Dear Brethren; Smith and Blair: - According to promise, I will let you hear from me. After leaving Lamoni, I came out to Oakland. (Stopped in New Mexico a few days to arrange leaving my business with my brother). While at Oakland, now three weeks since, I had a call to the ministry by the Spirit of prophecy, and was ordained an Elder. I am now up in the mountains-living in a miner's cabin out in the woods away from the world. I am preparing myself for the work. Surely, I realize to the depths of my soul that we are all at ease in Zion; and my soul yearns for the glorious work to begin actively. Truly, the harvest is white already; but the laborers are few-precious few. I pray God that the refreshing times will soon come, and Zion will awake in all her power and glory. Please send me by mail to Delta, Shasta county, California, a half dozen of blank certificates of licenses and membership.

Your brother in Christ, JOHN J. SNYDER.

FREMONT, Neb., June 30th, 1885. Bro. Blair: - Conference of the Northern Nebraska District was held on 26th, 27th, and 28th inst, at the above place, and we had a glorious time. Brethren Forscutt and Brand was with us and did the preaching, and they were filled with the old Gospel fire and made the jewels of truth ring like the music of ten thousand harps. The afternoon sacrament meeting was a joyous one.

The Spirit of God was present in power, and many testimonies were given of God's wonderful power in healing persons of various diseases.

Yours.

Dear Brother Blair: - Enclosed I send a dream of brother Howland's for interpretation, and to publish or not as you see fit; but I would like to have the interpretation. Dream by Capt. Wm. Howland, of Green Meadows, Los Angeles county, California, night of December 7th, 1884:

"I saw a pillar of gold come down from heaven; about seventy feet high; and it stood in the ground. About eighteen inches, of it-that in the ground—was hollow; the rest of it was solid. On the top of this pillar there was a white flag of peace. Then there came down another pillar of gold, much smaller than the first, about thirty feet high; and it stood in the ground. But no one could touch it, for it was death to approach it. Then came down the cross of Christ and stood near the centre, between them: but that was wood, and about seven feet high, of large proportions. Then came an Elder of our church who seemed much like Elder Badhamall in pure white-preaching the gospel; then came one like an angel and brought him a lot of books, and laid them at his left side. At this time Christ appeared coming in the heavens, to this place. Then came up four trees out of the ground two of fig, and two of olive-straight and green, nice looking trees, and these stood in the four corners, forming nearly a square around the pillars and cross. The Elder took up a book and said: This is the commencement of the new world. And as people came around, they appeared powerless; and he said to them, Los Angeles will be plowed up by earthquakes so that no man shall know that a city had been there, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and rivers of water shall run through this part of the country. And I saw when people came to the cross, the good ones went to the left of the cross, as the Elder faced it, making it to the right of the cross as it faced him; and then the next or less good went to their right; then the bad and murderers went further to the right of the others-or to the far off left of the cross, as it faced them."

Bro. Foseph: I am doing what I can at present, as I am out of business, and if my wife was better than she is, I could give more of my time; but I am out every Sunday in some part of the district, trying to do what I can. Last Sunday, by invitation, Bro. Puthell and myself were out of town together. One of the Scituate brethren came and met us about two miles out, and took us about seven miles, to a new place, called Saundersville, and met the brothers from Scituate in the forenoon. The meeting was a success. It was well attended, and we were invited to come again. After this meeting we went to Scituate to fill appointments in the afternoon and evening. Both meetings were well attended, and we were all blessed with the Spirit; and returned home about 11.30 p.m. So you see we have something to do; and, dear brother, I feel glad that I have some time to do it.

Bro. Joseph:-I am one of many who are delighted in reading the Herald. Bro. R. M. Elvin has been preaching in this vicinity with good attendance. Our Methodist friends appeared interested, and led in singing after the first discourse. His text was: "And some said, what will this babbler say; other some, he seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods; because he preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection." I was some what surprised with so strange a text, but the application was given with a spirit of love, blended with rebuke, that none could be offended.

Bro. Elvin left us on the morning of the 9th inst., in good spirits. We were sad in parting with one who had given us so much encouragement to strive on. Our number here is few, but we will work and pray, the Lord being our helper, that others may be added. Still we have reason to believe that Belial is striving to hedge up the way of truth in this as in other localities. There are many here who have been deceived by false stories about our belief. Many who came to hear are now investigating our faith by reading the tracts. You would have been pleased to see the people gather around him when he told them that he had tracts that were like his preaching, free. Some have said if the doctrine preached by Bro. Elvin is Mormonism, that they are Mormons too. Be this as it may, we are glad that much has been accomplished in the late effort by removing prejudice from the minds of the people. I am striving to live up to the standard of righteousness, yet life has its gloom and sorrows.

Yours in hope, F. M. Baker.

Dear Herald:-I have just united with the Church, and will write a few lines. I have been a member of the Baptist Church, and received no benefit, and was not satisfied. But I went to Sandwich and heard the gospel as the Saints preach it, and was convinced that it was the truth, and I also felt the power of the Spirit, and obey-

Brethren, why is it that there are not more people joining the Latter Day Saints? I say it is because of pride or love of popularity, and because they can not endure sound doctrine. CHAPTER III.

THE LAW REPEALED.

THE Law was not originally a part of God's divine arrangement. Previous to the time of Israel's bondage in Egypt, they were under a dispensation of grace. They did not abide in the gospel which was preached to them, and the Law was added because of transgression, as will appear from the following:

"And this I say that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, can not disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgression, till the seed [Christ. See v. 16] should come to whom the promise was made."—Gal. 3:17, 19.

To what was the Law added? Let the same apostle answer:

"And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed."—Gal. 3:8.

Thus we see the gospel was preached in Abraham's day, four hundred and thirty years before the Law was given. gospel continued with Israel till after their departure from Egypt, as may be seen by the following:

"For unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them: but the word preached did profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it."-Heb. 4:2.

By reading verses fifteen to nineteen, inclusive, of the third chapter of Hebrews, it will be seen that the apostle had direct reference to the Iraelites under Moses in the widerness. If, then, the Law was added to the gospel, or rather, given instead till the promised seed, Christ, should come, it is but logical to conclude that, when the Messiah should come, the added Law would be repealed, it having accomplished the purpose for which it was given.

We think the Scriptures plainly show that the Law, with all of its appointments, has been repealed. The only proper way to determine whether the Law has been changed or repealed, will be to enquire into the views entertained by the executors of the Divine will under the new dispensation. In speaking of the Law, and his privileges under it, Jesus says:

"Think not that I am come to destroy the Law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fufilled."—Mat. 5: 17, 18.

Here the inference is clear, that, when the Law should be fulfilled in the life and ministry of Christ, (including his offering) its binding force would cease. But fearing some may view it otherwise to their prejudice, we will introduce the testimony of the disciples upon this point. Luke represents the Savior as saying:

"The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it."—Luke 16: 16.

Here again the adverb of time in italics in the above quotation, indicates that since the kingdom of God is preached, the Law, by which the people were governed till John, had lost its force, and was then passing away. In further proof of this position we cite the fact that neither Jesus nor the Apostles, during the entire period of their ministry, were ever known to administer any of the forms of the law, or enjoin their observance upon others. That the Apostles understood the Mosaic Law to have been abolished will clearly appear as we proceed. Paul in his letter to the Romans, referring to this law, says:

"Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight; for by the law is the knowledge of sin. But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets: even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe; for there is no difference: * * * Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law."

Rom. 3: 20-22, 28.

Now let us take a careful look into the apostle's meaning. The law is introduced as a "witness." The witness testifies of the "righteousness of God" which should be revealed in the "faith of Jesus Christ," unto "all them that believe." Previous to the Christian dispensation, the righteousness of God was manifested through the "law and the prophets." "But now," says the apostle, God's righteousness is manifested "without the law." The witness having testified to all the material facts of Christianity, is dismissed by the great Judge, and modestly retires. Hence, the apostle's language, "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight."

That the apostle understood it in this light seems conclusive from what he says further on in his letter. "Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another [instead of the law] even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God. "For when we were in the flesh [i. e. under the law the motions of sin, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death. But now we are delivered from the law, that [law] being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of Spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter."-Rom. 7: 4-6.

In this chapter the old and new dispensations are brought to view. The old was a preparatory and a figurative dispensation. while the new, was and is a spiritual, real one. The law of the former was literal and local, while that of the latter is spiritual and general. We are released from the obligations of the one, and brought under subjection to the other. Hence, the apostle boldly declares we are become "dead unto the law." If we are not alive unto the law but "DEAD," why is it so? We are dead unto the law, because we are alive unto Christ-because we are "married to another," even the "body of Christ," which is his church. By the body of Christ we become "dead unto the law," the object being that we may be united to Christ. This union is called a marriage, that being the strongest tie that can unite human beings in a common bond. This union or marriage, Spiritually considered, must be governed by law.

The woman in this chapter, is employed as a figure to represent the church. Israelitish church was united to Moses, the great law-giver, who stood at the head of the former dispensation, and was "bound" to him by "the law of her husband," namely, the Mosaic Law. The Jewish church was under obligation to observe "the law of her husband," until her husband's death. As the natural life of Moses had an end, so the dispensation of which he was the head must have an end. Not until this dispensational husband should die [for Moses remained and lived during the law-dispensation] was the woman, or Jewish church, to be at liberty to sever the bond of her union. Had she done so, and united with another, she would be called an adulteress. But when this husband dies, i. e., when the old dispensation has drawn to a close, then the woman is at liberty to marry again. The Mosaic dispensational husband died upon the preaching of the "Kingdom of God" by John the Baptist. (See Luke 16:16). Hence, the Apostle says: "But now we are delivered from the law, that [law] being dead wherein we were held."

You will no doubt have observed that the "husband" is dead, and the law by which he governed his wife, is likewise dead. If both the husband and the law are dead, then the woman, if she shall marry again, can only be joined in marriage to the new husband, by virtue of a new law. We are as free from "the law," and its institutions, as the woman is free from the law of her husband who is dead. The law, then, being "dead," is inoperative. The Apostle justifies this view of the case, in the following language: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made us free from the law of sin and death."-Rom. 8: 1, 2.

Comment upon this would be superfluous. Fearing, however, that some may not understand his meaning fully, the apostle continues: "For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." (verse 5). If Christ is the "end" of the law, it can not now be in

It is worthy of observation that, in Romans 8: 2, the law is called "the law of sin and death." In the third chapter of 2 Corinthians the Apostle Paul puts this "ministration of death," in striking contrast with the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," as the following extract shows: "Who also hath made us able ministers of the New Testament: not of the letter, but of the spirit; for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life. But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away; how shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory. For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth. For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious. Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great plainness of speech: and not as Moses, which put a vail over his face, that the children of Israel could not steadfastly look to the end of that which is abolished. But their minds were blinded; for until this day remains the same vail untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which vail is done away in Christ."—2 Ćor 3: 6-14.

From this quotation we learn the following facts:

1.—That the law, which is by the apostle termed "the ministration of death," was "written and engraven in stones."

2.—That, while the law written on stones was glorious, the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ," excelled in glory. And,

3.—That the law written and engraven in stones "is done away in Christ.'

As the vail hid the natural face of Moses from the Israelites, so the "vail" of tradition obscured the glory of the countenance of the spiritual Moses—Christ. They could not be made to understand that all the glory that shone from the lofty summit of Sinai's mountain, had been obscured by the more resplendent light of the rising of the sun of righteousness. And so, alas! it is to-day. Many good people yet cling tenaciously to the opinion that the old law "written and engraven in stones," is still in force. That the law referred to by the apostle as the "ministration of death," and written and engraven in stones," was the ten commandments, I shall now proceed to prove.

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel. And he was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments."

Ex. 34: 27, 28.

Here we have the ten commandments written upon "tables;" and I wish now to show beyond the possibility of a reasonable doubt, that these tables were tables The reason for my wishing to of stone. show this will be rendered obvious when it is remembered that whatever was written on the "tables of stone" is denominated "the ministration of death," which the apostles declares to be "abolished."

When I have shown that the ten commandments were written on "tables of stone," then I shall have proven the ten commandments, as given upon Mount Sinai, have been abolished. And when I have shown that the ten commandments have been "done away," then I shall have shown that the Seventh-day Sabbath, is, in no sense of the word, binding upon Christian people. In support of this point we quote from the record as follows: "And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon Mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God."—Ex. 31: 18.

Here we have the two tables of stone. Let us next enquire, what was written upon these tables of stone. By reading verses twelve and seventeen, inclusive, we discover the ten commandments are referred to, and more especially the fourth commandment. These tables Moses, in anger, cast to the ground and broke (see Ex. 32:19), but were reproduced, as may be seen by the following: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou breakest."-Ex.

Of this matter Moses further says: "At that time the Lord said unto me, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up into the Mount, and make thee an ark of wood. And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou breakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark."—Deut. 10:1, 2. (For a description of the ark, See Ex.

"And it came to pass at the end of the forty days and forty nights, that the Lord gave me the two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant."—Deut. 9:11.

"And the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire; ye heard the voice of the words, but ye saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice. And he declared unto you his covenant, which he com-manded you to perform, even ten commandments, and he wrote them upon two tables of stone."—Deut. 4: 12, 13.

"These words [ten commandments, see verses 6-21, inclusive] the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the Mount, out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more. And he wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me."—Deut. 5:22.

"Then Solomon assembled the Elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto king Solomon in Jerusalem, that they might bring up the ark of the covenant of the Lord out of the city of David, which is Zion. . . . There was nothing in the ark save the two tables of.

stone, which Moses put there at Horeb, when the Lord made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came up out of the land of Egypt."—I Kings 8: 1, 9.

From the foregoing quotations gleam the following summary of facts, namely:

1.—The tables referred to in Exodus

34: 27, 28, were tables of stone;"
2.—That after the destruction of the first tables, Moses made other "tables of stone," upon which were written "the words" that were in "the first tables," and that these "words" were the "ten commandments;"

3.—That these tables were also called "the tables of the covenant," or the tables upon which the covenant was written;

4.—That this covenant which the Lord commanded the Israelites to "observe," was the "ten commandments;"

5.—That these "tables of stone" contained the covenant, or ten commandments, only;

6.—That these "tables of stone," containing the covenants, or ten commandments, were, for safe-keeping, placed in the "ark of wood," called also "the ark of covenant;" and,

7.—That when, in the days of King Solomon, the ark was placed in the temple at its dedication, "there was nothing in the ark, save the two tables of stone.'

No amount of sophistry, by which men may seek to darken counsel and mislead "old testament," the "covenant," the "ten commandments," were written upon "tables of stone." This fact, then, taken in connection with what Paul says in his letter to the church at Corinth, (2 Cor. 3:7), namely, that "the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones," is "abolished," we have the logical deduction that the ten commandments are "done away;" and if done away, there remains absolutely nothing upon which to base an argument in support of the theory that the Seventhday Sabbath is binding in the Christian dispensation.

An objection is interposed here, that the ten commandments are not referred to by the apostle—that the ten commandments are not a "ministration of death." swer to this objection we submit:

1.—That the penalty for a violation of either of the commandments of the Decalogue was death.

2.—That no law to Israel, except the ten commandments, was ever "written and engraven in stones." And,

3.—That the Decalogue was so "written" and "graven," as may be seen by the following:

"And Moses turned, and went down from the Mount, and the two tables of the testimony were in his hand; the tables were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written. And the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables."—Ex. 32:

15, 16. Don't cavil, reader, and say these may not be the tables of stone upon which the ten commandments were written; for in the eighteenth verse of the preceeding chapter it is positively declared that they were "two tables of stone, written with the finger of God."-Ex. 31: 18.

Hence, it is reasonably and Scripturally certain that the apostle had reference to none other than the Decalogue when he said the "ministration of death" should give place to the "ministration of right-eousness," which doth "exceed in glory" every thing that had preceded it.

CHAPTER IV.

THE TWO LAWS.

When we present the foregoing array of facts, in themselves overwhelming, in support of the theory that the law has been abolished, we are at once met with the assertion that there are two laws, namely, the "MORAL" and the "CEREMONIAL;" and that those passages referring to the abrogation of the law, have reference only to the

To begin with, we utterly deny that any such distinction is made by the divine writers-no two distinctive laws are found in the Mosaic economy. What are called the moral and ceremonial laws, are but different parts of the same system; the latter being an outgrowth of surrounding conditions, and had their foundation in the Decalogue, as seen in the following:

"And the Lord said unto Moses, write thou these words: for after the tenor of these I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel. * * * And He wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments."—Ex. 34; 27, 28,

And the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: * * * And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten command-ments, and he wrote them upon tables of stone."-Deut. 4: 12, 13.

Hence the ten commandments may with great propriety be termed the CONSTITU-TION of the commonwealth of Israel. None of the "statutes" or "judgments" must conflict with the fundamental law. The Decalogue was to ancient Israel what the Federal Constitution is to the government of the United States. The laws of Israel and the laws of Iowa alike punish crime, differing only in their methods. A man is charged with adultery, and is found guilty. Now, what saith the law? Israel's law said, He shall surely be put to death, while that of Iowa provides that the offender shall be punished by fine and imprisonment.

We may with as much propriety say there are ten or more laws, as to say there are two; for the very good reason that there is a statute providing for the punishment of any one who violates either of the ten commandments.

When overwhelmed with the unanswerable logic of this position, the advocates of the Seventh-day Sabbath resort to another show of argument. For to bolster up the tottering fabric of a decayed and discarded institution, they very gravely tell us that the "covenant," meaning the ten command-ments, is unalterable—that the Lord has said it shall "stand fast forever;" and to establish this view of the case, we are referred to the eighty-ninth Psalm which says: "Also I will make him my firstborn, higher than the kings of the earth. My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips."—Ps.

It is maintained that the ten commandments are here referred to, and that the Lord declares he will not alter them. They assert that the phrase, "my covenant shall stand fast with him," means that Christ would not alter the Decalogue in any sense whatever. Just how much ground there is for this claim will appear as we proceed. Let us examine this point carefully, for much depends upon it. It is conceded that if God, through Christ, has not altered the covenant, it remains unchanged; for no man, or set of men, can change that which God hath ordained and perpetuated. But the view presented above is certainly erroneous, as I think we abundantly prove. In the first place, the language of the Psalm from which the quotaton is made, does not warrant such a conclusion; and in the second place, this view makes the Psalmist to conflict with the prophets and apostles as will hereafter appear.

It cannot be argued that the Lord would not abrogate the covenant, simply from the fact that he says he will not "break" it. He did not "break" the law; yet, as we have shown, he abolished it. careful examination of the preceding part of the chapter it will be readily perceived that no reference, whatever, is had to the Decalogue; but quite to the contrary; for the "covenant" referred to is one made with David concerning his posterity, as the following abundantly proves:

"I will sing of the mercies of the Lord for ever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations." Verse 1.

No one doubts that David is here addressing his praise to the Lord. In verse three the Lord is addressing David and "I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, Thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah." Verses 3,4. David then offers sublimest praise to the Lord for having made this covenant to establish his seed forever. In verses five to eighteen, he extols the majesty, power, and excelence of the Almighty, and then quotes the Lord's lan-guage, as heard in vision, as follows:

"Then thou [God] spakest in vision to thy Holy One [Christ], and said'st, I have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people. I have found David my servant; with my holy oil have I anointed him." Verses

It is a well known fact of history that when Israel was greatly distressed in their contests with the Philistines, "help was laid upon the mighty," in the person of David, who slew the giant Goliah in battle, and was "chosen out of the people," in the most literal sense; and by direct command of the Almighty was "exalted" to the throne of Israel, and with the "holy oil" was anointed to be king and commander-in-chief of the Israelitish host. Having thus been anointed and exalted, the Lord said of him:

"The enemy shall not exact upon him; nor the son of wickedness afflict him. But my faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him; and in my name shall his horn be exalted. Also I will make him my first-born, higher than the kings of the earth. My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips." Verses 22-24, 27, 28, 34.

Thus David is assured that the Lord would not forsake him, and that his seed should endure forever. This covenant has been faithfully kept, for the seed of David is known to-day throughout the entire civilized portione of the world.

To show that we have not put a forced construction upon the Scripture in question, I will call the reader's attention to the fact that this covenant was conditionally made with Solomon, when he succeeded to the throne of Israel.

"And if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, in integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all I have commanded thee, and wilt keep mystatutes and my judgments; then I will establish the throne "of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, as I promised to David thy father, eaying, There shall not fail thee a man whom the throne of Israel."

t Kings 9: 4, 5.
It was no doubt generally understood by the Israelites, that such a covenant was made with David, and that this covenant God would not break, nor "alter the thing that went out of his lips."

Thus falls to the ground another futile argument advanced in support of the perpetuity of the Seventh-day Sabbath, and its binding force in the Christian dispensation.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 11.

BY S. F. W.

"The Mayas had many signs and characters identical with the Egyptians; possessing the same alphabetical and symbolical value in both nations; among the symbolical, I might mention a few: water, country, king, Lord, offering, splendor. * * * Eighteen of the letters have the same sound and value as the Spanish a, i, x, and pp, and are identical with the Etruscan."

By the use of these letters Mr. P. found the names of the ancient Maya founders to be Aak, a turtle; Cay, a fish; Chaacmol, a leopard.

The culture hero of the Mayas, Chaacmol resembles Osiris.

In Mayab there also existed mysteries. It seems that the initiated had to pass through different gradations to reach the highest or third; . . . certain signs and symbols were used by the affiliated, that are perfectly identical to those used among the Masons, in their symbolical lodges."

"Many of the customs of the inhabitants of equatorial Africa, as described by Du Chaillu, in the relation of his voyage to the land of Ashango, so closely resemble those of the aborigines of Yucatan, as to suggest that intimate relations must have existed in very remote ages, between their ancestors."

(We have before found that the Zulus, further south, are Noachidae.)

"It is impossible for us to form a correct idea of their (the Maya's) attainments, since only the most enduring monuments have reached us, resisting the disintegrating action of time and the atmosphere."

"In Ake, a city about twenty-five miles from Merida, there exists still a monument sustaining thirty-six columns of Katuns. Each of these columns indicates a lapse of one hundred and sixty years in the life of the nation. They then would show that 5,760 years had intervened between the time when the first stone was placed on the east corner of the uppermost of the three immense superposed platforms that compose the structure, and the placing of the last capping stone on the top of the thirty-sixth column. How long did that event occur before the Spanish conquest? It is impossible to surmise. Supposing, however, it did take place at that time, this would give us a lapse of at least 6,100 years since, among the rejoicings of the people, this sacred monument being finished, the first stone that was to serve as a record of the age of the nation, was laid by the high priest, where we see it to-day. I will remaak that Ake is one of the Egyptian divinities, the third person of the triad of Esneh; always represented as a child, holding his finger in his mouth. Ake also means a reed. To-day the meaning of the word is lost in Yucatan."

This reckoning was published at a time when Usher's chronology was undisputed. The cuneiform chronology is a revelation of last year; that the Maya and Chaldean chronology should be found to harmonize is a startling fact.

Cogoludo explains the ancient method of recording time: A lustrum was four years, five lustrums a katum, which means to place a stone down upon another; seven of these stones began an Ahuakatum. Then after the first lustrum of four years they placed a small stone on the top of the big one, commencing at the east corner; then after four years more they placed another small stone on the west corner; then next at the north; and the fourth at the south. At the end of twenty years they put a big stone on the top of the small ones, and the column thus finished indicated a lapse of 160 years."

As we have found that the first Americans were white men with beards, and like the Afghans, and so like Dr. Le Plongeon that he passed himself off on the natives as one of them reanimated; and discrediting the reports of white savages in Sonora and in the tierr de Guerra, we are left no alternative, and must say they perished. In saying this we are brought face to face with a great mystery. Science has its puzzles not less than faith. Science tells us the fittest survive. In this case the fittest were first, and are not a They are not even wanderers among their own ruins; none, however few, are left to guard some ancient stronghold or place made sacred by daring, devotedness, sacrifice, or song. The sculptured columns that should have made their designers immortal in fame, are buried in the soil that supports impenetrable forests; and letters cut in imperishable stone, represent a language the sound of which can never more be known.

Yet this is not more mysterious than many other facts in archæology. "The mastodons these ancients used at first, and worshiped later, have also perished. They had no enemies, and when the plains and jungles were left to their free occupancy, they should have multiplied. Who shall explain their decadence, and that of the extinct horses, once the companions of man?

We have a history of the overthrow of the Toltecs. It is vividly drawn. It includes all conceivable horror and disaster, famine, flood, drought, war, wickedness like that of the anti-diluvians and the cities of the plain, divination, prophecy, portents, terror, demoralization, frenzy, and utter desolation. "'Tis true 'tis strange, and strange it is 'tis true." The desolated cities of Central American are a strange phenomenon, famed in all lands. Many speculations have been indulged concerning their condition, and the causes of it. Mr. Baldwin has ouly this: "Central America had been subject to disrupting political changes, caused by violent transfers of supreme influence from one people to another, several times in the course of a long history.'

Mr. Delafield's work is devoted to the origin not the fate of the first Americans. He published with his volume, a map that is a genuine antiquity. It was first pro-cured in Mexico by Botturini, and was explained by him according to the knowledge of the Mexicans to be a history of their wanderings; but this is evidently a misconception. The map represents the destruction of the nation whose wanderings it traces, and the Aztics were not extirpated. Why may it not be a history of the more ancient people whose fortunes we have been following? What history more likely to be transmitted than theirs? We have seen that their history was written; a great deal was recorded of them; why not then their downfall recorded? It seems but reasonable that if the chart agrees better with what we know of their history than it does with Aztec history, it should be applied to them. Mr. Bancroft publishes this map, and with it another one, also Aztec pictures, and said to be a history of their wanderings; but as the two maps do not agree in any part of their delineations; they can not be the history of the same people. It then probably is a reproduction by them of the history of their predecessors, or their first predecessors. I have entered upon a pathway of conjecture, but was led to it by a chain of facts, and I will get along throught it as logically as I can, and trust to future papers to justify the course.

The first scene in the chart is, to use the words of Mr. Delafield, "six hieroglyphics, each denoting the word 'salli," or house, surrounding the emblem of a tumulus, erected for worship. Beneath are two figures, male and female, the latter being distinguished by two small tresses resembling horns, as in the mythological painting of the age of famine. Attached to the female is an emblem used heraldically, and points her out as one of the "children of the sun,"—a title claimed equally by the Hindoos, ancient Egyptians, and Peruvian Incas."

The object designated above as a "tumulus erected for worship," I will take the liberty of calling a representation of the tower of Babel—the original of all ancient temples and tumuli on the two continents.

The next figure is a man in a boat. That evidently represents water, and I will call it the sea, and the crossing of it; for the "children of the sun" are later found in procession.

"The next hieroglyphic is a cartouche, enclosing the zodiacal sign of Tecpatl, 'silex,' or 'knife,' accompanied by a ring denoting a year."

"The large comical figure marked 3, by Botturini, is the hieroglyphic denoting the building of a town. The emblem phonetically giving the name of this place is comprehended within a cartouche and answers to the names of Colhuacan. Whether these conical figures have any reference to the tumuli or pyramidal structures, yet remaining, is a topic for the fancy of the reader."

I would then surmise that instead of the figures representing a "town" it does represent a "tumulus or pyramadal structure." Within it is the character for the Aztec god Hautzilapochtli, but words from him are going up into the heavens as if he were a mortal engaged in prayer.

"We then come to a row of eight objects each giving the word Calli, or house. To these are attached various figures connected with a human form. * * * From this we may gather the inference, that at least eight prominent tribes constituted the race which is here designated."

"Following on the traces of their footsteps we next come to four persons standing erect, as though on their march. They are supposed to represent the family of the emperor, under whose guidance the journey is taken. In advance, marches the chief, who is borne upon the shoulders of one of the race. The phonetic symbol over his head, designates him by the name Cohuatl, or serpent."

We have seen that Votan called himself a "snake," and we thus identify this figure with him.

Farther along we see a tumulus, and on top of it a kneeling figure, with tears falling from his eyes. This may be considered their prophet-leader interceding for his people.

A man shooting birds shows their means of support. The change of scenery shows progress southward, &c.

The chart is eighteen feet long and I will not notice any more but the closing scenes. These represent war; the last of all is one man chasing another with a drawn sword, which cannot mean anything so well as extermination of the nation by internicine war.

Of the mound builders, MacLean says: "It requires no great observation in order to understand what became of this people—north of the Ohio. Every indication shows that they were expelled from this teritory by force. When they were harassed by the inroads of the war-like bands of a foreign race. They erected their strong fortifications, for retreat during the predatory raids. On the hills they erected the mounds for posts of obervation, and when a war party came down upon them, the fires were kindled, and the people thereby warned, sought their shelter

On the farm of Mr. Harrison Whaley near Moorefield, Ky., "about three inches beneath the surface of the entire tract may be found innumerable bones, evidently the remains of an extinct species of the human Several mounds are also in the woods and in one which has been partially explored were found skulls and bones, which from their size must have belonged to a race of beings more gigantic than the race which now inhabits the earth. * * It is evident they were never buried, but originally lay exposed to view, inasmuch as the whole tract, covering at least fifteen acres, has multitudes of human bones but a few inches beneath the surface."-Carlyle Murcury.

On the farm of D. Fredenburg, on Grand River near Cayeigact, N. Y., are "piled in layers, some two hundred skeletons of human beings, then measuring nine feet." * * At various times within the past years, the remains of mud houses, with their chimneys had been found; and there are pits of a similar kind to that just unearthed."

Priest (338) has the following: "In the fourteenth township of the Holland Company's lands, N. Y., near the ridge road leading from Buffalo to Niagara Falls, is the site of an ancient fort, situated in a large swamp * * The earth that forms the fort was evidently brought from a distance * * * The distance to the margin of the marsh is about a half mile, where large quantities of human bones have been found, on opening the earth, of an extraordinary size; the thigh bones about two inches longer than a common sized man's. The jaw or chin bone will cover a large man's face; the skull bones are of an enormous thickness. The breast and hip bones are also very large. On being exposed to the air they soon moulder away, which denotes the great length of time since their interment. The disorderly manner in which these bones were found to be, being cross-wise, commixed and mingled with every trait of confusion, shows them to have been deposited by a conquering enemy. There is no evidence of a bullet having been the instrument of death."

Mr. Squire tells us that the works of the ancients extend no farther than Western New York. Here we leave them.

JOSEPH SMITH.

HIS TWO SERMONS TO THE SAINTS ON SUNDAY.—THE OPERA HOUSE CROWDED, AND HUNDREDS TURNED AWAY.-RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AND THE LAW CARE-FULLY CONSIDERED.

THE REDEMPTION OF ISRAEL

The announcement that President Joseph Smith of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints would preach in the Chapel on Second South Street, yesterday afternoon, resulted in crowding the house to overflowing, the seating capacity being inadequate to accommodate all who attended.

The theme chosen by President Smith for his discourse was the departure of the Utah Church from the principles of Mormonism as taught by his father and as accepted by the church for fourteen years. He stated that he did not come to Utah as an enemy to this people, but he had long been in avowed antagonism to the EVILS THAT HAD OVERTHROWN ISRAEL.

There was a decided and wondrous unrest in Israel at the present time, and it seemed opportune that some one should take up the teachings of the prophets and lead the people back to the right path.

It had been charged against him that he was hand and glove with the world, but no one could follow his experience and that of his brother, and say they had not been true to the Book of Mormon. Only a short time ago he had preached in the Court House at Carthage, where his father

TRIED FOR HIS LIFE

And he dared to raise up and say that the Book of Mormon was a true record.

For fourteen years after the organization of the church, and before the introduction of polygamy, the church had flourished, and between 180,000 and 200,000 converts from among the different nations of the earth accepted the faith, and now, after fifty-five years of preaching, there were less than 200,000 members. What had become of the members? It was said that they had apostatized. But he had hope yet for the full redemption of the church from polygamy, when no man need fear the face of man.

As proof that he was not in harmony and sympathy with the world, President Smith mentioned the persecutions with which he had met. In various counties in Illinois, public meetings had been held, and resolutions passed, declaring no Mormon should be permitted to

PREACH OR PRAY

In the county; but he had gone among those very people and preached, and no one dared raise a hand against him. He was in accord with the world only in the sense that every man who is honest and sincere in his belief, and has the courage to express his own convictions is respected by all true men of the world. He thanked God that he had inherited enough independence to say, believe, and think for himself, without reference to what some one else thought or said. Each individual was responsible for his own actions, and he who would obey the command of any other man was not to be trusted. God did not require any man to be a slave, and he proposed to tell the people how to regain and keep their freedom. As to the statement that he came as an enemy of this people, he desired them to wait until he gave some evidence of enmity to them.

THE EVENING MEETING.

The meeting held by the Reorganized Church in the Walker Opera House on Sunday evening, was an important one. Long before the hour for commencing the services, eight o'clock, the building was filled from pit to dome, and hundreds of people were compelled to turn away. The audience was composed of Gentiles, Latter Day Saints, and orthodox Utah Morons, and the occasion of the gathering of so mixed a congregation, was to hear preach Joseph Smith, president of the Re-organized Mormon Church, and son of the first Mormon prophet. The wellknown anti-polygamic views held by the church which Mr. Smith represents, and the fact that the Utah Mormons now have their hands full of trouble in consequence of their polygamic practices, gave great interest to this meeting. At the hour set for commencing the services, Elder Joseph Luff gave out the hymn:

The morning breaks, the shadows flee, Lo. Zion's standard is unfurled; The dawning of a brighter day, Majestic rises on the world.

Elder Alexander H. Smith opened the meeting with prayer, and after the singing of a second hymn, Elder Luff introduced Mr. Smith, who stepped to the front of the platform. Mr. Smith is of medium height, of a broad, heavy build, wears a full gray beard, has a large, high head, and looks to be a man of more than ordinary breadth of character. He said, if there was one thing he desired more than another, it was to talk with that congregation as one man might with another, as a friend, and as the watchman on the towers of Zion, seeing eye to eye. happen in the affairs of men, which are viewed differently by different individuals; but that now upon this people could be viewed by them from a common standpoint with him if they understood each other. He was not responsible for his birth, for he did not recollect to have had anything to say about it, and no shame in that behalf could be visited on him by honorable men.

ONE OF THE GUIDES

Of the church and of the Saints, is contained in the first Book of Covenants, and the text is this: "He that keepeth the law of God hath no need to break the law of the land." This should be considered. The Elders had ever proclaimed that in this western land it had been the design that religious liberty should be born and maintained, and they preached and taught, that for this purpose God had raised up wise men, our patriot fathers, to write and bequeath to us the Constitution, the object being to give to the work of God a footing, that the race might be redeemed and prepared for that perfect liberty which is the design of Christ's Kingdom. Hence there should be no antagonism to this Government, for it was instituted to carry

THE DESIGN OF GOD.

The Book of Mormon teaches this land was to be dedicated to liberty for the establishment of God's work, and that no government that did not maintain this principle could last.

The troubles of the Saints in Missouri grew out of the fact that Mormonism was anti-slavery, and the Saints were composed of people from New England and the Northern States. This theory is taught to-day by the Elders all over the world, and the speaker appealed to the gray headed Elders present if it was not so, and if it was not to be so, until all men were free in Christ, whose Spirit would watch over and foster that principle of liberty, until these designs were accomplished. Christ said his followers had faith in him; the Elders say religious liberty, guaranteed by this Government, was foreordained in the great plan of salvation. This being so, God will not permit it to be submerged, nor trampled down. It must therefore, of necessity be maintained unto the end.

HOW LONG?

And the speaker answered the question by quoting from the Book of Commandments: "Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet." Not till the coming of the Son of Man and all men are redeemed. The speaker is charged with being an enthusiast. He is. The work in which he is engaged justifies it, and to-day, in every State and Territory there are men engaged in it. Can Mormonism exist without

THE DOCTRINE OF POLYGAMY?

From 1830 to 1844 the principles of this faith were taught in the West, and thousands embraced the church when there was not a thought nor a hint of polygamy, and later when accused of proclaiming it, it was solemnly denied. In the fourteen years preceding the martyrdom of the prophet, to 1844, the Elders built up a membership of 150,000 to 200,000, with 30,000 in England. The simple tenets of the faith were then taught. A brother had said: "If you take polygamy out of Mormonism, I want no more to do with it." That might be true of him, but the speaker was differently constituted, and did not want any such religion. In 1860 he took up the work of his father, and commenced gathering up the scattered remnants of the church. There were at that time about thirteen organizations claiming to be the true church, but there are now only two such organizations, and one of them has been treated of late as of some importance. It numbers

18,000 or 20,000 souls, built up in antagonism to polygamy. Since coming to Salt Lake, a certain man had charged that because the speaker was not reviled he was the favorite of worldlings; was patted on the back by the unrighteous, simply to use him as a tool, which charge was

AN ATTEMPT TO FORESTALL

Him and whatever of truth he might have to present to this people. Think of this in connection with the golden thread of truth; of the principle of Christ's allreaching design of salvation; of the principle of religious liberty. I confess with shamefacedness that a spirit of isolation a kingdom-building spirit—is manifested here, notwithstanding we are enjoined to make friends among all men, which the Elders did before this doctrine of polygamy was tacked on the faith. Then they could get a respectful hearing in all countries, where their very name had now become a stench by virtue of the acts of the men who were crying

"WOLF! WOLF!"

To the flock. And these were the shepherds, but they were not in sight, which was either a shame to the shepherds, or a credit to the sheep. The all-embracing spirit of the gospel was compared to the two per cent plan of salvation, and the fallacy of the latter pointed out, with a warning that the crisis would soon come. And what will the Utah Saints then elect to do? Natural and Divine laws are arbitrary, and the consequences of their transgression can not be shirked. Some say his father was responsible for polygamy. If so, he must answer for it. The speaker would not shield his father or his brother in a wrong. But that was not the question. The question was: Shall this wrong be continued? In the establishment of the work we were called to new life and new songs.

Is this still the design of the law giver? Don't say you live beyond the law, for no man can get by the law of Christ. If the work as designed has not been done in latter years, who shall do it? The efforts and acts of those who in Utah have claimed to, have brought

REPROACH UPON ITS VERY NAME,

Because the faith has not been taught by them as it was given to the church. One of the faults found with us is that the world pats us on the back, and we are not therefore of God. They were in earlier days received by liberal minded men, as we are now. The reason the world receives us is that we carry the spirit of the gospel which Joseph and Hyrum bore. He asked his hearers to consider these things; to stop long enough to let the cry of "wolf" die out of their ears, and hear something better.

HE APPEALED TO THE ELDERS

To resume their work where they had dropped it years ago, and break loose from the spirit of isolation which had so long bound them. Infidelity is rife in the world, with able men its advocates, and there are urgent calls for the bearers of Christ's plans, to go into the field. He appealed to them in the face of the impending crisis to give ear, and to take into consideration the injunction to obey the law; to join in the march of religious liberty which must go forth from the west, and which is the design of Christ's real work. It is your duty under the law, and you will have to answer for its discharge. You can not be punished in the day of judgment by proxy, neither rewarded. The prophet had said that so long as grass grew or water ran, he or his posterity should be found pleading the cause of injured innocence, and in fulfillment of it, the speaker was now pleading with those who had been misled, to return to their faith in its purity.

WELL ANSWERED.

A man in one of the boxes at the conclusion of the discourse asked: "Is there anything plural that can enter the kingdom of heaven?"

Mr. Smith replied: "I am not the gate keeper, and can not answer that.'

The man in the box then said: "Give us the law by which a prophet is called to preside over the Latter Day Church?" Mr. Smith answered: "In ancient times prophets ordained kings by virtue of revelation; later a prophet was chosen president by revelation, and approved by the people; but a prophet is not necessarily a president. Is that satisfactory?"

"Hardly," responded the man in the box; but he subsided.

Services on Wednesday evening in the Opera House were then announced, on which occasion Mr. Smith would again preach, and the meeting was dismissed with benediction by Elder R. J. Anthony.

Conserence Minutes.

DES MOINES DISTRICT.

Conference of the Des Moines District convened at Boonesboro, Iowa, on June 5th, 1885, at 8 p. m. for preaching, and upon motion Bro. W. C. Nirk occupied the stand. On the 6th, 9 a.m., session opened by singing and prayer, Wm. C. Nirk presiding, John Sayer secretary, assisted by R. Etzenhouser. A committee was chosen on permanent organization, and a committee on credentials.

Branch Reports.-Newton, 48 members, including 3 Elders, 3 Priests, 3 Teachers, 2 Deacons, 4 baptized, 2 ordinations. Edenville, 93 members, including 5 Elders, 3 Priests, 2 Teachers, 3 baptisms, 2 received by letter. Sheridan, 48 members, 1 Elder, 2 Priests, 1 Teacher, 1 Deacon, 2 baptized. Des Moines, 86 members, 4 Elders, 2 Priests, 3 Teachers, 2 Deacons, 6 removed, 1 received by letter, 2 marriages. Boonesboro, 65 members, 4 Elders, 3 Teachers, 4 Priests, 2 Deacons, 1 baptized, 2 expelled. Des Moines Valley, 58 members, 2 Elders, 2 Priests, 1 Teacher, 1 Deacon, 1 baptized, 6 received, 1 removed. Book Agent's report read and received.

Elder's Reports.—George Walker, J. S. Roth, (baptized 5, administered to the sick with good results), Moses Houghton, R. Etzenhouser, (held a series of mettings and opened a new place in Alpha, Grundy county, Missouri), I. N. White, (baptized 3), Brn. J. P. Knox and Wm. McBurney reported. Wm. C. Nirk had visited all the branches in the district and finds them doing as well as could be expected. Wm. Thompson baptized 1; John X. Davis reported. Priest Merrill reported. Teachers, A. Freal and F. A. Brown reported.

Programe of the meetings; on the 6th, at 10 p. m., business meeting, also at 2 p. m.; and at 8 p. m. preaching. Sunday the 7th, at 9 a. m. prayer meeting; at 11 a. m. preaching; at 2 p. m. sacrament; and at 7:30 p. m. preaching.

Resolved, That Bro. J. A. Newlin of Viola, be ordained to the office of an Elder; That, in the opinion of this conference, that any individual who refuses to be sustained as an officer of church or branch is inelligible for other work; That there be a grove meeting, beginning at 10 o'clock, at Jones' Grove in Poweshiek, county; That the president and ministry of the district, be a committee to arrange for a two day's grove meeting, and fulfill the demands made; That we sustain Wm. C. Nirk as district president.

Preaching Saturday by J. S. Roth, assisted by W. Thompson; Sunday 9 a. m., prayer meeting; at 11 a. m. preaching by R. Etzenhouser; sacrament at 2 p. m., and preaching at 7: 30 p. m. by Wm. Thompson.

Resolved, That we sustain the spiritual authorities of the church in righteousness; That we sustain John Sayer district secretary.

Bishop's Agent reports receiving $33.75, and paid to Bishop $7, on hand $26.75.

The time for next conference was left with the district president to be announced through the Herald.

KENT AND ELGIN DISTRICT.

A conference of the above district was held with the Ridgetown Branch, Ontario, in the Town Hall, May 30th and 31st, 1885. J. H. Lake president, and R. Coburn clerk.

Branch Reports.—Petrolia 22; I baptized, I marriage. Ridgetown 21; 2 received by letter, I died. Howard 16; 3 baptized, I died, I marriage. Blenheim 39; 2 died. Zone, report was referred back for correction.

James Robb, Bishop's Agent, reported up to December 31st, 1884. Balance in hand last report $59.03; received $11.55; paid out $70.58. Arthur Leverton, Jas. H. Tyrrell, and Samuel Brown were appointed to examine the report and audit the Bishop's Agent's book.

Elders J. N. Simmons, (baptized 3), J. Robb, A. Leverton, S. Brown, A. Vickery, R. Coburn. Priests:—John Taylor, P. McBrayne, A. McKenzie, (baptized 6), and J. H. Tyrrell, reported.

The auditing committee found the report and books of the Bishop's Agent correct, but that he had paid out $1 contrary to the instructions of the Bishopric. On motion the reports was received and the committee discharged

Resolved, That H. Leatherdale, P. McBrayne, and Asa Vickery constitute a committee to go and see the Lindsley meeting house, and if they deem it wise that they be empowered to raise means to repair it, first by getting what they can from the neighborhood it is in, and then appealing to the branches for the balance.

Resolved, That brethren Lake and Leverton be appointed a committee to inquire into the conduct of some members who have left the district in an unbecoming manner.

By separate motions the following officers were sustained: J. H. Lake, president of the Canada Mission; A Leverton, president of the district; J. Rubb, Bishop's Agent; and Richard Coburn, clerk.

Resolved. That we sustain the spiritual authorities of the church in righteousness, also the action of the General Conference in regard to the sacred books of the church.

At seven p. m., preaching by Bro. J. H. Lake. After preaching, the following report was presented and read: We your committee recommend that Wm. G. Gammage and Joseph Gammage be published in the Herald as in transgression, for leaving the Howard Branch and the Dominion of Canada in default of payment of their honest debts; and we also recommend that all branches of this district having members leaving honest debts behind them unpaid, be likewise published; and we further recommend that one year after said publication, such members, if making no restitution, shall be dealt with in accordance to the laws of God.

On motion, the report was received and adopted and the committee discharged.

Sunday morning prayer and testimony and sacrament meeting. Preaching by A. Leverton in the forenoon, by J. H. Lake in the afternoon and evening.

Adjourned to meet in the Blenheim Branch, October 3d, 1885.

TENNESSEE AND KENTUCKY DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Eagle Creek Branch, the first Saturday and Sunday in June [6th and 7th], 1885. Peter B. Seaton, president; S. L. Cooper secretary.

Branch Reports.—Eagle Creek 19; including I Elder I Teacher I Deacon. Foundry Branch 14; including I Elder I Deacon. Farmington, no change since last report.

Reports.—Elders W. H. Griffin and P. B. Seaton reported in person. Teacher S. L. Cooper and Deacon Frank Robards, in person.

The authorities of the Church were sustained in righteousness. Preaching on Sunday by Peter B. Seaton, followed by W. H. Griffin. Sacrament and testimeny meeting in the evening.

Adjourned to meet at the Farmington Branch, the second Saturday and Sunday in October, 1885.

SOUTH-EASTERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Brush Creek, Illinois, June 13th, 1885; I. A. Morris president, John F. Thomas clerk, pro tem. The following branches reported: Brush Creek 83 members; I. A. Morris, president. Dry Fork 31 members, John F. Thomas president; Alma 12 members, P. Brown president.

Miscellaneous.

MARRIED.

BACON—GITHENS.—At Philadelphia, Pensylvania, June 24th, 1885, by Elder John Gilbert, Bro. Hosea H. Bacon to Sr. Katie B. Githens, both of Philadelphia. May joy and prosperity attend them.

DIED.

CLEVELAND.—At Portage, Manistee county, Michigan, May 19th, 1885, Brookfield, son of Robert and Dora Cleveland, at the age of 9 months and 21 days. He was blessed by Elder George Cleveland in Hersey Branch, Michigan.

Smith.—At St. Louis, Mo., June 19th, 1885, of cancer of the breast and general debility, sister Ann Gibson Smith, wife of John G. Smith. She was born at Dalston, Cumberland county, England, September 12th, 1841; and was baptized there January 14th, 1855, by Elder John Dalling, and confirmed by Elder Wm. Gibson. She was married at Carlisle, England, April 8th, 1862, to John G. Smith, and with her husband emigrated to Utah same year. Being dissatisfied with the teachings and practices there, with her family she moved east in 1870, and settled in St. Louis, Mo. She joined the Reorganized Church in St. Louis, June 27th, 1871, being baptized by Elder George Hayward. She was a kind, affectionate wife, and the mother of ten children, eight of whom survive her. Peace be to her.

Madigan.—At Daggett, San Bernardino county, California, June 19th, 1885, Sister Francis E. Madigan, wife of Mr. Richard E. Madigan, and daughter of R. R. Dana. Deceased was born at Sunol Glen, Cal., April 6th, 1865, and at her death was aged 20 years, two months, and 13 days. She left a frail little boy baby, ten days old. Since her revoval by letter from Newport Branch, she had not joined any other branch of the church; hence was a scattered member. But her letter of removal is still in the possession of her father. She died without a struggle, just gave a sigh, and her Spirit departed to mingle with a loving mother, and other relations gone on before. A loving husband, father, two sisters, one brother and many other relations and friends deeply mourn her loss, and will miss her presence in the family group.

WHISKY is good in its own place. There is nothing like whisky in the world for preserving a man when he is dead, but it is one of the worst things in the world for preserving a man when he is living. If you want to keep a dead man, put him in whisky; if you want to kill a living man, put whisky into him.

Teach self-denial and make its practice pleasurable, and you create for the world a destiny more sublime than ever issued from the brain o the wildest dreamer."—Walter Scott.

GETTING SQUARE.

There are many people, who when injured or wronged by others, propose to "get square with them" by some method of retaliation. The wisdom of this course does not seem apparent. may get square with a mean man by making myself as mean as he is. I may get square with an ugly man, by making myself as ugly as he is. I may get square with a dishonest man, by myself becoming dishonest. I may get even with a drunkard, by making myself as drunk as he is.

By this method we have two wrongs instead one; and two wrongs neither of which is likely to make a right. It does not profit us to get square with those who have abused us or misused us. Why need we descend to their level? "Be not overcome with evil, but overcome evil with good."-Sel.

