Church for any and all wrongs done against it.

ABSALOM GRIST,

Chairman of Meeting and.

Former Pastor of Olive Branch.

P.S.—Newspapers that published the former action of this branch signed by Absalom Grist, please copy.

EPISTOLARY.

To the several branches of the Texas Central District, Greeting: - As my duties as a missionary in the field require me to be absent from the district for a season, I take this means of urging you to do all you can in harmony with God's law for the support of the work financially. I want to see this mission become at least selfsustaining. I know, too, you would be proud to say you were not dependent upon the church elsewhere. Let us then renew our diligence with the coming year, and see if we can not make a record worthy of ourselves, and no longer be a charge upon the church. As others have made a sacrifice that we might hear the good news, let us show our appreciation of it by sending the gospel to others, so they may be blessed with the light of truth. Do not wait until you can give a large amount, but if you have but a penny to spare, cast it into the treasury, and God will bless you for it. It may be said of you as of the poor widow, that you have done "more than they all." Some have already done nobly, and I hope all will see that this is a mutual work, and will cheerfully add their mites. Every member's name is enrolled upon the record, and the amount given set opposite the name. None of you I hope will allow the space allotted you to remain entirely blank. By special arrangment with the Bishop, I can put some young men who are ready and worthy in the field, if you will support them. Thus they may become qualified for a great work, souls be led to the Savior, and your own hearts made glad as a result of your sacrifice. In accordance with instruction of the Bishop, I select one in each branch to receive tithes and offerings in my absence. They will enter whatever you give to your account upon their record, and remit to the Bishop either directly, or through his agent. Members then in Elmwood Branch, will please remit to Bro. Thomas J. Norwood; those in Central Branch to Bro. Samuel R. Hay; those in Elkhart to Bro. J. W. Bryan; those in Cheesland to Bro. Henry Grim; and those in Live Oak to Bro. W. G. Allen.

May God help you to see the necessity of prompt and cheerful action, and bless you with manifold blessings both spiritual and temporal. Scattered members may remit to me as above.

> In gospel bonds, HEMAN C. SMITH, Bishop's Agent.

OENAVILLE, Bell Co., Texas, December 17th, 1884.

BISHOP'S AGENT.

Having been duly notified of the resignation of my agent, Bro. Thomas R. Hawkins, of the Nevada District, and of the recommendation of Bro. A. B. Johns; I hereby appoint him as my agent for the Nevada District, and as such recommend him to the Saints.

G. A. BLAKESLEE,

1 residing Bishop. Galien, Mich., Dec. 16th, 1884.

EPISTOLARY.

To the Saints of North-West Kansas District, Greeting; Beloved Brethren: Since conference I have been laboring might and main to arrange my affairs so that I could leave home without making too great a sacrifice; (for I must confess, and that frankly, that I am not willing to sacrifice my all, as some of my brethren talk of), to carry into effect the resolution requesting your presiding elder to appoint two days' meetings in the several branches, and elsewhere in the district. Thus far I have been unable to do so, and at the present am unable to decide when I can get away from home. If I had the money to spare to pay my way, I might visit the remote parts of the district, and spend a week at a time. But it must be remembered by the Saints, that according to wise provisions of the church, such as myself and others of the local laboring elders, have no right to call upon the Bishop to supply any deficiency, no matter how much need there may be for the president of the district to travel and preach, and look after the charge committed to him; nor how much good might be accomplished by his labors, nor how much he may feel the burthen and care imposed upon him by the obligation of his office and calling, he must bear his own burdens, pay his own expenses, and if he can not or does not, he has become an unprofitable servant, or is looked upon as neglecting his duties. But money is said to be the root of all evil, and that evil is daily increasing; and yet in this world of trade and traffic, we can not get along without it. Elders are not exempt from the general rule. Their families must be fed and clothed as well as other families. It costs Elders to travel, and they must be clothed and their time (if worth anything to the church) is just as valuable as though they were under General Conference appointment. I don't wish to find fault with the church or its rulings, but there is a wrong, or a mistake somewhere, either in the creating of district organizations, and supplying them with presiding officers, and placing certain duties and obligations upon them by virtue of his office and calling, without making any provisions for him to carry on that work. To my mind the church should prescribe and define the duties of the presiding elders of districts, and what will be required of them by virtue of their office and calling, and make provisions for their traveling and other incidental expenses, to enable them to discharge those duties assigned to them by virtue of their appointment.

Paul describes our Heavenly Father as being no respecter of persons, and says he made no difference, as there should be neither Jew nor Gentile, great nor small, bond nor free; but one in Christ Jesus they should all be. The head could not say to the feet, get out, I have no need of your help; nor the eye of the hand, I have no use for thee. Each member God had placed in the church, or body, as it pleased him, and he had defined the duties of each member. The smallest member could not be dispensed with, neither could the greater get along without the lesser, all working harmoniously together, each in his office and calling, one not meddling with or disturbing the other in the discharge of his duties; like a family of loving children, God caring for, and providing for each alike. What a grand and noble picture of perfection we see in the works of the deity.

Your brother in hope of eternal life,

A. KENT. CLAY CENTER, Kas., December 19th, 1884.

DIED.

BENEDICT.—At McPaul, Fremont county, Iowa, November 16th, 1884, of ulcerated lungs, Alma Guy Benedict, adopted son of Eber and Mary E. Benedict, aged 3 years, 9 months, 15 days. Funeral services by Elder Henry Kemp, to a crowded house.

> Dear little Guy is taken from us, His spirit left its house of clay, And has gone to live with Jesus, Where it will be forever day. Our hearts are very sad and lonely, Since our darling has been gone; Tis by faith and good works only We can reach his happy home. How we long again to meet him For a long, long sweet embrace, When there will be no more parting, And we will see his smiling face.

MARY E. BENEDICT.

HACKETT.-At North Freedom, Wisconsin, December 10th, 1884, Sr. Dency Hackett. She was born July 20th, 1807, near York, Pa., and was at her death aged 77 years, 4 months and 20 days. She accepted the gospel in the early days of the church, and was faithful until death. Funeral services by Job Brown to a large audience of children, grandchildren, other relatives and friends. Deceased raised a family of fifteen children, who are now nearly all heads of families, representing different faiths.

CRAWLEY.—In Independence, Mo., November 19th, 1884, sister Sarah E. Crawley, wife of Bro. D. S. Crawley. She was born July 19th, 1847. Entered the latter day work in California in 1867, and has ever been a devoted follower of Christ. She leaves a husband and eight children to mourn her loss. Funeral services by Elder F. G.

Reflect upon your present blessings, of which every man has many; not on your past misfortunes, of which all men have some.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

IT appears that some inaccuracies crept into our notice of the action of the Independence Branch, in reference to Mr. Braden, and the circular issued against him by some one. The writer of the preamble and resolution states that it should have read: "Whereas one Clark Braden," etc., and not "Whereas one Braden," etc. It should have read, "has but given voice to slander and vituperation." It should have read, "We can not approve," &c., instead of "We can approve." The word "depreciate" should have been "deprecate," &c. We copied the article from an Independence paper; and the errors referred to are probably typographical, either by us or others.

Quite a large number of letters are received; which for want of room must remain over as "crowded out." For the sake of the writers we are sorry for this.

Uncle William B. Smith is at home, having returned on account of ill health. Address Elkader, Clayton county, Iowa, for his pamphlet.

Bro. James W. Gillen returned December 25th from Stewartsville, Missouri, from his debate with Rev. Clark Braden, in good health and spirits. Mr. Braden's boast of burying Mormonism is not yet fulfilled.

THE months have slipped by in such quick succession that quite without warning we are obliged to write 1885.

The number of the HERALD just published, is the opening number for the 32d volume. For a quarter of a century, almost an average life time, the HERALD has left the place of its development for the four quarters of the land of America freighted with its contents for good, or ill, as they may have been received, or rejected; or as they may have been dictated by wisdom or written in folly. Our wish has been to make the HERALD all its best and most sanguine friends could desire; and we have used the best judgment we had both to suppress what might be injurious, or could be spared; and to insert what would be productive of the best good. If we have overreached our own design, or fallen short of the standard of others, we can only say, it was not through lack of love to do well, but for lack of knowledge.

That we have not pleased all, we know by painful reminders. That some have been quite displeased we give them credit for saying. That some have been tolerant, some commendatory we feel grateful for, and that there have been many ardent friends of the cause, who have been equally ardent for the Herald, has been our human stay and comfort.

We began the work upon the hypothesis that truth would finally triumph and men be made free in Christ. As the days have come and gone, our convictions that our hope for the ascendancy of the truth would be realized have been strengthened and become deeper and firmer. And, though some things that youth and inexperience thought to be near, have been found to be farther off, we have seen the wisdom and the reason for their delay.

Justice is blind and slow, but as she sweeps onward with the years she stays not long, nor leaves anything for regret. Her decrees are enforced by Time, and after experience makes them welcome to them who can afford to wait.

We are just as much the enemy to deception and wrong and evil, that have dogged the footsteps of the faithful to destroy them and their faith, as we were twenty years ago. Our mind more used to their character and ways, is less alarmed by their constant and pernicious attempts to destroy, than it used to be; and is more reconciled that such things have been and are to be. What has been for good has been pleasing in its passing, what has been evil, known to be so at the time, has been a sore trial to endure. But in this we have not been alone. Many, perhaps all, of the household of faith have suffered alike; temptation, grief, pain, distrust, and indignation and impatience that evil minded men have been permitted to belie the people and deride the work of God. Our hearts have echoed the cry, "How long, O, Lord, how long?"

Bright days, days of pleasantness and peace have attended; in them we have seen and felt the promises of God to Israel, and have rejoiced. We have been strong in the Mighty One, and have said, "The enemy shall have no place." The Word has been nigh us, and in that our confidence has been—for God can not lie.

The Herald, Hope, and Advocate; and later Sandheden's Banner, have wrought, each in its sphere; and good results have followed their ministrations. Those engaged in the labor and care of them have had common cause with all other gospel ministers. In that cause the silent, unseen forces of the Lord's will have been felt. On them to whom he has revealed himself the halo of his glory has rested as a benison of peace; foreshadowing the coming of him to whom only we can submit as to a king.

Without the church, the prejudice and hostility which have been so long and so persistently resisting the onward march of truth, have been making unfair bættle during all the year just past. No stone of evil, which could be turned against the work has been left untouched, or unturned. The just and the unjust charges urged against the Saints, the elders, and the work since the preaching of the renewed gospel began, have been gathered, increased and magnified. The men who for love of truth have been bearing the banners out into the field, have been compelled to meet bitter and prolonged opposition. They have borne themselves well. The spirit of their calling has been with them to a marked degree. They have labored against great disadvantages and in many places have met with success, altogether unexpected, only to be accounted for upon the fact that the "Lord wrought with them."

In some places misunderstanding and

error have wrought to the injury of some. Few have been led away by "seducing spirits;" others by vain teaching from their vain imaginations. In a few instances anger and passion have made bad work. Men, good men otherwise, have let a word, a poor, misdirected thought expressed in unfortunate terms, irritate them into anger. To them have the words of the Holy Spriptures been fulfilled: "Can ve be angry and not sin?" Anger has guided tongue and hand, and the men have been betrayed into forgetfulness of the bearing and dignity of men of God. To all such we commend the proverb, "He that controlleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city."

We begin the year in great hopes that it will be a blessed one to the Saints. The tokens are ominous. The adversary is fully on the alert. His cohorts are deploying in every field where the elders journey. And in all places where Saints are striving to live in harmony with the laws of God, there snares are set for their feet. But the Lord whose presence goes before them gives souls for the harvesting, and the work is spreading. Let us be encouraged and press on.

WE are favored by Elder James Brighouse, of Independence, Missouri, with an account of the organization of an order which he calls the "Order of Enoch;" but which the circular issued by Lars Peterson and himself entitles "The Church or Kingdom of Christ, which Church and Kingdom was organized, and established, on the seventh day of December, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and eighty four, upon the revelations and commandments, given through Joseph Smith, the Seer, as well as the New Testament and Book of Mormon." Lars Peterson and James Brighouse are chosen Presidents of this order; and E. Peterson chosen and ordained Bishop. There are twelve now in the order, seven males and five females. As stated by Elder Brighouse, they "are now prepared to lift up the standard of Enoch and warn our brethren, and call attention to the revelations of Jesus to this generation—and to point out the conditions and place of safety, whilst the wrath of God is poured out without mixture on all nations."

There are four points in the screed; one is no intercourse between the sexes, husbands and wives included, no further procreation in mortality; all property common; Lars Peterson and James Brighouse presidents; and E. Peterson, bishop (treasurer).

There has been a great deal of this organizing of Kingdoms of Christ and of God, since the message authorizing the church in 1830 was delivered. We know of none that has not come to grief; and we think this work of Lars Peterson will be one more added to the list. The statement that this 7th of December Kingdom is established on the revelations of Joseph the Seer, gives the clue to the inner inwardness of the institution, and marks it. "Whosoever forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained unto man;" is a special command of Christ in respect to this point; and when Lars Peterson, James Brighouse, or anybody else, proceeds to organize a Kingdom with such a clause in it as they have done at Independence, all Latter Day Saints ought to know at once, that neither God nor Christ has called or ordained them to such

We shall hereafter give the wording of the bond; and perhaps more of the details of procedure, if we are favored with them.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Letter from Bro. Metuaore, Tahiti, dated November 14th, announces the arrival of Bro. Thomas W. Smith and wife at the Society Islands, we presume on the 12th or 13th of the same month; the letter does not state. Bro. Metuaore says:

To our Brother in the Lord and President of the Church, Joseph Smith:-I am happy to inform you that Brother Thomas W. Smith and wife arrived here safely and in good health on the Tropic Bird, and it has been very gratifying to us all to receive him here with open arms, the only drawback is that he can not speak our language and we can not speak English, so that of a necessity our intercourse is, at present, limited; but it will not take him long to learn our language, as it is very simple and contains only fifteen letters. He and his wife are stopping with us all at our village; they are not quite accustomed to our kind of food yet, but will like it very much when they do. On the 16th of this month (next Sabbath) we are going to have a meeting of all when Bro. Smith will expound to us all his views.

Bro. Albert Haws writes from 711 Castrow street, Oakland, California, December 19th:

My health is gradually improving, and I live in hopes yet of doing some good. The work on this coast is very near a standstill, especially in the northern district. We are having a bounteous rain; prospects good for crops; people looking cheerful over the outlook."

GARFIELD ON JOSEPH SMITH.

WE reproduce the following from the Advocate, because of its aptness and pointed support of the claims made by the elders. Mr. Garfield's statement that such a case of healing occurred ought to be received without question by his brethren of the Disciple Church.

In the San Francisto Weekly Chronicle, November 23d, 1882, in an article entitled "Stalwarts Rebuked," signed "Gath," he in treating of the late President Garfield, relates that the latter said to him, "There is a corner in my character which makes everything of a supernatural or mystical sort very fascinating to me."

Gath further says: "He then told me a number of tales, all original and peculiar. For instance, he related that in his district, at a place called Kirtland, Joseph Smith, the Mormon, had gathered his first congregation, and there was a person brought to Smith, apparently possessed of a devil, with something that made the man froth, or bark. Smith, whom General Garfield described to be a fine man physically, with abundant magnetism, put the subject under his control, and finally raising his hands, shouted with a powerful voice, 'I command that you come out of him!' And the general said that it was in testimony that the man behaved like one in his right mind after that."

This testimony of Mr. Garfield is surprising only in the fact that it came from him. That Joseph Smith did, by the power of God, cast out devils, is a matter well authenticated and thoroughly believed in by the Saints, though stoutly denied by his enemies, and imputed by Mr. Garfield to magnetism. Magnetism is one thing, and the Holy Spirit is another and very different thing. Joseph Smith wrought by the latter, which is the highest and greatest of all powers.

Correspondence.

Stewartsville, Missouri, December 24th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. J. W. Gillen' started home on evening of 22d inst., after a warm and interesting debate of ten nights, with Clark Braden, the champion of Mormon opposers. He is the champion because he can excel in prevaricating, garbling, and cunningly misrepresenting the truth. We look upon him as being a very able representative of his master.

Not having bravery enough to take a vote at the close of the debate on Saturday evening, after we made an announcement for meeting on Sunday night, Elder Rogers announced that Clark Braden would lecture Sunday night on "Problem of Mormonism;" upon which occasion a vote was called, to the effect that Clark Braden had fully sustained every proposition, &c., it being announced that the Mormons were not permitted to vote—all others had the privilege. This is a sample of the trickery of the clan. If the Christians or Campbellites had been also excluded, it would have had more semblance of fairness; or if all had been permitted to vote. It was soon published abroad by the editor of the Investigator, that the large church was crowded with the best citizens. This is false, as the church will hold over four hundred, and there were not to exceed one hundred and fifty, and it is estimated less than this, by good authority. It was further published that the audience by a unanimous vote expressed themselves in favor of Clark Braden. This is also an "undeveloped truth," (spiritualistic definition of a lie), as not to exceed two-thirds voted at all, and taking out the Campbellite force, the number would be greatly reduced. I have it from the President Moderator's own lips that "they did not all vote. I saw some who did not vote"—he himself was among those who did not vote.

Talk about our best citizens! many of them who attended the first and second nights expressed their detestation toward the coarse and vulgar language used by Clark Braden. Some said (who are not Latter Day Saints, or in particular sympathy with them) that it was outlandish, and should not be tolerated; others said it was not a fit place to take a woman to, and such expressions; but Mr. Braden triumphantly declares, "If it is so bad for me to tell these things, what in the name of common sense must it have been for old Joe to do them?"

During the debate Bro. J. W. Gillen demeaned himself nobly, proving himself amply adequate to the task of meeting and impeaching the cloud of witnesses that Mr. Braden pretended to have, displaying in a bragadocio way what he called four hundred affidavits—but read one only. Some of these were got, perhaps, by Demming of Ohio, who at last report was in need of money to pay his board bill, waiting for returns from Braden. The notable "eight witnesses" were shown up in their true light as being the work of Hurlbut & Co., whom Braden himself denounced as a liar and a villain.

Many of Braden's glaring misrepresentations were plainly shown up, but the gentleman is shame proof. It has no effect on him, seemingly, to show him up in a lie. He took occasion to denounce the Kelley boys in strong terms, stating that W. H. Kelley palmed himself off in New York as Clark Braden's brother. How is that William? Did not you know that that was too high a position for you to undertake to assume? The whole affair as far as Braden was concerned, was one continuous stream of slander and abuse on the character of Joseph Smith and his co-laborers; but very little argument was thrown in at all.

At our meeting, a vote was taken, thanking Brethren J. W. Gillen and J. R. Lambert for their interesting and efficient effort in behalf of the cause; also a vote to the effect that Bro. J. W. Gillen had fully sustained the propositions in the debate. All voted save three. The saints feel satisfied with the defense made by Bro. Gillen. Considering the unfairness of the propositions—the public prejudice being against us on those especial points—the defense was all that could be asked for.

I must not in this connection ignore the able assistance rendered by Bro. J. R. Lambert, whose physical strength is at a very low ebb—Brn. Lambert and Gillen delivered some very able sermons while here, giving meat in due season to the Saints, and sound doctrine to the world. Bro. Lambert is still here, at this writing, but goes soon to Bevier, accompanied by Bro. J. T. Kinnaman

Time only can develop the result of the debate, but as far as the Saints are concerned nothing has been lost. In Braden's lecture on Sunday night, very abusive language was used toward the Church, stating among other things that the Mormons were constantly settling in here, and before the people were aware of it they would have the balance of power, and then drive all the Gentiles out. The only way to prevent it would be for the citizens to take martial [mob] law, and thus prevent them from gaining this power. This shows the true spirit of the man, even to excite persecution and mob law, but we are perfectly satisfied that Elder Clark Braden or any other man of the same spirit can not gain power over the peace-loving and law-abiding citizens of this country sufficient to cause them to thus disregard law, and molest the rights of their fellow citizens. The Saints here are a law-abiding and law-loving people, and as long as they remain at their post of duty all will be well, and Zion's cause will prosper, and His cause will go forth, for "God has commanded."

Yours for truth,

J. M. TERRY.

No. 1604, East Sycamore St.,

DES MOINES, IOWA,

December 22d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—We had a very pleaseant visit from Bro. Joseph Smith from November 29th to 31st. Sunday morning, the 30th, his instructions to the Saints were good indeed; we enjoyed ourselves much; a good feeling prevailed. In the evening he preached to a fair congregation, on the authority. Come again Bro. Smith.

I remember in the year of 1868, or 69, Brigham Young came to Parowan, Iron county, Utah. After his arrival there was a large body of men called out to guard him at night, with their guns and revolvers; I was one of them. When Bro. Smith came to see us, and when the time came for us to retire to rest, we bowed the knee and asked the Father in the name of Jesus Christ to guard us through the night; he did so. What a diference between these two men; while the former put his trust in man, the latter puts his trust in God.

In the Herald of December 13th, I read a piece on the Book of Mormon, written by Bro. W. R. Calhoon; a better piece than which I never read in all the years I have been in the Church; write again brother, I love that book, I love to read it; it is the best book on earth. Why is it the best book on earth? Because therein is contained the fulness of the everlasting gospel.

I baptized two on December 11th, a young man by the name of Jasper Parmenter, and a daughter of Bro. and Sr. Emsley.

I rejoice in this great work, knowing it to be of God and that the Book of Mormon is a true record. Brethren and Sisters let us hold fast to the Rod of Iron, which is the word of God, so that we may endure to the end.—A Happy New Year to all. I remain your brother in the one faith,

W. N. RAY.

VERDE, Bandera Co., Texas, December 17th, 1884.

Editor Herald: - Saturday, July 5th, Bro. Bennett took us to a school-house in Jack county. Preached there in the evening, and the next day (Sunday) in the forenoon, to fair audiences. On Sunday some of the Campbellites came with their pockets filled with newspapers, with which I was told they intended to annihilate us; but for some cause they failed in their contemplated attack. At the close of the meeting, one Mr. Rogers proposed to take us to Keechi, to a place where we held one meeting when on our way to Young county. Meeting that evening with a few, we endeavored to tell them of the faith "once delivered to the Saints." We continued our meetings there until the next Sunday, preaching every evening and twice on Sunday. Congregations continued ro increase until the last, and some were believing. In the afternoon we started with Bro. Bennett to Young county. Arrived at Bro. Bennett's at ten p. m., feeling very tired, but rejoicing in God. The camp meeting mania was raging to such an extent in Young county, that we could not do anything, so we again started to Jack county on the 20th, (Sunday), in company with one Mr. Dille. We stayed that night with him, and the next day we walked over to Mr. Ham's, which was four miles away. On Sunday, the 27th, I was called to preach the funeral of a very wicked man-a very unpleasant thing it was to me; but without comment upon his deeds, I told the people what the means of redemption was.

On Monday we baptized three, -Mrs. Paschal, Mrs. Ham, and Mrs. Bailey. On Thursday Mrs. Simpson was baptized. Saturday Mr. Ham, Mr. Paschal and Miss Wyatt were baptized, and such a time of rejoicing I have seldom seen among those just beginning in the latter day work; and more especially was it so in the case of Sr. Bailey. She would tell all that she met with that she knew it to be the work of God, for the light she had received was as much superlor to anything she ever received before, as day is superior to night. She was a Methodist before. Preached only twice during this week, but I was not idle, for there was more talking to do than three or four could have done. Sunday, August 3d, preached twice. I went to the debate between Bro. H. C. Smith and C. M. Wiimeth, but was too late to hear the first two speeches. There were things said in this debate that are too rediculous for the most credulons to believe. On Monday we started to Jack county, where we arrived on Wednesday. Preached at night, and the next day baptized Mrs. Cox. Bro. Bennett having come to meet us, we started to his home in Young county, in the afternoon. On Saturday Bro. Hargrave took us to Tonk Valley. We commenced meeting that evening, and at the eleven o'clock service next day, Sunday, we were fired upon by a Campbellite gun; but he had in an overcharge, and he fell under the recoil; and notwithstanding the much persuasion of his friends, he could not be induced to shoot again. His name is Thomas. We continued our meetings until Friday night, with increasing interest; but circumstances made it necessary for us to leave them. The 30th and 31st we held forth at the Ross Valley school-house, but the audiences were small. We remained in the vicinity of Bro. Bennett's, preaching as health and circumstances would permit, until the 13th of Septem-, ber. We then started to Keechi in Jack county; arrived there in due time, and when the time came for meeting we repaired to the schoolhouse where we had previously held our meetings, but found the door locked, and no one present knew who locked it. We repaired to the house of Bro. Paschal, and went on with the meeting as though nothing had happened. The next day, Sunday, we held meeting twice at Bro.

We continued in Jack and Young counties, preaching as often as practicable, until October 27th, at which time we embarked in Mr. Featherkiles wagon for Parker county, arriving at Mr. H. M. Hills on the 28th. Preached twice in that neighborhood, then went to weatherford, thence to Grand Prairie in Dallas county, where Brn. Bays and Smith preached during the summer; but like many other places, the religionists had made up their minds that it was not a safe doctrine, and they would keep it out. I saw the trustees and got permission to preach in the school-house, and announced a meeting for Sunday afternoon, and about an hour before the time the school teacher came along and turned the key on us, so that meeting was broken up. We then applied for the school-house two miles from town, and got permission to use it; and had three appointments there, but no audiences except some children and two men. We left there December 1st, to attend a debate at Bandera, between Bro. H. C. Smith and C. M. Wilmeth, upon the same propositions that were discussed between them in Bell county, in August. On Tuesday at ten a. m. the contest began, each contestant pursuing a simular course to that of the Bell county debate. Mr. Wilmeth advanced some new, as well as absurd ideas; I will here give you a specimen. In the Doctrine and Covenants, where it says, "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else," it means, says Wilmeth, that you can have another woman, and still another, and so on, it is all right, so you do not take your neighbors wife. While I cannot say we gained a complete victory, I can say that the cause of Christ lost nothing, but was maintained to the satisfaction of all intelligent hearers, and the saints rejoice in the belief that the facts are in favor of the Book of Mormon, and Joseph Smith's mision. Praying that God may in every place bless his people, and asking an interest in the prayers of all saints, I am Your brother,

A. J. CATO.

Dear Herald:-Please excuse me for seeking to burden your pages with a brief history of my labors; they are not great nor will such history be very entertaining, yet I feel that I owe to your readers this communication; and perhaps it is due myself that I should let the fact be known that I am not quite spiritually dead; and that I have not forgotten my covenant to my God, when in early boyhood, feeling the stirring of the Spirit of God within me, I said in the language of Isaiah, "Here am I Lord! send me," ere yet my ears had been saluted with the gospel in its fulness; and when in after years I heard it, my whole being rejoiced; but I had learned to know myself better; my deficiency was more manifest, and I trembled at the dread responsibility; yet rejoiced that God counted me worthy, and answered my boyish prayer by calling me to be a standard bearer in his Kingdom.

No, dear Herald, in all my wanderings, with all my short comings and weaknesses, I have never forgotten that prayer, and the covenant I made with my God, as I laid myself on the altar of eternal truth, a living sacrifice for truth and God. Nor once have I seen any time when, or found any place where, I was at liberty to take back the pledge I had given, or seek ease from the great responsibility. I have been in straits where it seemed my little bark must be dashed upon the rocks. Darkness has often covered my pathway; the gaunt hand of poverty has sorely pressed me; and the demon of doubt has often sought admission to my mind; and harder still, the cruelty of false brethren has entered like an iron into my soul; and, in connection with all these, my weakness and insufficiency have risen in such vast proportions before my mind, that I have felt like shrinking from the unequal contest. Still, my covenant to spend and be spent in the active service of my God has rung in my ears, and kept its seat firmly in my heart, and my heavenly Father has given me strength to hold fast my integrity, and still to resolve that whether the church treasury shall be empty or full. whether the sun shines or the clouds lower, whether poverty shall oppress or prosperity gladden, whether friends smile their approval or foes hurl their deadly hate, whether the masses scorn my feeble efforts, or flock to applaud and load me with honors, whether my labors are successful or apparently in vain, I will try to keep my covenant, and trust in him who has said, "Seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." And until my God or his Church shall dismiss me from the service I will try to hold the gospel plough, or scatter the seed, even though others reap where I have sown. Let me say here I am not blind to the fact that a more easy way, prosperous and honored life, in a worldly point of view, has always been open to me; but "what is the chaff to the wheat, saith the Lord God?" Nor does such a "mess of pottage" tempt my hungry soul. It is said, "Every man has his price." I have mine; I bargained for Eternal Life; I pray God that nothing less may tempt me from the path of duty. Do I write this boastingly? I write the sentiment of my heart, the settled determination of my soul, with the fervent prayer that I may never change or swerve from it. I write that the thousands of Herald's readers may understand where I am, and although my name may not often obtrude itself in glowing reports in the Herald's pages, that they may have the assurance that I am preparing to make a good report, one that shall be approved by the Great Judge.

The year eighteen eighty-four will have passed forever, before this has passed through the press. The first official act performed by me in this year, was the uniting in the sacred bonds of marriage a youthful pair whose hearts already beat in unison, and whose purpose was one. Since then I have several times repeated the same sacred ceremony. Many times have I stood beside the sick and dying, administering the consolations of the gospel to them. And in numerous instances the sad and painful task of performing the last sad rites for humanity has fallen to my lot. A number of cherub forms have been dedicated to God under my hands.

It has been my great pleasure to see souls "born of the water," and rejoice in the birth of the Spirit, of whom I had been an instrument in God's hands of awakening to a sense of the necessity of the divine life. In fact, I believe I have performed all the kinds of duties belonging to the calling of an Elder in the Church of Christ. My labors have been in Western Iowa and North Eastern Nebraska. I am not prepared to say that I have satisfied myself, but if I have afforded any true satisfaction to others I am rewarded. This I will say, God aids me in preaching his word, and I realize that it is the savor of life to them who receive it, and the savor of death unto those who reject it.

I see much in the work to cause my heart to rejoice, and some things that men have connected with it, that have filled me with sadness.

Many glorious truths appear in the Herald's columns, and many errors creep in there and marr the pages. Speculation seems rife in the minds of some, and I fear some are led to doubt thereby. I find some ministers are not content to tread the beaten path of truth and certainity, but they launch their little barks on the whirlpool of speculation, and I tremble for their safety. Some would fain persuade us by tongue and pen that they merit some great thing at the hands of God, while the Master says, Having done all ye are unprofitable servants." I notice too, the fact that many of the children of God withhold of their substance with which God has blessed them, and that in consequence every department of the church languishes. It is noticeable also that the Liberal soul is made fat," and their hearts are gladdened by the evidence of God's approval. But more noticeable to me at least, is the fact that I have so many short comings, I have no time to brood over those of my brethren.

"Among the rest of the duties belonging to a "good Elder," I have partially read the "Braden and Kelley discussion;" and I must say that Braden is a talented man, and one calculated to try the foundation and walls of our citadel; and if a breach could be made, I commend Lim for the task. It is eulogy sufficient for Kelley, to say that God enabled him to foil, at almost every point, this master of cunning and craft. I see nothing to fear from opposition, though all earth and hell be against us, so long as we stand on the Rock of Eternal Truth. Hence I am content to labor and to wait, feeling assured that truth will wear the the victor's palm, and that truth is ours; and he who abideth therein will obtain Eternal CHARLES DERRY. Life.

Bro. Foseph:—One day with the beautiful was December 14th, 1884, at the Latter Day Saints church, Rock Creek, Hancock county, Illinois, where father R. Lambert and three of his sons were all uniting to let their light shine so that men, if they will, may see their goods works, and be led to glorify our Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 5: 16. The great desire of your most humble servant is the increase of power, so that all who are in the way may be able to so let their light shine that all who are in the house may see to agree with their adversary quickly. 25 verse,

Written to our beloved brother by

A. HANCOCK.

New Bedford, Mass., December 22d, 1884.

Bro. Foseph.—I think my last was written at Brocton. Since then I have been to nearly all the branches in the district, but do not get around as fast as I would like to. There are many opportunities and calls for the preaching of the gospel which can not be attended to—places outside of branches where little or no presentation of our faith has ever been had—that only need able men, willing, and with temporal means enough to secure their families from want, to place our faith in a more prominent position before the world, and to cause many people who are now sitting in the shadow and darkness, to rejoice in the light of the glorious gospel of Christ.

At present I am the only missionary in the field in the Massachusetts District. The harvest truly is great, but faithful and wise laborers—how.

few! I hope to be able to get into more places where the word has never been preached during the next quarter; there are plenty of such opportunities. But I also find labor needed among some of the branches in this district; some of which labor, in my opinion, would have been rendered unnecessary had there been less daubing with untempered mortar in the past-building contrary to the law; failure to observe the order of conversion laid down by Christ; getting the gospel law so mixed up with tradition, and the spirit and notions of the individual, that the work of reconstruction, in some places, presents a task of no small magnitude. "Go ye into all the world,preach the gospel to every creature: he that believeth"-what? the gospel, shall be saved. I find, to use a homely phrase, that in too many cases that there has been a placing of "the cart before the horse." The order of obedience and blessing to follow, has been practically reversed, and that signs and gifts which were to FOLLOW, too often go before, or seem to have been the first necessary thing to teach, and that their presence was the certain and most agreeable test of our high standing before God, or of progress in the way of the just. I find an over anxious desire in the past to get people into the church, with very little understanding on their part of the true nature and import of the step that they are undertaking, instead of showing them that this is the veritable Kingdom of God-a school for the exercising of that grand principle of faith in God, by and through which only, is the righteousness of God revealed to the faithful hearer, and persistent doer of the word; for the building up of characters in all justice, intelligence, purity and truth, that shall permit us audience and association with the grand and good of all ages in the everlasting Kingdom of our God. It seems to have been deemed only necessary to somehow or anyhow coax or persuade people to be put under the water, and that's as far as many of them have ever gotten. "Born of water" is not sufficient, "and of the Spirit," not enough. If there has been a healthy and true begetting, a growth beyond that of infancy, or babyhood, should follow. "When I was a child, I spake as a child," says Paul. "According to the grace which is given me as a wise master builder, I have laid the foundation, and another man buildeth thereupon;" "but let every man take heed how he builds." It will be poor satisfaction to me when the day arrives that is to TRY every man's work, and how he has builded, that the fire test will reveal how much of hav, wood, or stubble, and how little of the enduring material I have used in the construction of my work, because, forsooth, on the one hand, I desired the honor that comes from men, and sought to please men in their own way, or, that honest, yet unfortunately ordained to teach others concerning great questions of which I myself was stupendously ignorant, I builded in an unauthorized way, and with material that could give no assurance of being a lively stone in the great spiritual temple-the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.

Publicans and harlots may go into the Kingdom of God before the Pharisee; not as such, but because Jesus came to call sinners to repentance, and that they have acted accordingly; and while God has not called many wise, nor noble according to the wisdom of this world, yet I do not deem it wise to boast of ignorance, or that we may feel justified in remaining in ignorance of the law of God contained in the written word, when opportunities to read and inform ourselves are presented. The gifts with which God has graciously adorned His church are not intended to supplant the study of the testimony of the servants of God, and their experience with Himtheir most valuable instruction, in prophecy, in argument, in testimony concerning the Messiah and his Kingdom. The master gave talents according to every man's several ability, and blessings and gifts according to his faithfulness and growth by self acquirement. How unwise to ordain a man to important office in this church who depends upon a revelation rather than a knowledge of, conformity to, or administration of the written law. How impossible for such a man to build, except to make trouble for those who shall come after.

This is not written in a spirit of complaint or forgetfulness of the toil or sacrifice made in the past by those who filled with love of God and good will toward man have wrought a sacrifice that has proved to a great extent unavailing-for reasons, some of which we have noted, but that the church may profit by the things that others have suffered, and are now suffering; if it so be that we begin to heed the sayings of the Master: "Whoso cometh to me and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will liken unto a man that built his house upon a rock." My earnest prayer to God is that he will raise up men in this eastern country, who have the wisdom to perceive what is necessary in order to place our gospel in a possition where the rays of its light may reflect upon the minds of a class of people who will appreciate its great worth, and the courage to maintain the honor of God's revealed law, no matter how disagreeable or unpleasant a duty it may seem. Happily there are signs of improvement. Ordinations are not so easy as in the past; and some people are beginning to have the courage to say no, even in the face of a revelation that does not seem in order. That a word should be prefixed by a "thus saith the Lord," or "thus saith the Spirit," has been considered, in the past, sufficient authority for ignoring the plainly written law, the evil results of which is not confined alone to the people in Utah.

Yet after all, this is the Church of Christ, and acknowledged of him, as I can gladly testify. The signs do follow. The gifts of God, which money can not purchase, are enjoyed by those who have obeyed the gospel. We recommend it to all, with great boldness and assurance, and thank God at times, with excellent liberty, feeling and apparent effect. It is said that with great power gave God the Apostles "witness of the Resurrection." I can truly say that this word has been confirmed in like manner to me. I am writing this at the home of our faithful brother and servant of the Lord, John Smith, who has an eve to the recompense of reward promised by him who is faithful, is able, and will do according to his eternal promise. Preached with fair liberty in the evening yesterday at this this place, to small congregation, owing to severe storms. My late visit to Dennisport was both pleasant and profitable; meeting held every evening with liberty and interest; Saints and others remembered me in substantial ways. Last Sabbath was in Plainville; ordained Bro. V. Green to the office of a Priest. May I always be blessed as in this ordination. I shall not have it to regret that I have "layed hands suddenly" on any man; he is a young man of much promise of usefulness, and good to others; also Bro. Pearce, a young man of good report and promise, to the office of Deacon. Both these will prove a needed help to our faithful brother, Chas. Coombs. Spoke in Attleboro Wednesday night last. Next week speak in Boston; and hope to open a new place beyond Fitchburg after New Years. Unusually cold weather for the few days past, but warmer, with rain, at present.

Editor of Herald:—I have been reflecting upon the 6th verse of the 14th chapter of Revelations, which reads: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue and people."

This certainly implies that every nation, kindred, tongue and people was without it (the gospel); as I hold this pen in my hand, I am quite sure that an angel could not bring it to me. Just so with the gospel. If there is any subject that seems mysterious, it is the restoration of the gospel, and to some it is insulting. However, I believe as Paul did when he shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God. The 12th chapter of Revelations gives a description of the church, from the first to the seventh verses. The man child spoken of in the fifth verse to my mind is the Holy Ghost. I am aware that some may differ from me, and try to prove the man child to mean the Son of God, or priesthood. But I am impressed that such is not the fact. To say that it is Christ would have the church to bring forth Christ, which is not so understood. We read that Christ organized the church. The man child to my mind is the Holy Ghost. It was to rule all nations with a rod of iron, which is the word of God. When the Holy Spirit, which takes of the things of the Father and gives them to us; and that communion which God gives to the church for their guidance are taken from the earth, where is the church? In darkness, or the wilderness.

In searching the scriptures we find not a few, but many verses pointing to the time in which the world would be void of the everlasting Gospel. We read in the 8th of Amos, 11th verse: "Behold the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine for bread, nor a thirst for water, but for hearing of the words of the Lord." . Again in the 7th of Daniel we read concerning his visions of beasts, or Kings, which were to prevail against the Saints, and wear them out. In the 8th of Daniel and 9th verse, we read of a little horn, (Pope), "which waxed exceeding great. He magnified himself, even to the prince of the host; and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down." Twelfth verse, "And a host was given him against the daily sacrifice, by reason of transgression, and it cast down the truth to the ground, and it practised and prospered."

This proves beyond a doubt, that truth would be crushed to the ground, and error would practise and prosper for a season.

In the year 566, the Emperor Phocas issued his bloody decree against Jerusalem; the streets ran with human blood.

This woman spoken of in the 12th of Revelations is the church so called. The man child caught up to heaven, is the church driven into the wilderness, where she remained 1260 years. Now, 566 added to 1260 brings us to 1826, just about the time the gospel began to dawn. To conclude, the apostle Peter in his 2d epistle, 2d chapter, says: "There were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false terchers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them," etc. Of all the reformers since the days of Martin Luther, not one has ever denied the Lord. This prediction clearly fulfills · itself in the person of Brigham Young. He sat in the temple of God in Nauvoo; for there is no temple of God in Utah; from there went to Utah, claimed Adam for their God, and the only God with whom they have to do, denying the Lord that bought them. As Martin Luther, John Wesley, Knox, Sweedenborg, none of them ever claimed that the angel restored the everlasting gospel to them; and farther, the apostle says, "Many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." The restored gospel taught by the Saints, is the only gospel that bears the reproach of the evils of Utahism. Hence, the prediction of Peter not only proves the wrong doings of Utahism, but it proves the Latter Day Saints to be the Church of Christ.

E. DELONG.

MISSOURI VALLEY, Iowa, Dec. 26th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith: You will no doubt be pleased to hear how we are prospering since we embraced the true doctrine of Jesus Christ. We do thank our Heavenly Father that he did hear our prayers, and led us into this haven of safety. We are inexpressibly happy, and the Comforter dwells within us. We never weary in communing with Him, and continually lift our voices in prayer. We think prayer is next in importance to baptism as an ordinance or command.

We are not circumstanced that we can meet often in divine service with the Saints; however, we have set apart Tuesday evenings for prayers, and as many of the Saints as can, meet at one of their specified dwellings at that time. There are but six members in this place, which numbers about two thousand. My companion and I meet with other denominations occasionally, and bear our testimony. I think some of them think we are a little loony, but we care not for their opinions. God knows what we are about, so do we.

I have, through the kindness of our local editors, secured the publication of our Epiome in the News, and the Temple Suit and What is Truth in the Times. I send you copy of Times to day. We have been doing our best to spread the glad tidings by the use of tracts and books.

I think that every Saint ought have a handfull of tracts always at hand, and never lose an opportunity to pass them out; as no one can tell what amount of good these little silent preachers will do. God speed the cause; the best of his servants can do but little.

Yours in Christ,

M. S. & ELIZA FRICK.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Dec. 26th.—Russia intends to trausfer her naval headquarters in the Black Sea from Nakolaier to Sebastopol. The change will cost $7,000,000.

Two slight shocks of earthquake were experienced near Madrid, Spain. The shocks were felt at Gibraltar, and severely in the Southern provinces, causing great alarm among the people of Grenada. At Malaga two persons were killed by a falling wall. Many towns suffered from the recent earthquake. Several houses, including the telegraph station at Velez, Province of Malaga, were badly injured. The terrified inhabitants encamped on the outskirts of the town during the night. Many persons were injured at Loja, Motrie, and Alhama. The convent at Seville was partly destroyed.

Luderit's expedition to Angra Pequena, Africa, announces that enormous finds of copper have been made in that district, and that the land is extremely valuable. It asserts that the annexation of Walfisch Bay and the adjacent territory by England is not injurious to German trade. The Sultan of Morocco has asked the British Minister at Tangler for copies of the protocols adopted by the African Conference. The Sultan claims sovereignty over Timbuctoo, and is desirous of annexing to his dominions the coast country south of Morocco.

According to the report of E. R. Hutchins, Superintendent of Labor in the State of Iowa, the average yearly earning of the head of a family in that State is $780, and the average family expenses only $400. This is $251 better showing than Massachusetts. Five-sevenths of Iowa's workingmen own homes, while but one-third of Ohio's and two-sevenths of Illinois' workingmen enjoy a similar luxury. Carpenters in Iowa average $2.25 per day, masons $3.66, blacksmiths $2.80, painters $2.50, plasterers $2.67½, harnessmakers $2, and laborers $1.45.

Baltzer Gehr died in Crawford County, Pennsylvania, aged 103 years. Thomas Van Valin died at Syracuse in his 105th year.

Dec. 28th.—A certain military dignity of high repute at the time of the Russo-Turkish war said in St. Petersburgh: "China is the true Eastern question for Russia; as for Turkey, that is our Western question."

Three thousand socialists hold a meeting at Lalle Levis today. A number of anarchists present wished to nominate a Chairman and met some opposition. A hand-to-hand fight ensued in which seats were used as weapons; a number were injured. Subsequently a resolution was adopted to call an open-air meeting of unemployed working-men, January 5th.

Official reports show that 266 persons were killed in the provinces of Malaga and Granadain by the recent earthquake. The population of Granada is still encamped in the squares, the richer classes lodging in carriages along the promenades. The facade of the cathedral was seriously damaged. Many houses were destroyed in Jimena and a whole family killed in the village of Cajar by the falling of a chimney. Over half of the inhabitants of Albunuelas were killed. Alhama is mostly in ruins. The province of Malaga suffered as much damage as did Granada. Commerce is paralyzed. Two hundred houses at Alfarnetejo were damaged. The panic is subsiding. The shock was not felt in the northern and north-western provinces. The Government has granted $1,000 from the national calamity fund for the relief of the sufferers of the Provinces of Granada.

Sedgwick L. Plummer, a graduate of Harvard, died in the almshouse at Gardiner, Me. He was formerly editor of the Gardiner Transcript and was worth $50,000.

Despite the arrest and expulsion from the Republic of Switzerland, of certain Mormon missionaries who had made themselves obnoxious to the authorities by their methods, the work of recruiting in the interest of the Utah religion continues with great activity in Switzerland. Apostle Cannon is managing the polygamous campaign in the Canton of Berne. Christmas day he held a "grand service" in the parlors of the Emmenthaler Hotel in the City of Berne. He had no difficulty in securing the parlors for his purpose, and conducted his advertising without any apparent fear of the authorities. Admission to the service was by official card only. Seventy persons attended the service. Of these, fifty were women, and all these women but two were elderly. The exceptions were young and comely Swiss maidens, who were densely ignorant and apparently under the spell of glowing promises. Apostle Cannon did the preaching. What he said was uttered in English and was translated sentence by sentence into German. He gloried in the Mormon Church as the one religious organization devoted entirely to the welfare of the family, and whose mission was largely to find for women the sphere for which she was destined, and which all the elements of her nature craved. The skillful manner in which Cannon fired off this apostrophe fairly made the faces of the elderly proselytes present radiant with revived hope and juvenility. The apostle undoubtedly understands his business, and knows where even wrinkled human nature is weak. In his efforts to disabuse the minds of his auditors of all idea that the growing hostility of the American public to Mormonism was anything to be seriously feared, the Apostle declared that his church gloried in being opposed, and waxed fat upon persecution. His description of the riches, prosperity, and domestic paradise of Utah seemed to render the poor spinsters present crazy to go there with wings. The preacher predicted that the whole Swiss people would soon be converted to Mormonism. Apostle Cannon has arranged for a series of Mormon mass-meetings at Zurich and all the principal towns of Switzerland.

Dec. 29th.—An entente cordiale has been arranged between France and Germany for the neutralization of the territory of the African International.

A violent earthquake shock was experienced in Carinthia, Austria, today. It is impossible to get the real damage done, but it is reported great. Several persons are known to have been killed, while rumor has it that the fatality was yery large. Buildings were rocked and many damaged A panic among the populace is the result, and many persons refuse to reenter their dwellings. Thousands of persons are on the streets and in open spaces, fearing a repetition of the shock. The panic was hightened by the reports of the recent upheavals in Spain, wherein nearly a thousand persons are said to have perished and unestimated damage done to property.

An earthquake was felt in Wales this morning. The particulars of the result cannot be ascertained, but it is said many houses were injured.

It is reported that 900 persons were buried beneath the ruins of buildings in Albunal, Spain, during the recent earthquake. Three churches at Antiquera are left in a tottering condition. The inhabitants are encamped in the fields. The earthquake was felt at Tarvis Suaday night. Violent shocks at intervals of an hour were also felt in the vicinity. The inhabitants are greatly alarmed.

A fatal land-slip occurred in the mountain near Periana, Spain. It destroyed many houses which stood in its path and buried forty-eight persons. Eighteen were rescued alive.

Later advices say that 300 lives were lost at Alhama, Spain. One hundred and fifty houses and a church were destroyed and thirty persons killed at Periana, and the town-hall and many houses damaged at Torrox. The inhabitants fled panic-stricken. It is now estimated that 600 persons were killed in the Province of Malaga, including the killed at Alhama.

Prof. Richard A. Proctor, the astronomer, says that the rejection of the theory that the sun's heat is due to the combustion in Ithat body, and of the suggestion that it may be due to the chemical changes, leaves no recourse so far as our present knowledge extends but to regard the process of contraction taking place within the solar globe as the true source of all, or very nearly all, the heat and light which the sun emits. In a word, he regards gravity as the cause of light and heat.

The largest stock farm in the world, under the management of Richard King in Texas, comprises 800,000 acres and 200,000 head of cattle, horses, and sheep.

In none of the Southern States do the receipts from the post-offices pay the expenses of the postal service. In Virginia the deficit is $407,000, in Georgia $320,000, and so on.

Stanley says the length of the Congo River is 2,100 miles, and that the Mississippi and the Nile together would scarcely equal its tribute of water to the ocean. From the mouth of the river a steamer drawing fifteen feet can steam up 110 miles, at which point a land journey of fifty-two miles is taken on account of the rapids. Then another steaming or rowing voyage of eightyeight miles occurs, which is succeeded by a land journey of ninety-five miles. After that it is possible to steam up another 1,000 miles. Along this route thirteen stations have been constructed among peaceful tribes. The banks and people upon them are now well known. The river marges show wide belts of forests, in the shade of which clusters of villages lie nestled; while close at hand are gardens and fields with a profuse abundance on their surface, and stores of mineral wealth, it is believed, within their bosom. There are spacious lakes also; in fact a known area of lake waters, in addition to Lake Tanganika, of 30,000 square miles in extent, which will probably be increased to upward of 40,000 after more definite exploration.

San Francisco Chronicle: At the meeting of the Public Mediums' Association in Laurel Hall, O'Farrell street, yesterday afternoon, something new in the Spiritualistic line was performed. It was announced beforehand that two mediums would be ordained, so that hereafter they might solemnize marriages and heal the sick.

Dec. 30th.—Italian newspapers bewail the extent of the emigration-fever among the peasantry, and say that Italy is being drained of its most productive factors.

Fresh details received from the districts in Spain in which the earthquake shock was most severe add new horrors to the great calamity. At Nerja, a town of 5,000 people, in the Province of Malaga, the earthquake was followed by a hurricane. This finished the destruction of many houses that had already been brought to the brink of ruin by the previous shocks. The inhabitants fled in terror from the houses and camped outside of the town. Much suffering is caused by a scarcity of provisions. The alarm in Malaga is now subsiding and affairs will soon resume their ordinary course. At Granada to-day the Te Deum was sung and prayers offered for a cessation of the earthquake. At Priego, Province of Cordova, the shock came while the theatre was crowded with people. A terrible panic followed. Many persons jumped from the galleries and from the windows upon the crowd below. Two were killed outright and forty more or less seriously injured. At Malaga two lofty chimneys of the gas-works fell. Patients in the hospital were so terrified that they forgot their maladies and fled to the open air. Convicts in prison refused to enter their cells and remained all night in the court-yard. Alhama and Santa Cruz were completely destroyed. Soldiers are now clearing up the ruins in search of corpses, which are found in large numbers. Many of them are horribly disfigured. The number of persons killed is unknown. There is much distress among the survivors, who ask relief. At Albunuelas 200 persons were injured. From ruined houses 100 bodies have been so far recovered. The barracks at Loja, province of Granada, are ruined. At Zaffarraya, town not far from Loja, fifty persons

The people are also urged to refrain from persecuting the Jews. The manifesto predicts that the growing financial and commercial depression is preparing the way for an early revolution, and workers in every part of the country are called upon to found new institutions.

Six troops of cavalry and a company of infantry under command of Col. Hatch of the Ninth Cavalry are about to start from Leavenworth, Kansas, on an expedition into Indian Territory to removetres passers from the Oklahoma Reservation.

Dec. 31.—Mr. Newton, the magistrate at the Marlboro Street Police Court, a veteran Justice, bluntly snubbed the celebrated Crimean and Indian General, Lord Strathnairn, because his Lordship had sent his secretary to identify articles stolen by his valet instead of coming himself to give evidence. The Justice said: "The law is not to be treated with disrespect in this manner by anybody. He ought to be here, like any other prosecutor. He should do his duty as a good citizen."

The people of Spain are greatly alarmed over the reports of earthquakes which continue to come in, each day bringing the particulars of additional horrors and the reports of continued shocks. From the shaken districts appeals come in for help. The inhabitants are terror-stricken, and business is entirely suspended. In consequence there is a shortage of provisions, and the people are suffering for food and shelter. The work of searching the ruins for the dead still continues, but progresses slowly, as but few are found who are courageous enough to risk their lives among the tottering and wrecked buildings. This work, therefore, necessarily falls to the soldiers. Further earthquake shocks were experienced yesterday at Velez Malaga, a city of 13,000 people a few miles from Malaga. The shocks were of much violence, and many houses were utterly destroyed. The people are terror-stricken and have abandoned the city altogether. They are now encamped outside of the town, and the telegraph station has been removed to the same place. A thousand houses at Alhama are in ruins. The work of searching in the debris for the dead bodies of the victims of the disaster was vigorously prosecuted yesterday. During the day 192 were recovered.

Shocks were also felt yesterday with more or less severity elsewhere throughout the Province of Malaga and through Grenada. They occurred between the hours of seven and ten o'clock in the morning. There was a further loss of life and property at Periana, Rio Gordo, Vienneia, and Alfanatejo. It is estimated that the total number of persons killed since Christmas is 2,000. The Town of Albuqueros was completely destroyed. Many people perished, among whom were several local officials. Subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers have been started at Madrid, Malaga, and Granada. The King subscribed $6,000. The shocks yesterday in Granada and Malaga were very disastrous and attended with heavy mortality. The panic caused by earthquakes is increasing at Archidona. Granada, Torrox, and Velez-Malaga. The inhabitants are still encamped in the fields. The museum, University Hospital, and prison and Government offices at Granada were more or less severely damaged.

The fires of insurrection are smoldering among the populace in Constantinople. The posting of seditious placards is of nightly occurrence. A body of Turks attacked a mill near Perlepe, a town in Macedonia, and killed and wounded several persons.

The Chicago Tribune for January 1st, contains in an editorial the following significant language: "Certainly as we look back a few years the prospect does not appear encouraging, for steadily, year by year, crime increases. The tone of public morality lowers, suicides are more frequent, human life is considered of less value, disasters through human carelesness multiply. The legal hangman is kept more busy, and the hangman who does not wait for verdicts is twice as busy as his associate who executes the decrees of courts. This is not an encouraging outlook for the improvement of society in 1885."

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

Dec. 26.—Rainwater & Sterns' elevator at Dallas, Texas, was burned with 60,000 bushels of grain. Three persons perished in the flames. The loss was $80,000, and the insurance $33,250.

*The steamer Vint Shinkle, on her way from Cairo, Ill., to Memphis, Tenn., got caught in the ice at Columbus, Ky., took fire, and burned to the water's edge.

Eleven barges containing 3,000 tons of coal, the property of the New England Transportation Company, foundered night before last in Long Island Sound. Two tugs and twenty-two other barges have not been heard from.

Sixty-six occurred in the Ohio mines during the last year, of which twenty-six were fatal.

Dec. 27.—The Blake Opera House block was burned at Racine, Wis. Loss $125,000, Three persons lost their lives. Loss by fire at Indianapolis, Ind., yesterday, $100,000. - Lanoke, Ark., $5,000. Warm Springs, N. C., $150,000.

Dec. 29.—Loss by fire at Canton, O., $200,000. Logansport, Ind., $50,000. Buckingham, Ill., $3,000. Lawrenceburg, Ind., $4,000. Raleigh, N. C., $100,000.

A terrific gale swept the Sierras of California three weeks ago, and the country was strewn with broken branches and prostrate trees. Many trees nearly five feet in diameter were broken off like pipe stems. The wind came in a whirling motion, and it is thought that if the ground had been wet half the forests would have been blown down. Some houses were crushed by falling trees, and in a number of cases people left their houses in the woods and occupied barns standing in the fields.

Dec. 30.—Hopkinsville, Ky., has been laid waste for the second time within two years. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

A fire is raging at Pierre, Dakota, which threatens the whole town. Loss by fire at Kentland, Ind., $35,000. Council Bluffs, Iowa, $8,000. Glidden, Iowa, $15,000.

An explosion of gunpowder in a gunsmith's shop at Kralup, Bohemia, destroyed three houses, killed three persons, and injured many.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

Wangler & Co., cigar manufacturers, New York, have assigned, with preferences amounting to $26,000. John Ewing, grocer, of Xenia, O., has failed, with $27,000 liabilities, covered by the assets.

There were 278 failures in the United States last week, a decrease of twenty-seven as compared with the week preceding.

The discount bank at Laybach, Carinthia, Austria, has failed. Liabilities, 1,500,000 florins. Two sugar factories at Sadsko have stopped work.

It is said that the industrial situation at Fall River, Mass., is by no means so bad as has been represented.

Twelve thousand persons are reported out of employment in Detroit, Mich.

Although the excess of the assets of the United States Treasury over demand liabilities exceeds $137,000,000, no bond call is to be made at present.

According to the terms of the contract for the construction of a port at Buenos Ayres at a cost of $20,000,000 a second canal will be made in the roadstead.

Smith & Robach, wholesale cigar-dealers of Minneapolis, Minn,, have failed, with $40,000 liabilities and $35,000 assets.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British grain trade says: The weather during the week was dry. Autumn-sown wheat obtained a good start, and is in excellent condition. There is no prospect of values improving. Trade during the week was a little stronger, owing to small deliveries. Sales of English wheat during the week, 59,793 quarters, at 31s 5d per quarter, against 56,820 quarters at 39s during the corresponding week last year. Foreign wheat merely retained the demand last reported. Activity in immediate and future months was unexpected. While receipts of wheat fell off, those of flour increased. Trade in off-coast was light. Six cargoes arrived, one sold, three were withdrawn, and four remained, and about ten are due. Flour was dearer, barley steady, maize scarce, and oats firm.

Florida orange-growers are much disturbed by their meagre returns this season, which in some cases scarcely covered the cost of shipping the fruit. The market is said to be glutted, and they begin to think that the orange business, like everything else, has been overdone.

Truninger & Co., bankers and merchants at London, Eng., have suspended. Baggallays & Spence, warehousemen, have failed for $600,000.

The number of failures for the last quarter of the year, with part of a week missing, is 3,132. This is the largest of any quarter except the first, when the number of failures was 3,329. The weekly average of failures, which declined from 356 in the first quarter, rises at the end of the year to 249. Looking at the failures in the aggregate for the last six years, we find that the number for 1884 is larger than that for any of those years, and is likely to exceed any previously recorded annual total. The worst preceding year was 1878, when there were 10,500 failures, with liabilities of $234,000,000. The year 1878 marked the bottom of the most severe commercial depression which had been experienced in the United States up to that time, but the year 1884 ends with 1,100 more failures than there were in 1878, and with total liabilities about $6,000,000 greater. The per centage of assets to liabilities is greater in 1884 than in any of the preceding years, being now 54 per cent, against 47 per cent in 1881 and 49 per cent in 1879.

Iron manufacturers in the Mahoning Valley have agreed upon a reduction of 10 per cent in the wages of all employees except members of the Amalgamated Association.

All the knitting mills at Cohoes, N. Y., are to resume work January 5th. The resumption will give employment to several thousand operatives.

Exports from the port of New York, exclusive of specie, for the week ended December 30th, were $5,382,000, against $6,429,000 for the previous week.

Reports made to the Bureau of Agriculture at Washington place the total cotton production of the United States for the year at 5,580,000 bales.

Etzel, Hutchinson & Co., St. Louis toy and notion dealers, have failed, with $100,000 liabilities and $57,000 assets. H. W. Stehr & Co., of New York, dealers in cloths, have assigned, giving preferences to the amount of $52,000.

SHALL WE MEET AGAIN.

The following is one of the most brilliant paragraphs ever written by the lamented Geo. D. Prentice:

"The fiat death is inexorable. No appeal for relief from the great law which dooms us to dust. We flourish and fade as the leaves of the forest, and the flowers that bloom, wither and fade in a day have no frailer hold upon life than the mightest monarch that ever shook the earth with his foot-steps.

Generations of men will appear and disappear as the grass, and the multitude that throng the world to-day will disappear as footsteps on the shore. Men seldom think of the great event of death until the shadow falls across their own pathway, hiding from their eyes the faces of loved ones whose living smile was the sunlight of their existence. Death is the antagonist of life, and the thought of the tomb is the skeleton of all feasts.

We do not want to go through the dark valley, although its dark passage may lead to paradise; we do not want to go down into damp graves, even with princes for bed fellows. In the beautiful drama of Ion, the hope of immortality, so eloquently uttered by the death-devoted Greek, finds deep response in every thoughtful soul. When about to yield his life a sacrifice to fate, his Clemanthe asks if they should meet again; to which he responds: I have asked that dreadful question of the hills that look eternal-of the clear streams that flow forever-of stars among those fields of azure my raised spirits have walked in glory. All are dumb. But as I gaze upon thy living face, I feel that there is something in love that mantles through its beauty that can not wholly perish. We shall meet again Clemanthe."

OATMEAL IN THE HOUSEHOLD.

In Great Britain children of all ranks are raised on an oatmeal diet alone, because it causes them to grow strong and healthful, and no better food can possibly be found for them. It is also quite as desirable for the student as for the laborer, and for the delicate lady and for her hard working sister; indeed, all classes would be greatly benefitted by its use; and dyspepsia, with all its manifold annoyances, can be kept at a distance. Oatmeal is more substantial food, it is said, than veal, pork or lamb, and quite equal to beef and mutton, giving as much or more mental vigor, while its great desideratum consists in one's not becoming weary of it, for it is as welcome for breakfast or tea as is wheat or Graham bread.

It can be eaten with sirup and butter as hastypudding, or with cream and sugar, like rice. It is especially good for young mothers, upon whose nervous forces too great a demand has been made, and they lose the equilibrium of the system and become depressed and dispirited. Oatmeal requires to be cooked slowly, and the water should be boiling hot when it is stirred in.

Original Poetry.

LINES FROM C. ST. CLAIR, RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED TO THEM WHO CAN BEST UNDERSTAND.

A whisper-giving breath, Of praise or blame to death; Soothing or saddening such As loved the living much.

Therefore with yearnings vain And fond, I still would fain A kindly judgment seek, A tender thought bespeak.

And while my words are read, Let this at least be said: Whate'er his life's defeatures, He loved his fellow creatures.

If of the twelve stone tables, To hold he scarce was able, The first great precept fast; He kept for man the last.

Through mortal lapse and dullness What lacks the eternal fulness, If still our weakness can Love him in loving man?

Age brought him no despairing Of the world's future faring; In human nature still He found more good than ill.

Though silently I suffered, My tongue and pen I offered; My life was not my own, Nor lived I for self alone.

I loved the Elder's zeal, though quiet, Nor felt I untempted by it, Or their fond dreams of heaven's beauty; I strove to do my duty.

I meant no wrong to any, I sought the good of many, Yet knew both sin and folly— May God forgive me wholly!"

TITHING, GATHERING, AND REVENGE.

BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR.

GATHERING.

As we promised in a former number of the Herald, we now undertake to examine the position of Elder Gurley on the subject of the gathering.

r. We undertake to say that, gathering was an inherent principle under the Patriarchal, Mosaic, and Christian dispensations; and, that when God's people served him in truth and righteousness, they enjoyed, in a gathered condition, the special fruits of their faithfulness; and, further, that division, dispersion, and scattering, were the results of disobedience to God, and were held to be either a calamity, a chastisement, or a rejection. The City of Enoch, the City of Salem, the land of Goshen, the land of Judea with God's people enjoying them when under his favor; and the dispersion from Babel, Israel driven to Egypt by famine, the various dispersions and scatterings of Israel from the times of the Judges till the days of John the Baptist, are all indubitable evidences in favor of this position. It is clear our Savior held this same view; for, near the close of his wondrous ministry on earth, when contemplating the terrible calamities, (including their scattering), that were about to sweep down like a desolating storm upon the Jewish race, he cried—

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."—Matt. 23: 37-39.

Such were the sentiments of Jesus relative to the gathering of God's people when righteous. From the parables of the "mustard seed," the "merchantman," and the "net," (Matt. 13: 31, 45, 47), may be readily infered the general principles of gathering; so also of the parables of the "dinner," and the "supper," of Matt. 22: 4–10, and Luke 14: 16-23, as also that of the "sheepfold," John 10: 1–16; and this upon the general law of association—like cleaving to like.

Whilst it was not practicable for the Saints, immediately after the crucifixion, to all gather into one place, or region, yet it is historically true that a large body of them were gathered in Jerusalem, and, that there was the chief seat of the Church, the place of its principal ministry, until Jerusalem was beseiged by the Roman army under Titus, when, by a marvellous providence they were gathered out from the doomed city to Pella and the mountains of Judea. The nature of the gospel was such as to then gather the Saints into churches, and its tendencies were such as to gather them into large communities, from all which we may learn that gathering is inherent in the gospel.

As to the gathering of God's Israel in the last days, there should be no doubt; for the Scriptures, including the Book of Mormon, abound with promises and prophecies in proof of it. The prophetic promises of Jacob; (Gen. 48: 16, 19; 49: 26); likewise those of Moses; (Deut. 33: 17); can be fulfilled only in the gathering of Israel; and especially is this true of Deut. 30: 1-7; for in this place the Lord promises to gather Israel "from all the nations" where he has scattered them, saying, "and if any of thine be driven out unto the outmost part of heaven, from thence will the Lord thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee." When Israel, through their disobedience, would be scattered; God would still remember mercy and gather them whenever they would repent and serve him. The Psalmists prophetic prayer was "Save us, O Lord our God, and gather us from among the heathen." Isaiah predicted this gathering in great clearness, as may be seen on reading chapters 2:11, 18; and These texts show, not only 63: 17-19. that Israel and Judah will be gathered, but in the second chapter, 3d verse, it is seen that many other people will be gathered in that time. And to this agrees the prophecy of Jeremiah, 16: 10-21. The reader will please mark this—"O Lord, my strength, and my fortress, and my refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit;" showing that the Gentiles, as many as turn to God in that day, will be gathered with Israel.

Ezekiel, chapter 36, and elsewhere, shows that when Israel turns to God and obeys his voice, he will bless them and gather them, in the last days. Zechariah predicts that when Israel's Lord (Christ) shall come, (Zech. 14:4-14), the Jews will be gathered to Judea. In order to understand these texts fully, it should be borne in mind that not only literal Israel, but all who become Israel by adoption through Christ, are heirs to the same promises. Indeed, literal Israel has no promise of special blessings-including gatheringuntil they turn to God and accept the new covenant in Christ, as predicted; (Jer. 31: 31-40, with Heb. 8:8-12, also Ezek. 36: 26-28, Gal. 3:26-29, Rom. 9:6-8, 11: 10-20). From these texts we learn that it is the true Israel—God's Israel, Christ's Israel-who are heirs to the promises. And let it be borne in mind that, up to the times of the apostacy, the saints of Christ were known, and held to be the true Israel of God; hence, Paul's reasoning in Galatians and Romans, as we have seen; and hence James' epistle "to the twelve tribes scattered abroad;" hence "the tribes of the children of Israel" mentioned by John the Revelator, (Rev. 7:3-8), and hence the twelve gates of the New Jerusalem, the celestial abode of the redeemed, being named after "the twelve tribes of the children of Israel," mentioned chapter 21:12; all going to prove that no one can enter that beautiful city till they become identified with the true Israel of God; and, that it is only through Christ that any can become "Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." To this agree the teachings of the Book of Mormon and the revelations of "the choice seer." Paul assures us that in the times when "the fulness of the Gentiles be come in," (Rom. 11:25), "all. Israel shall be saved;" and proceeds to say, "there shall come out of Sion [not Jerusalem] the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob;" (verse 26); and he then says this "Deliverer" is God's "covenant unto them." (verse 27). In the 20th verse he tells us literal Israel were broken off from their olive tree, because of unbelief; and in the 24th verse he informs us that though they "be the natural branches" they must nevertheless "be grafted into their own olive tree" the same as they of the "wild olive tree" (Gentiles) were gratfted in." (verse 17). And that, "so all Israel" (whether the literal seed, or Gentiles, if they be "grafted in" to the "good olive tree") "shall be saved."

Now, the Lord says by Jacob, (2 Nephi 7:2), that "when the day cometh that they (the Jews) shall believe in me, that I am Christ, then have I covenanted with their fathers that they shall be restored in the flesh, upon the earth, unto the lands of their inheritance. And it shall come to pass that they shall be gathered in from their long dispersion, from the isles of the sea, and from the four parts of the earth; and the nations of the Gentiles shall be great in the eyes of me, saith God, in carrying them forth to the lands of their inheritance." To this agrees 2 Nephi 5:4, 5; 12:13, 14; Book of Nephi 7:4; 9:9, 10, 11; 10:1; 13:6, as to the gathering. These texts show clearly the gathering of God's believing children in the last days, and that in a most literal manner; and that, too, to "the lands of their inheritance," wherever they may be, whether in Palestine and adjacent regions, or here on "the choice land" of America.

As Jerusalem will be the chief city of Judah and his fellows on the eastern continent, so the New Jerusalem, on this land of Joseph, will be the metropolis of God's Israel of the house of Joseph and those Gentiles who become identified with them. In proof we quote Book of Nephi 9:8, 9; 10:1, and Ether 6:1:

'8. And it came to pass that when they had all given glory unto Jesus, he said unto them, Be-hold now I finish the commandment which the Father hath commanded me concerning this people who are a remnant of the house of Israel. Ye remember that I spake unto you, and said that when the words of Isaiah should be fulfilled, behold they are written, ye have them before you, therefore search them. And verily, verily I say unto you, that when they shall be fulfilled, then is the fulfilling of the covenant which the Father hath made unto his people, O house of Israel. And then shall the remnants which shall be scattered abroad upon the face of the earth, be gathered in from the east, and from the west, and from the south, and from the north; and they shall be brought to the knowledge of the Lord their God, who hath redeemed them. And the Father hath commanded me that I should give unto you this land, for your inheritance. And I say unto you, that if the Gentiles do not repent, after the blessing which they shall receive, after they have scattered my people, then shall ye who are a remnant of the house of Jacob, go forth among them; and ye shall be in the midst of them, who shall be many; and ye shall be among thom, as a lion among the beasts of the forest, and as a young lion among the flocks of sheep, who, if he goeth through, both treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver. Thy hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off. And I will gather my people together, as a man gather-eth his sheaves into the floor, for I will make my people with whom the Father hath covenanted, yea, I will make thy horn iron, and I will make thy hoofs brass. And thou shalt beat in pieces many people; and I will consecrate their gain unto the Lord, and their substance unto the Lord of the whole earth. And behold, I am he who doeth it.

"9. And it shall come to pass, saith the Father, that the sword of my justice shall hang over them at that day; and except they repent, it shall fall upon them, saith the Father, yea, even upon all the nations of the Gentiles. And it shall come to pass that I will establish my people, O house of Israel. And behold, this people will I establish in this land, unto the fulfilling of the covenant which I made with your father Jacob; and it shall be a New Jerusalem. And the powers of heaven shall be in the midst of . this people; yea, even I will be in the midst of you. Behold, I am he of whom Moses spake, saying, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me, him shall ve hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that every soul who will not And it hear that prophet, shall be cut off from among the people. Verily, I say unto you, yea; and all the prophets from Samuel, and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have testified of And behold ye are the children of the prophets; and ye are of the house of Israel; and ye are of the covenant which the Father made with your fathers, saying unto Abraham, And in thy seed, shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed; the Father having raised me up unto you first, and sent me to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities; and this because ye are the children of the covenant. And after that ye were blessed, then fulfilleth the Father the covenant which he made with Abraham, saying, In thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed, unto the pouring out of the Holy Ghost through me upon the Gentiles, which blessing upon the Gentiles, shall make them mighty above all, unto the scattering of my people, O house of Israel; and they shall be a scourge unto the people of this land. Nevertheless, when they shall have received the fulness of my gospel, then if they shall harden their hearts against me, I will return their iniquities upon their own heads, saith the Father. And I will remember the covenant which I have made with my people, and I have covenanted with them, that I would gather them together in mine own due time; that I would give unto them again the land of their fathers, for their inheritance, which is the land of Jerusalem, which is the promised land unto them forever, saith the Father."—Book of Nephi 9:8, 9.

"1. But if they will repent, and hearken unto my words, and harden not their hearts, I will establish my church among them, and they shall come in unto the covenant, and be numbered among this the remnant of Jacob, unto whom I have given this land for their inheritance, and they shall assist my people, the remnant of Jacob; and also, as many of the house of Israel as shall come, that they may build a city, which shall be called the New Jerusalem; and then shall they assist my people that they may be gathered in, who are scattered upon all the face of the land in unto the New Jerusalem. And then shall the power of heaven come down among them; and I also will be in the midst, and then shall the work of the Father commence, at that day even when this gospel shall be preaced among the remnant of this people. Verily, I say unto you, At that day shall the work of the Father commence among all the dispersed of my people; yea, even the tribes which have been lost, which the Father hath led away out of Jer-Yea, the work shall commence among all the dispersed of my people, with the Father, to prepare the way whereby they may come unto me, that they may call on the Father in my name; yea, and then shall the work commence, with the Father, among all nations, in preparing the way whereby his people may be gathered home to the land of their inheritance. And they shall go out from all nations: and they shall not go out in haste, nor go by flight; for I will go before them, saith the Father, and I will be their rearward. And then shall that which is written come to pass. Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child; for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord. Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thy habitations; spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes; for thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited. Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed; neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame; for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more. For thy maker, thy, husband, the Lord of hosts is his name; and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; the God of the whole earth shall he be called. Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God. For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer. For this, the waters of Noah unto me, for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee. For the mountains shall depart and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my people be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee."—Book of Nephi 10:1.

"I. And now I, Moroni, proceed to finish my record concerning the destruction of the people of whom I have been writing. For behold, they rejected all the words of Ether; for he truly told them of all things, from the beginning of man; and that after the waters had receded from off the face of this land, it became a choice land above all other lands, a chosen land of the Lord; wherefore the Lord would have that all men should serve him, who dwell upon the face thereof; and that it was the place of the New Jerusalem, which should come down out of heaven, and the holy sanctuary of the Lord. Behold, Ether saw the days of Christ, and he spake concerning a New Jerusalem upon this land; and he spake also concerning the house of Israel, and the Jerusalem from whence Lehi should come; after it should be destroyed, it should be built up again a holy city unto the Lord; wherefore it could not be a New Jerusalem, for it had been in time of old, but it should be built up again, and become a holy city of the Lord; and it should be built unto the house of Israel; and that a New Jerusalem should be built up upon this land, unto the remnant of the seed of Joseph, for which things there has been a type; for as Joseph brought his father down into the land of Egypt, even so he died there; wherefore the Lord brought a remnant of the seed of Joseph out of the land of Jerusalem, that he might be merciful unto the seed of Joseph, that they should perish not, even as he was merciful unto the father of Joseph, that he should perish not; wherefore the remnant of the house of Joseph shall be built upon this land; and it shall be a land of their inheritance; and they shall build up a holy city unto the Lord, like unto the Jerusalem of old; and they shall no more be confounded, until the end come, when the earth shall pass away. And there shall be a new heaven and a new earth; and they shall be like unto the old, save the old have passed away, and all things have become new. And then cometh the New Jerusalem; and blessed are they who dwell therein, for it is they whose garments are white through the blood of the Lamb; and they are they who are numbered among the remnant of the seed of Joseph, who were of the house of Israel. And then also cometh the Jerusalem of old; and the inhabitants thereof, blessed are they, for they have been washed in the blood of the Lamb; and they are they who were scattered and gathered in from the four quarters of the earth and from the north countries, and are partakers of the fulfilling of the covenant which God made with their father Abraham. And when these things come, bringeth to pass the scripture which saith, They are they who were first, who shall be last; and there are they who were last who shall be first."—Ether 6: 1.

These texts make it as plain as words can, that God will gather all his people in the last days, whether from literal Israel or the Gentiles, to the lands designed for them, and that he will have a New Jerusalem, a Zion built up upon this land to the remnant of Joseph, and to as many of Israel and the Gentiles as will come. But the Book of Mormon does not locate the site for that city, nor does the Bible; nor do either inform us as to just when it would be prepared for God's people to gather to it and build it up; neither do they inform us as to the plans, methods, laws, and special requirements in respect to this gathering; but the revelations of "the choice Seer" do, at least in part.

And without this further revelation than the Bible and Book of Mormon, none can know the place, time, laws, and requirements for the gathering to and building up of this New Jerusalem. God declares by Joel 2:31, 32, that "Before the great and terrible day of the Lord come," * * * "Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered; for in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call." Here are three distinct localities and peoples where deliverance may be found in the last days; but how shall any one know where those localities and peoples are, and when deliverance may be found there, except God reveals these matters in those times? God declares that Joseph Smith would be "a choice Seer" in this last dispensation, and that he would "be great like unto Moses," and of him he further says, "I will make him great in mine eyes; for he shall do my work."—2 Nephi 2:2. Is it not reasonable to expect that the Lord would reveal these matters to this "choice See?" We think so.

This "choice Seer," whom the Lord says he would make great in his eyes-estimation—declares from the time of the angel's first visit the fact of the gathering; and from 1829 to 1844 he gave revelations to the church in regard to it. Who is most likely to be right in these matters, him whom God has accredited as his "choice Seer," or those who have no such authority and credentials! Is it not wiser, and safer, to trust the teachings of one of whom God says-"I will make him great in mine eyes"—than it is to trust those of whom God has said no such things! Is it not wiser and safer to follow the authoritative teachings of one whom God declares "a choice Seer" and "like unto Moses," than to follow the teachings, or be disturbed by the doubts and fears, of those whom God has at no time sent or endorsed as the leader and the presiding authority of his people?

The gathering is taught in both Testaments by both prophecy and promise; it is a chief doctrine of the Book of Mormon; it was one of the first principal facts taught to the church by the Seer from 1830 to 1844. And it is one of the chief principles taught the Saints of the Reorganized Church from November, 1851, up to the present time; for Bro. J. W. Briggs professed to have received a revelation from God November 18th, 1851, in which are these words: "Behold, I have not cast off my people; neither have I changed in regard to Zion. Yea, verily, my people shall be redeemed, and my law shall be kept which I revealed unto my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., for I am God and not man." * * * "In my own due time will I call upon the seed of Joseph Smith, and I will bring one forth, and he shall be mighty and strong, and he shall preside over the high priesthood of my church; and then shall the quorums assemble, and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be reinhabited, as I said unto my servant Joseph Smith; after many days shall all these things be accomplished, saith the Lamb, my rock and my salvation; and

This revelation, and others of a similar character, were the chief grounds, and principal causes, from which came the Reorganized Church. The heavens have borne wonderful testimony to the truth of the latter day work whenever and wherever the doctrines of gathering and tithing have been taught just as the three standard books of the church teach them. Heaven's endorsement is the chief one. Men and ministers may fail, but heaven will never fail us; and having the approval of God's word and Spirit we may cheerfully wait on the Lord, and he will bring it to pass. God commanded Abraham, and he went out not knowing whither he went, (Heb. 11:8), and he did not doubt, nor tear, nor falter, even though he did not know all about the final results. His posterity after him enjoyed and appreciated the results. So may the Saints of God if faithful and wise. The gathering is true in principle, and in fact; and we have the best of reasons for believing that the "choice seer" taught only true revelations in regard to it.

Elder Gurley claims there is a conflict between the two following statements relative to the gathering, one saying the the Saints should gather "into the regions round about;" the other saying, there is "no place" to which they should gather.

Persons well acquainted with the doctrine and sentiments of the church know full well that the meaning of the words "no place," were intended to be equivalent with "no stake," or no central site—no definite point. It is a common and very just principle of interpretation, that the meaning of words must be determined by the use they manifestly serve and were intended to serve in a passage. Apply this principle in the case in hand, and there is no conflict. But aside from this, the two passages do not conflict, and can not be made to conflict, for one is in the plural, and the other in the singular; one is in-definite; one speaks of "regions;" the other of a "place." Webster defines the meaning of "region" to be "In general, a portion of space or territory of indefinite extent; and "place" as meaning "any portion of space regarded as measured off or distinct from all other space," "site," "spot." There is no conflict in either the words, or the sense, of the two passages. [To be Continued].

THE BOOK OF MORMON A STANDARD OF TRUTH TO GOD'S PEOPLE.

THE truths of the Book of Mormon are stated in words and sentences which admit of no ambiguity. False teachers can not deceive its believers until they lead them to believe they have outgrown and are ahead of its teaching. The book forbids such a theory. Read 2 Nephi 11:6: "The things which I write shall go from generation to generation, as long as the earth shall stand. The nations who shall possess them shall be judged of them, according to the words which are written." 1st Book of Nephi 3:40, reads: "These things shall come unto the Gentiles; in them shall be written my gospel, saith the blessed are they that shall seek to bring forth my Zion at that day, for they shall have the gift and power of the Holy The whole verse implies that those who publish the gospel, the tidings of peace and great joy, are of those that shall have the Holy Spirit. For standard, read 2d Book of Nephi 13:6: "And my words shall hiss forth unto the ends of the earth for a standard unto my people, which are of the house of Israel." Verse 11 reads: "As many of the Gentiles as will repent are the covenant people of the Lord; as many of the Jews as will not repent shall be cast off." Thus we see these words are a standard to all who obey the gospel. No amount of sophistry can do away with the force and beauty of the truth taught in this book. 2 Nephi 11:16: "The Lord doeth nothing save it be plain unto the children of men. He inviteth all to come unto him, and partake of his goodness." Verse 15 reads: "The Lord worketh not in darkness. Doth he say to any, Depart from me: Hath he commanded any to depart out of houses of worship? I say unto you, nay, but all are privileged alike and none are forbidden."

This plainly coincides with Ether 3: 13: "The Lord worketh not in secret combinations." Not one especial combination; but he worketh not in "secret" combinations. Why? The above text says he doeth nothing save it be plain unto the children of men. He worketh not in darkness and forbiddeth none to come unto him, but all are privileged alike with his blessings. The candid reader can not believe the Lord thought it necessary to tell his people he did not work in murderous combinations of secret orders, when his gospel teaches peace and good will to all nations; but he meant as the word plainly asserts: The Lord worketh not in secret combinations. For beneficiary goodness the Psalmist joyfully exclaims "Praise the Lord for all his benefits." Thus his people will trust in him to bless the labors of their hands. Although secret combinations in the minds of some should be as strong as as the rocks of Gibralter, the Saints, believers in the Book of Mormon, can not justify themselves in working where the Lord does not work, when the preaching and practice of the precepts of the gospel of peace and good will to all demands all our time and means. Where the Lord works, if we work with him we shall have the gift and power of the Holy Spirit. For this we will forego the honors of the world, gladly working with the Lord until we gain eternal life. M. EATON.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF A DRUNK-ARD.—I die a wretched sinner, and I leave to the world a worthless reputation, a wicked example, and a memory that is only fit to perish. I leave to my parents sorrow and bitterness of soul all the days of their lives. I leave to my brothers and sisters shame and grief, and the reproach of their acquaintances. I leave my wife widowed and heart-broken, and a life of lonely struggling with want and suffering. I leave my children a tainted name, and a ruined position, a pitiful ignorance, and the mortifying recollection of a father who, by his life, disgraced humanity, and at his premature death joined the great company of those who are never to enter the Kingdom of God,

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.

NEBULAR.

THERE are maelstroms of stellar matter called spiral nebulæ. One is in Canes Venatici. Another class resemble planetary disks. One of this class is seen in the southern cross. Several others have perfectly the appearance of rings, and are called annular nebulæ. Others again are connected in pairs, like binary stars. Most of the small nebulæ have each a nucleus, enveloped in a nebulous veil; the nucleus sometimes concentrated as a star, and sometimes diffused; the enveloping veil sometimes circular, sometimes elliptical, with every degree of eccentricity between a straight line and a circle. Some have great branching arms; others no regular form. The one in Andromeda is visible with the naked eye, and was so discovered before the use of telescopes. The Magellanic clouds are nebulous tracts. are five thousand known nebulæ; one third of them give the spectrum of gaseity, the rest give stellar spectrums. All are within the limits of our stellar system. It has been noticed that flocks of nebulous matter separate from nebulæ that have a spiral motion, and follow in their detached state, suggesting the analagous form and movements of comets. Comets are nebulæ their tails half their diameter. Many supposed nebulæ have been resolved into stars, but others stand the test of improved means of investigation.

The density of Jupiter is small; his internal heat very great; the surface plastic, and red with heat; has a gaseous envelope of great depth and pressure, supporting an outer envelope of cloud-masses, which take the form of broad bands or belts, corresponding to parallels of latitude, alternately dark and bright. Within this envelope, rounded, definitely shaped clouds are seen, changing in form and color, and subject to some strong force that sometimes drives them all apart, revealing the glowing elements beneath.

The constitution of Saturn is similar to that of Jupiter, with the exception of three rings peculiar to that planet. The innermost ring is semi-transparent, but dark. The inner edge of the ring next to this one is dark, and seems to be approaching The outer edge of this the lower one. middle ring is bright. There is a space between the middle and outer rings, and the outer ring is all bright. These bright rings cast a shadow distinguishable from the inner ring. These inner rings not being solid it is presumable they are held out from the planet by heat, and centrifugal force. Another effect of the centrifugal force is to confine the rings to a position midway between the poles, just as water on a revolving grindstone forms a ridge in the middle of the stone.

GEOLOGICAL.

There was a time, all say, when there was no man upon the earth, no animals, no trees, no plants on land or see, no birds, no light of sun or moon or stars, no sea, no light, no rocks, only a red glowing earth, clothed in a night of vapor, which rose in steam and fumes, and fell in floods and debacles, falling upon, and rising from a heated, plastic stratum, upon which the waters settled and flitted, like flocks of frightened birds. This stratum became what is now called primitive rocks—crystaline and igneous, in uncertain proportion and connection, and at this stage, nameless. Upon this basis or bed, the water or waters, or chemical fluid finally rested, in a shallow, almost universal sea. In some part of this sea, or in some separate sea or lake, surcharged with chemical solvents in which the constituents of granite were held, gneiss was precipitated or crystalized. A similar process, in the main sea, combined with deposition of comminuted rocks, began the sedimentary formation, metamorphosed into the Huronian and Laurentian—hereafter mentioned. Deposited in hot water their composition would, per consequence, be different from rocks deposited at a later period, but the process of baking under extreme pressure, to which they have been subjected, makes them undistinguishable from metamorphic rocks of the later period, in general appearance.

It is said that the oldest part of the American continent and of the world, is a range of crystaline rocks extending from the great lakes to the Arctic Sea, consisting of trap, gneiss and granite. Granite, like gneiss, is composed of quartz, mica and feldspar, but while gneiss is formed by precipitation in layers, granite was formed in crystaline masses.

Crystals of feldspar sometimes form in the walls of furnaces used for smelting ores. Various crystaline rocks are formed by solfataras or gaseous volcanoes and also in fissures that emit heated gasses in geysers and hot springs. M. Daubree has by artificial pressure produced hydrated silicates, also augites and crystals of quartz. By this analogy we may assert that at a time when the greater parts of the elements of the earth were in a molten state, and surrounded by gasses of immense depth and of great pressure, out of this molten mass, igneous and crystaline rocks of a loose soft texture came into being by the laws of crystalization, somewhat as now ice forms upon water and beneath ice, the crystalization going on beneath the The deeper this crust became, the more compact the rocks formed beneath it were. The looser parts formed on the surface, we may suppose were washed away, or are the frappean rocks, like those mentioned above. It is still a question whether crystaline rocks can form when unconfined, but after the deposition of the first sedimentary rocks beneath the sea, the required conditions of confinement and pressure obtained, and the formation of this whole series or class of rocks was pos-

That gneiss was formed in water, and nothing hotter, is proved by the fact that it in some places contains cinnabar, which is readily volatilized. Trap must at first have been formed just as it is formed now—without being confined or subject to pressure. The various igneous rocks classified under different names, got their different characteristics from the amount of pressure under sea or rock in which they were formed. Pressure liquifies rocks and minerals much as heat does. Rocks buried at great depths therefore become homogeneous in character, plastic and subject to crystalization, and to cleavage which is a result of crystalization. Stratified rocks thus buried retain their stratification, although so changed that all traces of life are obliterated.

The former statement that the oldest range of the earth is crystaline, is confirmed by the fact that the stratified rocks are always found superimposed on the crystaline; but, the fact that the central core of all the principal mountain ranges of the world is granite that has upheaved, and has protruded through the metamorphic. proves that these metamorphic rocks were formed and in place before the granite took its present conical outlines, and therefore, certainly or probably before it had become hard and compact, and probably before it was formed at all. It is probable as we have said that the stratified rocks supplied the pressure and confinement that made crystalization possible. The history of creation will never be unraveled. The labratory out of which came the mineral and gasseous compounds was too vast for human inspection. Man can make won-derful experiments, and draw grand analogies, but must die in despair of the philosopher's stone he is now searching for. The sentence God created the heaven's and the earth, is true in a sense that science can never equal, never contradict, never understand, never more than confirm.

Crystals of the red oxide of copper were recently found in the mud beneath the old Roman baths, in the department of Haute Marne, France, formed by the action of hot water on bronze implements; copper pyrites was found in the same deposit, and various ores of lead formed from the lead pipes used in the baths, and pyrites of iron formed from the iron bolts and implements. These facts explain the presence of these ores in the Laurentian. When the earth was flame the metals were part of the flame; when there was only light they were in the light; when the elements were gasseous they were a part of the mass, when the gasses became liquid they were in the sea, and very much as we have just stated, transferred to rocky strata, as found at Dubuque, Lake Superior, Iron Moun-

This chemical process of extracting mineral and metalic substance from the sea, and that from the gasseous envelope, was a clarifying process, and there came a time when light from without began to permeate the primeval darkness. At this time and before, the centrifugal force of the revolving mass had been consolidating the cooling vapors of the upper realm into belts and srengs, like those of Saturn. At least the centrifugal force had a tendency to keep vast quantities of frozen vapor in the outer realm, in line with the ecliptic, while the chemical changes was going on that resulted in our atmosphere. There could be no life on the planet or in the sea until this condition was reached. During the Laurentian period the land was low. limited in area; the continents were in em brio. Some islands represented North America, an archipelago Europe. During this time we may suppose the lands—so new and rocky, less favorable than the sea for the development of life. That plants did grow and that animals had eyes, in this age, is proof that there was light and a firmament of air; but the nature of these plants and character of those eyes, prove that the light was dim.

The Huronian and Laurentian, were the oldest stratified rocks, and were, formed in the primitive sea, by sedimentation and precipitation as stated; and doubtless contained organisms, both vegetable and animal. The temperature of water is limited, and doubtless, there are forms of life that can endure 112 degrees or more of heat. Animal life is only sustained by organized substance, it is said, and therefore the supposition that vegetable life preceded animal life on the globe; but admitting this fact the one needs precede the other but a brief space. But the reasonable conclusion, I apprehend, is the lowest forms of animal life may draw their sustenance from inorganic matter. In accordance with this view we find that the oldest fossil yet discovered-the rhizopod, found deep down in the earliest stratified rocks, is said to be an animal. We can realize that a sponge can live independently of vegetable sustenance, and also that it or animals of its class, might live when the sea was boiling hot. The low Huronian rocks must have been formed in very hot water. The process of the formation of stratified rocks by precipitation, is explained by chemistry. Silica and alumina, chief constituents of the early rocks, are soluble in alkalies and in certain acids whichare found in mica and feldspar, in vast quantities in the earth. On these principles all existing materials are soluble, the acids in the alkalies, the metalic oxides and most of the earths, the alkalies in Alumina, &c. But, it will not do to exclude sedimentary action from the processes of the earliest stratification. In addition to the decomposing agencies already noticed there was a downfall of rain like as if the windows of heaven were opened. The waters which were above the firmament could not be kept there, after there was a place for them on the earth and they

We have seen the origin of sea and land, and of life. If the rhizopod, mentioned above, being an animal, had necessity for vegetable food this was supplied by alga seaweed. So perhaps algæ preceded the rhizopod. There were probably earlier plants and animals than these, but they are the earliest relics known, and will suffice as representatives of the great classes of organized matter. If vegetable life necessarily preceded animal life, the difference in the time of the beginning of the march of these two grand divisions of organized being, culminating in man and the fruits and flowers that sustain and cheer him, need not have been more than the span of the life of a single sea weed. Both kinds of life originated in the sea, for the lands were barren rocks and deluged with floods from waters above. The rhizopod doubtless had much company, as well as many predecessors, but he stands a single specimen, and lone representative of his age in the annals of the rocks as now revealed; and for many years and possibly millions of years his immediate successors are not known, though the chalk beds are made up of the same kind of protozoa and the deepest seas abound with them now. The marine deposit in which-life's fitful fever over-he lay down, and slept, was buried forty thousand feet under similar accumulations, and then sunk so deeply into the earth that it was burned like bricks in a kiln, and countless billions of forms like his obliterated. His near kinsman the moner of the present day, is a microscopic mite of organless matter, that feeds by absorption, and puts out threads to walk or move with; and when the occasion for their use is passed they fade away.

It is useless to speculate upon the origin of such animals. The microscope reveals a world of beings that have no limit but the power of optical instruments to disclose them. They are on and within all visible organisms; in the air and water and earth; evil spirits of epidemic diseases; and are the devils that possess sick folks. And if human life can not be traced back to them, human death is being traced to them to an appalling degree.

Many so called animalcules have been proven to be plants, having locomotive powers like that of animals—not voluntary motion however.

No experiment has resulted in producing life. No new form of life has come into existence since man learned to observe. None, doubtless, has come into being since man was formed, and how strange! God rested from all his works after man was formed. And, in this connection. No instance is known of one species passing into or producing another. The first moner was a miracle, for moners are not made now out of anything else. The greatest of investigators have so said and reiterated.

The sun-dew plant feeds upon insects, but that is not proof that animal life preceded vegetable life on the globe. The victims of the plant's carnal appetite are decomposed in gastric juice. These plants decline and droop when they can not get regular rations of flies, and those fed on roast beef thrive above their fellows.

Peptones, which are formed by gastric juice in the digestive organs of animals, have been found in the lowest of the protophytes—the yeast plant; furthermore, the process of excretion takes place in this plant. On the other hand planarians are vegetating, starch-forming, oxygen-exhaling animals; and there is no dividing line between the great kingdoms; and man must be traced a stage further down and back; and if there is evolution, not the most wonderful stage would be the spontaneous growth of fungi from earthy matter.

It is assumed by some that there was a single point of time in the history of the globe when spontaneous generation was possible—a time when the elements were changing from a fiery to a liquid state.

Evolution is too vast in its ramifications for impartial treatment; a fair rendition of the facts as now known (and all likely to be known) should be, CREATION AMID EVOLUTION.

WE publish the following by request:
THE WORLD'S PRAYER.

O, Almighty Dollar! our acknowledged governor, preserver and benefactor, we desire to approach thee, on this and every other occasion, with that reverence which is due superior excellence, and that regard which should ever be cherished for exalted greatness. Almighty Dollar! without thee in the world we can do nothing, but with thee we can do all things. When sickness lays its palsying hand upon us, thou canst provide for us the tenderest nurses, the most skillful physicians; and when the last struggle of mortality is over, and we are being borne to the resting place of the dead, thou canst provide a band of music and a military escort to accompany us thither; and last, but not least, erect a magnificent monument over our graves, with a lying epitaph to perpetate our memories.

And while here in the midst of misfortunes and temptations of life, we perhaps are accused of crime, and brought before magistrates; thou, Almighty Dollar, canst secure forus a feed lawyer, a bribed judge, a packed jury; and we go scot free.

a packed jury; and we go scot free.

Be with us, we pray thee, in all thy decimal parts, for we feel that thou art the one altogether lovely and the chiefest among ten thousands.

We feel there is no true condition in life where thy potent and all powerful charms are not felt. In thy absence how gloomy is the household, and how desolate the hearthstone; but when thou Almighty Dollar, art with us, how gleefully the Beefsteak sings on the gridiron; how genial the warmth of the Anthracite Coal or Hickory Wood diffuses throughout the apartments, and what an exuberance of joy continues to swell every bosom.

Thou art the joy of our youth, and the solace of old age. Thou canst adorn the Gentleman and thou feedest the Jackass. Thou art the favorite of the Philosopher, and the idol of the Lunkhead. Where an election is to be carried, O, Almighty Dollar! thou art the most potent argument of Politicians and Demagogues, and the umpire that decides the contest.

Almighty Dollar! thou art worshipped the world over. Thou hast no Hypocrites in thy Temples or false hearts at thy Altars. Kings and courtiers bow before thee, and all nations adore; thou art loved by the civilized and savage alike, with unfeigned and unfaltering affections.

O, Almighty Dollar! in the acquirement and defence of Human Liberty thou hast placed Armies in the field and Navies on the ocean. At the uplifting of thy powerful hand their thunders would break and their lightnings flash. Thou hast bound continents together by the Telegraph Cables, and made the varied products of our country available to all by a perfect net of Railroads. The Forest has been prostrated and the Desert made to blossom as the

We continue to regard thee as the Handmaid of Religion, the twin sister of Char-When the light of thy shining countenance breaks through the gloom of famine-stricken Ireland, the Shamrock wears a greener hue, and the Harp resounds in loftier strains, while weeping mothers and starving children rise above their wails of woe, as their hearts and their heels resound to the thrilling strains of "St. Patrick's Day in the Morning."

When our Brothers and Sisters of the Sunny South are smitten "hip and thigh" by the climate scourge of Yellow Fever, and destitution prevails in consequence of the cessation of industries, and suffering is increased from lack of nurses and medical attendants, and they call for the Almighty Dollar of the North, thou goest on the wings of love to their rescue, while the air that was discordant with groans and shrieks, becomes redolent with the exhilarating melodies of Yankee Doodle.

O, Almighty Dollar! be with us, we beseech thee, attended by an inexpressible number of thy ministering angels, made in thine own image, even though they be but Silver Quarters, whose gladdening light shall illumine the vale of penury and want with heavenly radiance which shall cause the wakened soul to break forth in acclamations of joy.

Almighty Dollar! thou art the awakener of our energies, the guide of our footsteps and the goal of our being. Guided by thy silvery light we hope to reach the "Golden Gate" triumphantly; enter while angel hands harmoniously sweep their golden harps, and we, on the golden streets, in the highest exhilaration of feeling, and with jubilant emotions, strike the Highland fling.

Almighty Dollar, thy shining face Bespeaks thy wondrous power; In my pocket make thy resting place, I need thee every hour.

And now, Almighty Dollar, in closing this invocation we realize and acknowledge that thou wert the God of our grandfathers, the two-fold God of their children, and the three-fold God of their grandchildren. Permit us to possess thee in abundance, and of all thy varied excellencies, is our constant and unwavering Prayer. Amen.

TWO PERSONALITIES IN ONE PERSON.

THE record books of the medical profession contain not a few reports of patients living double lives; cases in which there is a periodical loss of one phase of mental life, and the assumption or resumption of another very different one. For example, an hysterical subject will have a fit, and on coming out of it will be found to have lost all memory of the past. The mental faculties remain unimpaired, but so far as knowledge goes, the patient's mind is that of an infant. With more or less delay she will learn to talk, and to read and work, practically beginning life again at the beginning, and sometimes developing a character quite unlike her first one. The physical basis appears to be the same; but the personality is entirely different, with different temperament, different habits, diferent tastes, and so on.

Matters will continue after this fashion for an indefinite period; and then the patient will go into another fit, emerging just as she was originally. All the life she has lived since the first fit is suddenly wiped out. She can recall none of it; for the time her second life, and it may have lasted years, is annihilated, and the current of her original life flows on as serenely and naturally, as if it had never been broken-until another fit sets her back to the end of her second life, which she takes up again in utter unconsciousness of a break in it. And so her existence alternates between two lives entirely distinct and independent of each other, save that the same body serves for both.

Formerly such alterations of consciousness were explained by spiritual or demoniac possession. The body was supposed to be tenanted by two independent spirits; or the patient's soul was from time to time ousted by some other malignant or benevolent soul, as the tempter might indicate. In our more scientific and materialistic days, the spiritual hypothesis has few retainers: the phenomena in question being much more satisfactorily explainable by supposing that the patient's mental life has been carried on wholly or chiefly by one side of her double brain, and that, when the action of that side is arrested by disease, the unused side takes up the intellectual functions and continues until another paroxyism shifts the responsibility to the first used side. So the two lives alternate with the alternating functional activity of the two brains; the reason that such lives are always double and never triple or manifold lying in the fact that we have only two independent brain lobes and no more.

The latest case reported of this sort is exceedingly interesting, and peculiar in that there is a loss of continuity in the life only when the state recurs in which the patient's life began. The case is reported at length in the Revue Scientifique, by Prof. Azam, of Bordeaux, where the patient lives. The patient is a married woman now about thirty-four years old, and has been living a double life since she was fourteen years old. For brevity, we will call her first state of consciousness and its repetitions, A, and the second state and repetitions, B.

At first B came on at intervals of days, and lasted for a few hours only. Twice it was absent for three years at a time, from the age of seventeen and a half to twenty and a half, and again from twenty-four to twenty-seven. Latterly she has lived the life of B most of the time, A recurring at intervals of two or three months, and remaining but a few hours. Formerly the transition occurred during some minutes of unconscious sleep following violent pain in the temples; now it is almost instantaneous. In A, the patient has always been quiescent and somewhat morose in disposition; in B, she has always been bright, gay and affectionate. In A, she has no memory of events which happen in B; but in B, she has a full recollection of her life in both states—a remarkable peculiarity in her case, as already observed. In B, her distress, on discovering that there have been blanks in her conscious experience, is extreme; but the practical inconvenience of such loss of memory, formerly great, has become less with the predominance of B. On rare occasions on passing out of B, the patient suffers a brief period of agitation and extreme terror, during which her knowledge is somewhat disordered; at other times there is no apparent derangement except such as commonly appears in hysterical patients.

In her passage from B to A (Professor Azam remarks), she does not emerge from a dream, for a dream, however incoherent, is always something. She emerges from nothing. The time elapsed may be an hour, or it may be months, it is all the same to her; an entire section of her conscious life has dropped out. "To compare her existence to a book from which some pages have been torn is not enough. An intelligent reader might fill the blank, but she can have absolutely no notion of anything that happened in her secondary state."

A world of curious problems and complications, social, theological and other, are suggested by such a case as this. Fancy a person on trial for a crime committed in a previous state of which no recollection remains, with no one aware of the criminal's peculiarity: or a woman to find herself suddenly (to her) surrounded by a family of children, owning her as a mother, yet utterly unknown to her! There is a splendid chance for a sensational novelist. Scientific American.

Resolved, as Saints assembled in conference, that we pledge our hearts to God and to each other, that as Elders we will endeavor to preach the gospel, at least on the Lord's day, to our friends of the world, and at other times as far as circumstances permit; also, that each officer and member of the church present at this conference will pray for eace other in the discharge of their spiritual duties, and extend a heart of love and charity to all identified with us in the salvation of souls; and that it is the earnest desire of this conference that we may live a united people in the service of God, and worthy to obtain the blessings of God.

Resolved that we hold two days' meetings in the following places,-Willow, Webster, Excelsior and Wheatville branches; and that the President appoint such ones as he thinks best to fill these appointments, and that the President be requested to labor in connection with those appointed; also that the President state the time when such meetings shall be held.

Preaching in the evening by Brn. A. V. Closson and J. W. Whiteaker. At 10 30 a.m. of the second day, preaching by Bro. F. M. Cooper; afternoon, Sacrament and testimony meeting, in charge of A. L. and S. H. Whiteaker; evening, preaching by Bro. A. L. Whiteaker.

Resolved That we sustain Bro. A. L. Whiteaker as president of the district, W. A. McDowell as clerk, A. V. Closson as Bishop's Agent.

Adjourned to meet at North Freedom, Sauk County, Wis., February 7th, 1885.

Miscellaneous.

MASSACHUSETTS DISTRICT.

The conference of the above district will meet in Dennisport, the last Saturday in January, 1885, at half-past two in the afternoon. Free return tickets will be furnished over the Old Colony Railroad to those who attend. Ocean Hall has been engaged for the preaching service on the Sabbath. Hope to see a large attendance of the Saints. John Smith district president, No. 679, Purchase street, New Bedford, Massachusetts.

BISHOP'S AGENT.

Having received notice of the resignation of Bro. D. M. Gamet, acting as my agent for the Little Sioux District, in consequence of feeble health, and he feeling to say that an active agent is necessary to the success of the work. Therefore, I do hereby appoint Bro. Phineas Cadwell as my agent for the Little Sioux District, Iowa, and recommend him as such to the Saints.

G. A. BLAKESLEE, Presiding Bishop. GALIEN, Mich., Dec. 27th, 1884.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

Conference of the above district will be held at Wilber, Saline County, Nebraska, January 25th, 1885, at ten o'clock in the forenoon. A good attendance is desired, as there are some items of business to be presented of iterest to all. I hope every branch in the district will send a full and complete report of all changes, and especially the Plattsmouth and Palmyra Branches so that I can make my annual report to Bro. Stebbins of the condition of the district. Address all communications to me at Wilber, Saline County, Nebraska, care of L. Anthony.

J. B. GOULDSMITH, Dist. Secty. December 31st, 1884.

A WORD TO MY CORESPONDENTS.

Dear Brn. and Sisters: - I have answered every letter that I have received, and if any have not received a reply, I trust that they will write again. My address will be Papeete, Tahiti, via San Francisco, Cal. Please remember that all mail matter must be in the office at San Francisco by the last day of each month; as the vessel sails on the first day of each month following, and a letter being a day late would remain in the office at San Francisco another month. And please remember that it costs five cents for each half ounce, either way. We will be thankful for papers and other reading matter that any may feel disposed to send us. Send such to the care of Bro. Thomas J. Andrews, 436 Brannan street, San Francisco, Cal. Send letters direct to Papeete, Tahiti.

Your brother in the gospel,

T. W. SMITH.

DIED.

Doty.—Near Pleasant Run, Pottawattamie Co., Kansas, December 11th, 1884, brother James R. Doty, of typhoid fever and inflammation of bowels. He was born March 13th, 1848, in Ohio. Baptized August 23d, 1869, near Inland, Cedar Co., Iowa, by Elder John S. Patterson. Bro. Doty was a humble, faithful disciple, living to the best of his abilities an upright, exemplary life, cheerfully preforming every Christian duty, and preserving ever an abiding hope of eternal life, and a full belief in the gospel as taught by the Reorganized Church. He leaves a wife and little son to mourn his loss, the latter just recovering from a severe attack of diptheria. Sister Doty's sad bereavements should surely commend her to the sincere pity and sympathy of all true saints, especially to the relatives of her late husband, and to any of her own kindred under whose eye this falls. Sister Doty is a daughter of the late Elder Daniel Adams, niece of Elder Marvin Adams so long and well known in the old church as well as the new. She has been called upon to part with three children and her husband in less than two months' time, and is left with an invalid child, in a destitute condition, in a strange land, with no saints to comfort or assist her. Brethren, sisters, friends, the matter is worthy your consideration. Sister Doty has not asked aid, and this appeal is voluntary on my part, since learning by private communication of her sad losses. PERLA WILD.

TAYLOR.—Near Chariton, Iowa, November 11th, 1884, Bro. Clark W. Taylor, aged 49 years and 3 months. Funeral sermon by Bro. George Spencer. Bro. Taylor was a colored man and is said to have lived faithful unto the end.

WILLIAMS.—At St. David's, Illinois, December 20th, 1884, Sr. Jane Williams, aged 67 years, 7 months, and 23 days. She was born in Wales in 1817. She was the wife of Edward J., and mother of David D. Williams.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

LETTERS from Bro. T. W. Smith, Papeetee, Tahiti, November 9th, 1884, state that he arrived there on Thursday the 6th. He found a hearty welcome among the native Saints. He at once waited on the American Consul, Mr. Atwater, and was by him introduced to the Director, (French) next officer to the Governor, and was kindly received by both. The Director informed him that he was at liberty to preach when and where he pleased in the Protectorate; only being required to keep, "observe" the law. Bro. Smith's letter descriptive of their voyage will be read with pleasure by all. He found the natives to be good singers, keeping excellent time. He speaks to them by means of a brother who interprets. He will set himself to learn their language. The prayers of the Saints will be that Bro. and Sr. Smith may be useful to the cause in that far away land.

A letter from Bro. Joseph F. Burton, dated on board the Royal mail steamer, Australia, at sea, latitude 8° 35′ S., longitude 169° 04′, December 8th, 1884, states that all was going well so far.

Bro. Charles Williams, an old time veteran of the Cross in Northern Illinois District, writes us from Twin Springs, McDonald county, Missouri, that he is trying to open up the way for the work there. He wants help. Can Bro. John T. Davies of the Spring River District send him help?

The Salt Lake Daily Tribune of January 1st, had the following: "At the Chapel of the Reorganized Mormon Church yesterday, the Sunday School, under the supervision of Elder Barrows, assisted by a competent committee, had a Christmas tree, around which there gathered a numerous company of children, who were all made happy. One of the pleasing features of the entertainment, was the presentation of a purse, well filled, to Elder R. J. Anthony, the president of the Mission here."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—Where there is a regularly organized branch, containing several Elders, is it right, consistent or lawful, for the lay members to disregard the instruction of the Apostle James, and themselves anoint with oil and lay on hands, while the Elders are both willing to discharge their calling, and are accessible.

A.—No. The command is to "send for the Elders." If Elders are accessible it is safer and better to obey the requirements of the law, other things being equal.

THE LAW AND ITS TEACHERS.

THE proper teachers of the law, both civil and ecclesiastical, have ever had a comparatively hard and thankless task. church, as well as the world, has always had its croakers, questioners and cavilers, and it is probable that it always will have. A large percentage, by far the larger half of the membership, have been, and are vet extremely anxious that there shall be no incertitude in the teachings of the church, using the word church to mean the leading and mass of its priesthoodeldership. Yet while this has been the case, there has been and is a strange reluctance on the part of this same mass to accept the expositions of church faith and government, by the church, as certain and final. They ask that certain authoritative expressions shall be made, and when these are made, wag their wise heads and say, "We don't know about that." . "We won't accept anything that we can not see for ourselves." Even the good words of Christ, accepted long since by the church as a body in solemn conclave as such, are subjected to the same wise criticism.

We have waited long, anxiously waited, to have some avail themselves of the privilege of obedience to the law of temporal things, to be fraught with spiritual blessing, as such law is found in the instruction of Joseph Smith on the rendition of the revelation to Edward Partridge, first Bishop of the church in these last days. This revelation seems to have been under dispute, and he through whom it was given, and who it is fair to presume had wisdom to understand it, states that those who wished to avail themselves of the benefits of that law, could take their property, (an inventory of it fairly made), to the Bishop, giving up to the Bishop for church work, general and special, so much as they and the Bishop should agree upon, and taking back from the Bishop a certificate, stating the fact of such action having been taken, and such "tithing" having taken place. This certificate constituted the individual a steward over his own property, as a steward unto God, not the church, and filled the law. If an agreement was not reached between the member and the Bishop, then the Bishop was to go his way leaving the matter as it was before. This is a common sense view of the rule of law, and in complete harmony with the declaration of belief that the church can "put no man in jeopardy of life or property."

This being understood, all that the church, its leading men and officers, can do in the premises is to teach the requirements as found in the law. They can do nothing further, as no compulsory power vests in them. It remains for the church, the people, the membership, all of the mass, to observe the teachings; enforce the penalty, if there be any, for refusal on the part of individuals to comply; or to fix and determine the penalty if they choose to affix one; and to disfellowship, if they so decide, those who by not complying prefer to be called unworthy, and to take the consequences. If there be any loss, or blame, or punishment to attach hereafter, when the great settling day shall comethat belongs to God and not to church or

It would be well, very well indeed, if the members of the church (using the term to comprehensively include all) would bear in mind the general teaching of the leading Elders, and retain their composure of mind and their faith in God, Christ, and the Church, (the body of Christ), based on that general teaching in the law; more especially paying heed to them who are by position best qualified to teach. If the majority teach clearly within the law, in its fairest and most comprehensive rendition, not a single member, Elder, or otherwise, has the least reason to feel alarm, or to lose regard for the work; no matter if there should be some, and they high in authority and esteem, who do under cover of fair play, inquiry, and honesty of opinion, teach what may be against the general teaching. Such will finally find their level, "after the mists have cleared away."

We taught quite early the method of tithing, in the days when good Bro. Israel was our Bishop. We had the right then to teach, and we have the right now. We showed the necessity for a finance system, indicated how the law might be kept and honored. Since then the Bishopric are teaching the same, possibly more fully than we at the time, and that is tithing. It is to be paid as the "Lord has prospered you." It is to be "set apart" by you. It is to be the result of voluntary compliance with the law. It is not to be collected by a church tax gatherer. The right vested in the Elders to teach what the law of God requires does not vest in them, or any one of them the power to enforce the collection of tithes, or any other money assessment. The right to teach baptism does not confer the right to compel persons to be baptized. It is just as logical, consistent and true to hold that the right to teach baptism, and to receive men into the church by performing the rite of baptizing in water, confers the power to compel men to be baptized, as it is to hold that because tithing is taught in the law as God's system, therefore the servants of the church in the monetary department are empowered to assess a man's means and levy on moneys, or goods to enforce its payment. The Elders teach baptism, and if men choose to obey the requirement when so taught, the Elders administer the rite. If men who hear do not choose to obey, the Elder leaves the matter between them and God. The Elders, the Bishopric, recognizing the necessity for money and its use in the work, as it is recognized in the word from Genesis to the revelations on the subject last received, teach the requirements of the law. If those who hear choose to comply, the Bishopric administer as the law of receiving and disbursing demands, as they have the right to do. If those who hear choose not to comply, the Elders, the Bishopric, leave the matter between them and the one who gave the law.

Neither the laws of God, nor the rules of the church, authorize the ministers of the church to teach that which subverts the general faith of the body. No natural right appertains to any man who comes into the church relationship, which right he brings with him into the church, to destroy the faith of that church. If there is that in the teaching of the church which he does not choose to submit to, his only natural right is to go out of the church. And when a man has given his assent unto the rules and orders of the church, and as a minister is sent abroad to represent the faith of that church, he betrays his trust, dishonors the covenant he made with God in baptism, confirmed by the gift of God's Spirit through the laying on of hands, creates distrust, destroys confidence in himself and his comrades in ministerial labor when he speaks lightly of the accepted laws of the body, denies the teaching of the authorized servants of the church in their respective offices and callings; or privately sows the discord of doubt and unbelief among those where his labor lies. He should know that the bond of common honesty and fair dealing with men of the world, to say nothing of the diviner nature of the bond uniting him with men of God, like himself should be, demands that he shall maintain the teaching of the body to which he belongs.

In February, 1831, a period in the history of the church sufficiently early to be before the time when doubt is thrown upon the revelations through the Seer, the will of the divine originator of the church concerning the rules which should prevail, is given as follows: "And again, every person who belongeth to this Church of Christ, shall observe to keep all the commandments and covenants of the church." Sec. 42, paragraph 21, D. & C.

In this article thus divinely attested there is no room for the exercise of the canuistry of mental reservations. It is a recognition of the grand and solemn character of a covenant made with God. He who has entered in at the door into the church, and who has with the church accepted this article, must not trifle with the sacred obligation. If he does, it is at the peril of his standing with God. His standing with his fellow men, he can easily get along with; for the world is wide, the brethren are charitable in that they will let every man go his way; and if one chooses to journey alone, or away from the commonwealth of Israel, they will not say him nay. But no man can urge his mental reservations, or his conscience against the decrees of God. God made the conscience of man. And he will not excuse the man for doing wrong, nor yet for refraining to do as commanded, because of his conscience. "Shall the axe boast itself against him that heweth therewith; or shall the saw magnify itself against him that shaketh it," as Isaiah clearly states the argument in his tenth chapter. To the church the same divine commander said in August, 1831, the same year in which the revelation from which we have already quoted was given: "Behold, the laws which ye have received from my hand are the laws of the church, and in this light shall ye hold them forth." Sec. 58, closing part of par. 5.

Every member is under obligation to observe and keep the articles of the church, as laws; and every minister is, in the very nature of his covenant, to hold forth such laws as the laws of God.

If the ministry observed this rule, there would not be incertitude respecting the teaching of the church. Every man standing in his order would teach an observance of the things found in the accepted works of the church. Nor would he attempt to reserve to himself the right to sit in judgment on the accepted laws of the body; any more than he would as a citizen of the United States, attempt to usurp to himself the right to sit in judgment on the constitutional law of the land, and observe or disregard as his conscience disapproved or affirmed what the Supreme Court had passed decision upon.

The church can not, nor does it assume to bind individual judgment; or to hold souls in bondage. But the church does teach the necessity of unity. It does this because Christ has taught and enjoined it. The church also teaches that all must bring themselves into subjection to Christ. No man has brought himself into subjection to Christ, is not and can not be subject to Christ, or in unity with the body, who either directly or indirectly denies the laws of Christ's church, or reserves to himself the right to decide, in the church, what is and what is not Christ's law to the church, which Christ has given, or may give to the church, and which the church receives through proper and accredited channels and accepts by solemn voice as such law to the church.

It is too evident that if one may so place himself as judge of the laws of the church, or of God, holding mental reservations as to its being celestially constitutional, and therefore entitled to his credence and compliance therewith; so may another, and another, and another; and if one portion of the law may be set aside as not credible, and not necessary to be obeyed, by one man's conscience, in the church; so, also, may another portion be set aside by another man; and still another portion, by another—ad infinitum; and instead of unity and subjection to the law, there must ensue disruption and disunity.

He who holds these mental reservations, and claims, in the church, to exercise the functions of lawgiver unto himself, does violence to his better and wiser self; can not, and indeed will not bring himself to be subject to the law of Christ; for the "carnal mind is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."—Romans 8th.

JOSEPH SMITH,

President of the Church.

Jan. 9th, 1885.

"The mills of the gods grind slow, but they grind exceedingly fine." This trite saying is illustrated in a measure by the following paragraph, which we clip from the Chicago Tribune of the 8th inst.:

Andrew Jackson Davis, one of the leaders of the Spiritualists, has sued for a divorce from his wife, whom he charges with having another husband.

This leaves the matter open to the question whether this woman from whom the human founder of Spiritualism in the United States now seeks divorce in the courts, is the one of whom he wrote so glowingly many years ago as his wife by divine appointment; (?) and whom he took to be his wife while she was the wife of another man. As in the case of the Oneida Communists so in this the children of Free Love come home bringing the curse of their parentage with them. The teachings of Andrew Jackson Davis have sown the seeds of marital infidelity, distrust and the disruption of family ties broadcast for years; and it is but just that in himself he should, if possible, suffer some of the results of his own wild vagaries.

Correspondence.

New Providence, Indiana, December 26th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Having just arrived home from preaching through Jefferson and Ripley counties, in which our labors have been blessed greatly. Baptized two in Jefferson county, and blessed ten children. In Ripley preached some seven times, had one branch meeting, received two by letter, administered to one sick who received relief at once. Called on to administer to a burnt child of brother Flints, the worst I ever saw. The doctors were tending on it. I thought the child would go into fits. I administered twice. The child is getting well.

The cause in the eastern part of the district of southern Indiana is looking up, but the western part is in adverse condition. Nothing but the demonstrations of the power of God through the effectual working of his ministry will ever reach or penetrate that part of his heritage. But the ministry of Southern Indiana seem to be cramped. Pray for us that this spell-bound, chilled darkness may be broken up by the power of God's blessed Spirit; that the light may blaze across our path once again.

JAMES G. SCOTT.

Royal Mail Steamship "Australia," At Sea, lat. 8° 35' S., long. 169° 04' W., December 8th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:-I thought to write you a note from Honolulu, but we got in there about 3 a.m., and left at 6:30 a.m., after a quite rough passage of seven days from San Francisco. After three hours and a half there, we again were on our way southward. Quite a number of the passengers, including Addie, were seasick; but Emma and I were such old acquaintances of Neptune, that he passed us by, and so we were allowed at each meal time to take a good supply of provisions. Having been ashore so long, I had completely lost sight of a good many nautical terms; and it was amusing to me to notice these terms again present themselves to my mental vision, all unbidden by me, and seemingly without mental effort; and with them the days of my former life, after having slept so quietly for so long a time, came again before me: the different voyages; and so many details of them, that I sometimes could hardly conceive that fitteen years had passed since any of those events had transpired—and some of them thirty-five years. The crew, including officers, engineers, etc., number about 105; the passengers, cabin and steerage 130; so we have a village of 235 inhabitants, on the communist principle somewhat. Last Saturday we crossed the line, and about 2 p. m. the ship's bell clattered and rang, and the cry of "fire" was raised, and a running and cry of where is it, where is it, passed from passenger to passenger. The crew soon had the hose out, and from four nozzles streams of water were soon pouring, overboard. It was fire exercise. Then the cry of "man overboard" was raised, and the boats' crews were each man at his place. Afterwards another cry "the ship has sprung a leak," and soon extra pumps were placed in position, and the crew busily engaged pumping. This ended this day's exercise. Sunday morning at ten, or four bells, the crew mustered on the upper deck, two rows of men, all dressed in their Sunday go ashore suits, the officers also. At this conference there was to be a vote taken to sustain the officers, (in righteousness), and as the captain passed down each column of men and officers, each raised his hand; and touching his cap, which was answered by the captain with a like salute, confirmed or renewed the covenant, or articles. The men were to obey orders, the officers only to demand of them legalized work. Here every man knows his place and keeps it, or else is put in it severly, may be.

Dec. oth.—Discipline, with its essential principle, recognized authority, is surely an eternal law, and most beautiful to me. I would prefer to be "cabin boy," where everyone should be in his place, than king of a "crowd;" and I felt as much to honor the boys as they touched their caps in recognition of the captain's position, as I did him in recognition of theirs. Glorious law! God grant that Latter Day Saints may realize its importance more, so that if anything goes wrong aboard the old ship, Zion, we may at once communicate with the captain of our salvation, or through our captain seek instruction from our owners; and so from him who purchased this possession, we may receive an inheritance. Today we will meet a boat from Tu,tu,ila, (Too-too-e-la), one of the Navigator Islands, and so we will send these letters back to our friends at home. We pass within a mile or so of the island.

We are all well. Have met one woman who joined the church in England about thirty-one years ago. Has not had anything to do with them since; I think she will unite with us. I have tried to hold services on board, but have not succeeded yet. We have some agreeable conversations on doctrines with some of the passengers. Everything is going on nicely. Addie is real well. Emma and I enjoy the trip much. With love to all Saints, and a much more earnest desire than ever to serve God truly,

I remain yours,

JOSEPH F. BURTON.

CLINTON, Iowa, December 16th, 1884.

Brother J. W. Gillen:—Should you close in on a discussion with the Rev. Mr. Braden, on this Mormon question, I wish you to correct a slanderous statement, made by Mr. Braden, against the character of William Smith; found in Braden's sixteenth speech, on page 174 of the Braden-Kelley Debate.

That some profligate joker, about Kirtland, may have thought to help Braden in his effort to demolish Mormonism, and furnished him with this slanderous falsehood, there need be no doubt. The statement made use of by Mr. Braden wherein the name of William Smith was called in question, is on the whole an unmitigated falsehood. There never was to my knowledge, any whisky drank on the ground where ball was played on the flats at Kirtland, in which I participated; and the charge of drunkenness, is a most willful and base falsehood. Nor did William Smith ever attempt to extract money from his brother Joseph, on the threat of exposing the Mormon plates as a fraud. Such statements must have come from some unprincipled joker, who must have thought that it was splendid fun to fab-ri-cate falsehood about the Mormons.

And further, this deponent saith not.

WILLIAM SMITH.

SACRAMENTO, CITY, California, December 27th, 1884.

Bro. Foseph:—We are striving to do the best we can under the circumstances. We have built a nice little chapel to worship in; and have it paid for except about four or five hundred dollars. We have had good meetings ever since conference, up till the 9th of December; and then, on account of the inclemency of the weather, and an accident that happened me, there was a lull in our meetings. But, I am better, so I called the Saints together, and held a branch meeting, in which we spent two hours in doing business, and trying to set things in order, such as trying to hunt up scattered and cold members of this branch. We have some eighty or ninety members on the record, and about thirty or forty working and live members. There are some of the members forty and fifty miles from here, and some, where, I do not know. I am trying to get heir address; or to communicate with them, and to find out their whereabouts, so we can know how many members we have that are doing their duty. This is something that has never been done since the branch was organized. It will take a long time; but with the help of the working Saints of Sacramento City, the Lord aiding me with the spirit of wisdom, I will try to do all I can. Praying for the welfare of Zion.

Your brother in the gospel,

JAMES H. PARR.

On Board Barkentine, "Tropic Bird," Lat. 26° N., Long. 137° W., October 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph: As we may get a chance of sending some mail back by a passing vessel, although not expected, I write a few lines before we reach Tahiti. We left San Francisco at about eleven a.m., on Wednesday, October 1st. Bro. and Sr. Andrews, Bro. George A. Lincoln and wife, his mother and sister, Bro. Wm. Anderson, Sr. Forrest, Bro. Geo. Forrest, and several others came to see us off, and stood on the wharf, waiving their handkerchiefs, till we were out of sight. It was not pleasant to leave such kind friends, and our native land, to go to a far distant field, and to be among strangers; and had it not been that it had been shown to be our duty, we would have gone ashore even at the last moment. A large tug took us in tow, and with a stiff breeze blowing from the north, we soon went through the Golden Gate, and parted with the tug, and started south-west by south, with a wind that carried our vessel at the rate of twelve miles, or knots, an hour. This speed lasted till next morning, when the wind fell to ten knots, and next day to eight, and it has been ranging from four to eight since. The wind has been blowing from northwest, north, and north-east, and in a couple of days we will meet the trade winds from the southeast; but before we reach these, there will be a space where the winds will meet, and cross and mix with each other, causing heavy rains, sometimes pouring down in perfect sheets of water, so the mate informs us. I will describe that part of the voyage when we reach it. There are on board several passengers for Tahiti: a French gentleman named Droolay; an American named Boyd, with an Irish wife; an Englishman named Rialston, with ourselves; and the captain, named Burns, a German; the first mate, named Sachs, a Russian; the second mate, named Dame; and a crew consisting of a Spaniard, a Scotchman, an Englishman, and four Kanakas. Two of them say they belong to the church. The cook is a colored man, and the cabin boy is a Kanaka. One of the brethren can talk some English, and can understand a good deal. I have given him a number of quotations or passages of scripture, and he has marked them in his "Biblia." I have copied several passages from his Bible, but the language is not altogether Tahitian, but the language of Raratoonga, however there are but few words that differ. One quotation is the oft used verse, Acts 2: 38. The next Acts 8: 14-17; then 1 Cor. 12: 28; the other Rev. 14: 6, 7, and also the Lord's Prayer.

I learn that the Elder in charge on Tahiti, Matuore (Matoo-o-re) is an able man; and the white people on board, several of whom live there, say that our people, "are a good people." The brother on board says they have a large meeting house on Tahiti, and also on other islands. Tero-hea—or Tao-hee is not married at all, and is an elderly man. But I will write more of these matters when we reach the mission, and have an opporunity of looking around.

Yesterday was Sunday, but there was nothing to indicate it on board, except that there was not quite so much work done, except by the cook, who seemed to have more to do than usual, as is generally the case on land; and even among the Saints the day is anything but a day of rest, particularly for the sisters. The order of meals on board, is of the French form, a lunch of coffee, bread and cakes, any time from six to ten a. m.; breakfast from half-past ten to twelve; that is, several courses are served, consuming from one hour to an hour and a half; then dinner from five to six p. m. I prefer the American style, three meals a-day at regular hours, and everything set before us, so we can take just what we like, and as much of one sort of food as we may desire.

To-day we are in latitude twenty-five, and the weather is therefore quite warm, and it will be getting warmer daily.

Wednesday, two p. m.—We are just a week out, and are in latitude 18°, and five degrees south of the tropic line; just about the same latitude north of the equator as Tahiti is south of it. We have seen to-day several schools of flying fish; they fly from ten to a hundred feet, and can fly more than that; they fly till their wings dry, so the sailors say. At night they frequently fly on board, attracted by the side lights. They are esteemed a great delicacy. One of the Kanakas, (Charlie, as he is called) caught three fish called Benito,-they weigh about eight pounds apiece. We had some of it for our half-past ten o'clock breakfast. We are about a thousand miles north of the equator, and we have seen no land, nor a vessel of any kind since we left San Francisco, and expect to see neither till we reach the Marquesas Islands. On the route from Tahiti to San Francisco vessels are frequently met, going to and from the Sandwich Isles, and the Samoan Group, and the Friendly, and the Figi (or Feegee) Islands, as well as the Australian Steamers; but going this way, it is out of the line of any other vessels, unless we might perchance pass a whaler going to or from the North Pacific. We have had had a fair wind all the time thus far, although it has been light at times. We have in all probability three weeks of passage before us. But we will stay forty-eight hours at the Marquesas. The captain is a godless sort of a man; he does not want any praying or preaching on board his vessel. He need not fear that we shall ask him for permission to do either; but he may see the time when he will call for both; if not at my hand, of some one else, before he quits the sea.

October 15th.—We are now in latitude 70° N., and although nearer the equator, it is not so warm as it was a few days ago. We expect to reach the Marquesas Islands in about a week. The winds are irregular. Just now we are having a calm; yesterday we had a good wind. This is the fourteenth day out, aud not a sail yet seen, or any land. We see a few porpoises occasionally, and sometimes some flying fish. We have seen no sharks or blackfish yet. The latter is a small kind of whale. We have no expectation of seeing Tahiti for two weeks yet. We are in a latitude of frequent rains, heavy showers come up with but little warning, although we have no lightning yet, which in this part of the world is frequently very vivid, and the thunder is terrific.

October 10th.—But little wind to-day, but a terrible rain storm last night. It fairly poured down. A person would get wet to the skin in five seconds if he should step outside the cabin door. If we only had some wind to carry us out of this region of rain storms, and light and baffling winds!

October 18th.-A heavy breeze sprung up during the night, but it is dead ahead, and to get the benefit of it, we have to steer south-west, whereas we should go due south; so we are losing ground really (that may sound paradoxical on the Sea). It is a first-rate wind if we were going direct to Tahiti, but we have to call at the Marquesas, as I have before stated. We are making about nine knots an hour, and we will either have to shorten sail or tack ship, and go southeast, or south-south-east. We have made one hundred miles since five p. m., yesterday. It is eight a.m. now. The weather is very pleasant, owing to the fresh breeze. No sign of a vessel or any land as yet. Day before yesterday, a land bird, of the snipe species came on board thoroughly exhausted. It must have been blown away by a gale, and it is fully seven hundred miles from land, the Marquesas Islands beir g the nearest. It is still on board, all hands seeming to be disposed to treat it kindly. It is Saturday to-day, and we have been out eighteen days.

Sunday.—Still going on, but not as speedily as we desire. This is Sunday, but no worship for us. I have not been asked even to invoke God's blessing on a single meal as yet. We are surrounded by a godless company. The lady on board is a Catholic, and does her praying by aid of beads.

Monday 20th.—Helen and I sang a number of our hymns on our cabin deck last night, which the captain and mate listened to quite attentively, and said they were pleased. The wind is fresher, but we are not on our right course: we are going too far westward. We should go due south, but are now going south-south-west. The wind may haul around farther east.

Tuesday 21st.—Wind still blowing from the south, a little more eastwardly however. We are, at noon to-day, in latitude 3°, 26′, or 3½ degrees from the equator, or 207 miles north of it. We should have been nearly that on the other side.

Wednesday.—Winds ahead. Latitude 2°, 9', nothing unusual.

Thursday.—Beating to the east all day to-day, as we are losing longitude while coming southwest.

Friday.—The wind has become fresher, and more easterly, and we are within a degree of the equator. Weather pleasant; none too warm.

Saturday 25th.—Crossed the Equator at about half-past ten last night: Wind fresh and fair. We are nearly two degrees south of the equator at noon to-day. Have made one hundred and seventy-three miles since noon yesterday. A school of porpoises were sean around the bow last night. We have now got into the south-east trade winds, which we should have struck fully five days ago. We expect to reach the Marquesas some time on Monday. I had hoped to have reached there to-day, and perhaps might have got a chance to preach on shore on Sunday.

Sunday 26th.—We have made two hundred and twenty-three miles from noon, yesterday, till noon to-day, or over nine knots an hour. The vessel is heavily loaded, and with a quartering wind this is good time. She made thirteen knots an hour the first day, with the wind after us. We are now past the fifth degree south latitude. The sun is nearly directly over our heads at noon. The weather grows warmer. The coolest was when we were right at the equator, except of course the first few days out from San Francisco. We hope to reach the Marquesas by sunset to-morrow, and we will if the wind does not fall. If we can not reach there before night, we would as soon not get there till early Tuesday morning, for we can not run into the harbor at night. It is a dangerous passage most of the time. This is the fourth Sunday without any meeting, and many can judge what a loss it is to us. The sailors have not been doing any work to-day; save swabbing off the decks this morning, which they do every day. Everything is kept clean and tidy on board this vessel. Few sitting rooms are kept any neater.

October 29th.-We reached Teio Vie, or Nu Hiva on Monday night at about nine o'clock. It is considered a very dangerous harbor to make at night, but Captain Burns is an able navigator, and he took the vessel in safely, to the astonishment of many old sea-faring men on shore. I would not ask to sail with a more skilful captain. He is a quick tempered man, but is very soon over his pet, and is, as a rule, very kind to his men, and requires no unnecessary work of them. The harbor, or the village at the harbor, is a small one, and lies mostly along shore. The houses are small, but neatly made, and are arranged very tastefully inside, and are lathed and plastered. There are several stores kept by white people; a couple of beer houses, and a cotton gin house, and a Catholic Church; and a number of other buildings. We called on the Queen, a very pleasant old lady, who was pleased to see us, but could not talk a word except in the Marquesan dialect. She is very beautifully tattooed on the arms and feet. The ladies are all so marked, and the figures are very tasteful and regular, and they are very proud of their "stockings," and they could not be persuaded to hide them by wearing shoes or other covering. The men are all tattooed on the face, the lines which average three inches in width, run from ear to ear. A space of about one inch between them is, left clear-some have figures made by leaving the natural skin, and tattooing around it. Their arms and legs are marked the entire length. The tattooing of the face gives them a repulsive, and sometimes a ferocious look. The Marquesans are closely related to the New Zealanders in speech, and in manners and customs. They were once Cannibals. They are different from the Tahitians in many respects; the latter never tattoo, and are far more intelligent, hospitable, and docile, and a superior class altogether; and they will not learn the Marquesan dialect, while the Marquesans learn the Tahitian willingly. It is said by those who know, that a Tahitian can get along very well among the New Zealanders, the Sandwich Islanders, and with many other people or tribes in the South Seas. It is somewhat like the English language in Continental Europe, it is spoken by some in nearly every place. The fact of Tahitian being understood to a great extent in the various Islands in the South Pacific, is important; for a translation of some of our tracts into the Tahitian Tongue, would bring an understanding of our faith, to many people here; and the natives will read every thing they can, except where the missionaries of other churches have influence enough to hinder them. I learned a comforting word from parties in Marquesas, that "the Latter Day Saints at Tahiti are a good class of people, honest and upright." The island we stopped at is a wild looking place; very broken and mountainous, and the valleys are short—ranging from a hundred yards to a mile, and not over a quarter of a mile wide at the best. The products of the Marquesas Islands are cotton, oranges, bananas, cocoanuts, and guavas. Some few have gardens, where onions, lettuce and cucumbers are now in season.

We left the harbor at ten this morning and are now on our way to Tahiti-the "Queen of the Pacific." The Marquesan Isles are under French rule. When we weighed anchor this morning, I had the pleasure of hoisting the stars and stripes to the mizzen top; and I felt proud of our beautiful banner, admitted by all on board to be the handsomest flag in the world, except by a young Englishman, who thinks the English ensign to be more handsome; but I can't see it, nor can our French, German, Russian, Scotch, Norwegian and Tahitian friends on board. I do not believe that humanity can possibly create so beautiful, so suggestive, and so grand a flag. It is no wonder that our brave boys in blue fought so gallantly under its inspiring folds.

October 30th.—We are still over six hundred miles from Tahiti, winds light and baffling. We will probably not get in before Sunday night; if so, it will make five Sundays without meetings for us. It seems that Satan hinders, as in the case of Paul at one time in his effort to reach a certain field of labor. I will merely mention the fact of our arrival at Tahiti in this letter, and leave the description of the place, etc., for the next letter.

November 3d,—We are, because of head winds, and none at all, still two hundred and fifty miles from Tahiti. We will not make it before Tuesday night now. It will be about a five weeks' voyage. I will seal this letter, and write separately when we get to land.

T. W. SMITH.

CABOOL, Texas Co., Missouri. January 2d, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:-Just returned from Webster Co., Mo., where I went by invitation of acquaintance formed two years ago. I went to Webster county to try to preach the gospel of the Master. My place to preach is located about three miles west of Cedar Gap, and three miles east of Seymour. All the time I was there rain, high water and mud, prevented the people from meeting together in the country. I did all the fire-place preaching I could, visitors having met at two farm houses where I was visiting. I was kindly received among them. Two years ago I gave them a lecture on Church History. I learned from persons there that the people of Seymour had a Union Church Building; went there to see about it; was sent to a Baptist Preacher. He asked me what church I belonged to. I told him. He said he did not hold individual control of the church, but they as a body did; said the whole body would have to be called together to get the consent of all. I told him how the Church of Jesus Christ identified itself; learned he was not disposed to debate all the writers of the scriptures; hope I left him something to think about. In summer Seymour has plenty of room in her grove near by. By invitation stopped with a Follower of Christ preacher. He claims as many noted gifts and signs following as the Seventies boasted of before they were endued with power from on high; not quite enough to encourage him to keep family prayer. Bro. and Sr. Schofield of Norwood helped me on my As ever in the one faith, iourney.

B. A. ATWELL.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, December 30th, 1884.

Bro. Foseph Smith: We are all well and getting along very well. Clark Braden succeeded only in degrading himself in the minds of the best people here; and I doubt his return to this place. I am out preaching nearly every Sunday, and am glad to report that the Elders nearly all, are not only willing to labor, but anxious to magnify their calling. We intend to prosecute the mission under the direction of Bro. Jos. Lambert, to its utmost. Last Sunday Bro. T. W. Chatburn and I visited Kansas City Branch. Found the Saints rejoicing in the truth. Preached and rejoiced with them. Some non-members present. who seemed to enjoy the meetings as well as we. Two weeks ago I was called by telegram to Holden; found our worthy brother, H. Scarcliff, very sick. We administered to him. He rested well that night. Next day we held two meetings. In the afternoon he stood up and bore a faithful testimony, which was soul-cheering and encouraging; but as he is getting along in years, his affliction is breaking him down. There are but few Saints at Holden, and no standard bearer; consequently the work languishes. If some Elder would move there, he would have a good field of labor. I held meetings last month at Wyandotte. Preached three times and held one prayer meeting; the meetings were good. The Saints felt well; but there is an undercurrent. Saints must learn that when a question is presented before a branch of the Church, and properly spoken to, and a vote taken, that should be the end of controversy. The minority should quietly submit to the voice of the majority. The reverse will always work inharmonious; yet those who continue humble, to them all things will work for good, though it may be unpleasant for a while. We are now arranging for a series of meetings at all the branches in the district, and expect quite a jubilee. I extend invitations to all officials and members of adjoining branches; and a special invitation to the sweet singers, as we love good music. The weather is cold, times dull, and business slow.

Yours in bonds,

F. C. WARNKY.

DENNISPORT, Mass., December 14th, 1884. 🔸

Bro. Foseph:-In the year 1879, March 6th, Bro. T. W. Smith being here to encourage and labor with us, by his advice, we met at the Saints' Chapel, to organize a society. We called its name the "Helping Hand." When we started, there were twenty four sisters; seven of these members have moved to various places, two have died, some have withdrawn their names, and at this date there are but six left; and although so few remain, it is astonishing to see the work we have accomplished. We never yet have seen the time since the first year ended, but what our treasury held ten dollars. When we first thought of sending our small mite, we could spare but one dollar and a half. Since that time, when the quarterly dues are to be paid, we find to our surprise we can spare five dollars. I know the Lord lends a helping hand in this matter, and we not only can help for the rolling onward of this glorious work, but we have relieved the needs of the poor, both in the church, and out; and with courage and industry we are sure to conquer at last. My prayer is that the Lord will strengthen us that remain. The work is prosperous here, with the help of him who ruleth all things well.

Yours in the gospel hope.

ELTHINA F. JOY, Secretary.

PAICINES, San Benito, Co., Cal., December 14th, 1884.

Dear Herald Readers: - When I first joined the church, I had a great desire to see some heavenly messenger; for I believed as the Bible teaches, that angels visit the earth. So with this belief, I made it a subject of prayer, and thus continued for some time, when one night as I retired to bed with this desire, that I might be permitted to behold some heavenly beings; and just as I was lying down, a voice just above me said. "Quit the use of tobacco, and you shall." The voice I obeyed. So in two or three days after this, in the night I awoke, and raising myself upon my elbow, there in the room before me I saw two beautiful angels. They said something to me with such a pleasing countenance. I looked for some time. Then I felt satisfied and also fatigued, and laid down and went to sleep again; but in the morning I could not remember one word they had said to me; so then I was not satisfied; for I thought I ought to have remembered what they had said. Then I again prayed to the Lord, that it might be made known to me what they had said, and thus continued for some three or four months. I do not remember the exact time, when one night after I had gone to bed, but not to sleep, the same voice said, but with greater power than before, "Bear a faithful testimony before you seek more." Then I was satisfied and willing to bear my testimony to the truth of the gospel, and the power of God; and never since then have I doubted the gospel, or the power of God: but ever feel to bless his holy name for mercies and blessings bestowed on me, his weak handmaid. About two months ago I was taken very sick with a fever; but God in his mercy has restored me to health again; and many a time our children have been healed by the administrations of the elders.

Oh, dear Saints, how thankful I am, that I belong to the true Church of Christ; and to know that the gifts of the gospel do follow them that believe; and my prayer is, that the honest in heart may believe.

As ever your sister in Christ,

RHODA A. LAWN.

A well ordered house is a paradise on earth. No other earthly pleasure is equal to the calm contentment of the family fireside. The excitement of even successful business is attended with vexation; the enjoyments of travel are associated with fatigue and danger, and even the pleasures of knowledge are combined with bitterness. But the happiness of the fireside is unalloyed.

Sir Astley Cooper said: "I never suffer ardent spirits in my house, knowing them to be evil spirits. If people could see the white livers and shattered nervous systems which I have seen, as the consequence of drinking, they would be aware that spirits and poison mean the same thing."

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan.—Advices from Jamaica report an anticipated invasion of Cuba.

Gen. Lord Wolsely has received a dispatch from Gen. Gordon dated Dec. 14, saying: "Khartoum all right."

Serious trouble is feared between the Christian and pagan Indians on the Onondago Reservation, New York.

Jan. 2.—Four French men-of-war have been ordered to reinforce Admiral Courbe₁'s squadron in Chinese waters.

Another dynamite explosion occurred in London on the underground railway. Very little damage was done.

The latest information concerning the attitude of the French Government in regard to the Nicaragua treaty confirms the report that France is not inclined to oppose the Nicaragua treaty confirms the report that France is not inclined to oppose the Nicaragua Canal for the sake of protecting M. de Lesseps' interests. France takes but little interest in the construction of the Panama Canal, and the Government has no connection direct or indirect with M. de Lesseps' company.

The year opened as it closed, with serious railway disasters and London fires, accompanied with loss of life. Railway management in London is losing its old prestige, and Fire Chief Shaw, who was so hard a critic of American remissness in saving life, seems to be even more at fault as to ready and prompt service.

The excitement attending the earthquakes which are visiting Spain with such destructive results shows no signs of abating. Many persons who are able are leaving the country until they have discontinued. It is estimated that up to the president time 3,500 persons have been killed and property to the value of millions of dollars has been destroyed. Shocks were felt again at Granada, Malaga, Nerja, and Algarrobo last night, and the panic among the people is unabated. A number of towns and villages have been completely destroyed, and the inhabitants have deserted them. Many persons sleep in railway carriages. A royal decree has been issued ordering that a national subscription for the relief of the sufferers be made. Public officials have agreed to contribute one day's pay each. By this means $200,000 will be raised. The Spanish Ambassadors, Ministers, and Consuls in all countries will also open subscriptions.

Alhama is in ruins. The town was visited by an earthquake last night, and houses rocked until a large number feli. Others were only partly wrecked, but are in too dangerous a condition for the owners to re-enter them. A large number of persons were killed. One woman was found today clasping in her arms the dead bodies of her two yeung children. She had evidently just started to escape from the hous when she was canght by the falling timbers and killed. A panic prevailed among the inhabitants of Antequera, twenty-eight miles northwest of Malaga, where shocks have already been felt. The people are afraid to enier the buildings and are huddled together in open fields. The excitement is intense, and several persons are said to have become grav from fright. Houses in the vicinity were shaken and the roadway oscillated. Two trains were passing at the time of the explosion, and in both the lights were extinguished. The windows were shattered and the framework of several carriage doors smashed. The green, red, and white lights at the front and rear of the trains were extingeished. A ticket-collector at the Gower Street Station describes the report of the explosion as sharp and ringing in character, like the discharge of a piece of field artillery. The point where the explosion occurred is directly under the road leading to the main enterance of the London & Northwestern Railway station. A woman's nose was cut by glass. One gentleman had his side and face, and another his wrist cut. These are the only serious casualties reported. All the passengers left the trains at the Gower street station. Many of them were in a half-fainting condition. Shocks of earthquake continue to be felt at Jaen, Malaga. There were several severe shocks at Torrox Wednesday and Thursday, destroying more buildings. The town is completely abandoned. The church at Terge was damaged and services are now held in the open air. Three hundred and fifty corpses have been discovered at Orena's del Rey. Two hundred and fifty persons are now suffering from injuries. At a meeting of the Premier, Ministers of France and Interior, Senotors and Deputies for Granada and Malaga, held today, it was decided to adopt measures for the immediate relief of the sufferers and to provide shelter and provision for the homeless. A national fund has also been opened, to which the Government employees have been invited to subscribe a day's pay. The land tax has been remitted in the suffering districts. A committee of the principal inhabitants has been formed in each town to distribute the fund. It is reported that the Government loan of 3,000,000 pesetas will be used for the relief of the inhabitants of the afflicted districts.

The Chinese Government has employed fifty-five German drill-sergeants for the army, and the improvement since nanifested in the discipline of the troops is said to be remarkable. It is thought that under German drill the Chinese will show themselves to be excellent soldiers and fighters.

Some heavy fighting has taken place in the State of Santander, South America. The rebels, commanded by Gen. Fortunato Bernal, were defeated with severe loss. The Federal troops sided with the State Government and thus secured a victory.

The report that the Czar of Russia is to be crowned at Samarcand next year as the Emperor of Central Asia is confirmatory of a rumor which has been afloat in diplomatic circles for some months. Now that it is given on the authority of the Allgemeine Zeitung it may be well enough to tell the whole story. The fact is that the idea of Russian aggrandizement by a formal proclamation of an Empire in Central Asia has long been entertained by Russian Generals and statesmen. Ever since the coronation of the present Czar at Moscow he has been urged by the Chauvinists to grasp an Oriental Empire as an antidote to Lord Beaconsfield's master stroke in crowning Queen Victoria Empress of India. The St. Petersburg correspondent of the cable news telegraphs tonight that the report of the Czar's intention is undoubtedly correct, but he adds that it is equally undoubted that there will be an official denial of the report.

The antiquity of trade-marks has been traced by a contemporary to be almost coeval with the industry of the human race. It has been found that ancient Babylon had property symbols, and the Chinese declare that they had trade-marks one thousand years before Christ. Guttenberg, the inventor of printing, won a lawsuit about a trade-mark, and the use of a distinguishing stamp was recognized by the English Parliament in 1300.

Half of the steel-workers at Coshoeton, O., will strike against a proposed reduction of ten to twenty-five per cent in their wages.

A revision of the records of desertions from the regular army of the United States shows that 100,000 desertions have occurred during the last seventy years.

It is thought that the strike of the coal miners in the Hocking Valley is practically ended.

Estimates of the cost of the Nicaragua canal vary from $65,722,000 to $140,000,000. It is claimed by the opponents of the canal that it would cost over $200,000,000 to build.

There is an ice-gorge in the Susquehanna River at Nanticoke, Pa., and volumes of water are pouring through the lowlands on the west side of the stream. Traffic on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Road is at a standstill, and travel is only possible in boats.

Jan. 4th.—Some excitement has been caused in London by reports of unusual activity at the Portsmouth Navy Yard. A squadron is to be fitted out immediately for foreign service, but for what service is still a mystery.

Additional shocks of earthquake have occurred in various parts of the southern provinces of Spain. At Loja, Alhama, Jaen, Velez, and Malaga fisures in the earth appeared. A great panic prevails among the inhabitants owing to the continuance of shocks. The people throughout Parepa Granada and Malagz sleep in railway-trains or occupy tents. At night they congregate about huge bonfires. Religious processions are frequent. In some villages the inhabitants are suffering from famine. The bodies of the unburied victims are begining to de compose. The ruins of alhama present an awful impressive spectacle.

In consequence of renouncing his belief in the doctrine of eternal torment, the Rev. D. M. Brown, pastor of the Methodist Church at Las Vevas, N. M., has been compelled to resign.

Lewis Fedder, night watchman at the Ryers factory in Bloomington, Ind., was killed at his post by an unknown man. His wife dreamed that her husband was murdered, and, going in search of him found him dead. The motive of the crime was theft.

News is received from Dallas, Tex., of the sale of the Munsen ranch in the Pan-Handle and its stock of 75,000 cattle to W. W. Ewing of Kansas City for $800,000.

St Louis is swarming with beggars. I wenty thousand people are out of work. The Sanitary Aid Association is raising money to employ the destitute in cleaning the streets.

Times are hard in Kansas. Corn is selling as low as ten cents a bushel, and farmers are using it for fuel. Trade is dull and the banks have shut their money up in their vaults. Millers refuse to reduce the price of flour and the railroads help to keep the country poor by charging the same price for taking grain to market as when wheat was worth $1,25 a bushel and corn was bringing 40 to 60 cents.

Jan. 4th.—Another Orange outbreak is reported from Bay Roberts, Newfoundland. Hundreds of armed Orangemen paraded the streets Sunday, and the New York Redemptorist Fathers were besieged in their dwelling. Police aid was dispatched from St Johns.

There is an ice-jam in Grand River, fifteen miles below Grand Rapids, Mich., and the country is flooded for miles. Three tugs have gone up from Grand Haven to try to break the jam.

Jan. 6th.—A severe earthquake shock which was experienced in Granada, Spain, at 6 o'clock yesteraay evening gave occasion for a panic among the covicts in the rison. They attempted to escape from confinement, but were prevented by the civic guards. Shocks were also felt at Loja and Motril. King alfonzo is about to make a visit to the Provinces of Granada and Malaga. The people in Granada are thoroughly frightened by the succession of earthquake shocks. They are removing their goods from their houses and are living in open fields.

A dispatch from Hanoi says; After the defeat of 6,000 Chinese near Chu by Gen. Negrier 12,000 Chinese returned and resumed the hostilities. Gen. Negrier attacked them, penetrated their positions defended by forts and tiers of batteaies, and repulsed and routed the Chinese, who, after an active resistance, abandoned their positions. The Chinese lost 600 killed and a large number wounded. The French captured two batteries of Krupp guns, a large number of rifles, a quantity of ammunition and provisions, and some Chinese standards. The French loss in both battles was three officers wounded and nineteen men killed and sixty-five wounded.

Ballay, the Belgium Delegate to the Congo Conference sent to Paris by Col. Strauch, President of the African International Association to negotiate with Premier Ferry in regard to the claims of the association on the left bank of the Congo, has returned to Berlin. He reports that Ferry refused to recognize the association's rights, and insisted that the post of the association on the left bank of the Congo be included in French territory. This dispute threatens to affect the result of the Congo conference.

A severe shock of earthquake was felt at Santiago, Chili, at 4:45 this afternoon.

Regulations enforcing the recent decision of the Attorney-General in reference to the relief of the whisky men were issued by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington yesterday, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. The most important amendment to the existing regulations consists in striking out the words "thirty days" in the exportation bonds and substituting such time, not to exceed seven months, as may be reasonably required for exportation. Collectors are also required to list and report monthly all spirits which have remained in warehouse more than three years.

In response to an inquiry by the Utah Commission whether the commission had any jurisdiction in regard to the school meetings of Utah, Attorney General Brewster has rendered an opinion to the effect that these meetings afford no room for the exercise of the power conferred upon the commission by the act of March 22, 1882. In answer to another question touching the right of the polygamists to vote at school meetings called for the purpose of fixing the rate of taxation for school purposes, the Attorney-General replies that such meetings do not constitute an election within the meaning of the law, and a polygamist may vote upon such propositions provided he is properly a tax-payer and a resident of the school district.

Jan. 7.—A church, convent, and 500 houses were destroyed at Motril, Spain, by the earth-quake Monday evening. There was a great procession at Granada. Twelve thousand people headed by priests bearing images of the Virgin, marched through the streets chanting and praying for deliverance from further earthquakes.

There were 27,133 marriages in Ohio last year, 65,066 births, 1,739 divorces, and 24,364 deaths.

Last year 722 new convicts were received at the Joliet Prison and 557 were released by expiration of their sentences. The total number of convicts in the prison January 1 was 1,542, an increase of 169 during the year.

In the Senate at Washington yesterday the House joint resolution was passed appropriating $50,000 to relieve the destitute Indians in Montana.

The fifth annual meeting of the New England Divorce Reform League was held to-day in this city. I was resolved to make it a National League. The Hon. Theodore W. Dwight, Professor in the Columbia College Law School, and President Pepper of Colby University were elected to membership, and the Rt.-Rev. B. H. Paddock, D. D., was elected President.

Jan. 8.—During a calm off the Spanish coast the British bark Isabel experienced several earthquake shocks lasting fifteen minutes. The ship was shaken in every fibre and the submarine roaring was terrific.

The most important features of the Inter-State Commerce bill, which was passed by the House of Representatives to-day, are the following: Discrimination in freight rates is forbidden and likewise discrimination in the treatment of passengers who pay the same fare. The railroads are, however, permitted to provide separate accommodations with equal facilities and comforts for white and colored people. For personal transportation no one is to be charged more than three cents a mile. Rebates or other advantages given to shippers are forbidden, as well as all freightpooling arrangements. The roilroads are not permitted to charge a greater rate for a shorter than for a longer haul. Schedules of freight rates must be printed by the companies and posted conspicuously, and copies of the schedules must be duly filed. The bill further provides that any person who may suffer through the violation of any of its regulations shall be entitled to damages equal to three times the amount of the actual injury sustained. Infringement of the act is rendered punishable by a fine not exceeding $2,000. The provisions of the bill apply only to transportation from one State to another. They are not applicable to property carried for the United States at lower rates than for the general public. nor to the transportation of articles at reduced rates for charitable purposes, nor to transportation of property to or from public fairs or exhibitions. It will be noticed that the commission feature has been stricken out of the bill.

The programme for to-morrow's session of the Congo Conference is not yet decided upon, but the annexation question will probably be discussed. The latest reports are to the effect that the negotiations between France and the African In $_{1}$ ternational Association tend to an early and amicable settlement of the differences. The framework of the new Congo State Constitution is based on the principles of the English colonial administration, there being a Governor entitled the chief d'etat, three Deputy Governors, and a full number of officials in the various districts. Brussels will be the headquarters of the Government. King Leopold has already spent $5,000,-000 in forwarding the work of the African International Association, and still adheres to his promise to bestow upon it yearly an endowment of $200,000. During the sitting to-day, Kasson, the American Minister, repeatedly expressed the desire of America that the rights of the aboriginees be respected. A dispute over the ownership of St Lucia Bay is of no national importance. Prince Bismarck does not encourage Luderitz, who claims to have purchased the bay, to expect other than British protection.

Fresh earthquake shocks were felt yesterday at Nerja and Nelez, in Malaga, Spain. Several houses were damaged.

Another sharp shock of earthquake was felt in the south at daybreak this morning. Its greatest force was experienced at Loja, where 300 houses were damaged. Seven persons were injured, Most of the inhabitants had left or were sleeping in tents. King Alfonso starts to-day for the scenes of the disaster. Three hundred thousand dollars have already been subscribed. King Alfonso will take with him $100,000, which he will in person distribute for the relief of the sufferers.

A slight shock of an earthquake was felt today at Geneva, Switzerland. Several shocks were felt in the last few days in the Canton of Grison, Switzerland, and the Department of Haute-Savoie, France.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

There were 366 business failures in the United States last week, an increase of eighty-eight over the previous week.

There has been an increase of $641,384 in the public debt during the month of December. The decrease since June 30, 1884, has been $31,501,863.

Last month the United States' mints coined $4,849,958, of which $2,381,165 was standard dollars.

Clearing-house receipts at the principal cities of the United States last week show a decrease as compared with the corresponding week of 1883-'84 of 22.8 per cent. The decrease in New York is 26.5 per cent. In Chicago the decrease is 24.3 per cent.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the corn trade, says: The autum-sown acreage of 1884 is from 10 to 15 per cent below that of 1883. Young crops continue to show a healthy and promising appearance. Farmers' deliveries are greatly diminished, enabling holders to obtain from one shilling to two shillings, and sometimes three shillings a quarter advance. Sales of English wheat the last week, 35,021 quarters, at 31 shillings 11 pence, against 35,136 quarters at 39 shillings the corresponding week last year. Flour is six pence is higher; barley, is higher; foreign wheat, 1@2s higher. The market is against buyers. It is evident that waterside stocks have been reduced to their normal level. Foreign flour is generally 1s higher; American, 1@2s higher. Quotations for maize are unaltered. Barley is firmer. Oats are steady and slow. Cargoes off coast are materially advanced. One cargo of American red winter, per sail, bought 34s per quarter. There were four arrivals and seven sales. Two cargoes remained, one of which was from California. Trade forward is lively. There was a large business at advanced rates. No. 1 California, afloat, is worth thirtyseven shillings a quarter, which represents an advance of two shillings. At to-day's market wheat was excited. There was a general advance of two shillings to two shillings sixpence. Some sorts advanced three shillings. There was a moderate business transacted. Flour generally is two shillings dearer; American flour, two shillings sixpence dearer. Maize is scarce and sixpence to one shilling higher.

Thirteen collieries near Scranton, Pa., were suspended Jan. 6th. by the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western and the Delaware & Hudson Companies. About 2,000 men and boys were thrown out of work. The companies say that the suspension will not last more than two months.

Canadian millers are petitioning the Dominion Government to raise the duty on American flour from 50 cents to $1 per barrel. Over 250,000 barrels were imported from the United States last year by the maritime provinces.

Symptoms of revival in the iron trade are reported from Pittsburg. Several mills which recently suspended work are starting up again.

Francis & Joseph Badart, London merchants, have failed, with liabilities estimated at $2,000,000.

India, the San Francisco Chronicle thinks, cannot compete with the Northwest or California in the reduction of wheat. It costs the wheatgrowers of India to raise wheat and ship it to Delhi, which like Chicago is a primary market, one and a third cents a pound, but the freight from Delhi to the seaboard is a third of a cent a pound, as against a quarter of a cent from Chicago to New York. A great deal of Indian wheat has to be raised with the help of irrigation. This being undertaken at present as a Government enterprise gives the Hindoo farmers that advantage, but this is an unthrifty policy which the Government of India cannot continue. The great decline in the price of wheat has checked the sale by India to such an extent that in the first six months of 1884 its exports were only 11,125,000 bushels, as against: 20,513,000 bushels in the corresponding month of 1883. The crop of India this year as calculated by Consul-General Leonard of Calcutta amounts to 244,000,000 bushels, of which India will use 200,000,000 for her own consumption and will have 44,000,000 for export to England. The crop this year is not as large as that of last year, which was 299,000,000.

Union Pacific's net earnings for November were $1,284,000, a decrease of $127,000 as compared with the corresponding month of 1883. For the eleven months ended Dec. 1st, 1884, the net earnings show a decrease of $2,185,000.

Immense coal deposits west of Pekin, China, which are said to be the richest in the world, are to be opened. A railroad is to be constructed at once for transportation.

Exports from the port of New York, exclusive of specie, for the week ending yesterday were $6,393,000.

No less than 1,865 new manufacturing and mining enterprises were started in the Southern States last year, with an aggregate capital of $105,269,000.

In December the imports of London, Eng., de creased £797, 161, compared with December of last year. The exports decreased £1,130,999, compared with december of 1883.

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 1.—Loss by fire at Evansville, Ind., $300,000.

Four persons were killed and thirty injured by a railway collision near Barnsley Junction, England.

News is received of the wreck of the German bark Lile near Petrolia, Cal. The first officer, the cook, and three seamen were drowned.

Jan. 2.—Sunday last about sixty thatched huts burned at Gorgona, Panama, a small village on the line of the canal works.

A mob fired the Bristol tunnel on the Baltimore & Ohio Road near Shawnee, O. The flames were extinguished, but a few hours later the tunnel was again set on fire by the incendiaries. Twenty thousand dollars worth of damage was done.

Two thousand bales of cotton landed at Havre, France, by a New Orleans steamer was burned on the dock.