A KANSAS CITY court has made a decision that commends itself, we think, to the good sense of the community. The court had before it a professional spiritualist "medium" that has been so clearly proved to be a fraud, it was thought he was subject to a criminal prosecution. The evidence was clear as could be, but the court held that no proper action of the kind proposed could hold against the man, whom the prosecution professed all the time to have believed to be an impostor. That is, when fools venture their money on such persons they have no one to reproach but themselves. The person who can be fooled by spiritualistic seances deserves to be taken in and done for. We have a case of nearly the same kind in St. Louis, for there are as many simpletons here as anywhere else.

THE gospel in its power surmounts all disadvantages and lives in spite of all its enemies and their malignant misrepresentations of its professors. It spreads over the earth converting the pagan peoples of the most wicked and depraved nations. It is so glorious in its divinity and is so adapted to the crying wants of our ruined race, that it can survive the infirmities of its friends and the opposition of all its foes.

THE NEWS' REFUSAL.

From the following papers it will be seen that President Toseph Smith has written a reply to a repeated attack made upon him by the Deseret News, entitled, "Sacrilegious and Hypocritical," (which will be found in HERALD for the 4th inst., pages 433-4), and that the said News refuses to publish his reply for reasons given. When the reader has noted well the points made by President Smith and his brother Alexander, they will readily perceive that the real reasons why the News managers will not publish, lies in the fact that they are afraid, or ashamed, or both, to print a plain, full, and direct refutation of some of their statements, and a damaging exposure of their bad logic and worse doctrine. They will not, if they can avoid it, let the light on these matters come to the knowledge of their readers.

Well did Jesus say, "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be manifest, that they are wrought in God." These Brighamite leaders manifestly fear the scalpel and crucible of open, free criticism and discussion.

JOSEPH SMITH, Esq., Dear Sir:-You have tendered a correspondence with a request to publish in the News. In the event of your desire not being complied with, you wish a statement of reasons, in writing for the declination. Please find your article enclosed, as it is respectfully declined. Some of the reasons for its not being accorded space in the News, are:

1st. The article is somewhat elaborate and the space at our command is limited.

2d. The matter of your production is far from

3d. We would perhaps see some necessity for giving you an opportunity to open a controversy with us in our own columns if you had no medium at your disposal through which to reply to anything we may state regarding your public action or utterances. You have ample opportunities of delivering your views from the rostrums and in addition to the Journal of which you are editor, since your advent here the Salt Lake Tribune has, for obvious reasons, suddenly assumed the role of organ of the "Reorganized Church."

4th. Aside from the foregoing reasons, we do not care to open a discussion of the kind you desire with a gentleman occupying the position you do who insists on "fencing" a proposition to the effect that the Prophet Joseph Smith had but one wife, in the face of overwhelming proof to the contrary, easy of access.

5th. We are in hopes that some day you will be convinced of your error and change your attitude, and it would not be satisfactory to you in a future day, to have to meet statements in the church literature of which you might discover good reasons to feel ashamed.

6th. You may perhaps proclaim that this is all very illiberal on our part, but it is at least quite consistent with common sense-seeing you are anxious to enter upon a controversy-that we require you to fire your polemic guns from your own batteries.

7th. This position is asumed and statement made without the slightest tinge of personal ill feeling towards yourself. Even if you were not the son of a man whose memory we revere above that of all others, we would lessen our self-respect if we could entertain toward you any sentiment other than kindly, however widely we may differ from you, religiously or otherwise, Respectfully, John Nicholson.

EDITOR DESERET NEWS:

Sir:—In your issue for June 20th, you reproduce an editorial of your own for April 24th, in reply to one of mine in the SAINTS' HERALD for April 18th.

By repeating this "Sacrilegious and Hypocritical" article of yours, upon the occasion of the visit of my brother and myself to this city, you have made the attack a personal one, deserving a personal reply from me. That reply I herewith hand you, with the request that, if you decline to publish it, you will give me your reasons in writing, accompanying the return of this paper.

The question presented by me in the article so severely censured by you is this: "Would Pres. John Taylor have the courage to say," &c. The reason assigned by me for asking the question was stated by me clearly, that is, if "God should speak like himself, as he is revealed in the three standard works,—Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants,"-then, in that case, the tenor of his communication would be like that supposed. Would Pres. John Taylor have the courage to deliver such a message, if received?

It is easy to answer this question, Yes, or No, without drifting into the use of adjectives which can only hurt him who uses them.

Let me quote a sentence or two from each book:

God said:

"Therefore, shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh."—Gen. 2:24.

Tesus said:

"For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh."-Matt. 19:5.

The prophet Jacob said:

"Hearken unto the word of the Lord; For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none."— Book of Jacob, chap. 2, par. 6, Book of Mormon.

Christ said:

"Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and NONE ELSE." "Marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore, it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made."-Doctrine and Covenants, sections 42 and 49, (February and March, 1831).

You have here the word of the Lord, statements made by Him, by Himself and His accredited agents, in different places, at different times, to different peoples, under differing conditions. How can it possibly be "sacrilegious" for me to have supposed that if God should now speak to any man, (Pres. John Taylor, or any other), on the same subject on which He had already expressed Himself, that such statement would be in tenor and substance like what He had before spoken.

To commit sacrilege is to treat with contumely the person, attribute, and word of God; or to use sacred things for base and selfish purposes. I have not done this. I wrote in deliberate earnestness under the conviction that, should God speak upon so important a thing as that under consideration, in a crisis so grave as the one you and all other believers in Mormonism are facing, He would speak as He is revealed in the books.

Which is the greater sacrilege; for a man to stand before his fellow men avowing belief in the books named, therefore pledged to belief in the statements of God's will in the passages I have quoted, and then to set those statements aside as not being expressive of God's will now, because he believed that God had given a later expression of His will, which expression directly contradicts the first and more numerous statements, two of them, (that of February and March, 1831), being given directly to the people which you and the organ you edit claim to represent, and which one of your chief and ablest apostles stated in 1869 was "God's holy law;" or for me to say that God spake as those books revealed Him, and that if he should now speak He would speak in harmony, direct and certain, with the revealments of Himself on that subject found in those books which I most sincerely believe? Pray tell which is the greater sacrilege!

Bogus coin is detected by comparison with coin that is genuine. "Bogus revelation" must be detected in the same way. When I wrote a supposed revelation, I gave it to the readers as a supposition; and this suppositious revelation agrees in the spirit of the thing supposed with the revelations which you will not have the courage to say, or write are not genuine, and which I have already quoted. I did not introduce it "privily" as a genuine revelation from God; I did not keep it under cover for months out of the channels through which it should pass to the church, nor away from the light where it might be placed beside the known genuine revelations on the subject treated of, fearful lest it might be detected. I placed it before the readers as a supposition; and it is not a little strange that you should have noticed it at all, or attempted to answer it, and so signally have failed to discover the real question and its force, or to have so carelessly evaded it.

Did the present president of the Church you represent ever have a genuine revelation on the subject of plural marriage by which other revelations on the same subjuct could be tested? If so, will you please give it in comparison with what you so bitterly denounce?

If the sacrilige and hypocrisy of the suppositious revelation were so apparent, why did you take such pains to place it twice before the readers of the News, thus giving it so wide a circulation, when, had you let it alone in the Herald so comparatively few would have ever seen it? Why did you make the second insertion of it so direct a personal attack? The effort you have made in regard to it shows that there was force in the suggestion, and that you feared its effect; or else you have wasted time and talent in fencing against a faulty blow.

The Lord did command Abraham to put Hagar away, and he did it. The law given to the church was given before the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. The revelation on polygamy came long afterward. There is not a line in the article to which you reply that states that Joseph and Hyrum Smith had or had not plural wives. There is nothing in the quotation you make that "assumes" the "position," "absurd" or sound, that "certain standard works did not teach, under proper conditions, the rightfulness of Patriarchal marriage." That statement by you was evolved from your inner consciousness that the books referred to did not so teach. No claim is made by me in the article referred to, that "Joseph and Hyrum Smith did not practice" the sort of marriage named, as any one can see who will read it as it is.

And as for Mr. H. B. Clawson, he must speak for himself only. I specifically state, that it was not "well understood by both (he and I) that the prophet had a number of plural wives." I did not know then, nor do I know now, that he had any other wife than my mother; and for Mr. Clawson or any other man to reiterate a statement that I did so know, is unbecoming.

If Mr. Clawson knew what he says was so well understood, why did he say to an Inter-Ocean reporter, as published in the Salt Lake Daily Herald, February 1st, 1882:

"Polygamy at that time was unknown among those of the Mormon faith. It was not, therefore, the practice of polygamy that caused them to be driven from Illinois in the most bitter season of the year."

This was in answer to the statement of Schuyler Colfax, that the Mormons were driven from the state of Illinois, made at an anti-polygamy meeting held in Chicago.

Why did Mr. George Q. Cannon say in a sermon delivered June 11th, 1871:

"It was not on account of our belief in this [polygamy] that we have been hated. Joseph and Hyrum Smith were slain in Carthage jail, and hundreds of persons were persecuted to the death previous to the church having any knowledge of this doctrine?"

Why did Pres. John Taylor deny its existence and practice in 1850? Why did Messrs. John T. Caine; John W. Taylor and Mr. Cannon, Jun., take to President Cleveland a protest, adopted by a mass meeting of the people whom you represent, in which protest the statement is made that the public authorization of plural marriage dates in 1852?

Alexander Smith, my brother, states that no woman, or women, "confronted him claiming, in his presence, their wifely relationship to his father;" therefore, your statements to this effect is not a "fact." If such statement was made by such women, it was not in his presence, nor to his knowledge. I give you his own statement below:

"In reply to the statement as made in the Evening News, that 'certain women appeared before me and bore testimony that they were my father's plural wives.' I have simply to say that no such circumstance ever occurred; no such testimony was ever borne in my hearing by any women, anywhere. In 1868, when my brother David and myself were holding meeting in the Independence Hall, in this city, I was informed that such women were sent to my meeting under the escort of D. W. Huntington, for the express purpose of bearing such testimony. They attended the meeting, but their hearts failed them, or else they forgot their mission; for not one word of testimony was uttered by them, in my hearing, in reference to my fathers having other wives than one. А. Н. Ѕмітн.

For the journalistic courtesy extended to me in noticing my visit to the city, and the attention you have called to my efforts here, please accept my thanks.

Yours respectfully,
JOSEPH SMITH.
SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 24th, 1885.
Address: Box 1046.

LEADERS IN CONTRAST.

JOSEPH SMITH was had before the tribunals of the law nearly as many times as Paul received "stripes." How many times have Presidents John Taylor, George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith been served with process to appear? Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith's hesitancy to avoid arrest at the time of their murder, was not caused by fear of the result of a trial at law. or the punishment due for an infraction of the law; but was, that just such an occurence as did take place would transpire. It was not because the law had any fetters or dungeons for them; but because they felt an assurance that lawless violence could not, or would not be restrained. The result verified their premonitions.

What is it that Pres. John Taylor fears?

He stands in no danger of personal violence from a mob in his own city. The court is but a trifle in number. The city and its police are friendly to him. The officers of the United States are men sufficiently resolute to make all requisite efforts to secure men who are before the court from unlawful force, and they have shown no disposition to do otherwise than to enforce the laws. He is an old man, well stricken in years; and this entitles him to sympathy, and would secure it with the court, jury and spectators, and would secure him from lawless partisan malice.

George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith are not old men. They could stand the worry of a trial, and the rigors of an imprisonment if the examination should so result, and they could earn the title of consistency by suffering for their religion. But they answer "We will not."

MARRIAGE CONTRACTS.

"All legal contracts of marriage made before a person is baptized into this church should be held sacred and fulfilled."—Doc. and Cov. sec. 112 (109), par. 4.

This declaration was made by the church when the Book of Covenants was accepted and endorsed as a law unto the church in 1835, and is found in all the editions of the book from that date until the Utah church, moved thereto by the close attack made by us upon the "chain cable" -polygamy, took it out of their book, and inserted the so-called revelation on plural marriage. We have not yet learned that the Utah Church by a vote of its membership has ever authorized such change; nor have we learned by what authority it was so removed, and are therefore left to the inference that Pres. Brigham Young, finding it inconvenient to meet, or for the Elders to meet, ordered the one taken out and the other inserted.

The statement itself will bear looking at.

"ALL LEGAL CONTRACTS."

This means that all marriages contracted under the laws of the different nations and states when the parties lived and were married, are legal, according to law, because the first clause in the section says: "According to the custom of all civilized nations, marriage is regulated by laws and ceremonies." This fixes the character of the marriage contract performed before persons are baptized into the church as legal. Illegal contracts of marriage are of no force, and are void, and may be of two sorts: the one where the persons can not legally contract, by reason of not being of proper age, or because of other, or former contracts, from which they have not been legally discharged; the other where the marriage was not solemnized by those holding legal authority, or without due warrant and consent of the statutes.

"SHOULD BE HELD SACRED."

The word sacred means "made holy," "possessing the highest title to respect, reverence, or veneration." And that which is thus made holy is "not to be profaned, or violated," is to be held "inviolable." Its synonyms are "holy," "divine," "hallowed."

The sense of the statement that those contracts entered into before persons are baptized into the church should be held sacred, is that they are to be kept according to the genius and spirit of the usages, customs and institutions of the nation or state, where made. It is under these conditions that the laws and ceremonies of marriages are authorized by law, statute enactments usually being but the crystalized public opinion of the people. The rules of the church, the faith of the church as found in the revelation of February and March, 1831: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and cleave unto her and none else;" and "It is lawful that he [man] should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh," are in striking harmony with the sacred character which the statement gives to the covenant of marriage, as affirmed in the section under consideration.

The formula given to the church for the celebration of marriage expresses the nature of the contract so far as sole marital companionship is concerned. "You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other, and from all others, during your lives." And marks and defines what is meant by the word contract, or "contracts."

"AND FULFILLED."

That is, all the conditions of the contract as made should be observed; and the good faith in which it was entered into should be kept until the end of the term for which it was entered into should have been reached; and this is at the end of life for one, or both.

This acknowledgement of the holy nature of the marriage contract, thus made by the church at so early a period in its history, and so oft repeated by endorsement and republication, is a fruitful field for contemplation. In the light of it let the reader look at the claim made that Joseph and Hyrum both violated their marriage contracts; and the now admitted fact that Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball and many others, did disregard the holy character of the contract into which they entered before being baptized into the church; and see if the Reorganized Church is not thrice warranted, before God, angels, and men, in refusing to accept the so-called revelation, that in its terms justifies such a sacrilegious violation of the divinely instituted marriage bond, so directly given to the church, and so solemnly endorsed by them. To accept such a revelation as being from Christ, or the Father, in the face of all the teaching of the books, is to our mind to make God to be not only a covenant breaker himself, but to teach truce-breaking, decietfulness, and treachery; for he says, "I am God, I change not."

Those who now so strenuously insist that Congress should not now legislate against polygamous marriages, because that it would be making laws "impairing the validity of contracts;" would do well to take the view herein set forth into consideration. For if Congress which "in its sphere is as supreme as God is in his sphere, ought not to make laws impairing the validity of contracts, how much less should the Almighty not issue edicts establishing contracts and making their character sacred and holy, and there after issue other edicts disanulling and impairing those contracts. Think of it ye wiseacres of the valley in the tops of the mountains.

OSTRACISM.

Mr. Orson P. Arnold, of Salt Lake City, Utah, a good Mormon, superintendent of the street railways of the city, and a man of note in other directions, was one of those whom the United States prosecuted under the Edmunds law. Upon his appearance before Judge Zane, in open court he pleaded guilty to the charge made against him, and promised the court that he would thereafter obey the laws of the land as a good citizen should. This was very distasteful to his fellow church men. They have denounced his course as being unworthy and cowardly. The inevitable result will follow. The methods of coercion, heretofore successfully employed to keep men in the toils will be brought to bear upon Mr. Arnold, until he will yield to the pressure, and refusing to keep his promise to the court, will return to his practices against the law, or the reins of priestly domination so tensely drawn over him will snap in the hands that hold them, and he will become "apostate" to the church whose leaders counselled, directed, and encouraged his offense.

Already the process of compulsion by ostracism has begun. At a late election of officers for the office of director in "Zion's Benefit Building Association," Mr. Arnold was the victim of deliberate rebuff. A caucus was held a few nights before the election, and Mr. Arnold's name was agreed upon as one of those to be placed on the ticket being printed with the others. On the day of the election the brethren went back on Mr. Arnold, and he was defeated.

Mr. Arnold's offense for which he is now being ostracised by his brethren is this. He was taught that to marry more than one wife was authorized by revelation from God. He was doubtless counselled to take another wife, and did so. The law laid its hand upon him. He then, exercising his personal right to direct his own course of conduct, acknowledged his fault and proposed to stop offending. He neither evaded the process of service, nor resorted to doubtful evasions. He did not choose to lie, or perjure himself on the stand. He had sufficient manhood to take the punishment of his offense in his own person. He was not so selfish as to wish to escape, by suffering the occasion of his offending, his plural wife, to stand between him and the rod of punishment. He had enough delicacy of feeling not to want to see the women folks of his house brought into court and his domestic affairs made the object of public sight and comment. His course is to be commended. It evinces an honesty of purpose that goes far to show that as a member of the church to which he belonged, he had innocently followed the counsel of those whom he esteemed as leaders. It also seems to evince a sufficient amount of reserved moral power to bring Mr. Arnold out of the entangling alliance with legal and moral wrong doing into which he and others have been betrayed. It points the way for other men to pursue who, like him, have been enmeshed in the church transgression. It is a plain and direct way to conditions of safety, so far as the operations of the law and the courts are concerned. He who will avail himself of the example that Mr. Arnold has set, will find himself free from surveillance, and need not to fear a United States deputy marshal.

But for such men the church whip will be swung, and the spiteful snap of its cracker will be "apostate." This in the instance of Mr. Arnold would mean that it was apostacy to abandon the practice that the law of the land had declared specifically to be a crime; and that the Lord declared was "abominable." It means that Mr. Arnold is suspected of being weak in submission to counsel to disregard the laws of the Nation, which God suffered to be raised up on the land for the purpose of developing his church, which from the beginning had no need to break the law of the land."

The course pursued by Mr. Arnold must find imitators; for it can not but strike many who think, that if there was any great merit in standing by the peculiar system under stripes, then the leading counselors and abettors in fastening the system upon the polity of the church, ought not to deprive themselves by flight of the privilege of obtaining the merit and glory which they promise to others.

It may be well that Presidents Taylor, Cannon, and Smith should be told and remember that there are some few, and possibly many, to whom the absence of the shepherds, in the endeavor to avoid the storm that their opposition to law has raised, is very damaging. It is damaging in two ways; one is, it hurts the sense of honor and respect in which leaders should be held, it wounds the hearts that have trusted, and destroys confidence in the men: the other is, that it tends to lead men to think upon the subject itself, and weakens the faith and confidence of the people in the system as the result of revelation from God; no matter who practiced it at the first, or through whom it reached the people.

It is almost a foregone conclusion, that if men could be brought face to face with the document, called a revelation, and the plain provisions of the word of God, the fateful decision of every one would be in favor of the word as found in the laws given to the church at the beginning.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Under date of the 7th inst., Elder I. N. White writes from Clinton, Missouri:

"I hope the Advocate will be continued. Long may it live! The Herald is just excellent under the present official regime. Joseph's visit to Utah is bearing glorious fruit. The little Advocate swelled the tide, and I trust Joseph will (through the helping hand of God) clear up the stream from the rubbish that has so long darkened its surface. I do not remember reading Heralds with more feeling and interest than the two last. I read, wept, and prayed. May God be with our western missionaries. I am trying to loosen my hands so I can take the field in the fall. I feel the work needs all the available Elders now, if ever. Do you know of any good brother or friend with from $1,500 to $3,000, who has some experience in mercantile business and wants to engage in it? If so, tell him to write to White Brothers, Clinton, Missouri, as they want a good partner to start a branch store which will greatly assist to loosen me for the ministry."

Bro. A. H. Parson, writing from Chase, Rice County, Kansas, the 5th, inst., says: "I have been laboring here for ten days. This is fifteen miles southwest of the center of the State. Prejudice is very strong against us here, but the efforts put forth will help to remove it. We got the promise of space in the town paper setting forth our faith, and some of the differences between us and the Brighamites. Am stopping with Bro. and Sr. Lush, formerly of the Keystone (Iowa) Branch. They are good Saints, and have good influence with the people."

Elder W. H. Kelley writing from Coldwater, Michigan, the 6th inst., says:

"We had one of the best and most spiritual conferences here the 27th to 29th ult., that I ever attended. Everybody seemed cheered."

WALLED IN-SECLUSION.

THE visitor to Salt Lake City, who has seen the fine buildings elsewhere erected for public use and ornamentation, both in city and country, is very unfavorably impressed with the enclosures around the public buildings and their character in that city. This is notably true of the Temple, Tabernacle, and Assembly Hall. These enclosures are high stone walls, with thick, dense gates. The only possible reason that can be assigned it seems to us, has long ceased to exist, that of a hostile invasion of savages, if any such danger ever existed. If the enclosures were for the purpose of repelling idlers, and to keep them from intruding upon the labors of the workmen, an ordinary fence that would not prevent the public gaze, with police regulations similar to those in force in cities with regard to parks, gardens, and public buildings generally, would suffice.

The Assembly Hall is one of the neatest and finest public buildings we ever saw; but it stands in a corner of the Temple block, hidden by a wall too high to scale and too thick to see through. There is no place from which even its outside may be seen to advantage, except one is inside the Temple yard. Many visitors who would like to see both the Temple and the Hall and Tabernacle without troubling any official, or workman, or intruding upon the people by going inside pass by disappointed, fearful lest they may intrude and be liable to censure. The Hall and Tabernacle are completed; and the wall might be removed from the top to the water table, and a neat iron fence, or railing be put on it that would add to, rather than hurt the general effect. "A thing of beauty is a joy forever," is a trite and true saying; and the people who built the Assembly Hall, need not to be ashamed to let it be seen by the passer by.

If the wall was erected to insure the buildings from malicious mischief-makers and vandals, those who erected it ought to know that such precaution is useless. Did any one really desire to destroy or deface the buildings, it could be done in spite of the wall. The beauty, utility, and grandeur of public buildings are the strongest protection from destruction at the hands of men; destruction by elemental causes, no walls can avert.

The man who would injure a building like either of those in the Temple Block, would be unfit to be at large. We fully believe that the Latter Day Saints have no enemies so depraved that they would counsel, or sanction so mean, so despicable a malice as the injury or destruction of such buildings would be.

Of course it will be said: "Mr. Herald man, it is none of your business." True, most wise Daniel; but as a citizen of the country, and interested in the material development and prosperity of Utah, as well as other parts of the republic, we answer that we should like to see the wall that hide the Assembly Hall, especially, removed; that the sojourner in the Utah "City of the Saints" might see the structure as it is. We express this desire without asserting that it is any business of ours; or desire to dictate to them whose business it is, it being matter of wonder to us why the buildings are shut out of sight by so unsightly a wall.

WE read in the Willoughby (Ohio) Independent, for the 3d inst., that "Bishop Snow and Brigham Young, Jr. passed through El Paso, Texas, a few days ago, en route to the City of Mexico, to negotiate for the purchase of large tracts of land in the Mexican Republic for the occupation of Mormon colonies."

Whoever among the Mormons are deluded into such an emigration scheme, will help to illustrate and fulfil the predictions of Joseph the Seer concerning the "rebellious": "Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind; and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days; and the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land; for, verily, I say that the rebellious are not of the blood of Ephraim, wherefore they shall be plucked out."—Doc. & Cov., revelation given Sept., 1831, 7th par. And it is further predicted:—

"Therefore, if that salt of the earth [the Saints] lose its savor, behold it is thence forth good for nothing, only to be cast out and trodden under the feet of men."—Doc. & Cov., rev. Dec., 1833, par. 5.

The Utah Mormons should remember, that when God rejected Israel he sent them away out of their land of promise, and they became "outcasts." This seems likely to be repeated in the case of some of the Utah Mormons.

THE COLDWATER MEETING.

THE following from the Coldwater, (Mich.), Courier of the 4th inst., is but an added evidence of the forward movement of our church work, and of the fact that God is "working with" his Saints and ministers wherever they are actively and righteously engaged in gospel teaching and holy living. Good tidings are coming in from all quarters; the Lord is reviving his work, and the Saints should rejoice and press forward with gladness.

Editor Courier:-The conference held by the Reformed Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, five miles south-east of Coldwater, on the 27th, 28th and 29th of last month, was attended by representatives from Galien, Marcellus, Hartford, Diamondale, Clear Lake, Lancing, Detroit, etc. The weather was most favorable for such a meeting. The business meetings were held in open session, and those holding various religious beliefs were in attendance, from curiosity or otherwise, as well as the saints. A lunch was prepared on the ground for all who were inclined to refresh the physical man, and a happy social feeling prevailed throughout the entire meeting. There was a throng at the preaching services held on Saturday evening and at the three services held on Sunday to hear Elders C. Scott and H. Rathbun. Pretty much all shades of belief were represented and the speakers were listened to with intense interest. Three were baptized during the meeting. On Monday the 20th, at nine o'clock a. m., the closing session commenced, which lasted until two p. m. The unfinished business was completed and those who had been baptized were confirmed by the laying on of hands after the old apostolic order. A number not of the faith were present at this meeting also, among them a United Brethren preacher, who attended all of the meetings with a scrutinizing interest. A number of the sick were anointed with oil and prayed for with the laying on of the hands of the elders, for their recovery. The meeting was resolved into a prayer and testimony meeting, then, one speaking and praying at a time, and the other's listening with earnest interest. The gifts of prophecy and tongues were exercised by some of the members, and the interpretation of tongues were given. Whether it was fancy or fanaticism, truth, error or fact, the Saints were lit up by some kind of supernatural inspirational feeling and manifestation, all confirming to them, and was at least a puzzling enigma to those not of their faith. Altogether this was an extraordinary session with the Saints.

Of this meeting the Angola (Ind.) Herald, of the 1st inst., has this among other things, to say:—

The Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints assembled in semi-annual conference five miles south-east of Coldwater last Saturday, and continued in session by frequent adjournments until Monday two o'clock p. m., when they adjourned to meet at Clear Lake some time in October next. It was our pleasure to attend throughout the exercises. They are a body of 35,000 members, 1,950 preachers, thirty appointed missionaries in the field. Their annual fund disbursed among the various clergymen the past year was $14,000. Hitherto their number of missionaries was ninety-six. Their Bishop, residing at Galien, Mich., was present and gave the above report. He also gave an able and instructive talk upon the subject of tithing, which was interesting indeed. He will soon visit the Pacific coast in the interest of the body, and work up this subject. He has been postmaster at Galien for thirty-one consecutive years, and is now fifty-nine years old. His father was a minister in the times of the first Joseph Smith, and preached the doctrine for thirty-three years. Mr. Blakeslee, the present Bishop, is affable, agreeable and approachable in his manners, and evidently has the cause at heart, having given it much study. * * * We were entertained during the above mentioned session by Samuel Stroh in a royal way. He utterly refused compensation. We witnessed the anointing with oil and prayer for the eradication of disease, the Elders, three in number, laying their hands on the subject's head. Quite a number were thus administered to. Before using the oil they in a public way consecrate it by prayer; two spoke with tongues, viz: Elders Kelley and Rathbun. The social meeting Monday and finishing of business lasted four hours. We saw three confirmed, by laying on of hands, for the reception of the Holy Ghost. All the sessions were entertaining, and we came away knowing more than before. A kinder, more open-hearted and hospitable people it was never our lot to be among.

FORTY-EIGHT LAWSUITS.

THE late Brigham Young, in an address delivered July 11th, 1852, at Great Salt Lake, published in the Deseret News and also in the Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 41-2, says:

"I know for myself that Joseph Smith was the subject of forty-eight law-suits, and the most of them I witnessed with my own eyes; but not one action could ever be made to bear against him. No law, or constitutional right, did he ever violate. He was innocent and virtuous; he kept the law of his country, and lived above it; out of forty-eight law-suits, (and I was with him in the most of them), not one charge could be substantiated against him. He was pure, just, and holy, as to the keeping of the law."

The people would do well to bear the further fact in mind, that when these lawcuits were pressed against the Seer, the judges, juries, lawyers, sheriffs, constables—all the machinery of the courts—were in the hands of non-Mormons, and offtimes in the hands of rank and avowed enemies, Yet with all this great odds against him, he was never convicted of crime, or anything like it. What he asked, and all he asked, was to be judged by the same laws, usages, and courts, as other citizens. This he willingly and cheerfully submitted to, and in every case was found innocent.

Are the Utah leaders ready to submit to, honor, and obey the laws of the land as did the Seer? Brigham's testimony in respect to the Seer's fidelity and loyalty is in point just now, and should have great weight with those who profess respect for his word.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We see it mentioned in the local column of the Columbus, Nebraska, Democrat of the 26th ult., that Elder J. Caffall had delivered in the Saints' Chapel in that place, "two very interesting lectures on modern orthodoxy, * * * calculated to stimulate thought and research of the grand old story of apostolic days."

Bishop Blakeslee, writing under date of the 2d inst., says they had a splendid time at their late conference at Coldwater, Michigan, and says further "the Spirit of the Lord was with us in great power. A minister of the United Brethren Church was compelled to arise in our meeting and confess that ours was the gospel of Christ."

We have been permitted to read a letter of condolence, full of gentle sympathy and words of comfort and hopefulness, written to Bro. and Sr. Camren, by P. H. Moulten, teacher, on the occasion of the death of Lyssa, his pupil, and their daughter. "Kind words can never die." They float in upon the sad and wounded Spirit like the soothing cadences of angel-songs and lift the troubled soul above the darkening clouds of sorrow, and point it to the glory-land beyond. How precious are the tender wooings of "words" fitly spoken"! May heaven give its peace to the sorrowing ones.

Bro. John Shook writes, the 7th inst., from Buchanan, Michigan, to say that the Saints there "are still strong in the faith once delivered to the Saints;" and that brother Richardson attended the late Coldwater Conference and witnessed there a great outpouring of the Spirit of God in prophecy, tongues, interpretation, etc.

Elder Odin Jacobs writes the 6th inst., from his home, Leland, Illnois, that he is in good hope and good health, though his wife is sorely afflicted. He had a fair experience in his labors in Missouri and Iowa, and expects to labor among the Norwegians in Illinois some this summer and the coming fall.

Under the date of the 4th inst., Bro B. B. Seaton writes from Paris, Tennessee, and says he has watched the sure and steady progress of the truth, and the vanishing of many of its foes; and that he has sought to magnify his calling as a minister and president of the Tennessee District, and feels encouraged with the prospects for future progress.

THE Deserte Evening News for July 2d, contains a reproduction of the Chicago Tribune's report of the speech of the senior Editor, delivered in Farwell Hall, Chicago, February 22d, 1882. In that report is a remark assailing the virtue of the women of Utah, which was not made by us; as aside from plural marriage and its practice, we have never called the virtue and purity of the women of Utah in question. Both the Chicago Times and Herald reported and published the speech, but neither contained the justly obnoxious sentence. The Deseret News of May 13th, 1882, called attention to it, and in the next issue of the HERALD, June 1st, we corrected the matter, which we supposed the News would take notice of, but it appears that they did not.

We now assure the News and its readers that we did not use the language as published in said report, and reprinted by the News on July 2d, 1885. We stated that an unmarried man whose acquaintance we formed in Salt Lake City in 1876, informed us that he was not married, because that he did not know where in the territory to go to get a wife; that it was "not" easy to find marriageable young women not already married into polygamous families, or bespoken for some Bishop. That he was not alone in being unmarried, for the same cause—the contaminating influence of polygamy.

Whether the man stated the truth, or not, we did not know, nor do we now; but it was stated to show how thoroughly the tenet was taught, and how universally believed and practiced in 1876, the time the statement was made.

With the Editor of the News to be plurally married is to be cellestially married; hence, to him, to state that Miss Jones, or Miss Smith is a plural wife, means no reproach to her; and it was only in this sense that the man referred to made his statement to us. He did not speak in disrespectful or stigmatic terms of the women of Utah. He did not so intend, and we did not so understand him, and did not so use his statement in the Chicago speech. How much of stigma those who heard on that occasion, including the reporter for the Tribune, might attach to the condition of a plural wife, the News can probably estimate, from the fact that it was an antipolygamy meeting.

As far as we are concerned, the positions occupied by the two churches, the Utah polygamic and the Reorganized, anti-polygomic,—are sufficiently wide apart on the point under consideration as to make it quite unnecessary for either party to make personal, bitter and improper issues. We have tried to avoid them. If we have not always done so, it is an error which we regret.

Dear Herald:-I desire through you to say to your readers that the latter day work in this and the surrounding country seems to be onward. On the 11th of this month, in company with Bro. L. R. Devore, set out on foot for Byre station, and procuring a little bit of paper which made us worthy, we were permitted to ride in Nahum's chariot to Radcliff's; then walked to Vale's Mills, Vinton county, where brother L. R. Devore recently baptized twenty into the fold, and organized the Vinton Branch. We found the Saints generally an honest, humble band of believers, seeming to desire to live by every word of God. We held six meetings, with fair congregations, good attention, and we were blessed with liberty to present the truth. We had the pleasure at the close of the sixth meeting of inducting five into the fold, three heads of families; one of them a lady whom we found in bed, unable to turn herself in bed, afflicted with hemorrhage of the stomach, who by the power of God was in a very short time enabled to go about the house, and rode on horseback to the place of baptism, some three or four hundred yards. Others there are convinced. One young man, of good family, was hindred from obeying, by relatives. May all the faithful remember the Saints of Vinton Branch. They are hungering for the sincere milk of the world. May this grand work roll on is the desire of one that hopes to have an inheritance here. JAMES MOLER.

FULTON, Ky., July 2d, 1885.

Dear Bro. Blair: - Accompanied by my daughter Grace, I left home on the 25th of June, for my appointed field of labor. By invitation of some of the brethren, I stopped at Independence, and attended the District Conference. I enjoyed the visit among the Independence Saints very much, and especially the Sunday afternoon prayer meeting. It was truly, to me, a time long to be remembered. Sunday night, at nine o'clock, we boarded the train bound for the sunny south, arriving here Tuesday morning. In the evening I attended the Methodist church and announced a meeting for last night. A few came out. I enjoyed excellent liberty while addressing them. Prejudice is very strong here, not withstanding all the labor that has been done by brethren

Lambert, Hyde and others. It seems they will not believe there is any difference between the Reorganized Church and that in Utah, though a man declare it unto them. The outlook is not very encouraging, as far as I can see. I understand that Bro. Seaton and Griffin are faithfully performing their duty in their respective neighborhoods in Tennessee. I expect to make my visit among the branches short, and shall make an effort to open some new fields. I should feel much better if I had some able Elder associated with me in this extended field.

With love to all the Saints, I remain your brother in gospel bonds.

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

WHITCOMB, Wis., June 30th, 1885.

Brother Joseph Smith: - One week ago last Saturday I went up to Antigo, about thirty miles north here, on the millwaukee Lake Shore and Western R. R., and I preached there twice in a school house. Had a very good attendance. I think good can be done there. I had some opposition. The Baptist man would not give out my appointment, but the Methodist and the Congregationalist men gave it out all right. Sister Pickle lives at Antigo, and she is working for the cause. I took my warehouse to hold meetings in, and last Sunday had very good attendance, and had good liberty in speaking, and intend to keep on preaching here as long as they come out to hear, and will do all I can in the work. I will try and sow the seed, and may the Lord gather it in his own due time. I am very lonesome since my wife died, and intend to do all the preaching I can, for its my meat and my drink to do the Lord's will, that I may be saved in the glorious Kingdom. Please send an Elder to help us in this region. Your brother, J. M. WAIT.

A VISION.

BOSTON, Mass., June 20th, 1885.

Dear Bro. Joseph:-I thought I would write you a few lines, also send you the description of a vision that I had on last Sunday morning, and which I trust you may publish in the Herald, as I desire a right interpretation of the same. I am only a year and a half in the gospel, have not as yet received the promised baptism, though I have received of the Spirit. I was exceedingly surprised on the above mentioned morning; I do not know as I ever expected to behold a vision, neither did I realize what I had seen until after it was over.

As soon as I awoke on Sunday morning, I commenced to think of the gifts in the gospelthat of tongues was most prominent in my mindjust at this moment a ball of fire appeared above me, it moved along a little ways and disappeared; but the trace of it remained visible. Very soon a second ball of fire appeared; this one was larger than the first, it traveled twice the distance, and disappeared like the first. While looking at the trace of it, a third one appeared; this was larger than the others. It began to descend like a meteor falling to the earth. I thought it a destructive element; then it changed its appearance and became very clear, or transparent; the course was also changed from downward; now it began to move in a circle as if making a circuit around the earth, and which it was drawing nearer to every moment. I saw the shape of it to be oval, very perfect in form, shaped very much like an egg, yet much larger. It had a tail like a comet, which was exceedingly long and branched out, and was very broad at the end. I also saw another tail that appeared just like the first one; it either traveled by the side of the first one, or followed immediately after it, I do not remember which. I was so surprised to see this that I exclaimed, Why, there are two of them. After this I remember of seeing this one no more. The object of my vision then passed around me and was nearly in front of me, when it made a short turn and came directly towards me. My surprise was so great at first that fear came upon me, but n an instant this left me. By this time the object of my vision was upon me, I felt it as it touched me, a portion of the Spirit was upon me, and I was left to meditate upon what I had seen.

Who can give the interpretation to this?

Hoping and trusting that the work of God may advance rapidly forward, and that his Spirit may ever be with you, I remain, yours in the true faith, John S. Lawton.

No. 229, Dudley St., Boston Highlands, Mass.

[Brother Lawton should have sought unto the Lord in faithful, fervent prayer, to know the meaning of his vision. It was a divine presentațion, similar in its nature to the lambent flames on Pentecost, and the star that led the wise men to the palace of Herod in Jerusalem, and to Bethlehem, the inn, the stable, and "stood over where the young child was," (Matt. 2:9). No one is generally so well entitled to know the interpretation of visions as they who have them.—Ed.]

DETROIT CITY, Minn.,

July 1st, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-After one day and two nights, I arrived at this place from Kansas City safely. I was honored by the officers and agents with half fares a distance of eight hundred miles. I met Bro. M. Shaw at the depot, rested a few hours at his house and then went a few miles further and met with brother Andrew Tabbut and his wife. I baptized them in Maine in 1871. I had not seen them for seven years, and my heart rejoiced to find them strong in the faith. Last Friday rode by the side of brother Tabbut fifty miles, in company with nineteen others to conference. On my arrival to Girard, I found Bro. H. L. Holt. I spoke that night although I felt more like being in bed for sleep and rest. Next day the business meeting passed off well, and in the evening we had a good prayer meeting. I say prayer meeting, for so it was, for twenty prayers were offered, besides about a dozen that spoke. Sunday morning there was a large gathering in the new meeting house just erected by the Saints, and we listened to brother Holt. I spoke in the afternoon, after which we had testimony and sacrament meeting. On Monday morning we met, and I spoke on our duty here, and the resting place, between death and the resurection, after which we went to East Battle Lake, and I baptized two. I had the good pleasure of being made acquainted with many of the Elders and Saints.

Northern Minnesota is the hunting ground of brother Nutt, who brought many into the Church, as also did T. W. Smith; they are spoken of by many. Elder T. J. Martin was made choice of District President, and Elder J. R. Anderson clerk. Elder Henry Way has been a good little team, and he says he is going to travel and preach. Brother Martin expects to put in all the time he can, if so, those two God-fearing men will do good. I see they are well liked. I learned that brother B. B. Anderson was in Nauvoo, and helped on the Temple from the time the first stone was laid till it was done, (or till they stopped working any longer). He told me of the hard set Joseph had to get along with. I asked him if he ever heard Joseph teach polygamy. He answered at once, "No; but he spoke against it many a time."

My address is Detroit City, Minnesota.

John C. Foss.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., June 27th, 1885.

Editors Herald:-Since the beginning of this conference year, I have been laboring in the Massachusetts District according to appointment. At Attleboro, May 17th, in company with Bro. F. M. Potter of Providence, and Bro. Coombs, we held meetings in a large tent used for Indian exhibitions kindly furnished gratis to us. The attendance and interest was good, and the Lord was with us. From there we went to Liittle Compton, tried to preach the word to the world and confirm the Saints in the hope of the gospel, share their trials, and relieve their burdens as much as was possible by our counsel and action. Bro. Pearce, their presiding Priest, is faithful, and growing in the work, and aught to, if the trial and discipline incident to the care of a new branch could do so, develop growth. Some disturbing forces have been removed; or their power to create mischief curtailed, at least, by trial and expulsion. Other trials yet to come we fear, might have been avoided had more care and observance of the law been had in the past. Baptism signifies nothing but trials and disappointments in the future when that instruction which should precede, or understanding and obedience which should follow, are wanting. And we shall build but to court future trial and disaster until we learn to temper our zeal with wisdom and understanding of the law of God.

On our return home we found Bro. F. M. Sheehy. Bro. Frank seems to have improved through his winter's campaign. Opposition seems to have agreed with him, and his logic is of the convincing kind. Our conference at Brocton was voted a success. The Lord was with us by his Spirit, confirming the word of the gospel which we preach. The following week was at Georgiaville to look after the interests of that place as assigned to us by the conference. Two weeks ago we were at Attleboro again and spoke in the G. A. R. Hall in company with Bro. Coombs and V. Green. There is great prejudice at this place, but the hall was filled especially in the evening; and we were helped in presenting the word and feel certain that good was done; shall try to hold the place—and Bro. Frank Potter is to hold forth to-morrow at the same place. Last Saturday went to Little Compton and assisted Sunday in the dedication of their neat new chapel which was crowded. We could wish that all Saints had a house of their own in which to worship. This house was not built without effort or trial, and is a standing attest to the people of their zeal and faith in their religion. Thursday went to Georgiaville in company with Bro. Coombs, had an excellent meeting, brother Charles speaking with unusual liberty and power. Met Bro. Thompson there also, and the time of our stay was profitably spent in declaring the gospel hope, encouraging, and also warning the Saints against mistakes which make us all at times a world of needless trouble. Yesterday came to this place under the advice of the Spirit, and feel well in our minds, whatever may be the result. Tuesday we expect to leave here for Douglass. This little branch has been sorely tried, and in its isolated condition seldom receives the visits which it needs. After the fourth we shall start for the eastern side of the district, visiting Brocton, then over on the coast to Cohassett, Plymouth, and the Cape. We need more efficient laborers. Am strong in the faith of the gospel, and our hope has been confirmed as we try to persuade men. By every test that could be called reasonable, we feel satisfied and at rest in our minds, that whether our progress from the starting point of our religious experience has been much or little, we are in The Way; and that's a great and abiding comfort in this day of breaking up, and bold challenging beliefs of past centuries. In gospel hope, Myron H. Bond.

DELOIT, Iowa, June 24th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-Trembling on the brink of the dark stream, whose cold waves it seems must soon waft me to that haven of rest "He hath gone to prepare for the tempted, the tried, and the true," through your dear columns I wish to say to the many Saints who have written to me, I can not now answer your kind and welcome letters, as I can not purchase writing material, and am to weak in body and mind. Write again; it cheers me; and let all who read this, pray for me; and if I meet you no more in life, may I finally meet, and ever remain with the Saints of All, all is well, God.

SISTER FANNIE.

DETROIT, Minnesota, July 29th, 1885.

Bro. Blair: Since last writing I have labored in Sioux City, Iowa; Richland and Akron, Dak. At Sioux City, assisted Bro. Charles Derry to organize a branch. Some splendid material there. At Richland, I found a home with Mr. Smith, whose wife is a member. She stands all alone wisely and quietly contending for the truth. There I found a good interest, and made some warm friends to the cause; sowed on ground that will give increase. I was kindly treated by the citizens, and my wants remembered, which I regard as an evidence of their friendship. The purse is ofttimes a good index to the heart; and the Bishop's books a good place to judge Saints, as the Master will in time. If He will judge them by the record kept by the Bishop, why not we do the same? Judge no man;" yes, but we will form an opinion, so let us do so by a correct

From there, by request, I came up here to attend the District Conference to be held on the 27th and 28th of this month, its not being known that Bro. Foss would be here. But he arrived just in time for conference. The conference was a good one; was well attended by both Saints and others. A good feeling prevailed throughout the session; two were baptized. I found here a noble band of Saints, united and blest; proving by their works their worth—a meeting house that is in course of completion, 26 by 40ft. is an evidence of that. It is expected to be finished by the fall conference. It is certainly an honor to them, and so stated by the world. I think a good work will be done in these parts. The spirit seems moving the people, more so than anywhere else I have been.

Bro. Foss has gone to Becker County, north. I am to speak in the town of Maine at the celebration. My address is Clitherall, Ottertail H. L. Holt. County, Minnesota.

> MESA CITY, Maricopa Co., Ariz., June 25th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: I have very lately received the sad news of the death of one of my daughters, Mrs. Frances E. Madigan. She died a few days after confinement, and her babe, a frail little boy, was not expected to live more than a few days. This is very sad news for me, and may necessitate my return to California in a few days. All will depend upon what kind of news I get from the rest of my family, during the week to come. I dislike to leave here at present, because there are several persons here, upon whose minds the light of truth has begun to dawn, and they will need some more assistance, to help them on to its final acceptance. May the Lord help them.

I received Bro. Joseph's letter of the 5th inst., and it gives a quietus to the report that the Reorganization repudiates the doctrine of baptism for the dead, also tithing and gathering. He also said, that the position which I had taken, (rejection of the church) as a reason why the Reorganization does not now perform that rite (baptism for the dead) is the one usually taken by the Elders and believed by him also to be the correct view. I was glad to know this, as I had never heard our position strictly defined with regard to the non-practice of that ordinance at present. I am cheered with news of the advancement of the work throughout the world. Desiring to assist in the onward march ot truth, and to continue faithful to the end of life, I remain your brother in the one faith.

NEW GLASGOW, Nova Scotia, July 1st, 1885.

Dear Herald: - God is working with us down here in Nova Scotia. There was a girl about thirty years of age, I suppose, and she had been sick for six years, and three years was not able to get out of bed, or move. She had rheumatism, I believe. She was drawn up, hands and legs, so she could not move herself; and for the last fifteen months was stone blind. Some time ago one of the Plymouth brethren went to see her, and talked to her about prayer-cure, and she said she had strong faith in the Lord, but she could not get any one to pray for her. So the brother told her he would write to Mrs. Judd and see if she would not pray for her. So he did, but they were to pray for her on Thursday, and I and two of the Plymouth brethren that believe in prayer, said we would pray for her too, and she was to be prayed for at eight o'clock. So when we arrived at the house she was up; and the hand that I saw myself closed tight, and while we were yet talking to here she received her sight, thanks be to God who can do all things. She is not able to walk yet, but expects to be in a week or so, for her limbs are gaining strength fast, and I was seeing her again the other day, and she told me she was making a dress for herself; that she never expected to be better, and her sisters wore all her clothes out. I thank God that he has honored me with seeing the blind receive their sight in my day. She could not sleep at night or lay on her right side; and now she can both sleep and lie on her side, and feels well, all but her knees are a little stiff. She is the second that has been cured by prayer here. We three were praying for her about a week before that night that we saw her up, and God was better than we even expected; for when we got to the house he had her up, and while we were talking to her, he gave her her sight. Glory be to God in the high-Yours,

BAY CITY, Michigan,

Bro. Joseph:-I have a desire to bear my testimony to the truth of the latter-day work in the columns of the Herald, if you think it worthy a place. I love to read its instructive pages; they encourage and strengthen my heart by their blessed teachings; for it is in harmony with the word of God contained in the three standard books-Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. I am glad the "controversy" is ended, and trust that good has resulted from it in establishing the Saints, more firmly in the gospel delivered to us through the "choice Seer" whom God raised up with a dispensation of the gospel for the last time. My prayer and desire is that Zion's watchmen may all see eye to eye, and trust God will grant unto them the spirit of wisdom and true holiness to feed and guide the flock of God aright. I feel to thank God that he enabled Bro. Blair to set forth his truth in such clear light concerning tithing and the gathering. It has been a query in my mind how the Jews should build the temple in Zion on this continent and the Gentiles should assist in building, till Elder Blair showed that Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were both literal descendants of Israel, and of the tribe of Joseph. Why may not many more of the Saints be their descendants? Ephraim shall become "a multitude of nations."

I am working for an old Baptist preacher; has preached near fifty-three years; he says the Bible is all the revelation we need, ever had, or ever will have from God. His wife says there was a great man in England who said Mr. Moody was the angel (Rev. 14: 6) that was to come with the everlasting gospel. I have them a little interested in the Herald now. They say there is considerable good in its teachings. They do not think we believe in polygamy; but they don't like the founder of the church. They think it had a bad beginning, and they rehearse the old stories about "Joe Smith." I am trying to show them by word and conduct that it is the pure gospel of Christ we are advocating. We are few in number; only four here in this large city, but I believe we are all striving for the kingdom. We hold our little prayer meetings every Sabbath, and are blessed. The Herald is the only preacher we have, and it gives us great joy when we read it. We would be glad to have an Elder come here and preach. I think there are some that would obey the truth if they heard it. Brn. Campbell and Delong preached here some; but we need an Elder that can stay here awhile, as this is a hard place to open up. It needs patience and courage.