Fire destroyed the Glen Woolen Mill at North Adams, Mass., causing a loss of $100,000.

Christopher Brant, a workman in the Michigan Central car shops at the Junction, was killed by a passenger train while crossing the Michigan Central track at Twenty-fourth street this morning.

Jan. 5.—Loss by fire at De Pere, Wis., 3,000. Battle Creek, Mich., $7,000. Valparaiso, Ind., a large livery stable and seven horses. West Lafayette, O., $3,000. Newark, N. J., $25,000. St. Paul, Minn., $5,000. Denver, Col. $15,000. Poplar Bluff, Mo., $25,000.

Seven persons were killed and sixteen injured by a railway disaster in Nicaragua.

GOSSIP.

Can the evil wrought by gossip be estimated? We think not. A wise woman can scarcely say too little in company if the conversation trenches in the least upon scandal. Many a social nobleminded woman has been obliged to withdraw herself from a neighborhood intimacy which would have been pleasant otherwise, because her remarks were returned by some idle tale-bearer, so perverted as to make her doubt the existence of genuine friendship, and accept loneliness for the sake of the safety it brought. You say we must talk "about something." Yes: and through that very fact we see a remedy for the evil, to so thoroughly interest ourselves in other and better things that we find no space to spare for our neighbor's affairs. Let us talk of our work, our homes, our house-plants, our books or our babies. Let us teach our eyes to find beauty everywhere, while we blind them by constant watchfulness to blemish. Never, under any circumstances, cast the first stone. Then, if any erring neighbor goes down, you can not blame yourself for assisting the downfall.

The race of mankind would perish did they cease to aid each other. From the time that the mother binds the child's head, till the moment that kind assistant wipes the death-damp from the brow of the dying, we can not exist without mutual help. All, therefore, that need aid, have a right to ask it from their fellow mortals; no one who holds the power of granting can refuse it without guilt.

BUILD WELL.

High on the granite wall the builders, toiling, Heaved up the massive blocks and slabs to place, With swart and streaming brows and straining sinews, Under the Summer's blaze.

And higher yet, amid the chills of autumn, Tier upon tier and arch on arch arose: And still crept upward,-coldly, wearily, 'Mid winter's sifting snows.

From stage to stage upsprings the master builder, Instructing, cheering, chiding here and there; Scanning, with scrutiny severe and rigid, Each lusty laborer's share.

Anon his voice to those most distant shouting Through his hoarse trumpet makes his orders swell: Or utters words like these to rouse and hearten: "Build well, my men, build well!

"The ropes are strong, and new and sound the pulleys; The derrick's beams are equal to the strain; Unerring are the level, line and plummet; Let nought be done in vain!

"Build that these walls to coming generations Your skill, your strength, your faithfulness shall tell, That all may say, as storms and centuries test them: THE MEN OF OLD BUILT WELL!"

And ever thus speaks the great Master Builder To us, where'er our 'journey-work' may be: "Whate'er the toil, the season, or the structure, Build well—build worthily."

QUORUM ORGANIZATION.

At the earnest solicitation of a respectable number of the members of the First Quorum of Elders, as also several of the officers and members of the other elders' quorums, I write.

I shall try to set before those officers, some little of the law, necessity, object and benefit, accruing to the church in general, and the elders in particular; but first permit me to state, that in a limited degree I feel the weighty responsibility that rests upon those who undertake to reflect the true light and meaning of the revelations of God, and teach the duties, privileges and responsibilities of those who are by inspiration called and set apart as the true ministers. Should a flaw be discovered in this, please exercise charity, and credit it as a mistake of the head and not of the heart. Remember that our portion of labor is that we teach constantly, without addition or subtraction, the principles of the gospel.

As seen in canvassing the church history, it was the chief aim and life work of Joseph Smith, to complete and set in orfully employed in the preparation and instruction of those enrolled in the different quorums, as is revealed in the constitutional law of the church. Unfortunately for us, these things were very meagerly recorded, or at least not fully published. I quote however the following, as clearly pointing out the great importance to the church of a correct understanding and the means of accomplishing the full and complete organization of the priesthood. November 12th, 1835, Joseph tells us that he met with the Council of the Twelve. Nine of them were present. In the address that he made I find these words:

"You want to know many things that are before you, that you may know how to prepare yourselves for the great things that God is about to bring to pass. But there is one great deficiency or obstruction in the way, that deprives us of the greater blessings; and in order to make the foundation of this church complete and permanent, we must remove this obstruction, which is, to attend to certain duties that we have not as yet attended to. I supposed I had established this Church on a permanent foundation when I went to Missouri; and indeed I did so, for if I had been taken away, it would have been enough; but I yet live, and therefore God requires more at my hands."—Millennial Star, Vol. 15, p. 423.

It will be observed in the above statement, that there was a something to be done in the future, that the church might attain to a "greater blessing," and stand upon a "permanent foundation;" so that "the eye can not say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you." Thus it will appear essential, that the church, to be complete, in all its parts, must be in harmony with that system of divine architecture contained in the text books of the church; viz.,—"Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fulness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them." Doctrine and Covenants, p. 142. By wav of accomplishing the "will of the Lord," and removing the obstructions, that the "greater blessings" be granted unto the church, Joseph enters in his Journal, Mill. Star, Vol. 15, p. 620:

"At early candle-light I met with the Presidency at the west school-room, in the Temple, to attend to the ordinance of anointing our heads with holy oil."

Those who were in attendance at the General Conference of 1883, at Kirtland, Ohio, will understand where this meeting was held. Again on p. 631:

"In the evening met the quorum of High Priests in the west room of the upper loft of the Lord's House, and, in company with my Council of the Presidency, consecrated and anointed the Counselors of the President of the High Priesthood; and having instructed them, and set the Quorum in order, I left them to perform the holy anointing, and went to the Quorum of Elders at the other end of the room. I assisted in anointing the Couns lors of the President of the Elders, and gave the instruction necessary for the occasion, and left the President and his Council to anoint the Elders, while I should go to the adjoining room, and attend to organizing and instructing the Quorum of the Seventy."

All these preliminaries were but preparations, that the Priesthood might receive the promised endowment; and that they der the several quorum organizations of the church. Days and weeks were faith- in "solemn assembly." Space forbids my taking note of the endowment, with the glorious blessings that were bestowed upon those who had been organized into quorums and instructed, that they might be found worthy sons, according to the holy covenant of the Priesthood. In the closing remarks, Joseph spoke as follows; Mill. Star, vol. 15, p. 728:

"I then observed to the Quorums, that I had now completed the organization of the Church, and we had passed through all the necessary ceremonies; that I had given them all the instruc-tion they needed, and that they now were at liberty, after obtaining their licenses, to go forth and build up the kingdom of God."

Please observe here, that it was upon the completion of the organization of the quorums, the church organization was completed. I now come to the law upon this question. Doctrine and Covenants, 104:31, provides for the presidents of the elders' quorums:

"I say unto you, says the Lord of hosts, there must needs be presiding elders to preside over those who are of the office of an elder."

From this it should be clear to all, that the need of a president, carries with it the necessity, imposed by the Lord, upon all those holding the office of an elder, to enroll themselves with the quorums, as made and provided in the constitution of the church; so that all obstructions and hindrances might be removed, which are now preventing the complete organization of the church. In paragraph 41, same section, are these items presented: 1st. The duty of the president, which is, first to preside, second to sit in council, third to teach the quorum. 2d. The number constituting a quorum, namely ninety-six. 3d. That there is a distinction between the president of the Elders' quorum, and that of the Seventy. 4th. That those having the office of elder are not required to travel by reason of their ordination; and this is the difference between the office of Elder and that of Seventy, as is shown in sec. 107, par. 44:

"The difference between this [Seventies] quorum, and the quorum of Elders is, that one is to travel continually, and the other is to preside over the churches, from time to time; the one has the responsibility of presiding from time to time, and the other has no responsibility of presiding, saith the Lord your God

This not only points out the distinction between the duties of the Seventy and the Elder, but also to some degree indicates some of the work of the Elder, "to preside from to time." Under this provision the elder is subject to election to the office of branch or district president, and by sec. 117, par. 10, the Elder may be chosen as a counselor to the Bishop, or by the nomination of a district, and the appointment of the Bishop to act in the capacity of Bishop's The next I seek to point out the Agent. duties of the Elder. 1st. "To conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost." Sec. 17, par. 9:

"But notwithstanding those things which are written, it always has been given to the Elders of my church, from the beginning, and ever shall be, to conduct all meetings as they are directed and guided by the Holy Spirit."—Sec. 46, par. 1.

2d. To teach the principles of the gospel as contained in the three adopted text books of the church. Sec. 42, par. 5. 3d.

To meet in the quarterly conferences, (this duty is greatly neglected), or from time to time, as appointed. 4th. To hear testimony and give a verdict thereon, as a court. Sec. 42, par. 22. 5th. To pray for, and lay hands upon the sick. Sec. 42, par. 12. 6th. By their ministry they are to bind up the law, seal up the testimony, and prepare the Saints for the hour of judgment. Sec. 85, par. 23. 7th. To administer in spiritual things. Sec. 104, par. 7. 8th. Shall travel and preach. Sec. 83, par. 22. 9th. When duly appointed, shall go to the nations afar off, islands of the sea, Gentiles and Jews. Sec. 108, par. 3.

I now mention among the privileges of the Elders: 1st. They are permitted to act in the office of the High Priest in the absence of said officer. 2d. They are permitted to act in the office of the Priest, Teacher or Deacon. 3d. They are permitted to bless children. 4th. To baptize those who are to be received into fellowship. 5th. And confirm those who have been legally baptized. 6th. To ordain other Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons, when these officers have been selected as provided for in the law. 7th. To perform marriage ceremonies. 8th. To receive the revealments of heaven, to the furnishing of divine wisdom in the filling acceptably of the work of the minister.

It should also be understood, that where an Elder and five or more members are, there is found the Church of Christ, and they are entitled to the watchcare of the Father, and the guiding power of the Holy Spirit, to the obtaining of the spiritual blessings promised to the believer.

Should an Elder who has a standing in a quorum, be overtaken in a fault, and tried by either branch or district authorities, he is entitled to a hearing before his peers, and there it may be expected the decision shall be just.

One of the great benefits to be secured to the church, will be in the quorums rendering their reports to the General Conferences, which will require but little or no more time, than an individual report would require; and this in the future will be an important item in the Conference business. Every member of a quorum should take sufficient interest in his quorum to report to them at the annual meeting, and tell at least his desire for the cause, and what he had done during the year for its advancement. Do not let any misunderstanding arise in this connection that by reason of their not being under the appointment of General Conference no report is required. Those who are appointed by the General Conference will report to that body; but the report to the quorum is by reason of the office held and membership in the quorum.

Let me urge upon you the necessity of active and faithful labor; for the responsibility that rests upon you is very weighty, and in the very nature of the organization of the church must be, as we are scattered over such a wide extent of territory, and branches are established everywhere; and it not being practicable for the First Presidency, Twelve, High Priests or Seventies, to be with each branch, therefore the vast army of local ministers must be called from the ranks of the Eldership; and as the past history indicates that the Elders have been true faithful and active missionaries, it is not to be anticipated that the future action of the church will entirely dispense with the usefulness of these laborers.

In conclusion, our reward will not be for the office or position we have occupied in the church; but for the faithful discharge of the duties imposed upon us by our Heavenly Father. May grace equal to the task be granted, is my prayer.

R. M. ELVIN, President First Quorum of Elders.

BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR.

REVENGE.

Bro. Gurley rejects the revelation of June 22d, 1834, for the reason that, to his mind, it teaches violence and revenge; and yet the second paragraph assures us that "Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the Celestial Kingdom; otherwise I [God] can not receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, [to the law of the Celestial Kingdom], if it must needs be by the things which they suffer." Now there is nothing like violence or revenge either enjoined or permitted the Saints under that law, except upon the following conditions, to-wit:

"5. Now, I speak unto you, concerning your families; if men will smite you, or your families, once, and ye bear it patiently and revile not against them, neither seek revenge, ye shall be rewarded; but if ye bear it not patiently, it shall be accounted unto you as being meted out a just measure unto you. And again, if your enemy shall smite you the second time, and you revile not against your enemy, and bear it patiently, your reward shall be an hundred fold. And again, if he shall smite you the third time, and ye bear it patiently, your reward shall be doubled unto you four fold; and these three testimonies shall stand against your enemy, if he repent not, and shall not be blotted out. And now, verily I say unto you, if that enemy shall escape my vengeance that he be not brought into judgment before me, then ye shall see to it, that ye warn him in my name that he come no more upon you, neither upon your family, even your chil-dren's children unto the third and fourth generation; and then if he shall come upon you, or your children, or your children's children unto the third and fourth generation, I have delivered thine enemy into thine hands, and then if thou will spare him thou shalt be rewarded for thy righteousness; and also thy children and thy children's children unto the third and fourth generation; nevertheless thine enemy is in thine hands, and if thou reward him according to his works, thou art justified, if he has sought thy life, and thy life is endangered by him; thine enemy is in thine hands and thou art justified.

"6. Behold, this is the law I gave unto my servant, Nephi; and thy father, Joseph and Jacob, and Isaac, and Abraham, and all mine ancient prophets and apostles. And again, this is the law that I gave unto mine ancients, that they should not go out unto battle against any nation, kindred, tongue or people, save I, the Lord, commanded them. And if any nation, tongue, or people should proclaim war against them, they should first lift a standard of peace unto that people, nation, or tongue, and if that people did not accept the offering of peace, neither the second nor the third time, they should bring these testimonies before the Lord; then, I, the Lord, would give unto them a commandment, and justify them in going out to battle against that nation, tongue, or people, and I, the Lord, would fight their battles, and their children's children until they had avenged themselves on all their enemies, to the third and fourth generation; behold, this is an ensample unto all people, saith the Lord, your God, for justification before

"7. And again, verily I say unto you, if, after thine enemy has come upon thee the first time, he repent and come unto thee praying thy forgiveness thou shalt forgive him, and shall hold it no more as a testimony against thine enemy, and so on unto the second and third time; and as oft as thine enemy repenteth of the trespass wherewith he has trespassed against thee, thou shalt forgive him, until seventy times seven; and if he trespass against thee and repent not the first time, nevertheless thou shalt forgive him; and if he trespass against thee the second time, and repent not, nevertheless thou shalt forgive him; and if he trespass against thee the third time and repent not, thou shalt forgive him; but if he trespass against thee the fourth time, thou shalt not forgive him but shall bring these testimonies before the Lord, and they shall not be blotted out until he repent and reward thee four fold in all things wherewith he has trespassed against you; and if he do this thou shalt forgive him with all your heart, and if he do not this, I, the Lord, will avenge thee of thine enemy an hundred fold; and upon his children, and upon his children's children, of all them that hate me, unto the third and fourth generation; but if the children shall repent, or the children's children and turn to the Lord their God with all their hearts, and with all their might, mind, and strength, and restore four fold for all their trespasses, wherewith they have trespassed, or where with they have trespassed, or wherewith their fathers have trespassed or their father's fathers, then thine indignation shall be turned away and vengeance shall no more come upon them, saith the Lord your God, and their trespass shall never be brought any more as a testimony before the Lord against them. Amen."

By this we learn that it is not until after the fourth assault that the Saints can be justified in rewarding the violence of their enemy "according to his works;" and then, if that enemy does not "repent and reward thee fourfold in all things wherewith he has trespassed against you, * * * I, the Lord, will avenge thee of thine enemy an hundred fold." This is "the law of the celestial kingdom" on this matter. This was revealed through the "choice Seer;" and we undertake to say these principles have never been excelled in any age or nation. The Lord will have his people thoroughly indoctrinated and disciplined in this very law, even "if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer;" and the experiences of the "Camp of Israel" in going to and returning from Missouri, with what was told them June 22d, on Fishing River, should have accomplished this; for, the Lord, in that revelation says -"It is expedient in me that mine elders should wait for a little season, for the redemption of Zion; for, behold, I do not require at their hands to fight the battles of Zion; for, as I said in a former commandment, (see D. C. 98: 4, and 34: 4), even so will I fulfill, I will fight your battles. Behold, the destroyer I have sent forth to destroy and lay waste mine enemies; and not many years hence, they shall not be left to pollute mine heritage, and to blaspheme my name upon the lands which I have consecrated for the gathering together of my Saints." D. C. 102. 3, 4. [It is a very notable fact, that those active persecutors, but very few of them, now remain in the regions indicated]. In paragraph five of same revelation the Lord says of those who composed that camp, "But inasmuch as there are those who have hearkened unto my words, I have prepared a blessing and an endowment for them, if they continue faithful. I have heard their prayers, and will accept their offering; and it is expedient in me, that they should be brought thus far for a trial of their faith."

By interpreting this revelation in the light of its own clearly expressed statements we learn, (1), that the Lord never intended the Saints should, with carnal weapons, fight the battles of Zion; (2), that he brought the camp "thus far, for a trial of their faith."

The Lord had told the Saints in December, 1833, six months before, that because of "their transgressions," and because they "esteemed lightly" his counsel, they must needs be chastened, and tried, even as Abraham, who was commanded to offer up his only son." God did not intend that Abraham should slay his son; but he would try his integrity, and his faith; in doing which he also showed, in a most prominent manner, his utter disapproval of human sacrifice, an evil common among heathen nations. Jesus said, "He that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one."—Luke 22: 36. This, taken alone, looks very warlike, and it could be easily construed to mean that the Master just then was actuated by a warlike spirit, but when interpreted in the light of its contexts, and what he taught both before and after, we see he purposed to make it a most notable occasion for teaching, for all coming time, that "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." Matt. 26: 52. So also, we take it, the Lord commanded his Saints in December, 1833, to organize the camp, go up to Missouri, and "redeem" his "vineyard" which he had "bought with money," for the express and most important purpose of teaching his people for all time to come, that he did not, and would not, call on his elders to fight the battles of Zion; and, that he alone would fight their battles, in his own time, and in his own way.

It is most probable that many of the Saints were greatly provoked, and even angry and revengeful over the evil treatment they or their fellows had received in being persecuted and driven from Jackson county; and the trip of the "Camp," with what occurred in Missouri, and en route there and back, was a fitting "chastening," "trial," reproof, and rebuke for all their angry, vengeful, unchristlike feelings, views, and intentions.

If the Saints were not, and are not instructed in the principles of peace, forbearance, and non-resistance, by the revelation of December 1833, with that of June 22d, 1834, the fault is not with those revelations; for a thorough examination of them will reveal that this was their object, and purpose and design.

It should be borne in mind that the "army," "warriors," "watchmen," "towers," "banners," etc., etc., in these revelations, are but parts of "a parable," and should be understood and interpreted as such. These terms are sometimes used in Bible parlance as relating to the Church or people of God, the ministry, the defenses, and the chief attractive features of Gods' work. In proof, see Ps. 68:11; Ezek. 37:10; Dan. 4:35; Rev. 9:16 2 Tim. 2:3, 4; Ps. 60:4; Isa. 13:2; Ps. 61:3; Prov. 18:10; Matt. 21:33.

When we put a literal interpretation to the several parts of this or any other parable, we may greatly pervert their purport and intention, and do much harm.

If the reader will turn to Doc. and Cov. 98: 1, 2, 3, the then unfaithful, unwise, and disobedient condition of many of the Saints will be seen; and paragraph four will make it clear that God alone will execute wrath upon their persecutors; while paragraphs 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13, point out plainly what the Saints should do in order that "redress and redemption" might be obtained by them. Now, in all this there is nothing like carnal warfare, revenge, or retaliation on the part of the Saints either commanded, contemplated, or provided for; but, to the contrary, they are counselled to seek "redress and redemption, by the hands of those who are plac-ed as rulers and are in authority" as civil

The revelation of February 1834, is similar in sentiment. It makes no provision for revenge by the Saints, and none for resistance except against mob violence in defense of their own homes previously purchased. This is a right ordained of God in the very constitution of man, guaranteed under the Constitution and laws of all civilized countries, and endorsed by both the Bible and Book of Mormon. (Alma 20:2, 7, 10, 12; 1 Pet. 2:13, 14; Titus 3:1. Matt. 22:21. Only in the "parable," (Doc. and Cov. 98:6, 7, 8; 100:4, 5; and 102:8), is anything like revenge by the Saints provided for, and then only when you apply to it a literal interpretation. When we interpret it in a figurative -spiritual-way, so as to harmonize with other parts of the same revelations in which it is taught, and in harmony with "the law of the celestial kingdom," then the idea of revenge and retaliation by the Saints "vanishes like the baseless fabric of a vision"—it can not be found except in so far as relates to "taking possession of their own lands, which they have previously purchased with their moneys, and of throwing down the towers of mine (God's) enemies (the persecuting mob), that may be upon them;" all of which is of a defen-sive character, a right which is natural, indefeasible, and guaranteed by the constitution and laws of our Nation and of the several States therein.

That it was not intended the Saints should by physical force redress their own grievances, nor avenge themselves or God, is further evident from the fact that the company or "camp" called in the "parable," might be as few as "one hundred." This number would answer the purpose of demonstrating forever in a conspicuous way, the fact that God would not have the Saints "fight the battles of Zion;" also that they must purchase the lands of their inheritance; and further, that they could be justified only in defending their homes against mob violence in case of extreme necessity. And it further served as a means to prove whether the Saints could have their rights—those common to all citizens—protected under the laws and rulers of Missouri and our Nation. It was designed, clearly, to serve these ends as well as to try the faith, and zeal, and love of the Saints. It has been stated by those who were in the "camp" at Fishing river, that when Joseph the Seer saw the clouds rising from whence came the storm which raised the streams in a short time to a marvelous and unprecedented hight, preventing a violent collision between the great mob and the "camp," that the Seer ex-claimed—"There is salvation for us in that cloud!" The mob was baffled, God fighting the battle in behalf of the little "camp" by the storm and tempest.

The rulers and people of Jackson county and vicinity did not honor and magnify their own laws; but they either violated them or suffered them to be violated when the Saints were persecuted, and robbed, and driven out in 1833; and when the Saints sought by legal process to regain possession of their own lands and property, and their co-religionists offered to assist them, they were opposed, resisted, and repulsed with threatenings and violence; their natural and guaranteed rights were denied them; the laws of the State and Nation were trampled down by their persecutors, and all without the least justifiable provocation; the rulers of the State and Nation stood by and saw, and suffered the dearest rights of its citizens invaded and outraged. And this sending of the "camp, purposely to aid the persecuted ones to regain their rights, was one important feature in the programme for trying the Saints as to whether they would keep the celestial law, and for proving the people and rulers of both state and nation as to whether they would honor, obey, and enforce their own laws in justice and equity. It was "expedient" that the Saints should be tried, and taught; and it was wisdom in God that the faithfulness and integrity of the people and rulers—State and National-should be tested, and this "that all men may be left without excuse; that wise men and rulers may hear and know that which they have never considered; that I may proceed to bring to pass my act, my strange act, and perform my work, my strange work; that men may discern between the righteous and the wicked, saith your God." D. C. 98: 12. God, by remarkable providences, founded our nation; and by special revelation and endowment he founded the church. The one was dedicated to liberty, justice, and equity to all mankind; while the latter was dedicated to the truth and righteousness of God. Both must be tried and proven; and the Lord would choose the means and ways for effecting this; and this gathering to and expulsion from Jackson county, including the going up of the "camp," humble though they were, were suitable means to accomplish it. And it is a noteworthy fact, that many of the same general issues raised between the Saints and their opposers in 1833 and after, were also raised between the Free Soilers in Kansas and their sympathizers on the one part, and the Pro-Slavery element in Kansas and their sympathizers on the other part, which finally resulted in the war of the Rebellion. The rights of the Free Soilers were vindicated and maintained, and their cause finally triumphed; but the rights of the Saints were successfully outraged, their wrongs remain unredressed, and their cause still suffers from defeat. But there are forces at work in many ways to bring their cause to the notice of the people, the Nation, and the world; and when this is fully accomplished, it will enable all to perceive more clearly the wisdom and the purposes of God in his dealing with the Saints, the people, and rulers of Missouri and the Nation, as set forth in the revelations now under consideration.

> "Truth, crushed to earth, will rise again; The eternal years of God are hers; But error, wounded, writhes in pain, And dies amid her worshipers."

The revelation in question further says -"And let all my people who dwell in the regions round about, he very faithful, and prayerful, and humble before me, and reveal not the things which I have revealed unto them, until it is wisdom in me that they should be revealed." This advice can not be excelled. They should not reveal the purposes and designs of heaven in respect to purchasing inheritances and gathering to the regions indicated, for the reason that unlearned and uninformed persons might misunderstand and misconstrue them; and for the further reason that wicked, unscrupulous persons might pervert them to the hurt of the Saints, and to deceive and delude others to the harm of all.

"Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works." This counsel is good at any time; and was especially so in those times of excitement and persecution. "But carefully gather together, as much as can be consistently with the feelings of the people." Certainly, this was, and is, wise, timely, and wholesome advice. It was just what was proper then, and it is proper now. Those who did not and who do not now, exercise care, and have all things prepared before them before they gather into those regions are neither faithful nor wise, and such may blame themselves only if they meet with disappointment, perplexity, and loss. The "feelings of the people" in those regions were to be inquired after and learned first; and the Saints were to gather among them only when it "can be consistently with" their feelings. Surely, there is nothing like revenge, violence, or wrath, in all this; but the very opposite.

The Saints had the natural and guaranteed right to migrate and settle wherever an opportunity offered; but, in order to avoid bitterness and strife, this revelation required them to make the sacrifice of those rights. This is giving the "cloak" after the "coat" has first been taken. It is Christlike in a very eminent degree. It is not only free from anything like violence and revenge, but is full of forbearance and of that heavenly charity which "seeketh not her own."

In closing we have to say, these revelations in question were, with all those which constituted the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, August 17th, 1835, adopted unaminously by a General Assembly of the whole Church for "a law, and a rule of faith and practice to the Church." It was adopted, first, by the several quorums of the priesthood, and then by the entire assembly. See Church History for that date in Messenger and Advocate, and Mill. Star., vol. 15, p. 299.

This action has never been repealed by the Church. The Church was in a prosperous, spiritual state at the time, and it is safe to conclude that their endorsement and approval, if not fully divine and inspired, was as near it as is likely to be the case with any similar body until a greater spiritual endowment is received than has been in this age. It is far safer to trust their judgment and experience touching those revelations, especially when they made them a matter of critical examination, and that, too, under the most orderly and favorable circumstances, than it is to entertain the doubts and fears and unbelief of one or many who oppose them.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 2.

BY S. F. W.

THE great extent of the Silurian (like the Laurentian) formation proves that it was deposited in an almost universal sea. Denudation, erosion, and corrosion of the limited continents are not adequate causes to account, at that age, for the formation of a universal stratum, in places four miles thick. Chemical laws must be appealed to. The sea must have contained the lime that formed the animals that secreted these calcareous deposits; yet the previous formations contained but a small per cent of it, and were nearly all beneath the sea, and the sea was not disturbed by winds. The sea then was replenished from the mineral compounds still in the clouds. The earth was still warm from within, and still belted heavily with mists and fumes. This was sixty millions years ago, say some, but there is no way of estimating the rate of deposition at that era. The different sub-kingdoms of animals were in being, sturgeons of large size heading the list; and creationists assert that this is a contravention of evolution, as they exist in a diminutive form at the present day. Silurian rocks consist of sandstone, limestone, shale and slate, and were metamorphosed by time, heat and pressure, from beds of sand, clay and calcareous mud, originally deposited in the sea, enclosing at every stage the organisms peculiar to the time.

The conditions of life, animal and vegetable, were in this early age somewhat like those of the present time. The seabeaches were marked by the tide and wind, and by trailing animals. The heat of the sun was now being added to the internal heat. There were clouds and sunshine.

With the sunshine, winds, of course, but not violent gales. The areas of uniform conditions were greater then than now, and types more widely distributed. Out of three hundred and sixty-six species, only fourteen were migrant, i. e. common to Europe and America, proving that they were created in different parts of the world at the same time, by one sovereign power. There were a hundred and sixty-eight species of trilobites, having no forerunners.

It is by the imbedded forms of progressive life that the ages of the rocks are known, and as different types, had very diverging ranges in the same era, as well as very different periods of endurance, the evidence is not absolute. The presence of particular fossisl is not always evidence of the exact age of a deposit, but associations of fossils and of rocks is the test. If the leaves of a work in several volumes, should be torn and scattered, they could not be collected together again by the numbers of the leaves, for the numbers would represent different volumes, and some would have been obliterated, so that it would be necessary to get the sense of the writing, and then an expert could put together again all the leaves. The layers of rocks are all numbered, and tell different parts of the same story, and have a regular succession; but they are scattered all over the earth, and in no one place are they all piled up one above the other in their order, but are distributed in volumes, chapters, sections, and, in places, single leaves.

In this age of Mollusks, very imperfectly developed vertetrates—as the sea-squirt, were links to the higher types in the following Devonian age-prophecies of the true vertebrates, as they were of man. Yet the Devonian came in persaltum with a leap, with sharks and sturgeons, twenty feet long, fishes of the highest type. This is a full statement of the geological evidences for and against evolution—links and leaps—links provided in one age, but nothing in the next to link to without a leap. How to get over these leaps, and link these disconnected links, has been the problem of the present era. From the moner to man, each order introduced in the succession was a prophecy of man, but man came at last with a "leap" the greatest saltum that the records tell us of.

The Devonian system, next in order is, at most, two miles thick. In this are boat-like animals, furnished with oars and rudder, fish plated like the tortoise, and lobsters four feet long. The earliest and lower order of dry-land vegetation began with this epoch. Above the Devonian is the Subcarboniferous, consisting of limestone, sandstone shales, and coal.

The Knickerbocker History of New York begins with an account of the creation of the earth; that was satire. But why should we not wish to know the origin of things we daily look upon, or come in contact with—prairie, wood-land, clay-bank, quarry, granite bowlders, gravel-beds, slates, &c., &c.? The poet says, "The earth rock-ribbed and ancient as the sun." We are now half way down the story, when the earth became "rock-ribbed."

On page 566 of Websters's Dictionary, is a representation of these ribs, twenty in number, as there laid down; beginning with Azoic at the bottom, and terminating with post-tertiary at the top. The figure of ribs as we have said, does not present a proper conception of the rocky strata composing the earth's crust. The rocks of the earth's crust, are generally in layers, superimposed. Where these strata are nearly horizontal, as in the prairie country, only a few of the upper ones can be seen. Where broken through by water courses, or upheaved as in mountain districts, those of greater depth can be examined. The strata underlying Iowa dip slightly to the south-west, and consequently are more exposed to view in the eastern part of the state; and in the extreme north-east the lowest of the stratified formations of Iowa -the lower Silurian, comes to the surface. This lower Silurian stratum doubtless underlies the whole state. Next west of it the upper Silurian appears. On the eastern edge it thins out in the lower Silurian; on the west edge it dips below the Devonian. The Devonian extends about a hundred miles westward, and dips beneath the Sub-Carboniferous. This again beneath the middle and lower coal measures. In this belt extending north-east and southwest, are the coal mines of Lucas county, and all, or nearly all, the profitable coal mines of the state. This last belt dips beneath the upper coal measures, which appear at the surface in numerous places near

A trench cut through a peat-bog exposes a wall of vegetable matter, much resembling a bank of coal. The moisture has preserved a great part of the plants and trees from decay, but the process of decay is going on, and will result in lignite, or subject to great heat and pressure, the transformation to coal is completed.

To understand the formation of coalfields so extensive as those known, we must suppose the earth to have, at a remote period, been covered to a great extent with marshes, in which tropical plants grew with prodigious luxuriance. The earth was heated with internal fires, and subject to internal commotions, which caused the surface to rise and fall at recurring intervals. When at a slight elevation above the water, and partly overflowed, vegetation flourished abundantly. Ferns, clubmosses, calamites, and various plants grew rapidly, and fell into the water, and by chemical action changed to peat, which accumulated in vast quantities, and was in due time submerged beneath the sea. Then sediment settled upon it, which in time became a bed of clay or shale. Again brought to the surface this clay or shale furnished a soil for a new growth of plants, to be again submerged. It was by being buried deep in the earth, or beneath the sea, where the heat was great, that the peat by pressure and heat, was changed into coal.

The formation of coal seems fortuitous, the causes accidental as the formation of a sand-bank by the roadside after a rain; yet a thorough study of the geological history enforces the stupendous conclusion that nothing is accidental. A purpose is evident in every part, and is seen in the first stages of development, and further illustrated and confirmed at each succeeding stage. The lesson of each page of the sublime story is: The earth is being made for man. The coal then was made for man. As a corollary to this asserted fact it might be said: If coal was made for man, man will use it; that is he will continue using it until it is exhausted. So he may; or it may be transformed, and serve some future, higher purpose in the economy of God; or it may go to waste, as we see seeming waste in every department of nature. Yet, we may not know; there may be no waste; the myriads of forests that perished without making coal, bridged the way, perhaps, to something better.

The upper coal measures contain limestone, sandstone, shales and clay, which are seen abundantly in the valleys of Middle, North and South rivers in Madison county, and in the valley of Grand river, in Decatur county. The building stone of Lamoni comes from a layer ten feet in thickness, lying immediately above the coal stratum. It is limestone, and contains many fossils, principally marine shells of the bivalve species of Mollusks.

While coal is a fresh water formation, the rocks and shales of the coal measures were formed in the deep sea. "The process of rock formation is now constantly being repeated, and year after year the shell-fish and coral contribute their calcareous portions to the sediment that is constantly accumulating beneath the ocean, and this will eventually become hardened into solid rock strata.

The permian, triassic, jurassic and cretaceous formations that lie above the carboniferous, do not appear in Iowa. The only limestone in the vicinity of Lamoni is the stratum already mentioned capping the coal formation. It forms the surface of the ground in places here where the drift has been removed by erosion. Though thus exposed to view, it is very ancient. It lay just as it is, horizontal and above tide before the great Sierra Nevade and other mountains of California were raised, and during the illimitable eras that they were being formed by slow deposition under the sea. Then we reflect that the upturned strata of those mountains the cretaceous 2,000 feet, jurassic a mile, triassic half a mile, aggregating between one and two miles, we have presented a faint conception of the time that has passed since the mollusks whose shells are familiar to our eyes, were living tenants of the sea. And yet before this time the Alps, the Pyrenees, Himalayas, and the Andes were beneath the sea; and Sinai and Lebanon and Ararat were not.

In the Permian and Triassic ages, which some hold correspond to the "fourth day" of creation, the continents were deluged and the waters covered almost all the lands. The disturbance thus caused, and the poisoning of the air by gasses from the interior of the earth, and may be too from extraneous causes, destroyed nearly all forms of life, the shark and a few others excepted. A new stocking of the world was necessary to beginthe triassic age, and mesozoic time.

The triassic was an age of ferns and conifers, labyrinthodons, and crocodiles in high latitudes. The jurassic, was the age of most wonderful reptiles.

The cretaceous two thousand feet thick The lands are still low. chalk. Throughout these cycles of time incalculable, the sea had flowed where now all the high mountains rise; but we have arrived at a period of the most wonderful change the earth ever underwent. The Pyrenees, Alps, Himalayas and the Andes rise slowly out of the sea. The earth in passing from a heated to a cool state shrank, and the crust was subject to folding or plication. The main ranges seem to have been lifted up gradually as high plateaus, and erosion has since given them much of their abrupt appearance.

As these last mentioned strata are absent from the prairie lands, and are present in the Sierra Nevada, we will next consider that locality. These strata are there the principal rocks. They represent mesozoic time—the middle of the work days of creation, and the period prolific of animal life, in sea and on land; yet they are here barren of life. On the north in Plumas county are impressions of triassic fossils, and on the south in Maripusa are found belemites. These seem to be relics that like the lone protozoan, in the old Laurentian, accidentally escaped obliteration when the rocks were undergoing their transformation. Though miles in thickness, they have been raised from the ocean to a hight of 10,000 feet, and stood on edge against the granite core that forms the center of the range, and present, at one view, a lapse of time in their formation, and expense of force in their elevation, that assert the agency of the Omnipotent and Eternal. During the time of their metamorphoses and upheaval they became interjected with seams and dikes of auriferous quarts, that have made them the great gold field of the world. Another effect of the baking process was to turn shales to jaspery rocks, argillaceus sandstone into serpentine.

To account for the elevation of these marine strata it is supposed that the shrinkage of the earth by cooling continued until a crisis resulted in general internal convulsion, that forced up the granite from below, and at the same time the lateral pressure aided to bend, break, and burst the crust in parallel ridges, with valleys and oceans between. The Cordilleras was one of these principal folds, and the Sierras being a part of that range, have a structure representative of the whole range. The time of general upheaval was also a time of volcanic activity, greater than had ever occurred before; and vast areas were covered with basalt, trachyte, trap, rhyolite, propylyte, andesite, and other eruptive rocks, together with ashes,

Both sides of the Sierra have the same formation, with the same inclination of strata, from the central core. On the east side of the range, within the boundaries of Nevada, as a separate formation, stands a syenitic peak called Mount Davidson.

When it came up it lifted up on its eastern side, a vast bed of propylite rock, that dif-fers from granite by having its crystals embedded in a paste that is not crystaline. Where the propylite and syenite met, the face of the syenite was not even and there was an opening between the two formations, reaching down into the heated earth. As the mountain pushed up, the fissure widened in places to an extreme of several hundred feet; and it extended north and south several miles. As it reached down to the heated region it was at once filled with vapors and gasses. From these fumes crystals of quartz soon formed on the sides of the fissure, and began the process of filling up the great cavity with the various ores of silver and gold, viz., silver glance, stephenite poly bassite, galena, pyrargyrite, horn-silver, sternbergite, zinc-blende, pyrites, &c. As pressure is necessary to crystalization, we must suppose the top of the fissure was closed.

After the fissure was filled the syenite peak rose still higher, crushing the quartz and smoothing the walls of the vein. The whole top of the vein and adjoining propylite broke off, and fell back from the syenite, at at angle of 45°. The propylite wasted away by erosion, and the hard quartz and walls of the vein were left standing above it. So Gold Hill became a little mountain of quartz, the gold visible in the vein without digging. was followed down by the miners until the break was reached, and there the lead appeared to come to an end, and there was great commotion and fear; but further exploration proved that the lode continued at a reverse angle, down the slope of the mountain thousands of feet; and the world is filled with the fame of the Comstock lode. The formation of the Comstock happened in the miocine era. The course of geological time takes us back to California and to the pliocene era.

Great glaziers have come upon the scene before their time, according to the books. Their source was the mountain tops to the northward; their scene was then a valley. The melting of the glaziers caused the rivers that formed numerous channels and filled them with the quartz gravel the glaziers had ground out of the rocks. The rivers were swift and the gravel clear and bright, piled tens and hundreds of feet high. It was interspersed with gold. A great overflow of trap, ashes, scoroe, basalt, and boulders next covered the gravel beds hundreds of feet deep, and diverted the rivers from their courses and sent them by new courses to the sea.

Since then the rivers have worn deep gorges in gravel-beds, and they with their basaltic caps are the high peaks and ridges—the crest, of the Sierra Nevadas in Sierra county. This line of peaks has each a separate name, Fire-cap, Saddle-back, Table-rock, Pilot-rock, &c. The local poets have been inspired by them, thus:

"Like birds the fleecy summer clouds
Around thy hoary summit flock,
And morning rolls the misty shrouds,
O'er thy cold temples, Table Rock."
Again:

With awe thy mighty form I scan, Rude monument of Pluto's reign, That mock'st the puny works of man— The wondrous piles on Egypt's plain. Of ages ere the march of time Thy hieroglyphics plainly speak; A birth and history sublime, They tell of thee, old Pilot Peak.

These river beds are reached by tunnels and are the world's great treasure house of gold.

The rocky mountains though so high and in places rugged, are also broad and flat, and, in places, carried up seas with them, when they rose. These seas formed a deposit called the "bad lands" of the west; where so many wonderful fossils are found. These deposits were left dry by the draining of the seas into the Missouri river. They were never subject to heat or pressure. They retain their fossouri river. They were never subject to heat or pressure. They retain their fossils, and look like walls of mud laid up in layers, and the creeks and winds have worn them into fantastic shapes, so that one can imagine himself in an enchanted land of forts and castles.

Geological time brings us back to Iowa. [To be Continued].

Miscellaneous.

ORDER OF THE CITY OF ZION.

WE the members of the Church of Jesus Christ whose names are hereunto annexed, have agreed to form ourselves into an association as the United Order of the City of Zion, Perpetuity and better government, do hereby establish the following constitution:

Art. I.—The name of this association shall be known as the United Order of the City of Zion; and its object shall be the aiding and assisting of worthy brethren, the building and working of manufacturing and wholesale establishments; and for any and all benevolent and charitable enterprises which may in the judgment of the Order be for the weal of Zion, and the establishment of her subjects.

Art. 2.—The Officers of this Order shall consist of a President and his two Counselors; a Secretary and his assistant; a Treasurer; and a board of directors.

Art. 3.—All officers shall be apointed by twothirds votes of the order. The Treasurer shall give bonds to the amount that the Order shall decide from time to time, for the faithful discharge of his duties, his bondsmen to be approved by the Order.

Art. 4.—The sum of $100 shall constitute one share in this Order, and entitle to one vote; and shall be paid, in no less than $6.25 annually, until the sum of $100. shall have been paid.

Art. 5.—Any member becoming dissatisfied, shall have refunded all moneys paid into the Order by said member, without interest, within one year from time of giving notice at a meeting of the Order.

Art. 6.—The Board of Directors shall use due precaution in loaning money, and taking security for the same. All money loaned to worthy brethren for the purpose of procuring homes for themselves, shall bear no rate of interest; but money loaned to business men, interest may be exacted at a rate per annum as may be approved by the Order.

Art. 7.—It shall require a two-thirds vote in transacting business in disbursing or loaning money.

Art. 8.—The Officers of this Order shall be elected for the term of twelve months by a two-thirds vote; and no man shall be eligible to office, who is not a member of this Order. All officers shall hold their offices until their successors are duly elected.

Art. 9.—Any member who shall be guilty of any public felonious offense against the law, or who shall persevere in a course of conduct degrading of itself, or calculated to bring this Order into odium and disrepute, shall be expelled by a two-thirds vote of the members present, at any stated meeting; but no member shall be expelled until he shall have been labored with, as in other cases made and provided in the Book of Covenants.

Art. 11.—This constitution may be altered, amended or abrogated, at any stated meeting, by a two-thirds vote; provided, that written notice of said alterations, amendments or abrogation, shall have been given at a previous stated meeting.

Officers chosen, unanimously:—T. W. Chatburn, President. S. Malony and J. C. Hardman, Vice Presidents. F. C. Warnky, Secretary. J. H. Lee, Assistant Secretary. A. Munn, Treasurer. J. H. Lee, R. May, E. Curtis, Board of Directors.

Moved, that the Secretary send a copy of these by-laws to the Herald, with a request for the Editor to publish them in that paper, so that any of the brethren abroad may have an opportunity to become members of this Order, and thereby assist in helping the needy. All communications to be directed to Secretary F. C. Warnky, Independence, Missouri.

BORN.

Allen.—At Lucas, Iowa, October 11th, 1884, to Bro. and Sr. John Allen, a daughter, named Mary Emma.

DIED.

GAMET.—At Little Sioux, Harrison Co., Iowa, on the 28th of December, 1884, Bishop David M. Gamet. Our Lamented brother was born in 1811 in the state of New York. Obeyed the gospel in October, 1835. Labored for years in the traveling ministry, in the midst of poverty and persecution. After the death of the Prophet and Patriarch, came into Western Iowa, but seeing the corruption of the rejected church, he refused to follow their wanderings; and although poverty stared himself and his family in the face, and concious that he would incur the displeasure of false shepherds, he firmly stood his ground, and breasted their ire, determined to have no part in their abominations. In all this he was ably supported by his noble and faithful wife. In 1861 the good news of the Reorganized Church saluted his ears; and after carefully examining it, he renewed his covenant under the hands of Elder Silas W. Condit; and, his priesthood being confirmed upon him, he entered the field again and did valiant battle for the truth. He was ordained a Bishop of the church under the hands of President Joseph Smith and Charles Derry. For a number of years he presided over the Little Sioux Branch, and acted as agent for the Presiding Bishop of the Church, in the Little Sioux District; and also as Counselor to the President of the High Priests' Quorum. Seeing that his end was approaching, he resigned his position as Bishop's Agent on the 13th of December, 1884. And after a faithful service of forty-nine years, he calmly passed away from earth, on the 28th ult. with a hope beaming with immortality and Eternal Life, leaving behind, his aged and afflicted companion, with five sons and a large number of grand children and great grand children, all like himself, well respected and highly esteemed for their true nobility, honesty and integrity. This man has blessed the world, both by his own virtuous life, and the legacy of noble children, who have been made so, by walking in his footsteps and following his instruction. The funeral was conducted by Elder P. Cadwell, and the sermon preached from 2d Tim. 4: 7, 8, by Charles Derry. The weather was intensely cold, but great respect was shown by his fellow citizens.

Rest from thy labors, my brother and friend,
"Till Christ in his glory to earth shall descend;
Then may I meet thee to part never more,

In the glorified presence of Him we adore.

BONA.—At San Francisco, Cal., August 20th, 1884, of old age, Sister Ann Bona, a native of Swansea, Wales, aged 78 years; was baptized into the faithin 1848; immigrated to Utah in 1853; to California in 1862, when she joined the Reorganization, and remained a faithful member to the close of her probation.

Bell.—At Chatham, Ontario, Dec. 18th, 1884, of Consumption, Sister Mary H. Bell; aged 26 years, 11 months and 10 days. Funeral sermon by Elder Samuel Brown, in Saints' Chapel, Blenheim, on Sunday, December 21st, to an attentive audience of Saints and friends; after which the remains of deceased were deposited in the Crawford burying ground, there to remain until the resurrection of the just.

ROBERTS.—At Brownsville, Rock Island County, Ill., September 22d, 1884, of Bright's disease of the kidneys, brother Moses Roberts, aged 51 years, one month. 17 days. Brother Roberts leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss. He was a loving husband and kind father, and was highly respected by all who knew him. The funeral sermon was preached October 12th, 1884, by Elder D. S. Holmes.

SUTTON.—At Buffalo Prairie, Ill., November 25th, 1884, Elizabeth A. Sutton, of liver complaint, aged 51 years, 8 months and 17 days. Sister Sutton leaves a husband and two children to mourn her loss. She had every attention that could be paid her, but loving hands could not save her. Funeral sermon by Elder D. S. Holmes.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letter from Bro. R. J. Anthony to Bro. W. W. Blair, dated Coalville, Utah, January 5th, we learn that he had been preaching at that place, having the Church School-house at $3 for one night, in Bro. Allen's house for two nights, and the Congregational School-house for the night of Sunday the 4th inst. The house was full, and Bro. Anthony reports having had excellent liberty.

Bro. E. C. Brand, writing from Tabor, Iowa, his home, January 5th, reports having labored at Webster, Nebraska. Bro. Brand relates the effort of a certain reverend gentleman to affect his effort disastrously, by impugning the character of a brother in the church not present. The result was that Bro. Brand succeeded in defending the absent and discomfiting the accuser. Bro. Brand also reports tough times among the dwellers at Clearwater and that portion of Nebraska. He had good liberty and fair opportunity for the presenting the word.

Bro. W. W. Blair left Lamoni on the 13th, for Independence, Missouri, where he will review Rev. Clark Braden's late lecture against the faith in that place. He goes at the request of the brethren of the Independence Branch.

Bro. J. J. Cornish writes from Webberville, Michigan, January 9th. It is his third visit to the place. There are ten or twelve of the faith there. On his way he stopped at Port Huron, and spoke there at the request of Bro. and Sister Whitford. Bro. Whitford's children were sick with diphtheria, but were helped by administration, to the astonishment of many. Bro.

Cornish made several openings in Huron county. Bro. Cornish reports that one Davie is traveling about the country as a preacher of the faith, who has not been properly ordained, and the Saints are warned in regard to him. Prospects for the work seem to be good.

Sr. Nancy Thomas writes from Wyoming, Iowa, January 2d, giving a good testimony, and asking the prayers of the Saints.

Letters are received from quite a number of the Saints and Elders, which because of their number and the want of room in Herald, will of necessity be deferred or omitted as opportunity or their dates may warrant. We would be glad to insert them all, but can not.

Bro. Daniel Brown of Watsonville, and Bro. J. H. Lawn of Paicenes, California, were at Visalia, Tulare county, and a number of other places. Attendance fair, weather rainy, roads muddy.

The Providence, Rhode Island, Journal, for January 5th, notices the visit of Bro. E. L. Kelley to the Massachusetts District. Bro. E. L. spoke in the hall occupied by the Saints, January 4th, from Timothy 4:16, the Journal says "with much earnestness and force, and commanded close attention."

Sr. Hattie Wight writes from Medina City, Bandera county, Texas, January 4th, that she attended the debate between Bro. H. C. Smith and Rev. Wilmeth, at Bandera, December 9th, and was well pleased with the result.

THE North Bend, Nebraska, Flail, has a correspondent at Weston, Nebraska, and in a late issue of the paper occurs the following:

We have lately been entertained at our school house by Elder E. C. Brand, of the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints. He held a series of thirteen sermons. He is a very earnest and interesting speaker and attracted the attention of all classes and all religious denominations. Some attended his preaching who had not attended preaching within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The house was crowded night after night. By the way, this church does not advocate and uphold polygamy, as is supposed by many, but to the contrary, is its most bitter opponent, and it keeps missionaries constantly at work trying to overthrow that cursed institution in Utah, and Mr. Brand informed us that his church had men attending Congress when the Edmunds bill was in progress aiding and encouraging Congress in its passage.

Some Chicago (wonder if Boston will yield the hub of the universe readily) wise men are advancing the theory of the purchase of the property of the Utah Mormons by the Government of the United States. The following appeared in the Chicago Tribune of January 8th instant.

"Many Eastern papers have variously commented upon a proposition from a Chicago source that the National Government solve the Mormon question by buying out the Mormon possessions for $50,000,000 on an agreement by them to leave the country. Emigration to New Guinea or some other of the islands of the Pacific is suggested.

"This is a curious illustration of history repeating itself. In the summer of 1883, while on a visit to the Sandwich Islands, The Tribune correspondent had a long and pleasant interview one afternoon with the veteran, the Hon. William M. Gibson, Minister of Foreign Affairs for King Kalakaua's dominions. In notes of the conversation I find that Mr. Gibson in 1857 was a party to a scheme for buying out the Mormons on somewhat the same terms as now suggested. He proposed that the Mormons seek a home among the islands of the Pacific, and New Guinea was mentioned by him as a fertile land, at that time without government or protectorate. The Mormons, he thought, would accept $5,000,000 for their Utah possessions, and agree to depart within three years, the Government to furnish a convoy of naval vessels to their new home. Mr. Gibson drafted his plan and sent it to Brigham Young. That wily leader, wearied with a long agitation against Mormonism, promptly replied, inviting Mr. Gibson to Salt Lake City. After conference with Gen. Cass, Secretary of State, and several prominent Congressmen, all of whom regarded the scheme with favor as promising an easy solution of a troublesome question, Mr. Gibson started for Utah. Brigham Young went over the details carefully and authorized Mr. Gibson to submit the plan, unchanged in its main features, to the authorities at Washington. He did so, but President Buchanan earnestly opposed it on the ground that it was unbecoming the dignity of a great Nation, to virtually admit, as it would, that it could not enforce its laws within its own borders. The Presidential opposition killed the scheme. Now it crops up, after all these years, with a proposition to pay ten times the original amount. The argument advanced by President Buchanan would doubtless have equal weight todav.

Brigham Young was promptly advised of the result. At that time he had a small Mormon colony in the Sandwich Islands. It was on the east side of the Island of Oahu, some distance from Honolulu, and exists to-day, with about 3,000 souls there and in adjacent islands, who are in no wise interfered with by the native authorities. Many of the Mormons are natives, and they are governed from Salt Lake City. Young arranged with Gibson to go there and organize among the colonists a company to go to New Guinea. Young agreed, if the outlook was promising, he would largely reinforce the new colony from Europe, where Mormon proselyters were even then at work. Gibson reached the Sandwich Islands, in June, 1861, investigated the colonization scheme, found it impracticable, and went to sheep-raising. He gradually drifted into politics, and is now one of the most influential men in the Hawaiian Kingdom."

President Buchanan was right. It would be a sorry acknowledgement for the Government to make; that a handful of 2,500 or 3,000 polygamous men, having from two to fifty wives each, could so far evade the just enforcement of law against their evil doing, as to drive the puissant nation to the pitiful resort of buying off the whole people, the 3,000 practical polygamists and all the holders to the doctrine who are innocent of its practice.

Brigham Young was too shrewd for the wiley diplomatists, who even in that early day, sought to "get out of a bad fix as easily as possible." He knew that when practical statesmen came to fairly consider such a proposition, its absurdity would be shown; and he was quite willing that the experiment should be tried.

Fifty million would be but small remuneration to a hundred and thirty thousand people, for their homes, the abandonment of their native or adopted land, and to convey them to a distant country and make similar homes there. To thus buy the Utah Mormons to quit the United States would take on the appearance, either that the people were innocent of actual wrongdoing, or it would be one of the hugest cases of compounding of felony the world has ever seen.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

In a long letter which we are obliged to omit for want of space, sent us by Bro. H. A. Richardson, of Buchanan, Michigan, he says:

"There are many here very much interested in this latter day work, and some two or three who, I am sure, would obey the commands were they not afraid of the circumcision of the sectarian world with whom they mingle. Oh! may the Father send his enlightening Spirit and remove the sectarian blindness of this people. Bro. J. Shook and wife sends greeting."

Bro. Joseph Squires of New York, writes January 5th, that

"The members of the Brooklyn Branch with those at East New York, have united again to carry on the work. A good feeling now prevails in our midst. We were pleased to have Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley call on us; we had a pleasant time with them."

INGERSOLL seems to be no more honest than others whom he has charged with dishonesty. The following is sent us by Bro. Forscutt, cut from the Pittsburg Press for December 11th:

"I have just seen in your enterprising paper an editorial on Mr. Ingersoll's late lecture delivered in Kansas City. I wish to call your attention to his noted lecture delivered in Cincinnati in the year 1879 or 1880. At that time I was reading a very old and excellent work entitled, 'Evidences Against Christianity,' by Hittell, an Englishman. I recognized at once Mr. Hittell's style in Mr. Ingersoll's 'Mistakes of Moses,' as reported by the Truthseeker, (I think of Boston), and upon examination 1 found a chapter of Mr. Hittell's book entitled also 'Mistakes of Moses,' which, upon comparison, proved to be word for word the entire chapter, identical with the great lecture of Ingersoll.

"Shortly afterward Mr. Ingersoll published his lecture, 'Mistakes of Moses,' which I obtained, and I there find he has re-written Mr. Hittell's chapter, but has retained the facts, figures, and thoughts of that author. In this book, over his own signature, he says that his lecture has been erroneously reported; and in order to have it appear as he delivered it, he has taken that method of publishing it. He nowhere alludes to Mr. Hittell's work, but claims the whole as original with himself. You will find the above statement correct if you care to obtain a copy of Hittell. I write you this, thinking it may be of interest.

"I am not a believer in anything supernatural, and am not a scoffer. While many of the claims of Christianity may be fallacious, a great many earnest, intelligent persons sincerely believe them to be true. Mr. Ingersoll does not give his utterances more weight by claiming them as his own, than if he gave us his true source. In the discussion of such a subject as religion, there can be nothing more important than perfect sincerity. Let us discover the truth if possible, and attain, not belief, but knowledge. No belief will undo the law of nature."

Bro. G. T. Griffiths sends us the following clipping from the New York Sentry. Bro. Griffith wrote from Bethesda, Ohio.

"The return of the Jews to Palestine has been a favorite hobby of zealous and philanthropic persons in every age of Christianity. It has failed hitherto to interest people most concerned but the Jewish Chronicle records a movement which may have serious results. A conference is now sitting at Kattowitz, in Upper Silesia, to frame a project for transporting the Hebrew populations of Eastern Europe to the Holy Land. Many of the most important towns in Russia, Poland, Germany and Austria are represented by delegates; the conference is to last a week and over. £10,000 have been subscribed. That sum would go but a very little way, in truth, but as the first token of interest on the part of the Jews themselves it is significant. If they can be brought to entertain the idea it might be realized. We are not used to think of the Jew as an agriculturist; and that is the fundamental objection to the scheme which experienced persons adduce to his incapacity for pioneering. But the persecutions in Russia have revealed that many thousands of the Chosen People are engaged in farming there, and in Austria, Poland and the Balkan counties. It is these persecutions doubtless, and the prospect of more which have stirred the Jews at last. They may well think that if go they must, Palestine is as good a land to colonize as the Western States, and they would be fulfilling prophecy into the bargain. There is no serious reason for believing the idea impracticable if money enough be forthcoming, and the right class of colonists be found."

BLACKWOOD'S Magazine for November, 1884, has an article on the oil and oil trade on the Caspian Sea, which article is reproduced in the Chicago Tribune for December 20th, from which we extract the following:

"The supply is apparently altogether inexhaustible, for already twelve thousand square miles in this region have been proved to be oleiferous, and of this vast surface, only six miles are as yet being developed. The oil-bearing stratum is found to extend beneath the Caspian Sea, where it crops up in Tcheliken, a true isle of oil, which literally streams into the sea from hills and cliffs, which are entirely formed of ozokerite—in other words, of crude paraffine.

"On the eastern shore of the Caspian it reappears at Krasnovodsk and elsewhere. A hundred miles inland lies the Neft, or Naphtha Hill, whose deposits are officially valued at £35,000,000 sterling—oleonapht, as this particular material is called, being found especially valuable for lubricating machinery; so it promises to become an important article of export.

"The oil-bearing stratum also reappears in the opposite direction; for as Baku lies at the eastern extremity of the Caucasus Range, so at its western extremity, on the shores of the Black Sea, lies another great petroleum region in the river basin of the Kouban River, in the province of the same name. This oil-field, extending over about two hundred and fifty miles, terminates in the peninsula of Taman, between the Black Sea and the Sea of Azof—a strange region, abounding in mud-volcanoes, some extinct, others still active, which, combined with strong outflows of gas and occasional earthquakes, prove subterranean action to be only quiescent.

"The natural petroleum pits are scattered in all directions: some lie in deep valleys, others nearly nine hundred feet above the sea level. In some places the gas bubbles up through pools and lakes, which are covered with a rainbowtinted scum; in others the thick oil oozes from rock crevices or bubbles up in mud volcanoes. In some valleys there are regular terraces of a thick paste resembling asphalt, and smelling of petroleum. Rich deposits of ozokerite and flowing wells of petroleum have been partly worked, and it is noted that the oil here is of a yellowishgreen color, while that at Baku varies from very dark green to transparent lilac. These Kouban deposits are as yet quite undeveloped, but it is evident that, from their local position on the shores of the black Sea, they must soon attain to considerable importance. In all this region the character of the soil differs essentially from that of the United States; here layers of solid limestone are comparatively rare, and the general formation consists of thick layers of clay, sand, quicksand, and sea-shells, telling of a period when the whole formed the ocean bed. The methods of drilling and pumping have, of course, been adapted to suit these different conditions."

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska, January 6th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—Another year is filed away in the archives of eternity, and many of the hoped for results, like the mirage of the desert, are still awaiting a fulfillment, and we are still struggling with the constant toils of every day life. The cheerful seasons, and the disappointments, together lie slumbering, unil the judgment shall sit and we all rewarded, "according to the deeds done in the body." Our present year came stealing in upon us with a marked coolness at twenty-four below zero, but thanks to him that gives all blessings, this cold wave was not of long duration.

The south bound train on the "K. C." last Saturday afternoon, brought us a visitation in the form of Brm John Goode, and Henry and George Kemp, of the Fremont District. They spent about three days with us in holding meetings and visiting among the Saints, which ministrations were quite acceptable, so far as I have been informed.

I was glad to learn that it was Mr. Braden, that "circumstances," took from the debate; had it been the other man, long ere this, it would have been heralded in every available newspaper in the land. Sometimes we mortals murmur at the tardiness of justice; but time with its unerring exactness, proves that He who promised is true and faithful, and will fulfill his promises, both to build up, and likewise to abase. I am a firm believer that no weapon formed against the truth, can long be successful.

There are many calls for the word, but none to answer in telling the glad news of the gospel. Hoping for a favorable change soon to come,

I am in gospel covenant, ROBT. M. ELVIN.

ATLANTIC, Iowa, December 17th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith: - My husband just handed me one of our county papers, published about twelve miles from here. In it is a clipping from the St. Louis Spectator, in which it is trying to enlighten some poor deluded soul or souls, in regard to the origin of the Book of Mormon. The man (or he ought to be a man at least) is one Clark Braden, who it seems has been the one mighty, not in truth, but in telling all manner of stories in regard to the Mormon doctrine, as he calls it. He seems to know all about it-to let him tell the story. He is trying to impress the people that the Mormons at Salt Lake and the Josephites, as he calls them, are one and the same in doctrine; and says they are divided into many sects, but the principal are the polygamous Brighamites, in Utah, and the non-polygamous Josephites, scattered in various places; and says they number nearly thirty thousand. He also speaks very disparagingly of your father. He is one of those fellows who fills the bill of "I am more righteous than thou," or if he does not think himself so he would like others to think it. It is wonderful indeed, how far some will stretch the truth sometimes, in order that they may put others down. I do think such people as he is stand so straight they lean over a little; but such in this life we meet often. They would, if they dare do it, put those despised Mormons out of the way, and verily think they were doing God's service; but his day is at the present time, and he soon will run his race, unless he repents, which I hope he will. I will send the paper also, which will tell the whole story about that Spaulding Romance. I hope and pray that all the brethren in the Latter Day Saints' Church, and sisters too, will stand firm, unshaken and lift up their voice in prayer to God to be directed aright in this matter.

I am your sister in hope of eternal life,
HARRIET HUDSPETH.

JONESPORT, Maine, January 2d, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith:—That the readers of the Herald may know how we are getting along in the cause of Zion "away down East," I herein give you a short account of my labors in the field.

The fore part of the season was spent in the Massachusetts District, prior to entering upon my field of labor assigned me by General Conference. The latter part of June found me at Jonesport, where was convened the conference of the Eastern Maine District, which passed off pleasantly, Bro. Lakeman presiding. Bro. Lakeman resides on Grand Manan, and there occupies the trusted and honored position of American Consular Agent for that section. The latter day work was opened up there by Father John Landers, who met with terrible opposition, but succeeded in planting the seed of gospel truth. To-day among the most respected citizens there are found Latter Day Saints. From there the work spread through this part of the East so that may be safely called the parent stem.

I left Jonesport on a vessel, Bro. John Richardson, Captain, bound for Nova Scotia; my passage free as far as Bro. John was concerned; but old Neptune demanded and obtained from me tribute, such as seems satisfying to him, but rather disagreeable to the giver thereof. I left the vessel at Calais, Maine, after a beautiful sail up the St. Croix river, the dividing line between the United States and the British possessions, intending to take the steamer State of Maine, for St. John; but by one of those kindly providences that ofttimes befriends a messenger of the cross, I missed her, thereby avoided being shipwrecked, for she went ashore that very trip between Eastport and St. John. This changed my course, and I crossed the Bay of Fundy by another route, landing at Anapolis, Nova Scotia, where I took the train for Newport, passing through the Anapolis Valley, considered one of the most fertile portions of Nova Scotia, also a favored route of American tourists, who delight in visiting the land of the exiled Acadians, and obtain relics from the scenes of Evangeline, immortalized by Longfellow's celebrated poem. The Americans are so anxious for these relics and mementoes that they become an easy prey to the wags along the road. It is reported of one of the conductors on the railroad that he has cut into splinters more than one railroad tie, and distributed it to these unsuspecting travelers, as part of the veritable building once occupied by Evangeline and her sire. A story is told to offset this joke of an enterprising Yankee who was traveling over this road, which is noted for its oft stopping and slow rate of speed, who enquired why they stopped; he was answered by a fellow passenger that it was to drive a cow off the track. Shortly afterwards the train stopped again, when the Yankee looking up from the paper he was perusing, asked, "What, have we caught up to that cow again?"

I was welcomed at the home of Bro. J. W. Dimock by his family, Brother Dimock being away to Halifax with farm produce. The following day Bro. Burgess, who presides over the branch there, took me with his team to visit the saints. We called on the families of Brn. Burgess, Wood, Haley, and O'Brien. I was interested in visiting these pioneers of the work in this part of Nova Scotia, who dared to stem the tide of opposition that met them, when Bro. Burton and wife first labored among them.

They are a class of citizens that compare favorably with their neighbors, and are sturdily and zealously maintaining the truth. They have within the precincts of their branch two young Sabbath Schools, as well as keeping up meetings regularly. Bro. Davison, president of the district, visits them once a month for preaching. I held a few meetings in the branch; it being in the midst of haying season it was an unfavorable time

From there I went to Parrsboro, where reside Bro. J. W. Layton and wife, the only ones of our faith in the place. By the effort of Bro. Layton we were enabled to obtain a school-house on the outskirts, at a place called Lakeland, where we held several meetings with fair attendance. On Sunday August 17th, the largest crowd (said to be) ever known to gather there for such a purpose, assembled on the banks of a beautiful lake to witness the "Mormon baptism," as they called it, thinking there was going to be something extraordinary occur. Some had started a vile rumor that we "salted" and oiled them before we baptized. This had the effect of bringing out many who probably would not have otherwise come; even some who had vowed they never would go to listen to me, and said they would never enter the school-house again, because I had been allowed to preach in it, and pollute it. Previous to entering the water, I stood upon the bank and preached with as good liberty as I cared for, the Lord granting the Spirit copiously in this hour of need; after which three were buried with Christ in baptism. In the evening I preached to a full house and confirmed those who had been baptized. Bro. Layton obtained a public hall in town used as a Temperance Hall. We opened up there under a heavy pressure of prejudice and bigotry, less than half a dozen present. I continued to preach every night, my audience increasing in numbers and interest, until one evening my auditors included the Baptist Minister, Deacon, and several of his leading members. After my discourse I invited with kindliness and friendship, my clerical friend to make a few remarks if he so felt. He began by asking me if I understood Greek, Latin, or Hebrew; if not how could I understand the Scriptures, not being able to read for myself in the original, etc. After a kind of a running polemic encounter, it resulted in my inviting him to discuss, in a proper way, which was accepted. We arranged the following day for the debate. I had to give him all the odds in his favor, or in all probability he would have backed out.

I left Parrsboro for the time being to visit the branch at Delhaven. Bro. Beach obtained a place for me to preach there. When it was announced that an Elder of the Latter Day Saints was to hold services, how some did rage, and imagine a vain thing! I preached Sunday morning with but few out. In the evening quite a number came. I opened my meeting as usual, and began to preach, but had not progressed far when there came a shower of stones against the building, causing a pause in my rhetoric not usually included. After catching my breath I went on, and was having good liberty, the scare having about abated, when crash! came a stone through the window, undoubtedly aimed at me, striking the lamp on the pulpit in front of me, smashing it to atoms, scattering the glass far into the room. The oil catching fire I was immediately surrounded by the flames. With remarkable presence of mind some of the men rushed up and taking their coats smothered it out. I think I am safe in attributing the prevention of a panic with its horrors, to the provident hand of him who careth for the sparrow's fall. There were some ladies and children present; the exit from the place was down a dark stairway, and these villains had piled stove wood upon the stairs in such a way as to trip the people, and throw them headlong down the stairs, if they had rushed out in excitement, as is generally the case under such circumstances.

This of course broke up the meeting for that night. I gave notice that if I could have the hall, would preach the following night. Some remarked that they would like to hear me, but didn't like the idea of getting killed with a stone.

I couldn't blame them for if the stone had not struck the lamp it would have struck some one in the audience, probably. The next night I went to fill my appointment with feelings akin to a soldier entering battle, for I did not know what awaited me. I knew what had occurred and it was not of a character to give me much cheer. An effort had been made to prevent opening the hall, but some who had become aroused as to who should run things, the law abiding citizens or hoodlums, demanded the opening of the hall in such a manner that indicated they meant business; so it was opened. Although I was not in a joking humor on entering the hall, the aspect of my audience was ludicrous; they were gathered up in the corners and nooks, out of the way of the windows; and quite a number had collected. You can imagine my feelings as I commenced the meeting, thinking that at any moment I was liable to get a blow from a stone, for I thought that any one who would do as they had done would go farther with it. Well I preached without being molested and I appreciated it. I don't aspire for martyrdom at present. I was obliged to leave there then to attend the conference which met at South Rawdon, and which passed off pleasantly. The people of that section are quite friendly and some are near the door.

I went from there to attend my debate at Parrsboro, which occupied three nights; one eve devoted to the laying on of hands, the other two to the claims of the Book of Mormon. As Bro. H. J. Davison signified he would write concerning it, I forbear. After the debate I returned home to attend to family affairs. Am now at work again in the field, concerning which more anon. Yours in Christ,

FRANK M. SHEEHY.

LAGUNA, California, December 19th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—We have returned from our southern mission. We opened up four new places in San Diego county. Had very good liberty, and most of the time full houses. There were two baptized, and more will be; some five or six more requested baptism, but we were called away for the time, and did not return.

We preached mostly in Methodist settlements. The members were much pleased, but their elders were somewhat troubled, and preached against us, which didn't hurt us any. There are plenty of chances for preaching south of Santa Ana, where little if anything is known of our doctrine, but it is hard to get them to understand, there are so many kinds of religion, the Holiness taking the lead. They are breaking up and dividing all the other churches. Still some obey, and the work rolls on, and the end draweth nigh. The Saints here are trying to live their religion, and are blessed.

Our conference this fall was one of the best ever held on this coast. The Spirit was poured out from the time we met, till we separated. The sick were healed, devils cast out, power of tongues and prophesying manifested, and we felt indeed we were God's people. May God bless us in doing right.

A. W. THOMPSON.

CLITHERALL, Minn., January 1st, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:- The work of the Lord is prospering in this part of the Lord's vineyard. We have been blessed in many ways in the last year. Three weeks ago my wife and I visited the Silver Lake Branch, and Saturday evening I spoke to them on the temperal law, with good satisfaction; and on Sunday met with them for sacrament and testimony, and all were made to rejoice; even those who has not united with us yet, but will hereafter no doubt. Two weeks ago Brn. Nutt and Way came down here, and spoke to us several times with good liberty, and four were baptized. Then Bro. Nutt and I went up to the Silver Lake Branch and held three meetings there, and one was baptized; and then we returned home and brother Nutt spoke to us several times on the Book of Mormon. Now he has gone to Detroit, and from there he is going to Dodge county, Minnesota, to commence labor there, as there is a brother and wife there who have been writing to him to come and open up the work there for them; and so it goes. I will say since I wrote to you last December asking for an elder to be sent here, there has been over fifty baptized in this district; so you can see we have been greatly blessed, and I will say Bro. Nutt is a good faithful laborer. He is worthy of his hire, and such men as he is, that are willing to go and labor night and day for the good of the cause, the Saints ought to be willing to help with their means, so they can continue in the field.

I think the tithing law ought to be taught to the saints, so they would all understand it alike; and to get them to understand that it is part of the law of God; for all that gather unto the land of Zion have got to be tithed of all their surplus property, and after that pay one tenth of their interest annually; and by this law sanctify the land of Zion, or they shall not be counted worthy to abide there. So if we believe that revelation as I do, we can see we have to come to it some time, and the sooner the better for the advancement of the work. I don't see what Bro. Gurley was thinking about when he wrote on the tithing law a short time ago, if he believes as he wrote, for it will not do to deny that revelation for there are other ones linked with it, that we would also have to deny. He has certainly forgotten he met with the Twelve and Bishopric, and agreed on the tithing law; and their decision makes it binding on him to teach that law, as well as the rest of the Twelve, and collect tithing and send to the Bishop. I hope we all will soon see and understand alike, and be able to teach alike: and then the work will roll faster. The Twelve surely ought to understand alike and be able to teach the word of God the same.

I expect soon to go up in Becker county and try to instruct the Saints in regard to the tithing law, hoping I may do my duty as the Bishop's Agent for this district. I can say for the Saints in this part, they have done well this last year, and I hope they may continue to do well, until we are gathered home to Zion to help perform the labor there that has to be done there before many years.

This district has decided to build a church, as we have no place suitable in which to hold our conference; and the work seems to require it. We have commenced it, and already have the stone on the ground for the foundation; and sills all hewed. The building is to be twenty-six by forty feet. As they have decided to built it on my land, I will give one acre for that purpose. I think if there is a Scandinavian elder that can be spared to come up here next summer with Bro. Nutt, he could do much good by getting the work started with that class of people, as there are some who seem to be favorable already. I will close for fear of wearying you.

Your brother,

J. R. Anderson.

DETROIT, Minnesota, January 4th, 1884.

Dear Bro. Foseph:-I thought to send, a few encouraging words to you. March the 8th, 1884, Bro. Thomas Nutt came to my house, and got the branch in an organized way, and left for General Conference. June the 8th, I saw him again, at the district conference at Clitheral, where he baptized six into the kingdom, and have seen a great deal of his labor since in this part. The work has truly prospered in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Bro. Thomas has baptized, in this part, since the district conference, some sixteen; and a good many at Clitheral; and the outlook is good for more in the near future. He has not, like some of the good Elders, held a discussion with, and defeated, the poor Campbellite minister, but he convinced and baptized him-a noble and good man, it is said. In the main, Bro. Thomas has done much good for the people in this part, for which we all feel truly thankful to our Heavenly Father. Ever praying for the good of the latter-day work, and asking an interest in your prayers, I remain in the covenant of THOS. M. PARR. peace.

LITTLE BLACKFOOT, Montana, January 3d, 1885.

President W. W. Blair, Dear Brother:—I have been a silent observer for many years. I am getting stronger in the faith of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I believe that the Spirit of the good Master is leading Bro. Joseph: please give my love and respect to him. I have a desire that the spirit of truth and love may always govern this Reorganization, that we may never fall again into the darkness that we have been in. It is useless to mention the names that led astray to forbidden paths; but I feel that God is feeling after the honest and true, and that ere long the truth will prevail over land and sea triumphant.

I am not much of a hand to write, but will draw to a close. If you send any one as a representative of the latter-day work, and wish to give us a call, please notify me of his coming to Avon, as that is the nearest station. I will bring my team and do the best we can for him. We have a little school-house, and I think most all of our neighbors would attend and be glad to hear the story of the cross. With love and respect,

Yours in bonds,

R. J. JENKINS.

FENLON FALLS, Ontario, January 7th, 1885.

Brother Joseph:-I send a few words to let it be known where I am and what doing. After laboring at Cameron as long as I thought the interest of the work required my presence, and the Saints could be edified, I began to cast about for a new field or opening. Laboring as I am, with and under the directions and instructions of Bro. J. H. Lake, and having been in correspondence with him, I finally made a break for the village of Oakwood some twelve miles from Cameron; but I did not feel as if any good would come of it, and so it was; spent most of a week feeling the pulse of the town council, clerk, &c., during which time I preached them a pretty fair discourse (they being assembled); was not permitted the use of the Town Hall however; so I next tried the Trustees of the common school, and late on Saturday night, December 27th, 1884, succeeded in obtaining consent of them. On 28th, being Sunday, I arose, filled up some hundred or so dodgers; circulated them around the village during the morning, announcing a meeting in school house at 2:30 p.m. About forty or fifty came to hear; could only get school house for one service, so returned to the Saints at Cameron. The men who comprise the council being all Methodists, two of them local preachers, was the cause of my not getting the use of the public hall. Thus Methodists seem to run church and state in Oakwood.

Well, after getting back among the Saints I began to grow restless again for work, of something more to do than I was doing. Finally on Monday, January 5th, 1885, Bro. D. McIntyre drove me to this place. He hired a hall for one night, and left money enough with me to pay for five nights more; so I opened here with one of the usual Methodist receptions—two of the ministers having persuaded the people not to come and hear, stating that we do not believe in Christ, nor the virtue of his blood, and that we believe in polygamy, &c., telling how many wives Bro. Lake and I have, &c. However the crowd came and filled the hall, first with their bodies and next with their yells, which equalled bedlam, (I guess). Next night no better, although a great many, to their credit, are disgusted at such actions and are very anxious to hear. I try again to-night and so on till Friday next. What the result will be I know not. Two gentlemen came to me last night, saying a crowd was to be there to prevent my speaking, and run me out of the place, and out of the town. Being warned, but nothing daunted, I took occasion before opening the meeting to say I was warned of the mob's presence. I had no occasion to tell them, as they were busy in their way. However, I got order enough, having good lungs, to be heard, and called attention to the fact that I was a citizen of Canada, and I was going to have all my rights; showed my license, having stamp of seal; explained the use and authority of such documents; further called their attention to the fact that in our country any one coming into a religious meeting and disturbing were liable to a fine, not exceeding twenty-five dollars, upon conviction. &c: cooled them down so far as to be alive this morning, and no bones broken. I feel satisfied there are a few honest ones here and Satan is mad for fear he loses them. The Presbyterian Reverend has followed suit in warning his flock not to come and hear, but still they come, all the same.

The precise order of my reception here is varied slightly from the usual reception in other places; but the general outlines and spirit are the same, particularly so far as relates to the Reverend gentlemen being at the bottom of affairs. Several of their own hearers are willing to testify they did hear a Reverend Oaks say we practised or preached or believed in polygamy. He has lost a good many of his members at Cameron, and feels bad; and I feel glad, and others sad.

Saints are well, and are trying to do pretty well, except a few gossips, and some evil surmisers; but on the whole the branch is in good condition. I feel well; hope to be blessed; need your prayers.

I remain your brother in gospel bonds, J. A. McIntosh.

Bro. Foseph Smith:—The debate at this place has ended, and the results are yet undeveloped; however we are permitted to come to some conclusions by comparing with past observations, and our conclusions are that good will result. Our enemy was well supplied with the only material that will tan Mormon hides. It will be observed that to remove the scurf, the solution must be strong and bitter, and be (as in this case) composed of two thirds lye, (lie) and the rest assertion. This is conceded by our enemy to be the most successful method, and, indeed, he had a whole valise filled, (as he said).

After the first proposition was discussed we observed a little band of Saints returning home, singing, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet," and indeed, all the way through the debate the tendency was to confirm the Saints in their faith. We were, however, disappointed, from the fact that we thought there was some argument on their side of the question. You can read all of Mr. Braden's argument against Joseph Smith's being a prophet, in his nineteenth speech against the Book of Mormon, (see Braden-Kelley Debate). The rest of his argument was read from the Braden-Kelley book. The Saints are satisfied with Bro. J. W. Gillen's effort. He successfully met every thing that was ever brought against the cause; for Mr. Braden was in possession of all that can be said against the work; and we can say Mr. Braden was true to his clients; and he nobly served his master whom he serves; and inasmuch as he engaged in the discussion for victory, and we for truth, it would not be fair for me to decide, for I would surely decide against him. In conclusion, I must say he used the most filthy and obscene language I ever heard from any man in public. It was of such a character that a great many (not Saints) told me it was no place for a decent woman. On the other hand the same parties told me that Bro. Gillen conducted himself like a gentleman and a Christian, and they held him in esteem for his conduct. Yours in hope,

WILL. H. KELLEY.

REED CITY, Michigan, December 29th, 1884.

Bro. Foseph Smith: The Saints of the Hersey Branch are still alive in the work of the latter days, and are blessed of the Lord in their efforts to serve him. This year, on November 1st, we met for a day of thanksgiving, and praise to the Great Giver of all good, for our temporal and spiritual prosperity. About one o'clock, a thanksgiving dinner was ready. Such a display has not been often seen by us. It showed that the heavenly Father had blessed us in temporal things by a bountiful year. After about one hundred had partaken of the bounties of this life, the young Saints spent a short time in singing and playing some beautiful pieces. This we enjoyed very much, indeed. Then a prayer and testimony meeting was held, in which a profitable and edifying time was had. The Saints enjoyed the gifts of the blessed Redeemer, and were warned of the perplexi ies coming upon the nations, and the trials through which the Saints would "come up, with their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb." We separated, glad that we had met.

May the Lord bless and guide his people, is the prayer of your brother in gospel bonds,

Joseph Emmett.

Newport, Nova Scotia, January 1st, 1885.

Dear Brother Joseph:-I remember reading in the Herald of February 16th, 1884, a prediction stating that the adversary was standing by to overthrow the work in Nova Scotia just as soon as Elder Burton left; this I believe to have been true, and perhaps you think that he accomplished the overthrow. We know that throughout the United States the people think that the Nova Scotians have a name to live, but are dead in matter of worldly enterprise; but we hope the Saints will not think this about us, with regard to spiritual matters. We are still trying to hold fast to the "rod of iron," and are striving together for the faith of the gospel. I have received the Inspired Translation of the Bible; can truly say that it has given us much confidence and strength in the latter-day work. I have also Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants; prize them equally as the word of God, knowing that while we stick close to the teachings of these books we will be, as Paul says, walking after the Spirit.

I would like to notify the Saints through the Herald that I have received a blank book from Bishop Blakeslee, in which to keep a just and true account of all moneys received as tithings or freewill offerings, and will endeavor in truth and righteousness to do my duty; and hope that each and every Saint in Nova Scotia will consider that this matter belongs to them.

Yours in Christ,

J. W. DIMOCK.

Bro. Foseph:—The Herald is all the preacher we have, as we are living far from any branch, or any of the Saints, and an Elder seldom gets estray far enough to visit us. Enemies to the cause surround us; but for the Herald and Hope we should be lonely indeed. Yet I feel to rejoice in this glorious gospel. I know it is of God, as I have experienced miraculous power many a time in healing this frail body, both by anointing, and when none but God was near. It makes my soul rejoice that God hears the prayers of poor, feeble mortals, and to bless. I ask a request of you, to intercede for my husband, Bro. E. R. Hillman, who is afflicted with a very bad cold, settled on his lungs, so he is almost speechless.

Ever praying for the spread of the gospel, your sister in the gospel,

EMILY C. HILLMAN.

ORANGE, Nebraska.

December 14th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:-Please say to the numerous officers and members of the church, (through the Herald) that any of them traveling through this part of the country will find a welcome and rest at our home. We live one mile north west of Orange, Franklin county. I am trying to do right, and serve the Lord as best I can. I am all alone here; do not know that there is another Latter Day Saint in the county. My wife does not belong to the church, but is a great lover of the truth. I have not heard a gospel sermon since in the summer of 1881; that was by Bro. R. M. Elvin, in Gage county, Nebraska, and I shall not soon forget it. I could get a place for an elder to preach, if I could get one to come and preach here.

Yours for the truth,

B. GASTON.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan. 9th.-A messenger who left Gakdul Sunday reached Korti to-day with dispatches for Gen. Wolseley. He fell in with armed natives at some of the wells en route, who treated him in a friendly manner. The country for eighty miles out for Korti is open, but beyond that point is dangerous from the caravans of the Mahdi. These caravans frequently crossed the road. A native guide, the messenger further stated, had been sent from Gakdul to purchase produce of the natives, but he returned without anything, and besides reported that he had been badly treated. British scouts captured four natives who had left Metamneh Jan. 1st with goods for Merawi. These men report that a detachment of Gen. Gordon's troops is at Shendy. The Mahdi's force at Metamneh is 2,000 strong. Maj. Kitchener with a few men was scouting in the direction of Abuhalfa, a few miles this side of Gakdul. He captured a small party of natives with camels. He went in pursuit of a convoy of seventy camels and fifty natives on their way to the Mahdi. The natives at first showed fight, but dispersed uttering loud cries, when the English charged them. Nine camels laden with corn were captured.

Eleven persons drank coffee at the house of Mr. Van Fossen of east Liverpool, O., night before last. Mr. Van Fossen died at midnight and the others are not expected to live. A package of rat-poison was found at the bottom of the coffee-pot.

Jan. 10th.—Briere de l'Isle telegraphs that 3,200 reinforcements have arrived in Tonquin to join his army. Everything is in readiness to march upon Lang-Sou.

Gen. Wolseley telegraphs to the British War Office that a messenger sent by him reached Khartoum Dec. 28th and saw Gen. Gordon. The messenger has just returned to the camp at Korti. Gen. Gordon was well and confident.

Notification has been sent out by the Bank of England to banking houses throughout the country that there are at present in circulation perfect counterfeits of its notes of from $\pounds 5$ to $\pounds 500$. The notes are supposed to be the work of American experts.

France contemplates an attack upon Pekin. The Minister of Marine says in an official communication made to the chiefs of his department that if the expedition at present contemplated starts for China the fleet will be placed under the control of M. Lewal, the Minister of War.

The last sheets of Mr. Henry M. Stanley's new book on the Congo have now passed the proofreaders, and the book will be issued within a week or two by Messrs. Sampson, Low, Marston, Searle & Rivington. The book is sure to make a sensation in the present state of public feeling about Egyptian affairs. Mr. Stanley, in the clear, frank, blunt style of the better kind of American reportorial writing, tells the British taxpayers some very unpalatable facts about England's operations in Africa, and especially about affairs in the Upper Nile. He says in effect that Gen. Fordon is not and has not been in any danger at Khartoum; that he has three available avenues of escape, and that he has men enaugh to cope with any force likely to attempt to surround him. As to the desponding messages which have been made public purporting to have come from the beleaguered commander at Khartoum, Mr. Stanlev believes that most of them were forgeries, and that the rest were the product of biliousness, of which he says his friend Gen. Gordon has long been a victim.

The London police have received information that simultaneous attempts are about to be made by dynamiters to blow up the Holborn viaduct and the Mansion House railway stations. Extra precautions are being taken at both points. All luggage is scrutinized with great care.

The Colonial Government of New Zealand has asked permission of the Home Government to annex the Island of Samoa to its jurisdiction. It holds a steamer in readiness to proceed to Samoa pending the reply of Lord Derby, Secretary of State for the Colonies. This reply will probably be unfavorable to annexation.

The announcement of the desire of New Zealand to annex Samoa has caused a sensation—at Berlin. The newspapers consider it certain that Germany and America will vigorously protest against the annexation.

Gen. Lewal, French Secretary of War, has decided upon taking more active measures in Madagascar. Reinforcements will shortly be dispatched. The Madagascar Committee of the Chamber of Deputies has prepared a report adverse to the extension of offensive operations in Madagascar.

Sir Edward Malet, British Ambassador at Berlin, has been instructed to propose to Bismarck that an agreement be made to maintain the neutrality of the Samoan Islands.

Alfonso left Granada, Spain this morning. He took breakfast at Loja and then drove to Alhama where he will pass the night under canvas. Slight shocks were felt today at Alhama and Alinunecar.

To such proportions has the diseased-milk nuisance grown in Milwaukee that twenty-five milkmen have been summoned by the Health Commission to answer to complaints.

Today's advices from the camp of the Oklahoma boomers say that a conflict between the United States troops under Gen. Hatch and the colonists, commanded by Capt. W. S. Couch, may be expected within a few days. The colonists are encamped on Stillwater, at a point admirably adapted for defensive operations. They number nearly 400 men, and are armed with rifles, shotguns, and pistols, but have no artillery. They are well supplied with horses and wagons. The men are being drilled, and the intention to resist removal is evident.

The Columbus & Hocking Coal & Iron Company discovered this morning that Mine No. 5, at Straitsville, was on fire, having been fired the night previous. The mine has not been in operation for some time, though it is the largest in the country, having a capacity of about 125 cars per day. An entrance was gained to the mine by removing fifteen feet of earth and blocks which had been used in inclosing the old entrance. No trouble has resulted, as the perpetrators were not discovered in the act of firing the mine. The reports are that some people who endeavored to go near the mine to-night were fired upon, but no person was hurt. This is one of the mines which was fired at another place some two months ago. The Coal & Iron Company are so enraged over the affair that they announce a determination to put themselves on the offensive rather than occupy the position of defensive in the fight which has to be continued. Signal lights are reported as seen to-night in the direction of Haydenville, but no particulars are

Jan. 12.—It is said that China and Japan have agreed to submit the Corean question to the mediation of England, Germany, and America.

It is reported that one of the finest vessels of the Hudson Bay Company, the Prince of Wales, with a cargo of furs valued at nearly $500,000, has been lost.

A serious revolt is reported from Cambodia in Gado-China, headed by the brother of the King. The insurgents have captured a number of French posts and have murdered the garrisons. A general massacre is feared. French troops have been ordered to proceed at once to Cambodia.

A general strike of the engineers on the Belt-Line of the Western Indiana Railroad took place at noon to-day. The trouble arises from the alleged overwork and under-pay of the employes. gers and 59,500 cabin passengers landed in New York City.

Bavaria has enacted a law forbidding the marriage of couples who do not possess sufficient means to maintain themselves, or who, during the previous three years, have received help from the public funds, or who have not paid their quota of taxes, or regarding whom there is reason to suspect that trouble will result to the household from the want of sobriety, economy, or love of work.

Jan. 13.—Vast tracts of land in Italy are inundated by the overflow of the River Tiber. The stream has risen forty feet and Rome is threatened.

Another earthquake shock was felt in and about Alhama, Spain. At Nerja an encampment of refugees outside the town was burned.

There is a growing agitation among the Pan-Slavists of Russia against M. Gicholas de Glers, the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs. It is an outcome of the long-standing warfare between the German and the Slav element in the Russian Empire. The opposers of Minister deGlers claim that he is not loyal to Slavonic principles and traditions, and seek to depose and disgrace him. His latest offense in the eyes of the Pan-Slavists is his opposition to the scheme for extending Russia's Empire in the East by the annexation of Corea.

France has chartered two more steamers for use in transporting reinforcements to Tonquin.

The Chinese Legation declare that German officers are being enrolled for the Chinese army.

Striking employes of the Oliver Chilled-Plow Works at South Bend, Ind., created a riot. One man was probably fatally injured. Another was made to run the gauntlet, and was beaten insensible with clubs. A dozen more were severely hurt, and several thousand dollars' worth of property was destroyed.

A proclamation has been issued by the Governor of New Jersey conveying a warning that pleura-pneumonia exists among the cattle in that State, and ordering all diseased cattle to be quarrantined

Jan. 14.—The floods in Italy are receding. King Humbert and the Pope will contribute to aid the sufferers.

Police-Commissioner Rumpff was killed night before last night at Frankfort-on-the-Main in front of his own house. It is believed that the murder was the work of Anarchists.

Prime Minister Ferry said yesterday in the French Chamber of Deputies that the Government had decided on the immediate and complete occupation of Tonquin as the only means to settle the Chinese difficulty.

At a meeting of the Western Iron Manufacturers' Protective Alliance at Pittsburg yesterday a considerable reduction in wages was determined upon. It is not known as yet what action will be taken by the employes.

A deficit of $5,000,000 is reported in the Prussian budget for 1885. In the Reichstag yesterday Bismarck said that in order to meet the demands of the farmers it would be necessary to treble the duty of wheat and to double the tariff on rye.

Earthquake tremblings were felt yesterday at Torrox, Canillas, Almunecar, and Algarrobo. The storm in the Southern provinces still continues, and the rivers are greatly swollen. The suffering of the people who have been rendered homeless by the corthquakes is intense. According to the official record, the number of persons killed by the earthquakes in Granada was 695, and the number of injured 1,480.

The Budget Committee of the Reichstag yesterday voted in favor of a credit of 150,000 marks ($35,700) for explorations in Central Africa. The money was asked for at the beginning of the season by Bismarck. The appropriation was considered in the Reichstag Friday, when a motion was made to reduce it to 100,000 marks. The motion did not prevail, but the subject was referred again to the Budget Committee by a small majority. The Geographical Society is preparing to send out an expedition to explore the left bank of the river Congo. The expedition starts in July next.

Ädvices received from Melbourne state that the popular opinion in Australia continues greatly agitated in view of the recent German annexation of New Guinea and adjacent islands. Massmeetings to protest against the foreign annexation in the Pacific are every-day occurrences. Shire and Borough Councils likewise take occasion to record their protest, and the press of the country, without a dissenting voice, is engaged day after eay in a various and emphatic denunciation of all foreign attempts to gain a foothold in Australia. It is certain the Australians are thoroughly aroused against the present policy of the British Colonial Office.

Doubters of the progress in strength and tactics of the Salvation Army should have been in Exert Hall, London, Eng., last evening, where the crowd rivaled that at the Drury Lane pantomime. Gen. Booth was in the chair as a sort of Whittington, and his son, who usually goes with him and may be called his cat, stood behind him, An uproar of applause that must have been heard in the stalls of the Naudeville hard by, where "Saints and Sinners" were also on the boards, greeted on his rising this tall, thin, sallow, full-bearded, and Cromwellian-haired enthusiast, who with his shrill clarionet voice announced that this was a farewell meeting to thirty officers, chiefly women, who were to be dispatched as recruiting sergeants of the Salvation Army to America, New Zealand, and India. "But more," said the General, unconsciously falling into Shakspeare, "remains behind. I have under organization an army corpse in every British village, who will barrack in vehicular caravans and be guarded at night by sentries." One of the recent converts to salvation, a celebrated cricketer, stood near the General on the platform. Referring to him the General said: "He goes to India to guard the salvation wickets against the swift bowling of the devil." This was received with an almost dervish howl, which was supposed to be applause. The audience, keeping time with the well known weird music, or with the songs, seemed animated with the fanatic zeal truly Oriental in looks and gestures.

The Health Department of New York City has commenced a crusade in earnest against adulterated food of ail kinds, and immense quantities have been seized and destroyed. Thousands of pounds of candy prepared with poisonous colors have been confiscated, and over 10,000 pounds of fruits and preserves, sold in tin cans or pails, where the acid had attacked and poisoned the fruit, have also been destroyed. Dr. Edson of the department is also turning his attention to coffee, tea, pepper, and spices, which are not only adulterated, but poisoned by the use of such substances as lead, copper, arsenic, chrome yellow, Prussian blue, and other minerals. The field for Dr. Edson's investigations indeed is a wide one. It covers almost every article of food, drink, and medicine which is sold in the market. If he succeeds even to a remote degree in reducing the amount of the poison which is sold under the guise of food he will prove himself a public benefactor, and the people of New York may well rise up and call him blessed.

The bill which is to be introduced in Congress for the establishment of the cattle-trail from Texas to the British Possessions provides for the appointment of three Commissioners, who are to lay out a trail not exceeding six miles in width, with grazing-grounds at intervals. The trail is to be open all the year, and provisions are made for quarantine in case of necessity.

A battle is reported imminent between the Oklahoma boomers intrenched at Stillwater, Indian Territory, and the military force sent against them.

Jan. 15.—Five thousand unemployed persons paraded through the streets of Birmingham, England. Disorder is feared.

An emerald weighing over a pound, the largest ever discovered, has been found in the Muzo emerald mines at Boyaca, United States of Colombia.

An Anarchist plot has been unearthed at Lyons, France, which contemplated the seizure by night of arms and the immediate proclamation of a revolution.

A party of army recruits made a ferocious attack upon the Jewish residents at Vilkomer, Russia. The police were powerless, but the firemen quelled the riot.

In recent speeches made at Birmingham and elsewhere in England, the Rt.-Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, President of the Board of Trade, and a leading Cabinet officer, has outdone the Radicals in attacking land monopoly and other "aristocratic privileges." The Troy press denounces these utterances as invitations to Communists and Anarchists to establish their propaganda. Bitter complaints have been made to Mr. Gladstone about the matter.

A public meeting was held to-day at Queenstown, Eng., to promote the organization called the "House League." Resolutions were adopted condemning the exorbitant rents asked for houses and shops, and inviting tradesmen to join the league and resist the payment of what were considered unjust rents.

The Berlin correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette says Germany rejected the proposals regarding Egyptian finances recently submitted to the Powers by England and accepted counterproposals submitted by France. The latter embody the financial scheme England distinctly rejected at the Egyptian Conference in London last spring.

The Paris Temps says that the French counterproposals in regard to Egypt are very conciliatory. France requires England to guarantee an Egyptian loan of £9,000,000, instead of £5,000,000 and thus cover the whole of the expenditure. France rejects the British proposals for the payment of the interest on the existing debt, and suggests instead that a special tax be imposed on coupons. The reply of France to the proposals regarding Egyptian finances submitted to the Powers by England was presented to Earl Granville to-day. The Ambassadors of Germany, Austria, and Russia have been instructed to present an analogous reply.

Admiral Courbet, in command of the French fleet in China, began to-day the landing of troops for the occupation of the mines of Kelung. Le Faris states that Admiral Courbet has captured the mines of Kelung.

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 10th.—Fire damaged the stock of Henry Rogers, wholesale fancy goods dealer in New York, $75,000. Loss by fire at Fort Wayne, Ind., $3,500. Galena, Ill., $47,000. Hagerstown, Md., $7,000.

Six persons were badly injured by a railroad accident near Jacksonville, Florida.

Jan. 12th.—The entire town of Pinos Allos, Mexico, has been bestroyed by fire. Hundreds of people are homeless. Fire destroyed over $200,000 worth of property at Yonkers, N. Y. Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $13,500. Fall River, Mass., $200,000.

Terrible havoc, both to life and property, has been reported from the recent typhoon in Japan, At a place and especially on the west coast. called Kurashiki 500 houses were destroyed and 1,800 persons killed. At Tamashima the sea-walls were carried away, 100 lives lost, and 430 houses blown down; while at Imabari, Matsuyama, and Iyo 151 houses were wrecked, 112 junks sunk, and 170 persons drowned.

The Province of Malaga, in Spain, was swept by a hurricane yesterday which completed the ruin which the earthquakes had wrought. A camp in which fugitives from the Town of Periana had taken refuge was destroyed.

A number of vessels and many lives have been lost in the great storm which has swept the British coast.

Jan. 14th.—A wing of the Solvay Process Soda-Ash Works at Syracuse, N. Y., blew up yesterday and buried eight men in the debris. Two or three will probably die, and the rest are badly hurt. The loss is $75,000.

Twenty-eight men were buried alive by an explosion of fire-damp in the great coal-mine at Lievin au Pas de Calais, France. All were killed.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

A new and important discovery of borax has just been made near San Bernardino, Cal. It is a very large ledge, and assays 54 per cent of pure borate of lime. The discovery is likely to interfere with the monopoly hitherlo maintained by a wealthy San Francisco firm, which has succeeded in controling the supply of borax.

Stix Brothers, Kernan & Co., cloak manufacturers of New York, failed yesterday. The liabilities are $160,000, which, it is hoped, will be covered by the assets.

There were 448 failures in the United States last week, an increase of eighty-two over the previous week.

On the London Stock Exchange the American market is stronger, and some shares have shown a decided hardening, the improvement being attributed to the better prospects of the iron trade and the prospective movement of large quantities of grain to the West. The closing prices to-day were barely up to the average for the week, but the slight decline is principally due to heavy sales for realization purposes. St. Paul and the Vanderbilt stocks are firm, but Readings are depressed, the latter having fallen 11/4 per cent to-day. Other coal stocks are steady on the strength of private dispatches, which indicate that an early settlement of the output question is expected.

The liabilities of the sugar-house of Tischinkel which failed a few days ago, are ascertained to be 6,160,000 florins; assets, 8,697,000 florins. The liabilities of the firm of Hecter of Bucharist are 2,500,000 florins. The assets are of a doubtful character. The liabilities of the sugar firm of Strauss, of Madgburg are 8,000,000 marks; assets, 11,000,000 marks.

Late advices from California report that considerably more rain has fallen than at even date last year, and that farmers can now cultivate their land and sow the seed without restraint, as there is abundant moisture in the soil to make a crop. The natural effect of the copious rains is to cause the farmers to part with wheat more freely at current low prices, having no fear now of a dry season

According to the annual estimate made by Director Burchard of the United States Mint the total amount of gold coin in circulation in the United States is $563,213,573. The total amount of silver coin is $264,106,699. The total net increase of silver and gold coin is estimated at $13,296,764. The amount of gold used in the arts is placed at $4,875,000.

Clearing-house receipts at the principal cities of the United States last week show a decrease, compared with the corresponding week of 1883, of 24.9 per cent. The decrease in New York is 33 per cent. In Chicago the increase is 17.9 per cent.

Dealers and speculators in grain believe that the recent advance in wheat will be maintained, and many are buying for a further rise. One London bull speculator, is said to have cleared $72,000 this week in this market.

Rouse, West & Co., a great cotton broking firm of Liverpool, Eng., have failed. Their liabilities on the Cotton Exchange are 30,000 bales.

Advices from Buenos Ayres state that the Government is seeking to overcome the financial crisis by decreeing a forced currency for two years in favor of the National bank.

Oliver Brothers & Phillips, the great iron firm of Pittsburg, Pa., have failed. Their liabilities are estimated at between $3,000,000 and $5,000,-000. The firm employs 4,000.

Chester Darby, proprietor of a steam flouringmill at Cortland, N. Y., has failed, with $117,000 liabilities, covered by the assets. J. B. Gregg & Son of Binghamton, N. Y., boot and shoe manufacturers, have assigned. Their liabilities are estimated at from $120,000 to $140,000.

John J. Cisco & Son, the New York bankers, have failed with $750,000 liabilities.

Tobacco factories at Lynchburg, Va, are starting up again after several months of idleness. Over 2,000 colored laborers will be given employ-

"One Baptism" in German—translated and published by the Committee appointed by the General Conference. To be had also of any of the Committee, Brn. T. W. A. Reidel, Temme Hendricks or Casper Hendricks, Scewarts-ville, DeKalb Co., Missouri.

CHANGES IN THE ENGLISH LAN-GUAGE.

FEW scholars, even, are aware of the great changes through which the English language has passed in successive centuries. Following are specimens of the Lord's Prayer, as used in various periods in English history:

A. D. 1158-Fader ur in heune, haleweide beith thi neune, cumin thi keneriche, thi wille beoth idon in heune and in errhe. The euryeu dawe bried, gif ous thilk dawe. And vorzif uer detters as vi yorsifen ure dettoures. And lead us nought into temptation, but dely vor eous of evil. Amen.

A. D. 1300.-Fadir ure in hhavene, Halewyd be thi name, thi kingdom come, thi wille be don as in hevene and errthe-Our uchre days bred give us to daye. And forgive oure dettes as we forgive oure dettoures. And lead us nor in temptation, bote delyveor us of yvil. Amen.

A. D. 1370.—Oure fadir that art in heunes hallowid be thi name, thi kingdom come to, be in thi wille done in erthe as in heune, geve to us this day our breed oure other substance forgene to us oure dettis as we forgauen to oure dettouris, lede us not into tepttation; but delyuer us yvel. Amen.

A. D. 1524.—O oure father which art in heven, hallowed be thy name. Let thy kingdom come. Thy wyoll be fulfilled as well in earth as it is in heven. Give us this day oure dayly brede. And forgive us our treaspaces even as we forgive oure treaspacers. And lead us not into temptation, but delyver us from vell. For thyne is the kingdome and the power and the glorye forever. Amen.

A. D. 1581.—Our father which art in heaven, sanctified by thy name. Let thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heauen, in earth also. Gives us to-day our seperstantial bread. And forgives us our dettes as we forgive our detters. And lead us not into temptation. But delivere us from evil. Amen.

A. D. 1611.—Our father which art in heauen, hallowed by thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our dayley bread. And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors. And lede us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thyne is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever. Amen.

MARRYING FOR MONEY.

A LATE author very truthfully says: "Gold can not buy happiness, and the parents who compel their daughters to marry for station or money commit a grievous sin against humanity and God. And a woman who marries a churl for his wealth will find that she has made a terrible bargain-that all the glitterings of heartless grandeur are phosphorescent glitterings of heartwretchedness; that her life will be one of gilded misery, and her old age will be like a crag on the bleak side of a desert mountain, where cold moonbeams sometimes glitter, but no birds sing, but wild storms howl and hoarse thunders roar, and through the sweeping storms shall be heard the stern voice of the great God, saying, "Your riches are corrupted, your garments are moth-eaten, your gold and silver are cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and eat your flesh as if it were fire."

It is not the station we fill which is of importance, so much as the light we send forth from us ! No Credit for moneys received on subscription will appear on the Colored Address Label of the Herald and Hope for this issue, as no changes have been made, except in case of persons desiring a change in P.O. address.

Selected Poetry.

FAITH AND HOPE.

O don't be sorrowful, darling!
Now don't be sorrowful, pray;
For, taking the year together my dear,
There isn't more night than day.
Its rainy weather, my loved one;
Time's wheels they heavily run;
But taking the year together, my dear,
There isn't more cloud than sun.

We're old folks now, companion—
our heads they are growing gray;
But taking the year all round, my dear.
You always will find the May.
We've had our May, my darling,
And our roses, long ago.
And the time of the year is come, my dear,
For the long, dark night, and the snow.

But God is God, my faithful,
Of night as well as of day;
And we feel and know that we can go
Wherever he leads the way.
Ay, God of the night, my darling!
Of the night of death so grim,
And the gate that from life leads out, good wife,
Is the gate that leads to him.

OUR OWN INSIGNIFICANCE,

How small a speck is a man amidst the vast multitudes which throng life's pathway! Even, should he succeed in gaining riches and honor, and be all that is within the province of human possibilities; yet, when he takes into consideration the myriads of the race "gone on before" into the great beyond, and for a moment surveys the remaining host—his brothers in the great battle of life, then, should he cast his eyes heavenward and view the starry worlds within infinite space, methinks, if he never before had considered the matter he would then stand amazed at his own insignificance. The tendency of such contemplation is in the right direction; for it lessens the influence of pride, and exerts a corrective power in enabling us to view ourselves as we are, and so perhaps, to judge more righteously upon the merit and demerit, of those who surround us.

The telescope brings to our view almost countless worlds, while we occupy but one. The great "Apostle of the Gentiles," affirms the existence of "the worlds," and declares that they "were framed by the word of God." And, as if but emphasising our insignificance, although an illimitable space seems as if literally dotted and bespangled with planets and orbs resplendent in glory, our existence, by the very nature of things, is confined to this "mundane sphere."

It would seem that we were as but in the vestibule of the Almighty's creation. And, sometimes, in view of the vastness of creation, the idea would steal upon us that we were too small to deserve the least attention from the Governor of the universe. And yet, how consoling and joyous it must be to realize the scope and fulness of our glorious privilege and inheritance, as the children of the Highest.

How fraught with comfort is the doctrine of the fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of man. Even the details in the make-up of the human life, all appear before "His all-searching eye." He views our lives with that tender solicitude alone possible unto the Infinite God. The Savior declares that the "hair" of our "heads" were all "numbered," and that a "sparrow" would not fall unnoticed. When we think of these things, then it is, that we are able to but faintly appreciate the matchless grace and beauty,—the loving condescension of the Lord our God.

How weak, wayward and erring! How slow to learn—how seemingly hemmed in by the conditions in which we live and exist! Yet, strange as it must appear to the "natural man," whom Paul said "knoweth not the things of God," the finite can approach the Infinite at the "throne of grace," and be filled unto overflowing.

"Prayer is a creature's strength, his very breath and being; prayer is the slender nerve that moveth the muscles of Omnipotence." "Prayer—the sublimest strains that reach the Majesty on high." But righteousness or right doing—at least purity of motive, must abide in that soul which would commune with the living God.

Personally considered, we are but as a grain of sand upon the sea-shore; or, as a dew-drop in the great ocean of existence. Our physical life is "At best but a brief delight. A sun scarce brightening ere it sinks into night."

The microscope, however, comes to the rescue, and under its auspicious influence, we begin to think ourselves of immense importance. This wonderful restorer revives our withered and drooping spirits; and now, we would fain look at ourselves with all admiration, and begin to enquire of what manner of being we are. It reveals the hithertounknown myriads of lives. The animalcular existence is clearly demonstrated. We discern the tiny beings which roam to and fro in a single drop of water. Think of the almost countless number of lives which the microscope discovers in a glass of water. Our very bodies are but a compound of tiny existences, which indicate according to their various orders and species, normal and abnormal conditions, health and disease. How very important -stupendously great, a man must appear, when brought into comparison with an animalcule! And yet, how insignificant he really is, when he but considers his weakness, his dependency, his ignorance! The wisest man knows but little, while much that passes for knowledge is either pretence or conjecture; but ofttimes, the greater the sham, the greater the reputation. The little that is known seems as naught when compared with the vastness of the unknown. And, notwithstanding how prone to self-adulation, self-esteem and self-conceit! Turn our eyes where we may, and we can not but notice human insignificance attempting to foist itself into prominence. "Ever and anon," and the aspiring mediocre presents himself in an effort to obtain position and honor; which, however, is not to be wondered at, when it is known that "Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works."

We are reminded of the toad of legendary note, which attempted to assume the gigantic proportions of the ox. Of course the failure was unavoidable. I have sometimes thought how ludicrous the poor toad must have appeared in his vent of rage against the ox, and his fellows who had not contributed toward his success. This poor toad, like some men found in almost every part of the land, committed the folly of overestimating himself, and underestimating all others. His idea, no doubt, was, that the ox was but an inflated toad! Today the idea of many, poor, weak, and selfish aspirants is, that the qualified official is but an accident, and that inflation is a necessity towards success. I have seen men, of whom, in all justice it might be said, that with a little encouragement (so great was their self-conceit) they would fain contest with the Almighty, for the sovereignty of the universe! It ts eminently right and proper, that in our personal, social and general relations in life, we should see to it, that self and selfishness be repressed; and that the generous and selfdenying, the noble of heart, be given preference in stations of honor and responsibility; for such persons will ever prove themsleves of superior ability in the discharge of the duties which may so be imposed upon them. How opposite to the teachings of the prophets and pilgrims, and the utterances of the great Nazarene, is the aspiring and proud spirit. True piety, in its influence upon the heart touched with the love of God, serves now, as in all the past ages, to abase self and to humiliate; to elevate by fostering those elements of character which beautify, adorn, and enrich the human life. And, only when we are brought face to face with a realizing sense of our own nothingness before God, will we ever attain unto the excellency and beauty of the true Christian character.

"It requires a constant labor all His precepts to obey;" but "To him that believeth, all things are possible." The spirit is to be subdued, and so brought under divine rule and guidance. Do not understand me as saying that individuality and personality will cease. But under the beneficent reign of righteousness, the evil will be eliminated and repressed, and the good developed—the man will be perfected.

The decree has gone forth that we must "become as a little child," of a teachable and submissive spirit, if we would enjoy the promises of God. And it must be adjudged as reasonable, and in accord with the dealings of God, that the summit of happiness, both here and hereafter, can only be reached in the way appointed, and by the "heirs of the kingdom." 'Tis pleasant to feel assured that obedience to the divine commands conduces to our joy and peace. To this end were they ordained. And in keeping with this idea, it is well also to understand that all disobedience, must in the order of things bring pain and anguish. Believing that self-importance does not and can not form any part of the Saint's duty; and strong in the conviction that humility is vital to the Christian religion, and that righteousness alone can exalt a people, I subscribe myself a wellwisher for Zion's cause,

THE ISSUE.

In the consideration of the issues growing out of the revelations contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, it would be well, I think, for all parties to remember that they were not accepted in a formal manner by the "old church" as law until the appointing of a committee September 24th, 1834, empowered, according to the history, to arrange the "items" of faith, and which as stated were to "be taken from the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the revelations which have been given to the church-up to this date, or shall be until said arrangements are made." See Mill. Star, v. 15, p. 183. The book as then arranged was approved by "General Assembly" of church at Kirtland, Ohio, August 17th, 1835, ibid p. 299; and thus the revelations selected by the committee from those given up to that date were accepted. In June, 12th and 13th, 1852, at a conference held by the Reorganization at Beloit, Wisconsin, the following resolu-tion was adopted: "Resolved, That the whole law of the church of Jesus Christ, is contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants." Again, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, in the Autumn of 1878, (I believe) was adopted a resolution endorsing all these books as a rule and guide, including Inspired Translation, all the revelations this present Joseph had received, or should thereafter receive, as a rule and guide to our faith, &c.

These facts go to show, that without an act on the part of the body in the first instance those revelations would never have become a law to it, but having been by legal enactment thus made law, in August 1835, that organization became bound by that enactment; hence, were compelled to accept subsequent revelations received by Joseph Smith, as a rule and guide of life to them, as made and provided for by their accepted law, and seen in sec. 19, par. 2 of the Doctrine and Covenants, late edition.

That they held the right to change their position by which these revelations might have been eliminated, or their obligation to accept additional, revoked, is quite clear, and self evident, from the fact that by vote only, did that organization become subject to that condition, and by a vote could have amended, or repealed any former act.

The fathers of the Reorganization acting in harmony with this inalienable right, declared that in those three books was contained the "whole law of the church." Now, as to how much or how little of it was contained in each book, they did not say, yet it is quite evident, however, from their teachings, that everything contained in those books was not accepted nor intended as law; but that they did recognize Christ Jesus as the Head of the church; and being led by the Spirit of God, their interest beyond all question was to define the law and accept that which should harmonize with the teachings and doings of Christ as recorded of him.

That this resolution was not explicit enough to satisfy some, may be seen I think by reference to the one passed by General Conference, held at Council Bluffs, in 1878, as stated above. This resolution proposed to accept everything which the president might say in the name of the Lord, (see minutes of that conference); and being quite different in its operation from the one adopted in June, 1852, created a great deal of uneasiness and dissatisfaction; so much so, that at the General Conference held the next autumn, at Galland's Grove, Iowa, was presented a resolution from Decatur District, asking the church to define herself upon the vexing questions growing out of (very largely) the resolution adopted at Council Bluffs, Iowa, the year previous. The matter was referred to the First Presidency, and their report upon the same was unanimously adopted by the body; and, while it is true that that report does say, "that it is destructive to the safety of the church, and inconsistent with the calling and dignity of the ministry, to decry, disclaim, or publicly to teach contrary to the revelations in said Book of Covenants, or by arraigning them in such way that the faith of the people of the church is weakened, and they distressed," it at the same time also says, "We are further of the opinion, that the Elders should confine their teachings to such doctrines and tenets, church articles and practices, a knowledge of which is necessary to obedience and salvation; and that in all questions upon which there is much controversy, and upon which the church has not clearly declared, and which are not unmistakably essential to salvation, the elders should refrain from teaching. The question now arises, naturally enough, to every reader, What is "essential." Is belief in the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants essential to life and salvation, as now affirmed by many of the Elders? I will answer this interrogation in the language of the resolution itself, towit: "We are further of the opinion, that it is not the intent and meaning of the said resolution, referring to the one passed at Council Bluffs, and referred to above to make a belief in the revelations in the Book of Covenants, or the abstract doctrines possibly contained in it, a test of reception into and fellowship in the church; but that the things therein contained relating to the doctrines, rules of procedure and practice in the church, should govern the ministry and elders as representatives of the church."

You may, kind reader, still be in doubt, and ask whether the church has expressed herself definitely upon "doctrines" and the faith essential to "salvation," life, &c., as contained in the books, to which I answer, that she has, as found in the language of the same resolution, viz.: "It is not intended, nor indeed practicable, to bind, or proscribe the liberty of conscience, whereby violence is done to the honesty and integrity of the people, by prescribing dogmas and tenets other than the plain provisions of the gospel, as affirmed in the New Testament, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, as set forth in the Epitome of Faith and Doctrine." This act then as late as 1879, places the body on record as affirming the principles and "doctrines" of the gospel contained in the three books as "set forth in the Epitome of Faith and Doctrine"; but does not affirm, nor obligate its representatives to affirm, all that is contained in or taught in either book. Then I take it, for an individual to decry and teach against those revelations publicly, would be reprehensible according to the resolution quoted; and for an individual to teach publicly the doctrinces contained in those revelations not enumerated in the Epitome, and declare it to be the faith, and that representatives must teach these or "step down and out," is equally as reprehensible, being also in opposition to the resolution referred to.

Now reader, you may ask, Which of these parties has again evoked the discussion of these matters? I think by turning to the files of your Herald, you will readily find out who has been re-agitating the various questions that had been agitating the church for a few years previous to and up to 1879, when the resolution at Galland's Grove was adopted by way of settlement; for all will admit, I think, that "Gathering," "Tithing" as taught in revelation of 1838, and "Inspiration," as questions, had deeply moved the body, and disturbed its peace; and in bringing to trial the President of the Quorum of Twelve, one of the fathers of the Reorganization, for supposed heretical teachings upon these points, seems to me, that anybody with a memory conversant with the history ought to recollect these things: and for the past year, more especially, has the Herald teemed with articles advocating the "Gathering," &c., insisting repeatedly, that the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants were not only true and faithful, and that "all should be fulfilled," but that no one should represent the church unless they so taught and believed-such at least being the spirit of these writings. Now, this kind of talk has become irksome and tiresome, until the feeling has obtained and very properly too, that until these old vexing questions are disposed of, that no great progress can be accomplished.

I have tried to act in harmony with the resolution or platform adopted at Galland's Grove, in 1879; and in harmony with that was the work performed at Washington City; and I invite special attention to the paper presented to Secretary of State, a copy of which was presented to General Conference at Kirtland, Ohio, in the Spring of 1883, and endorsed by unanimous vote. Please examine the position there taken relating to the faith of the church, and what it must necessarily remain, and just see if it is or is not in harmony with the position of the church taken at Galland's Grove. Then ask yourself, by what rules of right reasoning or common courtesy, can belief or disbelief in the revelations contained in Doctrine and Covenants be made a test of fellowship or ministerial standing, until the church by vote so declares, repealing the resolution passed at Galland's Grove. That the right to so declare, and make belief in those revelations a test of fellowship in the church, belongs to the body, I readily admit; and that the church has the right to eliminate every revelation in the Doctrine and Covenants from the faith, is equally true; as man is subject only to that to which he yields himself; and it strikes me, that one of the greatest safeguards to liberty of conscience is not to profess to believe too much.

In support of the doctrines contained in revelations in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, it is averred by some that they are "cardinal points of the gospel," and for that reason ought to be accepted, endorsed and taught by all as the faith; and yet those brethren ought to know, that these very doctrines referred to, are now and have been in dispute for some years; and that the act of conference in 1879, as noticed above, relieved all members from the necessity of believing in those disputed doctrines, the disability being entirely removed by affirming as its faith, the faith as expressed in the "Epitome of Faith and Doctrine." Again, if those "abstract doctrines," (so they appear to me), are part and parcel of the gospel of Christ, part of the will of God' why in the name of consistency don't the advocates thereof appeal to the teachings of Christ to sustain their position; but instead of doing that, they appeal to the revelations themselves almost invariably. Now, it seems quite evident, (self evident to every Christian), that Christ gave to the world the will of God, the gospel of peace in its fulness, in its entirety, complete; that will is God's plan of saving the entire race; that will is the precious gospel of Christ; and by which we hope to be sanctified by virtue of obedience thereto. If this view be correct, it follows necessarily, that unless it can be proven that the doctrines contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and now affirmed by some as part and parcel of the gospel, unless this can be proved, that they are a part thereof, (taking Christ and his immediate representatives as a standard), then in that case, we not only have the sacred right, each and every member, to reject said doctrines as an essential part of the faith; but it becomes our bounden duty so to do; for if Christ did not reveal the will of God in its fulness, we certainly have no assurance that any man since that day has or will; and if we must continually, year by year, expect and receive new doctrines and beliefs by revelation after revelation, as part and parcel of that will, "cardinal points of the gospel," which makes them essential to life and salvation, then in that case we would "ever be learning, but never coming to a knowledge of the truth;" and certainly we would be "standing in jeopardy every hour," not knowing what moment the oracle might give us a new thing. However, to all who do believe as stated above, allow me to ask you, and insist, that you never again find fault with the various churches because their organizations and teachings are not after the pattern, as given by Christ our Lord; for if you have the right to deviate from the primitive pattern, the will, so also have they; for God is no respect-er of persons. Paul's anathema in Gal. 1:8, 9, should be remembered here. "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed, &c. I call special attention to the fact, that the apostle's curse not only reached man, but angels and those, too, who came "from heaven,"-provided they taught "any other" way of life then that he had taught. The Book of Mormon, too, containing "the fulness of the gospel," agreeing with the New Testament as to the gospel of Christ, its simplicity and unchangeableness, sums up the case still more tersely than Paul, by saying, "and whose shall declare more or less than this, and establish it for my doctrine, (referring to Christ's doctrine), the same cometh of evil, and is not built upon my rock; but he buildeth upon a sandy foundation, and the gates of hell standeth wide open to receive such, when the floods come and the winds beat upon them. Therefore go forth unto this people, and declare the words I have spoken, unto the ends of tho earth."—Book Nephi 5: 9. With this testimony agrees the testimony in Matt. 28: 19, 20; towit, "Teach all nations,"-"teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." When the advocates of the local and abstract doctrines taught in the Doctrine and Covenants shall prove that they are part and parcel of those "commands" which Christ gave, then, and not till then, ought they to expect the church to declare, or the members thereof to accept them as the faith of the Church; but, if they shall fail to so demonstrate by proof, it seems to me that consistency then would indicate to them the necessity of withdrawing their statements, or better still, let the church the whole church have opportunity, and vote upon these various questions by which something decisive may be reached. I had thought that the church had spoken in 1879, as noted; but as many who voted for that resolution then, seem dissatisfied now, I am willing for my part to vote again; but suggest that some course be pursued that will subsequently be regarded as a quietus; and in my judgment that can only be reached by the voice of the entire church, so far as practicable. By such course we will give to each member the benefit of a decision and will show to the world just what our faith is. That such a decision should take place, seems to be the inevitable.

It is claimed that the act of last General Conference in passing certain resolutions, reopens the case, at least sufficiently to make discussion upon these questions tolerable. This thought may have originated in the fact that shortly after conference, articles in the Herald appeared, treating occurred, as I think it will help each one to feel and understand the necessity of knowing what they teach, and what they propose to teach as Christianity: as we are informed that "the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." Whatever course others may pursue, I am determined by the grace of God to try and build upon the foundation which Christ laid, in such way and manner that I shall neither be ashamed nor afraid to meet the Master in the day of judgment, according to the knowledge he has given me of his work; and while I must build in this manner in order to be honest with God and myself, I am quite willing and anxious that all others should do likewise, teach what or how they may. I think I have learned that the gospel is not owned by any one man, or set of men; but in every nation, and in all ages, whosoever works righteousness is accepted of God, whether their goodness be much or little. It is accepted just so far as it extends, and no farther. We may be partial and favor some in our judgments; but not so with God, he being no respecter of persons; for whatever an individual develops into, so is he; that which he sows, will he also reap; and to develop the Divine nature we must love truth, because it is truth, regardless of any man, because divine truth will make us

I have in this paper purposely avoided the direct discussion of the doctrines themselves as referred to in the Doctrine and Covenants, but will do so at some future time; for it being affirmed that belief therein is essential, which affirmation necessarily assumes the imperative, it now becomes and behooves every one to examine himself, and see whether he be in the faith Yours for truth, or not. ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 3.

BY S. F. W.

Overlying this limestone in the vicinity of Lamoni is the drift formation, which reaches an extreme depth, in places, of two hundred feet. It consists, in great part, of clay, with boulders and gravel and sand incorporated. The upper part of it forms the subsoil. The portion near the surface is usually of a yellowish cast; deeper down it has a bluish color, and is very tough and

The drift deposit was made by glaciers. The cause of the glacial epoch is not fully agreed upon. It occurred at the close of the tertiary age. It is asserted that at that time this part of the globe was elevated much above the present level. This is inferred from the fact that the river beds were then much deeper; but this supposed cause is not general enough to account for effects on both continents. Another supposed cause is that the axis of the earth has an oscillatory motion, by which the northern hemisphere was turned away from the sun more than the southern, during a period of ten thousand five hundred years. In connection with this there is another upon the issues. I for one am glad it has | that the eccentricity of the earth's orbit was formerly greater than now, and the earth passed through regions remote from the sun while its north pole was inclined most from the sun. Another theory is that the waters of the ocean were formerly suspended above the earth in the form of belts and rings like those of Saturn; that the water from one of these rings settled upon the polar regions in the form of snow, and thus caused an avalanche of ice to be pushed slowly southward over half the northern hemisphere. This ice sheet strewed the hills of New Hampshire with boulders and had power to scoop out, or greatly modify, the great lakes. A lobe of the glacier pushed south-west through Lake Superior and covered Minnesota, Iowa, and part of Missouri. In all the more northern regions it was doubtless a level waste of ice, carrying with it, and grinding beneath it, rocks and soil, in inconceivably vast quantities. Before that time, the prairie lands of Iowa had been the bottom of a shallow sea, the margin of the Atlantic; this sea was filled up with ice, and the debris, and commuted particles brought down by the ice. These particles, set free by the melting of the glazier, settled in water in irregular masses, forming the till or boulder clay. This clay was the mud originally formed beneath the glacier. How it was distributed so evenly and generally, and over so great areas, without being stratified, is not easily explained; but it must necessarily have been held in solution in and precipitated from water in order to be homogeneous, and fine grained and generally distributed. It is stratified, in one sense, it is itself a stratum. It probably settled suddenly in a still, fresh-water sea, at the time of the breaking up of the glacial ice. The conclusive argument that the deposit was made in water is that the surface of the land—the tops of the hills, is now a dead level, or plain, slightly sloping south. The ice-sheet extended over the whole state except the north-east corner, and was 400 feet thick at the northern boundary. The west flank lay for a long time upon the watershed between the Des Moines and the Missouri; this accounts for the boulders of that latitude, but not for the clay farther south. The southern deposits of the loess were deposited by a broad river, like the Amazon, in what is now the Missouri valley; but there is no explanation offered of the drift midway between the Mississippi and Missouri. No stream has flowed there, no peat bog nor marsh nor loess obtained there. The Atlantic was there made fresh by inflowing ice, and lifeless from cold. slope of the surface southward and westward accords with the supposition that it was the shoal water bed or beach of the Atlantic ocean. The drift deposit extending into Missouri, while the principal moraines are mid way in Iowa, shows that the deposit extended farther than the glacier. This more southern deposit was made by floating ice. The eye detects these facts; for although southern Iowa is hilly, all the hills and ridges have the same altitude, showing that they once formed an unbroken plain, and proving that the hollows and water courses have been formed simply by erosion.

Taking this view, that southern Iowa is an upheaved bed of the sea, all that was necessary to constitute it a prairie was the growth of grass. Grass sprang from the clay and formed the soil, just as we see soil forming by the side of the railroads now. This theory of the origin of prairies blocks out very much that has been written of their origin from peat bogs, &c.

The absence of trees on the high prairies of Iowa results from wind, fire, climatic extremes, and shallowness of soil; but above and independent of these, a want of time. The processes now going on, of forming wind breaks, suppression of fires, &c., result in abundant forest growth.

It remains to say that the material of the drift deposits came from the regions of metamorphic rocks northward. The gravel and boulders are water-worn masses of sienite, porphyry, granite, amygdaloid and red sandstone.

The scratched, grooved surfaces of the underlying limestone, the polished surfaces of others, and the size of the boulders prove that ice bergs and glaciers like those of the present day, loaded with the mineral detritus of the far northern lands are the only know agencies of the drift.

ETHNOLOGICAL.

The first tribes of Central Europe, finding themselves exposed to storms, cold, and wild beasts, and being ignorant of architecture and the use of tools, naturally and unavoidably sought shelter in the numerous caves of that country. It is almost certain, from these considerations, that the caves of Belgium, Kent's hole in England, and Moustier and Cromognon in France, contain relics of the earliest race that ever inhabited that latitude and locality. The early tribes did not migrate from central to northern Europe until they had learned to polish their implements; from which it may be inferred that that section was then too cold, or was covered by glaciers. The southern part of Europe may have been occupied earlier than the central, and the caves would not show their presence in a warm country.

The time of the first appearance of man in Europe is variously estimated. By one school at 7000 or 8000 years ago, by another 75,000. The longer chronology is based upon the theory of the effects on climate of the former great eccentricity of the earth's orbit; and according to it mankind had been living a good while in Europe at the time of the Champlain epoch, which next succeeds the great cold of the glacial age, and was a warm moist equitable period 73,500 years ago. Following the Champlain, half the time of a revolution of the apsides, was the riendeer period, 63,500 years ago? The Champlain era, it is said, is the time when and before which, the rude flint implements were deposited in vast quantities in the drift of the Somme and several other vallies. The fact that these flints are found in the south of France, and not in Sweden and Denmark, is taken as proof that Denmark was too cold at that time; but surely there was a time when Denmark and Sweden were habitable; why not rude implements there? The true answer is that the flints were made by natural pressure, and are confined to a limited zone, and geological horizon, both in Europe and America. The fact that no polished implements are found in the drift and are found almost every where else, is proof only that natural agencies could not make them, and there were no men there. The fact that no human bones are found with the old implements, and animal bones are found, is proof that no human bones then existed. questionable shape of the old glacial flints as pictured in books, proves that men did not make them, could not use them, and had no use for them if they could. The fact that they are found in vast quantities, proves that there could not have been men enough to use them; and if men enough to use them, the wet, cold, treeless earth, as then described, could not have supported animals enough to have supported so many men; for they are described as flesh eaters and canibals. Late reports say that bones have been found in the drift, it may be so, and genuine implements may have been found; but there is glacial drift, post glacial, and drift of various ages both glacial and post glacial, and intelligent revision of the subject is necessary. It is said the paleolithic race disappeared suddenly and it is guessed they came to America and are the Esqui-

Notwithstanding these difficulties, there are doubtless genuine human relics in very ancient drift; and it is certain that the cavedwellers were very ancient, and that the most ancient of them were paleolithic, and were contemporary with the reindeer, the musk ox, the hairy mammoth and wooly rhinoceros. These animals attest that the climate was rigorous. The rivers have lowered their beds by slow erosion two hundred feet below the caves and banks where the relics were covered by them. No pottery is found with the rude implements. This only proves that it was not as suitable to their condition as baskets, like those used by intelligent tribes of the present day, in which meat is boiled by throwing hot stones into the water in the baskets. The cave men had their boiling stones. Their tools and implements were much more perfect and various than those flints found in the drift, which is against the genuineness of the latter. Some authors say they were low and stout like the Esquimaux, that their incisors came together like a trap, and were worn by tearing flesh; and by this they resemble the Esquimaux; and also that their shins were flat, and feet long. Other authors say the Cromognon man was large, stout and large brained. The cave-dwellers let refuse accumulate around them, which is proof they were snow bound. They sketched reindeer and hairy elephants, on horn, bone, and ivory. Their flint scrapers and bone awls show that they used skins for clothing. They had no domestic animals. Their chief food was the reindeer, and it is possible they followed him to Lapland and Finland; and may have been at first driven down to the latitude of the caves by the advance of glaciers. Unpolished flint implements are found all over the world, but their age is not determined.

The cave relics are found in deluvium which whether right or not, some authorities attribute to submergence in the sea; but prolonged submergence is disproved by the absence of marine relics. On the other hand a deluge of a year's duration would have filled them with muddy or roily water, the sediment from which would have formed the deluvial clay and sandy loam common to them all. It would also have left the seams and pores of the rock full of water, which gradually oozing out would have formed the stalagmite every where superimposed upon the alluvium. The caves of Brazil, examined by Dr. Lund, seem to be in every way like those of Europe, and prove primitive man widely dispersed as if the lands were

The dripping that formed a foot or less of stalagmite, would have made the caves uninhabitable. There being no stalagmites with the bones proves that the caves were dry when occupied by man. What then could have made them dripping wet afterward but an overflow of water? The cessation of this dripping when a layer of stalagmite was formed proves that its cause was temporary.

The problem of the flood has not been solved. It is attributed to natural causes by each of two parties who hold very opposing theories of those causes. The one party holds as we have seen that the eccentricity of the earths orbit produced the snow and glaciers that were piled up high, and by pressure burst in the crust of the earth in Western Asia. The other that a ring of vapor, like one of Saturn's, came down in avalanches of snow at the poles. and debacles of rain over all the earth till it was literally and wholly submerged. Both parties think there was a clearing up shower, and the bow appeared afterward because the air had never been clear enough for it to appear before, and as the old conditions can never recur, it is a covenant sign.

In making all calaclysms a result of natural and general law, the only way to make a deluge a special providence would be to have God make the ring purposely and the glacier purposely, and have them prepared millions of years beforehand, for a foreseen emergency. Theories are useful to make facts interesting and more easily remembered. I therefore add: all revolving bodies are greatly bulged at the equator and revolve around on axis which is their shortest diameter. The accumulation of snow and ice at the poles, resulting from all the causes already mentioned, continued until the diameter of the earth at the polar axis was greater than that at other points; and therefore the axis was shifted, and the earth began to revolve around the line of its true shortest diameter. This diverted the high waters of the equatorial regions from their place, and they swept over the more northern lands, causing the deluge. The ice was suddenly melted, and then the world swung back to its proper inclination.

Returning to California, we resume the story of paleolithic man. The Sacramento valley was a pliocene sea six hundred feet above the level of the ocean. It was formed by the upheaval of the coast range in the cretaceous period. This sea covered a part of the great gold field of central California, but not the old river beds system in their higher altitudes. They seem to have skirted the crest of the Sierras (fed by glaciers) and redistributed the gravel worn from the quartz ledges of the meta-morphic strata. They were steep, swift mountain streams, else the gravel would not be so clear and clean. Their beds still show a greatly inclined descent. The bottoms of the channels, too, are striated, as if the ice had forced the boulders over them in mass. The streams were larger than the present system of mountain streams. They followed or crossed what are now the main crests of the Sierras in Sierra county, and all the main ridges running out from that crest; and before settling into their deepest beds, they left benches of gravel and old beds on the higher levels, just as nearly all streams have done. These benches or outlying deposits, did not get covered with lava, and were the original "hill diggings" worked by the hydraulic system. Many of them when worked led to the main channels, which were deeper and capped with basalt, and forming the ridges above described.

Further on in their courses southward and westward, and down their inclined way, they divided out, and reached a lower level, where the temperature was lower, and where animals abounded, and where human being dwelt. It is in that part of their courses the relics of man and the mighty animals are found in profusion.

There is no philosophical reason why man should not have lived upon the earth as soon as monkeys and the gigantic mammals. The conditions of life were as suitable for him as for them. The fishes came when the sea was cool enough, the trees when soil was formed. The coal when carbon filled the air, and the earth was marshy. The great mammals came when the air was purified, and the earth clothed with vegetation. Their flesh was useless except as man's food. The great law of adaptation-organism and environment—necessitates that man should come to the feast, and begin the work given him, to subdue the earth and have domin-

The California charnel house is said to be pliocene; but the implements are neolithic and so various and artistic, as to throw doubt upon not only pliocene implements, but glacial and champlain implements as well. Affidavits can not settle such a case as the calavarous skull, even though true; and is impossible that a collar bone was found in the blue lead where it is one thousand feet deep; it is incredible, at least, to those familiar with the formation; and the many well attested discoveries of mammoth and man in the secondary washings, as Oroville, Bidwell's Bar, and etc., even at great depth, is not conclusive of high antiquity. But the well established cases of human and extinct relics under Table Mountain is staggering, even if it is not a pliocene formation. It possibly is post glacial, but post glacial, where water course have worn so deep, is evidently old enough to put old theories into confusion. It is useless to try to whittle down the mountain or the facts.

The presence of the extinct animal with man in Europe and America, proves that man in both countries belongs to the same period, and that the human race was very long ago, numerous and widely distributed and a local flood could not have drowned them all.

The Danish peat-bogs contain the three ages of man, showing his march from savagery to semi-civilization. With the rude stone was the extinct pine, and the extinct bird that lived upon its leaves. Above these were the extinct oak and the bronze implements; and above and last, the beach tree and iron of historic times. The Swiss lake dwellings tell a similar story with much minutia. The shell heaps of Denmark contain skulls, small and round, with prominent ridges over the eyes; were like the Laplanders. They were very ancient reaching back to the stone age of the bogs and caves. Shellheaps all over the world are ancient but indefinite and barbarous. The relics of the deltas of the Nile and the Mississippi are very ancient, but indefinite. The same might be said of Slieman's discoveries at Troy. Slieman found barbarous relics below those of civilization, but the barbarians may have been offshoots of civilized populations elsewhere; and though they endured long and progressed in art, they were superceded suddenly by more civilized peoples who in turn were also displaced by people better armed or more determined, or more numerous; just as animals succeeded each other in the geological ages. Layers of human monuments succeed each other, as the rocks below them, with their enclosed fossils, succeed each the former; the animals by displacement however, and the human sometime by improvement.

Of the animals associate with primitive man, the reindeer occupies the same relation to him now it did at first; it and he, probably having followed the retreating ice. The musk ox survives in a changed latitude. The mammoth and mastodon of Europe were overwhelmed by flood or died from unexplainable cause, after the time that man lived in the caves. The mammoth of America died out in Mexico within traditional times. The mastodon began life in the Miocene age and survived in America until a recent period. It disappeared in Europe, like the mammoth, at an early period. It might be argued from these statements that the causes that destroyed these animals were not universal. The elephant existed in Chili before the Andes were upraised. Later it was contemporaneous with the mastodon and man in America. The horse and camel were cotemporaries of man in California. With these exceptions not a single animal, bird, reptile, fish or plant was common to the Old and New World. The animal and vegetable kingdoms were created where found. During the Pliocene, elephants existed in Africa, Europe, China and Australia. With the remains of man have been found those of the primigenius, the migalonyx, miglodon, eriptodon; and in the Brazil caves, the sceledo thereum, glyptodon and chlamydotherium.

THE SAME CAUSE PRODUCES THE SAME EFFECT.

WHEN the Lord sent Elijah, Jeremiah, or any of the prophets, the people held them in doubt, or opposed and persecuted them; yet these same men or people had unbounded faith in, and devotion to Noah, Moses, and in short all the prophets who lived before their own day. And so again after these holy prophets had delivered their messages and sealed them with their own blood, the following generations would awake to the fact that they were God's servants. Then they could not do enough to praise and honor them. "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous; and say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets."—Matt. 23: 29, 30.

These prophets had been put to death by their fathers; but now when the event had proved beyond a doubt that they were sent of God, these hypocritical timeservers were loud in their praises, and eager to honor them. But notice, there was now no risk, no sacrifice, in doing this. They flattered themselves that if they had lived in the days of these martyrs they would have believed them and suffered with them. But these very men turned right around and killed the son of the living God. They had strong faith in all God's servants and their works in the past; but when it came to their own time, they did just as all had done before them, they took the popular side, the easy side, where there was no sacrifice nor persecution. Their faith was wholly in things of the past for which others had suffered and died, but they were blind to the all important work of God in their own time. This they did not and would not see. They thought that their faith in the work of God in the past would save them. As to this Jesus, they did not know whence he was; and the baptism of John, they could not tell whether it was from heaven or of man; and for an angel to visit Joseph Smith or any other person in this age of the world's history is an utter impossibility; and for any one to make such a claim would be an imposition and a fraud. But we all believe the apostles, Moses, and all the old prophets, and that is enough; it has saved our fathers, and it is good enough for us. Here is where men deceive themselves. A man may believe all the works of God in the past, but if he rejects the special work for his own time, he will be rejected by our Lord Jesus Christ. Faith in present truth, present revelation and prophecy; a faith which will lead a man to obey it, to give his life for it, and to aid it with his means and influence.—That is a living faith, a faith that will save a man and gain him a crown of everlasting life in the celestial kingdom.

What is the use of faith! It is to lead a man to work. See James 2. Faith that does not lead a man to work is dead. God calls on men to have faith, because they have a great work to do. In what does he require them to have faith? In the work he has to be done in their day; for in this they can assist, not in some work of the past, which others have done, and which does not need their help or sympathy now. The present truth, the present work, and faith in the present work, which leads men to engage in and support the present work—this is what has always been pleasing to God. This is living faith. A dead church and formal professors

A dead church and formal professors always have great faith in God's works of the past, but only contempt and persecution for his works of the present. Reader, be careful; all your talk and fuss about faith in Christ and what he did and suffered in the past will avail you nothing if you reject his work for the present time. Give obedience to his laws, obey his commandments, and be baptized into his kingdom; live the life of the righteous, and gain a crown of glory.

ANCIENT POTTERY.

A. M. Quivey showed us, this week, some pieces of ancient pottery, which he recently found on the Stillwater, near the foot of the mountains. Their material consists of a fine sand and gravel on the inside, the outside being coated with a species of fire-clay, found, in connection with limestone in that section of the country. They are evidently portions of vessels used to contain water or other liquid. They exhibit a fair degree of skill in their manufacture, and are evidently the handiwork of some prehistoric race, who inhabited this country before the advent of the present race of Indians. None of the Crows, or other tribes of Indians in this latitude, possess the art of making pottery, and Mr. Quivey informs us that the fragments in question are the first traces of ancient pottery that have been found in northern latitudes on the eastern slope of the Rockies. The Crows have a vague tradition of a superior race that inhabited this country ages ago, and possessed many of the arts of the white man and leading archæologists have arrived at a similar conclusion. The place where this pottery was found was a rocky promontory, accessible from one side only, and had evidently been used as a stronghold by this remote race. A sample of the pottery has been added to the Post's cabinet, and is worthy of inspection by those interested in such matters.

[The relics found by Mr. Quivey can not but prove interesting to students of history; but we must dissent from the opinion that "the fragments in question are the first traces of ancient pottery that have been found in northern latitudes, on the Eastern slope of the Rockies. Unless ex-superintendent of the Yellowstone Park, Colonel Norris, is unreliable, he found several fragments of ancient pottery in the stone mounds on the upper Yellowstone, which he forwarded to the Smithsonian Institute at Washington. Mr. J. V. Bogert, also, has in his cabinet of curiosities almost a complete vessel, of a quart capacity, which was found several years ago on the upper Yellowstone; and Sy. Mounts has in his cabinet a gallon jar complete in all respects, except that when found it was fractured on one side. This was found on the West Gallatin, seventyfive miles from Bozeman. We do not vouch for the claim that either one or both vessels are genuine pottery, although they certainly have that apperance, but some hold to the opinion that both vessels have been carved out of a species of soap stone. In any event the vessels referred to were doubtless constructed centuries ago, and they bear evidence of skilled workmanship.—Avant Courier, Bozeman, Mont.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

Conference met at Columhus, Nebraska, December 27th and 28th, 1884, at 3 p. m. Bro. Geo. W. Galley president, and Chas. Brindley secretary pro tem. The weather being severe adjourned to meet on Sunday 10 a. m.

Sunday, 28th.—The committees oppointed to report on the legality of the disorganizing of Deer Creek Branch and organizing the Burnett Branch, reported that having thoroughly examined into the matter in controversy, they find the proceedings all irregular and illegal, and recommend that the action of the last session of conference of this district held at Clearwater, September 27th and 28th, 1884, be set aside. Report received.

Resolved, That the Deer Creek Branch be recognized by this conference as an organized branch, and that the Burnett Branch has no existence.

Columbus Branch report was read and referred back for correction; after which it was accepted. No reports from Deer Creek, Cedar Creek, Clearwater and Glen Alpine Branches.

Elders Geo. W. Galley, H. J. Hudson, Charles Brindley reported in person; Chas. Thrush per C. Brindley; Levi Gamet and George S. Hyde by letter. Teacher James Warner in person.

Bro. Levi Gamet offered his resignation as President of the district. Resolved, That it be accepted, and Bro. Geo. S. Hyde be his successor for the the ensuing three months.

Motion that the thanks of this conference be extended to Bro. L. Gamet for his past services, and also our prayers that the way may be opened to resume the office—for which he is pre-eminently adapted—as president of the Central Nebraska District.

In the afternoon Bro. Hudson spoke to the Saints, followed by Bro. Geo. W. Galley, who administered the sacrament in testimony meeting.

Moved that we sustain Bro. George S. Hyde as president and Bro. D. H. White as secretary of this district.

Resolved, That we sustain Joseph Smith, with his Counselors, and all the quorums of the Reorganized Church in all righteousness.

Moved that the next session of this conference be held at Clearwater Branch on the 28th and 29th of March, 1885, at 10 a.m. Adjourned.

DIED.

ALLEN.—Near Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, January 12th, 1885, Mrs. Sarah Allen. Was born in Greene county, Pennsylvania, May 8th, 1799; aged at the time of her death, 85 years, 8 months and 26 days. The deceased was married at the age of sixteen, and removed with her husband to Knox county, Ohio, where she raised a family of eight children, five of them having survived her. Two daughters and one son in Ohio, one son in Kansas, and one in Decatur county, Iowa, with whom she has been living for the past ten years. She has lived a widow for a period of twenty-nine years, her husband having died in 1854. She united with the Christian Church in early life, and has remained a faithful member of the same to the time of her death. In her daily walk through life, she always manifested the goodness of heart, and kindness of disposition which are requisite in the Christian character. Funeral sermon at the house of her son, January 13th, by Elder J. W. Gillen, assisted by Elder Henry C.

PARR.—At Wingham, Huron county, Ontario, October 9th, 1884, Sr. Charlotte Z. Parr. She was born January 10th, 1819. At 15 years of age she heard the gospel, as taught by the first Elders sent to Canada by Joseph the Prophet, and accepted it under Elder A. Leverton, in January 27th, 1880; lived true to the covenant, and died in the faith of the latter-day work. Her last words were to not allow any but the Elders to preach her funeral sermon.

PRICE.—Near Fanning, Kansas, January 7th, 1885, Sr. Elizabeth Price, aged 38 years. Born. 1846; was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1867, by Bro. J. W. Gillen, in Malad, Idaho; and has ever been a devoted follower of Christ, and a kind and loving mother. She leaves a husband and nine children to mourn her loss. Funeral conducted by Bro. William Gurwell, and Bro. Charles Herzing.

PAGE.—At Buffalo, Scott county, Iowa, December 26th, 1884, at five o'clock a. m., Sr. Celia C. Page. Her illness was brief, but great fortitude, an unreserved resignation, and undaunted courage, were the pleasing characteristics of this weary, wayworn child of God. She united with the church the 26th of March, 1863, Bro. T. W. Smith administering the rite of the "household of faith." The place and time of her birth was Litchfield, Maine, January 29th, 1808. Those that knew her best loved her most. Her living and dying testimony will echo in the hearts of her children, with sweet pathetic sadness, and cause the heart to vibrate and thrill with filial love. The funeral services were largely attended on Sunday, December 28th, at the Methodist Church. Elder Jerome Ruby, the river pilot, had included the deceased in his household, hence Pauline, the wife and daughter is weeping, but buoyed with hope. We spoke on the certainty of death, the nature of the judgment, and the power and glory of the first resurrection.

HOMER.—At her home, at Galland's Grove, Iowa, October 15th, 1884, Sr. Eulia Homer, aged 17 years, 6 months, 11 days. Funeral service by Eli Clothier, assisted by John Hawley. This was the young sister that was sick at the Reunion Meeting, last fall. We left the camp ground as soon as convenient. On Monday 13th, traveled slowly all day, and arrived home at Galland's Grove about midnight. She appeared to be as well all day while traveling, as she had been for several days before in the tent. We thought it would be better to take her home that night, than to stop by the way, and lift her in and out of the wagon, as we were satisfied there would soon be a change. A physician was sent for to satisfy some of her relatives; he pronounced the disease typhoid fever. She died at 10 o'clock on Wed-JAMES PEASALL. nesday night.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Holmes J. Davison, writing from Lockhartville, Nova Scotia, January 14th, says:

"High toned, pious bigotry seems to be the great barrier. If there are any spare Elders who understand dealing with that kind of an enemy, they need not want for an opportunity for usefulness in this country."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Expositor, our California newspaper colleague and co-worker in the gospel, was laid on our table in due course of mail; and we take our editorial cap off and make our visitor our best bow of welcome. The Expositor is published at No. 911 Broadway, Oakland. Its business office is at 1801 Polk street, San Francisco. Board of Management is composed of H.P. Brown, Editor, to whom communications and contributions for publication may be directed, whose address is 619 Nineteenth street, Oakland; Thomas J. Andrews, 436 Brannon street, San Francisco; Geo. S. Lincoln, 1801 Polk street, San Francisco; Richard Ferris, 630 Chestnut street, Oakland; and Albert Haws, 711 Gastro street, Oakland. All subscriptions, orders for the Expositor and donations for its publication should be addressed to G. S. Lincoln, No. 1801 Polk street, San Francisco. The traveling ministry, district and branch presidents, Bishop's Agents and the sisters are requested to solicit subscribers. See Bro. Brown's request elsewhere.

Bro. Eri B. Mullin writes from Georgeville, Missouri, January 9th, in good spirits and to good purpose. He has lately visited the Waconda Branch, where he found considerable backwardness among the members, and but poor zeal to hold meetings. The year has been very prosperous to him, and he proposes to help the work to the best of his ability. He writes of some one living in a branch of the Church who prophesied that the Saints of that branch would be under condemnation if they did not "go to and build a house to worship in," but who did not aid the building of the house, of which he prophesied. Of course Bro. Mullin mentions no names; and hence the man referred to represents only a type, and this type is found among nearly all organized branches of the Saints; men who believe and predict that disaster will follow if certain things are not done, but who never attempt to do, or help to do the things upon which safety rests. Bro. Mullin draws the wise conclusion that he who works, is safer than he who theorizes only.

Sr. Elizabeth A. Childs, Obi, Allegheny county, New York, is anxiously waiting for a minister for the truth to visit the place. She writes that they can have the use of a "nice new school-house" for preaching. Can Bro. W. H. Kelley arrange to call there; she thinks he promised to do so.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert returned home on the 22d, in rather improved health. He and Bro. Stebbins had a hard task at Bevier, but succeeded in helping the Saints to a better condition of things it is to be hoped.

Bro. E. N. Webster, of Boston, Massachusetts, has been interviewed by Miss Dickenson, the great, great grand-daughter of Rev. Solomon Spaulding, in regard to our faith and work. Miss Dickenson is expecting to publish a work on Mormonism, and wishes of course to get the Reorganization into it in some shape. Brother Webster says, "let them write, the truth remains just the same." The theory assumed by Miss Dickenson is that "the Mormons bought the Spaulding romance of Hurlbut and destroyed it." "What next?" says Bro. Webster.

Bro. P. M. Bradley writes a happy greeting to the Herald for 1885, from Webb City, Missouri, wishing it a long and useful life in doing good.

Bro. W. W. McLeod, Cormorant, Minnesota, writes that Bro. Thomas Nutt has done an excellent work in the mission he undertook in Minnesota, and rejoices that he was among them who were made partakers of the gospel by his ministry. He wrote January 12th.

Brethren Samuel Brown and Walter Cowles were at Tilbury Center, Ontario, December 24th last, preaching the word.

BUSINESS MEETINGS.

THESE are a necessity to the existence of every branch. How they shall be organized and carried on is not specifically stated in the law. But under the clause "Men shall of their ownselves bring to pass much righteousness" there is ample room.

It follows that one of the conditions upon which all business meetings are to be conducted is the preservation of righteousness. This is and should be the very first one considered, and the one kept constantly in view. The second condition is that such meetings should be provided for, organized and held for the good, the absolute good of the whole body of the church;
howbeit the good of the local congregation is most in interest, and may be first taken under advisement. We may perhaps give the idea best in answer to a few questions (hypothetical of course).

Should meetings for the transaction of business for the branch and church be held in every branch?

Yes.

Should these meetings be held at intervals as called by officers of the branch, or at stated periods?

We favor regular, stated periods; but believe that such meetings may be held as the branch may determine, at the call of its officers, or otherwise as may be agreed upon.

Who should preside at such meetings?

The highest branch authority present. But any church officers may be chosen by consent and vote of those belonging to the branch who may be present.

What business shall be proper for these meetings to transact?

Any and all matters pertaining to the good of the cause at large and the branch especially.

Who are entitled to voice and vote in such meetings?

All church members belonging to the branch, and others by courtesy; unless by action of the district, or branch, it has been otherwise provided.

When should such meetings be held?

As often as the size and character of the branch may make necessary.

On what days should they be held?

On the days upon which the branch may agree. But it will be more conducive to the good of the members of the branch, and the church at large as well, if business meetings are not held on Sunday, or on occasions of prayer and sacrament and testimony meetings.

Why should not such meetings be held Sunday?

Because it is held sacred, devoted to the worship of God in the name of the Prince of Peace, and the observance of the duties of worship only should be observed by the members on that day.

Why should they not be held on sacramental and testimonial occasions?

Because that in many, if not in all branches, there are those, who, in the examination and determination of matters of business connected with the church, are apt to become unsettled in temper and good will; and who forget the object, "the good of the whole" for which the meeting is held; and by improper words and manners create disturbance and thus do great harm instead of good. Such meetings if held on sacramental occasions frequently end in confusion; and sensitive Saints are hurt spiritually by it. Indeed it has happened that the end of such a business meeting has been with contention and strife, sometimes with violence; a thing greatly to be deplored.

Are there not some kinds of business that may be done in prayer or testimony meetings?

There may be, but if there are it must be that sort upon which there can be no dispute; perhaps the receiving of members by vote; the granting of letters; ordinations previously ordered; the receiving of communications from church officers, or other branches, upon which there is to be no discussion.

What business and what questions ought not to be considered, or done on prayer and testimony occasions?

All business involving controversy, or of a personal nature likely to gender ill feeling and strife; and all questions upon which there is likely to be discussion ought to be presented at proper meetings held for business purposes (not on Sunday) and ought to be avoided always on occasions of prayer, sacrament and testimony. They are "questions which gender strife," and have properly no place in the devotional exercises of Saints—they might do for men of the world, or hypocrites, and men of evil dispositions, but for Saints, may God forbid.

Are non-residents eligible to branch or district offices?

Yes, if in good standing unless it is otherwise provided, as in the case of representatives.

ELDERS James Brighouse and Lars Peterson, the prime movers in the new movement at Independence, Missouri, say that we misrepresented them in the reference we made to them in the HERALD of January 10th. We stated that there were four points in the article: "one is no intercourse between the sexes, husbands and wives included; no further procreation in mortality; all property common; Lars Peterson and Tames Brighouse presidents, and E. Peterson bishop and treasurer." We did not intend to misrepresent these men; and in order to show that we did not, we give Elder Brighouse's letter, and an extract from one from E. Peterson, both of same date, and after that we quote from the printed document sent us.

Independence, Jan. 12th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I find in your notice of the Order of Enoch in your last issue of the Herald two errors, which I hope you will be kind enough to correct, so that none of the Herald readers (who have not our circulars as yet) may come to an improper conclusion with respect to our screed, as you have been pleased to term it.

The first error I shall name may have been and was most likely an oversight. You have made it to read "New Testament" instead of Inspired Translation. The second is the quotation you profess to find in the circular, where you state that "we forbid to marry," &c. Now I can not say that this error is an oversight; I wish I could; but I am forced to the conclusion that this is a wilful and wicked misrepresentation of the point of doctrine plainly stated in the circular, and enjoined as a fundamental principle of the Kingdom of God, until the King shall come,

And then from this false statement of us, you proceed to render judgment, and appeal to every good Latter Day Saint for the same view of it as the one named; but as the standpoint from which you would view us, and call upon the good Saints to look at us from, is false, so may not your judgment and theirs be alike false.

If you will correct this error, and publish the point of doctrine as it reads in the circular, as soon as you can, this will be satisfactory as far as we are concerned; but if you do not correct the quotation as now printed against us in your paper, we shall try to correct it as best we can and as soon as we can. I will send you a circular, so that you will have it at hand.

We shall continue to send you our proceedings from time to time, and hope you will publish them as written—we shall ask no more, no less—and feel greatly obliged to you.

Yours faithfully,

JAMES BRIGHOUSE.

Extract from E. Peterson's letter:

"You have misrepresented us in the Herald, which we could not but expect, considering the source, and we doubt very much that you will try to correct yourself, or cease to misrepresent us. But the time is near when your misrepresentations will be made manfest by a voice louder than that which shakes the earth; for judgment will commence among you, first among those who have professed to know my name, saith the Lord, but have not known me, but have blasphemed against me. Doc. & Cov. Then you will probably wake up and consider your ways, for the organization that is not built upon the rock, will surely come to grief, sooner or later."

The quotation made by us in which the words New Testament occur, was precisely as it is found in the first clause of the covenant issued in the circular by these men, and reads:

"Which church and kingdom was organized, and established, on the seventh day of December, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four, upon the revelations and commandments, given through Joseph Smith the seer, as well as the New Testament, and Book of Mormon."

We quoted it as it was in their circular, and hence on that point did not misrepresent them.

We quote below from the circular:

"The New and Everlasting covenant, is a covenant that must be made by sacrifice. In addition to the laws of Equality, every man who will be redeemed from the fall, must 'take up his cross and follow Christ; purify, and sanctify himself, and become as a little child," and do not defile your flesh;' but cease the procreation of mortality as Noah did; 'that the body of sin might be destroyed;' Rom. vi. and prepare to bring forth a righteous offspring through the thousand years, when 'your children shall grow up without sin, unto salvation and will never die; Doc & Cov CI sec. Lasciviousness or lustfull desires have defiled and corrupted all mankind, to such a state of degradation, that they are unfit to procreate, and are not any more fit to live than the people in the days before the flood; and except they repent they must all likewise perish, and remain in hell a thousand years. The time has come when men shall be commanded to repent (Mosiah viii 8 9.) from practicing the law of sin and death (Rom. viii 2 which was given to Cain by the devil in the beginning, gen v. 13. also the law of tithing, (one tenth) which maketh nothing perfect Heb. vii chap. Inspired Translation.

"The scriptures are full of evidences, that the faith, example, and doctrine of Paul was and is Virginity; and He says follow me as I follow Christ.' The gospel of Christ is nothing more or less than the example or life of Christ; for He said 'I AM THE LAW;' which Paul endorses by saying I would that all men were even as myself.' We forbid marriage in the same way that Paul forbids marriage; saying, If you marry and 'keep your virgin' you 'do well, but he that giveth himself not in marriage doeth BETTER;' and 'those who have wives, shall be as though they had none.' i cor vii 29 37 38. After this faith of Paul is preached, and the kingdom of Christ set up on the foundation Paul laid 'as a wise master-builder,' there Will be some depart from the faith of Paul, but who will nevertheless advocate a celibate life even as He did, but they speak lies in hypocrisy: having their conscience seared as with a hot iron,' because they profess to be pure, and 'follow Paul as He followed Christ,' but who secretly live in the generative lusts, contrary to their profession; hence departing from the faith, becoming foolish virgins unprepared to meet the Bridegroom; while those who live strictly by the life of Christ (which is his gospel) even as Paul did, will be prepared to meet him: for none but the Pure in heart shall see God. Therefore Jesus said 'purify yourselves even as I am pure.'"

Elder Brighouse underscored the lines that we give in Italics, so that we should know what they meant. We read them now precisely as we did before; and our statement of the points in it was as the circular has it; hence we did not misrepresent that. The names of Lars Peterson and James Brighouse are signed to the circular; and Elder Brighouse himself wrote us that he and Peterson were chosen to preside, and that E. Peterson was chosen Bishop; hence we did not misrepresent them in that point.

No reference is made to the property in common, and hence did not misrepresent them in that. But we did quote from the Doctrine and Covenants, which they profess to believe, which quotation destroys the effect of their misapplication of texts, and lo, then we misrepresent them.

Mr. E. Peterson says, in his letter:

"If you had not been full of the spirit of him who was a liar from the beginning, you would have noticed on the second page of our pamphlet the following."

He then quotes what we have published above, sent us by Elder Brighouse and underscored. We did notice what was on second page, and all the rest of it; and gave it to the Herald readers as we found it. We did not intend to misrepresent these men, and we now think we did not.

Correspondence.

St. Louis, Missouri, January 16th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith: - I came here in time for the conference held at Belleville, Illinois, January 3d, 1885. We had an enjoyable session. Since conference I have spoken in several places. On Sunday night I spoke in the Rock Springs Baptist Colored Church, over which the Rev. Mr. Hayes presides. Several of the brethren and sisters went with me to the church; and after listening to a tew hymns sung by the colored people, I spoke from St. John 14:21-24. The colored people seemed to be very much pleased with what I said. And after I got through speaking those that accompanied me arose and sang from the "Saints Harp," hymn 1083, which left a grand impression upon the minds of the colored people. The Pastor desired to administer the Sacrament to us, but we begged to be excused. and passed out of the house for home, all in the house shaking our hands as we passed out, and saying, Come again. The Lord willing we'll be there for Sunday next.

At Tower Grove last night we met and organized a branch, which will be known as the Tower Grove Branch. Edward Potts president, William Price clerk. Their address is in care of Daniel Donavan, Kentucky Avenue, Tower Grove, St. Louis, Missouri. Yours truly,

JOHN C. Foss.

No. 4,728, Jacob Street, Wheeling, W. Va., January 16th, 1884.

Bro. Foseph:-I take this means of informing my correspondents of my whereabouts, as I have not means to write them individually. On the 9th of October, 1884, Bro. Ells and myself visited Clarksburg, W. Va. On our arrival we were kindly received by the Saints. The branch was in a fair condition but there is still room for improvement. We had some excellent meetings with the Saints, which we trust was a benefit to them as well as ourselves. On the 15th we left for the Cabin Run Branch; there are only a few in this branch but they are apparently strong in the faith; it was with some reluctance we left this little flock, but we pray that the Good Shepherd will keep them within the fold. We enjoyed liberty of speech, in pointing them to the way in which the people of God should walk. We feel to render thanks to Mr. and Sr. Williams, with whom we made our home, for their kind hospitality. Could not Bro. Beatty visit this branch, his labors there would be conducive of good.