We desire to live upright and just before all, where we can make an honest living by industry and economy, and have something to help spread the gospel to the dark corners of the earth, by the many "hunters" and "fishers" that the Lord is sending forth. We have our difficulties to contend with; poverty, affliction, and disappointment, like many other Saints; but the dear Lord is sustaining us. We feel our weakness and desire the prayer of the Saints. Dear Saints, times are very hard, but let us be faithful a little longer and the Lord will come. God will wipe tears from off all faces in that day of a thousand years. Yours in the one faith,

MARTHA YAGER.

PLEASANTON, Iowa, July 4th, 1885.

Dear Bro. Blair:-As I have been elected president of the branch here, and wish to see every member fully established in the faith and doctrine of the church, I would like for you to come and preach us a few sermons on faith and doctrine, on the 19th of July; and if you can not possibly come, send Bro. Gillen.

It is thirty-seven years since I first obeyed the gospel; and in 1849 I became a strong believer in the Book of Mormon, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and Joseph Smith as a Prophet of God. I never did believe, neither do I now believe that Joseph Smith manufactured any thing in the form of a revelation and gave it to the church as a revelation from God. I believe what he said when he went to Carthage to deliver himself up:-"I am going like a lamb to the slaughter; but I am as calm as a summer's morning. I have a conscience void of offense toward God, and toward all men. I shall die innocent." Not for false revelations, as some have said. I remain your brother in the gospel,

"YOUNG JOSEPH'S" ORDINATION. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 27th, 1885.

Bro. Blair: - In looking over the Herald of to-day, (June 27th), I notice on page 413, a notice under the heading Little Joseph's Anointing and Ordination. You say you copied it from the journal of Bishop Geo. A. Blakeslee, the following testimony of "Elder Whitehead" taken down by "Bishop Blakeslee" at "Alton, Illinois, April 20th, 1885," at the time it was uttered by Elder Whitehead; that he was present with Joseph and Hyrum Smith and Bishop N. K. Whitney, in an upper room over "Joseph's store," and saw Bishop Whitney take a "bottle of oil" and anoint Young Joseph Smith (son of "Joseph the Seer") and also saw Brn. "Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and N. K. Whitney" lay their hands on him, while "Joseph the Seer" ordained him (Young Joseph) a Prophet, Seer, and Revelator to the church. I believe this account, for it is confirmed by the testimony of one who is dead and gone. He said he was present at the time, and that he thought he was the only one living at the time he told me, that was present on that occasion.

He said that N. K. Whitney held the Horn of Oil, and that "Joseph the Seer," ordained Young "Joseph Smith" "Prophet Seer and Revelator," to be his successor to lead the church. This (testimony) was told to me by Geo. J. Adams, about one year before he died. He was not a member of the Reorganization at the time. He also bore the same testimony in the presence of Edith J. Heck, Ivan Brannan and myself at Mrs. Heck's house, for a second time. I then and there asked him if the testimony of Sr. Emma was true in regard to his coming down stairs, very much elated, saying, We now know who is to be Joseph's successor; I have just seen him (Joseph) ordain "Young Joseph" to that office. His answer was, Yes; it is true. He said he remembered it very well.

If this is worthy of publication, you can publish it; for I bear my testimony before God, that what I have written is true. With best wishes for the furtherance of the truth, and kind regards to yourself and all the Saints,

I remain your brother in Christ, Joseph A. Stewart.

THE TWELVE.

Editor Herald:—With due deference to Bro. J. W. Briggs, I think "Penance" and "Eating flesh" irrelevant—entirely so. And for myself, I wish to say further. 1st. For as much as by, and with the consent of the body, Annual Conferences are held for the transaction of general church business, one item of which is the regulating or appointment of missions, in which, by virtue of their appointments, the combined wisdom of the First Presidency, Bishopric, and Quorum of the Twelve, are needed; and whereas, much injury has been done by indiscretion to this most vital order of the church, to me it is of the highest importance, and obligatory upon every member of the Quorum of the Twelve, to be at conference unless distance or other untold circumstances prevent; in which event they, especially the president of the quorum, should report to the body and the quorum, offering such suggestions and advice as in his judgment may be beneficial for the cause. Therefore, the plea of Bro. Briggs, that the quorums are not expected to attend all conferences, etc., seems to me groundless.

2d. Especially did I think it important for all the members that could, to be present at the last conference, as the financial condition of the church would seem to create a necessity for a lessoning in the ministerial force at the present, which fact was made apparent as soon as the Bishop was consulted; which fact made missionary appointments difficult indeed. It was not at all expected T. W. Smith would be present; Brn. A. H. Smith and J. Ells' coming was a matter of doubt-the former from distance; the latter through infirmity-in which event, if the the three absentees had been present there yet would only have been seven of the ten. But as it was, with the two former present, and three being absent, we were but six—lacking one of a majority—this precluding action in any matter requiring a decision by the quorum, and so to speak throwing a burden on six, in matters we could act upon, which ought to have been shared by nine; so thus if additional anxiety of mind could be construed to mean "penance," the six are the ones to prate about penance.

3d. The convening of the quorum by their own act, or other authorised methods, for a special or specific purpose, I fully indorse. But to exhibit an indifference in attending to a General Conference, for general business, especially since the conference of 1884 recognized the duties and prerogatives of the quorum, by which the quorum at any succeeding conference may be called to act on some official act of a member in his field of labor, in the absence of any special call, to my mind, is irreconcilable with the duties the law imposes on the quorum. And a kind of a happy-golucky, slip-shod way of getting along, and too much like standing at ease in Zion, waiting for something to turn up, instead of trying to turn something up.

4th. If distress is felt over our fragmentary condition, or a thirst for additional knowledge through a general assembly, we must give evidence of appreciation of what we have, by a proper and continuous activity, prompted by pure motives, and patiently wait (by diligent labor), God's own due time for a more thorough organization, and an increase of power.

5th. The idea of the quorum claiming the same option to attend General Conference as all or any Elder, to my mind is misty. The accepting of a position in the Quorum of the Twelve is tantamount to a covenant to acquit one's self of duties belonging thereto; for he is a general officer to travel continuously, while the Elder is not under that obligation. For in the absence of any special appointment the law is satisfied by his traveling as his circumstances permit. How strange, then, that a member of the quorum, under General Conference appointment, his family being provided for, justifying himself in an indifference because the "Elder" fulfilling the law in working to keep his family, because the Church has not called him to do otherwise; or so it seems to me. Generals are often on the watch, while privates are napping. How shall the quorum expect the body to look to them as leaders if they don't lead! We must be thankful for confidence and respect when we merit it; and if we merit it and don't get it, we can fight it out, taking courage in the thought that God is his own interpreter.

6th. The letter referred to talked of calling the quorum together for a special purpose. I answered it without a remote idea that it would add to or decrease the interest the quorum should have in going to a General Conference. Furthermore; the president of the Twelve should know if a necessity exists for a special meeting, and officially notify the quorum in time, that they may make proper arrangement in their respective fields, to come together before, or stay after the conference. I don't recant from what I said in answer to the letter; and should it become necessary, can further explain. These are some of my views, with the kindest feelings, and highest regards for all.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

BY ELDER D. H. BAYS.

CHAPTER V.

THE TWO COVENANTS.

"He taketh away the first that he may establish the second."—Heb. 10: 9.

Four important covenants have been made with man, at different periods of the world's history. The first was made with Noah respecting the flood, seed-time and harvest.—Gen. 9: 9-12. The second was the covenant of circumcision made with Abraham.—Gen. 17: 4-14. The third was made with the children of Israel, through Moses at Mount Sinai.—Deut. 5: 22. And last, but not least in importance, the "new covenant" made with the house of Israel through Christ.—Jer. 31: 31, 32; Heb. 8: 6–13; 12: 24, &c.

It is our purpose to speak only of the two covenants made, at different times, with the house of Israel. Our Sabbatarian friends claim that the Sinaitic covenant was to remain forever; while we be-lieve it was to "wax old" and pass away, to give place to a "better covenant," based upon "better promises."

They believe it will "stand fast" with Israel forever, while we believe it was "abolished" because of the "weakness and unprofitableness thereof." One is called the "old covenant, "the other the new." One is called "the ministration of death," the other the Law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus."

Now, in order to determine which of these positions, so antagonistic to each other, is the correct one, we make our appeal to the Scriptures; remembering that if the old Sinaitic covenant is displaced by "a new" and "better" one, the Seventh-day Sabbath goes with it; for it is enshrined as a "Jewel in the very bosom of that covenant."

Let us now enquire if these two covenants have ever been made; and if so, when and where were they made? We shall see. With respect to the first covenant, we have the following:

"And Moses went up unto God, and the Lord called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel, ye have seen what I have done unto the Egyptians, and how I bear you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself. Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine. * * * And Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before their face all these words which the Lord had commanded him. And all the people answered together and said, All the Lord hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people to the Lord."—Ex. 19: 3-8.

Here are presented all the essential elements of a covenant. The Lord on his part asks the people if they will "keep his covenant," on the condition that they shall be a peculiar treasure unto him, that he would make of them a nation or Kingdom of priests. They said they would. So Moses returned the words of the people to the Lord. Now all that remains to be done to complete the covenant, is for the Lord to deliver the "words of the covenant" by "voice" to the people. Preparations for the consummation of this grand event were made at once. Bounds were set to the people at the foot of the mountain. The people were to sanctify themselves, and be ready against the third day.

"And it came to pass on the third day in the morning, that there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that all the people that was in the camp trembled. And Moses brought forth the people out of the camp to meet with God; and they stood at the nether part of the mountain. And Mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the Lord descended upon it in fire: and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace and the whole mount quaked greatly. And when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, Moses spake, and God answered him by voice."—Ex. 19: 16-19.

Israel now stands at the foot of the burning mountain ready to receive the

Moses was again called to the top of the mountain to receive further instructions to the people, that they may be wholly prepared to receive God's word. Again he descends the mountain and delivers his message to the people. Israel is now fully prepared, and awaits with bated breath the enunciation of the divine law. Amid the thunders and lightnings of Sinai's lofty summit, the voice of God is heard to proclaim the ten commandments. The transaction is completed; the covenant is consummated, and all Israel is now under the law.

In view of the importance of these commandments to Israel, they are called "the covenant." That there may be no doubt with respect to the Decalogue being the covenant made with Israel, just read the

"The Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice. And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone."-Deut. 4: 12, 13. (See also Ex 31: 18; 34: 1; Deut. 9; 11; 10: 1, 2).

Here it is said that God, in audible voice,

"declared unto you his covenant," "even ten commandments." After this covenant was, by the voice of God, declared to the children of Israel, they were written up-on "tables of stone" for preservation, that there should be no room for cavil. as to the nature and character of its provisions.

Did the Lord intend this covenant to remain in force, and without change or modification, for the government of all subsequent generations? Or did he intend to make another covenant with the house of Israel, at some future day? It will certainly be considered safe to let the inspired record answer. The prophet Jeremiah, who shall be our first witness upon this point, says: "Behold the days come saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant, with the house of Israel and the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the days that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land Egypt: which my covenant the break, though I was a husband unto them, saith the Lord: but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people."—Jer. 31: 31-33.

Here we have the very plain and positive declaration that God "will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah." It is further said that it shall not be according to the former covenant, made with their fathers at Sinai. The prophet, therefore, understood that the time would come when the covenant that existed in his day should cease, and that a new one would be given in its stead.

It is pretty generally conceded that the Sinaitic covenant continued till the introduction of the gospel under the ministry of Christ and the Apostles. Jesus himself was of this opinion, as the following language very plainly shows.—"The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it."—Luke 16:16.

The only question remaining to be decided respecting this matter, is this:—Did the old covenant, or Masaic Law, cease to exist upon the introduction of the gospel dispensation? For an answer to this question, let us pass down to New Testament times, and enter upon a thorough examination of the subject.

It may be well to bear in mind that the Tews would not be likely to break away from old and well-established usages and traditions, and yield to the new regime without a struggle. A sharp conflict may therefore be reasonably expected. Moses clearly predicted the coming Messiah. The ritualism of the law points unmistakably to the "Lamb of God," that should take away "the sin of the world." But notwithstanding these facts, the Jewish people, blinded by "the traditions of their fathers," rejected him.

The apostle Paul, though educated in the law, for a long time failed to behold in Christ the predicted Redeemer. He was not impervious to the polished shafts of the divine argument, (Acts 9: 3-7; 22: 616; 26:12-19), and finally yielded to the inevitable force of superior evidence, and became one of the ablest—if not indeed the very ablest—expounder of the intricate doctrine of the new dispensation. He has written more exhaustively on the subject of the law and its relation to Christianity than any other person of his day. From him we may therefore expect a good deal of light on the matter under consideration.

It seems the Hebrew converts to Christianity clung, with all the tenacity of their race, to the traditions of their fathers respecting the old covenant, and the apostle Paul endeavors to correct their errors and afford them better views of the matter. In his letter to them he says:

"But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which is established upon better promises. For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second. For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws in their minds, and write them in their hearts, and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people."—Heb. 8: 6-10.

The apostle here, unmistakably, has reference to the covenant made at Sinai, for that covenant was made with Israel about the third month after the Lord "took them by the hand to lead them out of Egypt," as the following passage shows. -"In the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of Egypt, the same day [i. e. the fifteenth] came they into the wilderness of Sinai, * * * and there Israel camped before the mount."-Ex. 19: 1, 2. (See also verses 10 to 12.)

This covenant as we have abundantly shown in the preceding pages, is the ten commandments. This covenant the apostle calls the "first covenant," and declares the Lord "found fault with them." Moses was the mediator of the first covenant, but Jesus was the mediator of the "new covenant"—the "better" one. Had the "first covenant" been "faultless," says the apostle, "then should no place have been sought for the second"—the faultless covenant. But it was faulty, and must give place to a better one, "established upon better promises." The promises upon which the first covenant was based were these:-"Ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me, above all other people: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation."—Ex. 19: 5, 6.

But the promises upon which the new covenant was established are these:-"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," (John 3: 16 and all others specified in and under the gospel). Far better promises indeed, but the apostle continues: "In that he saith, a new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away."—Heb. 8:13.

The first covenant, having "waxed old," "vanished away," and a new and everlasting covenant is "established" in its stead. To establish, is to "fix; to settle firmly."—Webster. Hence, the new covenant is a fixed fact; a settled question; an "everlasting covenant."

Thus we see the prophetic promise, recorded in the thirty-first chapter of Teremiah, namely, that God would make a new covenant with the house of Israel, is quoted by the apostle Paul as having been accomplished in his day.

Upon this point the apostle continues: "For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of a heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God? And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, [covenant] that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance."—Heb. 9: 13-15.

It is hardly possible for any man to mis-understand this language. The apostle argues that if in any sense, the blood of bulls and of goats could, under the "old testament" or old covenant, sanctify the unclean, how much more shall the blood of Christ, under the "new testament," "purge the conscience from the dead works of the law, to "serve the living God." Speaking further concerning the establishment of the new covenant, in confirmation of the above stated view, Paul very pertinently says: "Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second."—Heb. 10:9.

Comment upon this passage seems unnecessary, more than to say that Jesus, in accomplishing the "will" of his Father, took away the first covenant, that he might establish the second. In order to remove any lingering doubt in the reader's mind, should there be any, that God removed the covenant made at Sinai, and made a new one through Christ, I shall introduce another scripture directly in

"Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law? For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a free woman. But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the free woman was by promise. Which things are an allegory: for these are the 'two covenants;' the one from mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all. * * * Now we, brethern, as Isaac was, are the children of promise. But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now Nevertheless what saith the Scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman. So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free."—Gal. 4: 21-26, 28-31.

There can be no mistake as to the apostle's meaning upon this point. Let us carefully analyze this problem. Agar, or Hagar, in this "allegory," represents Mount Sinai-not a spiritual Mount Sinai, if such a thing could exist, but the literal, real mount Sinai; for the apostle qualifies his meaning by saying, "Mount Sinai, in Arabia." We have already shown that mount Sinai is in north-western Arabia, as any one may see by consulting any good map of the Holy Land. As Ishmael, "the son of the bond woman," originated with Hagar, so the Law, or Sinaitic Covenant—for the words "law" and "covenant" are used interchangeably by the apostle—originated at mount Sinai. Following the parallel it is impossible to arrive at any other conclusion. The apostle likewise says this mount Sinai "answereth to Jerusalem," which, he avers, "is in bondage with her children."

Sarah, the legitimate wife of Abraham, is made to represent "Jerusalem which is above"—the new Jerusalem. Her son Isaac, Abraham's legitimate son, represents the new covenant. It is therefore scripturally certain that the "two sons" Abraham, under this "allegory," "are the two covenants." "The one from mount Sinai," written upon "tables of stone," containing the "ten commandments," is represented by the "son of the bondwoman;" the other, the "new and everlasting covenant," by "the son of the free woman.

This "bondwoman and her son," were both "cast out" by the free woman and her husband. Christ and his church, are represented by the "free woman" and her husband; for the church is called "the bride, the lamb's wife." Completing the parallel, we have Christ and his church to "cast out" the Mosaic church, and the entire law by which is was governed. As both the bondwoman and her son were "cast out," it is apparent that the whole Israelitish institution was superceded by the free woman, or Church of Christ. The reason assigned by the apostle for casting out the covenant from mount Sinai is, that it "gendered to bondage."

The law by which Hagar, as an individual, was governed, was a law of bondage, she being a "bondwoman." Hence, the Mosaic church, of which she was the type, must have been governed by a law of "bondage," to agree with its prototype, otherwise the allegory would loose all its

The same apostle, in speaking of this covenant, calls it "the ministration of condemnation"-"the ministration of death." See 2 Cor. 3: 7-9. It is a fact well known to Bible students, that "death" was the penalty imposed for a transgression of the Decalogue. Under it men were as readily "put to death" for kindling a fire on the Sabbath day (See Num. 15: 32-36), as for taking the life of his neighbor.

The law was extremely rigorous, and necessarily brought the people under "bondage." Following up his argument presented in the fourth chapter respecting the covenant "from mount Sinri," and desiring to enforce the fact upon them that they were no longer to be governed by it, Paul urges: - "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."-Gal. 5: 1.

They had been "delivered from the law," (Rom. 7:6), and made "free from the law of sin and death," by the "law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus." (Rom. 8:2). Peter calls it a "yoke," "which neither our fathers nor we are able to bear."—Acts 15: 10.

The one is a "law of sin and death," the other, the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus." One is the law of "bondage," the other, the "law of liberty." (Jas. 2:12). It is but logical, therefore, to conclude that two laws so antagonistic to each other can not, in the very nature of the case, exist together; and hence the language of the apostle Paul to the Romans:—"Ye are not under the law, but under grace."—Rom. 7: 14.

Thus it is declared, as plainly as language can express it, that the "covenant" propounded from mount Sinai, has been "cast out," like the prototypical "bondwoman and her son," and has been superceded by the "new covenant," the antitypical "free woman," and her son.

LETTER FROM W. M. RUMEL.

BRO. D. DANCER:-The conference of this district just closed, was one of the best ever held in the district. The Spirit was with us. Brn. Brand and Forscutt, who were present, greatly assisted in making the conference a success. Bro. Mark displayed his musical talent upon the organ, which was kindly furnished for the occasion by one of the largest music stores in Fremont.

Омана, Neb., June 30th, 1885.

To the Saints of the Northern Nebraska District, Greeting:—As Bishop's Agent, I feel interested in the temporal welfare of the Church, and would like to see each one do something for the cause we say we love so much. The work can not be carried on without temporal means; no society can exist without such means. Whenever God has had a people on the earth, the principles of tithing and freewill offering were taught and observed by them. It was taught to the people of Enoch; they observed it, and they had no poor among them. There was a store house among them, and some one who kept it. Means must have been paid into the same and the wants of the poor supplied in that way. They loved each other not in word only but in deed. We have the same law taught to us, and the same promises are made to us. Then why are we not like them? Because we do not keep the law; but they did keep it. How can we say that we are God's people, and therefore better than our neighbor, if we only keep a part of God's law? "I the Lord am bound when ye do what I say; but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." We are told also that "the Lord blessed the land." Is our land blessed? The Lord has made a promise that, if we would observe the temporal law, the destroyer should be rebuked for our sakes; that we should have a delightsome land; that the nations should call us blessed. (Mal. 3: 11). These blessings are for us. This Scripture was given to the Nephites by the Lord Jesus Christ, who said they were to be "given to future generations." Book of Mormon, p. 469.

We are told that the people of God are to be, and have been a peculiar people in every age. We read that Abraham observed this law and was blessed with great riches; (Gen. 14: 40. I. T.); and he was called "the Father of the faithful." Having a name in the church books will not save us. As to how much is required of us as tithing, you learn by reading the article written by the First Presidency and the Bishopric in Herald, April 25th, 1885. I desire to urge upon you the necessity of complying with the law, knowing that the work can not be carried on effectively, nor the wants of the poor be supplied unless we do. I know also that if we enter into this work with the right spirit, we will not only increase in temporal things, but also in spiritual power. If we do not love the Lord and his work more than we do the temporal things we possess, we are not worthy of him. Let us make the sacrifice with a cheerful heart. Read 5th par. sec. 64 of Doc. and Cov.

May the good Lord help each one to do his duty that we may escape the burning, is my prayer.

W. M. RUMEL. My address is, 1433, Eighteenth street, Omaha, Nebraska.

FALSE AND TRUE RICHES.

IESUS CHRIST, the adjuster of the universe, became so poor that shelter from the pitiless storm was not forthcoming, in order that the riches of eternity might be vouchsafed to an estranged and a fallen world. The bestial train, and the feathered tribes, were cozily ensconced, while both the least and greatest in the kingdom of heaven" was saddened to grief, and sorrowful unto death. The "chief apostle" was experimentally acquainted with manual labor, and humbly bowed to a ministration of sacrificial suffering. True courage will grapple with and vehemently surmount seeming impenetrable barriers, and thus become the worthy masters of the situation; whereas, effeminates, cradled on the downy lap of ease, will be drones and die like miserable dudes. If a person has a good nerve, a courageous heart, and true grit, adversity is only the palladium of safety, and heroic action becomes the crowning glory of a sweet existence. When the regal palaces of the opulent cast shadows over squalid poverty, the golden rule is inoperative; as also when the rustling silks and the gorgeous jewels dazzle the poor man's eye as he gazes on a worm of vanity. Tributes of respect and honor are praiseworthy in their proper place; but castes on a cash basis we heartily detest.

Whenever I am led to proclaim against a popular evil, my name must go with the proclamation. We would not have you think that honest toil should not be duly rewarded, but "big I's and little U's" and pretty select church pews are a moral

"Now if there come into your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparrel, and there come also a poor man in vile raiment; and ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him sit here in a good place, (i. e. a cushioned pew) and say unto the poor man, stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool; are you not then in yourselves partial judges, and become evil in your thoughts?"—James 2: 2-4.

Money is power, and if used judiciously it will exalt the righteous possessor, and happify the objects of his care. He that is faithful in the mammon of unrighteousness will pave the thorny paths of life, soothe the dying, and do homage to the dead. Yea more, he will secure the benign co-operation of God's host, triumph over the dissolutions of the natural realm, and ultimately regain the Eden of Paradise, and dwell in ineffable glory, ad ininitum. Supreme love to God and man is the full measure of devotion, and the grand acme of our profession.

While it is expressly stated that the common comforts and staples of life must be secured to a saintly household, it is not intended that an individual should run "greedily after the error of Balaam;" "for covetousness is idolatry."

"For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. But thou, O man of God, flee these things."

-1 Tim. 6: 10, 11.

The "god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not,' while many who received the word were swamped with the "deceitfulness of riches;" or, as Luke states it, they are "choked with the cares and riches and pleasures of this life." The affluent cities, with the eclat of society, and the rivalries of commerce and trade render them almost impervious to the gospel of peace and good will, and the sway and scepter of the lowly Nazarene. Quite often colossal fortunes engross the time and talent of the railroad king, or the merchant prince, while would-be's, admirers, and parasites swell the medly mass, and forever bar out the "light of life." Lord pity the rich, for the poor can beg—at a "throne of grace." "He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things, and the rich he hath sent empty away." So saith Mary, the blessed of God, The wants of mankind are illimitable, whereas the absolute needs are comparatively few. The desires are actually unbounded; and should any considerable proportion be realized, it might bring a vague unrest, or a disastrous downfall. I must think it a wise proverb that tersely observed—"Give me neither poverty nor riches," with the probable result of either extreme

A treasure in a field, or elsewhere, is something of great value; hence above and beyond the common people, with their ordinary comforts and needed supplies; for where our treasure is there the heart will be. When you can corral camels through the needle's eye, or press a selfopinionated bigot in and through such a small orifice, then you can begin to convince me that heaven is accessible to the great lords of the soil, or the millionaire. If you will read carefully the nineteenth chapter of Matthew and the tenth of Mark. especially as rendered in the Inspired Translation, you can readily learn "great possessions" will have to be divided and subdivided ere the party holding the title in fee simple can view the jasper walls, or pass through the triumphal arches of the pearly gates, and behold the crystal bowers, the gold paved streets, or the throne of glory. Convenient food is not costly dainties; proper apparel is not extraordinarily fine fabric, and a large house intensifies the echoes of a "brawling wife." Content to serve, willing to act, quick to forgive, tender to alleviate, prayerful under trials, hopeful in adversity, and resigned under all circumstances, is true riches.

Every freeholder that can find out how to pay his taxes, can ascertain the way to pay his tithing; if so be that Mr. Will is at home, or they are inclined to "live by every word of God." All that we have All that we have and are comes from the great giver, and one-tenth of the original whole is about what he demands of every son and daughter of the holy covenant. The above amount is the basis, or beginning of the law of tithing, when complied with in all good faith. It should be adhered to strictly, and an annual inventory would indicate the amount due the church yearly, as also show the blessings of God upon a humble child of his royal favor. This unrepealed law does in no wise exonerate us from donations, oblations, free-will offerings, feeding the hungry, clothing the destitute, relleving the oppressed, entertaining strangers, and, in fine, performing acts of charity too numerous and various to mention. "It is more blessed to give than mention. "It is more blessed to give the receive," but the majority prefer the lesser blessing. The sun is dispensing light, heat, gladness and vitality throughout the solar system, and the stellar dependencies are in accord with that immutable fact. The father gave his well beloved to redeem and exalt a sin-cursed, ruined and fallen world. Should we withold a few paltry dollars when we might raise the fallen, cheer the faint, bind up the broken hearted, liberate the captive, and send the gracious gospel around the globe? Will we let this filthy lucre rust on our hands, and canker our benighted spirits, when we could use it to dissipate gloom, melt away error, usher in everlasting righteousness, and prepare the earth for the soon coming Lord? "The kings business requireth haste;" therefore great alacrity should be manifested in filling up the depleted coffers of the body politic, in order that shackled hands of ministers might be freed so they would go forth in the power, and strength, and authority of the Omnipotent Jehovah. The votaries of heathenism and sectarian Babylon are exerting their financial strength to stay their false and corrupt systems, and extend and perpetuate their power.

They utilize and combine inordinate schemes in the way of fairs, festivals, lotteries, etc., and, in that manner secure the patronage of the pleasure lover, the gambler, the proud, and the base. The spiritual manipulator will wheedle the mixed multitude, flatter their vain hearts, spur them on to shame, pronounce the Pharisaical benediction, over his ill-gotten gains, and then demurely declare that "the end justify the means." The reason why the secular press makes honorable mention of these pious (?) entertainments, is because the world loves its own, if perchance it would find one of the important factors with a broad-cloth Prince Albert, a "plug hat," and a white necktie. It is cruel and wicked to gamble; but a fish pond, post office, winning beauty, or a pious cake with a magic ring are in order. When your humble servant will be forced to resort to unlawful ways and means, or "step down and out," he will be sure to choose the latter. The day is dawning when these miserable sycophants will lose their influence and sway. The sober thinking people will not amalgamate fun and religion.

When money is properly obtained, as instanced in the widow's mite being placed in the treasury, the blessings of God Most High attend it. I feel that the time is at the door when substance will flow in heaven ordained channels from all points of the compass, and across the commerceladen seas. I believe that many, very many are willing, waiting, and ready to disburse vast sums of wealth so soon as they are taught how, where, and for what purpose to advance. We can write upon the outlays incident to the gospel without coveting our neighbor's means. There is an immutable decree that tables should be served by other than he who labors in word and in doctrine.

The earnest, vigilant, active dispenser of the bread of life, is not to think much about his food, apparel, or lodging; but for all that, he is to live of the gospel; consequently his portion is anticipated and supplied. When a clergyman is called upon to go forth in the active missionary work, and expects succor and support for services rendered, he should be assiduous in the Father's cause, nor take occasion to go hunting, fishing, boating, gaming, or otherwise worse than idling away time. To be up and doing begets confidence, and greatly increases ones usefulness, and prepares a pleasant path for a successor. Those engaged in temporal pursuits are required to work only six days out of the week; whereas, the preacher of righteousness ought to put in full time, for it is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day. by virtue of their calling, are under duty bound to traved far and wide; others have more domestic responsibility in the way of large and somewhat helpless families, while still others are visited with sickness, or famine, disaster or death. The busy world of traffic would tell their employees that they could give only as it is earned, neither count his children, or allow wages when sickness, or death would intervene. I am proud and happy to think that our ministers as a whole, curtail their expenses in almost every conceivable way, and actually, cheerfully, willingly deny themselves of even staples. They think about what they can respectably get along without, instead of what they really would like to have. They study about the possibility of going forth, and the best field to operate in, nor cast about for fanciful, or real excuses to remain at home. They are always happy in the line of duty, and are glad to face the driving storm and threatening tempest when good is apparent.

Good to the race has come out of seeming evil; the good Lord spoke out of the whirlwind, and the crisis of late will surely have its counterpart. It made me sad indeed to see the missionary force reduced very low instead of augmenting the same, at our recent conference. In returning, I rode the night with a score of Utah folks, en route for merry old England. Some heard me when in Provo, and all heard me that night; but I did not tell them we were out of change and owed the Bishop. I heard a worthy brother say that he would preach on bread and water, and not murmur or complain, if all the appointees were like circumstanced. force and logic of such thoughts are, that a proper distribution of means, be they much or little, would prevent jealousies, and the work of evangelizing the world would still go on. I have all confidence in the Bishop's sagacity, but "an ounce of preventative is better than a pound of cure." Our religious neighbors pay their pastors about a thousand per annum, in this quiet village. They are furnished pleasant homes, enjoy the society of their families, and labor, after a fashion, one day in seven. Their hearts are fat, and their eyes are blind, and their self-righteous souls are impenetrable, and their stupid, deluded "happy-go-lucky" votaries are legion. While every effort is exerted to use these engines of death, it behooves us to be out on the battle field with the roaring effective artillery of heaven.

I heard a worthy and beloved missionary say that the butter and eggs of their own production were not designed for his little children, in order that they might be marketed to obtain things they needed more. Slash on style; pile on the costly gems; draw around your sumptuous person the seal-skin sacque; and finally, carefully spread a handkerchief on the cushioned carpet for your dainty knee, but don't pray too loud for some one might hear you. I could never understand how parties could live for pleasure, and strive for profit and aggrandizement, and testify truly? that they love this work as well as any one. They either deceive themselves, or their actions are no criterion. None should appear before the Lord empty handed. I lately saw children lending helping hands. If I have drawn strong comparisons, I was only seeking the best good, collectively and individually. Let us strive to emulate, and, if need be, "provoke to love and good works," Paul like. Do not be so afraid of not doing it just right, as not to sacrifice at all. The old whisperer may tell you that your money will not be used to advantage, and you had better be so careful as not to give it, Burst these and like false and trivial bands, and act in the living present. God's name will be magnified, sinners will be warned, perishing mortals will be saved, and you will cooperate in earthly and heavenly family reunion. By so doing you will gain the true riches in lieu of perishables, I trow.

M. T. SHORT.

BAPTISM FOR THE REMISSION OF SINS.

This article will show that there are many witnesses who testify that baptism is for the remission of sins. First we notice John the Baptist.

"In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins."—Matt. 3: 1, 2, 5, 6.

He would baptize only the repentant.

"But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance: and think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the tree: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire."—Matt. 3:7-II. (See also Luke 3: 7, 8.)

Mark next testifies that John's baptism was for the remission of sins:

"John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins."—Mark 1: 4, 5.

Luke also bears testimony:

"Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, the word of God came unto John the son of Zacharias in the wilderness. And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins."—Luke 3: 2, 3.

You will also notice in Luke 3:2, that John acted according to the word of God—he was sent from God (John 1:6). God is then the real author of baptism for the remission of sins. Jesus acknowledged that baptism by obeying the order, and thus laid a good example for us:

"Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water; and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: and lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."—Matt. 3:13-17.

Here God the Father is so well pleased with his Son, that he sends the Spirit in the form of a dove, all three persons of the Godhead evidently testifying to the truthfulness of that order. Those who obeyed it justified God; but those who rejected it, rejected the counsel of God against themselves.

"And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John. But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him."—Luke 7: 29, 30.

The same remission of sins must be preached among all nations:

"And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things. And, behold, I send the promise of my Father unto you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high."—Luke 24:47–49.

The apostles tarried about ten days, and then the "power" came, and under the influence of that Spirit they declared that baptism was for the remission of sins:

"Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2: 37, 38.

Peter speaks under the influence of the Spirit of God; the apostle were not to go out to preach until they received it: (Luke 24:49); it should "guide into all truth;" (John 16:13); and it guided Peter to say, "he baptized for the remission of sins." Jesus appeared to Paul (Saul) and said, "Go into Damascus, and it shall be told thee what thou must do."—Acts 9. And Ananias, a disciple of the Lord, was sent to him to tell him what must be done.

"And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."—Acts 22: 16.

Paul (Saul) believed that baptism was for the remission of sins.

"And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight torthwith, and arose, and was baptized."—Acts 9:18.

In after days Paul was called to the ministry, (Acts 13: 2-4), and began to preach the same principle.

"Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection: knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforce we should not serve sin."

—Rom. 6: 3-6.

He did not bring that principle in with him from the Jewish Church, but Jesus told him to preach it, long after he left this world and went to the Father where he was before.

"But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man. For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ."—Gal. I: 11, 12.

He sums up the principles of that doctrine the Master revealed to him, and among them was that same baptism.—

"Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith towards God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment, and this will we do, if God permit."—Heb. 6:1-3.

And John says:

"Whosoever trangresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds."—2 John 9-11.

And for that reason Paul says:

"But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel to you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1: 8, 9.

Well the might Jude add:

"Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the Saints."—Jude 3.

Then, dear reader, you who have not been baptized for the remission of sins, obey that order, and come in through the door, as our Master did. (Matt. 3: 13-17; Mark 1: 9-11; Luke 3: 21; John 10: 2, 3.) Leave the world of darkness; leave your sins behind by obedience to the law of God.

"Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his hear son: in whom, we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins."—Col. 1: 13, 14.

Conference Minutes.

LONDON DISTRICT.

The above district conference was held in London, Ontario, June 6th and 7th, 1885; Bro. J. H. Lake presiding, Bro. S. Brown clerk.

Reports of branches called for. Cameron, Alliston, St. Thomas, Riverview, Egremont, Corinth and McKillop Branches reported.

Financial report read and adopted. Bishop's Agent's report read and received, and on motion the president appointed a committee to audit the same, who afterwards reported it correct.

Elders J. A. McIntosh, John McKenzie, Wm. Jenkins, R. C. Evans, (since June, 1884, labored at St. Mary's and Corinth, baptized 15), and Samuel Brown reported. Priests Geo. Henley (baptized 1), C. Pearson, Geo. Brown, John Hartwell and John Taylor reported.

Resolved, That this conference sustain the present officers: J. H. Lake, president; J. A. Mc.-

Kenzie, Vice President; and Samuel Brown as Bishop's Agent and Secretary.

The next meeting of this conference will be held at Corinth, on the 11th and 12th of October, 1885. The Bishop's Agent reported an outlay of $2 for postage, &c., and a collection was ordered taken at evening service.

J. H. Lake preached from Psalm 50, verse 5.

Special committee reported as follows:—(1), With regard to Bro. Medowcraft, charged with apostacy, we find the charge sustained and advise that he be expelled from the church, which is in compliance with his own request. (2), We have examined the report of the Court of Elders in the case of Bro. Lawton, and we recommend that their report be adopted. (3), We have examined the report of the Court of Elders as to the case of adultery in the London Branch, and recommend that their decision be sustained. The report was received as a whole, and adopted in clauses.

Sabbath morning service of prayer and testimony meeting, with administration of the sacrament, conducted by J. H. Lake, C. Pearson and J. McKenzie. In the forenoon Samuel Brown preached from the Lord's prayer, the basis of his remarks being on the words, Thy kingdem come. R. C. Evans preached in the afternoon, and J. H. Lake in the evening.

WESTERN WISCONSIN DISTRICT.

Conference convened at the Excelsior Branch, Richland county, Wisconsin, June 7th and 8th, 1885. A. L. Whiteaker, president; W. A. Mc-Dowell, clerk.

Branch Reports.—Excelsior 8 members; 1 died. Wheatville 13.

Elders A. L. Whiteaker, J. W. Whiteaker, J. S. Whiteaker, F. M. Cooper, A. V. Closson and W. A. McDowell, reported.

Bishop's Agent, A. V. Closson, reported, cash on hand and received, $6.85; paid out, $1; balance on hand, $5.85.

Resolved, That, as there was a resolution passed at the Willow Branch, October 20th, 1876, that the head of each family pay five cents a week for the support of the gospel; therefore, Resolved, That as the Saints feel that they are not able to fulfill that obligation, that we rescind that resolution.

Resolved, That we as Saints of the Western Wisconsin District, believe that pure wine from the juice of grapes should be used in Sacrament meetings; therefore, Resolved, That in all the Sacrament meetings in this district, pure wine from juice of grapes shall be used, and that the said wine shall be prepared by the Saints. Also, resolved, that we make it a rule to bake and use unleavened bread in our sacrament meetings hereafter.

Whereas, A number of lay members do not attend meetings of the church when opportunities present themselves; and, whereas, their course and actions do not give even their moral support to the church; and, whereas, there are officials in the district who never report to the district conference, either in person or by letter.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That this conference appoint Brn. A. L. Whiteaker and A. V. Closson committee to visit said delinquent lay members and officials, for the purpose of discovering why such lay members fail to give their moral support to the church, and where their actions in this regard is the result of willful neglect of duty, or any other illegal reason, that action shall be taken by the district conference upon such cases; and also determine the reason why the afore mentioned officials do not report to district conference, either in person or by letter, as the rules of the church require; and if lawful reasons can not be given, that the district conference have legal grounds to take action against such officials; and said committee report their labors to the next conference.

Resolved that we request all officials to report to the district clerk, so he can get it at least oneweek before each conference, if it is doubtful of their getting to conference.

A. L. Whiteaker and W. A. McDowell were sustained as president and secretary of the district

Preaching on Sunday forenoon by Bro. A. L. Whiteaker, and in the evening by Bro. F. M. Cooper. In the afternoon the sacrament and testimony meeting was presided over by Brn. J. W. Whiteaker and W. A. McDowell.

Adjourned to meet at the Wheatville Branch, Crawford county, Wis., October 17th and 18th, 1885, at half past ten in the forenoon.

ST. LOUIS DISTRICT.

The above conference convened at St. Louis, Mo., on Saturday afternoon, June 27th, 1885. Noah N. Cooke, president; Edward Potts, vice-president; John G. Smith, clerk.

Branch Reports.—St. Louis 191; 2 received by vote, 2 died. Cash on hand March 1st, $22.98; received since $28.60; expended $22.70; balance on hand June 21st, $28.88. Cheltenham 30. Alma 40. Boone Creek 15. Chester 12. Belleville 64. The other branches did not report.

The Committee appointed to audit the books of the Bishop's Agent, R. D. Cottam, reported favorably, they found the figures correct.

A petition for a rehearing by the Belleville Branch in the case of the Belleville Branch versus John Beaird, was refused by the conference. Bro. John Beaird having complied with the decision of the District Conference, was restored to full fellowship, and his license as an Elder renewed.

Election of Officers.—As Bro. N. N. Cooke desired to retire from the presidency of the district, Bro. Charles J. Peat was elected district president for a term of six months. Bro. Edward Potts was elected vice-president; John G. Smith secretary; and Joseph G. Cole, tract agent.

The St. Louis Meeting House Building Committee reported progress. Their report was accepted and committee continued.

Sunday, June 28th, 1885, forenoon preaching by Brn. Frank Izatt and John S. Parrish. In the afternoon a Sacrament and Testimony meeting was held. And in the evening, preaching by Elder Edward Potts; and closing remarks by Elder Noah N. Cooke on retiring from the presidency of the district. Officers present:, 10 Elders, 4 Priests, and 4 Teachers.

Adjourned to meet in St. Louis, Mo., at halfpast two on Saturday afternoon, October 3d, 1885.

ADVOCATE NOTICE.

In view of the continued and more extended prosecution of the Rocky Mountain Mission and of the need of a paper devoted especially to its interests; and in view of the great aid rendered that mission and the church by the Advocate since 1878, it is deemed advisable by those now laboring in Utah and Idaho, that the said paper be continued. We have therefore, to announce that it will be published as heretofore, and that its editorial department will likely pass into other and very capable hands now engaged in that field, as soon as proper arrangements to that effect are made. In the meantime, we ask for it the aid necessary, requesting all in arrears for it to pay at once, for all its patrons to come forward with their timely subscriptions and for others to subscribe liberally; and all to remit to David Dancer, Box 82, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, or the present editor. W. W. BLAIR.

SECOND QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Dear Brethren:-At a meeting held by our quorum last April, at Independence, Mo., it was found necessary to get up a new Circular Letter, and Bro. William Cadwell of Logan, Iowa, was appointed to assist me in this labor. Now in order that we may be able to accomplish this work properly, it will be necessary to have a report from each member of the quorum; therefore, I call upon each member to send me their name, post office address, County and State. Then, when we know where every member is, we will be able to write and get what information we may need. It is necessary that each member writes, for we can not copy from the old list, as many have moved from where they were six years ago when the former circular was got up. No name will be put on the new Circular Letter of those we do not hear from directly or indirectly. All this is necessary for another reason—I have been appointed to make out an Annual Report, which I can not do unless I correspond with each of you. Therefore, please write to me at once. It was also requested that each member who feels himself able should contribute a small amount to help defray expenses.

FOURTH OF JULY IN SALT LAKE CITY.

THE Fourth in Salt Lake City was an eventful day. The City Hall is directly across the street from Bro. Warnock's, and when I reached the sidewalk, I saw the "stars and stripes" at half-mast on the pole in front of the hall. No one seemed to know why it was so displayed. But it was similarly displayed from the flagstaffs on the News Office, the Tithing Office, Tabernacle or Assembly Room, the Co-Operative Store, the County Court House, and all the public buildings controlled by the Utah Church.

Through the efforts of Marshal Ireland, and some others, the flag was raised on the Court House, and though first pulled down at the City Hall, then raised to full height of the staff, where it was flying at sun down.

This act of flying the flag of the United States at half-mast on the National Holiday, was taken by many as a direct and premeditated insult to the flag and the Government it has so long represented. When asked by a committee of citizens why it was so displayed, Marshal Phillips replied that it was a whim of his. We happened to be at the hall, when a part of the quarrel was going on, as brethren Anthony, Luff, and myself were hunting Marshal Ireland, on business for Bro. Anthony, and not finding him at his office, nor at one or two other places, to which we were directed, we were at last told that he had gone to the City Hall. We at once went there to seek him, and ran into the hot quarrel, quite unknowingly. We succeeded in meeting the Marshal, and made an appointment for the Monday morning at nine o'clock. We were a little sorry that we were at the Hall during the altercation, as it was likely to be misinterpreted. We were sorry to see the flag at half-mast, for we thought that the circumstances did not warrant such an illadvised action. We kept away from the business part of the city all the afternoon. and went to a meeting advertised as a Patriotic Meeting, held in the Methodist Church, Gov. E. H. Murray presiding. We were invited upon the platform. Judge Zane, of the Supreme Court; Bishops Warren and Walton, and Rev. Iliff, of the M. E. Church, and Rev. R. G. McNiece, of the Presbyterian, where already there. We complied with the invitation, and at the close of the meeting, by request of Gov. Murray, we spoke a few words, evincing our loyalty to the government and devotion to the flag.

We were in hopes that the authorities of the city, and the Church of Utah, would have disavowed the putting the flags at half-mast on the public buildings; but the City Council, indorsed the action of Marshal Phillips in the case of the City Hall; the Deseret News, the church organ, also endorses it. In the case of the Court House, Sheriff Groesbeck at once ordered the flag put at full height, as soon as he discovered that it had been so displayed. Ex-Mayor Jennings has had the courage to disapprove the action at the City Hall, and asked that his disapproval be placed on the Council record.

To us it seems that if the action of a few city officials resulted in such an act of useless bravado as putting the flag of the Government at half-mast on the public buildings of the city and county in the central city of a territory belonging to the United States, (on such a holiday as the Fourth,) will be construed to be; that action should be at once promptly disavowed by both city and the church officials. If it was the result of a few church officials consulting together and influencing the city officials, it should also be disavowed by the church. If, however, it was the result of an order direct from controlling church authorities, it must add greatly to the gravity of the crisis already pending, and makes it difficult to say what complications may arise because of it.

The attitude of the church in Utah, if the Deseret News properly represents it, is one of distress and indignant protest against the action of Congress, and the prosecution of polygamists under it; claiming that the law is unconstitutional, and the prosecution and findings of the courts are acts of oppression and persecution; and that victims convicted under the law are martyrs.

The presumption manifest by the church and its organ in persisting that the law is unconstitutional is remarkable. The Supreme Court is the constitutional tribunal which only can determine whether law is in accord with the Constitution, or not. When the Utah Church, or its organ the News, presumes to assert that laws passed by Congress, and endorsed by decision of the Supreme Court, are unconstitutional, it is so absurd a display of wilful ignorance that it is lamentable.

It is certainly high time that some of the men making up the ninety-eight per cent. who are not in polygamy, and therefore not in danger of persecution, should come to the front; and looking the situation fairly in the face, should put a stop to the further exercise of the foolish wisdom being displayed. A gentleman remarked to us in the city the other day: "The affairs of the Mormon Church are being badly governed at the present." We are inclined to believe that.

JULY FOURTH AT LAMONI.

THE following good words for Lamoni and its late fourth of July Celebration will prove of interest, we feel assured, to many of the HERALD readers. The clipping is from the Journal published at Leon, Iowa, our county seat, sixteen miles distant.

The time was when it was thought next to impossible to have a celebration of any kind without wine or strong drink. But times have greatly changed in this respect for the better.

The celebration at Lamoni was a decided success in every respect. It had been feared by some that in consequence of the seeming disadvantages of Lamoni, i. e., shade, etc., it would be hard to get a crowd. But early in the forenoon those fears vanished by the pouring in of wagons and carriages. Ample shade and seats had been provided where the exercises in the forenoon were held. Nice music by the band, good singing, an eloquent prayer by Elder W. W. Blair, reading of the Declaration of Independence by Prof. Roy, and excellent oration by R. L. Parrish, also young ladies "flag drill," constituted the exercises of the forenoon.

The afternoon was occupied by the "awful looking fellows" parade, foot races, base ball, foot ball, &c. And in the evening were balloon ascensions and display of fireworks.

Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves. It is said there was not a drunken or disorderly person. Everything went off in perfect order. Thos. Teale was marshal of the day. It is said that this celebration has given Lamoni a good recommend if she chooses to celebrate next year.

About two thousand people were present.

CITIZEN

In the present crisis of affairs it looks curious to see in the Provo church paper, a complaint in one column of Elders being persecuted and denied places to preach in in Sweden, and in the very next column, to see the statement that the request for the further use of the school house in Pleasant Grove, for Joseph Smith to preach in "was not granted." In the one case it is unjust prejudice and persecution, in the estimate of the Provo paper; but in the other case it is simply a judicious shutting out-difference of place and change of men makes all the difference-of course. One person at Pleasant Grove offered an orchard for us to occupy, but subsequently recalled consent. The News commended the recalling as a meritorious deed. Time passes; the world is moving.

CHOIR SINGING-FAULT FINDING.

A FEW days since a letter came to this office directed to David Dancer, with a request that the Editor give it place in the HERALD. No name was signed to it, and the postage on it but half paid. If this falls under the eye of the writer of it, we notify said party that it is utterly contrary to the rules of journalism and the dictates of sound sense to publish anonymous articles.

The writer objects to choir singing, and thinks it wrong to select and commit to memory new tunes for a congregation of God's people or Saints, the choir singing them while the congregation may not know them. This party should bear in mind that all tunes are new ones to those who have not previously heard and learned them; and if choir singing is to be frowned down because the tunes are new, and more or less in the congregations do not know them, then all progress in singing would be cut off; for people are not apt to sing until they "select and commit to memory new tunes." There is a first time for all to learn such tunes as they sing. Choir singing cultivates the voice and memory, so that songs may be sung "with the spirit" and "with the understanding also" (1 Cor.14:15). Paul thus exhorts the Saints to sing: "Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord.—Eph. 5: 19. This can not be done without time and tune are in harmony, and it requires patient culture to attain this. Melody can not be had without harmony of time and tune; and it requires the exercise and close discipline of choir training to reach excellence in this direc-

In the palmy days of Israel, choir singing was common, and great attention was paid to its cultivation in connection with instrumental music, as may be seen by reading I Kings 10:12; I Chron. 9:33; 15:19,27; 2 Chron. 5:13; Ezra 2:41,65; Neh. 7:67. The prophets of Israel cultivated vocal and instrumental music wherewith to praise God in unity and with melody. (I Sam. 10:5; 16:16, 23; I Chron. 25:3; Ps. 57:8; 81:2.) Nor is this confined to God's Israel on earth. In heaven vocal and instrumental music blend in worship and praise of God and the Lamb. (Rev. 5:8-10; 14:2,3; 15:2,3.)