The 6th of November I left home for Hunter, Ohio, and Bro. Ells subsequently left for Pittsburg, Pa. The 7th I began preaching in the town school house where I continued preaching over the Sabbath, during which time I had large audiences and the best of liberty in speaking. Through the kindness of Mr. John Phillips I was proffered the use of the Maple school house one mile from Hunter, in which I delivered eight discourses. Had good attendance; also held four meetings with the Lampsville Saints while in that region.

The next point I reached was Nicholson, Guernsey county, Ohio. Here I baptized Brn. Parmer and his son. These were received into the Byesville Branch, formerly under the presidency of Bro. Luke Sharp, now of Lucas, Iowa, but now presided over by Bro. George Rosser. Bro. and Sr. Wm. Moore, who live at Nicholson, are endeavoring to let their light shine before the people.

On the 27th of December I raised the standard of truth in Uniontown, Ohio; preached fifteen sermons in succession, in a union church. The Christian church choir did the singing for us. All the Christian members are not made of the same material as the champion Braden. While there I received an invitation from the Christian people of Morristown to preach in their church. I return the 23d to preach another week at Uniontown. Time only will reveal the results of our labor.

Experience in this work teaches me the propriety of exercising patience under whatsoever circumstances I may be placed. I feel encouraged at the present prospects and have implicit faith in the great work to be accomplished in these latter days, and feel confident that it will triumph in the end, although, perchance, I and others may fall by the way. I think it prudent that some of my brethren, who are skeptical regarding some of the sublime doctrines of the Church, remember the "landmarks" which God hath set through our Fathers. May the Lord help us all to be faithful, that the crown of eternal life, may be ours to wear in the end, is the prayer of your brother,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, January 16th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—Permit me to burden your columns with my late rambles in Utah, that your many readers may have a glimpse of what is doing in the Rocky Mountain "Zion."

I left Salt Lake City November 26th, 1884, for a tour southward. I spent Thanksgiving Day with Sister Sterrett at Pleasant Grove. On the 28th I left there for Scipio; arrived at that place on the 29th and preached in the house of Bro. Peter Clawson, also the next day and night I spoke again; congregations were good for a private house, and a good interest seemed to prevail

I left Scipio December 1st, with Brn. Peter and John Clawson, for Salina. We got there in time to call on the Bishop of that place, and ask for the Tabernacle, which he refused, of course. We then asked for the school house to hold meeting in, which we failed to get. Mr. Nicholas Clawson then tried to get a private house for us to hold services in, but failed in that. He was cut off from the church some time before. In his trial before the Bishop he was permitted to state his objections to the church, and read from the Doctrine and Covenants. After he was cut off he asked the Bishop if he cut him off for reading the "books. The Bishop said no; but cut him off for sticking to them so tenaciously. "Testimony in Utah is superior to all the 'books."

Left Salina next morning for Richfield, the brethren Clawson taking me there. We put up at the house of Bro. J. C. Christensen. He is the president of the Richfield Branch, and an excellent man. At night I spoke to a fair little turnout, mostly Saints. I remained there and at Elsinore, preaching there and at Monroe, until the 16th. The interest at Monroe was good. I occupied the hall of Mr. Jones, a merchant of that place, he kindly furnishing it free. I only spoke twice there, but was impressed that much good could be done there. During these meetings Bro. Ekmark was with me. We were treated with great kindness by the Saints and friends. I believe we left the Saints there feeling better for the visit. Bro. Christensen took us to Scipio where I preached to a crowded house on the 17th. On the 18th he took me to Juab, where I took rail for Salt Lake City, and Bro. Ekmark to Santa Quin. I remained in the city during the holidays, preaching there two Sabbaths. On New Year's eve the Mission Sunday School met in the chapel. A Christmas tree had been prepared by the committee and beautifully decorated with a variety of presents for members of the school. Songs, recitations and speeches were the order of the evening. All acquitted themselves grandly. Presents were distributed, making many little hearts glad. The writer of this was made glad also, being the recipient of a purse containing nine dollars. While it was silently received, a heart of thankfulness breathed a silent prayer to the giver of all good gifts, for his blessing upon the generous donors. And when hearts that were made glad that night read this, let them know the writer of this thanks each one for their kindly remembrance of him, praying that in the day of accounts it may stand to the credit of the Sabbath School.

January 1st I left the city for Coalville and other points on the Weber River. On my arrival at Coalville I called on Bro. John F. Allen, where I was made comfortable and happy. Held meeting in his house at night. Next morning we called on Bishop Salmons to see if we could get the school house to preach in. He willingly gave his consent, but told us he did not have the control. He gave us the names of the trustees, who let us occupy by paying them three dollars for the privilege. Bro. Allen paid the price and we went in. The congregation was not large, mostly young men, and but few wonien. I did not feel as though we got the worth of the money. We held another meeting in Bro. Allen's house; only few out. On Sunday the 5th, we had the privilege of occupying the school house built and occupied by the New West Educational Commission. The house was commodious and comfortable. It was well filled and the people gave good attention. I spoke on the influence and power of the gospel. On the evening of the 6th the house was crowded to its utmost. I spoke on polygamy. At the close I gave liberty for any to oppose, when President Cluff of that "stake," came forward and made a reply, or rather tried to smooth the thing down. He admitted I.C. Bennett started polygamy, but said it was a lustful kind, but Joseph afterward revealed a celestial order. Said Joseph and all of them were forced to deny it owing to the persecution. Said G. A. Smith had visited the present Joseph and tried to draw him out, and that Joseph did not believe in anything. Said his father was a fanatic, that he was ashamed of him, and that his work was a failure. Said when the committee from the reorganized movement waited on him, he pooh poohed them; that he was a lawyer, &c. I replied to him as best I could, and I think many saw the weakness of his position.

From there I went to Wanship. On the 7th had the New West School House there. Held three meetings in that place; and the last two evenings had opposition, the house each night being crowded. The opposition did us much good, and the cause lost nothing from it.

On the 9th I returned to Coalville again, and spoke on Succession, at night. The house was filled; all the standing room was occupied and many could not get in, so I learned. I was here opposed by Alma Smith. Bro. E. C. Brand will remember him. He told of the persecutions of the Saints. Of course they were God's people, and we were hail-fellow-well-met with opposers. Told them Joseph rolled the kingdom off on the Twelve: that this church was like it was when Christ was put to death-the Presidency did not go to his heirs; related how Joseph's mantle fell on Brigham, and bore his testimony. I replied to all his objections and statements, in the light of the revelations and history. Bishop Clark of Upton, then wanted ten minutes to speak. He was astonished at the weakness of the effort; told what he could prove, and told the rolling off story again, with the mantle business. I challenged him to the proof of his assertions. On Sunday night I occupied again on the duties of the Saints to the law of the land, and of God; had a splendid congregation although it was storming, and a special meeting had been called, with a request for all to attend. A deep interest pervaded and no opposition was offered. On the evenings of the 12th and 13th I spoke in Heneferville; but few turned out there.

From there I returned to the city, the brethren and sisters supplying all my wants, and sufficient to supply a new suit, for which I feel grateful indeed. The brethren and sisters who took the clothes business in hand, told me I was not to report it; that it was a present to me individually. Some families giving five dollars each. As I am not at liberty to report their names to the Bishop I pray for the giver of all good to restore to them four fold. I appreciate the generous gift and feel exceeding proud of the new suit.

We feel lonely here at times, with no one besides local help to aid in this great work. We think the good time is coming. Polygamists are fleeing from almost every settlement. Fearfulness has taken hold of the inhabitants of this Zion. The leaven is at work as it never was before, for the deliverance of the honest, but erring. We are willing to labor, wait and pray. In all my meetings at Coalville, Wanship and Heneferville the teachers of the New West rendered us valuable aid, by singing and playing the organ. May heaven bless them.

R. J. Anthony.

CLINTON, Henry Co., Mo., January 18th, 1885.

Dear Brother: -- I and family left Iowa, November 18th, for this place. We stopped a few days at Independence, visiting with some of the Saints. We were pleased with some of the business features of the place; but are of the opinion that Saints must not forget that dollars do not grow on bushes to be plucked at will in Jackson county, but must be earned by hard work and good management, to meet with financial success. We arrived in Clinton, November 24th; commenced taking an inventory of a stock of groceries which we bought of Messrs. Rice and Sharp. We now occupy a nice brick room, 22x100, with an east front, in center of block, on the public squaresplendid location. Have rented the room for three years, pay $40 per month. Business is somewhat dull, having so much rain, mud and snow; still trade for us has opened up finely, and bright prospects for all in Spring Henry county is composed of good farming land, of which most is in cultivation. Corn, wheat, oats and other small grains do well; corn very fine; potatoes fair; peaches and apples in abundance. Apples are worth now 35c. to 40c. per bushel. Plenty of coal within two to six miles from town, worth about 8c. at bank. Wood, rock and water, all we need. Well-water is not the best of drinking water, but plenty of it. Most of us use cistern water to drink. Fine clay for making stone ware and brick.

Clinton is situated about two miles from Grand River, on the M. K. and T. Railway, with a population of about four thousands. Good school and ten churches. We have two new railroads now grading and laying the iron, to be completed this year. This gives us an outlet to St. Louis, Chicago. Kansas City and Springfield, Mo., making Clinton a railroad center, and one of the best towns in western Missouri. With these advantages, the indications are a "boom" in the Spring for our town and county. Some good openings for business men here, and splendid chances for farmers. Only one family of Saints besides ourselves. Yet plenty of room for more. We are about seventy-five miles south-east of Independence, and feel satisfied that this is in the "regions round about." We have been visited with quite a number of the preachers here, wanting to know, "Do you make any profession of religion?" "What church are you identified with?" We tell them we are members of the Church of Christ, our creed, all truth; so they go away wondering. We thought it best to take Bro. J. H. Lake's advice, "Make haste to go slow." We want the people to get acquainted with us first, and learn we are men and not beasts with horns on. By and by, when Bro. I. N. White comes, and opens up the work here, they my see "the elephant." But if they do, we shall not deprive them of a chance to ride. If any of the Elders or brethren should come this way, call on us; or wanting any information in regard to our town and county, I will gladly write them. Oh yes, there's plenty of wild game here, ducks, geese, rabbits, quails and a few turkeys; so if any one with an "old wagon, yellow dog and a gun" comes this way, don't fail to stop.

Wishing the latter day work success, I am your brother in the gospel,

CLEAR WATER, Nebraska, Sanuary 14th, 1885.

Dear Herald: Oft since first I knew the Lord by obedience to the gospel, have I sought communion with your patrons and contributors. Joy and satisfaction hitherto unknown to me, have crowned my efforts at times in the work of God. The best hours of my life have been spent in wandering far from loved ones at home, amid strangers and strange scenes. I do not regret having embarked in the ship called Zion, but do often lament my human follies of brain and heart. Sometimes I pause, and wonder whether my efforts by tongue and pen have been as effectual for good as I had fondly hoped at the time. My present convictions are that they have not. If any have been blessed, I am glad; if in the least degree one has been misled by my stammering tongue or blundering pen, I hope to be forgiven. Even the truth may be so presented as to be misapprehended by the unwary, and lead them astray. None who are rational will take poison, if they know it; but a little concealed in some choice viand, may deceive the "very elect."

However poorly I may struggle along in the latter day work, I desire to be conscientious; and when I make a blunder seek to rectify it. I know the souls of men are precious in the sight of God, and if by my action or teaching one is caused to suffer, I am held accountable; and this is one of the reasons why I wish to make restitution in this life when a wrong is done.

Ministerially I am doing little or nothing at present, for reasons I can not well explain. Had I been wiser, and endowed with greater discernment, myself and others might have been saved some heartaches, and the work of God would have suffered less. However, I do not mourn without hope; for I know in reason the strange and varied experiences of the past, will serve to better place me on my guard in the future; and I would rather be punished at home than abroad. I rejoice in my Redeemer. I love the name and character of Jesus. Precious morsel to my soul! I still desire to bear the standard of this gospel to the nations of the earth. If he will accept the poor tribute of my heart, I only ask to be his servant.

Several of the Saints here contemplate going three hundred miles west, to find new homes on Government land. Claims in this vicinity are offered for sale at from five dollars to fifteen dollars per one hundred and sixty acres.

Bro, Foseph: I am still in the faith, and hope of the gospel, in all its promised blessings for the obedient, in this and the life to come. There are in the revealments of this latter day work, the loving kindness and tender care of our Heavenly Father towards his children, as nowhere else realized or seen. Truly it is, while he makes known to us the condition of the wicked, of their continued estrangement from him, the infidelity of the world, the corruptions of the people, and the terrible judgments to follow, that he has in his love shown unto those who love peace and him who is the God of peace, a place of safety and the way of escape even through obedience to him who is our refuge and strength. The words of promise to us, dear Saints, are faithful and true, and will all be fulfilled if we on our part do the things that are required of us. Let us strive hard and diligently to overcome. Let there be no malice, envyings, strife, jealousy, or hatred in our hearts. If the love of Christ be in us we shall love our brethren who are Christ's. If we are faithful and true to him, we shall be to each other. And the very God of peace will be with us to strengthen and help us to overcome, that we may enter that rest and enjoy the presence of him who has died to redeem us.

Many of the Saints here in this eastern land are striving to keep the commandments of the Lord, and are holding on to the rod of iron, while some I fear are drifting away upon the rocks and quicksands that will sink them in despair, or dash them to pieces. Oh that we might heed the voice of warning, and turn unto the Lord before it is too late.

Bro. Wm. H. Kelley was with us; preached the word in power, Sunday, January 3d. His visit has encouraged us much. May the Lord bless him; we are in hopes Bro. E. L. Kelley will be able to make us a visit.

May the Lord bless and comfort you, Brother Joseph, and all your colaborers, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

E. N. Webster.

JONESPORT, Maine,

January 9th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-I desire to address, through your columns, the sisters throughout the length and breadth of our land, upon the subject now attracting the attention of the Saints, namely, the , law of tithing. One year ago last September I understood and practiced said law, for the first time, as taught by our beloved brother, E. L. Kelley, of the West; who, by the way, is an able expounder of the faith, and a zealous advocate of the financial law. Since then I have been blessed of the Lord tenfold, physically and temporally.

My business has prospered beyond my anticipations. Prayers that have been unheard for years. have been answered during that time; also at the time I commenced to keep this law my health was very delicate, so much so that I could walk to church only once a day, and then by great effort. Now I can go twice, and three times if necessary; rain, snow, cold, or frost can not, unless very severe, prevent me from attending. The cause of Christ is languishing for the want of laborers. Elders are leaving the field for want of financial aid; and the world is starving for the bread of life. How is this demand to be met with a deplete treasury, and no way to replenish it. "Try me saith the Lord and see if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there will not be room to receive it." There is a great work to be accomplished and it is our duty and privilege, as saints of the Most High to do all that lays within our power to help spread the glad tidings of salvation to a fallen world. Now the sisters can do a great deal to help accomplish this work, and God will bless the effort. Some may say "I have nothing to tithe." If we have not, we are justified in so doing; but if we can afford to wear expensive clothing, and indulge in all the luxuries the land affords, and practice no self-denial, then we come under condemnation, and the facts as they are will meet us at the judgment bar of God, "As ye sow ye shall reap." Every act of life touches some chord that will vibrate in eternity; and this is one of the acts that will redound to the glory of God, the upbuilding of his cause, and our own eternal welfare. Now is the time for the sisters to work. The field is open for us to do much good; and the golden opportunity now lost may be lost forever.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy of Providence is laboring in our district with good results. We are very desirous that General Conference should continue him in the Eastern Maine District. Hoping that the sisters will enter into this work with a zeal,

Your sister in Christ,

LIZZIE M. WOODWARD.

LOCKHARTVILLE, Nova Scotia, December 21st, 1884.

Dear Herald: Our home is a small peninsula out in the sea, surrounded a good part of the time by ice-out in the cold, some may say-from a physical point of view, correctly. Spiritually not quite, although we are not as warm in the gospel cause as we might be. Neither are we lukewarm. No. Nova Scotians are not that way, they are "either cold or hot." Elders Burton and Sheehy can testify that it does not take long to raise the temperature among us by frictional

Perhaps some of your readers are wondering why nothing has been said about Bro. Sheehy's visit. It is not because it was not one of interest, nor that his labor was not appreciated by the Acadian Saints. Bro. Sheehy was not long with us, but did a good deal in the way of encouraging and building up the saints, and introducing the doctrine to those who never heard, of whom three were baptized by him. A good impression was made among the young people, whose parents are strongly prejudiced against the "faith once delivered to the saints." Upon one occasion a rock came through the window, smashing the lamp upon the pulpit while he was preaching, setting fire to the oil which was scattered over the floor; however, it all had a good effect. the action being condemned by an item in the county journal. He also succeeded in drawing the fire from one, or rather three of the Baptist guns at Parrsboro, the rumble of which is still echoing from the battlements of that disturbed kingdom. Strange is it not, that such a strongly fortified position as the Baptist Church, should be thrown into confusion and consternation, by a shot from the gospel gun. No, not strange, when we take into consideration the "demonstration of the spirit and power."

A discussion was held at Parrsboro, between Elder F. M. Sheehy and the Rev. McLean, a Baptist Minister. The Christian Messenger (?) has given an account of the affair in several issues; still some of the good people of that church want to hear the "other side," before they feel disposed to judge. Is it strange that Baptist people should think of "another side," when the Christian Messenger speaks in the way of giving an account of any transaction? Do they doubt its veracity? I don't wonder. I'm afraid I shall in the future, if I never have. I was at the discussion-sure of it-quite sure, but if I am to believe the Messenger, I was not there at all; not that it says I was not there, but its description of the discussion does not agree with any discussion that I ever attended.

The first night was upon the doctrine of "laying on of hands." Bro. Sheehy affirmed. Spent his time in showing from the scriptures that it was a part of the gospel plan in the apostolic age, and the necessity of its being a part of the same to-day, to make the gospel unchangeable; clothing the position with argument that could not be gainsaid. Mr. McLean did not even attempt to answer one of the arguments from a scriptural sland point; consequently did not strip him of his covering, as the Christian Messenger stated. But contented himself with the position of him who said, "command these stones to be made bread," saving, that it was no time for argument (in a discussion) but demonstration, referring to the case of Elymas seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith, claimed that it was a parallel case, he being Elymas, and Bro. John Layton then upon the platform, formerly one of his flock, the deputy. "Now," says Mr. McLean, "bring on your miracle to prove your position." But Bro. Sheehy brought down the house, by replying that there was no need of it, as there was no danger of John being turned away from the faith; and added, "If you will turn Bro. John away from the faith, I will guarantee a miracle to turn him back again. Then Mr. McLean became emphatic, (not to say angry); ran across the stage, shook his fist in Bro. Sheehy's face, declaring there was not enough Mormons between Parrsboro and Utah, to resurrect a flea; while some of the audience hissed. If that was putting a veto upon Mormonism as represented by F. M. Sheehy, then the Messenger is correct.

The other two nights were upon the "Book of Mormon." Bro. Sheehy pursued the course adopted by Kelley in the Braden and Kelley debate, of course very much curtailed on account of time; but bringing out the chain of evidence in the bible very clearly, dwelling mostly upon twenty-ninth of Isaiah; then internal evidence, and clinched it with scientific research. Mr. McLean sought to prejudice the audience by throwing mud, using Beadle for his chief authority. He is a well bred Scotch man, and I fancied I could detect the honest scotch blood swelling and surging with shame, as Bro. Sheehy compared the two contending authorities, the Bible versus Beadle.

Dear readers, if ever I felt proud in my life that I was a Latter Day Saint, it was that evening; one of eight in an audience of about five hundred. All went well the second night, until the last closing speech of Mr. McLean, in which he did that which I would have thought very mean, had the other party done it, by bringing forth new matter, in which that old, played out Spaulding Story was rehearsed, and strange to say, it had the effect to swing the majority of that vast audience against us, for the time being. There was no chance for reply, so had to take it; and so the discussion ended. We circulated all the tracts on that subject that we had to the crowd. For a day or two that side seemed favored by the mastery; but in a few days the scriptural arguments, so clearly brought out, seemed to show themselves, and Mrs. Layton, who lives in that town, says that the tide turned in our favor, and I feel quite safe in saying, that the debate resulted in bringing the doctrine before the people, in part; and leaving such an impression, that including a few of Mr. McLean's own followers, the majority of that town are favorably inclined. There is much work to be done here, and it is our request, that the church will remember in her distribution of able Elders, the little mission out in the cold. Ever praying for the spread of the gospel, I am yours, in bonds, HOLMES J. DAVISON.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan. 16th.—Extreme destruction and suffering are reported in the Spanish Province of Andalusia.

China is divided on the Franco-Chinese imbroglio. The masses are in favor of war. The wealthy, who were obliged to contribute to the war expenses, desire peace. Vast hordes of officials are greatly interested in the continuance of the present state of things. The amount of peculation is something astounding. Had the Chinese fleet twenty efficient men and trained officers abroad of each man-of-war they could sink Admiral Courbet's fleet with ease and safety. The empress is devoted to a warlike policy. The German officers in the servive of China demand that the forts be rebuilt and equipped with modern ordnance. The Chinese are dismayed at the probable cost of the new order of things, declaring that the new structures and new equipments demanded would furnish opportunities for immense frauds. The Provincial-Mandarins as a rule are openly hostile to the proposed innovations, and the masses of the people are sullen and apathetic.

An anonymous letter was published yesterday morning at Defiance, Ohio, purporting to be issued by a secret labor organization composed of men who have recently been thrown out of employment, in which they describe their destitute circumstances and their inability to get credit at stores. They demand relief or blood, and say that unless something is done in their behalf within the next week they will burn every store in the city, and will be prepared to kill any one attempting their arrest to prevent incendiarism. They claim to number eighty, and say they expect 300 or 400 men will join them in any emergency. Manufacturers and business-men generally laugh at the threat publicly, but there is an undercurrent tending towards immediate action, which brought them together tonight to consider and act upon it. They appointed a committee in each ward to look after the needy and provide work for as many as possible. It is thought the City Council will take steps to supply a large number with work.

Snow has been falling heavily during the last few hours throughout the entire West, reaching as far South as Northern Texas. Railway traffic is greatly impeded.

Jan. 17th.—The police of Russia have received some startling information about the doings and designs of the Nihilists. It is said that the Nihilists are now engaged in a conspiracy to murder by means of poison certain officials who have incurred the hatred of the order. In the effort to thwart this conspiracy, a circular has been sent to all the principal officials in the Empire, warning them against the employment of new servants who are not strongly vouched for, and cautioning them against the acceptance of food or drink from any one not known to be trusty. It has also transpired that ever since last September there has been a systematic series of defalcation and embezzlement by minor officials connected with the treasuries of Russian cities. The thieves have been invariably proved to have been connected with the Nihilist organization, and little or none of the stolen money has been recovered. It is feared that the Nihilists have now obtained sufficient funds to organize a well-planned attempt upon the life of the Czar Alexander III. There is no longer any doubt that the attempt to wreck the special train on the Gatschina Railway, which was conveying the Czar to St. Petersburg the 7th, ult., was a deliberate attempt upon the life of the sovereign, and the corpse of the sentinel found by the side of the railway just where the train was expected to leave the track furnished ample proof of the malignity of the assasins. That narrow escape has considerably shaken the Czar's nerves. He is now virtually a hermit in his gorgeous Winter Palace of the Neva perspective, and he looks forward in superstitious dread to the 1st of March, which will be the fourth anniversary of the murder of his father. Private advices give deplorable accounts of the condition of German colonists in Africa. The glowing descriptions published by interested explorers a few months ago caused quite a rush of emigration from Germany to Angra Pequena, St. Luci Bay, and the Cameroons, despite the warnings of a majority of the German newspapers. they arrived at their destination the emigrants found neither the salubrious climate nor the fertile soil which had been pictured to them. Many of them succumbed to fevers, and many others were slaughtered by the natives. survived found that the soil and climate were totally unfitted for the agricultural methods they had used in Germany, and they now declare that the soil is capable of raising nothing except weeds and malaria. Most of them are now piteously pleading for money enough to bring them home, having used all their savings in the passage money and their outfit for the African venture. In their letters they freely attribute the hostility of the natives to the intrigues and lies of English agents who seek to monopolize the trade of the negroes.

The supreme court of the United States rendered a decision in the polygamy case of Rudger Clawson, appellant, vs. the United States, appeal from the supreme court of Utah. Clawson, the appellant, having been found guilty by a judge of the crime of polygamy and cohabitation was duly sentenced to pay a fine of $800 and imprisonment four years. He appealed to the supreme court of the territory, and pending judgment on such appeal, applied to the court that sentenced him, for release upon suitable bail. The judge denied the application on the ground that defendant ought not be admitted to bail after conviction and sentence, unless some extraordinary reasons were shown and no such reasons had been given. Clawson thereupon sued out a writ of habeas corpus in the supreme court of the territory and prayed for release upon the ground that the court below had unlawfully refused to admit him to bail. The supreme court overruled the petition and remanded the prisoner to the custody of the marshal, whereupon he took the present appeal to this court. This court holds inasmuch as the judgment of the third judicial court in which the prisoner was tried did not impose upon him a fine only, but imprisonment, his admission to bail pending appeal from that judgment is distinctly committed by the laws of Utah to the discretion of the court, or judge to whom the application for bail may be made. The supreme court of Utah was, therefore, right in overruling the petition and remanding the prisoner to the custody of the marshal, and its judgment is affirmed.

Jan. 19th.—A Turkish army of 6,000 men has been ordered to Suakin. It is reported in London that the British Government is prepared to resist any attempt on the part of Turkey to land troops in Egypt. There is great activity at the British naval stations, troops are under orders to be in readiness to move at a moment's notice, and indications all point to stirring events in Africa.

Andrew Jackson Davis, the high priest of high Spiritualism, the harmonial philosopher, has "fallen, fallen, fallen from his high estate"-as the poet says. He seeks to have declared void his marriage with Mary F. Davis, his wife for nearly thirty years, on the ground that he has lately discovered that when they were married she had a lawful husband living in the person of Samuel G. Love. Mr. Davis has been a long time finding this out-longer than the general public were at the time, for Mr. Davis' marriage with Mrs. Love in 1855 did not escape comment; he was a very noted person then: his marvelous improvisations in trance were not forgotten, and one of his most inspired acts was his union with Mr. Love, who also had her fame. They have lived together faithfully and affectionately, and have been quite ideal figures in the estimation of Spiritualists, and have been respected by the rest of the world. They have been prominent in the woman-suffrage movement, and both have written books of admirable morality in respect to the important relations of life. Yet now Mr. Davis' attorney asks tor the certification of a copy of the judgment in a divorce suit brought by Love in Erie County, New York, in 1856, granting him a divorce. The Spiritualists who have "pointed with pride" to the Davises are much depressed. The only thing they can say is that Dayis has been "psychologized" by a woman; and, for a man who must be 60 years old, that is especially disgraceful.

Six coal-boats and five barges containing 235-000 bushels of coal belonging to J. C. Risher & Co., broke from their moorings near Wood's Run, on the Ohio River, and sunk.

Pope Leo is confined to his bed with fever and rheumatism.

Jan 20.th.—Advices from Tonquin report the arrival of more reinforcements of French troops. A general forward movement of the invading forces is expected to begin about the end of the present month.

The Vossische Zetung publises a letter from the Congo country dated Dec. 10th in which it is stated that Lieut. Schulze, commander of the expedition to the Congo, has acquired from the African International Association a large track of territory near Nokki, where he will found a German station and trading depot.

In response to the appeal of the Oklahama boomers for the protection of the Government President Arthur has authorized a renewal of the orders for their expulsion from Indian Territory, and instructions have been conveyed to Col. Hatch, in command of the United States troops, to drive the invaders out by force of arms if moral suasion does not prvail. Gen. Augur has received instructions to send more troops to Col. Hatch to overawe the boomers if possible. Col. Hatch reports that the troops and the settlers are getting so close together that it is necessary to determine at once what action shall be taken. The boomers' camp at Stillwater has received reinforcements, and its garrison appears defiant and determined upon resistance.

In the House of Representatives the Committee on Public lands reported a bill prohibiting aliens from acquiring title to and owning lands in the United States. The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Indian Appropriation bill Mr. Ellis spoke in favor of the appointment of a commission to select somewhere in the North-west lands similar to those in Indian Territory where the Indians could be established and taught to support themselves. Mr. Throckmorton advocated the granting of lands in severalty to Indians. Mr. Ryan urged the importance of settling the Oklahoma question. A long discussion followed concerning the right in the case between the Government and the boomers.

A letter has reached the Chief of Police at Montreal threatening to blow up the city-hall with dynamite if he does not cease interfering with the tavernkeepers in Hochelaga for selling liquor Sundays.

Rudger Clawson's polygamy case was argued before the Territorial Supreme Court at Salt Lake City to-day and taken under advisement. The open venire and exclusion of Mormons from the jury are the points at issue.

The Mormon President of this Stake, Angus M. Cannon, was arrested to-day for polygamy and held in $2,500 bail for examination tomorrow. He is a brother of Apostle George Q. Cannon.

Jan. 21.—King Alfonso and suite visited Torrax and Nerja, Spain, yesterday. The royal party will return to the Capital to-morrow. A slight shock of earthquake occurred at Nerja yesterday. Deep snow in the northern part of Spain continues to block the railways.

Gen. Briere de l'Isle, the French commander in Tonquin, telegraphs that the transportation of troops is difficult and tedious. Rear-Admiral Rieunier has been appointed to command the naval division under Admiral Courbet, commander of the French squadron in Chinese waters.

The following gives the full force of several passages in Gen. Soboleff's letter in the Russ which were only slightly touched upon in former telegrams on the subject: "England lays a heavy hand upon her dependent people, reducing them to a state of slavery, only that English trade may profit and Englishmen grow rich. The deaths of millions in India from starvation have been caused indirectly by English despotism. And then the English press disseminates far and wide the idea of Russia being a country of barbarians. Thousands of natives in India only await Russia's crusade of deliverance.

"And on the other hand, if Englishmen would only throw aside their misplaced pride and study a little deeper the foundation of Russia's rule in Central Asia, comparing it with their own in India, they would soon see plainly why the name of Russia has such prestige in Asia, and why the natives of India hate the dominion of England and set their hopes of freedom upon Russia. Russia gives full liberty to native manners, and not only does not overburden her subjects with fresh taxes but even allows them exemption and privilege of a most extensive character. England, on the contrary, is a vampire, sucking the last drop of blood of India.

"As to our course of antagonism in Asia, Enggland herself threw down the glove at Sebastopol; and if the Russian flag now floats over Merv, the English have themselves to blame. We accepted their challenge. It now rests with them whether there is to be a Russian invasion of India or not. We should all the same prepare for this campaign, in order to let England know that we are getting ready to deal her a blow. But we hope the time has come when English strategists will take into consideration the 200,-000 troops of the Caucasus and the 100,000 in reserve of Turkestan and Western Siberia, besides another army of half a million men behind in European Russia, and will look on the map and see what must happen if a Russian corps of 200,000 men, accompanied by another of 100,000 splendid irregular cavalry, pass through Herat and Balkh into India and proclaim the independence of the native population. Let England think well of the consequence of Russia deciding to take up arms against her.

"We do not want India, we want the Bosphorus. She has vet time to meditate on our offer. Let her decide which of the two peoples is the more dangerous for her, the Russians or the Germans. The Congo Conference is intended to weaken her colonial power. Who interfere most with English trade in the Balkan Peninsula, Russians or Gemans? The Germans are getting into their hands many branches of Eastern trade, not excluding even those of India. And did not more than 200,000 Germans go over to London after the Franco Prussian war and learn the commercial talents of the English merchants? Are the English really not aware of the fact that this mass of Germans have found their way into the offices in India? We offer England a more advantageous arrangement for them than for ourselves. Let her think over it, and decide while there is yet time."

An imperial ukase has been promulgated at St. Petersburg which forbids giving landed property in certain extensive districts to persons of Polish extraction. Stock companies and associations are not allowed to acquire more than 500 acres.

The North German Gazette (Bismarck's organ) says the intention of New Zealand to run steamers to Samoa and Tonga is an attempt to counteract the rising influence of German enterprise in those quarters, and is inspired by the hope of extending British rule in the Eastern Pacific.

A dispatch has been received at the War Office from Gen. Wolseley dated Korti, Jan. 21, 3 p. m., which reads substantially as follows:

"Gen. Stewart has had a heavy engagement with a portion of the Mahdi's forces near the Abu-Klea wells, about twenty-three miles this side of Metemuch. The rebels had collected from Berber, Metemneh, and Omduraman. This last place, I regret to say prisoners report, was recently captured by the Mahdi, and thus men were released from there to fight Gen. Stewart. The afternoon of Jan. 16 Gen. Stewart's cavalry reported that the enemy were in position some few miles this side of the wells. It was too late in the day to allow of an advance and successful encounter, and Gen. Stewart bivouacked where he was for the night. The enemy kept up a harmless fire all night and erected works on Gen. Stewart's right flank. Saturday Gen. Stewart endeavored to draw the enemy on to make an attack, but the rebels hesitated. In consequence, Gen. Stewart left all his impediments, also his camels, with a guard from the Sussex Regiment and some mounted infantry, and moved forward, keeping his forces in the form of a square. All the men were on foot. The British army passed around the enemy's flank, forcing them to make an attack or be subject to an enfilade fire. The enemy wheeled to the left and made a well-organized charge under a withering fire from our men. The square was unfortunately penetrated about its left rear, where a heavy cavalry and camel regiment were in possession, by sheer weight of numbers. The admirable steadiness of our men enabled them to maintain a hand-to-hand fight with the opposing force, while severe punishment was being inflicted upon the enemy by all other parts of the square. The enemy were finally driven back under a heavy fire from all sides.

The Nineteenth Hussars then pushed forward to the wells, which were in our possession by five in the evening. The enemy left not less than 800 slain around the works. Prisoners taken while the enemy were retiring report the number of the enemy wounded as quite exceptional. One immediate effect of the battle is that many of the rebels are submitting. It was necessary for the army to remain at the wells some hours to obtain water. As soon as practicable the intention was to push on with all expedition to Metemneh. The English wounded are doing well."

Official instructions sent by the War Department at Washington to Gen. Augur direct that the Oklahoma boomers shall be forced to retire from Indian Territory. A hope is expressed that this object may be accomplished without armed conflict, "but the responsibility for any bloodshed must rest upon those who do not accept the warning of the proclamation of the President." Gen. Augur is further directed to increase the force of Col. Hatch by 800 men.

There is great excitement in St. Louis concerning the outbreak of alleged Asiatic cholera. Two men—a Russian-Jew peddler and a negro—have died in that city of the disease within a few days Jan. 22d.—Famine prevails in the Government of Archangel and Vologda, Russia.

Gen. Stewart is reported to have occupied Metemneh. The British Government has telegraghed public congratulations to Gens. Wolsely and Stewart.

It is reported that the agreement between England and Turkey regarding the government of Egypt provides that Turkish troops shall occupy Egypt with the exception of the ports of Alexandria, Damietta, Port Said and Suez, which England will continue to occupy; that England shall maintain garrisons in the Red Sea littoral and abandon the Soudan to Turkey; and that Tewfik Pasha, Khedive of Egypt, shall be deposed, the Sultan to appoint in his stead a Pasha who does not belong to the family of Mehemet Ali.

An avalanche buried a hamlet of fifteen houses at Chiamonte in Piedmont, Italy. The cries of the buried people can be distinctly heard. Two thousand soldiers are endeavoring to rescue them. Most telegraph lines on the Italian frontier have ceased working, owing to the avalanches. The winter has been one of extreme severity throughout Europe.

So serious are the undervaluation frauds which are charged against the New York Custom-House that in some cases, it is said, invoices of silks have been received at that port the valuations upon which were 70 per cent less than the actual cost of production. The statement is made that foreign-born agents in New York representing foreign manufacturers virtually control the importations. Silks are even said to be purchasable in New York from these foreign agents, duty paid, for less than the cost at which they can be procured by American merchants at the European factories. The remedy suggested is a uniform system of duties upon the yard or pound.

A special from Rome says: "Terrible accounts continue to be received from the region of the Piedmontese Alps of the casualties and destruction caused by snowstorms and avalanches. Twenty houses were destroyed and forty persons killed at Borgorivo. Fifty houses were demolished at Frassinerie, and the number of fatal casualties there was eleven. In the little Village of Frassino, which has a total population of less than 1,800, seventy persons were killed. Soldiers have been sent to all the places named to assist the villagers in digging out the dead and rescuing the wounded. The snowfalls at Piedmont, Savoy, and other departments in the vicinity of the Alps are very serious. The avalanche which buried Frassino, Piedmont, yesterday caused great loss of life. Thirty bodies have been recovered. Forty persons are still missing.

The thermometer on Mount Washington, N. H. went down to 50° below zero this morning, one degree below the record. A hurricane was blowing at the time at the rate of 100 miles an hour.

Col. Hatch has sent dispatches to Gen. Augur to the effect that he needs no reinforcements and believes that the removal of the boomers from Oklahoma can be accomplished without bloodshed.

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 17th.—Fire destroyed over $120,000 worth of property yesterday at Fayetteville, N. C.

The South infirmary, a detached ward of the Eastern Illinois asylum, caught fire at four o'clock this morning and was destroyed, causing a loss of $25,000. The fire caught from an overheated furnace while the night-watch was in the second story, he having been at the furnace, according to the clock register, ten minutes before. The fire spread rapidly, having good fuel to feed on, the building being finished in southern pine, and made such progress that the building was filled with smoke before the attendants were aware of the fire. The building contained forty-five patients, six attendants, and one night-watchman, and was one of the twelve detached wards erected under the plan projected by Fred H. Wines, secretary of the state board of charities. The main buildings of the asylum are fire-proof. Seventeen of the demented victims were burned in the building.

Fire destroyed the Victoria woolen mills at Bartley, England. The loss was $150,000.

Several million dollars' worth of damage is said to have been done by the recent storm in Northern Ohio.

A broken rail caused a smashup of the Wabash Toledo train near St. Louis yesterday morning. Two cars were thrown into a ditch and eleven persons were injured—United States Express Messenger J. J. Mattocks fatally.

Jan. 20th.—A lard-rendering tank in J. E. Booge & Co's., pork packing house at Sioux City, Ia., exploded, reducing to ruins a considerable portion of the main building. Three men were killed and several others were severely scalded. The disaster fortunately occurred at a time when but few were in the building. Loss $25,000.

A few minutes after six o'clock yesterday morning two freight-trains on the New York, Chicago, & St. Louis (Nickle-Plate) Road collided near Grand Crossing. An engineer, Charles Ellis, was killed, four engines were more or less damaged, six loaded freight-cars with their cargoes were almost totally destroyed, a number of cars were badly wrecked, and the escape of the other engineers and firemen was almost miraculous. The damage is probably between $15,000 and $20,000. The wreck was cleared from the track during the day. The collision occurred at a point about half a mile south of Grand Crossing.

Jan. 21st.—Loss by fire at Waupaca, Wis., $12,000. Ixonia, Wis., $25,000. Elm Grove, W. Va., $5,000. Piperville, Wis., $15,000. Evansville, Ind., $6,000.

Ten persons were injured yesterday morning by a railway accident near Sedalia on the Missouri Pacific Road. The west-bound passengertrain struck a broken rail and a chair-car was precipitated down a high embankment.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

According to the annual report of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, the corn production of the country last year was 1,795,000,000 bushels. Of wheat there was 513,000,000 bushels, and of oats 583,000,000 bushels. These are the largest aggregates ever recorded.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British corn trade, says: Changeable weather during the last week somewhat retarded farming operations. The demand for native wheats slackened materially and values were maintained with difficulty. Sales of English wheat for the last week, 82,891 quarters at 34s. 2d., against 58,680 quarters at 38s. od. the corresponding week last year. The flour market was steady throughout the week. Fine grades of barley continue to advance, but ordinary grades are unimproved. The market for foreign wheats was slow and dragging and disappointing to sellers. Foreign flour was somewhat steadier, owing to an idea that a smaller output at the great milling centres in the lakeside districts of America will lessen exports. Maize is in restricted supply, and spot values are nominal. Malting barleys and Canadian peas are 1s higher. In cargoes off coast there was one sale, leaving the market bare. Owing to adverse winds the market for cargoes forward opened strong, but closed weaker in the absence of actual inquiry. Quotations are nominal. To-day the wheat trade is at a standstill. Flour is steady, American maize is lower. Round corn is dearer, owing to scarcity.

Richard Worthington, the New York publisher, has failed with $300,000 liabilities.

The North Chicago Rolling-Mills have resumed work giving employment to 1,200 hands. It is expected that the South Chicago mills will begin operations within a month.

Judge J. W. F. White of Pittsburg, Pa, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. His liabilities are about $75,000.

Exports from the Port of New York, exclusive of specie, for the week ended yesterday, were $7,669,000.

It is estimated that 100,000 men, previously unemployed, have obtained work in manufacturing enterprises since January 1st. In addition to these a large number of miners—10,000 in one Pennsylvania county—have resumed work within the last few weeks.

The bank at Wadena, owned by E. S. Case at Wadena, Minn., has closed its doors. It is thought that not more than twenty cents on the dollar will be paid.

Nothwithstanding recent statements to the effect that the gold in the United States Treasury has steadily increased since January 1st, the fact is that the actual gold balance not covered by certificates outstanding has decreased by over $11,000,000 since that date.

J. I. Case bought in the property of the defunct plow company, at Racine, Wis., for $175,000.

Internal revenue collections in the United States for the first six months for the fiscal year amounted to $56,518,568, a decrease of $4,270,786 as compared with the corresponding period last year.

BIBLE TERMS.

READERS of the Bible will be interested in the following explanation of expressions frequently met with in the Holy Scriptures. They are believed to be entirely correct: A day's journey was 33 and 1-5 miles. A Sabbath day's journey was about one English mile. Ezekiel's reed was 11 feet, nearly. A cubit is 22 inches, nearly. A finger's breadth is equal to one inch. A shekel of silver was about 50 cents. A shekel of gold was $8.09. A talent of silver was $1,518,32. A talent of gold was $23,309. A piece of silver, or a penny, was 13 cents. A farthing was 3 cents. A gerah was 2 cents. A mite was 11/2 cents. A homer contained 76 gallons and 5 pints. An ephah, or bath, contained 7 gallons and 4 pints. A hin was 1 gallon, 2 pints. A firkin was 7 pints. An omer was 6 pints, A cab was 3 pints. A log was one-half pint.

A FEW THOUGHTS ON THE BOOK OF COVENANTS.

DEAR HERALD:—Being at a meeting held at Lamoni on July 27th, 1884, when Brother Wm. B. Smith preached, subject, "The dispensation of the fulness of times," his sayings, and some criticisms after meeting, caused the writer to go through the following reflections:

The speaker introduced the revelation concerning the rise of the church, and the instrumentality used in organizing the same, &c., and argued,—to our mind, wisely,-that all sciences had their alphabets, and at no time of their growth could their alphabets be dispensed with, no more than A, B, C, &c., could be dispensed from the science of reading in its advanced stage. A, B, put together was "ab;" b, a, k, e, r, was baker, and no matter how many letters the largest words contained, they were collated from the alphabet, the basis of written and spoken language. conclusion the writer drew from the speaker's remarks was that the revelations in the Book of Covenants, though given, mostly, at an early date of the church, for the organizing and perpetuating of the same, could not now be dispensed with, not even one revelation, no more than the alphabet could be dispensed with and reading be perpetuated. To doubt one revelation, in his opinion, was paving the way to doubt another, and then another, until all was ignored, and then the Book of Mormon would go by the board, and finally skepticism would seize the individual, and his consequent destruction would follow if persisting in his downward course.

After meeting one said to another, there is an apparent show of argument for those of an opposite belief to the speaker; viz: "If the agent through whom the revelations came was infallible, then none of the revelations purporting to come through him, could be called in question." On our way home, our mind cogitated upon the saying and the sermon, and at home continued on, examining the evidences pro and con on each side; and while meditating on these things, we conceived that—the still small voice whispered, write your thoughts for the benefit of your fellow man. To be obedient to the injunction we submit the following:

1. That it not necessary, or requsite, that the agent through whom the word of of the Lord comes should be infallible. All former precedents are against the position. None of the Lord's servants, as recorded in Biblical history, could lay just claim to infallibility; and yet the word of the Lord came through them to mankind; why should the latter day prophet be an exception to this rule?

2. That the Holy Ghost by whom the prophets wrote and spoke, was infallible, we are prepared to believe; and presume that no believer in the Scriptures will attempt to deny it. One of its names is the "Spirit of Truth," designated as such by the "Author of our salvation;" hence whatsoever it communicates to man, will be the truth, no matter how weak and fallible the instrument through whom it But says one, the question is, speaks. how shall we know when a servant of God speaks by the Spirit of God, or by his own spirit or in some other way, so that we may not reject, but receive that which comes from God? Before we answer the question directly, we would state, that upon mature reflection we have arrived at the conclusion, that it is not allowable by God's word, that we should know before we have faith in that for which we desire knowledge.

In proof of this we refer the reader to Paul's saying, "The just shall live by faith.". The apostle is so sanguine of the truth of this declaration, that he asserts it three times; once to his Roman, once to his Galatian, and once to his Hebrew brethren; and Habakkuk corroborates the statement in 2:4. In scriptural phraseology the word "just" applies to those justified of God, God's children. It is not applicable to the sinner; he has to repent and be "born again," change his nature, become a "new creature in Christ Jesus," before he can be justified as one of His. We understand the apostle to mean by this saying, that faith is the process by which we obtain the aliment necessary to this spiritual life; nor do we deny that knowledge is necessary; we believe faith to be the antecedent and knowledge the consequent. The foregoing is corroborated by the Savior's declaration, Mark 11:26: "Therefore I say unto you, Whatsoever things ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive, and ye shall have whatsoever ye ask." It is here seen, that in order to receive that which they desire, they must have faith that they will receive the same; but having received the things desired, faith is lost in knowledge, and knowledge is life; "for this is eternal life that they might know thee the only true God," etc. It is declared by the Savior to his servants whom he sent forth to preach the word of life to their fellow man, "He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me," Also, "He that receiveth a prophet, in the name of a prophet, shall receive a prophet's reward."

To answer the question directly "How shall we know that a servant of God in speaking, does so by the Spirit of God, or by his own spirit, or in some other way," we refer the reader to the Savior's saying, "He that doeth His will shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."

In this declaration, is seen the possibility of one claiming to be a servant of God, sent with a message from Him, speaking of himself; or in other words, instead of God sending him he may have sent himself. But the word declares that we shall know in either case! Question, Upon what terms shall we know? Answer, Doing the Father's will. Suppose a brother, or brethren, at the time of hearing a message professedly from God, is not living acceptably in the sight of God, is not doing His will, will he be in a fit position, according to the condition prescribed, to know whether the message is from God? We believe not. It is necessary therefore, for either an individual, or the Church as a body, to be alive in Christ, in order to know from what source a message is. It is recorded, "Without faith it is impossible to please God." If this be true, without faith we could not obtain a knowledge from God, of the truth of a message sent from Him; for he would not be pleased with us; and not being pleased with us individually, or collectively, he would not bestow the desired boon. But do you mean to say that we should render a blind assent, or faith, to everything purporting to come from God? No, my dear reader, we are not so constituted as to believe that "God, the Just One" requires any such thing. Faith is the result of evidence; evidence is generally given by a witness; a witness could not be such without a knowledge of that of which he testifies; no court on earth would receive as a witness one who said he only believed such and such was the case. A servant of God, sent with a message from him, knows the fact of its origin, consequently can testify to the same; and as a witness of God, his character for honesty, uprightness, and truth never having been impeached—to our knowledge we have faith in his testimony; and, "The declarations of a witness furnish evidence of facts to a court or jury."—Webster. If this is true, that the declarations of a witness furnish evidence of facts etc., the declarations of a witness for God, can be scrutinized most diligently, with the most scrupulous care, and they will evidence the fact that they are of God.

It is a fact firmly established in nature, that like begets like; it is also a fact in spirit life, that like begets its like, and cleaveth to the same. It is recorded in this book which we are discussing, that "Intelligence cleaveth to intelligence; wisdom receiveth wisdom; truth embraces truth; virtue loveth virtue; light cleaveth unto light; mercy hath compassion on mercy, and claimeth her own; justice continueth its course, and claimeth its own." The same principle is involved in the Savior's saying, "A tree is known by its fruit. A good tree can not bring forth good fruit."

From these declarations we deduct the following. That if a message be from God, although given in the language of unlearned, fallible man, that which is declared will evidence the fact to our minds, that the principle couched in the message, being born of, or originating with God, are like him, Godlike in their construction and design.

And contrariwise, if a message originates with man, it will show its parentage. The declarations, or thoughts, involved in it, will evidence the fact, no matter what the pretensions of that man, nor how high his attainments. This position is corroborated in the twenty-fifth section, second paragraph, Book of Covenants, old edition, given November, 1831, which reads:

"Your eyes have been upon my servant, Joseph Smith, Jr., and his language you have known, and his imperfections you have known; and you have sought in your hearts knowledge, that you might express beyond his language; this you also know; now seek you out of the Book of Commandments, even the least that is among them, and appoint him that is the most wise among you; or if there be any among you that shall make one like unto it, then ye are justified in saying that you do not know they are true."

You will perceive, reader, that if any of the former revelations that had come through this Joseph Smith had originated with him, he acted very foolishly in giving such an unfair advantage to those opposed, in giving the most wise among them the privilege of making one like unto the least of those revelations; for it would naturally be supposed if any originated with the man, the least would; and to men whom he knew had a knowledge of his imperfections in scholastic attainments, and no doubt knew there were some superior to him in the learning of this world, it would naturally look as giving his case away. He certainly was staking a great deal; not only the least of the revelations upon which the test was to be had, but they were to be justified in declaring that they did not know that any or all of them were true. But to the writer it is very evident that God spake through his servant, and He gave the test, knowing that those revelations, although given to his servant according to his capacity in language, were of him-as he declared there was no unrighteousness in any of them-"and that which is righteous cometh down from above, from the Father of lights." Knowing that they were of Him, He could safely give the test; for man could not originate anything Godlike; that what man brought forth would be like himself, could not rise any higher in the scale of intelligence than man was in possession of, and even the wisest among men, in originating, or organizing any system-without the inspiration of God-would incorporate therein unrighteousness, to a greater or less degree. The writer is among the number who believes, that the character of the witness who declared the revelations in the Book of Covenants to be from God, has never been truthfully impeached; among those who knew him best his character for veracity, honesty and uprightness, to the day of his death, remained unimpaired.

This being the case, the church, or body, to whom the revelations were always presented for their acceptance or rejection, could have faith in the declarations, "Thus saith the Lord;" "Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your Redeemer, the Great I Am," &c. They also could examine the language of the various revelations when presented, although given to his servants in their weakness after the manner of their language, and finding the principles couched therein bore the impress of Jehovah, they had another foundation for their faith; and having exercised faith in God's word, they had pleased Him, and as the people acknowledged of God, trying to do his will, all who succeeded in so doing, were entitled to a knowledge that the revelations were of Him. Many have borne testimony to the truth of these revelations; that they knew they were of God; some by the testimony of heavenly messengers to them; some by the gift of vision; and others by the testimony of the Holy Spirit; all these having done his (the Father's) will, knew that the witness spoke not of himself, but by the power of God, declaring the things of God.

Lamont, Jan'y 2d, 1885.

LET US GO ON UNTO PERFECTION.

This text undoubtedly refers to the perfection of the Christian System, or unto a comprehension and attainment of its higher and more complicated principles of doctrine and government.

We will inquire first, How are we to determine and arrive at what is a correct rule of government to which we are to "go on unto?" We answer by thoroughly and carefully examining the pattern given in the word of God, "the rod of iron," and when we find one that exactly fills the word of the pattern, the word of God, that is perfection number one.

Just so in regard to the doctrine. It must exactly harmonize in every regard with the pure revealed word, "the rod of iron," and then we "will all speak the same thing." Then we shall have arrived to a "unity of the faith," and "all be one in Christ." This will be perfection number two.

To prove that there have been men whom the inspired writers called perfect, we have only to refer to the pure word. See Job 1:1-8; Ps. 37:37; Phil. 3:15; 2 Tim. 3:17: and we might cite you to many more This is perfection number three.

The righteousness that is enjoined on us in the gospel, and attainable through it only, is not the righteousness of the gods, nor even of the angels, but of men. as is clearly stated by "Fidei Defensor, "in his concluding sentence: "Hence it becomes the imperative duty of every Latter Day Saint to seek to know, and to strive to attain unto this same (perfection,) by living in strict obedience to the law; and may God always guide by his Holy Spirit in reaching after greater wisdom and knowledge in the things that pertain unto the Kingdom of our Lord and His Christ, is the earnest prayer of Fidei Defensor;" and all this that we may be fit subjects of the "Celestial Kingdom."

I do not suppose that Bro. Lawn would contend for one moment, that as far as we or any of the Saints are concerned, any preparation on our part is possible "in the grave whither thou goest" quoted by Defensor as being a place where there is no work or device. If David the sweet sing in Israel was correct; then all preparation on our part for us, must take place in the present probationary state. We might notice quite a number of what we should regard as imperfections; but as a notice of or a discussion of them would not remove them, we will be content at present with reminding you, that the "cleansing of the sanctuary" is at hand, and "all that are holding their offices in unrighteousness will be shaken out, and that soon too," and we might add, that any other gospel or doctrine than that proclaimed by Paul or his co-laborers will be shaken out too; and if Judgment must begin at the House of God, 1 Peter, 3:17, in all conscience I would ask, Is it not about time for it to commence, that the quorum, district, branch, and individual difficulties be brought to a perpetual end, so that our ability and strength be turned against our common enemy, "The world, the flesh, and the devil."

One of the principal causes of the misapprehension of the subject under discussion, is a lack of discrimination between the terrestrial and the celestial, the mortal and the immortal kingdoms. I think that a proper discrimination in this regard, will clear the mist and uncertainty from many passages of scripture, and obliterate many theories built upon wrong constructions; therefore we would call the attention of all the Saints to a thorough investigation of the Kingdoms of Christ and also of God.

First then we notice that the kingdom of Christ was prophesied of by all the holy prophets until John. Matt. 11:13. John preached that that kingdom was then due, "at hand," Matt. 3:2. Christ preached that that kingdom was then due, "at hand." Matt. 7: 17; and that they were correct is shown by the fact that the kingdom suffered violence, and the violent took it by force. Matt., 11:12. This is the spiritual or terrestrial kingdom and Church of Christ, into which we are all translated, Col. 3: 13. Thus it is conclusive that this kingdom was set up in the days of Christ and his first apostles; and it had a king and officers, and laws and subjects and territory, and is distinct from the kingdom he taught them to pray for in the lan-guage, "Thy kingdom come." This latter is the literal, celestial, immortal and eternal kingdom of God, that the God of heaven shall set up in the days of these kings, Dan. 2:44, and for which Christ taught his disciples, those already in his spirit-ual kingdom, to pray. The first and spiritual kingdom was introduced at the first advent of Christ, and was marked by his death and resurrection, which are symbolical; and their memory is perpetuated by the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper. The latter of these two is an unanswerable traditionary record of his death, burial and rsurrection.

But again: This kingdom is to be "Delivered up to God, even the Father," I Cor. 15:25. "But every man in his own order, Christ the first." This as we have shown, took place at the beginning of his spiritual kingdom; "And afterwards they that are Chirst's at his (second) coming." I Cor. 15:23. Then these that have been faithful in the spiritual kingdom and Church of Christ, will have the glad plaudit, "Well done, good, (perfected) and faithful servant, enter into the joy of the Lord." This is at the beginning of the second and never ending kingdom. That is when and where the Seer of Palmyra taught his disciples that the Saints and the world would be immortalized. See Church History, pp. 449-50. This condition he also taught was to be an eternal condition. Eternal is never ending.

Now I wish to give Bro. Lawn a little friendly criticism. He says that at the introduction of the perfect state, the devil, or Satan, is to be bound a thousand years. I would ask in all candor if the devil is not bound now-his power limited-and has been since the days of Christ's first advent, and his resurrection. The devil had the power of death, but Christ broke that power by coming forth a triumphant conqueror over "Death, Hell and the grave." And the devil is now a conquered foe. Else how could Christ and his disciples cast out devils, and how could that instruction be made availing for good, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." "But the devil is not dead yet," as one well said through the Herald not long But that the devil has now, or ever will attain unto eternal life, which is the gift of God, is also false, and is a great error imbibed by the "Mother of Harlots," and all of her daughters. The facts are, that the devil and all his emissaries and angels are to be destroyed, Heb. 2:14, "And that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil," and the finally unsaved ones will be cast into the lake of fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," Matt. 25: 41; Rev. 21: 8. "This is the second death," the eternal death; and God's celestial, eternal, immortal kingdom, in its perfected condition, will never be defiled with one single unperfected being, neither man nor devil. No binding of devils there; that kingdom is perfect and eternal, and Christ "shall order it and establish it forever," and let all the Saints say, amen. So may it be.

Guy. So may it be.

THE "HERALD," "HOPE," AND "ADVOCATE."

Brother Joseph and Saints, Greeting:—The wheels of time are rolling rapidly onward. The days are shortening, the leaves are falling, the trees are unrobing themselves of their beautiful garments of many colors, and the birds are being left to meet the storms and colds of another winter. These things tell us that the year 1882 is hastening to a close. Wisdom dictates that we should review the past, with sentiments of grateful remembrance for sparing mercy, and sustaining love. Many of our fellow travelers have fallen by the way, while our lives have been graciously prolonged to continue on our way.

The Herald, Hope, and Advocate still live, and find their way into many thousands of homes in our land, imparting instruction to the Saints, encouraging mothers to persevere in their labors of love, training their buds in the way they ought to go, that when they are advanced in years, they may not from it stray.

The Herald has now attained to its twenty-eighth annual issue. The Hope to its fourteenth, and the Advocate to its fifth. Having been before the public for this long period, abundant opportunity has been given to judge of their merits. But the verdict upon this question is evidently not an equivocal one; for year after year, amidst a multitude of other periodicals, they have kept their ground. Let this speak for itself, "And to God be all the praise." The object of their editors and contributors in aiding and writing, is not to gain applause, but to influence the minds and hearts of the people for God. We seek to teach lessons of wisdom and piety, which are of value for this world, and for that which is to come. Perhaps the circulation of our precious papers, or we might say "messengers of love," might be greater, if we wrote to amuse rather than to instruct. But remember, the responsibilities of the corps of writers who influence the minds and the actions of the many thousands who read, and they try to discharge the duty laid upon them in the fear of him who "requireth for that which is past."

One writer remarked that we have got one of the best Sunday School papers published in the land! And when we consider the demoralization of both literature and art; the unfaithfulness in the administration of trusts, now no rare spectacle in public affairs; the lowering of the standard of business integrity, and of moral responsibility, for the payment of debts: the increase of unscrupulous speculation, and of corrupt combinations to control prices, and give fictitious values, regardless of the injuries done to others: which all greatly oppress a man of tender conscience in his endeavors to make a living, we do not wonder at the sensational literature: tales of adventure and crime: and cheap, trashy publications, all over the land. Says the late Cardinal Wiseman, "Give me the training of children, and I care but little who has the education of the adults." The Cardinal was a man of very wide observation, and he recognized the great importance of teaching lessons to the young. This, then, is one of our principal objects, to help parents to teach their children how to live, that they may be prepared to The results of our toil will be made manifest at the last day, when the secrets of all hearts shall be made known, and discovered. Surely, among the countless millions who will then receive the "Well done," from the lips of the Master, the Christian's father and mother will not be forgotten; their reward will be great indeed; for they have trained their little ones for immortality. Their reward will be ours, if we are faithful to help on the greatest work of this, or any other age— "The latter day work," and bringing up children for God. May he help us to do so is my prayer.

And now, dear reader, help us to contribute to our respective papers and seek to increase their circulation, that we may all be coworkers in the vineyard of the Lord; and may the divine blessing rest upon all our united efforts, and render them instrumental in extending the Redeemer's kingdom.

WILLIAM STREET.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS .- No. 4.

BY S. F. W.

SEERIC.

THE first actors in the world's history are the greatest. Whether the first created man was a savage or not depends upon what contstitutes a savage. He was ignorant. Many savages of the present day have great capabilities of mind and heart. Missionaries find such among all tribes. There is a law of natural development that applies to the question. The first types of any order or species are neither the highest nor lowest of these orders or species; and as they run their courses, lower as well as higher types appear. In addition to this, human history attests that nations, tribes and individuals, deteriorate and retrograde, as well as advance. There is no law of nature in conflict with the well supported theory that the Africans are descended from Cain. He was a savage.

A treatment of the subject of archæology includes a notice of the Mosaic record of creation. In the perfected form in which it is found complete in the first chapter of Genesis it conflicts with geolegy to such a degree, that an attempt at harmonizing them is, at the present time, hopeless; but yet it corresponds so nearly with the latest theories and strangest deductions of advanced science, that there is reason to expect that further developments of scientific truth upon the one hand, and new methods of interpretation on the other, will reduce still more the antagonisms, and explain the seeming want of any reference in Genesis to the Silurian era.

The Nebular theory explains how light was "first born," and how afterwards darkness was upon the face of the great deep; how the lands came out of the sea; how the firmament came between the waters above and below; how birds and animals produced from the sea were associatel; how the sun and moon appeared in due time; how saurians lived while the air was impregnated with noxious fumes, and mammals after the carboniferous era, and how the race of man came when due preparation had been made. All theories and facts attest the day of rest that now obtains.

The author of the first of Genesis uses the word Eloheim, plural of El, the Strong One, and which is derived from the word "to turn," to roll, and was originally applied to the power that rolls the seven stars of the Great Bear around the pole, and sustains the heavens. The title is associated with the traditionary Mount of Paradise—the Gan Eden of Semitic, Turanian, and Aryan tradition, was located in the high plateau of Pamir in central Asia, where four great rivers rise. This mountain is connected with the Gelestial Eden, and the north pole was the supposed common center of the two. It is the same that is referred to by Ezekiel as "the Holy Mountain of God," and by Isaiah as "the mount of the congregation in the sides of the north." It is connected too with the traditional mountain where the ark rested. The most ancient texts of the Zend-Avesta point to it, as do those of the Mahabharata and the Puranas. It is called Meru by the Hindoos and Albordj by the Persians. The rivers that rise there are the Indus, the Helmend, the Oxus and the Jaxartes. The primitive name of Meru was Aryaratha, the chariot of the Aryas, the seven stars of the Great Dipper. Arya-ratha was corrupted into Ararat, and misapplied to Mt. Masis. It was the abode of the divinities—the Asiatic Olympus, and here was the primordial civilization: so said.

The second chapter contains a different narration of the creation of man, in which the first human beings are represented as a single pair, and a different name is given to the Deity. Nearly every object in this chapter has a symbolical meaning, and the whole is allegorical. The account was doubtless originally written in hieroglyphics, which are symbols. Before the invention of the alphabet there was no way of representing words but by objects, and all religious ideas were represented by symbols. This symbolism has been perpetuated in all lands. It is absurd to make the ancient usages conform to ours. The picture of the tree of life is older than written language. The garden of Eden is the Gan Eden of Semetic, Aryan, and Turanian tradition as just represented.

The tree of life and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil are myths common to the ancient civilization. The fruit bearing palmtree meant the recipient element of nature in the production of life -the female element. The serpent was supposed to represent the fecundating power of nature—the male principle, and active element in the production of life. All that the ancient pagans knew of God was what they could interpret from nature. The frequent lapses of the Israelites were to this idolatry. The picture of a serpent wound around a fruitbearing tree represents the necessity of the combination of the two elements in nature and in the production of any form of life. From this it may, or may not be inferred that to eat of the fruit of the tree and become as gods was to become creators of new forms of being. Being driven out of Eden may or may not mean leaving the joys and innocency of youth. The sweat of the brow may or not mean the struggle for existence in mature life. The knowledge of good and evil may be the knowledge that comes of sins, and sorrow for sins that debar return to the Eden of youth; and a history of the first man may be a history of all men. The creeping to which the serpent was doomed may or may not be confirmed by the fact that the boaconstrictor has rudimentary legs. ing woman out of a rib is explained by the old myth that the first man and woman were one being—an androgyn. The most ancient name of Babylon was the place of the tree of life. The cherubs with flaming sword over the east of the garden were winged bulls, with human faces, and the flaming sword was a revolving phenomenon—a flaming disc, a purely Chaldean conception.

There is nothing pleasant to the modern mind in this ancient symbolism, yet we find it here used to enforce the purest and highest conceptions of truth. One evidently familiar with the gross concep-tions of the phallic worship here reaches by divine inspiration the highest plane of spiritual truth. The act is evolution and we see the incipiency of a spiritual revolution. The same symbol of the serpent appears again in the prophecy of the future Christ as the seed of the woman who should bruise its head. What is the explanation? This, that the revelations of God are affected by the reigning ideas. Joseph's dreams are Egyptian. Ezekiel's images are Assyrian. Some of the patterns shown Moses in the mount were Egyptian. The great promises were communicated to Abraham by what seems to us a heathenish ceremony. There was doubtless true worship before the flood and after it, but so far as research can detect, Judaism sprang out of Paganism. This coming of the sweet out of bitter has been exemplified by all dispensations and all reforms; and now in our own time we find true Saints of God so closely allied to the abominations of a former rule, that many opposers can not, or will not see any difference. So couched in pagan symbolism is this first recorded prophecy; more wonderful than the creation of worlds. Just when questioning whether or not Moses wrote the account we are forced to say, a greater than Moses is

The origin of Christianity is an unsolvable problem, God has ordained that his counsels can not be looked into, not even by angels; but it can be traced definitely back to Genesis 3: 15. In geology we trace different forms of life in such succession that we are ready to say that one sprang from the other by variation, but just when the proof seems conclusive we come to another form that no law of development can explain, so we trace one statement after another back to its source. and when ready to say all sprang out of paganism, we come across this prophecy, which is a "leap," requiring divine interference. We have seen, too, an order of progression in the development of organisms, that made each new form a prophecy of what should follow. So this first declaration of the spirit of prophecy is a link connecting the geological and human records. Having followed cosmical history from the beginning down into the human period it seems proper here, by a geological excursus, to show the unity and connection of the different parts of the

The argument from design has been used in all ages to prove the being of God. Cicero found it just as Paul did. The argument has gained force by the discoveries of modern times. Surveying the whole field of geological science, the modern philosopher says that each part was a prophecy of all that followed. Hall demonstrates the existence of the intelligent creative will by saying that it was a part of the design and original purpose, to impress upon man that the same God who finished with man, began with the vertebrate fish as a model. The design that reaches up to man, of course reaches to all that man may become in the eternities upon which he is entering. The laws and providence that brought him into being can give him higher being. What is the resurrection but evolution, and a survival of the fittest?

If an untutored savage saw a blacksmith make a nail on his anvil, he would look on with wonder, and feel much reverence for the operator. If he should afterwards be told of a machine making nails by the thousand, each one at a single stroke; and be told that that was man's way of making nails, he would, may be, feel indignant and say he knew better; that he had seen man make nails, and knew how it was done. The Christian world of the last generation, occupied this ground of this supposed savage; they could not see that it was more worthy the divine architect to establish laws, and put in operation forces that would work out his creations according to his will and purpose, than to personally and miraculously and instantaneously and upon occasion, produce these various works.

The expression "The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters," is common ground for evolution and creation.

"Let the dry land appear and it was so" is a key to the whole problem of creation. We know that the Adirondacs arose from the primeval sea by the same forces that are raising the coasts of Norway at the present time. The process in each is gradual and protracted in duration; and the word of command, "let," applies equally to either case; and must have either a scientific or poetic interpretation. The introduction of life was by the forces of nature, and therefore by the same method; and is explained by the same phrase: God said let the waters bring forth, &c., and God said let the earth bring forth, &c.

The forces that elevate a continent, and the forces that populate it are equally natural, and equally divine, and scripturally identical—not identical in operation. The forces that made the continents are radiation and contraction. In these we can not discover divine wisdom, but as they prepare the conditions which make life possible, they are part of the forces that cause life, and are equally divine with them. But, the forces which produce organic forms show intelligence, so we must suppose that intelligence directs the forces that upheave the continents. The wisdom controling the forces becomes more apparent in the late stages of the creation, until finally the general design becomes apparent. One type points to a succeeding type, and each is a promise of the culmination in man; so the creative intelligence is a prophetic spirit, the same that spoke to Adam and to Moses, and told them what should be,

Man is the culmination of the progressive principle—is the last link in the chain. Creation ceases by law just as it began by law. The creative principle in nature exhausted itself. Nature's "teeming date dried up," simply because the process was completed. No higher structures could possibly succeed the previous types. No higher endowment could be given than that of the human mind.

The creative process having terminated upon earth in man, argues that nature is not capable of a higher effort; so, therefore, there is not upon any earth, or in any sphere, a more perfect form, or intelligence of higher type. Christ came and went, and will come, in human form. (Winged cherubs are a fiction). There are abundant scientific proofs that man enters upon a state in which change of form is not necessary. His mind is capable of infinite expansion, but not susceptible of change of constitution. He is now in his first estate, with an infinity of time ahead.

Going back to trace principles of evolution that culminated in man we find that he was and is, subject to laws of development that had been in force throughout the geological era. He was a propagator of his species and his species became de-vided into races, and differentiated into tribes and families; all within limits that were the bound of species, genera, families, &c., in the old Silurea era. The migrations of these races; their succession on the earth; their rise and decline under favorable or unfavorable periods and conditions, is purely geological; and all human institutions have followed a law of development. Religion is not an exception to the law of the survival of the fittest; and civilization is an evolution, and we behold and perform an act in the drama that began in the movements of stardust. And as God is in the last act so must he have been in the first. The history of creation merges into the history of man. One plan runs through both. One design is traceable throughout. It was the God of Creation who spoke to the prophets. None but the Creator could know how the machine would work. The future will grow out of the past by evolution and the forces are discovered that will produce the results prophets have foretold. What can the resurrection be but evolution, and the new earth-but the old transformed?

Cain's building a city proves that there were people to occupy it or that it was small. The text concerning this and other like matters have been used in proof of theory of a pre-Adamite race; but it is this first race we have been searching for—the first man whatever his name. There could have been but one first man. Humanity is a unit—a single species; and the milleniums past and to come, can not make one man essentially different from an other one.

Cain's building a city, Tubal Cain making implements and Jubal handling harps, &c., seem to denote the evolution of the industries and arts of civilization. Copper and iron are smelted at a very early period.

All the antediluvian narratives are duplicated in the myths of the ancient nations.

It is easier to trace the origin of the myths than it is to trace the origin of the narrative. The Dioscuri and Cabiri are reflections of Cain and Abel. Vulcan is possibly Tubal Cain, Set of Egypt and Baal of Assyria were probably Seth. The ten patriarchs became the ten heroes of the Assyrians and likewise of the Iranians; the ten kings of Egypt, ten emporers of China, &c. Noah became Aquarius. Enoch's character was inconceivable except to seers. He does not reappear in myth.

The ages of the patriarchs were an artificial arrangement according to the cycle of the sabbatical year. The numbers are different in different versions and are fanciful or misunderstood in all.

The sons of God who took wives of the daughters of men were the angels who Jude (and Peter with him) tells us kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation. Their progeny were the supposed heroes celebrated throughout the ancient world in myth and song. As an example of these myths one cuneiform inscription states that they were not found worthy to go the land of the silver sky, where the son of Ea raises the dead, but were imprisoned in the land without return. Presumptuousness is one of the sins ascribed by ancient tradition to the antediluvians. Violence is charged in the scriptural narrative. The Book of Enoch represents them as astrrologers and necromancers. The crimes that brought the punishment of fire and brimstone are most probably the ones that characterized those punished by water. Physiology knows nothing of hybrid heroes. Geology knows nothing of giants. The geological record is not complete. An engulfed Atlantis may have taken down the evidences of man's existence and exploits in that early age-or the inaccessible and little known parts of the world may contain them. The men of the caves, peat bogs and gravel pits are very unideal. So we may question part of the narrative, while admitting the main facts. The parallel of Sodom is not the only one. The traditions of Mexico portray a condition of morals and magical practices among the Toltecs quite like that of the antediluvians, and christian civilization seems to be tending to similar conditions.

The traditions of the Chaldeans were carried by Abraham to Canaan (though it is possible that Melchisedec had records of which Chaldean were corrupted duplicates). They were perpetuated in the sacred archives of his race and collated and compiled by prophets; and though many of the legends were false and many questionable, yet the dogmatic teaching of which they are the vehicle is binding on the conscience of the race forever. age of criticism has come and now uninspired men can detect the mistakes of those who were inspired—the mystic seers of the twilight of time—and separate the narative into its different redactions, and again into parts; but there is a spiritual reality behind the narrative of possible and impossible actions and events, that knowledge will never dispel the awe of.

Much of the narrative is out of the domain of criticism, because it treats of the world beyond the cognizance of the intellectual faculties. Modern times has produced two seers both of whom have reviewed this primitive history. One pronounced it allegorical and purely spiritual; teaching moral truths by correspondence which he undertook, with unparalelled ability of learning and reason, to explain.

The other pronounced them literal and truthful history. Science runs its plough-share through both interpretations, yet both are nearer right than it can get.

Finally we have no right to set up a standard for God. Our province is to accept of the situation, to know the exact truth, and admit it, and be thankful and believing. It imperfection is the rule, accept the rule and apply it to modern inspiration.

THE INHABITANTS OF NEW MEXICO IN PRE-HISTORIC TIMES.

THE railroad is working a revolution in the history of New Mexico. This Territory with an area large enough for four good sized States has lain idle for centuries, save in villages of Mexican and Pueblo Indians. What this country once has been, no person can with any degree of accuracy estimate, from the fact no written history exists anterior to the beginning of the fifteenth century, and as to what occurred before that period it is the work of the scientists, if possible, to determine. I suppose I will be classed as heterodox, if I should presume to state that this country was inhabited before the Christian era. Investigation impels me to that belief. Go where I will, I find ruined cities of which no living being has any tradition as to the period of their occupancy.

In Taos County, about eighteen miles from Fernado de Taos, along the shores of the Rio Grande del Norte is a city some twelve to fifteen miles in length, where walls have crumbled, until where the walls of the buildings stood are ridges about six to ten inches high in distinctive parallelograms, while in the spaces inside and out, the slow accumulations of centuries have created a deposit of several feet. I had to dig down five feet beside one of the walls, before I came to the stone foundation. This wall was three feet thick. The old-est Indian I saw—ninety years old—had no tradition as to what the name of this city was, or who occupied it, save the fact that it was before the birth of Montezuma, whom they claim was born in the earlier centuries at the Pecas Pueblo, (Pueblo means town) which is about fifty miles northeast of Santa Fe. After Montezuma had grown to be a man, Hon. W. S. Ritsche says that, "It is claimed by the Indians that Montezuma was possessed of supernatural powers, and that he on one occasion collected his people and started from New Mexico on a journey south, their great leader, Montezuma, riding on the back of an eagle in advance of his people. Wherever the eagle stopped at night there was planted an Indian Pueblo. The sign of arriving at the site of the great city and capital of the Aztec Nation was to be the alighting of the eagle upon a cactus bush and devouring a serpent. This event took place when the eagle arrived at the site of the present City of Mexico, then first made a city and capital.

The faith of the Indian is strong in Montezuma. He promised to return, and although several centuries have past, the sacred fires in the Estufas are ever burning, never permitted to go out. As the sun rises in the morning and sets in the evening, so go the faithful believers up to the highest elevation accessible, sometimes on the tops of their houses, and sometimes on the mountains, where they engage in a prayer to the sun, showing that the principle of sun worship is a cardinal principle so deeply imbued in their nature, that although the Jesuits and Catholic priests have had full sway with them for over three hundred years, yet parts of the principle of Aztec worship are yet observed. Go into the churches and buildings of the Pueblo Indians and you find pictures of eagles, animals, cactus, serpents, and such things as enter into or are in anywise connected with their traditions. And when I come to the topic of tradition, I will go At the present time the allinto detail. absorbing topic with me is, who preceded the Toltec race, and whence come they? That is the question to which I have been giving all my capacity for inquiry and personal investigation of the remains and other facts by which I can come to a conclusion on this subject.

To enable me to accomplish this object I have examined the ruins of the Moundbuilders from their most northern limits through Canada, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Missouri, and thence across to this country from the foot of the Rocky Mountains down to the Gulf of Mexico. It is a well known fact that the mounds of Nineveh and Babylon are yet in a state of perfect preservation, being covered with a luxuriant coat of grass, while those erected of stone have by the agency of rains, snows, frosts, and the air and sun crumbled away, while the same agencies have been a strong protection to the shape of those that were covered, as first stated. On a mesa of a tributary to the Upper Gila River, in southwestern part of Socorro County, are several mounds, their shape preserved by the grass, the location of which with reference to the river, goes to show that when built they were constructed with reference to accessibility to the water, which in centuries innumerable has cut away the banks to a depth of several hundred feet, and make the water inaccessible, except by traveling a considerable distance to reach a place where a descent can be made to it.

No settlement now is within many miles of those relics, and the oldest inhabitant I could find, an Indian, had no tradition as to the time when these mounds were occupied. In the vicinity of these mounds I thought I saw evidences of where a settlement had once been, and on excavating to the depth of five feet through an accumulation of alluval, I found quite a quantity of fragments of pottery, artistically ornamented, unlike anything of the modern period. About two days' ride southeasterly, I came to the Mimbres River. All along the Mesas on either side, are the evidences of settlements of pre-historic times.

Farther down the river, a settler, while sinking a well, at a depth of nine feet, came upon a stone hammer, beautifully shaped, small oziers handsomely shaped and striped in silver and gold, showing that both of these metals had been used in solution and inburned by a process then known. In the same vicinity was'dug up a terrapin-shaped mal-pais stone bowl or dish about eight inches long, five wide and four deep. It had the head cut in relief, the neck about an inch long; the feet were short. The rock from which this terrapin was cut is common in the Burro Mountains, some thirty miles distant. When it is known that this mal-pais is harder to work than granite, it will afford an opportunity for speculation as to the process by which, and with what this bowl was made, especially when considering the fact that it belongs to an age that antedates the knowledge of metalic substances or implements?

When considering the fact that grass has preserved the mounds of Nineveh and Babylon, we may, by comparison with the mounds of our own country, draw some conclusions that may be of some importance in throwing light on our own country's occupancy. Ohio readers will remember the works at Newark, the serpent mound in Adams County that according to my recollection, is a thousand feet long, and the one across the river from Portsmouth. All these, when I last saw them, were in a wonderful state of preservation. The works I have named above, and others in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Canada, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Missouri and other States and Territories, and thence on down were made as the builders emigrated. On their return to Central America they erected more wonderful works, as experience taught them, both in Mexico and Peru. Their defensive works go to show that they were pursued by an enemy, and left behind them in their tracks, monuments, altars, idols, ruined temples, bridges, aqueducts, paved roads, stairways hewn and worn in the solid rocks in their roads to places of security in the higher elevations. One race built Cities, wove fabrics, and made a cloth not dissimilar to that made by the Egyptians used in embalming their dead; they worked in gold and silver and copper, labored in the fields, and I believe then had their regular governments.

The Indians succeeded the moundbuilders, but there is this difference: they built no Cities, no churhes, no schoolhouses, no ships, no bridges, no roads, but only the wigwam and canoe. His highest aim was, is, and always will be, to do the neatest job in scalping the white man, and to let his squaw do the torturing, build the wigwam, cut the wood, carry the burdens on the journey, make his "fire water," clear the land, scratch the ground with a stick or sharp stone, plant the same, and dress the skins for the clothing while the "noble red man," a dirty, lazy, lousy, stinking piece of humanity, hunts, fishes, smokes, and drinks his vino mescal, a strong liquor which I have seen them make from the maguey plant, which grows in abundance all through these Western Territories. This liquor has the smell and flavor of the German "kinel' and with the potency of undiluted Put-in Bay Catawba brands. After this liquor has stood a few days it is pleasant to taste, but good proof spirits, and improves by age. I saw several squaws make this liquor. They gathered the plant which was as large around as a good sized cabbage, a hole dug in the ground about eighteen inches deep, put some sticks in the bottom, then tied the outer leaves at the top, and placed three in a hole, covered them all over with sticks and dried grass, then covered all with earth about three inches deep, leaving a small hole in one side to set fire to the sticks and grass. In this way, in a much shorter time than a person would suppose, the plants would be roasted, and on removal the juices would be squeezed out with the hands, like wringing a wet cloth. As soon as cool enough to drink, its use is begun. It requires about two hours in its manufacture. The older it gets the more powerful its strength. The old story of the white man learning the Indian to drink "fire water" is a first-class puritanical myth. The Indians understood its manufacture and use before the Mayflower landed her pilgrims, or the English settled at Jamestown in 1607, or the Dutch at New Amsterdam in 1613.

Conserence Minutes.

WYOMING VALLEY DISTRICT.

A special conference was held in the Wyoming Valley District January 10th and 11th, 1885. H. S. Gill president, John J. Thomas clerk pro tem.

Reports of Branches.—Plymouth 11. Nanticook no change. Danville no report. Hyde Park 26. Elders' Reports.—L. B. Thomas, John J. Morgan, H. S. Gill (baptized one), in person; Wm. Crumb, Jacob Baldwin, by letter. Deacon John J. Thomas reported in person. Priest T. O. Davis by letter.

The Hyde Park Branch recommended David Griffiths to the conference, to be ordained to the office of an Elder, which was done by Elder H. S. Gill and L. B. Thomas.

Resolved, That Jacob Baldwin preach in and around Plymouth as circumstances permit until next conference.

Resolved, That John J. Thomas be the district clerk.

Resolved, That we receive H. S. Gill's resignation as district president, and that we recommend him to the Bishop as his Agent in this district instead of the deceased Wm. W. Jones.

Resolved, That John J. Morgan be district president.

Sunday forenoon H. S. Gill made a short and instructive address to the children; then David Griffiths preached in the Welch language. Saints' meeting at 2 p. m.; the Spirit was present and in abundance, which made us to rejoice. At 6:30 p. m. preaching by John J. Morgan in the English language, and L. B. Thomas in the Welch.

Resolved, That we sustain the authorities in righteousness.

Adjourned to meet in Plymouth, the last Saturday in May, 1885, at 2 p. m.

GALLAND'S GROVE DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Galland's Grove on the 19th, 20th, 21st and 22d days of December, 1884, at 11 a.m., Eli Clothier president, W. W. Whiting assistant president, John Pett and C. E. Butterworth secretaries.

Afternoon Session: Branch Reports.—Galland's Grove 231; 5 baptized, 1 received by certificate. Mason's Grove 94; 7 baptized. North Coon 21; 1 baptized. Salem 90; 4 baptized, 1 received by letter. Coalville 23; 4 baptized, 2 expelled.

Ministerial Reports:—Eli Clothier, John Hawley, James Caffall, John Rounds (baptized 5), C. Butterworth.

Saturday forenoon session: Brn. James Turner and Ira A. Goff reported as a committee to visit the Pilot Rock Branch, and if possible get it in order, and obtain a report. They were not as successful as could be desired; many of the members had moved away and the record was lost. Thereport was accepted and the committee discharged. Brn. W. Whiting and John Pett were on motion appointed a committee to labor in the Pilot Rock Branch, and if possible get a report.

Ministerial reports continued:—W. W. Whiting (baptized 2), James Wedlock (baptized 1), B. F. Wicks, Wm. Jordan and Edmund Ford reported by Bro. Whiting. Alfred Jackson, Davis H. Bays, John Pett. Priest Chauncy Williamson, and Teachers Thomas Bell, John Cross and James Turner.

Brn. John Rounds and John Hawley were appointed to labor at Charter Oak in Crawford county, and in Carroll county. The Elders and Priests not engaged in branches, were, on motion, requested to labor under the direction of the district president as much as they could.

Bishop's Agent's Report.—Cash on hand at last report, June 6th, 1884, $4.70; received since $242.50. Total $247.20. Paid out $237.67; balance $9.53.

Resolved, That we accept the appointment of Bro. James Caffall to labor in western Iowa, and that we request him to labor amongst us as much as he can.

Brn. Eli Clotheir and W. Whiting were sustained as president and assistant president of the district, till after the close of the next conference; and Brn. John Pett and Charles E. Butterworth secretaries.

Bro. J. C. Crabb preached in the evening. Sunday forenoon Bro. Caffall preached. Bro. Derry preached in the afternoon, and in the evening Bro. D. H. Bays preached.

Monday, 10 a. m. Miscellaneous business in regard to the duties and privileges of branch officers, was discussed and passed upon; after which upon application of Bro. D. H. Bays to the conference for a letter of removal from the Galland's Grove Branch, which had been refused him; and the conference deciding it had no power under the circumstances to grant it, it was Resolved, That the Galland's Grove Branch be required to grant to D. H. Bays a letter of removal, or show cause for not doing so.

Adjourned to meet at the Salem Branch, on Friday, March 6th, 1885, at 11 a. m.

Miscellaneous.

PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT.

To the officers and members of the Philadelphia District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.—You are hereby notified that the Philadelphia District Conference will be held in Philadelphia on Sunday, February 22d, 1885, that we may appoint delegates to the General Conference to be held at Independence, Missouri, April 6th, 1885.

JOSEPH STEWART, WILLIAM SMALL,

In charge of district.

PHILADILPHIA, Jan. 12th, 1885.

THE EXPOSITOR.

Bro. Foseph Smith:—I desire to say to the readers of the Herald to whom we have sent the first number of The Expositor, that in consequence of the hurry and drive in the holidays, our first edition of 5,000 copies had many typographical errors which have been corrected, and to-day we issue the second edition of 5,000 copies. We intend to keep 2,000 copies to fill subscriptions. We desire everybody who can subscribe to do so, and we will send corrected copies to all subscribers.

H. P. Brown.

NORTH-WEST KANSAS DISTRICT.

The next conference of this District convenes with the Goshen Branch, of Clay County, Kan., Saturday February 1st, 1885, at ten o'clock. A full and complete report from all the branches and ministry is desired. We hope to see a large attendance of the Saints. Come brethren; come one and all; come with the Spirit of the Master, come, praying that the Holy Spirit may shed light upon our minds and love in our hearts.

A. KENT, Dist. Pres.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

Conference of the above district will be held at Plano, Illinois, beginning at half-past ten o'clock, February 28th, 1885. We trust the Saints and officers of the several branches in the district will take notice and attend or send a report of their branches, one and all, so that we may know how the district stands. Be in earnest, brethren, about this matter.

W. VICKERY, Secretary of District.

CORRECTION.

Dear Herald:—Allow me to correct a statement made by Bro. A. J. Hinkle, in a recent issue. Bro. Hinkle states that an angel appeared unto my father and Reuben Newkirk, in Wisconsin, at the beginning of this Reorganization, and told him certain things. Now this is the first I have ever heard of such a thing. I have talked with my mother, who is also much surprised, as she never heard of such a thing before. The words, or something similar, attributed to the angel, were spoken by R. Newkirk, or wife, or my sister Julia, aged about fifteen years; and I think likely it was the latter. These three having prayed first for the gifts, and then to know certain things to which these words were the answer, having préviously been instructed by my father what to pray for. The statement is evidently a mistake.

Yours for truth,

Z. H. GURLEY.

PLEASANTON, Ia., January 11th, 1885.

BISHOP'S AGENT.

Having been notified of the recommendation of Bro. H. S. Gill as Bishop's Agent, for the Wyoming Valley District, Pennsylvania, I do hereby appoint him as my agent, and as such recommend him to the Saints.

G. A. BLAKESLEE, Presiding Bishop. Galien, Michigan, Jan. 15th, 1885.

BORN.

LANYON.—At Nauvoo, Illinois, January 10th, 1885, to Bro. Wm. C. and Sr. E. Lanyon, a daughter.

SHEEHY.—At Fall River, Massachusetts, November 17th, 1884, to Bro. Moses and Sr. Susanna Sheehy, a daughter; named Rouletta Mabel.

Novert.—At Henderson, Iowa, December 28th, 1884, to brother and sister Novert, a daughter named Bertha Abigail.

MARRIED.

[In consequence of an error of the proof reader in a former publication, this notice is republished.]

WILLIAMS—GRAY.—Bro. Richard R. Williams, son of Sr. Thomas R. G. Williams, was married at Lucas, Iowa, on Christmas Eve, 1884, to Sr. Mary A. Gray, daughter of Bro. and Sr. R. S. Gray, Bro. Henry A. Stebbins officiating.

SMITH—WALKER.—At the residence of the bride's parents, near Iowa City, Iowa, November 16th, 1884, Fred A. Smith and Miss May Walker, by E. D. Kilburn, Pastor of M. E. Church. After a trip through Western Iowa, returned to Independence, Missouri, where they will make their future home.

SCHANCK—DAVIS.—At the residence of J. W. Novert, at Keystone Branch, December 9th, 1884, by J. W. Novert, Mr. Theodore Schanck and Sister Laura D. Davis, of Henderson, Iowa. DIED.

FASSETT.—At the house of her son-in-law, Mr. John Lee, near Lamoni, Iowa, on the morning of December 31st, 1884, Mrs. Mary Fassett, aged 87 years, 1 month, and 26 days. She was born at Portland, Maine, November 5th, 1797 and has been a widow since 1844, living with her daughter, Mrs. Lee, for many years. Her son, Mr. J. W. Fassett, lives at Denver, Colorado. In August 1882, she had a stroke of paralysis from which she never recovered, and the next year a cancer appeared, so that her sufferings and weakness both of body and mind during the past two years were very great. In early life she embraced the Baptist faith, and is said to have lived in letter and spirit, to her profession. Funeral services by Bro. Henry A. Stebbins at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Lee.

BUTLER.—At 182, Fremont Street, Chicago, December 16th, 1884, sister Eunice Alden, wife of Henry Butler, aged So years. Sister Butler was born near Cooperstown, New York, May 13th, 1804; became a member of the church during the life time of the Seer; renewed her covenant in 1861 by being baptized by Elder Sheen at Plano. She became a member of the first Chicago Branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, while Uncle Mark was in charge, was one of the most faithful members, and although five miles from the Hall, and notwithstanding her age, hardly ever missed a meeting or a Sunday School. I had the privilege to be with her several times two days before her death. She had a faith reaching within the vail; longing for the rest prepared for the Saints; she had no fear of death, for she knew in whom she put her trust. She fell asleep without a struggle. May our end be like hers.

CHAS. L. MUETZE. BREITHAUPT.-At Clifton, Kansas, January 8th, 1885, Wallace L., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Breithaupt, aged 2 months, and 19 days. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder A. Kent, at the residence of the child's parents.

> Go to thy rest fair child. Go to thy dreamless bed While yet so gentle, undefiled, With blessings on thy head; Ere sin has seared thy breast, Or sorrow woke the tear; Rise to thy throne of changeless rest, In your delightful sphere.

SMITH.—At St. Louis, Missouri, January 7th, 1885, William J., son of Bro. Joseph A. and sister Maria T. Swift. Elder J. C. Foss officiating at ELVIN.—At Nebraska City, Nebraska, January 13th, 1885, Lyman Moroni, son of Robert M. and Emeline A. Elvin; born to die, was the life journey of this child. Funeral services by Elder J. W. Waldsmith.

WADDELL.-At Independence, Missouri, January 9th, 1885, Soren O., son of Bro. and Sr. S. O. Waddell, aged 16 years, 1 month and 2 days. Funeral sermon at Saints' chapel by Elder F. C.

CLOSSON .- At Independence, Missouri, on the 6th of January, 1885, John William, only child of Bro. and Sr. William O. Closson, aged 3 years and 5 months. Funeral sermon at the Saints' chapel, by Elder F. G. Pitt.

ALFALES YOUNG, a son of President Brigham Young, and J. L. Rawlins, son of Bishop Rawlins, of Union Fort, Utah; both quite able young men, have fallen under the displeasure of the authorities of the church to which their fathers and possibly themselves belong. The ground for this displeasure is that these young men have thought that the attempted union of church and state had worked disadvantageously to the best interests of the people, and the state, as a consequence. And having taken thought they have given utterance to those thoughts.

The Deseret News of January 23d gives a letter written to the Salt Lake Tribune, January 12th, 1885, by a member of the Utah Church whose name is Mrs. J. L. Miller, which letter the News calls "a caustic and incisive communication," thereby adopting it. In that letter as published by the News, occur the following references to Messrs. Alfales Young and J. L. Rawlins:

"Who are these modest (?) and precious (?) upstarts, if you please? What have they done to develop and build up Utah and to make her the prosperous Territory she is? To whom is Alfales Young indebted for his money and education? and what of Joseph Rawlins? Are they honoring their fathers in payment for these legacies! Did President Brigham Young ever talk like his illustrious (?) scion, Alfales? Do his gangrene sentiments, as vapored at the Theater, harmonize in any particular with those of his father? Anybody that knew or heard his father, knows that Alfales is fighting him in act and sentiment. What of young Rawlins? Is he an improvement on Alfales? If so, in what particular? He knows that his father and mother are not pleased with his course; that he is opposing them as with fire. What fillial affection! What a reverence for parents! What dutiful, loveable and noble sons! But they contend that their sires were and are in the dark; that they know a great deal more than their sires; that they have drunk longer and dived deeper for the jewel of inspiration, and consequently they are better posted. Are they better posted? Do they know more? Are they better and more competent teachers than their parents? If left to be answered by the thousands who knew their sires, what answer do you think would be returned? Poor, simple, theoretic, impracticable, unbaked, unripe simpletons!"

To show the character of what these young men have said that has brought down upon their devoted heads such a "caustic" application of words, we quote from the speech of Mr. Rawlins upon the occasion referred to and complained of.

The speech was delivered under the auspices of the Utah Young Democratic Club, in the Salt Lake Theater, January 8th, 1885. We presume that Mr. Alfales Young was present and gave expression to similar views, and thus compromised him-

But there is another feature of our platform to which your attention must be invited. Among the objects of the Democratic party as set forth in the National Democratic platform and to which the party pledges itself is "to revive respect for law." The President-elect, nominated by that party in a recent letter, affirms that it is a part of the Democratic faith that there should be an honest and regular enforcement of existing laws. As an adjunct of that party, we do not seek to shun the responsibility of these declarations. If laws are unjust they should be repealed; but so long as they remain they must be enforced. Every person may agitate for the repeal of a law. An unconstitutional law is no law. He may go to the court at his own risk to have that determined. But the ultimate determination of that question is with the courts, and not with him.

To effectuate this Democratic doctrine, locally, the Democratic Club in its platform affirms that "we shall struggle to make predominant the sentiment that every citizen should and must obey every law until by legitimate agitation, if obnoxious or unjust, its abrogation or repeal can be secured." It is reputed abroad that people in Utah do not obey or respect the law. This fact has brought great evils upon us in the past, and until removed will be an obstacle to our political progress in the future. This is a question—an issue—we can not avoid. We, the people of Utah, may regulate the matter ourselves if we will act in harmony with the principles of free government. If we do not, the Nation will do it for us. You inquire, Does this mean polygamy? I dislike to use the word, because it grates harshly upon the ears of people. To some it may mean polygamy; to others something else. People say you can not succeed with this in your platform. Persons say, and they say in sorrow, "But for this we could submit to your doctrines. For the sake of our conscience and our God, we can not do this thing. Why do you, young men, rise up against your fathers and your mothers?" Without the assistance and co-operation of the people of Utah the young men of our club will be as impotent for evil as for good; but if you, the people, give us strength, we know our hearts. Would to God we might condone the past and save the future.

We revere and love our parents. The chords of affection which bind us to them are of adamantine strength. We have seen the remorseless toils slowly but certainly encompassing them. To the fastnesses of the mountains they flee for refuge. Safety in the absence of all associations of love and family, is the highest boon they may be permitted to enjoy. Some look upon gloom and desolation from between the prison bars. Wives and children may be left to the cold mercies of an unfeeling world. You can not do this for conscience sake? But does not your conscience revolt at the consequence which a failure to do it entails upon you, your wives, your children, your friends and neighbors? If you live with a woman with the same intimacy you would with a wife, you can not acknowledge her as such. If she raise children they can not be acknowledged, but must be held forth as the illegitimate offspring of an illegitimate union. A man of previous respectability does this; what kind of an example is this to the community—to the young whose characters are in process of formation? In this matter the situation is such that the left hand can not be permitted to know what the right hand does. It can be nothing less than the worst sort of an example of licentiousness and immorality.

In fact, the attendant evils of this thing are manifold. It is useless to speculate upon the probabilities of change. Anglo-Saxon people have never tolerated polygamy, and it is equally improbable that it will ever have the approval of the Nation.

The law should be obeyed. In respect to any law, there is but one of two things which a person may do with any degree of honor, either obey it or according to the right of revolution take up arms and fight it out in open, honorable warfare. One who sneakingly violates the law, then sneakingly attempts to shield himself within the petticoats of a woman, or flings her into the breach to receive the puuishment which he would avoid, can scarcely expect the respect either of his neighbors or his country.

It is said that the people of Utah are Democratic. I believe they are. People of sober and well-regulated minds are generally supposed to be. If so, let us live up to our Democratic doctrines. Thereby we may increase our importance at home and our influence abroad; existing relations may be saved; where there is sorrow we may have power to bring joy.

Our Territory is extensive; its resources are varied and abundant. The mountains have been perforated and yielded up their treasures of precious metal. The very rocks, through the energy and industry of the people, have been productive of the richest verdure. The savor of wealth has been extracted from our salty sea, and our mineral lands groan beneath their burdens of golden grain. We have a brilliant sunshine to illumine the imagination, a picturesque scenery to delight the perspection and enrich the mind with imagery. In fact, here all nature is almost supernatural in the grandeur and fascination of her scenes. The bold conformations and distortions in the surface impress themselves not only upon the mind but also upon the heart.

This land ought to be the home of courageous manhood and freedom. Yet politically we are not happy. The scarlet letter of disgrace has been placed upon our bosom. We have been subjected to great, and are threatened with still greater, political thralldom. Many of our citizens have been brought to political degradation by disfranchisement. We have often been struck with the thunderbolts of Congressional displeasure. And when for brief spells the dark clouds recoil in the heavens it is but to gain additional strength and burst forth with redoubled fury. We are becoming the gamins, the political outcasts of the Nation. Like the descendants of her who was sent into the wilderness with her nursling infant and a bottle of water, our hand is against every man and every man's hand is against us. It is not open to dispute that we have come into almost world wide disrepute, when in truth taking into consideration our varied and abundant resources, the attractiveness of our climate, the beauty and grandeur of our scenery and the general characteristics of our population, the luster of our position should shine forth resplendent with glory and honor. Our political status ought to be as proud and happy as it is possible for free people to attain.

If the same causes continue to operate in the future as they have done in the past it is safe to predict that it will not be long until the condition of Ireland would be as a paradise compared with that of Utah. If possible and consistent with the principles of free government we can save ourselves from these evils and the Nation from this disgrace, is it not a cause worthy of our best energies and highest devotion? We want no legislative commission with its iron heel of despotism. We are not organized as a band of lobbyists to importune Congress for hostile legislation. We appeal to the people of Utah. It is for you, fellow citizens of Utah, to say whether we shall succeed. Cease this unprofitable struggle upon the basis of Church and anti-Church. Let the Church and State each attend to its appropriate business. Quit this crimination and recrimination. Let us broaden our hearts and liberalize our views. Even if your God is not our God let us hail one another as political brothers of the same faith and go hand in hand to bring Utah to the position of one of the proudest and most glorious of the American States. Will we have the courage to do this? This movement should be hailed by the people as the star of the east was greeted by the priests of Judea, with great rejoicing, for it arises like the Star of Bethlehem, as a beacon light to guide us all to our political salva-

the Herald readers is that they may be informed, so far as practicable, of the course of events in Utah; which may have relation to our work.

It has been thought that not many of the older leading elders of the church dominant in Utah would retrace their steps; but it has been hoped that there would be some among the younger men, sons of the first elders of the church, who would take thought of the situation and strive for a better condition of things.

The HERALD has frequently insisted that the sons of those elders earliest in the work had the right to inquire into the causes for the decay in the work of their fathers, and to assume the responsibility of an attempt to remove from the body of the church any and all incubi that may have become fastened thereon.

It is most fitting that next to the sons of Joseph and Hyrum, that the sons of President Young, and some contemporaneous with him should take up the cudgels in the prosecution of what is wrong, and defense of what is right. This jointure of church and state, with political domination in the "everlasting priesthood," has been a most disastrous experiment, and ought never to have been tried by Latter Day Saints who should know that it is not until Christ shall "reign as King of Kings," will Saints be trusted with the reins of government, and then only as "kings and priests unto our God and his Christ."

These sons of Pres. Brigham Young and Bishop Rawlins, now so severely denounced as "poor, simple, theoretic, impracticable, unbaked, unripe simpletons," have our sympathy; for we too, with several others of the sons of some of those early elders have borne for years similar pressure; and for similar reasons. And though we preceded these young men some years in taking the obnoxious step, it does not detract from the virtue of their action that they have moved at a later period.

The utterances of J. L. Rawlins are but indications of what may be expected of those minds emancipated from an improper control by priestly influences. If we mistake not, Bishop Rawlins is the man who permitted the Editor of the Herald to occupy the Ward House at Union Fort, Utah, in the fall of 1876. On that occasion the Editor stated that the time must come when the children of those who first bore the heat and burden of the day, in the rise of the church, would make an inquiry into the present untoward condition of the church founded in 1830, and the reasons for that condition that would be heard, and must be answered by those responsible for that condition. "Coming events cast their shadows before," and this is one of them. Let those who have been in authority, upon whom rests the charge of putting the mark of shame upon Utah's rising statesmen and endeavoring to perpetuate it, look carefully to their future; for the day is now very near when no careless subterfuge will suffice to silence the inquiry now on foot.

The branding by the name of apostate, the spleeny denunciation of those incapable of more honorable defense, the cry of persecution, the appeal for sympathy because it is done in the name of religion and men's consciences are involved in the controversy, will not now avail. The Anglo-Saxon race, the Nation established by God for his own purposes has a conscience, and this conscience has been moulded by the unseen forces set at work by him who founded the American Government for the accomplishment of his designs. The consciences of individuals, the petty interests of self-constituted dictators to men's liberties must go to the wall when met by these wonder working agencies at work for God and men.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

INQUIRY is made by a brother whether it is right for an Elder or Priest to state to an applicant for baptism that after baptism he may join any church that the Spirit may lead him to do? In replying to this all we can state is that persons baptized by the Elder or Priest, are baptized into the church to which the baptizer belongs; and is a member of it by reason of his baptism. But if by the word church, branch of the church is meant, which the person baptized may join, then it may not be far wrong. There need be no apprehension that one baptized into the church will be led by the Spirit to join any other church.

Bro. J. J. Cornish writes from Webberville, Michigan, January 27th, that two had been baptized upon the occasion of his present visit to that place.

By letters from Bro. Joseph A. Stewart, we learn that the Philadelphia Branch has so far lost but two of its members, by reason of the late misunderstanding there. We are sincerely sorry that these two have been lost to the church there. We sympathize with those who fall into distress and doubt; and feel for those who are lost to the church, either by withdrawal, or by official action of the branch where they reside and have membership.

Bro. E. L. Kelley was at Boston, January 19th and spoke there on the divine origin of the Book of Mormon. He would remain there till after the 27th, and would go from there to Dennisport, holding meetings until the sitting of the district conference on the 31st. Bro. W. H. Kelley is preaching at various other points in the east, the brethren thus doing twice as much as they would if traveling together.

We call attention to the preparation of a number of texts from the Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptnres, arranged under different heads, by Bro. W. W. Blair, which we have printed in four pages, on thin paper; suitable to be placed in any bible, or the Holy Scriptures, either front or back; and which will greatly aid the elder student in his researches, and comparison with the King James Version. Any one wishing them can be accommodated by sending us a penny stamp for postage.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert reports that Bro. J. T. Kinnaman of Stewartsville, Missouri, was with him at Bevier for nearly three weeks, "working like a Trojan," endeavoring to get matters righted in that branch; Bro. Stebbins being called later to sit with an elders' court, which the labors of Brn. Kinnaman and Lambert had provided. We had not seen Bro. Lambert to learn any of the items when we last wrote.

We learn from Bro. James W. Gillen, that Bro. Kinnaman, President of District; and Bro. J. M. Terry, president of the Branch, at Stewartsville, stood by him in the debate with Braden manfully; Bro. Kinnaman as one of the moderators, acting coolly and fairly, controlling himself under trying circumstances "nobly," as Brn. J. R. Lambert and Gillen both agree.

The Index, published at No. 44 Boylston street, Boston, Massachusetts, by the Free Religious Association, Wm. J. Potter and B. F. Underwood, Editors, is placed upon our table. A late number contains an article by T. W. Curtis, entitled "Mormonism in a New Light." It is a very fair article, though from what is called the Liberal standpoint.

Brn. F. C. Warnky and Thomas W. Chatburn were at Kansas City, Missouri, January 18th, preaching, and succeeded in rousing quite an interest among those within and without the church; so writes Sr. Fannie Winn.

Bro. J. W. Johnson, of Locksprings, Davis county Missouri, wants a partner with some capital to go into the boot and shoe business, in connection with the bee business. He has a good shop, business stand and an apiary of fifty-two stands of bees. A chance for somebody. He will give good business references and will require the same.

Bro. D. H. Bays is engaged to hold a discussion at Wheeler's Grove, Pottawattamie county, Iowa, to begin Tuesday, February 24th, at ten a. m. Bro. Bays' health is some better than last fall; he wishes the prayers of the Saints, that it may be continued to him.

Rev. C. M. Wilmeth, the Christian minister with whom Bro. Heman C. Smith has held discussion in Texas, propounded the following question to the Preachers' Institute held at Add Ran College, December 30th, 1884, to January 2d, 1885: "Is the plurality of wives directly forbidden by the New Testament; and if so, give chapter and verse where it is forbidden?"

BRO. M. H. FORSCUTT has been permitted a rather singular experience in a meeting of the Liberal League, in Maltby Hall, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. He was given the part of chief speaker for the afternoon of January 25th, his lecture entitled, The "Briareus of Doubt and the Cerberus of Faith," was well received by the audience; but at its close, Messrs. Hoover and Gundy gave criticisms upon the positions taken by Bro. Forscutt, which criticisms were skilfully answered by our brother. The Times newspaper contained a report of the proceedings; and the Evening Penny Press of the next day, had the following notices of the affair:

"Ladies were present at yesterday's meeting of the Liberal League in larger numbers than ever before, and were supplemented by a sufficient number of men to crowd Maltby Hall. Rev. Mark H. Forscutt, elder of the Latter Day Saints, spoke on "The Briareus of Doubt, and the Cerberus of Faith." •When he had finished, a vote of thanks was tendered him, and an opportunity was given for general discussion, in which Messrs. Hoover and Grundy took part, and were answered by Rev. Forscutt."

"The Briareus of Doubt, and the Cerberus of Faith" was the subject of one of the ablest defenses of the Bible ever delivered in the city, made yesterday afternoon before the Liberal League, by Rev. Mark H. Forscutt, pastor of the church of Latter Day Saints. The Liberal Leaguers are said to have been knocked clear out by his arguments. Rev. Forscutt published the first anti-Mormon newspaper in Salt Lake City."

WE clip the following from the Richmond, Missouri, Conservator, of January 9th.

David Whitmer, Esq., reached his 80th birthday Wednesday last, and is still hale and vigorous, bidding fair to celebrate his centennial anniversary. He remains firm in the faith of his youth, he has passed beyond the years of man's ambition, he feels that he is lingering in the gleam of the sunset of his pilgrimage, he has seen the pronunciamento of Joe Smith the accepted belief of near one million people as of divine origin, he holds in his possession the manuscript from which the Book of Mormon was published, he reiterates that he saw the glory of the angel, blinding him by its radience, heard it proclaim "You have testified to the truth," and with no regrets for the past and no fears for the future he calmly awaits the summons universal that says "come" to the sons of Adam. We wish him many more such anniversaries."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. John S. Page writes us from Independence, Missouri, that Bro. Blair's late visit was productive of good to the Saints there. He says that he, himself, was edified, and on some points largely benefitted by the wise counsel given. He writes:

"It is not necessary for me to repeat Bro. Blair's remarks; suffice it to say, that I discovered that I had too many rights that I was too ready to fight for. Now I can look over the history of life and see that my afflictions of mind have grown out of my great determination to enjoy every right belonging to me in both Church and state."

STOCKDALE, Wilson Co., Texas, January 15th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—After writing from Elkhart I preached several times in the Saints' Hall at that place, and four times in the Shadrick School House about seven or eight miles from there, near the Trinity river. In my labors I was blessed of the Master and well cared for by Saints and friends. November 27th, Bro. E. Land and I commenced a series of meetings on Little Elm, in Bell county. The interest manifest was encouraging, and I think some there are very near the kingdom. Spent one day at Elmwood, in which we were so busy we did not see all of the Saints, which we very much regret.

December 3d, in company with Bro. and Sr. Cato I left Temple en route for Bandera, via San Antonio. Arrived at San Antonio late at night where we found Brn. Waterman and J. A. Currie, Jun. awaiting us at the depot, and were soon at Bro. Waterman's pleasant home.

December 5th. Bro. Cato and wife, Bro. Currie and I started by wagon for Bandera. The weather was fine and we enjoyed ourselves finely viewing the magnificent scenery. We arrived in the afternoon of the 6th, and put up with Bro. A. Hay and his mother, whose guests we were during the debate which followed. Before the debate Bro. Currie and I made a flying visit to Medina City, where I saw some of my relatives, and enjoyed a visit with them.

On December 9th, according to previous arrangement, the debate between C. M. Wilmeth and the writer began, in the Methodist Church at Bandera. For five days of four hours each, we discussed the following: "The Book of Mormon is what it purports to be, and contains a revelation of God's will to man." More and more as the discussion proceeded were we convinced that the ground we occupy is incontrovertible. Now and then Mr. W. would make a feint at answering our argument, but as a rule my argument was wrong because Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, Martin Harris and others were bad men; this was about all he had in stock. All the slander, scandal, and misrepresentation that could be raked and scraped from Howe, Braden, Moss, Campbell and others, were brought forward as argument. I reminded him repeatedly that such a course was wrong, and that if such things were resorted to that no man's reputation would be safe; his own not excepted. To this he replied by demanding that I should produce what I had against him. I put him off from time to time thinking perhaps he would quit his abuse but he grew worse; and finally when I told him he would fall under such weapons he arose and demanded I should produce something against him or take back what I had said, whereupon I read to the audience the action had against him by the citizens of Big Springs, and called attention to the fact that the call for this meeting was signed by the judge, sheriff, treasurer, clerk, two of the commissioners of Howard county and many others. This was not only more direct, but signed by men occupying higher positions than anything he had produced. He grew angry and branded them as drunkards and gamblers, and notwithstanding I had told him I did not know whether it was true or false, but just produced it to show him that his mode of debate was wrong, he threatened to sue me, and went away without retracting the threat; but I give him credit for being a smarter man than he would prove to be if he should try that. I am sorry to say he lowered himself in my estimation considerably by doing what I would call dishonest things. Several times with a book in his hand he misread its contents; at one time I called upon him to read an extract over the third time before I could get him to read it correctly. He made but little effort to meet the evidence produced from Archæology; but simply said that "Humboldt, and Priest published works containing the same general outlines before the Book of Mormon was published." I demanded one quotation from Humbolt, Priest, or any other before 1829 upon the points I had produced in evidence. He did not bring them. He can not! He reserved the Spaulding Story until near the close, not giving sufficient time for a full examination; but I succeeded in knocking the wind out of it (and that is all there is in it) so effectually that in his recapitulation he said he did not care who stole the manuscript, whether it was Rigdon, Smith, or some one else, they had it. He had before labored hard to show that Sidney Rigdon stole it.

The second proposition was: "Joseph Smith taught and practiced polygamy." In support of this he brought the testimony of Ann Eliza Young to show that Joseph performed the first plural marriage ceremony. I showed that she was not born until September after Joseph was killed in June, consequently she was not a competent witness. He produced the affidavits of David Fulmer and Emily Dow Partridge-Young, also the statement of Lovina Walker. All of these I showed to be false upon the face of them—purporting to have been made at a time when the parties said to have been present were living, but not being brought forward in evidence till they were dead.

I was never better satisfied with the result of a debate in my life; and from what I can learn all who are unbiased and capable of judging award us the victory. I heard a Mr. Harris, Justice of the Peace, say, "Wilmeth can come nearer knocking the meaning out of the English language than any man I ever saw." He is a man of fine education, and good natural ability. Many other like remarks were made for which I have not space, some of them from his friends. I thank God for the truth, and for the the privilege of defending it.

After the close of the debate Bro. Currie and I went to Medina City, where I have two uncles residing, and with them and their families we had an enjoyable visit. We were not idle however; during the visit we preached several times in West Prong school house and three times in the office of the Justice of the Peace in Medina City. We had large audiences and good attention, and on Sunday, December 28th, I had the, to me, great privilege of immersing my aunt, Sophia Wight, in the clear sparkling waters of Medina River.

On the 29th Bro Joseph Sutherland started with us for San Antonio, he furnished the team and uncle Loami the hack. Stopped that night at Bandera and heard a good discourse from Bro. Cato. The next morning Bro. Sutherland was sick, but said we could take the team and go on, which we did, and still have it in our possession. Arrived in San Antonio the 31st, and tarried for the night with Bro. Waterman.

January 1st. Drove to Oak Island, where we held ten meetings. The Saints are, generally speaking, strong in the faith, and others are almost persuaded. The Saints here, aided by friends, have erected a house of worship, which when done will be neat and commodious, and reflect credit upon those who in any wise helped in its erection. Bro. H. L. Thompson of Bell county has been there visiting his children for some time, and has been liberal in aiding the branch upon the church building. Our friend, Mr. J. P Neal, deserves special mention in this connection; he has given twenty-five dollars, done considerable of the work, and has made himself responsible to lumber dealers for quite a sum of mony yet due. I do earnestly hope he will not have it to pay; it would be too bad to have his liberality imposed upon in that way. Bro. Waterman has made much sacrifice to keep up the interests of the work here, and is yet willing to do his utmost both spiritually and temporally to keep the work moving. I believe the Lord has accepted his labors. We arrived here last night in a hard rain storm, and are now at Bro. J. A. Currie, Sen's. We will open the work as soon as the weather settles; but it is now raining and cold with thermometer at thirty above

We have had many draw-backs in the last year the principal one being the loss of part of the missionary force, but I feel encouraged for the future. We have two young men in the work now who, I believe, will become men of usefulness if faithful and humble, Bro. J. D. Erwin of Red River county, and Bro. J. A. Currie of this place, who has of late been traveling with me, and showing encouraging signs of improvement.

Times are very hard, and money scarce, which will effect our work, but taking all into consideration the Saints have done well in the main, and I think the time is coming when the South-West will make its influence felt in the church.

I read with pleasure the article in the last two numbers of the Herald entitled "Tithing Gathering, and Revenge. I think it sound, timely and from the proper source. It will be hailed with joy by many and give new life and vigor to some faltering ones.

Before closing I must not fail to mention that on December 23d Bro. M. Curtis of Medina City, took Bro. Currie and me to see a dam which he had lately examined across Thomas creek, a tributary of the Hondo, in Bandera county. We were somewhat interested in this as we are in all works of the kind. After careful examination we are satisfied it is the work of human hands, and of very ancient date, but just when built, or by whom, we were of course unable to tell. The dam is about sixty or seventy feet long, composed of a very hard rock, different from any to be found in the neighborhood except a few pieces below, which have probably been washed from it. There are two walls about four feet apart. The upper side of the upper wall and the lower side of the lower wall were rough and sloping. The sides facing each other were smooth and perpendicular. The rocks regularly laid breaking joints of the layer below. The walls to the water's edge are from three to four feet high; under the water only the foundation remains; but Mr. Dean who owns the premises, told us that until about four years ago the walls extended from bank to bank. Some of the rock composing the dam are very large. The largest we measured was I think 8x 3x4 feet, but one under the water which we did not measure looked to be much longer. I brought with me some specimens of the rock, also some substance found in the joints which is either cement or sediment grown hard with age, I am not able to tell which.

Bro. Curtis wishes me to say in regard to a recent letter published in the Herald over his signature, giving an account of himself and cousin visiting Nauvoo, and giving some account of the mission to Texas in an early day, that he is undoubtedly the author of it, and that it appeared word for word in the Herald as he dictated and corrected it. He wishes this statement made because he has heard that some have disputed the fact that he was the author of it.

Praying for Zion's weal, and God's blessing upon the faithful, I am, in bonds of peace,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

Boston, Massachusetts, January 20th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph Smith: - Since leaving Kirtland, December 1st, I have scarcely had time to give an account of the work where I have traveled, in company mainly with W. H. Kelley. At that time we started for the eastern country, and made the first stopping place Philadelphia. It must not be thought that nothing but dark and ominous clouds hang over the work along the Atlantic; for, notwithstanding the "fightings without and fears within," there are many good and noble minded Saints, who are striving to bear the trials of the warfare, and they are determined that they will not fail. Many places we have met with those sure tokens of success and final triumph, in the wise and upright work of Saints, that greatly encouraged and strengthened us; and in some, a few things that tended in their growth to destroy the faith of those drinking them in. It is no difficult effort to ascertain whether a seed planted, is the true or a false one. That which tends to build up and give confidence in the work of God, is the genuine; that which tends to relax the efforts of the Saints in behalf of the work, and to cast doubt and suspicion upon the truth, is the false; and is sown by the evil one.

In Philadelphia we found an excellent home at Bro. Archibald Cameron's. This was propitious to begin with; for the Camerons hold the key to Pennsylvania, and outside of this line, no one can hope to win success in that state. Sr. Cameron is one of those genuine, true hearted Latter Day Saints, that the good everywhere are pleased to meet. She feels happy, too, in being known as one of the Saints; -- "those not of the world," but "children of the heavenly kingdom." It is not intended to throw cold water upon that resolution introduced by Bro. Cameron at their district conference by this statement; that, evidently, froze up before winter came; and Bro. Archie's objection seems to be from the standpoint that the name is too good, instead of not good enough, to hear. Would it not be well to let him settle this little difficulty he has got himself into without the "benefit of clergy?" For one, I hope nothing will satisty his wife but his humble confession. Brn. Joseph A. Stewart and Wm. Small, who are now in charge of the work in the district, the latter also presiding in the Philadelphia Branch, were ready to aid us in our work, and seeking to maintain the right; and although some things had crept in, weakening the faith of some, and deterring others from duty, we were met with kindness from all; and when ready to depart, felt encouraged in the thought, that many were more resolutely determined to contend for the faith henceforth, whether through good or evil report, than ever before. May the kind Father help them to abide in the "one faith," for Satan has sought to sift them.

At Hornerstown, New Jersey, the evil seed sown—"old wive's tales," &c., was beginning to manifest itself; the result being to stir up a feeling of hardness between some, and to weaken the faith of others; while still others thought they had profited by the experience of the past six months, and were better prepared to withstand such a fiasco as was attempted in their district conference than ever before. Bro. Wm. H. Brown is the presiding officer at Hornerstown. Their former flourishing Sabbath School had been adjourned over the winter months. This ought not to have been; for no one will readily be able to estimate the good done in a properly conducted Sabbath School, in calling the attention of the people, and especially the younger portion of them, to what is the actual duty of every one.

At Bro. Samuel Hopkins we found a most agreeable stopping place. Thanks to the giver of all good, everything was homelike, notwithstanding the raging of a New Jersey storm without.

W. H. in answering to the criticism on the revelation stating that the Lord would hold the people guiltless if they would observe his law, in recovering the property taken from them said: "I state right here for myself, that being an American citizen, and having guaranteed to me nnder the highest law of the Republic, protection of my rights to life and property; if any intolerant and licentious mob should be permitted, through the prejudice and corruption of the National and State executives, to drive me and my family from my home, and seize by mob violence my property, for one, I shall never think of waiting for a revelation from the Lord, stating it would be right to retake it; but I will go back and take it without such."

Whatever may be the opinions of others upon this, it was easy to perceive that the audience present, both of those in and outside of the Church, heartily endorsed the position as being in accord with the highest honor and patriotism of a citizen of the United States.

Bro. Joseph A. Stewart started with us on this New Jersey trip; but when it came to going on further, heart failed him, and he turned back to Philadelphia. I shall not give the reason offered, as he may wish to report that himself. Bro. John and Sr. Mary McGuire, of Allentown, of late suffered a severe loss in the death of their mother; but are happy and hopeful in the work, and ever ready to speak a word in its defense. The Brooklyn Saints we met with at the residence of Bro. Joseph Squires, 305 Henry St., East New York. Bro. and Sr. Squires are devoted workers; and although laboring under discouragements, are not without hope. The Brooklyn Branch, which was in a disorganized state, was organized with Bro. Squires presiding. They have help in the brethren Potts, lately landed from England, and with the aid of Elder Clark and others, there is a hopeful outlook for the work to be placed on a permanent basis, under the very guns of Beecher and Talmage. I noticed in a Congregationalist paper lately, the statement, that "Mormonism [so called] flourishes the best, and finds easiest converts, where the Bible is least read and understood." This being accepted as true, it will be interesting to note a year hence, how the faith of the Saints takes where these men have been talking upon the religious question for years. Brn. Truman and Box now reside quite a distance from the meeting place, but were present at the Sabbath services. At eleven o'clock we attended services at Plymouth Church. It is a plain, commodious, but unpretentious structure, of the style of forty years ago; admirably arranged in the seating. The acoustics good. The sermon by Rev. H. W. Beecher was finely delivered; but in thought and instruction, would have ranked only as an average, as compared with those delivered by the ministers of the Reorganized Church. His noted "apology," delivered at the close of the sermon, was happy, ingenuous, pathetic, emphatic, and sensible. As it deserved, it brought forth the frequent and hearty applause of the audience; and a few of the press notices next morning to the effect, that it met with "feeble applause once or twice," was simply a political prevarication on the "great divine"

It had been our intention to return west from Brooklyn; but we were directed otherwise; and W. H. came right to Boston, and I overland to Providence, where I enjoyed the kindest hospitalities at the homes of Brn W. H. Blood, M. H. Bond, and Mrs. Dr. Grimwood. Let the kind Master reward them with the many good Saints of Providence. Bro. Bond is laboring successfully for the truth. This time visiting them, I got much better acquainted than on my former trip to the Massachusetts District; and yet I am only half around. Bro. Frank Potter, the Providence irrepressible, is presiding over the branch, and well liked by the Saints. There are yet trials upon some of the Saints here, and some, evidently, unnecessary; but all love the work, and they ought to have much patience one toward another. Think of the patience and forbearance of our heavenly Father toward all of us; and then of the fact, that often we do not feel to overlook simple faults in each other, although they are rare in comparison with those forgiven in ourselves. The policy of trying to discipline by trial a member for fear we shall be criticised by others if we do not, is a wrong one. Our people should act only from the standpoint of whether it is right, and according to the law of Christ, regardless of outside opinions. If others want to direct us by their wise opinions, let them come into the fold where they may authoritatively speak and act.

At Plainville, Bro. Charles Coombs was still holding the fort, aided by Bro. Holmes and others. The Saints here have their trials, as do others, and yet they don't think of giving up the ship. I enjoyed both the visit and the meetings at Plainville. Stopped with the Fall River Saints over three meetings, and was the guest of Bro. John H. Gilbert. The profession of medicine has not impaired Bro. Gilbert's worthiness in the cause of Christ in the least; neither his excellent wife. Bro. John Potts presides in the branch, and the cause is aided each week by Bro. Gilbert's efforts in the pulpit. Notwithstanding the usual criticisms made upon the professional man, I wish our new physician the heartiest success in blessing mankind, in his acquirements of both spiritual and scientific wisdom. I lectured to the friends in Fall River upon the Book of Mormon. and found that W. H., who had preceded me, had spoken upon the 'Divine calling of Joseph Smith.' The Saints spoke very highly of his effort as effectually settling some "mooted points."

At New Bedford the work is growing under the immediate oversight of Bro. John Smith, the Bishop's Agent, and District President. Bro. Smith is a successful worker in both positions. He has carried out the law as expounded by the Bishop as faithfully as any other officer in the church, and the result is all that could possibly be hoped for, considering the close times east. He has also written and sent to the Saints in the district, wise recommendations, urging a compliance with the law. Bro. Smith is one of those who can see that the most effective way to execute the law is to put the people upon their honor and patriotism with regard to it. It is a poor Civil Government that is compelled to use force to make all of its subjects contribute to its support, much less to refer to such an order in the Kingdom of God. A compliance with the law that is entirely free, is the surest force in carrying out a law that can be known to the church. It is a mistake to suppose that the enforcement of dues by proscription, practiced by the Sectarian Priesthood, for lo, these hundreds of years, is a more certain way of executing a law of temporal demands, than that of fraternal love. Duty is a binding force with all true Saints. Under it the Elder must leave his family and go and preach the word, and he does. Under it the member of means must contribute of that, and he will. Under this voluntary duty the Lord tells the Elder where, and how far to go, to be a good minister. Under the same voluntary duty he tells the member how much to contribute of his temporal means, and he must voluntarily obey to be a good member. God is not partial. He does not compel one in his church, to give his life to build it up, and then excuse another for not giving of his means to build it up. The idea that we are not bound because under the gospel, to perform duty, is ridiculous. There is more cerrainty of duty required under the gospel, than there is under the Mosaic law; but to obtain this certainty it must be voluntary. If the obligation of duty fails us, then the badge of the law steps in, but not to compel by process, but simply to declare the members at variance; and for which he must render an account to the Master when he comes. It is necessary under the law also that God should name the amount, because it is only by so doing that the member could be attested by it hereafter. It also takes the right from some priest, to name the amount, instead of the Lord; and hence, be able to oppress the people. Under the system of tithes set forth in the law of God, no man or woman has ever been wronged or oppressed. Under the perversion of the system, as modified by the priest, millions have been. So with the spiritual law. Let not the Saints fail to observe this law as they would any other, and they will prosper.

I am now at Bro. E. N. Webster's, Boston, and happily entertained and profited, both by himself and Sister Webster. In looking over the Herald, I observe first the article on "Law." Good! I like to read sound talk. Give us a few more, and we will the more agitate subscription.

Hastily, for the truth,

E. L. KELLEY.

102 Pownall Rd., Queen's Road, Dalston, London, England,
January 6th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:-I thank you most sincerely for the kind words of sympathetic encouragement contained in your last welcome letter. I am happy to say that the disability under which I have been laboring, is now so far removed, (by the kind providence of a loving and covenant keeping God), that I shall have both time and leisure to let the Saints have the remaining two essays I promised them in a copy of the Herald of some time back. Will they kindly intimate by letter to the ensuing number of the Herald, if any of the Saints feel pleasure in my humble contributions, which essay they would like next, viz: the one upon "Music," or the letter on "Comets," which I promised you when I sent the last essay (on "astronomy:") or would you kindly let me know by letter, as I may not happen to see the Herald regularly? But let them rest assured that any humble attempts from Brother Tubb to please or instruct them, are always made with fervent heart and a willing mind.

I believe Bro. Bradshaw has sent you a copy of the "East London Press" in which I made a humble attempt to vindicate the honored name of your father, and the holy pages of the blessed Book of Mormon, from the foul charge of polygamy, with which both him and it have been persistently and mendaciously assailed. The Book of Mormon speaks for itself to any honest man who will, with an earnest heart, sit down and ponder its golden pages, and is, therefore, well able, thank God, to defend itself in the eyes of every honest reader, from the gratuitous and altogether groundless charge of teaching polygamy. I have myself, in the course of nearly five years' study, perused the book entirely through some seventeen or eighteen times; and have never yet been able to discover a single passage in the slightest degree favoring that doctrine; let alone enjoining the practice of it. As for your beloved parent, I have never seen him in the flesh, but he has been shown to me in vision by the Spirit of the Most High God; and I know that the kind, manly, and noble face shown to me never belonged to a man who gave the law of God with the right hand and broke it with the left. Having been a student of phrenology and physiognomy for eleven years, I can testify that hypocrisy or secret uncleanness were not inhabitants of his noble soul; his visage proclaims that. I may here mention the first time I saw your father's portrait in a book, I instantly recognized in it the face shown me in the vision. But above all the testimony of science, or of physiognomy. I have received, in answer to anxious and repeated prayer, the testimony of the Spirit; assuring me that he is now "Blessed for ever," and clear from the false things they have laid to his charge; and there cometh a day when this shall be proclaimed upon the house-top, and the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle!

Oh! I do trust, dear Bro. Joseph, that the Spirit of God may comfort your heart mightily in Him; and of all the beloved Saints in America; for I know and am assured that the day of emancipation from the chain of falsehood and malevolence is at hand. Falsehood and malevolence! and from whom? Our brethren of Utah. O, how forcibly does all this bring to mind the word of the Lord, which says: "Hear the word of the Lord, ye that tremble at his word; your brethren that hated you and cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified: but he shall appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed."—Isaiah 67: 5.

Nevertheless, I hope and believe that there are a "few names," even in Utah, who have not defiled their garments; who shall "walk with Him in white, for they are worthy," (Rev. 3:4), for they are most anxious to "come out of her;" (Rev. 18:4; Isa. 52:11; 2 Cor. 6:17); only "he who letteth (hindereth) will let (hinder) till he be taken out of the way." (2 Thess. 2:7). God speed that day, and prepare all his Saints by watchfulness and prayer; that, when the midnight cry sounds loud and long on the still air,—"Behold he cometh! go ye forth to meet him," (Matt. 25:6), we may be found among the wise (or watchful) virgins; and hear him say, "Come in, thou blessed of my Father." (Matt. 25:46).

This is the one hope and desire of your loving brother, FRED. K. R. TUBB.

EAGLE RAPIDS, Smith Co., Kan. January 19th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-I will give you a little sketch of meetings held here by our good brother I. N. Roberts, since November 15th, 1884, till now. Bro. Roberts started home this morning. We were sorry to part with him as he is liked so well by all in and out of the church. When Bro. Roberts first came here, the Free Methodists made a desperate fight to keep out a Mormon Elder. They engaged all the school-houses and churches in the whole country around here, and they warned all the people not to go to hear a Mormon. Said it was all from the Devil. Their head man, or big gun, stated in his meetings, that he had a revelation from God, that the Mormons, Advents and Spiritualists, represented, or were the three frogs spoken of in Revelations 16: 13-16; and warned his congregation not to go to hear Bro. Roberts, for it was all from the Devil. Bro. Roberts gave him a written challenge to debate; but he refused, stating that he was no debater and did not have to debate his religion. His name is Henry Collins. Bro. Roberts kept on with his meetings, with small audiences for about two weeks; after that he succeeded in getting one of the school-houses which the Free Methodists had left, after a long series of meetings. Bro. Roberts started in on Sunday evening; the scales began to turn, the word went all over the country, that they had the best preaching that they ever heard. One of their best men in the district, told me that the people had got to receive Mr. Roberts' preaching, or deny the Bible. "For," said he, "he did not preach anything but the Bible." After that, I went over to the town of Harlan, and got the school-house for a week. We did not know at the time, that the United Brethren were carrying on a protracted meeting at the college at the same time. After Bro. Roberts heard about it, he offered to stop his meetings until they got through; but one of the head men of the town, John Cox, rose up and requested Bro. Roberts to take a vote of the house as to whether the meetings should stop or not; and nearly all rose to their feet to have the meetings continued. We had nearly all the time a full house; and when Bro. Roberts quit, they all wanted him to still keep on. Said we could have the school-house just as long as we wanted it. Bro. J. C. Gilman, of Osborn City, was with Bro. Roberts the most of the time. He is a very nice man; but can not do much in the way of talking in meeting.

Your brother in the gospel,

A. I. NIENISON.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan. 23d.—France is said to be willing to modify her Egyptian policy if England will recognize the French occupation of Tunis.

Col. Miramondi, the French officer who was sent in pursuit of the insurrectionists in Cambodia, surprised the camp of Swatha, the leader of the revolt, and dispersed his little army after a sharp fight. Twenty of the rebels were killed.

A proclamation has been issued at Hong Kong declaring that in the event of war between two nations with which England is at peace the men of war of neither of the belligerents will be furnished with equipments or supplies at British ports.

M. de Giers, the Russian Minister of Foreign affairs, has issued an order forbidding the delivery of several thousand rifles ordered by the Chinese Government from Russian manufacturers on the ground that it would be a violation of neutrality obligations between Russia and France. The Marquis Tseng has made an unavailing protest. It is suggested that M. de Giers' action may possibly be inspired by fear lest the weapons in question might be turned against Russian soldiers if Russia perseveres in her schemes of Eastern conquest.

Gen. Lewal has just received from Gen. Briere de L'Isle at Hanoi a most important telegram, which modifies completely the plan of the campaign in the East. The Commander-in-chief in Tonquin announces that he has before him at least 80,000 Chinese troops, so strongly intrenched as to render any direct attack utterly hopeless. Moreover, the nature of the country to be passed over before reaching Lang-Sou and the Chinese frontier is such as to compel the French to attack the Chinese in front if the original plan is to be continued. Such an attack says Gen. Briere de l'Isle, would involve an enormous sacrifice of men with no result, and would require material of war, artilery, and means of transportation far more complete than anything the General has at hand. Under these conditions Gen. Briere de l'Isle deems a diversion near the Chinese position indispensable, and asks that all reinforcements that have left France already in the Cacher, Provence, France, Berne and Annamite, and those about to follow in the Cachemire, Chateau Yquem, Nantes, and Burgundia, altogether about 12,000 men, with artillery and cavalry, be ordered, not to Haiphong, but to Pakhoi, where they will be disembarked. From Pakhoi, these troops will march alone to the frontier of the Province of Kovang-Si, and take the Chinese army in the rear, while Gen. Negrier will operate against the Chinese front, and, without bringing on a serious engagement, endeavor to hold the enemy in position. For Monday Gen. Lewal has convened a council of war, composed of all general officers now in France, including Gen. Mellot, who has returned from Tonquin, when this important change in the plan of the campaign proposed by Gen. Briere de l'Isle will be studied.

The Susquehanna is gorged with ice from Garrett's Island, three miles south of Port Deposit, and extending several miles north and from shore to shore. The ice moved this afternoon and piled fifteen feet high opposit Port Deposit, backing the water and submerging the entire lower section two or three feet. Intense excitement prevailed. The water continued rising half an hour and rose five feet in twenty minutes. Citizens removed their stock and other personal effects to places of safety. Citizens residing in the lower section prepared for the gorge by moving into the second story of their dwellings. A party of men and women skating upon the river had a narrow escape. All the rolling stock of the Columbia & Port Deposit Railroad Company was removed this evening to places of safety. The ice backed upon the railroad, which required a force of men to move the obstructions for two north-bound trains. The water is falling tonight.

The cold snap continues in Texas, and reports from all parts of the State show the loss of cattle and sheep to be appalling. The extremely dry summer left the ranges in a bare condition and the cattle unable to live through a severe winter. It is probable that 30 per cent of the neat cattle and 60 per cent of all the sheep in the State will be lost. In Bosque County half the sheep died night before last, and it is thought that last night's heavy sleet killed most of the remainder. The aggregate loss will not run short of $40,000,000.

Advices from Western Africa state that the irritation of the traders and natives of Cameroon at the recent movements of Germany there led to serious disturbances. It was necessary to use force to restore order, which was done only after much property had been destroyed. The German Admiral ordered the native chief beheaded for murdering a German subject.

Smallpox has appeared at Shoals, Ind.,

Capt. Couch, the leader of the Oklahoma boomers, is said to have advised Col. Hatch of his intention to stay where he is until forcibly expelled. Col. Hatch is trytng to starve the intruders out. The latter are building rifle-pits. Their fighting force is 400 men. All non-combatants have been sent out of camp by Capt. Couch, as well as all whose obedience to discipline cannot be counted on. Col. Hatch's force about equals that of the boomers. Reinforcements are held in readiness at Leavenworth by Gen. Augur.

Meetings are held almost nightly in the towns of Southwestern Kansas in the inteaest of the Oklahoma boomers, and the action of the United States authorities is vigorously condemned.

There is trouble among the Shinnecook Indians on Long Island. The trustees of the tribe sold Shinnecook Hill to the Long Island Railroad against the wishes of the majority of the Indians, and pocketed the money. One of the trustees fled to Canada. A suit is to be brought questioning the validity of the sale.

The Liberty Bell was taken from Independence Hall in Philadelphia yesterday and shipped by special car to the New Orleans Exposition.

Jan. 25.—A terrible explosion occurred yesterday in London, Eng., which is believed to have been caused by dynamite; the explosion occurred close to the House of Lords, near-Westminister Hall. It is reported that the explosive was placed in the crypt under the building. Policemen were hurt. The force of the shock was tremendous and was felt at a great distance, and the amount of the damage done was very great. There were two explosions. One at the Parliament House and the second came about three minutes after. The first one was near the House of Commons, the other at Westminister Hall. One man was arrested near the scene of the explosion. The outrage was the most successful yet made upon any of the public buildings since the inauguration of the dynamite warfare. The number of those injured by the explosion is as follows: At the tower 6 injured seriously, 14 slightly; at the parliament building 4 seriously and 10 slightly. The worst injuries were received by Constables Cox and Cole and a civil engineer named Edwin Green, visiting the Parliament building, Cox and Cole are still unconscious. Their recovery is considered hopeless. There were over 100 visitors in the house when the explosion occurred in Westminster Hall and most of them rushed out of the building to ascertain the cause and thus many lives were saved. A large number of children were among the visitors. Many of these little ones had their faces and hands badly torn by the broken glass and flying splinters. The crowd outside the walls have been wrought up to a pitch of great frenzy against the perpetrators of the outrage. Immense damage was done in the lobby of the Parliament House. The masonry decorations and sculptures were utterly destroyed. The place is described as being literally blown to pieces. The great window over the main entrance of Westminister Hall was smashed to atoms, and all the side windows were blown out in the interior of the House of Commons. A faaorite theory of the police is that the dynamite which caused the explosions in Westminister Hall, House of Commons and tower, was carried to the place in each case, concealed under the long cloak of a woman, whose appearance was thus made to resemble that of a woman about to become a mother. A woman in whom this appearance was very noticeable was seen at the tower this afternoon shortly before the explosion occurred. She was escorted by a tall man. Neither of them could be found after the gates closed after the explosion, and when the visitors came to be searched.

It is rumored that Gen. Gonima, the officer who has just elected and placed in power President Santo Domingo Vilo, and who left Panama, S. A., for Baranquilla for the purpose of raising a force. has been captured by revolutionists. The interior of the Republic is in a revolutionary blaze. The Radicals and a small section of Conservatives are delermined to cause the downfall of Nunez, and they are using every effort to bring about that result. Many of the friends of Dr. Nunez are deserting him and joining the coalition. among them one Morgan, the American who was recently promoted to the rank of General. They now control the Magdalena river, having seized all steamers at Honda, and with them captured both Baranquilla and Carthagena. This movement prevents communication with Bogota and cuts off the Government from the coast, whence alone it can receive munitions. Gen. Daniel Hernandez, the leader of the movement in Cundinamarca, Santauder, and Boyaca, is in Zipaquira with 4,000 men. Zipaquira is situated within a short march of Bogota, the capital. It is thought President Nunez will resign. The troops here all side with the revolutionists, and will join them directly a movement is made in this direction.

The position of the Oklahoma colonists is simple and easily understood when fairly stated. They are composed of a large body of actual settlers, who believe that the ownership of the fourteen million acres of Oklahoma lands is vested in the United States, the Creeks and Cherokees having sold their interest in the tract in 1866 to the Government. Under the Homestead Act these people have taken up quarter sections of these public lands, and proceeded to build themselves homes, according to the intent of the law. But the Oklahoma territory is gridironed by the wire fences of cattle companies, who claim the land under leases from the Creek Indians. Now the power of the Government is invoked to drive out the settlers, and in consequence to turn over the territory to the cattle kings, whose agents are all-powerful with the Indians. The claim of the settlers may not be valid in law, but it has never been settled by the courts, and on many accounts it is desirable that some decision of it should be legally arrived at. At all events, the shooting and bayoneting of American citizens by uniformed troops is a dangerous experiment in ejectment. to make among a people unaccustomed to such, spectacles. There is a widespread belief throughout the Western Staees that the Oklahoma colonists, if not exactly in the right, should be proved judicially in the wrong. The sight of United States troops driving citizens from their homes at the behest of cattle raising corporations is neither pleasing nor tolerable. This Oklahoma question is not likely to be disposed of exactly as land grabbers desire.

The Governor of Idaho, William M. Bunn, closes his message to the legislature with a clarion voice against Mormonism which has already made serious invasions in that territory. He says: "The Mormon leaders were never more defiant than at this time. I conjure you to do your utmost toward destroying the polluting practices of this seditious organization. Suppress these licentious saints with their plural marriages and so wipe away the foul blotch upon the Territory that is a stench in the nostrils of all the honest humanity within our borders. I advise the enactment of such laws and amendments as shall make effective the laws of God and man regarding adultery, bigamy, and polygamy, and compel loyalty to the nation and respect for the flag.

Jan. 26.—Dispatches from Rome report that the Italian troops recently sent to Assab will assist the British forces in the Soudan. It is said that England and Italy will hereafter co-operate in the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. The ironclad, Principe Madeo, is ashore at Port Said.

Great anxiety is felt in London for the safety of Gen. Stewart's little army, and apprehensions of disaster are gaining ground, notwithstanding the fact that Gen. Wolseley telegraphs that there is no cause for alarm. A regiment is to be sent at once to Malta, and is to proceed to Egypt if occasion requires. An unofficial dispatch states that Gen. Wolseley has sent reinforcements to Stewart from Korti, and is himself about to press forward. No news of the battle at Abu-Klea Wells has reached Korti except the dispatches brought in four days after the fight by the Bashi-Bazouks.

Excitement in London over the dynamite explosions continues at fever heat. Immense crowds are attracted to the vicinity of Westminster Hall and the Tower. Several arrests have been made. Cunningham, the man who was arrested Sunday on suspicion has given a very contradictory account of himself. The injured policemen, Cox and Cole, seem likely to recover. The approaches to all the public buildings are rigidly guarded. Persons carrying parcels on the street are frequently stopped and the parcels examined. It was reported yesterday afternoon that the police had discovered an important clew. The official estimate of the damage done by the explosions is $70,000. The royal apartments in Windsor Castle have been ordered closed by the Queen. The London newspapers are calm in tone but the provincial journals bristle with horror. Vigilance committees are proposed, and a systom of espionage is suggested over all persons of Irish extraction. The adoption of Mr. Bayard's dynamite resolution is hailed with delight in England.

The result of the Senatorial election in France, is a disagreeable surprise to the Cabinet, whose candidates are beaten in several places by advanced Radicals. The loss of twenty-two seats, on the other hand, is a terrible blow to the Monarchists. Though in many cases they disguised their monarchism under the badge of conservatism, many of their most able men lost their seats. In the Duc de Broglie, notably, the Orleanists lost their leader. Imperialism was beaten in the person of M. Fourton. But the broadest lesson learned from the election is that opportunism, to use a French expression, has ceased to please. The defeat of M. Spuller by M. Martin, the Independent Radical candidate, is as significant as the triumph of M. Barode over M. Remusat at another election a dozen years ago. Whether it will have the like consequences remains to be seen. For the present the power of Gambettaism in the Senate seems to have broken monarchism.

Jan. 27.—It is said that Italy has been persuaded by England to abandon her designs on Tripoli.

The dynamite panic in London seems to be increasing. Special guards have been placed at the national arsenals and naval stations. No one is allowed to enter the House of Commons, Westminster Hall, or the Tower. The hole made in the floor of the White Tower where the dynamite exploded is ten feet long by five feet wide. The masonry of the building is practically uninjured, but the woodwork is badly torn up. Special precautions have been taken to protect the London Post-Office, against which anonymous threats have been made. The conviction that Cunningham was concerned in the explosions is gaining ground. A French newspaper says that the dynamiters who have caused all the recent explosions in London are employed in a printing-office in Paris.

A superior officer of the French army makes the following important communication concerning the military situation in China:

"The war in Tonquin is one of the greatest mistakes that any Government has ever undertaken. It is worse than the Mexican expedition, which was so just a reproach to Napoleon III. The Emperor had thrown away millions in that expedition and had uselessly poured out a great deal of blood, but honor at least had been preserved. Will it be the same in China? I would like to be sure of it. Our troops perform prodigies of valor, but to no purpose-absolutely for nothing. Gen. Briere de l'Isle and Gen. de Negrier have but 3,000 men to put in battle array. The remainder is scattered in thirty different places. After the magnificent naval combat at Foo Chow and the fortunate temerity of Admiral Courbet it was necessary to make peace immediately. But the political party which governs us is so incapable that it can not even understand that it was only by a miracle that the French fleet was not captured as in a mouse-trap. The expedition to Formosa, the fruit of the imagination of M. Jules Ferry, is an insanity, and the repulse at Kelung proves it. The Minister would like to give a lively fillip to the French army in Tonquin and China, and looks about for a Commander-in-Chief capable of carrying on the war with energy and finishing it before the elections, which more than ever occupy the special attention of the Government. Its want of success in the Senatorial elections of Jan. 25 clearly announces that the Ministry will be beaten in a few months. But where would it find a General intelligent enough and who would leave France for the wilds of Tonquin? The Generals commanding the corps d'armees are old, and have not for the most part capacity enough to bring to a happy termination this distant expedition, as was done in 1880 by Gen. Cousin-Montauban Comte de Palakao. What a difference in the situation! France proudly boasts of her military successes in the Crimea and in Italy, and yet she fights the Chinese in an experimental way. She had England for an ally; all Europe was tranquil; she had no aggression to fear; and yet the expedition was ineffective."

It is rumored that a woman was arrested in London in the act of entering the Royal Exchange Building. She was found to have a quantity of dynamite concealed about her person. Three men, supposed accomplices of the woman, are said to have been arrested.

An official letter from Panama addressed to Surgeon-General Hamilton reports that the isthmus is in an unusually pestilential condition. The annual death-rate is 11 per cent. The prevalence of malignant and malarial fevers is concealed by the canal company and the authorities. The Director-General of the canal company, who reached Panama fifteen months ago with his wife, two children, and twelve staff officers, is now the sole survivor of the party. One thousand interments were made in one of the five cemeteries in six months. Reports from Colon and other points on the line of the canal are to the same effect.

A vivid description of the fight across the desert has been received by the London Telegraph from Col. Burleigh, its special correspondent. During the engagement of the 19th the British fought four hours behind a zareeba in the open desert. The men became exhausted for want of water, and Col. Wilson ordered a number of guardsmen to cut their, way to the river, three miles distant, and return with rubber sacks filled with water. The guards sabred their way through the Arabs, losing half of their number on the way to the river. Half of the remainder were killed on the way back, but they brought water enough to save the army. The next day the army reached the Nile. Soon after one of Gen. Gordon's steamers came down the river bringing reinforcements and provisions. Gen. Gordon reported that he could hold Khartoum for years.

Intelligence was received at the War Office at 11 o'clock to-day that Gen. Stewart's force is intrenched south of Metemneh. The dispatch also gives the gratifying information that Gen. Stewart is in communication with Gen. Gordon. Stewart's force had several fights with the Arab rebels before it reached Metemneh, Stewart himself being badly wounded. Five of the Mahdi's Emirs were killed in the fights. Stewart's wounds are reported doing well. The excitement occasioned by the explosions and the great anxiety concerning the fate of Gen. Stewart, which have existed during several days, are obliterated by the news. Great enthusiasm prevails, and many congratulations over the success of Stewart's expedition have been received at the War Office. Stewart's wound, while not fatal, is so serious that he will be disabled for the remainder of the present campaign. Gen. Wolseley considers the deprivation of his services a national loss. He characterizes Gen. Stewart as the ablest soldier and most dashing commander he ever knew, and recommends him to the Queen's most favorable consideration

Sunday two young Hebrews made a public profession of Christianity at Wesley Chapel in Cincinnati, O. One was Solomon Batt, a resident of Cincinnati for three years, and the other Elias Grosfield, a recent arrival. Batt who is 23 years old, is a private tutor of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, and claims to be a graduate of the Hebrew Union College. Grosfield is also a Hebrew and Latin scholar, and is said to be the son of an eminent Austrian linguist and educator. He is at present employed in a Hebrew printing establishment in this city. Batt had begun a course of study for the Hebrew priesthood. It is said he will be sent by the Methodists to Drew Theological Seminary, Boston, and it has been suggested that Grosfield go to the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., as he also desires to enter the Methodist ministry. They deny that they have renounced Judaism, but claim to have taken a step forward in embracing Christianity. With this view the Jews here do not agree, and, the action of the young men becoming generally known to-day, was much discussed, and in Jewish circles was seriously criticised. The Rev. Dr. Wise, President of the Hebrew Union College, said in an interview: "Mr. Batt came to Cincinnati with a number of Russian Jews three years ago and studied one year at the Hebrew High School, at the end of which time he was dismissed with a diploma in Hebrew. Batt might answer as a missionary to Africa, but is not fitted by education for the Israelite priesthood. He is a Russian and is like all other-Russians. He broke down with his first year in school and can not teach anything but Hebrew."

LAMBERT-BRADEN CORRES-PONDENCE.

[The following correspondence will be interesting to Herald readers for the following reasons:—

It is the latest from the seat of war: "war to the knife, and the knife to the hilt." It is also the latest from him who a short time ago declared, that he "had Mormonism corralled, and I propose to take its hide off, tan it, and bury the malodorous carcass in it."

It gives the exact measure of the man Clark Braden; accurately shows the field of his operations; presents the weapons he has found by "dire experience" are those most likely to be successful against the Latter Day Saints, namely, popular ignorance and prejudice. If these are not on his side, he does not propose to move.

It gives all a chance to see who has backed out from a full and fair discussion; who has "stayed in his hole;" and whose "carcass" is in need of burial.—Ep.]

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., Dec. 22d, 1884.

CLARK BRADEN, Sir: In behalf of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and in answer to your public challenge made to the Independence Branch of said church, to meet you in public debate upon propositions supposed to cover the issues between the two churches, I offer the following reply:

1. We are willing, under all proper circumstances, to affirm and defend that which we believe, provided that our opponents will affirm and defend that which they believe.

2. We will debate the following propositions which fairly cover the issues between us:

(1) Is the Church of Christ (commonly called Campbellite Church) in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and church organization?—Braden affirms.

(2) Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (commonly called Mormon Church) in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and church organization?—Latter Day Saints affirm.

(3) Is the Book of Mormon a true record? Does it contain a revelation of God's will to man?—Latter Day Saints affirm.

(4) Does the Bible contain all the revelation that God intended for man in all ages of the world?—Braden affirms.

If preferred, in place of the third proposition, we will affirm that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God.

3. In case of a conflict, it is expressly understood that the Moderators shall see to it that the rules contained in "Hedges' Logic," for the regulation of public discussions, shall be enforced.

4. The discussion to be held between the 10th of February and the 15th of March, 1885, at Independence, or Stew-artsville, Missouri.

5. The disputants will be required to speak extemporaneously, or from notes, or if written speeches are agreed upon, one of the disputants shall occupy all the time allotted for a single session, in his proper turn, and at the close of each session he will be required to deliver up his manuscript to his opponent, to be returned when he shall have answered his speech.

6. On the first two and fourth propositions King James' Translation of the Bible, and standard church histories, shall be the standards of evidence. On the third proposition King James' Translation of the Bible, and Standard American Antiquities shall be the leading standards. All other evidence to be received upon its merit, subject to the rules governing such testimony before our civil courts.

7. All other necessary rules and preliminaries to be agreed upon between the disputants, or between you and me.

Mr. Braden, you have in your last lecture, delivered at Independence, Missouri, maliciously misrepresented our faith and wickedly lied about us as a people. There are at least one dozen base falsehoods in that lecture as it went into print. Now you can meet us in honorable debate upon the true issues existing between the two churches, or stand condemned before the public as an unscrupulous coward.

Yours for truth and right, JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

The above communication was handed to Mr. Braden, "And it came to pass" that the would-be champion and slayer of Mormonism refused to accept these propositions, which fairly and fully cover the issues existing between the so-called "Church of Christ" and the "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints."

Mr. Braden does not propose to meet the Latter Day Saints, only upon some of the most unpopular parts of their faith—chosen by him, and formulated by him to suit the illogical mess of stuff he has scraped together. Finding, in previous discussions that his argument was not suitable to propositions which properly represent the issues between us, he has gone to work and made propositions to suit his so-called argument; and even then, his folly and trickery have been made manifest. Mr. Braden and his fellows must meet the issues fairly and fully, manifesting their willingness to affirm their own faith, as well as to deny ours, or they will receive no permanent support, except from those who love scandal rather than truth, and who are anxious that "Mormonism" should be put down, without regard to who does it or how it is done.

With reference to the printed proceedings of a so-called mass-meeting of the citizens of Stewartsville, Mo., the attention of all who love straight dealing, truth and right, is called to the following facts:

1. There were fully one third more people in the church, the last night of the debate, than were in attendance at the so-called mass-meeting. If an expression of the citizens of Stewartsville upon the result of the debate, the moral and intellectual standing of Mr. Braden, etc., was desired, why was it not taken at that time?

2. The meeting for Sunday night was not announced till after it had been announced to the people that Elder J. R. Lambert would preach in the Opera Hall, at eleven a.m. and seven p.m.; nor was the object of the meeting stated to be anything more than a lecture on the "Mormon Problem," by Clark Braden, to which the Presbyterians, Congregationalists and Baptists were invited. The announcement and invitations were made by Elder Rogers of the Christian Church.

3. If Clark "Braden is better qualified to do such work" (put down Mormonism) "than any other living person," why does he refuse to meet us upon the above propositions which fairly and fully cover the issues? Is it because he can lie faster and to better advantage "than any other living person," that he is the chosen instrument for this holy work? We are prepared to show at least one dozen base falsehoods in a single lecture, delivered at Independence, Missouri. Is this the way to undeceive honestly deluded Latter Day Saints? Or if it suits Mr. Braden better to assert that they gather none into their ranks, but thieves, liars and hypocrites, then what is all this fuss about? What is to be gained by it?.

God pity the clergy! and God pity all the evangelical churches, if Clark Braden is the highest exhibition of Christian love and integrity, and the best qualified to present from the Bible, evidences with which to reclaim the "deluded Latter Day

4. The "preamble and resolutions" were not adopted by a "unanimous vote." At least one third of the audience did not vote at all, including Judge King, the president moderator of the debate. Rev. I. S. Hall was only present the last session of the debate. Elder W. C. Rogers only heard one of three propositions discussed. Rev. C. T. Phillips was present about one half of the time. As to the other six names attached to this delectable instrument, five represent men who are officers in the Christian Church, and have no more right there to represent the citizens of Stewartsville than the names of the officers of the Latter Day Saints' Church have on an instrument of an opposite character, purporting to contain "proceedings of a massmeeting of the citizens of Stewartsville, Missouri."

5. There are but two ways in which a proper expression of the judgment of the people on the Braden and Gillen Debate could have been taken: (1) A proper expression of all who were present at the close of the debate; or (2) by excluding Latter Day Saints and Christians, and allowing all others to vote. Mr. Braden and his fellows were evidently afraid of the results of either one of these methods, though the latter would have been more than fair for them.

If Mr. Braden will not meet the Latter Day Saints in an honorable way, and upon fair propositions, so far as debate is concerned, I shall use my influence to have him treated as he richly deserves, with silent contempt.

Joseph R. Lambert.

Stewartsville, Mo., Dec. 23d, 1885.

J. R. LAMBERT, Sir: I refuse to entertain the propositions that you offer, because they are indefinite, evasive, and do not express the issues that ought to be discussed. I stand on the propositions in my challenge, and I defy and challenge the L D S to meet me on them, because they are full, clear, and bring out fully and sharply the issues that ought to be discussed.

For years you have most impudently denied that Smith originated Mormon polygamy, that he practiced polygamy, and that he gave the revelation in favor of polygamy, and have denounced such charges as infamous slanders. Kelley challenged me to affirm such charges. Do you now admit their truth? If you do not, dare you deny them in a public discussion?

If you will acknowledge, in writing, that Smith originated Mormon polygamy, and gave the revelation in its favor, I will consent to drop that proposition. Until you do that, I defy and challenge all Mormondom to deny it in a public discussion.

The second proposition affirms clearly and sharply what you have for years sneered at as the "Spaulding Story." Do you now admit its truth? If you do not, dare you deny it, in a public discussion? If you will admit, in writing, that the second proposition is true, I will drop it. Until you do that, I challenge and defy all Mormondom to deny it in a public discussion.

Do you admit that mankind did not need new revelations from God, in addition to the revelations in the Bible, when Smith professed to give to the world new revelations from God, in addition to the revelations in the Bible? If you do not, will you affirm it in debate? If you will admit, in writing, that the proposition is not true, I will consent to its being dropped. Until you do that, I defy and challenge all Mormondom to affirm it in public discussion. Do you admit that Smith was NOT a true prophet of God? If you will admit that in writing, I will consent to have that issue dropped. Until you do, I defy and challenge all Mormondom to affirm it in public discussion.

Do you admit that Smith did not, in the Book of Mormon, in the B of D and C, in the Inspired Translation, in the Book of Abraham, and in other pretended revelations give to the world new revelations in addition to the revelations in the Bible? If you will admit it in writing, I will consent to have that issue dropped.

Now sir, admit in writing what 'I demand, or step out and affirm or deny like men, or back out like cowards, and forever shut your lying mouths, and hide your impudent faces from public scorn.

You forget that I am representing others besides myself. The citizens of Stewartsville declared by vote that the propositions I offer are the ones that should be discuss-After hearing them discussed, they reaffirm their former judgment. In conversation with scores of leading citizens of Independence, I heard them declare positively that the propositions that I offer are just the ones that they want to hear discussed. If you will agree to discuss them, if the citizens of Independence will so declare in a mass meeting, I will get such declaration. I stand ready to discuss just such propositions as the citizens of Independence who are not Mormons, wish to have discussed. Dare you discuss them in Independence? Again you are going Again you are going clear outside of all order in urging me to discuss propositions that were not hinted in my lectures in Independence. You de-nounce my lectures as lies. Is it not singular that you are trying, so hard, to avoid facing those lies? You have neither right nor business to try to lug in issues, not even hinted in my lectures. Now I know where I stand. I can afford to stand on my challenge. You can not afford to let it pass unaccepted. It is a confession of cowardly weakness if you do. By the action of the citizens of Stewartsville I stand when I can say to Mormondom, "Face fair propositions, or back out. Acknowledge the truth of what I say, or deny it in clear, fair propositions." Which will you do? I will have the citizens of Independence, who are not Mormons, reaffirm the action of the citizens of Stewartsville. I can afford to have you back out and play the coward. Can you afford to do so? Dare you discuss the issues that I presented in my lectures that you de-nounce as lies? Dare you discuss what you have been affirming in Independence for over fifty years?

alternatives is a clear affirmation of what you teach, or a square back out. Which shall it be? As the people of Stewartsville, who are not Mormons, are satisfied with the debate, I will entertain no proposition for a repetition of it here. If the Mormons are not satisfied, that is their fault not mine. If you accept the challenge, and the people of Independence want to have the character of the two organizations canvassed—after the issues in the challenge are discussed—I will most promptly gratify you. I propose to be governed by the will of those I represent.

Bevier, Macon Co., Mo., December 26th, 1884.

December 26th, 1884.
CLARK BRADEN, Sir: Your communication of the 23d inst., in answer to mine of the same date, received. I am not surv prised that you refuse to entertain my propositions, although you fail to show wherein any one of them is at fault.

When I urge that, to be consistent with your own brave words (?) you ought to entertain these propositions, because they are definite, unambiguous, comprehensive—covering every possible issue that exists between the two churches—I do so with truth and fact on my side. We stand on the true issues; and are ready and willing to meet you or any other acknowledged representative man of your faith on this ground. The object of a public discussion (especially on the subject of religion) should be to elicit truth; and not to incite persecution and mobocracy. Therefore, no one should be required to affirm or defend more or less than that which he believes, or his faith requires. You can meet us on these issues, or let it alone, just which you please.

Your first proposition is barely big enough to deserve a passing notice. Just think of it, a leading minister of the gospel, who claims that the Bible is the very best book in the world, and that it contains all that is necessary "For doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works," (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17) leaving the Bible entirely, trampling it under his feet, with all its valuable tests, and then trying to put down the religious faith of a people by an unholy attack upon the character of its reputed founder! When men are driven to such miserable straits as these, one of two conclusions is inevitable; either their cause is not fit to be represented, or they are not fit to represent their cause. The Latter Day Saints have not affirmed the good character of Joseph Smith as any part of their faith; they have simply defended him as a highly respected friend against the aspersions of evil minded men. Suppose Joseph Smith was a worse man than we think him to have been, or a better man than you think him to have been; how can that affect the doctrine he taught, either one way or the other? Mr. Braden are you afraid to meet that doctrine upon its merits? If not what does all this dodging mean?

No, sir; we do not admit your first proposition to be true. It will be time enough to do that when it is proved. As yet, this has not been done. We offered to affirm that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. Could you not bring in your polygamous argument while negativing that proposition? You certainly could when you lug it in to disprove the Book of Mormon and the faith of the church.

Your second proposition is too little also. You are a big man, but you certainly stoop to some very little things. When we have disproved all your claims for the "Spaulding Story," it still remains an open question as to whether the Book of Mormon is true or false. We propose to affirm, directly, all we believe concerning that book. Are you, Mr. Braden, afraid to meet our claims?

Your third proposition makes us to affirm that Joseph Smith gave to the world new revelation, not found in the Bible, in the Book of Abraham; while you certainly know that the church has never accepted the Book of Abraham as a revelation from God. Nor do we admit, as you have falsely asserted, in public, that Joseph Smith lied when he said he had translated it, and that the whole thing is a fraud. It is something upon which the church has not passed; it is not a vital point, and all I have to say is that you have failed to disprove the claim made by Joseph Smith. You have simply set up the claim of another man (for aught you know a fraudulent one) against the claim of Joseph Smith. The leading statement of this proposition does not fairly and truthfully represent our faith. Joseph Smith did not claim to reveal to the people a new God, new Christ, or new gospel—not known to the Bible; but he claimed, as a prophet of God, to make known to all who were willing to understand, those precious truths which have been from the beginning, but which have been hidden or obscured from the people because of false tradition, wickedness and unbelief.

My fourth proposition asks you to affirm that the Bible contains all the revelation that God intended for man in all ages of the world. This you are constantly affirming with the advantage of popular sentiment in your favor. Why are you afraid to risk the results of affirming it in public debate?

When you made your long list of blustering and sophistical demands of me, did it not occur to your mind that you were unskillfully using a two edged sword, which would, at every stroke, rebound with accelerated force, cutting your own dear self as ferociously and wickedly as you intended it to cut me? Or did you think "Lambert is such a fool that he will not notice it." You have taught, lo! these many years, that the "Church of Christ" (commonly called Campbellite Church) is in harmony with the New Testament scriptures in doctrine and church organization. Do you now admit that this proposition is not true?

If you will admit in writing, that the so called "Church of Christ" is not in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures, in doctrine nor in church organization, I will consent to have that issue dropped. Until you do, I defy and challenge you and all Campbelldom to meet the Latter Day Saints on this issue.

My second proposition requires us to affirm that the "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" (commonly called Mormon Church) is in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures, in doctrine and church organization. This you have ever denied. Do you now admit its truth? If not, dare you deny it in public discussion?

If you will admit in writing the truth of this proposition, I will drop it at once. Until you do this, you and all Campbelldom must either let us alone, while we are in the exercise of our God given rights, or come forward like men and deny the proposition.

Do you admit that the Book of Mormon is a true record, and that it contains a revelation of God's will to man? If not, dare you deny it in public discussion?

If you will admit in writing that this proposition is true, I will consent to its being dropped. Until you do this, you and all Campbelldom are invited to come forward and deny it in honorable and public discussion.

Do you now admit that the Bible does not contain all the revelation that God intended for his people in all ages of the world? If not, why do you refuse to affirm this proposition in public discussion?

If you will admit in writing, that this proposition is not true, and therefore, does not properly represent your faith, I will drop it at once. Until you do this, you and all who hold with you on this anti-Christian doctrine, will be asked to affirm what you teach and believe, or "forever afterwards hold your peace."

"Now, sir, admit in writing what I demand, or step out and affirm or deny like" a man, "or back out like" a coward, "and forever shut your lying" mouth, "and hide your impudent" face "from public scorn."

No, I had not forgotten that you represent others beside yourself; though in deportment and policy I trust the number is not large. I am not now at a loss to understand what you mean by "the citizens of Stewartsville," and "scores of leading citizens of Independence." I represent no clique, but the whole church of which I am a member; and the church desires that the true issues existing between the two bodies should be fully and honorably met by their voluntary executioner. We are willing to allow all churches to represent their own faith, through their standard publications and acknowledged representative men. We demand the same privilege for ourselves. We do not propose that you, or any set of men you can scrape together, shall dictate to the people what we believe, and then compel us to defend it.

In your lectures in Independence, you claimed to properly represent our faith. I have seen but one in print, and only referred to one in my letter to you. In this one, as I have said before, there are many base falsehoods. Is it out of order, then, to signify our willingness to meet you on the true issues?

Mr. Braden, if you dare meet us on these propositions, at Independence, Mo., we will gladly agree to expose the one dozen lies contained in said lecture; unless it has already been done. Will you give some of our boys a chance?

You say if your propositions are not accepted by us "it is a confession of cowardly weakness" on our part. What wonderful logic that is! Just because I am a Latter Day Saint I must affirm and defend what Clark Braden says I believe, or I am a coward! If I so affirm and defend, you, sir, would c ll me "a fool and a liar," as you have called others; and because I will not, I am a coward!! In the days of the Roman Inquisition, men were accused of certain wrongs. If they confessed, they were punished for their guilt; but if they denied, they were punished for their stubbornness. So you see, the rack was their doom, no matter which course they pursued. Would you, Mr. Braden, like to institute a little holy order of that kind for the special benefit of the Latter Day Saints?

You need not flatter yourself that we will "back out, play the coward," or be caught in your contemptible trap. "A clear affirmation of what we teach" is neither strange nor new, to us; and we shall see who will do the backing out.

Your affected fairness to debate the respective claims of the two churchesafter your propositions have been discussed should the citizens (your citizens) of Independence so request, is but a dodge. I have good reason for believing that these same citizens are led and controlled by you. They would make no such request, lest it should cause division in the camp and endanger Clark Braden's craft. Your expressions, "The people of Stewartsville, and the people of Independence, who are not Mormons," are designed to mislead. They simply mean the Campbellites and a few others, who join with them in their holy crusade against the Latter Day Saints. Suppose the Latter Day Saints of Stewartsville and vicinity should get together, with their friends, and pass resolutions, &c., and then call them the "proceedings of a mass meeting of the citizens of Stew-artsville." What would you say and think of it? Yet we would have as much right as you have to do the same thing, and we could make a much better showing than you did in the M. E. Church, last Sunday evening.

When you are willing to engage in honorable warfare, you can easily be accommodated; until then you are left to choose between holding your peace, and continuing in your present contemptible course.

Joseph R. Lambert.

PAOLA, Kansas, January 3d, 1885.

JR LAMBERT I have received your long pettifogging communication. Since receiving it I have visited Independence and talked with ministers and others there. They agreed with me in their conclusions. For years you have denied that Smith or-That he iginated Mormon polygamy. ever practiced polygamy. That he gave the revelation in its favor. You have asserted that his revelations condemned polygamy. You have denounced Brigham Young as an apostate and a false prophet, because he practiced polygamy. You have asserted that he forged the revelation in favor of polygamy. Kelley bantered me to meet him on the above issues. You know that I can prove that Smith originated Mormon polygamy. That he practiced polygamy. That he gave the revelation in its favor. That in so doing I expose your lies and hypocrisy of the last twenty years. That I show that Smith was a false prophet by your own denunciations of Young. That you, not Young are apostates from Smith's teachings. Hence you dare not accept my challenge to debate the first proposition. You have backed out. You dare not meet the issue.

In regard to the second proposition.

You have for fifty years ridiculed the "Spaulding Story." You have claimed that you could utterly explode it. That it was too preposterous for notice. You have learned that I can prove that Sidney Rigdon stole the histortic portions of the Book of Mormon from the Manuscript Found of Solomon Spaulding. That he stole the religious portions from the Bible, and patched them out with his own peculiar religious ideas. That he stole other portions from modern literature. have learned by dire experience, that I can establish this by overwhelming evidence. You dare not meet it. What an insult to common sense, to ask me to debate whether a fraud, whose religious ideas I have proved were stolen from the Bible, harmonizes in their stolen portions, with the book from whence it has been stolen. It is like asking a lawyer to prove that a bill, that he has proved to be counterfeit, does not resemble, in some particulars, the bill it imitates. You can see that my second proposition proved, it proves your silly fraud, the Book of Mormon, as an imposition. That is why you dare not face it.

You have for years claimed that mankind did need new revelations, in addition to those in the Bible when Smith professed to give such revelations. Now you back out of such a position. Hundreds of thousands have heard you make such claims. If man did not need them, what need of Smith? If he did not give them, what did he do? How can you call his stuff revelations? You have claimed that Smith was a true prophet, of God. You have accepted Smith's statements, that, in the Book of Mormon, in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, the new portions of the Inspired Translation, in the Book of Abraham and in the prophecy in regard to the rebellion, and other professed revelations, he gave revelations from God. Did not Smith so claim? Did not he so publish to the world? And in regard to each and all of the publications above? Was he mistaken in regard to any of them? Or did he lie in regard to any of them? I care not what you call "your faith." The query is, What did Smith claim to do? What have you published to the world as his claim? Do you go back on Smith's positive declarations and claims as a prophet? If so why? Because he lied? Or because he was mistaken? Will you please answer why any revelation that Smith positively asserted to be a revelation, is not a part of "your faith?'

I remind you, that in my lectures, that caused you to challenge me in Independence, I made certain statements. I am ready to defend them. What business have you to lug in what I never hinted at? Suppose Ingersoll were to visit Independence and assail the origin and revelations of Christianity. The preachers denounce his statements as falsehoods. But when they challenge him, they want him to affirm that the teachings and practice of the Republican party harmonizes with the constitution of United States!! And to deny that the teachings of the Democratic preach Republicanism. I assailed your book and religion. I did not assail the Democratic party. I assailed your book and its teachings. Your challenge is a cowardly attempt to avoid defending what you present as a revelation, and to array against me the prejudice of the political element opposed to me!!

In like manner I assailed your revelations and their teachings and your prophet. Instead of meeting what I said, you challenge me to show that my church harmonizes with the Bible!! To prove that your church does not. Gentlemen, I said nothing about my church. Nor of your church as an organization. I did not assail its organization or practices. I assailed your prophet and revelations and their teachings. Your challenge is a cowardly attempt to evade meeting what I said, that you dare not meet, and to array against me the religious prejudices of other churches. It is as contemptible and cowardly as the supposed action of the preachers in our illustration.

Gentlemen, I will not move one hairs breadth from my propositions. They express just what I said in my lectures, on which you challenged me. They are just what citizens of Independence want debated. They are fair and full and clear. They are what you have denied, or have taught. Accept or back out. This ends all correspondence, except an acceptance of them.

Lambert & Co:

You can accept the propositions or back out. I can afford to stand where I do. Every fair minded person of sense can see that if you do not accept you back out of a fair debate. Now accept or back out. I will answer no more letters except letters of acceptance of the propositions.

BRADEN.

LAMONI, Iowa,

January 16th, 1885.
CLARK BRADEN, Sir:—Your communication of the 3d inst. received vesterday.

If there is any pettifogging contained in my letter, it is found in those portions wherein your favorite method of making propositions and propounding questions is turned against you. If it is pettifoggery for me to try you by propositions which fairly and fully cover the issues between the two churches, what is it for you to try me in a similar way by your own selections from and misrepresentations of our faith?

You now claim (1) that you said nothing of our "church, as an organization. Did not assail its organization or practices," in your lectures. (2) That your propositions "express just what" you "said in" your "lectures."

If then, your propositions contemplate nothing of our church as an organization; nor of her practices, as a religious body claiming to be Christian, how can you say, "they are fair and full and clear?" And how can you, in justice, blame us for wanting, in the proposed contest, propositions which are fair and comprehensive? It is you, not we, who are doing the "pettifogparty harmonize with the constitution!! ging," as your own letters show. What Ingersoll would say, Gentlemen, I did not right have these "ministers and others" of Independence, to represent our faith for us? And what right have they to dictate in what manner we shall defend it? We propose to represent our own faith through our representative men and standard publications. It is unjust and shameful for anybody to oppose the belief of any body of people from any other basis; and when indulged in by one claiming to be a minister of the gospel, it is wonderfully inconsistent, low, and contemptibly mean.

But who are these "ministers and others?" For aught we know, a few Campbellite elders and their followers! Your statements need to be confirmed, unless we are furnished with evidence of thorough reformation on your part.

Our objections to your first proposition have been plainly stated. All of that which you say we have "denied," "denounced," "admitted," "asserted," &c., is irrelevant, and for the following reason: We have not acknowledged that Joseph Smith was a polygamist, nor that you have been, are, or ever will be able to prove him to have been a polygamist.

There is no parallel between the respective attitudes of Joseph Smith and Brigham Young towards the doctrine of polygamy. The former presented no revelation to the church, either authorizing or permitting the unholy practice. No written or printed article, long or short, over his own signature, favoring the principle and practice of polygamy, ever made its appearance during his lifetime. The latter taught and practiced it openly from 1852 till the time of his death.

Mr. Braden, it is useless for you to try to hide your real condition and feelings by stating that we "dare not meet" you, "have backed out," &c. Men of "fairness and sense" will not fail to see that you are in a tight place, and that you are conscious of your situation; hence the long whine that you have raised in your last communication.

Your claim that we, "and not Young, are apostates from Smith's teachings, is worthy of notice. Brigham Young taught polygamy and enjoined it as a duty affecting our condition in eternity. He taught that murder ("blood atonement") lying and stealing, under certain conditions, are allowable. He also taught that "Adam is our Father and our God." He taught opposition to and rebellion against the government of the United States. You will not object to the statement that B. Young was anti-Christian on all points of doctrine, "except what originally came from the Campbellites through Sidney Rigdon." Joseph Smith, you say, was an Joseph Smith, you say, was an infidel, and B. Young was his faithful follower and true successor. This being true, it follows as a necessary conclusion, that we are, in reality, opposed to polygamy, lying, stealing and murder, under all circumstances. That we are opposed to idolatry, infidelity and opposition to and rebellion against the government of the United States. What, then, do you expect to accomplish by your continuous and acrimonious assaults upon the Josephites. Why not let them alone if they have gone back on Joseph Smith and his doctrine? Or are you striving to get them to return to Joseph Smith's teachings from which they have apostatized? Why is it that you are tramping the country over in order to warn people against us? Why is it that you take particular pains, in your lectures, by inference and statement, to leave the impression that we and the Brighamites are identical in faith? If you can untangle this web you have woven, we will watch and see how it is done.

Your second proposition, as I have shown before, is not sufficiently comprehensive. When we have thoroughly exploded the "Spaulding tale," as we have done many times in the past, the origin of the Book of Mormon still remains an open question. It gives you every opportunity to cater to the ignorance and prejudices of the people, while we have but a very poor opportunity to present the many incontrovertible proofs in favor of its divine origin.

In your debate with E. L. Kelley, at Kirtland, Ohio, you made use of the "Spaulding story" as a leading argument against the Book of Mormon. If you were right and successful in the means and methods used at Kirtland, why not pursue a similar course at Independence? Or have you "learned by dire experience" that your "Spaulding story" stands no show when arrayed against the evidences we use to support the Book of Mormon? Which is it? We will leave you no excuse on this proposition. If you will meet us in an honorable manner onthe four propositions already submitted to you, we will accept your second proposition as the fifth one to be debated in the coming discussion. Now we will see what you mean by your wild, extravagant claims for yourself, and your foundationless and ungentlemanly denunciations against us.

Your remarks concerning our proposition on the Book of Mormon, show that you are hard pressed—driven to the wall. You were certainly writing for "simple folks" when you penned those paragraphs with that characteristic illustration.

You have proved that the Book of Mormon is a fraud, all stolen by Sidney Rigdon, from the "Spaulding story, Bible and modern literature." "What an insult to common sense, to ask" you "to debate whether a fraud, whose religious ideas" you "have proved were stolen from the Bible, harmonizes in those stolen portions, with the book from which it has been stolen?"

"What an insult to common sense" to require us to concede all this and then challenge us to disprove it in public debate! If we are required to admit that the Book of Mormon is just what you claim it to be, before we can properly frame propositions looking to a discussion of the subject, then your challenge for us to meet you on your second proposition is an open insult to us, and an outrage on "common sense." Yet this is made the premise of a labored argument against our third proposition.

Not only your premise, but your whole argument is at fault. It is a glaring misrepresentation of the proposition you seek to belittle; but your cunning is not sufficient. You are not asked to debate whether the Book of Mormon harmonizes with the Bible, in some particulars, like the counterfeit bill to the genuine, but "Is the Book of Mormon a true Record? Does it contain a revelation of God's will to man?"

The proposition is comprehensive and clear. It affirms as much for the Book of Mormon as C. C. Rowley claimed for the New Testament in a debate with J. E. Remsberg, held a short time ago at Stewartsville, Mo. A proper discussion of this proposition involves the necessity of examining the historical, doctrinal and prophetical statements of the book. It is too fair and comprehensive to suit your purpose, hence your illogical mess of stuff in opposition to it.

We do not propose to be governed by what others think, or say they have heard us teach; but when you are ready to meet fair statements of our faith, as it is, you can readily be accommodated.

We have offered to affirm "that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God." If you wish to know "whether we have gone back on the claims of Joseph Smith;" what we believe about his revelations, mission, &c., accept the propositions which we have sent you, and you will be sure to find out. We know what we have taught, what we believe and are teaching, better than you or anybody else can inform us; and we do not propose to be scared into your trap by your hyperbolical statements.

On the above proposition, as suggested before, you will have ample opportunity to prove, if you can, that Smith originated and practiced Mormon polygamy. You can "tell it again;" I mean the story of the "eleven girls in the Mansion House;" and "the girl in the privy," and lots more of the same kind of stuff, of which you keep a most plentiful stock always on hands.

On the other hand we would have opportunity to prove that the inspired translation of the Bible, the Book of Mormon and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, with other professed revelations, furnish evidence that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God.

If you will agree to discuss the propositions submitted to you at Stewartsville, Mo., we will agree to oppose the false statements found in your lecture entitled, "Mormon Problem and its solution."

Your illustration of Ingersoll and the preachers at Independence, has no proper application to anything that I have submitted for your consideration. According to this illustration, Ingersoll assails "the origin and revelations of Christianity." The preachers take him away from the subject of religion, and challenge him to debate the respective claims of two leading political parties. You have gone to Independence and elsewhere and raised certain issues upon the belief and practices of the Latter Day Saints. You have said many hard things against them and their faith. Have we attempted to lead you away from the subject of religion to some dissimilar one? Is it improper for us under such circumstances, to step forward and signify our willingness to affirm and defend our faith in its entirety? Is it improper under such circumstances, to request you to defend your own faith? Is it not just and right that your faith should be subjected to the same scrutiny as ours? Would any honest man, whose object is truth only, be afraid of such test and comparison? When Ingersoll and other infidels attack the Bible and Christianity alone, are you and other preachers careful to say nothing against infidelity, or ask infidels to defend it, so long as they confine themselves to a bitter attack upon Christianity?

In the Kirtland debate with E. L. Kelley, you affirmed the claims of your church and denied the claims of ours. Have "you learned by dire experience" that it will not do to repeat it? Or have you found out that it will pay better to confine your efforts to an attack against an innocent people whose faith and practices will compare favorably with the faith and practices of any other religious body? the reason why you are tramping the country over and trying to incite a spirit of persecution and mobocracy against the Latter Day Saints?

You admit that you have assailed the revelations in which we believe, "their teachings," and our prophet. Did you do all this without saying anything of our "church as an organization," or assailing its "practices?"

What do the following sentences, taken from your lecture delivered at Independence last November, mean?

"Both sects of Mormonism (Josephites and Brighamites) are thoroughly organized systems for acquiring and using power. At the head of each stands a president, then beneath him two vice presidents, twelve apostles, three seventies of apostles, a high council, a large number of elders and presiding elders, bishops and presiding bishops, patriarchs and other officials, until every fifth adult male Mormon is an official of some sort or other."

"Mormonism is the most absolute theocracy the world has ever known. It is an organized rebellion against all authority except its own. Its government is the government of God, and the utterances of its unprincipled leaders are the voice of God. All else is human, a usurpation of what rightfully belongs to Mormonism against its divine authority. Josephism and Brighamism is exactly alike in these features, and in the hands of their crafty teachers are a constant conspiracy against all Gentile government and authority."

"In 1832 and '33, as all who lived in this region can testify, the Mormons plundered and abused all the Gentiles that they came in contact with. They did this in accordance with the following revelation found on page 194 of the Book of Revelation and Covenants."

"Said nothing of" our "church as an organization!" "Did not assail its organization or practices?"

The above utterances speak for themselves. They give the lie to your last words to us. You are in a tight place Mr. Braden, and have made one of your desperate and unscrupulous efforts to extricate yourself.

Just think of it? "The champion of Campbellism" going about and making such statements as the above about the Latter Day Saints, and when invited to meet one of their representative men and debate their faith, as a whole, he backs clear down and out! He will not even defend his own church!

If our challenge, as you call it, "is a cowardly attempt to avoid meeting you," "and to array against" you "the religious prejudices of other churches," what can be said of the course you are pursuing? Your whole effort since the Kirtland debate, has been to array against us the religious prejudices of other churches. In order to secure this much desired end, you have not hesitated to use any means which promised success. The old Papal doctrine, "The end justifies the means," has been adopted and freely acted upon by you. You have resorted to means, the use of which places you far below the dignity of any gentleman, making no profession of religion. Infidel arguments, and infidel methods, with cunning and trickery that were not surpassed by the persecuting Jews, in the days of Christ; glaring misrepresentation and downright lying, have all been resorted to by you in your frenzied efforts to put down the Latter Day Saints.

We submitted to you four propositions. In your first answer you denounced them, but did not undertake to show wherein any one of them is at fault. In your last communication you make a feeble attack upon one of them, basing your argument upon an assumed and false premise. In these propositions we offer to affirm our faith and deny yours. We only ask you to do the same, affirm your faith and deny ours. What and where are your grounds for denouncing this fair offer as a cowardly attempt to avoid meeting you, &c.?

It appears that you are more anxious to put down Mormonism than to teach and defend what you call Christianity. You have so arranged your propositions as to give you every opportunity to fling dirt and filth at the Latter Day Saints; but you propose, if possible, that their hands shall be tied so they can not defend themselves. Shame on the man who will do this, and then denounce his opponents as cowards, because they will not meet him on these same propositions!

We have not, nor do we propose to back out from a fair and proper defense of our faith; but it is doubly manifest now that you have no hope of success from honorable warfare with the Latter Day

You are welcome, so far as we are concerned, to all the prestige and religious sympathy you can receive by your present contemptible course. They will avail you nothing in the end; for sooner or later, unless you repent, you will fall into the ditch you have dug for others, and your "curses, like chickens, will come home to roost."

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

No. 405, East Cumberland-St., PHILADELPHIA, Pa., December 12th, 1884.

CLARK BRADEN: I am in receipt of your intolerant and maligning letter from Independence, Missouri, in which you state that the "Christian Church" there endorse you. It is gratifying to me to learn that you can get endorsement from that body somewhere, for you certainly failed in Northern Ohio, where you are better known and were so signally defeated in your deplorable tirade against the Latter Day Saints. Would it not be well for you to get an endorsement from the Christian (?) Churches at Chardon and Mentor, Ohio, which are so near the scene of the late debate at Kirtland? It would materially aid in the sale of the Debate, to the Disciple brethren in many parts of the country and this will please me as well as yourself. I trust further, that your church members in Independence are so willing to endorse you, that they will also buy and read the Debate. Let every man read and be his own judge.

It will be time enough for you to talk about a fair debate with me in Independence, when you shall have shown manliness enough to accept a fair debate with me in Stewartsville, where you first challenged

I forwarded long ago my reply to your false and cowardly publication of my attitude in the Stewartsville debate; but, today am informed by card that the papers there would not insert my reply as they had done yours, without they were paid for it. I had before understood that the papers were favorable to a free and impartial hearing of this matter and sought it for the benefit of their readers; otherwise, I should not have asked a hearing, but sent you directly. I do not now claim the papers were to blame in the matter, only I misunderstood their attitude toward the debate. But seeing you have not had the benefit of my reply by publication, as I received yours, I will direct a copy handed you, and trust you will observe, that my address is as before "Kirtland, Ohio."

Here, I shall only notice that my former discussions with you seem to have fully convinced you that you dare not undertake to meet me again upon the following

- 1. Any fair proposition affirming or touching the truth of the faith and belief of the Campbellite or so called Christian Church.
- 2. Any fair proposition touching the faith and belief of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

It is further plainly demonstrated to my mind that the fact of your going about the country parading and boasting over the questions of your own false framing in order to deceive the people into the false idea that I am not willing to meet you upon any fair propositions touching my faith, shows that you are conscious of the fact that you can not meet me successfully in fair debate, and that you would stoop low enough to steal a victory, if possible, which you dare not undertake to manfully win. And now, you say you have a grave dug for me. Yes; and Haman had a gallows for the fair Mordecai; and just so sure as Haman was suspended from the gallows he had built for the man who stood for the right, will a just public eventually bury you in the invidious mess you have stirred for others.

In the meantime I shall not make myself uneasy at your threats, or desperate struggles to vilify and slander a man whom you refused to meet in fair debate. The monument of your defeat at Kirtland, is too formidable and enduring to require my chasing the country over to answer to your waning jack o' lantern light.

When you shall have sufficiently recovered, as to be willing to engage me upon fair and honorable propositions you will have no trouble in finding me. And, until you expunge from your false and malicious publications, your grossly absurd and wickedly false statements, you shall stand indicted before the public for attempting to steal a victory over me in a proposed contest, which you was too cowardly to fairly and honorably enter. E. L. KELLEY.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

WHAT is it? is a question very frequently asked and an answer more sought than to most scriptural allusions. While nearly all professors of Christianity deny the possibility of living without committing sin, the point is to find out what the unpardonable sin is, so they may avoid it. Some attempt to confine it to suicide, the last extremity, which, after having committed, they could do no more good or bad. Our Savior tells us, that he that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, hath no forgiveness, Mark 3:9; and Paul tells us, if we sin willfully, after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins.—Heb. 10: 26. After we have put on Christ, believed in and accepted Christ as our Redeemer, confessed and asked pardon at the hand of God through Christ for our sins; been baptized in the likeness of his death, and risen in the likeness of his resurrection, and determined to walk in newness of life, are we not clean? Then let us remain so by keeping the command of God, and not commit sin by transgressing the law; for sin is the transgression of the law. Let us hear from some of our able brethren on this subject. Good will to all the brethren and sisters.

JOHN HODGES.

HARSHNESS VERSUS FRANKNESS OF SPEECH.

How often a bitter speech, which has caused keen pain to the hearer, has been followed by such words as these, as if in justification of the unkindness shown: "I am a plain, blunt person, and I have to speak out just what I think. People must take me as the Lord made me." Anything meaner than such an attempt to throw the responsibility for one's ugliness of temper off upon the Lord it would be hard to imagine. Frankness of speech is one thing, but harshness is a very different thing. The Lord never endowed any man with such a disposition or put him in such circumstances that he was obliged to make stinging, cruel remarks. Some men have more difficulty than others in being sweet-tempered and kindly spoken, but when one fails it is his own fault. The very attempt to justify harshness in such words as we have quoted is evidence that there is a consciousness of guilt felt by the person so speaking .- Boston Congregationalist.

INDEPENDENCE LOCALS.

The weather for the past week has been very cold, the mercury perambulating close around zero. The five inches of snow-fall without wind is being gaily improved by the lovers of the sleigh.... A "conference committee" has been appointed to study out the possibilities and probabilities of the coming Annual Conference, of which you will be duly informed later A. Munn was a few days ago called to Illinois to settle up and dispose of his father's estate.... Judge J. W. Chatburn, of Iowa, spent last week in the city, visiting relatives; preaching on Sunday evening to an appreciative audience..... W. W. Blair's smiling countenance lighted up our "sanctum" on last Monday, since which time he has favored us with several able discourses, to the joy and edification of the Saints; inspiring confidence and renewed and determined resolutions for the future. Come again.... Miss Vida Smith has returned home from Stewartsville, where she has been visiting friends through the holidays.

IOSEPH SMITH - - -

EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Feb. 14th, 1885.

THE Christian Evangelist, published at St. Louis, Missouri, by the Christian Publishing Company, for and in behalf of the Disciple, or Christian Church, in a late issue attempts to dispose of the argument presented by us not long since in reference to the issue between the two churches, theirs and ours. The method of disposing of the argument is as follows: "The conclusion of this labored effort seems to be that if Alexander Campbell and others had the right to retorm the church, so had Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith. Granted. But they had no right to deform the church, and it is their efforts to do this that has made them so obnoxious. Thus we dispose of several columns of bad logic in the HERALD."

The object of the movement for reformation by Alexander Campbell and others, as stated by Thomas Campbell, and endorsed and restated by Rev. R. Richardson, ef Virginia, an accredited and able minister of the Christian or Disciple connection, was "The restoration of pure primitive apostolic christianity, in letter and spirit; in principle and practice."

Sidney Rigdon was in good repute while with his aforetime brethren of the Christian Church. When, in his pursuit of "pure, apostolic christianity, in letter and spirit," as a reformer; which is all that Alexander Campbell for himself and coworkers, claimed to be; then he became anything which these reformers chose to call him.

The right to reform the church being granted to Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith, as so curtly conceded by the Evangelist; it leaves the question at issue between the Christian Church and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, just where we placed it in the article which that very clever paper tries to "pooh, pooh!" out of countenance, by calling it "bad logic." That question is: Is the Reorganized Church, in its faith, principles, doctrine and practice, more nearly in accordance with the church instituted by Christ and his Disciples, than is the Christian Church or the Disciples of Christ? And is said Reorganized Church, by reason of being more nearly in accordance with the New Testament pattern, more certainly entitled to be called the Church of Christ than is the said Christian or Disciple Church? Is said Reorganized Church, because that its principles of faith, organization and practice, are more nearly in accord with the primitive church of the New Testament, more entitled to the attention and credence of mankind than is said Christian, or Disciple Church?

It is one thing for the Evangelist to state that Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith deformed the church, but is is another, quite different and much more difficult thing for the Evangelist, or any of the ministers of the Christian Church to prove such deformation.

The Reorganized Church affirms, and stands ready to attempt defense of the affirmation, that in faith, principles, doctrine and organization it is much, very much more nearly in harmony with the teachings of Christ, and the Apostles of the New Testament Scriptures, than is the Christian or Disciple Church, in its faith, principles, doctrine and organization, if it has an organization. Is the Disciple Church prepared to meet such issue?

It is not a question of whether Alexander Campbell, Sidney Rigdon and others were men of good character, and therefore the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches, reformed by them and called the Christian Church, is the Church of Christ, or Christ's Church. Nor is it a question whether Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith were men of bad character when they reformed the church, or organized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and therefore it is not the Church of Christ, or Christ's Church.

The character of these men no more legitimately enters into the dispute, than does the character of Moses enter into the validity of the law written on stone by the finger of God; the character of Saul, into the question whether it was good for Israel to be ruled by a king; the character of Jacob, into the question of blessings conferred through Judah; the character of Noah, into the question of the flood; or the character of the twelve disciples, into the question whether the gospel taught by them was authorized by Christ. Yet, whenever the disciples of Alexander Campbell have attempted to meet the associates of Joseph Smith, in discussion, in nearly every instance, the methods of attack have been to assail the character of Sidney Rigdon, Joseph Smith, and others.

We grant the correctness of the statement by the Evangelist that Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith had "no right to deform the church." But did they? We answer that they did not. Can the Evangelist show that they did deform the church; and wherein. Would it not be more consistent with the profession of the people for whom the Evangelist speaks, if they would point out by a "Thus saith the Lord, either in express terms, or by approved Scripture precedent," the principles presented by the Reorganized Church as the proper and legal representative of the church instituted by Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon and others, that have deformed the church, or that are not in harmony with New Testament truths. Is it not strangely out of harmony with the character of professed teachers of Christ to set aside so earnest a plea as the one the Latter Day Saints make against them in such an illogical and foolish way as that adopted by the Evangelist.

By granting the claim made by us that Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith had the right to reform the church, our Disciple friends have disposed of one part of the controversy and that to our advantage.

Disposing of our attack in the way the Evangelist does, is admitting that our statement that the question whether the Christian, or Reorganized Church is the Church of Christ is of more importance to mankind than whether the Book of Mormon be true, or false, is correct; and thus leaves the issue between us confessed. Will the Disciple Church stand by their side of it.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE are asked whether it is "absolutely wrong for the Saints to go to meetings held by other denominations: Methodist, Baptist, Christian or Campbellite, United Brethren, &c. We answer no. It is not absolutely wrong, and can only be wrong relatively, when the Saints have meetings of their own, and members go from them to other meetings. When, and in places where the Saints have no meetings it would be right for members of the church to go and hear the preaching from other pulpits; and attend prayer and praise meetings, when convenient and they feel like it.

Bro. S. Case wrote from Sand Beach, Michigan, January 27th, that he had been preaching four miles north of the beach, for five consecutive Sundays, with good liberty, except on one occasion. He left them a promise to return at some future time.

Brn. James Caffall, and Henry Kemp were at the late Southern Nebraska Conference, at Wilber, Nebraska, and preached there to the benefit of all. Bro. Anthony writes that it was a wonderful season of rejoicing.

Sr. Matilda Ballinsky wrote from Webberville, Michigan, Ingham county, February 1st, that brethren J. J. Cornish and Hiram Rathbun had been there preaching. She says that a year and a half ago there were two Saints, herself and sister, there; now there are fourteen. Two, as reported by Bro. Cornish, were baptized not long ago.

Bro. P. P. Gillmore writes from Breeze, Jasper county, Missouri, January 17th, that there was considerable talk now going on in the community, caused by views expressed by him and others concerning the Bible. Let the work go on.

Letters received from brethren Jasper M. Towsley, Chester, Illinois; R. M. King, Vancleave, Mississippi; Sr. Ella StClair, Kansas City, Mo.; Bro. Jobe Brown, Lacrosse, Wis.; Sr. E. Sartwell, Savanna, Ills.; Brn. C. StClair, Kansas City, Mo.; W. H. Curwen and some others, which we are obliged to pass for want of room.

Letters from Sr. M. J. Murphy, Plattsmouth, Nebraska; Brn. J. D. Erwin, Manchester, Texas; R. M. Bradley, Webb City, Missouri; G. C. Hodges, Springfield, Nebraska; Levi Anthony, Wilber, Nebraska; W. J. Curry, Rushville, Illinois, which are crowded out for want of room.

See "Farm to Rent," on last page of HERALD. A good chance for parties wishing to rent a farm of the kind.

Bro. G. S. Yerrington wrote from Providence Rhode Island, February 2d, that Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley and M. H. Bond attended the Massachusetts Conference and spoke during the session. Much benefit was derived from their labors. Bro. Yerrington says: "We feel the need of just such men to spread the truth."

Bro. B. V. Springer called on us at the Herald Office, February 2d and 3d, in good health and spirits.

Bro. Joseph F. Burton's Australian address is care of Richard Ellis, Catherine Street, Forest Lodge, Sydney, New South Wales. Postage is twelve cents per half ounce. Bro. Burton reached Sydney, December 20th, all well.

Bro. William N. Dawson writes from Nortonville, Contra Costa county, California, that the coal mines there were about to be closed up, only a half dozen men were working now, and four weeks would close the work out. Times hard, money scarce.

On page 69 of present volume of Her-ALD, first column, second paragraph, read "five hundred to fifteen hundred dollars," instead of "five dollars to fifteen dollars."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. John S. Patterson wrote from Mission, LaSalle county, Illinois, January 20th:

"I am still laboring quietly, but steadily, for the advancement of the Master's cause, still believing that the path of duty is the only path of safety, my old enemy, (rheumatism) has been playing havoc with me for the last six weeks, and still continues, but I keep on groaning, preaching, and hoping for relief, believing that it is better to wear out than to rust out. I am doing my best to keep things moving in the field assigned me, but the field is large and I am alone, and getting older. The local brethren in some places are doing nobly; others are slothful. I watch with deep interest the controversy going on in the Herald. I am not without hope of meeting you at next Spring Conference. Kind remembrance to Bro. Blair, and all in the office."

Bro. Robert Brown wrote from Petrolia, Ontario:

"We had Bro. Luff preaching here. Brn. Leverton and Lake baptized five earnest believers, and there is a pretty good prospect for more. I am only two years the 9th of this month here. Have bought a church house so as not to be turned out of doors. Hoping to do still more for the Master yet though I was seventy years of age the 13th day of July. Pray for us."

Bro. L. C. Donaldson wrote from Riverton, Iowa, January 25th:

"Bro Henry Kemp paid us a visit and left a good feeling among the people. The people turned out well to hear him, considering the cold weather. The mercury ranged from ten to fifteen degrees below zero. Bro. Milton Dougherty has done some preaching here and at Hamburg. I assisted him some. Times are hard, money scarce."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—1. Did Orson Hyde on the 24th of October, 1841, offer the prayer as is recorded in several publications, asking that the curse be removed from the land of Palestine?

Ans.—It is so stated in some of the works published at the time of Orson Hyde's return, and since. We do not know whether the statement is true or false.

Q.—After the bread has been passed and some pieces remain, what shall be done with the pieces which remain?

A.—It would be better that none were left; or at least very little. But it is a matter for each branch to decide for itself, whether it shall be passed until all is eaten; or what other use should be made of. It is no more necessary to eat all the bread than to drink all the wine, if any is left. If any bread is not eaten, the one taking charge of the plates, cups, &c., should see that it was properly taken care of to prevent waste, sacrilege and scandal.

BASE IMPOSITION.

FRAUDULENT RELICS SOLD TO THE CATHOLICS OF MONTREAL.

The announcement made during the celebration of high mass in the Roman Catholic Churches, that a number of supposed sacred relics which had been brought from Rome in 1880 by Mgr. Fabre, Bishop of Montreal, were not genuine, has caused a profound sensation in religious circles. It is asserted that the Bishop was victimized by a relic merchant in Rome, and that in order to carry out the scheme the name of the Pope was forged. Bishop Fabre visited the Eternal City himself for the special purpose of securing relics for the use of his diocese, and spent time in the work of making the collection. It was announced upon his return that his mission had been crowned with great success, and he brought with him what had been represented to him as the bones of St. Claudius and St. Julian, which it was related by the antiquary had been taken by the Piedmontese army of Victor Emanuel from the sanctuary of St. Peter's in 1871, and cast into the street, where they were gathered up by some of the faithful. and subsequently passed into the hands of the relic hunter. The alleged bones of St. Claudius were presented to the Parish of Lachine and those of St. Julian to the Church of the Convent of St. Anne. Special altars were erected, within which the precious and costly relics were deposited, after having been blessed and sanctified with great religious pomp and ceremony. Such was the anxiety on the part of the faithful to secure some of the relics that a number of the bones were cremated and the ashes distributed, the church receiving in exchange for them thousands of dollars as gifts from the persons thus favored. A year ago intelligence was received from Rome that many of the relics purchased there from time to time were fraudulent, and that forgeries had been resorted to to give them the appearance of bearing the Papal certificate. Bishop Fabre, becoming alarmed, sent an inquiry as to the genuineness or falsity of his relics, and an answer was received that they were fraudulent; that the Pope had never signed the certificates, and directing that the "relics" be at once destroyed, which was done yesterday. The costly ashes in possession of the faithful will, doubtless, share a similar fate.

The above views from the Chicago Fournal are worthy of insertion in the HERALD. It is another evidence of the credulity and superstition in the world. The worship of the Creator is lost sight of in the long continued practice of adoring the bones and other relics, real or supposed to be, of men to whom history or tradition ascribes great virtues, or, more frequently, of undying love for their church right or wrong. The majority of people will feel no sympathy for those thus swindled in buying such relics and then building altars to their honor; or for those who buy the ashes of the bones and hold them as sacred and holy. H. A. S.

Correspondence.

LAMONI, Iowa, February 3d, 1885.

Dear Herald: On the 13th ult. I returned home after an absence of about two months and a half. It seemed a long time, as usual, but solid satisfaction only comes from an effort to discharge duty. My labors, while gone, were confined to Salt River, (near Macon City), Bevier, Delano Branch, (near Cameron), Stewartsville, (city and country branches), and over one Sunday in St. Joseph. Nearly five weeks were spent at Bevier, where the opportunities of the Saints for doing good are splendid. But Satan has hindered them, and sought to overthrow the work. It is marvelous what ready instruments he sometimes finds among God's people, and how well he succeeds in his terrible designs! If the children of God do not make a continuous effort to be wise and good, they are only His by name. In theory the standard for God's people and ministry is, and ever has been, high and grand; in Pactice, on the administration or church dicipline, I believe, (and therefore regret it), it has often been too low. History repeats itself, not only in the age in which we live, but from age to age. We can not, as individual members of Christ's Church; as branches, districts, and a complete organization, carry too heavy a load of corruption. If we do, we are sure to fall and be "broken;" and if we continue in this mistaken policy, (which is sometimes misnamed charity), we shall finally be ground "to powder."

Bro. J. T. Kinnaman was with me for nearly three weeks, at Bevier, and he labored faithfully and well. Bro. H. A. Stebbins was called by telegram, stopped a few days, and his visit and labors were duly appreciated. Our work at Bevier was difficult, in some respects very unpleasant. We left things in a much better condition than we found them; and if the members and officers of the branch will abide by the order and law of the church, all will be well.

Of my work at Stewartsville, enough has been said by others. I attended the Gillen-Braden debate, and of course had a good opportunity of learning something of the ways and methods of the man Braden. Bro. Gillen labored faithfully, made some excellent points, and as a whole (under the circumstances) did well.

My visit to St. Joseph was a pleasant one, as were my visits and labors with the Saints in the Salt River and Delana Branches. May the good work roll on, and the Saints be more fully established in the truth, which has been made manifest to them by revelation from God, according to the precious promise of his word.

Yours in gospel bonds,

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

MANASAS, Colorado, January, 1885.

"A Chiel's among us now, taking notes And faith he'll print them."—Burns.

In my last I promised to give more instances of the immorality of this people. Also the abject servility they are under to their masters, the priesthood.

The first thing that presents itself to my mind, is the observance of the Sabbath. For me to say that Brighamites ignore the day entirely, might be going a little too far; as it is true, that on this day they hold Sabbath School. Besides they go through a form of religious worship; but the day is also dedicated to business and political meetings. But the day itself is not considered more holy than other days of the week; for on this day the members can be seen engaged in all the secular affairs of life, such as irrigating, plowing, mowing, reaping, threshing, fishing, hunting, &c. And in all the seven years of my connection with them, I have not heard of one member being brought before the church, or even being reprimanded by the authorities. As they are all guilty of the same sin, there are no stones thrown by any of the sanctified in Zion. And as regards moral honesty in business and other relations of life, I think that it is by them numbered with by gone virtues.

I will now devote a short chapter to what some folks call short comings, but which I term long reachings, of these Zionites. And as so many instances, as their name is legion, present themselves to my mind, I will only mention a few of the most meritorious, or praiseworthy, as the matter is looked on by the faithful. First case: The leaders contract to have cut and delivered on the railroad, a large lot of ties; and invariably none but adherents are employed to do the manual part of it; for which services they receive about one half the price that the road pays the bosses. So when final settling up time comes, after giving one tenth of their scanty hard earnings to the Boss, as tithes, then paying his board and feed bill, he finds that he has not a dollar to send home to his poor, half famished family; and he is a lucky fellow, if he is not brought out in debt. Yet the leader is not satisfied with what he has defrauded his poor brethren out of, but he must have a shake at the railroad company, by having the spots of reception on the ties defaced or removed, thus getting double price for them. It is true that the laborer is dissatisfied and grumbles, but he can't help himself, neither can he go back home, without the means to supply the wants of his family for the coming winter; so he enters in to labor again with the same parties, as they promise him a sure thing this time, and that there is big money to be made, but are entirely silent as to who is to be the maker. So the men, thinking that they now have a chance of making up their losses, willingly contract with their leaders to work on the grade, as they have taken a large contract. The hands agree to remove dirt at fifteen cents a cubic yard, and hard-pan for twentyfive cents. But when the contract is completed, they learn to their sorrow, that they have been robbed again; as the boss tells them that it has proven to be another losing job, and they can't allow them but eleven cents for dirt, and fifteen for hard-pan. And as in the tie case, after board and feed bills are settled, they are more in debt than before; so there is no alternative for them. but to return home as poor as church mice, while the leaders rejoice in good stock, nice vehicles, and plenty of money. And after the duped men get home, they learn that the bosses received twenty-five and thirty-five cents per cubic vard for the entire grade contract. But not a dollar more can they get from the bosses after settlement. While I am on the grading subject, I will relate another case in connection with it. It is of a good old man from the Southern States, who came here five or six years ago, with a few thousand in cash, which the leaders have tried to get out of him ever since, which fact I think he is now cognizant of. This southern man goes in with the head boss, and sends east and gets a lot of good stock to work on the grade. And in the wind up, he, too, finds that he has been made to lose money, as he entrusted his young sons with the matter, as he could not attend to it himself. But before the boss comes home, he divides the stock with these sons of the Southern man; so when the boss gets home, he tells the old man that the boys got two hundred dollars the advantage in the division, which amount he wanted: so the old man forks over the full amount. But when the stock is compared, it is found that the boot should have been on the other foot; so the boss pockets a cool four hundred.

Good Southman gives boss another lift. He tells him that he knows of a valuable piece of property which can be bought cheap, and on easy terms; that is, one third down, and the remainder in two annual installments. Asks boss how he would like to go into such an arrangement. Boss would like it the best in the world. but has not the amount on hands at present. So a Southern man in his good heart, tells boss that he will lend it to him, rather than not have him as a co-partner. So Southman buys the property for boss and self. Then superintends the management of same, to such good effect, that the property pays for itself before debt is due. While boss in mean time sits at home in his easy chair, looking after number one. Good for boss, but green for southman. Southman mighty good to priesthood, willing for some of them to have his daughter for plural wife. But women folks kick, and there is no go. Daughter marries an apostate. who don't believe in the double rule of three, or a half dozen. Fat all in the fire, girl gone to hell sure. Never wake up in the morning when the trump sounds first time. No one to wake her. Will have to sleep another day. May be not then, unless some good faithful one takes pity on her in the meantime, and has her sealed to him by proxy. Sad affair indeed. But I think southman has had a few dots lately added to his great experience, and has adopted the priesthood maxim, to get all he can, and hold on to it, which he is doing, especially with his quarter interest in the C. O. P. Mill, although he has no showing of its management since it was started. If he has it is of very recent date.

The next case is, or was, as they have him fast now, by the secret combination oaths. He, too, had a few thoasand when he got here; so the faithful went for him, One good saint palms off on him a span of old broken down horses for about twice what they were worth. Another lifts him clean out of his boots with a pair of old mules, while others cut his eye-teeth in various ways. But good old soul has rest now, as he is one of the faithful.

The next case is a very rare one, as it seldom happens, where a man pulls up comfortable stakes back east, and himself imports his family to Brighamite communities, himself not being a proselyte; but such is the fact in this case. He too had a snug sum; but better than all, he had some old friends here, who gave him a few dots on priestcraft, which placed him on his guard; for just as soon as he got into the environs of these devil-fish, their feelers commenced reaching out for him, as they were anxious to suck his golden blood, thinking he was a soft snap. So boss went for him, was powerful glad to see him in Zion, and that he had fled from Babylon, and had taken shelter in the strongholds of the Lord: and that, if he wished to buy a nice little farm, that he had the place for him, only about one hundred acres in all; convenient to town; would hate very much to part with it, yet would do so for the aecommodation of brother newcomer; so he takes Mr. newcomer to see a parcel of state land which he claims without any title. After praising and showing off the land to best advantage, newcomer asks the price. "Well, as I said before," says boss, "I hate to part with it; but to accommodate you, you being a stranger, I would be willing to take the small sum of one thousand dollars. And if you wish to live in town, close to church and school, there is a nice cottage that belongs to one of the Utah brethren, that can be bought very cheaply, not more than a thousand dollars, and very likely eight hundred." "Well." says Mr. newcomer, "I will think over the matter, as I have been looking at another place." "But," says boss, "we, the priesthood, claim the privilege of advising and counseling the brethren in all matters." Newcomer answers that he himself is not a member yet, but his family is. "Well," savs boss, "that is the same in the end." But newcomer never bit worth a cent.

Some who have not had the chance of witnessing and experiencing these things, may question them for lack of consistency. That surely an intelligent being could not be so easily duped. But when they come to know how befogged the proselyte's mind is, they will not have any doubts; for when persons embrace the teachings of the elders, they have the utmost confidence in any and every thing that has the least smell or look of Mormonism on it. And if what I have said on the subject may be the means of placing even one poor, confiding being on his guard against the wiles of these human leeches, I will feel that I have been amply paid for my time and labor; for I know that none who embrace Utahism will ever stop short of seeing the big elephant.

And after they have seen him, and know for themselves that he is nothing but a gigantic swindle, gotten up for the sole purpose of power and gain, may they have the moral courage, by the power of the Holy Spirit, to shake off the gross delusion, and flee out from its contaminating influences; for moral death is the ultimatum of all who imbibe of its spirit. For these are they of whom St. Peter speaks in his second epistle, 2: I, 2.

I wish to give one more illustration of the submissiveness to their leaders of those who have taken endowment oaths. As I said in a former letter, when the priesthood commands, then all ties of kindred, friends, honor and gratitude are entirely ignored by them. They know nothing else but to obey, and the case in hand is a fair sample of this. He was sent out from the realms of polygadom as a pattern of godliness for us ignorant southerners to follow. He was one of the shrewd ones, ever looking out for self; and as a matter of course he was soon indebted to every one that would credit him, and no pay. He very soon was out of money, credit, and friends; but worst of all, out of food in mid winter. He, knowing that I had a supply of provisions on hand, came to me and stated his condition. He said that he did not have anything in his house to support life with, not even bread. And that he had just been to the boss, who was owing him forty dollars for work which he had done, which amount was to be paid in provisions. But the boss told him that he had neither money nor provisions for him. And the boss did not even invite him into the house. And now he had come to me as the last resort, after trying his Utah friends; and that if I would be so kind as to let him have the provisions that he would not fail to pay for them in a very short time. So I let him have enough to do his family two or three months. But after waiting some time, and seeing no prospects of pay, I concluded to receive whatever I could get from him, which was in work and a little grain. But I have never been able to get it all yet. Besides that, there was seldom a day passed by during that winter, that his tamily did not receive from my house something to support life with. And in the following spring I furnished him grain to sow. But just as soon as the tocsin of war was sounded between the priesthood and myself, he was one among the first to align himself in the ranks of the said boss.

Wishing the Herald great prosperity during the coming year, that its pay roll may be increased two fold, and that the richest of heaven's blessings may attend it, and all who are identified with it, I remain your brother in the gospel of Christ,

Felix B. Moyers.

Dear Herald:—The testimony of to-day's nearness to heaven is as important as what we may say concerning what we have realized in days that are past. To be sure, we treasure all of our blessed experiences of a spiritual nature, and prize them as gems; but Christ said to the woman of Samaria, "Whosoever drinketh of the water which I shall give him, shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water, springing up into everlasting life." And so it is with all the sons and daughters of God. The old truth, the undying, everlasting things that proceed from the source of truth, present themselves day by day, in plain, yet varied garments; and the Spirit brings to us a clear understanding of them, making our hearts to rejoice and be glad. As the rich foliage of nature assumes continually new appearances, now in her new green, then laden with blossoms and fruits; and again, as now, clad in the brightness as of clear crystal, so the old, &c. So the old gospel truth, as reflected from thy pure pages shall appear to Zion's children to grow still more bright and beautiful, until the day of glory comes to gladden evermore.

ABBIE A. HORTON.

FONTANELLE, Adair Co., Iowa,
January 18th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—Your presence is still with us, though I am not and have not been able to read scarcely a couple of your columns for two or three weeks. Yet I see you come, and I hope you will continue to come while I have an ear to hear and a heart to understand.

I have a word or two I wish to say to you, Bro. Joseph. Several weeks ago a Mr. Bradley called on me, quite inclined to destroy and use up Mormonism. He was told where he could get a Book of Mormon. After comparison for a few days he returned, and was in for uniting with all the rest, anxious to choose a committee, and have the Spaulding Romance, and go down to Bro. Whitmer's in Missouri, and there have the whole manuscript examined by competent persons, such as were capable of judging correctly between truth and error. After having a talk of an hour or so, I loaned him five Heralds. The next word from him was his letter in the Herald. Last Tuesday he came in and spent an hour or more, tame, showing quite a change in his disposition. He seems to be much pleased with your reply to his questions. Show him how to hunger and thirst after righteousness, what righteousness is, and it will be well with us in Fontanelle, perhaps. Don't undertake to read this when you have forty others to read. Go some place where you can be alone by yourself; be patient.

Yours truly,

B. Alden.

SYDNEY, New South Wales,
December 28th, 1884.

Dear Saints:-We arrived here the 29th. Our passage of twenty-eight days and twenty hours, was a pleasant one, on an average, though the first week out was unusually rough; and also from New Zealand across to Sydney, which caused many of the passengers to suffer from sea sickness. But for myself, I emjoyed it intensely. There is nothing more pleasant than sailing on one of those fine steamships in fine weather with a smooth sea. And when it was moderately rough, that was not enough to endanger the ship, I enjoyed with something of a childish glee, standing on the settee in my room, looking out through the window, or port, watching her tear through the sea at the rate of from twelve to fourteen miles an hour, lashing it into a white foam. Then as if the seas were indignant at being interfered with in their onward march would toss about gathering up their forces, and rush with all their strength against the side of the ship, only to be struck and hurled back against their advancing comrades, with a rushing noise, sending columns of spray high above the sea, to fall back again with an empty splash, while the proud ship would rise on the crest of a mighty wave, and as suddenly settle down-down again, till the dark, seething waters would come rushing against the glass. Only one half day I felt somewhat uneasy. But thanks to our Father for his protecting care in bringing us safely across the mighty deep, and also for the strength that was given in the trying hour of parting from our dear ones, that are left behind, a triumphant strength that I had not known of before, that though the tears would flow, the heart was unflinching, and even cheerful. At Oakland we were much cheered and strengthened by the Saints who gathered in to Sr. Forest's the two evenings we were there. The room was well filled both evenings, and the good Spirit was present also, and made itself manifest in tongues, interpretation and testimony, though there was no regular meeting. Two were administered to, then Sister Vernon spoke in tongues, and in the interpretation to my husband she said, "The winds and the waves shall obey you." Those who attended the San Bernardino conference will know the force of this testimony to us, a confirmation of what was given there, coming from this sister who knew nothing about the circumstance. So the word of God and the words of his servants are confirmed, and the hearts of many are made to rejoice. The brightness of those two pleasant evenings will long remain, and mingle in our thoughts with those spent at Laguna Canyon, during our last visit there, which time can never efface. I love to linger in thought over those sweet seasons now. I must leave California, however loth to do so, and turn my thoughts to Australia. But not without a few words in acknowledgement of the very great kindness shown us by Bro. and Sr. P. M. Betts and family, with whom we made our home for nearly four weeks before we left. (If any one wants to find one of the best homes in the world they will find it there.) And also for the kindness of Bro. and Sr. T. J. Andrews and family. And now for Australia, the place I have dreamed of so often, thought of so much, and concerning which I have shed the bitterest tears of my life; and also have had many bright anticipations, and that a few weeks ago was so far away. Sydney is a very large city, and approaching it from the sea is one of the most beautiful places I have ever seen, the Bay of Naples not excepted. For pleasure seekers this is the place. But as a missionary field, from what we have learned so far, Australia in the distance, and Australia in reality are somewhat different. The outlook at present is very laborious and discouraging; but we are not sufficiently acquainted to form an opinion, having only seen (of the Saints) Bro. and Sr. Ellis, who kindly took us to their place on our arrival, and took care of us till we found a suitable place to rent. I must confess to being very homesick the first few days in Sydney; and it was only by a strong effort, and the fear of making Addie (our daughter) feel worse, that I could control myself and keep my own tears back. Now I am beginning to feel quite at home. We are very pleasantly located in a cosy little home of our own, not exactly in town, nor quite out of it. From the balcony we have a sweeping view of a very large portion of Sydney, and just across the street to the right a park surrounded by lovely green trees, and a little lake in the center where children are now playing in the water. Our present address is Junction of Glebe Point road and Parrametta street. No. 6.

Our first meal in our new home was Christmas breakfast, and dinner at Bro. Ellis'. How different the surroundings from last Christmas, spent in Nova Scotia. True the weather was bitter cold, but we were surrounded by warm-hearted Saints and brothers and sisters in the flesh, and in the kingdom; and with them we spent a pleasant day at Bro. H. J. Davison's. I think of the dear Nova Scotia Saints with a heartfelt longing to see them again. The day here was beautiful and warm. But we are strangers in a strange land. The people and customs are not like those of America. My husband has visited some among the Saints, and has had two or three very kind letters, that let us know that we are not all alone. I anticipate a great deal of loneliness here, for the Saints are so scattered. My husband will be away most of the time, and traveling is too expensive for us to accompany him. I am thankful my daughter is with me. She was some seasick for a few days; and for one that clings to old associations and shrinks from making new ones, as she does, it was quite hard for her to leave all behind, and go forth among entire strangers. But she proved herself to be a brave girl, and recovered her good spirits without a murmur. SISTER EMMA.

> LILLYDALE, Perry Co., Indiana, January 28th, 1885.

W. W. Blair; Much Esteemed Brother: -Knowing that a word would be of interest to you, from me, I herewith submit the following: On the 18th of December, 1884, I bid family and friends adieu in Lamoni, and proceeded to my field of labor (Indiana) as appointed by the First Presidency of the Church, arriving in the city of New Albany on the 20th. Here I called on father and mother Seichrist. They are getting quite feeble. I went at once to Bro. H. Scott's, president of the district, who gave me a hearty welcome, and instructed me in regard to the rulings of the district. From here I went to Birdseye, a town on the Louisville and St. Louis railroad, in Dubois county. Bro. Ferguson lives here. I had the privilege of beginning my work at this place. I preached three times; good was effected in removing prejudice, in presenting the claims of the Reorganization as against the Utah church.

From there I came to Marietta, Crawford county; preached three weeks in this part of the country. My meetings were well attended; a good interest manifested by a great many. The shepherds of other churches kept away for some cause. The cause here has taken deep hold on the minds of the rising generation, and I look for a good report from here at no distant day. I had calls to come and preach in various localities in Crawford county, and realized the force of the vision that I had before I left home for this field of labor. The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few. I received two seals to my ministry at this place, a Bro. J. Duncham and Sister Reasor. I likewise assisted the brethren to reorganize their branch. Bro. V. D. Baggerly was chosen to preside. He is performing faithful work for the cause in this part of the vineyard. The brethren here were glad to see me, and we had a good time indeed. God bless the Saints at Marietta.

I am at the present writing at Bro. Robert Eyers. The branch here is in rather a backward condition. I begin the battle here the 30th, and hope to continue the same during the most of the coming month. In coming from Marietta to this point, I found a man lying by the roadside, having his shoes and socks off, and his bare feet right in the snow. Supposing him to be sick, I stopped and asked him what the matter was. He said he was not sick, but that he was the John the Baptist of America, and the Spirit was with him to the extent that it would not hurt him. He said he was the forerunner of John Bishop Hall; that the world would come to an end in 1888. He raved like a maniac when I called in question his theory. He is the craziest man I ever saw in religion. I think the downfall of the sects will present many strange things. I can see in the space of ten years that the churches are losing their hold on the minds of men; they are being more confused than ever before. How thankful Latter Day Saints ought to be in that they know the plan of salvation. How strange that men will spend their strength for that which will not profit them.

In conclusion would say that I feel thankful that the Lord has been with me thus far in my ministry, by his Spirit; and hope to still be useful to his cause. Love to all Saints at Lamoni. I hope they will remember me in their prayers.

Yours in bonds,

I. P. BAGGERLY.

GRAND RAPIDS, Holt Co., Neb., January 21st, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:-I have not denied the faith, neither have I shrunk from my duty. My faith is as firm in this latter day work as it was when I first believed, though I have passed through many sore and grievous trials and temptations; but my faith has been unwavering. Since I left the Conference ground in 1880, I have not been to meeting but once; that was at Sweet Home, Nodaway county, Missouri; assisted Bro. I. N. Roberts in holding one meeting. My reason for so doing, is the want of finances. I want to say a few words in regard to my treatment while I was at Conference in 1880. I came there on my way to Missouri, myself and family being sick before we left our former place of abode, and thinking perhaps traveling would do us good; but to the contrary it made us worse. We lost one of our children on the way, camping on the damp ground. Our feelings the next morning we can not express; all sick and in a deplorable condition, and having one of our children with us. It was soon made known, and several brethren came to the tent to learn our condition. Bro. Thomas W. Chatburn being foremost. He went away for a short time, and when he came back he had wherewith to help us out in temporal matters; and you don't know how my heart was made glad, for it was something unexpected. The brethren ministered to our wants during the session, which I thank God and the brethren for. I also had my children and wife administered to, and thank God, he healed the little boy, who was almost gone.

We live in Holt county, Nebraska, at Grand Rapids. If any of the brethren have not farms of their own, they would do well to come here. This is a good country, and we are going to have a Railroad in the spring. Improved farms can be bought here for from three to ten dollars, according to improvements. This country is well adapted to farming and stock raising. We have no branch here. There are five of us here. We have no preaching. If an Elder comes this way, he will be welcome to come and see us

We will do the best we can for them. I am not in circumstances yet to labor, but the present outlook is more promising than it has ever been for me. I have a home and a little stock, and I expect to use them for the benefit of the church, except enough for our support. This is the genuine spirit of the gospel as I understand it.

C. D. STEVENS.

Омана, Neb., January 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—The Apostle Peter exhorted the saints in his day, in speaking of the true faith, and enjoins upon them to add to that faith the excellent virtues that make up the whole sum. We learn from James in speaking of this, that faith without works is dead, being alone. Being a part of the whole plan, we may illustrate by a piece of machinery. There are so many parts connected with it, that make it a perfect piece of mechanism. Take one or two parts from it, and will it answer the purpose it was designed for? Will it operate successfully? If one or ten thousand dollars have been expended on it, we must all admit that every part must be in its place, that it may answer the end designed. Again, take the human frame on this point. Here is a perfect man; take one eye, or the hearing of one ear from it, is it a perfect body? All will answer no. So we might multiply figures. But says one, Does not our preacher tell us, that all that is necessary is for one to believe, and he will be sayed? Let us pause a moment and see what is written. The devils also believe and tremble. Will they be saved by adding to faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity? We grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, and may become a perfect man in Christ. What is the opposite? He that lacketh these qualifications is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. We are also exhorted to prepare to meet our God. That signifies that we must sooner or later be in his presence, either prepared or unprepared. What shall it be? This is an important question that concerns every one of us. Let us put on the whole armor of God, and know this is the day of our visitation. Be wise virgins. Gain all the golden characteristics of Saints. Be as lights before men; and having run the race, and endured to the end, the promise is sure, the prize is won; and with the beloved Paul exclaim, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown which the Lord, the righteous judge will give me at that day; and not to me only, but to all those who love his appearing."

NICHOLAS RUMEL, Sr.

PLAINVILLE, Massachusetts, January 30th, 1885.

Brother Joseph Smith:—This branch has been abundantly comforted of the Lord, and blessed of late. In our prayer and conference meetings the gifts and powers of the everlasting gospel have been manifest to the edification of many. Visiting Elders have been with us most of the time for the past two weeks. Bro. E. L. Kelley was with us three evenings of the second week in January. He gave an interesting lecture on the Book of Mormon. Bro. W. H. Kelley preached to us last week four evenings; and also being present with us on the Sabbath, and delivered two sermons which we trust were blessed of the Father to the upbuilding of his kingdom. Numbers of strangers have visited our chapel of late, and the knowledge of the gospel is spreading. We are hoping, praying, and working, that the cause may prosper, and our chapel may be filled with those who shall inquire, "What must I do to be saved." Our presiding Elder, Bro. Charles Coombs, is an earnest and faithful worker in the cause of Christ: and we are endeavoring to hold up his hands, that he may proclaim the word to the sons of men. We have started quite a work in East Attleboro, and hold a meeting every Wednesday evening in that place. Brn. E. L. and W. H. Kelley, M. H. Bond, and John Gilbert have lately preached there. It is our desire to press on in the work in the strength of the Lord, and see the "perfecting of the Saints."

Yours in Christ,

ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan. 29th.—Gen. Briere de l'isle has just telegraphed for the fifth time that he is about to begin active operations against the Chinese, Meanwhile the delay is of immense advantage to the enemy.

The recent dynamite outrages in Londan are denounced by the United Irishman as the work of men who believe they can serve Ireland by carrying on a campaign against stone walls and stained glass.

Gen. Wolseley telegraphs from Korti that Gen. Stewart was doing well at last accounts. A bullet is lodged in the region of the groin and no attempt has been made as yet to extricate it. A hospital for the wounded and disabled has been pitched on the bank of the Nile. Supplies in the vicinity of Gakdul are very plentiful. News has just been received from Hamdab of Gen. Earle's expedition which started thence for Berber. The Black Watch and Staffordshire Regiments arrived at the Kab-del-Abak Cataract yesterday. The Arabs made an attack, but were driven back, and the Village of Warag was captured. An attempt was made by the rebels the other night to storm Galabal. One hundred of the garrison were killed and 800 of the attacking force were slain. Attacks are made almost every night upon Suakin, and at night the firing is continual. The garrison has been strengthened by the arrival of 400 British troops. News from the Red Sea littoral grows more serious. Massawah is practically besieged.

Upon the square vote for ratification of the Nicaraguan Treaty, in the United States Senate, the yeas were 32, the nays 23. As it takes two-thirds to ratify the treaty it was, of course lost.

Three ice-boats with twenty two people on board left Cape Traverse, Prince Edward Island, yesterday, carrying the mails for Cape Tormentine, N. B. Nothing has been heard of them since, and it is feared they are lost. Dr. McIntyre, M. P., was one of the passengers.

Advices from St. Martin, N. B., report the loss of the American three masted schooner Aracana, Capt. Holmes, on Quaco Reef. Four of the crew reached land, three of them dying soon after from cold and exposure. The survivor is not likely to live.

The Mormon election cases under the Edmunds bill were to-day argued in the Supreme Court. Senator Vest and ex-Attorney-General Mac-Veagh appeared for the Mormens; Solicitor-General Phillips for the Government. There were five cases, presenting different aspects of the denial of the right of suffrage. The parties, one of whom was the widow of Orson Pratt, applied to the Election Commissioners of Utah to be registered as voters, and submitted affidavits skillfuly drawn and intended by the parties to bring them within the terms of the Edmunds act. It was contended for the Government that the affidavits were evasive. Female suffrage exists in Utah, and in one of the cases the right to vote was denied to the woman because it appeared that she was the wife of a polygamous husband. The question on which the cases turned was whether the test oath could be required as a condition precedent to suffrage. Vest and MacVeagh contended that the right of suffrage was properly under the decisions of the Supreme Court, and could not be taken away except by indictment and conviction. The Solicitor-General urged that prescribing the oath as a condition precedent to suffrage was a regulation of the franchise within the power of Congress. Ris was the substantial question. MacVeagh also contended that Congress, having delegated to a Territorial Legislature the right of regulating all the matters in question, it was incompetent for Congress to establish another independent body like the Board of Commissioners under the Edmunds act to exercise the same authority over the same subject-matter. This was, however, controverted by the Government, whose representative insisted that it was a common thing for the superior legislative authority to delegate power over a given subject and to legislate in relation to it as occasion might require. The court announced that Monday next it would take the usual February recess until the first Monday in March, at which time a decision as to this case may be expected.

Jan. 30th.—Unusual precautions have been taken to protect the British Museum, which the dynamiters have threatened to blow up.

The Socialist members of the Reichstag will strenuously oppose the extension of the extradition treaty recently effected between Prussia and Russia to the other portions of the German Empire. The treaty was concluded the 12th inst., and provides for the extradition of persons guilty of murder, attempted murder, or of committing or preparing to commit acts against the King of Prussia or the Czar of Russia or their families, such as assasination. acts of violence causing bodily injury, abduction, or insults. The treaty also provides that persons guilty of the illegal manufacture or storage of explosives shall be extraditable. It is now proposed to extend the operation of the treaty to those portions of the German Empire which are outside of the Kingdom of Prussia. The opposition of the Socialists is based on the ground that past experience has shown that such laws are not used to further their ostensible objects, but as engines of arbitrary oppression to suppress free speech and all agitation for reform, even of the most peaceful and constitutional kind. The Socialists will endeavor to force a debate on the whole subject in the Reichstag at an early day.

The following item was handed over the counter of the World newspaper, and is published without comment: "At a meeting of the British Retaliatory Society, held at Toronto, Ont., $8,000 were subscribed toward carrying on a dynamite war against the United States. The Socialists of Chicago are to be invited to co-operate. Some of the most cherished monuments in the States have been marked for destruction."

The Medical Times of London, Eng., this week publishes the results of an elaborate inquiry recently instituted by the editor into the merits of canned goods. It concludes that the evidence is overwhelmingly in favor of the wholesomeness of such goods.

Gen. Wolsely telegraphed to-day from Korti that Gen. Earle's expedition to Berber by the river route was making satisfactory progress. Advance scouts exchanged shots with the enemy near Boiti.

Aggie McMurrin was to-day held in $1,000 bonds for perjury, at Salt Lake City, Utah. She swore she married Royal B. Young, a step-son of Brigam Young, charged with polygamy, in 1881, while her oath for registration papers made in September, 1882, says she had not married in polygamy.

Gen. Hatch contemplates building a number of forts in Indian Territory, and will leave troops at Salt Fork in anticipation of another colonising expedition by the Oklahoma boomers. The General says that the boomers at Stillwater were starved out. They did not give up until hunger compelled them to surrender. At the time of the capitulation there were only 156 men in the boomers' camp. Capt. Couch and his followers were escorted into Arkansas City by 3,000 citizens and a brass band. They were received with great enthusiasm. A large part of the land in Oklahoma was found to have been fenced in by cattle men, who were left in peaceable possession after the expulsion of the settlers. An Oklahoma Union was formed at Arkansas City.

Capt. Couch, H. H. Stafford, George W. Brown and Col. S. E. Wilcox, leaders of the Oklahoma boomers, were arrested yesterday at Arkansas City for conspiracy and rebellion against the United States Government.

Feb. 1st.—It is said that Austria prompted Italy to make the movement towards the annexation of Tripoli which was so vigorously opposed by Turkey. Lord Granville is enraged at this covert action of Austria, and the exposure of the intrigue has increased the tension between the Governments of Austria and Great Britain.

The floods in Counties Down and Armagh, Ireland, are unabated. Many bridges and embankment walls have been destroyed. Several vessels are stormbound in Carlingford Bay, and at Newry traffic is almost suspended owing to the impossibility to get across the river.

The Scientific Commission which was recently appointed by the Spanish Government to inquire into the causes and effects of the late earthquakes in Southern Spain has fairly commenced operations and is daily sending reports to Madrid on the result of its operations. Perhaps the most remarkable phenomenon noted by the commission is that of the complete obliteration of the high roads leading into Periana, no reliable trace of which can be found for several miles outside the town. The road in most places lay between abutting hills, and in the recent terrific disturbances the earth's crust seems to have been forced downward or ingulfed. Many of the hills themselves were leveled beyond recognition, and wellknown landmarks whose positions had remained undisturbed for centuries were moved a distance of thirty yards.

The following dispatch has been received from Gen. Wolseley: "Gen. Earle has advanced his troops to within seven miles of Birti, but will be unable to concentrate them in readiness to attack that place until the 3d, owing to the difficulty of navigating the river. The enemy holds a strong position at Birti. A deserter from the rebel ranks says the commander of Birti received a letter from the Emir of Berber stating that the British had captured Metemneh and sent steamers to Khartoum with troops and stores for the garrison there. The Emir strongly advised the commander of Birti not to oppose Earle's advance as the British were sending troops across the desert from Korosko to Abu-Hamed to suppress the rebels. The deserter recently left Berber, where, he says, are twenty-six survivors of the massacre of Col. Stewart's party wrecked on the Nile in one of Gordon's steamers. The survivors are Syrians and Greeks. He says they are not imprisoned, but are not allowed to leave Berber."

The British to day made a reconnaissance in force with two guns, at Suakin. They shelled the enemy's camp at Hasheen. The rebels, who hold a strong position, are very courageous, advancing with loud yells, but seemed loath to leave their own ground. The British subsequently returned to Suakin. There were no casualties.

The Tribune correspondent in the Oklahoma country reports that over a third of a million cattle have perished in that section through starvation and severe cold. There are a million cattle in the Cherokee Strip, and if the cold weather holds out a week longer half of them will die.

Late Saturday night an explosion of dynamite occurred in New York City, shattering the fronts of Garry Bros', and Ridley Bros'. dry-goods stores, corner of Grand avenue and Allen street. The damage amounts to $2,500. Five arrests were made. Striking employes are charged with responsibility for the explosion.

Philadelphia Correspondence Pittsburg Dispatch: During the passage of the American Line steamship British King, which arrived here today from Swansea, she encountered a blinding electrical storm, such perhaps as has never been before experienced by a transatlantic vessel. The ship was off St. George's Banks Monday last during a heavy rain. The electricity in the atmosphere became so intense that it blinded the men on the lookout, and as a precaution against accident the engines were stopped. The horizon, as far as the eye could reach, was flashing with vivid and continuous sheets of lightning. At the same time St. Elmo's fire appeared on the yardarms in the shape of luminous meteors. The cargo brought over in the vessel consisted of 1,200 tons of tin.

Feb. 2d.—Jeremiah O'Donovan-Rossa was shot this afternoon on Chambers street in New York City by a young woman, who fired five shots at him, only one of which took effect. The woman was respectably dressed, wore eye-glasses, and looked like a school-teacher. Upon being arrested and taken to the police station she did not appear at all discomposed, but calmly admitted that she had done the deed. Rossa walked to the Chambers Street Hospital, where his wound was pronounced not dangerous. The motive for the crime is unknown. The woman said her name was Yseulte Dudley.

It is understood that when Gen. Wolsely reaches Khartoum Gen. Gordon will resign his post there and proceed to the Congo country to fulfill the pledge he made a year ago to King Leopold to take command of the field operations of the International African Association. When he was sent to Khartoum Gen. Gordon was about to start on his Congo mission, and was so intent upon going thither and stamping out the slave trade in that region that he was on the point of resigning his commission in the British army. It was finally agreed that as soon as he had completed his task in the Soudan he should go to the Congo. It is thought possible that he may attempt to reach the Congo by way of the Equatorial provinces without returning to Europe.

James G. Cunningham, charged with complicity in causing the recent explosion at the Tower of London, was arraigned yesterday at the Bow Street Police Court in that city. The Crown Solicitor dwelt upon the suspicious circumstances which surrounded the prisoner, his traveling under assumed names, and particularly the mysterious disappearance of a peculiar box from his lodgings in Scarboro street immediately after his arrest. This last circumstance seemed to point to the conclusion that Cunningham was in league with others, who were instructed how to act in case of his arrest. The court was notified that the Government would reserve the privilege of altering the charge against Cunningham to high treason.

The censorship of the press in Spain, which has always been severe, is to be made still more rigorous in consequence of the publication of certain facts regarding the Zorillists and the Carlists, which the Government was particularly anxious to have kept secret. A new and stringent press law has been prepared in the office of the Minister of the Interior, and will soon be presented to the Cortes. In addition to the present penalty of fines and imprisonment for imprudent publications, the new law will provide for the confiscation of the type, presses and machinery of offending newspapers.

A sweltering crowd of Fenians gathered in the little hall at No. 475 Pearl street, New York, tonight. The tenor of their remarks concerned blood, dynamite, and fire. It was the Dennis Deasy Circle of the Fenian Brotherhood. A young orator made a passionate appeal for the "stuff" which he said Rossa would use in blowing up Englishmen, and he sat down amid a storm of yells, but none of the "stuff" came in, although the white-haired chairman asked for it. Then there were howls for O'Donovan-Rossa, whose classic features appeared at the door. After much urging the chief dynamiter came forward. "I won't say a word in the presence of reporters," he said. "The council has forbidden it." The crowd immediately began to yell: "Fire them out! Drop the reporters out of the window! Curses on the papers."

"Whist, me friends," said the great man, stretching out his hands. "I will try the press once more, and if my words are misrepresented let them beware. I have been threatened. I have had more threatening letters sent to me this last week than a thousand men in a lifetime, but I am not afraid. No; Rossa is not afraid of all England and her minions. The glorious acts of last week are held up to the world as murderous, and the innocent babes injured are held up in horror. Well and good. How many Irish women and children has England murdered? There will be no peace for Ireland until all the English landlords are killed or frightened out of the island. [Long and wild cheering and cries of "Death to landlords!"] When Burke and Cavendish were slain a few years ago a cry of horror went up. I stood alone among the editors of the country in defense of that removal. I cried for joy. And now every man and woman in America, except the Anglo-maniacs are glad those villains were slain. I believe not an Irish heart exists in America or in the whole world but leaped for joy at the news of the explosions last week. [Loud cheers]. I would pick out 100 men and take them to England-now, I don't say I am preparing for this, but wait. I know 100 men who would go to London with me and go into 100 hotels and set fire to them. One hundred fires in 100 hotels at the dead of night will strike terror to England. Repeat the dose until Ireland is President John Taylor spoke in the tabernacle at Salt Lake City, U., yesterday. He referred to his recent trip; said the saints were being persecuted in Arizona and sent to the American Siberia for living their religion: spoke of Federal officers here as sneaks and tramps, intruding with process from the courts into the homes of the people. It was hard to bear, and forbearance ceases to be a virtue. Yet they would stand it a little longer, as they didn't want any blood to flow. There would be a change before long. The persecutions were making some of the saints think of going to a foreign country to preserve their religious liberty, and there might be another pilgrims' day. He said the saints were illegally punished at home, and killed in a Southern State. No one was punished for murdering Mormon missionaries. He intimated that all must be silent on what they knew, and thus thwart the wicked men who were persecuting the people.

Dispatches from Admiral Courbet announce the capture of the Chinese works commanding the Kelung mines after a severe fight.

There was great jubilation in England over the news of the shooting of O'Donovan-Rossa. Extra editions of the newspapers containing cable dispatches from New York sold yesterday like wildfire.

A sensational report from Pittsburg conveys intelligence of an anticipated outbreak of Socialists, who have stored large quantities of arms and ammunition in that city and are ready for an attack upon the capitalists. Men from the Hocking Valley and elsewhere are said to be ready for a disturbance.

O'Donovan-Rossa's wound is not likely to result seriously. Mrs. Ysculte Dudley was arraigned yesterday at the Tombs Police Court in New York City, and was subsequently remanded to her dungeon cell. Her bullet entered Rossa's shoulder and took an upward course beneath the skin. He suffers no pain, and no uncomfortable symptoms have developed. Chelsea Hospital officials deny Mrs. Dudley's statement that she graduated from that institution as a nurse. Some months ago, it is said Mrs. Dudley tried to commit suicide by taking poison while traveling in England on the Great Eastern Railway. When arrested she asserted that she was a governess and that her Christian name was Lucilia. Her story was investigated and found to be correct.

The Inter-State Commerce bill, as passed by the Senate yesterday, provides for a commission to be composed of nine members, one from each judicial circuit of the United States. These Commissioners are to have jurisdiction over the operations of all inter-State transportation companies. They are authorized to require such companies to furnish annual reports, giving full information as to their financial condition, etc. During the first year the commission is required to investigate and report upon the subjects of maximum and minimum charges, pooling, watering stocks, and unjust discrimination. The bill expressly forbids extortion or discrimination by transportation companies.

Feb. 5-A dynamite congress is to be formally opened in Paris, Feb. 23. Eleven delegates, including six from America, will attend. The utility of dynamite in aiding the Irish cause will be discussed, as well as the proposed union between the dynamite party and the Fenians. The question as to whether or not members of the House of Commons who voted for the Crimes act shall be executed will also be brought up for decision.

Dispatches from Gen. Wolsely announce that Khartoum was taken by the Mahdi Jan. 26th. Col. Wilson arived at Khartoum Jan. 28th and found the enemy in possession. He started at once on his return down the river under a heavy fire from the rebels. A few miles below Shublaka Cataract Col. Wilson's steamer was wrecked. Col. Wilson with his whole party reached an island in safety, and a steamer has been sent to convey them to the British camp near Metemneh. Gen. Wolsely says that he has no information as to the fate of Gen. Gordon. Natives report that the Mahdi had 60,000 men in the vicinity of Khartoum. He introduced spies into the city, who persuaded the greater part of the garrison to desert Gen. Gordon. With 2,500 men Gen. Gordon tried to hold the city, but after severe fighting he was compelled to surrender. There is great excitement in London. Hopes are still entertained that Gen. Gordon may be holding out in the citadel of the town. The clubs and public resorts are crowded with people anxious to hear the latest news from Africa. A gloomy view of the situation prevails. The War Office is besieged with army officers anxious to tender their services for active duty. Millitary experts express the opinion that unless reinforcements are hurried forward to Korti disaster may befall Gen. Wolseley's army. A Cabinet council was summoned yesterday by Mr. Gladstone. The feeling against the Government in England is very bitter.

It is little less than a year since Gordon entered Khartoum, and all that time he has held El Mahdi at bay, to be sacrificed at the last moment by perfidy when relief was so near at hand! He left Suakin, on the Red Sea, Jan. 30, 1884, and arrived across the desert at Khartoum Feb. 17. The mission which he felt so sure of accomplishing failed at once. The Mahdi was not to be pacified, or bribed, or terrorized. On the other hand, he speedily invested Khartoum and more than once repulsed Gordon's sorties. He pushed farther down the Nile and captured Berber, and then gradually drew his toils about Gordon's beleaguered garrison. It was not until Aug. 1, however, that the House of Commons voted its credit of $2,000,000 for the relief expedition. From that time until about the opening of the new year was consumed in organizing the expedition and getting it to Korti. The rest of the story-the division of Wolseley's force, one detachment under Gen. Earl moving up the Nile against Berber, another, under Gen. Stewart, crossing the Baihuda desert to the vicinity of Metemneh, his gallant fight at Abu-Klea Wells, his subsequent encounters pending his occupation of Gubat-is well known. Gen. Earl's column of 2,500 men is still in motion up to Berber, with the prospect of encountering a rebel force at Abu Hammet.

The German Government seized the entire edition of yesterday's Danziger Zeitung, a Liberal paper, because of the radical tone of its Hamburg correspondence. The seizure is considered an extraordinary action on the part of the Government, and is the first case of a seizure of a newspaper within the last twenty years.

THE ONLY AND TRUE GOD.

I NOTICED an article in the Herald of December 8th, under the above heading. Never understanding the Godhead to be as there represented, I thought I would like to present my views on that subject. I firmly believe that there are three separate parts in the Godhead. We will first notice what took place at the creation of the world. I shall quote from the Inspired Translation, as the King James' gives but a short account of it. God speaking to Moses said:

"I am the Beginning and the End; the Almighty God. By mine Only Begotten I created these things. And I, God, said unto mine Only Begotten, which was with me from the beginning, let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and it was so."—Gen. 1:2, 27.

Here is God talking with the Son, or Only Begotten, two personages. were alike, and God created man in his own image, and in the image of the Only Begotten. Verse 29. This was the spiritual creation, all these things created, were created spiritually before they were naturally on the earth.—Gen. 2:4-6.

It will be noticed, that God talks with the Only Begotten. At this time Christ had not taken a body, was not yet on the earth with men; but was the second person in the Godhead. Upon those great and important subjects, God consulted the Only Begotten. Then, after creating man out of the dust of the ground, he talks with the Only Begotten, and tells him that it is not good that man should be alone. "Wherefore, I will make an helpmeet for him."-Gen. 2:23, 24. would not suppose for one moment, that God the Father and God the Son, were only one personage of spirit; and that God was here talking to himself. Again God tells Moses the conversation (or part of it) that took place between himself, his Son, and Satan. Speaking of the fall, Satan said: "Behold I, send me, I will be thy son, send me, I will redeem all mankind, that not one soul be lost, * * * But behold my beloved son, which was my beloved and chosen from the beginning, said unto me, Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever."-Gen. 3: 1-3

Because the son was permitted to come, Satan rebelled, and fell; deceived man, and taught doctrine opposed to God's truth, to man. Man obeyed him, and his eyes were opened. God again talks with the Only Begotten, saying: "Behold the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil."—Gen. 3:28. God did not say, He has become like me, but "like one of us," or like either me, or mine Only Begotten. A little further on we notice an angel spake, and told them that they were to call upon the Father, or God, in the name of the son, forever. "And in that day, the Holy Ghost fell upon Adam, which [Holy Ghost] beareth record of the father, and the son, saying, [speaking in behalf of the son] I am the Only Begotten of the Father from the beginning, henceforth and forever."-Gen. 4:7, 8. Here we notice the three take part, the Father, the Son, the Holy Ghost; each acting separately, independently, and in behalf of each other. In the teaching of the gospel to Adam, God taught it, told him to obey the order, repent and be baptized; Adam believed it and rejoiced, and the Holy Spirit, [not the Father nor Son] took him, and carried him down into the water, and baptized him, and he received the Holy Ghost. And that he might know what it was, and more fully rejoice in it, "both" the Father and the Son recorded the fact, that he was now baptized with the Spirit, and that he was "one in me, and thus may all become my sons."—Gen. 6: 51-71. Thus we see very clearly the three parts in the Godhead. You will also notice in the closing portion of the sixth chapter of Genesis, how all may become God's sons; and all become one. Not all become one man or one woman, bodily; but one as God the Father, and God the Son are one. Each has his respective body and form; yet seeing, hearing, understanding and believing alike, &c.

We will now turn to the Book of Mormon. In Alma 8:10, I do not see anything extraordinary. Amulek in answering Zeezrom's question, said yes. The Son of God is the very Eternal Father; and he could rightly say so, when we consider the fact that nothing was made without the sanction of the Son. If God the Father and God the Son, were both working together, each consented to creating this world, also to creating man like themselves, why not the Son be considered the very Eternal Father, as well as the Father himself. "There was nothing made that was made but by the Son."—St John 1:3, 10, and Doctrine and Covenants 90: 1. He was the author of it as much as the Father; hence to satisfy Zeezrom, Amulek made the answer he did. Amulek knew that it was not wrong, as he was the beginning of all things, just as much as the Father was. Yet to make the distinction to us, he is called the Son of God the Father, and Amulek so understood it. In the same paragraph he makes the distinction, and shows Zeezrom that all, both small and great, must stand before the bar of Christ, the Son, and God the Father, and the Holy Ghost, which is one Eternal God. Alma 8:10. Some may ask, How can those three named be three separate beings, and yet be the one Eternal God? Because they are all eternal, and they all compose the Godhead, bodily and spiritually. This will also explain the idea of Jared's brother, that Jesus was both Father and Son, because of his being equal with him, being with him before the world was made, assisting him and holding councils with him, and their agreeing together, and nothing being made without him. Hence, he being in the form of God, "thought it not robbery to be equal with God," (Phil. The distinction between them is made in that, he "took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God [the Father] also hath highly exalted him [the Son], and given him a name above every name. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, * * * and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."—According to the brother's theory, God would be exalting himself. But no, the Father exalted the Son, for the following reasons: Because he came "as it is written in the volume of the book, to do thy will, O God."-Heb. 10:5-9. Because he left the glory that he had with the Father before the world was, (John 17:5). He loved him because he was tempted and tried, faithful and merciful, took upon him a servant's form, and died for evils man had done. (See Heb. 2: 9-18). The gospel was not his, but it was the Father's who sent him. (St. John 7: 16, 17). The Father was so well pleased with him because he obeyed the gospel and thus set the example for man, that he spoke from the heavens in the hearing of the sons of men, saying, "This is my be-loved Son in whom I am well pleased," and sent the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove. (Matt 3:16, 17). Here we again see the three parts of the Godhead,—the Son being baptized, the Father acknowledging him by an audible voice from heaven, and the Holy Ghost coming and resting upon him.

We find Iesus on the Mount of Transfiguration, with three of the apostles, when Moses and Elias appeared. And a voice was heard out of the cloud, "This is my beloved Son," &c. Matt. 17:2; Mark 9: 2. We follow him to the garden where he prayed to the Father, (not to himself), and sweat as it were great drops of blood. "Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me; nevertheless not my will, but thine be done. And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him." Luke 22: 41-44. We need not comment upon this, it is too plain. We view Jesus again when betrayed by Judas, and when Peter cut off the ear of the High Priest's servant. The Son said, "Put up again thy sword. Thinkest thou that I can not now pray unto my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?" &c. Matt. 26: 49-53. Next look upon the cross and hear him saying, "Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani? which is being interpreted, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me." Mark 15: 34. Here we see plainly two very distinct beings. Elohim is a Hebrew word. It is in the plural. Eloi is singular. Christ had no need to say in the Hebrew tongue, Elohim, Elohim, &c., because he was a part of the Godhead. Hence, speaking personally he said, Eloi, Eloi, &c. On the cross he says, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." Luke 23: 46. Brother, what will you do with those scriptures, and with the following. "If ye love me, keep my commandments; and I will pray the Father, and he will send you another Comforter." John 14: 15, 16. According to your theory, you would make this scripture read thus: "And I will pray to myself, and I will give you myself, that I myself may abide with you forever." Too much self about this brother.

You say that you believe literally that we should be one. So do I, just as much as God the Father and God the Son are one. Jesus says, "I and my Father are one." John 10: 30. On further in the seventeenth chapter, he prays that the apostles might "be one, as we are one." Now we all know that Jesus did not pray that the twelve apostles might be put into one apostle; but that they might be one in love, live in unity one with another, that their wisdom might be alike, that they might understand the mystery of Godliness, &c., as he and his Father understood and acted, and was one in might, power and dominion.

"If ye love me, keep my commandments and abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love."—John 15:10. Read from the thirteenth to the sixteenth chapter of St. John, all pointing to the three parts of the Godhead, as being separate. vision in Doctrine and Covenants we learn that there are three separate parts of the Godhead. First there is one glory of the sun, which is the celestial glory; and those who obtain that glory, are those who have obeyed the fulness of the gospel of Christ, had been baptized, had hands laid upon them, received the Spirit, &c. "God the Father reigns over them." Second is the glory of the terrestrial world, whose glory differs from that of the Church of the First Born, even as the moon differs from the sun in the firmament. They receive of the presence of the Son, but not of the fulness of the Father. The third is the glory of the telestial, which glory is the lesser, even as the glory of the stars differs from that of the moon in the firmament. They receive of the fulness of the Holy Ghost, but not of the Son. Doctrine and Covenants 76:5-7. Also see 85:4-6.

Speaking of the Spirit being God and Christ, all one, &c. I see nothing to stumble at in that. God the Father is Spirit, is intelligence, is knowledge, &c. God the Son and God the Holy Ghost likewise. Yet that does not prove that the three parts of the Godhead are one person only; if so, it proves that man is God also, from the fact that man is that same intelligence, that same truth, and that same spirit. Doctrine and Covenants 90:3-6. In that sense, all the millions of people of this world are but one person of spirit and body together with the Father, Son and Holy Ghost; and that all these are one God, unless they partake of the spirit of the wicked one; and in that case they would be all Devil, as is clearly shown by sec. 90, par. 4.

But such is not the case. The three parts of the Godhead are separate. Man is separate also, yet of the same truth and light, all existing in the beginning, all having a free agency, as is clearly shown in the nintieth section, as well as in several other places in the Scriptures. Viewing it as I do, I can see how grand it would appear to me and others, to believe our brethren, Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, to have had the glory of the Father and Son, who was seated at the right hand of his Father, together with Stephen the martyr, who, "being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God. Acts 7:55-59. Remember the three parts of the Deity are there clearly shown. He was filled with the "Holy Ghost," also saw the other two personages, one standing on the other's right hand. Stephen's, as well as Joseph's and Sidney's words, were uttered by the power of God and Christ, by way of the Holy Ghost. That same spirit bears record, "Now we are sure that thou [Jesus] knowest all things. By this we believe that thou camest forth from God [the Father]." John 16:30. We give I Tim. 2:5; 1 John 5:7; 2 John 1:9; Jude 1:1-4. And I might mention over one hundred passages in the standard works of the church, pointing to the above doctrine, many of which are of equal importance, and perhaps more so, than those which are here quoted. But read in the twentieth of Revelations that Christ reigns with his people on the earth a thousand years; God [the Father] still in heaven. After the thousand years are past, and Satan is unbound, and the armies gathered, &c., fire comes down from God [the Father] and devoureth them. Then in the twenty-first of Revelations, God himself comes down and dwells with man also. Jesus will give up the kingdom to his Father, &c. 1 Cor. 15:23-25.

DECKERVILLE, Mich., Dec. 16th, 1883.

TITHING, GATHERING, AND REVENGE.

UNDER the above caption in Herald, issue of the 3d inst., Elder W. W. Blair seeks to make reply to a former article written by me, confining himself chiefly to the question of Tithing, to which I desire to address a few remarks.

1. The claim is made by the writer, "that the apostles after Christ" did teach "tithing." True the "claim" is made by him, but unfortunately as he left the case without proof to sustain such a claim, the verdict of all fair minded men and women must be against him, and the "laboring oar" still in his hands, and must remain there until he extricates (if he can) himself from such a dilemma; for certainly it is not good for a minister for Christ to affirm, or claim more than he can prove,—the "claim" having been made I certainly demand either the proof, or a withdrawal of the claim.

2. We are informed by the writer that "Melchisedec was the type and representative of Christ," and the argument made is that we ought to accept tithing, its "justness and propriety" being averred, because the said Melchisedec took "tithes of Abraham," Now, will the writer accept the sequence of his own logic? It certainly follows that if this act of taking tithes justifies the revelation of 1838, through Joseph Smith, as a law of tithing to-day, then it would also follow and be right and proper for the church to have a king, even in this day, for Melchisedec was also King of Salem" ("Sodom"); but the difficulty in this latter clause is, that it conflicts with the Bible in this particular regard, too glaringly, as may be seen in 1st Sam., 8th chapter, &c; for when Israel desired a king, (and why shouldn't they when knowing that Melchisedec had been a King and High Priest too), "the Lord said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people; for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them." (Please read the reference.) If we resided in a kingdom, it would be our duty as Christians to be subject to the king; but God does not want his people to have a king to rule over them, and I believe never did. In that regard I am free to confess that I do not acknowledge fealty to any king but one, the ruler of the universe.

Again, Elder Blair cites us to Gen. 13: 2, showing that Abraham "was very rich rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold," and would have us believe that of these riches he paid tithes to Melchisedec. Now, is this correct, is it the facts of the I think my readers will remember an oft quoted passage in the Bible; viz., "to the law and the testimony," &c. What are the law and testimony in this particular case, which by Elder Blair are averred to represent Christ. Do they show that Abraham of his own money, his own wealth, his own honest earnings, paid "the tenth" to Melchisedec? Does the record show this? Let us see. Gen. 14: 17-24. "And the King of Sodom went out to meet him, after his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer, and of the kings that were with him, at the valley of Shaveh, which is the king's dale. And Melchisedec, king of Salem, brought forth bread and wine, &c. And Abraham gave him tithes of all. And the king of Sodom said unto Abram, Give me the persons, and take the goods to thyself."—But Abram's answer was, "I will not take from a thread even to shoelatchet; and that I will not take anything that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich, save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men which went with me, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre: let them take their portion."

Do you ask, What is meant by "their portion?" Evidently but one answer can be given; viz., their part of the spoils, which they had captured in battle; from these facts it will be seen that the idea of Abram's paying tithes of his own riches, is a mistake, so far as the record goes; and instead of giving of his "cattle" his "silver" or his "gold" he only paid tithes of the spoils he had taken in battle, than which, a poorer example could not be offered in favor of tithing under a Christian dispensation, for the simple statement of Christ, "My kingdom is not of this world, else my servants would fight," Taking this as an example as argued by Elder Blair for us to follow, then in that case fighting, or going out to battle would be tolerable under similar circumstances; and I for one protest against the logic, claiming that Melchisedec in this particular did not represent the law of Christ, as seen in Christ, and his immediate representatives. That the tithing of the "spoils" of war was the practice under the kingly order and admissable at that period, in which Melchisedec reigned, is quite evident, but not necessarily a part of Chris-Abram recognized the king's right in this regard, as clearly shown in the expression, "I will not take anything that is thine, lest thou shouldest say I have made Abram rich. The statement of Paul in Heb. 7:4 refers to the same identical affair, and adds nothing new whatever.

But suppose I should admit, for the sake of the argument, all that is claimed, does it follow that because Abram paid tithes to Melchisedec of the spoils taken in battle, being "one tenth" thereof, that, therefore the revelation of 1838, is obligatory upon us as part and parcel of "the faith," the gospel, which takes at the outset, "all the surplus property"—the fruit of long years of toil, industry, and economy? And after this one tenth of all their interest annually"—such things may be given to a people who have departed from Christ, such at least are the indications of history—given as a yoke, a burden, but not necessarily a part of the gospel as taught by our Lord, which instills into the heart of the child of truth, love of God and love of neighbor, which feeds the hungry and clothes the naked, whether they be saints or sinners, and "especially the household of faith."

Again, Elder Blair tells us that Abram paid tithes as seen above, "over four hundred years" before the "law of carnal commandments was given to Moses"-and his idea seems to be that because it was "before" the carnal law, therefore was part of the gospel plan, and should be to-day. This logic is of a piece with that referred to above; for if being "before the law" argues anything in this regard, because of which it is and was a part of the gospel plan, then the same may be affirmed of circumcision; for it also existed, and was commanded and enjoined of God in a more explicit and definite manner than can be shown of tithing, four hundred years before the law of carnality, Gen. 17: 7; 10:13; and I am surprised that assuming the position which Elder Blair does, that he does not also include and affirm circumcision, just as certain early Christians did, whose mode of reasoning by which they sought to establish the faith, appears to be synonymous with his. See 15th chapter Acts. But unfortunately for them, when the apostles, elders and brethren came together, and considered the case, the Holy Ghost instructed their minds, showing that such things were not essential to salvation.

The next in order is Heb. 7:8: "And here men that die receive tithes; but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that he liveth." What "men that die receive tithes?" The 5th verse tells us thatthey are the "sons of Levi, who receive the office of the priesthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law." There is no provision here for a free will offering, that is to say, that it shall be left to the "people" to give as they please, whether much or little, that matter being regulated by law. Lev. 27:30, 31; Num. 18:24-26, &c. Now these priests were "ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices," (Heb. 8:3), and when we consider the labor they had to perform in offering the many, very many "offerings," "oblations," &c., "under the law," we can see at once the necessity of the law of tithing for their support, &c.; for the gifts which they offered according to the law, v. 4, were only to "serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things,"—v. 5. Now, what about the "heavenly things?" Let us see. In the first verse, 8th chapter, Paul says: "Now of the things which we have spoken, this is the sum: We have such a high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens; A minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man;" and in making the distinction between the priests, who collected tithes, gifts and offerings under the law, and Christ. the minister of the new covenant, he says that the latter "hath obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises. For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." Verses 6, 7. And in the 10th and 11th verses we are told by the Lord, "I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; * * And they shall not teach every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying, know the Lord; for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest.' This promise harmonizes with the promise of the Holy Ghost by our Savior in John 14, 15 and 16 chapters, which he said would "guide and lead into all truth," the most acceptable offering under this covenant being that of a "broken and a contrite heart," or to make the matter more definite in point of worship, Jesus said, "But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship him." Ino. 4:23.

But now we turn to the latter portion of the 8th verse of the 7th chapter: "And there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that he liveth." Elder Blair tells us that "Christ our great High Priest," who has "entered into that within the vail," can "receive tithes." I forbear any criticism upon this point at present, simply because the "principle" assigned by him, upon which and by which it is done, in Matt. 25: 40; to wit., "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." I am thankful for this reference—I regard it as capital, for in this we have the words of the minister of the true tabernacle and sanctuary—of the new covenant the gospel plan—and under that plan as expressed in this chapter, 31 to 40 verses, we have not one word in favor of the law of tithing, not one word in favor of giving or taking one's "surplus property" as made and provided in sec. 106 Doctrine and Covenants. In fact, there is no more connection between this revelation of 1838, and the principle of giving to the poor and needy, visiting the sick and afflicted, clothing the naked and feeding the hungry, as contained in this 25th chapter of Matt., than there is between the carnal law, under Moses, and the spiritual, or law of life under Christ, the difference being that the former is a sort of external worship, the latter being internal; the one being the "letter" which "killeth," the other the "spirit" which "giveth life." In harmony with this thought is the teaching of James 1:27 "Pure religion, and undefiled before God and the Father, is this; to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the word;" and, "If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled: notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit." 2:15, 16. As Paul expressed it, "Let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him," I Cor. 16: 2. Such teachings as these and practice succeeded the extreme, lavish one of "all things common," Acts 4: 32. But in no case, not one solitary instance on record of which I have knowledge, did Christ or his apostles teach, or enjoin, the law of tithing upon the church. Elder Blair thinks they did. Well, to put it mildly, I think he is very much mistaken, and I demand the proof. Talk and assertion will not answer, neither will conjecture; it's proof we want. He thinks I have attacked the teachings of the Bible, and I think he attacks the teachings of my Lord, when he seeks to add to the will of God, a law which takes "all the surplus property" which an individual has earned and saved by economy and industry. Such a law exceeds the law of tithing of the past, which requires but a tenth. Such a law is not the "methodical freewill system," which Elder Blair seeks to make it—not by any means; for in the second paragraph it states, that "those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, [see 1st par.,] and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide awong you." I don't know how much plainer language need to be; for certainly if an individual is "not worthy" to abide in the church, among the Saints, then they should be "cut off;" and I for one believe that if this revelation is the law to the church upon this question, then it ought to be enforced, the penalty for disobedience being excommunication. Reader, please read sec. 106, Doctrine and Covenants, and see if this is not correct.

Elder Blair refers us to the "eleventh chapter of the Book of Nephi," where "Christ recites to his disciples the prophetic words of Malachi; and in conclusion asks, "Does not Christ here endorse the principle of tithing? Does he not also enjoin it?" To which I answer no,—emphatically no, as he and all others may know, who will read the entire chapter, and elsewhere in the book—Christ tells them to "write the words which the Father had given unto Malachi"-"words" evidently not in their possession. These "words" contain statement of fact as well as prediction—of fact, in that, that Israel had not kept, but had violated the law of Moses, especially in "robbing God of tithes," which system, as Elder Blair truthfully asserts, "was incorporated into that law." Of prediction, in that, that when the Lord shall come, he shall "sit as a refiner," and "shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness." That said "offering will be under the law of Moses, may be seen from the further fact, as stated successively-and, "Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in days of old, and as in for-mer years." Anybody conversant with the past history of Israel, knows quite well, that the "offering of Judah and Jerusalem" was under the law of Moses, which required tithes, gifts, and offerings very numerous—that the Lord will purify Israel eventually by this law, the "school master," is quite evident, and "in that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses, Holiness unto the Lord; and the pots in the Lord's house shall be like the bowls before the altar. See Zech. 14: 20, 21.

That Jesus did not intend in this speech the law of Moses to be regarded as obligatory upon his followers, may be seen from his own words in same Book of Nephi, chapter 7, par. 1. "And it came to pass that when Jesus had said these words, he perceived that there were some among them who marveled, and wondered what he would concerning the law of Moses. * * to which he answered, "Behold I say unto you, that the law is fulfilled that was given unto Moses." Again, "The law which was given unto Moses, hath an end in me." "Tithing" as a law, was part of the law of Moses, of which Christ said, it "hath an end in me." Elder Blair thinks not, and the readers will take their choice as to which they will follow. See also chapter 4:8. In chapter 11, paragraph 6, occurs this language. "Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb, for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments." this occurs in that statement where "Christ recites to his disciples the prophetic words of Malachi," to "be given unto future generations," but which Elder Blair was careful not to quote, for in trying to show the continuation of the law of tithing, had he referred to this item as proof, it would have been too much, as that would be reinstating the law of Moses, which Jesus declared was at an end. Reader, just examine this 11th chapter Book of Nephi, and satisfy your own minds, that if it reinstated tithing, it also reinstates the entire law of Moses, which thing can not be under Christ. My opponent reminds me of a man who has formulated a theory, and then seeks to compel scripture to sustain it. Jesus commanded his apostles to teach what he had commanded them. Let Elder Blair show that Jesus commanded such a law unto them as the one now in dispute, and unless he does this, he fails in his affirmation. Elder Blair holds to the doctrine contained in sec. 19, par. 2, of Doc. and Cov., relating to the words and commands of Joseph Smith, wherein the church was commanded to "give heed unto all his words and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith." This command was received the day upon which the church was organized, April 6th, 1830, and formally adopted together with other revelations, as a rule and guide to faith, in August, 1835. When the church adopted this, they became bound thereby to accept all subsequent revelations without question, so long as Joseph Smith retained his office and position in the church. Thus we see the dogma of infallibility clearly set up and established in a trifle over five years from the day of organization, a dogma which required centuries in the Roman Catholic Church for its establishment. If we as a church are bound by this law to-day, then all this talk and disputation about tithing, gathering, revenge, baptism for dead, Lord's Boarding House, &c., is all out of place. The voting by conferences upon those vexed questions simply time thrown away; because if that dogma is law, then in that case we are bound to receive all revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants, and all that may hereafter be received, as a rule and guide to faith; and for any one to say, "I don't believe the revelation on tithing, or the one on "Nauvoo House," &c., would be equivalent to saying, "I don't believe in God." Such a law makes Joseph Smith's power in the church omnipotent. It places him instead of God to us. I admire Elder Blair's frankness in quoting this as law. I like to see men teach what they believe, and believe what they teach; I despise hypocritical cant, in religious matters especially. If this be law, let all the church realize the force of it and its power; for if it be law to us, then in that case our salvation depends upon belief in Joseph Smith. This may sound strange to some, but if so, I think you will see it in that light upon due examination of the text; for it makes Joseph Smith's "words and commands" God's words to us, and certainly our salvation depends upon God's words, especially when given in the imperative.

I fully realize the necessity of courtesy in the consideration of any one's religious faith, as we are apt to receive in return that which we do to others; but upon this question I wish to be distinctly understood, that I have never seen a day according to my recollection, that I believed this dogma for one moment, I do not now, and never expect to. I regard it as a fatal error to the advancement of Christianity, and if Elder Blair can show that Christ ever established such an officer thus empowered in the primitive church," he will confer a favor by such a showing; but in this case as in others, proof is required, not conjecture.

If any man remained holy all the time, it would not be so bad; but we all know that man is very weak and fallible; hence to make any man's words as a whole spoken in the name of the Lord, equal to God's words, to me is an impossibility in truth, and every member in the church ought to enquire into this matter, and see if they believe this dogma. Joseph was to be "great like unto Moses," and we are told that "if Joseph gave to the church false revelations when founding and building it up, he would not compare well with Moses;" and don't Elder Blair know, that those very great laws or the law given through Moses, was superceded and rendered dead, by the operation of the gospel? Joseph was to be "like unto Moses." I certainly think he was-I accept the consequences of the admission, while Elder Blair does not.

Again, we are told that "if God's prophets give even one false prophecy, they shall die for it, and that speedily." Admitted as to fact, possibly might disagree as to detail. Jesus said, "by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."—Matt. 12:38. Let us apply Joseph Smith's own words under the above rule. Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 2: par. 3, "And behold, how oft you (Joseph) have transgressed the commandments and the laws of God, and have gone on in the persuasions of men." Par. 4, "Behold, thou art Joseph, and thou wast chosen to do the work of the Lord, but because of transgression, if thou art not aware thou wilt fall, (par. 2 "and incur the vengeance of a just God) but remember God is merciful." This warning and reproof were given in July, 1828. Again, sec. 4, par. 4: "And now I command you, my servant Joseph, to repent and walk more uprightly before me, and yield to the persuasions of men no more; and that you be firm in keeping the commandments wherewith I have commanded you, and if you do this, behold I grant unto you eternal life, even if you should be slain." This was given in March, 1829, and the readers will notice that his promise of "eternal life" was in "keeping the commandments.'

Again: sec. 34, par. 4, latter part, "I have given unto him [Joseph] the keys of the mystery of those things which have been sealed, even things which were from the foundation of the world, and the things which shall come from this time until the time of my coming, if he abide in me, and if not, another will I plant in his stead." Given in December, 1830. The promise being made of life until Christ's coming upon the condition that Joseph abide in God; and if he did not so abide, another would be appointed, &c., together with the fact that Christ has not come, and that Joseph has been cut off, proves I think conclusively that he died for transgression, for "not abiding in the Lord." Now, will Elder Blair please tell us which or what was the "false prophecy" for which he died? As it will not do to say it was for "personal conduct," as Elder Blair informs us that "persons called of God to be his prophets, seers and revelators, may sin in their personal conduct, even to the extent that Moses and others did, &c., and still live and serve in their official capacity for many years; but if they give even one false revelation to any one of God's people, they are doomed of God to die for it, and that speedily," &c. According to this rule, it wont do to say that Joseph was cut off for "personal conduct." (What a pity everybody is not a prophet to enjoy so liberal a rule.) Therefore we conclude it was for false revelation. Let Elder Blair tell us please. Again, in a tract issued by the church, and entitled The Successor, &c., page 2, is found a quotation from a letter written by Joseph Smith to W. W. Phelps, dated Nov. 27, 1832, from which I extract: "Thus saith the still small voice which whispereth through and pierceth all things, and often times it maketh my bones to quake while it maketh manifest saying: And it shall come to pass that I, the Lord God, will send one mighty and strong, holding the scepter of power in his hand, clothed with light for a covering, &c., &c., while that man who was called of God and appointed, that putteth forth his hand to steady the ark of God, shall fall by the shaft of death, like as a tree that is smit-ten by the vivid shaft of lightning." The man who had been appointed at that period, 1832, was Joseph Smith. death fills the measure of the picture, was shot, fell suddenly—instantly, and that too, because he "putteth forth the hand to steady the ark of God." Whatever the character of this act may have been, by comparing with sec. 34: 4, the reader will see that it was for not abiding in the Lord; and I have shown according to Elder Blair, that it was not for "personal conduct. David, Solomon, and others were great men, and did much good in their time and way, as also much evil; but no one would hardly say that they were innocent men, or infallible in that which they spoke in the name of the Lord. Joseph Smith like them was a great prophet, but because of that, his revelations and prophecies are not infallible, neither died he as an innocent martyr for Christ, but like other great prophets, he died for transgression. Upon these points rests the entire issue of the present hour. And the men who affirm his innocence, the infallibility of his revelations, and his martyrship, must remember, that Christ not Joseph, is the foundation,—God's will—not Joseph's is the thing to establish; and that the passport into celestial glory, and test of fellowship with Christ, is not whether I am a follower of Joseph Smith, but, rather, am I a follower of Christ.

Yours for truth, Z. H. Gurley. Pleasanton, Ia., Jan. 8th, 1825.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS .- No. 5.

BY S. F. W.

THE theory that accumulations of ice at the poles crushed the earth's crust is liable to the objection that no evidence of such rending of rocks is now discoverable.

The other theory that a saturnian ring of water broke upon the earth is subject to the criticism that if the earth was thus flooded it would have remained so. It is easier by this theory to get the water over the mountains than it is to get the water off again.

As theories are interesting and help to systematise facts, I offer a third; that the snows and ice did accumulate at the poles and to such a degree as to make the polar axis longer than the diameter through the north temperate and the south temperate regions: and as the axis of a revolving body must be always its shortest diameter the poles were shifted. This shifting of the poles caused a corresponding change of the high belt of equatorial waters and sent them to another part of the land.

We now come to the greatest event in human annals, that of the flood. The cunieform inscriptions have been found to include a very ancient account of the deluge so much like the Hebrew narrative that scholars agree that the latter is simply a transcript of it, with its polytheism "carefully eliminated." I have followed this leading and dictation hitherto in supposing the Hebrew records are made from the Chaldaic with a different signification given to gross naturalistic conceptions; but in this history of the deluge I reject a supposition that seemed legitimate and plausible in each other case. The original account of the deluge is the one that should contain the truth. The Chaldaic story starts out upon an impossible hypothesis; i. e., that one of the false gods inspired a certain pious individual in a dream. None but the God of heaven as represented in the Scriptures could have made known the coming of the flood. None but he could have provided against it; none but he could have brought it in; and none but a monotheist could have written a true account of it at first; and none but a monotheistic account could be a true one. The true one was necessarily the oldest; and if the cuneiform narrative is not true, it has been corrupted, and if it is corrupted, and the biblical account genuine, the genuine should be supposed older than the counterfeit; and if the writers and preservers of the cuneiform narrative were not monotheists then they were not the people first possessed of the facts, or of the record. The Hebrews having the true faith are necessarily the same in faith with the family preserved; and unless they had lost the faith had never, probably, lost a knowledge of the great event, and had not had occasion to corrupt their account with polytheistic conceptions. This brings us to the question: Had the true faith been preserved in the earth? We find that Melchisedec had the true faith before Abraham's day; that he was a priest of an order, and therefore must suppose he had predecessors in that office. Question. predecessors in that office. Would God have a priesthood on the earth more ignorant of his dealings with mankind than the heathen neighbors of those priests of God? I am satisfied that Abraham with a knowledge of Chaldean lore, did not go and pay tithes to an ignorant man. "Consider how great this man was" being "king of righteousness" and "like unto the Son of God." Further investigation will doubtless prove that the priesthood of the Most High God was the source of the wondrous light found reflected in Egypt, Chaldea, Irania, and India, in the remote, prehistoric ages. And if the fact be not developed by research, it will have to remain an item of faith by all true believers in God and Christ and their revelations to man. The theory that the intensely literal, practical, condensed and awfully spiritual account of the flood was copied from a poem—a romance of the heathen, is simply—untenable. If the two accounts had been identical down to the time of Abraham, as asserted, there would be some similarity in the names of the two versions, and also a greater sameness of matter. But the differences are so great that we can account for it only by supposing that the narratives had been preserved separately through a great lapse of time. One of them by a people or priesthood having a knowledge of the true God; the other by a priesthood who had turned from the true God to fables. This theory does not prove either account true, but supposes the Hebrew to be nearest to the truth and independent of all others. The ancient priests made it their chief business to preserve the sacred writings. Would the priests of the Most High God be the only ones of the known world who did not have such records? "God has not left himself without a witness."

Genesis is made up of two accounts, one Elohistic the other Jehovistic, and what has puzzled scholars is that the Jehovistic was the older of the two; for the Chaldean being the oldest and polytheistic, the Elohistic being most like it ought to be older. But, if the true account is older than Moses, we need not be surprised to find that the true name is connected with it.

The tablets then may confirm the Scriptural account and illustrate it, but can not supercede it. They do prove that there is a distinction between the Jehovistic and Elohistic accounts. A plausible theory of some concerning the authorship of the biblical narrative is that Abraham possessed the Chaldaic version and that Melchisedec possessed an original monotheistic version, that these two versions were preserved until the time of Moses, who combined the two into the record that bears his name.

There is a notable case of drowning that comes within historic times—the closing in of the Red Sea upon Pharaoh's hosts.

Both this and the deluge are attributed, to natural causes, yet there was a miraculous element in both cases as also a moral purpose. There was in each a display of divine power and also divine wisdom; and in each case was there a display of the prophetic spirit in man.

The drowning of the Egyptian host is a demonstrated fact. We have the written record of witnesses of the event, the testimony that comes of correllation with other facts, and the evidence of topographical examination. These evidences have been subjected to the test of severest criticism, and the unwilling admission of science is that the narrative is true. The rule of analogy requires that if one of two similar narratives, written under similar conditions is found true, the probabilities are in favor of the truth of the other narrative. This is logic, and next to faith it is the best guide. Where faith and logic combine their testimony, the logic that comes of perversity can never prevail. So the story of the flood with all its unsolvable problems must stand in its place, while human conditions remain as they now are.

It is claimed that the account in Genesis is mostly human because of the fact that the different versions give different periods of duration to the different stages of the flood. The Elohist makes the whole period of one year of 365 days, the increase of 150 days and the decrease of 150 days of the water, corresponding to the annual increase and decrease of the Tygris Euphrates. The Jehovist makes the increase of the water forty days and its decrease forty days. He also gives prominence to the number seven, which is a Chaldean peculiarity.

The cuneiform narrative includes nautical terms, as vessel, sea, navigation, pilots, &c. These are omitted in the Mosaic account, proving that it originated with an inland people; therefore the origin of the two accounts is distinct and separate.

Tradition points to the valley of the Euphrates and city of Sippara as the home of the last five Antediluvian kings. This conflicts with the tradition that fixes the original abode of the races that sprang from Noah in the central part of Asia. It is true that the traditions of all the civilized nations of antiquity point to the highlands of Asia as the site of Gan Eden; and the tradition concerning the post diluvian abode probably grew out of the traditions, as a religious conception. The central part of Asia was known to be the highest part of the known world. It was natural for the people, in their ignorance, to think it a sacred region, and the abode of the gods; and connecting it with the traditions of Eden, they got to regard it as the place where the gods came down to hold intercourse with the forefathers; and finally, to conclude that it was the home of the race before the separation. The Chinese were right in thinking that their original home was westward. And the Aryans of India were right in thinking that they came in from the west; for not far to the southeast of where the ark is supposed to have rested, was the tableland of Iran, where part of the race settled and remained many years, and traveling from here to the westward they found the valley of the Tygris. All the accounts can be harmonized by supposing that the Japhetic branch of the race remained in this locality, or moved back to it, at a very early period, and remained there until they grew into the families that settled India and all the countries of Europe.

The history of the Aryan nations as learned by the study of their languages does not conflict with the statements of the tablets that the valley of the Tygris was occupied before the flood, but whether it does or not, the tablets being the oldest known records must have precedence. According to them the ark was built at Sharippak,—in lower Babylonia; and it was there the heavens poured down their floods, and the water spouts and winds were brought on by the several gods.

There is a statement of Berosus to the effect that Xisuthrus was commanded to take the beginning, middle, and end of all things that had been consigned to writing, and to bury it in the city of the sun, Sippara. This curious statement has been regarded as fiction for two thousand years, but the revelations of the tablets give it new interest, and much importance; for in them we have a confirmation of it.

Mr. Rassam agent of the British Museum has recently and accidentally found a mound in Tygris valley, called Aboo-hubba, which has proved to be the ruined Sippara or Sepharaim. It is six miles from the Tygris and on a canal once fed from the river. The mound is 1,300 feet long, 400 wide, with hundreds of chambers. Very many terracotta cylinders and clay tablets have been found in it.

Here has Nebuchadnezzar and other kings, as early as 1,300 B. C. searched for records buried under the foundations of the temples of the sun-god, Ul-bur in the part of Sippara called Agani. This Sippara said to be antediluvian is the Accad of Nimrod's reign and which later, under Sargon was called Agade.

Sargon was called Agade.

Berosus, in addition to the above statements from him, says that the survivors of the flood recovered the writings from Sippara and built many cities and temples.

We next have a narrative taken from a barrel found in the mound called Mugheir (which is the ruin of Ur) by Nabunahid, a king of Babylon, who reigned 550 B. C. These barrels are inscribed cylinders in shape of a barrel and varying from one to three feet in hight. They serve the pur-pose of transmitting knowledge to futurity just as the pillars which Josephus says he had seen in the land of the syriad in which the sons of Seth, or Thoth, before the deluge inscribed their knowledge of the stars, so that it should not be lost. He describes them as one built of brick and one of stone; so of course they were monuments of greater size than the "barrels" and cylinders on which Sagarraktiyas inscribed the antediluvian lore. From this barrel of Nabunahid we learn that when Sagarraktiyas reconstructed the pyramidal temple of Ammis (same as Ulbar) he made tablets in imitation of those deposited in Sippara by Xisuthros.

The date of this transaction was before 3,800 B. C. Mr. Rassam has found at Abbo Hubba an inscription that fixes the date of Naramsin at 3,800 B. C. Naramsin is son of Sargon called also son of Sagarraktiyas who made the inscriptions of supposed antediluvian history. Agade was the capital of the first North Babylonian Moses: it is also the Akkad of Nimrod's reign and from which the language of the cuneiform inscriptions takes its name.

It is not known what the barrels of Sagarraktiyas contained. It is certainly important to know that writing was practiced at so early a date. Whatever the writing was it became legendary as the tables of Larsam, hidden for the first time by Xisuthros himself. So after five hundred years had passed, Kuri Galzu, a king of the 4th or 5th dynasty of Berosus, searched for the buried tables, and left an inscription saying he had searched for the corner stone and not found it.

Asarkaddan searched for the tables. Nebuchadnezzar had his army search for them.

It was just before the beginning of the Babylonian power (550 B. C.) that Nabunahid records that he had not found them.

Still later Nabonidus says he directed his army to search for the corner stone in the place where Nebuchadnezzar's army had made a trench, but the tempest of water had inundated everything; but he finally found the corner stone, with the name of Sagarraktiyas at the bottom of it, and his inscription that he "had replaced in the foundations the barrel of the East, and the barrel of the West."

The inscriptions are fragmentary and it does not yet appear that the tables of the antediluvian Larxam were found and read. But the Izdhubar series are supposed to have been written soon after the death of that hero, and as the account of the deluge formed part of the sacred writings, the latter, must have attributed to them an earlier date than the Izdhubar series.

The Chaldean accounts of creation can independently be proven to be as ancient as 2,000 B. C. It is reasonable to suppose they extend further and are antediluvian relics. The Izdhubar legends were composed 2,000 B. C. Isdhubar was a great hunter or giant, who after getting dominion in Babylon drove out the tyrant of Erech, and destroyed a monstrous beast of prey; has as a friend an astrologer named Hebani, a learned hermit, who aids him to destroy wild animals, and to conquer a mountain chief. Belesu was the name of another conquered chief; a divine bull was killed, and the country subdued from the Armenian mountains to the gulf. Who could this hero be but Nimrod? He fell sick and by the advance of Hehani sought the deified hero of the flood, Xisuthros. This latter part is poetry; but we find the legends are referred to in inscription during the time of 2,500 to 1,500 B. C., and that the title "city of the ark" is applied to Surippak and there Hea was called the God of the flood; all of which shows that the traditions were generally recognized. In the course of the poem, four giants appear. One of them directs Isdhubar to visit Xisuthros. Among many questions asked is the one, how he became immortal. This introduces the story of the flood, which is made the eleventh tablet of the series. Erech the blessed, now Warka, is the scene of part of the story. It was once called the Giant City. The world, before the flood, is said to have been very wicked. The poem gives details of the building of the ark; storing it; placing in it treasures, animals, and a good many people. The future life is spoken of as glorious for the good. The bad go down into the earth, into a prison house, from which there is no return. Xisuthros is first warned by Ea, in a dream, and told how to prepare the vessel. Different gods take part in bringing on the flood, wind, water-spouts, and a deluge of rain. On the seventh day the rain decreased. A dove, a raven and a swallow were sent out. A sacrifice was offered, and the gods gathered to it "like flies."

These items of the poem show its inferiority to the biblical narrative.

The tablets surely take us back to the grandson of Noah and to the beginning of kingdoms. It is an approachable date. Egypt can go just as far back and no farther—about 4,000 B. C. is the date of the kingdoms. A few hundred years added for the growth of populations is all that history, sacred or profane, can demand. This is satisfactory to all who are not too unreasonably hard to please. So the great battle of the ages is over. Faith has the field and can take breath.

The cuneiform accounts of creation and the flood can not be traced to the tables of Xisuthrus, but as they can be traced back to the period of 2,000 B. C. it is a legitimate conclusion that they and the biblical narrative of the same things are based upon the same originals.

From all this history may be deduced the further conclusion that the biblical account of antediluvian events was transmitted through a line of inspired men from Noah, and others before to Moses, independently of the Chaldean priesthood. Inscribed papyrus rolls were in use before Abraham's day; therefore there is no reason why he should not have had sacred records in his keeping. But the cuneiform characters were not in use in the earlier ages, therefore these histories and legends could only have been translations out of the agglutinative language and hieroglyphics of the former age. If we suppose Melchisedec to have had translations into some other language than Chaldean, that would account for the greater part of the variations between the Chaldean and Biblical narratives, and especially for the great diversity in the names. Supposing this common source of the Hebrew and Chaldean traditions, it must have been hieroglyphical. There is proof that Egyptian hieroglyphics are older than the cuneiform alphabet or phoenecian alphabet. These peoples having had a common origin, it follows that the hieroglyphics of Egypt were closely allied to those of the antediluvians. The antediluvians had had an alphabet, the descendants of Noah through Mizriam would not have given it up for an inferior system. There's no case in history of a people retrograding in writing, and advancing in other arts at the same time. Again supposing the antediluvians to have had a rude system of hieroglyphics, they could not have written a very full and correct narrative; and what they did write could only be correctly interpreted by inspired men. The Chaldeans could not have got and perpetuated a full account after they had and on the following Sunday for worship.

fallen from the faith. It is most likely that the Hebrews from the time of Heber and before had their own separate records and traditions and picture writings like the Mexican, and Moses in compiling them was inspired to preserve and perpetuate that which has come down to us.

DIED.

BAGGS .- At Clear Water, Nebraska, January 14th, 1885, sister Sarah, wife of Bro. Elijah Baggs. No offspring blessed their otherwise happy union. Many friends mourn her loss, for she was beloved by all who knew her. Born in Lambourne, Berkshire, England, June 21st, 1851. She came to America in 1878, and was married on November 6th, to him who now mourns her loss. She was baptized July 16th, 1882, at Dawsonberg, Fremont Co., Iowa, by Elder James R. Badham. Confirmed by Elder E. C. Brand. She bore her sufferings patiently, and was resigned to the will of God; and with eyes beaming with heavenly intelligence, she bore a faithful testimony to the truth of the gospel; giving exhortation to those present to be faithful and careful, she soon fell asleep. Funeral services were conducted by Brethren William Barbee and J. B. Williams, the latter preaching the sermon.

tter preaching the sermon.

Be comforted all ye that mourn

For one whose life to you was dear;

This life is but a narrow span,

And all is well; we need not fear.

As workers on God's vine-clad hill,

May we our talents so improve;

That he who counsels at his will,

May call us to his courts above.

WHITING .- At Fall River, Massachusetts, January 20th, 1885, after a few days' illness, Sister Thirza Whiting, aged 69 years, 7 months and 28 days. Funeral services were held over her remains in the Saints' Chapel, Fall River, by Elder John Smith, at which many friends and neighbors gathered. In her life she always bore a strong testimony to the truth of the latter day work, and like many noble and true among women, has gone to rest.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Lamoni and the region of country about it, were visited by a very severe "blizzard," beginning Saturday, February 7th, and continuing till the morning of the 11th. The mercury went down to 22 and 26 degrees below zero, the difference being accounted for by differences between thermometers and the places in which they hung. The wind was unbearable, and stock that was not housed suffered terribly. It was the worst storm Lamoni has had for over a year.

Bro. E. J. French, of Santa Ana, California, has sent a case (about ten gallons) of strained honey, the product of his own bee ranch, in the land of orange blossoms and grapes. It is of most excellent quality, like amber in color and pure as the dews. We recognize the gospel friendship which warmed the donor's heart when he started the sweet freight on its long journey from the west to the middle lands; and appreciate the gift and the spirit which prompted the sending of it. A wonderful land is this Joseph's land on which the Saints dwell; blessed above all other lands. And as we eat of the nectar gathered from the flowers of the Golden State, spread upon the wheaten cakes made from the grain grown on the plains of Kansas, rich with butter made in the dairies of the prairie state, we shall thank God, the giver of life that our lives are cast among the dwellers on that wonderful land. We thank Bro. French for his token of kind remembrance.

Bro. Oden Jacobs of Leland, Illinois, wrote us January 31st. He had been lecturing on the condition and national prospects of Utah; using specimens of mineral and crop products obtained in a late visit to Utah. The means raised by his lectures he proposes to use in tracts for distribution. Bro. Jacobs is a very earnest devotee, and we believe a good man. The branch meets only occasionally.

Messrs. Curtiss and Anderson, of Sidney, Nebraska, have 300,000 acres of railroad land for sale at from two to five dollars per acre, on ten years' time. The land consists of valley, grazing, and smooth divide land. Three hundred thousand acres of Government land are lying vacant among these railway lands, that can be located as homesteads, timber claims and pre-emptions. They may be consulted by addressing Cheyenne County Land Office, Sidney, Nebraska, or Curtiss and Anderson.

In Herald, page 85, read instead of "where the Bible is least understood," "where the Bible is best understood;" also, "The name is too good," instead of not "good enough, to bear," (not hear).

THE following from the Inter-Ocean, of Chicago, will give the HERALD readers an idea of what Mr. Alfales Young's speech in the Salt Lake Theater, January 8th last, must have been like. It is the counterpart, in sentiment, to the ideas expressed by Mr. J. L. Rawlins, which we have already given in a former issue. The extract is furnished us by the kindness of Bro. H. A. Stebbins.

"We hear a great deal about the People's party and its 18,000 majority, but you can count the one at the head, beginning and ending there—the others are naught but ciphers. Seventeen thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine of the persons composing that majority are merely ciphers in that party. These are facts that I know. These are the facts that have called for the organization of our club. * * *

"One of the great wrongs here is the polygamic system of this Territory. We arraign the polygamic leaders as false to their children. From the time of the establishment of a provisional government in Utah up to the Legislature which sat in the City Hall last year, not a single thing was done to give the children of polygamic parents a legal standing in the Territory. They never tried to do that, but sneaked around and denied that right to their children. It may be argued that they could not have done it; an honorable failure was at least worthy the trial. Is such conduct worthy of men? The question of the right of the Government to interfere with the marital relations in this Territory is much talked about. It is the business of the government of Utah to define the relations of man and wife. Why didn't they do it? They never tried. It was opposed to the system in favor throughout the United States. And the people of Utah Territory call themselves Democrats! Why should the state take cognizance of the marital relations of husband and wife? From the days of ancient Greece and Rome down to to-day it has been the aim of states everywhere in the civilized world to secure the preservation and sanctity of the family, without which social chaos would have overtaken the world. This is why they should continue it. And further, because the family is the unit of the State, upon which the whole superstructure of government is erected. If the people of Utah Territory think that the polygamic system is a better system than any other, let them come out and say so, and fight it boldly out on that ground. Are there no evils attendant upon this system? There are. Three-fourths of the children born in this community are born in polygamic relations, and when they come before the courts of the country, they stand there as nobodies! That is one reason why we arraign the People's party. It has been a party of tyranny. [Cheers.] We believe this: that the evil should be cured here. We don't ask anything from the outside: we think we are perfectly competent to cure it right here in Utah Territory. * * * In a free government it is the duty of every citizen to see that his children stand before the law equal to the children of every other man. Does that condition exist here? No. The People's party have not done it. It remained for a Republican Senator, in a Republican Congress, to introduce the measure which gave to the polygamic children of the Territory a legal status, and the bill was signed by a Republican President."

THE Index, Boston, Mass., for August 21st, 1884, contains the following stricture on Rev. Clark Braden, which we give below.

"We learn from Monroe's Iron-Clad Age that some of the Western Cambellite preachers are trying to impair the force of Ingersoll's influence by circulating a slanderous pamphlet by Rev. Clark Braden, entitled "Ingersoll Unmasked." Pretty small business this! Assaults made upon him in this way Ingersoll can easily afford to treat with silent contempt. Whatever this man Braden says or writes about a free thinker, or even about his own brethren when they differ from him, or when he thinks it to his personal advantage to injure them, is not entitled to the least credit. He takes to abuse and blackguardism as naturally as a duck takes to water. He seems to be devoid of a sense of honor. Some years ago, he met a free thinker in a public debate in a Western city. His brethren were so disappointed with the result that they immediately commenced making arrangements for another debate, in which their side should be represented by Rev. John Sweeny, a debater of some reputation among the Campbellites. Braden revealed his baseness in a letter which he wrote and addressed to the free thinker, informing him as to the weak points of Mr. Sweeny as a debater, and telling him the best course to pursue in order to "defeat him." For years, Braden has tried hard to get Ingersoll to engage in controversy with him, or to notice him in some way that would bring him into prominence; but he has been persistently ignored. And, instead of coming to Boston to 'demolish infidelity' and give the clergy of this city lessons in logic and Christian evidences, as he intended, he has been down to Texas repeating his platitudes, depending mainly upon personal assaults upon Ingersoll and boastful claims as to the number of victories he has had in debate, to attract the attention of the natives. We know of several Western preachers starting for Boston, but, not receiving the encouragement expected. abandoning the route marked out before bidding good by to their friends in 'Sugar-tree Hollow' and other localities, and bringing up in Texas. A common expression once was, 'Hell or Texas.' With the great Western champions of theology and demolishers of 'infidelity,' who, like Braden, complain of inappreciation in Western communities, the cry now seems to be, 'Boston or Texas;' and, somehow, it turns out to be Texas every time. The amount of theological talent and learning in the Lone Star State must be enormous. This may account for the unsurpassed acquaintance of the Texas herders with the expressive and euphonious language of theology."

In connection with the foregoing some one has sent to us a pamphlet published by B. F. Underwood, in 1879. In this pamphlet the circumstance of the betrayal of Rev. Sweeny, by his co-laborer in the ministry of the Christian Church, Clark Braden is fully shown; together with other circumstances, which indicate that even then this would-be slayer of Mormonism, root, barnch and body, was a very unreliable, unscrupulous man.

TABOR, Iowa, February 2d, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—We are trying to do the best we can in this district. I have been laboring some in this place and at the Gaylord school house, and at the Ross, and preached one week in Bartlett, to a crowded house; have visited the branches in the southern part of the district, and intend to start for the north this week. We would be glad if things were in better shape, in some respects; but on the whole we have no reason to complain. The brethren are doing the best they can under the circumstances.

And we all hope to be able to do better in the future. Times are hard, but we must push ahead, as there is no standing still in the kingdom of God. The weather has been very cold, but in spite of all, our meetings have been well attended.

Prejudice is fast giving way, and the people are more liberal minded. Men who one year ago would not listen, are now investigating our claims. I feel thankful to God for mercies bestowed, and still pray for favors in the future.

Ever praying for the prosperity of the work, I still remain in bonds, HENRY KEMP.

Brother Foseph:-I have been a reader of the Herald for some time, and I have received much encouragement by reading the testimonies of my brethren and sisters; and I feel it my duty to give my testimony to the readers of this little paper. I am nearly fifty-one years old. I joined the church of Latter Day Saints in the month of October, 1884; was baptized by Bro. John Mc-Millen, priest of the Church Hill Branch, about twenty-five or thirty miles from this place. Previous to meeting brother McMillen, I was a very strict Baptist, and thought I could never change; but I found out-as to the true gospel-I had been living in darkness all my life. I had indeed been building my house upon the sand, and I can not praise God enough, or thank Bro. McMillen enough for his patience and perseverance in trying to convince me of the true doctrine; for up to the time of my reading the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, my prejudice had not left me, especially against Joseph Smith; but before I was through reading those books, the mist all cleared away, and I know now that he was the true prophet sent by God; and as such I reverence his memory. I have great hopes of my husband embracing the true faith. I desire an interest in the prayers of the Saints, that I may be faithful.

Your sister in Christ,
MARGARET ROBSON.

Friend Herald:—On the 5th ultimo I went to Boone, as per previous arrangement. After our arrival we were apprised by branch president that our presence should be necessitated for a longer time than we had calculated.

The Teacher had tendered his resignation, and the vacancy was to be supplied. A meeting was duly called by president, selection made of a young brother, Fulton Brown by name, and his ordination was ordered by vote, and he was appointed Teacher of branch. There was much power of the Holy Spirit manifested at ordination. He, as well as others had good evidence of his call, that it was divine. The second Sunday in last November, when Bro. Roth and writer were at Boone, we had a most excellent social meeting, and it was then signified to the writer that Bro. Brown would be called to the office of Teacher in that branch, although I named it to no one but my associate until a few days prior to ordination, to the president. Bro. Brown was baptized last March at Edenville, and has made a good, substantial, progressive member ever since; and God blesses him much. We attempted to depart several times, but were hindered by snow storms; and the last Sunday in January, God blessed the Saints greatly.

I wish to mention an incident I deem worthy of notice. The second week of our stay at Boone we were at the president's home. His wife was taken ill ere our arrival; had herself under the doctor's care, but one afternoon Bro. McBurney, a son and myself were sitting in parlor talking of religious matters, when all of a sudden the Holy Spirit spread over us as a mantle of peace, and we wept. Word was sent by Sr. McBurney that she desired the ordinance of God ministered in her behalf. We went to her room, prayed, administered, and immediately all pain and fever left her, and a feeling of rest and sleep came to her. As we walked out of the room we met Bro. Johnnie, the youngest son, sixteen years old, and he told the writer he had felt impressed to go out and pray God that his mother would seek God's help. It was during his absence at prayer this occurred, for as he entered he found us praying for his mother. He is a boy of much faith, and I felt strengthened by his holy example. The young people there still have their prayer meetings and are much blessed. We tried to encourage them, and do them all the good we knew Never should any feel ashamed of our holy religion. I notice that those who are striving lawfully have much to tell of what God has done for them; while the indifferent never say anything as to whether God blesses them or not. Whenever we let the world get such a hold of us so as to cause religious matters to seem insignificant, we are on dangerous ground. Notwithstanding much odium attaches to the work because of apostate wickedness, yet there is nothing about the real work itself of which I feel ashamed! The more I preach it, the more I realize of its excellence, and intrinsic worth. The farther I get from the world, the brighter does heaven's glory shine. New thoughts, new words, fill my soul with joy, and the Holy Spirit's genial influence makes me glad, and happy in the Master's cause. "Progression" is the motto of this work; but progression is by no means retrogression! Neither is it a departure from well established, and clearly defined principles of truth. God said in preface to Book of Doctrine and Covenants, "Search these commandments for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall ALL be fulfilled." "What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself." I italicized some words, because I call attention to them. If God has no excuse to offer for anything that appears in the book, we should have none.

We account for certain doctrines being embraced in our faith, because, or from the fact that our theology is dispensationally representative, i. e., those principles that were the most important factors in the divine economy have ever been retained as a part of the faith and practice of God's people. He has never imposed unnecessary obligations upon his people at any time, and never shall, because it would not be in keeping with his justice nor yet compatible with mercy. I read in Liverpool edition, sec. 21, par. 5, "Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man) * * * a day for the tithing of my people." Sec. 107, par. 2: "All those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of the surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you. Epistle of Twelve, October 1861, "The Twelve will take measures in connection with the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing." In Book of Mormon, 11th chapter Book of Nephi, Jesus gives all of the 3d chapter of Malachi, in which tithing is mentioned, and then says: "These Scriptures which ve had not with you, the Father commanded that I should give unto you, for it was wisdom in him that they should be given anto future generations." If not for instruction and observance, then for what? There has been no change in either doctrine or general practice of the church in any dispensation aside from the Mosaic-during which the ritual obtained, and burnt sacrifices. God's financial scheme is not one of robbery, imposition or impolicy. It surely is not burdensome, but easy and plainly told, so "that he who runs may read." God's ways are not our ways, only as we adopt them. I was once told that "Joseph was surrounded by men who wanted one thing and another, and to gratify them he would inquire of the Lord, and the Lord would answer according to their wishes." It seems strange, however, that, this being the case, God would yet say, "these prophecies and promises are true and faithful;" but we are asked to believe that many of the revelations are answers to men's idle notions. I was not told this by any of the Re-organization, but by some who "once were enlightened, and tasted of the good things of heaven." It reminds me of a person, who some years ago, told me they "were present at the Kirtland Temple when the 'Word of Wisdom' was read, and it was gotten uy by Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon because some of the Elders spat tobacco juice on the floor," etc. But I remembered that one year previous that same party told me they "observed the Word of Wisdom one year, never were they so blessed as during that time." So God blesses men's impositions, and gives great evidence to their divine pretensions? Never!

Whatsoever the Lord hath enjoined upon us, we should strive to do with all willingness and readiness of heart. It matters not how much we may give, it was ever the Lord's.

Some people have much to say of sacrifice. What of it? Is not the matchless word and work of God worth all and more than we can do? If so, what do we sacrifice. All we can do will never amount to what God has done for us. "The debt of love can ne'er be paid." Supposing we had millions of earthly possessions, and die, leaving it all, and have done little or nothing for God's work, what kind of a sacrifice shall we have made? A sacrifice of eternal interests: but if we give of our substance here, we but "lay up treasures in heaven." As Dean Swift once remarked, "He that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord,' if you like the security down with the dust." I sometimes fear we doubt the worth of the security." Some people when they give to the Lord, by giving to His cause, look around the corner for the four fold pay, forthwith. If we could amass wealth and purchase some elegant residence in the hereafter, and possess by our purchase an eternal dominion; and having power so to do, we should give to the church here, and perhaps give much, decreasing our fortune, so when we crossed the river, we could not purchase what we wanted, we might say, "well, I really sacrificed so much I can't buy as I desired." But as it is, giving as we are asked of God, and all we thus give being had in remembrance, toward enhancing our future interest and good, I fail to see wherein comes the so-called sacrifice. It seems to me sheer murmering, and petty ingratitude to talk of superior light, superior power, superior knowledge, superior understanding of divine things, to what the world has got, and then see indifference on the part of many about doing, aiding, supporting God's work; and expecting eternal life, immorality, eternal glory, all for as little as we may do; should I be worth a million, "lay it all at the apostles' feet," die a pauper—were it a sacrifice too great, for such eternal riches as God offers us? No. And yet God asks not thus much. "The Lord loveth the cheerful giver." What have we that is not His already? Nothing. And yet would any of us hold from Him what is His own, and thus rob God.

All my fourteen years of ministerial labor, I dare not name it as sacrifice. All trials, temptations, perplexities, persecutions, are not to be named or compared with the reward offered. Does not God ever give more than we can offer?

Yours for the work,

J. FRANK McDowell.

St. Louis, Missouri,

Bro. Foseph Smith:—We are yet alive and trying to hold up the banner of truth which gives me great pleasure. The Saints here are trying to do their best to serve the Lord; but while they are so doing, the adversary is not idle. I often wish that some of the luke warm Saints would try and be as busy as Satan, and all join with one accord to build up the kingdom of God. How the truth would spread, the honest in heart be gathered in, many souls be saved. We would work out our salvation, the name of our God be glorified and our present reward would be heaven on earth.

Bro. M. T. Short was with us last Sunday. Preached an excellent sermon. He had good liberty, full house, happy time. He also preached in Cheltenham. God speed such noble soldiers of the cross. Ever praying and watching and working for the welfare of the gospel of Christ,

I remain your co-laborer in the true light,

NOAH NEPHI COOKE.

DELOIT, Iowa, Jan. 22d, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-Although I have been in the Church of Christ but a short time, God has given me a testimony of this work, of which I am neither boastful nor ashamed; and in the spirit of meekness, I submit the following which is true. I was born in Randolph Co., Mo., 1850. In my eighteenth year I united with the Christian or Campbellite church, and verily thought it was the Church of Christ. How strange, with the knowledge I had of the Scriptures so plainly describing the Church of Christ. What I had been taught by the Campbellites and Missourians, of the Saints and their doctrine, needs no comment. Twelve years ago we moved to Deloit. I went to one prayer meeting of the Saints, it had not much impression on my mind, though I was much pleased with what I heard and saw.

Five years ago I was attacked with what the doctors called blood poison. It so affected my eyes, that the water continually ran from them for ten weeks. I have had three more attacks since, each time longer, and more severe. In the early part of last summer, I was taken with a severe pain in my head; it continued five or six days. I was strongly impressed to send for the Saints, and they would tell me what to do. I sent for old Aunt Polly Jordan. When she came I asked her what to do; I knew I must have something done. I could not endure the pain much longer. She told me she was once in my suffering condition; it was before she obeyed the gospel. She sent for the Elders, and through their administration she was instantly healed. I knew this was according to the bible. I sent for W. W. Whiting; he bowed in earnest prayer to God for my relief, and through anointing with oil, and laying on of hands, I was so much relieved I knew God was with the Saints.

About the 15th day of July last, I was again attacked with the same disease in my eyes, inflammation setting in. No tongue can tell what I suffered with my eyes for seven weeks. I have a dear companion and six children. I would have given worlds were they mine, to have seen their faces, been able to do my work and care for them. I could see nothing in my room, only when near enough to put my hands on it. I could then see the shape and that was all. I at times could not distinguish my children one from another. Print was a black mark. The sunlight closed my eyes entirely. At this time there was a doctor highly recommended to me for treating the eyes. Fearing I would go entirely blind I prepared to go to him. I was much troubled about leaving my family. I prayed earnestly to God to know what to do; was directed by the Spirit to obey the gospel. Thought I would attend the Saints' meetings when I came back. I was told Mrs. Francis Ernst, of Deloit wanted to see me. I called at her house on Friday the 24th day of October. She entreated me not to go to the doctors; said she had once been blind like me. That the doctors had destroyed her eyes and they would destroy mine. I said there must be something done for me. She pointed me to the Church of Christ restored again; to Jesus of Nazareth who opened the eyes of the blind. Said he was the author of the latter day work; and bore a faithful testimony, that through obedience to the gospel taught by the saints she received her sight. I determined I would do likewise and receive the same blessing. I was baptized the following Sabbath, and on Monday could see to read anything I wished. Have been doing my sewing and house work ever since, and my health is much improved. I thank God for this wonderful blessing, and ask the prayers of the dear Saints, that I may be faithful to the end; for I know if I am I will receive a crown of eternal Your sister in Christ,

SARAH N. LAUGHERY.

Twin Creeks, Uintah Co., W. T. January 18th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-Thinking that a few lines from this part of the Lord's vineyard might not be uninteresting to your readers, I thought I would write a short letter descriptive of this part of the great West. This is a coal mining town, (or camp as it is called, and is situated on the line of the Oregon Short Line Railroad. The coal mines located here belong to the U. P. Railway Company, who are having quite a large quantity of coal mined, and are shipping it to points west of this. The wages paid to day laborers are from $2.25 to 2.50. Miners receive from fortyfive to seventy-five cents per ton according to the thickness of the coal. The coal fields here are very extensive. I am told by those who ought to know, that this coal belt is three miles in width, and extends north and south one hundred miles in length. This is a fine country for stock raising, but not good for farming, on account of its great altitude, it being about seven thousand feet above the level of the sea. The inhabitants of this part of the country will bear a favorable comparison with those of the best mining camps in the West. Of course there are a few roughs, whiskey drinkers and gamblers here; but I have this much to say in behalf of the citizens of Twin Creeks, they have treated me with all due respect.

Your readers would no doubt like to know if I have done anything for the Master's cause in this place. Not having authority to do much, of course I have not done a great deal, but I have tried to do my duty as an humble follower of our blessed Savior Jesus Christ; have bought tracts and books, and distributed them among the people; have done a good deal of fireside talking, and have agitated the subject of a Union Sunday School. In this my efforts have been crowned with success, for on Sunday, the 11th of January, 1885, a portion of the citizens of Twin Creeks met at the school house, the writer in the chair, and organized a Union Sunday School. The writer was chosen secretary of the Sunday School, and also appointed on a committee of two to visit the citizens of Twin Creeks for the purpose of soliciting money to buy Sunday School books, cards, etc. The citizens generously responded to the call, and we raised nearly twenty dollars. In conclusion I will say that the result of my labors here is three ready for baptism, and others investigating. And my prayer to God continually is, that he will send an elder here to preach and baptize those that are ready. Will Bro. Anthony, President of this Mission, come this way and preach for us, or send some one. Please do.

Ever your brother in the one faith,
A. J. LAYLAND.

Angus, Boone Co., Iowa. January 20th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—I love to read the pages of the Herald, as it gives to me an understanding how the work of God is winning its way. Since the first of October last there has been very little preaching done in this place, as we have been on strike for an advance of half cent per bushel. It has caused the people here to suffer to some extent; and I have been away most of the time, so there was no one here to hold meetings, of our faith. The beginning of this month they had a riot here, and two men were killed, and there are now eight men of the strikers in jail. On the 10th there was a mass meeting, when it was settled to go to work for a fourth of a cent advance.

Got home on the 17th, so on the 18th visited the saints; talked and prayed with them; found them anxious for meeting; found Sr. Wise bedfast. She has been sick for a number of years; she rejoiced in hope of a glorious resurrection, and to-day we paid the last tribute of respect till we meet again on the resurrection morn.

We have considerable opposition here, like all others, I suppose, but we are satisfied with the cause, and we are not ashamed of it, because we know it is of God. There are only seven of us here now, but we hope to see more added to our number; to that end we will labor. We find we have considerable to do to keep up with the work. There is no place for idle hands. We all have something to do. We ask an interest in the prayers of the saints that we may be able to stand. It is a noble work and is worthy of all that we can do to help it along.

Last summer we had a visit from Brn. White and Etzenhouser. We could not get a church to preach in, but we got the use of the lumber Yard. They did valiantly, and we were much encouraged. Would be glad to have any of the saints call and see us here. My desire is to see souls added to the church of God. I know that the work is true I ask an interest in the prayers of the saints, that I may be able to do some good in this place. Your brother in the one great cause, WM. THOMPSON.

HUBERT, Conecuh Co., Alabama, January 30th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:—I was at Paris Landing, Tennessee, when I wrote last. I continued my labors in Tennessee till the 8th of November. In company with Brn. Seaton and Griffin came to Bro. Turnbow's near Farmington, Ky., where we held some meetings, with fair attendance and good liberty. From this place we came to the Snow settlement, where I remained one week, the brethren returning home. I enjoyed the visit with father and mother Snow very much; held two services while with them.

On the 17th came to Fulton, Ky., where I held a series of five meetings; at the close I had the pleasure of baptizing Sr. Gardner, the daughter of Bro. Lewis Clapp. Since that time I have visited and labored at following named places: Lamberta, Baldwin county, Alabama, where I met Bro. and Sr. Cato, and had a pleasant time. At this meeting Bro. F. P. Scarcliff baptized four, in the beautiful waters of Mobile Bay.

From Lamberta Bro. and Sr. Cato, Bro Frank and the writer came to Mobile. Bro. Cato on his way home, and Bro. Frank and I to attend the Florida Conference, at Three Rivers, Mississippi. The action of the conference has been reported. We remained but a short time after conference; had some meetings in which we were greatly blessed with the spirit in presenting the reasons for our hope. We returned to Baldwin county, Alabama, where for want of means to defray traveling expenses I went to work with the labor of my hands to obtain the necessary funds to prosecute the work, thankful that our early training could be turned to so good use; and while doing the work continued to preach and labor with the Saints, and was blessed with the cheering influence of the Spirit.

On January 13th Bro. Frank and myself crossed the Perdido Bay, to Millview, Escambia county, Florida. We had sent an appointment, but it failed to reach them, so we had no meeting. We found some of the Saints sick with fevers, and seemingly without faith to be healed or to seek for such blessing, prefering to trust the power of medicine. We left them with feelings of sadness and pity. On the 14th we came to Milton, Santa Rosa county, where we were met by Bro. Jones, with team to convey us to his place, where we were kindly cared for. Here we again expected to speak, but no appointment had been made.

On the 17th at break of day we started for Cold Water, to attend the special conference of the Florida District, arriving at the appointed hour, weary with a twelve mile walk, we met not the smiling faces of the Saints in fond anticipation of a good meeting, but the sad and tearful faces of weeping relatives and mourning friends accompanying the earthly remains of Father West to their last resting place in the little church yard. We greeted the Saints as best we could. Bro.

Frank made some suitable remarks; sang one of the sweet and comforting songs of Zion, and went our way sad yet comforted in the thought of the sweet by and by. We met at night at father Kennedy's in conference. Bro. F. P. Scarcliff was called to the chair and a clerk appointed. The writer was chosen to take temporary charge of the district. Sunday we came together at the church, but it was too cold to stay; so after a brief talk, its chief merit being its brevity, the audience returned home, carrying with them appointments for a two days' meeting in each branch of the district. I desire the prayers of the church that the work done in this series of two days' meetings may result in so arousing the Saints in this district that men may be found that will rise up in the strength of the Lord and hold the fort against the enemy till Jesus comes in glory, or they pass from earth with their armor on.

On the 22d we came to Garland, Butler county, Alabama, expecting to attend the conference at Midway, but was hindered by a two days' rain. We were made welcome and comfortable by Bro. and Sr. John McPherson, may the good Lord ever bless them and lead them to the pearly gates of the holy city, I pray.

On Sunday the 25th, met a few of the Pleasant Hill Saints, Bro Frank occupied the hour. Yesterday Bro. Aaron Odom brought me to this place. On our arrival Bro. Harper mounted his horse and circulated an appointment; a few came out, and without any fire in the house stood the fire of the little Mormon gun, for an hour without flinching. There may be some fluttering at the third round however. From what I can learn the work in this district stands fair with the world, and if we could have the proper labor done at the right time a good work could be done. I go back to Florida next week to commence the series of two days' meetings.

In bonds I remain your brother in Christ,

« Geo. Montague.

Springport, Michigan, January 24th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith: - I feel to say with one of the saints of olden times; "How precious are thy thoughts unto me, O God; how great is the sum of them." But the enquiry naturally arises, Of what use is it to mention any of these thoughts to this ungodly generation? This enquiry is not made save in reference to my own individual effort. For I know the gospel must be preached whether men will hear or forbear. A ready answer to this question seems to be given in the parable of him who was blamed for not putting his Lord's money into the hands of the exchangers, instead of hiding it in a napkin. Counting your honor as one of those who might be considered in the light of "exchanger" I present a few thoughts.

In Paul's letter to the Hebrews, he charges them of ignorance of the first principles of the oracles of God. And from Paul's showing of this matter, he makes it evident that the power of the holy Melchisedec priesthood is the first grand principle in the gospel. And this same idea is fully embraced in the revelation in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, viz., "Without the holy priesthood and the ordinances thereof, the power of godliness is not manifest to men in the flesh." These two witnesses by the Apostle Paul, and the Prophet Joseph of this dispensation, agree in one; and fully demonstrate why it was in Paul's day that the Jews held on to a form of godliness, denying the power much as do the Gentile churches of the present time. It was then and is now, because of ignorance of the grand principles of the holy oracles of God. It may now be as well said of the Gentile churches as Paul said of the Jews; "Whereas for the time you ought to be teachers, ye have need that we teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God." The ministry of Christ are forbidden to teach except they have the Spirit. This, also, was so from the beginning. Herein the teachings of Joseph Smith and Jesus Christ agree together in one. Again, the disciples were commissioned to go into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. They were commanded to wait for their endowment, or "until they were endowed with power from on high." If Apollos had tarried until he was in like manner endowed, Aquilla and his wife would not have needed to teach him as they did, nor Paul to baptize his converts over again, as so many "dead works." But Apollos was honest, and was willing to be better informed, and came into the sheepfold. But his honesty with his eloquence did not make his office work as administered valid, so long as he knew only the baptism of John. For it could not be said of one of the authorized ministers of Christ at that period, that he knew not of the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Nor would he have left his hearers in ignorance of so great and glorious a promise, like as Apollos did. Is it not a wonder that so many learned divines can not look into this gospel glass and see what manner of persons they are? I say without fear of contradiction, that these twelve men were rebaptized in water, for no other reason than that the administrator had no more right to baptize than a modern Baptist or Methodist. My conclusion is, upon this point of gospel doctrine, that if one man is to be "bound hand and foot and cast out," for not having on the wedding garment; then every such man will be included in the number; and the number of the man will be "six hundred and sixty-six." "Here is wisdom: Let him count the number who has wisdom." My conclusion is made upon the ground of impartial justice in union with scriptural and philosophical facts. For instance, that baptism is for the remission of sins, John the Baptist affirms that it is "putting on Christ," all must admit. And if necessary to the membership, it is necessary in order to be a member of the body of Christ. Hence it follows as essential to salvation. It follows also that it is no less essential that the administrator should be sent of God, to make it valid or essential. Yours, J. S. C.

> BURLINGTON, Iowa, February 5th, 1885.

Dear Bro. Foseph:—My mind has been somewhat exercised upon the financial question, and I would like to tell my sisters the effect of some of my cogitations. I was glad to see in the last Herald that another sister, Lizzy M. Woodward, had been thinking to some purpose on the same subject, though she speaks more particularly of tithing. But since there are many who can not tithe themselves, but are desirous of doing what they can, I thought it might not be amiss to lay before them a plan which we have adopted, and feel that the Lord has blessed us greatly since we began it. As we are of the number who have no increase, that is, anything left over at the end of the year, being desirous of doing more if possible; at least more regularly for general church purposes than we were, a thought suggested itself to me, which, after consulting my husband, I resolved to carry out. It was this: That I would lay by out of all the money that I handled for household expenses, a small percentage, say two and one half per cent, which is five cents out of two dollars, or twenty-five cents out of every ten dollars. That seems a small amount does'nt it? And it is; but if we live in a town where we have to buy every thing we eat, we shall find that quite a number of ten dollars will be spent during the year; and if our necessary expenses are ten dollars a week, (of course we are not speaking of those who earn scarcely enough for a comfortable living), that will make a dollar a month twelve dollars a year. We would need to have saved up one hundred and twenty dollars to be tithed twelve dollars. But if we take five cents out of every two dollars before we use the rest, (and very few but can do that, if they have anything to spare) do you believe we will ever miss it much? And yet see what the aggregate would be, if all who could, would do that.

The Lord has said that we must make a covenant with Him by sacrifice—or that it is a day of sacrifice—a day of tithing—and if he gives us the ten dollars, can we not deny ourselves enough to return unto him so small a portion out of it? Otherwise, how can we be at all sure that we shall continue to have the means to live upon? Many think, O, I haven't enough to be tithed, and rest satisfied. But my faith is, that if we would lay by a portion for the Lord, little or much, that he would bless us to that extent. I believe he will add to our means more and more, the more we do for the work. I often wonder if we consider enough who gives us our means, and our good health; and whether if we were under such great obligations to any of our fellow men, we would dare to pay so little regard to their directions.

Now one query: If the cost of all the cigars and tobacco used by members of the church were put into the treasury of the Lord would it not heap it up quite a little? Let me see: I believe ten cents a week is considered quite moderate for any one who uses tobacco. Fifty two dimes a year; the tithe of fifty two dollars. But a dime a day would be very moderate for the cigar users I suppose. Three hundred and sixtyfive dimes a year. The tithe of three hundred and sixty-five dollars, or thirty-six dollars and a half a year. I wonder if many of the users of tobacco in either form, don't compel their families to some self-denial, in order that they may not indulge a vitiated taste. A dime a week would get at least four pairs of overshoes, or two pairs of shoes. I suppose it must be very hard to give up a habit that gets such a hold upon one; but I presume many would gladly give all that it costs to the church if they were once rid of it. I heard one brother say, that when he first joined the church, he asked help of the Lord to break off the use of tobacco; and he said he not only lost all taste for it, but it became disgusting to him. Our kind Father is still able and willing to help all those who can not help themselves.

Dear sisters, let us try if we can not do something to help on the cause, and let us all look to it, that we deny ourselves, so that we may not be among those who may be scourged so that we lose all, and possibly our lives as well.

In love your sister,
ALMA S. SELLON.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Feb. 6th.—Russia has recognized the International African Association, and yesterday signed the convention in regard to the proposed Congo Free State.

A courier from the British camp near Metemneh has arrived at Korti and reports that the rebels at Metemneh have become defiant since hearing of the fall of Khartoum. An attack on Gubat is expected at any moment. Gen. Wolseley will remain quiet pending further orders. He telegraphs that he will be unable to reach Khartoum in less than five weeks, when the hot season will have begun. He is still confident of his ability to attack Khartoum successfully and defeat the False Prophet, but he admits that the operations necessary to achieve this result will now be difficult, not to say hazardous. Col. Wilson is said to have had one man killed and five wounded while returning down the Nile from Khartoum. It is the general opinion in military circles in England that Gordon is dead.

At a meeting of the Cabinet in London Friday morning it was determined to send telegraphic orders to India for the dispatch of Indian troops to Suakin, and meanwhile to reinforce Suakin, by drafts from England and the Mediterranean. Ten thousand British troops at stations in the Mediterranean are available for service in the Soudan. The Middlesex Regiment, now at Dover, has been ordered to prepare for active service. It is believed that the Ministry will be glad to concede everything that Gen. Wolseley wishes in order to shift the responsibility from their shoulders to his.

Chicago Tribune: "Such a pressure is being brought to bear against Mormonism in Salt Lake City that the practice of polygamy is threatened with extinction. Dissensions in the Mormon Church are causing its gradual disintegration, and the young Mormons are trying to break away from ecclesiastical rule. A city of refuge is being established by the church near Guaymas, in Sonora."

Richard Short, who stabbed Capt. Phelan in O'Donovan-Rossa's office, was arraigned yesterday at the Tombs Police Court in New York. Phelan was present with his arm in a sling, and identified Short as his assailant. The latter was held in $3,000 bail.

A committee of exhibiters has been sent to Washington by the managers of the New Orleans Exposition to appeal to Congress for $500,000 in addition to the $1,000,000 already given. A Louisiana Congressman says that before any more money is granted there will be a thorough investigation of the manner in which the $1,000,000 was spent.

Feb. 8.—Twenty-seven Anarchists were arrested yesterday in Paris at a secret meeting.

It has been semi-officially announced in Rome that the Italian forces entered Massowah February 5th.

The fall of Khartoum is said to have seriously affected the Paris Bourse by upsetting the elaborate arrangements of the French bankers for the financial settlement of Egypt. The possible fall of the Gladstone Ministry, the probability that Italy will be drawn into the African war, the indefinite postponement of the settlement of Egyptian finances, all contribute to the uncertainty of the situation.

The English drummers, who have been heavily bitten by the depression in trade, are further exasperated by the competition of women, who for the first time in England now advertise and are advertised for as traveling agents for mercantile business.

The steamship Alaska, which has been for several days overdue, reached Fire Island, off New York, last night, with the steamer Lake Winnipeg from Liverpool in tow.