The power and excellence of song service can never be attained without culture, and this requires "chief singers" to lead and instruct others. This writer thinks that in the early days of the church their singing was without instrumental music, and without a choir; and in this another mistake is made. For the history of the church shows that great attention was paid to choir singing. And when the temple at Kirtland was built, seats were erected in the four corners of the house for the singers. The late Bro. E. B. Gaylord was one of the "chief singers," or leaders of the choir. At the dedication of the temple the song service was under the direction of leaders and their choirs, the congregation joining.

The same article insinuates that the Saints here who have "money" and "substances" and "fine apparel" and "adorn" their churches, are those whom the prophet Mormon denounces.

We have to tell this party that the wealthy Saints in this branch are the faithful, energetic workers, who by dint of industry, economy and good management, have accumulated their wealth, and who at the same time have used it liberally in aiding the needy in very many ways, not only through the treasuries of the church, but privately, and also in erecting churches, assisting the ministry, the publishing department, and in various other important ways. We could name one who has given over $2,100 to the Lamoni Chapel; another who has given more than that; and others who have done well in giving to it, and for other laudable church and charitable purposes. And we can name others, who, while they could aid some, do a large amount of grumbling about others and at the same time do little or nothing toward the chapel, the church treasury, or in aid of the poor and needy. Persons who find fault with others should first examine themselves and see if they have "a beam" in their own eve; and if they have, they are but poorly qualified to pluck the mote out of their brother's eye. All should be swift to hear, slow to judge, and slow to find fault with others.

"THOU SAYEST IT."

PROMINENT persons sometimes utter sentiments and make statements the full meaning and scope of which they little understand. Pilate, the Governor, wrote a title,—"Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews," at which the Scribes and Pharisees were sorely offended; but it was heaven's truth, and untold millions have since rejoiced in it. And now another governor has uttered great truth in respect to a humble servant of God, and the Scribes and Pharisees in Utah are angry and troubled about it. Here it is as taken from the Deseret News:

"At the meeting held in the Methodist Church on Saturday evening, Governor Murray delivered himself of one of his characteristic harangues; Judge Zane exercised himself over the "marriage relation;" Bishop Warren, of Denver, made an eloquent speech; Bishop Walden, of Cincinnati, made some remarks, after which a resolution was passed denouncing the placing of the national flag at half-mast, and the meeting was closed by a short address by Joseph Smith, who was introduced as "the President of the Latter Day Saints," who claimed loyalty to the Government on the part of his adherents."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Elder Joseph Luff, writing, from Salt Lake City, under date of the 10th inst., having just returned from Provo where he left Pres. Joseph Smith and Elder R. J. Anthony, says:

"We are having immense crowds to hear Bro. Joseph, and much interest is manifest by quite a number. * * * We are all feeling well. My health never was better."

This reminds us that Elder Luff said in 1883, that he would yet travel and preach in Utah in company with Pres. Joseph Smith, for the Lord had revealed it to him. Yes; and the Lord showed to us at divers times from 1865 till the present, the peculiar conditions which the Utah Mormons, especially their leaders, are now passing through.

Bro. J. C. Foss, in his letter of the 5th inst., writes:

"Last night burglars entered the house of Bro. M. Shaw and took his watch and seven dollars in money. My satchel was carried to the door and things taken out. Soon after it commenced raining and my clothes, books, etc., were soaked with water."

Bro. Foss' address is Detroit City, Minnesota.

By card dated Sand Beach, Mich., the 14th inst., Elder J. J. Cornish writes:

"Lively times here; the different sects are trying to preach and pray down Mormonism as they call it; and I have been preaching and praying for God's word and work to prosper in the land, and yesterday I baptized seven more."

This is the way the Record-Union of Sacramento, Cal., and the Tribune of Salt Lake City, look upon the present mission of President Joseph Smith to Utah:

JOSEPH SMITH'S MISSION.

The mission of Joseph Smith, Jr., to Utah has attracted attention in other quarters than at home. Any real student of the Utah problem can not fail to at once recognize its importance. The writhings of the Descret News for a time, and then its sudden silence as if smothered with a weight of conscious terror and the presage of sure defeat, have all been very significant. The coming of Mr. Smith is mentioned by the Sacramento Record-Union, which, after noting the fury of the church organ thereat, says:

"It is altogether probable that Mr. Smith is just as far-sighted and penetrating as any of the Utah leaders. He knows, of course, that Gentiles are pleased with his coming. He knows, of course, that they are not friendly in a religious sense, to the doctrines of his faith. But he knows that this unfriendliness extends only to the polygamic practices of a wing of the Mormon Church, and that the Gentiles of Utah have no other aim in aiding him than to break the polygamic power, and that once made subservient to law they will be precisely as tolerant of Mormonism as any other form of religion. The News evidently fears the influence of Smith, since it warns the faithful that he is a "repudiator," and is working in a direction that is approved by "apostates, the vile, the ungodly, corrupt, cruel knaves," etc. This is all well for the Josephite. It ought to give him encouragement. He has drawn the fire of the enemy without himself firing a shot. Whoever is feared has power; whoever is contemned by his opponent, and charged with offenses, and repudiated without a discussion of his claims has already made headway, and can afford to continue on his mission. Smith single-handed may be the means after all of accomplishing that which the United States Government has failed to consummate after thirty years of labor."

The audiences which have given Mr. Smith a hearing have been very large, and the discourses he has delivered to them have been well poised, strong and effective. He offers the people nothing but their own, what they have all acknowledged to be true; and he offers them the whole of that doctrine as formulated and given out by his father, their acknowledged lawgiver and inpired seer; and they can not show where after his death anybody else was authorized, either in his name or their own, to add to or take away aught from what he had declared. Yet additions of the most startling importance have been made in his name. Whether these were really such as ought to have been received, a simple, common-sense test will show. The rule was laid down by the elder Joseph Smith, "He that keepeth the law of God hath no need to break the law of the land." Tried by this test of undoubted genuineness, how do the additions by his designing successors appear? Is it not true that these contested "revelations" are the very cause of the present misery of this people, and of the dark outlook before them? Can any man observe both rules that is to say, keep the laws of the land, and the requirements of the polygamous church leaders of this day? And yet the time was when there would have been no conflict; no difficulty whatever in squaring a Mormon's conduct in strict accord with his faith. Even yet the real keepers of the faith do this without trouble, and go peacefully along without molestation. Joseph Smith, Jr., offers this peace and immunity to the afflicted people of Utahafflicted of their Egyptian-like task masters, who require them to make bricks without straw; to obey two opposite teachings, and to pull in contrary directions at the same time. From this unreasonable dilemma into which they have been led by persons who have shown their lack of generalship in getting them into it, and their lack of manhood by deserting them once they are fairly in, Mr. Smith proffers relief. It can not be but that many will accept his guidance.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Did the angel that talked to Joseph the Seer mean that the churches were all an abomination in the sight of the Lord, or did he mean they were only wrong in organization?

Ans.—It was the "creeds" that were condemned, as also a certain class of professors who draw near to the Lord with their lips, "while their hearts are far from him.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letter of the 10th inst., from Brn. John Taylor and E. L. Page, of Hannibal, Mo., we learn that Bro. John Cairns has made application to unite with the Reorganized Church, and we are safe in saying this news will make glad many hearts. He was born in Scotland, and came to Canada when young; was baptized in Canada in in 1834, by Elder James Blakeslee (father of our presiding Bishop); was ordained an Elder and soon after removed with his family to Nauvoo. This was about two years before the death of the Seer, under whose administration he went as a missionary to Europe. He presided over the Glasgow conference, was faithful in all things, and returned to Nauvoo, (where he had left his family), several months after the death of the Seer. He soon became dissatisfied with the changed and rapidly changing affairs of the church at Nauvoo, and left for St. Louis, Mo., where he located and became a prominent business man, was held in high esteem, and did important service in city government affairs. He now resides in Hannibal. Possessed of a love of learning and a clear, logical mind, he has sought to penetrate the depths of human philosophies, and now in the sunset of life, after having made a searching survey in nearly all directions, he turns his face to the light of Christ, seeks again his Father's house, and hopes for acceptance, rest, and salvation.

Bro. John Eames of Cheyenne, Wyoming, writing the 5th inst., relates many particulars of a fearful explosion of a powder house near that city, caused by lightning, the details of which were telegraphed at the time to the press. Bro. Eames expresses gladness and rejoicing that he has heard and received the gospel, and that he knows Joseph the Seer was sent of God. He bears testimony to the blessings of God given in answer to humble, fervent prayer.

By our exchanges it appears hot indignation is felt by the American people in all quarters in respect to the half-masting the national flag by the Utah Mormons on the 4th inst. It would seem the wits of those who originated the insult had gone wandering.

From late Attleboro, Mass., papers, we learn that Elders F. A. Potter and T. W. Whiting have been enlightening the good people of that city on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the restored gospel, with fair results. This is good; it is "the King's business," and requires haste.

Sr. N. V. Pearson, now living on her brother Henry Gernigaur's place, near Llano, Texas, will welcome any of the Elders or Saints to her home, and she thinks many there are anxious to hear the true faith, and that some will be baptized. The Elders in charge in that region will please take notice of this call, and supply it as wisdom shall direct.

Bro. Joseph C. Clapp wrote from Deer Lodge, Montana, the 7th inst, that he was preparing to move his family from Moscow, Idaho, to Montana; and that he had baptized two of late in Gallatin Valley, and the branch there was in fine condition.

By the Madison (Iowa) Democrat, it appears that Elder H. C. Bronson is defending the Book of Mormon against the silly aspersions of a somebody who attacks in apparently in the interests of a Rev. Lambert of Montrose, who seems to lack either the courage or the ability to engage in a discussion of the matters involved with Bro. Bronson.

Bro. C. D. Stevens writes from Grand Rapids, Holt county, Neb., July 4th, that he is still firm in the faith; had preached but once, and then had fair congregation and attention; says there are good openings in that part of the country; intends to push the work after summer work is past; says Bro. Parley Premo is doing considerable preaching with good results. There are fifteen members of them, though not yet organized, and they are waiting for some authorized Elder to set them in order, and wish it may be Bro. James Caffall. Bro. Stevens wishes the address of the president of the Fourth Quorum of Elders, of which he is a member.

By letter just received from Elder John T. Davies, we learn he was preaching at Netawaka, Kansas, and was to be at Good Intent the 20th instant, and hope to reach home by the 25th inst.

Elder Peter Anderson was at Nebraska City on the 9th inst., and expects to be ready to go to Utah to labor among the Scandinavians by the 23d inst. We think him well fitted for that difficult field. May heaven direct his way.

By letter just received, Elder Jobe Brown informs us he had of late preached five times in the Hall at Clinton, Iowa, to attentive audiences, blessed one child and solemnized one marriage. Hopes the branch there may recover its former activity and unity.

A brother wishes to know if William Miller, the founder of the Millerites, (Adventists), was ever a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. No; not that we have any knowledge of. But it has been said that Elder Jared Carter visited him, and gave him ideas on the second Advent, which he afterwards modified and preached.

We welcome the Ottumwa (Iowa) Democrat to our exchange list. It is neat and newsy, and is the official paper of the city and county where it is published. In its issue for the 15th inst. it has this to say of the HERALD: "The Saints' Herald is the name of a weekly paper published at Lamoni, Iowa, advocating genuine Mormonism, divested of polygamy and all the other heresies invented by Brigham Young and the Utah hierarchy. One of the editors is Joseph, a son of the Prophet. The Herald has considerable literary ability, and wages a relentless war on the Salt Lake Bogus Mormons."

WE offer to the readers of the HERALD something to think of in the puzzle given below. Take it and examine it from your own observations among your acquintances and neighbors.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL PUZZLE.

RACE DEVELOPMENTS—THE CHILDREN OF THE LABORING CLASSES.

Some of the working girls who are nearly all foreigners or of foreign parents, the observer will note the striking physiological improvement of American children over their parents. This improvement is especially marked in the poorer classes. The father and the mother will display all the characteristics of ignorance, contracted mentality and vulgarity in their manner, while their large feet and hands, stooped shoulders and ungraceful bearing tell the tale of Old World hereditary toil and grinding poverty. And yet this is their daughter. Beautiful eyes, a rosy, Hebe-like mouth, a swan-like neck, dainty hands and feet, the form of a sylph! How wonders breed on the free soil of America!

Is it the climate? Well, hardly. The same phenomena can be seen from Lake Winnipeg to the Rio Grande-from the frozen north to the tropics. Political institutions? Yes, indirectly, But not those of the United States particlarly. Canada presents the same phenomena of race improvement, and yet her government is theoretically founded on a monarchy. But her monarch is distant, her titled aristocrats are scarce as hens' teeth, and primogeniture is unknown. Both are free countries, therefore, in fact, and from freedom indirectly springs the race improvement. Food? Yes, a great factor in female pulchritude is nourishing food, and it is furnished in better quantity and quality in North America than anywhere else on this world's surface. The manners and customs which prevail on this continent also gives social freedom and beauty to the poorer classes. The common-school system is the alembic which fuses the forces of society, and refines and beautifies the crude matter with the aid of the glowing fires of thought.

Among great causes is the social consideration in which women is held in America. The worship of the sex prevails all over the civilized world, but in the other countries it is confined to the higher and middles classes. Here it descends to the very poorest, and respect and courtesy are extended freely to the daughter of the hod-carries. On this continent woman does no degrading labor, and everywhere she is surrounded by social honors and privileges which in the Old World are only extended to the wealthy.

But while these facts are enough to indicate some of the causes of race improvements, and particularly the production and development of female beauty in the lower classes, still they signally fail to explain a very common phenomenon in the very same connection, and which may be the initial cause of all. An emigrant family, poor and ignorant, arrives directly from the Old World. Their children, born abroad, partake of the mental and physical characteristics of the parents-low mentality, homely faces and ungraceful physique. But the next child who comes into the world in this country, in nine cases out of ten, will be keener, handsomer and more graceful than its brothers and sisters. Why is this? Is it the subtle influence of a freer and sweeter civilization acting on maternal imagination? Let the savant and psychologist answer.—Toledo Blade.

Correspondence.

SPAULDING'S MANUSCRIPT.

OBERLIN, Ohio, July 15th, 1885. Pres. W. W. Blair;

Dear Brother.—In reponse to your letter forwarded to me by Bro. Blakeslee, I came here yesterday to arrange for a copy of the long lost and hidden story of Solomon Spaulding. The manuscript is old and getting much worn; the outside leaves being in places thumbed and pinched to such an extent as to make it necessary, in a few instances, to supply words from the evident connections. There are sufficient marks and dates connected with its pages to show beyond any question that the writing is that obtained by Hurlbut from Mrs. Davidson, as the one claimed by the enemies of the Book of Mormon to be the story forming the basis of the same, and delivered by the said Hurlbut to E. D. Howe, of Painsville, Ohio. After examining (in connection with the reading of President J. H. Fairchild) the manuscript and story as related therein, I am fully satisfied as to the object Howe had in suppressing it when he published his "Mormonism Unveiled."

There is sufficient in the manuscript to base the stories upon made by Howe's witnesses who claimed they had heard it read twenty-two years prior to giving their statements, except as to a few of the technical expressions and names that Hurlbut and Howe run in when they wrote up the "statements" for their "witnesses"; but nothing whatever to show that it was the foundation of the Book of Mormon. Hence, it is evident that the position taken and maintained by me in the Kirtland debate from other evidences which were more of a circumstantial nature, has been proven absolutely correct, to-wit: "That Howe suppressed the manuscript, lest it should suppress Howe and his book." The old adage, "that honesty is the best policy," would have been best here. Time has brought about her rewards, and now dishonor and disgrace must ever after follow the soiled heels of the man who was foremost in circulating the thousands of unqualified lies against the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith.

President Fairchild has readily given me whatever facts he was in possession of touching the story of the Spaulding manuscript, &c.; and instead of the tricky, mischief-maker who pursues the avowed policy of "anything to beat the Book of Mormon," that it has been my lot to so often find in the ministerial profession, I have found him to be a man of broad enough principles to examine a matter upon the facts presented, instead of by the too common fanatical prejudice, and to extend to others the like privilege. Had we many more men in the country as able and fair in their work as the Venerable President of Oberlin College, Satan would soon have to change his methods of warfare against the truth, for the world would be educated to judge from a higher plane than that which proved Jesus to be "the carpenter's son"—"an impostor,"—"deceiver"—"traitor"—and of the "low bred,"—to the satisfactaction of the carnally "self righteous" and viciously deprayed in the first century.

The copy will be ready and placed in your hands next week. The copying will be done by a type writer copyist, verbatim et literatim, and will contain the certificate of Pres. Fairchild, that it is correct.

The copy that Mr. Rice took will also be published, thus furnishing two independent copies to the public, making any suppressions or erasures impossible without detection.

Pres. Fairchild charges nothing for his time in the examination of the matter and giving certificate; and finding that he desired a copy of the Book of Mormon for the Oberlin library, I told him I would ask our publishing house to furnish him a copy free.

The manuscript contains 165 pages, and between forty-five thousand and fifty thousand words. I expect to leave Kirtland for the west on Tuesday or Wednesday next, and hope to hear from you at once at Kirtland, if there are any other points worth looking after. There will be no necessity of getting in further evidences as to the genuineness of the manuscript, as there is proof sufficient. The first pages and endorsement on the last will be photographed so that should you wish to have it stereotyped and presented in this form for evidence, you can do so. There will be three pages of this in photograph form.

Hastily, I am as ever, in bonds for the gospel's sake, yours,

Provo, Utah, July 8th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair.—We had two meetings in Salt Lake City on Sunday last: one at two p.m., at which Bro. Luff spoke with great liberty, and I at eight p. m. The house in the evening was full, and I had fair liberty; subject, the gospel as unchanged. Brethren Luff, Anthony, and I left the city on Monday, the 6th inst., for Pleasant Grove, where we had the school-house for one night. Bro. Anthony prayed with fervency, and I gave some reasons why I did not accept polvgamy. The house was packed, and many listened at the windows. When I began I noted, as I thought, some faces which looked steeled against me; but some of these quite softened down by the time I was through. At the close, when we asked for the house again, Mr. Adamson, one of the trustees, refused it. We thanked them for what we had, and were constrained to leave the place, much to the regret of Sr. Sterret and family; and to the disappointment of several others, if what they say is to be relied on. The first wife of Parley P. Pratt was at the meeting.

Bro. Anthony came here yesterday, Bro. Luff and I remain at Pleasant Grove till to-day. We obtained the school-house here, in which meeting is to be held to-night. Bishop A.O. Smoot himself consented to the use of the house here. Can not tell what the result will be.

The refusal of the house at Pleasant Grove will have as good an effect as any sermon as I could have preached in the place; and I can only believe that it will react in our favor.

July 10th.—It is almost certain that there are but few, if any, among our Utah contemporaries, who realize the gravity of the crisis that is pending. From the statements of the leading men, there are two per cent, of the men in polygamy. This leaves ninety-eight per cent. of the men free from process of the courts for that practice. But their belief is of such a character that they maintain the aspect of hostility to the Government in its attempt to enforce the Edmunds Bill. The claim is that the law is oppressive, and proscribes the faith—their faith, &c. It is made to appear that the oppression is against them who do not infringe the law by practicing plural marriage. This seems plausible at first glance; but is not when maturer consideration is had; because the Government is not trying to prevent the exercise of conscience; but to suppress actual infringement of law. This is hard on the "two per cent." I really think that there will be some of those who are not liable to arrest who will see the anomalous and perilous condition this class are in; and should a few of them really get to see. I fancy that they will precipitate a revolution.

There will be no probability of the admission of Utah as a State in the present condition of public opinion on both sides. The late strange behavior of some of the leading men in the city in sanctioning the half-masting the flag on the Fourth, will be taken as indicative of the feeble loyalty of the church to the Government, and this will certainly make the admission further off than before.

The information of the people in regard to their future action is very meagre; there is no decision except by absent leaders; and the advice so far is dangerous. Even now the advice is to those not in plurality to take more wives; to obey the law of God rather than the law of the land. The Government is evidently determined to enforce its law, and hence the peculiar gravity of the case.

Yours,

Joseph Smith.

REPLY TO "PENANCE."

No. 218 Center Ave., PITTSBURG, Pa., June 30th, 1885.

In the issue of Herald for 20th of June, under the above caption, is a communication from Bro. J. W. Briggs intended to exonerate the parties named from the censure passed upon them by the quorum for non-attendance at the late General Conference at Independence.

The effort is an attempted justification for their absence, based upon the following premises:—
That there was no official call for the quorum to convene; and that unless such notification is given, it is entirely optional with the quorum, or other Elders, to assemble in the conferences by them appointed.

In reply to this assumption we quote the law governing the case:—"The several Elders composing this Church of Christ are to meet in conference once in three months, or from time to time, as said conferences shall direct or appoint; and said conference are to do whatever church business is necessary to be done at the time."—Doc. & Cov. 17: 13.

This enjoins it as a duty upon all the Elders to attend the conferences by them appointed. Herein is no license for absence, only for legal cause. Not only are they instructed to assemble, but also to appoint the time of assembling for the ensuing conference; hence those appointments are official, and thereby made binding, so far as the law given to the church and the action of its officers can make it. In the nature of the case, no Elder can be justified for absenting himself from those appointments made by both God and man.

"Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed in all diligence. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand. Even so, amen."

—Doc. & Cov. 104: 44.

We do not think it necessary to notice all that was said, or to make a tirade of the case, as we believe it will be seen that the attempted justification was based upon false premises; hence the conclusions are without force, and void, and that the censure passed by the quorum was warranted by the law and the facts in the case.

In my heart I desire that the brethren may set themselves right, otherwise the Penance must still lie, as the law governing the case is of God, and therefore specific.

Josiah Ells.

TIPUTA, Rairoa, May 13th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—As I may have an opportunity of sending this off to Papeete by a vessel now here, I write a few lines, as I may not have a chance before the next mail leaves.

This settlement is three miles from Avatora where I wrote last. There is a small branch here, surrounded by Catholics, but they are all on good terms it appears; in fact Catholicism among the natives is merely a name; very few know anything of the doctrine or history of the church. A great difference is seen between our church and all others, in this-our people are continually searching the Scriptures; others are contented with what their pastors may dole out to them on the Sabbath, (or the Lord's day), and that is very little. There is one thing positively certain, and that is, if a couple of missionaries had been here ever since the mission was first opened, there would be very few members of any other church in these Islands. But so many years having passed, wherein no missionaries were here, others got a foothold, and of course all the machinery employed in enlightened countries is employed here to keep the sheep from straying from the various folds. I am baptizing continually, or every week, a number who do not belong to any other church. To-day I baptized some fourteen new ones, and some seven old members.

There is quite an anxiety for my labors in several Islands, some 200 miles away where there are hundreds of members of the church baptized by Grouard, and by Elders ordained by him; all these wish to come into the Reorganization. Catholics and Protestants have tried till they got tired of it, to convince these people of their error in believing in a church of the same faith, and order, and organization as that of Paul and Peter's day. Some how or other, they cannot make these people believe there is any resemblance between the burial and resurrection of Christ, as illustrated in baptism by immersion, and the sprinkling of a few drops of water on the head. They say they do not bury people by dropping a few grains of sand or earth on their heads; nor can they see how they are following the example of Christ by being baptized out of (for they could not be baptized in) a bowl.

The more the whole case is looked into, the more flimsy the structures called churches, look, when compared with the church of Christ. I used a little argument to-day that caused some flutter among those not of our faith. I showed that the church is the bride, or wife of Christ, and is called the "Lamb's wife." Then I showed that Jesus had condemned polygamy in the books; then I suggested the idea, that, if there was more than one church of Christ, or more than one wife of the Lamb, then he was violating his own laws, and was a polygamist. The form, and features, the habiliments and ornaments of the bride of Christ could be readily discerned in the New Testament, and there was no need of being deceived by women (or churches) of different form and features; differently, and very scantily clothed, and without ornaments at least of the kind and character that adorned the bride of the Lamb, even if they did claim to be his bride, and laid claims to his favor and fortune. They readily saw the point, for they are quick to discern. I expect to leave for Koukura in a few days, and then in a week or two, if any way opens, I think of returning to Papeete for a month or so; and then go either to Aana or Tepue, one about 100 miles east of Tahiti, the other about 200 south. I feel the need every week of a small hand press, that I could print small sheets, say about 7 by 9 inches. Much good could be etfected by printing sheets, containing extracts from the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, etc. What could such a one be had for, with type sufficient? I wish you would see what one could be got for.

THOS. W. SMITH.

Brighton, Cal., July 8th, 1885.

Bro. Blair: I have just returned from Stockton, Cal., where I have been preaching, or laboring for the past six weeks with good results. I have baptized fourteen, with the united effort of the Saints. The Saints at Stockton have been neglected. For some cause or other no Elders have visited them for nearly a year, which is a shame, as they have no Elder in that city. Bro. John Nightingale has invited the Elders to come to Stockton, time and again; but they seem to to think that no good can be done in that city, which is a wrong idea. There is no danger but what an Elder will be cared for. He will get glenty to eat, and a place to sleep, providing he does not want to sleep too long. Any active Elder that will go to work and move around among among the people will meet a hearty welcome at Stockton, for there is as good and as noble Saints in Stockton as there is on the Pacific Coast. Bro. John Nightingale says his house is open for any Elder that will come and work, not only on the Sabbath but every day, going from house to house. He says he has a gospel horse and buggy that he will use to carry any Elder around the city, or in the country, which I know he will do, for he has carried me about one hundred and fifty miles outside of the city limits. The Stockton Branch is alive again, with her fourteen new members all alive to the work, and enjoying the gifts of the gospel in tongues, visions, and dreams. We had a time long to be remembered, July 5th, in our sacrament and testimony meeting. I am sorry to have to retire from the field, for I believe that if I could continue in Stockton, with the aid of the Saints there would be a great ingathering in that city; for God was with me. Never had I better liberty in my life, and I hope that the good work that has commenced will be followed by one that is more competent to labor in the service of God than myself: for I feel that I am the weakest in the field; but I have not been alone, for God was with me; yes, in power. I have baptized fifteen since our District Conference, but now I will have to devote my time in trying to open up my mines. If I had the means to hire it done, I should do so, and remain in the field. I have to run one hundred feet of a tunnel, then I think I can devote my time in the field; for I believe it will prove to be a rich mine. I have written for no other purpose than to draw the attention of some of the Elders that are anxious to find a place to preach, that they may see by this lettter that they need not be afraid of Stockton. If they will keep humble, having the Spirit of God with them, they will be blessed with the confidence of the Saints and there assistance to support him in warning the inhabitants of that city; for the people are anxious to hear the gospel, and many will receive it, if the Spirit of God is with those who preach there.

I remain yours in gospel bonds,
THOMAS DALEY.

WILBER, Neb., June 26th, 1885.

Dear Herald: At the time of my last communication, written for publication, I was at Mt. Hope, and was negotiating with the Christian Church of Dorchester for the holding of a joint meeting, and promised to report progress. Elder Shields their Pastor, expressed himself as quite willing to enter into such an engagement, provided that the church would agree thereto. We waited upon those having the oversight of the church (I suppose both the spiritual and temporal interests), and told our errand, explaining the position we occupied in relation to the doctrine of Christ as it is found in the New Testament, pledging that nothing of a controversial nature would be introduced by us with a view of disturbing or destroying the faith and hope of any in the light and life-giving principles of God's revealed truth. They ask for time to consider our proposition, and after waiting for several days, we were not in the least disappointed, at their declining. For the present we will let the matter rest, but shall seek to make a favorable opportunity to tell the glad news to those who have expressed an anxious desire to hear the word of truth. A slight of this nature only plants within any heart the conviction that in all such places, it would be acceptable to the Father to there erect an altar unto righteousness. I spoke three times at Mt. Hope, the congregations were large and attentive; but best of all the blessing of clear thought and liberty of speech was bestowed to comfort and build us up. Several are requesting our return, and in the good pleasure of providence will comply therewith.

On the 9th, I came here, and with the advice and consent of the authorities here, I labored in doctrine and ordinance. Perhaps I have spent more time in this immediate vicinity than some think I should devote to one place. The only excuse I have to offer is this: I have sought to be guided by the true interest of the cause, and the Holy Spirit. And I will patiently await the developments of time to prove the correctness or mistake of my judgment. While upon this theme, allow me to state that the result of my observation and experience is, that the missionary is the best qualified to decide as to time and locality for labor. Many times I have yielded to the wish of others, and the labor was not productive of the result expected or hoped for. "But wisdom is justified of her children," was the answer made by the Master to the fault-finder and complainer of his day.

On the 19th and 20th, I rode some forty-five miles in an open buggy, and the sun came down upon us with an unwelcome warmth. Found Sister Ella Redfield, late of Shenandoah, Iowa, at the town of Blue Springs. And a Sister Leach at the town of Wymore. There are a great number of members living in this State in a scattered condition. I wish that more could be done to feed these wanderers on the bread of Heaven. However, their being thus scattered gives a golden opportunity of preaching the truth on the beautiful plains of this rapidly developing commonwealth. I pray earnestly that the time will soon arrive when every Saint will arise to the discharge of their every duty, that the untold thousands, who are sitting in the mists of uncertainty and spiritual darkness, shall have the gospel in its purity presented to them. So strong is the conviction that prompts this prayer, that I believe the time will reveal the fact, that some have not kept pace with the progress the cause is making. Hence those who lag, will lose their place in the ranks of the "army of the Lord."

At the Hand School-house, I held four meetings which were well attended, and the people urged me to come again or send some other Elder, so that they might see if we all told the same story. I have hopes that at some future date, there will be an increase to the body at that place, that the twenty-eight discourses preached there will be "bread cast upon the waters, to be gathered after many days hence."

I returned there on the 24th, and am now engaged in holding "tent" meetings. Bro. Levi Anthony obtained the loan of the "G. A. R." tent, which will hold about seventy-five persons; and with those who come in and those who stand close enough to hear, we have quite an attendance.

Crops are looking fine, and the gospel-field is inviting.

In bonds.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

COLDWATER, Michigan, July 7th, 1885.

Dear Brother Blair:—I was on the way to the General Annual Conference held at Independence, when I last wrote. I was thankful to God for the privilege of attending it, and was much edified and greatly encouraged in the work, during its session, and have tried to move forward with renewed trust and energy. And while I look upon it as being in many features, one of the grandest of the Reorganized Church, I wish to say in justice to myself, that, the conference minutes to the contrary notwithstanding, I favored the "mercy" referred to in the revelation given us there by both "voice and vote," as I then understood its reference.

On Sunday following the adjournment of conference, I was with the Saints of the Delana Branch, near Cameron, Mo., and spoke twice for them, the audience being fair sized and attentive. While there I was the guest mainly of Bro. J. S. Constance and family,—cousins—whom I had not met for years. My visit among those Saints as elsewhere all along the line was very pleasant indeed. The Wednesday evening following this, I had the pleasure of speaking to a goodly number at Stewartsville, Mo., with liberty, on the establishment of the "Mountain of the Lord's house," in the latter days; and at the conclusion of the service we were favored with some fine specimens of music, by the musically noted Kinneman family. It reminded us of our childhood's days, and suggested fancies of the days to come. when around the throne of Christ in Zion, when God in her palaces for refuge shall be known, the children shall sing for gladness and shout aloud for joy; and I wondered whether I would really stand among them in the holy courts. Will I see the Savior as adored by the throng all robed in white; behold their reverential worship; hear the divinely inspired strains of heavenly music; join in the holy devotion and attune my voice to mingle in and help swell the chorus of celestial melody that shall then give expression to the joys of the redeemed! But let us drop back now from this brief flight and remember that experiences, labors, and tribulation here, are neccessary to discipline, cleanse, and sanctify us for that happy abode and its triumphs.

Sunday, April the 26th, I was permitted to worship with the Saints at Lamoni, and by request spoke twice; and the only thing I now feel that I ought to apologize for is, that in my awkardness in the stand, I unintentionally put my foot on Bro. Blair's toes—not his metaphysical but physical—and hope the wound of the toe, was not taken to heart.

After visiting briefly, but very pleasantly, among the Saints and friends at Lamoni, Davis City and Leon, I turned my face eastward and arrived at home and my field of labor, April 30th, and found the Saints and "home ones" at Galien, in fair health and good spirits; but the flock there one less in number, having suffered the loss by death of that aged but ever faithful Saint, Mother White. Taking leave of "dear ones at home" May 15th, again I began labor for the Master at Dimondale, Mich., and vicinity, and continued to do battle for the cause till June 26th, taking occasion however to visit Weboerville, a point twenty miles east of Lansing, once during this time.

At Webberville the little band composed mostly of sisters, are firmly and determinedly holding the fort against superior numbers who are armed with false reports and clad in prejudice, attempting to capture our works. But their efforts so far have proved unavailing. Meetings there are held regularly under the superintendence mainly of Sister Billinsky, one of the faithful. Bro. Cornish more than any other has labored there for us, and done a good work. I held nine services with the Saints at Webberville, baptized one-Brother George M. Frey,-and did what we could to strengthen and edify the Saints, and also to inform the friends concerning the gospel of Christ as restored. We hope to hear of honest hearted ones being added to their number at no distant day, through their honest, faithful living.

At Dimondale and vicinity, the opening made has been maintained in the midst of strong opposition from the first, of a character akin to that at first manifested against our Elders in Utah. People are warned by their ministry not to come to our meetings, and not to investigate. And some of the church members there have been called to account by their church for attending our meetings! thus reminding us of the presumption of the august lordly ministers of the dark ages requiring penance of their duped followers for some ex post facto or foolish and pretended sin. Freedom of conscience, tolerance of investigation, and the right of individual judgment would be denied us, if some of these self-constituted teachers could control us. How unlike are these men to the Savior who said to the people, "Why do ye not of your own selves judge that which is right?" But in the midst of all the difficulties, persecutions, and opposition attending the work there, those obedient to the faith, with other friends, have stood firm, and we are slowly gaining ground. Mr. Oliver, who in his youthful days belonged to the Catholic Church, but has now outgrown the iron clad customs of that body, and who believes now in the right of all to be heard in their views on questions relating to the good of mankind here and hereafter, has opened his hall to our Elders from the first, and has more recently donated its use to us free, deserves honorable mention. He believes the faith, and we apprehend his good conscience will give him no rest till he becomes obedient.

June 25th, we had the pleasure of baptizing two ladies of excellent report, near Bro. Wheeler's, and of confirming them at his house. One, Sister Keeler, the mother of Bro. M. Beebee of Cameron, Mo., the other, Sister Cilly, who, though a lady of excellent qualities and character, and of middle age, yet had never belonged to any church, a fact which will not at all militate against her growth and progress in the faith of the gospel. We hope the Saints will pray for these young and inexperienced Saints at Dimondale.

Saturday, June 27th, we were in attendance at the conference of the Michigan and Northern Indiana District, near the city of Coldwater. And notwithstanding the late season, we were very happily disappointed in meeting such a goodly number or Saints, representing all parts of the district. Bro. W. H. Kelley presided in his usual, genial, thoughtful, and deliberate manner, and great peace and unity characterized the entire session. Business was transacted in the spirit of amity, and with the best of feeling. The Lord graciously blessed the Saints with much of the Spirit during the various services. Preaching services were largely attended, and the preaching of the word, so far as we listened to it, was attended with the Spirit, and was edifying and encouraging. During the intermission on Sunday, Bro. Kelley baptized two-one a sister Trout of Grand Rapids, the other Sister Conat of Manistee. A number of the people and afflicted ones were administered to, both on Sunday and Monday, and the power of God was present to bless and cheer.

On Monday, before assembling for services, we administered the rite of baptism to Sister Ella Casper, who is doubtless remembered by many at Lamoni. The concluding service on Monday was one of the most notable meetings I ever attended. A deep spiritual feeling was manifest, strong testimonies to the truth of the work were borne and the gospel gifts were manifested to the joy of all. We feel greatly encouraged with the present prospects of the work, and we are very hopeful of good and great results to accrue to the work from all around. We trust the voice of the Elders may be heard by the masses in Utah as their errors are pointed out to them, and that by the time the impositions of their leaders, of a financial character, are opened up to them by our Bishopric, they will be found willing to turn and walk in the old reliable paths. We pray for their release, as that of all, from the bondage of sin and evil, and the success of the glorious work.

Your brother in hope,

C. Scott.

IS TITHING IN KIND A LEGAL TENDER.

I desire to first place myself on record as fully endorsing tithing as taught in the books, as far as I understand it, and as administered by the Bishopric and the Twelve. I am not writing to find fault with the present system, but to lead the minds of some of my brethren, who write on these subject, to think as to whether the tithing might not be much increased, and I believed even doubled, if the Bishop's Agents were authorized to receive "tithing in kind." Abraham paid his tithing in kind, "a tenth of the spoils," (Heb. 7:4). Malachi, third chapter, tenth verse, carries out to the writer this idea. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat, [food, provisions], in mine house," etc. In Doctrine and Doc. and Cov., sec. 42, "the residue shall be kept in my storehouse," etc. Section 51, par. 4, "And again, let the Bishop appoint a storehouse unto this church, and let all things both in money and in meat, * * * be kept in the hands of the Bishop. The commencement of this revelation says, par. 1, "For it must needs be that they are organized according to my laws, if otherwise they will be cut off;" and the fourth paragraph says, "And thus I grant unto this my people a privilege of organizing themselves according to my law." Question: Does not this grant to the people the privilege of paying tithing in kind. Also the law contemplates the keeping storehouses by Bishop's Agents, see sec. 70, par. 3, "And behold, none are exempt from this law, who belong to the church of the living God; yea, neither the Bishop, neither the Agent who keepeth the Lord's storehouse."

So much for tithing in kind being in harmony with the letter of the law. It may be urged, would not men selling their cows, hogs, and potatoes, etc., and handing the money to the Bishop, or Agent, fill the law, and is it not a more convenient way for Bishop and Agent to receive it; and would it not cost much for these storehouses? I would answer, that if the Saints, farmers, would sell their tithes of produce, and hand it in in cash, it would fill the law, and be more handy; but I am well satisfied by observation, that where men pay a dollar in cash, there are many who would pay five, if they had it, in kind. There are many men who think nothing of giving a load of corn or hay, who, when they have sold it for cash, would not half as readily part with it. It seems bigger in their eyes, and sticks closer to their fingers now. I will suppose a man living in a branch of the church where the agent lives, say two miles from his house. He would be willing to haul the load to the Bishop's house, or deliver it to the family of some missionary, say within two to four miles. But the Bishop's Agent would say, I have no authority to receive corn; sell it for whatever it is worth, and bring me the cash. The man is quite willing, that is the inner man, the spirit, and he starts out to haul the corn to the railroad station, say twelve miles. He gets five dollars for his load. He breaks something about his harness, or wagon; has to break into his five dollars, and once broken into, it goes for various little necessaries for house. He has spent a day in hauling the corn. The loss of time in hauling corn, the loss of the price of the corn, and the loss of selling corn when the market is low, would not only pay the expense of store-house, i. e., corn crib, but the agent's time in taking care of and selling by car load at proper time and place, much more in the Lord's treasury. I only write these few crude thoughts to start an examination on both sides of the question.

POLITENESS.

There has been much said, and a good deal written on this nice little—big subject; but presuming that a few words in addition might not be out of place, I essay to express an opinion. It has been said, and that very truthfully too, that cleanliness is akin to godliness. This we believe to be true; and it is the humble opinion of the writer that politeness is closely related to both the former. Cleanliness may, and sometimes does exist without godliness; but to presume that we can be godly and not cleanly, is, to say the least, a gross error.

But we were writing of politeness. According to my understanding, the family, the "home circle," is the best place to make use of this verry desirable and beautiful principle. Everybody loves to see a well regulated household, and especially when the family come to surround the breakfast or dinner table. Certainly this is a good time and place to manifest our politeness, if we have any. To see all quietly seated, and, as with the voice of one, the divine blessing invoked, the humble thank-offering ascending to our Father in heaven; then, to see the one at the head of the table, (for there should always be a head), do the honors by serving those who are seated with him—the ladies first of course, as a matter of taste, of etiquette, and politeness. I do not speak because I care for myself; but I dearly love to see the ladies sitting at table waited upon before the gentlemen. And, all jokes aside, I think where this rule is unobserved, there certainly is a lack of politeness. And then, I think it polite that there should be a little enlivening conversation while we surround the board; an inocent joke; or a dash at repartee, would probably aid our digestion and be a good thing generally. I believe it to be the duty of all parents, and especially among the Saints, to teach their children to be obedient unto parents and guardians; to be self-reliant; respectful to all; and, in a word, teach them politeness.

A FEW MORE OBJECTIONS TO THE GEOLOGICAL STORY.

It may be true that it is not needful to our salvation to believe or disbelieve the story of Geology; but the story as it is told is a great stumbling block in the way of the unbeliever, coming as it does from the foremost men of the age, the unbeliever often without examination accepts it as a fact and uses it as a weapon against the cause of truth.

There is one reason why men do not arrive at the truth, and that is they have set up a false standard, and have sought to bring all that will support their standard as evidence of the facts that what they know of it is true, and the only true solution of the question under consideration; thus they are they who are forever learning, but never coming to a knowledge of the truth; for no matter how honest their intentions may be, they can not have the aid of the Spirit of promise that leads unto all truth. So that they are lost in a mist of confusion, out of which they can not come, while they seek to uphold the false standard they have set up.

That Chief among the Apostles of unbelief, Ingersoll, tells us that the story of the sun standing still can not be true; for to stop the earth would derange the whole planetary system, as he claims that the earth is turning on its axis at the rate of one thousand miles an hour, and to have stopped it, would have generated heat enough to burn a lump of coal three times the size of this globe. He may, or may not, know the speed of the earth; but such reasonings do not accord with observation. Railroad cars, flywheels, and circular saws, are all run at a high rate of speed, and often stopped in a few seconds; but we never have heard of any fear of danger to the axles being made hot by such stoppages.

The writer has in mind a shaft that was sunk to a great depth to a vein of coal; the fiery gasses came forth in such dense volumes that it was not safe to have a light or fire of any kind near the mouth of the shaft; and as it would take some weeks of work in the mine ere there could be air enough sent down the mine to even use a safety lamp, the coal company's agent had a great reflector erected on the top of the shaft which reflected light of the sun to another reflector at the bottom of the shaft, this giving light to the workmen which enabled them to complete the work. Here was an instance the of sun not only standing still part of one day, but for weeks together, yet so little did it derange the planetary system that none knew of it except those immediately concerned. But to say that God could in such a way, enable one of his servants who had faith in him to accomplish the work he had commanded him to do, and what a jingling of denials do we hear!

Liebig tells us that he produced coal by subjecting a piece of wood, for some weeks, to great heat and pressure, and he has set up the theory that the rest has followed, that coal was once wood, yet they all do not agree; for so few are the specimens of vegetation found in coal, more especially in the anthracite, that some claim it is oil in a baked and hardened state. We do know that coal subjected to great heat takes fire, the tary and resinous matter passes away in smoke, leaving a denser and purer carbon. Soapstone subjected to heat becomes hard, and all the shells and other remains of the sea life are destroyed. And it is too well known, the effects of heat on limestone, to need description. And since therein, and also in the soapstones, are found many beautiful specimens of shells in such a good state of preservation as to be easily known, we have good reasons to deny the heat and pressure theory.

Hugh Miller tells us of a friend of his who went in search of coal, sinking a shaft over one hundred feet finding many specimens and fragments of cone-bearing trees and other evidences of vegetation, but no coal. Also of another man in Wales who was at great expense to find coal, but did not find it, though the evidence of vegetation was not wanting. And all who have seen the imprint that the leaves, stems, or branches, have left in the rocks, as plain to be seen as the shells, have good reason to doubt the whole story that coal is vegetable; for if heat and pressure turns wood into coal, all such surely would be changed, no matter how small the specimens found.

Coal is found in veins of a few inches to ten, twenty, and sometimes ninety feet in thickness. Overlaying each other in some localities, there are as many as twenty veins; and it is said that in Nova Scotia there are over seventy veins, one of which is in some parts sixty feet thick, while there are others that are fifteen and twenty feet thick; and the theory is that the forest grew, the ocean swept, and sediment overlaid the buried forest, again the ocean retires, another forest grows to be swept and buried, and so on it has been for untold ages. And the theory tells that the earth was under a great tropical heat; that ferns and other vegetation grew to a gigantic size. This is to accommodate the vegetable theory to the great mass of vegetation needed to furnish the big veins. But I have yet to see the gigantic fossil remains of vegetation, as all I have ever found in the red sandstone or elsewhere were like the oak-leaves, twigs, acorns, or the elm, and other trees, as we know them to-day. But what has become of the coal of the tropical lands? where are they? and how is it that the beds are mostly all found in the temperate regions of the earth? and the farther north the more numerous and thicker the veins? To remove all doubts of the vegetable theory of the formation of coal, they tell us that the six days of creation were periods of time that may have been each from one to five hundred thousand years, or even more; for like the Evolutionists, they are not particular to a few million years, more or less, if it does but help out their theory. They tell us the Lord knows all his work, he lives in one eternal now, to him there is no time; yet we learn he does all in his own due time. We are also informed that the planet Kolob is the Lord's time keeper, and that it completes a revolution once in a thousand years,—a thousand years is as a day with the Lord.

It is said that order is heavens first law; and without time there could be no order. And it is written, "There is a time for everything," and that a book of remembrance is kept. There is nothing so important as time; for all would be confusion without it.

When we look within ourselves, we know that time is one of our faculties; and since all we possess comes from God our Father, it really seems strange that they who lay claim to such great wisdom should have overlooked this fact. Yet these are but a few illustrations of the foolish blindness that has beclouded the vision of those wise in their own wisdom; puffed up in the pride of their hearts; seeking to be teachers of truth, but in reality are blind leaders; so that it is well for every earnest searcher after truth to heed not their sayings, and look not unto man for wisdom, for therein is much vexation. But he who looks unto God will assuredly receive the "line upon line," here and there the little that will plant firm, abiding faith that all such vain reasonings can not destroy. And there is wisdom, great wisdom, in the books of God: yea, great treasures of knowledge; and he who truly seeks shall surely find.

HOLINESS.

"Thou hast made us for Thyself, and the heart never resteth, until it finds rest in Thee." That perfect rest, and perfect peace can be found, none can deny who believe the gospel of Christ. And besides the many promises contained in the word of God to lead us on to the attainment of this higher life, these are commands that no believer would knowingly disregard. We all know by happy experience that obedience brings pardon, and prepares the way for communion with the Father through the Son, but we also know by sad and disappointing experience that it does not lift the soul above the cares and worry of life. Obedience to the command-"Be ve holy"—if obeyed in faith believing, will lift the soul at once and forever above the distressing perplexities of life; and the command—"Be afflicted for nothing, but in everything, with prayer and thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God"—can be habitually, peacefully, and restfully obeyed. BLIND ZEAL.

THERE is a way which seemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death."—Prov. 14: 12.

It is a sad thing to believe that this prophetic declaration, is established as a truthful condition of religion at the present time. The evidences are too prolific and commonplace to make a successful denial of the fact, and it seems so strange that the wise man should be able to so accurately point out the cause of many making the mistake. Those who should be faithful guides to the pilgrims from sin to salvation, departed out of the true way themselves, are filling up the same measure of those in the Savior's day; they seek not the "pearl of great price." "But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."—Matt. 15:9.

The reason why the way seems right,

The reason why the way seems right, is because those who should be the oracles of God are walking in the path of wrong, as pointed out by Micah 3: 11, "The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money: yet will they lean upon the Lord, and say, Is not the Lord among us? None evil can come upon us." Thus it is, and ever has been, the preacher is the responsible party for the introduction and following of false ways

God has manifested his loving kindness toward man in warning the people against those who are not in possession of the right way. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world."—1 John 4: 1.

Were the people wise unto salvation, they would give earnest heed to this timely admonition and faithful exhortation; but instead of complying therewith, they seem to run greedily after husks, and submit themselves as willing victims to every venial sin, and to all the vagaries of so-called piety; and we are constrained to lift up our voice and cry out, long and loud, "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land; the prophets prophecy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means, and my people love to have it so: and what will ye do in the end thereof?"

-Jer. 5:30, 31. Here is a very pointed question to the people by the prophet, and must be answered at some time. Nor will it do that the people shall excuse themselves, for they compromise truth, by furnishing means, and love to have the priests bear rule by the weapon supplied, and when a people abandon the truth and take delight only in unrighteousness, they are ripe for deception and iniquity; therefore it would not be in anywise astonishing to find that their blind zeal, and sinful desires, caused a visitation of wrath.—"And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."-2 Thess. 2: 11, 12.

I am aware that this looks a little harsh, that God would thus bring under condemnation those who would not believe the truth;

but when it shall be remembered that God never deprives anyone of his agency, and that He invites all to "walk in the old paths; and when they in the exercise of the volition of their own will shall prefer "a way which seemeth right," they should not complain, nor murmur if their loss be great, and their punishment severe. A safe rule to adopt to avoid rejecting the counsel of the Almighty, is to accept and abide in the healthy instructions of Saint John, wherein he announces; "For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an anti-Christ. Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward. Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds."—2 Jno, 7-11. Instead of a wise application of the above advice, those who in their blind zeal are in the "way" which seemeth right, condemn, unheard, all those who do not worship at their shrine of "the unknown," and unknownable God. They might be saved both confusion and shame here, and eternal loss in the hereafter, could they be induced to examine themselves, whether they be in "the faith." 2 Cor. 13: 5. This duty imposed upon all, that there shall be a selfexamination, clearly indicates the importance of a due understanding of what it takes to constitute the doctrine of Christ, and man's responsibility thereto. rance of God's law and loose compliance therewith, or a neglect thereof, will be sure to place any or all who will so conduct themselves in a condition to be influenced to a great extent, or, still worse, be overcome by those dangerous characters who are ready to make sport of every humble follower of the Lamb, and find fault with every expression of confidence and hope in the promises of God; "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts."—2 Peter 3: 3. It is to be expected that those who reject all forms of religion, will treat lightly the requirements of God. But the champion scoffers are those who "having a form of godliness, but" deny "the power thereof."—2 Tim. 3: 5. They having made choice in their blinded zeal of "a way that seemeth right, are forever excusing themselves for their overt act, of omission or commission pertaining to duties, and are ever finding fault with those who are seeking and urging that "man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth God."—Matt. 4:4. After reading the plain and unmistak-

After reading the plain and unmistakably evidence that zealous workers inspired from some other source than from on high, should be found industriously spreading abroad the work of their Master. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy: having their conscience seared with a hot iron."—I Tim. 4:1, 2.

There should be no uncertainty upon the part of any as to the true meaning of the above scripture, that on account of a zeal not of God, but with a desire to serve their own lusts, are these workers of evil ever prompted to advance their own vile cause, and to heap reproach and shame upon those who are willing to bear the cross of Christ, in meekness for love to humanity. If the following advice was duly appreciated, the experience of many would be much improved. "If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness; he is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself. But godliness with contentment is great gain."-2 Tim. 6: 3-6. Then add to the foregoing this wholesome counsel,-"Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear; ye shall recieve a crown of glory that fadeth not away."—1 Pet. 5: 2-4.

When men shall do as above directed, and guide all their words and works as God hath appointed, and cease to be proud in heart, then they will not be found in the "way that seemeth right," but as true children of the light walk in the path of holiness and acceptance with God, and the angel of peace will come and proclaim that "God is come into the camp" of those who are "arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of Saints." May I be worthy to be so clothed.

RELIGION VERSUS SUPERSTITION.

PURE and undefiled religion is faith in God, expressed in the faithful observance of his commands. Superstition is a belief without evidence, often traditional, and is maintained in ignorance. Religion elevates, purifies, refines. Superstition low-ers and degenerates. One appeals to the intellect, informs the judgment, and inspires an intelligent hope. The other intimidates, take advantage of the stultified senses, and precipitates its victim into all manner of inconsistencies and follies. The first inspires, enlivens, beautifies, and clothes nature itself in garlands of exquisite hue. The second contracts the brain, narrows the vision and takes from life its chiefest features of attraction. Religion makes men free, and places them in a high condition of moral responsibility to God. Superstition engenders bondage and impairs human agency. The one makes brave, true-hearted men; the other, cringing cowards. Religion developes the finer qualities of the soul; it teaches men to do right because of a regard and love for the right. Superstition threatens, and its devotees bow in menial servitude, hoping to evade the demands of justice. One is superior, the other inferior. One is noble and grand, the other mean and contemptible. One prepares people for heaven, the other fits them only for a dark abode.

Religion makes a kind and beneficent husband, a tender father; superstition makes despots and tyrants. The virtue and sentiment of the former are incorporated in the laws of republican institutions; while the partiality, injustice, and inequality of the latter, form the chief pillar in despotic government. Religion is on the side of truth; it is mighty and will prevail. Superstition is born of ignorance, maintained in wickedness, and is doomed to die. The light and glory of one will succeed the darkness and gloom of the other. The earth shall be clothed in the rich habiliments of peace and love, while wickedness shall be exiled from that fair domain.

BY ELDER D. H. BAYS.

CHAPTER VI.

WHY WAS THE LAW ABOLISHED.

The old covenant, or law, was faulty; and was repealed because of these imperfections, as will appear from the following. Says Paul:—"For if that first covenant [which we have shown to be the Decalogue] had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second. For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah."—Heb. 8:7–8.

Had the apostle referred to any covenant other than the "ten commandments," he would doubtless have used the pronoun "it," to agree with the singular noun "covenant." But instead of this he employs the plural pronoun "them," which agrees with the plural noun "commandments," understood. Substituting the term "ten commandments" for the word "covenant," the passage would read thus: "For if the ten commandments had been faultless," &c.; thus showing the Decalogue itself, as well as all other laws derived from it as the basic law, was imperfect, and must give place to the new and everlasting covenant.

Another reason offered by the apostle for repealing the law, is that it is weak and unprofitable. "For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof. For the law made nothing perfect."—Heb. 7:18, 19.

Yes, the law was weak and unprofitable, for the reason that it made nothing perfect. The law being imperfect, could not "make the comorn thereunte perfect".

the comers thereunto perfect."

Hence, the divine lawgiver ordained that the imperfect law should be "disanulled," to make way for the "perfect law of liberty." That the law, with all its institutions was understood by the apostle Paul to have been abolished, is apparent from the following:

"We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles, knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified."—Gal 2:15, 16.

Here we have a positive declaration that no man is "justified" by the works of the law. The Seventh-day Sabbath is a part of the law. As no man is justified by the law, then no man is justified by keeping the Seventh-day Sabbath. Then why keep the law? Why would the apostle use the above language, if we are still under the law?

"Well," says the objector, "we admit the law of Moses—the ceremonial law was abolished; but we deny that the ten commandments are any part of the law in question." Suppose we give a little thought to this objection.

Our Sabbatarian friends, as already stated, claim that there are two laws, namely the Moral and the Ceremonial. Neither the term "moral law," nor "ceremonial law," can be found in the Bible, and hence we deny the existence of any such two distinctive laws. The Jewish theology consists of forms and ceremonies—forms of law enjoining a high degree of morality, and numerous imposing ceremonies. The existence of "two laws" under the Mosaic dispensation, are but the ideal creations of men, and not to be found in Israelitish history as we have it recorded in the Bible. Until good reliable authority can be produced upon this point, we shall be content with a bare denial of the assumed premise. When the divine writers therefore speak of "the law," they speak of it as a system, with all its institutions and appointments. They use the term in its broadest, and not in a restricted sense. Hence, as the Seventh-day Sabbath was one of the institutions of the law, observance of which is enjoined as absolutely as that which relates to circumcision or sacrifices, when it is conceded that the law enjoining the one no longer exists, it is but a tacit admission that the other is no longer binding.

In the third chapter of his letter to the Galatians, Paul presents a striking contrast between the law of "works" and the law of "faith," in the following language:

"This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident. For the just shall live by faith. And the law is not of faith."

-Gal. 3: 2, 11, 12.

Here we have the broad statement, and in the most emphatic language, that "no man is justified by the law"—not by the works of the law, but by the law itself. If "the law" can not "justify" a man, it can not sanctify him; and if he can not be sanctified by it, in the Scriptural sense of that term, he can not be saved. Hence, we have the logical deduction from the premise, that "that law" can not save a man. If the law, as a system, can not save men, then, certainly no particular portion of that law can do so; from the admitted fact in logic that a part is never equal to the whole. The Seventh-day Sabbath is a part of the law; therefore the Seventh day Sabbath can not save men. A law that can not save a fallen race, is only fit to be "abolished," and give place to one of broader scope, and greater power.

In the passage quoted above, the apostle says—"the law is not of faith." again, that, "whatsoever is not of faith is sin," (Rom. 14:23). Therefore, to rely on the law is sin since the gospel superceded We observe that the law is sin, because it is "done away." For "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace."—Gal. 5:4. And inasmuch as Christ abolished the law of works, and established in its stead the new law of faith, the gospel, it certainly is sinful to adhere to the former, and disregard the latter, and thereby ignore the grace of God in the gift of his Son Jesus Christ. But says one "Can I not observe a part of the law, and not be placed under obligation to observe it all?" Let the apostle Paul answer:

"For as many as are of the works of the law, are under the curse: for it is written, cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them."—Gal. 3: 10.

If you observe any part of the law, you thereby become a "debtor to the whole law."—Gal. 5:3. In view of this fact, the apostle very significantly asks: "Wherefore then serveth the law?" Verse 19. And then answers as follows:

"It was added because of trangression, till the seed should come to whom, the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator. Is the law then against the promise of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law. But the Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe. But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed. Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come we are no longer under the schoolmaster."—Gal. 3: 19–25.

Upon a careful examination of the above text, we learn the following facts:

I.—The law was added because of transgression, and was to continue only "till the seed should come."

2.—That this promised seed was Christ; (see verse 17); and hence, the law was to continue only till Christ.

3.—That the law could not prevent the fulfillment of the promise to Abraham, made four hundred and thirty years before the law was given, which could not have been the case had the law not been "taken away."

4.—That "if there had been a law given, which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." Righteousness is not by the Law, but "by faith of Fesus Christ."

but "by faith of Jesus Christ."
5.—That "before faith came" we were "kept under the law, shut up unto the faith" to "be revealed."

6.—That the Law was but a "school-master" to bring us to Christ; and,

7.—Now that "faith is come," we are "no longer under the schoolmaster," and hence, no longer under the Law.

What law is referred to is made plain by the apostle in the chapter succeeding the one now under consideration. Lest some may not understand him he introduces the two sons of Abraham to represent to two laws, or covenants, namely, the Sinaitic and the Christian, and declares that the former like the "bondwoman and her son," were "cast out," while the latter, like the "free woman" and her son Isaac, were retained. So we arrive at the legitimate conclusion that the old covenant, with all its institutions, including the Seventh-day Sabbath, has been disannulled, and is no longer binding upon the children of men.

Another potent reason for believing the law promulgated from Sinai should be repealed is, that it was wholly restricted in its operations to the Israelitish people. For this one reason, if for no other, it would appear to be actually necessary that it should be superceded by a system broad enough in its provisions, to include every nationality under the whole heavens.

This seems to have been the apostle Paul's view of the matter, as appears from the following extract: "But now, in Christ Jesus, ye who sometime were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our peace who hath made both [Jew and Gentile] one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments, contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both [Jew and Gentile] unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby." Eph. 2: 13–16.

Thus, it appears, the Jews considered the Gentiles "far off" from God, having "no part or lot in the matter;" and as a consequence, thought they had no promise of salvation. This barrier between the two peoples was effectually "broken down" in the ministry of Christ. Under the law the Gentiles were called "strangers and foreigners" to the "covenant of promise," but now, under the dispensation when men are governed by a new law, they are "no more foreigners and strangers, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." (Verse 10).

and of the household of God." (Verse 19).

The "law of commandments," stood as a "middle wall of partition," separating Jew and Gentile, and formed a barrier absolutely insurmountable.

Jesus, by his divine teachings while in the flesh, removed this barrier; broke down this middle wall of partition which had long separated one nation from another, and invites all nations, whether they be Jew or Gentile, to stand upon a higher plane. He abolished the law of commandments, by which the Jews had been governed, and instituted a new system, bringing both classes together to stand upon common ground; thus destroying the "enmity" which had ever existed between them, and "so making peace." Under the "new covenant" both Jew and Gentile were "reconciled unto God," the "enmity"—the law—having been "slain" by Christ while "in his flesh."

Should there remain a lingering doubt that the whole Mosaic economy has been obliterated, we think the following will be sufficient to remove it:

"And you, being dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him having forgiven you all trespasses; blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross."—Col 2: 13, 14.

Nothing can be plainer than this. "The handwriting of ordinances," has been "blotted out." To "blot out" is "to efface," "to erase," "to obliterate."—[Webster]. Now, what is the "handwriting of ordinances." The word "ordinance," means "a rule;" "observance commanded." Hence, the term means "a hand writing of rules," with a command enjoining observance. What were the "rules," or "ordinances," by which the Israelites were governed? There is but one answer-the ten commandments, and all other laws based up-on them. This was the only "handwriting" the Almighty ever executed to Israel, (or any one else, for that matter), and hence the apostle employs the definite article, "The handwriting." This hand-writing was made upon "two tables of stone," and contained the ten commandments. The only conclusion to be logically reached is, that the whole Mosaic economy was abolished; "nailed to his cross," "blotted out," "obliterated."

Thus ends the system of government given through Moses for the advancement and control of the Israelitish nation.

THE CRISIS IN MORMORISM.

The Josephite Sect Coming Rapidly to the Front.—Preaching for Mormonism Without Polygamy —A New Dispensation Looked For.
—Polygamous Wives Under Assumed Names.
—How One Mormon was Caught by Telephone

Since the polygamous Mormons became convinced that the present prosecutions were not to be laughed off or dodged, there has been a general advance of the lines of those worthy people who have long been fighting the evil by moral suasion. The Christian missions are unusually busy, and several Josephite Elders are here preaching in the interest of reform and a return to the ways of the original Church. Great interests has been taken in these meetings, particularly those of the Josephites, and it is expected that a good deal may be accomplished.

The Josephites cling to the idea of Mormonism which Joseph Smith, the "martyr," taught—that it is nothing but a supplement to Christianity—and they have always been the inveterate foes of the Brighamites, or polygamists. The Josephites are scattered through the Mississippi valley, and are a very godly people, who grieve in spirit over the degeneracy of their polygamous brethren in Utah. The announcement that Joseph Smith, a son of the prophet, whom Mormons of every description hold dear, would preach here, was received with great interest, and every time that he has spoken he has been greeted by large audiences, made up of Josephites, Gentiles, Utah Mormons, and Saints. The burden of his remarks has been that Israel is scattered, and that there must be some great underlying cause. He has shown that in fifteen years after the discovery of the Book of Mormon there were more than 200,000 converts, and now, he says, fifty years later, there are not that many members of the Church. After explaining the hardships which the brethren had suffered, he declared it to be his opinion that no improvement in the situation of affairs could be expected unless Israel should return to the law.

Reading freely from the Bible and from the Book of Mormon, and drawing comparisons between the condition of the people now and that of Israel when it had offended, he has argued that no one could deny the truth of his assertion that the brethren had wandered away after false prophets, and that there was no hope save in their immediate repentance and submission to the will of God. As some of the Utah Mormons, knowing the Josephites were coming, had warned their flocks to beware of the wolf," Joseph Smith criticised them for their lack of charity and fair dealing, and reproached them for their fondness for deception. In reply to the charge that he was sectarian, he declared that he had rather be sectarian and right than unsectarian and wrong, and when he denied that he was sectarian he said that in 1860, when he began his ministry, there were thirteen different sects claiming to be the original Mormons, whereas now there were but two, the Brighamites and Josephites. He had united all the non-polygamous Mormons together and they were prospering abundantly. Besides quoting from the Bible and the Book of Mormon to show that the Brighamites were wrong, Mr. Smith read law to the people, and gave a very clear constitutional argument to show them that the authorities were right. Other members of his communion have made powerful arguments against the polygamy feature, and their sayings have had great weight.

In closing his remarks the other evening, Joseph Smith was interrupted by some man in the audience, who yelled:

"If I can't be a polygamist I will not be a Mormon!"

"That may be true of you," said Smith,

"but as for me, I am differently constituted, and I want no such religion. Mormonism can exist and has existed without it."

Just what effect this sudden onslaught from the Josephites, which is as temperate and gentle as it is sincere and persuasive, will have, it would be hard to say, but it is evident that it has set a great many of the Saints to thinking, and the increasing congregations indicate that many of the Saints are willing to hear, if not to be convinced.

The recent decision of the Territorial Supreme Court affirming the validity of the convictions already had, has had the effect of preparing the brethren for a new dispensation of some kind. They still maintain their accustomed air of bravado, but it is known that they are leaving no stone unturned to destroy the evidence against themselves. Nearly all polygamous wives now go under assumed names, and scores of them are scattered all over the Territory in small settlements. Their husbands have succeeded of late in stimulating them with greater courage and obstinacy than they have shown heretofore, and in three or four cases prosecutions have failed because the testimony which the Government expected from these women has not been forthcoming.

One of the latest arrests was that of F. H. Hansen of Pleasant Green, who is a Dane of only six years' residence in this country, and who has three wives. all of the same nationality as himself. He married his first wife in Denmark, and took the other two soon after coming here. The first wife then rufused to live with him, and set up for herself on a little farm. One of the others lived with Hansen in his house, and the third was domiciled in a dugout made in the side of a mountain, where she had an interesting brood of children. It was the first wife who testified against Hansen, and on her evidence he is likely to get a long sentence.

A prominent Mormon named Jenks, whose friends have said he was not here, but for whom the authorities have kept an anxious lookout, was caught recently in a clever way. A Gentile business man, who had occasion to use Jenks' telephone one day, noticed that the connection was wrong, and before he could get it righted he found that Jenks was talking, and that he supposed he was telling another Saint where to find him. The Gentile listened long enough to get the address, and, putting it in the hands of a deputy marshal, Jenks was nabbed before he had a chance to wonder if his friend was coming. is little things like this which make the Saints hate the Gentiles, and that there is no love lost between them is plainly to be seen every day in the week.

In such a fight as this is, every individual change of opinion becomes of the deepest interest. The people who are making the battle on polygamy were thrown into a rage the other day by the announcement that a young lady school teacher at Silver City, Idaho, named Curtis, had decided to join the Mormons. She had previously had no affiliations with the Saints, so far as is known, and the surprise that was felt at the first announcement was heightened by the discovery later on that she had married an ardent believer in polygamy, though he is not yet an offender in that direction. On the heels of this sorrowful announcement came the report, subsequently found to be true, that one of the numerous wives of Musser, who is now in the penitentiary, is about to apply for a divorce, with the intention of abandoning Mormonism and marrying a man not connected with the Church.

The penitentiary in this Territory is a primitive affair, consisting of a few cheap buildings surrounded by adobe walls. As no industry is carried on, the prisoners pass their time in idleness, and during certain hours of the day enjoy themselves promenading in the enclosure. One day this week a lot of women interested in the welfare of some of the Saints now in prison, went to the place, and took turns boosting each other up to the wall, over which they could look with ease. One of the women saw her husband, and, calling to him, the two had a brief conversation. As this was against the rules of the institution, the offending prisoner was escorted to his cell and the women were driven

A good deal of sympathy is expressed for a young woman named Elizabeth Starkey, who, although only seventeen vears of age, is the polygamous wife of Charles L. White. She appeared to be thoroughly under the influence of her hushand and the dignitaries of the Church, and as she proved a contumacious witness in three different instances, she was sent to the penitentiary on three $50 fines, which will keep her there ninety days at least. The young woman is more than ordinarily attractive, and as she has recently been very ill, her imprisonment is deemed a great hardship. The Judge himself expressed his great regret at being obliged to punish her, as he said he was in duty bound to do with all who obstruct the administration of justice. White comes in for the denunciation of everybody not a Saint .- New York Sun.

MIRACLES.

A miracle is simply a wonder. But in our literature the term refers exclusively to that particular class of wonders denominated miracles in the New Testament. And those who are skeptical as to the claims of Christianity have affirmed of this class of phenomena: "It does not and can not exist."

The miraculous is adjudged by these to be impossible on the grounds of eternal unchangeableness in the laws of Nature. In this they are evidently in error on account of a false definition of terms. If matter were eternal and every known law of Nature unchangeable, it would not for a moment affect our claim for the miraculous. Because a miracle, properly defined, is but an effect produced by putting forth at will, and sometimes instantaneously, a power equivalent to creative or producing energy. A miracle is not above Nature, nor contrary to Nature. It is only a power equivalent to creative or producing energy exercised in harmony with Nature. It took no greater power to give eyesight to the blind, than to give the eye itself in the beginning. It took no greater power to raise the dead, nor does it involve any greater mystery than the birth of a living child.

To the infidel one half of the testimony to any question of fact, outside of the Bible, which is given in regard to miracles, would be conclusive; and instead of attempting to evade it, he would go to work to harmonize it with his theory. It would be an easy matter for him to refer such phenomena to occult causes, the nature of which would be understood further on.

Until the infidel shall have exhausted the store-house of infinite knowledge, he is not and can not be in the condition to dispute the existence of the law of miracles. To doubt is the extent of his creed. He can not deny. No recorded miracle is antagonistic to any known law of Nature. Miracles simply demonstrate the existence of an additional law in God's universe. It is admitted that some forces in Nature have been overcome or destroyed by the interposition of miraculous power, or causes beyond the power of human science to explain. The origin of life, for example. But he who considers this a contradiction, might as well say that Nature contradicts herself, because fire is extinguished by water, or life destroyed by carbonic acid gas.—Microcosnit.

MODERN METHODS.

THE New York Grapic in cold blood publishes the following spleenetic:

"The modern type of evangelist differs greatly from those who in the beginning went forth without script or staff into a hostile world to convert it to Christ and his doctrines. Though poor and illiterate, most of them, they had been taught in the greatest school and by the deepest and sublimest teachers that the world ever knew or ever will know. Consequently their preaching and teaching, though full of zeal, were also full of knowledge and of power, while the daily example of their lives as they moved to and fro among the peoples that followed false gods was in itself the strongest appeal to a higher life. They were sober, earnest men of weighty utterance, wrestling with the intelligence of their hearers as well as with the feelings of their hearts. Thus they effected permanent conversions. But the so-called evangelist of to-day is apt to degenerate into a religious mountebank, who seems to think that religion is to be caught in a spasm, and the conversion of a man or woman's life wrought by a sudden emontional feeling. Spasmodic conversions go out in spasms. Claptrap sayings, jumping ejaculations, pious drivel and religious ribaldry may catch the ear of a gaping crowd for the moment, but they really degrade religion, and tend to bring it into contempt."

CHURCH SOCIABLES.

We have noticed a painful tendency to make long programmes for church sociables, which sometimes utterly prevent any sociability, and often include performances of every doubtful propriety for anybody, much more for Christians. We have unalterably resolved not to publish, nor praise any such performance. We consider voting gifts to the prettiest young lady and the handsomest gentleman as frivolous and ungenteel, and all lotteries as immoral, and mere silliness as demoralizing, and in the name of Christ, we protest against them. We have long contemplated making such a statement as this. No modest or cultured lady could find herself the victim of foolish contest, and be auctioned off as the prettiest woman in the crowd, without a sense of the deepest humiliation and disgust; and no gentleman can wish to be a party to a pitiful device of this kind. We shall not advertise such things. If this resolution brings on the Advocate adverse criticism, well! We can not be a party of frivolity and immorality to please anybody.—California Christian Advocate.

THE EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY,

OR THEOLOGY OF EVOLUTION—BEECH-ER'S LATEST DEPARTURE.

Mr. Beecher in his sermon Sunday morning, June 21st, said regeneration—the new birth—fitted in perfectly with the system of evolution, but declared the idea that any grace was bestowed in infant baptism an "innocent delusion," which he would not fight by refusing baptism if asked to perform the ceremony, because many good people were comforted by the delusion. Of adult baptism he declared his disbelief in any influence outside of the person's own conscience and will. Generally he took ground against original sin, or the sin of Adam, being present in any one.

Referring to opinions as to a clergyman's right to be in a church when he repudiates one or more of the doctrines thereof, Mr. Beecher said no church had a right to exist that had such rules and regulations that a live Christian could not glance up to. If he did not believe in regeneration in baptism, and his church did, the church must change, because it should be such a body that every man who tried and did good to his fellowman could heartily support it.

To a gentleman in Brooklyn, who wrote to him asking him to define his belief. Mr. Beecher writes that he believes in a personal God, universal sin, need and possibility of conversion, Jesus Christ, the manifestation of God in human conditions. His office in redemption supreme, and by Him he proposes to be saved and brought to heaven. He rejects the Calvinistic doctrine of atonement, the fall of the human race in Adam, and declares the race was not lost, but has steadily grown better from the creation. Finally he says the newspaper reports of his sermons on this subject are not reliable, and that he would revise and publish them in authoritative form.

BAD AIR.

WHEN a person has remained for an hour or more in a crowded and poorly ventilated room or railroad car, the system is already contaminated to a greater or less extent by breathing air vitiated by exhalations from the lungs, bodies and clothing of the occupants. The immediate effect of these poisons is to debilitate, to lower vitality, and to impair the natural power of the system to resist disease. Hence it is that persons who are attacked by inflammatory diseases, as pneumonia or rheumatism can generally trace the beginning of the disease to a chill felt on coming out of a crowded room into the cold, or damp air, wearing perhaps thin shoes and insufficient clothing. If these facts were generally understood and acted upon, thousands of lives might be saved every year. It is a well known fact that men who "camp out," sleeping on the ground at all seasons of the year seldom have pneumonia, and that rheumatism with them, comes as a rule, only from unwarrantable imprudences. There are two facts that should be learned by every person capable of appreciating them, and they should never be lost sight of for a moment. One is that exhalations from the lungsthe breath—are a deadly poison containing the products of combustion in the form of carbonic acid gas, and if a person were compelled to reinhale it unmixed with the oxygen of the air, it would prove as destructive to life as the fumes of charcoal. This is an enemy that is always present in force, in assemblies of people, and only a constant and free infusion of fresh air prevents it from doing mischief that would be immediately apparent. The other fact is that pure air is the antidote to this poison. The oxygen of the air is the greatest of all purifiers... Rapid streams of water that flow through large cities, receiving the sewage, become pure again through the action of the air after running a few miles. Air is the best of all blood purifiers. Combined with vigorous exercise to make it effective, it will cure any curable case of consumption.

Summary of News.

UTAH ITEMS.

There are indications that the Mormons think of leaving Utah, to establish themselves in the Mexican State of Sonora. A large part of that State is occupied by the Yaqui Indians, who have never been entirely subdued by the Mexican Government, and last fall Brigham Young, Ir., and Heber T. Grant, made a treaty with this tribe, and soon afterwards established a Mormon colony near Cruces. It is beleived in Utah to be the purpose of the leaders of the Mormon Church to transfer their headquarters from Salt Lake City to this point in Mexico, and begin there the building of a city of refuge for the faithful, who find that they must get beyond the reach of the laws of the United States. John Taylor, the head of the Mormons organization, is now seventy-seven years of age, but he found it necessary to make the long and arduous journey from Salt Lake to Sonora in the dead of winter to confirm the treaty made by Grant and Young with the Yaqui Indians. Within a few weeks the Mexican troops have gained a decisive victory over this tribe, and it seems likely that its power is broken and if so the Mormon treaty can not be of much value. The Mormons are now attempting to buy from the Mexican Government the lands which they tried at first to secure from the Indians. The Mexican authorities are disposed to act with some caution, as they know perfectly well the trouble the polygamists have caused in the United States. Indeed, they have informed the Mormons that the Mexican laws do not tolerate polygamy, and if they come there they must expect to be law-abiding. The Mormons are no doubt anxious to secure a place of refuge outside of the United States, but they may have some difficulty in effecting a lodgment in Mexico. —Chicago Tribune.

F. A. Brown and Moroni Brown, prominent Mormons of Ogden, Utah, recently convicted of unlawful cohabitation, were, July 11th, sentenceed by Judge Powers to six months' imprisonment in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $300—the maximum penalty under the Edmunds law. In passing the sentence the Judge said: "The present condition of affairs in our Territory is deplorable, the people apparently defying the law, being unwilling to obey the supreme law—the law of the land. In consideration of this the court feels compelled to pass such a sentence as will impress all people that in this Territory, as well as in every other part of the country, the law will be upheld.

About three weeks ago Apostles Erastus Snow, Brigham Young and John W. Taylor (son of President John), a late accession to the Twelve, departed from Utah, as was supposed to look over the Sam. Brennan grant, and see what could be done in the way of opening settlements upon it. The first two, Snow and Young, are reported to be in the City of Mexico, adding to Diaz's troubles by offering to settle large colonies in that country on condition that they shall not be molested for practicing polygamy. It isn't likely that they will get any such concession, possibly they are not asking it, but their mission is additional evidence of the disturbance of the brethren, and of their desire to flee from a reconing for their crimes.

Robert Swain, who has three wives, was arrested July 7th, at Salt Lake City, for unlawful cohabitation. Two of the wives, sisters, freely told the facts, and the prisoner was held in $1.500 bonds; the women in $200 each as witnesses. Robert Morris was also arrested to day for unlawful cohabitation. He has three wives. He has waived examination and was held in $1.500 bonds, and the witnesses in $200 each.

July 17th.-The trouble between England and Russia regarding the Afghan question continued a source of general alarm in Great Britain and on the Continent yesterday, and the markets throughout the world were more or less affected by the rumors in circulation. It is now said that the Czar depends upon France for aid in case of any rupture with England regarding Central Asian questions. If there is to be any backing down now Russia must do it. It is reasonable to expect war unless Russia retreats from her claim. The Tories have pledged themselves to the war policy. Their leaders are strongly anti-Russian and can not hold their position before the English people if they condone a fresh advance of the Russians. They no longer fear any complication from the danger of French interference in the quarrel. Unquestionably, also, they can show to the world a juster cause than Russia can. More than this, what better campaign policy can they ask for use next November in the general election than a war cry against their ancient enemy, which would rouse the whole English people and might even stir the Irish heart in gratitude for the Tory concessions promised and some of them already made to the demands of the Home-Rulers?

A widespread conspiracy to overthrow the present Government has been discovered in Spain. One of the leaders has been sentenced to death.

There were nearly 1,500 new cases of cholera and over 650 deaths in Spain day before yesterday.

It is estimated that the public debt reduction for June was $10,500,000, the total for the fiscal year just ended being about $65,000,000. During the previous fiscal year the reduction was $101,000,000.

The National expenditures for the fiscal year ended yesterday were $310,000,000; receipts, $321,000,000, or $7,500,000 less than the estimates.

The revenues of the Post-Office Department will be seriously affected by the new legislation. After July 1st letters weighing one ounce or less may be sent through the mails for two cents, and the rate on newspapers mailed by publishers will be reduced from two cents to one cent per pound. From the reduction in the newspaper rate a large deficit in revenue is expected to result. In the opinion of the financial officers of the department this legislation will cost the Government at least $10,000,000 during the next fiscal year, and will swell the excess of expenditures over receipts to $6,000,000.

* The Pope is said to be enjoying excellent health, despite reports to the contrary.

The weather at Mount MacGregor was delightful yesterday, and Gen. Grant spent most of his waking hours on the piazza of his cottage.

Conserence Minutes.

DECATUR.

A conference of the above district was held at Lucas, Iowa, June 20th and 21st, 1885; H A. Stebbins, presiding; A. S. Cochran, clerk, pro tem.

Branch Reports.—Lucas 217; 8 received, 5 removed, 1 died; 2 Teachers ordained; G. S. Spencer, president; Wm. Shakespeare, clerk. Lamoni, 527; 15 added, 3 removed; H. A. Stebbins president, W. Hudson clerk. Davis City, 61; 2 received, 4 removed; 1 Deacon ordained; E. Robinson, pres.; M. A. Robinson clerk. Greenville, 23; 3 added; 1 Priest ordained; H. Bartlett, pres; Mary Harger, clerk. Lone Rock, 52; 3 added; J. P. Johnston, pres; J. Sandage, clerk. Allendale, 37; 2 expelled; S. Pinkerton, pres; J. Hammer, clerk.

Official reports.—Elders E. Robinson and A. Hines; Priest G. Cloyd, and Teacher J Hammer, reported by letter. In person: Elders H. A. Stebbins, B. V. Springer, J. Watkins, J. J. Watkins, J. T. Phillips, A. S. Davison, T. R. Allen, G. L. Spencer, J. R. Evans, T. A. Johns, and E. B. Morgan; Priests John Davis and P. Batten; Teachers J. Wilkenson and S. Shakespeare; Deacon J. A. Evans.

A recommendation from the Lamoni Branch that A. S. Cochran be ordained an Elder was endorsed and ordination ordered.

Resolved, that we disapprove of the action of the Lamoni Branch in receiving into it, those who live within the limits of the Lone Rock Branch.

The resignation of E. H. Gurley as clerk of the district was read and accepted.

The president stated that Bro. E. H. Gurley had handed him his license as an Elder of the Church, also a letter setting forth the reasons for so doing, which he now read. Various motions were made, but the following as a substitute finally prevailed:

Resolved, that we receive his license, and that the further consideration of the matter be deferred till next conference. The president read his report of the moneys received from branches and individuals in the district since the action of the conference one year ago calling for financial help to support the work.

"From Lucas Branch and individual gifts $48.88; from Zero Saints $4; Centerville Saints $6: (these wo families are also members of Lucas Branch); Lamoni, individual gifts $4.80; Creston Saints, $1.75; Allendale, $1.25; Union Hill 75c, total $67.43."

He had reported the same (with names of those giving) to Bishop Blakeslee up to March, being $60.52 of the above.

Preaching on Saturday evening by N. Stamm; on Sunday morning by A. S. Cochran and A. N. Bichop, and in the evening by B. V. Springer. Afternoon sacrament meeting in charge of the president, and A. S. Cochran was ordained an Elder under the hands of H. A. Stebbons, John Watkins and A. S. Davison.

Adjourned to meet with Lone Rock Branch, September 19th and 20th, 1885

NORTH-WEST KANSAS.

This district conference was held with the Prairie Home Branch, at Cuba, Republic county, May 23 and 24th, 1885. President A. H. Parsons in the chair; H. R. Harder, clerk.

Branch Reports.—Goshen 47; I baptized. Blue Rapids 59; 3 expelled, I marriage, 10 scattered. Prairie Home 21; no change. Twin Creek 22. Elmira 30; 2 received by certificate, 3 removed by letter.

Official Reports.—Elders John Landers, J. D. Bennett, G. W. Beebe, A. Sears, R. Hayer, A. Kent, G. W. Shute, A. H. Parsons and M. Smith; Priests E. M. Reynolds and H. R. Harder, reported. The Bishop's Agent reported on hand last report $21.50, received $22.50; paid out $30, balance on hand $14.

B. H. Case was appointed to travel and labor with District President. The Elders to labor as the Spirit of God directs. The president of each branch is requested to raise their portion of the funds to defray the expenses of delegate to Annual Conference. A committee of five were appointed to arrange for a district re-union; who reported Thursday, August 27th, as the beginning of re-union, and the Twin Creek Branch in Osborne county the place. Programme for Thursday and Friday: prayer meeting at nine o'clock; preaching at eleven, three and eight o'clock. Saturday, prayer meeting at nine, conference at ten.

Adjourned to meet with Twin Creek Branch, August 29th, 1885, and ten o'clock.

GALAND'S GROVE.

The above district conference convened at Deloit, Crawford County, Iowa, June 19th, 20th and 21st, 1885. W. W. Whiting, president; J. Pett, and C. E. Butterworth, secretaries. Owing to the stormy weather no business was done on the 19th, but an excellent prayer meeting was had in the evening.

20th, forenoon, Branch Reports.—Union 50. North Coon 21. Boyer Valley 47; 5 baptized, 4 received by letter. Coalville 20; 2 removed by letter. Mason's Grove 119; 15 baptized, received by certificate 1, by letter 3, removed 2, died 1.

The committee appointed to visit the Pilot Rock Branch reported no labor done, the committee were continued and Bro. Ira Goff, was appointed to be one of said committee.

Ministerial Reports.—J. Hawley, C. E. Butterworth (baptized 4), B. Salesbury (baptized 1), B. T. Wickes, J. Rounds (baptized 2), W. A. Carroll, W. Jordan, J. W. Chatburn, R. Montgomery, D. Shirk, W. W. Whiting, J. Pett, J. A. McIntosh, J. Wedlock, I. A. Goff (baptized 15), J. Allen (by letter), C. Dobson, J. Dobson, J. Turner and N. Brogden, reported. John Pett, Bishop's Agent, reported cash on hand last report $7.50, received since $74.65; paid out $66.95; balance $15.20.

A recommendation by the Mason's Grove Branch that James Turner be ordained an Elder adopted.

By request of Bro. Salesbury, a camp meeting was appointed at the North Coon Branch, commencing July 16th.

Bro. W. Whiting was appointed to preside over the district till after the close of next conference with C. Butterworth to assist.

It was ordered that president of district set the the time for holding two days meetings in the different branches, and appoint Elders to take charge of them. Preaching in the evening by J. W. Chatburn and C. E. Butterworth, Sunday forenoon, the Saints met for prayer meeting; the Spirit of the Master being sensibly felt by all present, and manifesting itself in prophecy to the instruction and encouragement of his people. At the usual hour Charles Derry preached, also in the evening.

Adjourned to meet at Dow City, November 20th, 1885, at two o'clock.

FAR WEST.

Conference of the above district was held with the German Branch, Stewartsville, Missouri, May 30th and 31st, 1885. J. T. Kinnaman in the chair; J. S. Constance and J. H. Merriam secretaries.

The following branches reported:—German Stewartsville, Stewartsville, Center Prairie, Delano, Far West, Pleasant Grove and St. Joseph. Branches not reported: Stewartsville City, Starfield, Mt. Hope and Breckinridge.

Bishop's Agents report received and adopted.

Elders S. Butler, T. T. Hinderks, J. D. Craven, W. Lewis, J. H. Merriam, J. Drown, D. E. Powell, A. Nesser, T. Worrel, J. D. Flanders, S. Alcott and J. T. Kinnaman, reported. Priests A. W. Head, W. H. Kelley and P. Peterson, reported. Teacher W. Wells reported.

Case of court in Stewartsville and Pleasant Grove Branches presented. President decided a branch must either accept or reject the decision of a Court of Elders. Further, that a court must not withhold its decision from a branch longer than is necessary for them to come to a conclusion.

On motion this matter was referred to a committee consisting of brethren Winning, Philips and Burlington; said committee to report at this session if possible.

On motion, the appeal of F. W. Curtis was taken up, and the following resolution obtained: Whereas, Bro. Curtis has presented an appeal to this conference, which is not in proper form; and whereas, it can not entertain such an appeal. Therefore, be it resolved, that it be returned to the brother, so he can place it in proper form.

The decision of a Court of Elders in the case of E. C. Brand vs. L. L. Babbitt was presented and adopted. Bro. Babbitt was required to make restitution to said court during some of the sessions of this conference.

Committee on Pleasant Grove and Stewartsville Branches reported. Report rejected and committee discharged.

Moved that this conference require the Pleasant Grove Branch to render a decision on the finding of the Elders' Court within two weeks, and report to the District President.

Moved that the Starfield Branch be disorganized, and letters of removal given to those in good standing.

Moved that a committee of two be appointed to act with Bro. J. R. Lambert in regard to the names of the Stewartsville Branches. J. S. Constance and Thomas Worrel were appointed as said committee.

The district officers were sustained as a whole. Moved that the President of the Starfield Branch call the members together, and that the president and vice-president of district assist him in disorganizing and furnishing letters of removal

Resolved that the next conference be held with the Delana Branch, August 29th and 30th, 1885.

Moved that the matter of two day meetings be left to the President of District and President of Branches.

Moved that those who have received finance books from the Bishop be requested to report to the District Agent quarterly, and at least one week previous to the sitting of conference, so that the agent will be able to report properly to the conference.

On Sabbath forenoon, preaching by Elder Butler. In the afternooa, Saints' meeting. Evening preaching by Elder Hawkins.

Miscellaneous.

CHURCH LIBRARY.

We thank Bro. Samuel Platt of No. 10, Walnut street, Denver, Colorado, for donating the sixteenfh volume of the Millennial Star to the Church Library. Since writing the above we have received a copy of the same volume, mailed from Keighley, Kansas, and the name S. J. Hinkle, Leon, Kansas, written on the fly leaf. Who the sender is, we have not learned.

Bro. H. J. Hudson, Columbus, Nebraska, in a letter to the librarian, says: "I find I have two copies of volumes 11 and 12 of the Millennial Star, and seeing a request to send to the Church Librarian any volumes that can be spared, I thought they might be useful to some Elder, if not to the library; you are at liberty to dispose of them as may seem best to you."

From Sr. Lillie Walman, St. Louis, Mo., we have also received as a gift the sixteenth volume of the Star, accompanied by Kidder's "Mormonism and the Mormons."

JOHN SCOTT, Librarian.

INDEPENDENCE LOCALS.

Bro. George Montague, on his way to his Florida mission, sojourned with us a few days, filling the pulpit on Sunday morning, and gave us an old-time sermon, which sounded like the tinkling of the "old bell." It was well appreciated by the Saints.

Every week adds to the number here, but so silently, that not even the Saints know of them until their names are read in church; and the end is not yet.

The Herald is doubly interesting of late, occasioned by the letters and reprints touching our president's doings in Utah. Let the good work go on! is the great "heart-throb" of Independence Saints.

F. C. Warnky's enterprise has led him to build a baptismal font in his yard; water is furnished from the city water works. It was christened last Saturday evening.

BORN.

ROHR.—At Lincoln, Nebraska, December 13th, 1884, to Eliza Rohr, a daughter, (the father wantonly abandoning the mother prior to the birth of the child.) Blessed at Lincoln, Nebraska, July 3d, by Robt. M. Elvin, and named Gertuide.

HOLENBECK.—Near Elmwood, Neb., Jan., 14th, 1885, to Bro. John W. and Emma Holenbeck, a son; blessed at camp-meeting, at McCaig's Grove, Neb., July 12th, by Elder James, Caffall, named Henry Leslie.

Furguson.—Near South Bend, Neb., February 14th, 1885, to Bro. James and Sister L. A. Furguson, a son; blessed at camp-meeting, at McCaig's Grove, Neb., July 12th, by Elder R. M. Elvin, and named James Le Roy.

GOODE.—Near Avoca, Neb., November 25th, 1884, to Mr. Wm. and Sister Mary Goode, a son; blessed at camp-meeting, at McCaig's Grove, Neb., July 12th, by Robt. M. Elvin, and named Fred Hugh.

PRESTON.—At Plattford, Neb., May 29th, 1885, to Bro. John and Sister Mary Preston, a daughter; blessed at camp-meeting, at McCaig's Grove, Neb., July 12th, by Elder Henry Kemp, and named Lydia Mary.

DIED.

WEBB.—At his home, seven miles from Plattsburg, Clinton county, Missouri, January 28th, 1885, Charles Webb, aged 78 years, 11 months and 23 days. He was born in Hampshire, England, February 5th, 1806; baptized by Heber C. Kimball, one of the first missionaries that went to England; came to America in 1840; did not follow any of the factions of the church, but was ready to unite with the Reorganization as soon as he learned the truth. He remained firm in the faith till death, having a hope in the first resurrection. Funeral sermon by Bro. Wm. Summerfield, June 21st, 1885, assisted by Bro. Thomas Worral.

CLOSSON.—Near Excelsior, Richland county, Wisconsin, June 5th, 1885, Bro. Frank E. Closson, aged 33 years, 6 months and 21 days. He was baptized November 8th, 1876; was one of the purest-minded men; was as innocent as a child,his life and character "bore the image of the heavenly," and he has gone to inherit the treasures he laid up in heaven. We laid him away in the quiet grave, with tears of love, in the blessed hope that we will meet him again in the glorious dawn of the Saints' immortal spring. Sermon by F. M. Cooper.

TOWNSEND.—At St. Louis, Missouri, June 30th, 1885, After four days sickness, Henrietta, daughter of Henry and Lizzie Townsend, aged sixteen months.

UTAH MISSIONARIES.

By a late Descret News we learn—(Elder Theo. Brandley writing July 3d)—that there are twenty-three Utah missionaries in Minnesota, Iowa, and Dakota; and that from last October till May 24th—seven months—they had baptized twenty-eight persons and blessed twenty-one children, or an average of but a trifle over one baptism for each Elder during that time. In the days of the Seer, and for some time after, that number of faithful, intelligent Elders in the same length of time would have baptized nearly, or quite as many hundred.

What is the cause of all this fruitless effort? We aver that polygamy, disloyalty to the laws and institutions of our country, priestly domination and oppression, are the chief causes. The Reorganized Church in the same length of time, with the same number of active missionaries, would expect them to baptize fifty times as many; and this, too, though our ministers suffer largely from the prejudice, reproach, and disgrace caused by the Utah Mormon leaders and their devotees. As the truth suffered reproach, and its conquests were hindered and lessened by false teachers in the early Christian Church, so it is now. Peter prophecied: "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious way; by reaosn of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now for a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not."—2 Peter 2: I-3. And similar conduct on the part of "false teachers" of these times produces similar results—causing "the way of truth" to be "evil spoken of."

It is a fact that can not be disguised, that the teaching and practice of those things which the New Testament, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants condemn as vile, calling them gross "crimes," "abominable," and "iniquities," are the very things which has covered the Utah Mormons with shame and infamy, a measure of which the Reorganization suffers because they bear the name Mormon and Latter Day Saints. Their teaching and practicing these evils are rapidly closing all doors for missionary work for them, and hindering the missionary efforts of the Reorganized Church. Their "pernicious ways" tend to defeat the very purposes for which God restored the gospel and the church. The design of heaven was and is that "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." And yet the conduct of the Utah leaders and their followers obstruct this work, and tend to defeat it, for even nations, as well as states, are legislating to prevent their missionaries preaching within their borders.

The Utah leaders "compass sea and land" to make proselytes, and with all their labor, zeal, and expense, their numbers increase but very slowly, if at all, for nearly as many, if not more, fall away from them than they add by proselyting. But "the works, and the designs, and the purposes of God, can not be frustrated, neither can they come to nought; for God doth not walk in crooked paths, neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore his paths are straight and his course is one eternal round." (D. C. 2: 1). God does not contradict in one place what he has said in another. He does not "vary" nor change his purposes; neither will his promises fail. And those who get in the way and hinder his work will be "ground to powder" and have "their folly" made manifest to all men except they speedily repent. Woe be to those who fight against God, and pervert the ways of the Almighty!

JOSEPHITE HARVEST.

THE clipping below from a late Descret News exhibits the feelings of some in the Utah Mormon Church, in respect to the Mission work of Pres. Joseph Smith and others now in Utah:

"When the Josephite harvest is over, ye may know they have assisted in purging the Church of unworthy members, for they, with various other sects, are welcome to all they can convert."

The class composing the "Josephite harvest" should be only those who will faithfully and cheerfully accept the gospel of Christ as contained in its "fulness" in the Book of Mormon as well as the Bible; honor marriage in the form God gave it to Adam in the beginning, and as observed by Noah and his sons, both before and after their salvation from the flood, and as restated by the Savior, the apostles, Book of Mormon and Book of Covenants; and be such as will not "break the laws of the land," but honor and support them. This kind of a harvest the Josephites will welcome.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Joseph Luff, writing from Salt Lake City, the 14th ult., says of the work in Utah:

"The interest is quite as good as I expected, every where; but I look for more speedy and numerous returns outside of the city than in it. Still we can not tell. I believe, however, that by being here at this time, we are preaching louder and more effectual sermons back east than if we were there in person."

Pres. Joseph Smith, in a letter dated at Pleasant Grove, Utah, says:

"Two or three female sprigs of the plural celestiality of Utah stood in the street in front of the Hall last night and cut up pranks, and mocked while I was preaching; three or four of the same ilk talked and chatted almost aloud the first night not far from the stand. The spirits which waited so long for tabernacles in plurality, (?) have some of them made poor choice of tenements of clay. * * * The half-masting of the flag at Salt Lake City, July 4th, is, I see, seriously reprehended by the press, east and west of Utah. This is as it should be, though some partisan bitterness is traceable in some Journals. I have had most excellent liberty in the efforts I have made here and at Provo. May the Lord grant the increase which I feel assured will in time appear."

Elder H. L. Holt writes from Clitherall, Minnesota, the 20th inst., to say he feels delighted with the spread of the Lord's work in all that region. He says:

"The more I labor in it the stronger I am, for I am greatly blest in my labors. I never have seen the work spread like it has here. Every place I go, the call is for more preaching, new invitations come, and it seems the Lord is truly with us. I think several will be baptized here soon. One reason for all this is, that the Saints here are trying to live as they should.  I feel blessed and happy. I think that article of Bro. Bays' should be published in tract form."

We are now receiving much of this kind of news from the Elders.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE have sent a large number of Advocates to various parties in Utah and Idaho, for free distribution. If they have any left over they will please give them to our missionaries to distribute.

Elder Henry Atwood from near Salt Lake City, Utah, is in and about here in the interests of the Utah Mormon Church. He meets with cordial treatment from his kindred and others till he either advocates or defends the "twin relic" and its like, and then "grim visaged war, with his wrinkled front" makes things lively if not attractive. The Elder seems a pleasant gentleman, but it is sad to know he seeks to defend as a virtue what the Lord, by the Book of Mormon, denounces as a "crime" and "abominable." We sincerely hope he and his church may soon put their errors away.

Bro. John S. Lawton of Boston, Mass., has a communication of worth in the Roxbury Advocate of late date, defining some of the distinctive differences existing between the Reorganized Church and the Brighamite Church. These matters are getting to be pretty well understood.

Bro. J. D. Flanders writes from Stewartsville, Mo., the 16th inst., to say that persons desiring to find homes in that vicinity should not go to land agents and speculators first to get advice; but to friends who are posted in the quality of lands and prices, and in this may save money and trouble. He says lands are declining in price. He is anxious to see the land redeemed in righteousness, but is litterally opposed to seeing the Saints imposed upon. All this is right and proper. "Let no man deceive you."