A gloomy statement has been prepared by the National Board of Health which is intended to call the attention of Congress to its duty of providing against the threatened epidemic of Asiatic cholera. The report shows that in every instance where the plague has become epidemic in Europe it has broken out in this country either the same year or the next year.

A distinguished Socialist of Chicago, said that there were 5,000 to 6,000 Anarchists in that city. These Anarchists, he averred, are not Socialists, but people who have broken up the Socialistic party there.

A party of Mormons arrived at the Palmer House, Chicago, to-day, on a general tour of the East. Regarding the Edmunds bill, they said a very bitter feeling was being developed. It was impossible for Mormons to get a fair trial under it, and many business-men were leaving the Territory, causing a general stagnation in business, but the people were not to be driven away. They would stay and fight it out, but there seemed no hope of the repeal of the law. It was claimed that great hardships arose from the raking up of offenses committed long ago, by which several Mormons had been convicted. It was believed, the visitors said, that an amnesty bill for offenses committed before the passage of the Edmunds bill will be passed by Congress, which would do away with the chief of Mormon grlevances just now. In general, however, it was confessed that the future gave no encouragement, and they were inclined to feel despondent over the outlook.

Feb. 9.—Cunningham and Burton, the alleged dynamite fiends, were arraigned at the Bow Street Police Court in London. The Crown Solicitor opened the case by announcing the withdrawl of the charge of conspiracy and the substitution of that of high treason and felony against both prisoners. He said it would be proved that the headquarters of the conspiracy were in America.

Orders have been issued by the British War Office for the dispatch of 8,000 men to Egypt. Nine battalions will be sent at once to Gen. Wolseley. They will proceed to Suakin and endeavor to open the route between Suakin and Berber with a view to effecting a junction between the British forces on the Nile above and below Berber. Great activity prevails at Chatham, Woolwich, and Aldershot. A naval demonstration in the Red Sea, to co-operate with the land movement, has been arranged, and several British men-of-war are to be sent thither at once.

The Cabinet is said to have decided that the defeat of El Mahdi is necessary to restore England's prestige.

Lord Wolseley telegraphed the War Office today, from Korti, that the advance guard of Gen. Earle's column, consisting of a squardron of cavalry under command of Col. Butler, had surprised a large body of the Monassir tribe under Wadgam, who murdered Col. Stewart, encamped at Shakoob Wells. The cavalry charged on the encampment of the enemy, who fled in every direction, leaving behind twenty men killed, a large number of camels, cattle, and many Remington rifles. Col. Butler captured six prisoners.

Gen. Briere de l'Isle telegraphs the Government as follows: "Friday and Saturday we destroyed five forts belonging to the Chinese. The enemy had evacuated them without fighting. In the forts we found immense stores of provisions, gunpowder, and other ammunition. We reconnoitered twelve kilometers and found the Chinese retreating hastily towards Langson. Our losses during the engagements were twenty-one killed and 162 wounded.

The blizzard which has been sweeping through the Northwest during the last thirty-six hours is one of the wildest storms experienced in this region for years. The railroads are blockaded everywhere, and many trains have been abandonin the snow-drifts. The weather has been especially fierce through all the Lower Lake region from Chicago to Buffalo. From the extreme Northwest a frigid wave is spreading. Business has been almost at a stand still.

Chicago Tribune: The "Anarchists," as the latest organizations of the "red" Communists in this country call themselves, go a good deal further than the Socialists of Germany, England, and the United States, or the Nihilists of Russia. The Nihilists are making war on the political despotism of Russia, and the Socialists claim to be hostile to some of the industrial institutions and laws of society, which they desire to "reform" by legal means. But the Anarchists, as their name implies, threaten with destruction the whole fabric of society. They do not ask for reforms of any kind; they simply threaten annihilation of life and property. They do not pretend to any mission for helping any portion of mankind; they merely propose to kill, blow up, and burn down, Universal desolation seems to be their objective point.

The Mormon newspapers having called on the officials to stop the prosecutions for polygamy until the United States Supreme Court could pass on the appeals that have been taken, and having requested the business-men to demand that this be done in the interest of trade, The (Salt Lake City) Tribune correspondent to-day interviewed a large number of the prominent business-men of Salt Lake City. Following are specimens of the answers:

"Never mind business: enforce the law."

"It is better the law should be enforced now than ten years hence."

"The Territory has suffered much from this perpetual agitation, which will never cease until the Mormons become law-abiding and, as a church, abandon politics."

"The Mormon priesthood sets up the standard of infallibility; so does the Government. The two are in conflict; the weaker must yield."

"Business reasons are no reasons at all why the laws should not be enforced."

"When the Reynolds case was before the courts they told us it was to test the constitutionality of the law. It was tested, but not to their satisfaction, and they have since been trying to reverse the Supreme Court. It is time they were halted."

"It would come with better grace if the Church organs would call a halt to their own people. They are the fellows who should halt. 'The Government has been 'halting' and 'limping' in this Mormon business long enough."

To-day it is whispered about that John Taylor, President of the Church, has left the city. His two counselors, Joseph F. Smith and George Q. Cannon, are also absent. Wilford Woodruff, President of the Twelve Apostles, is also missing. No such mysterious scattering of the leaders was ever known here before. The grand jury reported to-day, making ten indictments in a week under the United States statutes. All, it is supposed, are for polygamy.

Feb. 10th.—Beresford has returned safely to Gubat, bringing with him Col. Wilson and his party, who were stranded on an island in the Nile while returning from Khartoum. Some difficulty was experienced in rescuing the voyagers, the rebels on the banks keeping up a constant fire. Col. Wilson, upon arriving at Gubat, started for Korti and reported there to Gen Wolseley concerning his reconnaissance of Khartom.

Orders have been issued to the Italian troops recently landed at Massowah to cooperate with the English in the Soudan by marching into the interior and relieving the garrisons at Kassala and Senhi. If this movement is successfully accomplished a line of communication will be opened from the coast to Khartoum parallel with the route from Suakin to Berber. It is said that Italy has offered to occupy Cairo, Alexandria, and Suez in order to enable the British troops to proceed at once to the frontier.

A complete change of front has been made by the Liberal party in England, and Whigs and Radicals alike are outjingoing the jingoes. They advocate the most aggressive operations, even to a war of extermination against the Mahdi. Several criticisms are made upon the manner of selecting the troops for the Soudan. The cream of the British army has been skimmed off, and it is said that should any emergency arise not 5,000 men fit for active service could be placed in the field. The present condition of the British army is compared with that of the French forces just before the Franco-Prussian war. Scores of volunteer regiments have asked to be employed in active service, and it has been decided to call out a reserve force of 10,000 militia to take the place of regulars for garrison duty in England.

Chicago Tribune: "The winter of 1884-'85 is remarkable not alone for its general weather, but for its varieties. The Manitoba waves and the areas of low thermometer have given us different aspects every week, but none more remarkable than the display of the last two days. Two storms seem to have started from the same general point and to have traveled from the same general direction. One swept through Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, Northeastern Iowa, Southern Wisconsin, Northern Illinois, and Southern Michigan, and was in the nature of a violent blizzard of wind and snow, followed by a degree of cold which in Chicago showed a drop from 20° above to 20° below. The other storm was marked by astonishing electric displays, and traveled more to the south of us, being heard of in Southern Illinois, and Indiana, and in Northern Kentucky, both storms, however, being followed by a corresponding drop in temperature. As far south as Jackson, Miss., the mercury fell from 70° to 32°. The same general characteristics attended the Northern storm, a fierce wind and blinding snow, with the thermometer ranging from 14° to 20° below zero in the extreme Western regions and the mercury dropping as the storm advanced. The Southern storm was one of rain, hail and sleet, accompanied by heavy thunder and vivid lightning, which also appeared in the snow storm in some places further north, as sharp lightning occurred at Paxton, Decatur, Jacksonville, Centralia, and even as far north as Kankakee in Illinois, and Elkhart in Indiana. In same places the display was phenomenal. At more than one place the red sky appeared nearly all night, and at Louisville dense blackness yesterday rendered it almost as dark as at midnight. The accompaniment of thunder and lightning was so terrific that many thought the last day had come, while a unique addendum was attached to the display in a shower of small fish, which indicated a water-spout on the Ohio."

Certainly this is a conglomeration which leads one to inquire with some trepidation what is going on deep down in the bowels of the earth and way up in the air above us that creates such a disturbance in the elements and such a mixing up of the ordinary peaceful conditions. Is the seventh vial to be unloosed? Is the world passing through some mighty cataclysm not yet fully developed and having dire horrors yet to be loosed before our equilibrium is restored? Will not the weather prophets and the physical scientists tell us what these earthquakes, cyclones, tidal waves, volcanic outbursts, upheavals, red skies, and thermometrical extremes mean and what has broken loose in the upper air that we can not have a Manitoba blizzard without its being resonant with thunder and illuminated with lightning? Where is the signal service and what is it doing? What did it mean Sunday last by prophesying light snow?"

Cols. Wilson and Wortly, with the expedition to Khartoum, arrived at Korti to-day. They made the journey from Gubat in four days. They bring news of Gen. Gordon's death. One of the Pashas among Gen. Gordon's forces marched the garrison to the side of the town nearest Omdurman, saying a rebel attack was expected at that point. Meantime another traitorous Pasha opened the gates at the other end and allowed El Mahdi's troops to enter, and they easily captured the town. Gen. Gordon was stabbed while leaving the Government house.

Gorsuch, the Chicago Anarchist who has been at Cleveland, Ohio, organizing Communistic societies, will go East on the same mission. His first stop will be at Pittsburg. He met with good success at Cleveland.

During the worst of the storm last night the angry waters of Lake Michigan swept across the bleak patch of land at the mouth of the Mllwaukee River known as Jones' Island, threatening the lives of its two hundred inhabitants. No fires could be kept up, and many were almost crazed with fear and suffering. The people took to the upper stories of the highest buildings for safety. Some tried to cross over to the mainland upon the ice, but were driven back. Toward morning the wind and waves subsided.

Royal B. Young, whose examination before a commission for polygamy made a great stir a short time back, was to-day arrested on indictment for polygamy and unlawful cohabitation at Salt Lake City, U. His bail was fixed at $3,500. Agnes McMurrin, his presumed latest plural wife, was also arrested to-day on an indictment for prejury in swearing that their marriage was in 1881 instead of 1883, the object being to plead the statute of limitations. Her bail was fixed also at $3,500.

In a case on a mortgage to day Judge Zane overruled the interpleader of the wife of the mortgageor, setting up that she had not signed the mortgage and that the property was the homestead of herself and her five children, though in her husband's name. In ruling against her the Judge said the statutes of Utah had apparently been systematically framed with a view of depriving wives of any standing in the courts.

The House passed the bill to prevent cattleranchers of the Far West from inclosing tracts of public lands with barbed-wire fences. The bill had previously passed the Senate, the House adding some amendments.

Twenty per cent of the suspended coke-ovens connected with the Pittsburg iron interests are to be fired up at once, giving employment to thousands of men who have been in idleness. It is said that all of the 10,000 coke-ovens of that district will be in full blast by the first of March.

The New Orleans Exposition Commissioners applied to the House Committee on Appropriations yesterday for an additional appropriation of $500,000. The matter will be considered to-day. Feb. 11.—Newspapers in Turkey have been forbidden to publish news from the Soudan or to make comments upon the situation there.

El Mahdi's Minister of War is said to be M. Veret, who was formerly a Captain in the French army. He it was who taught the Arabs how to break squares in battle.

Gen. Lord Wolseley telegraphs that scouts sent to Khartoum have returned. They confirm the report of the killing of Gordon and the massacre of his followers. Troops have already sailed from Gibraltar to reinforce the army in the Soudan. The project of building a narrow-gage railway between Suakin and Berber has been revived. Several firms of engineers and contractors have offered to construct the road. Some of them promise to build a single track, with sidings, water tanks, and stations, and an average speed of twenty miles per day.

A most unusual spectacle was visible in Rochester, Minn., to-day. Two "sun-dogs" appeared on either side of the sun at eight o'clock this morning, connected by a bright, luminous band extending around the entire horizon at a hight of about. 40°. Three other bright spots were visible in the northern and western sky. In the zenith was a crescent displaying all the colors of the rainbow, and around the sun was a circle of wonderful brilliancy, which seemed to shoot out jets of light. The phenomenon continued until about eleven a. m.

Angus M. Cannon appeared in court to-day at Salt Lake City, U., to answer an indictment charging him with polygamous practices with more than one woman between June 1, 1882, and Feb. 1, 1885. His bail was fixed at $2,000.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: "Cool rains the last week had a favorable influence on the crops.

They solidified the ground and the roots of the wheat. Rains prevented thrashing, which reduced farmers' deliverances. Sales of the week. 67,-913 quarters at 33s 9d, against 48,302 quarters at 47s 3d the corresponding week last year. The markets continue slow, with declining values, in the provinces. Prices are a shilling lower for English wheat, and cheaper for any foreign equivalent. The receipts of wheat were moderate and of flour heavy, altogether equal to 76,644 quarters of wheat. Flour therefore declined: 6d@1s. Mixed American maize sold in London at 22s 6d, ex-ship, while rubbish from Morrocco and other inferior round corn fetched 26@27s. Three cargoes arrived off-coast, five were withdrawn, and one Australian remains. Wheat to arrive is in small inquiry, but prices are hardening. Barleys are very slow. Oats are firm but quiet Beans and peas are unchanged.

Chicago elevators contained, February 7th, 14,875,550 bushels of wheat, 1,485,394 bushels of corn, 540,056 bushels of oats, 109,384 bushels of rye, and 125,723 bushels of barley. Total, 17,-136,107 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 21,601,299 bushels a year ago. During last week our stock increased 238,665 bushels, including an Increase of 166,812 bushels of wheat and 12,526 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 48,090,797 bushels of wheat, 5,311,573 bushels of corn, 2,447,904 bushels of oats, 354,304 bushels of rye, and 1,467,339 bushels of barley. These figures are larger than a week ago by 177,446 in wheat and 344,605 in corn.

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

Feb. 8.—An express train between Sidney, New South Wales, and Wagga Wagga broke through a bridge over a creek. Forty passengers were killed.

A Philadelphia express-train on the Reading Railroad was wrecked at Greenville, N. J. More than a third of the seventy passengers on board were injured.

The gunpowder works of Fatshan, fourteen miles from Canton, China, exploded Dec. 22d killing 250 employes.

Three boilers of the Firmenich Starch-Works at Peoria, Ill., exploded this evening. They were carried out on the prairie nearly 600 yards. There is little doubt that the fireman and the watchman were both in the building at the time and that they met their death. The fireman's name is Joseph Doolittle and that of the watchman John Byers. Both are married men and have families. Shortly after the explosion the ruins of the starch-works took fire, but by the efforts of the firemen and the large crowd which had gathered by this time the blaze was extinguished. The works are almost completely wrecked. When they were in operation they employed about 100 men.

At 3:30 this afternoon the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy train No. 3, going west, jumped the track as it was approaching a bridge over a little stream ten miles west of Creston, Iowa. The train consisted of one baggage-car, one mail-car, two day passenger-coaches, and a sleeper. The accident was due to a broken rail. The baggage car first left the track. After bumping along on the ties till it came to the bridge it went down, carrying with it the two day coaches and the sleeping-car with twenty to twenty-five passengers. The following persons were killed:

Mrs. Powell of New Albany, Ind. Mrs. W. C. Carroll of Sangache, Colo. Robert Brown of Mt. Pleasant, Ia., and one or two more whose names I have been unable to ascertain. The following were injured: J. R. Hawkins, conductor, and S. I. Lindsey of Creston. Isaiah Waterman, Corning, Ia. W. J. Davenport, Burlington, Ia. Mrs. H. Day, Burlington, Ia.

Feb. 9.—Further reports from Creston, Ia., show the casualties resulting from the railroad accident near that place to have been more numerous than was at first thought. Six of the injured have died and others are not likely to recover.

Five workmen employed in repairing a bridge over the Susquehanna River at Havre de Grace, Md., were thrown down fifty feet upon the ice by the breaking of a scaffold. All went through the ice into the river. Two were drowned and the others were rescued in a precarious condition.

Feb. 10.—Later reports from the railroad accident near Creston, Ia., on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad show the casualties to be greater than at first expected. It is feared that the number of deaths by the accident and by exposure and wounds will reach sixteen. Mr. W. J. Davenport, General Passenger Agent of the Burlington, will probably die, as both legs are cut off above the knees.

Four men were killed outright and twenty wounded at Brazil, Ind., by the explosion of a boiler in the Central Iron and Steel Works. Two of the wounded men died soon after, and several others are not expected to live.

Advices from Lake Simon, Que., report that a camp situated six miles from that place was burned last Sunday. Four men were burned to death

THE WANDERING JEW.

INTERESTING SKETCH OF THE ORIGIN AND GROWTH OF THE FAMOUS LEGEND.

(Prof. Robertson, in Glasgow University Review.) The earliest mention of the legend in literature. so far as known at present, is not until the comparatively late date of 1237. It occurs in the "Floros Historiarium" of Roger of Wendover, a monk of St. Albans. His book was incorporated verbally in the more extended chronicle of Matthew Paris. Their account is to the following effect: In the year 128 an Armenian archbishop, in the course of a pilgrimage through Europe to visit the relics and holy places, came to England and was received by the abbot and monks of St. Albans with great respect. He asked many questions regarding the rites and customs of this country, and was in turn questioned about those of his own land. Among other things he was asked regarding the famous Joseph, so much talked of among the people, who had been present at our Lord's passion, and still lived as a witness to the truth of the Christian faith. Whereupon one of the archbishop's retinue, acting as interpreter, related in french that the archbishop knew the man well, and had entertained him at his own table a short time before setting out on his journey. Being further questioned he related the man's history as follows: Joseph, whose original name was Cartaphilus, was doorkeeper of the Praetorium at the time of the crucifixion. When Jesus was being led away to execution he struck Him a blow on the back, saying: "Vade, Jesu, cituis vade, quid moraris?" And

Jesus, looking at him sternly, said: "Ego vado, et expectatais honic veniam." Thus he had lived on, and had been baptized by the name of Joseph, by the same Ananias who baptized St Paul. Whenever he reaches the age of 100 he sickens for a time and again returns to the age of 30, as he was at the time of the passion. He lives for the most part in Armenia and adjacent countries, associates with bishops and holy men, speaks little unless when spoken to, and always with the utmost gravity, as one who in tears and fears awaits the second coming of Christ, placing all his hope of salvation on the Savior's prayer. "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Such is the earliest mention in literature of the legend. It is here spoken of as a matter much talked about among the people; but no one has yet discovered any counterpart in the ancient literatures of the East from which the medieval stock of legend was largely increased. Subsequent to this account, which was written about 1237, we have repeated mention of the legend in French and Italian literature. In a book published in the seventeenth century, giving a narrative of a Portuguese expedition made in the year 1484, we have a striking variation of the legend. It is related that at Jerusalem a man was imprisoned who had been an eye witness to the crucifixion. For the present of a few ducats the keeper of the dungeon opened the last of the nine doors within which the man was confined, and travellers saw him. His prison was a dungeon supported on four pillars. He was quite naked, his body covered with long hair, and his name Jan Roduyn. It was related of him that he stood on his doorstep as Jesus was led to Golgotha, and said: "Forward, forward! you have been too long in going this way," and that Jesus replied: "I will go, but you must remain until I return." How he came to be imprisoned in the dungeon is not stated; but it is said that he maintained a deep silence, only asking on every Good Friday: "Is the man with the cross not coming?"

In the beginning of the seventeenth century the legend appears in Germany. Neither Luther nor Hans Sachs, however, seems to have known it. It was in this country (Germany) that the legend received the form in which it has been taken up by poets and novelists. In 1602 an anonymous work appeared entitled "A short description of a Jew named Ahasuerus, who was personally present at the crucifixion of Christ."

The substance of this story is as follows: "Paul von Eitzen, when a student at Wittenberg, went in the winter of 1542 to visit his parents at Hamburg. He was there struck by the appearance of a man whom he saw in church. The man appeared to be about 50 years of age, was barefooted and scantily clad, with hair flowing over his shoulders. He stood over against the pulpit, so absorbed in devotion that he was not seen to move except when the name of Christ was mentioned, and then he bowed, sighed deeply, and beat his breast. Paul was told that he had been in the place for some weeks, that he described himself as a native of Jerusalem, a shoemaker, Ahasuerus by name, that he had been present at the crucifixion and had since wandered over many lands; the truth of all which, it is added with charming simplicity, he confirmed by relating many incidents which are not mentioned by the Evangelists or historians. Having his curiosity excited, the student sought an interview with the stranger, and learned from his own mouth his remarkable history. He lived in Jerusalem at the time of Jesus, whom he ignorantly regarded as a heretic and deceiver. He had shouted with the multitude 'Crucify him,' 'Not this man, but Barabbas;' and when at last the sentence of death was pronounced he had hurried home to tell his household the news. His house was situated in the street through which the procession would pass, and he stood on his doorstep with his child in his arms to see the heretic led to death. When Jesus reached the house he leaned for a little on the wall, whereupon the Jew in angry tones ordered him to move forward. Jesus then, fixedly regarding him, said, 'I will stand and rest, but thou shalt go.' The Jew then set down his child, and, driven by some impulse, followed the crowd to the place of execution. Thereafter, driven by the same impulse, he found he could not return home, but went forth a wanderer into distant lands. Centuries afterward he visited Jerusalem, but could scarcely recognize the place.

What the purpose of God was in leaving him so long in this miserable life, whether to be a witness to the godless and unbelieving, he knew not; he could only endure till God gave him release." The writer then goes on to tell how Paul von Eitzen and others examined him in history, and found him so well informed about all that had taken place since the crucifixion that they could not sufficiently marvel. The simple mode of life, silent manner and grave deportment of the Jew are then described. He was never seen to smile, but shuddered at the utterance of any profane remark; never accepted in alms more than two shillings, which he immediately distributed among the poor; and in whatever country he appeared, he spoke its language like a native. Many came from various lands to see him, for he made considerable stay at Hamburg; and, finally, the soles of his feet were measured and found to be two finger breadths in thickness, and as hard as horn. Such is the history of this extraordinary legend, second only in popularity, to the Faust legend. Goethe, it is well known, meditated a poem on the subject, but abandoned it for Faust. "The remarkable thing is," remarks the writer, in conclusion, "that it should have not only survived as a literary product, but retained its hold as a part of religious belief. To the present day, copies of the story are sold by the thousand in France, and, in the houses of the peasantry. pictures of the Wandering Jew and the First

REJOINDER TO BRO. Z. H. GURLEY.

We wish the reader to bear in mind that the only object we have in replying to Bro. Gurley's articles in Herald of late, is to point out his hurtful mistakes, and to vindicate the truth and wisdom of the authentic revelations given to the church by Joseph the Seer. Personally, Elder Gurley and the writer are warm triends, and whatever the latter may write, it is intended to be purely in the interest of truth and righteousness.

The gravity of Bro. Gurley's position in denying the wisdom and divinity of some of the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants, published in the lifetime of the Seer, and accepted formally by the ministry and membership up to 1844, and later, all will see who read and reflect on these matters. It is a serious thing to question and oppose a "thus saith the Lord" to the church, when it comes through one of whom God says:—"He shall be a choice Seer;" "he shall be esteemed highly among the fruit of thy loins." [Joseph of Egypt.] And further:—"I will make him great in mine eyes; for he shall do my work. And he shall be great like unto Moses, . . and unto him will I give power to bring forth my word unto the seed of thy loins; and not to the bringing forth of my word only. saith the Lord, but to the convincing them of my word which shall have already gone forth among them. . . . And out of weakness he shall be made strong, in that day, when my work shall commence among all my people, unto the restoring thee, O house of Israel."-2 Nephi 2:2.

Of the Seer's authority and power it is further said:—"For in that day, [the time when the Book of Mormon came forth, and the gospel was restored], for my [Christ's] sake shall the Father work a work which shall be a great and marvellous work among them [the Gentiles]; and there shall be among them who will not believe it, although a man [the "choice Seer"] shall declare it unto them. But behold, the life of my servant shall be in my [Christ's] hand; therefore, they shall not hurt him, although he shall be marred because of them. Yet I will heal him, for I will shew unto them that my wisdom is greater than the cunning of the Devil. Therefore, it shall come to pass that whosoever will not believe in my words, who am Jesus Christ, whom the Father shall cause him [the Seer] to bring forth unto the Gentiles, and shall give unto him power that he shall bring them forth unto the Gentiles (it shall be done even as Moses said), they shall be cut off from among my people who are of the covenant."

—Book of Nephi 9:11, 12.

Here is heaven's endorsement of Joseph the Seer as Christ's servant; here are the divine certificates, the heavenly testimonials of the "choice Seer's" appointment, approval, and authority, to open, organize, and build up the "great and marvellous work" of God in this dispensation; and so long as we believe the testimony of the Book of Mormon, we are bound to believe that Joseph the Seer was the chosen servant of God to bring forth the words of Christ to both Israel and the Gentiles; that he was and is "great" in the eyes of God; that he is and will be "highly esteemed" by God's Israel; and that those who disbelieve in the words of Christ which "he shall bring forth unto the Gentiles" will be "cut off" from God's people "of the covenant."

Now, in view of these facts, all should beware, lest when they either resist, oppose, revile, ridicule, treat lightly, or in any way cast doubt upon the revelations given in a regular way to the church by Joseph the Seer, they be found fighting against God. It was always a grave and perilous undertaking to either oppose or in any way trifle with a "thus saith the Lord" of God's accredited prophets. Christ says of those he sends:—"He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me."

Christ says of the "choice Seer:" "The life of my servant shall be in my hands," (Book of Nephi 9:11), from which we may infer that so long as "life" was given the Seer he continued to be Christ's minister,—that, ministerially, he was not from 1827 to 1844 giving revelations alternately form God, the Devil, or his own heart; but that, as a seer, prophet, and revelator, he would be in the hands of Christ. All this enables us to see the propriety and truthfulness of the revelation which Elder Gurley says in effect, he never did believe, which reads:—

"Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith; for by doing these things, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea, and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you, and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory. For thus saith the Lord God, him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good; and his diligence I know, and his prayers I have heard; yea, his weeping for Zion I have seen, and I will cause that he shall mourn for her no longer, for his days of rejoicing are come unto the remission of his sins, and the manifestations of my blessings upon his works. For behold, I will bless all those who labor in my vineyard, with a mighty blessing, and they shall believe on his words, which are given through me, by the Comforter, which manifesteth that Jesus was crucified by sinful men for the sins of the world; yea, for the remission of sins unto the contrite heart."

God will take care of his duly accredited prophets, and it is neither wise nor safe to disgrace, degrade, or reject them.

Moses and Aaron sinned against God to that extent that both died on account thereof; (Num. 20:24; 27:14. Deut. 32:50,51); yet neither prophet, apostle, nor Christ, ever questioned the truth of Moses' revelations and prophecies; but they always honored and maintained them. David the Psalmist said his sins and iniquities were more than "the hairs" of his head; (Ps.40: 12); but neither the prophets, Christ nor any of his faithful ministry doubted or decried his revelations and prophecies—they honored, endorsed, and taught them. And why will persons assume to despise and oppose the authentic revelations of God's "choice Seer" who was "great like unto Moses," especially when they profess to believe in the divine character of the book in which the exalted calling and mission of that Seer is so fully and plainly stated? While the writer continues to believe in the divinity of the Book of Mormon, he is bound to believe in the revelations which the "choice Seer" gave to the church, even though he may not fully comprehend them all. Christ's apostles, for a season, did not fully understand the Scriptures. they believed in Luke 24:45. Peter did. not understand Christ's commands to him. (Matt. 28: 19), nor the Scriptures which promised salvation to the Gentiles, (Hosea 2:23, with Rom. 9:24, etc.), till Christ in a marvellous way, revealed the facts to him, (Acts 10: 1-48): But we don't read. that he disbelieved, opposed, or denounced what he had misunderstood or mis-applied. He waited for the light, and was wise in that respect. When persons view the work of the "choice Seer" with a faith tainted with the base calumnies heaped upon him by apostates and bitter anti-Mormons; or under the delusive and misleading opinions of half-informed and half-hearted ministers and members; or with minds prejudiced by "old wives' tables;" or with hearts warped and biased by a love of worldly honor, place, and wealth; or with minds corrupted with pride, self-conceit and selflove, they are sure to mislead both themselves and others, when others will follow them.

When we have God's estimate and endorsement of the ministerial character and qualities of his appointed messenger to the nations, as is so clearly and fully set forth touching Joseph the Seer, it becomes us to pause, humbly, and examine well the causes, real or supposed, which prompt us to reject or invalidate his work done in purview of the callings and gifts of God to him.

The Lord commands all, saying, "Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm."—Ps. 105: 15. And of Joseph the Seer he says,—"Behold, that seer will the Lord bless; and they that seek to destroy him shall be confounded."-2 Nephi 2: 3. Whoever will trace with care the pathway of the church from 1830 till now will find it strewn with the wrecks of ministers who ridiculed, disregarded, or violated the revelations the Seer gave to the church. All such persons as have taken a course which would, if successful, destroy the Seeric—the inspirational—character of the "choice Seer," have been brought down and been "confounded." Such parties have lost the faith, lost the light of God, lost power, lost influence for good, lost place, lost the favor of God and man; and they greatly imperil their own souls,

Let no one think the writer is averse to critical investigation and discussion; they are right and proper when proper times and occasions offer. But they should never be had when they will result in digging a pit into which the unstable and unlearned are likely to fall. And when any person undertakes to criticise and oppose so great a seer as was Joseph, and to decry any part of the "marvellous work" committed to his care, they should be certain, (1) they are equal to that task; (2), that they have authority to do so from the same God who appointed the Seer and his work; and, (3), that in heart, and spirit, and mind, they are well fitted and qualified for such a high and important work. For if it is found they, themselves, are full of errors and evils of either mind or heart, they must blame no one but themselves if their own works cover them with confusion, or worse.

It is unfortunate for the reputation of Elder Gurley as a critic, that in the very outstart of his article, when treating of Melchisedec he makes him to be the king of Sodom! Any well informed Sunday School scholar knows better. Melchizedec was king of Salem, which afterwards was known as Jeru-Salem. Ps. 76: 2. But God destroyed Sodom, with all that region of country, (Gen. 19: 24-29), and the Dead Sea now marks the spot where they once were. Josephus, Ant. Jews, B. 7, ch. 3, says of Jerusalem; "Under our forefather Abraham it was called Salem, or Solyma." And in Wars of the Yews, Book 6, ch. 10, he says further of Jerusalem,-"But he who first built it was a potent man among the Canaanites, and is in our tongue called Melchisedec, the Righteous King, for such he truly was on which account he was there the first priest of God, and first built a temple there, and called the city Jerusalem, which was formerly called Salem." Besides all this, "Bera" was the "King of Sodom, (Gen. 14:2), and not Melchisedec. But Elder Gurley is no more in error in this matter than in others we shall notice.

God does not detest kings, as such. It is wicked kings that he dislikes. In proof we cite the fact that God has ordained that Christ shall be king; (Ps. 2:6; Zech. 14:9; John 18:37); Moses was King, (Deut. 33:5), and no where is he denounced as such either by God or his servants.

The Saints hope to become kings and priests unto God; (Rev. 5: 10); though they are commanded that, "In time ye shall have no king." (Doc. Cov. 38: 5). Melchisedec was a "righteous king," and Josephus says it was because of this that he became in Salem "the first priest of God, and first build a temple there."

We did say, and we repeat it, that Melchisedec was the priestly representative of Christ; that his priesthood was after the order of the Son of God; and that when ministering under this priesthood, by virtue thereof, (and not because of his kingly authority, as claimed by Elder Gurley), he received tithes of Abraham. Paul uses this historical fact to show the Hebrew Saints that there was a higher than the Levitical priesthood—he cites them to the significant fact that their father Abraham, before Levi was born paid to the priest of God, (not king), Melchisedec, "tithes of all," by which fact he proves the superiority of Melchisedec's priesthood over the Levitical. Our "argument," as Elder Gurley calls it, was and is, that the principle of tithing was really an ordinance belonging to, and ministered under, the priesthood of Melchisedec-the gospel priesthood—and in proof we cited the fact that both Melchisedec and Christ approved and received tithes.

Elder Gurley denies that Abraham paid tithes to Melchisedec, except in the matter of "the spoils, which they had captured in battle;" and says further that "It was the practice under the kingly order and admissable at that period, in which Melchisedec reigned, is quite evident." * * * "Abraham recognized the king's right in this regard."

Here Elder Gurley reasons again from his false premise that Melchisedec was the King of Sodom, and then mixes matters so as to make Melchisedec to say to Abraham, "Give me the persons, and take the goods to thyself;" whereas this was Bera, King of Sodom, whose "persons," and "goods," with other "spoils," had been recaptured by Abraham and his fellows. His false theories lead him into hurtful misinterpretations. Paul, as we have seen, says Melchisedec, in his priestly order received tithes, and that to him "Abraham: gave a tenth part of all;" (Heb,7:2); and in verse four he says Abraham gave him also "the tenth of the spoils." The historical facts found in Gen 14: 18-20, confirm the idea that Abraham paid "tithes of all" he possessed, and not of "the spoils" only. But to forever set this matter at rest with those who believe in the divine claims of the Book of Mormon, we quote the teachings of the great Alma, chapter 10: 1, 2.

"Now as I said concerning the holy order of this high priesthood: there were many who wereordained and became high priests of God; and it was on account of their exceeding faith and repentance, and their righteousness before God, they choosing to repent and work righteousness, rather than to perish; therefore they were called after this holy order, and were sanctified, and their garments were washed white, through the blood of the Lamb. Now they, after being sanctified by the Holy Ghost, having their garments made white, being pure and spotless before God, could not look upon sin, save it were with abhorrence; and there were many, exceedingly great many, who were made pure, and entered into the rest of the Lord their God. And now, my brethren, I would that ye should humble yourselves before God, and bring forth fruit meet for repentance, that ye may also enter into that rest; yea, humble yourselves even as the people in the days of Melchisedec, who was also a high priest after this same order which I have spoken, who also took upon him the high priesthood forever. And it was this same Melchisedec to whom Abraham paid tithes: yea, even our father Abraham paid tithes of one tenth part of all that he posessed. Now these ordinances were given after this manner, that thereby the people might look forward on the son of God, it being a type of his order, or it being his order; and this, that they might look forward to him for a remission of their sins, that they might enter into the rest of the Lord.

"Now this Melchisedec was a king over the land of Salem; and his people had waxed strong in iniquity and abominations; yea, they had all gone astray: they were full of all maner of wickedness; but Melchisedec having exercised mighty faith, and received the office of the high priesthood, according to the holy order of God, did preach repentance unto his people. And behold, they did repent; and Melchisedec did establish peace in the land in his days; therefore he was called the prince of peace, for he was the king of Salem; and he did reign under his father. Now there were many before him, and also there were many afterwards, but none were greater; therefore of him they have more particularly made mention. Now I need not rehearse the matter; what I have said, may suffice. Behold, the scriptures are before you; if ye will wrest them it shall be to your own destruction."

By this time Elder Gurley must see that something has wofully deceived and misled him in regard to tithing, for it is easy to see that his statements and interpretations are contrary to the teachings of both the Bible and Book of Mormon. These books plainly teach as we have shown that the "ordinance" of tithing was administered by the Melchisedec priesthood, and that it belonged to that "order." It is true the specific methods by which it was executed are not so clearly stated; vet in the Bible translated and corrected by the "choice Seer" they are made much plainer than in other versions; and with this agrees the revelation of 1838, in essential points.

Bro. Gurley thinks it unchristian to ask the Saints to pay their "surplus property," (when the Saints are gathered to Zion and "the Stakes of Zion"), and after that to pay "one tenth of all their interest annuallv." Let me ask, Does not Christ and the New Testament Apostles require as much, and far more than than this? The Saints are called, and called to be, "the family of God;" and John says, "If God so loved us, we ought to love one another. . . For he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"-I John 4: 11, 20. Now, when a Saint loves God and his fellow Saint, will he think it hard to use his "surplus property," and after that a "tenth of his interest annually," to aid his needy brethren, and to send forth the gospel and gather in to Christ "the poor among men," and so build up the kingdom of God? Will such not feel willing to aid the families of "the priesthood," who sacrifice the comforts and joys of home and go forth to preach the gospel of salvation to the nations of the earth? If it is hard for those who have "surplus property" in Zion and her Stakes, how is it with those who are poor, when called on to aid in building up Christ's work? Christ prayed the Father to make all believers in him "one," as he and the Father were one; and wherever this enlightened and loving unity exists, it will be no hardship for Saints to give their "surplus property," and far more, for the glorious work of Christ both in and out of the church. John says of the Saints, "He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him."-1 John 2: 10. When this "love" abounds, the systematic "ordinance" of tithing will be found a "reasonable service," and not a grievous sacrifice. When God gives men ability and opportunity to accumulate more of worldly wealth than they properly need, (a surplus), then such an one should use it for the good of less favored ones, and those who by reason of their "gifts and callings of God" are prevented from supplying their own needs and the needs of those dependent on them. The "ordinance" of tithing is a heaven-ordained help in this direction; and it seems that when men lived in the light of God they were taught of God to pay their tithings. After God had promised immeasurable blessings to Abraham, (Gen. 12:1-3, 7; 13:14-17), the latter, as the called and faithful of God, paid "tithes of all" to God's high priest. (Gen. 14:20). When God appeared to Jacob and renewed in him the Abrahamic covenant, and also showed him heaven and the way to attain it, (Gen. 28: 10-15), Jacob, actuated by his sense of duty to God, and moved by the new spiritual light given him, vowed, saying to God, "Of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth to thee."verse 22. Mark it: this was not when men were in apostasy, nor under "the law of carnality;" but when they were walking in close communion with God, and in the splendors of his heavenly light!

Of my reference to the fact that Paul. in Hebrews 7:8, says Christ "receiveth tithes," Bro. Gurley says "I forbear any criticism upon this point at present;" and he then seems to mislead himself as to my application of Matthew 25:40, when I claimed that Christ could receive tithes through his ministry—(that is, when tithes were paid his duly appointed ministry)the same as he could receive kindness or favor when they were bestowed on his people or ministry; or, as Christ received persecution when his people were persecuted—that is, representatively. (Acts 9:4.) We did not say that tithing was taught in Matthew 25:40; and we never hinted such a thing; but only that Christ, now "in the holy place not made with hands," even "in heaven," could and did "receive tithes" in the same sense and in the same way as he received kindnesses or persecutions when his disciples were treated well or ill. Paul says of Christ's receiving tithes, "He receiveth them."—Heb. 7:8. Elder Gurley says the system pertained only to kings, and to Israel under the law of Moses; but Paul, who ought to know, says it pertained to the priesthood of God in the days of Abraham, (over four hundred years before the law), and to Christ, over thirty years after "the law" was repealed. Who is right?

Elder Gurley says "tithing as a law, was part of the law of Moses." Yes; and so was "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Matt. 22: 36-39). But this principle—or law—existed before Moses law, as also did that of tithing; and neither of them were repealed with it. By the way, when "the first and great commandment" is kept, it will not be hard to keep the law of tithing, even if one has saved a "surplus" by industry and economy.

Bro. Gurley thinks I misinterpret the sayings of the Book of Nephi, chapter 11, when I say Christ gave Malachi's words for the instruction of future generations in respect to tithing. I still think he gave them to the Nephites for their "future generations," more especially, to illustrate to them the need of honoring the Lord with their substance in the way he had appointed, and to show that calamity followed disobedience to that principle, while blessings followed obedience to it. He would have them remember the law of Moses, not with the view of having them or others "reinstate it," but to be profited by an understanding of its ends, objects, and purposes; for the gospel is related to it as the substance is to the shadow.

By the way, Bro. Gurley condemns my interpretation on the ground that he thinks it involves a "reinstatement of Moses law," and yet he says, Malachi's prophecy foreshows that it will be reinstated, and, "that the Lord will purify Israel eventually by this law, 'the school master' is quite evident." I have never held, and do not now hold, that God will ever reinstate the law of Moses. I do not think Malachi's prophecy means anything of the kind. I do not believe God will "purify Israel eventually by this 'school master,'" but by the new covenant, the gospel of Christ. Bro. Gurley is really the one who proposes the "reinstatement" of Moses law; but I do not, though he says I do. Elder Gurley wishes me to show that Jesus commanded the law of tithing. Perhaps we might do this if we had the various gospels and epistles mentioned in the New Testament which the early Christians had, but which we have not. But if we had all those books and they did not contain such commandments, that would be no proof that he did not so command; for John informs us that Jesus did a very great many things which were not written. John 21:25. We have proved from the Book of Mormon, Alma 10: 1, 2, that God made it one of the "ordinances" pertaining to the priesthood of the Son of God; and we now say that that priesthood was ordained especially "to teach his (God's) commandments unto the children of men, that they also might enter into his rest, this priesthood being after the order of his Son." (Alma 4: 6). We have proved that Abraham paid "tithes of all he possessed" to God's High Priest, Melchisedec. We have proved that Jacob, when he was in close communion with God, vowed to pay to God a tenth of all he should obtain. We have proved that Paul, over thirty years after the cross, declared that Christ then received tithes. The revelations of the "choice Seer" from 1831 to 1838, teach this principle and law of tithing. But if tithing had never been taught and practiced till this century, every one who believes that Joseph was "great like unto Moses," "a choice Seer," and "great" in the eyes of God, would be bound to accept the Seer's revelations on that matter. For to say that Joseph was what the Book of Mormon declares he would be, and then to say he from 1831 to 1838 gave a string of false revelations on tithing is too absurd for anything.

Elder Gurley claims that the dogma of infallibility was set up when the church, in 1835, in General Assembly, accepted and endorsed the revelation of April 6th, 1830. That such infallibility was not claimed by the Seer, nor allowed by the Saints, is seen in the fact that the Seer presented that revelation and others, for inspection and consideration; and that said Assembly did consider and determine, as to whether they -the church-would accept said revelation, with others, as a rule of faith and practice. The acts of both the Seer and the assembly, disprove Elder Gurley's assertion. That the Seer from the first did not claim infallibility for himself, personally, or for what he might give to the church as revelation from God, is seen in the fact that the Elders were commanded to come together "to agree upon" the word of the Lord through the Seer; (D. and C. 41:1, 42:1); and from the acts of the aforesaid general assembly; and from the fact that the Seer wrote to the church in 1839 to not follow his personal counsel if they deemed it not wise; and from the still further fact that he instructed the ministry, including the Twelve, to not permit a revelation from any person to go to the church till it was properly tested before the quorums. (T. and S., vol. 5, p. 650). Elder Gurley gives further evidence of narrowness and technical pleading when he says the revelation of April 6th, 1830 "makes Joseph Smith's words and commands God's word to us." We might with equal propriety say Jesus taught cannibalism when he said: "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you."-John 6:55. The revelations of Joseph, as to their authority and force, explain themselves when examined in their entirety on the point in question; and so do the words of Jesus. When the Seer gave to the church a "Thus saith the Lord," and the church accepted the same, then, by "common consent" the church was bound. But this is not to say the church would not be under condemnation if they rejected the word of the Lord through him. Moses presented the word of the Lord to Israel, (Ex. 19:7, 8; 24:3, 7), and Israel formally accepted it; and had they not accepted it they would have been condemned. But wher they had accepted it, they were under covenant to God and his word. So with the Latter Day Saints.

I am astonished when Elder Gurley says Joseph the Seer was promised "life until Christ's coming, upon the condition that Joseph abide in God;" whereas, he was promised that he should hold "the keys of those things which have been sealed;" (D. and C. 34:4;) this, and this only. In March, 1833, he was told that "the keys of this kingdom shall never be taken from you while thou art in the world, neither in the world to come."—D. and C. 87:1. And this promise was renewed to him in that wonderful revelation of July 23d, 1837, D. and C. 105:6.

Elder Gurley requests us to state "which or what was the false prophecy for which he [the Seer] died;" and he then says-"It will not do to say it was for 'personal conduct,' as Elder Blair informs us that persons called of God to be his prophets, seers, and revelators, may sin in their personal conduct, even to the extent that Moses and others did, and still live and serve in their official capacity for many years; but if they give even one false revelation to any one of God's people, they are doomed of God to die for it, and that speedily." "According to this rule," says Elder Gurley, it won't do to say that Joseph was cut off for 'personal conduct.'" In reply to this we say, (1), that we did not state that Joseph the Seer was "cut off" for giving false prophecy; (2), we neither said nor intimated that a prophet of God could not or would not be cut off for his personal conduct; (3), we did not state nor intimate that Joseph the Seer was "cut off" for any cause. We have already seen that Moses and Aaron died because of their personal bad conduct; (Num. 20: 12, 27: 14; Deut. 32: 51); the prophet whom God sent to curse the altars of Bethel (1 K. 13: 1-24) died for presuming to disobey the command of God to him; Hannaniah died speedily after giving a false, delusive prophecy to "the priests" and "the people" of Israel; (Jer. 28: 1-17); God declared to Moses (Deut. 18: 20), and to Ezekiel, (Ezek. 14: 7-11), that if his prophet gave a false prophecy, he would "destroy him" from the midst of Israel, But God's prophets may die from other. causes, natural or violent. Not knowing I would not dare say what was the leading cause, or causes, of the Seer's early and violent death. Christ assures me of his care for the Seer when he says of him. "the life of my servant shall be in my hand; therefore they shall not hurt him. although he shall be marred because of them. Yet I will heal him, for I will show unto them that my wisdom is greater than the cunning of the devil."-Book Nephi 9: 11.

Elder Gurley claims that "David, Solomon, and others, were great men, and did much good in their time and way, as also much evil; but no one would hardly say that they were innocent men, or infallible in that which they spoke in the name of the Lord." Replying to this we have to say, that none of the succeeding prophets up to the time of Christ ever ventured to denounce, slur, or in any way seek to invalidate their writings; neither did Christ nor his ministers; neither did Joseph the Seer nor either of his spokesmen—they, rather, honored them and quoted them as authoritative and valid.

Elder Gurley assures us that "Christ, not Joseph, is the foundation—God's will—not Joseph's is the thing to establish; and that the passport into celestial glory, and test of fellowship with Christ, is not whether I am a follower of Joseph Smith, but rather, am I a follower of Christ."

The manner in which Bro. Gurley makes this statement is delusive and misleading. He uses it as a means, apparently, to weaken confidence in the divine authority of the Seer. All concede that Christ is "the foundation;" that "God's will—not Joseph's—is the thing to establish;" but all this does not destroy the fact of the Seer's ministerial authority, nor relieve any from their duty to respect that authority when exercised in accordance with the law of God and the gifts and callings of God to the Seer. Jesus lays down the principle that, "He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me."-John 13: 20. And, "He that heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me."-Luke 10:16. This principle is taught throughout both the Old and New Testaments, as also throughout the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants. Joseph the Seer was Christ's servant; he was sent of Christ to restore the gospel, establish the Lord's "great and marvellous work," and build up his church. He was sent with priestly authority similar to that which was held by Moses. These facts are established, and will remain established and heaven will in the future, as in the past, confirm these facts by testimonies sent down from God; and when this is done it only establishes the fact that Christ is "the only foundation." But let it be borne in mind that whoever rejects, or despises, or treats with indignity the proper mission and calling of Joseph the Seer, treats those who sent him in the same manner. We remind all of what God has said concerning the "choice Seer" in 2 Nephi 2:2, 3; also in Book of Nephi 9:11,12 which we again quote.

"For in that day, for my [Christ's] sake shall the Father work a work, which shall be a great and a marvelous work among them; and there shall be among them those who will not believe it, although a man shall declare it unto them. But behold, the life of my servant shall be in my hand; therefore they shall not hurt him, although he shall be marred because of them. Yet I will heal him, for I will show unto them that my wisdom is greater than the cunning of the devil. Therefore it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not believe in my words, who am Jesus Christ, whom the Father shall cause him to bring forth unto the Gentiles, and shall give unto him power that he shall bring them forth unto the Gentiles, (it shall be done even as Moses said), they shall be cut off from among my people who are of the covenant."

May God in his wisdom and love enable his Saints to understand his word, and to humbly and lovingly obey his requirements, that they may live in the unity of his Spirit and in the bonds of his peace, and thereby glorify Christ in his church, and be a light to the world, an honor to God, and a blessing to all.

W. W. BLAIR.

LETTER FROM A. H. SMITH.

In continuation of the subject of my last articles, I shall call the reader's notice to sec. 42, par. 18, Doctrine and Covenants, where we find the following record:

"Ye shall observe the laws which ye have received and be faithful; and ye shall hereafter receive church covenants, such as shall be sufficient to establish you both here and in the New Jerusalem."

This commandment with promise, was given evidently with the foreknowledge of how it would be received, and how it would be understood; and we may safely say also with a foreknowledge of the result, in case of a failure on the part of the Saints to observe, (i. e. obey), the commandments, or law which had been given; and yet we are justified in believing, that God still had in view his decree to establish and have built the city so often referred to in his past revelations to his people, called the New Jerusalem. We see also that God is working like himself in thus leading the disciple up, step by step, little by little, to a realization of the fact, that the time is not far distant, till the call would be made, "Come out of her my people;" and the whole genius of this work looks to the fulfillment of this call. It would hardly be supposed for a moment that the architect of the universe, would be unprepared with a place, for the ingathering of his saints, where they could live and be governed by the church covenants which he here promises to give. I notice too the conditions of this promise, as of all God's promises, are faithfulness in the observance of his laws. A disbelief and rejection of his words alienate the affections, and thus become a bar to the receipt and enjoyment of the fulfillment of those precious promises.

I believe I will not antagonize any one, when I say the church has received such covenants, and now is, and since its reorganization has been, governed by them. Is it not a safe rule, when a prophecy and promise are made in the name of the Lord, and the most of it has been fulfilled, to expect the balance to come to pass? I think so. But how can we expect the building up of the New Jerusalem if there is to be no gathering of the people of God to build it? I am told I am too literal in my application and hope. That I make the same mistake which was made fortyeight or fifty years ago; and look for a "brick and mortar" Zion, when it was all the time a spiritual city, a spiritual gathering, a spiritual Zion, that God was teaching the Saints to look for; and in seeking to build up that brick and mortar Zion, they lost sight of the spiritual Zion, and God scattered them. There is an abundance of evidence to prove that that people did not observe or obey the laws of God which he had given them; and by this failure to observe, and by their transgressions, they grieved him whom they should have been diligent in serving; thus forfeiting their privilege to build, they were scattered, and indeed it seems that this must needs have been, that the prophecies of all God's prophets might be fulfilled. And now just a thought or two upon that spiritualistic idea of a spiritual city, spiritual Zion. The sense or meaning of the revelations of God is wholly destroyed, all the way from the beginning of this great latter day work up to the present moment of its history, if we admit that theory; for the fundamental principle of the gathering out of the righteous runs like a thread of fine gold through nearly every revelation God has ever given, either in former times or latter times, speaking of the redemption and salvation of the families of man. I have no objection to the coming of that spiritual Zion, caught up to God, of which we read, as being the city in which Enoch and his people dwelt, neither have I any such selfish wish as to dispossess those worthy ones of their homes. No, no; I wish to help build another Zion, and if need be, use brick and mortar, stone and cement, wood or lumber, and precious stones, in its building; in which the righteousness of God shall be found, and where may dwell the pure in heart, till Christ shall come and reign, whose right it is to reign. How shall we understand the following prophetic language, if we are not to make a literal rendering of the promise of the New Jerusalem? In March, 1831, sec. 45, paragraphs 11 and 12 of Doc. and Cov:

"Ye hear of wars in foreign lands, but behold I say unto you, they are nigh, even at your doors, and not many years hence, ye shall hear of wars in your own land; wherefore, (or for this reason), I the Lord have said, Gather ye out from the eastern lands, assemble ye yourselves together ye elders of my church; go ye forth unto the western countries; call upon the inhabitants to repent, and inasmuch as they repent, build up churches unto me; and with one heart and with one mind, gather up your riches that you may purchase an inheritance, which shall hereafter be appointed unto you, and it shall be called the New Jerusalem, a land of peace, a city of refuge, a place of safety for the saints of the most high God; * * * and it shall be called Zion."

Are we to believe it was spiritual wars in foreign lands? If so, then it would be spiritual wars which were at our own doors, spiritual reason for the spiritual elders to spiritually go, to the spiritual western countries, and a spiritual gathering of spiritual riches, to purchase a spiritual inheritance in that spiritual New Jerusalem. That out-spiritualizes Swedenborg. The sad experience of that people, as also our nation's trouble from 1860 to 1866; the death and misery of hundreds of thousands of souls, in fulfillment of that prophecy, testify in tones of thunder, in favor of the literal rendering of the literal promises of God; and a literal gathering to a literal Zion. The reality of it, the tangibility of the whole plan, is that which gives the work its beauty, its solidity, and its power; and it was that basic principle, that thread of gold, which gave to the work its unparalelled success during the first fourteen years of its existence Selections.

THE following is a brief digest of Bro. Mark H. Forscutt's lecture before the Liberal League, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, as it was published in the Dispatch of January 26th, with the comment of the paper upon it.

A LATTER DAY SAINT.

REV. MARK H. FORSCUTT MAKES A MASTERLY DEFENSE OF THE BIBLE AND RELIGION.

He Non-Plusses the Liberal League!

ITS GIANTS OF ARGUMENT, ORATORY AND RIDICULE, FLOORED BY HIS LOGICAL SPEECH.

BRIAREUS OF DOUBT; CERBERUS OF FAITH.

Rev. Mark H. Forscutt, the pastor of the church of Latter Day Saints of this city, preached a sermon yesterday afternoon in the Liberal League Hall, to an audience of nine hundred people, on the subject, "The Briareus of Doubt and the Cerberus of Faith." Many persons present pronounced it one of the most able defenses of the Bible ever heard in this city, and it was made by the man who published the first anti-Mormon newspaper in Salt Lake City, Utah. Extracts from his discourse are given below:—

"I at the outset will explain briefly what characters classic authors ascribe to the imaginary beings to whom the names Briareus and Cerberus were given. Briareus and Cerberus belong to the realms of mythology. The former was a famous giant of mythologic lore, the reputed son of Coe-lus and Terra. He is credited with having had fifty heads and one hundred hands. have chosen him to represent doubt, his heads as suggesting intellect and variety essential to the existence of doubt, for behind it are the vast brain forces of the scientific world; the hands to execute are more numerous and more destructive in their operations. Cerberus, in mythology, was a dog of Pluto, the monarch of the infernal regions, of death, and of funerals. He was credited with having three heads. As Biblical history represents deity in the three great eras, Patriarchal, Judaic and Christian, I have chosen him to represent Faith. As the object of obedience is commonly represented to be that of deliverance from death and hell, the choice is not inopportune. Cerberus was placed at the entrance of the infernal regions to prevent the living from entering and the prisoners from escaping. Creed founders have borrowed extensively from this mythological

"Doubt is often faith's best servant. Intellect must recognize or deny. Where error claims the right to be faith's guest, doubt makes denial proper. But for doubt's intervention dogmas would be welcomed which reason could not sanction. Doubt is the heart's sentinel to challenge intruding thought, and reason's guard to arrest the intruder. All are subjects to alternate doubt and faith. In early life man is impressive. This susceptibility is the basis and formitable principle of spiritual, intellectual and moral growth and development. He who retains this youthfulness within himself finds higher reasons for undying faith and ever-increasing hope. To him doubt is but a sentinel. Man is not impressive to highest forms of life until he rises from the complementary surrounding of the animal to the realms of thought and faith. Faith's completeness is doubt's overthrow.

SHOULD NOT MAN BELIEVE?

"Must he not accept much on testimony? Has each man the time, wealth, education, perseverance, adaptiveness, brain and nerve force sufficient to solve the problems of Euclid? View the heavens with Ross, or compute their distances and trace motion with Copernicus, Newton, Kent or Kepler? Is not man interdependent, and is not faith very necessary to his mental growth? By looking through the microscope and telescope a revelation is made that teaches the observer that things unseen by natural eye or heard by ear unaided, have existed veritable as his own be-The utterances of sciences appeal to the populace with varying result. If they conflict with some previously accepted thought bigots reject them as necessarily untrue. The wonders of the microscope bring faith and doubt into conflict. Spiritual and mental experiences depend upon the cognitive faculties for recognition. A doubt suggested to the spiritual-minded man often leads to the discovery of higher spiritual truth. Unreasoning doubt, not the intellectual doubt of reason's sentinel, robbed our ancestors of liberty, treasure and blood when they only sought humanity's good by joining art and science, crowning their Union with the benediction of

"I have seen men who would scorn the believer in revealed truth because he accepted from Holy Writ the words: 'In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, and yet he himself could not express his views in good English. I have also seen the believer who would scorn the unbeliever for refusing the claim that every word in the Bible was God's word and every claim there true; that God had inspired men to deeds which make the hearts of fathers ache and of mothers to bleed, the face of noble manhood to pale and the cheeks of maidens to blush scarlet. I pity the skeptic who scorns the simple believer, but I equally pity the believer who teaches such horrible and barbarous doctrine as that God inspired to murder and commanded to murder, with cruel and infamous methods, the thousands of the unprepared to die and yet consigns the murdered to an endless hell of horrible torture without reprieve or future hope. I say to you in all meekness and sincerity that the Bible, rightly construed, does not teach this horrible doctrine ascribed to it. It is unjust to any work, to any author, to enforce a construction upon an isolated passage or a number of disjointed passages which the spirit of the author and the general tenor of his work does not warrant. I do not, like many, confine deity's words to the Bible, nor believe that all there is His word. The Bible is the noblest book in the world. It has its divine and its human sides. The thoughts of demons are there. It has been unfairly dealt with alike by its friends and its foes, and I sometimes think its friends, unconsciously and undesignedly, have been its worst foes. Geometry has its isoperimetrical figures. Has religion none such? Every line of true theology is equal; justice is not overlapped by mercy; mercy is not sacrificed to justice by an angry God. The centre of true theology is faith. Its lines radiate from the centre in doctrines of equal strength and importance. Each spoke in Ezekiel's wheel is a saving truth. The circle is the all-embracing love of our Father. The time will come when science and revelation will be found to fully harmonize. The trouble is that its advocates and opponents hold each other off at swords' points. You call yourselves 'The Liberal League.' Christians call you

'FREETHINKERS' AND SKEPTICS.

The Christian world shuns you, and you in turn call those people 'bigots.' I claim to be more liberal in my views; but I also claim to be more liberal to all systemns of faith than you do, than you can be so long as you believe religion to be an imposture, its teachers deceivers, its followers dupes. I and my church for over thirty years have suffered from Christian and skeptic alike, and I can give the right hand to one, the left to the other, for you are each my brother man. I respect the honest advocates of a faith I do not endorse, and while I pray the Father to lead them into light, I must not blame them if they stumble in the darkness. I respect the honest doubter. If he could discipline his mind to what is called 'divine' and natural truth, and could free himself from too common interpretations of the Scriptures while investigating, different views would find their home within him, and the blessed hope of immortality spring into life.

"Spirituality is a part of man's constitution as much so as ideality. The susceptibility of the child is weak. Physical demands are first in nature. It must be first developed. Our moral nature is what education makes it. The horse, ox, cow, dog or monkey attract the child's eye. That is nature. The child as an animal sympathizes with animals. How many are children of larger growth? From the natural to the ideal is a transitional step. Music in its ruder forms appealed to our animal nature. Music, once too transcendental for us, now engages our Our moral, intellectual and thoughts. ideal natures awaken; religious feelings identify themselves with these, for man, not the animal, often misnamed 'man,' who only lives to eat, drink, sleep and enjoy his sensuous nature. Man is morally, intellectually, religiously a spiritual as well as a corporeal being. As age advances and passions die, his spiritual nature, if its faculties be not all blunted, yearns for sympathy. Man's early susceptibility is a

that he may have strength to resist evil. "Perfect man employs a nature compounded of spiritual, moral and physical powers, and in their exercise intelligence must govern. Unbelief is a negative condition of the mind. The unbelievers are hundreds where disbelievers are units. Unbelief is skepticism, disbelief, infidelity. To deny intelligence would be to deny the power to make denial. There are then fewer atheists than infidels. All intelligent persons are skeptics to some questions, and they may be believers in certain things. Doubt is an evil Briareus when he closes the avenues to men's souls against witness bearers and condemns their testimony before given. Faith is a Cerberus when it becomes the watch dog of the Tartarian abode, instead of being the angelic messenger of 'Peace, good will to all men.' Faith should never rest. New developments should be investigated. If her fortifications be good she should strengthen them; if not, then abandon them for better ones. Theology is not religion. The present theology's components may disappear, but religion is virtue and love of the spiritual. It will live when all are gone."

Conserence Minutes.

NORTHERN MINNESOTA DISTRICT.

The above named conference was held on the 2d and 3d days of November, 1884. Thomas Nutt was called to the chair. H. Way acted as secretary.

It was moved that Bro. Thomas Nutt be our district president until after our next conference. Bro. Nutt then chose Bro. B. B. Anderson as first counsellor.

Branch Reports.—Hope of Zion, 40; Silver Lake, 20; Oak Lake, 28. Presidents of branches reported their branches in good working order. Six Elders reported in person, also three priests, three teachers, and two deacons in person.

Resolved, That we sustain H. Way as our secretary of district; That we sustain those sent to this mission, in righteousness; That we sustain all the authorities of the church, in righteousness; That Thos. Nutt be chosen as our delegate to the next General Conference.

Bishop's Agent's report read and approved.

Resolved that this conference adjourn to meet on the 27th and 28th of June, 1885, at 10 o'clock.

Sunday was devoted to preaching the word; the Lord making it plain by his Spirit, and the people being greatly blessed. Elders J. R. Anderson and H. Way were requested to labor as best they could in the district, until our next conference.

Testimony meeting Sunday afternoon in charge of Elder T. Nutt, a good time was had, the Lord bestowing many blessings. The congregation was so large that it was resolved to build a meeting house in Ottertail county, Minnesota, in the township of Girard, 26x40 feet, and if possible to have it to hold our next conference in. The following committee was chosen, B. B. Anderson, Wm. W. Anderson, Jedediah R. Anderson, Clayton G. Gould and Henry Way.

The place of our next conference to be named by the district president.

NAUVOO AND STRING PRAIRIE DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Keokuk, Iowa, December 6th and 7th, 1884; president, M. T. Short, secretary, O. Owen.

Branch Reports.—Burlington 66; Keokuk 50; Farmington 56; Rock Creek 41.

Resolved, That the resolution touching the system of representation, passed at Burlington, December, 1883, be, and is hereby repealed.

Bro. M. T. Short's written report of his labors as president of the district was read and accepted.

Elders H. C Bronson, B. F. Durfee and D. D. Babcock made their reports verbally. Teachers A. Hall, H. Kestner and O. Owen reported.

Afternoon Session.—Resolved, That when this conference adjourns it does so to meet at Montrose, on first Saturday and Sunday in March, 1885. That in consideration of Bro. M. T. Short's having had a call beyond the limits of the district, Bro. H. C. Bronson be appointed as president of the district for the ensuing quarter. Bishop's Agent's report was read: amount collected $12.35; expended $8.33; balance on hand $4.02.

Report approved. The committee appointed to the Elvaston Branch was, on motion, continued.

Resolved, that hereafter the Bishop's Agent of this district be required to make a full report of all funds received and paid out by him every three months, or as often as conference convenes; and all resolutions or parts of resolutions conflicting with this, be, and are hereby repealed. Motion prevailed that Bro. O. Owen be continued as secretary, and Bro. J. H. Lambert as Bishop's Agent. Motion prevailed that we sustain the authorities of the church in righteousness.

Officials present: Seventies I, Elders 6, Teachers 4, Deacons 2. Resolved, That Bro. H. C. Bronson preach to-night; arranged that Bro. M. T. Short preach Sunday morning; that we have sacrament meeting Sunday afternoon, and that Bro. H. C. Bronson preach in the evening.

Miscellaneons.

KEWANEE DISTRICT.

Dear Saints:-As I shall not be able to visit the several branches of the district at present. and agreeably with the request of the Bishop, sent with a financial book to each branch, that a more systematic arrangement may be made between the several branches and the Bishop's Agent. that each member contributing as tithing or free will offering, for the spread of the gospel of the kingdom, may be properly accounted for, I request each branch of the district to select some one of their number to take charge of the financial book of the branch, and act according to the instructions with it. I also request the secretary of each branch of the district to forward to me the names of all the members of his branch, that I may enter them on the Bishop's Agent's book of the district. Now brethren, let each and every one of us use our best efforts to contribute of our means, whether it be much or little, that the cause of Christ may be advanced, and many be brought to the knowledge of the gospel as it is in Christ Jesus. Yours in the bonds of gospel truth,

R. J. BENJAMIN, Bishop's Agent. PRINCEVILLE, Ill., Feb. 2d, 1885.

MITE SOCIETY.

Election of officers of the St. Louis Mite Society of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, for the ensuing six months; Sister Maria Cooke, president; Sister Mary Burch, vice-president; Sister Eliza Cowlishaw, treasurer; Bro. Noah N. Cooke, Secretary. St. Louis, January 25th, 1885.

DIED.

Shabino.—Near Millard, Walworth county, Wisconsin, November 17th, 1884, Bro. Antonio Shabino. He was born in 1808; aged at his death, 76 years, 7 months and 17 days. He was a good saint and a faithful member; and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. He leaves a wife and several children to mourn his loss. Funeral services at the house, Rev. Mr. Hunter, of Elkhorn, officiating.

Dear father, thou art gone to rest,
Thy trials all are o'er:
Thy spirit's numbered with the blessed,

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

An Elder will find an opportunity for preaching, and a place to stop while preaching there, at Hepner, Oregon. Enquire for William Crabtree, or William Rush.

Bro. Peter Andersen wrote from Blair, Nebraska, January 3d, that he had been there for some time, good feeling prevailed.

Providence, R. I., Evening Mail of February 5th, contains a notice of the Saints' conference at Cape Cod, February 1st, under the appropriate heading of "Happy Meeting." The discourses of Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley and M. H. Bond are favorably noticed.

Bro. M. Dougherty wrote from Hamburg, Iowa, February 7th, rejoicing in the work, and asking prayers of the Saints for restoration to health.

Bro. R. J. Anthony expected to engage Bishop Clark; of Upton. Utah, in debate; but somebody (presumably in authority) interfered and Bishop Clark would not discuss. Bro. Anthony held one meeting in Wanship, which was well attended.

Bro. S. L. Cooper, Buchanan, Tennessee, bears a testimony to the work of God in a letter dated January 27th, 1885.

Bro. I. J. Cornish sends a card from Port Huron, Michigan, on his way home from a tour in Ontario. Mercury 241/2 degrees below zero; trains blocked for three days. He says, "I had a lively time at Inwood; made many friends to the latter day work. A lecture on Mormonism did good,"

Bro. W. H. Davenport wrote from Bandera, Texas, January 31st, commending the labor of Bro. A. J. Cato; but indicating that the brother was having a hard time to maintain himself in the field; although anxious to continue the good work. The Saints there are as a rule not rich in worldly goods; times hard.

Bro. W. Vickery, Elder in charge of Plano, Illinois, Branch, wrote February 14th, "The Saints are usually well, though not all, but are striving to keep the trust the Master has given them."

J. M. Tullar, wrote from Wallula, Washington Territory, February 9th, speaks of his still being in the faith, and always anxious for the HERALD, all the preacher he has.

By letter from Bro. Thomas W. Chatburn, of Independence, Missouri, dated February 17th we learn that Bro. J. J. Kaster, Bishop's Agent for the Independence District, was very sick, of typhoid fever, by reason of which he was unable to attend to the business of his office; those who have written him and whom he has not replied to will understand the reason why, when they see this notice of his sickness. Bro. Chatburn wrote at request of Bro. Kaster.

Sr. Catharine Guhl, Brn. Hans P. Jensen, Theodore C. H. Jensen, Joshua M. Tensen, of the Council Bluffs, Iowa, Branch, are requested to report their whereabouts to L. P. Jensen, care of John Beno & Co., Council Bluffs, Iowa, clerk of branch.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly of Lamoni, writing from Lilly Dale, Ind., January 5th, says:

The outlook for the spread of the work is good in this country. My meetings are well attended, and quite an interest manifested by a great many whether any will unite I do not know. I found the branch at Marietta in a disorganized condition. Good was done. I look for many to unite with us there. The branch here was no better, but they are waking up. I think of continuing here two weeks yet. There are calls in various directions to come and preach.

He found Bro. James Scott and a few others at work locally, doing the best they

Bro. F. C. Warnky wrote from Independence, Missouri, February 13th, to Bro. W. W. Blair:

Our meetings at Armstrong were a successall we could desire, and more than we expected. Instead of holding meetings for three evenings, we held them for seventeen evenings. The Lord was with us, and we all felt blessed. We were ably assisted by brethren Pitt and Crawley. The first Sunday afternoon we had a real feast from the Lord; excellent liberty was enjoyed in all the preaching; one was baptized; some more are believing, and others are investigating. I feel impressed that ere a very distant day their church will be full and overflowing with loving sons and daughters of the Kingdom of God. At Kansas City we held forth four evenings: the interest was the best I have ever seen there. We were ably assisted by Brn. White and Newton. One was baptized, and others are standing at the door of the kingdom. God's power was also realized in administering to the sick, (not yet of the church), which was a joy to us all. I preach again at Kansas City next Sunday. On next Thursday I go to Cedar county, where I expect to hold forth for a week. There are a few Saints there. They belong to this district, but it is near one hundred miles from here.

WE have several times tried to set before the readers of the HERALD the position that paper occupies as a church organ. But, for some reason it appears that either we have not understood it correctly, or others have misunderstood it.

Who is the church? One of as good brethren as we know of, once stated that when he asked that question in the streets of Salt Lake City the answer was, "Pres. Brigham Young." Suppose that this same brother was to ask the same question concerning the Reorganization, in the streets of Lamoni, Boston, or Little Sioux; would he be answered, "Pres. Joseph Smith is the church?" Would not he be told, "No one man is the church. Reorganization consists of a body of free men, each standing before God as an integral portion of a spiritual whole."

To whom does the Herald Office in its property and franchise right of publication belong? Is it the property of one, and if so who is he? Does the right to the use of the columns of the HERALD for the advancing and defending of dogma, or doctrine inure to one, and if so, who is he?

The property value of the HERALD belongs to the church as a whole, an incorporated body having an existence by legal enactment of the law of the land. The moral and spiritual values of the HERALD belong to the Church of Jesus Christ as a body created by virtue of divine enactment. These bodies, the one spiritually incorporate, the other legally incorporate are one; a vital many in one.

This corporation to which the HERALD belongs controls the Office in its working details by agents, properly chosen by the voice of the many, that voice installing those agents to stand in their agency within the limits of their agency; and within those limits alone are they authorized to act. Those agents choose other agents and place them in direct contact with the Herald Office and HERALD as church machinery, investing those secondary agents with certain duties to be discharged by them with regard to the rights of the whole ownership. Both of these two classes of agents, though joint owners with other members of the body, the church, hold no different ownership by reason of their agencies. Some of these agents deal with the business and temporal concerns of the Office as property only; while others pursue their duties with a view to the moral and spiritual value of the HER-ALD as a part of the spiritual machinery of the church.

One of the joint owners of the HERALD chooses to make use of the paper for setting forth his views on doctrine and church polity. He writes his article under the influence of the idea that he is an owner, a recognized representative of the body, of which the Editorial Agent is nothing more, and entitled to "free speech," and sends it to the office of the church organ to be published. In that article he expresses his views, sentiments, opinions, and feelings. He affirms and defends what strike him as vital and important principles and facts as they appear to him. If the article is printed it is put into the columns designed for communications, under the statement that the Editorial Agent of the body in charge does not affirm, and does not deny anything the article contains; the writer only being responsible for the theory, dogma, doctrine, sentiment and feeling it contains.

Another joint owner of the HERALD likes or dislikes, assents to, or dissents from the expressed sentiments, or arguments of the other, and feels to correct, partially or wholly; or to confirm and ratify what has been written. He writes his counter article and sends it to the agent of the whole for insertion. He has written under the same sense of ownership as the first, with just as honest a purpose to serve, and with just the same regard for the doctrine of free speech as he who first wrote. Should he be denied an insertion of his view? If so, upon what principle does the editorial agent so deny?

One writes deploring the existence and work of what he believes to be an error in faith, or practice, and gives his reasons therefor. Another writes to defend what he believes to be correct, and deplores that any one should look at it as the other does. Another writes, deploring the dissension and contention and controversy going on in the HERALD, and augurs dismal things because of such wrong doing; and charges that evil lies at the door, or there would not be such discussions. Another still writes feelingly upon the unity that should prevail in the "many in one" body, argues that if these various writers had the Spirit of Christ they would not so differ in doctrine and sentiment, and wonders when the children of Zion will "see eye to eye." Another still writes in grave fear that this can not be the Church, because there is such a "diversity of opinion among the Elders." All of these articles and expression of sentiment come from separate and equal stockholders in the real and spiritual property known in the church and in the law as the HERALD and its office.

One good brother writes to another, "Would it not be well to change the advertisement of the Herald—it certainly does not explain the faith and doctrines of the church. If so, which side of the several controversies shall be selected." Another writes to the Editorial Agent, "What is the matter with Elder——, is he troubled with the sorehead?"

Would it not be well for one of these brethren to remember that another may write adversely to his views without being properly liable to the appellation of "sorehead." The other might call to mind that not very many moons ago he himself went into an epistolary controversy on a question of church doctrine, with a brother who had ventilated his view in the HER-ALD, and that he claimed of the Editorial Agent at the office the right to be heard. When the HERALD published the article to which the brother replied and took exception to did it then explain the "faith and doctrine of the church;" or was it not until it published his reply that the "faith and doctrine of the church" were explained. Both articles went into the same communication columns, under the same specific statement: "Articles under this head do not necessarily receive the endorsement of the Editor; writers are responsible for their own views. Contributions solicited."

Is it not consistent to assume that when a person writes for the HERALD knowing that his communication, if it goes into the paper, will go in on its own merits, the merit of its intrinsic mental, moral and spiritual worth, he writes with a full understanding that he alone is responsible for the views of the article written; that he does not write, nor does his article stand, as written by him as the sole representative of the "faith and doctrine of the church," that he does not compromise the church as bound by his views so expressed, only so far as what he has written may by the close and rigid scrutiny of his fellow workers in comparison with the standards accepted by the church be found according to the word, "orthodox" and "in the faith," and according to "sound doctrine;" and that he does not compromise the Editorial Agent, the properly accredited agent of the incorporate body spiritual in charge of the HERALD as a part of the spiritual machinery of the church; for this is especially provided for.

It will be as well for all, especially the faint-hearted, and those easily disturbed, when they pick up the HERALD to read what is written in the communication columns that they read first the statement made at the head: "Articles under this head do not necessarily receive the endorsement of the Editor."

The Herald, aside from the various communications from contributors, has faithfully presented the faith of the church; explained and maintained the doctrines of the church. It has presented the public acts of the church. It has defended the church; and has shrunk from no pains to present the claims of the church. It has strenuously tried to preserve the integrity of the church, tried to maintain its dignity; and in its official capacity as church organ, to faithfully represent the principles of the church.

While this has been the course of the HERALD, whenever there have been views presented that have been really, or presumably in opposition to the supposed teaching of the church; or in controversy, one with another, then we have heard and borne the cry, the HERALD is not the organ of the church. This cry has been made by astute Elders, who if they have written for the HERALD have frequently done so in reply, review, criticism, or opposition to what some one else has written with a view to truth. They have also required that the articles written by them should not be changed or corrected, (except mechanical errors), that they might be allowed to represent themselves. Some of these writers we know would not have written a page had they been conscious that the Agent of themselves and the church (other members besides themselves) would have presumed to exclude if not suited to his own view of the same subject, or to have inserted the article labelled, directly or by adverse criticism, "the doctrines, or views of this writer are not in accordance with the faith of the church," or "the views of this writer are heresy." They would have let the pages of the Herald go blank before they would have so placed their feelings in the crucible of one man's opinion.

"These contentions and controversies are very damaging. Surely such things can not be in the church, and it be or continue to be the Church of Christ."

Will these good brothers who so write, please tell us what church Peter represented and was in when a brother Elder "withstood him to his face." What church were those four men in who quarreled in regard to routes they should pursue; and one of the principal men took Barnabas and the other took Mark whose surname was John. What church did those persons (elders) belong who, when contentions arose, regarding the requirements to be imposed upon the Gentile converts, sent men to the chief apostles to get a decision. Were these all in the church; and did the church continue to be the Church of Christ, though these dissensions arose in it. Will these good brothers take up the actual history of the church during the Savior's ministry and the ministry of the disciples for long years after Christ's departure; and reading it in connection with the prophetic declarations concerning the church in its after existence; "And they shall say, Lo here is Christ, or there." "After my departure shall grievous wolves enter in, not sparing the flock." "They shall deceive the very elect, if it were possible." "Of your own selves shall men arise having perverse minds, who shall turn the word of God into fables," &c. The Savior's parables of the "foolish virgins;" the "sower and the seed;" the "wheat and the tares;" His statements concerning the tribulations of the last days, the end of the world, and the harvest when the "good" shall be "garnered" and the "tares burned," all point to the continuation of these, or similar controversies among the members of the church. The statements of Paul, "men shall be heady, high minded, rebellious,""evil seducers," "teaching lies," in the same last days indicate a similar condition of things. The later statements respecting the Book of Mormon, that "those who murmur may learn doctrine," &c., indicate a condition of murmuring. The several statements in the Doctrine and Covenants touching the character of the times and the conditions in which this latter day work should be consummated, all clearly show that controversies will arise. The prophecy that the name of Joseph Smith should be had in "honor" and "dishonor" in the world, also shows that in his day and after his departure disputes should be had in regard to that name; strongly suggestive that these disputes should be about him, his claims, his character, personal and prophetic; his teachings, public and private; what he taught and how, make it almost certain that there would be in the church divisions in opinion, possibly strife for the mastery.

The statement concerning the one who was to succeed the Martyr, that he "should come in at the door;" that he should "teach the revelations;" also warrant the belief that these disputations would occur.

The fact of the occurrence of these differences in views on doctrine, revelation, the church and its policy, does not surprise us nearly so much as does the fact that these controversies are oftentimes sprung by those who in their zeal for their own sentiments and opinions, claim for themselves honesty of intention and capabilities for judgment which they deny to their compeers, of equal repute for gospel charity, spiritual knowledge, self-abnegation and natural and acquired ability. Burdened with the defect of fallibility in themselves they proceed to sit in examination of other men and their acts, and to pass an infallible decision upon them. Acknowledging a standard of decision, yet reserving to themselves the right to correct that standard, or to deny its correctness when found adverse to their judgment. Insisting upon arbitrament and final decision and refusing acquiescence in that which is found by the tribunal to which they appeal, unless it is formulated to their own view. Demanding the good and the prestige to attach to them as members of the Church of Christ, assimilating to themselves the honor and glory of the work, yet refusing the sacrifice of self assertion which the life in Christ demands, aspiring to be teachers, but refusing to be taught. Demanding the privileges of the church but denying its disabilities. Claiming a share in its fame but refusing its reproach.

If the Herald has been such in its career, it has not reflected the faith, or doctrine of the Church of Christ. If on the other hand the liberties of the people have been regarded while the dignity of the church has been respected; then has it reflected the principles of the faith and doctrine.

FALL RIVER, Massachusetts, February 9th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-Being privileged to attend our district conference, held in Dennisport a week ago, I am pleased to speak of it as a success. We have enjoyed the vist of Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley very much. Their preaching was excellent, and so far as I can hear, was encouraging to all who heard them. I hope they may be permitted to return again, and stay longer next time. There is a great field here in the east, and when the good time of the Lord shall come I believe a good work will be done, in gathering out thousands of the honest in heart. At present we are not able to reach the masses. Our work is yet taking "one of a family and two of a city;" I trust ere long however that a greater effort may be made for the east, than hitherto has been made to bring the gospel before the people.

From what I can learn the Saints throughout the district are striving to maintain the work in all the branches. While there are some things that tend to discourage, yet, on the whole, I think that progress is being made.

As ever in gospel bonds, JOHN GILBERT.

> Cameron, Ontario, February 11th, 1885.

Dear Brother Joseph:-I again write to inform you of what I am trying to do. It will doubtless be remembered by some of the Herald readers that I had made an opening in Fenlon Falls, where I had held forth only two evenings, at the time of last writing. Well, I continued for three more nights, and the result about as follows: I found several very much interested, and are so yet; and the seed sown there will grow and bring forth fruit. Apart from the good interest manifested by several comers the sequel or other side was, we were locked in by a combined crowd of Methodist and Baptist bigots, who were spurred on by two Reverend Methodists, who I am well informed went so far as to incite several boys to go into the stores and get rotten eggs for us; but they failed to use them. A large crowd inside, about one-third of whom were interested, were then locked in, the door barred with fence, red pepper put on the hot stove, bells, loud speaking, tooting of a band instrument, shots from a pistol. &c., together with a determined effort on our part, made up the proceedings of five nights.

I then returned to Cameron, and from there went to another place called Cambray, where we obtained a hall for a dollar per night, and here we found friends who stood nobly for us. The hotel keeper with whom I stayed one or two nights and had several meals, refused pay; and the hall owner gave us the use of the hall one night free; and during the eight nights we preached there we were treated to yells, shots, broken windows, barred door, drunken interruptions, &c., and yet we made several friends, who are now investigating.

I expect to go to two or three more new places. Efforts are being made to secure a place to preach in Balsover, Minden, Oakwood, and one or two other places. A good many near Cameron are fully ready for baptism, but the weather has been so intensely cold for the past two or three weeks, that it makes the flesh weaken. I never before had as good liberty in speaking as I have this winter, and in general I have good health. The Saints are well, and all are in pretty good spiritual condition; indeed, I may say are in very good order, except one or two slight misunderstandings which I am sure will come out all right in due time.

Pray for your brother in bonds,
J. A. McIntosh.

MOUNT AYR, Ringgold Co., Iowa, February 15th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith:—I thought a few lines from this place might please some one to know of our whereabouts. Bro. W. S. Loar and I came here October 22d with a general store, and we are doing as well as we expected, considering the hard times people are seeing on account of poor crops for the last two or three years. We are here all alone in the faith, and would be glad to have any of the Saints to call on us when passing this way.

There is one lady here by the name of Chrichfield, says she has an aunt in our church, she, herself, belongs to the Campbellite Church. The Saints' Herald is a welcome visitor. I love to read its pages. If any of the Saints should call they can find our store first door north of post office. Your brother in Christ,

T. R. WHITE.

EAST St. Louis, Illinois, February 12th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:—I feel that it would be of some interest to you to know how the gospel is winning its way in this district. Bro. J. C. Foss has been doing a good work here. He is a man of peace and a wise counselor. It was indeed fortunate that he was here at this time. His labors have been of great worth to the church, and he has honored his office and calling in his mission here; and he has been an instrument in the hands of God of renewing and building up many of the Saints in the true faith. He has preached to the colored people in their churches at three different points, and they all gave good attention to what he said to them, and seemed to be much interested in the truth.

On the 10th he preached at Rock Springs, St. Louis, on the fall and rise of the church; and when he got through with his discourse two of their number stood up and said that they were Baptist's, and that they had driven their stakes, and would make no change; but the majority of their leaders expressed themselves as being in favor of what Bro. Foss had taught them, and they said it was the truth, whilst others said they would follow Bro. Foss. It now looks as if that church was divided.

Bro. Foss leaves in the morning for Franklin county, Missouri, on a preaching tour; and will return in about a week or ten days, and will labor with us again, two or three days, and then go to Pinckneyville, Perry county, Illinois, and from there to Chester, Randolph county, Illinois. He is in good spirits and feeling well in the work. There are many open doors here for him, and warm friends to cheer him up and sustain him. I hope he may be continued here.

We would be much pleased to see Bro. Lambert visit us and be at our next conference. His presence would be of great worth to the church here at this particular time. Great good would be done here by keeping at least one Elder in the field all the time.

the time. Your brother in Christ, JOHN BEAIRD.

> Manassa, Colorado, February 7th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-To very many of your readers it would sound very strange, to hear a preacher in the pulpit on the Sabbath day instead of speaking on the principles of the gospel, commence talking about big potatoes, good wheat, oats and other farm products, and the best methods of culture. Strange as this may appear, such is the fact. It is of very common occurrence in a Brighamite religious meeting, as can be witnessed almost any Sabbath evening. But the most popular theme with them on these ordinary occasions, (and as almost all have it committed to memory there is no lack of words), is for the speaker, let him be ever so ignorant, to state that he knows for himself, that the work which they are engaged in is the work of God; and that they are the only people on earth that he recognizes as his Saints; that they are a peculiar people, a chosen, royal race, which God intends for kings and priests unto him in eternity. That we may form a more correct opinion of the matter, we will attend one of their Sabbath evening meetings. After the usual opening ceremony of song and prayer, an elder will occupy the stand for a short time. He takes no text as a general rule, but commences by saying, that he feels very happy in having the privilege of standing before a congregation of the Saints of God, as he for one can testify that they are the only people on the earth, that God recognizes as such; and that he also knows for himself, that the work which they are engaged in, is of God; and that if the Saints will only be obedient and pay their tithings, and live up to their privileges; that they need not have any doubts for the future. As God is ever watchful over them, both spiritual and temporal; but that it is essential that they should learn to help themselves; and that on the morrow they must all turn out. While some will clean out the irrigation ditches, the others would repair the fences. He will then conclude by saying, "May the Lord bless, and enable us all to fulfill our duty, is my prayer, Amen.

Another one will then take the stand, and go through with about the same rigmarole. And then another, who says that he is happy too. But we can see that he is not telling the truth, if his countenance is a correct index of his mind. But we can look over this general failing, as he says that he is not in the habit of speaking in public; but he feels it a duty, to say something whenever called on, and that he fully endorses and vouches for what the brethren have just said, and that is his prayer, amen.

Now is not this programme of worship very similar to the strange worship recorded by Alma in the 16th chapter and 14th verse of the Book of Mormon. I see no difference in form or sentiments, except only two noticeable features, viz., where the Nephites had a spirit for a God, the Brighamites have fallen man, although they acknowledge a Christ, yet they do not obey his commandments, which are not any more laudable than to ignore him entirely. But the greatest treat the faithful have, is the semi-annual conferences, when there is always a section of the battery of their heaviest pieces sent here from head quarters, at which times they are stuffed as tight as toads on the higher law, besides having the privilege of exercising that great boon of freedom, which is conferred on all the faithful, to vote for and sustain whoever the priesthood places in authority. And as we have come a long ways to get with this royal race of kings and priests, we will have to attend one of their big gatherings, as a silent spectator, as we are bound to get our foes mashed anyhow.

After the usual ceremonies, the show begins. The first thing in order is the sustaining of the authorities. John Taylor's name comes first, as prophet, seer and revelator. Then the other officers according to standing or precedence; and as each department is voted on separately, their hands are kept bobbing up and down like a pump handle, for at least an hour. But the strangest part of the affair is, a majority of these tools do not know or comprehend what they are doing. Little do they think that they are voluntarily voting themselves and children into serfdom and idolatry. And if they would only consider for a moment the absurdity of upholding a man for a seer who has never exhibited any prophetic powers in the past, I think that their natural instincts would teach them better. But whenever the minds of a people become darkened, how great is that darkness. And as the business part is now dispensed with, we will now get a taste of the stronger diet, or higher law of Brighamism. So a big gun is placed in position. The first discharge is a friendly salute, as he feels exceedingly happy in having the privilege, &c.; and that those who are living their religion by obedience to counsel, and paying their tithing, would be abundantly blessed in eternity. But I think such options are far fetched, and will never be realized. The next discharge is a kind of raking fire on the lukewarm, the disobedient, the non-tithe payers, and all who do not bow a willing knee to the powers that be. Then comes a broad side of grape, canister, and red hot chain shot, into the ranks of all those who have the hardihood, or moral courage to withdraw from their abominable sink of corruption. There is nothing that he can say about them but what is too good; and after he gets warmed up to the highest pitch he orders them out of the house. He says, "Yes, you can leave and be damned, for all I care." Then he will branch off into the glories of the polygamic paradise. He paints it out, and holds it up to his hearers in all its lustful extravagance. And the only felicitous life for gods or men to live, which invariably wafts his faithful henchmen beyond the gods and angels, to a heaven or world of their own creation, surrounded by hosts of beautiful houris, that are all his own. He will become so elated in anticipation of the exquisite felicity that awaits him in the future, that the water will course out of each corner of his mouth, and drip from his jaws. The speaker says: "You want to know if I am married or not? I answer yes. And muchly married at that; and if any of you ever expect to attain unto the celestial glory, you will have to go into polygamy too."

And it so worked on the lustful heart of an old southern proselyte, who had for a long time wanted a younger, if not a better looking woman than the old wife of his youth, whose brow was now furrowed by time and care, and her once raven curls were silvered by the frosts of many winters; and as he had not proved a faithful subject up to that time, he threw himself entirely into the arms of the priesthood, paid up all his tithing, got a recommend from the authorities here, then packed off to Salt Lake, and took the oaths of obedience; not only himself but also his family. In regard to himself, he made an entire failure in securing a buxom lass in her teens, but came back as he went. But according to current reports, he succeeded in ridding himself (for a short time at least) of his grown daughter, to a good, faithful, who already had one wife. So when number two was introduced, it was not long before the domestic pendulum ceased to vibrate, as it had lost its equilibrium. And as number one in times passed, had proven herself equal to any and all emergencies, she was so in this. And although number two was ever introduced to strangers as our hired girl, yet when number one said get, she left, and again took shelter under the paternal roof. But her father said that he would make her celestial lord and master pay her board, as he would not keep her for nothing. And from what I am able to learn, there was no pay forthcoming; so she went out to service, but her father will ever have the great remorse to knaw at his vitals, that he was the sole cause of blasting his daughter's happiness. This is an exceptional case; for most invariably, the older one is abandoned, and left to shift for herself and children.

I merely bring these particular incidents up to show the gross iniquity that is tolerated in this, one of the States of this great Republic, with scarcely a probability of ever reaching them with the law, on account of the horrid oaths of secrecy that they are bound by; therefore it is needless for me to enumerate the many flagrant breaches, not only of God's laws, but also those of the land, which are practiced openly by the adherents of Brighamism. I will only add, that there are not less than eight or ten men who are living in defiance of the laws, at this time, in this locality.

Dear Herald:-As many of the Saints to whom our appeal has come through your columns for aid for the church at Fremont, would like to know as to how we are prospering in regard to the debt; we take this method of informing them. We have succeeded in reducing the debt somewhat, by the kindness of a few of the Saints, who have responded to our appeal. We have had the time of payment extended for three months, during which time we hope to be able to raise enough to pay the debt, if the Saints will continue to respond, as a few of them have done. We believe it to be our duty to help one another in matters of this kind, as it is in other things; and if we fulfill the law of Christ, we must bear one another's burdens, (Gal. 6:2), which I believe includes the temporal as well as spiritual things; we thereby show that we love each other; and also prove that we have passed from death unto life, (1 John 3:14); and the only means by which we can manifest our love is our works; for "faith without works is dead." Assisting one another in this way I believe to be a part of our work. Please read 1 John 3:17; then give a practical application to the 18th verse, and thereby be classed among the "doers of the word."

Then, dear Saints, let us show our faith by our works. So send your mites, and be assured that. we will give due credit for all that comes into our hands in due time. There are many who could send two or three dollars without ever missing it, and thereby help to further along a good cause. Let us labor both spiritually and temporally as children of the light while the day lasts, so that when the night cometh we may enjoy the fruits of our labors. I hope to hear W. M. RUMEL. from many.

Address, 1433, 18th St., Omaha, Nebraska.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, February 3d, 1885.

Dear Bro. Foseph:-Bro. Blair arrived according to promise, and I believe did excellent service. We enjoyed his visit, appreciated his good counsel, and were blessed by his preaching. We have good reason to believe his visit did good; and yet many of us feel greatly disappointed, as the real object of his visit was a failure. Against considerable opposition we secured for him the Court House, advertized the lectures to be given by him, and ordered a thousand hand-bills printed, to be distributed through the town; and considerable interest was manifested by many to hear our side of Mormonism, when unexpectedly the news came to them, that through sickness Bro. Blair had returned home.

We are trying to do the best we can to uphold the banner of righteousness; and although we have much to contend against, and the conflict rages at times; and although victory does not always crown our efforts, and our advance upon the enemy is fiercely met and we are sometimes defeated. We feel not to be too much overjoyed at victory, nor yet cast down at defeat; but using the power given us according to our best wisdom, we can safely leave the result of the contest in the hands of him who hath charge, the captain of our salvation. We have very little trouble with the enemy from without; but his hardest blows are dealt from within. Here is where the enemy seems to meet with the best success; and this will test the best soldier. It is comparatively easy, when one is surrounded by friends all united as one body, to move forward upon the enemy's strongholds, and carry them by storm; and I know by experience in the late war of the rebellion, that there was something akin to pleasure, in this kind of warfare. But when the influence of the enemy is felt from within, and signs of mutiny are visible, sometimes the bravest heart fails. To prevent the wildest kind of confusion, desperate means sometimes have to be resorted to; and the coward, and those who are not truly brave, will feel like getting out of the way, and letting others fight the battle. This work is of God, and like one of old, "I would rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness."

The last two weeks I have been assisting Bro. Warnky in holding a series of meetings at Armstrong. Quite a good interest is manifest, and some are very near the kingdom. The few saints there, by living their religion, seem to have lived down prejudice, and an excellent spirit prevails. Business here is very dull. Winter has been very severe.

Your brother in Christ, F. G. PITT.

GENERAL NEWS.

Feb. 12.—Gen. Wolseley telegraphs from Korti that no reliance is to be placed in the reports of Gen. Gordon's death, which have all been based on rumors collected by Col. Wilson's party on its retreat down the Nile. Gen. Wolseley has sent twenty spies up the Nile to ascertain the facts. These messengers are expected to return very soon. The correspondent of Reuter's Telegraph Company was severely wounded in Tuesdays action at Bierti. Gen. Wolseley has telegraphed to the Khedive that no more fighting is to be anticipated on the Nile until the expedition recently commanded by Gen. Earle reaches Ber-

A dispatch from Tonquin states that the French column advancing toward Langson under Gen. Briere de l'Isle has had three days of hard fighting in the defiles of the mountains. The French losses were heavy, but the troops are making steady progress despite the obstinate resistance of the Chinese.

Mormonism was severely condemned in the Minnesota House to-day by a concurrent resolution calling upon Congress to pass laws which shall eradicate the evil of polygamy.

A table of the comparative consumption of alcoholic liquors has been complied by the London Times, with some interesting results. The average yearly consumption per head is given in litres (a litre is a little less than a quart), under the three divisions of spirits (or hard liquors,) wine, and Beer:

	Spirits. Litres.	Wine.	Beer,
Canada	. 3.08	0.29	. 8.51
Norway	. 3.90	2.00	. 15.30
United States	. 4.79	. 2.64	. 31.30

Switzerland			. 37.50
Netherlands	9.87	. 2.57	. 27.00
Denmark	18.90	. 1.00	. 33-33

Some of these figures are worth a moment's notice. Belgium, it seems, contains the greatest number of beer-drinkers, with Great Britain second in this list, and Germany, contrary to common opinion, only third. France drinks the most wine, and Switzerland comes next, while the amount accredited to the United States, though comparatively small, yet exceeds that of Canada is the most moderate Great Britain. drinker of all.

Feb. 13.—Gen. Briere de l'Isle telegraphs that he expects to reach Langson to-day. Tuesday he encountered the Chinese in force upon the hilltops and was compelled to fight his way. The Chinese abandoned their fortified works in the mountain gorges on the approach of the French troops Count Taafe, of Austria, recently said: America herself has given us an example. It seems as if the United States does not intend much longer to permit the threats and doings of the Anarchical band. The three groups of Anarchists—Fenians, Socialists, and Nihilists—all aim to reach the same end by the same means, and we ought to make no difference between them. This connection exists. But it appears to me that the Fenians restrict their attention chiefly to England, while the others are more international in their scope. But I cannot acknowledge a difference. In Austria we have to take very serious measures. The Anti-Socialist bill, which I have placed before the Reichsrath is indispensably necessary.

I am told that I ought first of all to improve the police force—that is to say, sufficiently to quickly suppress any attempts by the Anarchists. True, the German Anti-Socialist law has had no success, but who knows what would have happened without this law? In the management of railroads vast and precautionary measures are taken, notwithstanding which accidents occur. But for this reason, then, should all precautions be neglected? We have seen to-day what a nervous fear prevails among all classes. In Parliament to-day I was literally besieged by Deputies wishing to know if it were true that a revolution had broken out in Paris. It turned out to be simply a rumor, but the people have grown to be so fearful and anxious that the Anti-Socialist law has come to be an actual necessity. At present Vienna alone, by exceptional laws, is enabled to deal promptly with Socialism, but more thorough measures are absolutely necessary for the provinces. We are in hopes that England will take energetic measures against anarchy, and that in America the Government will in self-interest protect itself. The Edmunds bill in the Senate at Washington is very gratifying."

Earthquake shocks were felt to day at Torre del Canegro, Spain, forty miles north of Granada. The hospital was seriously damaged.

The bill prohibiting the importation of foreign contract labor was taken up and discussed in the Senate. Messrs. Hawley and McPherson opposed the measure. Mr. Blair defended it on the ground that the working classes in this country should be protected against competition. The Hocking Valley troubles, he said, were due to the class of people which the bill would exclude. Mr. Ingalls said that it would soon be necessary to decide whether every one on the face of the earth has a right to come to the United States and do as he pleased to the detriment of those already here. Mr. Hawley disapproved of the contract system, but did not like the bill. Mr. Bayard also thought the measure objectionable. No action was taken.

A very interesting discovery of Indian relics was made yesterday near Dubuqe, Iowa, by laborers engaged in excavating for the railroad across the river. Among the relics were several wedges made of iron and stone and one of copper. The former are of the usual wedge shape. The latter is near the shape of a coffin, except that it tapers to a sharp edge at the lower end. A singular characteristic of the copper wedge is that it will cut stone. These relics were found about ten miles north of the city at a depth of six feet. They excite great interest among the antiquarians of this city.

The police report to the Government that 2,000 Anarchists reside in Switzerland, and that they are chiefly of foreign birth. The leading sections are centered in Zurich, Geneva, Lucerne, Berne, Lausanne, and Fribourg. The number of secret foreign police has been largely augmented.

Feb. 15.—A dispatch from Assab Bay states that the Somoli natives have revolted against the Egyptian Government in Harar which is the most important territory in the Somoli region and was annexed by Egypt during the reign of Ishmail Pasha. The Italian traders and colonists at Harrar have made a claim upon the Italian Government for protection.

An official telegram from Gen. Briere de l'Isle states that the flag of France now floats over Langson. The Chinese position at Kulia was also captured by the French, the Chinese army having been routed after a hot fight.

The following offer is made this week in the United Irishman, of which Jerry O'Donovan Rossa is editor: $10,000 reward for the body of the Prince of Wales, dead or alive.

The idea that "England's distress is Ireland's opportunity" prompts a suggestive article in last week's Boston (Catholic,) Pilot, which, after affirming that it is not yet too late for England and Ireland to be friends, provided the former will consent to the dissolution of the union and the independence of Ireland, proceeds to mark out the duty of Irishmen in the present emergency. The Pilot wants to have national missions sent from Ireland, or under the direction of Irish leaders, to present the secession cause of Ireland to Germany, France, and Russia, and to convey a message which "will reach England's enemies from Moscow to Delhi." The Pilot wishes to have the secession purpose of Ireland made so plain as to compel the presence of 50,000 English soldiers, and "to hold the English navy in sleepless guard round her coast." Should the storm burst that is now gathering, the Pilot affirms that Ireland must declare her independence, and that she would receive early recognition as a nation from France, Germany, Austria, Russia and the United States. These declarations may be taken as an indication of the hopes which are cherished by Catholic Irishmen that England's foreign embroilments may be utilized for securing for Ireland independence. It would not be strange if these hopes took the form of some positive effort later on. The hot Irish blood is impatient of obstacles and considerate as to results. While the chance of realizing such expectations as those expressed in the Pilot article would be slender, there is no question that agitation and possible turbulence in Ireland would greatly weaken the effectiveness of English arms abroad.

Feb. 16th.—There is great excitement in England over the news that the Russian Government has ordered 2,000 Krupp guns of the largest pattern for use in Central Asia.

Anarchy still reigns in the United States of Columbia, and the country is in a complete uproar. Latest reports state that the rebels are beaten at all points and that the Government is triumphant.

Three thousand unemployed working-men marched through the streets of London yesterday to the building occupied by the Local Government Board. A committee from the ranks entered the office and demanded relief for the people they represented. They asked for immediate employment. Upon meeting with a refusal the crowd became a howling mob. The police were overpowered, and the paraders invaded Downing street, where they yelled invectives against the Government. They tried to force their way into the room where the Cabinet Council was sitting at the time, but were finally driven back. The mob then tried unsuccessfuly to storm the Admirality and Home Office.

The Porte is anxious, alarmed, and angered at Italy's action in the Red Sea, and her recently hatched alliance with England.

Gubat, the present centre of British military operations in the Soudan, is a village of 130 houses and about 700 inhabitants. It is surrounded with vegetable gardens, which supply the markets of Shendy, of which town Gubat is virtually a suburb, although situated on the other side of the Nile. It contains, also, the cemetery where were buried some of the most famous saints and chieftains of Shendy, a fact which makes the village sacred in the esteem of the entire Mahometan world, and will render its occupation by the British peculiarly irritating to El Mahdi.

One phaze of the funeral procession of Jules Valles, at Paris France, is thus described: The cortege did not long progress peacefully. The cries of "Long live the Commune," and the sight of the German Socialist emblem soon caused a riot, which, but for presence of the police, might have had grave consequences. The students who lined the boulevard began the uproar with shouts of "Down with the Germans!" mingled with the revolutionary cheering, and then a group of long-haired youths made a rush at the Teuton in the billycock hat who was carrying the violet wreath. The onset was resisted, but was again renewed, and from that time until the river was reached a running fight was kept up between the Socialists surrounding the trophy and the students. Sticks were flourished, windows were smashed, and several quiet bystanders were stoned and a dozen heads were broken. At last the students were vanquished and driven off amid the exultant yells af the revolutionists. The procession streamed on through the dense black lines of people flaunting German Socialism in the face of Paris. At 3 o'clock the crowds were still pouring into the cemetery, atheist poets and press men were beginning their speeches, and Jules Valles was in his grave.

Professor Ely, of Johns Hopkins University, says that dynamite explosions are a "local manifestation of an international devil," and adds: "I must say frankly that I believe we are just beginning to enter on a terrible era in the world's history—an era of international and domestic warfare such as has never been seen, and the end of which only the Almighty can foretell." The world is convulsed with fear. Capital combines against muscle, and trembles as it watches, gloomy browed want organizing for relief.

Feb. 17th—Dispatches from Port Said announce the arrival of the second Italian expedition sent to co-operate with the British in the Soudan Dispatches from Korti state that the Arabs are deserting from Metemneh in large numbers and entering the British camp at Gubat.

Gen. Briere de l'Isle telegraphed from Langson to the Government the following account of the march of she French troops to that city: "The French troops raised their camp at Dongson the 10th inst. The 11th they defeated the Chinese near Vaudi. The 12th they had a second battle with the Chinese. The Chinese made a stubborn resistance, but were completely routed. We stormed several forts, and, after a rapid march, arrived the 14th before Langson, which we found to be evacuated and burning, Our troops took possession and at once occupied a position beyond Langson in the hills. A large quantity of arms, ammunition, and provisions was captured. The Chinese withdrew toward the frontier. Their losses were very heavy. Darkness and bad weather favored the Chinese fight. Their rout was complete. Our losses since the 9th have been thirty-nine killed and 222 wounded."

The designs of Russia on Afghanistan are denied.

Feb. 18th.—A deputation of unemployed working-men went to the British Home Office in London yesterday to ask Government relief for the unemployed in London. They declared that they wanted work not alms. The Home Secretary said experience had shown that attempts to relieve distress by inaugurating public improvements were unwise. He promised, however, to do what he could, and thought that something might be done in the way of facilitating emigration to the British colonies.

A dispatch from Admiral Courbet says: "We have attacked the Chinese squadron and gained a complete victory." Another dispatch says the French fleet succeeded in sinking two of the three Chinese men-of-war which took refuge in the Ningpo River Saturday last.

It is firmly believed in Japanese Government circles that the indemnity which Corea has agreed to pay Japan for the attack made by Chinese soldiers on the Japanese Minister and troops at Seoul Palace in Korea, and the burning of the Japanese legation the night of Dec. 6th, will lead to war between China and Japan. When the conference between the Japanese Minister and representatives of the Corean Government took place, the Chinese special Envoy insisted on being present. The Japanese Minister objected and the Chinese Envoy was compelled to withdraw. Before doing so he addressed a letter to the Corean Prime Minister, telling him if the Corean Government dared to directly conclude terms with Japan it would be strongly censured by the Chinese Government. This only hastened conclusions, and Japan's terms were accepted. The Japanese are highly indignant at the action of China, and insists on that country yielding full satisfaction for its share in the attack on the Japanese troops and legation. If a compromise is not reached war will ensue.

The Japanese Government has tendered formal thanks to the United States Government for the humane and courageous conduct of Gen. Foote, American Minister at Corea, in rescuing at great peril to himself several Japanese during the riot and guarding them from the fury of the mob.

The offer of the Rev. Mr. Holcomb, lately connected with the United States Legation at Pekin, to lend China $25,900,000 with interest at five per cent per annum, for twenty years, on condition that the lenders have the right to exploit all railroads in China, has been rejected.

The Shanghai property has depreciated within the last year $12,000,000 owing to the Franco-Chinese war.

Deasy, Nationalist member of the House of Commons for Cork, addressing the central branch of the Irish National League to-day, said the recent quiet attitude of Irishmen was due to the reaction following a long period of exitement. Now that they were rested, they would soon become active again. He said he believed the "firm and gentle" Spencer would shortly follow in the footsteps of James French and others, and disappear from Irish public life. England's hands were now full, and the Irish should take every opportunity to strike a blow at her power in order to recover freedom. Deasy said he thought that within a year there would be another anti-rent strike.

At a late meeting of the Mormon priesthood ex-Mayor Jennings is reported to have said they must do one of three things—obey the laws, emigrate, or whip the United States.

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

Feb. 12.—Fire broke out in the insane department of the county almshouse in West Philadelphia to-night. The flames spread rapidly and before the 300 inmates could be released nineteen of them were burned to death. The others were left to roam about the grounds at will, and many of them were picked up by the police throughout the city. The buildings at eleven to-night were still burning, and the other departments are in great danger.

Fire destroyed the entire west side of the puplic square at Princeton, Mo., this morning. The loss is estimated at $75,000. Loss by fire at Big Rapids, Mich., $40,000. Chinatown, Dak., 10,000. Des. Moines, Iowa, $20,000. Edmore, Mich., $20,000. Midland, Mich., $20,000. Grave's Hotel, Ind., $4,000. Atlanta Ga., $15,000. Atlantic City, N. J., $10,000.

Feb. 13.—Twenty-eight persons are now thought to have perished in the flames which consumed the insane department of the county almshouse near Philadelphia night before last. The violent patients were locked in the cells on the third floor and were all burned to death. During the night many insape persons were found wandering about in different parts of the city. The report that the streets were full of escaped maniacs caused much alarm in West Philadelphia.

Near New Albany Ind, three persons were burned to death in a farm-house. At Calvert, Tex., two female servants were burned to death. Loss by fire at Schenectady, N. Y., $10,000. Pittsfield, Mass., $15,000. Near Elizabeth, N. J., $15,000. Vassar, Mich., 10,000. The County Court House of Henderson county, Tex. Supposed to have been fired to destroy the record evidence of the guilt of five murderers about to be tried. New York City, $30,000.

Feb. 15.—Loss by fire near Sheboygan, Wis., $2,500. Jacksonville, Fla., $50,000. Battle Creek, Mich., $5,000. Nyack, N. J., $10,000. Lancaster, Pa., $23,000.

The particulars of the widespread castastrophe which has befallen the Alpine districts of Piedmont, and the notices of new disasters, or of those which are becoming known as communication is gradually established with the further valleys, fill daily several columns in each of the newspapers. The intelligence, however, is still in great part little more than a melancholy catalogue of destruction and death, caused by the avalanches, which seem to have rolled one after another down every mountain side. A correspondent sent out by the Gazetta del Popolo of Turin describes the terrible disaster at Frassino as not less frightful than that caused by the earthquake in Ischia.

"I write," he says, "close to a heap of mutilated corpses, extracted from beneath the ruins, in the midst of the heartrending lamentations of the survivors."

The avalanche at this spot fell from Mount Ricordone, 1,800 metres above the level of the sea. When about half way down, a part of it spread to an enormous width, and falling on the road from Venasea to Sampeyre and the Val Varaita, completely destroyed the Village of Fasi, inhabited by eighty-six persons of whom forty were killed. The other part overwhelmed the Village of Martini, with about fifty inhabitants, of whom twenty-nine were killed, making a total through this one avalanche, of sixty-nine deaths. The avalanche that fell at Venaus measured, it is estimated, forty metres of snow in hight by 200 in length.

An indescribable panic is said to reign among the inhabitants of the Val d'Aosta by reason of the continued avalanches, carrying death and destruction with them. The villages in the Val Luserna are completely isolated, so that it has been impossible to ascertain the extent of the disaster there. Communication with the Val di Sturma is still interrupted. Telegrams from Cuneo state that it has been impossible to penetrate through the snow into the Village of Schieu, and it is feared that the fall of the Avalanche upon it has been attended by lamentable consequences.

Assistance, however, is being given in all directions. The troops are working like heroes, and the inhabitants with all the strength of desperation, in the hope of rescuing their relations alive. Even the women, discarding their petticoats for trousers or leggins, are working with the rest. But it is a task of great difficulty, and of no little danger to those at work and to those still alive beneath the snow. A spade driven too far may strike one or other of those buried in whom life still remains, or give the last impetus to the roof of a cottage tottering under the weight of snow and send it down, crushing those within. The only way to get at the houses of the buried villagers is by sinking shafts gradually, and then making careful apertures through the roofs. In some places the soldiers have found masses of ruins instead of standing houses.

To the many heartrending and touching incidents-such as that of the old woman who refused help until those with her were saved first, and I may mention here that she was 83 years old-there have, as at Ischia, been added others bordering on the ridiculous. At one shaft a soldier at work hearing lamentations below redoubled his efforts, and then descending feet foremost to the rescue through the aperture had his leg seized by the teeth of a donkey, the only occupant. But, alas! as at Ischia, there are those who have become demented at the loss of their relatives. A girl stood with fixed eyes watching some of the soldiers at work, and on being questioned replied quietly, "I am waiting for my father, and my mother, and my brother." Piteous descriptions are received of the anguish of the people inclosed, as it were, in sepulchres, waiting for thirty and forty hours for death, and their joy, and tears, and gratitude on being liberated.

From a house buried in the Val di Lanzo a woman was rescued alive, after forty eight hours, the only one living of five occupants. In one of the houses overwhelmed at Balme, in the Stura Valley, the village schoolmaster and his family of six were crushed to death; and from another, inhabited by a woman and five children, two prisoners were got out alive at the end of three days, but the others had all perished. At Exiles the snow reached up to the telegraph-wires, and avalanches are reported to be still falling in that district. One of those buried a company of soldiers on their way to render assistance; but fortunately it was not heavy, and they all got out safely from under it.

To the long list of villages overwhelmed or partly destroyed already sent must now be added; Balziglia, completely buried; Chialamberto, where only the tops of some trees are seen projecting above the snow; Forengs, near Chiabrano; and Romborgogno, where eight persons were killed. Heavy avalanches have fallen at Ronco. Valprato, and Campiglia, but the extent of the consequent disasters is not yet known, communication with them being still impossible. Six cottages in the Village of Musternale have been thrown down by an avalance there, and two in that of Fontanelly. At Ribordone nine women were caught by an avalanche and all except one perished. An avalanche at Aisone killed nine persons. The greater part of the Village of Bracchiello is buried under the snow. Coassolo. Villarpelice, Lemie, St. Rhemy, and many others, have also suffered.

In fact, it would almost seem that not a single village has escaped injury and loss of life among its inhabitants. To the destruction of human life must be added the loss of many cattle, to the great misfortune of the survivors.

The Chamber of Deputies has voted 150,000f. in aid of the sufferers.

Feb. 16th.—Loss by fire at Pottsyille, Ind., $100,000. Madison, Wis., $18,000. Chicago, Ill., $1.500. Eufala, Ala., $100,000. Cincinnati, O., $75,000. Salem, Mass., $40.000. Wellsboro, Pa., $35,000. Caledonia, Ont., $10,000.

Seventeen men were killed at Gibraltar yesterday by the explosion of a powder magazine.

News is received of a collision between the steamer Westernland, from Antwerp for New York, and the steamer Holmhirst. The latter was sunk and four of her crew drowned. The Westernland has put in at Plymouth, Eng., for repairs.

Feb. 17th.—Three lighters loaded with cotton were burned at the foot of Christopher street, New York, yesterday. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

The bodies of the victims of the Alta, Utah, snow-slide came in to Salt Lake City tonight. Twelve in all were dug out. Fred Cullinan was rescued alive and well. Two others were also alive, but badly hurt. One body (a Chinaman) has not been found. The twelve bodies came in escorted by the fifty men who brought them out of the canon and another flfty who went from Salt Lake to-day,

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

Count Taasse of Austria, in a recent interview said: It is clear to every one that something must be done against this inundation of American wheat, flour, and petroleum. The peasants demand the total prohibition of American food imports. We are in a very bad way. Fur exports are restricted, and we import grain without taking care of our own interests. We cannot complete with America any longer. The Americans have incredibly cheap freight rates. The competition grasps the Austrian peasant by the throat, or, better said, attacks his money-bags. Why should he make his life miserable by working year in and year out without profit? In Bohemia grain to-day can find no market. The price is so low that it may be said to be worthless. The importation of petroleum from America," said Count Taaffe further, "gives rise to serious disquietude. In this matter we must positively take measures for the protection of our own interests. The question is now being considered, and there is no doubt that Parliament will occupy itself with the problem of protection against this American competition."

The Manchester, Eng., Guardian's commercial article says: "Business is small. Producers are unwilling to accept lower prices. Weaving has been further curtailed. The home demand for yarns is weaker. The market is suffering from the fall of Khartoum and the weakness in Eastern and South American exchanges. The calico printing-works are producing much below their capacity, and the Glasgow cotton manufacturers will endeavor to secure a general reduction of production."

It is reported that the backbone of the strike of the carpet company's operatives at Lowell, Mass., is broken. Most of the strikers have gone back to work, and the mills have started up in all departments to encourage them to return.

The bank clearings of the principal cities of the United States last week amounted to $716,698,111, a decrease of $27,335,648 as compared with the corresponding week of 1884. The decrease is attributed in large part to the snow blockade.

Letter in San Francisco Chronicle: Alaska forests contain enough timber to supply the world. The forests of pine, spruce, fir, and hemlock cover every island of archipelago and a goodly portion of the mainland. The trees are straight and tall and grow close together. The only sawmill at present in operation is at Douglas Island, and so far there has not been a cord of timber cut for shipment. The trees, as a rule, do not have large dimensions and will not always cut up into good-sized boards. For fuel, however, the wood is excellent, and much of it is available for building purposes. There is little decorative wood, although the yellow pine is richly colored and might be used to advantage in interior work. Alaska spruce is an excellent variety, and often measures five feet in diameter. It is considered the best spruce in the world, and the supply is very abundant. In the interior of the country, timber is of much heavier growth than near the coast and on the islands. Regarding the hemlock, there is a large supply and the bark compares favorably with that of the Eastern trees, used in tanning establishments. None have vet attempted to compute the value of the Alaska forests. It may be they will not be necessary for years to come, but whenever wood grows scarce elsewhere, or whenever civilization fastens itself upon Alaska, the timber of the region will be found ready at hand and existing in rich profusion. Calculating only approximately the value of our possessions to-day, the forests must be considered. Practically inexhaustible, they aid most materially to the wealth of the Terri-

LETTER FROM ELDER J. CAFFALL.

DEAR HERALD:—'Tis cheering, to know you have survived the old, and are continuing the warfare in the new year. Appreciating the good received in the past year, thinking your continuance as urgent as ever, I trust the needed help may come.

I am not willing to admit being a croaker; yet must say in perusing your columns of late, to play the part of a bee, has seemed quite necessary. The demand on your space for scientific, sensational articles, with selections, etc., seems to preclude, reports from representatives, and articles reflecting church discipline, etc.; and the enquiry arises whether in the next decade, any characteristics to distinguish you as a church organ, will be seen. Though it can not be thought but when the general make up for your columns comes, in the event of a superabundance of matter, some must receive the go by, or with one editorial blast, land in the capacious stomach of the waste basket; but I have thought, that reports from representatives and articles reflecting our discipline, laws, usages, etc., should have the precedence. But my conception may be illy founded. It may be thought, however, that in church discipline all are too far advanced to need further instruction thereon. But it is so far from this, that one of two things to the most casual observer is apparent; viz., either profound ignorance exists, or wilfulness to that extent, that in some places or parts of God's moral vineyard, one may almost as well look for diamonds in a swine's snout, as effects from a prompt and continuous application of our recognized church discipline.

The grandeur of the gospel econony, consists in its simplicity; and as this economy reflects a method of adoption, nothing is more rational than the thought begotten by this fact; that a method of government subsequent to adoption is imperative, upon all the adopted. And that the laws and rules which this government reflects, may be enforced, officials are appointed. And as authority is the basis or corner stone of all institutions, whether human or divine, it therefore follows that to officials appointed, authority is given to act in the position appointed; and although in the Church of Christ, the recipient is not sworn after the manner of officials in human governments, yet it is understood that a manifest willingness to accept an ordination, is tantamount to a covenant to acquit one's self of responsibilities, said ordination may impose. And as responsibilities presuppose laws to define those responsibilities; therefore law, so far as it is explanatory of duties becomes the rule of action, and though few, if any officials are altogether deprived of discretionary power, yet such discretionary power is not authority to transcend or fall below the limits, or conditions of the law, to avenge enemies or favor friends; but rather the bestowal of favors upon him or those that may be under censure, though violating a known law, delaying or hastening his time of trial, etc.

It follows, therefore, that if officials should either become negligent, or presumptuous to such an extent, as to withhold, or enforce, to bestow favor or satisfy revenge, allowing that the conferment of the power was valid, that the recipient give evidence of soundness of mental powers, that he will be held responsible for said negligence or the prostitution of power to unholy porposes. There is nothing in the gospel economy to warrant the thought, that power to formulate, or make laws, is given by the author. So far from this, he reserves this power to himself. And all laws which we receive are from him as the giver, which make us the receivers, and their bounds and conditions are our guide; and as we keep, or violate, so we show our regard or disregard for the same. And herein is our loyalty or disloyalty shown. Latter Day Saints claim to believe that all helps and governments in the church are of God, tending to the one result; and hence, disputation about place, position, &c., must be the result of ignorance or wilfulness. But ah me! how slow we are to acknowledge either; but always ready to plunge right into the work of self-justification; and it really appears as one of your contributors once said, "I am wrong" are very hard words. And somebody has dared to say, "What fools we mortals are."

How often we hear of a wounded spirit, but how difficult to find out who inflicted the wound. Yes; and not unfrequently we hear rejoicing through having escaped the clutches of false brethren; but in vain we look for confessions of, and retraction from deceptive practices.

Few there are but condemn tattling; and yet what mountains of trouble are made by the practice? We express our surprise that so many were offended at Christ while prosecuting his ministerial labor; yet how easily we fall into the same error, letting anger burn in our souls, seeking every opportunity to send daggers into the hearts of the object of our spite, under some justifying pretext; yet failing to exhibit the required manliness in having recourse to legitimate means to bring about a proper and just adjudication. No tongue can describe nor pencil paint the amount of trouble thus created. If theorizing is invited and shall fail to bring us justification from God, without the practical work, how easy it is to deceive ourselves. What a pity it is that we don't more thoroughly view ourselves in the gospel mirror, that we might see ourselves as others see us. Surely essaying to teach and correct others must be a fearful responsibility. The gospel economy was not devised and revealed to qualify for the prosecution of litigation to a successful issue, through intrigue and sharp practice, through which so much deadly strife is created; but to prevent this. Hence the necessity for self-abnegation with corresponding efforts to overcome evil with good, etc.; and so to speak is to enter a warfare, against one's self; and so the saying obtained, that he who subdues his spirit is as if he had taken a city; the meaning as I take it, is to overcome all that is evil in self. And in view of the fact of Christ sending his diciples forth to reprove the world of sin, etc., this is very consistent.

is very consistent. Frequently are your columns freighted with articles condemnatory of wrong doing, which is proper if corresponding efforts are seen to suppress wrong, and punish the perpetrators of the same; but in the absence of the latter, the former to sober thinkers, who are watching our move-ments, is but the veriest twaddle. We teach that God does not allow condemnation, through revenge; but designs that condemnation brought by disobedience to revealed law, is designed to be reformatory; and that it will so ultimate. And that the gospel is to save us from, and not in our sins. A membership in Christ's body is attained by or through remission of sins, which remission cometh through a compliance with prescribed conditions, and in vain would we seek this membership while stubbornly refusing to comply with said conditions. But attaining to this membership is not the finish; does not place the seal of perfection upon our brow, or inscribe in indelible letters, saved; but only the seal of our adoption, which brings a consciousness of a relationship with God, with assurance of a supply of vitality or spiritual life, so long as efforts are made to perpetuate this relationship. But so long as we struggle in mortality, there is a possibility of this relationship ceasing, making the stoppage of our supply of spiritual power certain. This is the logical sequence deducible from the fact of this relationship being perpetuated conditionally; all of which is made clear from the very splendid instruction given by Christ in the fifteenth chapter of John, or the language is without significance. And whether "I sink or swim, survive or perish," stand or fall, I am glad it is so. I have always believed that the gospel was to save me as all others; but never has the present or future been so dazzling as to enable me to decide that I should be saved thereby. Ability, with corresponding efforts to portray Christ's excellence, is but as a bubble without continuous efforts to imitate or attain to that excellence by a practice of what He imposed. A feigned piety may bring a prestige, but it will be fleeting; as outward acts demonstrate the inward intention, and by our acts we stand or fall. Very much sympathy is exhibited for the world, and great anxiety for their salvation is shown; and ever and anon we hear the cry, "O Lord, revive thy work," etc., which is all commendable in its time and place, but the genuineness of all this can only be seen in constant labor, showing a godly zeal, leading to a co-operation in activity from member to president, as our circumstances and abilities allow, and duties require, and whereas it becomes practical, condemnation will follow a failure to work according to the pattern. The laws of God are so simple in their construction, and universal in their application, that no excuse for their violation can be made; and yet in the mercy of God, a willingness to retract, when in an unguarded moment they are violated, sets us right again; and so it is that our relationship, which begins conditionally, is thus perpetuated. And though a failure to bend, or retract, when wrong may be an exhibition of manhood, as manhood is understood without gospel light; it is one means of closing the door of mercy against ourselves. And he who helps another to prosper by stealth, or a trampling down of law and order which he should honor and submit to, is but sending him whom he claims to befriend, faster on the road to condemnation and shame. The power by which officials are made in the church, is to prevent and hinder trouble, rather than make it; and as the acceptation of the gospel brings peace to the soul; so will labors imposed upon officials when rightly performed, tend to perpetuate it. This fact is demonstrated by the spiritual condition of branches. I do not claim that proper, and continuous labor of branch officials would prove effective in altogether preventing trouble, but would do very much. towards it; and this zeal in time of peace would greatly tend to qualify to deal with and adjust trouble when it should come. Most of the troubles that bring distress grow out of the most trivial, and sometimes nonsensical causes. Timely interferences of a Teacher with proper advice, would often prevent troubles that gain large dimensions, creating litigation, most cruel in its nature and character. And some-times trouble is passed over under the pretext of showing mercy; and left to fester like an old sore, until it bursts forth like a big flame, requiring almost superhuman efforts to quench, which a little caution, with ordinary labor would have prevented. Hence efforts ultimating in a more thorough understanding of, and corresponding persistency in, enforcing the preventive system are very essential. This is one of the essentials of the hour; for a little preventive is worth very much cure.

As we take a backward glance on time, we find a failure to present the old, old, primitive gospel, has opened the way for the formulating of creeds, until the world is flooded therewith, and they are received in lieu of the gospel; whereas, if this old gospel had been always presented, and duly appreciated, it would have been a preventive to so many creeds. I shall not say that our church discipline has been totally ignored; but it is clear that from some cause there has been much negligence in its presentation or enforcement for the preventing and adjudicating trouble, that the innocent might be vindicated, and the guilty punished. As Bro. Bond remarked, there has been a putting the cart before the horse, or a failure to work to the pattern; and some one has the brunt to meet. And as we ask the world to come back to the first principles of the gospel, we ought to make this advice forcible, by returning to and sticking to, the first principles of our recognized church discipline, and thereby show that while all necessary patience and labor to save are shown, the church can not be a nursery for crime.

I have been led to view the publication of recent articles on essentials and nonessentials, as not only un-called for, but the result of a violation of order, no matter by whom or where they commenced. In identifying myself with this latter day work, I did not think but I came to the church. I did not then, nor do I now, expect that the church would come to me. Yet to her credit be it said, if I feel her measures oppressive, I may petition at a proper time and she promises to pause and hear; and so it was, that when the Decatur District felt distressed, (perhaps under the terrible apprehension that the church was nearing a yawning precipice, through believing too much), it cried, the church paused, considered and answered. The presidency explained, the church ratified.
What more could be demanded? Has the church broken loose from the explanation offered, on the resolution of the Decatur District, exacting more than she did at the time? No. Why then, since the church has kept her vows towards its members, have any failed to honor her in being governed by her recognized order, and becoming (asit were) a law unto themselves? And since her action, as above, failed, what evidence is there that a reopening of the case would still the troubled wave. And if the time of a General Conference is to be consumed in reopening questions legitimitely passed upon and settled, it were better we remained apart, until a decision can be reached to meet for the transaction of legitimate and necessary business. I never have claimed perfection for the church, but deny that she has, (to my knowledge), ever sought to impose upon her members, or the world, by the introduction and carrying out of nefarious schemes. And if it be a fact that the church has a settled policy, by the recognition of a discipline and laws, she ought to assert herself, so as to demand respect for those laws, and forbid the thought that class or special legislation, is any part of her policy—or retain a silence until she dwindles into nothingness, losing her identity amid the noise and clamor of modern Babylon, as a kingdom divided against itself. If I mistake not, the Reorganized Church has decided, that legislation by a General Conference on doctrine is valid until a general assembly convenes. And if we disregard our own rules, which obtain to better enable us to convey forth the gospel, how can we expect implicit obedience from the world? To reprove the world for sin and a lack of moral excellence, with advice to them to labor to attain it, and we ourselves fail to give evidence of such a moral excellence among ourselves, would savor of inconsistency to say the least. The right to obey or disobey the gospel economy, does not disprove the fact that obedience justifies, and disobedience exposes us to condemna-And however pleasant tion and shame. the work of copying after the radicalism of Mr. Ingersoll on the one hand, and catering to the pious orthodox who treat the ordinances of the gospel as a puff of wind on the other, it would illy comport with the belief in an exclusive gospel.

Since my return from Colorado, I have felt flattered at the many calls from points the General Conference of 1884 gave me jurisdiction over; and have responded as fast as possible. Labor in branches has seemed to preclude the introduction of the gospel into new localities. My reception generally has been all I could ask; but abilities to portray the evil of assumption and mal-administration in the old church, has not decreased, nor the terrible apprehension caused by a probability of a repetition of these evils altogether vanished; and so some of the sagacious and far-seeing seem to look rather suspiciously on the action of General Conference of 1884, in a recognition of the duties and responsibilities of the Quorum of Twelve, prescribed in the organic law of the church. May kind heaven smile on those noble souls who honestly say, I don't understand, With some such I come let us reason. have met, and a reasoning thus solicited and prosecuted, invariably terminates in good. And may God have mercy on him or those who would feign kindness, while their hearts plot mischief. The account Bro. Kemp gave of the Fremont District Conference in Herald of December 20, was most pleasant and profitable. There was a primitive Latter Day Saint oneness, without the suppression of intelligence. The conference was held at Shenandoah. where the saints have expended about two thousand dollars for a house of worship and a parsonage. The former has no useless additions, but is respectable; shaded by outer blinds by day, and brilliantly lighted by night, and kept scrupulously clean, so that an angelic being might worship there without offense.

Bro. S. S. Wilcox is serving the branch in the capacity of presiding Elder, with the privilege of filling, so far as opening, cleaning, warming and lighting the house is concerned, a Deacon's office. Officials who will, may work. It is encouraging to know that some officials are beginning to wake up to the fact of the necessity of our increased diligence and zeal. But there is very much apathy, and much jarring in local machinery; while some is hushed, as if the local officials were on a furlough, waiting for something to turn up to enable them to determine how much to believe, or for the arrival of some good elder. Would it be proper to say, "O Lord, revive thy work?" Certainly; but had we not better wait until we get ready to do what we ought to do to revive ourselves?

Since the above conference, for the first time in three years, I attended one of the Southern Nebraska District, held near Wilber, the Waterloo to Mr. Clark Braden. The demeanor of Bro. E. L. Kelley during the discussion raised him high in the estimation of a discriminating public.

Many are anxious to have him preach there. But what a world of change and reverse is this; for instead of Messrs. Braden and Luse jubilating over the anticipated victory, the death, burial, and nonresurrection of Mormonism, they are at enmity, and as I hear, a law suit is pending between them. Surely the way of the transgressor is hard. As a member of the body, I feel indebted to Bro. E. L. Kelley for his noble labors, and in refusing to meet the giant Braden the third time. think he maintained a proper dignity. The conference, for unity and the manifestation of God's power, was most remarkable. Bro. R. M. Elvin, one of its faithful representatives, was detained at home, through sickness. It was with considerable regret, that I turned for the time being a deaf ear to the many pleadings, to present the word in parts of the district. Bro. Levi Anthony is laboring as circumstances admit. There are some lively and working Saints there, and some friends investigating. Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, the Bishop, was there, nor did the Saints flee from him for fear he would seek to exact tithing under the gathering method. So far from that, that an exposition of the tithing and free will offering, seemed no way to disturb their religious equilibrium. I remained preaching until January 30th, vious appointment rendering it necessary. Determined to accept the invitation to come again as soon as possible.

There are no highly colored reports in this letter to raise an enthusiasm in your readers; but disappointment in this direction is better than raising hope, through exaggerated reports, never to be realized. A knowledge of the gospel economy with corresponding efforts to live its precepts, will qualify to meet and relate facts, with assurance that God is his own interpreter, JAMES CAFFALL. CLEAR WATER, Neb., Feb. 5th, 1885.

THE GATHERING.

THE reopening of this subject in the late communications from Bro. A. H. Smith in the Herald, suggests the following thoughts upon the same subject; which are commended to the consideration of the church as a whole, and every individual member. The Reorganized Church has spoken several times authoritatively upon the subject, that "there is no stake, and no place" to which the Saints are commanded to gather—that the local commandments in the Doctrine and Covenants are not in force as to this church—inapplicable and therefore inoperative; but in the face of this the communication referred to asserts that the church has established a place and the gathering has commenced; and still it, the gathering, is an open question. These statements antagonize each other-if the principle is affirmed authoritatively, and is being practically carried into effect, then it can not be an open question in the church. But I understand that in principle it is an open question; but the practical part is settled authoritatively when the church said there is no place to gather to. Reference to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants in proof that this church must gather to some particular place, or places, necessitates the statements in the article referred to, that this church and the one to whom these commandments were given, are one and the same. Is this true? Can it be true, when this church claims its existence upon the ground that that church was rejected. Reference is made to an act of conference touching the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, evidently to induce the idea of its applicability to this church. That act was the adoption of a report which says, "A belief in the revelations in the book, &c., shall not be a test of fellowship," &c. This certainly assumes that some things in these revelations are not necessary to believe-not in force, or expired by limitation. In harmony with this is the act of the last General Conference, that the local commandments in that book are not binding upon this church, (except when re-enacted). Gathering is a local matter, and as such can not be part of the gospel; but may be added as other temporal and local matters were added, for cause, and when the times of reformation came were done away, were abolished. The reference to the early history of the Reorganized Church, adopting the "three books" involves an error as an historical statement of dates, &c., but is correct as to the "three books." But does it follow that "whatever is clearly taught in these three books, or either of them, is doctrine"? In one of these books are found a multitude of clearly taught commandments, relating to temporal and local, family and personal matters, such as the building of an ark, gathering a family into it, together with beast and fowl; the taking of long journeys, building of altars, slaughtering beasts for sacrifice, and nations to vacate the inheritances sought, the building of tabernacles, temples, &c., none of which is applicable to the church now, and is not doctrine to be taught now. And the same is true of the second book of the three. This is conceded by all perhaps in respect to the Bible and Book of Mormon. Is it not equally true of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants? Are there not things clearly taught in that book, such as building a city at Nauvoo; a temple and a hotel at the same place; the collecting of armies for avenging wrongs, &c. Yes, the three books are adopted by the church, and the three books are alike; all contain much that is inapplicable to the present, therefore not "doctrine" to be taught to a living church; and the Quorum of the Twelve unanimously did declare last April, that the local commandments of that book were of this character. Hence, to argue "literal gathering" from these local commandments, seems to ignore this act of the Quorum of the Twelve, (not one or two of them), and of the conference which adopted the same, and impliedly reinstates the locals—types and shadows of all the books. While I think gathering ought not to be argued from that standpoint, to accommodate those who do, I submit the following: That it is "clearly taught" in Doctrine and Covenants that God "commands" and

"revokes." See case of Ezra Booth and O. Cowdery, and in respect to this gathering, are not the commandments relating to it revoked, in terms. The gathering taught in the Doctrine and Covenants is to build up a "local Zion," temple, &c. Subsequent to all the commandments on the subject, after the protracted struggle to gather and so build. After the effort, the sacrifice and the failure, the revelation of 1841 surveys the whole ground—the commandment, the effort and the failure, and removes it from the catalogue of duties thenceforth by "requiring" that work-the gathering to build the local Zion-no more of the sons of men—the church, previously commanded. Now that church, so commanded and so exonerated, even had it continued, were excused from further obligation to gather and build a local Zion. So that if the Reorganized Church inherits her obligations, this is no part of them; but if she was rejected, her locals could not attach to this church (without re-enactment). So much for the historical status of the question. But to the ejaculation, "Where, O where is Zion?" This Zion question, like most questions, has two sides or phases; one is that of the Jews under the dispensation of types and shadows, and Judaizing Chris-They tians, who were but half converted. talked and sang and yearned for Zion; their prophets prophesied of Zion. The whole commonwealth of Israel labored and suffered for Zion, and the school boy or milk maid could tell its exact locality; and the annual gatherings—the only practicable gatherings possible—to bask in her streets and drink to the full her ceremonies. It was easy for any of these to tell just where Zion was. Their idea was not "vague," but who will not say it was crude? This is the primary idea of Zion—a locality, a holy place; the place of a shrine. A stone and mortar, or brick and mortar Zion. When Moses gave place to Jesus, and Judaism to Christianity, the Zion song was not abolished, only its crudities dismissed; and thenceforth Zion was the City of God, that had foundations, the Holy and Heavenly Zion, or Jerusalem, where were angels and spirits of the just. At this point the question arises, which view are we to adopt respecting Zion, the Jewish or Christian? The first is carnal, the other spiritual; and if we adopt the latter, is it not because the former is a carnal conception of a spiritual truth?

So much for the principle of a literal gathering, which when submitted to Jesus by the Samaritan woman, I understand him to promptly repudiate—neither here nor there-but every where the pure in heart shall worship God in spirit and in J. W. BRIGGS.
To be continued. truth.

TITHING, GATHERING & REVENGE. GATHERING.

In my last article I agreed to continue, and I do so now with pleasure. In Herald issue for January 10th, Elder Blair "undertakes to examine the position of Elder Gurley on the subject of the Gathering;" and but for this kindly notice, I should never have known, much less supposed, that his argument had any relation or reference to what I had written or said. He affirms the literal gathering of literal Israel, a doctrine or promise which I believe as firmly as Elder Blair does; a doctrine, over which or about which I know of no dispute whatever, a doctrine believed in by thousands and tens of thousands of people, who are not members of the Latter Day Saints' Church; and why the readers of the Herald should be subjected to such an elaborate argument of circumlocution, is perhaps a mystery, unless it be to evade the real issue upon this point. I may add to Elder Blair's effort in regard to the promise of Israel's restoration, that when the day of their deliverance comes, as the Lord hath said by Isaiah, 49: 22, 23.

"Behold I will lift up my hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people: and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders. And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers; they shall bow down to thee with their face toward the earth, and lick up the dust of thy feet," &c.

These texts show the great majesty and power by which Israel will finally be delivered and gathered; also that it will not occur upon this continent, provided that "no king" shall ever bear rule here. To this agrees Jeremiah's testimony, 16:14,

"Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, the Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; [the saying which exists and continues to day]; but the Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he hath driven them; and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers."

The same author at chapter 30, informs

"We have heard a voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace. Ask ye now, and see whether a man doth travail with child? Wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness? Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it. For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off their neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him. . . . For lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid. For I am with thee, shall make him afraid. For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee; though I make a full end of all nations whither I have thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee; but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished. . . . For I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the Lord; because they called thee an outcast, saying, This is Zion, whom no map seeketh after."

This goes to show that Israel had been driven out of Zion because of iniquity, and "Therefore shall Zion for your sake be ploughed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountains of the house as the high places of the forest."—Micah 3:12; but when the day of deliverance comes, a day compared with which none is like it," "the day of his coming," the day when "all faces" will be "turned into paleness," why in that day the Lord says, "I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth; and "they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to goodness," and when thus the Lord has brought "again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and had mercy on his dwelling places," then shall "the city be builded upon her own heap, and the palace shall remain after the manner thereof."—Jer. 31:8–12; 30:18.

These texts ought to be a quietus as to where literal Israel shall be gathered; as to where their "Zion and Jerusalem" is located, as also the time when it will take place. But that no doubt may remain in the mind of the reader, I quote the words of Ezekiel 36:24-28: "For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land." "And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers," &c. And in the language of the same author, 37:21, 22: "Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land; and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations. (See I Kings 11:31, 35). Neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." 25th v. "And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt." 12th v. "Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel." 14. "And shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land; then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it, and performed it, saith the Lord." Paul testifies that "the dead in Christ shall rise first." Then the conclusion is fair, that when Israel is gathered and restored to his own land that it will take place when Christ comes—when he cometh to reign, Ps. 96. "Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." Isa. 24:23. His feet in that day "shall stand upon the Mount of Olives." That his throne will be at Jerusalem during that reign, may be seen I think, by reading Zechariah 14; for it teaches us that the nations, or what is left of them, after the burning and scourges pass through, shall go up to Jerusalem "from year to year" "to worship the king, the Lord of Hosts." And with this agrees Ezekiel's testimony, 43:7: "And he said unto me, Son of Man, the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel forever, and my holy name shall the house of Işrael no more defile,"

I have noticed the 37th chapter, by which I prove that Israel is to come out of their graves and be placed back into the lands which the Lord gave unto their fathers, which lands are in Palestine, and at which the Lord's throne is to be set up; and not only his, for Daniel testified that he saw "thrones placed," and the "judg-ment was set," and Jesus testified that when he comes in his glory, "and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations."—Matt. 25:31, 32. With this the prophets agree, that the nations shall come up to Jerusalem to be judged, and to worship; and according to Matt. 19:28 and Luke 22:30, Jesus said that the twelve apostles who had been with him in his ministry, shall in that day "sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." . Jesus also taught that "In that day, he which shall be upon the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away; and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back. I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left. And they answered and said unto him, Where Lord? And he said unto them, Wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together."—Luke 17:31-37; and in Matt. 24:28, we are told, "Wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together." The word "carcass" here undoubtedly refers to Christ himself, and in the 29th and 30th verses he described the appearance of things in the heavens, by which the powers of heaven shall be shaken, and the "sign of the Son of Man" shall appear in heaven, and "all the tribes of the earth shall mourn;" "and they shall see the Son of Man coming in power and great glory.' 31st v. "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they [not some man] shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."

This will not be done in a corner, nor in silence; not as we have been teaching; viz: "carefully gather together, as much in one region as can be consistently with the feelings of the people;" no, not that way-the Lord won't ask the nations, neither will his people appeal to them for favor in order to gather into Jackson county, or any other county; but when God's time comes to gather his elect, he will "send his angels" and gather them together from all parts of the earth; and the expression-"from the four winds," shows they will be scattered upon the face of the earth in all directions. That they will remain scattered until the day of God's wrath, until a "day of darkness," a "day of trembling, when all faces will be turned into paleness;" and that they will not be gathered until the "harvest time;" not gathered until Christ sends his angels to gather them, is quite evident from the foregoing scriptures. In harmony with this is the teaching of our Savior in Matt.

13; and the reader is requested to read this chapter carefully; for Jesus has tried to show us all just how the gathering will take place; and in every instance, where he has spoken, he tells us that the "angels," or "reapers," shall be sent forth, and divide, or separate, the wicked from the righteous, the sheep on one hand, the goats on the other; or the wheat and tares must, according to his statement, be left together until the harvest time; for at that time the "kingdom and greatness of it, under the whole heavens, will be given to the Saints of the Most High" and the saints possess the earth, the entire earth, for they are to reign with Christ a thousand years, which I understand will be upon the earth. The question may arise as to who the "elect" are. I answer, they are those who have accepted Christ Jesus and his truth. Webster says, "Those who are chosen or separated for salvation;" "Chosen as the object of mercy or divine favor; set apart to eternal life." Ibid. See Isa. 42:1; 45:4; 65:9-22; Matt. 24:22, 31; Mark 13:20, 22, 27; and in Col. 3:12, I find the following beautiful thought: "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long suffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any; even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things, put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness." If this definition be true, that the "elect" are the saints of God, then according to Christ's own words they will not be gathered until he sends his angels with the sound of a great trumpet at the time of his coming; and he, not man, will gather his people to himself. As Paul expressed it, that we who are worthy shall be "caught up to meet the Lord," and reign with him. At that day will the work of the Father commence to restore literal Israel, and which is clearly shown in the texts quoted by Elder Blair from the Book of Nephi, 9:8, 9, especially the last clause of 9th par., and par. 1, chap. 10. I call especial attention to the fact, that the "New Jerusalem" of the Book of Mormon is to be builded by the "remnant" of Israel upon this land, the literal seed to whom it has been given; and the Gentiles, who have obeyed the gospel, are to assist them. The reader is requested to notice in this 10th of Nephi, par. 1, that Gentile converts, which we are, are not to lead, in this work, but to "assist" this "remnant" of literal Israel, in building this New Jerusalem; and when that work commences, the Lord says he will come down and be in their midst. This agrees with the position taken above. And this same paragraph you will notice places this gathering of literal Israel back to Jerusalem, and those that are numbered with them after that, that is, after Christ's coming; and the fact in this text, that the New Jerusalem here spoken of is to be builded by this "remnant," which work can not take place until God moves upon them so to do, neither is any gathering taught here as being prior to that work, ought to he sufficient to satisfy every thinking mind that the time to gather is not now, neither is it essential to salvation, as belief therein does neither cleanse nor sanctify; that it is a work which God alone, not man, can consummate, and that it remains with the future for its fulfillment, and is among the final blessings to the pure upon this earth, as a reward for a life in Christ Jesus; as Paul testified that God would "gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him," (Eph. 1:10), which in the nature of things can not take place until he comes. That which is needful now is to be "in Christ," to develop the principles of peace, the divine virtues as exemplified in him, without which none of us will be worthy to be gathered by him; with the which none of us will be his "elect;" and if not the "elect," then will not be gathered, in that day appointed of him to perform that work; gathering being not a means to develop the divine virtues as some would have it, but as an end, a reward for such development. Now abideth hope, charity; now is the time to teach and develop the principles of peace contained in the gospel of Christ; and when God says it's time to gather, then will he he send his angels with the sound of a great trumpet, so that all can and will hear. There will be no mistake about it; every one will understand; for that time or day is to be different from all others, so at least testify the prophets and our Savior. In that gathering I hope to have a part, for in no other have I any interest what-

I could multiply passages of scripture to sustain this idea; but I forbear, lest the reader be wearied, and turn now to the real, actual question at issue, which is simply this: Is the gathering to Jackson county, Missouri, and into the "adjoining counties," the "regions round about," essential to salvation? A "cardinal point of the gospel"—that is the question before No argument being made of a direct character upon this point by Elder Blair, I have nothing special to reply to. In a general way, it is affirmed, the hypothesis being, that the "choice Seer" said so, and that is quite enough for us; that the "choice Seer" could not have been mistaken. Now let me say, that I heard Elder Geo. Q. Cannon take the same position in the great Tabernacle at Salt Lake City; at the time that Pres. Young was seeking to establish the United Order of Enoch. It appeared that the people were slow to engage in the Order, and Elder Cannon reprimanded them for their slothfulness, saying it was quite enough for them to know that Pres. Young had said, "go into it." I think we sing that "Reason and judgment make us men;" and I am inclined to believe that some are disposed to act upon that God-given right. To accept the gathering into Jackson county, &c., as essential to life and peace, without question, simply because Joseph Smith taught it, is I think without warrant in the teachings of Christ. It would simply be an acceptance of the dogma of infallibility, and in a more narrow sense than can be charged to the Roman Catholic church; for they passed upon and accepted as scripture the writings of Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, Paul, James, Jude and Peter; and they make no dis-tinction favoring Peter's writings over and above the others; but we say Joseph's "words and commands" are to be accepted by us, the same as if we heard God speak; and from Elder Blair's and other writings in Herald, we are given to understand that no other dare to speak in the hope that his ideas may obtain with the body," (provided his ideas differ from Joseph's); and to question any of the revela-tions of Joseph Smith, is next to, if not quite, high treason, affirming as they do, that the church has affirmed these revelations as law, &c. I deny that this church has affirmed, as part and parcel of the gospel, tithing as contained in sec. 106, Doctrine and Covenants; or that "gathering into the regions round about" is essential to life and peace as now claimed by its We are asked to receive all advocates. the revelations of the president of the church, in the same sense that the Romish Church asks and demands the scriptures shall be accepted; viz., "on the testimony of the Universal Church, the spouse and body of Christ, enlightened by the Holy Ghost." If this dogma was true and correct in the absolute sense, as claimed apparently by some of us, then it would follow that the church in Utah are right; for they have acted in that way all along; of such a position Dr. Farrar, Can-on of Westminster, hath truthfully said, "is to use a style, I can not say of 'argument,' but of dogmatizing traditionalism, which perilously confuses a thousand separate issues. Such assertions, if listened to, would end in making all criticism impossible, and in reducing all inquiry to medieval torpor. They can serve no purpose but to damage in many minds the cause of religion. They confound the eternal truths of Christianity with uncertain details." "The guidance of the Holy Spirit of God was promised not to one age only, but to the Church of all ages, even to the end of the world; but the lessons of century after century ought to have taught us that guidance into all necessary spiritual truth is a very different thing from critical infallibility."

I would not like to say that the Bible is the word of God; but can freely say I believe that it contains the word of God. "There are reasons addressed to the reason why a man regards the Bible as an exceptional production."

The Reorganization in 1852, by General Conference, declared that "in the Bible, Book of Mormon, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, is contained the whole law of God." That position is quite different from the one now being taken; viz., "that the Doctrine and Covenants is all law to the church;" quite different indeed, for it is quite obvious that the church did not intend to apply that rule to the Bible; but if it now be insisted upon as touching the Doctrine and Covenants, it may with equal propriety be insisted upon touching the Bible—which I think would prove rather too much; however, this church can and ought to say how it stands upon these issues that all may definitely understand. The old church in 1835, affirmed the infallibility dogma, and we can see where it and other matters have taken it.

As regards the Gathering, as taught and practiced by Joseph Smith, I undertake to say that it has produced withering blight in every instance. You may trace it at Kirtland, in Missouri and Nauvoo, and the results have been the destruction of property, of homes and of confidence both in God and in man. It is quite easy now for some men to rise up and say, "Oh they did not keep the commands; and they did not do this and that; I am of the opinion, that this class of teachers know but very little if anything about the matter whatever; and the various charges made against the mass who followed their leader are wrong; for as he directed, so did they. One thing we may safely say, "like causes produce like effects;" and when we shall concentrate this church into one region of country, we create an opposition that did not exist before, as concentration of numbers means concentration of power, political, as well as ecclesiastical. The fruits of it in the past have been most bit-ter; the fruit of it in Utah to-day is not good; Jesus teaches us to judge matters and things "by their fruits;" and to this. list may be added the gathering to Vorce, Wis., a stake I understand appointed by Joseph Smith. Will the gathering into the "regions round about" be conducive of good to-day? Have we any reason to believe that it will make people any better? That it will contribute to holiness and increased spiritual life in the Saint? Has it ever done such a thing? My readers know quite well that it never has done such work; that it has never borne such fruit; and judging it by the lamp of experience, we have no reason to expect it ever will; and yet, notwithstandidg these facts, we are asked to-day to accept belief and practice therein, as "essential to salvation;" nay more, it is insisted upon by various writers in the Herald, and we are brought face to face with the issue, that it is a "cardinal point of the gospel." Well, the world is wide, and that class of teachers can go right on, accept, affirm, teach and practice it so far as they may be able; but we have no reason to suppose that they will do any better than their predecessors have done; as humanity to-day is certainly no better, but in some sense rather worse if any difference; but, let it be remembered that this gathering to "regions round about," and the one taught by our Savior and his apostles, are two very distinct and separate affairs.

Elder Blair refers to my statement, relating to the command to gather "into the regions round about," and subsequent resolution of General Conference, saying there is "no place;" but thinks, or seems to, that there is no collision between these. The gathering "into the regions round about" was to be done "as counseled by the elders of the church," in considering the matter it was claimed by some that there was no place to gather to as yet, because the church had said by resolution that "there is no stake to which they are commanded to gather." This position was denied upon the ground, that the church was commanded in 1873 to gather "into the regions round about" as counseled by rhe elders; that "regions round about" was a place including certain counties, adjoining Jackson county, Missouri, and that the "connsel of the elders" had not yet declared "no place," as against gathering into "the regions round about." It will be seen at once, that the words "the regions round about," refer to a place, and a particular place too, when yoù consider that the "center place" was in Jackson county, and the "adjoining counties," "the regions round about" hence after discussing the matter before General Conference, the resolution declaring there is "no place" to which we are now commanded to gather was passed, (this is my best recollection of the matter), and until that resolution is repealed, it can not be said that the command to gather into regions round about is obligatory. Elder Blair's quotation from Webster, furnishing us with definition of the words "region" and "place" are all right in their place, but unfortunately for him, in this particular controversy, Webster's definition is not needed—we have a definition in the command itself, and I believe is the last one in the Doctrine and Covenants bearing upon this question, and is as follows, "to fulfill that which I have commanded concerning the purchasing of all the lands in Jackson county, that can be purchased, and in the adjoining counties round about." Sec. 102, par. 8. With this agrees also the last clause of 9th par., sec. 98; and where it is clearly stated, that all other lands outside these "adjoining counties" "regions round about" are to be left in God's hands, the church having nothing to do with them at all, and never had -according to these sections. I know that some hold to the idea, that we have no right to question these things, and no one has a right to oppose; yet the General Conference in 1879, at Galland's Grove, declared that belief in these revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants should not be considered a test of fellowship; and the Quorum of Twelve and the Bishopric in 1883, by joint resolution, declared the revelation on tithing, sec. 106, Doctrine and Coverants, as not binding upon the church now, which ought to have preference here, the act of the general body, and the two quorums referred to agreeing, or the opinion of one or two individuals? don't think it will be difficult to reach a conclusion.

Z. H. GURLEY.
PLEASANTON, Ia., Jon. 24th, 1875.

P. S. Since writing the above, I find in the history of the rise of the church as given by O. Cowdery, in Messenger and Advocate, vol. 1, page 111, the following:

"In consequence of the transgression of the Jews at the coming of the Lord, the Gentiles were called into the kingdom, and for this obedience, are to be favored with the gospel in its fulness first, in the last days; for it is written, The first shall be last, and the last first. Therefore, when the fulness of the gospel, as was preached by the righteous upon this land, shall come forth, it shall be declared to the Gentiles first, and who so will repent shall be delivered, for they shall understand the plan of salvation and restoration for Israel, as the Lord manifested to the an-cients." "Therefore, as the time draws near when the sun is to be darkened, the moon turn to blood, and the stars fall from heaven, the Lord will bring to the knowledge of his people his commandments and statutes, that they may be prepared to stand when the earth shall reel to and fro as a drunken man, earthquakes cause the nations to tremble, and the destroying angel goes forth to waste the inhabitants at noonday: for so great are to be the calamities which are to come upon the inhabitants of the earth, before the coming of the Son of Man the second time, that whoso is not prepared can not abide; but such as are found faithful, and remain, shall be gathered with his people, and caught up to meet the Lord in the cloud, and so shall they inherit eternal

The above is given, as the things given to Joseph Smith by the angel at the time he was directed to go and obtain the This teaching, as I understand it, I am in harmony with—and upon it I submit, that this is the "day of preparation." That said preparation can be effected only by and through the gospel of Christ, that the duty of saints is to teach it and naught else. That all who are thus prepared will abide the day of God's wrath, or the calamites which are to come upon the world, and no matter where they may be upon the earth, if thus prepared they will abide; and that whoso is not prepared can not abide. That after the visitation of these calamities, God will "gather his people" and they be "caught up to meet the Lord in the cloud."

I therefore feel fully warranted as I do most positively, reject all other gatherings excepting this one which seems so much in harmony with the teachings of Christ.

NEVADA DISTRICT.

The conference of the said district, held in Carson City, Nevada, November 23d, 1884, was called by the president, D. I. Jones.

Elders present: D. I. Jones, Wm. Riddler, A. B. Johns, T. R. Hawkins and D. R. Jones; also Teacher J. Wilmot; who all reported.

Branch reports.—Carson, Mottsville and Dayton, represented by their presidents. Franktown and Elko Branches no reports. There was a decrease of two in the Mottsville Branch, by death, and the increase of one (Isabella Courser) on original baptism.

Bishop's Agent, T. R. Hawkins, no report, living so isolated from the line of travel of the Saints that it was a difficult matter to act in the said office; he therefore presented his resignation as Bishop's Agent to the conference; on motion it was accepted, and Bro. A. B. Johns chosen to be recommended to Bishop Blakeslee, as a suitable person to be his agent in this district.

On motion that Elder Hawkins be the district clerk; carried.

Remarks by President Jones, and others, on the duties and privileges of the Saints. Sacrament meeting in the afternoon; a Brother and Sister administered to for afflictions. Prayer meeting in the evening by the Saints.

Adjourned to meet in Genoa at the call of the president, D. I. Jones. T. R. Hawkins, district clerk.

LITTLE SIOUX DISTRICT.

Conference met pursuant to adjournment, at the Saints' Meeting House in Little Sioux, Harrison county, Iowa, at half-past ten o'clock a.m., Saturday, December 13th, 1884. President of the district, J. C. Crabb, in the chair. Elder James Caffall occupied the forenoon with instructive remarks. Afternoon session, the conference organized by electing J. C. Crabb to preside, and James Caffall as assistant, and subsequently adding Phineas Cadwell to assist. J. F. Mintun was elected secretary of conference, and William R. Davison assistant.

Branch Reports.—Union Center 91. Little Sioux 186; 3 baptized and 3 received. Spring Creek 51; one ordination. Magnolia 221; one baptized, 20 received. Spiritual condition of each branch was reported. Official Reports.-J. Caffall of the Twelve; J. C. Crabb, Charles Derry and Phineas Cadwell (baptized 14), High Priests; John Thomas (by letter), J. F. Mintun (baptized 1), J. B. Lytle and Nathan Lindsey (baptized 2), of the Seventy; Elders E. R. Lanpher, Richard Farmer, John Convers, E. McEvers, G. W. Conyers, Donald Maule, Henry Garner, J. M. Putnev, E. C. Cobb, Dorman Lewis, R. Peaslee, William Chambers (by letter) and William C. Cadwell; Priests James Emmerson, William T. Fallon, J. C. Johnson and William H. Bradford; and Teachers Omer Lytle and Jacob Gunsolly re-

E. R. Lanpher reported his mission labor, and on motion was continued in his former field. On motion Charles Derry was continued in Missouri Valley mission. James Emmerson was released from the charge of the financial part of Missouri Valley mission, and M. S. Frick was appointed in his place.

President Crabb called attention to a resolution of a former conference with reference to all officers of the church in the district laboring as circumstances would permit, and urged them to act more promptly than in the past.

A recommendation from Union Center Branch that James N. Mann be ordained to the office of an Elder was referred back.

A petition for the organization of a branch at Sioux City was referred to the president of the district. President Crabb offered his resignation as president of the district. On motion he was sustained in that office. Phineas Cadwell was sustained as assistant president of the district. President Crabb presented the name of Charles Derry as an assistant president of the district, and on motion he was so appointed.

Sherman Knauss reported having turned over money in his hand, as shown by last conference minutes, to Bro. Gamet, and asked to be released from committee on Little Sioux Meeting House; report received, and him discharged.

Appeal case of Spring Creek Branch coming up, Bro. Caffall submitted his report, and Bro. Crabb his, in reference to action had and decision reached by Bro. Jas. Caffall, before whom the case was tried, at time and place agreed upon at last conference. On motion the questions of fact referred to in Bro. Caffall's reports were accepted, and questions of law were referred to a committee of three, to be appointed by the chair. Bro. Caffall asked if conference understood that this left Bro. J. Chapman, jr., where he was at the finding of the first court. The president answered that he so understood. Committee as above provided for: William C. Cadwell, Charles Derry and Henry Garner.

Bro. D. M. Gamet submitted his resignation as acting Bishop's Agent, owing to his enfeebled condition.

Resolved, That while we sincerely regret that the enteebled condition of our brother, D. W. Gamet, compels him to resign his position as Bishop's Agent of the church, we hereby express our hearty appreciation of his faithful labors in that calling; and while we feel in duty bound to accept said resignation, we tender our heartfelt thanks for his unswerving integrity, and pray earnestly that God in his love may bless, save and exalt him in his glorious kingdom, whether living or dying.

On motion, Bro. Phineas Cadwell was recommended to the Bishop for appointment as his agent in this district.

Preaching was had by Bro. James Caffall on Sunday morning, and by Bro. Charles Derry on Sunday afternoon. A good prayer and testimony meeting was held Sunday evening.

On motion, adjourned to meet at Magnolia, Iowa, at half-past ten in the forenoon of the second Saturday in March, 1885, and continue over the Sabbath.

Bereaved friends, weep not for him
Whose place is vacant here;
Your loss is great, but he has gained
A brighter, happier sphere.
He has only gone to wait awhile,
Beyond this vale of tears,
Bask in the smiles of Jesus face,
Till he in clouds appears.
In those bright clouds he'll surely come;
Would you then stand prepared,
To welcome him on earth, the home
Of all who love the Lord?
Then like him hold the iron rod,
Let that your footsteps guide;
And then his God will be your God,
Your feet will never slide.

MITCHAM.—At Douglas, Nebraska, sister Jane Mitcham, in her 82d year. She was born in Uphyme, Devon, England, November 2d, 1802; was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1867, at Bell Creek, Nebraska, by Bro. James Caffall. She joined the old church in an early day. She lived true to her covenant until the day of her death, all through she had many hard trials, having to depend upon her children for a home, who were not in a condition to make her comfortable. Her sufferings were great for some time before she died; but she quietly passed away, and is now no doubt with those who are awaiting the sound of the trump that shall call forth the sleeping dead in Christ. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder Nelson Brown.

HUNTER.—At St. Louis, Missouri, December 26th, 1884, Sr. Elizabeth, wife of Andrew Hunter. Born at Durham county, England, January 22d, 1828. Baptized in 1852, into the old church; baptized at Dry Hill, Missouri, by William Gittings, August 13th, 1864, into the Reorganization. Funeral services by Wm. O. Thomas and Wm. Williams

CROSBY.—At Chatfield, Minnesota, July 18th, 1884, Lizzie, wife of Hilton Lee Crosby, and daughter of Elijah and Clara McGrew, aged 21 years and 3 months. O dear Lizzie how we miss you. She believed in the Latter Day Saints' Church. Had said she would be baptized the first opportunity. She leaves father, mother, three brothers, one sister, husband, and baby boy, ten hours old, and many friends to mourn her loss.

She was patient, kind and gentle,
Loving, good, and true;
She seemed too pure to mingle

PEARSALL.—At her home, Galland's Grove, Iowa, February 5th, 1885, of chills and fever, Sarah Ruth, daughter of Bro. and Sr. James and Harriet Pearsall. Born March 17th, 1872; baptized when nine years old by Elder John Hawley at Galland's Grove, Iowa. Funeral services by Elder Ralph Jenkins, assisted by Priest Chauncey Williamson.

CLARK.—At East New York, November 23d, 1884, of inflammation of the bowels, Thomas Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. William and Anna Clark, aged 3 years, 11 months, and 19 days. He came to America with his parents in 1883, arriving November 25th. He was of a very active mind.