Bro. James M. Kelley informs us by letter dated at Macedonia, Iowa, July 20th, that a Reunion meeting is appointed to be held September 5th and onward, at Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, and that reduced rates have been obtained on the C. B. & Q. R. R. The Associate Editor has a strong desire to, and some hope of, attending said meeting, and the more so for the reason that Elder E. C. Briggs and he took a walk through that region in July, 1859, and after, hunting the "lost sheep," and found a goodly number to whom the Spirit revealed by tongues and prophecy that we were the servants of God, and that we would "lay the foundation of a great work" throughout that and adjoining regions. How truly these promises have come to pass! and yet, thank God, the work is onward.

Bro. J. J. Cornish is keeping his work moving at Sand Beach, Gore, New River, and Huron City, Michigan, with fine prospects ahead.

Bro. J. H. Jackson writes from Battle Creek, Nebraska, July 20th, saying: "Bro. James Caffall has just closed a two days meeting" at his place, and that "he had the pleasure of leading four into the waters of baptism."

Bro. John B. Swain, one of the "old-timers" in the Church in western Iowa, and a good helper to the cause, sends us a pressing invitation to come and labor among them again. We shall seek to do so soon, brother John.

In another place in this issue will be found an advertisement of Messrs. E. and J. B. Young & Co., of New York, for "books, pamphlets, and newspapers relating to the early history of the Latter Day Saints."

"Elders W. W. Blair and Henry A. Stebbins, of Lamoni, preached at the school house in this place on Saturday night, and morning and evening on Sunday, to overflowing houses."

Such is the kindly notice given us in the Democrat-Reporter, Leon, Iowa, of the 22d ult. Our visit to Pleasanton recalled the fact, that in July, 1859, a "committee" of two waited on the writer and Elder E. C. Briggs, at the house of the late Bro. George Morey, two miles north of Pleasanton, who warned them to quit preaching and baptizing, and to leave the country at once, or get very badly used. We did not leave, however, as we were conscious of seeking to "preach and teach Christ," and so we continued our work. We patiently worked and waited, and as time passed the dark clouds of prejudice lifted and floated away, and now in that same region a branch of near one hundred and fifty Saints is established; at Davis City, six miles north-west there is another of nearly fifty; at Lamoni, thirteen miles west there is another of about six hundred; while south-west of Lamoni, and to the west of Lamoni, are other branches, all living at peace and enjoying fair prosperity. This tells of progress and of triumph.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Does the church teach and practice the second step in reconciliation, viz, if the offender "Will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established?" (Matt. 18:17).

Ans.—Yes; they do, and this, too, from the fact that the church is specifically required of the Lord as follows—"Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my Scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues." This, in a special way, makes binding upon the church whatever was given in the Scriptures as the law of Christ.

Q.—Is the woman's "covering," (1 Cor. 11: 5, 6), an artificial one, or is it her hair?

A.—Paul answers this, at least in part, in the 15th verse of the same chapter; for he says:—"But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her; for her hair is given her for a covering." On the other hand he asserts that nature itself teaches that,—"if a man have long hair, [a covering], it is a shame unto him." Certain it is that Paul instructs that woman should wear natures "covering," and he does not forbid their wearing an artificial one. And it is equally certain that he teaches that man should not worship with his head "covered," either with long hair or an artificial covering.

Q.—Is hair braiding and gold wearing condemned, absolutely, by Paul (1 Tim. 2:9), and by Peter (1 Pet. 3:3)?

A.—Let those passages speak for themselves,—"In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array."—I Tim. 2:9. "Likewise, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, they also may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives; while they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear. Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." 1 Pet. 3: 1-4. They make the adornment of their Christian character to be the first and all important matter; and they discourage if they do not absolutely forbid mere personal ornamentation. The first promotes humility and purity; while the latter produces vanity, fosters pride, and tends to other sins. The Saints are instructed similarly in the Doctrine and Covenants.—"Thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands, and let all things be done in cleanliness before me. Thou shalt not be idle; for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garment of the laborer."-Sec. 42: 12.

Q.—Is the angel of Rev. 14: 6, 7, the one that appeared to Joseph Smith? If so, did it proclaim with a loud voice? Is not its mission to individually proclaim the everlasting gospel to every nation, &c.?

A.—First; Yes. Second; Yes:—he proclaimed the gospel "with a loud voice." and for "the whole of that night"-Sept. 21st, 1823—to the Seer, through whom and from whom it was to go forth to all nations, just as truly, and in somewhat similar way that the gospel was proclaimed to Cornelius and his household by the angel,—(Acts 10: 3-6, 22), through the Apostle Peter; for God has ordained that while angels are "ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation;" (Heb. 1:14); yet he has also ordained that his gospel shall be preached to the nations by a called, ordained, and "sent" ministry, and this the Scriptures plainly teach.—"For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!"-Rom. 10: 13-15. Put with this John 15: 16; Matt. 28: 19, 20; and Acts 13: 1-5, and the case is clear that though angels may minister "for" the salvation of man, yet the gospel is to be preached by ministers called and sent of God. In reply to the third item, the angel was not to "individually" preach the gospel to all nations, but only to commit it to man on the earth, that it might be so preached by them.

2.—Was Joseph the Seer the "deliverer" mentioned in Rom. 11: 26? and if so, what Zion did he come out of?

A.—He was not that "deliverer," but a preacher of it; for that is the gospel—the "new covenant,"—"For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins,"—(through the gospel). This "deliverer" came out of Zion after Zion was located and dedicated. D. & C. 57:1; 58:1, 2, 3, 15). And the ministry went from there by the authority of heaven, declaring the gospel to "all the world," "with signs following them that believe."

[Other questions in the same series will be answered by and by; And "triune immersion" will be reviewed.—ED.]

GENERAL GRANT is dead. The spirit of the great soldier passed away from its earthly tabernacle at 8: 04 o'clock on the morning of July 23d, after many weary weeks of painful suffering. His countrymen admire him. All civilized nations honor him. His closing days of Christian hope and trust and fortitude and resignation, were the fitting finish of an active, marvellous life-work.

However much his valor and prowess as a soldier may command our admiration, and whatever of greatness men may see in his statesmanship, the glory of his Christian faith and love in the face of death's approaching, will outlive and outshine them all throughout the coming ages.

May heaven console and bless his widowed wife and all his sorrowing kindred.

ELDER J. A. Robinson, traveling salesmen for Kingman & Co., of Peoria, Illinois, enlightened the people of Chandlerville, Illinois, Sunday, the 12th inst., in two sermons. The Editor of the Times, in concluding a somewhat lengthy review of the effort, says:

"We can not begin to tell all that was stated, but for every statement he made he quoted Scripture to substantiate it, and as he placed everything in such a reasonable light it would not be hard to believe a great many of his statements. The meetings were well attended, both morning and evening, and the new doctrine has been the subject of a great deal of conversation."

A correspondent in the same paper, has this to say:

"Well, that was gospel preaching at the Christian Church last Sunday night, call it what you please. Bro. Pendelton was there, and I felt as soon as he punched me in the ribs that there was going to be music in the air. 'And those signs shall follow them that believe.' That is what I told John Raines ten years ago, but he said it didn't mean that; that I was a free lover, and an abolitionist, or something. The preacher we understand is a Latter Day Saint, but takes no stock in Salt Lake Mormonism. He believes in marrying but one, whereas Brigham thought differently. While our preacher's idea of monogamic marriages is commendable, he must not forget that the monogamic marriage is only the least of two evils, "that he that giveth in marriage doeth well, but he that giveth not in marriage doeth better." That the children of this world may and are given in marriage, but they who shall be accounted worthy of that world and the resurection from the dead, neither marry or are given in marriage, but are as the angels in heaven. Pop."

FAITH-HEALING.

The clipping below is from the Chicago Times, and serves to show its views on the matter of faith-healing. Fifty years ago, yes, even thirty years ago, any newspaper advocating or defending it would have been frowned down. The Latter Day Saints have been scoffed and derided by all classes, especially religionists, for advocating the faith-healing taught in the Bible and demonstrated in their own experiences. But times, and seasons, and theories, have changed, we see.

"Faith healing is attracting great attention in various cities and towns in this country. There are several faith-doctors in this city, and the persons who testify their ability to "cure all manner of diseases" are numerous. Faith-healing has created so much excitement in Boston that a foreign journal has sent a representative from over the sea to investigate the matter. He represents that the believers in the faith-cure are very numerous, and that they embrace persons in every walk in life. An international faith-healing conference was recently held in London. Delegates were present from the United States, Canada, and most of the countries in Europe. Even far-away Australia was represented. persons attending the conference were so numerous that it was found necessary to hold the sittings in the Agricultural Hall, one of the largest assembly-rooms in the city. London papers devoted much space to the proceedings of these meetings. The testimony given at this conference in proof of the cure of diseases that had long baffled the skill of the most celebrated masters of the healing art would fill volumes. Some of it was given by persons occupying good sociai positions and possessed of a reputation for honesty and integrity. The papers generally admit that the persons who gave testimony were sincere. There was apparently no motive for them to state what they believed to be otherwise than true.

"This is the age of inductive philosophy and science. A limit has been placed by these on the things that one who accepts the dogmas of philosophy and science can believe. But it is an age which generally accepts as literally true the events recorded in the New Testament. Christ was the great apostle of faith. He who was styled "the Great Physician" was a faith-healer. He not only practiced faith-healing himself, but he commanded his disciples to do so. He taught that the sick were healed by faith, and that the wicked were saved by it. The New Testament is the gospel of faith. Christianity is the religgion of faith. The New Testament is a record of faith-healing and of faith-saving. The modern preachers of the gospel of faith-healing have no trouble in finding texts in the New Testament. It is full of them.

"Doctors, lawyers, and scientists generally reject the testimony given in behalf of faith-healing. They first state that there is no certain proof that the persons who declare that they were cured were sick. The second declare that the evidence offered will not bear the test of scrutiny. They, like the doctors, affirm that only experts are competent to pass on the testimony offered. They desire to have the subjects for faith-healing examined in order to ascertain if they are really diseased, or simply imagine they are ill. Some wish to make the wounds that are to be cured by faith. Others desire to have the attempts at faith-healing made in a public hospital and in the presence of the regular staff of physicians, and propose to apply scientific tests to the power of faith as a curative agent. They wish to examine its operations and effects as they would do if a new drug was to be tested.

"These persons are unreasonable in their demands. The power of faith can not be measured by any instrument found in the best labratory in the world. It can not be tested by chemical agents. Faith has nothing to do with science and philosophy. It is a world unto itself. The laws that govern are entirely unknown to the men who talk learnedly about atoms, molecules, attraction, repulsion, and other subjects discussed in scientific books. Faith commences before reason or science, and observation begins where they all end. Faith to the scientific man is likely to be simply a superstition. To the man not learned in books it may be a reality.

"The men who ridicule faith-healing are as likely to exercise faith in other matters as the faith-doctors or the faith patients. Human trust and confidence are inspired by faith, and generally by faith alone. A man takes a woman for a wife, not because it can be demonstrated that she is the superior of any of the sex whom he knows, but because he has faith in her. Most sick persons have faith in the doctors they employ, and the cures they effect may often be added to the list of faith-cures. Doctors should be among the last persons to make light of faith-healing. The faith of a patient in his physician has often more to do with his recovery than all the drugs he swallows. Faith inspires almost every great enterprise, invention, and discovery. Science apparently demonstrated that a vessel could not be propelled by steam across the Atlantic ocean. But faith tried the experiment and succeeded. Our currency is secured by national bonds, but faith is the only apparent security for the national bonds."

Correspondence.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah, July 14th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair.—We finished our efforts at Provo, Sunday night; very warm—yes, hot—a meeting in every ward-house; hence not so many out to hear us as on Wednesday and Thursday out to hear us as on Wednesday and Thursday evenings; but still a very fair audience. One or two young men were inclined to be noisy; otherwise everything was quiet and respectful. No effort was made to meet us openly, and I heard none of any sort. What was said in the ward meetings—don't know.

On Saturday evening we called at the residence of Bishop A. O. Smoot, but he was not at home. On Sunday morning, Bro. Anthony and I went to the general meeting house, or Tabernacle, where we heard Elders W. C. Smoot and Jorgen Hansen relate their mission labor. Smoot was banished from Bavaria, and imprisoned for three weeks waiting trial before banishment, and was also warned out of Schleswig-Holstein. The Elders of Utah have also been ordered out of Denmark. Bishop Smoot wound up the meeting with a few very fair remarks; the only thing of note to us said by him was that it was not for having more than one wife that Joseph was killed at Carthage, for it was not known to the world then that he had more; "nor was it known, only to his family and a very, very few friends." In the main, Bishop Smoot was plain and pleasant in his manners and in his talk.

Bro. Anthony and I went to a neighbor of Bro. Gammon's, Peterson by name, to dinner. On returning to Bro. Gammon's we found a number from Springville, and near, with whom we spent a pleasant afternoon, A while before the hour for meeting, Bishop Lovelace of the ward came in, and with him I conversed nearly an hour: he is the one who would let you have the house if you would promise "not to pitch into them, or say anything about them." Of course you refused to be gagged, and so did not get the house.

At the evening meeting I presented the Abrahamic covenant in the best way I could, and had fair liberty.

There is at Provo about 6,000 inhabitants. The Utah Church has a large woolen factory there. The Asylum for the Insane is located there, is finished, and will be dedicated and opened to-morrow, the 15th. It is a fine looking structure from a distance, but I was not near to it. The foundation for the Brigham Young Academy is ready for the walls; but the people are building a fine, large meeting house; a very beautiful building from the outside; and doubtless will be second to none of its capacity, anywhere, for fine appearance when done. This building so absorbs the time and money, that the Academy will be of slow growth. The faculty and scholars are using a large warehouse near the depot at present for the school.

The woolen factory has been run at a disadvantage this last year. Some attribute the failure to hard times; others, perhaps just as wise. state that it is mismanagement. A Mr. Dunn, a man of experience, having been dismissed as the Superintendent, and a Mr. Smoot, son of the Bishop, a young man whose qualification as a salesman only, is his stock in trade, having been put in his place. Half-time for the operatives, full salaries for the main officers, the sending away of the best grades of wool, the working of only the poorer grades, the restricting the sales to their own stores, the failure to keep the trade booming, a dividend of three per cent to be paid in goods, and an assessment on the stock of five per cent to be paid in cash, shows a deficit of two per cent. All this causes dissatisfaction.

There will be two or three to unite with us at Provo, soon. I made acquaintance of several cousins there; some of Uncle Hyrum's family; some of George A's. Met John Henry Smith yesterday at Provo, rode in train to Pleasant Grove with him. He has promised me an interview. My impression now is that the leaven will reach some. Came here yesterday; shall occupy for five nights, unless prevented.

I am glad you had so good a Fourth; mine was one of some excitement, but enjoyed after all. The afternoon I passed in quiet at Bro. J. W. Wilson's near Utah Central Depot. At night went to Patriotic meeting in M. E. Church.

Of the situation here I am not prepared to state. Of one thing I am being assured, that is, that for the number of women in polygamy, the number of children to the woman is less than for the same number of women in monogamy. Brigham Young's will names nineteen wives and 46 children, less than three to the wife. Take him as a sample, and the average is 2% to the mother, while our calculations at home five to the family, two parents and three children. B. Young's family would be 3½ to the family plus the 19th part of a husband; or 66 to the whole family as against 19 husbands, 19 wives and three children each in monogamy; a total of 95, a difference of 29 persons in favor of monogamy in kingdom-building as a whole; a difference in husbands of 18, in children of 11; about 20 per cent, or nearly that in favor of monogamy. So much for kingdom-building as a fine art, as taught by Brigham and his kind.

We may be balked here as there are no seats in the hall which we have hired. The effort will be made this afternoon, but I fear a failure to seat it. It is comforting to receive the encouraging word that the Spirit notices our work in the assemblies of the Saints, as per your letter touching the manifestations through Brn. Gillen, Snively and Ackerly. May God give the fruition of such favorable prophecies.

The weather is hot; harvesting has begun.

Fuly 17th.—Last night the audience was much larger than the night before, but there were still empty seats in the not large hall. I spoke upon the gospel, using the expressions of Paul in Ephesians 5th, respecting the "washing of water by the word," as a text, with the presentation of the "church without spot or wrinkle," as the desired result and end of the gospel economy. Those present listened well.

The folks from Camp Floyd were over again. We expect to baptize one or two here before long. The ruling church here neither opens a door to us, nor offers a comparison of views. I have been quite moderate, but have been plain in avowing my reasons for not accepting the revelation and practice of a plurality.

Wm. Sterrett's wife, one of our members here, born and raised in Utah, had never heard a gospel sermon—one on the first principles, in the Utah church; and even up to last night had not heard so full an explanation of baptism and repentance as held by us. She states that the younger members are not taught these principles of the faith; it is all about something else. She believes that there are plenty of young people belonging to the Mormon Church here who never heard a sermon on the first principles of the gospel.

It is an astonishing thing to see a people, once so ready to champion the faith, so silent in the presence of men representing adverse views.

While we were holding meeting last night, some of the young men of the city were racing their ponies up and down the street in front of the Hall, which is directly across the street from the Bishop's residence, (No. 1); John Brown is the said Bishop. Whether this was to annoy, to prevent those outside from hearing, or to show disrespect, or by design, or thoughtless carelessness, of course I, as a stranger to their customs, am not prepared to state.

At Provo, we had the use of the school-house in the First Ward, by consent of Mr. Halliday, trustee, and Bishop A. O. Smoot. We take pleasure in stating this, that credit and honor may be paid to them to whom they are due. Malice rests in the breasts of fools; and fools only can afford to cherish hate of their fellow-men. If any one here fancies that the truth can be shut away by the sort of ostracism attempted here, they make a fearful mistake against their own interests.

A Bro. Akenstein (Swede) has just been in. He received the gospel twenty-four years ago—but no polygamy. It was not preached to his knowledge until in 1858, in Sweden. He will unite with us before long. His wife and sons are in the old country. He will get away from here as soon as he can get something to do. He has had eight days' work since November last.

Salt Lake City, July 19th.—I returned to the city yesterday evening. I spoke Friday night, being the fourth effort at Pleasant Grove; had an increased audience, and good liberty. One man, a Mr. J. M. Ballinger, who had stated that I was quite wealthy, and was paid a big salary, came to me on Friday afternoon, made his statement as to his informants, and asked pardon; which I granted of course. He seemed to think quite differently of the situation after his chat with me, so it seemed. No one attempted to gainsay what I stated, or preached, while I staid in the city.

Sr. Laura Duncan, of Cottonwood, Meagher county, Montana, would like to learn of the whereabouts of Saints near where she lives. She is a daughter of Bro. J. D. Flanders.

I am glad that Bro. John Cairns has decided to accept the work of the Reorganization. I feel as glad as if I had baptized some dignitary of the land. May God bless the old man. I am glad you wrote Bro. Taylor. They ought to accept him without question.

A cranky Scotchman or Irishman, McDonald by name, from Brigham City, has challenged me to discuss with him; but as he claims to represent nobody but himself, as a free thinker, though possessing a nominal standing with the Brighamites, I have declined.

July 20th.—Bro. Hosea Sterrett came in last night. At the meeting at Pleasant Grove, Saturday night, which I left Bro. R. J. Anthony to fill, they had a "pic-nic," as Hosea expressed it. Elder Andrew Jensen, Editor of the "Bikuben," a Danish Mormon paper here, has a brother at American Forks, who is a Josephite. This brother came up to the city, and told Andrew that I was holding meetings at the Grove, and invited him down. He went, intending to smash us, and save his brother. But, attacking Bro. Anthony on the plural revelation, could not make it work; and he then challenged Anthony to discuss:-"Resolved, that the History of the Church, and the revelations through Joseph the Seer, warrant the settling of the Saints in these valleys of the mountains." This may not be the exact phraseology, but is the substance. The debate is to come off to-night. Bro. Luft goes down this morning to be present, and assist what he may.

I spoke yesterday afternoon in the Chapel on Second South Street, and in the Opera House in the evening. A fair audience only. I had excellent liberty from the text: "Sanctify them through thy Truth: thy word is Truth."—John 17: 17. Those who were in the Hall listened well, and I sincerely hope good was done. A slight disposition to applaud was now and then manifest, but was not boisterous. Altogether I am encouraged.

I had a dream at Provo, and one at Pleasant Grove, both encouraging. You know the system of water ways that is in use here, at Provo and elsewhere. I dreamed that I stood near two or three of those boxed ways, that lead from the main ditch into the gardens; and I saw come out of one of them two animals, something like a cross between a beaver and a muskrat, but large as a badger; they dodged back in as soon as they saw me. It seemed that they were destructive pests, destroying the chickens, garden stuff, &c., in unseen depradations. I was standing near one of the boxes, when one of these vermin ran out of it, but seeing me it quickly ran in again, but presently stuck its head out. I stepped back like into the yard, and picked up a long two tined hay fork, and quietly went back to the culvert box. when his verminship ran his head out; I jabbed. the fork down through his head just forward of his eyes. He tried to pull back, but only succeeded in tearing himself. I finally pulled him partly out, called to my boy David, who picked up a piece of board and broke his - with it. I then drew the dody out and laid it by the walk. The other dream was; I stood where one or two with myself had been fishing; we were examining our trophies. There were four,—two not very large, but of a good kind; one other with the two, was quite large, of a most excellent sort. The fourth was still larger, something the shape of the Michigan white fish; but darker in color, and still better in quality than the others. I have, I think seen the vermin; but I have not realized the fish; but think I will. It did not seem that I really caught the fish, though I helped with the first three. The fourth, and best, seemed to have been caught by another.

Some anticipate trouble here the 24th, but I can see no real cause to fear. I shall be in the city all the week, and think to go north to Malad, &c., in August; reserving the south for cooler weather.

Yours in bonds,

Joseph Smith.

My Post Office address is Box 307, Salt Lake City.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah,

July 15th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair.—Yours of the 8th inst. is to hand. Glad to hear from you. It will not be necessary now for me to write you of our movements here, as Joseph will do that, and I see by your letters to him that the papers give you full reports. I will just say that Joseph is making friends on every hand, wherever he goes. I look for a considerable overturning ere long. The underground railroad seems to be largely patronized by the "fleeing Shepherds."

In respect to the Advocate I will promise you or any one who may edit that paper, I will do all I can and make a special effort to get subscribers for it, and aid otherwise if thought best. I can write for its pages if thought best. I want to see the paper continued, for in the near future it will be a still greater help in giving light to the blind in Utah and elsewhere. It will be a great help in this mission. May the Lord prosper his glorious work.

July 17th.—Our work is moving quietly along here. Joseph has preached three nights here since we returned from Provo. Congregations not large, but attentive. It is thought some will unite here soon. To-morrow Joseph goes to Salt Lake City, and Sunday I go to Springville. I hope Peter Anderson will be able to reach here at an early day, as his labors are greatly needed. We can plainly see the fruits of the labor done in Utah. The reaping time will soon come.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., July 17th, 1885.

Dear Herald: -At the time of inditing my last letter, I was at Wilber, holding meetings in the "G. A. R." tent, the capacity of which was about an hundred. On the 27th ult. I spoke upon the mission of the Palmyra Prophet and the work of the Reorganization. There were present three ministers and they all expressed themselves highly pleased with our presentation of the cause of truth. More especially was I thankful that the Father was present by his Holy Spirit, to fire our heart with truth divine, and give utterance inspired. I can truthfully write, without any fear of exaggeration, that at no period of the past did the cause stand so favorable there as at the present, and never were so many interested, and to neglect this very important occasion, after having fought so long and hard to gain the ear of the people, would be suicidal upon our part. There is still an urgent necessity for Bro. E. L. Kelley to visit Wilber. On the 2d inst. went to Lincoln, the State Capital. As I traversed that beautiful city and beheld the progress made and the success attending the several churches, my heart ached to think how we, as a church, have let slip the golden opportunity for establishing an altar unto righteousness, and I was deeply impressed with the idea, that we owe it to ourselves and humanity to make an effort to obtain a hearing and plant a branch in that city, wheremuch good could be done, it will take time, patience, money and brains, to place us properly before the people. I held one meeting, and the Lord blest me while I spoke to a little company at the house of Bro. Wm. Bayless.

On our natal day, with the flag at full mast, I glided o'er the prairies in one of "Nahum's chariots" to the Palmyra Branch, and Bro. Levi Anthony and I held four meetings. The work is looking up here; I was told that it was in a better state now than it has been any time for the past six years; and there is still room for improvement. The 6th inst. we arrived at Elmwood. As the time for our camp meeting drew near, we felt a growing anxiety, hoping for success. It was but an experiment in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Bro. Hugh Thornton, was the first to pitch his tent. We had as fine a grove as can be found anywhere in the west, with all the conveniences; and, best of all, kindness unbounded. We can not praise the good will of Messrs. Mc-Caig's too highly. Everything upon the farm and in the house were at our disposal. At the appointed time we organized, and Bro. M. H. Forscutt gave the opening sermon. Three sermons each day. The burden fell upon Brethren Forscutt, Derry, Caffall, and the undersigned. Brn. Rumel, Kemp and Nutt, each spoke once. There was a steady increase in interest and congregations. No accident to mar our peace, and but one ripple of excitement, viz., a little son of Bro. W. H. Brolliar got lost in the woods, and the whole camp turned out in search for him. About an hour was spent in the hunt. Many hearts leaped for joy, and the unbidden tear sprang to many eyes, when the sonorous voice of Bro. Wm. A. Moore rang out through the woods, "The child is found." We felt moved with sympathy at the sudden illness of Miss McCaig. On the Sabbath it was estimated there was an attendance of about a thousand. The conference business was done on Monday, in the spirit of unity and good will. The camp meeting closed that evening, and Tuesday we spent in baptizing and confirming. Those who were present will not soon forget the holy calmness and peace that prevailed, while four noble daughters of Zion were added to the family of God. Arrived at home at ten a. m., Wednesday, and was hurried away to the house of mourning to preach the funeral of Sister Foote. Truly, amidst the activities of life we are in death. It is almost three months since I was permitted to eat at my own board, and tomorrow I leave again. No rest for the "warrior Saint" until the conflict is ended.

In gospel bonds,
ROBT. M. ELVIN.

REHOBOTH, Mass.,

July 19th, 1885.

Bro. D. Dancer: - I had quite an experience today through a misunderstanding, and came near ruled out of an appointment by the minister of a Baptist Church; but the friends among whom were one of the trustees, decided that I should preach. The minister was mad, and said something about superior authority, "Joe Smith," etc., that he was the peer of any minister, and rather prejudiced the people in my favor before I had said a word. He gave up the pulpit, and was going to get out of it, but I politely requested him to stay and take charge of the opening exercises. This is the first time the gospel was ever presented here. And the difference between that which a Latter Day Saint believes and the popular stories is so great that the people seemed astonished. Had fair congregation, and the promise of a full one to-night. We have friends, and will have more. M. H. Bond.

Selections.

WHY NOT?

IT is the "open secret" which, as Carlyle insisted through his long life, most people fail to read; the obvious truths which most people continually overlook.

They are always looking into the distance for the succor which lies in their own surroundings, to others for the help lodged in their capacity, to those richer, stronger, or wiser for the power in their own strong hands, to the wide world for the opportunity which lies hidden in their own neighborhood. We can not learn too soon nor too well that in ourselves is lodged whatever force is needed to send us along the path of a successful life; that close beside us is the work which our hands are to do; and that right before our feet is the path in which we are to walk.

In every community there are men and women "waiting for something to turn up." They think they are willing to work, but they fail to find anything to do; they are looking for opportunities, but somehow the opportunities elude them. Every successful man is overrun with applications for positions; every vacant place is crowded with people who are anxious to fill it; every editor is overwhelmed with the manuscripts of those who aspire to success in literature; and yet thousands of these seekers for positions do not find them, or if they find them they do not keep them. Numberless manuscripts go back every year to those whose desire, for their literary work will never bear fruit in any satisfactory results. What is the trouble?

Most people want to begin at the top. Instead of taking hold of the first piece of work that comes to hand, and driving it through as if it were the grandest thing they ever expected to do, they either decline it because it does not meet their tastes, or they do it in a half-hearted way because they take no real interest in it. Their thoughts are so far in advance of what they are doing that the thing in hand is only half done. It is the use of the first opportunity that makes a second opportunity, but thousands are always waiting for the second to come first; they are expecting miracles when they ought to be working along the normal line of success. It is the boy who takes a place in the country store, and puts brains, strength and heart into the weighing of sugar and the measuring of potatoes, who finally sits down in his office in a great ware house and telegraphs his orders to the ends of the earth; the other boy, who wanted to be a great merchant, by omitting the sugar and potatoes, continues in the obscurity of his native village. These small duties, these meagre opportunities, are the training schools of success, and no one gets the prizes who does not take his degree in them.

The world is full of people who do things "fairly well;" it is in daily and pressing need of those who do them supremely well. There are thousands who would like to write, who make no grammatical blunders, are guilty of no solecisms and can strike off sentences that read fairly well; every editor reads hosts of manuscripts from such writers. The article which is always in demand, for which there is always a place, no matter how crowded the pigeon holes are, is the article which is rich in vitality, tense with earnestness, instinct with fresh thought. The men and women who write such articles do not pass at once from a school composition to the pages of the first magazines and papers; they think, feel, live, suffer, and work until the gift of insight is matched by the gift of speech. Paul already had the training of the schools and the early vigor of a splendid intellect when the heavens opened over him on the road to Damascus, and a great new truth was flashed upon him; but he did not at once become a teacher; he went into Arabia, and spent three years in silent meditation before he took up the pen that was to address Jew, Greek, and Roman with a wealth of thought, a glow of conviction, and a splendor of speech such as they had never had before.

If you want success, do not expect to get it by chance, but seek it through the open doors of the things that lie next you; and seek it as if your soul depended upon your finding it.

BIDS FOR A BLOODY CONFLICT.

AGGRESSORS ON THE FLAG ARE THE REAL OFFENDERS—THE INIATIVE.

[From Sacramento Record-Union.]

The Salt Lake Tribune, which has these many years been a thorn in the side of polygamy in Utah, recently announced that a movement was on foot among exconfederate soldiers in Utah and all adjacent Territories to hold a mass meeting of all ex-soldiers, soon at Salt Lake City, to protest against the insult offered to the flag of the Union by the Mormons on the 4th instant. The purpose is not only to protect, but by speech and resolution to inform the people of the South of the true condition of affairs in Utah, since the Mormons are making the Southern States their chosen fields for recruiting for the Mormon Church in Utah.

On the 24th instant occurs "Pioneer Day" in the Territory. Rumor has it that on that occasion the Mormons propose to drape the national flag in crape. This leads The Tribune to suggest that it will be a good day for the proposed Convention to assemble, as the presence of 2,000 or 3,000 old ex-Confederate and ex-Union soldiers in the city at that time will probably result in a speedy and effectual settlement of the whole Mormon business, for with such men present in force, the nation's flag will not be insulted with impunity. This expression has roused the Mormon organ, the Deseret News, and it declares that the whole scheme is "a bid for a bloody conflict;" that conspirators against "the people" are making cat's paws of the ex-soldiers, to manufacture sentiment against the religion of Mormons. Further on it declares it to be a deliberate plot to destory popular rule in Utah, and to obliterate the principles upon which the republic was founded. This is followed by the assertion that on the "Fourth" there was not "the remotest intention of offering an indignity to the glorious old ensign, and The Tribune plotters will find themselves in an isolated situation in the endeavor to precipitate a bloody and destructive conflict. is well, however; that they should flaunt their black-hearted design before the public gaze, that the people may be on their guard, and all good citizens, as a body, will see to it that if such an atrocity be consummated, it will not be by their taking the initiative. The other side would have to take it as well as the blunt of the terrible consequences."

If this means anything at all, it means that the Mormons will be ready for such a conflict as they assume the Gentiles desire. What the Tribune means is perfectly clear. It is not intended that the exsoldiers shall go about provoking riots, but that they will, by force if necessary, prevent the draping of the flag. When the News speaks of the "iniative" being taken it should remember that the man who insults the national banner takes the initiative, and he does so knowingly and deliberately. Such insults are not the result of impetuosity or heated blood, but of cold malice and premeditation.

Now if such indignity as it is rumored is intended—and which the News, though quoting, is very careful not to deny, and thus by its silence affirms—is offered, and a "bloody conflict" results, the burden of its infamy must fall upon the Mormons. They can not spit upon the national emblem and then charge whosoever resents it with inaugurating a "bloody conflict." That kind of special pleading will not do in the Utah case. In some respects, while all the time deprecating violence, such a conflict, the possibility of which is here debated, would not be an unmixed evil. It would result in some good. There are periods in the history of nations in which early conflicts are much to be desired, that later and more serious shocks may be avoided.

Summary of News.

DEATH OF GEN. GRANT.

July 24th.—General Grant died at 8:04 o'clock the morning of the 23d. His family were grouped around his bedside when life's spark went out, at Mount MacGregor, N. Y. Death has conquered the old hero at last.

The news of the death of Gen. Grant was received 'throughout the country with universal manifestations of grief and sympathy. In London flags were placed at half-mast on the American Exchange and American Consulate. Mr. Gladstone and Mr. John Bright were much affected on receiving the news.

In the generally accepted sense of the word, Gen. Grant was not a good "politican." He was in no sense a trimmer. He was outspoken, blunt, and straightforward in his methods. He would not stoop to conquer, as the professional, skilled politician does. His strength of will and habit of command made him obstinate and persistent in any policy he adopted. He did not court the support of the politicans by favors and conciliation. Had it not been for the strong hold he retained upon the affection and confidence of the loyal masses he would not have enjoyed a second term of the Presidency, and certainly would not have been even seriously thought of as a candidate for the third term. There was one conspicuous trait in his character which was at once an element of strength and weakness in his political career. It was his loyalty to his friends. There were always strong politicans ready and eagar to sustain him in convention, Congress, and before the people, because they knew his fidelity; but at the same time his trustfulness in men who were unworthy of the faith he put in them was responsible for all of the embarrassment of his civic çareer,-Chicago Tribune.

'Tis done. His heart hath ceased to beat;
There is no life—there is no light.

With icy hands, with frigid feet,
He lies on Mount MacGregor's hight

Brave in the battle long ago—
Brave on his bed, with iron will
He calmy faced the unseen foe—
The foe he could not crush or kill.

All eyes with tears of love are dim.

In every land his name is known;

The whole world turns in grief to him,
And fondly claims him for its own.

Farewell, great heart! To heaven afar Thy soul on wings of faith shall fly; Thy crown shall bear the brightest star In God's eternal vault on high.

EUGENE J. HALL.

Shortly after eight o'clock this morning, the President was informed of the death of Gen. Grant. He immediately ordered that the flag on the White House should be placed at half-mast. The lowering of the flag was the first intimation that the citizens of Washington had of the death of the distinguished man, although they had been anticipating it throughout the night. A few minutes after the White House flag was placed at half-mast, the flags on all the public buildings and on many private ones, were placed in a like position. The bells of the city were tolled, and citizens who heard them readily recognized their meaning. Business-men immediately began draping their houses with mourning, and residences in a similar manner showed esteem for the deceased. President Cleveland sent the following dispatch to Mrs. Grant at Mount MacGregor:

Accept this expression of my heartfelt sympathy in this hour of your great affliction. The people of the Nation mourn with you and would reach, if they could, with kindly comfort the depths of the sorrow which is yours alone, and which only the pity of God can heal.

President Cleveland has requested Adjutant-General Drum to go to New York and represent him and consult with Mrs. Grant regarding the funeral of the ex-President.

The Thursday meeting of the Cabinet was called for at eleven o'clock, instead of twelve, the usual hour, to take action on the death of the ex-President.

With the exception of Secretary Endicott, all the members were present at the meeting of the Cabinet. The President informed them of Gen. Grant's death, he having been officially notified of the demise by a telegram from Col. Fred Grant.

John Bowen of Tooele, Utah, was arrested July 18th for unlawful co-habitation and was held to bail in $1,000.

Hugh S. Gowans, President of the Tooele Stake, Utah, was arrested July 16th on the charge of polygamy and unlawful cohabitation, and held in $1,500 bail.

THE WAR IN SALT LAKE.

Andrew Smith, one of the oldest members of the police force, was arrested June 18th, charged with polygamy. He was placed under bonds and his wives and children held as witnesses. Several members of the police force are polygamists, and it is said all of them will be prosecuted. Gentiles regard the arrest of policemen as a retaliation on the latter of the raids made on houses of prostitution, the inmates of which are frequently fined $40 to $100 each. It is said that the District Attorney has names of over four hundred polygamists, with witnesses in most cases, the information being furnished him largely through anonymous lettlers. They are believed to have been written by discontented Mormons. A corps of deputies are busy serving subpenses on witnesses to appear before the grand jury next Monday.

July twentieth, Bishop Sharp, a director of the Union Pacific Railroad, Bishop H. B. Clawson, the double son-in-law of Brigham Young, and Henry Dinwoodey were arraigned for unlawful cohabitation. All pleaded not guilty.

Judge Zane denied the motion made last week in the case of Angus Cannon, convicted of unlawful cohabitation, for a writ of error, and an appeal was taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Thomas Porcher was held July twenty-first by Commissioner McKay, for unlawful cohabitation with his niece as a plural wife, in $1,000. They have had ten children, all dead. There is no law in Utah against incest.

A Chinese opium-den keeper was found guilty to-day in the Salt Lake City Police Court. He will be sentenced to-morrow.

Mayor Sharp, Director John Sharp of the Union Pacific, and Delegate John T. Caine sought an interview July twenty-first with Gov. Murray, and declared that there is no intention of doing anything to create a riot the 24th. They asked to know who was responsible for the military orders. The Governor said he had three years ago recommended the stationing of a good military force at Fort Douglass to aid the enforcement of the laws, and they might put the responsibility on him. As to trouble the 24th he did not now think there was any danger of it. The same Mormons waited on Gen. McCook, who told them that his orders were direct from the President, and covered not only the 24th, but any time of threatened trouble.

T. O. Angel, church architect, was to-day arrested for unlawful cohabitation and held in $1,500 bail.

At Ogded, Utah, July 16th, Charles F. Middleton, one of the Presidency of that Stake, was arraigned on an indictment for unlawful co-habitation.

At Salt Lake City, July 19th, Thos. Burningham of Bountiful, was placed under $1,5000 bonds on the charge of unlawful co-habitation.

THE CALM OF THE SOUL.

When winds are raging o'er the upper ocean, And billows wild contend with angry roar, 'Tis said, far down beneath the wild commotion, That peaceful stillness reigneth evermore.

Far, far beneath, the noise of tempest dieth, And silver waves chime ever peacefully; And no rude storm, how fierce soe'er it flieth, Disturbs the Sabbath of that deeper sea.

So to the heart that knows Thy love, O Purest, There is a temple, sacred evermore, And all the battle of life's angry voices Dies in hushed stillness at its peaceful door.

Far, far away, the roar of passion dieth, And loving thoughts rise calm and peacefully; And no rude storm, how fierce soe'er it flieth. Disturbs the soul that dwells, O Lord, in Thee. Mrs. H. B. Stowe.

THE GATHERING.

"THEN saith he to his servants, The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy. Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage. So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good; and the wedding was furnished with guests."-Matt.

Much has been said and written on the subject of the gathering, as it does and has related to the people of the Lord, in the different dispensations of his grace, including the one "of the fulness of times," by aged, experienced writers and speakers, and with varied conclusions reached. So much has been written on the subject, by those whom we believe to have been inspired of God, and the "ideal" of a purified, cleansed, sanctified gathered people, dwelling in unity and love, under the peaceful dominion of the King of glory, with no intruding minions of evil to mar their peace, that as a gently flowing river glides forever along; has been so beautifully and vividly portrayed, and set before us an inducement to hope and trust for the future, and an incentive to do good, that we are constrained to accept as a fact, that the "real" of the portraiture is to be in all the worthy ones actually manifested. A gathering of the Father's children, not only metaphorical, spiritual, as into the one body mystic, one spirit and one faith, but also, literal, "gathered together" to abide in holy places, as "guests" at the feast of the Lord.

Of this, Moses the priest of the Lord spake, (Deut. 33: 17), also Jacob, (Gen. 49: 10), Likewise David, Israel's tuneful bard, while viewing prophetically the ultimate act of redeeming the fallen race, (Psalms 150: 4, 5), appealing in trumpet tones to Heavens and earth. His voice is heard by his ministers in charge: "Gather my Saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." And in this the "heavens declare his righteousness." "For he is Judge." Our Savior, too, while contemplating the sad condition of the ancient covenant people of God, when they should be slain and driven from their land and cities of promise, together with their long captivity among the Gentile nations, all as a punishment for disobedience and persistent rejection of the truth, with weeping and sorrow says: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children to-gether, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not."-Matt 23: 37.

This last passage, like our text is the language of the highest authority known to us, and is the utterance of him who is prophetically declared to be the "Wonderful counsellor, The mighty God, The ever-lastisg Father, The prince of Peace;" the teachings of him who laid the foundation of the dispensations of grace and salvation.

From the foregoing statements of holy writ, we feel assured, then, that the principle of gathering is divine, of heaven, authorized of God, revealed as a part of his all-wise purpose. With this part of the hope of the people of God of former dispensations so fully expressed, with this principle of gathering so thoroughly vindicated, would we not be greatly surprised, nay even astonished to find all the revelations of the dispensation of the fullness of time wholly silent in reference to this principle "of the faith once delivered to the Saints?" That dispensation in which we are gathered into Christ, and not only so, but all who are gathered into him, are gathered in one, not only those in heaven, but those on earth also. Would it not be strange, indeed, to really be convinced that the Lord had really reconsidered the matter, and had actually concluded to change from this ancient purpose? Strange! But fortunately such is not the fact; for prophets ancient and modern have come with the "burden of the word of the Lord," assuring us that his purpose relative to this feature of the Saints' hope still stands and will be accomplished:-"For He hath looked down from the hight of his sanctuary; from heaven did the Lord behold the earth; to hear the groaning of the prisoner; to loose those that are appointed to death; to declare the name of the Lord in Zion, and his praise in Jerusalem; when the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms, to serve the Lord."—Psa. 102:19-21. Of the progress of this work, the acme of which David speaks in the above language, Isaiah says:-"And the Gentiles shall come to thy (Zion's) light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about, and see; all they gather themselves together, they come to thee; thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side. Then thou shalt see, and flow together, and thine heart shall fear and be enlarged.

It will be of interest to notice in the consideration of the passage from Psalms 50, that only those who have covenanted with the Lord "by sacrifice" are gathered to him, judged and rewarded; and, from the 60th chapter of Isaiah, we learn that those gathered, are gathered after their conversion, and before Zion is made "an eternal excellency," and prior to the time when "wasting and destruction are no more heard in Zion's land."

It appears from the language of the Savior as found in Matthew, chapter 22: 1-6, that it was the design of God in the Christian dispensation, (the one preceeding the present—the dispensation of the fulness of times), to gather his people together, but for some reason those to whom the servants were sent did not render themselves worthy. It also appears that the work of gathering the guests together is to be accomplished in the last dispensation, at least a work is done by the servants sent in the nature of a gathering, that never was accomplished in any former dispensation. But, metaphorical or spiritual gatherings, or unions, have been done in all preceeding dispensations. Then what is the nature of this last gathering, Literal? It so seems to us. And we, hence argue again the righteousness and divinity of the principle of gathering. The keys of the gathering, it appears, are delivered to the authorized ministry of the last dispensation referred to in the passage above cited. verse 9, 10. And it will be further learned from our text, with its context, that the gathering here referred to takes place before the final separation of the wicked from among the righteous.

In beautiful harmony with the foregoing prophetic statements, is the following from revelations of modern date.-"And the day shall come that the earth shall rest; but but before that day, shall the heavens be darkened, and the vail of darkness shall cover the earth; and great tribulations shall be among the children of men, but my people will I preserve; and righteousness will I send down out of heaven; and truth will I send forth out of the earth, to bear testimony of my Only Begotten; his resurrection from the dead; yea, and also the resurrection of all men; and righteousness and truth will I cause to sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out my own elect from the four quarters of the earth, unto a place which I shall prepare; a holy city, that my people may gird up their loins, and be looking forth for the time of my coming; for there shall be my tabernacle, and it shall be called Zion; "New Jerusalem." (D. & C. 36: 12.) Righteousness has been sent down from heaven, and truth has sprung out of the earth, and righteousness is beginning to go forth on the earth, for the gospel, in which God's righteousness is revealed, is being proclaimed in its fulness. Also "great tribulations" are already coming on the wicked, as is foretold in the prophecy before us. Then, why may we not look for the remaining items of it to be fulfilled? We do

To the foregoing the following fully agrees.—"Wherefore the decree hath gone forth from the Father that they (the elect) shall be gathered in unto one place, upon the face of this land, to prepare their hearts, and be prepared in all things, against the day when tribulation and desolation are sent forth upon the wicked: for the hour is nigh, and the day soon at hand, when the earth is ripe."—D. & C. 28:2.

These two evidences found in the revelations given in the opening up of "the dispensation of the fulness of times," renew to the Saints the promise that was made to those who sought after life eternal, in ages past, and who held communion with our Father in heaven.

A gathering of a preliminary character to the final gathering of the Saints to judgment and reward, is plainly foretold, both by the language of our text, and passages quoted from the Book of Covenants. The reason assigned for this primary gathering is the temporal salvation, or rather the salvation of the children of God from the temporal judgments to be visited upon "the children of men" just before the second coming of Christ. We sometimes determine what is to be in the future by what has been in the past, or, in other words, we conclude the Lord will perform similarly with his people in the future as he has done in the past, under similar circumstances. And this rule can not be altogether an incorrrect one when it is remembered that "He is the same, yesterday, to-day and forever." He prepared the way for the salvation of all who desired it in Noah's time. God wrought for his Israel at the Red sea; in Egypt; and at various times when it was necessary for their good. Christ forewarned his disciples of their danger at the destruction of Jerusalem, (see Luke 21: 20, 22.) and history records that the armies that afterward encompassed the city were interrupted, and they temporarily withdrew from around the city, and the dsiciples improving the opportunity gathered out from the doomed city, and so escaped in safety. And in direct reference to the time referred to in the Latter Day revelations, our Savior and his Apostle Paul, both make promise of salvation from the judgments to be visited upon the wicked, and require of us special exercise of faith in God, to this end. (Luke 21: 36; I Thess. 5: 8, 9, 10; Rev. 18:-4). This coming out of Babylon, is not merely a separation from former church communion, but a literal going out; for the "plagues" to be saved from are "death, mourning, and famine."—Chapter 18: 8. (See also Dan. 12:-1,2,3). Joel is very plain on this point, and tells plainly that—"it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered;" From what? "for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and in the remnant whom the Lord our God shall call."—Joel 2: 32. Here the teachings of the revelations of ancient and modern times are in perfect accord again. Having now discovered by a comparison and investigation of the revelations regarding the gathering of the Lord's people, in the last days, as predicted by the prophets and promised, and the agreement of these revelations, in reference: first, to the divinity of the principle of the gathering; second, pouring out of the wrath of God in judgments on the wicked in the last days; and third, the intention of the Lord to employ the gathering as a means of deliverance (perhaps not the only means) from "these things that shall come to pass,"—the "trouble such as never was;" the "plagues," and the "wrath;" Thes. 5: 8, 9. We may leave this part of the subject, and very briefly review it as it stands related to history.

In approaching this very peculiar subject from an historical point of view, in looking at the different efforts that have been made to gather, the prerequisites necessary that pertained to the people to be gathered, the manner to be observed by them in gathering, the circumstances that surround them at the time, and the many especial obligations that they were and will be placed under by the Lord, are all to be borne in mind by us in our inves-Let us consider the great length of time, that was occupied in an endeavor to prepare ancient Israel, to be planted in the land of promise,years—and after all this time of being drilled, taught the right way of the Lord, how often, and in how many of the divine requirements they failed. Israel truly rejected much light that was offered to them while in the wilderness, (D. C. 83:4; Heb. 4:2), but notwithstanding this, and the further fact that as a consequence many fell in Israel and failed to enter the land, the Lord did not utterly cast them off; nor did the fact that they believed not the gospel preclude the Lord from fulfilling his promises made before to Abraham, of being "a God to them throughout their generations;" nor of bringing them into the land "in the fourth generation," (Gen. 15: 13–16; 17: 7, 8), and we can not very well see how their accepting the gospel would have prohibited their being gathered into the land. But in consequence of their rebellion many of their incidentals resulted differently than they would have done had Israel been obedient to all the requirements. (Ez. 20; Matt. 23: 36, 37; Rom. 9: 31-33). Perhaps they might have been gathered in peace, and would not have been under the necessity of entering into their possessions amidst carnal warfare, and military glory! (2 Kings 7: 9, 10; Jer. 32:40–44). Throughout all the subsequent history of Israel, up to the time of their final captivity by the Roman power after they rejected the offer of eternal life, as proffered to them by the Savior, whenever their transgressions were so grevious as to require the scourge of the divine hand unto captivity among the nations, and they afterward repented and turned to the Lord with all their hearts, he, according to promise previously made, graciously remembered and mercifully gathered them again, and "turned their captivity." (Deut. 30: 1-4). "If any of thine be driven out to the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the Lord thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee."

But then, "the iniquity of the Amorites was full" when Israel first entered the land of Canaan, and the destruction visited upon them was just, so the Lord decided, and we are not inclined to question the justice of that decision. These conclusions will not be controverted, methink; and with the thought that the course pursued by them was justifiable in the dispensation, and under the circumstances which it occurred. But if any one be inclined to object to the course then pursued in the manner of their gathering, and of their entering into their promised possession, let them suggest the course the Lord should have taken!

So far as the latter-day gathering of Israel and their salvation is concerned, suffice it to say that for all this the Lord will yet be inquired of by them, and he will respond to their inquiry by actually gathering both the houses of Israel back to the land of their fathers, (Ez. 36: 37, 38; Jer. '33: 6, 7, 8, 15-26; Isa. 40: 9, 10), and they will be brought into "the everlasting covenant;" also,—(Isa. 49: 6-8; Jer. 31: 31-34; Ez. 37: 20-26; Rom. 11:

Passing on down to the time indicated in prophecy when Israel is to be thus gathered and saved, we learn that the only reason why the Tews are not destroyed at the coming of Christ, with the balance of the wicked is: "For I am the Lord, I change not, therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." "For the gifts and callings of God are without repentance." (Mal. 3:6; Rom. 11:29). Leaving now the Mosaic economy, and coming to notice that the gathering sought to be brought about in the early Christian dispensation was not accomplished, because of the unworthiness of those to whom the message of mercy was sent; (Matt. 22:8; 23;37. Acts 13:46; 28:25-28); and passing over, without notice, the period denominated the dark ages, we approach the ushering in of the "Times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." That dispensation has introductory events which prepare the way for the second advent of the Messiah to reign and iudge among the nations. The first of judge among the nations. these events (and the one that marks its beginning) is the restoration of "the everlasting gospel" through the medium of an holy angel, to be proclaimed by divine authority, as a witness to all nations, just prior to "the end of the world." (Rev. 14: 6, 7; Matt. 24: 14). This is followed, as a legitimate consequence, by the restoring of the church after its primitive order of organization. And this gospel message is supplemented with the authoritative declaration that: Jerusalem in Canaan, shall be rebuilded, "as towns without walls;" also preparatory to the coming of the Lord to "dwell" on earth, and be "the wall of fire round about" Jerusalem, "and the glory in the midst."

complishment of this wondrous event. (Zech. 2: 1-12). The events predicted in these passages are in process of fulfillment, and by this fact we feel assured that we are living in the time referred to; and from this consideration we must be interested to the utmost in the matter. gospel having been restored, and some embracing it, the church began to be organized in the western part of New York State, in the year 1830. Ministers were ordained and sent into the regions adjacent, and numbers were added to the church rapidly. The work, though bitterly opposed, spread abroad; and the converts, as in former gospel dispensations, were mostly from among the poor and lowly. This was the case with the branches in all the places where they existed, and being desirous of doing that part required at their hand in the great latter day work, in a temporal point of view, the question naturally arose as to how to place themselves in a condition to enable them to do their duty, in regard to spreading the work to the utmost extent; and as the gospel work in its very nature is calculated to inspire with zeal to a great extent its real earnest devotees, so in the matter now under consideration.

The Saints at this time evidently sought the Lord on this subject, and as investment in real estate is the most permanent and safe investments that man in ordinary circumstances can make; and inasmuch as the public domain of our nation invited such investments by individuals or firms, or co-operative unions, because there was vast bodies of such lands; and from the furthur fact that the Saints desired, as they should, to act in concert, realizing that in union there is strength, and it seeming to be necessary for them to be located in reasonable proximity to each other, thus enabling them to act unitedly in their efforts to aid themselves and to aid the cause; it was suggested to them as "wisdom," provided they would act honestly and righteously, to go in small bodies to where the lands could be procured, and "purchase lands for an inheritance," would it be essential for them all to go into the same locality either; but to settle in congregations, located near each other, and "in this way establish Zion" the church. (D. & C. 48: 2. 57: 1 98: 10). Now, for the life of me, I can not see anything unjust or unwise in such a move as this, provided all transactions pertaining to the matter were performed legally. Many of the Saints, (and sinners too), have seen the "wisdom" of going west and buying "inheritances." And the signs of the times now indicate that it is about the safest thing a man can do. instance; witness the condition of, and the present outlook for, the thousands of wagelaborers and others who own no land. And note the further fact that, now the land which in 1831-2, and later, could have been had at cheap rates, is now mostly in the hands of those who hold it to speculate on; or it is settled up and held at high prices by others. Truly, "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." Yes; and in this case we are in the rear with special "wisdom." At least, they improved the opportunities. At the time this "wisdom" was suggested to the Saints, the lands to which their attention was directed, were comparatively new; the country was sparseley settled, and unimproved; and besides, it was quite distant from where the body of the church was at that time located.

Under all these circumstances very much valuable time, and much expense, would have been lost and incurred, with the slow and inconvenient facilities for traveling at that time, had each man went singly that long distance to select a place, purchase, and then return east, and move his family west; and hence it is that an economic plan, and one which would bring about the same results, was suggested by revelation to the poor and inexperienced Saints.

First: an "agent" was appointed to travel among and communicate with the churches, lay the matter before them, and collect sufficient money with which to begin, at least, to "purchase" the lands for them to locate and become established on. All the means that could be were to be obtained "in righteousness" by the Saints for this purpose. (D. C. 48: 1; 58:10;63:12).

And secondly; "honorable men," "even wise men," were to be sent before by the church, "to purchase" the lands, doing every thing pertaining to the matter, according to the law of the land, and when the lands were so purchased, men were to be sent to labor on and improve them, and thus prepare them to be occupied by the Saints, as "the priviliges of the lands were made known to them from time to time," and thus "have all things prepared before them."—D. C. 97: 10; 58: 12.

Thirdly; it is but reasonable, when the thought is once suggested, that for throngs to go at once upon wild and unimproved lands, want and confusion would be a natural result, and would bring pestilence. The Saints were counseled to go only after having all things prepared before themnot in great haste-but "carefully gather" thereto, and only as they were commanded by the Lord, and counseled by the Elders of the church, nor were they to go "by flight." (D. C. 98:9; 58:12).

Fourthly; when thus gathered and located according to the requirements given of the Lord to govern in righteousness in all these conditions, they were to live in all holiness before the Lord. Seek to build up the cause of Christ. Send the gospel unto all nations and all times to remember the poor and the needy among them. They were to strive in all things to sanctify and prepare themselves for celestial glory to be enjoyed in the mansions of eternal rest and peace.

It appears from the history of the case that some of the church were willing to comply with the arrangement proposed by revelation, and some were not. And as some were disobedient, the church did not meet with that degree of success which would have crowned their efforts had they all been "willing and obedient." Some "purchased" inheritances, and some did not. Some began well and ran for a season. But it seems that mortal man can not or will not build a character strong enough to resist all evil, and hence man's transgressions and failures from his gathering in Eden to the gathering of the Saints in 1831 are repeated. And with this continuous "fall" of man before them, some yet deny the doctrine of the "fall," and per consequence deny that that God ever gave to Adam the command not to eat of the fruit, or the Saints to gather.

In order for the gathering to be a success, obedience to all the commands was declared to be essential; and the results of disobedience were pointed out. But as all this is so plainly revealed in the Book of Covenants, we need not dwell on this point here.

A city of righteousness and peace is represented as being entirely appropriate to such a gathering. And to bring the matter down from the visual to regions of common experience, cities have been necessities, for many reasons, among all peoples in a civilized state, in all ages. And it is essential in the Christian life for each person to have attached to all their works and actions, that degree of sanctity to indicate the nature and character of a moral and spiritual life. And if the same principle be carried out in the life of a sufficient number to constitute a city, and if that characteristic gives it the name "Zion," a city of purity, who should object?

Cities have been overthrown and their inhabitants destroyed and scattered for their wickedness, and not because it was wrong to build them; and so it was, we apprehend, with those whose especial case we are now considering. And much more is this the case where special obligations are placed upon a people by the Lord, and they are gathered for the purpose of bringing to pass much righteousness, if the obligations are broken, and the purposes of their gathering are forgotten.

The Saints were scattered because of their transgression of the laws given to govern them, and not because the Lord had not commanded them to gather, or because the principle of gathering was wrong. (D. C. 98:1, 2).

As the kingdom, like the net, "gathers of every kind,' so there were those among the Saints in Missouri who "polluted their inheritances." They practiced "hypoctisies," lyings, adulteries, covetousness, became selfish in their temporal gains, began to speculate off one another—charge higher for what they sold than those out of the church would have charged for the same These and also many other evils things. were among them. For these things they failed, and for pursuing a similar course, any other people will fail before God, both here, and in the great hereafter.

The spread of the gospel in the last days, to manifest the love of Christ in remembering the poor, together with gaining eternal life for man, are the very objects of organizing the church, and also the gathering, and not to cherish and build up self by "biting and devouring one another."

But the time has passed for such a gathering now as was contemplated in 1831, from the very nature of the circumstances, viewing it from a natural stand point. The land is now owned by actual settlers, and can be bought only in small tracts or farms, and the church can gather by individuals or families, and settle in "the regions round about" the holy precincts.

The Saints, in a gathered condition, abused their privileges, and transgressed the laws given to govern them in such a condition, and consequently were driven away. But the fact of their being scattered does not prove the principle of gathering to be wrong, and more than the abuse of the privileges and conditions of marriage prove that institution to be wrong. Great evil has grown out of the abuse of the rite of baptism, but should we deny the righteousness of that principle because of such abuses? We say, discriminate between conditions and principles, and their abuses, and condemn the abuses; but do not ruthlessly sweep away principles with their abuses. The abuse of a principle is no argument against its right and lawful

The most that a disciple of Christ could do in an emergency, after having purchased a home and obtained a title to it according to the law of the land, is to endeavor to protect home and family and life against the intrusions of robbers and mobbers; and this he has a constitutional right to do. If this constitutional guarantee is right for the individual, is it not also right for a collection of individuals to use the same guarantee in a like emergency? This the Saints seemed forced to use once, after every other legal resort had failed them, and because of a prevalent political error-ultra states-rights doctrine-this resort failed them. And it was better for them to give the matter up than to be entirely exterminated because of this error, which had its origin and support with the slave ocracy. This event aided to expose this great political error to the minds of many, and good was brought out of it ultimately. We think the protection of home, life, and property is all there is to the huge "war" referred to in section 98 of Doc. Cov.; because in that same section, or rather its appendix, section 102, it is said: "For behold, I do not require at their hands, to fight the battles of Zion." other reason why I believe the Lord revealed the manner, and required of the Saints to gather at that time is, because the Lord informed the Saints afterward, that because of their failures, (and the oppositions of their enemies), to accomplish the work in a given time. It behoved him to require that work, (building the city and house) no more, at the hands of those sons of men. In the same connection he promises to "avenge" their failure, upon those who hindered, unless they repented and does not require them to do so.

As the disciples would have been destroyed with the city of Jerusalem had not a way of escape been prepared in answer to their faith, prayer, and obedience, (Matt. 24: 20), so in the time of the judgments decreed on the nations now, the fact of being a disciple will not saye us from the judgments, if we remain among the nations. We must labor and wait the time when the way will be prepared of the Lord for our gathering to holy places.)D. C. 28:2; 36:12; 45:4; 98:4; Rev. 18:4); and also, as patiently await the "command" to so gather. Let all Saints faithfully strive to be found "worthy" then. C. Scott.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

BY ELDER D. H. BAYS.

CHAPTER VII.
THE LAST DITCH.

Now comes the Sabbatarian, and for answer says: "You have abolished the law, including the ten commandments, and so we have no law now in force to regulate man's conduct towards God or his fellowman—we may kill, steal, commit adultery,—in short do whatever we please with impunity."

Let us carefully examine this last ditch in which our Sabbatarian friends have taken refuge.

It sufficient Scripture can be brought to bear upon this point to drive the enemy from his position, we think in all good faith, he ought to surrender.

Paul evidently well understood the depravity of human nature, if I may be allowed this expression, and no doubt but that the same line of argument had been employed in answer to his conclusion that, "we are not under the law, but under grace;" for he immediately propounds the very pertinent question.

"What then? Shall we sin because we are not under the law, but under grace; God forbid."—Rom. 6: 15.

No sir: God forbid that we should give unlimited sway to the unbridled passions of men. God, in his infinite wisdom has never left the world of mankind without law. Before the enactment of the law at Sinai, the world was governed by law. It does not follow that, because the Mosaic law has been repealed, nothing should be given to take its place. No; not for one moment.

Another objection is urged against the applicability of the text last quoted, on the ground that it does not refer to the decalogue; but to the "ceremonial law."

We may settle this point by simply determining what law it is that described sin. The law now under consideration is one which describes sin; and whatever law that may be, it is the law which we are no longer under, and to the provisions of which we are no longer to subscribe. Now, seriously, does the "ceremonial law," say anything about sin? You know it does not. Upon this point Paul makes the very timely remark:

"Nay, I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not Covet."—

Then the law referred to in the text under consideration is that which says, "Thou shalt not covet." What law is that? The ten commandments, undeniably; for the tenth commandment of the Decalogue says, "Thou shalt not covet anything that is thy neighbor's."

Hence, we arrive at the conclusion, as a logical sequence, that we are not under the law of the ten commandments, but under grace; and at the same time we are not allowed to sin. Therefore, there must of necessity be a law in existence forbidding sin.

Christ was greater than Moses; and we may, therefore, reasonably expect his law to be correspondingly greater—more nearly approaching perfection than that of the great Hebrew lawgiver. While it was the peculiar mission of Christ to establish a higher spirituality among men, he did not lose sight of the fact that the world must not be left without a "moral law" to govern men in their relations to each other. The Christian system may, with all propriety, termed a Divine Eclecticism. Every thing in the Mosaic law which was of any benefit to man, was tranferred to the new dispensation, and is expressed in the new covenant.

All that will be beneficial to man for his moral government we may, therefore, expect to find in the New Testament.

Whatever is not commanded, or in some other way enjoined by Christ and the Apostles, is not binding. Whatever is enjoined by them, either by precept or example, is binding. We think this absolutely safe ground, as well as perfectly fair. Now, are the ten commandments, as written upon the "two tables of stone" thus enjoined? To this we answer, and that, too without fear of successful contradiction, that all the commandments of the Decalogue, except the fourth, are enjoined, either directly or indirectly; some of them, however, in a modified or amended form. No where, in all the New Testament, is there a commandment, by either Christ or the apostles, to observe the Seventh-day Sabbath.

This being true, by virtue of what law is the Jewish Sabbath, originating under the Jewish dispensation, made binding upon men in the Christian dispensation? Sabbatarians, answer.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE NEW DECALOGUE.

The law of Christ, like that of Moses, has its moral and ceremonial features. In the former is included the spiritual, unknown to the latter. This law is based upon ten commandments, but in some respects differing from those of the former dispensation. I will present the Decalogue of the Old Testament, and the ten commandments of the new, in jutaposition, that they may the more readily be compared.

The most striking feature of this arrangment is the absence of the fourth commandment of the law. We omit it for the very potent reason that we can find neither command nor precept in New Testament enjoining its observance.

We respectfully invite our Sabbatarian friends to point out any apostolic injunction for the observance of the Seventh-day Sabbath.

man servant, nor his maid servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's"—Ex. 20: 2-17.

The careful reader will no-doubt have discovered the great superiority of the ten commandments of the New Testament over the Old, in many important respects. Let us review them briefly.

1. In the first commandment, the entire soul-service of the believer is required by the one, while the other only requires that they refrain from the worship of other gods.

2. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," of the new Decalogue, has no counterpart in the old, and is of far greater practical value to man than the corresponding commandment of the old law, which provides that the Israelites should neither make nor worship "any graven image."

The appendage to this commandment represents the Almighty as "a jealous God, visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation." This apparently unjust law is wholly eliminated, and nowhere to be found in the "revised statute," by which adopted Israel are now to be governed.

3. The third commandment in the one, merely prohibits the taking of the Lord's name in vain, while the other forbids swearing in any and every sense of the word. A man is not allowed to swear by anything.

4. This commandment of the law enjoins the observance of the Seventh-day Sabbath, while that of the new law forbids idolatry, and in import corresponds with the second commandment of the Decalogue.

5. In this commandment the inheritance of "the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee," the land of Canaan, is made contingent upon the observance of "Thou shalt honor thy father and thy mother." The corresponding commandment of the New Testament is broad and sweeping, including every body. Simply, "Honor thy father and thy mother." While the one was confined to a people who were to inherit the land of Canaan, the other was to "all the ends of the earth," and offered no mere worldly consideration to influence men in their actions. One is local, the other is general.

The 6th 7th and 8th commandments are essentially alike; while the words "against thy neighbor," in the 9th, are stricken out of the amended law, making it broader and grander in its application.

10 In the tenth and last commandment a similar change occurs. The one provides that a man shall not covet anything that is his neighbor's; leaving him free as to those not included in the word "neighbor;" while the other prohibits covetousness in the broadest possible sense, and applies alike to all classes of men. It declares that all evils proceed "from within," from "the heart of men," and are but the legitimate result of evil thoughts and carnal desires.

Who, with his reasoning powers unfettered by prejudice, can not see that the revised statute from Christ, the greatest lawgiver is, as a whole, infinitely superior to the law given through Moses! It is not only general, but we may go further and say it is universal in its application to the race. Not only so, but we find this superiority exhibited throughout the entire Christian system, as compared with the Mosaic economy.

It is a remarkable fact that the Jewish system of religion was based upon the Decalogue, while that propounded by Christ rests upon his sermon on the mount (Matt. 5th, 6th, and 7th chapters), and including two far greater commandments than is found in the Decalogue, namely:

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great command. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Matt. 22: 37-39.

This includes everything in itself ennobling and grand. If there is anything not included in the above, it may be found in the following:-"Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so unto them."-Matt.

If a man truly love God, he will keep his commandments. If he truly love his neighbor as himself, he will do him good, and no harm.

If to his faith be added charity, man will love both God and his fellowman. Charity is the great central idea of Chris-This word nowhere occurs in tianity. the Old Testament, and the doctrine is not inculcated under the law, only as it may be inferred from other commandments. The New Testament abounds with the most vivid presentations of this virtue, as the Alpha and Omega of the Christian religion; and with respect to it the apostle Paul says:

"Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned."—I Tim. 1: 5.

In harmony with this thought the apostle Peter says:

"And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, Godliness; and to Godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:5-8.

Of this divine principle, the apostle Paul thus eloquently writes to the Church at Corinth: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth, beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth."—I Cor. 13: 1-8.

No sentiment can be grander than this.

No system of religion can be perfect without it. It is the Alpha and Omega of every virtuous and ennobling sentiment. Who, in view of these facts, can for one moment indulge the thought that the old covenant is, in any sense, equal to the new?

CHAPTER IX.

We think the objection raised in the foregoing chapter, namely, that men may commit all manner of sins because the law has been repealed, is fully and fairly answered. Ample proof, we think, has been adduced to show that, under the new covenant, law exists to prohibit all crimes, of whatsoever name or nature. No man may sin, therefore, because we are not under the law of Moses; for we are now under a better law, even the "law of Christ," "the royal law."

At this juncture we are met by the interposition of another objection. It is this: "You have abolished the law, and although we may not commit the grosser crimes, by virtue of the existence of the higher law, yet we are now under no obligation to observe any day as a Sabbath, the former law which injoined the observance of the Seventh-day Sabbath having been repealed, we are left without a Sabbath-day." Let us consider briefly, the facts in the case. The objector here assumes that we are not to observe a Sabbath, because there is no command for it in the New Testament.

Now, we do not think it follows, necessarily, that men can not observe a Sabbath without a commandment to that effect, for the obvious reason that from Adam to Moses, a period of about two thousand five hundred years, there is not a single recorded instances of any one ever keeping a Sabbath; nor is there a command to be found requiring anybody to do so. If any Sabbath was observed during this time, it was not by virtue of the fourth commandment, for said commandment was not given till some four hundred and thirty years after Abraham's day, as will appear from the following:

"And this I say, that the covenant that

"And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, can not disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect."—Gal. 2: 17.

We live specifically, in the gospel age. We have shown that Abraham likewise lived under a gospel dispensation. (See Gal. 3: 8. Heb. 4: 2). If it be argued that Abraham observed a Sabbath, then we submit he did so under a gospel dispensation, and without the fourth commandment of the law. If he could observe a Sabbath in a gospel dispensation without a command, we may do so. If a Sabbath was observed at any time before the law was given without a command, it will certainly be conceded that we may do so after the law has ceased to exist.

It is clear that no command was ever given to observe the Sabbath till the days of Moses, some 1491 years before Christ. It is equally clear that no command to observe the Sabbath by either Christ or the apostles, is to be found as a matter of record in the New Testament. ing he had come to fulfill the law of which the fourth commandment was a part, and nail the whole Jewish system to his cross, it is remarkably strange that Christ should not specifically enjoin the observance of the fourth commandment, the same as he did the sixth, seventh, eighth, and so of nearly all the rest, if he intended the seventh-day Sabbath should be observed by his disciples. Indeed, he certainly would have done so if as much importance really attaches to the obedience of that day as its advocates seem to think. Evidently no such importance attaches to the observance of that day, from the further fact that neither Christ nor his apostles did ever so much as remotely intimate that the Seventh-day [Jewish] Sabbath should be observed by Christians.

From a candid consideration of the foregoing, we may safely arrive at the conclusion that the existence of a written command is in no wise essential to the proper observance of the Sabbath. If any day was observed as a Sabbath during the time that intervened from Adam to Moses, it will be a difficult matter for our Sabbatarian friends to show that such a day was the seventh day of the week, or Saturday. It will prove an equally difficult task for them to show that the early Christians, as such ever met for divine worship on the seventh day of the week. In the New Testament we find no command to observe any particular day as the Sabbath. In the absence of any express command on the subject, it is reasonable to conclude that we shall be perfectly safe in imitating the example of Christ and the apostles.

The careful reader may have observed that it is the Sabbath the Lord sanctified, and not the day on which it should occur. From this fact we may infer that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath, and that it is a divine institution. If the Sabbath was made for man, then by the law of induction we have the the further fact that man was made first, and the Sabbath afterwards; thus disproving the theory that the Sabbath was given in the garden of Eden, before the fall. God rested the seventh day, but he santified the Sabbath day.

The Sabbath as an institution is one thing, and the day upon which it may be observed is quite another. To observe the seventh day, was to commemorate the deliverance of the children of Israel from the bondage of Egypt. Christians have a greater event to celebrate, namely, the deliverance of a fallen race from the bondage of sin and death. The Seventh-day Sabbath commemorated the day of Israel's deliverance from bondage. The Christian Sabbath commemorates the day upon which God completed the plan of man's redemption. This plan was completed when our blessed Lord triumphantly rose from the dead on the first day of the week, and gave to all, to Jew and Gentile, a day typical of eternal rest in Christ.

In accordance with this view I shall now proceed to prove that the first day of the week, or Sunday, is the authorized day upon which Christians may rest from their labors, and meet together for divine worship. I think we shall be abundantly able to show that "The first day of the week, or Sunday, receives the sanction of the New Testament Scriptures as a holy day, or weekly Sabbath of rest.

As Lord of the Sabbath day, Jesus had the indubitable right to change the Sabbath day and its requirements and privileges. A change of the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day of the week we think clearly indicated in the types and shadows of the law.

A FEW WORDS ON TITHING.

To say that the law of Tithing, Word of Wisdom, or other writings that don't happen to accord with our belief, is non-esential, will not do, in this day and age of the world, for that is one reason there is so much confusion and strife; they deny all that they don't want to believe, giving it the name of non-essential, which is rather an unpleasant position; for if we can escape with the plea of non-essential, we may soon get as far away as the unbelieving infidels, who say that God is non-essential; that the world we live on is self-existing.

It requires a good degree of faith to believe the Word of God, and some more to obey the gospel; but it is only when we seek to obey the law as a whole, that we are hearers and doers of the word in truth and in sincerity.

Tithing, as I understand it, is this: should I have a saving of money, or other values, of one hundred dollars, then I owe ten dollars in tithes; and for every additional hundred dollars, a tenth thereof. Next year, should I be able to add another hundred dollars or more, I then pay ten dollars per hundred of the additional savings of all over and above what I have not needed for the wants of life. But I must not stretch those wants into lands, or additionals to my business in any way, and call it necessary, and so seek to escape the law.

Should I have no savings in money, or possessions; if it takes all I can earn to supply my daily wants, then I can pay no tithes, and must needs come under the law of the Offerings. The Tithes are for rich and well to do, and is an equal and just law; the Offerings are for the honest poor before the Lord; for God is respecter of persons, and provides a way for all to be acceptable before him. They who observe the law of Tithing, testify that the promises is theirs; they who give the Offering, remember the widow's mite and give with an eye single to God's glory.

The Elders testify that they have been called as was Aaron, and so are about their Lord's business—called to declare the plan of salvation—to go preach the word without purse or scrip, and they know all about it before they begin. They expect not their reward of men; but of God who shall prove his servants, and judge every man according to his works. Many a good Elder, who feels the weight of his calling, and loves the cause of truth, who goes forth to declare the tidings of great joy, has left behind those who are near and dear to him by the ties of nature, unprovided with the needs of life. Then, as they have went forth on the Lord's business, that wife and children are the Lord's poor, and must needs be provided for; and this is where the Tithes and Offering are needed; and here is wisdom, and the way wherein we can all be co-workers and helps to the glory of God our Father. There is no room for idlers. If we wish to prove ourselves worthy servants, actions are louder than words. Let us one and all bring in our Tithes and Offerings to the house of the Lord, and so prove by our acts that we do love the cause of truth, and that we do long earnestly to see the day when the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached to every tongue and nation. We are all desirous to see the work roll on. Desires are good, but it is actions that bear Who is it that will not desire good? Yet how few there are who really seek to accomplish their desires in very deed! Let us all lend a helping hand; all throw in our little, for every little goes to help the good work, and so we should not hold it back because we think it is so little, and is not worth giving. We may promise much in the good time coming, but that is not ours. Life is made of moments: we have but a moment at a time, and should ever seek to improve it; for the moment may soon come when life shall cease. Then let us strive so to live as to be able to meet it without regrets. Let us, one and all, for a moment think what good could be done did we all but throw in an offering of one dollar quarterly. Figure it up, some one, and learn how many families of the elders we could sustain. No need to cavil about about this-even those who have doubts about the law of Tithing can help here, and so be co-workers with those who go forth to tell the good old story of "Peace on Earth, good will to men."

Don't let us plead poverty; let us but resolve to give, and say to ourselves, We will, with God our Father's help. And not only will we find one dollar, but will soon find another to add with it. Then let us begin at once, and see if we can not bring "the good time coming." We will surely hasten it in this way. Let those who believe not, and tell of the trusts that have been betrayed, hinder us not. 'Tis better far to trust and be betrayed than never trust at all. Let us remember that they who give to the poor lend to the Lord. Surely, we like the security; then let us prove we do by throwing in our mites, and so lay up for ourselves treasures in Heaven, where the thieves can not steal. Let us strive to excel in good deeds; for it is only by striving to excel that great good has been done. Let us not wait to learn who will begin, but let all strive to see who shall be first, and so man the gospel ship with a full crew of sturdy sailors.

This district conference convened at Independence, Missouri, on the 27th of June, 1885, at ten o'clock. Bro. D. S. Crawley in the chair; T. W. Chatburn clerk.

Branch Reports.—Independence 406; Clintonville 15; I died. Kansas City 20. Armstrong 39. Elders D. S. Crawley, J. W. Brackenbury, F. C. Warnky, (baptized 4), J. Curtis, S. Crum, B. Myers, J. H. Lee, G. Montague, J. B. Tignor, J. T. Clark, W. Newton, G. Hayward, T. W. Chatburn, S. Maloney and J. Preator; J. C. Foss, C. G. Lanphear by letter.

Bishop's Report.—Moneys received $106.10, moneys disbursed $95; balance on hand $11.10.

Wyandott Branch was on motion disorganized. Election of district officers resulted as follows: F. C. Warnkey, president; T. W. Chatburn, secretary and treasurer. Pres. Warnkey chosing as his assistant, Edgar Harrington.

Preaching on Sunday morning by Geo. Montague, in the evening by Bro. Warnky.

Adjourned to meet at Independence, Missouri, on the 3d day of October, 1885, at ten o'clock.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS.

The conference of the above was held at Sandwich, Illinois, June 27th and 28th, 1885. Bro. John S. Patterson, president; and W. Vickery, clerk.

The following was received and ordered spread on the minutes. "Chicago, Ill., June 21, 1885. To the Northern Illinois District.—On the above date, members of the reorganized first Chicago Branch convened in accordance to former agreement. Being desirious of harmonizing with the revelation given at the last General Conference at Independence, Mo., we would respectfully solicit your kind consideration of our application and receive us as a branch in your district. S. C. Good, president; M. E. Good, secretary.

Branch Reports.—Chicago 16 members; three recived by vote on evidence of membership in first organization and 1 by letter. S. C. Good, president.

Burlington 21; 2 baptized. Henry Southwick, president. Plano 190; 2 baptized, 1 expelled, 2 marriages; W. Vickery, president. Mission 111; 1 removed by letter, 1 marriage; Thomas Hougas, president. Bro. Farling reported the Streator Branch as not being able to hold meeting for the last four months. No reports from Piper City, Leland, Amboy, Pecatonica, Marengo, and Janesville Branches.

Resolved, That in the mind of this conference, there can be no meetings held in a regularly organized church that do not come under the jurisdiction of the officers of the branch.

Bro. Patterson was retained as president of the district for the next four months, and W. Vickery secretary.

Financial Agent reported $1.35 on hand.

Brethren Hougas and Vickery were appointed to labor in the Streator Branch, in harmony with the branch officers. Preaching on Saturday and Sunday evenings by Bro. T. Hougas, and Sabbath morning by Bro. W. Vickery. In the afternoon two were baptized, and a fellowship sacrament meeting was held and a good time enjoyed.

Adjourned to meet at Mission, LaSalle county, Illinois, October 17th and 18th, 1885.

NORTHERN NEBRASKA.

District conference convened at Fremont, Nebraska, June 27th, 1885. W. M. Rumel, president; I. Sylvester, clerk. The evening session was devoted to prayer and testimony, a good spirit prevailing.

Branch Reports.—Omaha 94; 12 received by letter, I expelled. Union 24; 6 reported as scattered. Platte Valley 35; I baptized, 2 scattered members have again united with the branch. Pleasant Grove 20; I removed by letter, 4 expelled. Lake Shore 27; 5 baptized, 7 removed by letter.

Elders' Reports.—James Caffall by letter, E. C. Brand, Mark H. Forscutt, Peter Anderson, Nelson Brown, James Brown, Oscar Brown, N. Rumel, Sen., Edward Rannie, Jr., W. M. Rumel.

W. M. Rumel was sustained as president and I. Sylvester as clerk of the district.

Resolved, that we appreciate the labors of Brn. James Caffall, M. H. Forscutt, E. C. Brand and Peter Anderson, and request them to devote as much time as possible in this district.

Missions.—O. H. Brown and N. Rumel, Sen., to labor in Florence and elsewhere as the Spirit may direct. All other Elders and Priests labor as much as time permits, under the direction of the District President.

The Pleasant Grove Branch, upon request of the members, was declared disorganized.

Contribution for the traveling ministry $9.60. Preaching on Saturday evening by Elder E. C. Brand; Sunday morning and evening by Mark H. Forscutt. Sacrament meeting Sunday afternoon. W. M. Rumel, Bishop's Agent, received $25; paid out $5; on hand $20.

Adjourned to meet at Platte Valley, Nebraska, the third Friday [18th] in September, 1885.

Miscellaneous.

CORRECTED "REPORT."

Permit me to make the following explanation and correction of my report to the Bishop, as it is published in the Herald. Last July Bro. E. C. Brand borrowed twenty dollars for thirty days. I charged him. He returned it according to agreement, and I gave him credit, and so reported. He writes me that his credit entry might be regarded as tithing paid by him. The item of $42,65, paid for "the poor," is not correct, and I did not so report it. It was a balance on sister Hansen and child's board. Bro. H. N. Hansen who was here on a mission paid the rest.

R. WARNOCK.

[WE have examined the original report, and find the statement of Bro. Warnock correct. Those who prepared the Bishop's Annual Report, omitted the word "returned," in respect to the $20 paid Bro. Warnock by Bro. Brand, August 5th, 1884; and likewise omitted "Paid Mrs. P. Sterrett for Sr. Hansen and child's board," in the matter of the $42.65. The words "the poor" are not there.—Editor.]

REUNION CAMP MEETING.

Notice is hereby given, and a general invitation extended to all the Saints throughout Iowa, Illinois and Missouri, to attend a Camp Meeting to be held at Park Bluff, Montrose, Iowa, commencing September 20th, and lasting one week. Come everybody! and let us have a Tri-State meeting that will astonish the people and strengthen and build up the Saints.

Park Bluff is one of the most beautiful points on the Mississippi River. A grand view is afforded up the river as far as the eye can reach; also a fine view of the once famous city of Nauvoo. Those who have never had an opportunity of beholding the Prophet and Patriarch's last home on earth will have a fine opportunity to do so by attending this meeting. The Methodists of Iowa, Missouri and Illinois, have purchased the ground and fitted it up in nice shape, and at a great expense for holding camp meetings; and at this writing they are holding a camp meeting on the ground, and it is expected there will be at least six thousand people here before the meeting is over. A pavillion is built that will seat several thousand. This is permanent. All of this is offered to us for our use for a camp meeting in September. Excursion rates of one and one-third fare on the Diamond Joe line of boats, for the round trip will be given from Clinton, Iowa, down, and from St. Louis up. We will also secure reduced rates on railroads as far as possible. Tents can be rented here quite low, and the Saints of Montrose will arrange to run a table, and furnish meals as cheap as possible and save themselves, to all who wish to board. Those who wish to board themselves, provisions will be made for so doing. Better facilities for holding a re-union meeting will be hard to find, east or west. Then come everybody, and let us have a great spiritual feast.

Brethren W. W. Blair, M. H. Forscutt, J. R. Lambert, and J. W. Gillen are expected to be present, also many other Elders that we can not now mention. Don't forget the day and date. For further particulars address, with stamp, H. C. Bronson, Box 34, Montrose, Lee county, Iowa.

By order of quarterly conference of Nauvoo and String Prairie District.

H. C. Bronson, Pres. of Dist.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Since publishing recent notice in Herald, I have discovered in the old record, and not transferred to the new, the names of Andrew Hillisway, Jans Johnson, James Billington and George Rauch, as being members of the Quorum of Seventy. There are no items in connection with these names, except that James Billingston is dead, but time of death not recorded. Neither can I find that the other three has ever been disposed of by the quorum in any way. If any one can give me the whereabouts of the three supposed to be living, or any information of the birth. baptism, or ordination of any of the four, it will be thankfully received. I have received but little of the information asked for in-former notice. I hope all who are interested in this matter will be prompt. I sincerely thank the few who have responded. I would like also to know the names of the seven presidents chosen the spring of 1860.

HEMAN C. SMITH.

Secretary of Seventy's Quorum.

DIED.

FOOTE.—At Nebraska City, Neb., July 13th, 1885, of inflammation of the bowels, Sr. Eunice L., wife of Bro. Herman D. Foote, and stepdaughter of Bro. Edwin R. Briggs. She was 39 years, 11 months and 26 days a pilgrim on life's journey. She leaves a husband and a ten months' babe. There was a large attendance at the funeral. Sermon by Elder Robert M. Elvin from Isaiah 61:1.

MARRIED.

MILLER-GILLESPIE .- On the evening of July 7th, 1885, at the house of the bride's father, Bro. John Gillespie, Allegheny City, Pennsylvania, Bro. Ebenezer Miller and Sr. Margaret Alice Gillespie; Josiah Ells officiating.

BLESSEDNESS OF TRIAL.

"OH, count it a precious trial, a golden affliction, that brings your heart into a closer communion with Christ. Our Heavenly Father loves to hear the voice of his children; and when that voice is still, when there is a suspension of heart communion, and the tones are silent which were wont to fall as music upon His ears, He sends a trial, and then we rise and give ourselves to prayer. Perhaps it is a perplexity, and we go to Him for counsel; or it is a want, and we go to Him for supply; or it is a grief, and we go to him for soothing; or it is a burden, and we look to Him for upholding; or it is an infirmity, and we repair to Him for grace, it is a temptation, and we fly to Him for succor; it is a sin, and we repair to Him for pardon; but be its form what it may, it has a voice-'Rise and call upon thy God,' and to God it brings us."-Winslow.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

In my tours about the country I have often had a virulent ill-will excited toward those works of culinary supererogation, cakes, pies, sweetmeats, etc., because I thought their excellence was attained by treading under foot and disregarding the five grand essentials,-bread, butter, meat, vegetables, and tea. I have sat at many a table garnished with three or four kinds of well made cake, compounded with citron and spices, and all imaginable good things, where the meat was tough and greasy, the bread some hot preparation of flour, lard, saleratus and acid, and the butter unutterably detestable. At such tables I have thought that if the mistress of the feast had given the time and labor to preparing the simple items of bread, butter and meat that she evidently had given to the preparation of these extras, the lot of a traveller might be much more comfortable. Evidently she had never thought of these common articles as constituting a good table. So long as she had puff pastry, rich black cake, clear jelly preserves, she seemed to consider that such unimportant matters as bread, butter and meat could take care of themselves.

It seems impossible to get the idea into the minds of people, that what is called common food, carefully prepared, becomes, in virtue of that very care and attention, a delicacy superseding the necessity of artificially compounding

The struggle after so-called delicacies comes from the poorness of common things. Perfect bread and butter would soon drive cake out of the field .- Mrs. Stowe.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR

- - EDITOR.
Associate Editor.

Lamoni, Iowa, August 8, 1885.

Solomon Spalding's "Manuscript Found," at least a verbatim copy of it certified by Pres. Jas. H. Fairfield, of Oberlin College, Ohio, is now on our table, and will soon be given to the Herald readers. It will also be printed in pamphlet form and put on the market, that all who desire may learn just what there is of it, and of the popular claim that it was the egg from which Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon hatched the Book of Mormon.

Those not Mormons, some of whom were and are rabid anti-Mormons, have at length furnished us a complete chain of evidence by which to prove the identity of this manuscript, and to further prove it to be the very one which Howe and Hurlbut's witnesses are made to say read in some respects as does the Book of Mormon-especially in respect to names. While it is true that there is some similarity in the sound of some of the names found in these two writings, the spelling of such names is widely different, as is also their meaning, thus proving they could not have had a common origin. And the subject matter of them is as different as is that of the Bible and Sinbad the sailor.

Read the work and then judge.

SHALL WE KNOW EACH OTHER IN HEAVEN.

SHALL we know our friends in heaven as we know them here, and be known by them? Thus inquires a young mother, who mourns the death of her infant son.

Yes. All our experiences in life lead us to so conclude; for though long absence or sickness occur, and very important changes are wrought, yet friends recognize each other in their re-union. All the teachings of the sacred records on this matter confirm this view. The Patriarch Jacob, in view of his approaching death, said to his sons: "I am to be gathered unto my people; bury me with my fathers." He speaks of his "people" with such definiteness as to force the conclusion that, though they were dead, yet they still retained their separate and distinctive characteristics which marked them and distinguished them as his "people;" and this thought was a solace to the dying Patriarch, and a source of great comfort to him ere he entered "the valley of death."

The Psalmist said of his dead son, "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me;" (2 Sam. 12:23); from which we may learn that the Psalmist believed his dead child retained its entity, its real being, though dead, and that when he died he should go to the same "him" in all the essential peculiarities which distinguished that child from all other children.

Nebuchadnezzar said: "Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God." (Dan. 3:25). Herein is proof that one divine spirit possesses such distinction from others that they are readily discerned, enabling those who see them to know and distinguish between them.

Moses, and Elias, (John the Baptist—Matt. 17: 3, 12, 13), though dead, each retained his separate distinctiveness, and was recognized separately, and known separately. The leading features and characteristics by which one discerns and knows each other person, were so prominent that these personages were known and distinguished from each other, though they were yet in their spirit state. Of this remarkable and highly instructive event, Luke gives this inspiring description: *

"And it came to pass, about an eight days after these sayings, he took Peter, and John, and James, and went up into a mountain to pray. And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistening. And behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias: who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem. But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him."—Luke 9: 28-32.

All these knew each other. To this view agree the words of the Apostle Paul:

"For now we see through a glass darkly; but then [in the perfect state and life] face to face; now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known."—I Cor. 13: 12.

Joseph the Seer adds his testimony on this delightful subject, and says:

"I have a father, brothers and friends, who are gone to a world of spirits. They are only absent for a moment; they are in the spirit, and when we depart we shall hail our mothers, fathers, friends and all whom we love. There will be no fear of mobs, etc., but all will be an eternity of felicity. Mothers, you shall have your children, for they shall have eternal life."—Times and Seasons, vol. 5: 617.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

From a letter dated at Independence, Mo., the 23d ult., we learn that Mr. Peterson's pretensions are being sorely shaken, and that his church organization is shivered and splintered, till out of the eight or ten persons of which it was composed when in the hight of its prosperity, there are not now enough left to act as pall-bearers at its funeral. Mr. Peterson is simply reaping the fruit of his own doings; and the wrath and judgments he predicted against the Reorganization now strikes himself and his system, and leaves but a blank and a blot as a warning to others, if they will heed it. It appears the Saints in that district are prospering fairly, and many of the Elders are working wisely and willingly.

Bro. D. C. McIntosh writes from Darlington, Dakota, the 7th ult. He thinks Bro. Isaac Hogaboom is an earnest, active worker, and wishes he held the office of an Elder. We can only refer this matter to those in charge of that field, or who may be sent there. Let patience have her perfect work.

Bro. Heman C. Smith sends up a clipping from the Advocate, of Palestine, Texas, containing the details of the brutal outrage and horrid murder of Sr. Hassell, at Elkhart, Texas, in May or June last, and the lynching of five negroes, four men and one wench, for that terrible crime. The account sent us is too harrowing and brutal to publish, except when and where it is absolutely necessary. We feel it would be untimely and improper to now spread it before our readers.

Mr. W. H. Bybee writes from Stoutsville, Monroe county, Mo., the 22d ult., asking for HERALDS, and to know when the conference will be held in the district in which he lives, which is August 2d. He intends to unite with the Saints at Renick, leaving the Disciples, or Campebellite Church. He says they (himself and familv, probably), "have grown tired of formality without spirituality." He further says he has been an ordained minister for six years, but there has been a continual warfare between him and other ministers on doctrinal points. There are tens of thousands like this friend, whose sense and Bible reading teaches them that the dry husks of Sectarianism are not the Christianity of Jesus and his apostles, and is sadly wanting the edifying light, and the spiritual power and grace to build up and save souls.

Bro. A. P. Cantrell, in a letter dated at Pineville, Missouri, the 23d ult., expresses a desire that one or more Elders should call on him. His health is poor, some of his family desire baptism, and he thinks a hearing would be given the ministry by his neighbors. He thinks Elders coming to his place would need to go by railroad to Neosho, then by carriage to Pineville.

A brother writes to know if it is right for members to say "I am proud of the latter day work?" And further asks-"Is not pride of the devil? Would it not be better to say "I rejoice;" or "I am pleased?" As to the word "proud," it may be used in two ways-good and bad. Where it is used in the sense of self-esteem, boasting, or ostentation, it is bad. But where it is used to signify joy, gladness, or delight, it may not be bad, but good. It should always be remembered, that the value and significance of words must be measured by the intention and meaning given them by those using them. The same brother asks to know also if the Saints participate in all the frivolities of Fourth of July celebrations-run horses, catch greased pigs, run foot races, unite with brass bands and play vulgar and comical music, etc. To this we reply that many of them do not-especially the women and the old folks, yet some do, it is likely. But the sacred books of the church and its traditions neither provide for nor permit them. It is largely a matter of taste with those who engage in such amusements. Wisdom and Christian charity should govern all in respect to these things. Every one should carefully judge themselves, and be slow to judge others where no law is.

Pres. Joseph Smith writes from Salt Lake City, under date of 26th ult., saying: "The 24th passed here very quietly and peaceably. Saloons were kept closed all day. No drunkenness was seen, or heard of, that I know."

Bro. R. R. Dana, in a letter dated at Mesa City, Arizona, the 25th ult., expresses the desire that one or more competent Elders be sent to labor in that and adjoining regions, among the Utah Mormons. Who can go? We thank him for late Arizona papers.

By letter just received from Bro. F. C. Warnky, of Independence, we learn that Bro. Elmsley Curtis was lately thrown from his wagon by his runaway team, his arm broken and other injuries inflicted. By same letter we are informed that John Thorby, who united with the Peterson movement, is now confined by city authority as a lunatic.

Bro. John Bickle writes from Busseyville, Wis., the 29th ult., saying he had not heard a Latter Day Saints preach for about thirty years, that for him there was no paper equal to the Herald, and that he can not get along without it.

Bro. J. W. Ganfield writes from Minnewaukan, Dakota, the 26th ult., and wishes to have the ministry call on him. Let those laboring in that field note this.

In another place will be found an open letter from Sr. Jones to Mr. L. D. Hickey. It is full of logic and good proofs. The prophet Jeremiah predicts that "a woman shall compass a man," and Mr. Hickey may now confess the fact.

We advertised for one copy of the 16th vol. of Millennial Star, and up to this time have received three copies. It pays to advertise.

No one sending papers or periodicals should write in them. To do so is to violate the laws of our nation in respect to postal matters, and makes the matter thus written in subject to letter postage and makes the writer liable to prosecution.

SCANDINAVIAN MINISTER WANTED. Bro. John C. Foss writes from Cormorant Mills, July the 16th inst., requesting that we send him at once an Elder or Priest who can speak Norwegian, and have him go to Detroit City, Becker county, Minnesota, and to have him call on Bro. M. Shaw. We greatly wish we could send one, two, or a score of such into the mission field, for there is great need of them, not only in Minnesota, but in many other localities. If there is a brother, Elder or Priest, who can go as solicited by Bro. Foss, he can address the First Presidency, at this office, or Elder E. C. Briggs, Carson, Iowa, who is in charge of that field. Let such give us all the particulars as to their condition, age, experience, and ability to keep in the missionary field.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Has the candidate for baptism to stand up in meeting and state his desires, or has some brother to do so for him, knowing his desires, that a vote may be taken of the branch? What is the meaning of par. 7. section 17, of Doc. & Cov.?

Ans.—Candidates need not stand up in a meeting and state their desires for baptism. They can do so, or not, as they chose. Par. 7 means that candidates for baptism must give satisfaction to those to whom they apply for baptism, whether a minister only, or the branch, as the case may be, that they believe the gospel, truly repent of their sins, and are determined to serve Christ to the end.

Q.—A brother wishes to know if a member can be "removed or expelled from a branch by a request of their names."

A.—A member can be removed from a branch by applying for and obtaining a letter of removal; or by having charges preferred against them for transgression, and then be legally expelled. It has been the custom, in a few places, to drop from the branch record the names of persons desiring it.

Q.—In confirming members by the laying on of hands, must the minister say "I confirm you a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints?" And if he does not use these words, is the person a member of the church?

A.—There is no form of words provided for confirming members, as there is for baptism, and Lord's Supper, therefore there is no legal need to use the words indicated above. The essence on confirmation lies; (1), in the authority of the minister, (2), in the fitness of the candidate, and (3), in the prayer of the minister, whether uttered or unexpressed in words. It is said O. Cowdery, at times, confirmed with silent, but spiritual prayer. It is quite proper for the minister to use the words indicated, but not obligatory.

Q.—If the names of candidates for baptism have been given to the president of a branch, should he make those names known to the branch, if candidates have no objections?

A.—He is at liberty to do as he sees fit about it. He should seek to act with wisdom, and in that charity which rejoices in the progress and triumph of gospel truth. Where the law of the Lord is silent on any point, the officiating minister must excercise his discretion in the meekness, love, and wisdom of Christ; and the membership should respect and uphold him in this, even though their judgment may not be the same as his. Order is heaven's law.

2.—Is it the duty of the Presiding Elder of a branch to visit the house of each member, exhorting them to pray vocally and in secret, and to attend to all family duties?

A.—Yes; he should attend to it personally, unless he finds it best to leave such duties with the Priest, if there be a Priest in his branch. The law of the church—Doc. & Cov. 17: 8, 9, 10, 18, 19, 21–24; with sec. 104: 3, etc.; defines the duties and powers of the Elders. When discretionary power is left with the presiding Elder, it should be the rule of action by those under his watchcare, unless in the exercise of it he in some way violates the written law and order of the church.

2.—Have we an account in any of our Heralds or books of what became of the Urim and Thummim, or interpreters, which Bro. Joseph Smith, Jun., used in translating the plates of the Book of Mormon?

A.—Yes. And that account reads thus: "At length the time arrived for obtaining the plates, the Urim and Thummim, and the breastplate. On the 22d day of September, 1827, having gone us usual at the end of another year to the place where they were deposited, the same heavenly messenger delivered them up to me with this charge: that I should be responsible for them; that if I should let them go carelessly, or through any neglect of mine, I should be cut off; but that if I would use my endeavors to preserve them, until he, the messenger, should call for them, they should be protected.

"I soon found out the reason why I had received such strict charges to keep them safe, and why it was that the messenger had said, that when I had done what was required at my hand, he would call for them; for no sooner was it known that I had them, than the most strenuous exertions were used to get them from me; every stratagem that could be invented, was resorted to for that purpose; the persecution became more bitter and severe than before, and multitudes were on the alert continually to get them from me if possible; but by the wisdom of God, they remained safe in my hands, until I had accomplished by them what was required at my hand; when, according to arrangements, the messenger called for them, I delivered them up to him; and he has them in his charge until this day, being the 2d day of May, 1838."—Times and Seasons, vol. 3: pg. 872; Mill. Star, vol. 14, p. 6, 7, of Supplement.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. C. Brand writes the 26th ult. to say:

"I rejoice in the good news from Utah. I am confident the chosen time of the Lord has come for 'loosening the bands' from the necks of the captives."