PENFOLD.—Near Santa Ana, Los Angeles Co., California, December 23d, 1884, Bro. John Penfold. He was born January 9th, 1797, in Kent county, England. Aged 87 years, 11 months and 14 days. He emigrated to Australia in 1838, where he heard and embraced the gospel, and in 1855 came to California with the intention of going to Utah; but having met with false brethren, and not endorsing the doctrine that was taught in Utah, concluded to remain in California; and when Elders Morgan and Faulk came and preached that the church had reorganized, and Joseph the son of the martyred prophet was its leader, he gladly united with it, and remained a faithful member until he fell asleep. Funeral sermon by Elder Alex. H. Smith, at the Saints' Church, Newport.

MEDITATIONS.

I WENT to hear an Adventist brother speak on the millennium. At the close he had some tracts on the same subject to distribute to any who wished to investigate or to examine the law and testimony in regard to the coming age called millennium. And I thought that some of our Elders might take a hint and learn by experience in profit for the cause of truth.

I consider any thought suggested to the mind that savors of good to tempest tossed souls on this world's sea is worth penning or speaking, for the Lord has assured us that every one who is the means of any good on the toilsome way of human life "Shall in no wsse lose a reward."

And if we can not be a big ship bearing valuable cargoes to the nations, we should be content in being a little spring by the way-side, supplying weary pilgrims a cup of cool water, so to speak, as refreshment to cheer and strengthen them on their rugged road to a better land beyond. *

The weather is not always stormy but "storms and calms alternate like thorns amid the flowers." I have thought and found it wisdom to improve the best seasons that we are allowed, or the good days granted us by our kind Father in heaven, and by searching the scriptures we find a promise in 1st Peter 3:10. Whereby we may learn how we can have many good days whilst it is our lot to endure mortality and Satan's power. "For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile."—I Peter 3:10; I. T.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE received a letter from Albert D. Hager, Secretary of the Chicago Historical Society, dated February 23d, offering to the writers of history for the church, whatever aid they might derive from an examination of the muniments of the Society. Mr. Hager states that he has in his charge many documents appertaining to the early days of the church in Illinois, from the titles of which we gather the idea that a searcher might get great good from them. Mr. Hager would be very thankful, for the Society and himself, if those having literature, periodicals, newspapers, books, or other documents throwing light on church affairs would forward them to him. Address 140-42 Dearborn Avenue. Any of the Saints desiring to contribute anything of the kind referred to, can ascertain by correspondence with Mr. Hager whether what they have is already in the possession of the Society or not.

Bro. Thomas and Sr. Elizabeth Revell, of Nauvoo, Illinois, write: "We are not tired of the truth yet. The longer we live, the more we love the heaven-born truths of the gospel, and the brighter they seem to us, and more glorious as we see the end approaching. We often wish we had the privileges that most of the Saints enjoy, of meeting together often and cheering each other as we journey on the path to the river that divides us from that rest that remains for the children of light."

It is reported that Mr. W. H. Jennings, ex-mayor of Salt Lake City stated in a late priesthood council meeting in that city that the Mormon "people must do one of three things, obey the laws, emigrate, or whip the United States." This is sound common sense. Which alternative will be adopted we wait to see.

Bro. J. V. L. Sherwood, late of Lamoni, has removed to Grant City, Missouri, where he has established himself as a jeweler, clock and watch repairer. He is in the Post Office building; has an advertisement in the Worth county Times of February 19th. We wish him ample success.

Please address Elder M. H. Forscutt, till March 30th, care of G. A. Blakeslee, Galien, Berrien county, Michigan.

A number of letters are again left over, among them one from Bro. L. H. Ezzell, Marmaton, Kansas; one from H. N. Davis, of Anywhere, Iowa; one from Archie McKenzie, Merlin, Ontario; R. Fields, Dayville, Grant county, Missouri.

Bro. John Brackenbury and J. H. Lee write from Independence, Mo., that there is much sickness there. Bro. Lee has lost two children, and three others are sick. They desire prayers of Saints in their behalf.

Sr. Eliza Mann, formerly of the London, Ontario, Branch, but now at Arlington, Reno county, Kansas, writes February 20th, to Bro. W. W. Blair, that she has been seven years in Kansas, and during that time has not heard a sermon. Her husband is not a member of the church, but an Elder would find a home with them while he should set forth the truth for a time, should one visit the locality. Can not Bro. J. T. Davies look after them a little.

THE Kansas City Fournal of February 23, has the following bit of news from Lamar, Missouri, taken with the information from Wilber, Nebraska, by letter, that Mr. Braden had arrived there in custody of the sheriff, is suggestive that possibly the Rev. Clark Braden has fallen into difficult lines; and if the charges upon which he has been arrested should be properly proved in court, he is hardly the man in character to throw stones at primitive Mormonism. We hope for the sake of humanity that Mr. Braden is not guilty of so deliberate an attempt to defraud as this charge would indicate. We are however prepared to believe the statement concerning Zion, that "no weapon formed against thee shall prosper." One of the wittnesses by whom Mr. Braden sought to prove the bad character of the early Elders of the church at Kirtland, avowed himself a thief; and if the great slaughterer of Mormonism, the Goliath from the ranks of the Disciples, should turn out to be a deliberate defrauder and swindler, what becomes of pretentions he has made.

SELLING MORTGAGED PROPERTY.

"LAMAR, Mo., Feb. 22.—[Special.] John T. Lane, sheriff of Saline county, Neb., accompanied by a Mr. Smith, and armed with a requisition from the governor of Nebraska for one Clark Braden, arrived in town yesterday morning, and asked our officers to assist them in affecting his capture. Braden has been expounding Christian doctrines to the people of Liberal for the past two weeks from a Campbellite standpoint, and [going] for infidelity and spiritualism in the roughest manner possible. He attributing all rascality, immorality, drunkenness and debauchery to nonbellevers of Christianity.

"He was arrested for defrauding B. L. Castor of Wilber, Saline county, Neb., out of $800 by mortgaging to him a printing office which he afterwards sold and took out of the state, depriving the mortgagee of the benefit of his security, then skipping himself. Such a transaction is a felony in Nebraska, subjecting the offender to ten years' imprisonment in the penitentiary."

FROM the Pembroke, Dakota, Clarion of January 28th, sent us by Bro. Wm. Sparling, we gather that he and the editor of the Clarion, Mr. Samuel Lovett, were endeavoring to enlighten the citizens of Pembroke on the Book of Mormon. See below:

"Mr. Sparling favored the people of Pembroke with a sermon on the Book of Mormon, last Sabbath.

"Samuel Lovell will give the citizens of our village a talk on the Book of Mormon, on next Sabbath at the printing office. Everybody is cordially invited to attend."

From the Pittsburg, Dakota, the Potter county official paper, Frank King, editor and publisher, we take the following from the Pembroke items, probably referring to the same efforts:

"Theological discussions are rife at Pembroke. Rumor says the Mormon has the best of it.

"Mr W. Sparling preached at the post-office on Sunday last. Subject, "Scriptural Evidences of the Book of Mormon." The preacher quoted extensively from both Old and New Testaments, among which was the 29th chapter of Isalah.

Mr. S. invites questions, which are cheerfully answered. Preaching every Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Welcome all."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

9.—Was the baptism of Jesus for remission of sins?

A.—In the argument upon the question of baptism being for the remission of sins, this point is sometimes made. The body which Christ took was "a body of the nature of Abraham's seed;"-"a body hast thou prepared me," is said of it. This body partook of the sinful nature of flesh; "he [Jesus] was made sin for us;" and in obedience to the law requiring baptism, Christ brought that body "of the nature of Abraham's seed" into subjection and that body was baptized under the command that the sin imputed to it, because of the flesh should be remitted, and the body redeemed in the resurrection. It is not a doctrine, it is merely an argument based upon the nature of the body Christ had during his incarnation. It is not a doctrine of the church; Elders should not so represent it.

> MEDINA CITY, Texas, February 18th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-We held several meetings after I wrote last at the High Prairie School-house, near Stockdale; and on January 28th, we met at the residence of Bro. J. A. Currie, sen., and organized a branch, composed of nine members who were formerly members of the old Stockdale Branch, which was disorganized in 1881. The new branch is to be known as the "New Hope Branch," Elder J. A. Currie, sen., presides, and Bro. J. W. Currie, secretary. May God prosper them in every good work! Bro. J. A. Currie, jun., went to the trustees and engaged the schoolhouse in Stockdale for Sunday, January 25th. Accordingly we went, and found the Baptists in possession, holding Sunday School. At the close the superintendent announced that Bro. Figh would preach at eleven o'clock. I went to him, and told him we had obtained consent of the trustees, and had an appointment for eleven o'clock; whereupon another stepped up and said: "I saw Mr. McGee, (the trustee), and he told me he had not given them permission to use the house." I then turned to the speaker and asked his name. He replied, "My name is Cain." Bro. Currie and I then went for Mr. McGee, who denied the statement of Mr. Cain, and went with us and faced him, so he was caught before the audience. We held the house, but they succeeded in getting a large part of the audience to leave. We were well treated by the people in general, and some were very much interested in our services.

Bro. Currie and I left his father's on the 29th, and reached Oak Island the next day, where we held five meetings, Bro. H. L. Thompson assisting us by preaching once. February 4th we were again on our way for this place. Arrived at Bandera late the night of the 5th, just in time to hear a temperance lecture delivered in the Methodist Church by Bro. Cato, which seemed to give good satisfaction. I was requested to speak on the same subject the following night, to which I consented. The next day a special meeting of the Temperance Council was called to arrange a programme. The meeting was opened by singing the old gospel song:

"Ho my comrades, see the signal Waving in the sky; Reinforcements now appearing, Victory is nigh."

To which was sung an original chorus composed for the occasion as follows:

"Cease your rum and whiskey selling, Drunkards take alarm; If you drink then you'll regret it, For they'll do you harm.'

I enjoyed as good liberty as I usually do in preaching, and felt encouraged to work for the temperance cause. This consideration shown us is significant, when it is remembered that two years ago we were forbidden the privilege of speaking in this same house; and also that the debate was recently held there in which every effort was made to feed the prejudice already existing; when no effort was made to show that we were mistaken; but the system we represent was declared to be an imposition, a fraud and a deception. The character of some was ruthlessly and directly assailed, others indirectly. The good people of Bandera seem inclined to be fair, and willing to give every man a chance.

On the 7th we arrived here, and delivered up to Bro. Sutherland and my uncle their team and hack. We felt very grateful for the use of them. They have saved us some expense and much trouble. Since then we have been making some further effort here, but do not find the interest as good as we left it.

In hope, HEMAN C. SMITH.

COLDWATER, Mich., February 18th, 1885.

Editor of the Herald: - In compliance with the request of the Presidency, I left home the 26th of November last, in order to visit the Saints in the east. Arrived at Kirtland, Ohio, the same day, to find Bro. E. L. Kelley, whom I expected to accompany me, convalescent, having had a pull at the fever for more than a week, and his wife then lying with a high fever; the oldest boy, Winfred, soon to follow. By uniting faith and works all were well in a few days, and on December 5th we started for Philadelphia, Pa, where we arrived on the morning of the 6th. We called on Sr. Heck and brothers, who kindly entertained us. Sr. Heck, however, soon gave us to understand that she was not in the faith with us. She was not a member of the Olive Branch, but was in spirit and sympathy with them. She was laboring under the impression that it was not essential to belong to the church; that she had been baptized, and that she could now go out of the church and serve the Lord acceptably, This of course would avoid much, if not all, of the odium that the world attach to the Saints, &c. Others shared in this belief. In fact, it was apparent, that the seeds of disaffection had been sown. They were busy at work. Suspicion and distrust were cast upon those in whom it would be safe enough to confide, and that upon which it would be safe enough to lean.

In the afternoon we met with Bro. Joseph A. Stewart, who has stood for the right through evil as well as good report. Bro. Stewart is not disposed to give up the best thing in the world, just because some body is disposed to misrepresent and cast opprobrium upon it. At night we were domiciled at Bro. Archie Cameron's, which was our pleasant home while in the city.

The following day, Sunday, we preached in the Saints' Hall, morning and evening, to small audiences, but who manifested a love and zeal for the cause. Bro. Small, president of the branch, was among the number present.

On Monday, the 8th, by invitation we called at Sr. Heck's again, and met with Bro. Owens of Brooklyn, who had been sent for, presumably, to show cause why he had been so conspicuous a factor in effecting the late departures. He seemed to regret the course he had taken; did not try to defend his course, and expressed a desire to put himselt in accord with the church again. Stated that he would write an apology or statement, and send it to the Herald, making the plaster as broad as the wound. That he did not understand the position of the church on some matters mentioned; and that he could only attribute his course to his ignorance, &c. Sr. Heck and Bro. Ransome kept up a determined resistance, however, and were deaf to all argument and entreaty; and so persistent that there was no consistent course left but to sever them from the church. well at their home, which was duly appreciated; We visited them several times. They treated us and I have known stranger things to occur than that they should see their error some day.

Now it may be amusing, if not profitable, to learn something of the causes that led to this uproar and shaking of faith. Well, the whole thing grew out of a kind of gossip, tattling, and tale-bearing, that had been going on for an indefinite time, about what grandfather said, that aunt Mary said, that uncle Simon said occurred out at Nauvoo forty years ago, among the elite and high officials, &c. Those who ought to have been wise enough to receive all such at least in small doses, seem to have been ripe and ready for an adventure, and so gulped it all down without question, becoming all at once disgusted with the church in general and individuals in particular-called the whole "nasty," and raised their noses high and dry above the scum of humanity that was heaped together and named the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in search of a more smellable thing. Were going to get right away from all such bad odors, and start something sweet and savery, that the people would take to. So the "Church of the Primitive Faith" was projected, with an epitome attached that would indicate that they had not been in bad company, and Elder Owens as captain. This however had really outdone itself by the time we arrived at Philadelphia, and was known only in history. As a sample, here is the leading story set afloat, and mainly relied upon, that produced so much discontent, chagrin, and mortification. A certain Elder, resident, said, so the story ran, that he at one time lived in Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1843-4; that while there he saw Emma Smith drive seventeen of Joseph's wives out of the house at one time, &c. We were cautioned that when we met this individual, we would learn something. Being not born of faint heart, we did not grow short of breath or hysterical, but went straight to said brother to be astounded. First, we learned that he never lived at Nauvoo at all; Second, that he never was there but about three weeks. Third, that he never said that he saw Emma drive seventeen women, or any other number, out of her house. Fourth, that he told that as a story that he heard somewhere, and never thought of leaving the impression that he knew it himself. Fifth, he did not know whether Joseph and Hyrum Smith were in any way committed to the celestial scheme or not. So as usual, on that point, we were dumbfounded. Others were mentioned as knowing and divulging, periodically, great things. It was the old, old story over again; the main effect being produced by the narrator slightly lying back and hinting more than said; and with knowing look, talking mysteriously and in enigmas, that could be interpreted to mean anything or nothing, owing to the inclination of the hearer; that putting this and that together, and if, and but, if nothing did transpire it is "amazing" that it did not. Human nature is such that some people delight to tell louder things and stranger than their neighbors know of, or ever imagined. They meet, and for a while one trumps the other, until by and by they find themselves telling for fact that which was at first but second or third handed, or dim surmise; so that when critically examined, they are surprised themselves, that they have been so extravagant. Talk has flowed freely and recklessly, however, and the mischief is done. Some too credulous and weak ones stumble, or fall. After all it is but talk, the cheapest commodity in existence. Can there not be a reform? Tell only what we know especially when somebody's character is involved?

Again, some were exasperated over the "name" of the church. "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." Too great a claim, especially the title of "saint." But when shown that the church under Moses was composed of Saints; and that they were so virtuous, pure and angelic that they were not permitted to enter the earthly Canaan, to say nothing of the heavenly, that Saints in Old and New Testament times practiced most henious vices; if their actions were not saintly, they were called Saints; the word Saint became divested of much of the imaginary, beatific attachment, and they felt better. Especially when it is so apparent, that when the Savior comes, there do not seem to be but two classes with him, i.e., saints and angels. There are saints and angels in heaven; but no other classes but gods, to reject the name "saint;" and one might not be fortunate enough to be numbered with that company. Then came "latter." But it being clear that we are not former, but latter, this was disposed of. The church should be called after the name of Christ; and his name is Jesus, (Luke 1:31), hence Jesus Christ. There was nothing left but the little word "of," and it may be that some are brushing away at that yet. We visited the members of the Olive Branch personally, uninfluenced by any one, to learn the difficulties of each. They consisted in a great part, if not altogether, in the same and kindred things, cited above. Most all of these, however, had about reached conclusions, and made up their minds that they had started off without knowing where they were going, or what for; and were spunky at themselves for being so thoughtless as to start. All seemed to feel better when they learned that they could not resolve themselves out of the Church, no more than they could resolve themselves in. This district needs help. It has been neglected by the general church. Some have had to carry extra burdens, and too long with too little encouragement.

On the 26th, we went to Brooklyn, New York, and called on Brn. Box, Truman and Squires. Met with some brethren just from England, and helped them to reorganize the Brooklyn Branch; the old officers having moved away. The work needs a good, constant laborer here. The visits of the missionaries have been too transient to be of great benefit, and the brethren feel it. The leaven of discontent had wrought here, but not effectually. We called on Bro. Owens to learn that he again had changed his mind. Had not written to the Herald as promised at Philadelphia, and did not intend to. He was inexorable, and resolved on his own course; so we recommended that he be severed from the church. It will be a God-send, when the Reorganization is relieved of all of its adventurers, not to say cranks! and when men who represent the church can do so, without the use of so many lax and equivocal sayings as to leave multitudes in doubt to stumble over their sayings. It seems to me the hight of madness and folly, for men to build a thing, and then turn round and touch a match to it just

While here we were in doubt as to which way to go, east, or west; and in a night vision I saw a person standing on a marble pedestal, who directed us to go into the Massachusetts District. So suiting our action to the direction, I arrived in Boston on Christmas day, in time to dine at the secone table, at the house of our esteemed brother Webster, E. L. having gone another route. Bro. M. H. Bond was here laboring for the cause, and Bro. Hoxie. I had the pleasure of meeting for the first, Bro. Joseph Lakeman, of Grand Manan, here also. It was a treat to meet this out and out Yankee; tall and lean, and in conversation apt and fluent, and a fresh stock on hands all the time. He is one of the strangest compounds that the revelation of 1873 mentions. He made a favorable impression on us. I enjoyed meeting with the Saints here, and felt comforted to learn of so many earnest workers in the

Now, Mr. Editor, I am reminded that I must generalize or I will not get this into the columns of the Herald. Suffice to say, that after leaving Boston, I went to Fall River, and met with an excellent body of Saints, who are working for the cause. Here I chanced to meet with Bro. John Smith, the president of the district. He is a boon companion, and sound in the faith. By request I accompanied him home to New Bedford, where there is an organization of thorough going Saints. They have a pleasant hall in which to meet. Our stay was too short to be satisfactory. Young Bro. Whiting is a help to the cause there. Bro. Smith takes pride in keeping his name and credit good among his neighbors. From here I went to Providence, R. I., and stopped with Bro. M. H. Bond, to find himself and excellent companions zealously engaged in the work. He is all the constant laborer now in the district, and is meeting with success and encouragement. There are a number of good workers and faithful Saints here, too numerous to mention. Some have been standing for the faith for years, and are happy and contented; others are young and of promise. Providence bids fair to be a strong fortress for the work. Bro. Frank Potter—the coming man—is in charge, and has the support of the Saints. Young Bro. Yerrington leads the music at the Sabbath School and church, and sisters and brothers take an interest. I went out to Scituate, nine miles, while here, with Bro. Waterman, and had the pleasure of meeting a number of excellent Saints and interested outsiders. The meeting was a good one, but it was cold weather.

I spent a number of days at Plainville, staying at Bro. Coombs, mainly. The weather was bad, and I took it as providential that I fell into so good hands. Was so kindly cared for, that I just about conquered a cold of long standing. Held several meetings with seeming good impression. Brn. Green, Pierce, the Staple sisters; Brn. Holmes, Coombs and households; and sisters Hattie, grandma and Carrie, with some others, are the workers here. May their darkest day have been; and naught but prosperity and peace crown their efforts in the future.

January 26th, 1885, I arrived at Brockton, a lecture having been announced for the evening in the hall. The audience was not large, but of course the lecture was all right. Another providence met me here, and I was consigned to the kind care of Bro. and Sr. Doon, while the storm raged without. I met with a number of careful, cool, calculating, energetic Saints here, that it is a pleasure to be with. They hold to the consistent view, that it takes faith and effort to accomplish anything in this world.

From here, on the 29th, we went to Dennisport, away down on Cape Cod. Intended to have gone west two weeks ago, but come to find out, we might just as well have not gone east at all if we missed seeing the cape. Next to Plymouth Rock, this is without doubt the east. We soon met with Captain J. H. Long, president of the branch, who refreshed us, and in due time conducted us to our home, at Sr. Joy's, until after conference, soon to convene. Bro. Joy was absent, at post of duty, and ice bound. Thanks to Sr. Joy and family for kind care. At evening we listened to a good effort by Bro. Whiting, of New Bedford. It was comforting to hear some one else once more. Bro. Whiting bids fair to be quite useful; and takes delight in helping the cause. In due time conference convened with a host in attendance. The good Spirit was present and an excellent feeling prevailed throughout. It was quite apparent that they have held conference in the Massachusetts District before. Questions of moment were properly ventilated before being voted upon, the sisters taking a deep interest in all that was going on. On Sunday, the meeting assumed much of the appearance of a General Conference. The building was spacious, and the audience large and attentive; although it rained hard the most of the day. The preaching was fair to good, E. L. took the cake on Sunday evening, and I think it safe to say, that none were sorry that they were in attendance at the conference. Bro. John Smith was continued as president of the district, and it would be difficult to get a better any where. The other officers were also continued, I believe. We enjoyed the conference, and our visit to the Cape. With thanks to Bro. and Sr. Glover, of Hyde Park; Brn. Coles, Mortimer, Hoxie, Rainer, and Sr. Bliss of Boston; Brn. Gondoph, Toombs, Bloods and Grimwoods, of Providence; Bro. John Gilbert and household, at Fall River; Bro. Green, Mrs. Corts and daughter of Camden, New Jersey, who so kindly prepared an excellent Christmas dinner, at which Bro. Stewart and self sat and enjoyed. I bid adieu to the east, and find myself at home again, February 8th, to find that my oldest boy had been very sick for three weeks but is gaining.

The snow is deep and more falling, and the thermometer ranging from 15 to 30 degrees below zero. This letter is long, but thinking it fully as important and cheering as some other things that are illuminating the columns of the Herald of late, I submit it without an apology.

WM. H. KELLEY.

CAMERON, Missouri,

Feb'y 18th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph: - At present I am at home, trying to recruit. I have just returned from a trip into Grundy county, this state, where I tried to tell the old story the best I could; but owing to the severely cold weather, and my throat being sore, I could not do as much as I desired to do. In some places there seemed to be a good interest, and had it not been for the bad conduct of some that profess the name of Christ I think much good could be done. Oh when will Zion's children learn wisdom. I expect to go into Caldwell county, next week, to try to tell the story to some of my old neighbors, if I am able to preach. I never felt a greater interest in the work in my life than of late, or a greater desire to preach the word. I hope to be able to do more in the future; for I have been promised through the Spirit, that if I was faithful, I should be healed, and be able to preach as before. Oh how thankful I would be! Will all the Saints pray that my voice may become strong again, so that I may battle for the truth, as before. May the Lord bless the great Yours in hope, cause.

W. T. BOZARTH.

SAN FRANCISCO, California, February 14th, 1885.

Dear Bro. Blair.—All goes nicely with us. The future for our cause seems brightening. I feel much encouraged. The Expositor is going ahead nicely. Our meetings are quite well attended. I met Judge Crosby a few days since; he enquired kindly for you; he is coming to meeting to-morrow evening to hear Bro. Brown, and expects to bring with him the proprietor of the Daily Post, who has written several articles in our favor, and is very friendly to us.

Yours in the faith,

GEO. S. LINCOLN.

WHITCOMB, Wisconsin, February 17th, 1885.

Brother Joseph:—I have preached three sermons at Wittenberg, a small village four miles from here, at the house of sister Vanburen, her son and a young man named Sanford. They all came into the church near Galien, Michigan. They are all strong in the faith, and the interest of the meetings is increasing, and they know you, and heard you preach; and I think there will be a branch formed there.

I preached at my house last Sunday night. Had a few out, and I will preach next Sunday night at Wittenberg again. There is no one else to preach here in this new country, so I thought

I would do all I could for the Lord and his work. I intend to do all I can in this latter day work, for my heart is in it. Pray for me, that I may do all things right.

From your brother in the faith,
J. M. WAIT.

NEW PARK, York Co., Pa., February 16th, 1885.

Dear Brother Joseph:—We are all striving to do the will of the Master, as nearly as we can. Bro. Joseph A. Stewart, left this day for Philadelphia. He came here on the 7th of this month, and preached every night except one during the time he was here. We had meeting three times the first Sunday he was here, preaching in the morning, Sacrament at three o'clock, and preaching at half-past seven. The next Sunday he preached in the forenoon, and in the evening at the usual hours. He left us to-day, feeling well, and in good cheer. We had good attendance during the time he was here. May God bless him in his efforts in the gospel, is my prayer.

Yours in the gospel,

M. O. Matthews.

ST. PETER, Feb. 18th, 1885.

Brother Joseph:—We are strangers in a strange land, knowing no Saints, but often hearing of Elders in the adjoining towns, and there might be one in this town and we not know it; but if there is any Elder that will come and preach, he will find a welcome here. We are trying to live faithful, but feel we need the prayers of the Saints.

From your sister in the gospel, S. Weiler.

[This letter should have appeared prior to the one published in Herald of February 14th, but was unintentionally omitted.—Ed.]

Manassa, Colo.,

December 27th, 1884.

Dear Herald:-As you and your kind readers have so patiently borne with me so far, I will again intrude upon your generosity a little further, and crave your indulgence to follow me over to this Brighamite Zion, hoping we will find something to engage our attention of more importance than what we have had heretofore. And as time and tide wait for no one, the fall of 1878 rolled around, the time appointed by the leaders for the company to start for this the promised land. And as providence had not provided transportation by the iron horse nearer than thirty or forty miles, and wagons and teams being scarce, consequently they had to walk. As it is an uncontroverted fact, that it is hard to tell what an hour will bring forth in this section of Colorado, so on emerging from the warm cars, they found that the fleecy clouds in anticipation of their arrival, had covered the earth with a soft, white carpet, eight or ten inches deep, through which the poor women were compelled to wade. And after a toilsome tramp of five or six miles, with depressed spirits, they emerged from the canyon, out on the open plain, when they had something presented to view to cheer them on to nobler deeds. For off to the south-west, protruding just a little above the distant horizon, could be seen, like a camel's back, the little foot hill, that had been dubbed, Mount Manassa, whereon should lie the great city of refuge, (Manassa); but on a nearer approach, they found no city. It had vanished like the city in the Arabian Nights' Entertainments; and as Aladin's lamp was not to be had, it was impossible to speak a city, or even one of the dirt covered hovels that now meet the eye, into existence. But that it would take bone, muscle and time, to accomplish the task, which caused many sad hearts and rueful countenances. But as they were now into it, they would have to make the best of it; so they consoled themselves with the teachings of the elders, that the Lord was only trying them. Poor ignorant souls. If they did but know what the consequences will be in the end, when they will all fall into the ditch with their blind guides, how many would retrace their hasty steps before it is too late. But they have this consolation: they will be on top, and easier of access and succor, when the refreshing times come from the Lord. But there is a class of beings spoken of in the Scriptures, that has existed from the earliest ages, and would continue down to the end of time; viz., always learning, but never able to come to the knowledge of the truth; who are generally a very unsophisticated people, therefore easily led astray, as they look for and expect to be directed and governed by stronger minds, who take advantage of their verdancy, while betraying their confidence. They tell them that the Lord is only trying them, and that it is very essential that it should be so, as the Lord will not have any but a tried people; and that all the trials and hardships which they have to undergo, such as cold, hunger and other attendant privations are only simple means whereby the Lord intends to purify them. If any should have the temerity to murmur, and deplore their sad condition, they are told by their teacher, that the reason they are not more blessed is, that they are not-living their religion, but are disobedient to the counselings of the priesthood. The persons that the Lord so graphically described in the 23rd chapter of Matthew, who bind heavy burdens, and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders, but they themselves will not remove with one of their fingers. If the light of truth could be made to dawn upon their benighted hearts so that they could see and realize how fast and permanently they are fastening the shackles of mental and physical bondage not only on themselves, but on their innocent offspring also, their very souls would shrink within them. But it is impossible to gain access to their reasoning faculties, as they are surrounded by a wall of caution, emanating from their false teachers, not to have anything to do with any doctrine that is not in accordance with the teachings of the priesthood. Having now arrived within the sacred precincts of Brighamism imagination, where according to their prophecies, street cars would be now running from one end of its vast commonwealth to the other; but St. Paul says that prophecies shall fail, which is invariably the case with our Utah friends, as I am not aware of one solitary prediction of theirs ever being fulfilled. At least there has been none recorded to my knowledge, although they are very prolific in bringing forth. We will now take a bird's eye view from the top of Mount Manassa, of this magnificent city of the plains; and after taking it all in, we only find about one hundred squalid log cabins, a great portion of them covered with dirt; yet it is true that there are a few other houses that are better constructed, and as a general rule belong to the henchmen of the boss; while himself occupies a very grand and imposing mansion, compared with its neighbors. We now have an accurate description of this stake of Brighamism; and will take a look into the manners and customs of its denizens, if the term is applicale to a people who are only free to do as they are bidden. Our attention will be given first to the element that is sent out (as they claim) by the God-inspired hierarchy of Utah, to be leaders and patterns of godliness for the ignorant proselytes to follow. The vanity and arrogance of these sub-bosses is very great. They think that they know it all: and what they don't know is not worth knowing, as it would not make a primer for an African. But when they are sounded on any subject, they are found to be very shallow, and the only thing they are proficient in is, how such and such matters and things are understood and managed, back in Utah. There are very few of them that have the least idea what is contained in the books they profess to revere; and if their attention is called to any particular passage of scripture, that does not coincide with their teachings, they will say that is Josephite doctrine.

We will now examine their moral status, and see how it will compare with the Christian churches of the Gentile world. I do not wish to cast any reproach upon ignorance, for many are honest in their intentions, and if they will persist in believing a lie, that they may be damned, they will be culpable before the Lord, when they render an account to him of the deeds done in the body. But the greater damnation will be on their false teachers whose piety is very little above Lucifer's, when he wishes to appear as an angel of light, that is, when the occasion demands it. Therefore, it is not at all strange or uncommon, to hear the most profane language coming from the mouths of men who profess to be endowed with the Holy Spirit. I have witnessed a case where a person professing to hold the holv priesthood after the order of the Son of God, to get crazy drunk and make use of the most diabolical and obscene oaths that could be invented by his Satanic majesty; then in a very short time afterwards, appear before a congregation, and have the brazen hardihood and impudence to ask that holy being, whose name he has profaned, to bless and sanctify the emblems of the Lord's body, which was broken for sin.

The question might be asked, Is such gross conduct tolerated in the church? I can only answer that the authorities were cognizant of this particular fact; and I really believe that I have heard and witnessed more wickedness since I came out here, than I ever did in the former portion of my life; and I fully coincide with what I once heard a good brother say, namely, that whereever polygamy existed, that the very elements were fragrant with foul and evil spirits, and that they are inhaled with the air we breathe; and if not expelled by the Spirit and grace of God, would take full possession of the heart; that they were the same rebellious spirits that caused the leaders and followers to be driven out of Zion, and taken to a salt and parched land. Can we now wonder and speculate on the cause of the rebelliousness of the rising generation of Mormon parentage? Well did the Apostle Paul predict these times, when he said, that children should be unthankful, unholy, and disobedient to parents. Ask whom we will, if their children are as obedient since they came here as they were before; the answer will be, that they are not, provided the person has the least bit of reverence for the truth; and furthermore, that they are not able to account for the fact, as they were from the teachings of the Elders, led to believe to the contrary; for they were told before they came out, that the children could be seen going to and from school, with hands locked, singing the songs of Zion. So some of the good, pious souls, wished to witness such a heavenly vision while here on earth, so that they would be the bearers of the glad tidings to those behind the vail, when they should be called hence. So they posted themselves where they could have a fair view of the scholars as they came out of the school-house door. But what a sad disappointment was in store for them. For instead of happy songs, could be heard vile epithets of abusive language. Yet it was true, that they had their hands locked, but not in each other's, but in locks of hair. And they had the mortification to witness two fights before the children passed one block, a distance of about one hundred yards; consequently their mental reflections were: "And this is what they call Zion, where all is peace, harmony, and love. The place where, when a person salutes another, he salutes a friend and brother in very deed. Away with such gross falsehoods. I want no such Zion in mine. But give me back my old Babylonish home, if I can't find something better." Now, kind parents, whoever you are, whose children are obedient unto you, although you are in the midst of Babylon, don't be too hasty in bidding it farewell, to come to the mountains of Ephraim to dwell; but as the saying is, "Look before you leap," and do not bring your innocent little ones into this fanatical Pandora's Box; for I can assure you, that it is not like the fabled box of yore; for at the bottom of that there was hope, while in this there is none, as it is a gradual scale downward, from bad to worse. Taste not, handle not, of their damnable doctrines: for it is death to the soul.

And you, parents, who are here, and are eve and ear witnesses of these facts, whose little ones are ner and dear to your souls, let me beg of you to flee out of this modern, as good old Lot fled from ancient Sodom; for if he had remained, it would only have been a temporal death; while in this it will be both temporal and spiritual if you remain. You may say that I exaggerate the necessity; but I assure you that I do not. As Isaiah says, to the law and testimony. Read the Scriptures and understand them perfectly, that in every age of the world, when men forsook the true and living God, that he invariably forsook them, and suffered all manner of evils to come upon them. You may still think that I am too hasty, and say that you have not ignored the God of heaven. Admitting that you have not at this time done so knowingly, yet at the same time you sanction and uphold those who have, as your names recorded on their books goes to prove. For it is the signatures to a legal instrument that make it of force. Just so it stands in your case; and it is only a matter of time; for sooner or later you will follow their pernicious teachings, and be led off into the worst form of idolatry. They are very reticent to you now on the subject, but when you become as pliable as they desire, they will then fashion you to their will. You will be made, or persuaded to take the horrible endowment oathes in their secret combination order, when they will have you fast, and make you toe the mark. Then gratitude and all the nobler sentiments of your hearts will be only remembered as bygone virtues; for when the Priesthood commands, you owe no obligations for favors conferred by friends when you were in dire need. I only speak what I know to be facts, as I have tested them to my satisfaction, and will cite a few instances in my next.

Ever praying that light of truth may predominate, I remain your brother,

FELIX B. MOYERS.

Summary of Aews.

GENERAL NEWS.

Feb. 19th.—The Matanzas & Sabinilla Railroad Company in Cuba has granted freedom to all the blacks, thirty-six in number, still held in servitude.

Advices from Irkutsk in Eastern Siberia report a revolt among the Russian exiles, which was quelled with great difficulty, 'Nine soldiers and thirty exiles were killed.

In consequence of the fall of Khartoum and Gen. Gordon's death, the whole plan of the campaign in the Soudan has been changed. Gen. Brackenbury has been ordered to abandon his advance on Berber and return to Korti. Col. Buller, who evacuated Gubat the 13th and withdrew to Abu-Klea Wells, has also received orders to fall back on Korti. Gen. Wolsely will probably concentrate his entire army at Debbeh, and will there await help from England. It is thought that the moral effect of Gen. Wolsely's retirement will be neutralized by the contemplated action from Suakin.

The British Parliament opened, and plunged at once into the consideration of the Egyptian question, now so violently agitating England.

Advices from the west coast of Africa state, that Germany has annexed a strip of land along the coast to the westward of Benin.

Much astonishment is expressed over the quick passage of the Texas Pacific Land-Grant Forfeiture bill, which went through the Senate yesterday. Fifty six Senators voted for, and only two—Blair and Bowen—against it. Despite the efforts of the obstructionists all amendments which militated against the effectiveness of the bill were voted down. It declares forfeited all lands granted to the Texas Pacific Railroad Company under the act of 1871, and repeals the act of 1875 "for the relief of settlers within railroad limits."

A constitutional amendment was passed by the California Assembly yesterday providing that railroads shall pay a tax of 2½ per cent on their gross earnings.

The church organs and local authorities at Salt Lake City, urge the brethren to renewed diligence in boycotting "Our enemies." Some of their mutual-improvement associations under the lead of the Bishops have passed resolutions not to patronize Gentiles until the polygamy prosecution ceases. In speaking of this tonight the church organ demands that the action be made unanimous.

Landis, who arrived in Tucson, Ari., today, says that the Governor of Sonora, Mexico, has given the Mormons the right to settle the Yaqui country. It is one of the richest sections in the world. It has an abundance of water and coffee, cotton, pineapples, oranges, lemons, tobacco grows profusely. On the foothills of the Sierra Madre wheat, corn, and barley can be grown to per-

Feb. 20th.—In case of an agreement between England and Italy upon a plan of operations in Africa prompt measures are contemplated by the Italian Government to give effective aid to the British in the Soudan. Gen. Ricci will take command of the Italian contingent.

It is believed that the British Government is preparing for a long campaign in the Soudan. The quantity of ammunition and projectiles now in process of manufacture at Woolwich Arsenal for transportation to Egypt is greater than during the entire period of the Crimean War.

An almost universal protest has arisen against the Ministry in England. It is admitted even by the Pall Mall Gazette, which has always been the friend of the Government, that "Mr. Gladstone's sun is setting fast behind black and lurid clouds." The war spirit is fully aroused, and the peace party finds little support.

There is a general feeling of alarm in England in consequence of the Government order calling out the militia and suspending transfers of officers from the regular army to the reserves. It is surmised that more startling information has been received by the Ministry from Gen. Wolseley. Gen. Buller has been hemmed in at Abu-Klea Wells, and it will probably be necessary to send strong reinforcements to his rescue from Korti. The retreat of Gen. Buller from Gubat was rendered necessary by a concentration of the Mahdi's forces against him.

Gen. Buller, who began his retreat from Gubat several days ago, was compelled to halt at Abu-Klea Wells (only twenty miles from Gubat) and intrench his troops in position there in order to safely defend himself against El Mahdi's men, who are gathereng in large numbers on his line of retreat and continually menacing the British forces. Special dispatches indicate that Gen. Wolsely will have to send strong reinforcements to Gen. Buller if the latter is to be rescued from his perilous position. Grave fears are entertained that Buller may meet the fate of Gordon unless speedily succored.

The case of Ferdinand J. Hintze of Big Cottonwood, Utah, indicted for polygamy in September, 1882, was called to-day, at Salt Lake City, and Hintze and his sureties for $500 all failed to respond. The bail-bond was declared forfeited. Thomas Henegar, indicted for polygamy in 1879, was arraigned, and a demurrer to the indictment was sustained. The case of John Fowler, also indicted for polygamy in 1879, was continued.

Notwithstanding the recommendation of the Appropriations Committee against it the Senate decided by a vote of 33 to 18 in favor of the House amendment reducing the postage upon drop-letters to two cents an ounce. It is thought that the recommendation of the House as to the reduction of newspaper postage will also be adopted by the Senate. The members of the Appropriations Committee individually favored these reductions, but they regarded the recent vote of the Senate against incorporating new legislation in appropriation bills as imperative.

In anticipation of a Socialist outbreak the National Guard in New York City and elsewhere is said to be drilling for street fighting. Chicago merchants are also reported to be drilling their employes in similar tactics.

Gen. Sir Herbert Stewart, who was wounded at the battle of Abu-Klea Wells, died the 16th instant at Gakdul Wells. His wound was from the first of a hopless nature.

Feb. 22d.—Dispatches from Abu-Klea Wells report that the 15th inst. Gen. Buller began shelling the Arab lines. Well-directed shots did the enemy much damage. Maj. Wardrop with thirteen men stole cautiously around the enemy's right, and finding only a few hundred riflemen on the hills, fired a volley into their flank. Leaving one man to continue the firing, the twelve others advanced, and by pursuing the same tactics on three successive hills gave the Arabs an impression that fresh bodies of British troops were arriving. The enemy was panicstricken and fled towards Metemneh. Gen. Buller contemplates an advance to Gakdul as soon as reinforcements arrive from Korti.

A procession of the Trades' Assembly, Socialistic labor unions, and Anarchists paraded the streets of St Louis and were reviewed by Gov. Marmaduke, the Mayor, and members of the Legislature. Three thousand men were in line. The demonstration which followed at Turn-Hall was so disorderly that the police were called in.

Herr Most paid Baltimore, Md., a visit to-day. The International Working people's Association invited him to come. This afternoon he made one of his characteristic speeches before 400 people in Turner Hall. When Most had finished his tirade, justifying assasination and the use of dynamite, the Chairman asked if there was any one else in the hall wishing to speak his mind. To the surprise of Most, a little man named August Zwiebler, a New York Socialist, arose in the audience and began a bitter attack on Most. While uttering his denunciations of the Anarchist he walked up on the stage on which Most sat. In a minute the crowd began shouting to put him out. Some wanted Most bounced and others shouted to Zwiebler to sit down. Most finally jumped up, strode toward Zwiebler, and for a moment it was thought the two would engage in a slugging match. The Chairman, however, restored quiet, though many persons, fearing a free fight, left the hall.

February 21st, the great monument at Washington, erected to the memory of Geo. Washington, was dedicated. A vast throng witnessed the ceremony. The whole structure has been erected without one serious accident occurring.

Feb. 23d.—An appeal has been issued by the Lord Mayor of London for funds to assist the unemployed and destitute.

Dispatches from Berne, Switzerland, report that the Bundesrath has rejected the naturalization treaty with the United States.

Such numbers of Russians are pouring into Cabul, ostensibly as travelers, as to cause no little uneasiness in Government circles at the Afghan Capital. It is rumored that the Russians are military men, and their visits are supposed to be connected with Russian designs upon Afghanistan.

Advices from Tonquin state that Gen. Briere de l'Isle is repairing the Bacle road and laying telegraph wires. No further reinforcements have been received. Gen. de l'Isle reports that with the last contingent of troops he has 18.000 men, which are sufficient to thoroughly cleanse Tonquin of the enemy. Advices from China state that Admiral Courbet's squadron has left the Ningpo River. It is not known where the squadron has gone.

A meteor passed over Victoria, B. C., this morning of enormous size and appeared like a mass of molten iron. The noise caused by the passage was like that of escaping steam. Smoke and flames were thrown off and it was seen to descend into the Sea of Haro and sink. A cloud of spray and steam marked the spot where it struck. This extraordinary phenomenon was witnessed by many persons.

Feb. 24th.—The steamer Allegheny, from Cardiff for Ceylon, has been lost with her crew of thirty persons.

Gen. Brackenbury expects to reach Abu Hamed tomorrow. The arrival of Gen. Brackenbury's column at Abu Hamed will be a welcome event for the British, since there will then, for a few weeks at least, be a possible line of communication with Korosko, above the second cataract. This line is 235 miles long, and there is only one point at which water is found, but steps will doubtless be taken to forward stores of water to Elmivrad in advance, and by forced camel marches the distance can be covered in nine days. At best this line will be an indifferent one, but anything is perferable to the isolation of the last several days.

The dispatches sent by Mr. Charles Williams, special correspondent of the Cable News from Abu-Klea last month, and suppressed by Gen. Wolseley, will be published in London tomorrow. They give the most graphic and unbiased description of Gen. Stewart's battle at Abu-Klea Jan. 16. which has yet found its way to London. This is the battle in which Col. Fred Burnaby was killed and in which the British square was broken by the Arabs. The military explanation hitherto made of the breaking of the square was that it was accomplished by the Arabs by sheer weight of numbers. The report of Mr. Williams throws a new light upon the occurrence. He says the disaster was caused by an unauthorized order given by Col. Burnaby for the dismounted cavalry, forming part of one side of the square, to advance to meet the charge of the Arab spearmen. Col. Burnaby gallantly led this advance and was killed in the hand-to-hand fight that ensued. The cavalrymen were swept back, and the Arabs, swarming all around them, forced their way into the square through the gap left by the cavalrymen's advance. It was a plucky movement, and Col. Burnaby expiated the mistake in judgment which prompted it, but it terribly imperiled the safety of the whole force and cost many lives besides that of Col. Burnaby. Mr Williams says that after this action and the one near Gubat the wounded suffered fearful agonies from the effects of the sun and the impossibility of obtaining sufficient water to drink or to dress their wounds. He also criticises Gen. Wolseley's plan of campaign, and, writing from Gubat six weeks ago, he predicted the retreat which has since been begun by Gen. Buller, and foretold some of the disasters which have already overtaken his force.

A sanguinary engagement has taken place in the Janja Valley, Peru, between four companies of Government troops and 2,000 Indian Monteneroes. The latter were defeated, leaving 300 dead on the field.

The following resolutions were adopted at the late Dynamite Convention in Paris: Whereas, England's unwarrantable interference in the internal affairs of the Irish nation continues in utter contradiction of the feelings and aspirations of the country; and

Whereas, an English Viceroy and an English

Privy Council, chief representatives of the British garrison, have by brute force and intolerable tyranny made every constitutional effort at Ireland's regeneration a mockery and a fiasco, and have compelled Irishmen to seek redress of grievances outside the pale of the law; and

Whereas, English tyranny is a shame and a disgrace to modern civilization; and

Whereas, the recent warnings given in the Tower of London and at Westminster have been neglected [and for a half dozen other redhot reasons with which your correspondent will not weary your readers]; it is hereby

Resolved, that, as the gauntlet has been thrown down, we accept the challenge and all the risks and dangers involved in punishing England for her odious crimes, prosecuting our campaign on the same lines as hitherto, but on a more extended scale, by the adoption of more vigorous measures, by carrying out other explosions in London and other towns, cities, and villages of England.

A motion admitting the Invincibles into the dynamite organization was negatived, as the former were unwilling to mege their individuality or principles with those of other extremists. A cipher telegram from "No. 1" (Patrick J. Tynan) was read, explaining the impossibility of a union, but advocating continued action, both with dynamite and the dagger. A proposition for alliance with the section of Russian Nihilists, made on behalf of the Nihilists present, was also rejected, on the ground that Russia, being England's enemy, was indirectly Ireland's friend. An active alliance, it was said, between Irishmen and the Czar's enemies was decidedly unpatriotic.

The question of Irish informers in Paris next occupied the attention of the meeting. James McDermott was resentenced to death. Two men were deputed to follow "No 1," with private instructions in regard to him, and have him executed as soon as possible. In reference to another supposed informer, Capt. Stewart, whom Stephens alleges to have been in receipt of £30 a month from the English Home-Office for watching Irish revolutionists, nothing was done, as he was considered an imbecile, unworthy of serious notice.

The new penal code adopted by the Minnesota Legislature restores the death penalty for murder in the first degree and renders murder in the second degree punishable by life imprisonment. Manslaughter in the first degree is punished by five to twenty years' imprisonment. The penalty for treason is life imprisonment. For bribery a punishment may be inflicted not exceeding ten years' imprisonment or $5.000 fine, or both. Conspiracy and libel are termed misdemeanors. Among the crimes against the person are suicide, homicide, maiming, assault, highway robbery, dueling, and libel. Dueling is punishable by imprisonment for not less than two nor more than ten years. The penalty for seduction is not to exceed five years' imprisonment or $1,000 fine, or both. The penalties for body-snatching are the same as those for seduction. Lotteries and other methods of gambling are provided against. A limit of fifteen years' imprisonment is fixed for arson, and blackmail is punishable by five years' imprisonment.

Feb. 25.—It is reported from Berne, Switzerland, that the Federal Assembly has resolved to expel from the country at least 1,000 Anarchists. Latest news from Agig and Tami confirms the report of a brilliant victory won by the Mudir of Taka and the Shukria tribe of friendly Arabs against the Hadendowah tribe in an attack made by the latter upon some friendly tribes for supporting the garrison at Kassala with grain. It is now stated that during the battle no less than 3,600 of the Hadendowahs were killed and among the slain was Sheik Ah Moosa. The Kassala garrison is short of food and ammunition, and, as the place is hard pressed by the enemy despite the recent repulse, surrender must soon result unless the garrison is relieved.

Detective Hanshaw of New York, who is in Kansas City, Mo., looking after Capt. Phelan, states that he has authentic information that that city has been selected as the center of operations of a dynamite league and Socialistic organizations in the United States, and that arrangements are now being perfected to manufacture dynamite and infernal machines at the Crystal City Glass Works on the Mississippi River, below St. Louis. He says Dr. R. W. Sauer of Kansas City, a prominent local Socialist, has one of the latest machines, which will be used as a model. Gen. Polzwalski, a prominent member of a Russian Nihilistic organization, arrived in the city to-day en route to Sitka, and had a long conference with Dr. Sauer. He left to-night for the West, refusing to be interviewed.

There is an Anarchist agitator in Pittsburg, Pa., named Gorsuch, who, in his efforts to gain dupes to his course of destruction, says: We (the workingmen) have been gradually retrograding (through the years and centuries) until it has become apparent to the true and honest political economist that while the world advances the workingman is falling back; he is gradually being reduced to a system of slavery more abject and more terrible, because it is being accomplished under the guise of what is purported to be the injunctions and precepts of law and justice. We are falling into slavery of the mind as well as slavery of the body.

Feb. 26th.—A dispatch from Tangler says that the Admiral commanding the United States steamer Lancaster, which arrived at that port a few days ago to support the demand of the United States Consul for the release of two persons unjustly imprisoned, gave notice to the Government of Morocco the 21st inst. that twenty days would be granted within which the persons should be liberated and reparation given, and that if within that time the demands were not acceded to the Admiral would denounce the Madrid Convention of 1880 and refer the matter to the Government at Washington for further action.

The army estimates for the year 1886 are announced. They amount to £17,820,700. The sum includes expenditures which the Soudan expedition necessities.

Admiral Courbet will take a position near Shanghai for the purpose of intercepting vessels with rice cargoes. Gen. Briere de l'Isle telegraphs that he is constructing a railway from Chu to Langson. Five thousand reinforcements have arrived at Haiphong.

Advices from Hong Kong state that Admiral Courbet, commanding the French fleet in the Chinese waters, has taken measures to enforce the French declaration against rice as contraband of war from this date. England has refused to recognize the French declaration making rice contraband of war if found on vessels bound to or from Chinese ports. In the House of Commons, Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice, Under Foreign Secretary, stated that the Government had notified France that Englandt is unable to assent to the decision of France to treat rice as contraband of war.

Three violent shocks of earthquake occurred at Temesvar, in Hungary, last night and another of less severity to-day. No report of damage has yet been received.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The largest flint-glass factory in the country, located at Pittsburg, started up Feb. 16, giving employment to more than 250 men.

Chicago elevators contained Feb. 14, 14,922,443 bushels of wheat, 1,683,941 bushels of corn, 566,-179 bushels of oats, 114,570 bushels of rye, and 127,520 bushels of barley. Total, 17,414,595 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 22,034,131 bushels a year ago. During last week the stock increased 278,488 bushels, including an increase of 57,893 bushels of wheat and 198,547 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 48,-221,221 bushels of wheat, 5,730,412 bushels of corn, 2,378,888 bushels of oats, 358,576 bushels of rye, and 1,436,376 bushels of barley. These figures are smaller than a week ago by 69,576 in wheat and larger by 418,839 in corn.

The severe weather has badly injured the Ohio grape crop. E. Huntington, a well-known authority on grape matters, states that there will be few Catawba grapes grown at the islands this year. The buds have nearly all been killed by the extreme cold weather, only those surviving which are covered by the drifts. These will hardly pay for the harvesting. The early grapes have also suffered, although to what extent can not be determined. The peach buds, together with many of the trees, have also been killed. The failure of the grape crop will be seriously felt to the people of the Bass Islands, who had a light yield last year. On Kelley Island the grape-growers are in better condition to stand a failure this year.

The fruitgrowers in Elkhart, Ind., are fearful that the severe cold weather has destroyed all prospects of fruit for the coming season. The deep snow has afforded protection to the wheat, and, as it had a good start in the fall, it is thought the disappearance of the snow will show a good standing.

Three thousand colliers have struck in the coal-mines of Mous, Belgium.

There were 254 failures in the United States last week, a decrease of nineteen as compared with the previous week.

Clearing. House receipts at the principal cities of the United States last week show a decrease as compared with the corresponding week of 1884 of 20.1 per cent. The decrease in New York was 25.7 per cent. In Chicago the decrease was 8.1 per. cent.

There are 16,700 skilled laborers unemployed in Cincinnati. One-fourth of the iron-workers are idle, one-third of the builders, and one-half of the carriage and furniture makers. The total number of men out of work is estimated at 30,000.

Advices from Pittsburg report that 70 per cent of the 7,000 coke ovens controlled by the syndicate are now in operation. There is marked improvement in the trade, and all the men discharged during the dull season have been reemployed.

Chicago elevators containned Feb. 21, 15,033,-244 bushels of wheat, 1,821,327 bushels of corn, 566,032 bushels of oats, 120,636 bushels of rye, and 127,455 bushels of barley. Total, 17,668,694 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 22,241,721 bushels a year ago. During last week our stock increased 254,099 bushels, including an increase of 110.801 bushels of wheat and 137,386 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 48,-011,276 bushels of wheat, 5,216,971 bushels of corn, 2,183,864 bushels of oats, 333,243 bushels of rye, and 1,401,631 bushels of barley. These figures are smaller than a week ago by 200,045 in wheat and 519,441 in corn.

The lumber returns for the State of Michigan for 1884 show the following figures: Saginaw Valley, 1,004,997,853 feet; Lake Huron shore, from Tawas to Cheboygan, 495,937,079 feet; Manistee River and tributaries, 639,952,568 feet; other points on the western side of the State, 309,793,037 feet; mills on various railroad lines, 780,032,775 feet; making a total in the Lower Peninsula of 3,567,235,987 feet; total cut in the Upper Peninsula was 608,163,229 making a grand total for the State of 4,175,339,216 feet. The total shingle product for the Lower Peninsula, 2,724,-577,300 shingles; Upper Peninsula, 121,323,750 shingles; making a total for the State of 2,845,-841,050 shingles, of which Saginaw, Manistee, and Muskegon Rivers produced one-half. The amount of lumber reported on hand in the Lower Peninsula at the close of the year 1884 was 1,419,161,355 feet; in the Upper Peninsula, 120,-913,663 feet; making a grand total of 1,54,075,020

Eighteen hundred employes in the machine shops along the line of the Wabash Road struck vesterday against a proposed reduction in wages. FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

Feb. 19th.—While the steamer Ida Darragh was unloading a cargo of cotton and cotton-seed at Memphis, Tenn., fire was discovered in her hold. All efforts to extinguish the flames were unsuccessful, and they quickly spread to a wharf-boat and thence to the Anchor Line steamer City of Helena. All three were burned to the water's edge. The loss will exceed $100,000.

Fire at Troy, N. Y., destroyed $100,000 worth of property. The building burned adjoined the Everett House, and the guests were panic-stricken. An attempt was also made to fire the hotel. Two arrests have been made of supposed incendiaries.

At Blackburn, Eng., the Kingdom Cotton-Mills were burned. The loss is estimated at $100,000. Two constables were killed by falling walls.

The Grannis Block, one of the finest office buildings on Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., was totally destroyed by fire. The fireman fought the flames for hours under the most trying circumstances. The cold was intense, and the streets were flooded with water, which threatened for a time to ivade the basements of the neighboring buildings, where great damage might have been done to perishable stock. Two banks and one private banking firm were among the sufferers. The total loss is estimated at $250,000. One fireman was badly hurt by a falling icicle. The origin of the fire is not determined.

A valuable business block in Philadephia was burned, causing a loss of two lives and $2,000,000. Nine large business houses, between Second and Front streets, on and near Chestnut, were gutted, and several more were damaged. Franklin Hall, at New Haven, Conn., was burned last night. One woman was burned to death, at Manistee, Michigan. Loss by fire at Brazil, Ind., $12,000. Westerly, R. I., $40,000. Nondont, N. Y., $25,-000. Emporia, Kansas, $30,000. Independence, Ind., $2,800. Springfield, Ill., $13,000. Fairport, N. Y., $40,000. Watertown, Mass., $20,000.

Near Alexandria, D. C., a collision occurred between two trains, killing several persons.

A fruit-schooner, the E. V. Olive, went ashore night before last on Dixie Island, at the entrance to Mobile Bay. Five lives were lost. One sailor was taken from the rigging in the morning, but died soon after.

Feb. 20th.—Two hundred and fifty men are thrown out of employment by the burning of the Marvin Safe Company's factory, which was destroyed by fire in New York night before last. The factory was an eight story building, embracing Nos. 324 to 332 West Thirtyseventh street. The tottering walls of the structure threatened the surrounding tenements, which were cleared by the poliece and hundreds of half clad women and children turned into the streets. The loss is estimated at $230,000.

Latest reports concerning the disaster of night before last on the Virginia Midland Road make it certain that five men were killed, all trainhands. The passengers, seventy in number, escaped serious injury.

An explosion occurred in a coal-mine near Wilkesbarre, Pa., a day or two ago, caused by the stopping for a few minutes of the gas-fan, and resulting in the death and injury of fourteen men.

Nine people were injured night before last in a railroad accident near Ashton, Mo. The eastbound cannon-ball train on the Wabash struck a broken rail, and two passenger cars plunged over the bridge. The explosion of a boiler near Poplar Bluff, Mo., killed two men. Two trains collided near Blue Water Station, Ari., killing

Feb. 22 .- A block of buildings at Danville, Va., was burned, causing a loss of $85,000.

A severe gale has raged for twenty-four hours over the Irish Channel. Many marine disasters have been reported and more are expected. The quays at Dublin were crowded to-day by friends awaiting passengers on belated steamers and sailing vessels. During the afternoon a large schooner vacht was seen to be in trouble in the channel just outside of Dublin Bay. A life-boat was speedily manned and put off to the rescue. The crew of the life-boat succeeded in saving all hands on board the yacht, but during the process of transferring them from the yacht to the lifeboat one man fell and was badly injured about the face. The storm is general throughout the British Islands, and the London-bound mails from Scotland have been detained for periods ranging from ten to twenty-four hours by heavy snowdrifts on the railways.

Feb. 23d -Several persons were injured in a railroad accident near Chariton, Iowa.

The poor-house at Wohlen, Canton of Aargau, burned last night. Six persons perished in the flames. Attempts were made to rescue them, but the rapidity with which the flames enveloped the building prevented any successful results.

The aggregate loss by fire in New York City in 1884 was $3,474.547. The total expense of the fire department was $1,266,481. There were 272 persons killed and injured at fires, and fifty people rescued by the firemen.

On the Illinois Central Road night before last near Chebanse, Ill., two passenger trains were run into by a freight, several cars being telescoped. One man was killed and ten others were severely injured.

Feb. 26.—A terrible explosion occurred this afternoon at the Royal School of Gunnery at Shoeburyness, Eng., while a number of artillery officers and scientists were testing a new patent fuse. Three men were killed outright and several fatally wounded. Among the latter were some of the most prominent officials of the Gov-ernment laboratory at Woolwich. The scene of the explosion presented a sickening sight. of the wounded had their faces carried away; others had legs torn off, and men were lying about in every direction, groaning in their dying agonies.

A WISE WORD.

Do NOT jest with your wife upon a subject in which there is danger of wounding her feelings. Remember that she treasures every word you utter. Do not speak of great virtues in another man's wife to remind your own of a fault. Do not reproach your wife with personal defects, for if she has sensibility, you inflict a wound difficult to heal. Do not treat your wife with inattention in company; it touches her pride, and she will not respect you more or love you better for it. Do not upbraid you wife in the presence of a third party; the sense of your disregard for her feelings will prevent her from acknowledging her fault. Do not entertain your wife by praising the beauty and accomplishments of other women. If you would have a pleasant home and a cheerful wife, pass your evenings under your own roof. Do not be stern and silent in your own house, and remarkable for sociability elsewhere.

"THE ISSUE" REVIEWED.

On pages 58-9 of Herald for January 24th, is an article from the pen of Elder Z. H. Gurley entitled, "The Issue," which claims, in both its caption and its substance, that the subject matters of which it treats are now of first importance. Perhaps they are; but if so, that importance does not arise from any considerable number in the church holding the same or similar views with Elder Gurley; for to find such number one must go outside the church and hunt up apostates and non-Mormons.

The authority of the Doctrine and Covenants in respect to doctrine and church government is not questioned, we are confident, except by a few persons in the church and but very few of those are persons who have, or who are entitled to have, any considerable influence either in the church or out of it.

It is not a little strange, too, that those who are now so active in questioning and denying its authority are on record in many places prior to about eight years ago, as its earnest advocates and defenders; and it is strikingly strange that some of these same parties, during this latter period, have taken licenses, and recommends, and moneys, and favor, and prestige from the church, when it has distinctly and repeatedly avowed in its General Conferences, the authority of said book. It appears to the writer that, if such persons were walking in the light of God they would have seen the inconsistency and injustice of such a course. If the church had never, in a formal and authoritative way, accepted and fully endorsed that book, then this questioning and opposition would not appear so condemnable; but when said book has been endorsed in a regular way many times, as we shall presently show, then it becomes worse than "irksome" when members, and especially those holding high positions in the church, seek privately and publicly to invalidate and destroy it. Such persons may be compared to executive officers in a civil government who would decry, denounce, and oppose the very laws and regulations they were called and commissioned to teach and administer, while receiving official authority and moneyed aid. There is both law and authority in the church and kingdom of God; and when persons enter that church it is with the expressed, or the implied and common sense understanding, that they will comply with its laws, rules, and regulations. And, when persons in that church accept and receive authority, it is to build it up, and not to tear it down. This, if not expressed in words, is nevertheless understood. How would it appear to the average American, if, when a foreigner became an American citizen, such person should decry, dishonor, and reject the institutions and laws of the nation! And how would it appear should such person be placed in some executive office, if he then sought to invalidate the nation's laws, hinder their administration, or in any way bring discredit or dishonor upon them?

We repeat it; There is both law and official anthority in the Church and king-dom of God. There is also order in that Church, which order is the necessary outgrowth of its laws and authority. Its law should not be trampled upon; its authority should not be despised nor trifled with. The voice of God on this matter is—"If he neglect to hear the Church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican. Verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."-Matt. 18: 17, 18. Again: "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received from us. * * * If any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed. Yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother."—2 Thess. 3: 6, 14, 15. Law, official authority, and specific order, are essential to the very existence of the Church of Christ, and they must be honored and maintained.

As we have said before, so we say again, the church has spoken in regard to the authority of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and that repeatedly and emphatically; and it is deplorable that Elder Gurley and a very few others do not perceive the force of this fact; or, if knowing it, that they either ignore it or reject it. It is a most unpleasant, yet a most important duty, (a duty we owe to Elder Gurley, the church, and ourselves), to correct critical blunders, unfair statements, and incorrect quotations made in "The Issue" and other articles from Elder Gurley's pen. His competency as a critic of that man of whom God says-"I will make him great in mine eyes," and of "the great and marvelous work" he did found, will be severely questioned by all persons of reflection when they see his errors in these matters.

Elder Gurley, by his faulty reading, faulty interpretation, and faulty quotations, places the First Presidency, and the Church, in a false position on this matter of the authority of the Doctrine and Covenants, when he discusses the resolutions of conference, Sept. 7-15, 1878, and Sept. 24th to Oct. 1st, 1879. By his faulty quotation he makes the Presidency to say— "It is not intended, nor indeed practicable, to bind, or proscribe the liberty of conscience, whereby violence is done to the honesty and integrity of the people, by prescribing dogmas and tenets, other than the plain provisions of the gospel, as affirmed in the New Testament, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, as set forth in the Epitome of Faith and

The word "as," which we have italicised, the First Presidency never put there! It is not found in their report. (See Herald for Nov. 1st, 1879, page 329). Elder Gurley just dropped the word "and," and put "as" in its place, and repeated it twice, by which change he vitiates said Report and makes it mean the very opposite of both what was written, and what was intended to be written." Here is the entire Report:

To the Elders and Saints in Conference assembled; Greeting:—In the matter of preamble and resolution from the Decatur District, referred to us on a previous day of the session, we beg leave

It is our opinion that the free rendering and meaning of the Resolution passed at the Semi-Annual session of 1878, and referred to in said resolution from Decatur District, is that:

Whereas certain rumors had obtained currency that the Church had not at any time so attested the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and the later revelations given to the Church, by vote and affirmation, that they should form with the Bible and Book of Mormon, a standard of reference in case of controversy and difference of opinion upon questions of doctrine and practice in the Church; therefore, to remedy this defect, if it existed, the resolution referred to was introduced and passed.

We are further of the opinion, that it is not the intent and meaning of the said resolution to make a belief in the revelations in the Book of Covenants, or the abstract doctrines possibly contained in it. a TEST of reception and fellowship in the Church; but that the things therein contained relating to the doctrine, rules of proceedure and practice in the Church, should govern the ministry and elders as representatives of the Church.

We are further of the opinion, that, while it is not intended, or indeed practicable to bind, or proscribe the liberty of conscience, whereby violence is done to the honesty and integrity of the people by prescribing dogmas and tenets other than the plain provisions of the gospel, as affirmed in the New Testament, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, AND set forth in the Epitome of Faith and Doctrine; it is clear to us that it is destructive to the faith of the Church, us that it is destructive to the faith of the Church, and inconsistent with the calling and dignity of the ministry, [privately or publicly], to decry, disclaim, preach or teach contrary to the reverations in said Book of Covenants, or to arraign them in such a way that the faith of the people of the church is weakened and they thereby distressed.

We are further of the opinion, that the elders should confine their teaching to such doctrines and tenets, church articles and practices, a knowledge of which is necessary to obedience and salvation; and that in all questions upon which there is much controversy, and upon which the Church has not clearly declared, and which are not unmistakably essential to salvation, the elders should refrain from teaching; or if called upon, in defence of the Church, or when wisdom should dictate, they should so clearly discriminate in their teaching between their own views and oninions, and the affirmations and defined declarations of the Church that they shall not be found antagonizing their own and others' views as a conflict in teaching upon the part of the Church. We are further of the opinion, that the advancing of speculative theories upon abstruse questions, a belief, or disbelief in which can not affect the salvation of the hearers, is a reprehensible practice; and should not be indulged in by the elders; especially should this not be done in those branches where personal antagonisms must inevitably arise, to the hindering of the work of grace: and should be reserved for the schools of inquiry among the elders themselves.

We are further of the opinion, that until such time as vexed questions now pending are definitively settled by the competent quorums of the Church, the discussion of them should be avoided in all places where the elders labor, in the world and in the branches, and should only be had in solemn conclave when necessary to examine them for settlement, under proper rules of restraint.

for settlement, under proper rules of restraint.

J. SMITH,
W. W. BLAIR,

GALLAND'S GROVE, Sept. 29th, 1879.

This Report was in explanation of the following Resolution which was adopted by a General Conference at Galland's Grove, Iowa, September 7th to 15th, 1878, which reads:

"Resolved, That this body, representing the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, recognize the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, the revelations of God contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and all other revelations which have been or shall be revealed through God's appointed prophet, which have been or may be hereafter accepted by the Church as the standard of authority on all matters of church government and doctrine, and the final standard of reference on appeal in all controversies arising, or which may arise in this Church of Christ."

Certainly, there is no ambiguity in this resolution, nor in the report of the First Presidency upon it, as to the authority of the Doctrine and Covenants, nor as to the evil doing of those who either publicly or privately teach contrary to it. Both affirm that the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, and the revelations contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, constitute "a standard of reference in case of controversy and difference of opinion upon questions of doctrine and practice in the Cnurch."

The Report, as well as the Resolution of 1878, make the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants, (and also the Epitome, so far as it goes) the rule of faith and practice for the Church. But when Elder Gurley drops from the Report the word "and," and puts the word "as" in its stead, he makes the Report limit the teachings of the ministry to those principles only which are contained in the Epitome! Such a version were too great a folly to charge upon either the General Conference, or the First Presidency.

It is true the Report says,—"We are further of the opinion, that it is not the intent and meaning of the said resolution [of 1878] to make a belief in the revelations in the Book of Covenants, or the abstract doctrines possibly contained in it [such as the immortality of Adam and Eve when created; the raising up of the same identical particles in the resurrection; procreation by resurrected beings, etc., etc., or even some plain theological doctrines] a test of reception and fellowship in the church." But this does not mean that a person-a minister-may disbelieve, decry and reject, the teachings of the Doctrine and Covenants. Non-belief, and disbelief, are very different things. A person young or old, learned or unlearned, may believe only the very first principles of the gospel, and still be a fit candidate for membership in the church. But a person of age and experience, minister or member, who disbelieves what the church has accepted and endorsed as its rule of faith and practice in respect to doctrine and church government, has very questionable grounds for holding, or asking for, membership and fellowship in the church. "How can two walk together except they be agreed."—Amos 3: 3. "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad."—Jesus. Matt. 12: 30.

We have said that the church has formally accepted and endorsed the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. It did so in Solemn Assembly, at Kirtland, August 17th, 1835; (see Mill, Star, vol. 15, p. 299). It did so at Beloit, Wisconsin, June, 1852. The late Zenas H. Gurley, and R. Newkirk among the founders of the Reorganized Church were led of God's Spirit to "take the Bible, Book of Mormon, Book of Covenants, and the Holy Spirit" for their guide. (Herald, vol. 1:20). The Holy Spirit declared to father Gurley and others, who by prayer were seeking light -"I have given my law; I shrink not from my word. My law is given in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; but they have disregarded my law and trampled upon it, and counted it a light thing, and obeyed it not. Page 54 The Annual Conference, April 6-13, 1870, passed the following resolution—"Resolved, That the Memorial [to Congress] be so amended as to express the fact, that as early as 1853, the Reorganization did re-affirm the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, as containing the law to, and rule of faith and practice to the church." (Herald, April 15th, 1870, p. 252). The "Memorial" was so amended. In the "Articles of Incorporation" adopted by "the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" at a general meeting of the members of said Church, held at Plano, Illinois, on the 21st day of October, 1872, the following very clear statement is found-"The Church adheres to the doctrines and tenets of the original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,' as organized by Joseph Smith." Herald, November 15, 1872.

It was upon the published statement in said "Articles of Incorporation," that the suit for the Kirtland Temple (and the claim to succession in the church) was conducted to a successful issue. Now, put with the foregoing endorsements those of 1878 and 1879, and we have a continuous chain of official endorsement of that book by the church in its General Assemblies and Conferences, from 1835 up to the present. And, are the ministry to be told that they must not teach what is clearly and plainly revealed in those books! And, are they rather to be heard who teach contrary to what is plainly inculcated in these accredited standards of the church? Is the church and ministry of Christ to be limited to the facts and principles taught in the Epitome? Preposterous! However, the Epitome itself cites the Doctrine and Covenants as authority on doctrine; and on the opposite side of it as printed on a slip, in par. (2), it is distinctly held that the church was and is "founded upon certain well defined doctrines which were set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants;" * * * and, that "the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is a Religious Society, founded and organized upon the same doctrines and tenets, and having the same church organization as the original church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830 by Joseph Smith, and was organized pursuant to the constitution, laws, and usages of said original church."  * And, further; "the Court do further find that the Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is the True and Lawful continuation of and successor to the said original church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, and is entitled to all its rights and property."

Does Elder Gurley and his like ask the church to go back on all this record—these several and collective endorsements from 1835 till now? Shall the church, because of the disbelief, or unbelief of one, two, or a dozen of its members, be asked to nullify its authoritative acts for the past fifty years, invalidate its own claims, and repudiate its standard authorities!

Elder Gurley claims that he has "tried to act in harmony with the resolution or platform adopted at Galland's Grove in 1879;" and he further says—"in harmony with that was the work performed at Washington City; and I invite special attention to the paper presented the Secretary of State, a copy of which was presented to General Conference at Kirtland, Ohio, in the spring of 1883, and endorsed by unanimous vote." He may have tried to act in harmony with his incorrect statement and unfair intrepretation of said resolution; but as for the said "paper" presented to the Secretary of State, it quotes the Doctrine and Covenants, and that, too, as authoritative; and this it does without any reservations or qualifications; and it also claims that "The Reorganized Church is the proper representative successor of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized by Joseph Smith and others, April 6th, 1830;" and it then denounces the Utah Mormon Church for "having abandoned the faith of that Church." Does not Elder Gurley also abandon "the faith of that church" when he rejects the gathering, tithing, etc. etc., and when he seeks to invalidate the revelations which the Seer, in a regular way, gave to the church, and which the church made its rule of faith and practice? We think he does, and that he is at war with what has been the avowed authorities of the church for the past fifty years.

In the 9th paragraph of "The Issue" is a labored and misty argument, intended to show, no doubt, that Christ personally taught his apostles every principle and every fact, that was then or ever would be, essential to man's salvation; and yet he does not prove nor even claim directly. that all Christ taught is to be found in the New Testament and Book of Mormon. He probably remembered that John says— "And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." Moroni testifies similarly—"And now there can not be written in this book, even a hundredth part of the things which Jesus did truly teach unto the people."-Book of Nephi 12:1. From these statements, it is seen that there were more than ninety-nine times as much taught by the Savior to the Nephite Saints as is now recorded in the Book of Mormon; and vastly more done by him anong the Jewish Saints than was written up to about the year 98. If these teachings were good and important for those who heard them, would not at least some of the principles contained in them be good for Latter Day Saints? And how does Elder Gurley know but that the "Choice Seer" gave to the church, by revelation, many of these very principles? There are many things taught in the Epistles that are not taught by the Savior in the four gospels. And undoubtedly there were many important principles and truths in the "many" gospels alluded to and admitted of by Luke, (Luke 1:1), also in "The common salvation" cited by Jude, (Jude 3), also in Paul's Epistles which we have not, but which he cites as authoritative. (1 Cor. 5:9; Col. 4: 16). We have no record in the gospels that Christ taught the laying on of hands, the duties of Elders, Priests, Teachers, Deacons, with other gospel matters, and yet it is fair to presume he did teach in regard to all of them, for his apostles after him did teach much in regard to them. Now, it will not do to say that because we have no record that Christ personally taught of these matters, therefore they are no part of the gospel plan. We do not know what Jesus taught in those ninety nine parts which we now have not. If these ninety nine parts of Christ's teaching were "the will of God," then it is certain that in the Book of Mormon we lack ninety nine parts of it at least. And this applies to what Jesus did among the Jewish Saints, as well.

If Elder Gurley means that the Book of Mormon, or New Testament, teaches all that is essential to salvation, then we can answer Yes, in one sense, for both of them teach that man shall "live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Both teach the need and the fact of continued revelation. Both teach the need of Saints "growing in grace, and in the knowledge of the truth." Both teach the Saints to "go on unto perfection." Both teach the need of development, growth, and progression, in the work of God; but all in harmony with first principles. But if Elder Gurley means that all that appertains to the Church of Christ is taught in those two books, then we deny it; for there is very much that relates to official duties, church authorities and organization, historical events, prophetic facts, principles of knowledge appertaining to the past, present, and the future, which are not contained in those books, and which are and will be essential to the establishment, development, and perfection of the church. He says that Jesus taught and said—"Whoso shall declare more or less than this, [which Jesus had taught up to the oth par. of the 5th chapter of Book of Nephil, and establish it for my doctrine, the same cometh of evil, and is not built upon my rock, but he buildeth upon a sandy foundation, and the gates of hell standeth open to receive such, when the floods come, and the winds beat upon them." Does Elder Gurley mean to say that Christ prior to that time had taught the Nephite Saints all the doctrine that appertained to his gospel and his church! Is this the manner in which he interprets the teachings of Christ! Does he not perceive that such interpre-tation makes Jesus a transgressor! For, by reading from the passage quoted to the 13th chapter and 4th paragraph, we see Jesus gave line upon line, precept upon precept, both in respect to doctrine, principle, and fact. Jesus by the phrase "more or less" means differently, contrary tothis and nothing more.

The Lord says by the prophet, "Whom shall he teach knowledge? And whom shall he make to understand doctrine? them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts. [For such are not "babes."—B.] For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept, line upon line, line upon line, here a little, and there a little."—Isa. 28:9, 10. This has been God's plan of teaching his faithful people from the first. While the gospel plan is eternal and unchangeable, there are many things which grow out of it, and others that are supportive of it as auxiliaries and the like, which must be neither rejected nor despised.

Elder Gurley, in the 10th paragraph of "The Issue," says: "Whatever course others may pursue, I am determined by the grace of God to try and build upon the foundation which Christ laid in such way and manner that I shall neither be ashamed nor afraid to meet the Master in the day of judgment, according to the knowledge he has given me of his work; and while I must build in this manner in order to be honest with God and myself, I am quite willing and anxious that all others shall do likewise, teach what or how they may. I think I have learned that the gospel is not owned by any one man, or set of men."

Men should "be honest with God," honest with themselves, and at the same time be honest and consistent with the church of which they are members, and which they profess to serve as ministers. The church has rights which its ministers and its members are bound to respect. The church, as a body, probably has as much knowledge as one or a dozen of its members. The interests of the entire church of Christ are far greater than are those of one, or a few. If Elder Gurley will preach and teach according to his own personal views and convictions, and according to the degree and quality of knowledge he does or may possess, whether in harmony with or contrary to the accepted and standard books of the church, its rules and decisions, does he not thereby claim for himself greater light, greater knowledge, purer wisdom, and a higher degree of "infallibility," than he is willing to allow the entire church to possess? and a far greater degree than God's "choice seer" ever claimed to possess? Should he not recognize the fact that, so long as he is an officer of, or a member of any societyreligious or otherwise—he is bound to live and act in harmony with its laws, rules, and usages, and seek its peace and prosperity, though that society should disagree in some or many things with him? Freedom to think and act is good; but when a person enters the church of Christ, he surrenders his will to Christ and his church. ceases to be a law to himself, and he should be willing for Christ and his church to decide upon both his faith and his works while in membership.

When, in the past, persons have claimed they had personal rights and authority superior to, or even equal with the entire body of which they were officers or members, they have been confronted with the stern facts of vested, organized authority, and majority rights. Paul did not claim to have authority, nor a personal right, to preach and teach as he, personally might think best; neither did he allow that others had such a right; but he denied it in these words,-"Mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ."—Rom. 16: 17, 18. When, in the first apostles' times, certain ministers undertook to teach their personal, private notions, they were called to an account for it by the church and its associated authorities, who decided what they must not teach, as well as what they might; (Acts 15: 1-29); and the Apostle Peter wisely submitted to it. (Gal. 2: 11-18).

Christ demands that the members shall submit to the church, and says of the transgressor of its doctrines—"If he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican."—Matt. 18: 17. A careful examination of the Bible. Book of Mormon, and Book of Covenants, will enable any unprejudiced person to see that this principle holds good wherever God had a ministry and people. This principle is the wisdom and the security of all forms of organized society. Persons who profess to serve and represent a society -civil, religious, or otherwise,-should see to it that their acts do not contradict their profession.

As to the gospel being "owned by any one man, or set of men," it is safe to say it belongs to Christ and his Church; and it is furthermore safe to say it will remain with them. "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." (Luke 12: 32). The gospel and the kingdom belong to each other, and they can not be separated.

In conclusion; the real issue seems to be, as to whether the laws and doctrines of the church, (as the church understands and interprets them), are to rule and govern the church and its ministry, or whether those opposed to its laws, doctrines, and usages, shall be permitted to distract, divide, disrupt, and destroy it. "A house divided against itself can not stand." This is the wisdom of Christ, and the Saints should govern themselves accordingly, W. W. BLAIR.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS .-- No. 6.

BY S. F. W.

THE DISPERSION.

NIMROD is the Belus of the Assyrians, and the Orion of the Greeks. The attempt of the Hamites to build the tower of Babel is, in Greek poetry, the war of the Titans. Hesiod has the Titans, after defeat, banished to Tartarus, thus confounding them with the antediluvians.

The beginning of kingdoms pertains to the time of Nimrod. The primitive inhabitants of the cities that formed his kingdom were Cushite, and were identical with the races of Ethiopia and Southern Arabia. The first seats of government were Erech and Ur. The earliest name given the people and language in what was afterward called Shinar, was Akkadian.

Berosus states that the winds assisted the gods in destroying the tower of Babel, and that the gods caused a diversity of languages. The Jews have a tradition that the tower was split in two by fire from heaven. Greek writers following Berosus say it was blown down by winds.

The temple of Nebo at Borsippa, a suburb of ancient Babylon, standing at the time of the captivity, was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. The tower of Babel itself does not appear among the ruins of the Tygris valley; but on the site made sacred by traditions of such a tower the great pyramidal temple of the god Bel Merodach was built. It is the same that is called temple of Nebo, and its ruin is now known as Birs Nimroud, or citadel of Nimrod. Herodotus describes it as eight towers, built one above another, its base a stadium in length and width. Inscriptions on the bricks state that Nebuchadnezzar repaired the edifice forty-two ages after it was first built; that it was not completed at first; and "since a remote time the people had abandoned it, without order expressing their words; since that time the earthquake and the thunder had dispersed its sundried clay, the bricks of the casing had been split, and the earth of the interior had been scattered in heaps." As rebuilt by Nebuchadnezzar, the basement stage of burnt brick was 272 feet square, and 26 feet high. Upon this was a second stage also 26 feet high, and 230 each way, placed on one side of the lower stage. The third story was of the same hight, and 188 feet square. The fourth was 15 feet high and 146 feet square; also with the others, set nearest the back side of the pile. The fifth was 15 feet high and 104 feet square. The sixth was 62 feet square and 15 high. The seventh was 20 feet square and 15 high. On this stage was a tabernacle 15 Thus the whole hight was 153 feet, besides a base of three feet. These stories were painted different colors, and represented the sun, moon, and five planets. On top was a shrine, in which was a golden table and a bed. The bed was occupied by a priestess the night before giving forth an oracle. She was supposed to get responses from Belus, as did the pythoneses of Greece from Apolo, and the mediums of the present day from spirits. Birs Nim-roud, the supposed ruin of this temple, is a huge irregular mound, with masses of vitreous matter at its base. The interior is composed of bricks partially vitrified by fire. On the top is an irregular tower 90 feet in circumference, and thirty feet high, built of bricks. The whole mound seems to have been faced with bricks.

The pyramidal temples of the Chaldeans and of the people of all Asia and Africa, were in imitation of the traditionary Mount of Paradise or mountain of the assembly of the stars, the Harmoed of Isaiah, which sacred tradition placed in the north, the column of the world around which turns the seven stars of the Great Bear, assimilated to the seven planetary bodies. The conception is the same as the Meru of the Hindoos and the Alborj of the Persians. The most ancient pyramid of the Nile was that of Sakkara, constructed of bricks and in stages like the one at Borsippa, described above, which proves that the Myzriamites of Egypt and the Cushites of Babylon had inherited the same traditions concerning the Mount of Paradise; and sustains the assertion that the Borsippa Temple was reconstructed by Nebuchadnezzar on its original plan. But whether this last proposition holds good or not, it is true that the Pagodas of India and China are modified forms of the pyramidal temple in accordance with their tradition of the Paradisiacal Mount. At Benares in India are ruins of pyramids, also in China at Peking were some built in ancient times; and at Suka in Java. The Hebrew temple embodies many of the same ideas. Connected intimately with this form of temple was a system of geography, also inspired by religious conceptions which was developed in the very early ages, as proved by its elaboration in the Book of Astrology written by order of Sargon the ancient, who lived 3,800 B. C. He considers the country of Akkad as situated precisely in the centre of the world, and as located in the direction of the four cardinal points. This scheme of geography prevailed widely in antiquity, and extended as far back as the tetropolis of Nimrod, and the four cities of Asshur. Akkad and Aram signify highlands, in reference to the great Mount of God. The Aryans of India practiced this system in the division of their lands, as a symbolical conception of the world itself, divided into four great continents, around Mt. Meru; watered by four rivers descending from it.

In China the Emperor was called Regent of the nine earths, and the palace was the center; but they had inherited also the scheme of five divisions, connecting with a central mount, around which were grouped four other mountains, in the direction of the cardinal points. As in the Hindoo, Mt. Meru was surrounded in the direction of the cardinal points with four other mountains, so these, with Meru itself, constituted the five summits of the Chinese legend; and the four sacred canals of the Chinese uranography relate to the four sacred rivers of paradise. This with their traditions of the flood proves the Chinese a part of the Noachian race. And if the Chinese, also the Tartars, (the Mongolians are from Magog), and if the Tartars, the Aleutian islanders, their kindred American tribes, and, possibly, the Esquimaux. (The Antiquarian of January, 1885, says the researches of Baron von Richthofer led him to conclude that the ancestors of the Chinese once lived in the basin of the Tarim river, where they were in contact with the Aryans and Scythians about the Pamir plateau.)

Language is subordinate to the laws of evolution. It is subject to constant change, and can be grouped into families and varieties as numerous as the families of animals or man. It can be traced to beginnings, and followed through its stages to its highest complexity. It has, in different tribes at least, the stages of monosyllabic, agglutinate, and inflectional. By the growth and spread of population, languages are multiplied that have affinities that form them into varieties of main trunks that are more distinct. But, while language is subject to natural law as a natural gift, that does not conflict with the fact that it is also a spiritual gift. The phenomenon of the confusion of tongues is like many like events, explained on natural principles thus: The people became numerous in that one contracted locality. They had undertaken a great enterprise or task, which involved them in hardship, and subjected them to despotism. A former divergence of tribe and language, caused jealousies and clannish contentions. Some accident or natural phenomenon aroused their superstition, and they abandoned their work and went off to the new fields everywhere inviting them. Asshur went to the land that bears his name, the Japhetites to Irania, &c., &c. But all this leaves divine impulse and providence out of the problem of causation, after having been forced to confess them in the preservation from the flood. Language is both a product of evolution and an inspiration. Why not? Everything in the universe has this two-fold quality of subjection to law, and also direct connection with creative power. The miracle of Pentecost shows that speech is a subject of divine control. It is logical to claim that language was originally given by inspiration, and possibly the art of writing it. Absence of proof facts, and negative assertion, can not be made to offset the unequivocal declaration of Scripture when rightly interpreted. This position is not inconsistent with a persistent effort to find natural causes for the events and conditions under review in these papers.

From very ancient times three or four different peoples inhabited the Assyrian empire, differing in origin and language and were in intimate relationship. With one of them sphenography—wedge writing—originated and was adopted successively, and variously modified by each of the others. Originally it was hieroglyphic and ideographic, and belonged to a Hamitic race. At at later period the Persians changed the system to the alphabetical. The Assyrians borrowed the system from some people speaking a language different from theirs, as is shown by the fact that they used syllables in spelling, without reference to the ideas the characters represented

The Assyrian language being Semetic, and that in which the wedge characters originated non-Semetic, it follows that the writing originated in its rudest form with the earliest inhabitants of Akkad and Babylon; and it is probable that the wedge was first used to take the place of pictures in representing ideas. The earliest architecture of the Akkadians was rude, which proves that the art had to be learned anew. The case is different with inscribed stones, seals, ornaments, &c. The writing on these earliest relics is heroglyphic and semicuneiform.

Phænicians were descended from Shem. Melchisedec was Shemite and Phænician. It is possible that phonetic writing originated with the Melchisedec priesthood.

The Bactrians invented an alphabet represented by cuneiform letters. The Japanese have an alphabet adapted from Chinese The Greeks got their letters characters. from the Phænecians, the Romans theirs from the Greeks. Ours is Roman. The business style of hieroglyphics called hieratic writing came into use about 2,000 years before Christ; may possibly have been introduced by the Hyksos. By this time, too, the cuneiform had taken the place of semi-cuneiform among the Hitites of Asia. The Phœnecian was not yet written with an alphabet. The first alphabet was used in common by Hebrews, Moabites and Phœnecians; the speech of these nations being dialects of a common language. Out of this comon tongue the Hebrew as a distinct language differentiated after the resettlement in Canaan. Moses doubtless used it in its earlier form, and wrote in it instead of the Egyptian, and the Hebrew text of the Bible is a translation from it. The archaic Phœnecian was employed by the Phœnecians and Arameans in the sixth century B. C. The characteristic of the letters was great angularity. The proper Phœnecian was developed afterward.

Babylonia was part of Mesopotamiathe land between the rivers. In the course of time as has happened often in later eras, a vigorous tribe of the neighboring hills, of semetic stock through Arphaxad, known since as Chaldeans, obtained the dominion. The inscriptions reveal a change of language corresponding to this change of race. The Chaldeans are according to Berosus the third dynasty. The first reign is called by Berosus the reign of the Medes, and was followed by one whose capitals were Hur (Ur) or Huruk, Ereck, Larsa, and Nipur, the city of Belus, now Nipper. These four cities were one kingdom or capital, and represented the center of the four quarters of the globe. The ancient kings each styled himself "king of the four regions" or king of four divine regions. Another such Tetropolis was Babel, Borsippa, Cutha, and Sippara. The oldest capital determined by the inscriptions was Uruk, on the shore of the Persian Gulf, though, Mugheir its ruin is some distance inland now. Urukh and Ilgi appear to be successors of Nimrod.

Under Belshazzar's reign Babylon was besieged and taken by Cyrus. The capture took place on the 16th day of Thammuz, the day on which the celebration of the rites of Adonis took place. The marriage of Thammuz was celebrated by orgies, at which women were admitted to the feast. The water of the river had been suddenly diverted and the army entered by the bared channel. Every thing in all this eventful era can be confirmed but the supernatural. The hand writing on the wall is the last of the miracles of which Babylon is the scene, except the ruined heaps, the buried idols, the smitten tower, the waste sand, the furrowed mounds; these are a standing miracle.

The fact that Sargon as early as B.C. ,800, had a book written on astrology, throws light upon the statement of Josephus that the sons of Seth built pillars, and inscribed their astronomical knowledge on them, so that it would be perpetuated. The Book of Enoch, which has internal evidence of inspiration, if not of authenticity, and which was part, probably, of the patriarchal archives in post diluvian times, contains a statement that Arazval taught the use of stones of every valuable and select kind; that impiety increased, fornication multiplied, and the people corrupted all their ways; Amazarak taught all the sorceries, and dividers of roots; Amers taught the solution of sorcery; Barkayal taught the observance of the stars; Akibul taught signs; Lamiel taught astronomy, and Azaradel taught the motion of the moon.

The Chaldeans are called the fathers of Their priesthood devoted astronomy. themselves to this study. Besides attending to the offices of religion, they were the controlling influence in the government. To them is attributed the determination of the equinoctial and solstitial points; the period of the solar year; the lunar periods; the divisions of the ecliptic, and the signs, names and figures of the Zodiac; and the This renowned invention of the dial. priesthood declined in the lapse of ages to mere astrologers, magicians and soothsayers. Magic is the science of the secrets of nature and the exercising of preter-human powers by means of occult virtues and spiritual agencies. It was practiced in very early times by Assyrians, Hindoos, Bactrians, Medes and Persians, as well as Chaldeans. Its exercise was confined to the priests, who also attended to the healing of the sick, preservation of secrets, and the performance of religious rites generally. In the eastern lands the term Magi was applied to the profession. The art was at first founded upon a supposed system of the universe, and constituted and included the science of astrology. Psychology was doubtless the secret of the success the magi attained to. They could sometimes tell individual fortunes and predict near events of such importance as to give them influence in the councils of monarchs. All can not be attributed to superstition. But it is impossible to find the line of demarkation between what was true and what false; what divine, what human, and what demoniacal. Daniel found that the magicians of Babylon had extraordinary powers, as did Moses those of Egypt; and during the time of the greatest prophets of Israel there was the cotemporary reign of these prophets or seers in pagan lands. The power of the latter declined before the coming of Christ, and ceased after his advent. Prophecy in Israel too had declined or ceased before his time. The supernatural pertains to all times and lands; true prophecy pertains to the people of Israel, and the true patriarchs. Next to this was a shadow of the true light in the lands where Christianity was first established. In the farther east there was less of it.

Ancient Pagan history is filled with prodigies, which must be credited, though such things are now rare or impossible. The astrologers foretold the death Alexander. A natural way of explaining this fact above, would be to suppose that confidence in the prediction encouraged a false friend to poison him, but there are thousands of such cases. The Sybiline Books originated with priestesses of the various gods, in different localities. These were readjusted, by eliminations and additions, during centuries. They were treasured by the Roman emperors. They contained prophecies of Christ—borrowed, possibly, from the Jews.

Though history reaches back to Nimrod in Babylon, we can not get back to other grandsons of Noah. But we can get back to a situation of human affairs that makes it certain that the unreachable beginning is supplied by the tenth chapter of Genesis. A history of the descendants of Noah, as there inaugurated, is tantamount to a history of civilization. This assertion applies, as we shall see, to all quarters of the globe. Into lands that have not been civilized, the Distinct traditions of the flood are found among the Armenians, Phrygians, Lithuaneans, Goths, Celts, Greeks and less distinct among the Egyptians, Chinese, Malays, and South Sea Islanders. No trace of the great traditions is found among the dusky islanders, whose type is Negroid, and who probably drifted out from the African coast; nor among Africans. The Mandamins and Dravidians were in their habitat before the Aryan invasion of their lands, and are called antediluvians.

The traditions that tell of giants before the flood also tell us they were destroyed. The Rhephaim, Emim, Zamzumim, and the Anakim were unaccountable variations. Their being so easily overcome is evidence that they were effete remnants of an old stock, and high authorities think they had survived the flood by climbing a mountain, The Australians are allied to the African but are said to be distinct. Their long arms and slender calves indicate that they may have sprung from an ancestry that used their hands in walking, but there may be a law of degeneration that will account for their peculiarities. This is debatable ground; it involves the cursings pronounced upon some of the progenitors of the races. Rather than to evade an issue Africa may with some reservations, mental and ethnographical, be set down as the land of Nod, and also the land of the Misraim, Caph-torim, the Pathrusim, the Ludim, Phut, Seba, Naphtuhim and Sebahim. These tribes colonized the north coast, and the east coast half way down to the cape of Good Hope. Rev. Josiah Taylor, of Natal, says the Zulus keep a feast of first fruits; reject swines flesh; practice circumcision; have traditions of the deluge and of the passage of the Red Sea; sprinkle blood on houses; and that they "were cradled in the land of the Bible.'

Fifteen hundred miles north east of Babylon, on the head waters of the Amoo, four thousand feet above the sea, in what is now Turkestan and part of Afghanistan, was the ancient home of the Japhetic, or, as known to science, the Aryan race. It was a fruitful land and fit cradle of the great races that came out of it. Here a new language was developed before the separation into tribes; and the languages that were formed from this original are a history of that ancient civilization and that those races sprang from the Aryan. The names used and those omitted, alike tell a story of the time. Part of the race spread eastward, and drove the black, barbarous, aboriginal tribes of India before them; colonized India and wrote the Vedic hymns, the oldest of which are monotheistic. After they had declined into idolatry or worship of the aspects of the sun, stars, etc., they retained some conceptions of the truth, and one of the later writers says, "They call him Indra, Mitra, Varuna, Aquic, that which is one." This great decline resulted in the vagaries of modern India—the idolatry of the common people and the unnatural speculations of the learned class. These latter have always had a tendency to metaphysical science, to grammar, language, ontology, psychology, logic. They have done all to sound the problems of life that the human mind is capable of without revelation. The ancient vedas show the use of tents, of gold, silver, bronze (but not iron), the practice of writing, the custom of monogamy, &c.

The great resemblance found between the history of Chrisna and of Christ results from modern forgeries.

The westward migrating tribes of Irania reached Phrygia and Southern Europe; and others passing north of the Caspian, settled northern Europe.

The faith of the Aryans, settled in Media and Persia, was attended with a like decline until the time of Zoroaster, who as a restorer, instituted a faith of wonderful excellence. This system was adopted by the Medes, and it made them very distinct from their Hindoo neighbors. This religion gave Cyrus his inspiration and gained him the recognition of Jehovah. It, in its turn, declined and is represented now by Parseeism. In its teaching God appears as Ormuzd, and Satan the tempter is called Ahriman. It enforces prayer, praise and good deeds, promised resurrection, and puts sensuality under ban by threats of fire. Some hold that with Zoroaster originated the idea of Satan. It will not accord with facts to deny that some truth originated in pagan lands. The Gentile mystics were gifted souls, and their great desires and efforts to discover spiritual truths should not be made to count for nothing; and there need not be *any jealousy of their claims. Zoroasterism like all other false systems was an attempt to portray the spirit realm without the spirit of revelation and prophecy—Zoroaster got near the truth because he lived near the time of traditional truth, and in a locality where remnants of the truth remained longest. The three magi who followed the Star of Bethlehem were probably his disciples.

Confucius in China was a reformer as well as a philosopher. He taught that in a more ancient time divine messengers had brought truth to men, and said he was a man who had "love of the ancients, and made every effort to acquire their knowledge." But Confucius lived in medieval times according to the latest reckonings. The era of the Vedic hymns was but 1200 B. C., and the supposed era of Zoroaster is but 1500 B. C., while that of Babylon and Memphis is 4,000 B. C.

The false systems we have been considering were philosophical speculations, with more or less spiritual blending according to the psychological and clairvoyant power of the founders. Paintings show that the ancient Egyptians understood human magnetism, and clairvoyance and magnetic healing. True and false teachers seem to form an interblending series, and many assert they do; but the test of prophecy and miracle makes an unmistakable line of demarkation. Before Abraham's day there was no chosen channel of communication between God and man. In the patriarchal age each family was a household of faith, a church; its head a priest. The patriar-chal system declined just as species decline, and died out only when a new form came up prepared to take its place, and could be spared. The true faith was nationalized in Abraham's posterity. Since Christ, this nationality is made to include all mankind, by adoption.

Cnference was held at Aberaman, Aberdare, Wales, October 26th, 1884, T. E. Jenkins president, D. Lewis secretary.

The president addressed the conference, and urged every one to work earnestly in the Church of God, to the end that we may receive the crown of life. The Western District was reported: Branches 2, including 15 Elders, 3 Priests, 1 Teacher, 3 Deacons, 51 members, total 73, D. Lewis president. Eastern District, branches 5, including I Seventy, 18 Elders, 4 Priests, I Teacher; 2 died; 42 members, total 66; Wm. Morris president, T. E. Jenkins secretary.

The Bishop's Agent's account was reported from April 27th to October 26th, 1884. Cash received £2 9s; money paid out £1 5s; in hand 5s. Audited by J. R. Gibbs and B. Davies, and found correct. The books of account were reported from April 27th to October 26th, 1884. In hand when last reported £6 18s 6 1/2 d. Received since £1 78 9d. Total £8 6s 31/2d. Paid out 6s 6d. In hand £7 198 91/2d. Audited by T. E. Jenkins and Dan Davies and found correct.

J. E. Hughes reported North Wales Mission. The following Elders reported: Wm. Morris, John Lewis, Dan Davies, J. R. Gibbs, T. E. Jenkins, John Evans, John Jenkins, Benjamin Davies, James Griffiths, John Morgans, David Lewis.

Preaching in the afternoon by J. E. Hughes, J. R. Gibbs and T. E. Jenkins, to good effect.

Resolved, That we uphold in our faith and prayers, President Joseph Smith, and all the quorums of the Church in America; T. E. Jenkins, president of the Welsh Mission; J. R. Gibbs his counselor; D. Lewis and Wm. Morris, presidents of districts, and all the household of faith.

Preaching in the evening by D. Lewis and J.

Adjourned to meet at Llanelly, Wales, the 26th of April, 1885.

NORTH-EAST MISSOURI DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Bevier, Missouri, February 7th and 8th, 1885. George Hicklin president, and J. T. Williams clerk.

Sessión commenced at 2:30 p. m., very few present. Branch Reports.—Bevier 110, 1 baptized; Salt River 25; Hannibal 25. Renick Branch report rejected and sent back to the branch for correction. Bishop's Agent reported: Income $28.10, paid out $29.20, due the agent $1.10. Brethren Frank Mussell and J. T. Richards were chosen auditors to examine the agent's account.

Elders' Reports.—Charles Perry, R. Thrutchley, J. T. Williams, Geo. Hicklin, and John Taylor, by letter; Priests Mark Surridge and Frank Mussell reported; also Teacher J. T. Richards reported.

It was decided that J. T. Williams should be our delegate to General Conference.

Resolved, That we sustain the present officers of the district for the coming three months; That we sustain all the authorities of the church, both spiritual and temporal.

The auditing committee reported finding the Bishop's account correct.

At two p. m., sacrament, prayer and testimony. At 6.30 p. m. preaching by George Hicklin, from the 15th chapter of John, "I am the true vine."

Adjourned to meet again at Renick, Missouri, the first Saturday and Sunday in May, 1885.

Next conference to convene in the Palmyra Branch, April 26th, 1885, at 10:30 a.m.

Preaching Monday evening by Bro. Caffall, and thus closed one of the best conferences that has been held in the district for some time.

Miscellaneous.

BEVIER BRANCH.

To the scattered members having their names enrolled on Bevier Branch Record. A Branch Council meeting held by the Bevier Branch officers, August 5th, 1884, resolved that all scattered members having their names enrolled on the Bevier Branch record, please report once every three months to the Bevier Branch. We trust that each and every one that will read this request will comply promptly with the same, that we may be kept informed of their standing spiritually in the Church. Yours in behalf of the Bevier Branch.

J. T. WILLIAMS, Clerk.

Bevier, Mo., Feb. 15th, 1885.

FIRST QUORUM OF ELDERS.

To the Members of the First Quorum of Elders: —In the grace and peace of Him, whose servants vou are, I once more address you, for the reason that the annual gathering of the church for conference purposes, will soon be upon us; and as the adopted rules of our quorum make it the duty of each member to report himself at the annual meeting. I, therefore, in the discharge of imposed duty, most respectfully, and in the zeal of the Lord, request that each individual member shall make an extra effort to present, either in person or in writing, a cheerful and truthful account of their stewardship in the Master's cause during the past year. Once more let me seek to impress upon you the importance of an honorable striving to let the gospel light shine in your every word and work, so that your lives may be evidence of that grand redemptive, soulsaving errand, that caused the Son of God to leave the glory of his Father, and become a pilgrim upon earth. And now, in the prosecution of this great work of emancipating man, and restoring him to his lost inheritance, you have severally consented to take part, by submitting to an ordination, and thereby you are made responsible to both God and your fellow man. To God, that you will faithfully perform that portion of the work laid upon you, by reason of the agency bestowed, in your authority to speak in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

Be assured, my dear fellow laborers, we can not avoid giving a strict account to the Father, for the priesthood office we bear. To man, we owe some responsibility, because they sit in darkness, and by our hands hath God sent unto them the invitation to arise and come to the light of Zion. Do not allow yourselves to become chronic in forming excuses for neglecting to report. It may be true that you have not accomplished much, but remember, a little by each one of us aggregated, may look more encouraging than you had supposed.

Should age, sickness or business hinder, let'us know, so that you may stand before the quorum properly understood. Come brethren, now seems to be an opportune time to let your fealty to God and his cause be manifested, as the opportunity and demand far preaching were never greater, and the present time seems quite favorable to make an acceptable sacrifice for the good of the church, and a sure reward awaits those who advance the cause of "peace and good will" among men.

I would suggest that immediately after the reading of this, you sit down and write up your report, and send the same to me to Independence, Missouri. Let those who assemble to transact the business, come with the Spirit of Christ, so that the same may receive the Father's seal of approval. I remain in gospel bonds,

R. M. ELVIN, President.

MARRIED.

GAMMAGE-CORNELIUS.—At the Vester House, Blenheim, Ontario, February 10th, 1885, by Priest A. McKenzie, Bro. Joseph Gammage, of the township of Howard, county of Bothwell, to Miss Emma Ester Cornelius, of the township of Harwich, in the county of Kent.

"O Lord, give him the power to gnard and shield,
This help-mate of his future life;
While she by softer passions yields,
The solace of a virtuous wife.
And when their mortal course is run,
May still this bond of love endure;
Till they, Celestial honors won, *
Live with the loving and the pure."

DOTY-JENKINS.—At the house of the officiating Elder, William P. Smith, Union Ward, Salt Lake county, Utah, Clarence J. Doty, to Miss Mary L. Jenkins; both residents of West Jordan, Utah.

DIED.

TALBOT.—At Brighton, Colorado, February 5th, 1885, Robert B., second son of R. J. and L. M. Talbot, aged 4 months and 13 days. Funeral services by Rev. Tuttle, Pastor of U. B. Church.

Sweet little bud of promise,
How sudden the messenger came,
And bore our chubby darling,
Far out of this world of pain.
In dream I saw how lonely
My mother heart would be;
And yet, Oh Lord I murmur,
When I should trust in thee.

Jones.—At Plano, Illinois, February 11th, 1885, Bro. John Jones, aged 21 years, 5 months and 29 days. He was sick about six weeks; during all that time he was patient as could be; not complaining, but enduring his suffering with true Christian fortitude. All was done for him that medical aid could do; and the blessing of the Lord often sought for that he would spare him to us; but it pleased him to take him. Bro. Jones was baptized in Buttler county, Ohio, 1876, by Bro. M. B. Williams. Was ordained a teacher in 1877. Came to Plano in 1880, to the General Conference of that year, and has made his home here until he died, (except one visit to the home of his parents in 1881). A short time before he died, when asked if he was happy, he said. "How can I help but be happpy. I have to wait a little while, then I will go; there is a lot of them over there.' He then bid his friends good bye, one by one, and passed away without a struggle. Funeral services were held in the Saints' Chapel at Plano, February 13th, 1885. W. Vickery conducting, and also preaching the sermon. The remains were conveyed in care of his mother to her home in Ohio.

HULMES.—At Pittsburgh, Pa., February 6th, 1885, of pneumonia, after a sickness of about three weeks, Ralph G. Hulmes, son of Bro. and Sr. George H. Hulmes. Born July 2d, 1867. Appropriate ceremonies were held at his parents' home, Chartres, on the 8th, whence the mortal part was taken and placed in the city of the dead, Alleghany Cemetery, Pittsburg. Funeral sermon by Elder Forscutt, at Saints' Hall, February 15th, to a large and sympathizing audience. When first taken sick, and while nothing serious was as yet apprehended, he asked his mamma particularly about heaven, and on hearing her description of it, expressed a wish to go there, if mamma would go with him.

Sweet bud of promise, touched by Death's index finger Ere thy petals of life had chance to unfold; But thou'll live in our love while on earth-paths we linger, Then we'll walk with thee, darling, the pavements of TEANY.—At Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, February 3d, 1885, Sister Rebecca Teany, aged 86 years, 7 months, 20 days. She died strong in the faith. Funeral services on the 6th of February, 1885, by Elder John Stone, to a full house.

Ross.—At River Sioux, Harrison County, Iowa, September 7th, 1884, of diptheria, Leslie, son of Bro. George and Sarah J. Ross; aged 5 years, 6 months, 5 days.

Ross.—At same place, September 8th, 1884, of diptheria, Robert son of brother George and sister Sarah J. Ross, aged 16 months, 1 day.

"Fare thee well, thou fondly cherished, Dear. dear spirit, fare thee well; He who lent thee hath recalled thee, Back with him and his to dwell."

Hall.—At Cook's Point, Texas, December 26th, 1884, Lula Thomas, daughter of T. P. and Amanda I. Hall, aged 1 month and 4 days.

TURNBULL.—After a short time of sickness, Melissa, infant and only daughter of Mr. Cyrus and Sr. Mary Jane Turnbull, aged 2 weeks and 3 days.

It was so hard to give her up; So sweet, so young, so fair; But God knows best, so let her rest, Till we can meet her there. MELISSA WILLIAMS.

Rich.—At Farmington, N. H., January 20th, 1885, Bro. Alfred Rich. Born October 3d, 1844, on the Isle an Haute. Funeral services at the home of the deceased, by Rev. Thomas Spooner, pastor of the Baptist Church. Bro Rich was highly esteemed by all his neighbors, who defrayed his funeral expenses. His daily walk was such, that he was universally loved by those who knew him.

LEE.—At Independence, Missouri, October 27th, 1884, Annie, daughter of Bro. John H. and Sr. Martha I. Lee, aged 16 years, 7 months, and 21 days. Funeral sermon by T. W. Chatburn.

LEE.—Same place, February 21st, 1885, of croup, Joseph, son of Bro. John H. and Sr. Martha I. Lee, aged 5 years, 7 months and 12 days. Sermon by T. C. Lloyd.

A DREAM.

I saw in my dream that some of the Saints were using adulterated, milk, mixed with water. I thought the saints were establishing an organization that required each family of saints to give a goblet of pure milk. Those that were too poor to have pure milk at hand, were required to work and buy a goblet of pure milk to put into the organization. By so doing hey would ever after have pure milk to use, throughout their families, both rich and poor. Who will give the interpretation?

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. James Moler, writing from Limerick, Ohio, February 12th, says:

The work of these last days moves slowly but grandly on. Occasionally one yields obedience to the law in this vicinity. Recently Bro. Beatty baptized a minister who has been preaching for the Christian Church for twenty years; he now says he has been a false teacher all that time. He will yet preach the truth. May this grand work move on.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JOSEPH A. STEWART writes from Philadelphia, his home, that their late district conference passed off quietly. He was continued in charge of the district for the next six months. Bro. Stewart had been in York county, Pennsylvania, from which place he had lately returned, and would visit Cecil county, Maryland, the week succeeding February 24th, the date of his letter.

There is a paper published in St. Louis in the Spanish language, entitled "El Commercio Del Valle;" the "Valley Commercial" in plain English; and is we think devoted to the commercial interests of St. Louis, with Sante Fe and other western cities, where Spanish is spoken. It circulates in Mexico, Cuba, Porto Rico, Santo Domingo, Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, Chili, Bolivia, Ecuador, The Argentine Republic, Brazil, Uruguay and Paraguay.

We learn with regret of the death of Bro. Joseph Ellis, of Buxton, Ontario, from cancer in the face. We met him once in Ontario, and once at an April Conference in Plano, and from our acquaintance was very favorably impressed with Bro. Ellis, which we learn was correct, from the esteem in which he was held in the community where he lived, as stated by Bro. Archie McKenzie in a late letter to us.

Bro. C. D. Stevens writes from Grand Rapids, Nebraska, February 18th, most cheeringly and encouragingly.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

2.—Is it a sin to pray for the gift of tongues?

A.—We think not; but it is probable that that especial gift if desired too earnestly may make the believer oblivious to the reception of another gift which Christ might decide to be more suitable to confer upon the individual. Paul wrote "covet earnestly the best gifts, but rather that ye prophesy." The best gift, is eternal life; the next is, wisdom. Were we to advise any one to pray for an especial gift we should say, pray for "wisdom," then faith. We think safe to trust the Lord to give what in his wisdom would be safest and best for the believer.

2.-How do the gifts of God come?

A.—If this means in what appreciable way is the receiver made aware of the coming of the gift, we can only answer, we do not know. If it means by what processes is the believer made ready to receive the gift, we reply that it is by, or through obedience to the gospel rule; and the purifying power of the spirit given in remission of sin.

Q.—Can one have the spirit of truth without the Holy Ghost?

A.—One can have testimony of the truth of specific things without having what is known as the comforter, or the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost is the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth; so stated in the 14th and 15th chapters of John's Gospel.

Q.—Can one have the nine gifts, spoken in the New Testament, I Corinthians, 12 chapter, without having the Holy Ghost?

A.—The gift is the result of the supervising care of the Holy Ghost, and is a qualification wrought in, or for the receiver; a quickening, or changing the natural faculties in such way as to confer the peculiar gift required. There is a testimony that Jesus is the Christ that is possible without any of those gifts named in the Epistle of Paul; but it is probable that a portion of the spirit accompanies each gift.

2.—Are the sheep that are put on the right hand at the last judgment the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints that support the ministry?

A.—Not necessarily, they will be the members of the Church of Christ then existing—of the "family of God in earth and in heaven," having been faithful unto the end.

2.—Are the least of Christ's brethren, only the preachers?

A.—We hope not.

We are not sure that we have rightly understood the tenor of the foregoing questions, but have answered according to our comprehension of the queries.

Q.—In a branch where there are an Elder, Priest, Teacher and Deacon, can the branch choose the Deacon to preside over the branch, without first releasing the Priest and Teacher from their respective offices?

A.—Yes, unless the Priest and Teacher have been properly chosen as branch officers, by vote; in which case they should first be released from acting as branch officers. They can not be discharged from their offices as Priest and Teacher in the branch unless guilty of wrong doing, or criminal neglect of their calling. All other things being equal the highest in authority should be selected to preside.

2.—Do persons commit apostasy, or forfeiture of their membership, by depositing their "certificate of removal" with the Methodist, or other church?

A.—Yes, if by such depositing of certificate they are accepted as members of such church. They may not commit apostasy, but do forfeit their fellowship.

2.—If President Joseph Smith believes that the Law of Tithing is operative and binding upon the Church at the present time, why does he not set the example of his belief, by paying tithing?

A.—Several years ago when the question whether the law was binding on the Saints in their present condition had been decided affirmatively by the conference; Pres. Joseph Smith, in keeping with the instruction he gave in the Herald; how to pay tithing, made an inventory of his possessions, accounts, credits, debits and properties, and filed the same with the Bishop of the church, making the inquiry, and having an understanding with the Bishop as to surplus, tithing, or free will offering upon the statement; just as he had stated was his understanding of the rule. Since that time he has had no yearly increase, and has set apart from time to time and paid to various church uses according to his ability. So far as complying with the law as he understands it, may be an example he has done so; with the possible exception that he has not so conducted his labors, receipts and expenditures so wisely and well as to create an increase, as perhaps he and all others ought to do. Whether this is a misfortune, a folly, or a crime, must be left to the decision of the brethren, or to the final judge, just as those who read may choose. President Smith is ready to answer to the church through her Bishop for all that he has; to his brethren for his fellowship and to God for all that he is, or may be. President Smith does not presume to judge whether this will answer the question as it was intended to be asked; but he desires it to be understood, that he does not hold aloof from any proper inquiry into what appertains to his relationship with the Church.

THE lovers of music among the HERALD readers may wish to be informed concerning the Opera Festival to be held in the Exposition Building, Chicago, beginning April 6th:

At the Chicago Opera Festival, commencing April 6th, Col. Mapleson's company will join forces with a home chorus, and present fourteen performances of Italian opera. Our Exposition Building is being altered into a vast opera-hall to accommodate some 6,000 persons, and the Festival Association promises splendid performances at popular prices ($1.00, $2.00 and $2.50). company has the advantage of having among its solo singers the greatest prima-donna of her time, Mme. Adelina Patti. It is announced that she will sing six times-most likely in "Semiramide, "Traviata," "Martha," "Lohengrin" and "Aida." Mme. Patti promised Wagner that she would appear in some of his operas before the close of her career as a public singer; and it is understood that she makes her first appearance in "Loheng-rin" at this festival. Miss Nevada will make her debut in opera in Chicago during these peformances. The criticisms that have been made upon this singer's efforts in other cities all agree in stating that she possesses a pure and beautiful soprano voice, which has been cultivated to a great degree. Mme. Fursch-Madi, the dramatic prima donna, is one of the most reliable artists of the company, and much may be expected from her during the festival. Mme. Scalchi is so great a favorite in the city that her appearance will be an occasion of pleasure to all lovers of the Italian school of singing. Signori Gianninni and De Anni, the new tenor and baritone, have been universally commended for their splendid singing wherever they have sung during the season; and their appearances at this festival will be one of its strongest features. The répertoire includes "Lohengrin," Wagner; "Huguenots" and "L'Africaine," Meyerbeer; "Faust" and "Mirella," Gounod; "Der Freischütz," Weber; "Martha," Flotow; "Aida," "Il Trovatore" and "Traviata," Verdi; "Semiramide," Rossini; and "I Puritani," Bellini. The Chicago chorus of three hundred voices, under Mr. Pratt's direction, are learning the leading choruses of these operas, and will appear with Col. Mapleson's singers. In a reception performance which was given by the chorus a few evenings since, the ensemble number from the second act of "Aida" was sung with great effect, and the effort indicated that the home singers will be an attraction in the various representations during the festival.

Special attention is called to the fact that complete arrangements for heating the auditorium by steam have been made, also that elegant opera chairs will be furnished by the American Store Stool Company for the paraquet and dress-circle. Season tickets (good for fourteen performances), $12.00, $24.00, $30.00.

LEAVES OF MEMORY.
GALIEN, Berrien Co., Mich.,
March 1st, 1885.

Friendly Herald:-If "love is the fulfilling of the law," I believe that I am not wanting just now, in my lawful duty to you, however my silence may be construed. I have just arisen from a careful perusal in serial form, of a controversy commenced in your last November issue, and still unfinished; a controversy between our leading ministers, to each of whom I would fain look up as to a guide whom heaven has employed to lighten the path of poor benighted men like I to the truth which makes men free. They occupy the extremes of the argument on the disputed doctrines, however, and as I can not follow both without dividing myself-and I am too small for that-I must pray to their God. and mine, to help me follow truth's guiding star to the place where the child of spiritual hope lies, though he be wrapped in but swaddling clothes. To the faith of all my manhood's history, I hope never to prove recreant; and to vote as I have fought, and fight, if need be, as I vote. My wanderings over the western plains of Kansas, through Iowa, calling at your sanctum, and visiting Pittsfield, Ill., Kewanee, Sandwich, Plano, and Chicago, en route, led me on till I reached here. A tour under direction of the spiritual head of this mission-our warm-hearted brothor, Wm. H. Kelley, a most companionable fellow-laborer, who gave me more latitudinal and longitudinal scope than I could occupy, made me better acquainted with him, and with the excellent Saints and friends of Michigan than I had ever been, and resulted in confirming the impressions of a life-time that Saints' companionship on earth is that which best can fit for our future heaven.

By appointment, I met our large-hearted—and what other than a large-heart would suit so large a frame—and devoted brother, J. W. Waldsmith, and together we made a tour to Wirt, Indiana, where I had the pleasure of dedicating a neat structure built as a house of worship by the sacrifices of God's people there. It has a steeple and a bell. Its dimensions and cost I intended to give you, but have mislaid the document our good brother S. S. Rector furnished me containing them. The brother named and the others of the committee deserve great credit for their noble efforts, and God great praise for crowning those efforts with such success as gave completeness to their work, and makes that work a monument of Zion's growth. My labors there, seconded by my excellent brother, J. W., were blessed of God, and some baptisms the result, though not administered by us. When God gives the increase, he who sows and he who waters are made glad.

We thence took a tour through Western Pennsylvania, over the mountain tops of the chain where the "Horse-shoe Bend" has given to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company a more than national reputation, till we reached Huntingdon. and thence by team to unite in a family gathering of the Waldsmith family. It was expected and promised that I should participate with the M. E. minister in a series of meetings. His presiding elder heard of the proposal, and vetoed it. I had the privilege of praying in the church, so had Bro. J. W., and the difference in methodthough some account me rather methodicalstruck the Methodists and others. I preached in the school-house. The seed sown there is of the kind that will not die. God's Spirit did the sowing. I was but a seed-machine.

We returned in a few days, over the same scenes of wonderful beauty again casting hurried glances, till their sylvan and sublime beauties were lost in the smoke and glare of busy, manufacturing Pittsburgh, where Bro. Waldsmith left me, I feeling like a widower forlorn whose hope had perished. Bro. Josiah Ells, the old veteran in the army under three different generals, two of whom he has outlived, met us, and with him the widow of our beloved and still mourned brother. Edwin Hulmes. Arrangements were made for my stay at her mother's, sister Smith's, where I remained until it was decided that my stay ought to be prolonged for the work's sake in Pittsburgh. Then I removed to Elder's room at the Hall, bachelor retreat.

During all these visits, and labors in Kansas, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Pennsylvania, your correspondent has been taking notes. From these his conclusions are that you, friend Herald, are, on the whole, very much admired, and a little blamed. The blame, however, attaches to your liberality. Our men of thought are your friends. You ought to reject all articles not in harmony with the expressed faith of the church, is however, the opinion of perhaps nine out of ten of all your readers. The remaining one praises you for not rejecting them. Please, however, do not reject mine. So would each correspondent say, and so says your old friend,

MARK H. FORSCUTT.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 26th, 1885.

Brother Joseph Smith: Since I last wrote to you, although the weather has been very cold, yet I have put in good time in presenting the word of life. I was called home three weeks ago by sickness. My wife and little girl were some better when I arrived, but the day following my girl was very sick. I called in Bro. A. White, and we administered to her, and the next day I took her to meeting. Bro. White remarked, seeing she had been raised up twice by the power of God, that that little child had more faith than many of the old Saints. I just returned from Moselle, Franklin County, where I was nine days; spoke eight times, baptized one, Henry Williams. Moselle is the old hunting ground of B. V. Springer, and the people there think lots of him. They will be glad to see him return, and make himself a home with them.

I was at prayer meeting last night in St. Louis. Had a good meeting; gifts were present. I speak to night to the Methodist people in East St. Louis. I should have continued meeting longer at Moselle, but the measles commenced to spread.

Yours ever,

JOHN C. Foss.

UBLEY, Huron Co., Mich., March 2d, 1885.

Bro. Joseph: I have spent a few days here again. Preached some, debated a little, and baptized six more. This makes seventeen members in this place now, nearly all heads of families. All came in during last fall and this winter. I intend to visit London, St. Mary's, Usborne, and other places in Ontario, pretty soon. I find much to do; the work of God is rolling on.

In the faith,

JOHN J. CORNISH.

KEWANEE, Illinois, February 27th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-In reading the Editorial in the Herald of 28th, I was led to ask the following questions: First, Is it not the duty of the controlling agent of the Herald to guard the interests of the Herald? And when such agent is also the presiding officer of the Church, to see that nothing is published that is calculated to prove an injury to the church over which he is called to preside? In short, is he not expected by the body making him their agent in conducting the Herald that he will exercise his judgment, with regard to articles sent to him for publication? And has he not only the right, but is it not his duty to reject all articles and withhold them from publication, that, in his judgment, would injure the cause by breeding trouble, contentions, and hard feelings in the Church? Or are there no limits in this matter, and is the Herald to be thrown wide open for every thing and any thing that may be written, regardless of the good of the Church? If there is a limit, it does seem to me that the line should be drawn by the exercise of the judgment of the controlling agent, (Managing Editor), so that the Church as a body may not suffer by the publication of such articles as are calculated to destroy more in one month than one dozen elders can build up in the same length of time.

H. C. Bronson.

San Francisco, Cal., February 24th, 1885.

Dear Bro. Joseph:-All goes nicely with us. The outlook for church affairs seems to be brightening in our city. We have baptized several of late, and one more is to unite with us next Sunday. We have also added several to our branch by letter, so we are building up of late. I think our effort with the Expositor has done us all good. We enjoy more of God's Spirit since its advent, and we seem to be more closely united. I think our Heavenly Father is pleased with this attempt to spread the truth. I am happier, and am much blessed spiritually. Our meetings are very well attended, and God's Spirit is always there to assist the speaker, and enlighten the hearers. Many strangers are becoming interested, and are to be seen at all our meetings. Surely the seed sown in this city will bring forth good fruit some day.

Praying and working for Zion's cause, GEO. S. LINCOLN. GLENWOOD, Iowa, February 23d, 1885.

Bro. Foseph: The work of the Master is onward in this section of country. The Saints of the Elm Creek Branch, with the friendly aid of two or three non-members of the branch, have bought a very snug little chapel, in which meeting is held every Sabbath. Besides this we have held several meetings in Bartlett, and made two efforts to hold meetings in Glenwood, but owing to circumstances failed. The Saints here generally are active in the cause, and doing what they can to forward the good work. God's blessings have been realized by many.

Your humble servant chanced to fall in the path of a Campbellite "Mormon eater," and who after a strenuous effort, found he had overestimated his powers of gulosity, so regurgitation set in, and one would have supposed he intended to drown his victim in the flood of lies and slander. He belched forth against our church, and especially "Joe Smith." When he found his opponent, by the grace of God, was able, not only to give a "reason for the hope within" him, but to wade through his opprobrium, he was forced to remark, "Well, what shall I say;" and in a round about way acknowledge he had got hold of the wrong man. Discussion was on the following propositions, namely: (1) Resolved, That the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, established in 1830, and reorganized in 1860, has or should have twelve apostles, holding the same position and authority as those chosen by Christ in person. (2) Resolved, That the promise of Christ to the Apostles, of the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and its fulfillment as on the day of Pentecost, as in Acts 2d, is to all the obedient.

To the first I offered the usual arguments, showing a succession of Apostles in the primitive church, their necessity in the church, and their call by revelation, ancient and modern. He, after failing to offset my claims by scripture, as usual, had to resort to abuse. In discussing the second proposition, I showed the necessity of the baptism of the Holy Spirit, by Christ's language to Nicodemus, and Paul's language to the Corinthians, I Cor. 12:13, "For by one spirit are we all baptized into one body," and many other passages.

He, being anxious to get me on the latter day work, challenged me to show one true prophecy. "Sir," said he, "this will be evidence of the baptism of the Holy Spirit now." To this I very promptly replied by showing the prophecies in the Book of Mormon, pages 101, 102, 107, 466, 476, 487, and then showed their fulfillment in the returning of the Jews, as per last year's Heralds, page 417, also vol. 32 of Herald, page 50, etc. To show the turning of the Jews to Christianity I referred to last vol. of Herald, page 745. I referred also to other prophecies, all of which were too plain and literally fulfilled for him even to attempt to deny them; so did nothing but abuse the church and its founder. But this, when taken into consideration, had but little weight, and was not well received by his own church members. On the other hand the saints were well pleased and fully endorsed my efforts.

I think I fully proved the divine authenticity, and recognition of the Book of Mormon; whether Spaulding, Sidney Rigdon, or Joseph Smith was its author, and left the people to decide for themselves who its author was.

The discussion lasted four evenings, two hours each evening. The audiences were not very large, owing to the very severe weather we had at the time. The discussion opened on the 8th of February, in a snow storm, and the cold weather lasted till the last evening, when we had a good audience. Splendid attention was given throughout. I thank God for the Book of Mormon, and think it is the most effective weapon that can be used in its own defense, as well as of the latter day work generally.

Yours in bonds,

J. M. STUBBART.

WEST FORK, Crawford Co., Indiana, February 18th, 1885.

Dear Herald: We have been laboring as much as we could on Sundays, at Marietta. Bro. I. P. Baggerly came to the rescue the sixth of January, and commenced the battle here, and on the eighteenth baptized two, and reorganized the branch; and the Saints changed the name of the branch from the Low Gap to West Fork, and since that we have been having our meetings, and feeling well, and we rejoice that God has not forforsaken us. We have had a hard time, so much preaching, and no one come into the church. But the Saints held on to the rod of iron, and stood firm for nine years. Now they rejoice in the Lord. The work is in a good condition in this the southern part of the district. There are others not far from the kingdom. We hope that the Saints by wisdom and Christ-like walk, will be instruments in His hand of bringing others to the fold.

We have been down into Perry county, and the work is not in as good condition as we would like to see it; but the cause is apparent, as the most of the Saints have moved away, and they have had very little preaching there for four years. We hope and pray that they may get into a better working condition while Bro. I. P. Baggerly is there. There are several there who are very near the kingdom. What has become of Bro. C. Scott? I received a letter from him last fall saying that he would meet me at Templeton Station, on the Air Line Railroad, but I have not heard from him since. Bro. Isaac was at Comings Bottom, the last we heard from him. At Lilly Dale the Christian Order let him have the church to hold meetings in. I name this as it is the first time to my knowledge that any of our brethren have been favored with their houses to preach in. This is the place where Bro. Forscutt and Treat held their debate. God has spoken, and he will fulfill his promises if we are faithful.

Yours in the one faith,

V. D. BAGGERLY.

PITTSBURG, Pa.,

February 26th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:—I am striving to live faithfully and to live up to the covenant I have made, although I am weak, and feel that I can do nothing without the Lord helps me; therefore I put my trust in Him. Bro. Mark H. Forscutt has been laboring in our branch for three months, and during that period he has labored hard to win souls to Christ, and he has baptized twentyone, the fruits of his labors, and others are investigating; and I think if he could stay longer; more would be baptized. He is an earnest man, and his whole heart is in the work. Since his coming here three months ago, he has been preaching every Sunday morning and evening, and sometimes he would preach on Wednesday and Friday evenings. He has been taking charge of prayer meetings also, and in every way he could, advancing the work. Bro. Forscutt has not only been the instrument in bringing the world to obey Christ, but since he has come here he has brought more of a unity among the Saints than has been for a long time. He has made better Latter Day Saints of members than they have ever been before. They seem more determined to do their duty; and I have heard members say, I am thankful Bro. Forscutt came here; for I have been shown my duty through his teachings while here. He has also started a young folks' prayer meeting and I hear it is doing much good among the young members; and they intend carrying it out. He is a man that does good wherever he goes. I hope and pray that he will ever be blessed in all duties before the Lord, and that he will be permitted to return to this place again after Conference. I will close, asking you to remember me in all your prayers, that I may be kept faithful. MRS. A. M. REESE.

> PARRISH, Illinois, February 28th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—My wife and myself are the only Saints we know of in Franklin county. We would like any of the Saints passing this way to call and see us, or correspond with us; and if some Elder will come we will secure some place to preach in. We live three fourths of a mile north of Parrish, on the St. Louis and Shawneetown Railroad.

Your brother in gospel bonds,
AARON BURLISON.

Greenwood, Steuben Co., N. Y., February 23d, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith: - I am still stopping in this part, trying to make it through our long eastern winter, under as favorable conditions as our surrounding circumstances will permit. The weather here for a good deal of the time has been very severe; and we feel glad that the Spring is again near at hand, and that the hardest of the winter is past. There are near two feet of snow. I have not done much preaching of late, not being able to do the traveling on foot necessary to be done here in order to get around, and make appointments, and then go and fill them. Have been stopping the most of the time for a month or two past, with a friend four or five miles away, helping him in his shop, that I might not impose too much burden on hospitality. While speaking of kindness and hospitality, I wish to mention the names of sister and Mr. Deremer, who have a most excellent home here, and have always extended to me the kindest and best of hospitality under their friendly roof, while on missions and gospel efforts here in this eastern country. We can but say, may the Lord bless and prosper them a hundred fold.

While working at the place heretofore mentioned, I preached twice at a neighboring schoolhouse; once on the last Sunday in December, and again on the first Sabbath in January. Had quite a few out at each meeting. On the night of the 18th of January, I, in company with Mr. Deremer and family, attended Elder Cheeseman's meeting of the Christian Order in Greenwood village. As soon as I came in, he came to me, and requested me to go into the stand, and occupy part of the time. I cheerfully accepted his kind invitation, though it came unexpectedly to me. He spoke first, and during his remarks he mentioned the increasing unbelief and disregard manifest among the people, in regard to religion and Christianity; and following after his remarks, I had a tolerably good occasion to show that the cause of this defection was, to a great extent, the apostasy from the true principles of the doctrine of Christ, and accepting and inaugurating instead, the theories and systems of men; and the result of this apostasy had brought the world with its professed Christianity into the present state.

Last Sabbath evening Mr. Deremer and family went with their sleigh again to Elder Cheeseman's meeting, and I also accompanied them. The Elder requested me to take the stand and preach. He opened the meeting in the usual way, and I commenced by reading a portion of the tenth chapter of Acts, and then spoke for about an hour with most excellent freedom. The congregation, though small, was very attentive, and listened to the discourse with manifest interest. Elder Cheeseman followed with a few remarks, and said Elder Lanphear had preached the best sermon that he ever heard him; that it was Scripture, and that the ground taken was good. On my way out of the house, after the close of the meeting I met with a man in the audience who said to me that what I had preached was the true gospel, and that he had heard it before in the old country, before he came to America. We pray the good Lord of the harvest to bless the word, and to open the eyes of understanding to the people, that they may be led to walk within the province of the true gospel light and wisdom.

There is in this part a Sister Richardson and Sister Dutcher, old members who joined the church while your father was living, who have always held to the faith. Sister Dutcher is about eighty years of age, and takes the Herald, and has for a number of years past. She has an abiding testimony to the truth of the work, which she received about the time she joined the church. In vision or dream, the presence of the angel was by her with book in hand, and recorded her name within. This witness is always fresh in her memory when relating her past experience.

I have had several encouraging letters of late, from members north of here, where I was last fall, in Oswego, Jefferson, Wayne and Orleans counties; all expressing good desires and interest in the gospel. I have had the privilege of reading the February number of the Expositor, the paper published by the brethren in California, and like its contents right well. I hope they may be aided by subscription and means at hand, so as to be able to keep it in progress; for from the present appearance it seems to be prospective of accomplishing much good.

A few days ago I received a letter from Sister Hyde, of Belmont, Allegheny county, about thirty miles west of this. She had lately subscribed for the Herald, and was well pleased with it. She became a member in the early days of the church, and was confirmed under the hands of Elder Austin Coles and the Patriarch, father Joseph Smith, your grandfather.

I hope that the coming General Conference may tell much towards the more permanent establishment of the Reorganization; and that the Lord may be pleased to make known his revealed will concerning it, that there might be a more united and better understanding than what is apparent with some at the present time. I would like very much to attend the conference, but do not entertain any idea at present of being able to do so.

Yours in gospel bonds,

C. G. LANPHEAR.

CAMERON, Clinton Co., Mo., February 18th, 1885.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:-We have had a long and tedious winter; and I believe we are all very thankful to see the weather moderating a little, and we shall all be thankful to behold the first indications of spring; and should we not be very grateful to our Heavenly Father, that so many of us are spared to behold another spring? And shall we not strive to renew our covenant and double our diligence, and be more zealous in keeping all the commandments that our Heavenly Father has given, temporal as well as Spiritual. I am perfectly satisfied that the one is just as essential as the other; and I believe that all who are under the law of tithing and do not comply with it, will come under as great condemnation as those who neglect to keep any other commandment; and no one that has obeyed the gospel understandingly, believing Joseph Smith to have been called of God, can doubt any of the commandments that have been given through him, especially those contained in the Doctrine and Covenants. I do not believe in condemning the words of any of the prophets who have been called and ordained of God; and how any one can fail to see the justice of God in giving to us such an essential law, such a perfect law, as the law of tithing, looks strange to me.

GUILETA F. SIMMONS.

Persia, Iowa, February 12th, 1885.

To all the Saints:-Something tells me that there is something wrong in the branches that compose the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. It teaches me that there is discord among the members that compose this church, and a want of unity in all the branches. Where there is not unity there is not brotherly kindness, and where there is not brotherly kindness there is not charity, and where there is not charity there can not be a perfect harmony, and without harmony the cause of God can not prosper. How is this to be rectified? We think the only way to rectify it is for each individual member composing this church, to see to it that they are in harmony with God and Jesus Christ. If each member should make it a personal affair, and ask to be guided by the Good Spirit, and do just as that Spirit dictates, it would not be long until God would pour out his blessings until there would not be room enough to contain; and then it would run over the walls, and those out of Christ would be enquiring the way of salvation, and many would be added to the church such as should be saved. I have no doubt but there are many that would obey the gospel, and are ready to do so, but they see such manifestations of unpleasantness among the people of God they are afraid to enlist.

My brethren, why should discord exist? Is the Lord's arm shortened that it can not reach? Is his ear dull of hearing that he can not hear? Is his spirit gone so far from us that it can not return? It will not return without our bidding, and then where will the blame rest? It must be with you and me. If we have felt the Lord Jesus Christ precious to our souls once, we can surely have the same return again to us. If we live for it, why not? Was not life more pleasant when we were living near to God? All the Saints answer, Yes. Then why not try to live happy here on earth, that we may be more glorified when we come to meet our Judge. For the more glorified we live on earth, the more of his glory we will be able to receive when we come into the presence of our King of Kings, and Lord of glory.

And now that every individual member of the Church of Christ may see to it that they are fit subjects for the Holy Ghost to dwell in, is the prayer of your brother in the Lord,

P. PELTON.

Burlington, Iowa, February 28th, 1885.

Dear Bro. Joseph:-It is now over two years since I united myself with the church. I am thankful to my Heavenly Father for sending his gospel. My desire is to do the will of God. I hope by his help to endure to the end in righteousness. We live over seven miles from the branch, so we can not get to meeting as often as we would wish; but we have the precious word of God to guide and comfort us; and can read of God's promises and blessings unto those that love and serve him. I greatly long for the time to come, when pride and all wickedness shall be done away; and also hope that the Saints may be more united. I believe this to be the Church of Christ, and hope and pray that God's Holy Spirit may lead us all; for if we have the Spirit of God, there will be no contention among us, but we will all be one. May the Lord bless us all, and help us to be faithful to the end, is the all, and neip us to 2.

prayer of your sister in Christ,
E. M. HOVERSON.

RHODES, Iowa, March 3d, 1885. Bro. Foseph:--Others besides Braden are puzzled to "make out a case" as to how Smith obtained under such unfavorable circumstances, Spaulding's manuscript. It is more easy to say, "Impostor Joe!" or "Spread-eagle Sidney," than it is to find prima facia evidence of any connection between Smith, Rigdon and the Spaulding Romance. I have just finished reading the Braden-Kelley Debate. Take from Braden's half the bombast and assertions, and much less is left than there was of his "Kilkenny cats." I am really surprised at Braden's weak and sickly argument to bolster up Campbellism, in last proposition; I have met what they termed "boys" in their church, that made a better defence. I am not surprised at his evasive articles to Bro. J. R. Lambert, when a fair issue is sought. Men seldom want to be defeated more than once.

Our conference is over, and we had a time long to be remembered. Met in unison and separated in tears. I leave for Clinton, Missouri, at once, where I expect to make my future home, until God may otherwise direct. Members of the Second Quorum of Elders, please address me there until April the first; then at Independence, Missouri, where I hope to meet many of our quorum during Conference.

I leave the Des Moines District in good condition, not by reason of my labors, but the indefatigable labor of Brn. Roth, Etzenhouser, Shimel and others. We felt the directing influence of the Holy Spirit, in filling the vacancies that have occurred by reason of my leaving the district. There are pressing demands for preaching, and a growing disposition among the Elders to respond. Thus the good work goes on.

Hastily, yours in bonds,

I. N. WHITE.

NORTH PLYMOUTH, Mass.,

February 25th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph: - We are still trying to hold the fort as far as we are able to do it, God's Spirit being with us. We have the sweet number of twenty-four members in our branch, about all in good working order for the truth. When Bro. J. Gilbert organized this branch, he raised a praver to God that he would bless the little flock and add to their number, and we have already seen that prayer answered. We have a very large field here, but few laborers. We have opened a hall in the town of Plymouth to preach in. It is a grand place, but we do not get many to come in. I don't know whether the ministers have warned their flocks not to come and hear a Mormon preach. There are nearly all kinds of religious sects close by, so time will prove all things. We have stirred them up some, for there seems to be a spirit of inquiry abroad. The last two nights that I occupied the hall I was blessed in some measure with the Spirit. I did not know but that I should have to preach to the Saints altogether; but the giver of all good gifts, saw fit to lead quite a little number to hear the gospel.

I am not discouraged in this glorious work. I know the gospel of Jesus Christ is just what the apostle said it was, the power of God unto salvation, for therein the righteousness of God is revealed. I have a great desire to show to the world the glorious liberty there is in this work. We can be poor in this world's goods; yet in our hearts feel that we possessed all things.

Yours for the truth,

NEHEMIAH R. NICKERSON.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 5th, 1885.

Dear Herald: -Since the Reunion in September, I have labored almost incessantly, in Twelve Mile and Six Mile Groves, Salem, Persia, Portsmouth, Shelby, Crescent City, two points in Fremont county, Iowa; Omaha, Blair, Florence, in Nebraska; Osceola, Lucas and Davis City, Iowa, arriving at the latter place, my former home, on February 27th. At all the places named I had good audiences and the best of liberty in speaking. Never felt better and stronger in the good work, My stay in Lucas was especially pleasant. There was that in my experience there among that noble band of Saints, which endeared them to me so effectually, that they will have strong hold on my affections while reason retains her throne. May our beneficent Father bless them abundantly. Indeed, my associations among Saints and old time friends, have been of the most pleasant character throughout. I have earnestly sought to become a workman approved of God, and to meet the expectations of the church; and while I greatly deplore the lack of unity in the church, as manifest in the controversy now going on through the columns of the Herald, and wish it could be otherwise, yet I remember that such things have characterized the church in all ages, and serve as evidence of the divinity of the work; and for myself I propose, God helping me, to stand on the rock, and be true to the covenant I made twenty-three years ago. Nor shall I stultify myself by going back on the testimony I bore then, that God had made known to me that this work is true, embodying all that is implied in it. And to me, while it imparts joy, peace and hope, and solves the problem as to what constitutes human happiness, yet it has its serious phase; there is an obligation and responsibility resting on me, which call for and demand an exercise of the powers that God has given me, in order to sustain that true relationship to him, that is clearly manifest in the very nature or character of the Christian system, or gospel plan of salvation. In the very nature and fitness of things, if there shall be a failure to attain to that which is promised, both as to the immunities and blessings in this life and eternal life in the beyond, it will be seen that it was not because of a defective plan, but because I had failed to adopt it and live in harmony with its provisions. There may be in connection with the great machinery of the work, things, or side issues, (so to speak), or abstruse questions that I do not comprehend; but I hope I am not so foolish as to condemn, or ignore it, simply because I do not understand it. I do not desire to be classed among those of whom Solomon says, "The foolishness of man perverteth his way, and he murmureth against the Lord."

Although I shall in all probability be one of the number who will perforce of circumstances, step out of the active ministry, I console myself with the thought, that I can be better spared and less missed than others, who have become more conspicuous as able defenders of the faith; but the church and all others may rest assured, that I am just selfish enough to desire to attain to eternal life; and as a private citizen shall try to make it apparent, that I have the most implicit confidence in God and in the great latter day work—its divinity, and the divinity of the instrumentalities employed of God to bring it forth.

And now good bye, dear readers of the Herald. You may not hear from the "old devil killer" again officially through the Herald, but when you think of him, as I trust you will often, think that he is just as determined to be in at the death of the old arch fiend as ever, when the banner of King Emmanuel will float over a redeemed world, and the death knell of all the enemies of the race shall be sounded. May God speed the work, is the constant prayer of your brother in bonds,

B. V. SPRINGER.

CHURCH SECRETARY'S NOTICE.

In order to summarize the reports of districts for place in the minutes of the General Conference, and to have them ready, I would like to have said reports at an early date; and if the presidents and clerks of districts will make them out, and send to me, I will be obliged to them. Also, those of the ministry who can send their reports a little while before conference, will likewise confer a favor by doing so. Address either Pres. Smith or me, at Lamoni, Iowa, till April 3d; after that, address him at Independence, Mo.

GENERAL NEWS.

Feb. 27th.—Advices from Suakin report that the rebels have succeeded in wrecking three redoubts during the last two nights without exploding the mines which had been prepared for their reception.

Lord Salisbury's motion censuring the Government was adopted in the House of Lords last evening by a vote of 189 to 68. Sir Stafford Northcote's motion of censure was rejected in the House of Commons by a vote of 302 to 288. During the debate in the House a loud explosion rang through the Parliament buildings. There was a good deal of excitement until it was discovered that a leaky gas-main had blown up. So great was the excitement over the political crisis that many valetudinarians had themselves brought in carriages and wheeled to their seats in invalid chairs. Others came on crutches.

The Viceroy of India will go to Peshawur to meet the Ameer of Afghanistan, who is about to visit India. Bazaar rumors are current to the effect that Russia is collecting a large army for the purpose of advancing on Afghanistan.

The Sweedish schooner Norden was run into and sunk by the English steamer Cumberland off Norway. Of twenty-one persons on board the Norden four were drowned. The remainder March 1st.—The Crown prince of Prussia is said to have declared himsilf against Bismarck's policy of opposition to the Vatican. He urges that the Pope should be permitted to have his own way about the education of the clergy, the Holy Father in return to agree to the resignation of Cardinal Ledochowski. The Crown Prince seems be jealous of Bismarck's growing power and his assumption of almost sovereign authority in the affairs of Prussia.

Apropos of the fact that yesterday was the date originally set for the simultaneous publication on both sides of the Atlantic of the revised edition of the Old Testament, it is stated on what appears to be good authority that the leading booksellers lost heavily on the Revised New Testament. It is said that the King James edition has by no means been superseded, and that the demand for it has not perceptibly decreased. Heavy stocks of the new version were disposed of by auction, and certain dealers are now holding them in hopes of a future demand, which they believe will be sure to come when the people become accustomed to the change and appreciate the work of the revisers.

Rumors are afloat in London that the recent calling out of the reserves means that high officials regard the possibility of a war with Russia as something more than a mere possibility. The guards who were recently dispatched ostensibly for Suakin are said to have been really bound for Kurrachee, a seaport town near the estuary of the Indus, whence they could reach Kandahar via the Scinde Valley and the Bolan Pass. This movement is believed in by those alarmists who credit the recent story that Lord Dufferin, Viceroy of India, had asked for heavy reinforcements and proposed to mass his troops to meet expected Russian aggressions on the Af-

One of the so-called "mesmerists," of Chicago, Ill., who accepted the challenge of physicians investigating the subject, and who attempted to show that he did not depend on "horses," as the professional subjects are called by the initiated. utterly failed to influence a single one of half a hundred people selected at random by an unpartisan committee.

The Socialists of Chicago held three meetings at which the wrongs of the wage-workers, use of dynamite, and the relation of Socialism to Christianity were discussed and the usual abuse of the capitalists indulged in. Two meetings of the International Working-People's Association (Anarchists) were held at No. 54 Lake street. The American meeting partook more of the charactor of a liberal-league discussion than a meeting of Socialistic revolutionists, as the discussion turned on the question whether a Socialist could be a Christian. Several women spoke on the subject, and were the most radical in denouncing Christ and the teachings of the New Testament. Speeches were made by Samuel Fielden, who had just returned from the Hocking Valley district, where he had been organizing Socialistic societies; by August Spies, another Socialistic leader, who attacked Christianity; and by Mr. Bishop, who attempted to prove that Christ was a Socialist. The German Socialists held their semi-annual general meeting of all the groups in the same building and elected the following officers: German Corresponding Secre-Bach; French, Hershberger: Spies; Financial Secretary, Nebe; Librarian, Hershberger. The Socialistic Labor party, conservative, met in Thalia Hall and discussed the question: "The attitude of the Socialistic Labor party toward the dynamite assasins." ties are all making preparations to celebrate the anniversary of the taking of Paris by the Commune, March 14th.

March 2d.—A recent sortie by the garrison at Kassala, which has been defending the town for a year against the Mahdi, resulted disastrously, twenty-eight officers of the garrison and 630 privates being killed.

Admiral Courbet has blockaded the Ning-Po River, and at latest accounts was bombarding Ching-hai, near the mouth of the Ning-Po. The Burmese are said to have recaptured the Town of Bhamo from the Chinese.

In the course of the examination of Cunningham and Burton, the alleged dynamiters, in London, Solicitor Poland said that the Government expected to show that Burton was connected with a Fenian conspiracy in the United States and that he was implicated in all the recent dynamite outrages.

It is rumored that war is imminent between ngland and Russia. Negotiations between England and Russia. Negotiations between the two Powers regarding the Afghan frontier have reached a delicate stage. Russia has made such sweeping demands that England cannot accept anything approaching them. It is said that the British will occupy Kabool as soon as possible, and the Ameer of Afghanistan has been ordered to have the road cleared from Herat to Peshawur to facilitate the march of the troops. A medical inspection of every regiment in the British army is now in progress, and the Devon-shire Regiment and Seaforth Highlanders have been ordered to India. Queen Victoria has taken a hand in the Anglo-Russian complication, and has conveyed an intimation to her Cabinet that any Minister who opposes a vigorous maintenance of her imperial rights will soon find himself without a portfolio. The Cabinet is fully aroused to the gravity of the situation and recognizes the fact that England's protectorate in Afghanistan is seriously menaced. Some sharp messages are said to have been exchanged between London and St. Petersburg.

The tone of Prince Bismarck's references to the British Government in his speech in the Reichstag at Berlin to-day was contemptuous and chaffing. He mentioned that he had received no less than 128 dipatches from Mr. Gladstone's Government since last summer. dispatches made a mass of manuscript amounting to 800 pages and exceeding in bulk the total correspondence received from all other European Powers combined for many years. This statement was received with laughter.

A Cablegram has been flashed around the world that the independent Burmese have beaten the Chinese at a place on the Upper Irrawaddy called Bhamo. This is apt to convey a very erroneous idea of the actual state of the case. Burmah, so far from being at war with China, acknowledges China's suzerainty and annually sends to Pekin a nominal tribute. The fact of the matter Pekin a nominal tribute. is that King Theebew, the ruler of Mandalay, had his authority disputed at Bhamo, not by Chinese, but by a Kakhyen tribe, who are very brave but semi-barbarous, and it is these that the Burmese troops claim to have restored to quietude.

Russia continues to deal with communications from the British Foreign Office with exasperating slowness. Lord Granville's message sent last Monday conveying the expression of England's determination to protect the rights of the Afghans has not yet elicited a reply. In the meantime the British public is in a state of feverish anxiety. Complaints are made that neither the army nor the navy is adequately prepared for such a crisis as is threatened.

A large encampment of Oklahoma boomers is pitched near Arkansas City, Kan. Reinforcements are constantly arriving. Cap. Couch and twelve other leading officers of the boomers were arrested yesterday. Capt. Couch assured his comrades that his arrest was a mere farce, and said that he would be again at liberty by Saturday. He advised them to await his return before attempting the projected invasion of the territory.

President Grover Cleveland was inaugurated at Washington to-day. The day was a one and the city was filled with tens of thousands of people from all parts of the Union. At ten o'clock the new President and Vice-President were escorted to the White House, whence they drove to the Capitol, being escorted thither by troops of the regular army, the marine corps, and the District militia. Shortly before noon President Arthur, President-elect Cleveland, and Vice-President-elect Hendricks entered the Senate Chamber. Mr. Hendricks was sworn in as Vice-President and proceeded to administer the oath of office to the newly-elected members of the Senate, thus completing its reorganization. The procession formed and escorted Mr. Cleveland to the platform on the central portico of the Capitol. President arthur stepped forward, followed by President-elect, Chief-Justice Waite, and the Sergeant-at Arms of the Senate. Mr. Cleveland then delivered his inaugural address, at the conclusion of which he took the oath as President of the United States, which was administered by Chief-Justice Waite. The ceremonies over, the President and Vice-President returned to the White House. The display of fireworks in the evening was followed by the insuguration ball. auguration ball.

A dispatch from Teheran states that the insurgent native Chiefs of India have already raised the fiery cross and proclaimed in favor of Russia. Baron Mohrenheim, Russian Ambassador, had an interview with Premier Gladstone to-day and communicated the contents of a number of important dispatches received from his Government regarding the Russo-Afghan frontier question.

The question of peace or war between England and Russia is the most important topic in political and military circles in London, to-night. Opinions differ as to the feasibility of either Power making Afghanistan a field of battle, and an idea is prevalent that the terrible difficulties of the country, from a military point of view, will prove to be advantageous to the power which first gets a foothold.

The signs of discontent among the natives against the British rule are increasing. Threats against the life of Gen. Stephenson, the English commander, are frequently heard in the streets. Gen. Hudson, commanding the Indian contingent of the Suakin expedition, landed to-day.

The Swiss police have been ordered to take severe measures with real or suspected Anarchists, and many arrests are made every day. Female detectives have been employed in all the larger cities, and the sex of a suspected person is no longer a safeguard against a thorough examination. It is stated that the federal authorities sare exchanging notes with Berlin, Vienna, and St. Petersburg with a view of making the identification of suspected persons more certain. Many startling Anarchist documents have been seized, but they are guarded so zealously that it is impossible to reproduce their text. Even the little Swiss papers, which are generally sutspoken, if they are not always enterprising, have been put under the seal of secrecy, and state at the heads of their editoral columns that they have been requested not to publish items of news regarding the arrest of suspected persons, on the ground that such publication would impede public justice.

In his inaugural message Mr. Cleveland said: "The conscience of the people demands that polygamy in the Territories, destructive of the family relation and offensive to the moral sense of the civilized world, shall be repressed." He also said: "There should be no pretext for anxiety touching the protection of the freedmen in their rights or their security in the enjoyment of their privileges under the Constitution and its amendments. FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

There were 270 failures in the United States during the last week, an increase of sixty-six as compared with the previous week.

The weekly clearing-house statement is again unfavorable, the reports showing a decrease in the transactions of 33.9 per cent as compared with the corresponding week of 1884. The decrease outside of New York was 31.2 per cent. Of the reporting cities only three show a gain. The decrease in Chicago was 17.9 per cent.

The decrease of the public debt during the month of February was $3,204,975.

Chicago elevators contained February 28th,

15,226,788 bushels of wheat, 1,894,535 bushels of corn, 566,016 bushels of oats, 129,285 bushels of rye, and 119,357 bushels of barley. Total, 17,926, 981 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 22,495. 860 bushels a year ago. During last week the stock increased 258, 287 bushels, including an increase of 193.544 bushels of wheat and 73,208 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 48,142,457 bushels of wheat, 5,105,678 bushels of corn, 1,942,295 bushels of oats, 316,806 bushels of rye, and 1,206,343 bushels of barley. These figures are larger than a week ago by 131,181 in wheat and smaller by 105,293 in corn.

At a representative convention held March 3d, in Pittsburg the coal-miners of that district refused to accept the rate of two and one-half cents a bushel fixed by Umpire Weeks, and resolved to strike next Monday for three cents per bushel. The operators say they will close down the mines rather than pay the advance demanded. Four thousand men are affected.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

March 1st.—Albany, N. Y., was visited by a destructive fire which consumed railway and manufacturing property valued at about $225,000. Several acres of ground were burned over.

Loss by fire at Kane, Ill., $10,000. Mo. Malley,

Iowa, $8,000.

A large house at Cosenza, the Capital of the province of the same name, was wrecked to-day by the falling of a floor. Sixty persons were in the building at the time of the disaster, and all were injured more or less severely. Twenty are not expected to recover.

March 3d.—Loss by fire at Pittsburg, Pa., $18,000. New York City, $20,000. Near Bloomington, Ill., $2,500. Davenport, Iowa, $3,000.

A disastrous explosion occurred yesterday in the Usworth colliery, in Sunderland, Eng. Forty-seven persons were killed. Thirty-six dead bodies had been recovered at last accounts, the list including two men who were asphyxiated while engaged in the work of rescue.

An explosion in the Government powder manufactury at Granada, Spain, killed two and injured ten persons.

March. 4.—The St. Paul Plow Works were burned, entailing a loss of $65,000.

An eight-inch oil-pipe which passes through the farm of Abraham Kreider, near Wrightsville, Pa., burst last night and the oil was set on fire in some mysterious manner. The burning oil some mysterious manner. The burning oil overflowed entire fields, and at places was two and three feet deep. It menaced several farmhouses and barns, and the farmers turned out in a body and with picks and shovels threw up high embankments to prevent it from burning down their property. The fire raged all day down their property. The fire raged all day until this evening, when the oil was shut off. Many hundreds of barrels were consumed.

The Admiral notified the rebel chiefs that they must pay for the losses of Engglish residents. A German Judge will shortly adjudicate upon the claims. During the palaver hostile natives repeatedly plundered English and German factories.

PAUL.

One reason why Paul has so shaped the thought and life of the the Church is found in the fact that he was a scholar and a linguist. His vocabulary was enriched with the knowledge of many tongues. He was a dealer in words, as all public speakers and writers are. He weighed his expressions as an ancient money-changer did his coin. He selected his shaft from a full quiver, like an adroit archer. He shot to kill. A great part of the intellectual pleasure derived from a perusal of Paul's writings comes from the power and accuracy of his language. His words are picked words. Like soldiers selected to carry a point that must be captured, they are full of vigor and power,—full of an irresistible energy. They smite like cannon-balls; they come down upon the conscience like a ponderous battle-axe on a helmet; they are aimed with the unerring precision of a rifle-bullet. It is impossible for guilt to read the Pauline Epistles, and not shrink and cry out. He uses single words as no other writer that we have ever read. The study of Paul's vocabulary is the study of theology. You sink with his phrases to the depths of human depravity; you rise as with wings that lift you with a majesty of motion to the air where the glorified of God alone can soar.

CHRIST'S COMMANDMENTS.

"He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me. If a man love me he will keep my words."

These are the words of Jesus Christ, and by them we may learn at least three important facts; viz: who are in possession of his commandments, what they are, and the result of keeping them. In evidence of these, we may cite you to the history of man, as far back as we have any account of him, and until the time when the above language was uttered; and in fact, until the present time; and we learn that it was and is necessary, that all men have and keep his commandments, and have faith in God and his son Jesus Christ, and repent of their sins, and be baptized for a remission of them, and receive the Spirit or Holy Ghost; which is a part of his commandments; and in proof of this we cite you to the record of the gospel (Inspired Translation) as taught by Adam, Enoch and all the prophets and apostles since the world began, and even Jesus Christ himself, for, he says, "Ye believe in God, believe also in me; for I have not spoken of myself, but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak; and as the Father hath sent me, so send I you."

We shall not enumerate all the commandments given by him, nor the persons to whom given, or the result of keeping We apprehend that all those men that had them taught them to all who came under the sound of their voices; and here let me say, that it made no difference whether men received Christ's words or commandments from his own mouth, or by the mouths of his servants; in speaking to his disciples he says, he that receiveth (or heareth) you, receiveth me. That it was equivalent to receiving the commandments from Jesus Christ, through his servants is evident; and that it was necessary that men should receive them by that means is also evident; and if we find it was necessary in the past, we ask, why not now?

We wish now to examine some of the revelations or commandments of these latter days, purporting to be from the same commander, as of former days, and see whether there is any likeness or harmony in them; and whether there is any need of having and keeping them. In Book of Doctrine and Covenants, first section, we are given to understand that the voice of the same personage that gave commandments in former days, began a series of commandments, and whether we believe or disbelieve them, it will make no difference as to the validity or final results; for the same reasons are assigned that were in former days:

"Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of him who dwells on high, and whose eyes are upon all men; yea, verily I say, hearken ye people from afar, and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together; for verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape, and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated; and the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow; for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the house-tops, and their secret acts shall be revealed; and the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples whom I have chosen in these last days, and they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them. Behold, this is mine authority, and the authority of my servants, and my preface unto the book of my commandments, which I have given them to publish unto you, O inhabitants of the earth: wherefore fear and tremble, O ve people, for what I the Lord have decreed. in them shall be fulfilled. And verily, I say unto you, that they who go forth, bearing these tidings unto the inhabitants of the earth, to them is power given to seal, both on earth and in heaven, the unbelieving and rebellious; yea, verily, to seal them up unto the day when the wrath of God shall be poured out upon the wicked without measure; unto the day when the Lord shall come to recompense unto every man according to his work, and measure to every man according to the measure which he hath measured to his fellow-man.

"Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth, that all that will hear may hear: prepare ye, prepare ye for that which is to come, for the Lord is nigh; and the anger of the Lord is kindled, and his sword is bathed in heaven, and it shall fall upon the inhabitants of the earth; and the arm of the Lord shall be revealed; and the day cometh that they who will not hear the voice of the Lord, neither the voice of his servants, neither give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, shall be cut off from among the people; for they have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant; they seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own god, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol, which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon, even Babylon the great which shall fall.

"Wherefore I the Lord, knowing the calamity which shall come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets; the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow-man, neither trust in the arm of flesh, but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; that faith also might increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fullness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

"Behold, I am God, and have spoken it; these commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding; and inasmuch as they erred it might be made known; and inasmuch as they sought wisdom they might be instructed; and inasmuch as they sinned they might be chastened, that they might repent; and inasmuch as they were humble, they might be made strong, and blessed from on high, and receive knowledge from time to time; and after having received the record of the Nephites, yea, even my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., might have power to translate, through the mercy of God, by the power of God, the Book of Mormon; and also those to whom these commandments were given might have power to lay the foundation of this church, and to bring it forth out of obscurity, and out of darkness, the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth, with which I the Lord am well pleased, speaking to the church collectively and not individually; for I the Lord can not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance; nevertheless, he that repents and does the commandments of the Lord shall be forgiven; and he that repents not, from him shall be taken even the light which he has received, for my Spirit shall not always strive with man, saith the Lord of Hosts.

"And again, verily I say unto you, O inhabitants of the earth, I the Lord am willing to make things known unto all flesh, for I am no respecter of persons, and willeth that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh, the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion; and also the Lord shall have power over his Saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world.

"Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled.

"What I the Lord have spoken I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice, or by the voice of my servants, it is the same; for behold, and lo, the Lord is God, and his Spirit beareth record, and the record is true, and the truth abideth forever and ever. Amen."

I have quoted the whole section in order to show more fully the import of it; and also, the harmony existing between it, and revelations of former days; and if there are any other laws or commandments contained in the book, we believe they are just as valid and binding, as those we have already referred to; whether they are commandments to gather to Zion and build a temple, the law of tithing, or baptism for the dead, at the proper time; for we believe that all these commandments were given for the benefit of mankind, and should be kept by them; for we are assured that all laws and commandments, are of a spiritual, and not of a temporal nature.

Therefore let us carefully consider them, and obey the injunction: "Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled," remembering that it is the whole duty of man to fear God and keep his commandments.

VALENTINE WHITE.

YE ASK AND RECEIVE NOT BECAUSE YE ASK AMISS.

DEAR HERALD:-Being at a sacrament meeting a few Sundays back, we were privileged with hearing, through the gifts, the word of the Lord, admonitory and consolatory to the Saints assembled. We were struck with the reasonable request, and the promised blessings to be obtained through obedience to that request. The request was faithfulness and diligence in keeping the commandments of God. The result He would greatly bless in this life, as well as in the life to come. The exact language of all the communication we can not recall at present. The language and its delivery by the Spirit, portrayed a loving Father addressing his children, and showing his great willingness to bless them, and yet it was upon conditions.

It is stated by our skeptical friends, that our God is either hard to please or tyranically disposed, or unwilling to answer the professed children, for they have to ask him so often for a favor and then not get it, thus contradicting the scripture that says that God is more willing to give good gifts to his children than an earthly parent is to give gifts to his children; and say they, where is the earthly parent that would let his child importune so often for that which he is able to give? To which we would reply, where is the earthly parent, of good judgment, who would give a wilful, disobedient child, his precious gifts, while he remains so disposed to disobey his father's commands? Where is the wise parent who would give a spendthrift son -disposed to gamble, and of intemperate habits—money whenever he asked for it?
There have been exceptional cases, of

There have been exceptional cases, of which we have read, of parents doing this, but their folly was made manifest in their being brought to bankruptcy, and entailing misery and ruin upon themselves and families by so doing. A kind parent will not give his child "a stone when he asks for bread," nor a serpent when he asks for a fish; neither will the wise parent give edge-tools to his child, though he asks for them, when he does not know the use of them, and if granted would prove his destruction. If man shows wisdom in withholding things from his child, although he asks for them, and pleads very hard sometimes, shall God be counted less wise or kind to his children in refusing some things when asked for? "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss," is the sacred word. A child asking for edge-tools asks amiss, and if the petition was granted, he would cut himself and blood would flow, thus endangering his natural life; so also with the spiritual child, if his prayer for edge-tools was answered, he would cut himself and endanger his spirit life, and consequently a kind, loving, wise parent refuses the request because his child asks amiss.

If there were no conditions to govern a natural family, how long would it hang together as such? Instead of order and peace, anarchy and confusion would prevail, every one seeking his own way; contentions and divisions would be rampant, and dissolution the consequence, for "a house divided against itself can not stand." was the utterance of divine wisdom. On the other hand, if there were conditions to be observed, and the parents were lax in enforcing them, paying no heed to the breaking of them, the condition of that family would be the same. What is true of families, is also true of nations, or governments. No government could hang together-whether in heaven, earth or hell-without unity; no unity could obtain without law, and that law must be operative, not a dead letter.

If to receive the immunities, blessings, and privileges of an earthly government, we must be law-abiding citizens, and obey to the letter the conditions upon which the reception of those blessings is based; how can we expect to receive the immunities, privileges, and blessings of God's kingdom, unless we have first been adopted into citizenship, and then obey, to the letter, the laws governing the citizens of that government? Although heaven's king has granted unto us the privilege of asking and receiving, seeking and finding, &c., yet the condition of receiving is, that we ask not amiss.

Now, if we are in rebillion against the laws of God, though we should ask ever so persistently, we while in that state are asking amiss, and can not receive; faithfulness in obedience is required. Another condition is that we believe we shall receive what we ask for. "Therefore, I say unto you, Whatsoever things ve desire, when ye pray, believe that ye shall receive, and ye shall have whatsoever ye ask."—Mark 11:26:

It is plain from this language, to receive whatsoever we desire we must have faith that we shall receive it. It is also plain to the thinking mind that "whatsoever we desire," must be holy and proper in the sight of God that we should have, and would be for our best good. How are we to know what in all cases shall be for our best good? The Comforter is to teach all things; if so, what to pray for, is among the things to be taught us. He will also make "intercession for us."

But to secure the aid of this teacher, a holy life is requisite, for it is recorded that he dwelleth not in "unholy temples." A holy life, and consequent companionship of the Holy Spirit, is obtained through faithfulness in obedience to the commands of God; and this brings us to where we first started, that the revelation given was based upon the conditions of faithfulness and diligence in keeping the commands of God, and was consistent and reasonable.

From the foregoing remarks we are led to conclude, that the exaction of obedience to our Heavenly Father's commands is not tyranny, but a law established for our best good here, and our eternal welfare hereafter; and if the governments of men can not be charged with tyranny in the exaction of obedience of their citizens to wholesome laws, how then can Heaven's King be charged, consistently, with being tyranical in requiring the obedience of his children, and in refusing to bless, in a limited or extended degree, the disobedience of those who profess to hold such relationship with him. TITHING, GATHERING & REVENGE. "REVENGE."

In Herald issue for January 17th, Elder Blair has an article under the above caption, intended as a reply to some points of criticism previously raised by me, relative to the organization of an army or "armies of Israel" in the church, and the command to them to "avenge God on his enemies to the third and fourth generation;" also, the organization of a "camp," numbering between two hundred and three hundred men, armed and equipped for war, led up to Missouri by Joseph Smith, for the ostensible purpose to "deliver Zion"—in the summer of 1834, but which "Camp" failed to "deliver" as proposed, being disbanded in Clay county, Missouri, in the autumn of the same year.

Now, of this "camp" and "armies of Israel," "avenging God on his enemies to the third and fouth generation," Elder Blair would have us believe, that all this is according to the "law of the celestial kingdom," (which we as a church believe to be the highest and holiest law); and that this "camp" of armed men going up to Missouri to recover the lands previously purchased by the church and from which they had previously been driven, was a sort of holy charade, by experience in which the Saints would fully comprehend the problem of "Zion" and gathering thereto, and by which they would also obtain an experience of "camp life" and the use of fire arms as soldiers. But Elder Blair assures us that no one was to be hurt, nobody killed, nothing like revenge at all; and that that idea only obtains when you take the revelations as they read, that is, when you put a "literal interpretation" upon them; but when like Elder Blair, you place a "spiritual," a "figurative" interpretation, that is, spiritualize them to suit your taste, "then the idea of revenge and retaliation of the Saints, vanishes like the baseless fabric of a vision, a "midsummer night dream" I suppose. To say the least, this is highly encouraging, so instructive, so Christ-like? It is so comforting to know that "revenge" don't mean revenge—that "armies of Israel" don't mean armies of drilled men to fight, at all—that "young men, and middle aged warriors," don't mean fight, don't mean killing other warriors opposed to them, and that the "holding of the armies of Israel guiltless in taking possession of their own lands," don't mean going into Missouri and taking the lands referred to in the revelations; no, not that at all, but simply something "concerning your families; if men will smite you or your families," &c., that is, if anybody comes to your homes and abuses your families, or tries to rob you, or kill you, then in that case they are to be scared away, I suppose, or hurt. Such explanation makes one feel like the "puzzled Dutchman," i.e. "very glad to know that into, don't mean into, put shust clost py, shust near enough to be comfortable.'

The right of self defense, of one's life, or life of a member of the family, is both inherent and inalienable, given of God to all people, and recognized by all civilized nations, as well as barbarous, as a princi-ple of justice, acknowledged by the na-tions. This had been fully established thousands of years prior to any revelation through Joseph Smith, and nobody of ordinary sense would need to wait for a revelation upon this point, provided their life was in danger, and they desired to exercise their rights as citizens of the Government. But, does this right in the citizen to defend his life, extend to and justify a church in organizing a body of armed men to redress their wrongs against an armed mob? Does it justify the leader of a church in sending for men from the different branches of the church, who were not residents among the mob, nor of the state where the difficulties occurred, as was done in the organization of that "camp of Israel?" Does it justify said leader, in raising an army of men even in the state where the difficulty occurred, and proceeding under the claim of defense to punish an abusive mob? Does the right of the citizen to defend his life, extend to a right of executing justice by his own hand? If so, then in that case we should not need either court or officers of the law; for every church would have the same right? to raise "armies" and use them to redress themselves of supposed wrongs, as well as the Latter Day Saints; so also would the Masons, and Odd Fellows, and everybody else—and the armies of the Socialists now drilling at Chicago and elsewhere, would be in harmony—as they claim that their "rights" are trampled upon-and their bread stolen from them—and all they profess to ask is their "rights," and they propose to fight for them.

If the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints had a right? to send up armed men to quiet and quell a mob by force in Missouri, and to organize armies for their defense, why has not every corporation in the Union of States, the same right? And what use of appealing to law, and its authorities, provided this right? be vested in the corporation? That all citizens have the right of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, is quite clear and agreed to; but no citizen, not one of them, can legally exercise those rights in opposition to the law of the land, by which all are governed, and before which all are equal. The church taught in harmony with this in 1831, (Doctrine and Covenants sec. 58, par. 5), but, here in 1834, Doctrine and Covenants sec. 100, pars. 4, 5; sec. 102, par. 8, we find the authority given to "Baurak Ale and Baneeny, (Joseph Smith and Sydney Rigdon) to gather up the strength of the church, and go in and take possession of their lands, and avenge God on his enemies to the third and fourth generation. (And its the last will and testament which is of force in law). The expression their lands" means the lands in Jackson county, Missouri, and the counties adjoining, which they had purchased and from which they had been driven. taking the power into their own hands, of executing judgment and justice, is the very opposite of "being subject to the powers that be," and is in opposition to the laws of this country. Nor was this authority to execute judgment reserved to the church for that day only, but for the future, as may be seen by the provisions in the revelation of June 22, 1834, (and the last one upon this point); viz., "And let all my people who dwell in the regions round about, be very faithful, and prayerful, and humble before me, and reveal not the things which I have revealed unto them, until it is wisdom in me that they should be revealed." (Though Peter said-"Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." -2 Peter 1: 20, 21). "Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works; but carefully gather together, as much in one region as can be consistently with the feelings of the people; and behold, I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety, while you are saying unto the people, execute judgment and justice for us according to law, and redress us of our wrongs. Now, behold, I say unto you, my friends, in this way you may find favor in the eyes of the people." I ask here, why would they thus find favor, &c., with the people? Simply because that such procedure would be in harmony with the laws of the land, and the only righteous way, in my judgment,—for them or anybody else to obtain proper redress; but, does the revelation stop there? No, indeed it does not; but states that such a pacific course shall be pursued, "until the army of Israel becomes very great; and I will soften the hearts of the people, as I did the heart of Pharaoh, from time to time (as he did for Moses) until my servant Baurak Ale, and Baneemy whom I have appointed, shall have time to gather up the strength of my house, and to have sent wise men, to fulfill that which I have commanded concerning the purchasing of all the lands in Jackson county, that can be purchased and in the adjoining counties round about, &c. And after the lands are purchased, I will hold the armies of Israel guiltless in taking possession of their own lands, &c., and of throwing down the towers of mine enemies, that may be upon them, and scattering their watchmen, and avenging me of mine enemies, unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me."-Doctrine and Cavenants, sec. 102, pars. 7, 8. This revelation came while the receiver was at the head of the "camp," on Fishing river, Mo., June 22d, 1834; and upon which day the said "Camp" had been visited by the sheriff of Clay county, Cornelius Gillium. The reader will notice, that the gathering into these regions, and the "favor and grace" to be obtained by the church from the citizens, was all in the future from that day; (for the "Camp" had failed to "deliver Zion)." That this "favor and grace," and the "softening of the hearts of the people," was to continue "until the army of Israel became very great," and Baurak Ale and Baneemy had time to gather up the strength of this army-and then, when they got strong enough to do it, are to go in and "throw down the towers of mine enemies," &c.

Let the reader bear in mind, that all the land which the church owned in that day has been sold for taxes, or deeded in some other way. The present owners of the land are innocent purchasers, and have a legal right to stay there and possess it. This revelation proposes to "throw down their towers," buildings which have been erected upon these lands, and "scattering their watchmen," driving away these innocent purchasers, and "avenge God on his enemies to the third and fourth generation." This revelation contemplates that the lands which have been purchased by the church, are possessed by others than themselves, and will be in their possession until the "army of Israel" becomes great enough and strong enough to go in there and drive them out, and take these lands by force, this is clearly seen in the statement, "I will hold the armies of Israel guiltless!" Bro. Blair may whitewash this as much as he chooses, but will never make it white nor palatable. He thinks the entire case is settled when he quotes the last clause of 3d par., sec. 102: "for behold I do not require at their hands to fight the battles of Zion; for as I said in a former commandment, even so will I fulfill, I will fight your battles." I ask how? To which the answer is fully made in sec. 100, par. 3, latter part, (a "former commandment"), "Behold, I say unto you, the redemption of Zion must needs come by power; therefore, I will raise up unto my people a man, who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel." "Therefore, let not your hearts faint, for I say not unto you as I said unto your fathers, [meaning ancient Israel], mine angel shall go up before you, but not my presence; but I say unto you, mine angels shall go before you, and also my presence." By comparing these sections with others, the reader will readily see that Joseph Smith, as affirmed by Elder Blair, was "like unto Moses;" and as Moses did with the Gentile nations who stood in the way of Israel in his day, so also did Joseph expect to do with Gentile nations in his; that is the logic of the position, and would necessarily apply to the incumbent of "Moses' seat," the President of the Church, whoever that might be, at the time of execution, when the "army of Israel becomes very great." Now it seems to me that as Moses is made the type or parallel case, that to examine his record would enable us to comprehend this latter one, as this one is to be like the former, and to aid us in the investigation, I quote from Numbers 31:2,3: "Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites, &c. And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and avenge the Lord of Midian." They went up to battle, and according to the history was successful; after which they were commanded (17 and 18 verses) to dispose of their captives thus: "Now, therefore, kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with him. But all the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves. The reader will notice that in thus killing Midian, vengeance was administered to the third generation, possibly the fourth, the very identical thing taught in sections 100 and 102, and 95, of the Doctrine and Covenants, late edition.

To show the reader that I am not mistaken in regard to the spirit of revenge that moved the prophet and the people, like Israel of old, and that they understood it as stated, I need but quote (though hardly necessary) the covenant made and entered into by Joseph Smith, with the church at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1836, nearly two years after the revelation was received on Fishing River, and recorded in "History of Joseph Smith," Mill. Star, Vol. 15, page 728; to wit, "I want to enter into the following covenant, that if any more of our brethren are slain or driven from their lands in Missouri, by the mob, we will give ourselves no rest, until we are avenged of our enemies to the uttermost. This covenant was sealed unanimously, with a hosanna and an Amen."

This took place in the Temple, and during the time of dedication, which occupied several days and nights; and is in perfect harmony with the doctrine, "avenge God on his enemies," &c., as contained in the revelations cited above; nor is this all, for on page 727, same history, we find the following: "The brethren began to prophesy upon each other's heads, and cursings upon the enemies of Christ, who inhabit Jackson county, Missouri, "which is in harmony with this principle, and whomsoever ye curse, I will curse," as seen in sec. 100, par. 5, of the Doc. and Cov.; and we are asked to accept these revelations to-day as a rule and guide to our faith, "essential to salvation," as "cardinal points of the gospel;" and that all these various performances on the part of the "choice seer," were but part and parcel of the celestial? order. If so, why do we condemn the practice of revenge in those Mormons in Utah, who were present when these revelations were given, and were taught in person by the "choice seer" relative to this doctrine?

Reader, think of it. Think of Christ organizing an army to avenge God on poor humanity!

Elder Blair quotes the 5th, 6th, and 7th paragraphs of section 95, Doc. and Cov., which the reader is invited to read carefully, especially Elder Blair's comment, to-wit, "By this we learn that it is not until after the fourth assault that the Saints can be justified in rewardnig the violence of their enemy according to his works." (See 5th par.). Just what he would have us understand or believe is not clearly stated, as the term "according to his works" is very indefinite indeed, as a person might be slandered, lied about by another, once, twice, thrice, and "four times." A person might commit petty larceny upon another "four times;" in fact, there are so many ways by which one may trespass against another, and for which they would be liable to the law of the land, being guilty of a misdemeanor, but, according to Elder Blair, if it was the "fourth assault" the "Saints" would be justified in rewarding their enemy "according to his works," now will he please tell us why that "Saints" are possessed of rights in this regard not delegated to other citizens? Why has a "Saint" any more right to mete out justice to an offender than a "sinner" has? And if they have that right, please tell us when and where they obtained it? Except to defend one's life as noticed first above, no individual member of this Republic has that right, it being reserved to the law of the land and its majesty to protect the citizen by punishing the guilty; hence the error of our brother's position; for, should he or any one else undertake to "reward the violence of their enemy," they will find to their sorrow, that they have made a mistake, just as the church did in the past.

Par. 6: "Behold, this is the law I gave unto my servant, Nephi; and thy father, Joseph and Jacob, and Isaac, and Abraham, and all mine ancient prophets and apostles. And if any nation, tongue, or people should proclaim war against them, they should first lift up a standard of peace unto that people, nation, or tongue; and if that people did not accept the offering of peace, neither the second nor the third time, they should bring these testimonies before the Lord; then I, the Lord, would give unto them a commandment, and justify them in going out to battle against that nation, tongue, or people, and I the Lord would fight their battles, and their children's children's until they had avenged themselves on all their enemies, to the third and fourth generation; behold, this is an ensample unto all people, saith the Lord, your God, for justification before me."

This law and command is offered by Elder Blair as justification for the revelations complained of, and the doctrine of revenge contained in them. Now, reader, what does it do? What is the effect if we accept this as proposed by Elder Blair? It was to the church, accepted by them, and upon it they acted. This paragraph authorized the church under the conditions named to "go out to battle against that nation, tongue, or people," who oppose them in their rights. According to this, the church had a right to go out to battle against the people of Missouri; and in defense of that conduct it has been quoted. Now reader, the moment you tolerate this, that very moment you tolerate a government, a political power, in the church, which is independent of the Republic, claiming the right to go to war to make peace, a government, controlled by the priesthood, authorized to make her armies very great," in fact, the church is only to labor for "favor and grace in the eyes of the people" of the state of Missouri, "until the army of Israel becomes very great, after which it is to be supposed that they are able to take care of themselves, and go into "Jackson and adjoining counties," and take possession of "their own lands," already noticed; and this "army" is to become so great, "that her banners may be terrible unto all nations; that the kingdoms of this world may be constrained to acknowledge that the kingdom of Zion is in very deed the kingdom of our God and his Christ; therefore, let us become subject unto her laws." Doc. and Cov. sec. 102, par. 9. This Zion, is in Jackson and adjoining counties. This "army" as noticed is finally to go in and take possession and by and by its banner is to become so terrible to all the nations, that they will propose to give up, and be subject to this Zion, her laws, &c. I suppose this is why that old Mormons used to talk about taking charge of the assets of this Government of the United States, and why Sidney Rigdon talked of "pulling little Vick's nose," meaning Victoria Virginia, the good Queen of England. Well, if all these kingdoms are to be subjected by this. church, in the manner as declared in the revelations cited, then Rigdon's idea would not be wide the mark. The folly of such a policy is seen in the history of the past.

That Joseph and Moses taught the doctrine of revenge is clearly proven; that such doctrine and practice were tolerated under the carnal law is evident; but that it forms no part of the gospel of Christ Jesus, may be seen from the following scriptures. "Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; that you may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so? Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." Matt. 5:43-48. See also Luke 6: 27-36. Please read. Connect with the above Paul's teaching, Rom. 12:19-21. "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." 14 verse. "Bless them which persecute you; bless and curse not." Reader will please compare these teachings with those quoted in Doc. and Cov., especially sections 102, 5-8; 100, pars. 3-5. "Whomsoever ye curse, I will curse; and ye shall avenge me of mine enemies" &c., and sec. 95, par. 6, where it is made to appear that the Lord will fight the battles for the children, &c., "until they had avenged themselves on all their enemies, to the third and fourth generations, which last principle with others, Elder Blair, undertakes to say, "has never been excelled in any age or nation." That practice obtained under the law of an "eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." Under which law as Paul said, "there shall no flesh be justified in his sight." Rom. 3: 20. Jesus taught, "My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence," Jno. 18: 36. Paul taught: "Being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it; being defamed, we entreat."—I Cor. 4: 12, 13.

With these teachings the reader is invited to compare the reputed act of the City Council of Nauvoo, declaring the Nauvoo Expositor (an anti-Mormon newspaper), a "nuisance," and issuing an order to destroy the same, said "order" being signed by Joseph Smith, Mayor of Nauvoo, and then the execution of that order by destroying type, press, &c., and fixtures of the office; all of which occurred under Joseph Smith's endorsement, and not very long before his death. Would Elder Blair have us believe that this practice, like the others referred to, pertains to the "celestial law?" And yet it is in accord with the principle laid down in the revelations cited. The men who published this Expositor were enemies to Toseph Smith and the church, whether right or wrong. Their publications assailed their faith, and particularly their practices in the Church, by which procedure they had come against the church, and the church having been commanded to "curse" "their enemies" who "come against them" in the land of Missouri, and to avenge God of his ene-Certainly they would have the same right, and be under the same obligations in the land of Illinois, "for in God there is no variableness nor shadow of turning," and the item of law is, "and inasmuch as mine enemies come against you to drive you from my goodly land, which I have consecrated to be the land of Zion: &c., ye shall curse them; and whomsoever ye curse, I will curse; and ye shall avenge me of mine enemies, &c."—Sec. 100, par. 5, Doc. and Cov.

Some may suppose that such commands would never have been given, and that the church never commanded of God to raise armies and practice revenge had it not been for the ugly and mean conduct of the mob in Missouri; this is also a folly, and should be avoided, as it reduces God to man's level, and illustrates still more thoroughly that this revenge business was spite work in the highest degree, as the reader will see at once, that if this idea was correct, then it would follow that had those Missourians been good to the Lord, (the Church of Latter Day Saints), he would have been good to them in return; but as they were not, but acted badly toward him, (the church) he in turn acted badly, or severely with them, that is, "tit for tat." One will say, "that was right!" "Right"—in what sense? Only in the sense of "an eye for an eye," a tooth for a tooth," being "like unto Moses," but not like unto Christ, for he taught the very opposite as seen above, as also when dying on the cross he said-"Father forgive them; for they know not what they do."-Luke 23:34. And the blessed Stephen when being stoned to death, "kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." -Acts 7:60.

I prefer taking these as examples of the "celestial order," and Elder Blair can take the others if he choose. This is not a question of what we might do, or, of what others might do, under certain circumstances, but it is a question of principle, a question of right as pertaining to Christ Jesus our Lord, and whether it is according to his words and acts. Whatever anguish of spirit it may cost, we ought to be willing to know the truth; for the truth as Jesus taught it, will make us free. I find in Jesus, no such doctrines of revenge, or of cursing one's enemies as taught in the Doctrine and Covenants, and therefore, as I never have accepted or believed in such practice, I most respectfully but firmly decline to accept them now; however, the issue being upon us now, and a decision required by all, it becomes the bounden duty of every member of the church to decide what they accept as the gospel of Christ, and of every officer, what they will teach as "the faith once delivered unto the Saints;" for as we sow, so shall we reap, as we build, so shall we inhabit. That there be no misunderstanding nor occasion for any among the brethren as to what the faith is, what essential to membership in the church, it does seem that in accordance with justice and honor, the church ought to so state; and in such clear and definite terms that all who read may understand, that divisions and contentions upon points of doctrine should cease; for it ought to appear to all that, "a house divided against itself can not stand." In 1879, the church declared that belief in the abstract doctrines and revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants was not essential. To-day we are taught the very opposite. Not two years ago the Twelve and Bishopric pointedly declared the revelation on Tithing, sec. 106, not binding upon the church; to-day we are told that it is. Now I say, if the church believe in tithing as taught in that revelation, and hold it essential to membership, &c., let them so declare, and add the same to the Epitome of Faith and Doctrine; for, that revelation does say in unmistakable language, that they who are not tithed according to that law, "shall not be found worthy to abide among you;"

and do not the advocates of this law place it side by side with the ordinance of baptism? And by that make one as essential to salvation as the other? Jesus taught, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" but the logic of our present teachers is against that; for they say, except you are tithed of "all your surplus property," and after that "one tenth of all your interest annually,"—that you will be damned. I wonder that Jesus did not think of this when commissioning the apostles to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature;" and inasmuch as he omitted this "law of tithing" in the gospel which he sent to "every creature," what right have we to add it now?

The same rule must apply to "gathering into regions round about," the creation of armies "very great" for the consummation of the scheme, and avenging God on his enemies, &c. But if the majority of the church believe differently, holding these things essential to salvation, then I repeat, let them so declare so plainly and explicitly, that all who read may know what the church holds essential to life and peace, accepting and retaining none into membership who do not so believe.

I certainly do not blame any one for differing with me, I wish to cultivate the largest liberality, but I do blame every one who says "this is my faith," or "that is my faith," when I have never accepted any such dogma. If true of one, it is equally true of all in the church; hence the necessity of settlement, decisive and clear. I stated at the outset, some months since, "let the bolt fall where it may." I meant just what I said, not boastingly, nor in the spirit of bravado, God forbid; but because I know it's best to be "cold or hot," honest with one's self, with God and the world. So I repeat, let the decision be made, and in this I believe that I but voice the sentiment of many others, who certainly have the moral right to ask this and expect it to be answered. Because the church in 1835, adopted the Doctrine and Covenants as a "rule of faith and practice," Elder Blair thinks "it is safer to trust their judgment and experience touching those revelations, &c., than it is to entertain the doubts and fears and unbelief of one or many who oppose them," which theory would make their act infallibly correct. So when an elder stands up to preach, he is obligated by this to declare when speaking of the creation, that God created all things by faith, and that it is an attribute of the Deity, whether he believes it or not; for this is clearly taught in pars. 15, 16, sec. 1, Lectures on Faith. The history referred to by Elder Blair informs us that the committee were to arrange the "items of faith," and from the best information and I believe it's generally understood and admitted, Sidney Rigdon wrote these "Lectures on Faith." I had supposed that when the angel committed the record containing the fulness of the gospel, with the New Testament, that had the church but known it, the "items of faith" had already been arranged sufficiently to save the entire race; and that whatsoever is "more or less, cometh of evil, and the gates of hell stand wide open to receive such."-Book of Nephi 5:9. I am informed by David Whitmer in a recent interview, that these very revelations were not taught as law to the church in the first few years of its existence, neither was it considered essential to so regard them, as the Bible and Book of Mormon were held and taught as the only law of God to the church; and all that was necessary for man. And that the idea of arranging the "items of faith" and incorporating the same together with Joseph's revelations as a "rule of faith and practice," was never talked, nor heard of to his knowledge, until quite a while, perhaps some years, after Sidney Rigdon came into the church, December 30th, to whom he charged the origin of it; hence his writing the "Lectures on Faith." Father Whitmer stated that the "Lectures" and "revelations" contain many good things in his opinion, but that he opposed accepting them as a rule of faith in 1835, believing it wholly unnecessary, and a mistake; and that his experience only confirmed him in that belief. It is quite evident that these "Lectures on Faith" and "revelations" did not become law to the body until August, 1835, when by their vote they adopted them. It is equally evident, that the law to the body prior to that date, was the gospel as revealed in New Testament and Book of Mormon; hence as stated by me in a former article, the church have the right to endorse and continue these revelations as a rule of faith, &c.; and also the right to eliminate every one of them from their faith, as these revelations are not, and were not the organic law upon which the church first builded, and did not become a law to the body, until five years and more after its birth. Having lived those five years without this last law, it might have, and I think better had, continued even unto this day; hence Elder Blair's talk about its being safer to accept some other ones judgment than your own, is but a mere quibble, and unworthy an answer as an argument. What has become of that church and those men who adopted the Doctrine and Covenants as a rule of faith? I need not answer the question, I need not answer,—the history is full of darkness and of sadness—let it pass. But one thing Elder Blair I think knows, just as well as all do conversant with the facts, that the Reorganization have never in fact adopted the revelations contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, as a rule to their faith, while nominal assent has been given, tacit assent, or actual practice of the doctrines taught in them have constantly been denied from 1852, down to 1885. That the attempt is now being made to fasten them upon us is certain, hence this controversy, and the necessity for every one to choose "whom ve will serve."

That I be not misunderstood upon the question of tithing, because I reject the law as revealed in section 106, I wish to say, that I do believe in helping God's work, by substantial aid to his servants. I believe in feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the widow and fatherless in their afflictions, helping the poor and needy, doing good to all people as I may be able, especially to the household of faith. But the vital difference between me and others upon this question is, they hold, or seem to, that a member of the church becomes a "steward over his own property" only by going to the Bishop with an inventory of all, and setting aside a certain sum as they may agree upon, whereupon the Bishop gives the member a "certificate stating said fact," which "certificate constituted the individual a steward over his own property." I hold in opposition to this, that every person is by nature steward over their own property, that right being both inherent and inalienable, and is given of God through the law of life to every person. That in coming into the church we do not forfeit that right, nor confer that power over us to the church to control our property; hence, I deny that the church has the right of stewardship over my property, and therefore she can not confer upon me, by her representative, the Bishop, the right of stewardship, as neither she nor he possess it, that right being mine solely and only, I may give her what I choose to; but she has no right to fix the amount. Upon the same principle, I deny the right to the church to take "all my surplus property," and after that "one-tenth of all my interest annualas provided in the law. Such practice I think can only be tolerable where all unite in a sort of "all things common" association, and where all, each and every member, give all they possess to the church. Then the church by its Bishop, can give each individual a certain sum for his stewardship, which he is to control, and of which the church could properly tithe him annually, as provided for in section 106.

As I don't expect to enter into any such "association," I don't expect to adopt the rule objected to. But I believe this is best, give as God has prospered you; give and hope for nothing back; control your own property, your own business, and that, too, without going to the Bishop, or anybody else, for a certificate to do so; remembering that "to whomsoever ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are," &c.

In conclusion, I call the attention of the reader to the all important and underlying cause which divides Elder Blair and me. The principle, or cause, the only authority for the reception of and dogmatising the abstract doctrines contained in the Doctrine and Covenants as a "rule of faith and practice." I refer to that item which Elder Blair has quoted and referred to as law, and upon which he bases his claims, arguments, &c., to-wit: "The church shall receive his [Joseph Smith's] words and commands, &c., the same as if from mine [God's] own mouth."—D. & C. 19:2. (See sec. 43: 1, 2). I have no objection to Elder Blair or any one else accepting this, nor if the church sustains Elder Blair's opinion, by which she becomes subject to that dogma of infallibility; but believing it a fatal error, I enter my protest now, as I do not expect ever to accept it. I believe in continued, or present revelation; but I believe with Paul, that "the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal;" and with Tesus, "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, [Holy Spirit], whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."-John 14:26. This guide is promised to all who obey the gospel, and as John expressed it, "But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him."—I John 2:27. I believe in having apostles and prophets in the church, &c., but that is a very different thing from attaching critical infallibility to the words of one of them, to the exclusion of the others, as provided in the sections referred to. I believe God will continue in the future, as in the great past, to communicate with man; but God's will, as given through Christ, the only means, the only way necessary to salvation, hence the rejection of all addenda in that sense.

"What is excellent As God lives, is permanent: Hearts are dust, hearts' loves remain, Heart's love will meet thee again.
Revere the Maker; fetch thine eye Up to his style, and manners of the sky. Not of adamant and gold, Built he heaven stark and cold; No, but a nest of bending reeds, Flowering grass, and scented weeds; Or like a traveler's fleeing tent, Or bow above the tempest bent; Built of tears and sacred flames, And virtue reaching to its aims; Built of furtherance and pursuing, Not of spent deeds, but of doing."

Emerson's Threnody.

If a person is permitted to enter heaven, I believe it will be, because heaven has first entered the individual. No one is worthy to dwell with God, until the virtues and attributes of God have thoroughly permeated that individual; the divine image must be reflected in fact. To reflect that image, as seen in the virtues of the faith once delivered unto the saints, exemplified in the life of Christ, we, people need the holy influence of God's Spirit, the "Guide" which was promised. By it, we can love our enemy—and pray for those who despitefully use and persecute. By it, we can take the spoiling of our goods with joy. By it, we can pray, "Father forgive them, they know not what they do." By it, we can subdue the evil tendencies of our own natures, and control our passions, that we be not overcome. By it, we can forgive one another. By it, we can love the race, as God would have us. By it, we can become pure in heart, and thus through God's process, be prepared to meet him in peace; and whether we be beaten with many or few stripes in the preparation, one thing appears evident, that we must be prepared—if we inherit. t be prepared
Yours for truth,
Z. H. GURLEY.

"OUR THEOLOGY."

REV. J. F. McDowell's Lecture at Saints' Church.

On Sunday evening, December 21st, 1884, Rev. Mr. McDowell gave in a lecture at Saint's Church, Omaha, Nebraska, the following clear outline of the theological views held by that people: That it reveals the science which treats of the attributes of God, his relations to us, the dispensations of his providence, his will with respect to our actions, and his purposes with respect to our ends; the immutability of the gospel, the unchangeableness of God, the grand harmony of the church and revelation as a necessity.

We will bring this subject under nine different headings. First our theology is theistical. It presents the doctrine of one God, personally and with form—if personally, necessarily with form. We teach that God is omnipresent by virtue of the various agencies spiritually employed about him. He is ominipresent by virtue of his divine edicts, by the presence of the Holy Spirit, and not omnipresent in person.

We must recognize the fact that God first revealed himself to man at the commencement of the world's history; he confirmed the revelation of himself in times subsequent to his first appearance to several men of his choice, so the world need not be dependent upon the testimony of one man, relating to the appearance of God, and the revelation of himself to humanity.

Our theology is dispensationally representative. The church your speaker represents does not claim to be a church or sect growing out of or descending from any religious Fathers, but to be in the fullest acceptation of the term a church of Jesus Christ. The Bible does not teach that God's church continually existed. There were times when it was in the world as an organization; there were times when it was not in the world as an organization. The times when it has been in existence were called dispensations.

It is prophetical, not only from the fact that the church was prophesied of, but that in it is found the very spirit of revelation from God, which was prophesied by John who saw the prophetic vision on the Isle of Patmos, an angel flying through the midst of heaven having the everlasting gospel to preach unto all the world. We claim that the church has come; hence our theology is prophetical in the sense that revelation is received by the church prophetical from God, governed by it, controlled by it, and all its workings are ordered by prophetic power.

It is apostolic from the fact that it is found to teach all the apostles taught.

Our theology is Christian not only from the fact that we present Christ to the world in all his beauty and attractiveness, in all his goodness and immaculate purity; not only in that we would love and magnify him, and hold him up to erring humanity and self esteem, and turn him about so as to show all sides of the life filled with radiant glory and eternal goodness; not only that we should present him as a leader and commander of the people in a moral sense of the word; but also that he be presented to the world as possessing the fullest power of saving grace and redeeming love, as shown forth in the endowments of God, as delivered to perishing humanity by the blessed Savior, Jesus Christ.

Our theology is spiritualistic. Why, says some one, I thought you talked against that last Sunday night. So we did, and we propose to keep it up. Our theology is spiritualistic. Not that spiritualism, however, that comes by table rapping, and table tipping; that manifests its cold and slimy form in darkness and blindness of sight. But spiritualistic power of the Holy Ghost sent by an infinite God upon an enlightened church given as the guide to all Christian people. That spiritualism that acknowledges God, confesses Christ, pleads for the Holy Spirit, and feels an immutable adoration for Him who is the maker of heaven and earth.

Our theology is universal, in that it recognizes the right of reward for all good works done. It is universal because it is sent into all the world, and because it represents a God of universal power, and teaches that Christ is a universal Savior. It sends nobody in its doctrine of rewards and punishments to eternal agony. It has no horrid picture of burning pits with flames of lurid glare, nor any fanciful picture of pleasure to present to any one; but upon the other hand it represents God as a loving Father, one of justice as well as love; one of mercy as well as anger.

God says that all men shall be rewarded according to their works. All mankind may not be good enough to enter into the immediate presence of God, while they may all not be bad enough to enter into the immediate presence of his Satanic Majesty. All may not be assigned one place in happiness nor one place in misery, but there must be a place for each one according as his works have been.

Suppose that a man has never done a single act of kindness aside from giving some thirsty soul a drink of water, and no other good can mark his whole life, that one act can not be by a God of justice. scorned nor passed by with contempt and eternal punishment be inflicted; but somewhere while the soul may be agonizing in pain, and while sorrow and regret have drawn clouds of darkness like a mantle about him, yet it must pass away some time; an infinite hand must brush away the clouds, and let one ray of light come and descend upon that soul, and if his reward is no more than to be led by an angel guide to the pearly gates, and he be permitted to obtain a glimpse of the wonderful glories within, and led away again, let that be his reward and pass it not by. No, Infinite Justice can not do that. Somewhere must be found a time and place for the bestowal of that reward. So surely as the language of Christ be true, that he shall in no wise lose the reward, so surely must that poor soul find his reward, and find it as a gift from God.

While we believe that all men will be saved in degrees of glory according as their good works shall merit, so do we believe that all sins shall be punished. But the punishment will sometime have an end, when the reward shall come.

Our theology is biblical because it embraces all Bible doctrine, and in its presentation of the Bible doctrine, it is not partial, but accepts of the whole.

Our theology is monogamic as regards the marital relationship, strongly and decidedly. A certain writer in Boston, Massachusetts, in writing a work entitled the History of Monogamy and Polygamy, says this: "If there be any truth in Bible statement it teaches that monogamy originated with the Pagan priests of Rome who were dissolute beyond description."

I deny that. I can take the gentleman farther back in the world's history than either Pagan Greece or Rome. I can take him back to a time spoken of in this good old Bible, when there was a garden called the Garden of Eden and there in that amidst its blooming flowers and its creeping vines, its shadows and its lights, its mirrored lakes and beautiful fountains, we find a man, God's image, and beside that man we find a woman, one woman, his wife, given to him of God. There we find the marital relationship of the sexes as coming from the hand of Deity, upon which was pronounced the divinest benediction, with the lesson taught that any divergence from it would prove prejudicial to the best interests of society, and that monogamy was God's plan and not polygamy.

Our theology in its doctrine of revelation presents to the world not only one but three books, made among different nationalities, at different times, and of diverse imaginations. These books are alike as to the Father, Word and Spirit, which are one. In matters of doctrine there is not one conflicting precept, no antagonizing theory, but one in doctrine, principle, precept, theory, a grand united testimony of God, the church, Christ, the polity and power of the church, its honor, glory and mission.

Three books of united expression of religious thought, and in the history of revelations of all ages. Our theology dawned upon a world spiritually asleep. It arose as a new sun in the horizon of religious thought; it came as the rumblings of a mighty ocean; it burst upon the world as a volcanic eruption; and it has been pouring forth its blessings, and sending forth its light, and glory, and shining beauty for fifty-four years, and it stands as a mighty tower supported by the everlasting hands of an infinite Master, and its mission is to bless, not to curse; to live, not to die; to lift up, not to debase; to purify, not to contaminate; to sanctify, not to persecute.

GENERAL CONFERENCE COMMITTEE

We, your committee selected to ascertain and formulate the best methods of providing for those who may attend the Annual Conference to convene in Independence, Mo., on April 6th, 1885, beg leave to report as follows:

1st. That all delegates, members or visitors, who may attend the conference, shall pay two dollars per week for board, except as hereinafter provided.

and. That the homes of the Saints here who design keeping one or more delegates, members or visitors, shall be deemed boarding houses, for the purposes herein contemplated; and shall as soon as practicable, notify the clerks of said committee, as to the number of delegates, members or visitors they can accommodate.

3rd. That a committee of five be appointed, the president of branch acting as chairman of said committee, who shall have full charge and control of arrangements, said committee to appoint one or more of their number clerk, whose duty it shall be to purchase a book, in which to enter the names of the several landlords, and the number of guests they desire to accommodate. The clerk's office or stand shall be at or near the church, for the convenience of visitors.

4th.—All delegates, members or visitors, must apply for homes to said clerk, who may assign them to friends, if previously arranged; if not to the best advantage possible, each person paying the clerk $2.00 for a week's board, taking receipt for same, which shall be given to his landlord; and upon presentation of said receipt to clerk, said landlord may receive $2.00 per week for board so given.

5th. Nothing in the above shall be implied, or construed, so as to prevent any landlord from boarding free of sharge any delegate, member or visitor, provided such arrangements are previously made with the clerk, and the board of such favored ones be charged up to said landlord.

6th. Each committee man, shall wear a badge of blue ribbon to be the better distinguished by visitors.

The clerks would like, as far as possible, to be notified by those desiring homes under the above regulations.

Clerks, F. G. PITT, T. W. CHATBURN.

DIED.

McBrayne.—At Botany, Ont., May 8th, 1884, Sister Flora, wife of Peter McBrayne, after many years of suffering, of Bright's disease of the kidneys. Born August 2d, 1835; baptized December 14th, 1870. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Arthur Leverton. It is with a sad heart I write of the death of our dear mother. It was her request that her dying testimony should be sent to the Herald. She was a faithful member, and in her life she bore a faithful testimony to many of her friends, to the truth of the latter day work. She told us that she knew she would rise in the morning of the First Resurrection; and prayed that we might meet her. She asked for the hymn book, which was brought her, and she sang in a clear, unfaltering voice, hymn 854, "Shed not a tear o'er your friend's early bier." She chose for her burial service, hymn 850, "She's gone, her work on earth is done." Then she prayed for her dear Savior to come with his shining angels and bear her safely home. When her friends would say to her they hoped to meet her in heaven, she told them to believe and obey the right gospel, and they would meet her. Then soon after she died, but as though she had fallen asleep. We feel her loss very deeply, but we know it is our dear mother's gain. Our home is sad and dreary; but we have one bright hope left us, to meet where there will be no more sorrow and pain.

It was only the foot-steps of angels,
That silently entered the door:
And took from our circle a dear one,
To dwell on the radiant shore.
KATIE MCBRAYNE.

COLERICK.—At Blenheim, Ontario, February 24th, 1885, Sr. Elizabeth Colerick, aged 70 years, 3 months and 2 days. She was baptized by Bro. John H. Lake, October 31st, 1881.

JENKINS.—At Kirtland, Ohio, February 11th, 1885, Grace Jenkins, in the 85th year of her age. For many long, weary years, a few of God's chosen ones have, through both bright clouds and dark, courageously stood for the faith once deliveren to the Saints in and about Kirtland. Grace Harris Jenkins was one of these. Born in the town of Harrisena, New York, March 30th, 1800, she at an early day had opportunity of hearing the gospel of Christ-heard and embraced the same in the year 1830, under the preaching and ministration of Elder Simeon Carter, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and continued full of hope and the peace of Christ in the same, to the last. When she was eighteen years of age she was married to Murry Jenkins, in the town of her girlhood, with whom she continued till death separated them about two years ago. They came to Kirtland, Ohio, in 1838, where they have since resided. This faithful one to the Master was offered at the time of her leaving New York state, a fine farm if she would renounce her faith; but she chose to stand with the people of God, rather than to enjoy the riches of earth for a season. How glad must be every Saint, and her children and near relatives who yet remain, and the angels, and Jesus the faithful one, now that the time that she must quit this life has arrived, of this her choice of a home which is to be hers forever, rather than the pleasures of the world for a season. Her last years were passed with her daughter, Mrs. Kezia Funk, of Kirtland, who with two sisters and a brother living a distance away, and members of her father's family in New York state, mourn her loss. Funeral services conducted by E. L. Kelley, on Sabbath, February 15th; a large number of the friends and neighbors of the deceased attending.

CARR.—At Tewksbury, Massachusetts, February 25th, 1885, of heart disease, Bro. Matthew Carr. Funeral service at the Saints' Chapel, Fall River, Massachusetts, March 2d, 1885, by Elders Gilbert and Potts.

THOMAS.—At Malad City, Idaho Territory, January 29th, 1885, Sr. Serelda Thomas, aged 10 years, 11 months and 23 days. Sr. Thomas was a member of the "Malad Musical and Literary Society;" and Mr. H. R. Davis, at a meeting of that society, delivered a feeling address in her memory.

JOHNSON.—At Lamoni, Iowa, February 9th, 1885, of consumption, after an illness of more than two years, Bro. Jesse H. Johnson. Bro. Johnson was born at Deloit, Crawford county, Iowa, on the 15th of April, 1855. He obeyed the gospel in September, 1883, and from then till the time of his death, honored and kept his covenant with God. He was unusually patient throughout his illness, and died in the hope of the gospel as set forth in the revelations of God. Funeral services by Elder J. R. Lambert, at the residence of Bro. John McKim, on February 11th. His remains rest in Rose Hill Cemetery.

PALMER.—At Nichelson, Ohio, February 22d, 1885, from burning, Annie, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Palmer, aged 9 years and 4 days. She was a bright child, loved by all who knew her, and has gone to rest with her Redeemer.

GREENHALGH .- At the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Sarah Spear, in Kirtland, Ohio, February 25th, 1885, Elizabeth Greenhalgh, in the 84th year of her age. Born in England, she came to America in the year 1849, made her home near Kirtland, and for a number of years lived in the hotel opposite the Temple, her husband for a time having control of the Temple property. Hers was a long and eventful life, fraught with the many good deeds that tend to bind together families, neighbors and friends, and leaves in its triumph true evidence that humanity was blessed for this one having lived. For the last three years of her life her afflictions prevented her from going from home, or attending church; but she was glad when the Saints revived their meetings in Kirtland, and was ever ready to speak in their favor. The funeral took place from the Baptist Church, Kirtland; Elder E. L. Kelley delivering a discourse. She leaves an only daughter, the wife of Captain Spear, and two grand children.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letter we learn that Bro. Thomas Nutt has returned to Wilber from his Minnesota Mission. He writes in good health and spirits. His address will be Wilber, Nebraska.

Bro. James Caffall desires the following corrections made in his letter in HERALD for February 28th. On page 138, tenth line from bottom of first column, read "carry forth the gospel," instead of "convey forth." Same page, right hand column, eighteenth line from close of letter, read "under the tax gathering method," instead of "under the gathering," &c. For the close of same paragraph, read "Previous appointment rendering it necessary, I left on the 27th, determined to accept the invitation to come again as soon as possible," instead of the reading as it now stands.

Bro. Charles E. Aldrich writes Bro. H. A. Stebbins from Crawfordsville, Linn county, Oregon, that during last season he preached near that place several times. Bro. T. N. Fields was with him on some occasions. Bro. Aldrich is invited to begin again this season, and intends to do so in order to inform the people concerning the truth. He also expects to begin holding meetings in the town of Crawfordsville, as some wish to hear. Bro. Aldrich has removed from the Prairie City Branch which has again become disorganized by removals.

In the death notice of Thomas Clark, on page 143 of present volume of HER-ALD, read eleven years instead of three years; also, brother and sister instead of Mr. and Mrs.

Bro. F. M. Bass wrote from New Florence, Missouri, March 8th, that he had moved from Illinois, to where he now lives. He would like if some one would come there to preach. In the meantime he wishes that some of the elders in Missouri would correspond with him. Any elder passing is requested to call. Bro. Bass further says: "Any of the Saints moving west, who have an 'old team and old wagon, and a yaller dog,' will please stop and rest with us. We are the only family of Saints in the place."

BRO. I. N. WHITE sends us the following clipping from the Grinnell, Iowa, Herald for January 23d, 1885.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.

In the January number of the Bibliotheca Sacra, Rev. D. L. Leonard, of Salt Lake, ascribes the Book of Mormon to a well known source. "There is little room to doubt that Solomon Spaulding's romance furnished the bulk of the historical portion; but how the manuscript came into Smith's hands, no one knows." On a later page, Pres. J. H. Fairchild, of Oberlin, says that Solomon Spaulding's manuscript was discovered among the papers of Mr. L. L. Rice of Honolulu, formerly of Ohio, while he was in the Sandwich Islands, a few months ago. It is "an old worn and faded manuscript of about 175 pages, small quarto, purporting to be a history of the migrations and conflicts of the ancient Indian tribes which occupied the territory now belonging to the states of New York, Ohio and Kentucky. Mr. Rice, myself, and others," says Dr. Fairchild, "compared it with the Book of Mormon, and could detect no resemblance between the two, in general or in detail. There seems to be no name or incident common to the two. The solemn style of the Book of Mormon, in imitation of the English Scriptures, does not appear in the manuscript. The only resemblance is in the fact that both profess to set forth the history of lost tribes. There seems to be no doubt that this is the long-lost story" (of Mr. Spaulding). Names of several persons who knew this are endorsed on a certificate. "Some other explanation of the origin of the Book of Mormon must be found if any explanation. is required."

In connection with the foregoing we publish a letter from Bro. R. J. Anthony who wrote us from one of the country towns of Utah, that he had been informed about the article in the Bibliotheca Sacra by a school teacher, who had seen it; and that when he returned to the city he would send us a transcript from the Magazine itself. We give his letter from the city below:

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,

February 19th, 1885.

Brother Joseph:—Since I last wrote you, I have received the Bibliotheca Sacra, from Rev. Mr. Seward, of Echo City. I wrote him and asked him to furnish me a copy of the article by President James H. Fairchild, of Oberlin, Ohio, and he kindly sent me the book, so I could see it in print. I copy the item verbatim from the Bibliotheca Sacra, page 173. The article I copy is from foot notes on page 17, where Rev. Mr. Delevan A. Leonard, is giving a history of Mormonism, wherein he states: "As to the origin of the Book of Mormon, there is little room to doubt that Solomon Spaulding's romance furnished the bulk of the historical portion; but how the manuscript came into Smith's hands, no one knows." Here the Editor makes critical foot notes, and from his notes on page 173, I give what President Fairchild knows about the Solomon Spaulding story, It will be interesting to Latter Day Saints, if it is not to other people:

"The theory of the origin of the Book of Mormon in the traditional manuscript of Solomon Spaulding, will probably have to be relinquished. That manuscript is doubtless now in the possession of Mr. L. L. Rice, of Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, formerly an anti-Slavery Editor in Ohio. and for many years State printer at Columbus. During a recent visit to Honolulu, I suggested to Mr. Rice that he might have valuable anti-slavery documents in his possession, which he would be willing to contribute to the rich collection already in the Oberlin College Library. In pursuance of this suggestion, Mr. Rice began looking over his old pamplets and papers, and at length came upon an old, worn, and faded manuscript of about 175 pages, small quarto, purporting to be a history of the migrations and conflicts of the ancient Indian Tribes, which occupied the territory now belonging to the States of New York, Ohio and Kentucky. On the last page of this manuscript is a certificate and signature, giving the names of several persons known to the signer, who have assured him that to their personal knowledge the manuscript was the writing of Solomon Spaulding. Mr. Rice has no recollection how or when this manuscript came into his possession. It was enveloped in a coarse piece of wrapping paper, and endorsed in Mr. Rice's hand-writing, "A Manuscript Story."

"There seems no reason to doubt that this is the long-lost story. Mr. Rice, myself, and others, compared it with the Book of Mormon, and could detect no resemblance between the two, in general or in detail. There seems to be no name or incident common to the two. The solemn style of the Book of Mormon, in imitation of the English Scriptures, does not appear in the manuscript. The only resemblance is in the fact that both profess to set forth the history of lost tribes. Some other explanation of the origin of the Book of Mormon must be found, if any explanation is required." Signed, James H. Fairchild.

I have given the article complete, and just as it is in the book. President Fairchild has made a fair statement of facts, and it will no doubt prove to be a blessing to many people, coming as it does from the pen of an eminent man, as the President is said to be, it must be of some worth to all people who may be interested in the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. Good ministers will no doubt try to pass this evidence by as lightly as they have other evidences. One good Parson that I have talked with upon this article, thought there was nothing in it, "That it was not definite." "President Fairchild ought to know that Solomon Spaulding wrote more than one romance." He said the President was a thoroughly reliable man; but the President has decided that the long-lost story is found, and that it is in no way like the Book of Mormon. Just at this time this information is valuable. Surely the "Lord moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform."

R. J. Anthony.

On receipt of Pres. Fairchild's address, we at once wrote him, and received from him the following decisive reply:

OBERLIN COLLEGE, OBERLIN, O., February 27th, 1885.

Joseph Smith, Esq.; Dear Sir:—The "article" in the Bibliotheca Sacra, to which you refer, is only a brief note in which I state the fact that I saw last summer at Honolulu in the hands of L. L. Rice, what purports to be, and undoubtedly is, a long lost manuscript of Solomon Spaulding, which gives an account of Indian tribes formerly occupying New York, Ohio, and Kentucky. I compared it with the Book of Mormon, and could find no trace of identity or even essential resemblance between them.

Since I published the note I have learned that it is claimed there are two such lost manuscripts of Spaulding, one on the Indian tribes and another on the Hebrew tribes, and that it is claimed that the Book of Mormon originated in the latter. Certainly the manuscript which I saw was not the source of the Book of Mormon. As to any other manuscript, I have no knowledge. Yours truly, Jas. H. Fairchild.

One thing seems tolerably certain; that Mrs. McKinstry, daughter of Solomon Spaulding, stated that when the "old trunk" went to Monson, Massachusetts, it had manuscripts in it. Mr. Jerome Clark stated that when he attempted to honor the order for the delivery of the "Manuscript Found," brought to him from Mrs. Davison, formerly Mrs. Spaulding, by Mr. Sabine, and P. Hurlbut, he found but one; and that one he gave to Mr. Hurlbut when Mr. Sabine was present. The manuscript which Hurlbut got he stated that he gave to E. D. Howe, and there it perished by fire. Now, another manuscript; which Pres. Fairchild thinks is "undoubtedly" a lost one from the pen of Rev. Spaulding; turns up in the possession of a former resident of Ohio, a printer. This makes two, (if indeed this last is one), and the last and the one Hurlbut and Howe had are similar in character and neither bears any semblance to the Book of Mormon. The size and nature of the manuscript which Pres. Fairchild saw at Honolulu, give strong color to the idea that this may have been the one so much talked of as having been read by Mrs. McKinstry, and heard read by others.

The fact of this one being found in the hands of a former printer of Ohio, and he unable to account from whom he got it, would favor the idea that it had either been left by Rev. Spaulding himself; or put in the printer's hands as a sort of depositary for what would prove to be an inconvenient find, if found by Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, or other of the Mormons, during the effort to make it do duty as the Manuscript Found. It is "undoubtedly" a "long lost manuscript of Solomon Spaulding," says Pres. Fairchild. It is "undoubtedly" now, a "Manuscript Found," of the Rev. Solomon Spaulding, if the statements are true, which we are inclined to believe.

At all events two of the manuscripts said to have been in the "old trunk," are presumably accounted for, and neither is the putative father of the Book of Mormon; and we believe that President James H. Fairchild has sounded the key-note for sectaries of all sorts who have told and retold the Solomon Spaulding Romance origin of the Book of Mormon, when he states that the "claim made for the origin of the Book of Mormon in the Solomon Spaulding story will have to be relinquished." So the Latter Day Saints have always claimed; and every step so far taken to prove their claim incorrect, when the evidences have been examined, has been found to be strongly supportive of that claim.

Bro. WILLARD J. SMITH is having a healthy confab in the Lakeside Monitor, published in AuSable, Michigan, and in the Iosco County Gazette, published in East Tawas, Michigan; said confab growing out of the preaching of Bro. Smith at Sherman, Michigan; and a consequent misrepresentation by some would be annihilator of the faith. Bro. Smith sends us clippings from which we gather that he is able to take care of his side of the matter. He writes further:

"I start tomorrow, March 4th, for Santlas County, to remain this month. I expect to be at Independence to attend General Conference. The work is onward here. I have baptized two since last writing."

From the Iosco County, Michigan, Gazette, sent us by Bro. Smith we quote: "Elder Smith, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, preached here last Sabbath for the second time. Being in want of a suitable place in which to hold services the liberal and broad-minded Mr. McIvor opened the doors of his residence to him and his hearers. The speaker denounced Mormonism, and preached one wife to every man, and concubines none. Mr. Smith is an able advocate of the religion he professes, and takes the bible for a standard of belief."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. T. Chester, writing from Detroit, Minnesota, in regard to the tobacco habit, says:

"Somehow I began to feel ashamed before God, thinking I threw such dirt into the body which it had pleased God to give to me. How wise it is to go to bed with a clean mouth. It bothers me now that I was so foolish so long. No wonder that Jesus said, 'O ye of little faith, how long will ye tarry until ye do believe.' And now I feel that God was with me through the laying on of hands by the Elders, and that the Lord took a severe old sickness from me. At the same time I thought myself hardly good enough that the Lord would do so much for me."

We commend Bro. Chester, and bid him perseverance in being free from so filthy a habit as the use of tobacco.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—Does the right inure to one to discuss issues upon which the Church has authoritatively legislated and decided? If so, who is he? If to one, why not to all? and if to all, then what purpose does law, or rule recognized by the body serve?

A.—Our idea, as we tried to set it before the readers of Herald, has been that a church organ was one in which all shades of opinion could of right appear. We are not aware that any right has inured to one person only to discuss issues upon which the church has decided. If there is such an one, aside from Christ, we do not know him; nor do we know by what rule such right has so inured.

We fear that we do not comprehend the scope and intent of the question; and our statement above is subject to revision by us, in case we have failed to compss the the intent of the question.

Correspondence.

St. Louis, Mo., March 6th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith: On Thursday and Saturday nights last, and on Sunday morning at East St. Louis, I spoke in the Colored Methodist Church. I had the best of liberty, and the colored people sanctioned what I said. Bro. John Beaird spoke in the Colored Baptist Church, on Sunday evening, while I spoke in the hall at St. Louis. Bro. Beaird said he enjoyed the Good Spirit while speaking to them. I spoke on Tuesday night to the same congregation, with the best of liberty. Bro. Beaird has stood by me, and helped me in all the meetings, and he is doing his best to teach the black as well as the white, the truth of the gospel of Christ. May God bless him, and aid him in the good cause. I met with the Saints at Tower Grove Branch, on Sunday afternoon. They are getting along nicely. Two at that place are ready for baptism when the weather is suitable. On Wednesday evening I met with the Saints in St. Louis. Had a good time. The Spirit was present in the gift of prophecy. I expect to be with the Saints in the hall in St. Louis, on Sunday evening, the 15th, after which I will go home and prepare for General Conference. JOHN C. Foss.

Yours truly,

Hampden Street.

BOSTON, Mass., March 1st, 1885.

Elder W. W. Blair:-I am interested in the discussion now going on in the Herald, and hope it may, in the end, prove beneficial to the church; although, at the present, it seems detrimental, as it reveals to the minds of the Saints, and others, that there is but little unity in the ministry. But as the waters become more pure after the tempest, so may the church be purified so as to reflect more clearly the image and likeness of Christ. Regarding tithing, I am satisfied that it is not a yoke of bondage, but a law of equality and love, that the poor of the church may be blessed with homes, and the comforts of life, and the gospel be preached to the perishing.

While I believe there have been mistakes in the past in the gathering, I am a firm believer in the principle of the Saints gathering out from among the wicked to places where they can enjoy peace and quietness from the turmoil and strife of contending factions and combinations of wicked men, who will ere long be like the Anarchists and Nihilists of the Old World. The people who live in their quiet homes in the country, know but little of the struggles of the poor in our large cities. The wages of the poor working women and girls, as also boys and many men, are merely nothing, while the cost of living is but little reduced, rents being so high, and if "the poor among men," Isa. 29.) are to rejoice, it will be because a different order of things shall exist than now among men in the world. And this condition for the bettering of the poor of God's people has been revealed, and the place where it is to begin to be realized has been pointed out. There will be an actual necessity ere long for a place for the gathering-a place of safety, of refuge. The prophecies relating to the condition of the world in the last days are too plain to be misunderstood, and the time will surely come in the near future, when he who will not take up his sword in defense, even against his neighbor, must of necessity flee to Zion. Oh my dear brother, there is in the revelations of God so much to comfort and cheer the poor and despised ones of earth-so much in the gospel to elevate and ennoble mankind, who will obey from the heart, its precepts and examples, even in this life, that I wonder why it is not sought unto; and when the joys of the world to come are understood, even in the smallest degree, I marvel more. And when Saints have received a foretaste of the joys of that world, how is it they so soon turn back into a world of sin?

Your brother in Christ,

E. N. WEBSTER.

GLENWOOD, Mills Co., Iowa.

Bro. Foseph: -I have not been to meeting since I last saw you; but my preaching Herald comes every week. I am delighted to read Bro. Blair's writings, it strengthens me; for I can see the true faith of the Saints in his teachings, and it causes my heart to rejoice in the gospel of my Redeemer, knowing it is peace to all them that will obey it, and prove faithful to the end.

LYDIA WALLING.

ELKHORN STATION, Nebraska, March 4th, 1885.

Dear Bro. Foseph:-I wish to have a few mistakes rectified concerning the death of my mother, as I find in the Herald. Jane Mitcham was born in Upliyna, Devon, England, November 2d, 1802, and died January 27th, 1885, being 82 years, two months and twenty-five days old. She emigrated to New York in May, 1861; arrived in Nebraska in June, 1862. Has been living with me ever since, until the day of her death, and was buried on the old farm. Her being dependent on any one besides her son with whom she was living, is a mistake.

Yours for the truth,

HENRY HADDER.

Dear Herald:-The deferred discussion between Bro. Crabb and Rev. Allen, Missionary Baptist, came off at Mondamin, Iowa, February 16th, 1885, running ten nights. I was prevented from getting there until late on Tuesday evening, so was present but eight nights. The question was the validity of the Reorganized Church, etc., Bro. Crabb affirming. The Rev. Allen's charge seems to be at the Bethel Baptist Church, Fremont, Iowa. He is quite intellectual, and none could make greater claim of being a fair controversialist than he; indeed, accepting his version, he is the very embodiment of goodness, and one would as soon expect to see the sun fall to the earth as to see him resort to unfair means. or use unlawful weapons to gain a point. I would be glad indeed to thus decide in his favor; for notwithstanding what one believes, an honorable procedure to defend the same, is always creditable. Nor can it please human pride to prove humanity base; but a close and impartial listening to and watching of his mode of warfare for eight nights, forbid this. In affirming the question, Bro. Crabb, in order to show the necessity for a restoration, claimed an apostasy from the primitive gospel, to which Mr. Allen objected. seeking to render his objection formidable by a multiplicity of Scripture, of which the following is a specimen, Heb. 6:18: "God swear by two immutable things;" I Tim. 3:15: "Which is the church of the living God, the pillar and groundwork of the church," with frequent requests thus: "Let my brother put his finger on the scripture that tells of, and the scripture that says the church did fall away, etc. The climax of evidence of a cessation of additional revelation to those in the Bible, was, according to his reasoning, deduced from the first of Hebrews: "God, who at sundry times, etc., has in the last days spoken to us by his Son." Christ was the last prophet he said. No more revelation. So according to the decisions of the Missionary Baptists, alias Waldenses, the revelations given subsequently to Christ's first coming, are spurious. To rebut Bro. Crabb's position touching the restoration of Israel as per covenant God made with Abraham, etc., the Rev. Gentleman reminded him that the Turks held Palestine. So according to his logic, the restoration of Israel is a myth. He waded through the misty pages of history to trace a succession of Christ's Church through the Waldenses, and exultingly announced that he had proved that the Church of Christ had always existed. And when Bro. Crabb remembered that he accepted a challenge from him as a Missionary Baptist; and in the discussion of the first question he sought to show a succession of that denomination; and no reference made to the Missionary Baptists in the discussion of the second question, he asked for some explanation, whereupon the Rev. Gentleman said he did not care much for names, his object was to prove that Christ's church had always existed, which was a virtual acknowledgement that the tracing of the Missionary Baptists was not possible, and his next best hold was to prove, or try to prove, a succession through the Waldenses; and hence this Missionary Baptist, alias Waldenses, went up pumpkin and came down squash, or was transformed from Missionary Baptists to Waldenses.

Bro. Crabb, when I left him on Friday morning-the discussion closed on Thursday nightwas right side up. I would suggest to the brethren in western Iowa and Nebraska, that before they accept a challenge to know by a proper inquiry, whether their opponents are representative men; who and what they represent. If there is any rule forcing us to accept every challenge, and to plunge into discussion without proper inquiry and due preparation, I don't know of it.

In gospel bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

RHODES, Iowa,

March 3d, 1885.

Dear Herald Readers: -Our conference adjourned Sunday night, first instant, and I think all the Saints who were present, will agree with me in saying we had a peaceful and happy time. The Spirit of the Lord reigned throughout the entire session, both in business and religious exercises. The different branches of the district were well represented; and when the parting hour came, and hands were clasped, and the last good-byes spoken, and I stood on the porch of the Central House watching the departure of the Saints, a feeling of loneliness and sadness came over me, such as I never before experienced on a like occasion. The thought came forcibly to my mind, that this would in all probability be the last conference ever held in the Edenville

Branch; as more than half the number of our once large branch, has moved away within the last year. But the work in this place is not dead. There are some as noble hearted Saints here as have moved away; and so far as I know, all is peace and harmony in the branch. Bro. Nirk, a very worthy man, was chosen president of the district. Bro. I. N. White, who has presided over the district so long, will soon take his departure for his home in the South. We are sorry to see Bro. I. N. go. The thought that the voice which has cheered and encouraged and admonished us so many times, will be heard among us no more, is very sad indeed. But as he has been instrumental in building up many branches in this district, and of bringing many out of darkness into this marvelous light, I trust the Spirit of the Lord may still attend his steps, and that he may carry the message of salvation to many more. The Saints here have been, and are, striving to hold up the banner of light and truth to the world; and have not neglected the assembling of themselves together at their regular appointments. And I trust that the Saints who have gone out from among us, are doing the same. For it is written, "We do not light a candle and put it under a bushel, neither can a city set on a hill be hid." We have no need to be ashamed of our profession, providing our daily walk and conversation correspond with that which we profess. God has said by His Spirit, "My people have naught to fear, save it be they become negligent in duty." This is a grand work, and the hand of the Lord is over it, and it will move forward, and come out victorious in spite of all the opposing powers that can be brought to bear upon it. But God works through human agency, to bring about his purposes, and the responsibility does not all rest upon the ministry.

"If you can not be the watchman, Standing high on Zion's wall, Pointing out the path to heaven, Offering life and peace to all; With your prayers and with your bounties, You can do what heaven demands; You can be like faithful Aaron, Holding up the prophet's hands."

Let us each ask ourselves, Are we doing this? Are we doing all in our power to send the message of salvation to those who have never heard its welcome sound? My heart was made sad a few days ago, by hearing a certain Elder remark to another, that the probabilities were that at the coming General Conference, some of the laborers who are now in the field would have to be called in. on account of a lack of funds in the treasury. Dear Saints, this should not be. We need more laborers in the field; "For the harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few." There are but very few who can not do something for the Master, if they love His work as they should better than all things else. We should not withhold the little we might do, because we can not do some great thing. "Despise not the day of small things."

"If you can not give your thousands, You can give the widow's mite; And the least you do for Jesus, Will be precious in his sight."

If we never give anything for the cause of Christ, save that which we feel we could spare as well as not, there are but few who would ever give anything. Please read the third chapter of Malachi. This work is more than meat and drink to me; it is my light, my life, my all. I desire to keep my lamp trimmed and burning, lest

"Some poor sailor, tempest-tossed,
Trying now to make the harbor,
In the darkness may be lost.
Let the lower lights be burning!
Send a gleam across the wave!
Some poor fainting, struggling seaman,
You may rescue, you may save."

Praying ever for the advancement of the cause of Christ, I am yours, in bonds of Christian love,
M. A. HUGHES.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 7th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith: - When will sin and selfishness be overcome, and the Saints of God become worthy of the name they bear. I heard it stated often in 1847-8, when I came first into contact with their teaching, that your father had said, that the Saints would become so pure, that Jesus Christ would be often present and visible to the natural eyes; and that the Saints who had gained their bodies, would be their constant companions; but I have never seen it stated officially. If he said so, we do not seem to be very near to that time yet. We are growing in power, and God is opening a door for preaching of the word, and the sects are becoming more liberal, and we have much to be thankful for. If we were more united in our work, and enabled to bring all the power that God has given us into the defense of truth, and to build up the Kingdom of Jesus Christ in the world, how would the work roll on. May God bless you, and bring the church out of trouble. Yours,

JOHN M. MCKENZIE.

New Philadelphia, Ohio, March 5th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—I arrived here on the second inst. Commenced preaching last night in the town school house. Expect to remain here until the tenth. There are some who are somewhat interested in our faith, who, I think, will, unite with the Church ere I leave. Sister Mary Wilcox lives here, and she is highly thought of by all who know her.

From here I go to Chicago, thence to Sandwich and Lewiston, Ill. Shall call at other places on my way to Independence, Mo. Bro. Forscutt has done a great work at Pittsburg, Pa. We hope that he will be continued in the Eastern Mission. I have baptized three since I wrote last to the Herald. Bro. Palmer's wife at Nickelson, Bro. Anderson at Bethesda, O., and one at Wheeling on the second inst.

Your brother in the faith of the Saints, G. T. GRIFFITHS.

No 711 Castro Street, Oakland, Cal., March 2d, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—I was never prouder of the Herald as a church organ, and you as the first representative of the church than this morning, when I read your able defense of the rights of every member to be respectfully heard. Joseph, stand for the right of free speech, and a respectful hearing of every member, in the Herald, as long as it is a church paper. If the church is what it represents itself to be the church of Christ founded upon a rock, the rock of revelation, the truth, if it is founded upon this foundation, the gates of hell will not prevail against it. Christ likened the kingdom of God to a net cast into the sea; it gathered of all kinds of fish. I have thought what an admixture! How can we expect anything but dissension, discussion, fault finding, with trials of every nature, while the net is being hauled to the shore. The bringing all sorts and kinds of fish into close quarters one with another, will have a tendency to develop the different kinds, with all their characteristics. Of course their horns, snouts, tails and fins will protrude, and many will be badly horned, and the result will be to prove the good fish, while the bad will be thrown back into the sea, as we, when boys on the old Misssissippi used to throw away the bad fish. You will remember a certain kind of fish that was very troublesome. I will describe them. They were long, slim and round, with beautiful shining scales, with long bills, sharp teeth, and terribly destructive on our bait; hard to be caught. When they were caught, they would bite the line if you were not very careful, and away they would go, ready for more bait, and all the good fish would leave when they came around.

I say let the fish have a chance; mud-pouts, bull-pouts, gars, cats, sturgeon, suckers, flounders, and all other kinds. Let them show themselves; let them come to the surface; and let them have a respectful hearing. Every honest man will give every other man just the same rights he claims for himself. Keep the columns of the Herald open to every member that applies in a respectable way, until the church says by a majority of its members, that one man or the quorums are the church. Now, while I sustain the Herald as the church organ, free to all the members, I also realize and have realized for years, the want of another paper, in fact of many papers. I wish a good paper advocating our cause could be started in every city, town and hamlet of the world, that men might know the difference between us and the people in Utah. I feel to thank God that just such a paper has been started on the Pacific coast, barring out all discussions upon the church polity, making it a paper and a tract to be given to all men, under all circumstances; a defender of our faith, and it, (the Expositor), should be sustained in its work as well as the Herald and the little Advocate. They all have their places to fill, and every man, woman or child, that knows anything of the power of the press in our day, and has the work that we are engaged in at heart, will not hesitate a moment, but will make some sacrifices to sustain our papers. The Expositor was not started with any secular or speculative motive in view; but was started for the spread of truth among friends and foes; and as one who feels the responsibility of the times we live in, I invite all my brethren and sisters, to come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty thousands.

You say you want to do all you can to advance the work, to save souls, to send the gospel to your neighbors; yes, thousands of Saints repeat this weekly, monthly and yearly, in their testimony meetings. "I want to do all I can to advance the work of God." Now prove yourselves, you that say these things. Is there one of you that cannot save by some means, enough to pay for one paper, if not all three. Is there one that bears this testimony, that cannot save one dollar, and have twelve papers to give away to their neighbors and friends. See what a work could be done in this way. See how many could be warned in this way. Again I call on you, the sisters in particular, stand by our papers; they are the levers that must open up the way before the elders. They must remove prejudice. People will read our papers when you cannot get them to come near our meetings. Words may be changed and construed in many ways; but our writings are evidence both for us and against us. May God bless all legitimate efforts made in the advancement of our common cause is my prayer.

A. HAWS.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—My faith and knowledge continue to increase in my God and the latter day work; and when I stop and reflect upon the darkness that covers the minds of men, I think, What was I that I should be so greatly favored of God? Was I not in darkness, yea, verily, I walked in by and forbidden paths; but I heard the voice of the good shepherd, and seemed to know his voice, and his counsel to me was, to return from the errors of my ways, and turn my heart to God. This I did, and the light of heaven illumined my heart with faith and hope in God. My determination is to serve him, and obey his laws and commandments.

Dear brothers and sisters, the signs of the times for the near approach of Christ's coming, are daily before our eyes; yea, verily, look and behold the calamities there are upon the earth. There is no where peace, but war and destruction are everywhere. Another thing Christ said should be a sign of his near coming, the gospel of the kingdom should be preached to all nations, tongues and people; then should the end come. Thank God this is fast being done; my heart rejoices when I see the reports of the increase, and of the many that flock to seek protection under the flag of truth. The fire that has been kindled by the Spirit of God, can not be put out by men. The more the enemy tries to quench it, the faster it burns.

I was glad to see in our Sunday morning paper, copied from the Pittsburg Dispatch, the report of the sermon of Bro. M. H. Forscutt before an audience of 900 people. God bless you, Bro. Mark; and may you have continued good success.

I am greatly interested in the Danish Mission, and have been for a long time. I am glad to see the little paper, Sandhedens Banner. It is a neat little paper, well worthy our attention and our aid. I am sorry to see so few taking interest in it in this place; but few have subscribed. I have sent copies to Denmark, to Utah. It is my hope it will be hailed with joy in Denmark, and I beg my brethren and sisters in this country to aid it that it may be a grand success. To you, Bro. Brix of the Danish Mission, a Happy New Year; and may God bless you; may many unite with you. I am well acquainted with the mission. I have footed it five years, from the east to the west, from the south to the north, for B. Young; and during my travel, men told me that something better was going to come. This I could not see in those days, but I can see it now. Go to Frederickshavn, Hjorring and Aalborg, and sound your trumpet long and loud; cast the seed by the way-side, and spare not, and great will be thy blessings; and you will be rewarded with many sheaves; and please tell my friends, especially those who think I am dead, that through the grace of God I am still alive, and I know for myself that God has begun to establish His Kingdom upon the earth, and except they humble themselves in obedience to the command of God, they can not see it. Tell them I wish the blessings of God to be with them, and I tell you a great work is going to be done in that mission. I knew that for myself a long time ago, and my eyes are towards it, and my prayer to God that He will speed the time. If you will forward me your address, I will tell you where you can find homes. May God preserve his own from all seen and unseen harm, is my humble desire and prayer.

Your brother,

JAMES THOMSON.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

March 6th.—Great Britain's volunteer force at present includes 215,000 men—the greatest number ever attained.

Two dispatches in regard to the Afghan frontier difficulty have been received to-day at London, Eng., at the Foreign Office from M. de Giers, the Russian Foreign Minister. Their tone is friendly, but the text is by no means satisfactory. They express vast friendship, for England, and offer assurances of Russia's disinclination to interfere in England's affairs in Afghanistan, but they distinctly refuse to withdraw the Russian outposts which have been pushed within the Afghan frontier. M. de Giers says that Russia is willing to negotiate for a status quo; to prevail until the work of the International Frontier Commission shall be accomplished. Lord Granville, the British Foreign Society, has sent at least one reply to St. Petersburg. The text of this reply is withheld from the public, but it is understood that he proposes to take no definite action until he receives further information from Gen. Sir Peter Lumsden, the British Commissioner in Afghanistan.

President Cleveland's Cabinet nominations were confirmed by the Senate yesterday. The President accepted the resignation of President Arthur's Cabinet and signed the commissions of the new Cabinet officers. The latter are expected to enter upon the discharge of their duties to-day.

About three o'clock p. m. of March 5th, Mr. Parley P. Pratt was met at the door of the post office by Deputy Marshal Greenman, who read to him a warrent of arrest on the charge of polygamy and unlawful cohabitation. The complaint was sworn to by Marshal E. A. Ireland, and is as follows:

"That prior to the first day of January, A. D., 1883, in the County of Salt Lake, the said Parley P. Pratt did marry and take to wife one Romania Doe, whose true surname is to the complainant unknown, and did then and there have her, the said Romania, for his lawful wife; that afterwards, to wit, on the first day of May, A. D., 1883, the said Romania Pratt being then alive, he, the said Parley P. Pratt, did, at the said County of Salt Lake, marry and take to wife one Susan Pulley, and did thereby then and there commit the crime of polygamy; and said complainant on his oath aforesaid, does further complain that ever since, to wit, the first day of May, A. D. 1883, hitherto, the said Parley P. Pratt has, at said county of Salt Lake, continuously lived and cohabited with more than one woman, namely, with one Brighamina Pratt and with one Susan Pulley."

March. 8th.—Notwithstanding the pacific assurances of Russia the British War Office is dispatching troops to India with all possible speed. The number sent is limited only by the means of transportation. A troop-ship which arrived today from India was ordered to return at once to Bombay with 1,200 soldiers. These troops are needed to partly supply the places of those sent to the Afghan frontier.

Gen. Briere de l'sle. French commander in Tonquin, telegraphs he has relieved the beleaguered garrison at Thuyenquan. He says: "We arrived the 3d inst. at Thuyenquan. The Black Flags and Yunnan army had occupied the pass, the sides of which were inaccessible, and built forts with three lines of trenches before Duoc. The fighting was severe. Our troops behaved more admirably than ever. The enemy raised the siege at Thuyenquan yesterday evening, the garrison having fought eighteen days. After the first breach in the body of the fortress the garrison sustained seven assaults and caused immense loss to the enemy. This siege should be counted among the most brilliant pages of our history. The gunboat Mitrailleuse actively assisted in the defense of Thuyenquan. Gen. Neglier's column has pushed rapidly to the northward since the capture of Langson. He has now destroyed the line of forts which guarded the Chinese frontier. and blown up the fortification known as the Gate of China."

A reconnaissance at Suakin to-day showed 10,000 of the enemy in different localities. An Arabian paper says the Mahdi sent his lieutenant at Metemneh a reward of $5,000 for his bravery, and has ordered him to advance upon Korti.

Nearly all great German papers comment warmly on President Cleveland's address, calling it the utterance of a strong-minded straightforward, honest, and modest man, deserving of confidence.

The action taken by Congress in its closing hours with regard to the Oklahoma question was briefly this: The Western Representatives defeated the Dawes bill, which has passed the Senate, and the Ryan amendment to the Indian bill was adopted, directing the President to enter into negotiations with the Indians with a view to opening Oklahoma to settlement. The question as to whether these negotiations shall be opened through the agency of a commission or not is left to the president's discretion. Ryan and other friends of the settlers think that the negotiations will result in the opening of the lands to colonists.

The bottom-lands in Clark County, Missouri, bordering on the Des Moines and Mississippi River, are a sea of water and ice, and this county for seven miles west and farther south is flooded to a depth varying from one to five feet. Three miles of the Egyptian Levee on the Des Moines are gone, and the water of the river finds an outlet over the farming lands. St. Francisville and a portion of alexandria are flooded, and the inhabitants have moved out. The Wabash has three miles of track under water west of Alexandria. The bulk of the ice from 160 miles of the Des Moines is packed in the lower thirty miles of the river.

March 9th,—So rigid is the Government censorship at St. Petersburg of press dispatches relating to the Afghan frontier troubles that the correspondents are sending their news from the Russian Capital by cipher to Vienna. The cipher dispatches are translated into English at Vienna and are forwarded thence to London. News thus received indicates that there is but slight prospects of peace being long continued between England and Russia. The Slav or military party in Russia is now in power and is intriguing to influence the Czar against England. Russia is rapidly concentrating troops in Central Asia, and has positively declined to withdraw from the positions she has seized on Afghan soil. The gauntlet has been thrown down. It remains to be seen what England will do.

A dispatch from Korti says the rear guard of Gen Buller's troops has arrived at Korti from Gakdul in a terribly fatigued condition. Gen. Wood has ordered the complete evacuation of Gakdul by March 4th. They heard on the route that the whole Hassanyieh tribe intended to harass the English retreat. The Mudir of Dongola has started for Merawi.

Gen. Briere de l'Isle, commanding the French troops in Tonquin, announces that he has raised the siege of Tuyen-Kwang and driven away the Chinese besieging forces. The French garrison, which had held the town until the advance of the relieving column, reported that for eighteen days it had been subjected to incessant attacks from the Chinese. Every day a vigorous assault was delivered against the French line, but at each attack the Chinese were driven back with immense losses. They were not confident of holding out much longer when they heard the firing in the Chinese rear, which told them that succor was coming. The Chinese made but little opposition to Gen. Briere de l'Isle's force, and, in dread of being caught between the two fires, retreated precipitately. The besieged garrison gave way to transports of joy when De l'Isle reached the city, for they had begun to look upon their fate as sealed. It was an intensely dramatic scene. Meanwhile Gen. Negrier is pushing northward from the lately-captured City of Langson, and has captured and dismantled several forts on the borders of China. Among them is the great bastioned work of solid masonry known as the "Gate of China." The Chinese Government is preparing to resume offensive operations in Tonquin. They claim a victory at Tuyen-Kwang.

Information reached the State Department vesterday concerning the late acts of President Barrios of Guatemala towards Nicaragua. He has been hostile to the canal concession made to the United States and disposed to make trouble on that account for some time. He has now declared his purpose to compel a union of Central American States, and has put the matter in a shape which is equivalent to declaring war against Nicaragua. A communication in regard to the matter was to-day sent to the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. The following telegram from the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Guatemala has been received by Jacob Baiz, Consul General of that country: "Baiz, New York: President Barrios has issued a decree proclaiming the union of Central America as one republic, and to realize the same has assumed supreme military command. CRUZ."

A fishing schooner, the Solomon Poole of Gloucester, Mass., went down with all hands. Fifteen men were drowned.

March 10.—Austria and Hungary have decided to follow Germany's example In raising the duties on foreign grain.

The Mahdi is said to have left Khartoum for fear of assassination by his enemies. He is fearful of treachery and has doubled the guard about his person.

Gen. Graham, the commander of the forces now being massed at Suakin to disperse the rebels under Osman Digma, is expected at Suakin to-morrow. An advance will be made at once far enough into the interior to establish a line of defenses on the land side of Suakin.

In his recent statements before the House of Commons the Marquis of Hartington shed some light upon the Soudan campaign, which will be resumed next fall. In general terms, Osman Digma's scattered forces in the neighborhood of Suakin and between there and Berber are to be effectually dispersed by Gen. Graham, who will occupy their positions and then proceed to open the way to Berber, where, if he arrives in time, he will be prepared to co-operate with Wolseley in his operations against Khartoum. The railroad from Suakin to Berber is definitely decided upon, and the appropriation for its construction has been voted with scarcely any opposition. In addition to this road it is also proposed to build some short lines around the Nile cataracts. The Suakin-Berber road for the time, it is stated, will be a purely military line, but the intimation is given out that it will eventually be established as a permanent line, which indicates that the policy of the Government contemplates permanent relations of some kind with the Soudan after the Mahdi is "smashed."

Sir Peter Lumsden telegraphs via Meshed: "Afghan scouts report a small detachment of Russians advanced to Nihalsheni, the furthest southwest point on the Heri-Rud claimed for the Russian frontier. The advance does not complicate the work of delimitation, but endangers a collision with the Afghans." The Russian Admiral Crown has arrived at Singapore on his way to take command of the Pacific squadron of the Czar's navy.

An insurrection has broken out in Albania, European Turkey. All available Turkish troops have been hurried to the scene. A force of Turkish regulars were defeated by insurgents near Lyonment. At Prisrend the garrison was driven into the citadel by the insurgents, and are now besieged. The Austrian Consul at Prisrend and the orthodox priests have also taken rufuge in the citadel. The insurgents cut the telegraph lines communicating with districts in rebellion.

March 12.—Official reports have been received in London confirming the rumor of a further advance of the Russian troops into Afghan territory. It is admitted by the Russian Government that such a movement has been made, but it is asserted that the advance was only a reconnaissance. It is believed that both Afghans and Russians are hurrying forward and that a collision is imminent. British and Russian securities have declined in consequence of the news, and there was a semi-panic on the London Stock Exchange yesterday. A distinguished Russian diplomat in London yesterday declared that Russia had no intention of invading India or even Afghanistan, but merely desired to determine the frontier line. Russia, he said, desired peace, but would not submit to dictation from England.

The Powers have agreed to a conference on the Suez Canal. The conference will sit in Paris:

War has been declared by Nicaragua against Guatemala in consequence of the proclamation issued by Gen. Barrios of the latter Republic declaring that a Central American Union must be effected. Nicaragua has determined to resist the carrying out of this plan, which is practically an attempt on the part of Barrios to establish a dictatorship. Costa Rica will stand by Nicaragua.

FIRES_STORMS_ACCIDENTS.

March 6.—The explosion of a lamp caused a disastrous fire early this morning at Bradford, Pa. Two persons were burned to death and several others were badly injured.

Three persons were killed and a dozen injured last night eight miles south of Grenada, Miss., on the Illinois Central Road by a collision between mail-train No. 3, south-bound, and Express No. 10. Both were running at full speed, and the engines, two baggage-cars, one mail-car, and a smoker were wrecked.

The Oskaloosa House, at Oskaloosa, Ia., was burned, and one person perished in the flames. Loss by fire at Monticello, Ia., $4,000. Toronto, Ont., $200,000. Little Rock, Ark., $7,000.

March 8.—Loss by fire at Albany Mo., $50,000. Williamsport, Pa., $40,000. Providence, R. I., thirty horses. Canton, Ill., $2,500. Green Forest, Ark., $10,000. Philadelphia, Pa., $15,000. One man was killed by a fall in a fire at Boston, Mass.

March 9.—The residence of Mrs. Jane Snoph at Pearlington, Miss., was burned last night while the lady was at church, and three boys, the oldest eleven, perished in the flames.

Three colored children, whose parents had locked them into the house while they attended a log-rolling, near Durant, Miss., were burned up in the house Saturday, and two white boys were badly burned in trying to release them.

Loss by fire at Steubenville, O., $110,000. Liberty Mills, Ind., $20,000. Auburn, N. Y., $50,000. Louisville, Ky., $15,000. Allegheny City, Pa., $10,000. Bristol, Ind., $10,000. Powhattan, Ark., $20,000. New Cumberland, W. Va., $10,000. Nashville, Tenn., $19,000.

March 10th.—Twenty buildings, including the Central Hotel, were destroyed by fire at Newbern, N. C., causing a loss of $100,000. Loss by fire at Strubenville, O., $130,000. Tarboro N. C., $50,000. Wyoming, Ill., $45,000.

The heaviest nitro-glycerine explosion ever known in the oil country, wherein nearly 6,000 pounds of the annihilator were touched off, occured this noon at Howard Junction, three miles south of Bradford, Pa. There are located the factory, magazine, and other buildings of the Rock Glycerine Manufacturing Company. Two men, H. V. Pratt, an employe, and W. H. Herrington, one of the proprietors, were at work in the building. The latter had recently purchased an interest in the firm and was just learning the business. How the accident occurred will never be known, but observers at Custer City, about half a mile away, state that two almost simultaneous flashes were followed by a deafening report and white smoke, and large bowlders and quantities of debris were thrown high in the air.

Rushing down to the scene, they found that the destruction had been appalling and complete. Where the factory had been there was now a large circular hole ten feet deep, while at the place where the magazine was located a hole twenty-five feet in depth and thirty to forty feet in diameter was scooped out of the ground as nearly as if it had been the work of a professional excavator. On the bushes and trees for many rods around were found fragmentary particles of flesh and spatterings of blood. These were all that was left of the mortal remains of young Herrington. He was a man weighing nearly 200, and, altogether, less than three pounds of his body could be picked up. It was supposed that a simular fate had overtaken Pratt, but his corpse was found where it had been blown in the underbrush, a distance of 200 feet. Remarkable to state, while every bone in his body was broken by the great force of the concussion, his skin was intact. Of the factory and other buildings, the largest pieces that were found were no bigger than a lead-pencil. They were literally annihilated. The explosion was heard in all parts of Bradford and houses were shaken as from an earthquake. Herrington formerly resided at Springboro, Crawford County, where his parents live. Pratt came there from Kennedy, N. The campany's loss will exceed $5,000. They will immediatly rebuild. A portion of one of Herrington's arms was found 1,000 feet away lodged in a tree. Houses were shattered and window-panes broken in Bradford and surrounding towns. Trees were uprooted and oil-rigs in the vicinity were leveled to the ground.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

Action in favor of an established bimetallic standard currency was lately rejected by the German Reichstag.

There were 222 failures in the United States last week, a decrease of thirty-two as compared with the previous week.

The French bourse has been very unsettled owing to the fears that England may be dragged into a war with Germany or Russia. A fall in English consols was followed by a fall in French securities. However, as a consequence of the pacific speech of Lord Granville and the news from Tonquin, consols rose again and French sucurities went up in sympathy. These combined causes had such a reassuring effect on the market that the Crédit Foncier determined that its new emission should be made immediately. There was a further advance in Suez stock on the reported conclusion of Egyptian financial arrangements, and the bourse grew buoyant, thanks to the prospects of business reviving.

The German exchange was very excited during the last week. Political events did not produce the same inquietude as in London, but large London sales and the general London contractions naturally reached on the Berlin market especially on Russian values, but also on shares of Austrian "Crédit Anstalt" and the Berlin discount business indirectly, through the unsatisfactory balance of the latter. Only during the last two days, when, under the impression of Count Herbert Bismarck's visit to London and of the amicable assurance of the Russian Ambassador in London, the London market had assumed a more friendly face, could the Berlin market recover and close with a full revival.

Clearings at the principal cities of the United States last week show a decrease as compared with the corresponding week of 1884 of 32.7 per cent. The decrease in New York was 40.4 per cent. In Chicago the decrease was 14.7 per cent. The prospects for the fruit crop in Arkansas are not flattering. In Mississippi and Texas the outlook is fair, but the crops are backward.

Chicago elevators contained March 7th, 15,-473,367 bushels of wheat, 1,914,727 bushels of corn, 570,685 bushels of oats, 135,615 bushels of rye, and 113,458 bushels of barley. Total, 18,-207,852 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 22,-687,973 bushels a year ago. During last week the stock increased 280,871 bushels, including an increase of 246,579 bushels of wheat and 20,-192 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 48,585,675 bushels of wheat, 6,447,942 bushels of corn, 2,396,868 bushels of oats, 345,828 bushels of rye, and 1,321,939 bushels of barley. These figures are larger than a week ago by 144,-739 in wheat and 676,277 in corn.

Of the 12,000 coal miners in the Pittsburg district more than 10,000 struck March 9th for the 3-cent rate. The operators are determined not to yield, and a struggle of unprecedented bitterness is predicted.

Reports from prominent fruit-growers around Holland, Mich., show that a quarter crop of peaches can be looked for, unless this spring kills off more buds. While in some orchards the buds are all gone and even the limbs frozen, in others but few buds were destroyed. The mercury fell to but 18° below zero in the latter orchards, while in the former it went down to 30° below. The nearer Lake Michigan the better the prospect.

"Anxious inquiry in regard to the coming wheat crop of Indiana, has prompted the sending out circulars of inquiry throughout the States thus early, although in fully one-fourth of the northern tier of counties the wheat is yet covered snow, and in the southern portion it will require a few days of warm sunshine and showers to determine correctly the extent of the damage to the wheat plant by the recent severe weather, with two or three weeks yet to pass of the most hazardous period. The reports from a large number of correspondents as to the condition of the wheat crop the 10th of March as compared with the same time last season in the southern half of the State range from 40 to 90 as the basis, the average condition is 68; in the northern half of the State the range is from 60 to 100, the average 93. For the whole State as reported the condition is estimated at 80 and the acreage as compared with last year's season at 82.

The prospect for fruit around Keokuk, Iowa, is not very encouraging. The severe winter has not only injured the buds of apples and pears, but has also hurt the wood. This has happened for three winters in succession. While it is early yet to tell the extent of the damage, it is known that many trees are winter-killed. The orchard loss will be quite severe. An experienced nurseryman, who has made a personal examination, says: "We may have apples and pears, a partial crop of cherries, blackberries, and raspberries, but no peaches. Strawberries where properly mulched are all right.

WAS HE CONVERTED?

The country for many miles around is disturbed by the demonstrative religious revival which has been going on some days at Wells Bottom, a small town near Bayview, O. The climax of excitement was reached Friday night, when the revivalist minister announced to the congregation that Chris Dongel, a notorious infidel, had seen God and was ready to espouse the Gospel.

This announcement created the wildest excitement, during which it is said the people nearly tore the church to pieces and carried the new convert about on their shoulders.

The meeting did not close until four o'clock in the morning it is said, and as a result Dongel seems to have gone mad. It is said that he went to the bank, drew out all his money, and took it to the preacher. Then he locked Jacob Meiser in the cellar and compelled Mrs. Meiser to surrender what money she had at hand, which he also took to the preacher. Afterwards Dongel appeared at a meeting in the fantastic costume of an Indian Chief. He wore a crown of war-flowers and carried a heavy club. After a few murderous flourishes of the latter, he ordered the minister, whom he addressed as Judas Iscariot, to leave the pulpit. The latter protested, whereupon Dongel hit him over the head with his club, almost crushing the poor man's skull.

Dongel then mounted the pulpit, and, menacing those before him, announced himself as Christ, and said he was able not only to judge the world, but to knock it out at the same time. His manner was so violent and his voice so shrill that many women fainted and others made desperate efforts to crowd out of the church. This precipitated the intense excitement and aroused Dongel to the fever heat of frenzy. Springing from the pulpit he began using his club with murderous effect upon men and women alike. He seemed possessed of supernatural strength, and threw off those who attempted to seize him as if they were pigmies. One woman, Mrs. Dilton, he beat into a shapeless mass, and broke her brother's nose with one blow when the latter interposed to save her life. It is believed that Mrs. Dilton must certainly die. It was fully twenty minutes before Dongel could be secured, and only after a struggle which resulted in the fatal wounding of at least three of the Deacons. When overcome the maniac, in whom no vestige of reason now remained, was bound hand and foot and afterward gagged. With this scene of bloodshed and misery the revival terminated, and the physicians of neighboring towns have been busy ever since patching up the victims.

Fears are entertained that the excitement has dethroned the reason of the minister and several members of his flock, and that further distressing trouble will follow unless the commotion subsides.

INFALLIBILITY.

In the book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 19, paragraph 2, we find the following: "Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith."

Some have charged that to accept this as coming from God, would be to claim infallibility for the one referred to in the passage. After a moments thought, every fair minded reasoner will admit, that those who reject this revelation are not the proper ones to determine this question; but those who accept the revelation can properly speak, and say whether in doing so they accepted Joseph Smith's infallibility. There word is worth more to the honest investigator than the word of those who stand by and say, "it looks that way," yet admit their inexperience. The writer begs permission to say, that he accepts the revelation, and does not accept the infallibility of Joseph Smith. The very clause complained of teaches his fallibility very plainly to his mind. It does not command the church to receive his words because he is infallible, but because "he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me;" showing plainly that he was himself fallible, and could receive the truth only by a holy walk before God. For a man to thus humbly acknowledge the inadequacy of his own wisdom, savors far less of the dogma of infallibility, than does the position that one is capable in his own wisdom to determine in all cases, which of the Seer's utterances are of God, and which are not. When I accepted the above revelation, I accepted not the infallibility, but the veracity of Joseph Smith. I yet believe he was a great and good man, who had respect enough for the truth to represent nothing as coming from God which he did not receive of God.

This is, I think, all the revelation demands. Convince me that Joseph Smith would either lie or impose his opinions upon the church as revelations from God, and I will denounce him as an impostor. Surely God would not choose such an individual to bring forth the Book of Mormon and establish the church.

Suppose a gentleman should decide to build a house, and employ workmen thereon; and to one of 'their number he would give charge of the building, that he might take the oversight of the labors of his fellows; and to them he would say, "His word shall ye receive as from mine own mouth," would they understand that the infalibility of this workman was thereby established?

No, but simply his veracity and faithfulness. His comrades would understand that their employer had confidence that he would faithfully transmit any instruction he would give to his coworkers. In this light I accept Joseph the Seer; and I am confident that in this I speak the sentiment of every man and woman who accepts the revelation referred to. No confessed skeptic can choke the doctrine of infallibility down us. It is preposterous for any unbeliever in a doctrine to presume to interpret the faith of the believer. Latter Day Saints have always had this disposition of men to contend against. They have not submitted to it; I think they never will. When God said of Abraham; "I know him that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord," did he declare Abraham's infallibility? Did Christ mean that the apostles were infallible when he said, "If they have kept my sayings, they will keep yours also? Shall we say that Ananias was infallible because the Lord said to Paul: "Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told you what you must do?" Did the angel establish the infallibility of Peter when he told Cornelius to send for him saying; "who shall tell thee words whereby thou and thy house shall be saved?" The answer to these questions will be the answer to the question; does the revelation under investigation teach the infallibility of Joseph?

Respectfully, CREDULOUS.

THE GATHERING.

BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR.

In the Herald for the 28th ult., there are two articles on the doctrine of the gathering of the Saints, which need to be reviewed for many reasons, which do and will appear. They differ widely from each other on some points, but are a unit in opposing and rejecting what the church has endorsed and taught on the subject for the past fifty-five years. The first one claims that the literal gathering as held by Israel and the former and latter day Saints, "is a carnal conception of a spiritual truth;" and the other claims that "literal Israel" will be gathered "to where their 'Zion and Ierusalem' is located;" (which he says is in Palestine); but, that they will not be so gathered until Christ's second coming and the resurrection takes place; and further, that the Saints-none of them-will be gathered until they are resurrected or changed," Christ comes, and then by the angels only. That the true Israel of God, whether living or dead, will be "caught up to meet the Lord" at his glorious appearing, the church has always taught; and it, in all ages, has also taught that the greater part of the true Israel of God, whether they be of the "literal" or "adopted" seed, will be gathered to the promised lands of their inheritance, both in Asia and America, prior and preparatory to the glorious advent of Christ as "King of Kings and Lord of Lords;" and, that when he thus appears, then "the remainder"—composed of one taken from the bed, one from the mill, one from the field, and the like—will be translated and gathered by the angels to meet the Lord and all his Saints in the clouds of glory.

In our previous article on the gathering, (Herald for January 10th, 1885), we alluded to Elder Gurley's views, for the reason that, in Herald for November 22d, 1884, he rejects that doctrine as taught by the church; and if the treatment given the subject then was not to Elder Gurley sufficiently clear and definite, it is hoped what may now be written will not lack in that direction. Elders Briggs and Gurley both affirm, and re-affirm, that the church has in the past, by resolution, declared that there "is no place" to which the Saints are commanded to gather; and they thence argue that the doctrine as held and taught by us is wrong.

To this we have to say: (1) that no such "resolution" is to be found in the church records from 1852 to 1884; and, (2) that the only place where such words are found in Conference minutes, is in the preamble to a resolution written and moved by Elder J. W. Briggs, in Conference at Plano, Illinois, April 6th to 12th, 1876, and adopted as its last act prior to adjournment-adopted with great haste and little scrutiny by the few remaining members in the closing moments of Conference! The words "no place" were then, and since have been generally understood (with possibly the exception of the mover and a very few others) as meaning the same as "no stake," in the resolutions referred to by the preamble. That this is the "spiritual" if not the "carnal" conception of the phrase, is clear from the preamble and resolution, both of which we herewith submit:

"Whereas the conferences in the past have affirmed that there is at present no piace of gathering; therefore, be it Resolved. That any Elder teaching contrary to the resolutions of General Conference is censurable."

One of the "resolutions" alluded to in the above "preamble," was adopted in the first General Conference of the Reorganized Church, at Newark, Rock Co., Wis., and presided over by Elder J. W. Briggs. It reads as follows:

"That in the opinion of this Conference, there is no stake to which the Saints on this Continent are commanded to gather at the present time, but that the Saints in all other lands are commanded to gather to this land, preparatory to the re-establishment of the Church in Zion, when the scattered Saints on this land will also be commanded to gather and return to Zion, and to their inheritances in fulfillment of the promises of God. And it is the duty of the Saints to turn their hearts and their faces toward Zion, and supplicate the Lord God for such deliverance."

This resolution was re-affirmed in the April Conference at Amboy, Illinois, 1863. The conference of April, 1875, by resolution, appointed a committee of five to effect "a gathering of the Saints into a more centralized condition," and affirmed that, "such centralization is demanded by the necessities of the church and the genius of the latter day work." This action of conference finally resulted in locating the business center of the church in Lamoni, Iowa, its present site. It was upon these resolutions, all of which endorsed and promulgated the doctrine of the gathering as taught in the sacred books of the church that the preamble and resolution of 1876 were based, and to which they referred. Now, if the words "no place" were not and are not to be understood as meaning "no stake," where we find them in these resolutions, and in that preamble, then it looks very much like an intentional trick and deception. If the words "no place" do not, in that preamble, mean, and were not intended to mean, "no stake," then the preamble is false, deceptive, and misleading. These resolutions referred to endorse, affirm, and provide for the gathering. But Elders Briggs and Gurley argue that the resolution of 1876 repeals them, so that thenceforward the gathering has not been a doc-trine of the church. If the framers of that preamble and resolution intended thereby to repeal and repudiate the doctrine of the gathering, then they fail miserably; for they refer for authority and sanction to those very resolutions which provided for the gathering, and they profess to have been framed for the very purpose of maintaining and enforcing, instead of repealing them.

Another error in their argument lies in the fact, that they use the words "place" and "regions round about" as meaning the same thing—that is, that "regions round about" is a place! But to close on this point, we restate the fact, that the church has never, by resolution, said there was "no place" to which the saints were commanded at present to gather, only in the sense that there is "no stake," as taught from the first.

Elder Briggs argues that the language of the revelation of 1841, exonerates the Church from building the Temple and a city at Independence, Mo. It reads:

"Verily, verily I say unto you, that when I [the Lord] give a commandment to any of the sons of men, to do a work unto my name, and those sons of men go with all their mights, and with all they have, to perform that work, and cease not their diligence, and their enemies come upon them, and hinder them performing that work; behold it behooveth me to require that work no more at the hands of those sons of men, but to accept their offerings; and the iniquity and transgression of my holy laws and commandments, I will visit upon the heads of those who hindered my work, unto the third and fourth generation, so long as they repent not, and hate me, saith the Lord God. Therefore, for this cause have I accepted the offerings of those whom I commanded to build up a city and an house unto my name, in Jackson County, Missouri, and were hindred by their enemies, saith the Lord your God; And I will answer judg-ment, and wrath, and indignation, wailing and anguish, and gnashing of teeth, upon their heads, unto the third and fourth generation, so long as they repent not and hate me, saith the Lord your God."

I have italicised words in the above extract partly for the reason that Elder Briggs, in his article, puts the word "the" in the place of "those" in the revelation, and in this way he perverts it, and makes the revelation to say and to mean what it does not, and thus misleads and deceives the unlearned and unstable. "Those sons of men" who were commanded to build a city and a temple unto the Lord at Independence, in 1831-33, have passed away, with few exceptions. But all this is no reason why the church will not build that city and temple in this generation, as the Lord has promised. The hindrances before mentioned can not make the promises of God of none effect.

Elder Briggs claims that Christ did "repudiate" "a literal gathering;" but the facts are he deplored and bewailed the unwillingness of Israel to be gathered by him. [They would not comply with the prerequisite conditions of righteousness therefor.] His words were:

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." Matt. 23: 37.

And after his resurrection, when among the Nephites, he reiterated the same sentiments, and also applied them to the future from then, saying:

"How oft would I have gathered you, as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings; yea, O ye people of the house of Israel, who have fallen; yea, O ye people of the house of Israel, ye that dwell at Jerusalem, as ye that have fallen; yea, how oft would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her chickens, and ye would not. O ye house of Israel, whom I have spared, how oft will I gather you as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, if ye will repent and return unto me with full purpose of heart. But if not, O house of Israel, the places of your dwellings shall become desolate, until the time of the fulfilling of the covenants to your fathers."—Book of Nephi

Here we have in few words-plain words—the sentiments and purposes of Jesus Christ in respect to the "literal gathering" of his Israel. He wills to gather his people as often as they become worthy. His teachings are clear and decisive upon the point; and of right they ought to be the end of controversy with all Latter Day Saints. All the Scriptures, ancient and modern, are in perfect agreement with the teachings of Jesus, and Zion's watchmen should see eye to eye in these important matters. The entire literature of the church, from the very first, is full of teachings in favor of the literal gathering of God's righteous, worthy Israel, prior and preparatory to, as also at, the time of Christ's second advent.

The following, which Elder Briggs claimed Christ revealed to him November 18th, 1851, is plainly in favor of a "literal gathering" and literal building up of Zion as promised in the revelations of Joseph the Seer. Will he have us to accept this revelation as "a carnal conception"? And if he was deceived then, how does he know his present theory is not likewise "a carnal conception." The revelation says:

"Verily, verily, saith the Lord, even Jesus Christ, unto his servant, Jason W. Briggs, concerning the Church:—Behold I have not cast off my people; neither have I changed in regard to Zion: Yea verily, my people shall be redeemed, and my law shall be kept which I revealed unto my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., for I am God and not man, and who is he that shall turn me from my purpose, or destroy whom I would preserve? Wolves have entered into the flock, and who shall deliver them? Where is he that giveth his life for the flock? Behold I will judge those who call themselves shepherds, and have preyed upon the flock of my pastures. * * * "Therefore, let the Elders whom I have ordain-

"Therefore, let the Elders whom I have ordained by the hand of my servant Joseph, or by the hand of those ordained by him, resist not this authority, nor faint in the discharge of duty, which is to preach my gospel as revealed in the record of the Jews, and the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; and cry repentance and remission of sins through obedience to the gospel, and I will sustain them and give them my Spirit; and in my own due time will I call upon the seed of Joseph Smith, and I will bring one forth, and he shall be mighty and strong, and he shall preside over the High Priesthood of my Church; and then shall the quorums assemble, and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be re-inhabited, as I said unto my servant Joseph Smith;—after many days shall all these things be accomplished, saith the Spirit."

Oliver Cowdery, in the very article from which Elder Gurley makes his partial and imperfect extracts at the close of his paper in Herald, page 142, teaches plainly the literal gathering of Israel to the lands of their inheritance, prior and preparatory to the second coming of Christ; and this, too, in immediate connection with the preaching of the gospel, as we shall presently see. These extracts utterly disprove Elder Gurley's theory, for they state that those from among the Gentiles who obey the gospel in these last days shall "be delivered," and that "they shall understand the plan of salvation and restoration of Israel, as the Lord manifested to the ancients." This proves entirely too much for Elder Gurley, for it is a fact that the plan of deliverance, salvation, and "restoration of Israel" as taught by the "choice seer," was understood and adopted by the first Saints just as he taught. And if he taught wrong, then the Saints did not "understand" correctly, and the promise by the angel proves. untrue. Furthermore, that same extract says—"Before the coming of the Son of Man the second time, * * * whoso is not prepared can not abide; but such as are found faithful and remain, shall be (1) gathered with his people and (2) caught up to meet the Lord in the cloud, and so shall they inherit eternal life." From this, nothing can be plainer than that the body of the Saints will first "be gathered," and after that they will be "caught up to meet the Lord in the cloud." This is precisely what is taught in the revelations of the "Choice Seer," and precisely what is taught in both the Old and New Testaments. Isaiah says:

"In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord of Hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden underfoot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the Lord of Hosts, the Mount Zion."—Isa. 18:7.

Now put with this the following from the same prophet, chapter 59: 20:

"And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord."

In further confirmation, the Psalmist says:

"Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion; for the time to favor her, yea, the set time, is come. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favor the dust thereof. So the heather shall fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth thy glory. When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory."—Ps. 102: 13-16.

From this we see clearly the Lord will not "appear in his glory" until he first builds up Zion. In order to do this fully, the new covenant, the gospel, must be sent to Israel as predicted by Jeremiah 31: 31-37; Ezekiel 36: 24-30; and by Paul where he says:

"For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits, that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved; as it is written, there shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob; for this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins."—Rom. II: 25-27.

For this event the Psalmist prayed:

"Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion! When the Lord bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad."—Ps. 14:7.

The reader will please not forget, that it is not till after "the Lord shall build up Zion" that he will "appear in glory," and then they will see the necessity for the gathering of Zion's children before the second coming of Christ. There is a Jerusalem in the land of Palestine, and there will be a Zion there in due time; and there will be a Zion—a New Jerusalem—on this continent, and that, too, prior to Christ's second advent. In proof see Isa. 18:1-7; Joel 2:32; Rom. 11:26; Ps. 14:7; Isa. 59:20; with I Nephi 3:41; 7:2,3; 2 Nephi 5:5,9; 7:2; 11:16; 12:3; Mosiah 8:7; Book of Nephi 7:4; 9:10,11.

Why should it be thought incredible that God's Israel on this land of Joseph, whether they be the literal or the adopted seed, should have a Jerusalem—a Zion—on this land, as well as for Judah and his fellows to have a Jerusalem and Zion in Palestine? (Jerusalem signifies, city of peace, and security; and Zion, purity, holiness). In further proof that Gentiles and Israel will be converted and gathered, and that Zion will be established, before the wicked are utterly destroyed, and before Christ's second coming, we give the following:

"And now, these are the words: Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will lift mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people; and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders." And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers; they shall bow down to thee with their faces towards the earth, and lick up the dust of thy feet; and thou shall know that I am the Lord: for they shall not be ashamed that wait for me.

"And now I, Jacob, would speak somewhat concerning these words: For behold, the Lord has shewn me that those who were at Jerusalem, from whence we came, have been slain and carried away captive; nevertheless, the Lord has shewn unto me that they should return again. And he also has shewn unto me, that the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel: should manifest himself unto them in the flesh; and after he should manifest himself, they should scourge him and crucify him, according to the words of the angel, who spake it unto me. And after they have hardened their hearts and stiffened their necks against the Holy One of Israel, behold, the judgments of the Holy One of Israel shall come upon them. And the day cometh that they shall be smitten and afflicted. Wherefore, after they are driven to and fro, for thus saith the angel, many shall be afflicted in the flesh and shall not be suffered to perish, because of the prayers of the faithful, they shall be scattered, and smitten and hated; nevertheless, the Lord will be merciful unto them, that when they shall come to the knowledge of their Redeemer, they shall be gathered together again to the lands of their inherit-

And blessed are the Gentiles, they of whom the prophet has written: for behold, if it so be that they shall repent and fight not against Zion, and do not unite themselves to that great and abominable church, they shall be saved: for the Lord God will fulfill his covenants which he has made unto his children: and for this cause the prophet has written these things. Wherefore, prophet has written these things. Wherefore, they that fight against Zion and the covenant people of the Lord, shall lick up the dust of their feet; and the people of the Lord shall not be ashamed. For the people of the Lord are they who wait for him: for they still wait for the coming of the Messiah. And behold, according to the words of the prophet, the Messiah will set himself again the second time, to recover them: wherefore, he will manifest himself unto them in power, and great glory, unto the destruction of their enemies, when that day cometh when of their enemies, when that day cometh when they shall believe in him; and none will he destroy that believe in him. And they that believe not in him, shall be destroyed, both by fire, and by tempest, and by earthquakes, and by bloodsheds, and by pestilence, and by famine. And they shall know that the Lord is God, the Holy One of Israel; for shall the prey be taken from the mighty, or the lawful captive delivered? But thus saith the Lord: Even the captives of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered; for the mighty God shall deliver his covenant people. For thus saith the Lord: I will contend with them that contendeth with thee, and I will feed them that oppress thee, with their own flesh; and they shall be drunken with their own blood, as with sweet wine; and all flesh shall know that I the Lord am thy Savior and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob."—2 Nephi 5:3-5.

And we cite in further proof, I Nephi 7: 1, 2 2 Nephi 5: 4, 5; II: 3, 4; I2: 5, 6, II-I3; Book of Nephi 9: 10-I2; I0: I. This last cited text, with other similar ones in the Book of Mormon, and also in the Old and New Testaments—especially Galations 3: 26-29; Rom. 8: 17; II: I7-24; Eph. 2: II-I9,—prove that when the Gentiles become the children of God they are the true Israel, and are numbered with them, and are heirs to all the precious promises.

To show the reader that Elder Gurley misinterprets and misstates Oliver Cowdery in the extracts he made from the Messenger and Advocate we quote the entire article, except the three first paragraphs, and respectfully ask the reader to note, (1), that, prior to and in immediate connection with Israel's gathering, the gospel is to be preached to them and the Gentiles; (2), that as a result of gospel conversion the Gentiles and Israel are to be gathered; and, (3), that Zion and Jerusalem will in this way be built up; and, (4), that this will be done before the final destruction of the wicked, and, (5), "before the coming of the Son of Man the second time.

"I gave, in my last, a few words on the subject of a few items as spoken by the angel at the time the knowledge of the record of the Nephites was communicated to our brother, and in consequence of the subject of the gospel and that of the gathering of Israel's being so connected, I found it difficult to speak of the one without mentioning the other; and this may not be improper, as it is evident, that the Lord has decreed to bring forth the fulness of the gospel in the last days, previous to gathering Facob, but a preparatory work, and the other is to follow in quick succession.

This being of so much importance, and of so deep interest to the saints, I have thought best to give a farther detail of the heavenly message, and if I do not give it in the precise words, shall strictly confine mysel to the facts in substance.

David said, (Ps. 100), "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands," that is all the earth. "Serve the Lord with gladness: Come before his presence with singing." This he said in view of the glorious period for which he often prayed, and was anxious to behold, which he knew could not take place until the knowledge of the glory of God covered all lands, or all the earth. Again he says. [Ps. 107] "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good: For his mercy endureth forever. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom he has redeemed from the hand of the enemy; and gathered out of the lands from the east, and from the west; from the north and from the south.—They wandered in the wilderness in a solitary way; they found no city to dwell in. Hungry and thirsty, their soul fainted in them. Then they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, and he delivered them out their distresses: and led them in the right way that they might go to the city of habitation."

Most clearly was it shown to the prophet, that the righteous should be gathered from all the earth: He knew that the children of Israel were led from Egypt, by the right hand of the Lord, and permitted to possess the land of Canaan, though they were rebellious in the desert; but he farther knew that they were not gathered from the east, the west, the north and the south, at that time; for it was clearly manifested that the Lord himself would prepare a habitation, even as he said, when he would lead them to a city of refuge. In that, David saw a promise for the righteous, see 144 Ps.] when they should be delivered from those who oppressed them, and from the hand of strange children, or the enemies of the Lord; that their sons should be like plants grown up in their youth, and their daughters like cornerstones, polished after the similitude of a beautiful palace. It is then that the sons and daughters shall prophesy, old men dream dreams, and young men see visions. At that time the garners of the righteous will be full, affording all manner of store. It was while contemplating this time, and viewing this happy state of the righteous, that he further says: "The Lord shall reign forever, even thy God, O, Zion, unto all generations—Praise ye the Lord."

Isaiah, who was on the earth at the time the ten tribes of Israel were led away captive from the land of Canaan, was shown, not only their calamity and affliction, but the time when they were to be delivered. After reproving them for their corruption and blindness, he prophesies of their dispersion. He says, "Your cour desolate, your cities are burnt with fire: He says, "Your country is land, strangers devour it in your presence, and it is thus made desolate, being overthrown by strangers." He further says, while speaking of the iniquity of that people: "Thy princes are rebellious, and companions of thieves; every one loves gifts, and follows after rewards; judge not the fatherless, neither does the cause of the widow come unto them. Therefore, says the Lord, the Lord of hosts, the mighty One of Israel, Ah, I will ease me of my adversaries, and avenge me of my enemies." But after this calamity has befallen Israel, and the Lord has poured upon them his afflicting judgments, as he said by the mouth of Moses—"I will heap mischiefs upon them. I will spend my arrows upon them.—They shall be afflicted with hunger, and devoured with burning heat, and with bitter destruction: I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them, with the poison of serpents of the earth"—he will also fulfill this further prediction uttered by the mouth of Isaiah. "I will turn my hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin: and I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning: afterward you shall be called, the city of righteousness, the faithful city." Then will be fulfilled, also, the saying of David: "And he led them forth by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation."

Isaiah continues his prophecy concerning Israel, and tells them what would be done for them in the last days; for thus it is written: "The word that Isaiah the son of Amos saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem. And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem .-- And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plough-shares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nations shall not lift up the sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. And the Lord will create upon every dwelling place of his people in Zion, and upon their assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night; for upon all the glory shall be a defence," (or above, shall be a covering and a defence). "And there shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the day-time from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from storm and from rain. And his people shall dwell safely, they shall possess the land forever, even the land which was promised to their fathers for an ever-lasting inheritance:" for behold, says the Lord by the mouth of the prophet: "The day will come that I will sow the house of Israel with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast. 'And it shall come to pass, that like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I watch over them, to build and to plant, says the Lord."

For this happy situation and blessed state of Israel did the prophets look, and obtained a promise, that, though the house of Israel and Judah, should violate the covenant, the Lord, in the last days would make with them a new one: not according to the one which he made with their fathers in the day that he took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; "which," said the Lord, "my covenant they broke, although I was a husband and a father unto them: but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel: After those days, says the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and will write it in their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people."

"For thus says the Lord, I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have mercy on his dwelling places; and the city shall be builded upon her own heap, and the palace shall remain after the manner thereof. And out of them shall proceed thanksgiving, and the voice of them that make merry:—and I will multiply them and they shall not be few; I will also glorify them and they shall not be small. Their children also shall be as aforetime, and their congregation shall be established before me, and I will punish all that oppress them. Their nobles shall be of themselves, and their governor shall proceed from the midst of them.

At the same time, says the Lord, will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people; I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth; I will say to the north. Give up, and to the south, keep not back:-bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth. And in those days, and at that time, says the Lord, though Israel and Judah have been driven and scattered, they shall come together, they shall even come weeping: for with supplications will I lead them: they shall go and seek the Lord their God. They shall ask the way to Zion, with their faces thitherward, and say, Come. and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten, and watchmen upon Mount Ephraim shall say, Arise, and let us go up to Zion, unto the holy Mount of the Lord our God; for he will teach us of his ways, and instruct us to walk in his paths." That the way for this to be fully accomplished may be prepared, "the Lord will utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea, and with his mighty wind shake his hand over the river and smite it in its seven streams, and make men go over dry-shod. And there shall be a high way for the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria; like as it was to Israel when they came up out of the land of Egypt."

And thus shall Israel come: not a dark corner of the earth shall remain unexplored, nor an sland of the seas be left without being visited; for as the Lord has removed them into all corners of the earth, he will cause his mercy to be as abundantly manifested in their gathering as his wrath in their dispersion, until they are gathered according to the covenant. He will, as he said by the prophet, "send for many fishers and they shall fish them; and after send for many hunters, who shall hunt them;" not as their enemies have to afflict, but with glad tidings of great joy, with a message of peace, and a call for their return.

And it will come to pass, that though the house of Israel has forsaken the Lord, and bowed down and worshiped other gods, which were no gods, and been cast out before the face of the world. they will know the voice of the Shepherd when he calls upon them this time; for soon his day of power comes, and in it his people will be willing to hearken to his connsel; and even now are they already beginning to be stirred up in their hearts to search for these things, and are daily reading the ancient prophets, and are marking the times, and seasons of their fulfillment. Thus God is preparing the way for their return.

But it is necessary that you should understand, that what is to be fulfilled in the last days, is not only for the benefit of Israel, but the Gentiles, if they will repent and embrace the gospel; for they are to be remembered also in the same covenant, and are to be fellow heirs with the seed of Abraham, inasmuch as they are so by faith—for God is no respecter of persons. This was shown to Moses, when he wrote—"Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people!"

In consequence of the transgression of the Jews at the coming of the Lord, the Gentiles were called into the kingdom, and for this obedience are to be favored with the gospel in its fulness first, in the last days; for it is written, "The first shall be last, and the last first." Therefore, when the fulness of the gospel, as was preached by the righteous, upon this land, shall come forth, it shall be declared to the Gentiles first, and whoso will repent shall be delivered, for they shall understand the plan of salvation and restoration for Israel, as the Lord manifested to the ancients.—They shall be baptized with water and with the Spirit they shall lift up their hearts with joy and gladness, for the time of their redemption shall also roll on, and for their obedience to the faith they shall see the house of Jacob come with great glory, even with songs of everlasting joy, and with him partake of salvation.

Therefore, as the time draws near when the sun is to be darkened, the moon turn to blood, and the stars fall from heaven, the Lord will bring to the knowledge of his people his commandments and statutes, that they may be pre-pared to stand when the earth shall reel to and fro as a drunken man, earthquakes cause the nations to tremble, and the destroying angel goes forth to waste the inhabitants at noon-day; for so great are to be the calamities which are to come upon the inhabitants of the earth, before the coming of the Son of Man the second time, that whoso is not prepared can not abide; but such as are found faithful, and remain, shall be | 1] gathered with his people and [2] caught up to meet the Lord in the cloud, and so shall they inherit eternal life.

I have now given you a rehearsal of what was communicated to our brother, when he was directed to go and obtain the record of the Nephites. I may have missed in arrangement in some instances, but the principle is preserved, and you will be able to bring forward abundance of corroborating scripture upon the subject of the gospel and of the gathering. You are aware of the fact, that to give a minute rehearsal of a lengthy interview with a heavenly messenger, is very difficult, unless one is assisted immediately with the gift of inspiration. There is another item I wish to notice on the subject of visions. The Spirit you know, searches all things, even the deep things of God. When God manifests to his servants those things that are to come, or those which have been, he does it by unfolding them by the power of that Spirit which comprehends all things, always; and so much may be shown and made perfectly plain to the understanding in a short time, that to the world, who are occupied all their life to learn a little, look at the relation of it, and are disposed to call it false. You will understand then, by this, that while those glorious things were being rehearsed, the vision was also opened, so that our brother was permitted to see and understand much more full and perfect than I am able to communicate in I know much may be conveyed to the understanding in writing, and many marvelous truths set forth with the pen, but after all it is but a shadow, compared to an open vision of seeing, hearing and realizing elernal things. And if the fact was known, it would be found, that of all the heavenly communications to the ancients, we have no more in comparison than the alphabet to a quarto vocabulary. It is said, and I believe the account, that the Lord showed the brother of Jared [Moriancumer] all things which were to transpire from that day to the end of the earth, as well as those which had taken I believe that Moses was permitted to see the same, as the Lord caused them to pass, in vision before him as he stood upon the mount; I believe that the Lord Jesus told many things to his apostles which are not written, and after his ascension unfolded all things unto them; I believe that Nephi, the son of Lehi, whom the Lord brought out of Jerusalem, saw the same; I believe that the twelve upon this continent, whom the Lord chose to preach his gospel, when he came down to manifest to this branch of the house of Israel that he had other sheep who should hear his voice, were also permitted to behold the same mighty things transpire in vision before their eyes; and I believe that the angel Moroni, whose words I have been hehearsing, who communicated the knowledge of the record of the Nephites, in this age, saw also, before he hid up the same unto the Lord, great and marvelous things, which were to transpire when the same should come forth; and I also believe, that God will give line upon line, precept upon precept, to his saints, until all these things will be unfolded to them, and they finally sanctified and brought into the Celestial glory, where tears will be wiped from all faces, and sighing and sorrowing flee

May the Lord preserve you from evil and reward you richly for all your afflictions, and crown you in his kingdom. Amen.

Accept, as ever, assurances of the fellowship and esteem of your unworthy brother in the Elder Gurley says the word "carcass"— Matt. 24: 28; "undoubtedly refers to Christ himself;" and uses it as proof that the Saints will not gather till he comes. The words "carcass" and "carcasses" occur no less than thirty-three times in the Old and New Testaments, and they universally refer to bodies, and generally to dead bodies. For this and other reasons we reject such interpretation. The Inspired Translation refers it to the gathered "body" of the Saints, and the "eagles" to the ones taken from the bed, field, mill, etc., who are there called "the remainder." In the common version these are gathered to "the body."—Luke 17: 34-37.

Elder Gurley applies the phrase-"harvest-time" to the immediate time and event of Christ's coming with all his angels and saints. Is this correct? We think not; and we think that kind of interpretation greatly perverts the intention and meaning of God's word. The "harvest" time for the church relates to the work of the gospel ministry; (Matt. 9: 37; 13: 30; Luke 10: 2; John 4: 35-38); and when Jesus says he will "send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other," (Matt. 24: 31), there is not the slightest intimation against the theory of some being gathered from points and places on earth to which they have been previously gathered from among the nations. Neite-er is it evidence that God's ministry on earth will not be engaged at that very time with the angels in the work of gathering the Saints. Angels, and Christ, and the Holy Spirit, "work with" Christ's ministry on earth in carrying out the work of the gospel, including the gathering. In proof see Rev. 14: 6-8; Acts 10: 3-48; Rev. 18: 1-4; Num. 20: 16; Luke 2: 10; Rev. 22: 16; Acts 27: 23; Ps. 34: 7; Acts 5: 19; 8: 26; etc., etc.

It is claimed by Elder Gurley that the

It is claimed by Elder Gurley that the New Jerusalem of the Book of Mormon is to be builded by the "remnant" of Israel," and that they are to "lead" and begin that work. Let us now see just what the promises are on this point. Jesus says:

"But if they [the Gentiles] will repent, and hearken unto my words, [given through the "Choice Seer"] and harden not their hearts, I will establish my Church among them, and they shall come in unto the covenant, and be numbered among this the remnant of Jacob, unto whom I have given this land for their inheritance, and they shall assist my people, the remnant of Jacob; and also, as many of the house of Israel as shall come, that they may build a city, which shall be called the New Jerusalem; and then shall they assist my people that they may be gallered in, who are scattered upon all the face of the land, in unto the New Jerusalem."—Book of Nephi, 10: 1.

Moroni says upon the point:

"Behold, Ether saw the days of Christ, and he spake concerning a New Jerusalem upon this land; and he spake also concerning the house of Israel, and the Jerusalem from whence Lehi should come; after it should be destroyed, it should be built up again a Holy City unto the Lord; * * * and that a New Jerusalem should be built up upon this land unto the remnant of the seed of Foseph, for which things there has been a type; for as Joseph brought his father down into the land of Egypt, even so he died there; wherefore the Lord brought a remnant of the seed of Joseph out of the land of Jerusalem, that he might be merciful unto the seed of Joeph, that they should perish not, even as he was merciful unto the father of Joseph, that he should perish not; wherefore the remnant of the house Foseph shall be built upon this land; and it shall be a land of their inheritance; and they shall build up a Holy City unto the Lord, like unto the Jerusalem of old; and they shall no more be confounded, until the end come, when the earth shall pass away."—Ether 6: 1.

The reader will now carefully notice, (1), that Christ, if the Gentiles repent, will establish his Church "among them;" (2), that, after that is done "they shall come in unto the covenant;" and, (3), that then they shall be numbered "among this the remnant of Jacob," ("the remnant seed of Joseph"); and, (4), that then "they shall assist" this remnant and as many of the house of Israel as shall come, that they may build a city, which shall be called the New Jerusalem; and, (5) that "then shall they assist my people that they may be gathered in."

We now inquire; By whom will Christ thus establish his church among the Gentiles? The answer to this is found first, in the two last paragraphs of section 9, of Book of Nephi, where Christ says:

"For in that day, for my sake shall the Father work a work, which shall be a great and a marvelous work among them; and there shall be among them those who will not believe it, although a man shall declare it unto them. But behold, the life of my servant shall be in my hand; therefore they shall not hurt him, although he shall be marred because of them. Yet I will heal him, for I will show unto them that my wisdom is greater than the cunning of the devil. Therefore, it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not believe in my words, who am Jesus Christ, whom the Father shall cause him to bring forth unto the Gentiles, and shall give unto him power to bring them forth unto the Gentiles, (it shall be done even as Moses said), they shall be cut off from among my people who are of the Covenant."

The inference here is, that this "servant" of Christ is not a Gentile, but simply a minister among and to them; and to prove this to be true we quote 2 Nephi 2:

"For Joseph truly testified, saying: A seer shall the Lord my God raise up, who shall be a choice seer unto the fruit of my loins. Yea, Joseph truly said, thus saith the Lord unto me; A choice seer will I raise up out of the fruit of thy loins; and he shall be esteemed highly among the fruit of thy loins. And unto him will I give commandment, that he shall do a work for the fruit of they loins, his brethren, which shall be of great worth unto them, even to the bringing of them to the knowledge of the covenants which I have made with thy fathers. And I will give unto him a commandment that he shall do none other work save the work which I shall command him. And I will make him great in mine eyes: for he shall do my work. And he shall be great like unto Moses, whom I have said I would raise up unto you, to deliver my people, O house of Israel. And Moses will I raise up, to deliver thy people out of the land of Egypt. But a seer will I raise up out of the fruit of thy loins; and unto him will I give power to bring forth my word unto the seed of thy loins; and not to the bringing forth my word only, saith the Lord, but to the convincing them of my word, which shall have already gone forth among them. Wherefore, the fruit of thy loins shall write; and the fruit of the loins of Judah shall write; and that which shall be written by the fruit of thy loins, and also that which shall be written by the fruit of the loins of Judah, shall grow together, unto the confounding of false doctrines, and laying down of contentions, and establishing peace among the fruit of thy loins, and bringing them to the knowledge of their fathers in the latter days; and also to the knowledge of my covenants, saith the Lord. And out of weakness he shall be made strong, in that day when my work shall commence among all my people, unto the restoring thee, O house of Israel, saith the Lord.

"And thus prophesied Joseph, saying: Behold, that seer will the Lord bless; and they that seek to destroy him, shall be confounded: for this promise, of which I have obtained of the Lord, of the fruit of thy loins, shall be fulfilled. Behold I am sure of the fulfilling of this promise. And his name shall be called after me; and it shall be after the name of his father. And he shall be like unto me; for the thing which the Lord shall bring forth by his hand, by the power of the Lord, shall bring my people unto salvation; yea, thus prophesied Joseph, I am sure of this thing, even as I am sure of the promise of Moses: for the Lord hath said unto me, I will preserve thy seed forever. And the Lord hath said, I will raise up a Moses; and I will give power unto him in a rod; and I will give judgment unto him in writing. Yet I will not loose his tongue, him in writing. that he shall speak much: for I will not make him mighty in speaking. But I will write unto him my law, by the finger of mine own hand; and I will make a spokesman for him. And the Lord said unto me also, I will raise up unto the fruit of thy loins: and I will make for him a spokesman. And I, behold, I will give unto him, that he shall write the writing of the fruit of thy loins, unto the fruit of thy loins; and the spokesman of thy loins shall declare it. And the words which he shall write, shall be the words which are expedient in my wisdom, should go forth unto the fruit of thy loins. And it shall be as if the fruit of thy loins had cried unto them from the dust; for I know their faith. And they shall cry from the dust; yea, even repentance unto their brethren, even after many generations have gone by them. And it shall come to pass that their cry shall go, even according to the simpleness of their words. Because of their faith, their words shall proceed forth out of my mouth unto their brethren, who are the fruit of thy loins; and the weakness of their words will I make strong in their faith, unto the remembering of my covenant which I made unto thy fathers.

From this we learn, (1) that the "choice Seer" by whom the Lord begins his marvelous work, and establishes his church in this dispensation, is from "the fruit of the loins" of Joseph; (2), that his "spokesman" (Oliver Cowdery) was likewise from the "loins" of Joseph; (3), that the "choice Seer" would be "like unto" Moses, and Joseph the son of Israel. All this proves that God's great Latter Day work would be begun by persons of Israelitish lineage, from "the loins" of Joseph; and not by persons of Gentile lineage, though of Gentile nationality. This would fulfill Jeremiah 31: 6-10; Ps. 80: 1-3; Deut. 33: 13-17; and Rom. 9: 4; 11: 23-29, etc., etc. Now, inasmuch as Joseph the "Seer," and Oliver the "spokesman," were of literal Israel, and of the tribe of Joseph, is it not possible, nay, probable, that many who have received the Book of Mormon and the gospel of Christ taught therein, are also of the "house of Israel," and of the tribe of Joseph? We think so. This, then, enables us to see that when the Gentiles "come in unto the covenant," it is administered to them by Israelites of the tribe of Joseph; and, that when the Church of Christ is established "among them," that work is not done by Gentiles, but by Israelites of the tribe of Joseph. This makes plain and consistent the promise of Christ that, when the Gentiles "come in unto the covenant,"they shall "be numbered among" "the remnant of Joseph" "and also as many of the house of Israel as shall come," and be entitled to all the promises pertaining to "the remnant of Joseph" in respect to having "this land for their inheritance," building the New Jerusalem, and every other good promise made to "the remnant of Joseph." This fully identifies them with "the remnant of Joseph" and those of the house of Israel who come into the covenant here. Now, it is a fact, that, Joseph and Oliver-both of the tribe of Josephwere the first in point of time, and the first in rank, or authority in beginning God's marvelous work, establishing Christ's Church, ministering the "covenant" to scattered Israel and the Gentiles, and in teaching the Lamanites—a remnant of Joseph—the restored "covenant" and administering its ordinances to them. These same descendants of Joseph located the site for the New Jerusalem, August, 1831, began to build it up, was aided some by Gentile converts who in this way did "assist" in that work. Mark it; Israelites—with the Seer, and his spokesman, of the tribe of Joseph, as leaders in and beginners of the Church of Christ in these last days—with as many of the Gentiles as receive the covenant, attain to the same promised blessings as "the remnant of Joseph," are "numbered with" them, and are entitled to all the privileges, favors, and blessings which appertain to them. Why, then, is it not proper for them to begin to build the New Jerusalem? And when they do this, do they not really and properly "assist" the "remnant of Joseph" in that work? We think they do; and that in this way the promise of Christ in 9th and 10th chapters of Book of Nephi began to have its fulfillment in August, 1831.

Elder Gurley further states that when the work of building the New Jerusalem "commences, the Lord says he will come down and be in their midst." This is another wide mistake; for it is not until "the remnant of Jacob, and also as many of the house of Israel as shall come," and also the Gentile converts, shall "build a city which shall be called the New Jerusalem," and shall have gathered, with all Christ's people "in unto the New Jerusalem," that Christ promises to be personally with them; for he says, "And then when the New Jerusalem is builded and Christ's people gathered] shall the power of heaven come down among them; and I also will be in the midst." The teachings of Christ in the Book of Mormon provides (1), for the calling and sending of Christ's "servant," (the "choice Seer,") with his "spokesman;" (2), the bringing forth of Christ's words to Israel and the Gentiles by this Seer and spokesman, of the tribe of Joseph; (3), the establishing of Christ's church, and the Lord's "marvelous work," by these servants of Christ; (4), the conversion of Israelites and Gentiles; (5) their building the New Jerusalem; (6), the gathering in of all of Christ's people "who are scattered upon the face of the land, in unto the New Jerusalem;" (7), "then shall the power of heaven come down among them;" and, (8), when this takes place, Christ savs, "and I also will be in the midst." This is the order of the events mentioned, and we have been particular to simplify what we have written concerning them, that those not skilled and learned may understand in respect to them. TOBACCO.

THE use of the weed bearing the above caption is not, in my opinion, prohibited by a positive command of God; but is pronounced by him as not being "good for man," and "is not good for the body, neither for the belly." Notwithstanding this pronunciation by the Almgihty, the "Great I Am," the Allwise of the universe, it is used by many thousands of both men and women; and many good Saints are in this pernicious habit. But few, if any, I am persuaded, take up with this habit and use of tobaccco after they become connected with the church, but those who are in this pernicious and degrading habit acquired it before they knew that God had pronouncit "not good for man."

I know by sad experience that man, in the course of time will become a bound slave to King Tobacco; and when such is the case, it is a trying matter to free himself from it. When the writer entered the church he did so a bound slave to this King Tobacco; but seeing that God had pronounced it "not good for man," and the use of which was "not well pleasing in his sight," he was forced, by a desire to please God and reap the reward promised, to a conclusion to declare war by laying it aside. No sooner than this declaration was made he found himself surrounded by a host of this king's attendants, well armed and equipped for war, making attacks on all sides. The writer, for the sake of brevity, will omit a description of those attacks, and be satisfied by an acknowledgement that since this war commenced with King Tobacco, he has been overcome several times, and his forces captured. But reason, judgment and will in connection with desire, forced conclusion and resolution into line, and hope raised the banner of liberty from whence it had fallen, and war is still waged against King Tobacco. Although he makes almost every house in the land his home, and is perched upon the shelves of every store and shop in the cities, towns and villages in the land, and is carried about by his slaves who chew his flesh and suck his blood in the most loving manner, and is worshipped by the millions, the writer, by the help of the King of Kings and the Lord of Lords, will be free.

THE LATTER DAY SAINTS.

Their Faith, Persecutions, and the Utah Problem, as Explained by Rev. J. F. McDowell.

THE following is a synopsis of a very instructive and interesting sermon delivered at the Latter Day Saints' church in this city, (Council Bluffs, Iowa), by Rev. J. F. McDowell, Sunday evening, February, 15th, 1885.

The faith which we represent was first introduced in these latter days, as we call them, about the year 1830. It necessarily came into direct contact with the prevailing faiths of the day. Necessarily because it was fuller or more complete, and more thoroughly biblical, than anything that existed at the time of its advent. It did not conflict with the prevailing religious thought of the times from the fact that it contradicted no truth or trust then out, but from the fact that there was more of it; and the great rock upon which we and the religious world split, and on either side of which we passed down the stream of time to the present day, was that of revelation. The doctrine that God reveals himself today the same as he did anciently. The church we represent has never retraced the step then taken in that direction. The world has sought to argue our position away, and the most learned of the nineteenth century have endeavored to show its fallacies. Fifty-five years have now almost passed away, and the church still maintains the doctrine that God reveals himself. Never has she swerved from it. Never for a moment of time, has she thought that in assuming that position she assumed a position grossly erroneous. We claim that God reveals himself to-day, because we think (to put it mildly) that we have evidence to favor the thought; that we have substantial Biblical truth to support the doctrine. It seems that after so many years of constant and direct conflict, coming into contact with the most noted theologians of the times, that if there had been an error, it would have been discovered before this time. The church of the Latter Day Saints has had within its ministerial ranks just as large brained men as have represented any other religion extant. Men of thorough research, high literary attainments, profound thought and careful study; and if the doctrine of the church has not been thought absurd or incongruous, they have not been of such a character as to address the groveling passions of human nature simply, but that which is addressed to the better and nobler powers of the human mind. That which is addressed to man's reason, his better judgment and invited his candid consideration. It is the doctrine of faith in God, faith in the law of Jesus Christ, which in all its plenitude, wonderful beauty, excellent glory and saving worth, burst forth in light upon a darkened world. Not for the purpose of establishing an independent government or setting up a system antagonistic to the laws of the country, but for mutual benefit of spiritual and temporal welfare, and to have a mingling of membership separate and distinct from the world at large.

Wild stories are circulated of things that should have occurred among the Latter Day Saints that never had an existence in fact or in truth, and the world has assumed the responsibility of interpreting our belief, and every time they attempt it they get it crooked. Now, suppose I should announce in the daily papers that I should deliver an exposition of Methodism, and I should tell all the wild vagaries that imagination and rumor could conjure up to injure the Methodist doctrine. I should be referred to one of their ministers, and told that he is the proper authority to explain matters pertaining to that church. That is what we ask for ourselves. The ministers of our church ought to be the most capable men to tell you what they believe. The Latter Day Saints claim that a person ought to believe in God and Christ, to repent of their sins and be baptized by immersion. We claim to read in the Bible that the holy spirit was conferred by the power of God upon the baptized believers by the laying on of hands by the ministers of the church, and yet you tell us it is a false doctrine. Read the twelfth chapter of Corinthians. We teach all that is taught in that chapter and are called deluded for so doing. Our persecutions continue because of this doctrinal conflict. When a portion of the membership of the church emigrated to Missouri, the church being abolitionist as regarded slavery, the Missourians anticipated trouble, fearing not that our people were dangerous, not but what they were law-abiding citizens, but fearing that they might exercise an influence on the slaves against their condition of bondage, and they thought the best way to avert this danger which they supposed threatened them, was to resort to persecution and drive the church away from there, and they did so according to the orders of the Governor of the State at that time, who said that the Mormons should be driven from the State or exterminated. Men who had come there and bought property, and had warranty deeds for the same, which they had acquired through honest industry, were forced to relinquish all their hard-earned possessions and comfortable homes and flee with their families.

In 1844 Brigham Young secured the leadership of the church. In 1846 he told the people that all the God they needed was himself; that the Bible and Book of Doctrine and Covenants were like a boy's iacket which one day fit him, but now he had outgrown it. He took with him several hundred followers and started out, finally landing at Salt Lake, where they staid, and you know the balance of the story since then. In August, 1852, Brigham Young introduced the polygamist revelation, claiming that it had been given to Joseph Smith in July, 1843. But we have reason to believe that Joseph Smith never received that revelation; that he never had anything to do with it, and that it was all a concocted scheme of Brigham Young and a few other parties. We have reason to believe that Brigham Young was connected with the conspiracy for the assassination of the Smiths from the expression he used when he heard of their death. He was in the city of Boston when the news was received, and said: "I feel like a new man. I feel like a boy of twenty-one." From this and other things we might tell we believe that he was implicated in their assassination.

Our Book of Doctrines and Covenants contains the purported revelations of God through Joseph Smith to the church. It contains the disciplinary rulings of the church, and we read in it "he that obeyeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land." Polygamy is a violation of one of the constitutional laws of the land. This statement purporting to be from God to the Latter Day Saints' church stands in direct opposition to the doctrine of polygamy. Again we read in this book in relation to marriage and the marital relation of the sexes, "thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shalt cleave unto her and none else." statements brand polygamy for what it is worth, and it is not worth much. earliest account of polygamy is found in the Bible, in the instance of Lamech, who had two wives. It has existed from time immemorial, but Christian countries never tolerated it, as it is forbidden by the creeds of the Christian church. We are taught with regard to this in the very beginning of the Book of Genesis. There the example is given in the instance of Adam and Eve; "and these twain shall be of one flesh." Where polygamy drags its cold, slimy form into the household, the home is blighted—the prospects of happiness are ruined, and the sacredness of the sweetest words in the world, father, mother, sister and brother, are forever destroyed.

If the question of polygamy in Utah is any problem at all, I know not wherein that problem exists. An Episcopal minister of Salt Lake City said: "The reason why federal officers never accomplish anything when they come here is because Brigham Young and his colleagues buy them." Men that have been sent there have invariably been bought over. is a problem, the best way to solve it is to carry on the work as it has been begun. The disfranchisement and denial of all social and political rights to the adherents of the practice will prove effective. Officers say they have no right to interfere with this immoral fostering of licentiousness, because it will be interfering with religious liberty. Nonsense. An African may put up his idol here and worship it without molestation, but if he proceeds to sacrifice a child to that idol, see how quickly his religious liberty ceases, because he violates the law of our country forbidding murder. Just so with religious liberty in Utah. They may sing their hymns, build their chapels, pray and preach all they want to, but when they come to practice polygamy they are violating a constitutional law, and there their religious liberty must cease. The laws of our country must be executed and fearlessly carried

NORTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Omaha, Neb., February 20th, 1885, at half-past seven o'clock; W. M. Rumel president, H. Nielsen clerk. Evening session was devoted to prayer and testimony.

Reports of Branches.—Pleasant Grove 25; Omaha, (English), 83, 2 received by letter; Union 31, 1 expelled, 2 removed by letter, 1 received; Hayes 29; Omaha (Scandinavian) 26, 3 removed by letter; Platte Valley 32, and 6 scattered.

Elders' Reports.—James Caffall, by letter, E. C. Brand, Oscar Brown, Ed. Rannie, P. Andersen, N. Brown, W. M. Rumel.

Notice from the Hayes Branch, that its name had been changed from Hayes to Blair Branch, was read and endorsed.

H. Nielsen presented his resignation as secretary and Bishop's Agent of the district.

Resolved, That inasmuch as so many members of the Douglas Branch have removed, and not enough remain to hold meeetings, that said branch be declared disorganized. The Omaha Scandinavian Branch was declared disorganized.

Report of committee on drafting rules of representation was read as follows:

To the president and officers of the Northern Nebraska District, in conference assembled: Your committee, appointed by your honorable body, to draft rules of representation, which shall place the district in harmony with the law in Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 27, par. 4, "For all things must be done in order, and by common consent in the church," do respectfully submit the following:

Sec. I.—That all the Melchisedec priesthood in good standing residing in the district, and all missionaries under General Conference appointment, laboring in the district, be entitled to voice and vote in district conference when present.

Sec. 2.—That each branch is hereby entitled to send delegates to conference at the ratio of one delegate to each six members, or fraction thereof; and one vote in conference to each delegate to which they may be entitled.

The delegates present at conference from any one branch, shall be entitled to cast the full vote of the branch of which they are delegates, unless otherwise instructed by their branch; provided that in case of a disagreement of views among the members of said delegation, the full delegation not being present, they shall be entitled to cast only their individual votes as said delegates.

Sec. 3.—That qualification of delegates shall only be membership in good standing in the branch they represent.

Sec. 4.—That each delegate must be furnished with proper credentials, signed by the president or secretary of the branch they represent.

Sec. 5.—Delegates must be elected in a regular business meeting, of which there shall have been due notice given in a public meeting of the branch, no less than one week previous.

Sec. 6.—That in selecting delegates the branch should respect the law in Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 17, par. 25, "That one or more of said delegates be a Teacher or Priest, who shall take to said conference the statistical report thereof."

Sec. 7.—That all laws that conflict with the above rules of representation, are hereby repealed.

Sec. 8.—That these rules of representation may be amended at any session of conference, provided that a written notice of such proposed amendment or amendments, be given to each branch in the district, by the person or persons proposing such amendment or amendments, thirty days previous to meeting of conference.

Sec. 9.—That to amend, a two-thirds vote will be necessary.

Committee. { J. CAFFALL. D. JONES, chairman. Ed. RANNIE.

The spiritual authorities of the church were sustained in righteousness. The district president was sustained. The resignation of the district secretary was accepted, and Isaac Sylvester was chosen to act in his stead.

Bishop's Agent reported on hand at last report $8.15; expended to the ministry $8.15. H. Nielsen, agent.

Resolved, That we recommend to the Bishop, that H. Nielsen be released upon his own request, as Bishop's Agent, and that W. M. Rumel be recommended in his stead; That we appreciate the labors of James Caffall, E. C. Brand and P. Anderson and that our delegate to General Conference be instructed to use his influence to have them returned to this district; That we recommend W. M. Rumel to General Conference for recognition as appointee by said conference, that as the president of this district and laboring in the field, he may receive financial aid from the Bishop. W. M. Rumel was elected delegate to General Conference.

Resolved, That the presidents of branches be instructed to send money to the district secretary, to defray the expenses of the delegate to General Conference; That all desiring to labor in the district, may do so under the direction of the district president; That we hold a two days' meeting at Webster, the 6th and 7th of June, the district president to have charge of the same. Contribution $13.00

Preaching Sunday forenoon by N. Brown; prayer and testimony meeting in the afternoon; preaching in the evening by E. C. Brand.

Adjourned to meet at Fremont, Nebraska, June 26th, at 7: 30 p. m.

FREMONT DISTRICT,

Conference convened at Dawsenburg, Iowa, February 28th and March 1st, 1885, Henry Kemp presiding, and J. W. Stubbart Secretary.

Branch Reports.—Hamburg 29; Elm Creek 37; Plum Creek 86; Shenandoah 94; Mill Creek 25, 3 received by letter; Keystone 53. All in fair condition spiritually. Bishop's Agent's report.-On hand last report, $7987; receipts $390.86; expenditures $464.73. Elders S. S. Wilcox by letter; Wm. Leeka, J. Good, S. Dykes, George Kemp, Wm. Gaylord, M. Gaylord, H. Kemp and J. M. Stubbart in peson; Priests M. Stubbart, E. Weed, J. T. Wolsey, S. Dykes, Jr., L. C. Donaldson by letter; and Teacher A. R. Hills, reported.

Resolved, That all Priests and Elders, whose labors are not required in branches, travel and preach under the direction of the district president.

J. Caffall was sustained as president of the mission; J. M. Stubbart as secretary of the district; H. Kemp was to be sustained by our faith and prayers as president of the district; and all the authorities of the Church were sustained in righteousness. The delegates chosen to represent the district at the next Annual Conference were Wm. Leeka, J. M. Stubbart, J. Good and H. Kemp.

Bro. James Caffall did the preaching during conference. The prayer meetings were conducted by J. M. Stubbart and H. Kemp. A good feeling was generally manifest. The meetings were well attended. The official strength of the conference was, 1 Apostle, 8 Elders, 4 Priests, 2 Teachers, and 2 Deacons.

Adjourned to meet at Keystone, Iowa, the 30th, and 31st of May, 1885.

PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Philadelphia, Pa., at 10: 30 a. m., on Sunday, February 22d, 1885, Joseph A. Stewart in the chair. Bro. Hosea H. Bacon was chosen clerk pro tem, and afterwards to fill the office for the next term.

Branch Reports.—Philadelphia Branch 54; 16 received from Olive Branch, 2 expelled; Brooklyn Branch 19; New Park Branch 17. Bishop's Agent, Archibald Cameron, reported. Received from tithing and free will offerings $60.08; paid out $59.50; balance forwarded to Bishop, 58c. The committee appointed to audit the Bishop's Agent's accounts reported them correct. Elders Asa Copeland, Sr., John Stone, Absalom Grist, Wm. Small and Joseph A. Stewart, reported in person. Priest Hosea H. Bacon reported the Philadelphia Branch in a better spiritual condition than it has been for some time, with prayer meetings well attended, and the Saints more alive to the work, notwithstanding the shaking up they had during last term. Priests Pearson G. White and Wm. H. Harrison; Teachers Jacob Peters, reported.

Brethren E. L. Kelley, Archibald Cameron and John Stone were appointed delegates to the General Conference. The delegates present at the General Conference were requested to cast the vote of the district for those not present. The delegates present at the General Conference were instructed to request the appointment of Bro. W. H. Kelley to the Eastern Mission. Bro. Joseph A. Stewart was chosen president of the district for the next six months.

Adjourned to meet in Philadelphia on the fourth Sunday in August next.

Afternoon Session.-Resolved, That we rescind the resolution passed at last conference, to hold conference every six months; That the conference be held every three months as formerly.

Elders Nirk, J. F. McDowell, Wm. Thompson, R. Etzenhouser (baptized: 5): Priest G. Shimel; Teachers Ezra Merrill and J. T. Roberts, Deacon Lyke, reported.

Resolved, That we appoint Brn. Roth, Etzenhouser and Wm. McBurney to audit the Bishop's Agent's books.

We your committee as auditors of the Bishop's Agent's books report that we found all items kept in good business-like form, and correct. We recommend that the report be received and the committee discharged. J. S. Roth, R. Etzenhouser, Wm. McBurney, committee. Report received, committee discharged.

Bro. I. N. White offered his resignation as president of the district, which was received.

Resolved, That J. S. Roth be recommended to the Bishop as successor to I. N. White, as his agent for the Des Moines District.

That we appoint I. N. White and J. S. Roth as our delegates to the General Conference to be held at Independence, Missouri, on the 6th day of

Resolved, That the local authorities labor under the direction of the district president.

Whereas it now appears that the What Cheer Branch is in such a scattered condition, as not to hold meetings, therefore be it Resolved, That we declare it disorganized.

Resolved, That we elect Bro. J. S. Roth as book agent for the Des Moines district;

Resolved, That we elect Wm. C. Nirk for president of the Des Moines district; That we elect J. S. Roth, for president of the district;

The above forty-three persons have not been heard from, by either president or secretary, although a year has almost gone, and several appeals have been made. We still expect to hear from each one before April 6th, by report of what they have done since last April; and also what they can and will do in the coming year. Brethren, do not delay longer. If you are going to work we want to hear of it; if not, to take necessary action. Those having Licenses, please report; but few are received as yet. Please read and heed notice to First Quorum, in Herald for March 7th. Send reports to R. Etzenhouser, in care box 449, Independence, Missouri. Those sending for Licenses will address John A. Robinson, 108 Garfield Avenue, Peoria, Ill., with full items as on Church records, and a recommendation from district or branch president, or missionary in charge. Enclose stamp for return.

R. ETZENHOUSER, Pres. Fifth Quorum.

THIRD QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Members of the third Quorum of Elders, will please report to Bro. J. T. Kinnaman, Stewartsville, Mo. It is hoped and desired that each member will respond, at once, that the president, Bro. Kinnaman, may have the reports in hand by April 6th. E. T. Dobson, Sec'y. ST. JOSEPH, Mo, March 11th, 1885.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE have received the Vindicator for December, January and February; and are much pleased with the conduct of it. The brethren having it in charge are doing nobly. What with the Expositor in the West, California, the Vindicator in the East, England, and the Advocate, Sandhedens Banner and HERALD in the midst of the earth, the Saints should begin to realize the importance of their mission. We hail these our co-workers and fellows of the pen and type with great pleasure-"May their shadows never grow less."

Bro. G. T. Griffiths preached seven discourses at New Philadelphia, Ohio, closing about March 8th. He had great liberty, and the people were much interested. So wrote M. A. Wilcox.

At the late municipal election for corporation officers held in Buchanan, Michigan; Bro. John Shook received 245 votes, Charles Lauer 101, J. N. Smith 21 for the office of marshal. This is Bro. Shook's second term; and certainly speaks well for the effort he has been making as a gospel disciple of Christ. We are pleased with the success of Bro. Shook; and pray that prosperity may not put our brother off his guard, and permit pride to overcome his Christian fortitude.

Bro. George A. Blakeslee has succeeded in obtaining rates of fare over the Chicago and Alton, Hannibal and St. Joseph, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs lines of railway, for delegates and visitors to April Conference. He is negotiating with other roads. The rate agreed upon is, that those paving full fare from stations on these lines to Conference will be entitled to return to the same points from which they started for one third fare, making the round trip for one and one third fares. To do this they will secure a certificate from Secretary stating the fact that they did pay full fare from such Bro. A. H. Smith's address will be Box 375, Independence, Missouri, until further notice.

Bro. John Smith of New Bedford, Massachusetts, has his hands full, keeping the public informed regarding the faith and the church. The Boston Globe of the 7th of March contains a spirited correction of misstatements in that paper of a former issue, in which correction Bro. Smith quotes a notice from the Haverhill, Massachusetts, paper against the report in the Globe, and closes thus: "There is quite a contrast in the two reports about this people, one sought for the facts while the other seems to have been satisfied only with that which would seek to do an injustice to an innocent people. If you will send a reporter to the next conference of this people, which will be held in Brockton, May 30th and 31st next, he may have a different story to tell, as every opportunity will be afforded him to know the truth, if he so desires."

Congress has provided by proper legislation, that after July 1st next, the weight of single letters that may be carried for two cents is increased from one half ounce to one ounce. Each ounce or fraction of ounce over one ounce shall pay at the same rate, two cents an ounce or fraction thereof. Drop letters same where there is free delivery, otherwise one cent an ounce, instead of half ounce. Newspapers sent from office of publication, or from news agency, including specimen copies, one cent a pound instead of two cents as heretofore.

Sr. Maggie Collins, of Knox, Indiana, sends us a number of copies of the Stark county, Indiana, Enterprise, containing articles from the pen of Bro. J. B. Prettyman on the subject of polygamy, in refutation of the charge that it was a tenet of the church; and the subject of perfection as held by the Holiness People so called. Bro. Prettyman makes a good showing on his side of the argument. We thank Sr. Collins for the perusal of the articles.

CAPTAIN JOHN CODMAN, of New York, author of "The Mormon Country," "Free Ships," &c., is writing and publishing a series of essays in pamphlets, under the general head of "Questions of The Day." Number twenty-one of the series is entitled; "A Solution of the Mormon Problem;" in which the Captain deals with the question treated of in quite different fashion than has been by others. He deems it to the purpose for those who may be anxious to have polygamy abolished to aid such missionaries as the Reorganized Church are prepared to send into Utah, by donating means to meet the current family expenditure.

We shall wait with more than a passing curiosity to see the result of Capt. Codman's appeal. The sympathies of the world may be guessed at; lachrymose and full of condolences; real and expressed not in tears but in material help. We appreciate the first but accomplish more with the last.

THE Editor visited Council Bluffs, the 5th to the 10th. Bro. Joseph F. McDowell has been laboring there for the most part of the past winter, and has succeeded in accomplishing considerable good. He has stimulated the Saints into renovating the little chapel, until it is as "neat as wax;" himself painting and ornamenting with the labor of his own hands to aid them in the saving of expense. The changes were simple but effective, and made with but little cost in money.

By careful fostering wavering ones have been steadied and confirmed. A freshimpetus has been given to the flagging interest of many. The best effect has been upon the younger element of the church, who have been brought into active discharge of Christian duties by Bro. Mc-Dowell's exhortation, aid, and encouragement.

By a watchful notice of the Sunday services kept up from week to week, in the city papers, giving the subject for discussion, a very good, and we should judge a very healthy inquiry has been aroused, so that good audiences greet the speaker. We spoke on Sunday the 8th twice; at 10: 30 a. m. and two in the afternoon; subject, "Straight Paths." Bro. McDowell occupied the evening acceptably on the thee "Church Polity. Is it of Divine right."

It appears in evidence that an impatient image smasher living somewhere in Iowa, and whose sir name and prefixes are A. W. Harlan, has written the Keokuk, Iowa, Gate City, a towering note "offering to annihilate Christianity" if that long established conservator of public opinion, news and the markets would "ask him to do it." To the note the Editor of the Gate City makes the following humorous, just and fitting reply:

ANNIHILATING CHRISTIANITY.

We publish a note from Mr. A. W. Harlan offering to annihilate Christianity if we would ask him to do it. We publish the note because he is a veteran Iowan, a long time personal friend, and a very original and keen-minded man. But we didn't ask him to do it because first a secular newspaper is very foolish to let a religious discussion be saddled upon it. And secondly, we don't want Christianity killed off. Mr. Harlan concedes there has been 1,900 years of it but he says it's bad. We don't know about that, but we are so constituted that when we have anything Christianity or anything, in the family for 1,000 years, we get used to it, and like it. and don't want to lose it out of the house. Of course we have no doubt that Mr. A. W. Harlan could kill it if we let him get a crack at it. Because all the other fellows who have tried it have failed to do it and he must be the very man that can. For there must be somebody that can do it. It stands to reason that these folks from Nero and Julian and Ingersoll wouldn't keep trying to do a thing that nobody can do. So the man and the hour have come at last. But the Gate City must be content to go its way with humbler matters. It was not made for so great a part in the world as killing off Christianity. And then we have got some ridiculous superstitions that we cling to. Of course it is very cowardly and abject in us but we are not great and wise and must go on in our small foolish way. But we do know that when we see a mother looking into the face of her dead child in its white shroud, with its waxen little hands folded, we are glad that there is a voice sounding to the ear of her hope through all those nineteen centuries: "Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." And when the wife moans beside her dead husband it does seem something worth while that somebody has said in a strong and masterful way, "I am the resurrection and the life." And when the father or mother dies that has lived a life so good and pure that it sweetens even the life of the censorians into praise, one likes to think that this worrying, poor uneven life is not all, but that really they have entered into a great rest and the shelter of a mighty friendship which says: "Faithful over a few things, behold

I make thee ruler over many; enter into the joy of thy Lord." And do you know that we have a foolish and unwise notion someway that the Lord's Prayer and the Sermon on the Mount have not been failures? And that the history of the crucifixion has not been bad for the world. That do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you is really a good rule. That someway the song of Bethlehem sounding on through these centuries has done something to bring peace and good will among men. A Christian may be a poor creature enough but we wouldn't swap him off for any other kind of man the world has so far produced.

It is said that "order is heaven's first law." But from some things forced upon us as we have struggled onward in this field of trying warfare, we have been compelled to think, either that some loved disorder for itself, because it possessed no element of constraint over them; or that they were incapable of knowing what order is and therefore did not appreciate it, or that they would not care to enter into heaven if they had to subscribe to the law, the first law prevailing there.

"God hath made of one blood all the children of men for to dwell on the face of the earth, and hath fixed the bounds of their habitations."

Whatever philosophy before, or since the day of the apostle who wrote this, may have taught, does not change the wisdom of the saying. To bring this whole family so created of one blood, into one relationship as a nation; so that He who made them should be "unto them a God," and they be unto him "a people," "one nation," the gospel of unity, or oneness was given. It is called by the apostle the "gospel of reconciliation."

Latter Day Saints have contended that one of the chief reasons (if not the chief reason) why the men who were steeped in tradition, and by lapses into crime and barbarism made deaf to the call unto gospel liberty and life, was and is a refusal to comply with heaven's law of order. Upon this refusal to comply with heaven's order; objection is made to the idea of priesthood; so urged against the claim made by the elders who have been sent out during the existence of the work.

The gospel came in apparent harmony and compliance with some order already established, of which John, (the Baptizer), and Jesus were the first personal representatives and exponents in the Christian dispensation, as that is contradistinguished from the Abrahamic and Mosaic, as those are usually understood. It is pleasant to think that if He who became the Shiloh was He who was in the "burning bush," then was he at the same time of the royal order; and when he called the twelve and seventy, he did but endow them with the prerogatives of action in pursuance to the design of that order. This would make plain to some extent the reason why a subsequent apostle should have written, "the word (gospel) preached unto them did not profit them, not being mixed with faith." A similar condition of mind to receive prevails largely now in reference to the same "word." It is "preached," but is "not mixed with faith."

To apply this sentiment to what all preachers are pleased to denominate "the world" meaning all those whom these preachers are appealing to, is easy, there are so many agreements between statements and facts. But, it is quite possible that more effective illustrations, so far as Saints are concerned, might be found,—more effective because nearer,—among Saints themselves.

The gospel is an orderly plan of salvation; showing design in all its parts. Its efficacy for the purpose intended is guaranteed at the outset. It was designed of God, with whom rests power to execute what is promised in it, as well as wisdom to design. In the carrying forward the design, the declaration which the messengers made was that complying with the order as established would insure the salvation to the one so complying and that salvation was to be, either eternal life itself, or a condition of restful, contented, enjoyment and happiness in an eternal life.

In order to secure the sufficiently rapid spread of the offer made in the institution of the gospel, individuals were chosen, and ordained, (set apart), who were commissioned to act authoritatively; partaking to a greater, or lesser degree of the prerogatives of the same order as he was of who so set them apart; and we are warranted in believing that he called and ordained them in conformity to a law the existence of which with its provisions and practices had become known to him in heaven. No other conclusion can be drawn from his words "I do nothing but what I have seen the Father do."

We can but believe that when the work was revived in 1830, the same wondrous worker that stood in the burning bush, and called to Moses; calling his attention to the design of Jehovan to redeem Israel; the one who pleaded with John: "Suffer it to be so now," that we may heed the commandment of God and thus becomingly "fulfill all righteousness;" was the one who gave the order, chose the men, directed the mission and reinstated the same royal order to which himself as a messenger sent of God belonged. who is called to it is usually accorded some latitude of discretion within the scope of the general design, and the specific sphere into which he is chosen. There can be no reason to expect that with the royal commission empowering one to "beseech men, as in Christ's stead, to be reconciled to God," there should be liberty, or license to disregard the order, (heaven's first law), of that association with the great messenger sent to bring "life and immortality to light." Some seem to be of the mind to suppose that once endowed with the "keys," by which things bound on earth are bound in heaven; things loosed on earth are loosed in heaven; there came a liberty to disregard restraint imposed by rule, or order. Whence this disposition of mind among Saints.

We are of the opinion that refusal to be submissive to rule, or the disposition to be disregardful of restraint—a law unto ones own self,—is one of the most damaging things, preventing the progress of the declaration of salvation under the dispensation began in 1830 that is now burdening the mass of the eldership. We believe that this disposition is hurtful and ruinous to the welfare of the body; and damaging, possibly destructive to the individual.

That such disposition should have been manifested to an extent in the Reorganization, was a most natural result. The exercise of power in a tyrannical way, had brought grave distress. Men had bowed to Baal, in new form, and been hurt thereby. Confidence in rulers had been rudely shaken, and trust had been demoralized. But, was there to be no more thence an era of right rule and proper control. Were there to be no good men called who could be trusted as messengers of gospel tidings and grace. Were there to be no more bearers of the royal authority of him that called a Moses, that ordained a twelve and instituted a seventy. Was there not to be an end of deprecatory suspicion and distrust of men called of God. Was there not to be a willing submission to the laws instituted by the "minister of the sanctuary, the true tabernacle which God pitched and not man." Is there not now a necessity, and is not the time propitious for the ushering in of an era of faithful self sacrifice to the promotion of the cause of "Good will to men;" rather than the continuation of the baleful influence of distrust and hatred to restraint born of self will and a mistaken notion of independence of individual action.

It is easier and handier for men to flatter than to praise.

THE following arrangements for General Conference were adopted by the Independence Branch:

ARRANGEMENTS FOR GENERAL CONFERENCE.

ist. That all delegates, members or visitors, who may attend the conference, shall pay two dollars per week for board, except as hereinafter provided.

2nd. That the homes of the Saints here who design keeping one or more delegates, members or visitors, shall be deemed boarding houses, for the purposes herein contemplated; and shall as soon as practicable, notify the clerks of said committee, as to the number of delegates, members or visitors they can accommodate.

3rd. That a committee of five be appointed, the president of branch acting as chairman of said committee, who shall have full charge and control of arrangements, said committee to appoint one or more of their number clerk, whose duty it shall be to purchase a book, in which to enter the names of the several landlords, and the number of guests they desire to accommodate. The clerk's office or stand shall be at or near the church, for the convenience of visitors.

4th. All delegates, members or visitors, must apply for homes to said clerk, who may assign them to friends, if previously arranged; if not to the best advantage possible, each person paying the clerk $2.00 for a week's board, taking receipt for same, which shall be given to his landlord; and upon presentation of said receipt to clerk, said landlord may receive $2.00 per week for board so given.

5th. Nothing in the above shall be implied, or canstrued, so as to prevent any landlord from boarding free of charge any delegate, member or visitor, provided such arrangements are previously made with the clerk, and the board of such favored ones be charged up to said landlord.

6th. Each committee man, shall wear a badge of blue ribbon to be the better distinguished by visitors.

The clerks would like, as far as possible, to be notified by those desiring homes under the above regulations.

Clerks, { F. G. PITT, T. J. CHATBURN.

Correspondence.

ZIONA, Near Papeete, Tahiti, February 1st, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:—Instead of hearing from many as I had reason to expect from promises made, I have received very few letters from America. Bro. T. J. Andrews, and Bro. Wm. Anderson write each mail and kindly send us papers. We receive neither Hope nor Advocate. Living seven miles from Papeete, with no one to talk to but Bro. Brown, and he talks English but imperfectly, and understands it less, a letter from old friends, and new ones too, would not be altogether amiss. But then, as has been with others before us, "absent and forgotten." We would not even get the Herald if Bro. Andrews did not send it to us, except we would get and read Bro. Brown's, but we are simple enough to want our own.

I keep my mind occupied, however, in preparing epistles to the different branches, and in answering questions of law; and preparing work for translation. But that does not satisfy when the mail comes in about the first of every month, and brings three or four letters, and sometimes only two, when in the States, we would receive a half dozen and often more in one week. In about a month will go to the Paumutus, and then we will send for our mail by little vessels, some fifty to two hundred miles, and depend upon the weather for their return. I expected the inconvenience of the mail, but I had not calculated on this nearly universal neglect on the part of the brethren to write to us. The condition of the work here is quite fair, and we are getting quite a fair understanding among the ministry of the law and order of the Church. Benj. Grouard taught them it was wrong to use strong drinks, tobacco, and tea and coffee, and generally his teachings are regarded to this day, for several good reasons. I have considered it best to advise them to, abstain from these things. I am glad that they can not read English, or they would be considerably surprised in reading of the Sister's Mite Society, in Lamoni, selling tea and coffee to raise money to help finish the church. It has been stated through the Herald that Joseph Smith (your father) declared that the words "hot drinks meant tea and coffee," or included them; and if not "good for the body or the belly," should they be offered for sale by members of the Church, and presumably with Joseph Smith's sanction, at least, so many will suppose. If the temperature of the drink is where the harm will come from, it ought to be so said authoritatively, and if it be the nature or composition of the drinks, it should be so said. I will venture to say that, the temperature of drink could not be meant, for this reason, that the warning against strong drinks, wine, tobacco and hot drinks, was based on the evil and base designs of wicked and conspiring men, and I would just as soon drink a deadly thing hot, as a "cup of cold pizen." Bad, avaricious men could not make money by preparing something "hot," yet perhaps wholesome; but they could coin money by adulterated teas and coffees, and chocolates, etc. It could not refer to any direct effort to poison the Saints, for that could be done by putting deadly or death-dealing properties in their flour, sugar, rice, cheese, and in many other articles of every day use-nay these things are not good, they are not needful, and come under the head of evil habits, and the Saints can and hundreds do live without them, and enjoy health, and save many a hard earned dollar. I refer to strong drinks, wine, tobacco, and hot drinks, as tea, coffee, chocolate, Cocoa, etc. I do not think that the Lord meant tea and coffee only, but all preparations that avaricious, and base men would invent as drinks and beverages, that because of adulterations would become positively hurtful to the systems of the Saints. If the Lord had said, "tea and coffee," then many who like and enjoy "hot drinks" would feel justified in using other articles, which would be open to the same objection, "the designs of wicked men." I think medical men will affirm that which is not too hot for the tongue and palate, and throat, will not be too hot for the stomach, and certainly no sensible person would drink anything hot enough to scald his throat. And besides that, milk is a very wholesome and palatable drink for thousands; yet a drink of cold milk on a cold winter's morning will chill a person "through and through," as the saying is, and is "not good for the body or the belly," while it is affirmed by men of judgment and experience in the needs and conditions of the human body, that a glass of hot water, as hot as can be swallowed without injury to the throat, is a capital remedy for dyspepsia when taken upon rising in the morning. I have received marked benefit from it, and I could therefore say, that hot drinks are good, while I know that tea, coffee, and chocolate have injured me. But I base no argument on my experience, for other men will say, that tobacco does them no harm, nor wine, nor beer, but rather has been a benefit. But the question is, is this "word of wisdom" the word of God? It does not matter just now whether it is a commandment or not. Is it the word of God? Yea, or nay, which is it? If the word of God, then the experience of A. B. or C., that this or that, (disapproved of God), is good, or does them no harm, should weigh nothing, or else the party who feels that he has received no harm, may not fully comprehend the condition of his body in all its various members and organs; disease may be organizing in the system, or already developed in some unperceived form. When attending a course of medical lectures in Philadelphia, I heard Dr. Weiting say that there was not more than one person in a thousand who could say that he was "perfectly well." Accepting the "word of wisdom" as "a revelation from God," I dare not say that strong drinks, wine, tobacco, or hot drinks (tea, coffee, etc.,) are "good," when God says they are not good. Ah, yes, I know that brandy is good to wash the body with, (not inside however), in some kinds of fevers, and tobacco is good for "sick cattle," and men and women are not "cattle," and bruises, and then to be used with judgment and skill. But the point is, Does "hot drinks" mean that you may drink what you please, but it must be only warm, or cool, but not "hot enough to scald the tongue." I again ask, Why did God warn the Saints? The answer is found in the beginning of the revelation, and ask then what have the "conspiring men in the last days" to do with the drink of the people, as to whether it be hot, lukewarm, or cold? Who regulates the temperature of the drink: These "conspiring men," or the people who drink it? And when that is answered, tell who prepares the article drank-or the tea, coffee, chocotate, etc., the Saints or these "conspiring men?" If the Saints prepare the ingredients, and the conspiring men make them hot, why don't drink them hot, for they conspire to harm you that way. If they prepare the articles to be made into hot drinks, then beware of the articles, and why? Because "of the evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days." But no matter how skillfully these conspiring men put hurtful ingredients in your tea and coffee, don't drink it hot, it will do you no harm; for you must not drink hot drinks. But eat hot soups, eat hot biscuits, eat hot cakes, and hot suasages, etc.; but for your stomach's sake don't drink hot tea, or hot coffee; for it is not good, and if you sell them, to raise money for a good cause, make them lukewarm, or even cool, especially in December, for the people would not want hot drinks at that season of the year, and it is drinking them hot where the trouble comes in, you know.

"But Joseph drinks tea and coffee says many a one to me, and as he is the prophet of the Lord, he must know what the term hot drinks means." Well, if he has a revelation on the subject, and has learned that tea and coffee may be used, but not drank "hot," I consider that it is his duty to so inform us, for I do not want to be telling the people that I understand that the first Joseph taught that it meant tea and coffee, or included them, and that old father Whitmer told me in 1876, that they all understood that it included tea and coffee; and when asked why it did not say so, in so many words, I was answered that "Doubtless the Lord knew that other things would be prepared by wicked men as hot drinks, and all was included under the head of hot drinks," or words similar to these. There could be no grounds to think Joseph did not give the exact words given him, or that he changed them for fear of giving offense; for he would offend by referring to tobacco and wine and strong drinks, as well. Father Whitmer told me, that the revelation was given in answer to prayer, as they desired to know the Lord's will and word, for they could not all agree, some defending tea and coffee, some had a word of defense for tobacco, and even some could see no harm in wine occasionally for "the stomach's sake," or brandy might be good for colic, or dysentery, &c. And there are men in the church who will contend that in different complaints brandy, whisky, gin, &c., are good to take, and tobacco is a benefit in keeping some from getting too fat, and so the headache is cured by a cup of tea, and a strong cup of coffee imparts a "lot of muscular strength" to weak muscles, which any one who thinks can see is a fallacy; but then the Lord did not think of these facts (?) when he gave the revelation. The simple fact is, we preach that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and even testify weekly that we know it, and yet when the prophet delivers what he calls a revelation, in which is found "Behold, verily thus saith the Lord," we practically deny it, and some of us pitch into others for disregarding some other revelations, which make no stronger claim than this of being the word of God; the preamble is no part of the revelation. It is true, the Lord does not say-Thou shalt not use wine or strong drinks, or tobacco or hot drinks. But if I believe that if the God who formed and fashioned my body, a God of infinite wisdom, says that certain things are not good for me to use, I certainly either doubt that wisdom, and despise his regard for my welfare, or else am grossly indifferent as to the results of using them, and I do not want the blessings promised, even temporal salvation, and wisdom, &c.

We are just as consistent in this matter as we are on the "gathering." First we pass a resolution that says there is no "stake" to gather to, but that Saints on all other lands should gather to America, preparatory to rebuilding a "place" called Zion, which recognized a "place" to gather to even if the time had not come to gather to it. Then pass another resolution, misrepresenting this, only in that it affirms that the other said no "place" when it said no "stake," and censuring an Elder for believing and preaching, what a revelation from heaven authorized him to preach, even gaihering into the "regions round about," and which he was authorized to preach by the declaration of the president of the church, "gathering into the regions round about is binding and will be blest," and then endorse the action of a committee who located the Publishing House, in which is claimed and no doubt is within the limits of the "region" contended for by the Elder. The time will come when if the resolution of 1876,—censuring the Elder and which did not state the exact sentiment of former resolutions, is not repealed, and the Church get back to her ground of 1863 and previous, yet the time will come, when the Church will occupy that Elder's ground, viz., the command is to gather into the regions round about, as wisdom, prudence, and recognition of human law, and other's rights will admit. Or it will repudiate the gathering entirely; and when it does that, and thus opens the way to question a multitude of revelations, she will either clearly define just where the line between the human and divine in the revelations shall be drawn, or else drift on the rocks of doubt, and unbelief even of the Spirit, and fact of revelation divine in these latter times. And in drawing this line, human wisdom will hardly avail, and inspiration will be demanded, which may in turn be questioned, and would be if it did not agree with human judgment. But the straightening of the record made by various conferences is demanded for consistency's sake, to say nothing of justice to those who were rebuked for believing the revelations of God. A statement was made by the writer to Joseph in 1876, that the time would come when those who were looked to for counsel and advice, at that time, would be ignored and that their counsel would be lightly esteemed and not cared for, while others whose views and opinions were thought but little of, would be valued, or their counsel desired and sought for; a part has been fulfilled, the other will be in time.

I commenced to write about this mission, but I could not keep off these subjects. I want to see these things squared up. If the church can see her way clearly, so as to say that she has mistaught on the gathering, and has been mistaken, all right, I will acquiesce in her decision, or as Bro. Alexander says, I will not claim to represent the church; or if she has been correct on the principle, the center place, the regions round about; although wrong in some movements connected with the subject, let her say so. What profit is it to be believing a fallacy or a vagary, if such it may be proven to be?

To my mind there is no stopping place short of considering Joseph Smith a fraud, or a grossly deceived man, and incapable of discerning truth from error, and per consequence disbelieving his claims to have received angelic administrations, and concluding that our priesthood is of no more value than that of the sectarian world. It means the repudiation of what we have been claiming as the superiority of this church over all others, namely, her divine appointment, calling and qualification, to conclude that the doctrine of the gathering is a vagary. Without wishing to appear egotistic, I must say that such is the drift and force of reasoning with me, that starting with the disbelief in the principle, and the revealment of the doctrine, I simply reason myself out of this church and into infidelity. I can not see why God should not have a new Jerusalem on the Western Continent as an old Jerusalem on the Eastern Continent, for I read of both being found in the future on earth. If this land is Joseph's, and belongs to Ephraim and Manassen, why it should not have a capital as well as should the rest of Israel in Palestine. And I do not see why I can not question the gathering of the twelve tribes to Palestine, as well as that of Joseph's seed to this land, called now America. I must have another and different brain if I get rid of the alternative, that either Joseph Smith was a true prophet, or else there is no such thing as revelation or manifestations and operations of the Spirit of God today, and if I have been deceived in my manifold experience in this direction, then I have no faith in anything called inspired. My own experience, and Joseph Smith's divine calling are so closely interwoven that they both stand or fall together. I can not believe that the particular item on gathering, in a multitude of revelations of Joseph's, was by human impress written, and the rest by the divine afflatus. I confess my inability to draw the line that way. I am not compelled, however, in admitting the divinity of the idea of a gathering, and of a local Zion, to believe that men's zeal to bring about the purpose of God in the matter, may not have led them to both say and do in the premises that which God did not require. The command to gather at the first was based on righteous and lawful ground. It was simply to buy all the available land in a certain region of country. They were strictly forbidden to shed blood, or to even speak evil of their neighbors, and were forbidden to do them any harm. They were to render unto Cæsar the things that were Cæsar's. This was all consistent, lawful, just, and humane; and hence Christlike. If it can be shown that any revelation was afterward given that conflicted with these principles, or was antagonistic to the spirit of Christ, you need not question where I will be found. Show me a so-called revelation teaching the taking of the houses and lands of the people of Jackson county, Missouri, or any other county in or out of Missouri, by force or fraud, or in any other than an honorable, lawful, Christian way, i. e., by fair and honest trade or purchase, I do not hesitate to say that such a revelation is of no value whatever with me, or that it will be honored or obeyed by me. If this be treason, then make the most of it. If Bro. Zenas falls for refusing to receive such revelation as from God, I fall also. Suppose the church had listened to the voice of wisdom, hence the voice of God, to have purchased all the land that could have been bought westward of Independence to the Kansas line, which could have been bought for perhaps a dollar or two an acre, and had lived in peace, and love and unity among themselves, and had not boasted of faith and mighty works, in other words, suppose they had done as God had commanded them, they might to-day have been a rich people, by the simple increase of the price of land. They can live in peace, and be respected by their neighbors both there and elsewhere now; and I believe they could have done so then. God himself says they were driven out because of their transgressions, and it was the truth. If they get that land now or in the future, they will get it only by lawful and honorable means.

There never was a command given by the Lord for this people to rob, steal, cheat, or take by violence or any unlawful means, any man's property, either personal or in real estate. And if there should be found a revelation or commandment given to the Church in Joseph the Martyr's day, it is of no force with us unless either reiterated, or referred to, as being still in force, by commandment to this Church, for such the last General Conference decided was their view concerning commandments of a local character. But it would be wise if any commandment should be found that savors of anything anti-Christlike, and at war with what had been previously given, which was clothed with the spirit of the gospel, and Christlike, to simply expunge it from the record. I am a follower of Joseph Smith just this far and no farther, that is, just so far as he followed Christ. If I could write this across the face of the sky, so that the universe of mankind could read it. I would hasten to do it, and in saving this for myself, I believe I speak for the whole Reorganized Church, including the sons of Joseph. "Then you don't receive anything that Jesus did not teach," some one may say. I reply, I do not receive what conflcts with what he taught, and as I do not believe that we have all that he taught written, I can not tell how much of what has latterly been revealed, is additional doctrine or law, or truth to what he taught before. I see nothing in the principle of gathering, or the commandment to gather into the regions round about, that is antagonistic to the Spirit of Christ, if there be anything of the kind I don't receive it as from God, that is all there is about that.

I consider the mission here in quite good condition. There are eleven branches, four on this island, and the rest on the Paumuties, except one at Matea. I will soon arrange them into districts, and have each one choose a president and secretary. I expect that Tehopia will in a short time make an effort on some of the islands where our faith has not been taught. There is no use trying to get an opening where the Protestants hold sway. Borabora, Huahine, Riatea and other large islands of the Society Group, the Protestant missionaries are rulers; the kings and queens are mere puppets, and these pretended followers of the unworldly and meek and lowly Savior, are living luxuriously off the natives, in the form of taxes and fees of different sorts; for instance, if a man or woman is found out of the house after seven o'clock, and can't give the excuse of visiting the sick or being on some urgent business, they are fined $1.50, which of course goes to sustain the missionary; besides this, hundreds of dollars are annually collected to send to London to help send the gospel to the heathen in Africa. But how much reaches London the day of judgment alone will reveal.

These so-called missionaries are absolute despots, and so bigoted and illiberal, that every writer of travel and history that has mentioned them has seen it, and denounced it. A Catholic or Mormon (?) can not land on these Islands except on worldly business. Not many years ago a Catholic Missionary was tied hands and feet, and put into a canoe alone, and sent adrift to sea. God help the United States if ever any of the sects ever get control of the Government, and woe be unto us, if the Campbellites ever get into power, especially Clark Braden. Where the French rule in these islands, all sects and parties are tolerated. We can preach and build churches anywhere, where the French Republic has sway, but where there are independent islands under Protestant control, we need not dream of ever seeing the gospel preached. It would be a good thing for us if the French could get control over the islands I have named. I have been studying the relative merits of Protestantism and Catholicism now and then for the past four or five years, and I find that the latter is not much better understood than Mormonism is, by the rest of the world; and that there are a good many sound positions taken by the Catholic Church. Protestanism against itself, is an easy subject to handle, and O, it is "confusion worse confounded." But to the mission; there are plenty of places yet to be occupied by us, even if there is no hope for Borabora, Rorotonga, Huatrere, &c., and I will get men into the field just as soon as I can. If Tehopia will, he can do great good, for he is an able man. He is a fine speaker, and I notice that he holds the attention of the people. Metuaore, the president of the branch here, is also a good speaker, and is well liked. Trpuni, president of the branch in Papeete is a good man, and is highly esteemed by his branch, and speaks well, and there are several able men on this island. I can not say much of other parts, as I have not been among them yet. But several from there whom I have seen and have heard talk, are well versed in the scriptures. They are as a general thing very fond of authority and office, the sisters not excepted; for it is amusing to see them in their own meetings, or sisters' meeting, the one in charge with a big silk handkerchief around her neck, tied so as to look like a man's neck tie, and assuming the manner of the men; others with pencils behind their ears, and paper to take notes. Nelson gave in every place, certificates to women as leaders of choirs, and to others as singers, and they cherish these papers highly. They wanted new ones from me, but for several reasons I refused to comply. He also placed men as presidents over certain territory, and to others portions of the same, and hence a conflict of authority. I have ignored the whole arrangement, and will call the officials of the several districts (when formed) together, and let them choose a president. I have my hands full in one way or another, and particularly with men who fear that their authority or office is being interfered with. Yet there are plenty of unassuming, humble men, and really better qualified than some of these ambitious ones, and in time I will get them in their proper places. There is now no division among the I am satisfied that jealousy and envy had a good deal to do with the opposition to Tehopia, but I will get him and the others a good distance apart soon. The way to keep trouble down is to keep the Elders busy at something or other.

I hope that if we are forgotten as far as writing us letters is concerned, we will not be forgotten in the prayers of the church. Helen is as well as usual. I am also the same.

Your brother in the faith,

T. W. SMITH.

LAGUNA, Cal., March 10th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—We are still trying to hold the fort, though we feel somewhat the forces brought against us: but those who are built on the rock, will stand, let come what may. We have just met in conference; were blessed by the Good Spirit. The Saints seem willing to do all they can to help forward the Master's work in this part, and we were also blessed by the presence of our brother from the East, A. H. Smith, who has been laboring with us for some time. May the Lord bless him. He has the work at heart, and is the man to counsel and strengthen the Saints. It makes us stronger in the faith, more willing to work, and we can have more confidence in those that God has called for pillars in his church, when we see them working in righteousness before him. We need more such men here on the coast, to roll the work on. Thousands of good souls here are starving for the bread of life, and but few to supply the demand. Bro. D. S. Mills met with a sad accident some six weeks ago. Was thrown from his buggy, and broke his leg; also hurt his back. So we have lost his help, also his company, which is much missed among the Saints. He will soon be able to be around some, and ere long we hope to hear his voice, telling us what we must do to have eternal life in the kingdom of our Father.

Your brother in Christ,

A. W. THOMPSON.

TABOR, Iowa, March 12th, 1885. Dear Herald:-Since last reporting, I have done the best I knew how under the circumstances; visited the east and north part of the district. The Saints in the Keystone Branch are alive to the interest of the work; they come near to the standard in paying tithes and offerings. The result of which is the Good Spirit attends them when they meet to worship the Lord. Night found me at D. Hougas' home. I had tramped eighteen miles. Several of the Saints here were not feeling well. Sister Ruby was bedfast with inflammatory rheumatism; was anxiously waiting my arrival, hoping by the blessing of God, to find relief through the ordinance of his house. She found great relief through the prayer of faith, and is still on the mend. This sister is an oldtime Saint, strong in the faith. The next Saturday found me with Keystone Saints. Held meeting at night, and Sunday morning and night; Monday made my way for Tabor. Our conference came off according to appointment, and although the roads were almost impassable, we had a good, fair representation, full house, and good preaching from Elder James Caffall. He gave us four discourses at the Gaylord school-house, and at the Saints' Church of the Elm Creek Branch, one. He left us feeling well, and started with the good by, God bless you, of all the Saints. Long may he live to unfurl the banner of truth to all, is our prayer. The work on the whole is in fair condition. The brethren all feel like doing the best they can. May God bless and help them so to do. I have not done any preaching this last week, as the roads have been too bad for the people to get out nights. I start out again to-morrow night in the Gaylord settlement; next week for Hamburg. My brother Ceorge has always been on hands to take me to and from my place, and is a great help in singing; and has spent much of his time for the benefit of the work. May God speed his work amidst all opposing powers. It will triumph and accomplish all that is designed. I shall still battle for the right as I understand it.

HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE.

Yours for truth,

HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE.

We have just received from the publishers a book with the above named title. It is a book no one who anticipates building a house should be without. It contains plans for twenty-five houses, of all sizes, from two rooms up; also finely executed engravings of the buildings of which plans are given. Its value can not be over-estimated. Any one of the plans is alone worth very much more than the price asked for the book. In addition it has valuable information on subjects relative to building and building contracts, gives the quantity of material for building, and many suggestions to those who intend to build that may be worth hundreds of dollars. We urge all who think of building to send for a copy of it. It will be mailed on receipt of 25 cents, by G. W. OGILVIE & Co., 233 Lake St., Chicago, Illinois.

The printed name on the colored label on your paper gives the date to which your subscription has been paid. If it shows you are in arrears, please renew.

Summary of Aews.

GENERAL NEWS.

March 12th.—The sluggishness of English circumlocution and the wiliness of Russian diplomacy have strained the relations of those two powers to a most uncomfortable tension over the question of the Afghan boundary. It was nearly a year ago that a commission was agreed upon to settle the boundary between Afghanistan and Russia's newly-acquired territory in Turkestan. Sir Peter Lumsden appeared upon the ground last fall and has been impatiently waiting the arrival of the Russian commission, which up to the present time has failed to meet the agreement, although it was first proposed by Russia herself. In the meantime, encouraged by the presence of Sir Peter Lumsden, who has quite an armed force with him for purposes of defense, the Afghans have pressed forward beyond their frontier and occupied Penjeh with an advance force. The place is a Turkoman village near the Murghab River, and about 150 miles north of Herat. Although not a fortified place, it is strategically important, so much so that the Russian advance at Sarakhs, which is about 200 miles north of Herat, declared their post was threatened by the Afghans. Hence they advanced still further to the south and occupied Puli-Khatum, on the Hari Rud River, bringing them fifty miles nearer Herat, which provoked the first decided protests from England. Russia was requested to withdraw from Puli-Khatum and the Afghans were advised to fall back from Penjdeh. Instead of conceding to the English request Russia has moved still further south, it is said, although not beyond what she claims to be her frontier. Since Merve was taken and absorbed the Russians have claimed the whole Turkoman territory upon the ground not only that it is not Afghan, but that it contains pastures and salt wells which are necessary to the existence of the Turkomans. Such is the situation as it now stands.

Premier Gladstone said in the House of Commons that England's relations with Russia in consequence of the latter's reported encroachments on Afghan territory have not been improved during the last few days. The gloom of Mr. Gladstone's manner in saying this produced a marked impression.

Active preparations are being made by San Salvador, Nicaragua and Costa Rica to resist the usurpation of Gen. Barrios, President of Guatemala, who has declared his intention to form a union and assume supreme command of all the Central American States. Honduras accepted the declaration, but the other States refused to acquiesce. Gen. Barrios has accordingly dispatched an armed force against San Salvador. President Diaz of Mexico has been appealed to and has telegraphed to Gen. Barrios expressing the determination of the Mexican Government to resist any aggression. A resolution was introduced in the United States Senate yesterday calling upon the Secretary of State for information concerning the condition of affairs in Central America.

March 13th.—It is said that the Mahdi has evacuated Metemneh, fearing an invasion of the Soudan from Abyssinia. Osman Digma is concentrating a large force at Tamanieb to oppose Gen. Graham's advance toward Berber.

In the House of Commons this afternoon Gladstone announced that an agreement had been arrived at between Russia and England, by the terms of which neither the Russian nor the Afghan forces would advance any further on either side of the frontier. Sir. Stafford Northcote asked whether this agreement was a permanent or temporary arrangement. Mr. Gladstone replied that the agreement was without any specified limit. The best description he could give was that the agreement was to last as long as there was any occasion for it. This agreement provides against any rupture of friendly relations between the two governments in the event of collision between the Afghan and Russian outposts, which might possibly occur while instructions were being conveyed to the opposing commanders.

The decree issued by President Barrios proclaiming the Central American Republic did not become public at San Salvador until yesterday. In it he states that after serious consideration he issued the decree proclaiming the Central American Union as a single republic, he himself assuming the title of the "Supreme Military Chief of Central America," and taking, as such, absolute command, and declaring that any one pronouncing himself opposed to the union or embarrassing his movements will be treated as a traitor to the great cause of nationality and subject himself to the pains and penalties thereof. He urges all chiefs, officers, and soldiers of Central America to join him, offering promotion, with decoration and compensation.

Herat, the present bone of contention between England and Russia, is comparatively small for a place of such paramount importance, containing barely 50,000 inhabitants. It is situated in a slight depression on the summit of a rocky ridge 2,650 feet high, forming one of the westernmost spurs of the great Safeld Kok (White Mountains) range, which runs across Northern Afghanistan from west to east. It is surrounded by a wall which, measured from the base of the earthen mound on which it stands, attains a hight of seventy-five feet, which is considerably exceeded by several of the 150 towers that strengthen it. But these defenses, though seemingly formidable, are now, like those of most Afghan fortresses, fast crumbling to decay from long neglect. The citadel, like that of Cairo, stands on a steep rock in the centre of the town. There are four bazzars, which lie just within the four principal gates. The place has a considerable trade with Persia, India, Turkestan, and Western China, the chief local products being saffron, asafætida, saddlery, caps, cloaks, shoes, carpets, sables, and dressed sheepskins. The name of the town is said to be derived from the Heri-'Rud' or river, which flows along the southern base of the ridge upon which Herat stands.

March 15th.—The Albanian insurgents have been dispersed and the tribal chiefs have solemnly promised to remain quiet and prevent any further uprisings.

It is reported that Sir Peter Lumsden has arrived at Herat, Asia, and that the Afghans are actively fortifying the city. Small bodies of Russians hold the wells and roads between Sarakhs and Murghab River. There are several hundred Cossacks near Puli-Khatum, the most southerly point nearest Herat occupied by the Russians. The Russian forces occupying Merve consist of a battalion of infantry, a regiment of dragoons, and some Cossacks. At Askabad are about 8,000 troops of all arms. One Russian brigade and a convoy of military stores are enroute from Caucasus to Askabad. The Afghans believe that an offensive and defensive alliance between England and Turkey would have the effect of alienating the Turkomans from Russian authority.

Special editions of several London newspapers were published to-day announcing, on the authority of a private telegram from Suakin, that Kassala had fallen and the garrison had been massacred. The report is not believed in official circles, as the Government dispatches from Suakin received to-day make no mention of such an occurrence. Massowah advices to March 10th, say no news has been received from Kassala since March 4th.

The authoritative announcement of the discovery of coal in the very heart of Mexico creates the liveliest interest wherever it is known. This information comes from Jimulco, a small station on the Mexican Central Railroad, 562 miles south from Paso de Norte and 662 miles north of Mexico.

The strikers on the Gould railroads in the Southwest have been successful and the railroads have been forced to yield to their demands. As a result of the conference held to-day at St. Louis between the officials of Kansas and Missouri and the managers of the Gould system, the latter published last night an official circular restoring wages to the figures in force before Sept. 1st, 1884, the date of the first cut, and retaining all the strikers in their positions. The railroads promise to give thirty days' notice before any further reduction in wages is made, and guarantee one and one-half the regular rates for extra work. The men seem to be satisfied with the offer and will undoubtedly return to work this morning, thus ending the vexatious stoppage of freight traffic resulting from the great strike. The triumph of the strikers is a signal one, and is a merited rebuke to the unprincipled attempt of Jay Gould to secure the interest on his watered stock by reducing the wages of employes already underpaid.

March 16th.—Anxiety in England over the situation on the Afghan frontier increases. Mr. Gladstone's admissions in the House of Commons tend to aggravate the popular apprehension and to strengthen the belief that the Government is preparing to surrender to Russia. The Tories charge that the Premier's address in the House last week, which conveyed the impression that the written agreement with Russia was an event of recent occurrence, was intended to deceive. The agreement, they assert, was drafted and signed last month, and was merely used as a stop-gap by the Government.

The slow but steady advance of Russia is one of the most striking events of this century. A little over a hundred years ago she extended no further south than Uralsk, Omsk, and Orenburg. Now she is on the confines of Afghanistan, if not over them, and 200 miles south of Merve, her last acquisition, Step by step she advanced, annexing territory every few years and securely holding what she annexes, for it is a characteristic of the Russian Empire that it holds whatever it gets. At every stage in this remarkable progress of nearly 2,000 miles, accomplished in the last 150 years, she has been called to halt by England, and has halted but never receded. She has stopped now, but has not gone back. When this flurry dies away she will move on again. She takes no backward steps. Slow and sure seems to be her motto, Should the barriers of the Hindoo Koosh break her progress eventually in that direction, the tide will probably keep on through Eastern Siberia at China's expense.

Suakin advices do not confirm the rumor of the fall of Kassala and the massacre of the garrison

A dispatch from Shanghai says Admiral Courbet intends to abandon his position on the Island of Formosa and operate on the coast of Northern China.

Telegrams from Saigon report the revolt in Cochin-China is spreading. A plot was discovered to set fire to Saigon in order to give opportunity for an irruption of 3,000 Annamites. Annamites captured Ocmon, seven miles from Saigon, and massacred the European residents, burning alive the native Prefect and his wife. The Northern provinces are held by insurgents, who massacre native adherents of the French. The crews of the men-of-war at Saigon landed to defend the town, and foreign residents were under arms.

The Swiss Parliament has ratified the trademarks convention with the United States.

Advices from Calcutta report the tea and indigo districts in India suffering severely from drouth.

A telegram was received at the War Department from Gen. Hatch announcing that upon receipt of the President's Oklahoma proclamation most of those who were preparing to invade Indian Territory decided to return home. Dispatches from the boomers' camp at Arkansas City report that the colonists are still waiting there hopeful that the Cabinet will yet render a favorable decision.

Commander Wildes of the United States steamer Yantic, now at New Orleans, received instructions to-day from the Navy Department to sail as soon as possible for Livingston, Guatemala, to protect the interests of American citizens at that port.

The City of Panama was attacked at 4 a. m. today by a party of revolutionists, commanded by Gen. Vizpura, numbering 250 men. The Government is defending the city. Firing is going on incessantly.

March 17th.—Germany, it is said, will mediate between France and China.

There was a serious riot in the Town of Portadown, Ireland. Bands of Orangemen paraded the streets, and Nationalist rioters wrecked the houses of obnoxious persons.

Premier Gladstone stated in the House of Commons yesterday that the demand of the British Government for the withdrawal of the Russians from their advanced position had "lapsed." The announcement was received with ironical cheers.

Heavy firing ceased at Panama at 9 p. m. last night. The rebels retired to Buena Vista to recruit. The British gunboat Heroine landed seventy-five men yesterday, with a gatling gun, to protect property. Traffic on the Panama Railroad and business were suspended to-day, and there was great excitement, as a second attack is expected. President Arosemena took refuge on the Heroine. Colon is reported in possession of the rebels. Telegrams via Galveston are delivered without delay in Panama.

Commander Kane telegraphs to the Secretary of the U. S. Navy from Colon that a revolution exists in Panama and Aspinwall, and that he has landed marines and hauled the Galena alongside the wharf to protect property. Carthagena is also besieged.

Gen. Briere de l'Isle has blockaded Pak-Hoi. The remnants of Quang Si's army linger near Lang-Chan. The Yunnan army has retired in the direction of Thuyan Quan.

There is great excitement at Madrid over news to the effect that the Governor of Alhucemas, a small island containing a fortress and a prison settlement belonging to Spain, on the coast of Morocco, while parleying with a number of Morocco tribes, under the supposed protection of a flag of truce, was attacked. The Governor and several other officials were wounded.

"Lieut." John W. Richard of the Salvation Army was arrested at North Adams, Mass., and indicted with three others, charged with obtaining $30,000 worth of goods from merchants of different cities and disposing of the goods for their own business.

The United States Senate, and the government of Mexico, have both disapproved of the effort of Barrios, to unite the Republics of South America into one government.

Secretary Whittney to-day sent a dispatch to Commander Mahan of the Wachusett at Panama informing him that hostilities were likely to take place between some of the Central American States and Barrios, which will endanger the lives and property of citizens of the United States, and directing him to proceed with his vessel to La Union, and La Libertad, and other points on the Central American coast, to protect American interests. The Secretary also directs Commander Mahan to protest against any attempt to cut the cables or interfere with their use, and to take all precautions to protect the health of his officers and men from disease, which would render it necessary for the vessel to leave that coast.

John Nicholson, editor of the Deseret News, church organ, was arrested at Salt Lake City today for alleged polygamy. He waived examination, and was held in $1,500 bonds for the grand jury. C. W. Penrose, regular editor-in-chief of the News has skipped the Territory. He was wanted on the same charge.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

There were 282 failures in the United States and Canada during the last seven days, an increase of five as compared with the previous week.

Pope & Cole, dealers in metals at Baltimore, Md., have failed, with liabilities variously estimated at from $600,000 to $1,000,000.

It is not generally known that there are in successful operation in West Virgina two tin mines. One is near the City of Huntington, in Cabell County, and the other about five miles from Grantsville, in Calhoun County, on Laurel River. Unfortunately, it is a considerable distance from a railroad and on very bad ground for hauling. The Calhoun County mine, which is the most extensive, is owned by State Senator T. J. Farnsworth of Buckhannon, W. Va., and B. Ridgeway of Staunton, Va. Two years ago all this land was regarded as comparatively valueless, except for the splendid timber, and was a slow sale at fifty cents an acre. The same property is now held at hundreds of thousands of dollars. The tin is practically inexhaustible. The opening of the mine is directly in the face of a great hill. The rock is extremely hard, and blasting and drilling are constantly necessary. The product is of a bluish-gray color. Primitive machinery for the manipulation of the ore is in operation, and scores of curious visitors daily visit the place. P. B. Wilson of Baltimore assayed the ore, and found it to contain 42 per cent of tin. As soon as the necessary arrangements can be made smelting-works on an extensive scale will be erected. Eastern capitalists own the mine in Cabell County. It is believed that the Calhoun County vein extends miles across the country to the Great Kanawha River.

Southern Indiana winter wheat has suffered severely from the alternating thawing and freezing. In eleven counties in Indiana and four counties in Illinois not even a fair crop is expected, but the reports from eight Iillinois and two Indiana counties indicate that the crop is uninjured. Even the most discouraging dispatches do not indicate any great injury to the roots, and the farmers hope that a few weeks of good growing weather will repair all damages. Peaches in all sections of Indiana and Illinois, are a total failure. Apples and small fruits escaped better and the indications point to a good average crop.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: "The weather last week was fine, which was of great value to growing crops. Sales of English wheat for the week, 51,716 quarters at 31s 4d, against 59,699 quarters at 37s 7d the corresponding week last year. Foreign trade was ruled wholly by the political outlook. The off-coast trade was confined to one cargo of Australian wheat, which sold at 35s 9d. One cargo of American was vainly offered at 35s 6d and then withdrawn. At today's market the wheat trade was quiet and but little business was done. Prices were unchanged. Flour was quiet. Maize was 3d dearer. Barley was quiet and oats 3@ 6d dearer. Beans and peas were unchanged."

Chicago elevators contained March 14th 15,-705,834 bushels of wheat, 1,752,534 bushels of corn, 564,446 bushels of oats, 136,898 bushels of rye, and 101,652 bushels of barley. Total, 18,-261,362 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 22,-833,381 bushels a year ago, During last week the stock increased 53,510 bushels, including an increase of 232,467 bushels of wheat and a decrease of 162,193 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 48,593,017 bushels of wheat. 8,196,165 bushels of corn, 2,957,995 bushels of oats, 364,848, bushels of rye, and 1,282,755 bushels of barley. These figures are larger than a week ago by 7,342 in wheat and 1,748,223 in corn.

A forcible illustration of the evil effects of strikes is reported from Philadelphia. weavers at Kensington have been out for four months, and in that time $1,000,000 in wages has been lost to them. Many families are suffering for the necessaries of life. The store-keepers cannot afford longer to furnish supplies on credit and this adds to the misery. In the meantime there is no indication of a resumption of work. It is a national misfortune that differences of this kind cannot be adjusted without such great waste and misery. Pennsylvania has on its statutebooks a good law to prvide for arbitration in cases of this kind, but the workmen generally refuse to join in such a method of settlement.

Exports from various parts of Illinois represent the prospect for future and winter wheat as unusually bad.

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

March 15th.—Fifteen buildings were destroyed by fire Sunday night at New Holland, Ill., entailing a loss of about $20,000. Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $4,000. Columbia, Pa., $20,000. Norfolk, Va., $16,000. St. Mary's, Ont., $20,000. A large number of buildings at Petersburg, Va.

March 16th.—Fire in the City of Hull, Eng., destroyed $400,000 worth of property. Near Rockford, Ill., $2,500. Baltimore, Md., $15,000. Minneapolis, Minn., $10,000.

One of the twenty-three boilers in Lawrence & Brown's coal-breaker, situated on the slope of a high mountain near Mahanoy Plane, Pa., burst this morning without warning and hurled a dozen men off their feet. Three men were hit by the flying pieces from the boiler and terribly mangled. Jacob Grinder died and John Crawford and Fredrick Smith were so badly scalded and cut that they cannot live. The colliery will be compelled to remain idle until the damage is repaired, and in the meantime several hundred men will be thrown out of work.

March 17th.—Loss by fire at Bradlock, Pa., $12,000. Ishpeming, Mich., $60,000. Wabash, Ind., $16,000. Mo. Valley, Ia., $3,600. Saulsbury, Ind., $8,000.

March 18th.—Theophilus M. Marc's parafflne factory at Elizabethport, N.J., was totally destroyby fire. The loss was $200,000. Loss by fire at Atlanta, Ga., $80,000. Chicago, Ill., $20,000. Elizabeth, N. J., $200,000. Carbondale, Ill., $10,-000. Aurora, Ill., $7,000. St. Louis, Mo., $15,-000. At Michigamme, Mich., $15,000.

THE GATHERING.

BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR.

TITHING.

Elder Gurley says-"I deny that this church has affirmed, as part and parcel of the gospel, tithing as contained in sec. 106, Doctrine and Covenants." To this we reply, that the church has endorsed and affirmed the Doctrine and Covenants by its Assemblies and Conferences, many times, and for just what that book claims for itself—the revelations and prophecies to be of God, the lectures on faith to be valuable, but not revelation or prophecy; and the other articles in it to be just what they purport to be, and nothing more. Therefore, when the church endorsed and affirmed the revelations in that book, it endorsed and affirmed tithing as taught in them, without any kind of mental reservation, evasion, or quibbling; and to prove this matter further we cite the fact, that the Bishop and Twelve were commanded by revelation, Oct. 7th, 1861, to "execute the law of tithing." This revelation was accepted then, and was by resolution reaffirmed in conference, Sept. 20-24, 1871. It was further re-affirmed by resolution April 6-9, 1872 in conference. In the conference of April 6-11, 1875, it was again by resolution re-affirmed in these words-"Resolved, That the law of tithing is binding upon the church in its scat-tered condition;" and, in the conference, Sept. 7-15, 1878, the following resolution was adopted-"Resolved, that the law of tithing as given in the revelation of 1838, and referred to in the revelation of 1861, is applicable to the church in its present condition, and should be observed."

There has been some question as to what extent the revelation is applicable outside of Zion and her stakes, but scarcely no question as to the propriety and divinity of the law as expressed in that revelation.

When Elder Gurley states, or intimates, that I take the position "that the Doctrine and Covenants," as a book, "is all law to the church," he is again very wrong. The book itself does not claim it; neither has the church in its Assemblies and Conferences claimed it. As we said before, the book is made up of what claims to be useful lectures on faith, letters of the Seer, articles on "Marriage," on "Governments and Laws in General," history of and comments on the Martyrdom of Presidents Joseph and Hyrum Smith, minutes of the organization of the High Council of the Church at Kirtland, an account of "The rise of the Church," its leading principles, and the distinctive authority and duties of the ministry, as also many revelations and prophecies. These the church has accepted and endorsed respectively, according to the purport, character, and meaning of each.

INFALLIBILITY.

As to "the infallibility dogma" the very thought of which seems to trouble brother Gurley so deeply, it never had place in the church by virtue of any revelation or usage of which we have any knowledge either by history or tradition. The history of the church, written by the Seer, informs us that the principle of "common consent" was commanded the saints (through the Seer), and endorsed, at the very rise of the church; for when Joseph and Oliver were commanded to ordain each other to the office of Elders and organize the church, they were likewise commanded to call on the brethren present to know whether they accepted them "as their teachers in the things of the Kingdom of God, and whether they were satisfied," says the Seer, "that we should proceed and be organized as a church according to said commandment which we had received. To these they consented by an unanimous vote." And it was in the light of these commandments, and this procedure, April 6th, 1830, that the commandment came to the church," bidding "the church" to "give heed unto all his words and commandments" [when Joseph ministered them in the office and capacity of "a Seer, a Translator, a Prophet, an Apostle of Jesus Christ," etc]. It was only when Joseph officiated as the Seer, Translator, Prophet, first Apostle, and "first elder (presiding elder) of the church," that "the church" was commanded to "give heed unto all his words and commandments which he shall give unto you as he receiveth them walking in all holiness before me"—Christ. The words and commands of Joseph Smith as a private individual, and his words and commands when acting in those high and holy callings, were not the same in authority, but vastly different. A clear distinction should be made between his personal, and his official acts. The personal and the official acts of a civil officer differ-the latter are authoritative and binding, while the others are not. So with the ministers of Christ—so with Joseph the "choice Seer." That this view was held and taught by the Seer we have conclusive evidence, for he wrote from Liberty Jail, Mo., in the winter of 1838-9, as follows:

"Now concerning the places for the location of the Saints, [driven from Missouri], we would say that we can not council you in this thing as well as if we were with you; and as to the things written to you before, we did not consider them binding. We would advise that while we remain in prison and in bondage, that the affairs of the Church be conducted by a general conference of the most faithful and respectable of the authorities of the church, and that the proceedings of the same be forwarded to your humble servants, and if there be any corrections by the word of the Lord they shall be freely transmitted, and we will cheerfully approve of all things which are acceptable to God. If any thing should have been suggested by us, or any names mentioned, except by commandment or 'thus saith the Lord,' we do not consider it binding; therefore we shall not feel grieved if you should deem it wisdom to make different arrangements."—Times and Seasons, Vol. 1. p. 102.

This was the position of the "choice Seer," plainly stated; and "infallibility" is claimed for nothing except "the word of the Lord." And when we see that the Lord by revelation through the Seer called upon the ministry to "agree" upon his word; (D. C. 41:1); and when we further see an Assembly of the officers of the church called to decide upon the revelations to, and the rule of faith and doctrine of the church under the presidency of the Seer, and done by and with his advice, the "hobgoblin" of infallibility created by the fancy of Elder Gurley "vanishes into thin air."

If the revelation of April 6th makes Joseph and his revelations infallible in the sense claimed by Elder Gurley, if that revelation establishes "the infallibility dogma," as claimed by Elder Gurley—what shall we say of the following from the teachings of the good and wise King Benjamin in the Book of Mormon? "And now, my brethren, I would that ye should do as ye have hitherto done. As ye have kept my commandments, and also the commandments of my father, and have prospered, and have been kept from falling into the hands of your enemies, even so if ye shall keep the commandments of my son, or the commandments of God, which shall be delivered unto you by him, ye shall prosper in the land, and your enemies shall have no power over you."-Mosiah 1: 10. Does not this teach precisely the same principles and sentiments, the same kind and degree of "infallibility" as those revelations complained of and opposed by Elder Gurley? If these established "the Romish dogma of infallibility" in the church of the Latter Day Saints, and therefore should be rejected, why not reject those found in the Book of Mormon, or in the Bible? why not reject King Benjamin and his father, and his son, and Moses as well as the Seer? and why not then reject the similar "words and commandments" of John and Peter and James and Paul and Moses and the prophets and the reputed words of Jesus! When one starts on this "down grade" he is not likely to stop till he rejects all that claims to be revelation or prophecy, except just what he personally knows, or thinks he knows

Paul endorsed and taught the same kind of "infallibility" as that taught by Moses, King Benjamin, and the "Choice Seer" complained of by Elder Gurley; for he said—"And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed." 2. Thess. 3: 14. Again—"Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle." 2: 15. And again—"As though God did beseech you by us, we pray you in Christ's stead." 2 Cor. v. 20. And still again—"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." And yet further:

"That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior.—2 Pet. 3: 2.

From all these passages, (and scores of similar ones might be quoted), it is certain God never intended that the official, authoritative words, epistles, revelations, and prophecies of his duly accredited prophets, seers, revelators, and apostles, should be opposed or trifled with by any one, especially by any of his ministers; neither on the grounds of their supposed teaching of "infallibility," nor from any other reason. Every officer should learn and do his own duty, and not interfere with others.

The only proper places for Church ministers or members to discuss accepted and established Church doctrines and rules of government is in the General Assemblies and General Conferences of the Church, as before noted.

GATHERING.

Elder Gurley affirms that the "infallibility dogma" touching the revelations of the Seer has misled and corrupted the church. To this we reply, that had the revelations in the Nauvoo edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, given by the Seer and endorsed by the church, been faithfully obeyed, the church to-day would have been a pure church, resplendent with the glory of God, located in the great valleys of the Mississippi and Missouri-the garden of America—and would have numbered its millions. But when individuals and factions in the church—ministers and members-treated those revelations "lightly," and dishonored and disobeyed them, then came contention and division and sin and corruption and scattering and shame and reproach. No one who reads that book without spleen or prejudice will charge that the revelations teach, or tend toward disorder, immorality, or irreligion; but, to the very opposite. And when Elder Gurley says "the gathering as taught and practiced by Joseph Smith * * has produced withering blight in every instance," his statements are not reliable. That "blight" did follow the gathering to Jackson, Clay, and Caldwell counties, Missouri, is not denied; but it is traceable to two prominent causes, the chief of which was, the Saints did not keep the church articles and covenants given through the Seer in regard to purchasing land, having "all things prepared before them" ere they gathered, keeping the moral law, and observing their religious duties; while the other cause, (in Mo.,) lay in the fact that the Saints were eastern -free soil-people who held that human slavery was a sin, and that a man's complexion and nationality were not proper reasons for his being held in bondage! These were the primary and principal causes of the troubles the Saints endured in Missouri. We deny that any of the Kirtland troubles or failures are or were justly chargeable to any of the revelations given by the Seer to the church; but we hold that they were the legitimate fruits of treating them "lightly" and violating them. And as for the failures, troubles, and "blight" which occurred to the church in Illinois, they too, were the direct results of continued violations of the moral, social, political, and religious requirements found in the authorized and accepted revelations of the Seer, Joseph Smith. Indeed, the revelation given through him Jan. 19, 1841, predicted that their calamities would be the direct fruits of sinning against Christ's words through the Seer, as the following shows:

"And it shall come to pass, that if you build an house unto my name, and do not do the things that I say, I will not perform the oath which I make unto you, neither fulfill the promises which ye expect at my hands, saith the Lord; for instead of blessings, ye, by your own works, bring cursings, wrath, indignation and judgments, upon your own heads, by your follies, and by all your abominations, which you practice before me, saith the Lord."—D. C. sec. 107: 14.

It would be quite as proper and just to charge the failures and "blight" which attended the "oft" attempted gathering of Israel by the Savior, (Matt. 23:37.) to the badness of his theory and methods, as to charge similar things against the gathering as taught and practiced by Joseph the Seer. Every person of sense and fairness who studies the principles, objects, and methods taught in the revelations of the Seer in respect to gathering, will honor and admire them. It was not the carrying out of these that brought "blight" and failure; but it was the disregard and violation of them, as any one may see who will carefully study the matter.

The efforts to establish Republican forms of government have failed repeatedly; efforts to perfect useful inventions have failed repeatedly; efforts to moralize the world have failed repeatedly; and efforts to Christianize the world have failed repeatedly; yet these failures should not be charged to the principles involved in them, but rather to surrounding conditions, oppositions, and the imperfections and evils of men.

OBJECTS IN GATHERING.

One of the objects and ends had in view in the gathering taught by the Seer, was to create social, industrial and property equality, by a just and wise arrangement for the creation and distribution of capital and labor, and this by such plans and methods as would exclude idleness and encourage industry; promote love and subdue selfishness; encourage virtue and prevent vice; avoid hurtful competition, and provide safe equitable co-operation; and all this for the common good of the saints and humanity, and to be effected by taking means from where it could be spared and putting it where most needed. The following are some of the revelations of the Seer bearing upon this point—"Let every man esteem his brother as himself, and practice virtue and holiness before me." Doc. and Cov. 38: 5. "It must needs be that they [the saints] are organized according to my laws—if otherwise, they will be cut off; wherefore let my servant Edward Partridge [the Bishop], and those whom he has appointed, in whom I am well pleased, appoint unto this people their portion, every man equal according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs."-D. C. 51: 1. (See also Matt. 25: 14-29; Rom. 12: 6-8). "And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just; and all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundred fold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God." D. and C. 82:4. "For it is expedient that I, the Lord, should make every man accountable, as stewards over earthly blessings, which I have made and prepared for my creatures. I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handy work; and all things are mine; and it is my purpose to provide for my saints, for all things are mine; but it must needs be done in mine own way; and behold this is the way that I the Lord have decreed to provide for my saints; that the poor shall be exalted, in that the rich are made low; for the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare; yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment." D. and C. 101:2. In keeping with this is the following, found in the very bosom of the law given February 9th, 1831:

"If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose.

And it shall come to pass that after they are laid before the bishop of my church, and after that he has received these testimonies concerning the consecration of the properties of my church, that they can not be taken from the church, agreeably to my commandments; every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration, inasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family.

And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue, to be consecrated unto the bishop, it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants. Therefore, the residue shall be kept in my store-house, to administer to the poor and the needy, as shall be appointed by the high council of the church, and the bishop and his council, and for the purpose of purchasing lands for the public benefit of the church, and building houses of worship, and building up of the New Jerusalem which is hereafter to be revealed, that my covenant people may be gathered in one, in that day when I shall come to my temple. And this I do for the salvation of my people.

And it shall come to pass that he that sinneth and repenteth not, shall be cast out of the church, and shall not receive again that which he has consecrated unto the poor and the needy of my church, or, in other words, unto me; for inasmuch as ye do it unto the least of these, ye do it unto me; for it shall come to pass that which I spake by the mouths of my prophets shall be fulfilled; for I will consecrate of the riches of those who embrace my gospel, among the Gentiles, unto the poor of my people who are of the house of Israel.

Thou shalt stand in the place of thy steward-ship; thou shalt not take thy brother's garment; thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive of thy brother; and if thou obtainest more than that which would be for thy support, thou shalt give it unto my store-house, that all things may be done according to that which I have said.

If thou shalt ask, thou shalt receive revelation upon revelation, knowledge upon knowledge, that thou mayest know the mysteries, and peaceable things; that which bringeth joy, that which bringeth life eternal. Thou shalt ask, and it shall be revealed unto you in mine own due time, where the New Jerusalem shall be built.

And behold, it shall come to pass, that my servants shall be sent forth to the east, and to the west, to the north, and to the south; and even now, let him that goeth to the east, teach them that shall be converted to flee to the west; and this in consequence of that which is coming on the earth, and of secret combinations. Behold thou shalt observe all things, and great shall be thy reward; for unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom, but unto the world it is not given to know them. Ye shall observe the laws which ye have received, and be faithful. And ye shall hereafter receive church covenants, such as shall be sufficient to establish you, both here and in the New Jerusalem. Therefore, he that lacketh wisdom, let him ask of me, and I will give him liberally, and upbraid him not. Lift up your hearts and rejoice, for unto you the kingdom, or in other words, the keys of the church, have been given. Even so. Amen.

Had the church faithfully carried out these revelations of the Seer, the gathering would have been a grand success, and not a "blight;" and its excellence and beauty would have proved "a light" to which the Gentiles could come and find an easy and a ready solution of their labor-capital problems, and a preventive and specific for Socialism, Communism, Nihilism, and the various other issues arising from antagonisms existing wrongfully between labor and capital, which now menace the peace and prosperity of the nations. These revelations recognize the natural brotherhood of man, and the added covenant brotherhood of Christ's disciples; and they provide in a methodical way for a practical exemplification of the principles which should govern them.

TO ESCAPE CORRUPTIONS AND PLAGUES.

Another and a very important reason for the gathering is found in the vision of John the Revelator relative to the corruption and desolation of "Mystery Babylon" in these last days: "And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."—Rev. 18:4. Here are two of the very best of reasons for the gathering of God's people; one is, that his people "be not partakers of her sins;" and the other that "ye receive not of her plagues." In harmony with this is the following from the first revelation in the Doctrine and Covenants:

"Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth, that all that will hear may hear: prepare ye, prepare ye for that which is to come, for the Lord is nigh; and the anger of the Lord is kindled, and his sword is bathed in heaven, and it shall fall upon the inhabitants of the earth; and the arm of the Lord shall be revealed; and the day cometh that they who will not hear the voice of the Lord, neither the voice of his servants, neither give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, shall be cut off from among the people; for they have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant; they seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own god, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol, which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon, even Baylon the great, which shall fall.

Wherefore I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets; the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow-man, neither trust in the arm of flesh, but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; that faith also might increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

Behold, I am God, and have spoken it; these commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding; and inasmuch as they erred it might be made known; and inasmuch as they sought wisdom they might be instructed; and inasmuch as they sinned they might be chastened, that they might repent; and inasmuch as they were humble, they might be made strong, and blessed from on high, and receive knowledge from time to time; and after having received the record of the Nephites, yea, even my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., might have power to translate, through the mercy of God, by the power of God, the Book of Mormon; and also those to whom these commandments were given might have power to lay the foundation of this church, and to bring it forth out of obscurity, and out of darkness, the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth, with which I the Lord am well pleased, speaking unto the church collectively and not individually; for I the Lord can not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance; nevertheless, he that repents and does the commandments of the Lord shall be forgiven; and he that repents not, from him shall be taken even the light which he has received, for my spirit shall not always strive with man, saith the Lord of Hosts.

And again, verily I say unto you, O inhabitants of the earth, I the Lord am willing to make these things known unto all flesh, for I am no respecter of persons, and willeth that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh, the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion; and also the Lord shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world.

Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled.

What I the Lord have spoken I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my words shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine of vn voice, or by the voice of my servants, it is the same; for behold, and lo, the Lord is God, and the Spirit beareth record, and the record is true, and the truth abideth forever and ever. Amen."

And this from the Appendix, sec. 108: 1-4:

"Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the Lord concerning you; the Lord who shall suddenly come to his temple; the Lord who shall come down upon the world with a curse to judgment; yea, upon all the nations that forget God, and upon all the ungodly among you. For he shall make bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations, and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of their God.

Wherefore prepare ye, prepare ye, O my people; sanctify yourselves; gather ye together, O ye people of my church, upon the land of Zion, all you that have not been commanded to tarry. Go ye out from Babylon. Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord. Call your solemn assemblies, and speak often one to another. And let every man call upon the name of the Lord; yea, verily I say unto you again, the time has come when the voice of the Lord is unto you, go ye out of Babylon; gather ye out from among the nations, from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

Send forth the elders of my church unto the nations which are afar off; unto the islands of the sea; send forth unto foreign lands; call upon all nations; firstly, upon the Gentiles, and then upon the Jews. And behold and lo, this shall be their cry, and the voice of the Lord unto all people: Go ye forth unto the land of Zion, that the borders of my people may be enlarged, and that her stakes may be strengthened, and that Zion may go forth unto the regions round about; yea, let the cry go forth among all people; awake and arise and go forth to meet the Bridegroom. Behold, and lo, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him. Prepare yourselves for the great day of the Lord.

Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour. Let them, therefore, who are among the Gentiles, flee unto Zion. And let them who be of Judah, flee unto Jerusalem, unto the mountains of the Lord's house. Go ye out from among the nations, even from Babylon, from the midst of wickedness, which is spiritual Babylon. But verily thus saith the Lord, let not your flight be in haste, but let all things be prepared before you; and he that goeth, let him not look back, lest sudden destruction shall come upon him."

These are some of God's reasons for the gathering. Other reasons might be mentioned showing the benefits of the gathering as taught in the revelations, and sermons, and letters of God's "choice Seer," but these should be sufficient now. Elder Gurley volunteers the opinion that "this class of teachers" who say the calamities which came upon the saints at Kirtland, in Missouri, and Illinois were because "they did not keep the commands,"
"know but very little, if anything about the matter whatever." To this we reply, that some of them, at least, have had quite as good oppertunities for obtaining information on the point as he. Bro. Gurley was but an infant at most when the Seer was assassinated, and personally knew nothing of the gathering at Nauvoo, much less at Kirtland, or in Missouri. What information he possesses on these matters he gleans only from Mormon and anti-. Mormon records toned and flavored with rumor and hearsay. If he bases his opinions on the two latter sources extensively, which he seems to do, he can then go further, and judge of Christ and primitive Christianity, and the various protestant leaders and their works, by the writings and rumors of their enemies, and he then would be equally justified, and get about as near the facts, in one case as in the other. But when we judge the doctrine of the gathering by the revelations of the Seer, and by the teachings of the Book of Mormon and the Bible, we can only admire its ends and objects, its principles and its methods, its blessings and its glory.

When Elder Gurley points us to Utah, and to Voree, to see the fruits of the gathering as taught by Joseph Smith, he can give no greater evidence of either blindness or unfairness-to put it in the mildest form we can,—for the gathering to Utah, and the principles governing those who gather there, are very different, and in some respects directly contrary to what Joseph taught, as any may see who reads the standard books of the church or this article. He tells us he understands that Voree, Wisconsin, was a stake appointed by Joseph Smith. Yes; that may be his understanding. But is it correct? We think not; and we hold his "understanding". is as much at fault in this, as in very many other things he has stated in his controversy. He lacks proof.

As to the action of the Twelve on the revelation of 1838 on tithing, which he cites so often, it did not come to the light of conference, and is like some other objections he has offered, of no legitimate force or value.

IS THERE ANY THING SUGGESTED IN VISIONS THAT IS RELIABLE?

Some years ago, through the influence of those who expressed themselves as friends, and who were members of that fraternity. I was seriously thinking of uniting with the Masonic Organization. Was urged as strongly perhaps, as they ever urged any one to do so. The inducements held out were, that it would be of eminent service to me when traveling; could the more easily get acquainted, and make friends wherever I might go, and thus be protected when otherwise I might be left triendless, to be imposed upon and wronged: and further, that it would prove a great anxiliary to success in life. Experience having made me rather suspicious of men and their institutions when wholly of human conception, knowing that they are too often both blind and unscrupulous, bending their energies to the accomplishment of selfish purposes at any sacrifice, being tyrants and tyrannical when opportunity favored, so that they could carry out their natural bent, I had always utterly refused to become entangled or implicated in secret institutions of every kind, refusing even to join a Good Templars Lodge. Being a lover of freedom, not only of country but of the individual, I always scorned to sign away my natural rights to an individual or a confederation of individuals, and agree to be bound and obligated by their dictation. To me, ind-pendence, the freedom of soul and conscience, are gods next to the true God. But the question came, why be different from other people? There are scores of good people that I know who belong, and are none the worse so far as I know. Then to unite with this order may be of great service to me in many ways. Why not unite with them? Am I full of conceit, suspicion and distrust beyond all others? God I always did implicitly trust, but few others. While debating in my mind the propriety and the impropriety, the right and the wrong of this contemplated move, I was carried away in vision, and the following was presented to my mind so vividly and with such force, that it is very present with me unto this day: I saw myself clad in common clothing, such as I was accustomed to wear, having on a black overcoat buttoned all the way up in front, and wearing a slouch hat, my own suit as worn. I was riding a young gray mare which I had frequently ridden, and was returning from filling an appointment for preaching, along a muddy road, through fog and a mist of rain. I never felt more happy, cheerful and contentedsang merrily as I passed along, and was as light of heart and void of offense as any boy that ever played at ball, or romped over a lawn. Soon arriving at the little village where I then lived, at once I found myself passing through the doorway into a long room-hotel. I thought it my home-but it was not, neither the building in which I was then living. A long table, some twenty-five feet in length, was set, and was covered with dishes and remnants and scraps of victuals, and dishes of food that had been eaten from and culled over by a large number of persons who had just eaten and left the room before I entered. But two persons were seen; a lady—the cook—and a little child holding her hand, and both withdrew into the kitchen, just looked at me, the woman seemed tired and shut the door as I entered, and did not re-appear.

I threw my hat to one side and sat down, all alone and unattended, to eat, at the second table. I was very careless and indifferent in my manner, keeping on my overcoat and it closely buttoned; but I was so free, cheerful and happy in feeling and thought that not the least anxiety or distress of feeling impressed me. Not the least thing earthly seemed to have any claim on me, and I feared none. While thus eating, all at once the door through which I had entered opened, and a man with whom I was acquainted entered. I will not give his name, but he was a Mason, and belonged to the Catholic Church. He is the only man that I remembered of ever seeing that is both a Catholic and a Mason. He looked straight at me, and spoke as follows: "Mr. -," calling me by name, "they want to see you out here." (Out in the street). I thought there was a large, excited, surging, clamorous crowd on the street. "What do they want with me," I asked? He answered, "They want to kill you." "All right," said I, "I will be done eating pretty soon, and will go out and see what they want." He kept standing by the door, and I ate away and was just as indifferent to fear, or to claims that anybody had on me as one could be; was happy, cheerful and contented; ready to face any, whether one or a thousand. When done eating I seized my hat and started to go out at the door, when the same person said, "I wish I was in your place. It is not you they want to kill, but me. I have broken the pledge and I have to suffer the penalty. I took it of my own accord, and I must suffer;" and repeated it some three times. In an instant I passed the throng in the street, and found myself in an upper room of medium size, such as are commonly used in the West as lodge rooms, sitting in a chair near the middle of the room, all alone. The windows were curtained and the room seemed to be lighted with lamplight. Soon a strange man appeared with the person with whom I had been conversing. A table some six or eight feet long was stretched out a few steps from me, and the strange man took the man with whom I had conversed, and stretched him out upon the table, pushing him sideways and backward on to the table. The man was pale and the muscles of his face distorted with terror, fear and grief; but he was helpless. As he bent down along on the long table, he kept repeating, "I took it of my own accord, and I must suffer; I took it of my own accord, and I must suffer." While he lay upon the table, the While he lay upon the table, the strange man held him down with his left arm and with his right hand took a long, broad bladed knife, and inserted in the man's breast just above the pit of the stomach, and cut it straight down below the lower ribs, and then cut at right angles under the lower rib to the right, some four or five inches; and then lifted up the point of flesh thus cut around, took out the man's heart, and slipped the great knife through it. Just then a body of men seated in the back part of the room, and not before discovered, cheered all together, like a demonstration at a political meeting, sanctioning and supporting the act. Thus it ended.

This vision is real. What does it mean?

This vision is real. What does it mean? Who can interpret it? Is it wrong to join lodges? Would you have joined after seeing this, had you been in my place? What say you? Did I join or not?

XERES ZERUBBABEL.

THE FAITH ONCE DELIVERED TO THE SAINTS.

DELIVERED AT ONEIDA CENTER, OCT. 24TH, 1869.

SERMON BY ELD. HIRAM RATHBUN.

I. Faith may be divided into two parts: 1. Strength, or power, to believe, to trust, to confide, to rely. This strength to believe is of God: "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of his power toward us who believe." "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." Eph. 1: 18, 19; 2: 8, 9. This strength is through Christ: "Without me," says Jesus, "ye can do nothing;" "and the apostles said unto the Lord, increase our faith." John 15:5; Luke 17: 5. This strength is inspired by the Holy Spirit as one of the fruits of the This strength is inspired by Spirit. See Gal. 5: 22.

2. Exercise of this strength to believe, is the act of the creature: Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God? Jesus answered and said unto them, "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hall sent."—John 6: 28, 29. We are disposed to exercise this strength to believe through hearing the word: "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."—Rom. 10: 17.

II. The faith spoken of in the text, and for which we are earnestly contending is,

t. The faith of the saints, or the saints' faith. Hence it was the faith, not of hypocrites, of worldlings, of professors of religion whose hearts are swelled up and whose eyes stick out with vanity, pride, pleasure, covetourness, selfishness, lust, deceit, sectism,—but of saints, pious saints, holy saints, tried saints, God's saints.

2. The faith that was delivered to the saints. God revealed himself to them in wisdom, power, grace and glory. He gave the promises, and the record of his Son, to them. They assented to the truth of God, they trusted in his promises and believed the record he gave of his Son. They rested all in the wisdom, power, goodness and unchangeableness of Jehovah to fulfill all his promises. The gracious strength to do this was delivered to them of God. The exercise of the strength stood, not in the excellency of man's wisdom, nor in the cunningly devised arrangements of man, nor in the ingeniously written formulas or creeds of men, but in the power of God.

3. The faith that was perfected in its productiveness: Of Abraham, who offered Isaac his son upon the altar, it was said, "Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect." "By it the elders obtained a good report. By faith Abel offered a more excellent offering than Cain. By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him. By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by which he condemned the world, and became heir to the righteousness which is by faith. By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. Through faith also Sarah herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised. By faith Abraham offered up his son Isaac: and he that received the promises offered up his only Son, of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called: accounting that God was able to raise him up from the dead; from whence he also received him in a figure. By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come. By faith Tacob, when he was dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph; and worshipped leaning upon the top of his staff. By faith Joseph, when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Israel; and gave commandment concerning his bones. By faith Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's commandment. By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; for he had respect unto there compense of reward. By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king; for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible. Through faith he kept the passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the first-born should touch them. By faith they passed through the Red Sea as by dry land: which the Egyptians essaying to do were drowned. By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days. By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with them that believed not. And what shall I more say? for time would fail me to tell of Gideon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephtha; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets; who thro' faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. Women received their dead raised to life again; and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection; and others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonments: they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitue, afflicted, tormented; (of whom the world was not worthy): they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. All these obtained a good report through faith." So the faith once delivered to the saints was perfected by its productiveness. James 2:22; Heb. 11.

4. The faith once delivered to the saints was that which evinced and manifested its vitalizing power of life in being inseparably connected with works of righteousness. Hence it is not the faith of devils or wicked persons, nor is it the faith of heretics nor sectarians, but the faith of saints. "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him? If a brother or a sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith if it hath not works, is dead, being alone. Yea a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works; show me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works. Thou believest there is one God; thou doest well: the devils believe and tremble. But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead? For as the body without the spirit is dead so faith without works is dead also," James 2: 14; 20: 26.
5 The faith once delivered to the saints

was an affectual or saving faith; a faith by which they stood in the promised Messiah [Christ] approved of God and through which they were accounted as the children of God. So the promise was made to Abraham: "For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise of none effect: because the law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgress. ion. Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to al. the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all." It is further said, "He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God, and being fully persuaded, that what he had promised, he was able also to perform, and therefore it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him for righteousness, now it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification." So "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree: That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ, that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." "And if ye be Christ's then are ye abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." Rom. 4:13; 16:20, 25: Gal. 3:13, 14; Rom. 8: 1,2; Gal. 3: 29,26.

6. The faith of the Saints was a peculiarly distinguishing faith. By it the saints were distinguished as saints from all other people upon the globe. No difference whether at home or abroad, on the sea or the land, in poverty or in wealth, in adversity or prosperity, in sickness or in health, in life or in death, their faith was that which distinguished them as saints. It was the sign or index by which all heaven, earth, and hell might distinguish, read and know the saints. And why? Because it was the fruit of an excellent Spirit, and stood alone in the wisdom, power, goodness, and unchangeableness of God.

7. The faith of the saints was an unrestricted faith. There is nothing in the religion of God that would deliver this faith to the literal Israel of God and deny it to his spiritual Israel. There is nothing in the religion of the Bible that would deliver this faith to him that was a Jew outwardly and deny it to him that was a Jew inwardly. There is nothing in the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ that would allow this faith to be delivered to the Old Testament saints and then deny it to the New Testament saints; nor is it in any wise to be less under the dispensation of the Lord Jesus Christ than it was under the dispensation of Moses, but under every dispensation throughout every succeeding generation every saint of the Most High is entitled to "like precious faith." Hence says Jesus, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be And these signs shall follow damned. them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover." And again James, the Lord's brother says, "Is there any sick among you? let him call for the Elders of the Church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be for given him."—Mark 16: 15-18; James 5: 14, 15.

Now one man has just as much right to say that your sins shall not be forgiven, as any other man has to say the prayer of faith shall not save the sick, and the Lord shall not raise him up: so this faith is unrestricted either in its power, or to times, or to persons who are saints.

III .- OUR DUTY IN REGARD TO THE FAITH.

1. Contend for the faith; strive, struggle, make efforts,-powerful efforts-for the faith. Dispute, reprove so as to convince, reclaim, and convert to this faith: for, strange to tell, there will be in every way much opposion to the faith once delived to the saints being enjoyed and developed by you. Jesus found this so. It is said of him, "He did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief." Again it is said, "He could there do no mighty work; and he marveled because of their unbelief." Matt. 13:58; Mark 6: 5, 6.

2. Earnestly contend for this faith: Ardently, warmly, eagerly, zealously, importunately, with animated desire, intently in words and actions. So contend for this faith against any, and every thing that rises up against it. So this text means. We are not only to argue for this faith, but have this faith and practice it, even if we have to lay down our lives for the development of this faith in the defense of Hence says St. Paul "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."—2 Tim. 4:6, 7.
3. In Unity earnestly contend for this faith: In unity of heart, in unity of soul, in unity with God, in unity with Jesus, in unity with the Holy Ghost in unity with the holy angels, in unity with the spirits of just men made perfect, in unity with—not a part, but—all saints, earnestly contend for this faith; for if "two of you shall agree on earth as touching any one thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven:" but this agreeing, and this asking, must be in faith, "for whatsoever is not of faith is sin," but "then have confidence toward God, and whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight. And this is his commandment, "That we should believe on the name of his Son Tesus Christ, and love one another." Hence, says the apostle "Stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel, and in nothing terrified by your adversaries." Matt. 18: 19; Rom. 14: 23; 1 John 3: 21-23; Phil. 1: 27.

4. Is it Needful thus to contend for this faith: Why? "For there are certain men crept in unewares walking after their own lusts: [selfish purposes] and their mouth speaking great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration, because of advantage. "These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the spirit." "Mark those who cause divisions:" [sects, parties, rents], "For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly, [that is their own selfish purposes], and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple." Who on all the earth are more simple hearted than young converts? By "fair speeches," that is whole discourses that are "fair," made up of "good words," these simple hearted Christians are deceived and led captive into sects, parties, divisions. Their faith is in this process diverted from standing alone in the power of God, to stand in the wisdom of men in their cunningly devised arrangements and their ingeniously written doctrines, commandments, confessions of faith, creeds, &c. Hence, says the Apostle, "Preach the word; be instant in season, and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with long suffering and doctrine: For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts [selfish purposes] shall They, not the Holy Ghost but shall They heap [great multitude] to themselves, not to God, but "to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." That is they shall be turned unto the writings, sayings, commandments, doctrines, formularies of men. Hence says the Apostle Jude, "Beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Tesus Christ; how that they told you that there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts: [their own selfish purposes.] These be they who separate themselves," it is not God that divides them into sects, but These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the spirit." Hence says Paul, "I know this that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock." Not in the plural "flocks" but in the singular " for God has not got but one flock, one old. He continues, "Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly," he says, "that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." After all these quotations and the explanations from God's word if any man has the least lingering doubt of the absolute necessity of "earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints," just let him make only once a fair trial of it, neither need he do anything further than to get up in the congregation of sectarians and read what Jesus and his holy apostles say about faith, its power, and what God will do and do now through faith, and he will find that doubt very suddenly removed in the fulfillment of the prophecy of the Prophet Micah. "The best of them is as a briar: the most upright is sharper than a thorn-hedge." Jude 16, 19; Rom. 16:17, 18; 2 Tim. 4:3, 4; Jude 17, 18, 19; Acts 20:29, 30; 1 Tim. 4:1; Micah 7:4.

Conference Minutes.

POTTAWATTAMIE DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Council Bluffs, Iowa, Feb. 28th, 1885, at 10: 30 a.m., C. A. Beebe president, pro tem; J. F. McDowell secretary pro tem. Remarks by J. F. McDowell.

Resolved, That J. F. McDowell preach 7: 30 p. m., Bro. E. C. Brand Sunday at 10: 30 a. m., sacrament service be held at 2. p. m., and preaching 7: 30 by J. F. McDowell.

Whereas, much discussion has been had in columns of Saints' Herald, on items of doctrine long entertained by the church; and Whereas, by these discussions the validity of certain doctrinal tenets in some revelations in Book of Doctrine and Covenants, has been questioned, thereby calling into doubt the certainty of what we believe to be God's word; and believing that in consequence of such discussions the office of the Herald as a church organ, has been abused, believing its exclusive use should be the actual reflection of the well defined tenets of faith named an "Epitome;" Therefore, be it Resolved, That we discountenance such abuse, and we hereby instruct our delegates to recommend to General Conference the taking of action relative to the general and special use of the Herald as to being a "church organ."

Upon motion Brn. C. A: Beebe and R. Mc-Kenzie were appointed a committee to audit Bishop's Agent's books.

Sunday forenoon Bro. Brand preached. An enjoyable time was had at social meeting, the Holy Spirit's blessing resting on the assembly. At night J. F. McDowell preached to a large audience.

Adjourned to meet at Crescent City, Iowa, August 29th, 1885, at 10: 30 a.m.

Resolved, That this conference tender to Brn. Joseph Smith, and Wm. W. Blair of the Presidency; Alexander H. Smith of the Apostolate, and others, a vote of thanks for the expression of their views as contained in recent editions of the Herald, upon the law of tithing and their able support of the sacred books of the church, which we hold should be the rules to govern us in all things pertaining to life and salvation; That this conference empower the president of this district to solicit the labor of any officers in the district to assist him in his labors where necessity demands; That the Lampsville and Belmont branches be requested to furnish financial aid to the district, which they have failed to do for the past year; That Clarksburg, Cabin Run and Sugar Creek branches, be permitted to withdraw from this district. as the two former request. They desiring to form a new district on account of distance and expense incident to visiting them by officers of this district; That our district conferences be held the last Saturday of January and July of each year, semi-yearly, to continue over the following Sunday.

Assignment of Missions.—Jacob Reese and David J. Jones, Mansfield, Pa.; Joseph Parsons, Allegheny City, Pa.; David Stracham, Church Hill; James Brown, Gill Hill, Pa.; Wm H. Garrett, Greenville, Pa.

Sunday, preaching in the forenoon and administration of the ordinance of baptism at noon, by Elder M. H. Forscutt. Saints' Social Meeting in the afternoon, Elders J. W. Ells and G. T. Griffiths in charge. Evening, preaching by Elder M. H. Forscutt. Officials present, I Apostle, 2 High Priests, 1 Seventy, 5 Elders, 2 Priests, 1 Teacher, and 2 Deacons.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT. Conference was held at Plano, Kendall county, Illinois, February 28th and March 1st, 1885, Bro. John S. Patterson president, and W. Vickery clerk.

Branch Reports.—Plano 189, 1 baptized, 3 received by certificate of baptism, 6 received by letter, 2 removed by letter; Burlington, re-organized, 19, 1 baptized; Streator 13, 2 received by vote; this report received after the conference by the president of the district, and handed to the secretary of the same; Marengo, reported by Bro. Brand, disorganized, only 3 members living there; Leland, by Bro. Odin Jacobs, only 6 members.

Brn. J. S. Patterson and C. Scott were appointed a committee to draft preamble and resolution touching the case of C. C. Frisby, and other matters relative to Streator Branch, and report to this conference.

Bro. John S. Patterson was chosen president of the district for the next four months, and W. Vickery secretary for same time.

Brn. G. Sheideicker, I. L. Rogers, J. S. Patterson and T. Hougas were chosen delegates to General Conference to be held April 6th, 1885.

Preaching in the evening by Bro. Columbus Scott.

Sunday, March 1st.—Preaching in the forenoon by Bro. Thomas Hougas. One was baptized by Bro. Thomas Hougas. In the afternoon, sacrament and fellowship meeting in charge of Brn. T. Hougas and W. Vickery.

Committee in the case of C. C. Frisby reported as follows: We, your committee appointed to examine the matter of the baptism of C. C. Frisby into the church in the Northern Illinois District some time since, and his ordination to the office of Elder, beg to submit: Whereas, Investigation of the case shows that said C. C. Frisby was tried by a Court of Elders at Kansas City, said Elders' Court being duly appointed by the First Kansas City Branch, of which branch he was a member when said trial occurred; and whereas the Elders' Court on due examination of said C. C. Frisby's case decided that he was unworthy of membership in the church, and by the recommendation of said court he was by said branch of the church disfellowshipped: and whereas said C. C. Frisby came into the Northern Illinois District, and without making any restitution previously for his misconduct at Kansas City, he, by misrepresentation of the facts in the case to authorities in the Northern Illinois District, did obtain baptism into the church, and an ordination to the office of Elder in said district; Therefore, resolved that the said baptism and ordination of said C. C Frisby in said district be and is hereby declared nullified; further, that in consequence of the non-acquaintance of the facts in the case of said C. C. Frisby, no censure attaches to the ones who performed said baptism and ordination of C. C. Frisby in said Northern Illinois District; and that this action of the Northern Illinois District honors the decision of the Elders' Court in the case of C. C. Frisby, and that of the First Kansas City Branch.

Report received, adopted, and committee discharged.

Resolved, That this conference request the General Conference of 1885, to return Bro. J. S. Patterson to his present field of labor.

That we instruct our delegates to cast their vote to have the General Conference of 1886, at Plano, Illinois.

Sunday evening there was preaching by Bro. C. Scott. The entire session was one to be remembered by those that were present as calm and peaceful, with a goodly portion of the spirit of the Master.

Adjourned to meet at Sandwich, DeKalb county, Illinois, June 27th, 28th, 1885.

DECATUR DISTRICT.

Conference held at Lamoni, Iowa, February 28th and March 1st, 1885; H. A. Stebbins president, E. H. Gurley clerk.

Branch Reports .-- Lamoni 515, 7 received by letter, 1 by vote; Lucas 215, 7 received by certifiicate of baptism, I received by letter, I lost by error; Lone Rock 49, 3 baptized into the branch, 3 received by letter; Davis City 63. Official Reports.-Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, J. R. Lambert, H. A. Stebbins, B. V. Springer, C. H. Jones, (baptized 2), J. W. Gillen, S. V. Bailey, E. Banta, A. J. Moore. E. H. Gurley, J. S. Snively, Nephi Lovell, reported. District clerk reported, that from the conference of September 6th, 1884, he had received $3.76 for district record; that by exchange of records and purchase of stationery, he had used 76cts; balance $3.00, subject to the order of the district.

E. Banta, Bishop's Agent, reported as having received $275.75; and paid out $270 14; leaving a balance in hands of $5.61 A committee composed of J. W. Gillen, V. White and S. V. Bailey, was appointed to audit the Bishop's Agent's books. Said committee found report correct. Report received, committee discharged.

J. R. Lambert, E. Binta, J. R. Evans, J. W. Gillen, and J. S. Suively chosen as delegates to the next General Conference.

Resolved, That the delegates to the General Conference be instructed to labor by voice and vote, to have the General Conference of April, 1886, held at Lamoni.

Resolved, That this conference, representing the Decatur District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, hereby declares that it recognizes the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon and the revelations of God contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, as the standard of authority in church government and doctrine; and, together with the revelations that may hereafter be given of God, and accepted by the church, as the final standard of reference in all controversies that may arise; and be it further Resolved, That we sustain the action of the General Conferences of June 13th, 1852, April 12th, 1870, and September 13th, 1878, in so declaring for the whole church. Resolution was adopted. E. H. Gurley opposed.

NOTICE RATES TO GENERAL CON-FERENCE.

I have secured terms over the Chicago and Alton, Hannibal and St. Joseph, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs railroads. As my promise is given that none but those who have paid full fare one way shall receive the benefit of those terms, delegates and visitors to conference wishing to avail themselves of them will be required to certify to my secretary that they have paid full fare over the line of road they came on and wish to return by, and he will issue them a certificate entitling them to purchase a special limited ticket at one third fare in return over that line of road. I am negotiating with the St. Louis and Wabash, and the Chicago and Rock Island. If successful will notify you by telegraph, if possible, in time for publication with this notice.

SECOND QUORUM OF ELDERS.

It is desired that every member of our quorum report at our next Annual Conference, to convene at Independence, Missouri, April 6th, 1885. Brethren, please send your report if you can not come in person; for we desire to know where every member is, and what he is doing.

F. C. WARNKY, Secretary.

DIED.

CRANWELL.—At Chicago, Ill., February 23d, 1885, John C. Cranwell, husband of Minnie L. Culver, son-in-law of E. G. Culver, age 32 years, 2 months. He was loved by relatives and triends, and all who knew him. Though not a member of the church, he was a believer in Christ, having confidence in God's great love and mercy, which are over all his creatures. May he rest in peace.

STRANG.—At Crescent City, Iowa, February 5th, 1885, Sr. Jane Strang. She left four children to mourn her loss, three daughters and one son, all having arrived to maturity. She was born in Fifeshire, Scotland, in 1816; and was married to Bro. William Strang, lately deceased, in the year 1839. She and her husband joined the church in 1846, in Scotland and immigrated to this country in 1853; and becoming very much dis-atisfied with the doctrine of the Brighamites, they settled at Crescent City in Pottawattamie County, Iowa, and refused to obey the call to come west; and in the year 1862, they heard and obeyed the doctrine of the Reorganization; and she remained a faith ful member of the Crescent Branch till her death. The funeral discourse was preached by Bro. McDowell, and in the midst of a severe snow storm very good attendance was had.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In reply to Bro. John N. Aames, No. 4, Richmond St., Brockton, Massachusetts, we state: That there are steps being taken to secure the publication of a Hymn and Tune book to be called the Saints' Harmony. But circumstances have so far kept us from pushing it forward, for want of means.

Bro. B. V. Springer is doing some good local preaching in the Decatur District. He spoke at the Smith school house, ten miles south west of Lamoni, March 8th, his discourse being most acceptably received and spoken highly of by all who heard him.

Bro. E. H. Gurley spoke at the Fowler school house on the 22d, and we are told had a good audience and excellent liberty. Bro. J. Smith spoke at Smith school house same day.

Bro. Weston Mosher wrote from Waterville, Le Sueur county, Minnesota, March 19th, that they were visited there by two Elders from Utah; but that from the representation of these two Elders they learned of the corrupt teachings there promulged, and combatted it. The people there both men and women, refused to listen to their teaching after they learned that these Elders held to polygamy in Utah, but did not teach it in Minnesota because it was contrary to the law of the States. Bro. Mosher lives in North Minnesota.

Bro. John S. Patterson put in an appearance at the Sanctum, Monday, March 23d, en route to Conference. He looks well, but is "pestered," as he calls it, with rheumatism, the result of old time exposure at sea and in the mine.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert was at Bevier and Renick, Mo., during the week ending March 20th. Had good audiences at Bevier, but was severely ill during the time. Was to be at Renick 18th and 19th, and would be at St. Louis by the 20th, if well enough to fill the appointments at Renick. Thence to Independence, and Conference.

We have received from M. J. J. P. Bushnell & Co., Des Moines, Iowa, publishers, a valuable work, entitled, "Iowa Resources and Industries." It is an exhaustive presentation of practical, statistical information concerning the State of Iowa and inducements held out to those seeking homes within her borders. It can be had of the publishers at 75cts per copy, in paper covers, and $1.00 in cloth.

Bro. Jas. Caffall was at Fremont, Nebraska, on March 22d, and would go from there to Clear Water on business connected with the branch there.

Bro. Nutt baptized four at Wilber, Sunday, March 22d.

Bro. A. F. Rudd wrote from Dow City, Iowa, March 20th, in fair spirits, but in poor health. He thinks the cause more likely to be hurt by the efforts of false brethren, than from outside attack.

Brn. Charles Blair and wife from Sandwich, Illinois, and Delos F. Nicholson and wife, from Salt Lake City, are visiting at Bro. W. W. Blair's, Lamoni. These are members of Bro. William Blair's family, and it is the first time in many years that the family have been together. They are having a happy family reunion.

Bro. Wm. F. Greer writes from Neosho, Newton county, Missouri, that he has not seen a Saint since he had arrived there. He and his family would welcome an Elder.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. H. Culp wrote from Weedman, Michigan, March 11th.

"Bro. J. J. Cornish is here holding meetings and we are having a first rate time. Meetings are held one mile east of here, at Inwood; and we have a good turn out every night. Quite a few are interested in the latter-day work, and I think in time there will be a branch here."

Bro. Hyrum C. Bronson, writing from Kewanee, Illinois, March 16th, says,

"I have just returned from Lee county, Iowa.

I held meetings one week at Keokuk then attended the conference at Montrose on the 7th and 8th, and in company with Bro. Columbus Scott continued meetings there all last week with good effect."

Bro. W. H. Kelley wrote March 20th that he had held six meetings in the Quinlan school house, not far from Sandusky, Ohio. Had attentive audiences. It was the first preaching in that country by the Elders. A good interest was manifest, and requests were urgent to return. Bro. Kelley says:

The neighborhood is strongly Disciple (Campbellite), United Brethren, &c., and near the home of Dr. P. Hurlbut. Here he lived for many years, and died about eighteen months ago. His wife and family reside there still. It is rather amusing to hear the opinions of the neighbors about this famed Dr. Hurlbut, whose name is conspicuous in nearly every work that has been issued against the Saints for the last forty-five years. Sidney Rigdon's setting out of this romantic character is tame compared with the hard phrases used by his neighbors to give him proper presentation. If good character is the test, Hurlbut is down. With the mixed multitude down there and so near the city of Toledo, we may have things a little exciting by and by.

Bro. Kelley would go to Clear Lake, Indiana, March 21st, and return to Coldwater for the 29th. Thence to Conference.

Bro. A. H. Parsons wrote from Blue Rapids, Kansas, March 17th:

I have been preaching here in company with Bro. H. R. Harder. The result we leave now with the Lord, shall go to Centralia, then to Independence.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is it right for Priest, Teacher, or Deacon; to be elected president of a branch so long as there are Elders living in that place better qualified for that office?

Ans.—All other things being equal the one holding the highest authority should be chosen to preside.

Q.—Is it right for an Elder to refuse to put his hand on the bread and wine when asking God to bless it before administering it to the church?

A. We have never seen Elders or Priests lay hands on the bread or on the wine, more than to take the plate on which the bread is placed between their hands, and the vessel in which the wine might be contained, putting their hands to its sides; nor do we hold it necessary that hands should be laid upon the bread or upon the wine. The language in the Book of Covenants is, "the church shall kneel with the officer, and he shall ask a blessing upon the bread."

Q.—What are those plain and precious things to which Bro. Calhoon refers in his article in a late Herald?

A.—By sending stamp to secure texts and references as advertised in Herald, many of those plain and precious things may be known, a large number of the texts being collated by Bro. W. W. Blair. They were also published in the Herald not long since. We have not time, nor is it necessary now to specify each and every one of them. One of the principal ones, however, will be found in the forty-second of Isaiah where it occurs, "Who is so blind as the servant whom I will send."

Q.—If a child nine years of age is moved by the Spirit of God in the Saints' meetings to speak, and express himself ready for baptism, should baptism not take place at the first favorable opportunity?

A.—Yes, if the child is of sufficiently advanced judgment to be capable of knowing what baptism is for, and parents or guardian do not object.

A GOOD sister expressing herself in regard to the HERALD, says:

"I have searched in vain among the Heralds for something unobjectionable. . . . There is so little gospel food in it, that to get the little it contains seems so like dipping in a pail of swill for a few crumbs of bread. It is too disgusting to any but those who are so hungry and appreciative that they charitably overlook the swill, even though the bread is contaminated. . . . I dislike to say it, but I am ashamed of our representative (?) paper when it is asked for."

Burns wrote for all time, when he penned:

"O would some power the giftie gie us, To see ourselves as others see us: It would from many a blunder free us, And foolish notion."

We dislike to see our distorted and illpleasing features reflected in the mirrors others hold up for us to see ourselves in. But it must ueeds be that it is needful. The sister's expression penned more in sadness than repining, causes reflection. She has been using the Herald as a communicative tract, when she felt that she could safely and freely do so. But when it contained anything for which she would feel it necessary to apologize, explain, or palliate, she preferred not to use it; and then she could only clip whatever needed no apology, and use that. She says that she is too poor to take the HERALD for private reading only; and therefore wished a paper that may be used as a tract, or written argument, not objectionable.

A brother, whose letter is found elsewhere in the Herald, appears to be of much the same opinion; and joins in the censure visited by some of the brethren upon the Editor, by stating that he is "in fellowship with it."

The "rebuke of a friend is better than the kiss of an enemy." Praise is ofttimes a snare, and flattery a temptation. Censure justly applied is to a wise man a warning, and a goad. Just censure will not injure him whose desires are to become blameless; whose aim is to be free from faults, so far as human nature with human surroundings may be. The man who sees himself only as the mirror of self adulation which he may hold before himself reveals him, will not be apt to discover whatever faults he may have; or if he should see them they will be so small, and so excusable that he will fancy that they are imperceptible to others. When such a man finally stands in the light that others turn upon him, he will be shocked at the deformities he has regarded as beauties, the faults he has thought to be virtues, the weaknesses he has believed were strength. If such a man shall have sense to recognize himself as he is, and humility to make him teachable, he will mend. If he has neither, he will become a victim to self love and will destroy himself.

The HERALD has been a curious kalei-dascope, and has reflected the rays from a host of thought prisms, in a multitude of lights, as seen from the standing place of thousands of minds. That all have not been pleased we have seen; that some have been seriously displeased is also known. That there have been some beautiful combinations presented, we have believed. We should be sorry if all had been bad; but are not over much tried because all has not been good.

If the work of the Spirit is to lead and guide into all truth, it is possible that the way may lie through thorny paths of error, fear and doubt. That things that are foolish, unnecessary and false may lie contiguous to the path in which the Spirit may lead those destined to be wise. From the vision we have seen in the mirror held up to us we can believe that the office of leading has not been a sinecure, but everywhere one of watchful work and care.

The discernment of spirits, or the gift and power to discern spirits has been needed, and we can believe must have been exercised; else no criticism would have been made of what has been presented. If this Spirit of discernment has performed the office-work assigned to it, well and faithfully, we have reason to be thankful. And there is reason to believe that the good Spirit of discernment may have aided some in the selection of what was wisest and best for them out of the medley put before them. When the Garden was planted all that was put into it was pronounced good, very good. But time elapsed and good and evil fell to the lot of man; to know good and evil, became, their condition. The knowledge of evil brought no gladness, only as by contrast the good was made apparent. Since the garden, the good and the evil have been sorely commingled. Men have deplored the evil, many have sought for and longed for the time to come when the evil and the good should not be set before them and the poor human brain and heart be taxed to make choice between them. Many have believed that the machinery of the universe could be, and had been so adjusted that only the good might be presented; and the care of choosing and the danger to follow the choice of evil be avoided. Some have even thought that in the anterooms of the HERALD were the fan and the crucible, from which the evil should emerge as the dross, or fly away as the chaff. But when these have failed, as the mirror may have shown, blessed gift of discernment, have thy excellencies been shown.

From the "unfailing fulness" of the Master's store, faith as the "dews of Hermon" have descended on the church. Faith to stand, withstand, hold, uphold, bide and abide, bear and forbear, has been given. Men tried as by fire, have borne the terrible strain of their trial, pure and faithful, because unto them has the gospel gift of faith been borne from the Master's hand. Needful to them, the boon came graciously. With that they have been comforted. The good has been craved and found, the evil borne and overcome.

Knowledge, like a river, has roared in the shallow places and foamed amid the rocks, and ran softly and still in the deeps. Upborne on its crest evil and good have been seen side by side. Wisdom with her book and her scales has sat quietly by, making use of the good and the evil. The one to refuse and reject, the other to gather and save.

There were prophets of God and of Baal anciently. The economy of God suffered them to jostle together on the highways of time. As the one came before the people so did the other. So with us. The economy of the Lord still permits the evil and seducing spirits to prophesy. No august arm is yet held out to stop their es-tranging and blaspnemous work. The elect are being besieged by the evil, that if possible they may be deceived. The good is placed before them by the prophets of God; and the din of the prophets of Baal is heard. Choose ye, choose ye.

The Editor bows to the rebuke, and the censure; but wonders whether upon him is laid the burden of choice for all, or the "manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal."

WE note the following business changes among the firms at Lamoni. David Dancer and Company, have sold their mercantile business and goods to Bro. W. W. Blair's son, William A., and Bro. Thomas Bell; and their lumber and farming implement business is in the hands of Bro. Dancer's son Eugene. Bro. N. M. Reeder has sold his implement and furniture business to Bro. Henry C. Smith and Allen Hopkins; and has bought out the dry goods and grocery business of Mr. George W. Young. Brn. R. Hogue and R. Clum are in the tin and stove trade; who together with Bro. John Foreman and P. White in the same trade ought to supply the community, especially as Messrs. Wheeling and Biddle, H. Tilton, and Bro. Wilson Hudson all sell tin and hardware. Bro. Hudson is making some good improvements inside his store. We have one harness shop, Bro. George Derry. Three blacksmith shops, Brn. P. Harris and Joseph Rodger and Mr. J. Rabidou. Two wagon shops, Peter Hansen and John Cunningham. One restaurant, Sr. M. Conover. Five dry goods and general merchandise stores, Bro. Wilson Hudson, Blair and Bell, H. Tilton, N. M. Reeder, Z. T. Earl. Two tin and stove stores, Brn. Hogue and Clum, and Foreman and White. One butcher shop, Messrs. Tyrrel and Johnson. One millinery store, Sr. Minnie A. Wickes. One grist and feed mill, Bro. P. Harris. Two lumber yards, Eugene Dancer and H. and W. Stoddard. Two grain buyers, D. Dancer, and Graham and Smith. Two farming implement stores, Eugene Dancer, and H. Smith and A. Hopkins. One musical instrument dealer, Bro. N. W. Smith. One cheese factory, D. Dancer, E. J. Robinson, J. W. Gillen and N. Riggs. Three dress makers, Sisters V. Buckingham, R. Hogue, J. V. L. Sherwood. One tailoress, Sr. M. E. Kearney. One shoe shop, Mr. Spargar. Two drug stores, Sr. M. Walker & Co., and J. W. De Noon. Three doctors, Bro. J. H. Hansen, J. W. De Noon and J. J. Stafford. One lawyer, W. A. Williams. Two Justices, Bro. Asa S. Cochran and

T. Z. Stark. Three Notaries Public, Brn. Asa S. Cochran, C. A. Wickes and W. A. Williams. One Post Office, Sr. L. L. Lyons, P. M. One horse trainer, Bro. Louis Krucker. Two constables, Riley Dillon and E. McCormick. One hotel, Bro. John McKimm. One boarding house, Mr. Officer. One well digger, Bro. E. Brantwait. Two stone masons, Bro. M. McHarness and J. Ross. Two brick layers, Brn. Joseph Upton and Arthur Judson. Two plasterers, Bro. Arthur Judson and J. B. Randall. Carpenters and builders, T. Jacobs, V. White, L. A. Fowler, B. F. Merritt, D. Ward, L. Frink, R. Brand, T. Z. Stark, F. Dillon, H. Stoddard and a lot more. One drayman, F. Bailey. One barber shop. And one printing press, Herald Office.

From the Assessor we learn that there are in the town, one school house, two churches, twenty-nine business houses, twenty-six of which are occupied and three vacant; one hundred and fifteen dwelling houses, one hundred and seven of which are occupied and eight vacant; making a total of one hundred and forty-seven houses; with a total population of four hundred and ninety-eight, an average of a little over four and a half persons to the dwellings occupied. We think this pretty fair for a town of its sort and age.

BISHOP FALLOWS of the Episcopal Church, preached at the St. Paul Reformed Episcopal Church, Sunday evening, March 15th, on the Signs of the Times. He said:

"It was a remarkable fact that the great mass of intelligent, far-seeing business men, politicians, and worldly wise people generally could not or would not read the signs of the times in their bearing upon that far more important matter—the second coming of Christ. A great many of the important events which have happened in modern times were foretold, the speaker thought, centuries ago, and were foreseen then by students of the signs of the times. He thought the events of to day were as pregnant of indications as those of 1,800 years ago.

"The present condition of Egypt was to the preacher a sign and an evidence of the coming fulfillment of the prophecy that Egypt would be ruled by the Jews. He considered the domination of England equivalent to that, as it would be a control in the interests of the Jewish bohdholders. Earthquakes, pestilence, and famines were prophesied as signs to be seen before the advent of Christ. The earthquakes in Italy, the approaching cholera pestilence, and the famines which have prevailed in Asia were the signs to meet these prophecies. It had been prophesied that iniquity would abound, and the bishop thought the full measure of this prophecy had been fulfilled.

"Another sign, and one directly the reverse of those alluded to, was the great spread of the gospel. In the opening of Africa to its very heart the preacher thought he saw the last stronghold thrown open to the preaching of the word. He had no indorsement to give the criticisms many had heaped upon Bishop Taylor and his noble band of missionaries for taking women and children into the heart of the dark continent, but believed it to be a sure sign of the beginning of the end. He closed with an expression of the hope that the advent of a new Christian dispensation was not far away, and said he was grateful that he was, as he hoped, to be permitted to live in the age which would see this joyful and glorious event.

SR. MARY CAZALY, of St. Paul, Minnesota, sent us a copy of the St. Paul and Minneapolis Pioneer-Press, containing a notice of Captain Codman's "Solution of the Mormon Problem;" in the closing paragraph of which notice the editor says:

"After showing the injustice and inefficiency of the attempts to meet the question by congressional legislation, the practical effect of which has been rather to attack the freedom of a religious sect than the abuse which has taken hold upon it, Mr. Codman makes two recommendations: (1). That agents able to speak to Mormon immigrants in their own languages be stationed at Castle Garden to warn them of their liability if they break the laws of the country upon their arrival in Utah. (2). That means be furnished to send hundreds of anti-polygamous Mormon missionaries to preach and distribute tracts among their Utah half-brethren. "They will accomplish a work,' he concludes, 'beyond the powers of all the other Christian sects. By preaching the Mormon doctrine as they claim that it 'was once delivered to the saints,' they will convert men from the great sin which we deplore, without driving them into atheism and despair.'

"Something of serpentine wisdom as well as dove-like harmlessness in this Buck Fanshawe method—don't you think?"

Correspondence.

PAICINES, San Benito Co., Cal., March 12th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-Bro. Daniel Brown and self left my home with his team, on November 21st, 1884, for a missionary tour in Tulare county, this State, and returned, finding all well, on the 6th of this month, having been gone three and a half months from home. The farthest point reached while away, was about two hundred miles, where I preached in the Lewis Creek school-house ten times, at different visits. We traveled over twelve hundred miles while away; found a few Saints who formerly belonged to the Visalia Branch; but found said branch in a disorganized condition, with no visible or tangible shepherd; and at a meeting over which we presided, the few members of said branch declared by vote that it was disorganized. We also found a few Saints from other counties and branches, all in a scattered condition. We instructed them to send to their respective branches for letters of removal. with the view of organizing them all into a branch. They all sent for and got their letters. Visalia is a difficult place for us to labor in. We could not get a place in the town in which to preach; but, Bro. Alexander, the Saints there want to see you again. They will treat you or any good brother kindly. Please go and see them if possible. Mr. Samuel Evans, near Visalia, whose wife is a faithful member of the Church, kindly gave us permission to preach in his house. He is a good, obliging man. He has, and will furnish a good home for the Elders; also Mr. E. S. Burton opened his house for the preaching of the word. He is a brother of Bro. Joseph F. Burton, now of Australia. Preached twice at Bro. and Sr. Evans'; four times at Bro. and Sr. Burton's, with whom also we found a good home. Also preached several times in Bro. and Sr. P. C. Dailey's house, near Farmersville, seven miles northeast of Visalia. They are old veterans of the cause. Also preached twice in Bro. and Sr. Mathias Clark's house, near Tulare City, ten miles south of Visalia. That is a thriving railroad town; here also we found a pleasant, congenial home; also at Mr. James and Sr. Mary A. Twaddle's, two miles east of Tulare City, where we made it our home while preaching in Oak Dale school-house, three miles north-east of there, where we held five meetings; also preached four times in Farmersville school-house, and several times in Locust Grove school-house, some eleven miles north-east of Visalia, and three times in the Central school-house on the plains, furteen miles south-east of Visalia, and on January 11th I baptized two in Outside Creek, Mrs. Elizabeth Dailey, wife of Bro. Samuel Dailey, and Miss Anna Staton, of nineteen years, sister of the former, both promising young women. I would not forget to mention that Mr. C. F. Staton furnished us a comfortable home, while we were holding our series of meetings in the Lewis Creek school-house, twenty-three miles east of Visalia. He is not far from the Kingdom. At Brother Ben. Dailey's and Bro. Samuel Dailey's we were taken care of and made welcome. We also visited Mr. Daniel and Sr. Sarah Hedrick, twenty miles west of Visalia, and eight miles south-west of Hartford, where the school-house was locked against Bro. J. F. Kingsbury and myself one year ago this month. So while there this time, they sent their little boy round to the neighbors, to notify them that there would be preaching in their house that evening at seven o'clock. We were all ready, and seven o'clock came, but no congregation; and eleven o'clock, and not a soul came. We sang, had prayer, and retired, satisfied that the people did not want the gospel. Bro. and Sr. Hedrick have done their duty in giving their neighbors a chance to hear the gospel. They kindly cared for our wants. May the Lord's blessing rest and abide with all his dear saints in Tulare County and elsewhere.

On February 22d, I had the pleasure of baptizing Bro. Ebenezer S. Burton, and Sr. Susan Burton, his wife; and on March 1st, we ordained him an Elder, and organized the "Lone Branch," with E. S. Burton president, Mathias Clark Teacher, P. C. Dailey Deacon. With eleven members present at organization, and some few who will unite soon by letter. The last night we stayed with them we had meeting at Bro. Burton's house. Many good testimonies given after preaching, and a good spirit pervaded each breast till eleven o'clock, when all was invited by the good house-wife to sit down to their hospitable board, and partake of our midnight meal, which was enjoyed by all. We held while there in that county, some forty-five or forty-six meetings; blessed their children, administered to their sick, in all of which we were not left alone. The Lord has greatly blessed our labors there. We left them in good working order and rejoicing. May they continue to rejoice, is the prayer of your co-worker.

In bonds,

J. H. LAWN.

SHEFFIELD, England, February 17th, 1885.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I wish to bear my testimony to the truthfulness of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. See section 90. It there declares "Verily, thus saith the Lord, it shall come to pass, that every soul who forsaketh their sins, and cometh unto me, and calleth on my name, and obeyeth my voice, and keepeth my commandments shall see my face and know that I am, and that I am the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

Dear Saints, I prayed to the Lord that I might see his face, and the Lord did appear unto me in a dream, yea, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Father did show me the Son, and I did look upon him, yea, my brethren, I beheld that there were two personages, Father and Son. It has been made known unto me, that Joseph Smith was a good man. Brethren, let us remember the poor. God loves them. Let us bear the good tidings to them, and God will bless us. I remain your brother in Christ, H. H.

Кеул Рана, Nebraska, March 10th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph: -I left Minnesota three weeks ago to-day; arrived here two weeks ago. I attended the Methodist prayer meeting on Thursday. The M. E. preacher came to me, and wanted to know if I intended to preach. I told him I did if I could get the house. He said I could have it. I opened fire Sunday, March 1st, at eleven o'clock, and continued in the evening, and on Monday and Friday evenings. They took the rest of the time. The house was filled every night. The Circuit preacher came to fill his appointment Sunday the 8th, and may God forgive him for the slander he uttered against the Church of Christ, and the prophet Joseph. Monday night I preached, text, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." The house was crowded, and I thank God for his blessings and power that he granted to his servant. I think four-fifths of the people are in favor of what I preached. May God send more laborers this way. I have two more places where they want me to come and preach to them; and the only desire of my heart is to do what good I can in the cause of my Master. I desire the prayers of all, that the way may be opened for me. The Saints are rejoicing in and enjoying the blessings of God here. There are seven Saints here, and four at Grand Rapids, about six miles from here, making eleven in all; and I think there will be more. They are investigating, and there is a good interest taken; but we will leave it with God. There could be a branch organized here if some Elder that has charge of this part would come this way. On Monday I challenged the M. E. preacher on any point of the doctrine of Jesus Christ; and the Bible to be taken as proof; and also upon the Book of Mormon. He came and said he and Rev. Malory would accept the challenge, but he would not accept it single handed, (they both claim to be graduates), I told them I never attended school one year in my life; and the day for discussion was set March 30th, and they both backed out. The next day one said he could not come, the other had taken him a farm, and he could not come, so that ended that. I will preach this evening to them. May the blessings of God rest upon his word wherever it is preached, that all the honest in heart may see the truth. If there is any Elder who wishes to come here, write to us, and we will meet them at Stuart. Send letter in time, to Grand Rapids, Holt county, Nebraska.

I ever remain your brother and laborer in the gospel, P. W. PREMO.

New Harbor, Me., March 16th, 1885.

Dear Herald Editor: - We have lived at New Harbor forty years last October, and have never seen but one Elder, and that was Bro. J. C. Foss. He came and stopped with us a week, and preached every night to a full house; and no doubt if he or some other one could come again, the people would understand, and appreciate the truth better than when he was here; and some thought then that he was the best preacher they ever heard. May God bless him wherever he goes to preach this gospel. Elder Sheehy was at our place two years ago; but I did not see him. Come again brother, there are some here that I think would come into the church. The Herald and Hope are all the preachers we have, and they are truly a great blessing to us. May God bless all those that write for the Herald, that there be no disputations among them, is the prayer of your sister in the truth.

ELIZA POLAND.

DELOIT, Iowa,
March 23d, 1885.

Dear Herald:-The Saints of Mason Grove Branch, have learned it is, good to do the Master's will; to pray earnestly, walk humbly, live faithfully. God is truly blessing us; our sick are healed, our blind see, our numbers are increasing. Over thirty baptized during this dreadful winter. Old and young go down in the icy stream. Oh how the Lord pours out his Spirit upon us at the water, in confirmation, in prayer and testimony, in preaching, everywhere. Perhaps you would like to know what "efficient Elders" did the work. Our own branch officers. Any branch, however small, may have this kind, who will become tithe paying, God serving, humble followers of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. SISTER FANNIE.

> FREMONT, Nebraska, March 21st, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—Our district president, Brother Rumel, and Bro. Brand, have been here for some time, and did a great deal of good. Have preached eight times in the church. The outsiders have manifested more interest than before. Bro. Brand leaves to-day for home quite unwell. Hope he will recover soon; for he is an able defender of the truth. I pray that God will bless him with health. Bro. Caffall came here the 19th and preached two times, and will preach tonight and to-morrow morning and evening. Bro. Rumel is here too. I pray that good may come from their labors; for it is hard for the brethren to leave their homes, and go out to preach the gospel, and put up with all the trials and sneers that they have to; it is only the hope of the reward in the sweet by and by, that enables them to stand. May God bless them all; for I know that this is the true church of Christ; for he has made it known to me by his Holy Spirit.

Ever praying for the truth, I remain yours, M. N. SAMPSON.

> LINDLEY, Grundy Co., Mo., March 21st, 1885.

Bro. Joseph Smith: - My last writing left me at Oelwein, Fayette Co., Ia., at Bro. Benjamin Shippy's, who, with others, thought that Bro. Banta's one sermon, though excellent, was a "small patch" for their expectations, and his notice in Herald. They are willing he shall try again. I felt similarly, but he seemed needed elsewhere, so toiled on, sowing the seed with liberty and appreciation of hearers, and think a reaping time will come. Had earnest solicitation to open some new points, but arrangements south forbade. Substantial kindness was had from Aunt Rhoda Platt, Bro. Shippy, Mr. Everett and others. May they be prospered. Arrived at Des Moines, December 22d. The Saints asked help in the Christmas Tree work. We responded, and all had a grand good time, things moving harmoniously. We spoke there several times with the sure approval of the Master. On the last Wednesday eve of the old year, an excellent time was had at prayer meeting, and seldom, if ever, was a glad New Year begun better than on the first Sunday there. Oh! what peace and joy in that Saints' meeting; such can be had oftener there if striven for.

Early in January went into the Valley Branch; spent three weeks with the approval of the Master and his Saints; some blessed times were had, especially at the first of permanent prayer meetings, and the baptism and confirmation of four at Bro. Wm. and Hattie Park's on 25th. It will be long, if we ever forget parting with those Saints on the 26th. Des Moines was again visited. A series of services at Ankeny, where T. E. Lloyd used to chat, was well received; some saying that the closing effort on divine authority left them "just without the portals;" for this we did not feel bad, as we had shown them the way in, ere we shattered their frail habitation. The next point was Grimes, where the odds as to weather, etc., were sadly against us; but in Bro. "Joy's" habitation we had quarters, and also place for service, which was not time lost, though the empty church there refused us, could have been used better. All we observed and experienced was not so "joyful." We hope "celestial joy" will be sought, to have its habitation there in the allowable degree. We were prevailed upon to remain over our arranged time, though felt we would be snowbound, and so it was, throwing us two days late for Ogden, where three efforts were made, Bro. I. M. Lane assisting and caring for us fully, who if "courageous" enough to "burst the fetters" that bind, will work in the vineyard yet. A severe cold from exposure and constant work, made a rest necessary at Boonesborough, which was had in social work among that noble band of Saints. All attempts to leave there, were failed to our astonishment; Sunday, February 22d, explained in its "strong experiences, however," as in that "very hallowed" time, the "opposer appeared;" but under the blessing of God was banished. Had excellent liberty that evening. On 23d, with guide of "Scotland Height's" training, we traversed eminence and glen, through varied depth of snow, to cheer "a tried but true-hearted" one of Israel's fold; a grand peaceful time was had; we felt there were "angels hovering around."

A sumptuous meal was served, "two pilots" put us on one "narrow white road" in the snow, (this we thought suggestive to those who glean everywhere for good); good-bye and God bless you were exchanged," as "only Saints can," and we were favored with the sweet lingering peace, all the way to Grimes. Took up abode at Mr. Inman's, whom we hope to see next as "brother." Held two services, and departed for Edenville conference, which was a grand success.

The outlook in Des Moines district was never better, except that the laborers are less, by the departure of some to other fields. Viola, that hotly contested place, where much arduous labor was done, gives lately rays of hope for good returns; also other points not mentioned.

En route for this place and the General Conference, stopped at Des Moines, spoke twice; then to Olivet, where an attempt to labor was thwarted by terribly muddy roads, and a severe illness of our physical self; the order of God's appointment and kindly care by Sr. Laughlin and family, enabled us to start on our way after four days, reaching this point on the 17th. Circumstances permitting, we shall speak a week here, and then home for conference. The years' labor has been fraught with many rich blessings, some sheaves gathered, and other sowing to hear from. Still willing to labor for the Master,

I am your brother in Christ,
R. ETZENHOUSER.

Moss Point, Jackson Co., Miss., March 8th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:-We have the bible translated into our language; and, if I was the devil, and it was my mission to deceive, as it is his, and could find a people with the letter, (which has neither life nor power), raised for a standard, I would send me a prophet, first to the letter of the law, and tell him to commit it to memory, and be careful to notice the organizing of the church, to fulfill the letter; for if the letter is fulfilled, then you have on your sheepskin robe, and can deceive all who take the letter of the law, no matter how many books, for a standard. I want a standard so high that Satan can not fulfill, and when I find a church with this kind of a standard raised, then I will be certain that it can not be deceived. J. B. PORTER.

> BUCHANAN, Berrien Co., Mich., March 17th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith:—The saints in this place, although few in number, by the grace of God are alive to the work of the Master, feeling happy in the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who has called us from the darkness of Sectarian blindness, into the glorious light and liberty of the fulness of his everlasting gospel, as presented to us in these latter days by his servants, God blessed forever more, amen. Bro. and Sr. Shook and myself, are all in this place who have as yet acknowledged Christ, by going forward and obeying the commands as set forth in the unadulterated word of our Heavenly Father.

We are doing all we can to advance the cause of our Master, and the indications to-day are that prejudice is fast giving way to a more reasonable view. Our beloved brother, John Shook, being guided during the past year in his official dealings with the people of this place by that spirit of truth and knowledge long ago promised to the faithful, has again been chosen to preside over this people in the capacity of Marshal; and while he is striving to meet out justice to all men in temporal things, he is not neglectful in striving to sow the good seed in the hearts of his fellow towns-men. There are many in and near this place, who are almost persuaded to accept of the truth, but the fear of men caused them to procrastinate the day of their salvation. May God have mercy on this people. I have had many invitations to speak to the people in this part of the Lord's vineyard, but having no authority, I decline.

Your brother in faith,

H. A. RICHARDSON.

CLAY CENTER, Clay Co., Kan.

Bro. Joseph:-As I love the cause, I would like to bear my testimony to the world of its truthfulness. I thank God, that he has given me of his Spirit, and enlightened my understanding, that I know this gospel is the power of God unto salvation. We have just gotten through our conference, and we had a time of rejoicing long to be remembered by all. What a glorious work this is. How thankful we should be that we have been blessed by the sound of the gospel. Suppose we say, the Book of Mormon is not true, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, will part of it do, and part will not; where do we stand then? Do we not tell a falsehold when we say that we know that this work is of God? Let us be careful, dear Saints, that we are ever striving for the faith that was once delivered to the Saints, that when Christ comes he will not be ashamed of us.

Your sister in the gospel,

EMMA PAYNE.

CABIN RUN, W. Va.,

March 20th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph: -We, the Saints of this little branch, and with the rest of the poor class of people in this part, are seeing hard times. We were visited last summer with a long-continued drouth, which cut the crops short, and there was very little raised in this part, all of which the longcontinued and severe winter has consumed, which renders the poor class of people destitute of feed for their stock, and without provisions for their families. In many places the stock is nearly all dying for food, and helpless women and children are crying for bread. Some of these counties are taking measures to relieve some of the sufferers; but is feared there will be much suffering and loss of life and property before help can reach them. Added to this list of disasters, are the ravages of typhoid fever and other diseases, which generally follow drouth. We have just passed through a long siege of typhoid fever and other sickness in our family; but the Lord's promises have been verified to us thus far, and they have been raised up through prayer and faith. But we are now rendered destitute of provisions for our families, and considerably in debt, and no means to supply our wants. There are also two other families of Saints here that are rendered destitute in the same way, and no means to supply their wants. It therefore becomes a case of necessity for us to ask the Saints everywhere, to help us with a little means to relieve our present necessities. Now, dear Saints, we humbly ask all that can, and feel it their duty, to help us a little, it will be thankfully received; and you will in no wise lose your reward. Please send your contributions to me, Toll Gate, Ritchie county, W. Va., with names, amount, name of branch and district.

Your brother in Christ, C. G. Ruley, Pres. of Branch.

> INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, March 20th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-Perhaps a brief explanation of the plan adopted by us to entertain those who may attend the General Conference, may not be amiss, as we learn already, by letter, that some are criticizing the propriety of our charging board. I think it was never my fortune to live among a warmer hearted lot of Saints than those of Independence; and I feel sure it would have been a pleasure for them to have been able to say to the church, Come and partake with us free of charge. But the facts are, many of us are poor, and not only poor, but in debt. Many of us have been out of work all winter, and have had to go In debt for the necessaries of life. And while there are a number who will take all their houses will hold free, there are evidently not enough of this kind to entertain a large conference. The result would have been, many would have come here expecting board free; but finding the houses of the Saints filled: would have had to put up at the hotels or boarding houses, at four or four dollars and fifty cents per week. To avoid this, board was placed at two dollars per week, barely enough to cover the expense of the raw material, the Saints being only too glad to give their labor and accommodation, and to make all as comfortable as possible. Nothing in this however to prevent any one from entertaining as many as they desired free. But to enable those who had not the means to bear the whole burden, to help all they could in the matter. We believe the districts who send representatives and pay their expenses, would rather meet this little expense, than that a poor family should be made to suffer. And we believe that most of those who attend, would rather contribute a little individually, than to leave a poor family from twenty to fifty dollars in debt on their account, as has been the case with some in the past. We hope no misunderstanding will be had concerning this matter; for we feel assured, that those who attend conference will return home, satisfied with their reception at Independence. At least we hope, and shall labor to that end.

Your brother in Christ,

F. G. PITT.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

March 18th—Advices from London report that the Indian budget dwells upon the depreciation of silver, the lowness of exchange, and the gloomy prospects which threaten India's future.

Gen. Grenfell will inspect the line of communication to Assiout, Egypt, and command the Egyptian army. Gen. Wood will command the troops in the entire region between Merawi and Dongola. Reinforcements of 25 per cent of the present strength of the troops at Korti will be required before autumn, owing to sickness and deaths from heat. The camel-drivers refuse to remain there. Navigation of the Nile is difficult. Transportation of the wounded is tedious. A general advance toward Tomasi will be made Friday. The troops at Suakin will march Friday. One regiment will remain to guard Suakin. Spies continue to report that the Amarai tribe of Arabs will desert El Mahdi and join the British at the first favorable opportunity.

The British members of the International African Association ceded Germany all the territory east of the Upper Congo bordering on Lakes Tanganyike and Victoria Nynza, including the station of Karima. The first stsge route from the Congo to Zanzibar will be laid out by Germany.

It is said that France has renewed negotiations with China with a view to securing peace. It is stated that France is willing to waive her indemnity claims if China will execute the Tien-Tsin treaty.

The value of the general law for the incorporation of private capital in Illinois is vindicated by the statement of the licenses issued since it was adopted. In the six months of 1872, after the special-charter system was abandoned, 166 companies were incorporated, and in the ensuing year 353 licences were issued with an aggregate capital of $29,000,000. There has been a steady increase in every ensuing year, and in 1884 the number of incorporations under the law was 1,097, with a total capital of over $358,000,000. The most conspicuous feature of the law is the limitation of personal liability to the amount of stock actually owned and the government of all corporations by the same general rules. It is a vast improvement over the old system of special Immense damage has been caused by the icegorge overflow at Waverly, Mo. A rescuing party found Mrs. Judge Thomas on a hill, where she had been for two days without shelter. The Van Meter family were rescued from the second story of their house in a starving condition.

March 19th—James Stephens, the Head-Centre, who was expelled from France recently, is reported to be destitute and dying at Mons, Belgium.

The imperial authorities at St. Petersburg are determined to convince the Vatican that the Czar is the spiritual as well as the political ruler of his people. Catholic clergymen throughout the Empire have been required to forswear supreme allegiance to the Pope. If they refuse, Count Tolstoi, the Russian Ministry of the Interior, is said to have threatened to establish an independent Patriarch at St. Petersburg.

An advance in force was made from Suakin in the direction of Hasheen. Cavalry, mounted infantry, and Indian infantry were sent to reconnoitre, while the Guards acted as a reserve. The Arabs retreated before the British as far as the hills near Hasheen, the main body of the troops under Gen. Graham supporting the skirmishing line. The scouts on reaching the summit of the hills discovered the Arabs massed in the village. When the main body of the British reached the hilltops the Hadendowah tribe rushed from ambush and made an attack in which several hundred Arabs were killed and wounded as well as a number of the British. It was ascertained by a reconnaissance that the enemy were in force along the entire range of hills. The engagement ended with the retirement of the Arabs. A rival of El Mahdi has appeared at El Obeid, the Mahdi's headquarters, which indicates treason in his own camp.

The British House of Commons has agreed to the introduction of bills authorizing the raising of a loan of £10,000,000 in England for the completion of the railways of India and £400,000 for the railway from Hopetown to Kimberly, South Africa.

Recruiting is exceedingly active. The fighting strength of the army is 40,000 more than in 1883, and then there were 70,000 reserves ready for service.

A syndicate of Hamburg merchants has acquired vast territory east and north of Lagos, the British colony in West Africa. Lagos is one of the chief settlements of the Gold Coast Colony, 4,127 miles from England and 1,157 from Sierra Leone. Population about 75,270. The harbor of Lagos is the most secure of any for some hundred miles along the West African coast, and the town is the most commercial place in that section, the principal exports being palm-oil and palmnut kernels.

New York World: The bark Innerwick, during a voyage from Yokohama to Victoria, B. C., had a terrible experience Feb. 24th, the report of which excited much discussion in shipping circles. That day about 5 o'clock in the morning, when the vessel was in latitude 37. longitude 70 50, the sky suddenly changed to a fiery red. All at once a large mass of fire appeared over the vessel. It seemed to waver a moment in space and then fell into the sea, about fifty yards to the lee-ward. It struck the water with a great hissing sound, the shock causing the bark to quiver from stem to stern. The masts creaked ominously and the ship lurched. A towering mass of white foam was then seen rapidly approaching the vessel. The bark was struck flat aback, and before there was time to touch a brace the sails filled again and the roaring white mass could be seen passing away ahead. Another sheet of flame then ran down the mizzenmast. From the rigging of the mast myriads of sparks poured forth, and the strange redness of the sky lasted for twenty minutes. During all the time the sailors were appalled. There was not a speck of water or blue or black in the sky. All was a fiery red. When it faded the atmosphere took on a vellow tinge. Then it changed to blue and finally faded away in a mist. Suddenly the sun came up, and in an hour was dancing on the waters. The Captain could give no explanation of the phenomenon. The mass of fire seemed to be forty feet long and twenty wide.

A decision was rendered by the Supreme Bench of Baltimore that a colored man has a right to admission to practice at the bar. The Maryland law provides that only white men are eligible, and this law has been sustained by the Court of Appeals. As a result, no colored men has ever practiced law in the State.

In executive session the Senate ratified the treaty with the Khedive of Egypt which extends to the United States the commercial privileges which England enjoys. The Senate also ratified the convention relating to the boundary line between this country and Mexico.

March 22d.—While detachments of English and Indian infantry were making a zareba seven miles southwest of Suakin to-day they were suddenly surprised by a rush of Arabs, who were massed and concealed in the defiles west of Hasheen. The English formed a square as quickly as possible, but the camels, mules, and horses were driven back in confusion on the troops, causing a stampede, and, amid clouds of dust, the Arabs penetrated the south and north sides of the square. Meanwhile the marines and the Berkshire regiment, who were on the east and west sides of the square, maintained a continuous fire, holding the enemy in bay while the charge of cavalry and the fire from the guns at the Hasheen zareba checked the onslaught of the Arabs, which at the outset threatened serious disaster to the British. General Graham reports the English losses as far as known at two officers and twenty-two men killed and thirty-three men wounded. The losses to the engineers, transport corps, and Indian troops are not yet reported. An unofficial estimate places the British killed at fifty-two and the wounded at eighty-five. Nearly all the casualties were due to spearthrusts received in hand-tohand engagements. The Arabs got between the transport train and the zareba and speared the men of the transports corps and killed the animals. They fought savagely, refusing to give or take quarter. Gen. McNeil, who commanded the zareba, reports vaguely that there were several thousand Arabs in the fight and over 1.000 killed or wounded.

Private dispatches from Pekin to London indicate that China is not suing for peace, but wants an armistic to replenish her stores of rice at Pee-Chi-Li and elsewhere. Then the plan would be to raise impossible claims, which would necessarily cause a resumption of war. The object of this stratagem is to prolong fruitless operations, which will inevitably discredit and ruin the Ferry Ministry in France.

There is a political crisis in Denmark. The King is said to have made preparations to fly from the capital in case of popular riots. He has been counseled by the British Government to abandon his mulish attitude and let the obnoxious Ministry fall. Unless he does surrender before the end of this month, which is the end of the fiscal year, financial and official anarchy must ensue, and a revolution would not be improbable.

Russia has contracted with a Bridgeport, Conn., firm for 100,000,000 metallic cartridges, and England has ordered 50,000,000 from the same manufactory.

Lieut. John W. Richmond of the detachment of the Salvation Army stationed at North Adams, Mass., has been arrested on a charge of extensive swindling. Another officer has been arrested on a charge of abduction.

As a curious statistical trifle it may be mentioned that the United States has over fifty penitentiaries and 2,400 jails. These institutions contain over 50,000 boarders. The cost of supporting these people is several millions of dollars yearly, and would be doubled if all were accommodated who ought to be.

The Parish of Cameron, in the southwestern corner of Louisiana, is sparsely settled by farmers, graziers, and lumbermen. The sheriff of that parish recently visited New Orleans on his way to Baton Rouge to make his annual settlement with the State. He reported that there is no place in the parish where liquor is sold, and that few of the people use intoxicants in any shape. The result is, he says, that the parish jail has become an incumbrance; that it is falling into decay for want of use, and that he has lately utilized it as a corn crib. The people, he said, are remarkably healthy, the labors of the few physicians being confined almost entirely to cuts and bruises.

Information is received that small-pox has broken out at Mound City, in Pulaski County, Ill., and that there are fifty-one cases there. The outbreak is traced to the attendance of infected persons at a recent religious meeting.

The Chronicle-Telegraph of Pittsburg, Pa., publishes a lengthy article confirming its recent story of sudden activity on the part of the socialistic organizations in Pittsburg. Special detectives have been giving the subject diligent attention for the past two weeks, and have discovered that out of 1,500 members in Allegheny Co., Pa., not over a dozen actual citizens, properly known as workingmen, are joined to the organization, and that in almost every case where an acknowledged member is found he belongs to that class of foreigners who have come or been driven to this country to make aliving off the product of honest labor, and who, if he works at all, only does it when he can get no one else to support him. But at the same time it has been found that the organizations are strong enough to be a constant menace to property, and that they deserve watching on the part of the authorities. While too cowardly to take any overt action themselves, they are watchful of opportunities, and would take immediate advantage of any public turmoil to work their will, when the responsibility could be thrown on somebody else. In Allegheny county there are fourteen "groups." No. 1 meets at Eckert's Hotel, Woodsrun; No. 2 at John Mueller's house, on Beaver avenue, Allegheny; No. 3 in Pittsburg at Waldman's Hall; No. 4 at John Berget's, on Carson street, South side: No. 5 is not located; No. 6 at Muller's, in Allegheny, and No. 7 at Christ Beck's on Fifth avenue, in Pittsburg. Among the leaders are Messrs. Schmidle, Fry, Steenback, Weekler, Adam Frick, Grier, Richter, Leman, Facs, Saam and Backwann and Misses Reno and Molke. Miss Molke is said to be a Bohemian, who is an enthusiast. She sings anarchist songs at secret and public meetings and inflames the men with incendiary speeches. Miss Reno is a similar character. Schmidle is the keeper of the magazine. He works at Klein's shovel factory, on the South side, and lives above Washington street, on Mount Olive, where a large amount of explosives is stored. This much was discovered by the detectives and corroborated by a reportorial investigation.

March 23d.—Col. Bernejo, commander of a cavalry regiment at Badajos, Spain, has been arrested on a charge of conspiring to restore the republic. The existence of a powerful revolutionary organization has been discovered, and troops have been sent to Geron, where trouble is feared.

Gen. Graham made a general advance in the direction of Tamai, leaving Suakin garrisoned by sailors. Tamai will be reached to-day and Gen. Graham will at once attack Osman Digma, who is said to have 25,000 troops under his command. The fight is expected to be decisive.

Russian intrigues with Turkey are becoming more gudacious. The Russian Ambassador at Constantinople has the ear of the Sultan, and England has no diplomat on the ground skillful enough to cope with the Czar's representative.

The total British loss during the fight Sunday was five officers and fifty-one privates killed and 170 wounded. In the rush a large number of Arabs entered a corner of the zareba, and in a desperste fight which ensued there every Arab was killed. Later official accounts place the losses of the Arabs at 1,000 all told. If this figure is correct the losses of the enemy exceeded those of the British less than in any battle of the last three years. One report says the Arabs admit they lost 3,000 in Sunday's battle. The troops are engaged dragging the bodies of the slain to the leeward of the zareba. Dense heaps of the corpses of the Arabs and native camp-followers are mingled with the carcasses of 500 camels. The ground is strewed with rifles, spears, and shields. Suakin was attacked Sunday, and the Arabs repulsed by four o'clock.

Reports of trouble in the Northwest Territory caused great excitement in the House of Commons at Ottawa, Ont., yesterday. Sir John Macdonald admitted that the half-breeds of the Prince Albert district were in open revolt. The cause of the trouble was a difficulty over certain land claims in dispute between them and the Government. Troops have been sent to quell the disturbance.

March 24th.—Sappers were engaged yesterday in making a road through the brush from Suakin toward Tamai. The Egyptian troops are to be shipped back to Cairo to-day. Osman Digma is sending all the women and children into the hills, and is preparing to make a desperate resistance to the British advance. The famous Arab Chief, Taggish, was killed in Sunday's fight. Gen. Graham's general forward movement and attack upon Osman Digma's strohghold at Tamai are now fixed for next Friday.

Last week it was announced that Armaur & Co. had contracted to furnish 5,400,000 pounds of canned meats to the British Government, and today it was stated that the Fairbank Canning Company have orders for 3,800,000 pounds additional. This makes a total of nearly 9,250,000 pounds of meat, all of which is presumably for the supply of British troops in their actual campaign in the Soudan and the prospective one in Afghanistan. This alone is equal to the supply of 50,000 men each with eight ounces of cooked meat daily for a whole year, or 100,000 for six months. The fact may be accepted at least as an indication that vigorous war preparations are in progress.

President Barrios of Guatemala is advancing on San Salvador with 15,000 men.

President Cleveland sent the following nominations to the Senate yesterday: Henry L. Muldrow of Mississippi, to be Assistant Secretary of the Interior; William A. J. Sparks of Illinois, to be Commissioner-General of the Land-Office; Daniel McConville of Ohio, to be Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department.

March 25th.—Latest reports place the number of British killed and wounded in Sunday's battle near Hasheen at 580, including camp-followers.

Gen. Graham has moved his camp two miles nearer Tamai. Serviceable work is being done by the balloon corps in reconnoitering the enemy. It is expected that a general advance will be made by the British to-morrow.

It has been decided by the French Govern ment to continue sending convicts to New Caledonia, notwithstanding the partial promise made to Lord Granville that the penal settlement should be removed to some other island more distant from the British possessions.

Reports of the troubles at Prince Albert and Duke Lake have greatly exagggerated the gravity of the situation, although it is actually serious. The half-breeds demand that patents shall be issued for the lands occupied by them, defining each man's homestead. The Dominion Government has admitted the justice of this demand, but delay has been caused by the fact that the Government had previously disposed of many of the half-breeds' farms to speculators. The half-breeds refuse to give up their homes, and demand the same treatment as is accorded to other settlers. The Indians are in sympathy with them, No violence has as yet been offered, though about forty white settlers and traders are shut up in the Catholic church. The Government has ordered all the available troops and mounted police to the scene of the rebellion. The half-breeds are reported to have seized the mails, cut the telegraph wires, and imprisoned the operators.

Excitement in London over the prospect of war with Russia is again at fever heat. Lord Dufferin's vigorous action in India and the military preparations at home are considered more significant than the soothing speeches of the Ministers in Parliament. The military clubs are in a ferment in consequence of orders for all officers of the Indian service now on furloughs to rejoin their regiments in India. Another week is expected to decide the question of peace or war. Both Russia and England are doing their best to secure the good will of the Ameer of Afghanistan. Lord Dufferin has been instructed to assure the Ameer of Afghanistan will never be permitted by England to come under Russian sway. England's efforts to checkmate Russian efforts to secure a secret treaty with Turkey seem likely to succeed. It had been suggested to the Sultan by England that if he behaves well he will be allowed to fight the Mahdi. The Sultan is anxious for this, since he knows that it is likely to result in Turkey's obtaining control of Egypt. If Turkish troops are sent to the Soudan it is likely that 10,000 British troops will be sent from Africa to India, as well as 10,000 more which had been intended to reinforce Gen. Wolsely. Plans have already been perfected for blockading the Russian ports. At the Cabinet meeting held yesterday afternoon it was resolved to firmly demand of Russia that she shall begin at once the delimitation of the Afghan boundary. It was reported in London yesterday that 25,000 militia had been called out, that Russia had rejected England's proposals, and that the Porte had asked Bismarck's advice regarding a Turko-Russian alliance against England.

In to-day's session of the Australian Parliament there was a great anti-Semitic demonstration. After the vote on the Northern Railroad arrangement had been accepted a number of anti-Semites began shouting, "Down with the Jews!" This insult to parliament was resented by the other members. The President could not check the disorder. The disturbance lasted for half an hour, and the session was finally broken up. The people are so greatly excited that the Parliament may have to be moved to some provincial city.

The United States Senate confirmed the following nominations: Samuel S. Cox, to be Minister to Turkey; Henry L. Muldrow, to be Assistant Secretary of the Interior; and William A. J. Sparks, to be Commissioner of the General Land-Office.

March 26.—The Queen of England to-day sent a message to the House of Commons calling out the reserves and the militia for permanent service. The Queen's message is as follows: "The present state of public affairs and the extent of the demand on her Majesty's military forces for the protection of the interests of the Empire having constituted, in the opinion of her Majesty, a case of great emergency, her Majesty has deemed it proper to provide additional means for military service. She has, therefore, thought it right to communicate to the House of Commons that she is about to cause the reserve forces and such proportion of the militia as might be deemed necessary to be called out for permanent service." In accordance with the message the War Office has called out the army reserves and the militia. The call issued by the War Office is for 53,000 reserves and 140,000 militia. The calling out of the reserves and militia increased the excitement over the Anglo-Russian dispute, especially in military circles. The Marquis of Hartington will call attention to the message in the Commons Monday. A wild rumor is affoat that some of the Russian troops attacked a portion of Sir Peter Lumsden's party and two were killed. Mr. Gladstone stated in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Russians have advanced no nearer to Penideh than Puli-Khatum, which he said is eighty miles distant from Penideh. Gen. Aikhanoff, Gladstone added, has established a post of Turkomans at Puli-Khatum. Orders for thousands of rifles and revolvers have been sent to Birmingham. The arms will be shipped to Bombay as rapidly as completed. The factories at Birmingham are working night and day. Orders have been sent to Chatham to supply immediately 5,000,000 cartridges. The Ordnance Department at Chatham has been ordered to ship to India all the Martini Henry rifles available. Orders have likewise been sent to armories throughout the kingdom to return immediately to the Tower of London all Martini-Henry rifles which they have in stock. The object is that they be inspected and dispatched to India. Fourteen thousand rifles now at Portsmouth will be forwarded to India to morrow. ment is placing large orders for rifles and munitions of war with manufacturers.

A strong body of the Grenadier Guards, commanded by Gen. Graham, which left Suakin with the Shropshire, Surrey, and Sikhs Regiments, was attacked by the Arabs on the way to MacNeill's zareba near Hasheen. The troops threw themselves into a square and the enemy was repulsed. Three of the British were killed, and about 100 Arabs. The Arabs have cut the telegraph wires between Hasheen and Suakin, but communication is maintained by heliotrope.

Paris was astounded to-day by Gen. Negrier's offic al admission of a defeatat Dong-Dang. The Parisians have been accustomed to read bulletins of a very different kind from French commanders in Tonquin and they could hardly realize that an important division of the French army had been whipped by the Chinese, and was now practically beleagured in Dong-Dang.

The rumor to-night is that the worst has not yet been told about Tuesday's battle, and that the French loss exceeded 500 killed and wounded, instead of 200, as is stated at the War Office.

The Madrid newspapers continue to publish accounts of Moorish outrages upon Spanish residents, some of which are nearly as bad as the revolt on Allucenas Island, off the coast of Morocco. The effect of these reports is to inflame the Spanish populace against the Moors and to pave the way for Spanish annexations in Morocco. Many merchants and public men in Spain believe that a considerable stretch of Moorish coast on the Mediterranean could be seized and held by Spain in the interest of commerce and civilization. It is rumored that Prince Bismarck would not oppose Spanish annexations on the Mediterranean coast of Morocco, as he has similar designs on its Atlantic coast.

Dispatches from Winnipeg, Man., state that companies are being organized in the West at all points along the line of railway for defense against the half-breed rebels under Riel. The country is in an uproar. The rebel army has been augmented by bands of Indians, and a general uprising is expected. Col Irvin, who started for Fort Carlton three days ago with a detachment of mounted police, has changed his route, reports having reached him that the insurgents were lying in ambush at Batache. It is thought that the rebels number over 1,000, all well armed. Advices from Ottawa report that two batteries of regulars have been ordered from Quebec and Kingston to the Northwest.

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

March 22d.—At last accounts fifty one of the workmen who were entombed in the Camphausen mine in Rhenish Prussia had been taken out alive. One hundred and thirty-seven dead bodies had been recovered, and about forty men and boys remained unaccounted for.

At least five people are known to have lost their lives at the burning of the Langham Hotel in Chicago, Ill., Saturday night—Mrs. Belknap, two paper-hangers, and two firemen. The last four were crushed in the ruins of the building upon which the south wall of the hotel fell. Two men whose names are unknown, who took rooms at the hotel about four p. m. Saturday, and who were slightly intoxicated, are still missing. The books of the hotel have not yet been recovered, and neither the clerk nor the proprietor is able to give any definite information as to the number of guests in the house. The loss is estimated at $250.000.

March 23d.—Weller & Merz's ultramarine-blue works at Newark, N. J., were destroyed by fire yesterday, causing a loss of $100,000; fully insured. The Hale House and other property at Charleston, W. ELDER BLAIR'S "REJOINDER" EXAM-INED.

THE statement of Elder Blair, that he and I "are warm friends," is true; and the reader need not think that arguments of this character will destroy that friendship, nor that they are intended for that purpose on my part; but simply for the purpose of eliciting truth, for the truth as Jesus taught, will make us free.

One might suppose from Elder Blair's last argument, that I had committed the unpardonable sin, in the technical error of referring to the King of Salem as King of "Sodom." The error was unintentional, an omission, and the use of that idea was intended only in a borrowed sense, and to apply if need be to that occasion.

In the fourteenth chapter of Genesis, we have the account of this battle of "four kings with five;" and the battle was joined "in the vale of Siddim" (which vale Josephus calls "Slimepits); and in tenth verse we are told that "the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, and fell there: and they that remained fled to the mountain." In the seventeenth we are informed that "the King of Sodom went out to meet him," (Abram), after his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer, and of the kings that were with him," &c.

These statements have an apparent contradiction; the first narrates the battle, the flight of the two kings of Sodom and Gomorrah, before their enemies, and their falling in the vale in the battle, together with the flight of their forces after they fell; and it may be questioned by some because of this, whether this King of Sodom was really present or not upon the day when Abram was met by the "King of Sodom" and Melchisedec, as stated in 17th and 18th verses. Now to meet or remedy this defect, if it existed, or the objection, should it be raised, the idea as stated was thrown in, (but the definitive statement omitted); for we have proof in Hebrews with Genesis, that Melchisedec was present; also the rights, or interests of the king and of the people of Sodom were represented and protected. me, it makes no difference whether this king or his successor in person was present in fact, or not; but the important part is, the division of the property—the "goods" "women" and "people." The right of the people of Sodom to get their "persons" and "goods" of Abram, seems recognized in his statement, "I will not take anything that is thine;" verse 23. Now if the King of Sodom was entitled to this, would not the people (or king) of Gomorrah be entitled to the same right by a parity of That their "goods" had been reasoning? taken, as well as those of Sodom, is shown in eleventh verse, though no mention is made of them in the settlement. Again, what right had Amer, Eschol, and Mamre to these "goods," &c., these men who were "confederate with Abram." The record appears to be silent, as to just what that "right" was, but evidently they had a right, and it was recognized by Abram in the expression "let them take their portion;" verse 24. The conclusion upon this point seems but reasonable and fair, that among those kings, among those leaders, there must have been some established rule, by which such matters were regulated, and by which the spoils of war were divided. Whatever benefit or comfort may accrue to Elder Blair because of my technical error, he is quite welcome to it, as it does not in the least affect the point at issue between us, nor my argument thereon. Now in proof of this, I call the reader's attention to the point which was under discussion. Elder Blair argued (see Herald for January 3d). that Melchisedec, "a gospel minister," administered the law of tithing to Abram, on his return from the "slaughter of the kings," and that Abram being "rich in cattle, in silver and in gold," paid tithes of all this to Melchisedec at the time as cited above, in proof of which Elder Blair cited Gen. 14, also Heb. 7. My answer was, that this position is in error, and I make the same answer now; and that too without fear of a successful controversy. Gen. 14:11, shows us that the victorious kings carried away, "took all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah," and the 16th verse informs us that Abram, by his victory, "brought again his brother Lot and his goods, and the women also, and the people." That "the persons" and "the goods" formed a part of that which was taken by Abram, may be seen in the expression of the king of Sodom in the 21st verse, "give me the persons and take the goods to thyself." This is admitted also in Elder Blair's rejoinder. Now, of these things Abram gave tithes (a "tenth"); they constituted the spoils, (the goods, the property), and Hebrews 7:4, informs us, that "Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils." Now, I prove by this record, (and King James' version of the scriptures is the standard of evidence), that Abram upon this occasion, cited by Elder Blair, did not pay tithes of "his cattle," his "silver" or his "gold;" but only of the "spoils" taken in war. Seems to me that Elder Blair ought by this time to see his error; but to make the proof still more conclusive, inasmuch as Elder Blair has quoted and referred to Josephus as authority in this matter, (see Herald, February 21st, p. 122), I will also quote him. B. I, chap. 10, par. 2:

"Now the king of Sodom met him, (Abram), at a certain place, which they called The King's Dale, where Melchisedec king of the city of Salem, received him. That name signifies the righteous king; and such he was, without dispute, inso-much that on this account, (being a righteous king), he was made the priest of God; however, they afterward called Salem Jerusalem. Now this Melchisedec supplied Abram's army in an hospitable manner, and gave them provisions in abundance; and as they were feasting, he began to praise him, and to bless God for subduing his enemies under him. And when Abram gave him the tenth part of his prey, he accepted of the

This item completely explodes Elder Blair's theory in regard to this matter, and instead of its being the operation of some holy law of a Christian character, pertaining to the priesthood of God, according to Josephus it was but a "gift," the "tithe" the "tenth" of the "prey," "the spoils" taken in battle; and purely voluntary on the part of Abram; and the reason for so doing is assigned by Josephus in the above quotation. I repeat that I have now proved, that upon the occasion cited, that the "tithes" given by Abram were of the "spoils" of war only.

Elder Blair thinks, that in receiving these, Melchisedec represented Christ, and therefore the same practice should obtain to-day, and that this was clearly a gospel ministration, (see Herald, Jan. 3d., p. 9); and the same thought is confirmed in his "rejoinder." Now, it is a well established and accepted rule among men, that when an individual willingly and knowingly accepts a part of stolen goods, or aids and abets the individual who steals them, that he by that act, becomes accessory to the When an individual partakes of crime. the spoils of war willingly, or aids and abets either party thereto, he becomes by that act a party to, or accessory to that war. Christ said, his kingdom was not of this world else his servants would fight. See John 18:36. The whole life and teachings of Christ in their entirety completely negates the thought of war, or fighting, being tolerable or to be tolerated under his administration; hence I say again, that Melchisedec, though an High Priest, in accepting tithes, the "tenth," of the "spoils," the "prey" taken in war, that in so doing he did not represent the law of Christ as revealed in Christ. when Elder Blair or any one else, seeks to establish that act of Melchisedec, in receiving a tenth of the spoils of war, as a precedent in Christ Jesus, I say, as I believe, that it is bad in theology; and while I do not wish to retaliate or notice any personal flings at me, I must say, that as Elder Blair has expressed such deep interest and concern, over my "reputation as a minister," that probably there are two of us-who should be similarly interested.

Elder Blair thinks to have "forever set this matter at rest," when he quotes from "the great Alma chapter 10: 1, 2." This is rather refreshing. I have often read that passage, but have never thought as Elder Blair appears to, that it is a quietus to the case in hand; for while Alma states that "Abram paid tithes of one tenth part of all he possessed," (reader will notice that it is "tithes of one tenth part," not "surplus"), he at the same time, like a sensible man, refers his hearer or reader, to the "scriptures," which contain the ac-count. The "scriptures" in this case I suppose were Moses' writings; and being thus referred by Alma, I appeal to them; and as shown above, I prove from that record, that the tithes he gave Melchise-dec at that time were of the spoils of war. Now, if he paid tithes at some other time of all he possessed, would it not be better for Elder Blair to show that fact and point out that time, instead of referring to this case of giving of the "spoils?" The reader will ask, "can such proof be made?" I think it can not from King James' version. Elder Blair's entire argument relative to Heb. 7, may be answered in the fact, that neither Christ nor his apostles ever taught and enjoined the law of tithing, as observed by the patriarchs, or taught by Moses.

Elder Blair says, that "Elder Gurley denies that Abraham paid tithes to Mel-chisedec, except in the matter of "the spoils, which they had captured in battle." This mistaken view arises from extracting a part of my language and ideas to the detriment of others connected with it; for the reader will find upon Herald, page 106, for February 14, that I was particular in referring to the "particular case, which by Elder Blair is averred to represent Christ;" that that "case" and the "record" referred to, do show that the tithes upon that occasion were of the "spoils taken in and not of Abram's personal wealth I have proven. So far as my personal belief is concerned I may say that Ibelieve, that through the Mosaical, patriar-chal, and earliest ages of the world, there has been a class of ceremonial rites observed, such as "sacrifices," "first fruits," "tithing," &c., by various persons and people. This is seen in Gen. 4: 3, 4, where "Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord." And Abel brought of the firstlings of his flock, and of the fat thereof;" (this is noticed too in Heb. 11: 4), and of Job also, offering "burnt offering," Job. 1:5. Of Abram, being commanded of God to offer a sacrifice-Gen. 15:9, 10, of "a heifer of three years old, and a she goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtle dove, and a young pigeon." Account of this is also found in Josephus B. 1, chap. 10, par. 3; and the translator in a marginal note states that "it is worth noting here, that God required no other sacrifices under the law of Moses, than what were taken from these five kinds of animals which he here required of Abram." Here we have a case of sacrifice of the animals identical with the law, some four hundred years before the law was given. If of sacrifice, why not of tithing, as vowed by Jacob, Gen. 28: 22, and of "first fruits," &c., all of which is enjoined by the law,—see Ex. 23: 19; Deut. 26: 1-4; Ex. 13; Lev. 27: 30; Deut. 12 and 14 chapters. In other words, these various rites given of God to individuals in various parts of the history of the past, were apparently crystalized, brought out and established in the law through Moses in their completest sense, as types and shadows until Christ should come. With this thought agrees the words of Alma 10: 1, See also Heb. 10: 1; 8: 1-5; Col. 2: 17. Canon Farrar (without reference to his religion) very tersely remarks in his "Early Days of Christianity," and very appropriate here, that "to St. Paul Judaism was represented by a law, which enforced by one universal menace, its impossible exactions; it was a dispensation of wrath which revealed to man that he was naturally under the curse of God. Christianity, on the other hand, was represented by a deliverance from a doom which their troubled consciences declared to be deserved." "To St. Paul the Levitic system was a discipline which had been rendered superfluous." To St Paul the Law was a bond, of which Christ had nailed the torn fragments to His Cross." That he recognized Christianity as far more ancient is quite clear, but he recognized it largely in the form of a promise, see Gal. 3:8; Heb. 4: 2; also that the gospel was not understood, only in a fragmentary manner in those earlier ages, (not in its fulness), is seen I think clearly, in Paul's writings, Eph. 3: 2-7. "If ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which is given to me you-ward, how that by revelation he made known unto me the mystery, as I wrote afore in few words; Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge, (not wrest the scriptures), in the mystery of Christ, which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit; that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, and of the same body and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel: whereof I was made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by the effectual working of his power." Again, in Col. 1: 26, 27,—"Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages, and from generations, but now is made manifest to his Saints; to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you the hope of glory.' This fulness of the gospel Paul was authorized by "revelation of Jesus Christ" to teach, see Gal. 1:11, 12, and when "by revelation" he went up to Jerusalem to confer with the apostles and brethren to see how his teachings compared with theirs, he states that they "added nothing" to him, "only they would," says Paul, "that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do."—Gal. 2:

This great apostle went forward teaching the law of Christ, and in no case do we find him enjoining the law of tithing upon the church; being the apostle of the Gentiles, his teachings, and the practices ensuing therefrom, must be taken as true and proper examples to guide us. What are they in this particular? Are they "All your surplus property," and then "one tenth of all your interest annually," as provided in the revelation of 1838? Why, even when reprimanding him that stole, Eph. 4:28, he enjoins as his true duty, "rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth." The principle is brought out more fully and generally in I Cor. 16:1, 2, where Paul states, "Now concerning the collection for the Saints, as I have given over to the churches of Galatia, (showing the rule I to be a general one), so do ye: Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him," &c. To make the matter still To make the matter still plainer and more conclusive, I need but refer to 2 Cor. 9th chapter: "For as touching the ministering to the saints," says the Apostle, "it is superfluous for me to write to you;" ("superfluous" because they understood the rule regulating such matters as Paul had taught them); but the Apostle writes them that their "bounty" may be "ready,"—and mark his words, "He which soweth sparingly, shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver." Not the "surplus," not the "tenth," no not that, but as the individual purposeth in his heart.". The apostle in summing up this case states that, "the administration of this service not only supplieth the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God; while by the experiment of this ministration it must have looked like an "experiment," to those who had been reared under the law of tithing especially), they glorify God for your professed subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them, and unto all men." No law could be more general than this; for in its operation it not only reached the "saints," but "all men." To my mind the solution of the case would stand thus: The "letter" of the law is the "tenth." The "spirit" of the law is, "give as God has prospered you," "every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." The "letter" killeth, "but the spirit giveth life." Paul claimed to be a minister of the "spirit" not of the letter;" see 2 Cor. 3:6; also Rom. 2:27, 29; 7:6. I prefer his position upon these points to that of Bro. Blair's, (provided I understand him); for I hold that to establish the revelation of 1838, sec. 106, Doctrine and Covenants, is but a return to the "letter," which necessitates a departure from the "spirit;" however, if Elder Blair really believes that it is the duty of the Saints to give "all their surplus property, &c., for the building of mine house, and for the laying the foundation of Zion, and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the presidency of my church, &c.; "and after that shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually;" and those who are not thus tithed "shall not be found worthy to abide among you," (the saints), as provided for in that revelation, I say, that if Elder Blair believes that, he and I will not quarrel, but he must not say that I believe in it, for I do not; and to my mind it is an open question yet, whether the church believe in it; and the reader will choose for himself. Blair appears to assume that it is now obligatory. The quorums of Twelve and Bishopric declared it not obligatory. I think it ought not to be made obligatory. Elder Blair thinks oppositely. I say the church ought to decide, and declare positively, what the position is upon this and other questions, and then, but not till then, will these difficulties be settled. Should the church declare that law of tithing of 1838 obligatory upon us, I say let her not shirk the responsibility of enforcing the penalty for disobedience thereto, put it down in the "Epitome," that no one coming into the church will be deceived.

I now turn, somewhat reluctantly to the (to me) invective part of Elder Blair's "rejoinder." I know it's difficult to understand men, even when they write. The difficulty arising from the "confusion" in our language I suppose,—and that "confusion" seems to be deepened, when men write under excited conditions. However that might be in the case before us, I am not allowed to judge. I only know that I have looked Elder Blair's articles over and over, and in my mind have wondered and still wonder, "does he mean what he says?"

In Herald for January 3d, page 10, Elder Blair states, "And inasmuch as the Lord commanded the 'choice Seer' to organize the church; (references) and inasmuch as he commanded the church the very day of its organization to give heed unto all his (Joseph's) words and commandments, which he shall give unto you (the church) as he received them, walking in all holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith," (Doctrine and Covenants 19: 2), is it proper, is it safe, to reject his professedly inspired teachings to the church on tithing? We think not." Reader will notice the position taken, That God commanded the choice Seer to organize church—and also commanded the church to give heed unto Joseph's words and commands, and that they shall receive Joseph's "word," the same as if from God's own mouth. Now reader, if you would agree to accept an individual's word-or command—given in the name of the Lord, in just the same sense and of equal worth as if you heard God speak, would you not be establishing the infallibility of that individual in that regard? And would you not be obligated by your own act in making that choice? Elder Blair denies the right to the church of rejecting the revelation on tithing; then by a parity of reasoning, he must deny the right to reject any "word or command" given by Joseph; for that is the letter and the spirit of the law, and the argument as cited. In his article, Herald page 44, January 17th, Elder Blair refers to the historic fact that in August, 1835, the "Book of Doctrine and Covenants" by a "General Assembly of the whole church," was adopted as "a law, and a rule of faith and practice to the Church," and states that it is "far safer to trust their judgment," &c., than to entertain doubts or fears of anyone. The point in this is, Elder Blair denies again the right to question any revelation of Joseph Smith, by his argument, he makes the one on tithing binding, (and all the rest), by the act of 1835. This one on tithing was not given until 1838; hence when I have said as heretofore that when the Church by her vote obligated herself to "receive" Joseph Smith's "words and commands," the same as from "God's own mouth," that that settled the case with them, and being bound by that rule, they were bound to accept all that were given to them subsequently. Again-in his "Rejoinder,"-see Herald February 21st,—Elder Blair comes before us with a long and labored article, to show how highly the choice Seer is to be esteemed, quoting largely from 2 Nephi 2: 2, and Book of Nephi 9: 11, 12; (though I don't say that his version of those authors is correct, as I find quite a difference of opinion, but its immaterial in this discussion, so I leave the reader to examine those passages at their leisure, and just notice please, at the same time, that the work, that great work which was to be done, was the bringing forth "the book," "that it shall be as if the fruit of thy loins had cried unto them from the dust," &c., &c.); he states, "here is heaven's endorsement of Joseph the Seer as Christ's servant; here are the divine certificates, the heavenly testimonials of the 'choice Seer's' appointment, approval and authority, &c., "and that those who disbelieve in the words of Christ which he shall bring forth unto the Gentiles," will be "cut off from God's people of the covenant." In the next paragraph he applies the fragments of quotations made above to the revelations of Joseph Smith, and goes on and on, repeats and repeats the sentiment and idea, that to question one revelation given by the "choice Seer" is almost sure to bring ruin and death, states directly, "whoever will trace with care the pathway of the church from 1830, till now, will find it strewn with the wrecks of ministers who ridiculed, disregarded, or violated the revelations the Seer gave to the church." Reader, is there any stronger argument in favor of and claiming the infallibility of an individual's words needed? Could Elder Blair make a more positive argument in that direction? I think not. Have I not proved by thus quoting and referring to Elder Blair's argument, that he does claim infallibility for Joseph's "words and commands?" And does not he hurl anathemas upon every one who dares to question the revelations of the choice Seer? Does he not say that the pathway of past years is strewn with the wrecks of those who "ridiculed or disregarded" them? And yet in the very face of this high sounding infallible? argument for intallibility, he has the hardihood, to turn right round and say-"that such infallibility was not claimed by the Seer, nor allowed by the Saints," see page 124, ibid; and then to cap the climax by way of proof, tells us, "that the Seer wrote to the church in 1839, to not follow his personal counsel if they deemed it not wise; (why should he write this if they had never done it)? and from the still further fact, that he instructed the ministry, including the Twelve, to not permit a revelation from any person to go to the church till it was properly tested before the quorums." This goes to show as they accepted this, that they felt bound by their solemn act in 1835, to receive his "word," "as if from mine (God's) own mouth," (see Doctrine and Covenants, 19: 2), and instead of helping Elder Blair, it confirms my position; however, if he wishes to admit that these revelations of Joseph Smith are not binding, unless the church wish to make them so; and that the church has the right to "disregard" them by eliminating every one of them from the faith; then he admits all that I have ever claimed, (please see my article—"The Issue," in Herald few weeks since, not written in answer to Elder Blair, however); but his arguments do not indicate anything of this kind, as such admission would be to their destruction.