He also sends notice of Basket Meeting to begin at eleven a.m., August 9th, at Hager's Grove, Jamestown, Dodge county, Nebraska, which will be found in another column.

VARIABLE JOHN TAYLOR.

THE clipping below is from the Salt Lake Evening Democrat, edited by Alfales, a son of the late Brigham Young. This is but one of hundreds of evidences that John Taylor and his co-workers have departed widely from the doctrines and principles of the church up to 1844, and is an added proof of the rank apostacy into which the Utah Mormon Church has fallen.

"THE VIEWS OF PRES. JOHN TAYLOR ON 'RELIGION AND POLITICS.'

"'There are peculiar notions extant in relation to the propriety or impropriety of mixing religion with politics, many of which we consider wild and visionary. Having witnessed in the proceedings of some of our old European nations a policy that was dangerous, hurtful and oppressive in the union of church and state, and seen in them an overgrown oligarchy, proud and arrogant, with a disposition to crush everything that opposed its mandate or will, we have looked with abhorrence on the monster, and shrink from the idea of introducing anything that would in the least deprive us of our freedom or reduce us to a state of religious vassalage. Living under a free republican form of government, sheltered by the rich foliage of the tree of liberty, breathing a pure atmosphere of religious toleration, and basking in the sunshine of prosperity, we have felt jealous of our rights and have been always fearful lest some of those eastern blasts should cross the great Atlantic, wither our brightest hopes, nip the tree of liberty in the bud, and that our youthful republic should be prostrated and the funeral dirge be chanted in the land of the free and the home of the brave, in consequence of a union between church and state. No one can be more opposed to an unhallowed alliance of this kind then ourselves.

"The foregoing is a portion of an editorial in the Times and Seasons, a paper which was printed in Nauvoo, Illinois, bearing date March 15th, 1844, of which paper John Taylor was editor and publisher

"It is presumed that the then editor of the Nauvoo paper is the present President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. If it be so it is reasonable to suppose that a change has come over that gentleman, seeing that he is now at the head of an "oligarchy" in Utah. Whether the Utah oligarchy is as dangerous, hurtful, oppressive, proud, arrogant and monstrous as those to which the editor aforesaid made reference, I leave your readers to indee

"But if such oligarchies as he describes are dangerous—being as he suggests, produced by a union of church and state—how much less dangerous and hurtful is the oligarchy which governs and controls the People's party in Utah, of which the said late editor is chief? For my part I unite with the Democratic party in opposing a union of church and state, believing that religion ought to be kept separate from politics, and can only wish that it had been possible for John Taylor and his colleagues to have adhered to the strong platform which he placed himself upon, as above, for I fully agree with what his predecessor, Joseph Smith, said in reference to political authority, to-wit:

"'In the United States the people are the government, and their united voice is the only sovereign that should rule; the only power that should be obeyed.'

"Query.—Is not the present policy of the Latter Day Saints a departure from the doctrine of their first president? "DEMOCRAT."

"MANUSCRIPT FOUND."

This clipping, taken from a late Descret News will be read with interest by many. When Rev. Demming says he had "called on E. D. Howe and D. P. Hurlbut, and spent several days with one or the other of them on the subject of the manuscript," it can not be true, unless he refers to what might have taken place some years ago; for D. P. Hurlbut has been dead for some time past.

It is curious, if not very significant that this shallow novel writer—Solomon Spalding—advocated polygamy on similar grounds as did Brigham Young and his fellows. Brigham often stated in his harangues, that if the single men "would marry the daughters of Eve," so each could have a busband and a home, there would be no need of polygamy. This seems to have been the sum of Mr. Spalding's logic on that point.

How will certain sectarian preachers, with many lecturers, book-makers, and newspaper editors, who have charged the Mormons with putting the writings of the very learned, very talented, and very pious Rev. Solomon Spaulding to such a base use as making the Book of Mormon out of it, (which book condemns polygamy and its like under all forms)—how will they feel now that it is proven by his own writings that Rev. Solomon Spalding taught polygamy as early as 1807-12, more than forty years before Brigham Young taught it publicly; and did so, as he tells us in the introduction to his "Manuscript Found," to improve the head and the heart of its readers! Will they be just now, and proclaim that Rev. Spalding, a very pious and very learned Presbyterian advocated polygamy before 1812, in his long lost "Manuscript Found," and that polygamy had advocates among the Presbyterian preachers before it did among the Brighamite Mormon Elders? We shall see. "Time hath her revenges," and this, too, in many ways.

> [From Deseret News.] "MANUSCRIPT FOUND."

APPLICANTS FOR THE MANUSCRIPT .- WHY THEY WANTED IT .- THE ORIGINAL SENT TO OBERLIN COLLEGE LIBRARY.-MR. RICE AGREES TO PART WITH THE COPY AND THEN BACKS OUT, BUT LENDS IT.

HONOLULU, Sandwich Islands,

June 24th, 1885.
Editor "Deseret News:"—Among those who had written to Mr. Rice for the manuscript were Eber D. Howe, of Painesville, Ohio, (since which Mr. Rice informs us he had a stroke and was supposed to be on his death-bed); Mr. A. B. Demming, also of Painesville; Albert D. Hager, librarian of the Chicago Historical Society, Chicago; and Mrs. Ellen S. Dickenson, of Boston, grand-niece of S. Spaulding. Mrs. Dickenson demanded that the manuscript be sent forthwith to her or to Mrs. Mc-Instry, from whose mother it had been "sto-len by D. P. Hurlbut." She also asserts that she is writing a book against the Mormons, and desires the manuscript from which to make extracts, provided it is the one that Hulburt stole "which she scarcely thinks is the one." Mr. Demming says he does "not think it is the Manuscript Found," for it is rumored that Hurlbut sold it to the Mormons and they destroyed it, which, he says, "I believe to be true." He was nevertheless clamorous to have this manuscript sent to him immediately, for, writes he, "I desire to make extracts from it, as I am writing a book, to be entitled "The death-blow to Mormonism." Joseph Smith did not ask for the manuscript for himself, but that it might be sent to the Chicago Historical Society, 140 and 142 Dearborn street, Chicago, for preservation. Mr. Hager, secretary or librarian of said society, desired it also sent there, and promised to defray the postage or expressage, and to have it neatly bound, etc., etc. But Mr. E. D. Howe laid claim to it on the ground that when he sold his printing establishment to his brother, from whom it was turned over to Messrs. Rice and Winchester, in 1839, the manuscript was inadvertently turned over to them with the office. He further states in his letter that the manuscript was left in his office by D. P. Hurlbut, pending efforts to obtain evidence against the Book of Mormon. Mr. Rice showed us all these letters, which we carefully read and noted. Mr. Demming who is a Rev. gentleman, wrote two letters, both of which seemed to savor of a spirit smarting under the sting of conscious imbecility, and reeking with venom and the bitterness of gall.

Mr. Rice informed us that his friends, among them the Rev. Sereno E. Bishop, of Honolulu, had advised him not to allow the Mormons to get hold of a copy of the manuscript. When I asked him for what reason, he replied, "What, indeed?" The old gentleman has a son in the States, who is a minister, (to whom Mr. Demming's letters were addressed), and he wrote him to make enquiry respecting the existence of Messrs. Aaron Wright, Oliver Smith, and John N. Miller, who testified to the identity of the manuscript, as Spaulding's writings, and he found them to have been "veritable persons, but they are now all dead." This was the statement which Mr. Rice made to us. Here is a copy of the certificate: "The writings of Solomon Spaulding, proved by Aaron Wright, Oliver Smith, John N. Miller and others. The testimonies of the above gentlemen are now in my possession. Signed, D. P. Hurlbut." [The signature is written as here given].

I made another visit to Mr. Rice a few weeks ago, and read several more chapters of the manuscript. The following passage occurs on the thirty-eighth page, but is crossed out:

"Let thy citizens be numbered once in two years, and if thy young women who are fit for marriage are more numerous than the young men; then wealthy men, who are young and who have but one wife, shall have the privilege, with the permission of the king to marry another until the number of the single young men and the single young women are made equal; but he who has two wives shall have a house provided for each, and he shall spend his time equally with each one."

We again took a good look at the manuscript which had been returned to him by Mr. Hyde, a minister to whom it had been loaned for a time, and by whom I suspect it was copied, although I do not know. We counted the pages and found 169 numbered pages and one and two-thirds pages not numbered, and two loose sheets not apparently belonging to the manuscript, which made in all 175; less pages 133 and 134 which are missing.
Mr. Rice said that when he was publishing a newspaper, the Republican Mon-itor, at Cazenovia, N. Y., he published a very interesting story entitled the, "Man-uscript Found," and some ten or fifteen years later while editing the Ohio Star, at Ravenna, Ohio, he republished this story, which was a romance predicated upon some incidents of the Revolutionary War. He was of the opinion that the name of this story by some means had been confounded with Spaulding's Manuscript or writings, and that this is the only novel that Spaulding ever wrote.

I also read another letter from Mr. A. B. Demming, fairly clamoring for the possession of the manuscript. He said he had called on E. D. Howe and D. P. Hurlbut, and spent several days with one and the other of them on the subject of the manuscript, and urged it be sent at once to Mr. Rice's son (in Painesville, Ohio,) with instructions to let no one know of the fact but Mr. D.

On the 15th inst., I called upon Mr. Rice again, in company with a couple of the brethren, to read a little more in the manuscript. He informed us that he had that day forwarded the original to the Oberlin College Library, in the care of a lady who was going there, and then made us the following proposition: to let me have the copy he had now finished, provided I would have it printed verbatim, complete, with erasures, or crossed out parts in italics, and explanation in preface; and after printing, to send fifty copies to Oberlin, twenty-five copies and the manuscript back to him. I accepted the proposition, and he was to draw up a paper set-ting forth these terms, and he would deliver the copy of the manuscript and a copy of the agreement into my hands at

When I returned at the appointed hour he took me to his room and said: "Mrs. and Mr. Whitney (his daughter and sonin-law) have protested against my letting you have the manuscript until I get the consent of President Fairchild. Now, in view of my promise to you, this places me in a very embarrassing position, for I want to please them, and I regret having to fail in my promise to you; but I think it best to postpone the matter for two or three weeks, until I can hear from President

Fairchild."

"What reason," I asked, "do they give for their objection? We agree to your proposition—it is all your own way. The original is beyond our reach and we could have no other than the most honest motives, with all the expense on our part, in carrying out your proposition." The only answer was—"They are not as liberal as I am." I do not know whether this meant they wanted something more for it, or that they were not as liberal in their sentiments or feelings towards us. I took the last meaning.

I then said, "Well, Mr. Rice, my curiosity leads me to desire to read it, and I would be pleased if you would lend it to me to read.

To this he consented, provided I would return it when I got through. So I brought it home with me, and had it from the evening of the 15th to the morning of the 21st, when I sent it back. I got home with the manuscript on the evening of the

We read it. It is a shallow, unfinished story, but withal somewhat interesting in parts, as containing some ideas which the author must have gathered from the traditions of the Indians. I have but little faith that Mr. Fairchild will recommend or give his consent for us to publish it. Mr. Rice claims that his copy is a verbatim et literatim copy, with scratches, crosses and bad spelling all thrown in.

The names "Sambol," "Hamboon,"

"Labaska," "Labona," "Lamesa," "Mammoons," occur in the story which might easily be changed. Mammoths were the author's beast of burden. The two principal tribes of Indians were "Ohions" and "Kentucks," with numerous adjacent tribes—"Sciotans," "Ohons," etc.

ISLANDER.

By the clipping below, from the Phoenix (Arizona) Herald of the 16th ult., we see how well posted journalists are becoming in respect to the genuine, original doctrines of the church, in respect to marriage and loyalty. This is gratifying and encouraging. We trust the time is near when the true faith of the church will be generally known, and the apostacy, its errors, follies and abettors, will also be known.

"'Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad,' was a saying of the ancients that never was illustrated better than it is to-day, in the case of the Utah polygamists. While they have not gained a single point for themselves in their action of the Fourth of July, they have insulted a nation, and to-day there is not a newspaper in the United States-the Deseret News and one or two other polygamistic journals excepted-that is not denouncing the Utah Mormons in a way that will shortly result in wiping them out of existence in the United States. They can expect no more leniency from the decent people of the country, from the courts, or from the government. They have defied the laws, insulted the government, outraged society and common decency by their beastial practices and consorted with crime and rebellion, by receiving with public demonstrations those criminals who have served their time in the penitentiary for their lechery and been released. If the government can longer withhold its hand under such insult, it is time for it to be wrapped in the lecherous crimes of polygamy from the President down, and fall into a common pit of prostitution and destruction. It will no longer tamper with the wretched institution. The monsters of beastiality who have originated and kept the lead in this harem business are now skulking and hiding, while from their lair they call upon the small fry to stand the brunt of the punishment that they saw coming, and from which they fled in cowardice. If their institution of polygamy is God's institution, it strikes the casual observer that the leaders in the business here have very little confidence in His protecting hand. However, their polygamy is not even a Mormon institution. The great ----, Brigham Young, instituted it for his own convenience, and succeeded in finding followers in men as beastial as himself, and dupes among the weak, the ignorant, the superstitious.

"The old Mormon Church doctrine of Jo Smith taught no such crimes against society and the Government. In his Bible their occurs this pasthere shall not any man among you have, save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none.

"And again in the old Mormon Book of Commandments: 'Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land.' From these primordial doctrines the Utah Mormons have widely departed under Young and Taylorthe 'Brighamites.' The other branch, the 'Josephites,' still hold tenaciously to the ancient doctrines of virtue and loyalty and everywhere except in Utah and the dependencies under its influence, the Josephites are gaining ground. We are pleased to note that Joseph Smith, Jr., the son of the prophet, has gone to Utah to preach to his erring brethren, and is having much influence, though the leaders of the bagnio doctrine are fighting him as hard as they can, and slinging the maul of 'Apostacy' at the heads of all those who listen to young Smith, or regard his teachings favorably. But do what they may the immediate end of polygamy in the United States is at hand. If polygamists are not willing to reform by mild treatment, they can be whipped into it or whipped out of the country."

The same journal, of the 23d ult. has this, which exhibits the temper of the non-Mormon element in that region in respect to polygamists and their doings.

"The polygamists of Mesa City, to-day, celebrate the return from the penitentiary of such of their number as were confined last spring for their crimes. They have sent several invitations out to Gentiles. It looks very much like the whole community of Mesa City standing up in defense of criminals and in defiance of the laws of the land. The attempt to make martyrs of those who have been punished for their beastiality and crime will fail, and the late defiant attitude of the polygamous section of the Mormon Church will only hasten the end which will be complete when it comes, and it will come soon."

By letter just received from Pres. Joseph Smith, dated Salt Lake City, 28th ult., we learn he and Elder Joseph Luff would start for Bozeman, Montana, in a few days. He reports fair progress and good prospects.

Correspondence.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 23d, 1885.

Bro. Blair: To-day, at about nine o'clock the flags were put at half-mast in token of grief for the death of Gen. U. S. Grant; quite a different day than the 4th. To-morrow will, I trust pass peaceably. Governor Murray and Marshal Ireland, are doing all they can to prevent any collision. I really think none will occur. The City Council has ordered the saloons closed to-morrow; the troops at Fort Douglas will be ready for any thing that may occur; and I believe there is some sense in those controlling on the part of the church here.

I met the Commissioners of the Electoral Commission this morning, Messrs. Godfrey, Paddock, and Pettigrew. I was met with cordiality, and passed a pleasant twenty minutes with these gentlemen at their rooms in the Opera House block. Our talk was on the situation here. They seem to be informed upon many points. I found no bitterness of feeling with them; none with the Governor, and none with Judge Zane. As I anticipated on leaving home, it is slow work getting acquainted; but I am doing it; and shall continue. I visited Judge Elias Smith, day before yesterday, and yesterday; I find a bit of family record with him I am trying to get.

Anthony maintained his own in the debate with Andrew Jensen, at Pleasant Grove; so Bro. Luff thinks; of course they will claim the victory, as Jensen, though affirming, flatly refused to take the lead in the argument; throwing the burden on Bro. Anthony. His proofs were chiefly from the Juvenile Instructor, while Bro. Anthony's were the revelations and the history of the church as found in Times and Seasons, Millennial Star, &c., published before, or immediately succeeding the death of father.

Yours ever,

JOSEPH SMITH.

Kirtland, Ohio,

July 23d, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair.—I arrived here on the 18th inst., and aided E. L. in conducting two services in the Temple, morning and afternoon, on the 19th. Had the usual attendance, and good interest was had. A feeling of good will towards our cause still continues. The weather is hot, and crop prospects encouraging.

Yesterday, in company with E. L., I dropped into the office of Prof. Fairchild, at Oberlin, and had the pleasure of examing the famed old Spaulding Manuscript, which has been posed against the faith so long by self-willed and unscrupulous opposers, as constituting the ground-plot far the origin of the Book of Mormon. Beyond question it is the identical Spaulding Romance. There are so many things which identifies it, that the mind is set at rest that it is the thing de facto. It has an antiquated appearance; leaves soiled by use and torn in places, and has a smoked, rusty appearance. The paper is thicker than ordinary writing paper now in use, and is not ruled. Water marks are easily traced upon it. The leaves are six and one half inches wide and eight inches long, and are closely written on both sides in an old fashioned cramped hand. The manuscript when lying loose on the table, measures three-fourths of an inch in thickness. A few leaves were stitched together with linen thread, thus forming them into little sections, or books, easy to handle. Take a sheet of paper thirteen inches wide and sixteen inches long, double twice, so as to leave it six and a half by eight inches, and you have the precise manner of the arrangement of the paper for use. I counted eighty-seven sheets in all. Some are missing. On the large wrapper enveloping the manuscript, the following is found written with lead pencil, "Manuscript Story. Conneaut Creek." It is known that writing done with lead pencil will remain legible for years. This wrapping paper, however, looks to be a little more modern in its make up than the manuscript paper, but shows age. It is of good consistency, and is a good, durable, buff colored wrapping paper. The most probable thing is, that this wrapper was put around the "Manuscript Story" by D. P. Hurlbut when he procured it from Mrs. Davison; and that the pencil writing was done at Conneaut, Ohio, when he, Aaron Wright, John Miller, Henry Lake, et al, were closeted with the manuscript before them, endeavoring to invent a theory that would account for the origin of the Book of Mormon, other than the truthful narrative given of it, and in a way that would tickle the fancy and please the ear of the fableloving, give to themselves some note, a lucra tive business, and to the devil one more chance to close the eyes of the willingly blind. The strange part is, that his Satanic Majesty would hit upon such a chaffy thing. It isn't a respectable counterfeit. I have been amusing myself today in reading the story—have gone over about sixty pages, and strange to say my faith holds out! As it is to be issued in printed form soon, and put into everybody's hands who may wish to peruse it, it is not necessary here to give extensive particulars. By way of caution it might be well to say, get ready for a little "side splitting," to end in disgust and contempt, to think that for years we have been confronted with this old humbug manuscript as being the root from which the Book of Mormon grew; the egg from which it was hatched; or to put it in Darwinian style, this was the monkey and the Book of Mormon the man. But if the latter were true, there is an endless number of missing links lying between the two, that this affords no comfort. The puzzling perplexity of the mind must remain as hitherto, if not disposed to accept the divine claim. Remembering that it is pretended Solomon Spaulding was a very pious Reverend, a college graduate, who understood the classics, languages, etc., and by this means was able to furnish strange names for his manuscript, which afterwards found place in the Book of Mormon, we give the following:

The "Lehi" of this story is named "Fabious, being descended from the illustrious general of that name." He was born at Rome, and on the arrival of Constantine at that city, he (Fabius) was favorably received by the great conqueror, and was intrusted with a ship and crew, in order to carry messages and assistance to the army in Britain. When near the the shores of Britain a great storm arose and they were driven out to sea and finally landed on the new world. Here they found a wild race of people, who received them kindly; and Fabious and companions "found themselves once more on terra firma." The king prepared an "entertainment" for them, which consisted of "fish," boiled beans, and samp." The feast ended in the natives acting "more like devils than human beings." There were seven women and thirteen men who had accompanied Fabius. So the women chose each a husband: "Droll Tom" (what a classic name), was rewarded for his benevolent proposal with one of the most sprightly rosy dames in the company. Three others of the most cheerful, resolute men were chosen by the other three bucksom lassies. We united heart and hand with the fairest prospect of enjoying every delight and gratification which are attendant upon the connubial state. Six poor fellows were doomed to live in a state of celibacy or accept of savage dames." The fortunate couples repaired to their new departments, "partook of an elegant dinner and drank a bottle of excellent wine." In a speech one enthused as follows:-"My sweet good souled fellows, we have now commenced a new voyage. Not such as brought us over mountain billows to this butt end of the world. No, no; our voyage is on dry land." Before done another cries out, "May God bless your soul. What would you have us do who have had the woful luck not to get mates, to cheer our poor souls and warm our bodies. Methinks I could pick out a healthy plum lass from the copper colored tribe that by washing and scrubbing her fore and aft and upon the labboard and stabbord sides she would become a wholsome bedfellow. I think, may it please your honor, that I could pump my notions into her head and make her a good shipmate for the cupboard. . . Upon this I filled the bottle with wine and observing to honest Crito that he was at liberty to make the experiment. . . We retired two and two, hand in hand, Ladies heads a little awri, blushing like the moon" &c.

This sounds so much like the discourses of Alma, Lehi, Nephi, Moroni, Mormon, and others, that it may be necessary to send a delegation among the Saints in order to strengthen their faith after reading! Go on with your "Grove Meetings;" perhaps that will be a sufficient safeguard. Here is some of the classic names that it is said so much resemble those in the Book of Mormon; "Lucton, Droll Tom, Radocom, Haddocam, Labasko, Ohom, Elseon, Bombal, Siotans, Mammoons, Kentucks, Golonga City, Gamba, Rambock, &c. No Lehi, Nephi, Zarahemla, &c., in it; although one of the witnesses for Hulbert and Howe remembered distinctly "Zarahemla." The devil and his agents will have to hold another council and hit on something else, or get out of the way of the old Hastily, ship Zion.

WM. H. KELLEY.

GRAYSVILLE, Ohio, July 21st, 1885.

one of the editors of our much valued Herald. It is my only preacher now, as we have had no Saints' meetings since last September. It cheers me to see the reports of the valiant servants of Christ; for to a close observer 'tis plainly evident how the Lord is giving them wisdom and power, and working with them. And 'tis evident those most powerfully blest are those most meek and unobservant of the good they are doing. I often, when reading some of the reports, am reminded of the meekness of Jesus. I pray that the faithful may always be kept meek and humble. It cheer me to see the testimony of new converts. Although Satan is employing every instrument he can to overthrow truth and righteousness, God's work is moving onward; and will till victory's won. Many plans has the adversary taken to jostle me from the narrow way; but I realized the power of the Lord to be sufficient to detect his cunning, and so I cling to the "iron rod." So in loneliness and weakness his Spirit strengthens me. I loan my papers, and instruct and do all I can. One of our Ex-Congressmen who lives a near neighbor, (a great reader), reads

Bro. Blair:-I am pleased to address you as

The Index is published at Boston, and speaks very respectfully of our church there. Mrs. Milligan gave me a paper that had a lengthy defence of our faith in it, by Elder John Smith, of Massachussetts. Elders preach. She is the wife of the Congressman, and they are both intelligent people. Many others say they would like to hear. I do believe if some wise Elder could labor in this place for a time, with a right knowledge of what people he is dealing with, a large and flourishing branch could be built up here yet. One hope cheers me on; God will save the true Israel. So I shall try to be patient and do what I can, that my page of life may be fit for all to scan. Our recording angel is keeping our page by which we fall or stand.

DECATUR, Nebraska, July 23d, 1885,

Dear Herald:—We are having a warm time here at present. There is a Mormon-eating Campbellite preacher on the war path. He discharges his puny volley at the Saints, and then scampers off out of range when the gospel-gun is aimed at him. He reminds me of what the negro poet said,

"If you want to see old Satan run, Shoot him with the gospel gun."

The teacher of this branch offered to discuss with him, but he said he would not snap at a weasel; and when any of the Elders come, he says they are too well informed for him. It is sad to see the blind lead the blind, knowing that all must fall in the ditch together. He has gained some converts, and there are others seeking for the right way. I pray they may find the truth, and I know they will if they are honest and unprejudiced seekers, for they will have an opportunity to hear it. I will do what I can in my weakness to expound the way of God, trusting that some brother more able will come to us to uphold the banner of liberty. Trusting in our heavenly Father for help, my prayers are that the gospel may roll on till all the honest in heart are gathered in one fold. I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

GEO. W. WALTERS.

HEIDENHEIMER, Bell Co., Texas, July 21st, 1885.

Dear Herald:—We continued our meetings at Eureka Springs, Arkansas, after writing last, until we had delivered fourteen discourses. The meetings were fairly attended. The seed sown there I trust will do much good. It will certainly scatter well, for there were people attended from many parts of the world. We felt well in delivering the message.

• On June 15th we left the Springs for Texas. Bro. Pickering and wife accompanied us as far as Beaver, where we laid over till the evening train; during the time Bro. Roberts immersed sister Pickering in the clear sparkling waters of White river. Stayed that night with our genial brother, E. Short and his pleasant family at Seligman. The 16th we were again on our way, arriving at Hearne, Texas, the 18th, where we met Bro. Roe of Bastrop, Bro. and Sr. Cato, as well as the Saints of Central Branch.

On the 20th, conference began, and we had a very good time. Bro. H. L. Thompson was chosen to preside, and is making preparations to be about his duties. May he abundantly succeed. Brn. Cato, Roberts, and I, assisted by Bro. Hay, held meeting there each night for a week after adjournment, and were blest in our effort.

On the 29th Bro. Roberts and I bade adieu to our co-laborer and others, and were off for Bell county. We began a meeting at Elmwood, July 4th, which terminated last Sunday night, in which we were assisted by Brn. H. L. Thompson, E. Land, and E. D. Thompson. The meeting resulted in the baptism of eleven. Some of the brethren who have labored here before would be glad to know who they were, so I will insert their names; B. F. Renfroe, F. M. Sanders, J. W. Frost, C. C. Holcomb and wife, Jonah Skinner, S. Simmons and wife, C. A. Norwood, John Skinner, and Mattie Thompson. They are all adults but one, and all heads of families but two. So the good work moves on here where the battle was fought last summer-where the Campbellites boasted they had broken us down. We had the best prayer meeting ever held there, on the 15th, at which the Spirit's power was sensibly felt, and the gifts of the gospel enjoyed to the cheering and comforting of the Saints. Bro. Roberts and I left the brethren in charge on Saturday, and came here where we have commenced a meeting with fair prospects of success. There are no members here; but friends with whom I have sojourned before, treat us kindly. Now is a leisure time with farmers, and we propose to use the time as we have ability and strength. I hope the Saints in the mission will renew their diligence, for I am satisfied a revival awaits us, and we can rejoice in God's goodness if we will.

Crop prospects are fine,—God is smiling on Texas this year. Oh, may the Saints appreciate his goodness, and appropriately express their gratitude. God is blessing us with liberty, full and free. May his name be praised.

In bonds of peace, HEMAN C. SMITH.

GRAND RAPIDS, Nebraska,

July 22d, 1885.

Brother Joseph:—I am trying to do all I can in the field. I have opened a new place six miles west of here; had a house well filled; preach next Sunday, the 26th. The M. E. preacher followed me the same day, and tried to overthrow what I preached, but made a failure to my satisfaction and the majority of the others. They think he will want to debate with me. I think not, for he had a chance last winter and backed out. He knows better than to engage with a Latter Day Saint. May God hasten the day that more laborers may be sent into the field. I for one am willing to spend my time in the field, and do all I can to defend the truth.

Yours ever in gospel bonds, P. W. Premo.

Kingston, Missouri, July 25th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—I live four miles south-west of Kingston, Caldwell county, Mo., on Log Creek, where the Saints used to live before they were driven. Many old heaps of rock mark the spots where houses once stood. I am preaching in a grove close to my house; very few come to hear. The people are very prejudiced. I think it will take a long time to convert them. I have preached four times, and expect to continue every Sunday till cool weather if people come to hear. Your brother,

R. L. WARE.

RENICK, Mo., July 25th, 1885.

Bro. Fsseph:-I have long had a desire to drop you few lines, although I am young in this cause, yet I rejoice, because this work has brought peace to my soul, and a desire to do what is right before God and man. And I can truly say that I know this work is of God. I have been presiding over this branch since Bro. J. T. Phillips went from here to Lucas, Iowa. Bro. John is a good man, and a faithful soldier in the work. I have done the best I could in the branch since he left. The gospel has been preached here by many of the Elders, and tracts have been scattered for miles around, and what the future will bring forth, we can not say. We have meetings every Sunday, and prayer meeting every Thursday night, and are striving to do the Master's will. May the Lord bless us all, and help us to be faithful to the end, is the prayer of your R. R. Jones. brother in Christ.

> Andubon, Minn., July 24th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-I think the Herald is splendid. It is very interesting. We look for it with great anxiety, to see what is going on, especially in Utah. It is our earnest prayer to our heavenly Father, that they in Utah may obey the prophet's voice, and abandon polygamy. I feel that the right men have been sent there. A few nights ago the Spirit came upon me, and I saw and heard Joseph preaching to the people in Utah, laying the law before them in such an easy and simple manner, that I thought, Is it possible, that that people don't understand the voice of the prophet of the Most High! And as I looked at the people, I saw many that believed, but something seemed to keep them from obeying. I then looked at brother Joseph Luff; I saw the Spirit resting upon him, and it seemed that he was speaking to them the word of the Lord, and I awoke speaking these words, (yet it appears that brother Luff was speaking them)-"Thus saith the Spirit unto you who have listened to the voice of my anointed, whom I have sent unto you; if ye will hearken unto what he has said, and forsake your great abominations. and turn unto me, saith the Lord, then ye shall be led out of bondage, and ye shall be a blessed people, and I, the Lord, will own you as my children. But if ye will not, I will visit you with judgments, and ye shall be cast from off the face of the earth."

Cormorant, July 27.—The twelfth of this month I spoke in Lacy's Hall, at Pelican Rapids. In the morning we had eighteen to hear, besides those of the like precious faith who met with me. Brother Martin spoke in the afternoon; brother May and several others did the singing. The Hall was promised us whenever we wanted it. After considerable talk about the Utah Mormons hoisting the National flag of our country on the 4th of July half mast, they claimed we were Utah Mormons. But Mrs. M. J. Blaisdell, of Pelican Rapids, a modest, retiring, and unassuming lady, thought she would inform herself and friends as to that, and so she wrote to Ex-Governor Alex. Ramsey, being personally acquainted with him. Yesterday, the 26th, we met in the above mentioned Hall and delivered two sermons more; Mrs. Blaisdell, with her two noble looking sons, were of the congregation. The boys are investigating our claims. Mrs. Blaisdell let me read a letter she received in reply to hers to Governor Ramsey, and with her permission I took a copy of it which reads:—

"St. Paul, July 19th, 1885.—Mrs. M. J. Blaisdell, Madam: I know nothing, of course, of the parties representing themselves in your vicinity as of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; but this is the title of that branch of the Mormon Church whose head is Joseph Smith, son of Joseph who was killed at Nauvoo, who the Mormons call a Prophet. The Reorganized Church repudiate polygamy, and are hated and detested by the Mormon Church of Utah. Respectfully, Alex. Ramsey."

Yours truly, John C. Foss.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, July 27th, 1885.

Editor Herald:—Believing that a few words from this place—historic, round which so many fond hopes cluster, would be of interest, I assume the responsibility of this intrusion into your crowded columns. The branch now rounds up to four hundred strong, representing almost every state from the golden shores of California to esthetic Massachusetts; from the sunny climes of the Gulf States, to the bleak and cold regions, above and beyond the Northern lakes. We are here from almost "every nation under heaven," and yet this great diversity finds unity in the "one hope" of our "high calling in Christ."

Those who have settled down among us, and have adapted themselves to their surroundings, have generally fared well. In fact, I am convinced that the Saints in point of material prosperity, will compare splendidly with their neighbors. If a man wants to do right and live in peace and quietness, let him but do right and practice godliness, and his success will be amply assured.

The mere theory of the latter day work amongst the members of the church—without the graces which should adorn the character and profession of Saints, will be insufficient to redeem the church from the odium imposed upon her by evil doers in by-gone days. It were far better for all concerned, that an Elder should never lift up his voice to preach "Christ and him crucified," unless he puts into practice, in his every day life, the principles of piety and truth. Mere theoretic Christianity does not meet the demands of to-day.

All is peace and serene quietude with the Saints; the dangers which confront us are from within. Laxity of dicipline—that of many years' standing; the want of that effectual standard of righteousness—that "righteousness which exalteth a nation," are matters of deep concern. Happily, the pruning process has commenced in earnest, and good results are fondly anticipated in the branch. Those coming here should bring a good stock of practical piety with them; and remember that among many, importance does not so readily attach as among the few.

Kansas City is extending her limits toward Independence, and as a result, the price of real estate is upward in its tendency. Lands on the west have raised fully one hundred dollars per acre since last spring. A syndicate from abroad has been around, buying up the land adjacent on the west, knowing there was "money in it." This has its effect upon city property, in making values permanent and safe. It is now proposed by the Cable Steam Street Railway, of Kansas City, to extend its line to Independence. This will be a grand benefit to this place. It will give employment to many of our citizens in Kansas City, and many in Kansas City will reside here, while at the same time engage in business there.

According to late news, that little concern, numbering, I think, eleven or twelve, including old and young, founded by Lars Peterson, proclaiming "all things common and celibacy," has been of "few days and full of sorrow." Death and disaster always attend such chimerical institution. But Peterson still abides! What next? One of their late members, now non compos mentis, as a seeming result of their peculiar freak, is now in jail—he having set fire to his own goods and home, and then departed bare-headed.

We feel cheered and encouraged with the splendid services now being wrought by Bro. Joseph and his co-laborers in Utah. The reasons assigned by the Deseret News editor for refusing Bro. Joseph's reply admission into their columns, look sickly indeed. "Lay on, McDuff."

Believing that the work is of God, and that he will accomplish all that he has promised,

I am in bonds,

THOMAS E. LLOYD.

ELKADER, Iowa, July 24th, 1885.

Brother Blair:-I am wanting some more of them books entitled "William Smith on Mormonism," struck off. I have written a supplement I designed to add to the pamphlet, a skeleton of which I sent to my nephew, in answer to the question as to what were the causes that led tothe death of my two brothers Joseph and Hyrum Smith. An answer would be brief, though covering the whole ground, on the principle causes, making two additional pages to the book. The brief must be among my nephew's letters. I intended for him to inspect the brief and correct if need be any error that might be found in it. This brief I think important, as many who have sent for this book have thought that this explanation had heen given. I will need about one thousand of these books struck off in the short time of two months. This number will make the price less on each book.

I am preparing for a missionary crusade against the world's opposition to Mormonism-old and true. I expect to be ready for this work, and to enter the field by the first of September next. I am also in duty bound to say that for the last eight months I have not been able to do any missionary work either at home or abroad, on account of poor health, and have been confined mostly to the house. My last missionary work was done among the Saints at Clinton, Iowa, in December, where in taking a severe cold that settled upon my lungs, it well nigh deprived me of the power of speech as well as to endanger life. Through the blessing and mercy of God I have so far regained my health that I shall try the field once more, the Lord willing. This gospel of the kingdom must be preached in all the world. There is then work for all.

WILLIAM B. SMITH.

CORTLAND, Illinois, July 22d, 1885.

Bro. D. Dancer:—The Saints in Cortland and DeKalb are trying to let their light shine by holding prayer meetings, Bible-class, and Sunday School, when we can get no preacher or Elder to help us roll the work along.

W. R. CALHOON.

REBELLIOUS MORMONS.

OMAHA, Neb., July 26th.—Gen. Howard is extremely averse to giving currency to alarms, and regrets the noise which attended his mere recommendation of the retention of the Sixth Infantry at Fort Douglas. The 24th of July, the Mormon fete-day, has passed without demonstrations of hostility against the Government, yet it appears that the military authorities are in receipt of advices which warrant no relaxation of watchfulness over the Valley of the Salt Lake. Gen. Howard yesterday afforded this much information to the importunings of a Tribune representative:

"Mind me," said the General, "my personal belief is that predictions of troubles of any character whatever are groundless. But if you want to hear something of the reports we are receiving every day I will give you an example. A letter reached me to-day from an officer stationed at Fort Douglas, a gentleman and a soldier, in whom I have every confidence, who avers his conviction that the Mormons are hatching mischief. Nothing like an organized attack against the Government is being entertained, but the observer and those provided with advices from the inside of the church see that the Mormons mean to make some trouble for their Gentile fellow-residents in Salt Lake."

"Does the writer state the nature of the brewing mischief?" asked the correspondent.

The General seemed to evade this question as

The General seemed to evade this question as beyond the limits of his agreed divulgence, and and the reporter continued:

"Can they intend to levy petty reprisals, subject their Christian neighbors to small persecutions, or are they planning a grand occasion of slaughter in the night of the St. Bartholomew order?"

"I don't know what is in the minds of the Mormons, but I wish to repeat that I do not care to be identified with the sensations which it is the custom of newspapers to make out of trivialities such as the one I have just informed you of"

There can be no reasonable doubt that the military authorities have fears which they will not venture to half express. The Deseret News, the official Mormon organ, in its current issues, voices the most seditious, treasonable, and incendiary declarations which ever assailed a Government. The recent restrictions placed upon polygamy in Utah and the military preparations made for suppressing anticipated trouble in Salt Lake the 24th inst., have fired the Mormons to the maddest pitch of which their base passions are capable

Notwithstanding the fact that July 24th the Mormon fete-day, passed without any disturbances in Utah, it is said the military authorities have received advices which cause a close watch to be kept over the Salt Lake Valley. An interview with Gen. Howard at Omaha is printed this morning which outlines the cause for the fears that the polygamous saints are expected to make serious trouble at any time.—Chicago Tribune.

John Taylor was seen at the office of the church historian last Saturday afternoon at one o'clock. It is generally believed that he spends a good deal of his time at the Gardo House. His valet has recently been seen on the streets, but his appearance has been greatly changed during the past few months.

A greasy looking pilgrim from Brigham City, styling himself an "Optical Professor," has been seeking notoriety during the last few days by callenging President Joseph Smith to engage in a joint discussion. We understand that for the last twenty years the leaders of the Reorganized Church have kept a challenge open to the authorities of the Utah church to discuss the points at issue between the two branches, but the Utah authorities do not seem inclined to accept it. The leaders of the Reorganized Church do not care to engage in a public discussion with any disreputable seekers for notoriety.—Sall Lake Tribune.

BRANCH GOVERNMENT.

THE officers of a branch are the servants of the church, and should be the chief conservers of its faith and morals, shewing a zealous attention to duty, and a cheerful recognition of the obligations imposed upon them by virtue of their respective appointments, each standing in his own place, carefully performing the duties for which he is responsible. Branch officers, especially presiding officers, are required to see that the law of the church is duly honored, first, in themselves; afterward, in those over whom they have been called to preside, always bearing in mind, that executive officers are not law makers in their executive capacity; but they are expected to be honest and firm administrators of the general law by which the church is governed. To insure this, necessitates the appointment to administrative and executive officers, (in branches), if men of judgment and wisdom; otherwise their official acts will fail to receive that recognition essential to the proper government of those under their control.

Subordinate officials are in duty bound to honor the ruling of those above themresponsibility rests with authority, and those in authority are entitled to the prompt enforcement of their precepts, except such precepts are in open violation of the law from which is derived the right to govern. "Free lances" are a source of weakness, in either the battalions of the cross, or the armies of the world. Success depends in a great measure upon the obedience of the rank and file, combined with the efficiency of officers in comprehending and enforcing obedience to the general orders issued by those who hold supreme command. Therefore the efficient, spiritual discipline of the membership of the church becomes a matter of paramount importance, in face of the conflict now raging against sin and Satan.

That intelligent and fervent preaching will contribute much towards the edification and spiritual life of a branch of the church can not be denied; but a presiding officer, however gifted with grace of tongue or heart, will be unable to build up into solid usefulness a congregation of purely formal worshipers; and however attractive the Sabbath services may be, if, during the week, the members of the congregation frequent the concert room, the theatre, or the dram shop, to all such the devotional services will be but formal, lacking to them the attractiveness of the foolish and delusive pleasures of the world. Worldly mindedness is destructive of faith, and if persisted in must ultimately destroy that active, loving zeal for Christ and one another, that distinguishes the churches of the true Saints from the churches of the world.

The roots of a church thrive best in the spirituality of its ministry, and the devotional fervency of the membership. These graces when combined are like the vital sap, penetrating each limb of the tree, until the branches are heavy with fruit of spiritual growth, ripening under the benign influence of spiritual knowledge and divine blessing. One of the greatest auxiliaries to this desirable condition is the prayer and fellowship meeting of the Saints-not cold formal meetings, but meetings that resound with earnest praise and prayer, when men and women speak and pray and sing with the Spirit and the understanding also; with hearts kindled with love for Christ and devotion to his church; their spiritual natures warmed by an atmosphere redolent with the love of God, wherein sinners may be drawn, and souls converted; an atmosphere that is essential to the cultivation of that higher spiritual life, whereby Saints become perfected, and without which it is impossible for the church to grow in grace, abounding in the love of God. The law says the Elders, (subject to the provisions made for their assistance by other officers), shall conduct the meetings as they are "led by the Spirit," thus presupposing punctuality in attendance at, and time of opening such meetings; duty presented, interest awakened, godly walk and conversation urged, until the leaven of the Spirit has leavened and conquered the worldly longings of the carnally minded: the finite absorbed in the infinite; the substance of the things hoped for obtained; the evidences of the things not yet seen, demonstrated by faith.

The prayer and fellowship meetings are the nurseries of the branches in which to foster the spiritual growth of the membership; and one of the most important considerations in connection with them is the appointment of men qualified to preside,men of faith, with single minds, and loving hearts,—men who can effectually re-buke sin, and yet encourage the sinner, men of spotless reputations as servants of Christ, thereby commanding the respect due to spiritual trust and responsibility; obtaining and retaining the confidence of those to whom they minister; capable of directing the energies of others; full of sympathetic devotion to the household of faith; not shewing desire to lord it over "God's heritage."

In the ordinary fellowship or prayer meeting, short prayers or addresses, from those presiding, will be found most conducive to the spiritual requirements of such meetings; for there is nothing in the law from which it may be inferred that official members are entitled to occupy in these meetings to the exclusion of the unofficial brethren, or sisters. Avoid over-exhortation; for too much becomes monotonous, especially when it assumes the form of chastisement. Habitual scolding seldom edifies the Saints, and still more rarely converts a sinner. Officials who are constantly berating the members for coldness or inattention to duty, soon find themselves outside of that sympathy which it is desirable they should retain as shepherds of the flock. "Feed my sheep," was the injunction of the Master. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ," is the exhortation of the apostle to the Gentiles. Freedom within the law is essential to success in social worship. "Cut and dried" meetings are at best but cold and formal, losing that interest they might otherwise possess. Always playing the one tune becomes wearisome. Constant harping upon the one string must offend the ear, while the reiteration of dry platitudes shews poverty of mind, and is devoid of that devotional fervency which creates the bond of sympathy necessary for the effectual enunciation of spiritual truths. Fellowship or prayer meetings should be placed at the disposal of the membership; the time should not be occupied by the officials to the too frequent exclusion of the Saints. There is a time and place for lengthy discourses; but neither time nor place should be found in the fellowship or prayer meeting. It is, to say the least, inconsistent upon the part of the leader of such meetings to invite those present to sing or testify or pray, and then to occupy the greater portion of the time at disposal, thus indirectly preventing those whom he has invited to participate from exercising the rights justly belonging to them, and practically excluding the very people for whose benefit such meetings are intended. In acting in this manner the brethren may mean well, but unknown to themselves they damp the spirit of the meeting, often without having the remotest suspicion of the real cause; whereas, if they had briefly exhorted the Saints in a way likely to lead their thoughts in the channels of devotion, a different result must inevitably have followed; and instead of cold, formal meetings, wherein the patience of the congregation is sometimes sorely tried, a deep interest would have been begotten in the light and shade of each other's experiences and prayers, that would have constituted a spiritual feast for those present, thereby showing the true characteristics of a meeting set apart for the worship of God, wherein the aspirations of the soul are fostered and developed, and the stature of the spiritual man increased.

JOSEPH DEWSNUP.

MANCHESTER, England.

AN OPEN LETTER TO L. D. HICKEY.

BY SR. DANIEL JONES.

L. D. HICKEY; Dear Sir:—I received your letter of May 18th, and will hasten to reply. By reading your letter 1 see you wish me to prove that young Joseph is a prophet of God, as was his father, and that he is to lead the church. Also that the Reorganized Church is the Church of God. Before commencing this argument I will say, you have all the advantage on your side, for you are an old man, and have been acquainted with the Mormons for years, while I have been in the church only a little over three years, and am not yet twenty-nine years old, With God's help I will endeavor to explain this subject to you, and I hope you will read my reasons carefully, and not close your eyes to the truth. The first thing that I will try to explain to you is the successor in the prophetic office. In a revelation given Joseph, September, 1830, the Lord says:

"No one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church, excepting my servant Joseph Smith, Jr.; for he receiveth them even as Moses. * * * For I have given unto him the keys of the mysteries and the revelations which are sealed until I shall appoint unto them another in his stead. * * * Take thy brother Hiram Page, between him and thee alone, and tell him that those things which he hath written from that stone, are not from me, and that Satan deceiveth him; for, behold, these things [obtaining revelations as a law for the church. See Church History for September, 1830, Times and Seasons and Mill. Star | have not been appointed unto him; neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants."

From this we see that Joseph Smith alone was the one to receive revelation to govern the church, and that the Lord was the one to appoint another in his stead, and that his successor must not be appointed contrary to the church covenants. In Doctrine and Covenants 43:3-7, read:

"And this ye shall know assuredly that there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken, if he abide in me. But verily, verily, I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him [Joseph the Seer], for if it be taken from him, he shall not have power except to appoint another in his stead."

This shows us that no one was to receive revelations as a law for the church until Joseph died, if he remained faithful, and that he must and would appoint his own successor. Also that the Elders should not receive the teachings of any claiming to be Joseph's successor unless they were appointed by God through Joseph. He also must be ordained to that office, for the Lord hath said:

"It shall not be given to any one to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by some one who has authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church."—Doc. & Cov., Rev. February 9th, 1831.

We find a revelation given April, 1830, on church government, that every president of the high priesthood is to be ordained by a High Council, or a General Conference. We can plainly see by the following that the Martyr was to have a successor. Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 673, in a revelation through Joseph, the Lord manifested to him the following:

"Thus saith the still small voice, which whispereth through and pierceth all things, and oftentimes it maketh my bones to quake, while it maketh manifest, saying: And it shall come to pass that I, the Lord God, will send one mighty and strong, holding the sceptre of power in his hand, clothed with light for a covering, whose mouth shall utter words, eternal words, while his bowels shall be a fountain of truth, to set in order the house of God, and to arrange by lot and inheritances of the saints, whose names are found, and the names of their fathers, and of their children, enrolled in the book of the law of God; while that man who was called of God and appointed, that putteth forth his hand to steady the ark of God, shall fall by the shaft of death, like as a tree that is smitten by the vivid shaft of lightning; and and all they who are not found writt ten in the book of remembrance, shall find none inheritance in that day.

By reading this revelation carefully, you will see that Joseph was to fall by the shaft of death, and it was to be sudden. And such it was, for he was shot down in a moment; and that the Lord would send his successor, who should be "mighty and strong," and that he would find the house of God in a disordered condition, and that he would set the house in order. "Young Joseph" did certainly find the house of God in disorder, and with the blessings of God resting on his head, he has certainly wrought marvelous changes in that house, by setting it in order once more. in D. & C. 100 (101): 3 we read:

"Behold this is the blessing which I have propised after your tribulation, and the tribulations of your brethren; your redemption and the redemption of your brethren; even their restora-tion to the land of Zion. * * * Behold I say unto you, the redemption of Zion must needs come by power; therefore I will raise up unto my people a man who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel, for ye are the children of Israel, and of the seed of Abraham; and ye must needs be led out of bondage by power, and with a stretched out arm; and as your fathers were led at the first, even so shall the redemption of

We find that the Saints would have many trials to go through before they would receive their inheritances, and for the redemption of Zion the Lord would raise up one unto his Saints like unto Moses, and that he would be sent of God to lead them by revelations of God. I think this is enough proof to show that

Joseph must have a successor.

The next thing to prove is who his successor is. Lyman Wight, one of the Twelve, said that "Young Joseph" was the one, for this reason, that in 1839, when Joseph, Hyrum and himself, were in Liberty Jail in Missouri, little Joseph went to see his father, and that Joseph, Hyrum and himself laid hands upon the child's head and blessed him, and his father prophesied that he would yet lead the church. Such was the testimony of Bro. Wight up to the time of his death in 1858.

Again, the law of lineage points to "young Joseph" as the legal one to succeed his father. In D. and C. 104 (3): 18, it reads:

"The order of this priesthood was confirmed to be handed down from father to son, and rightly belongs to the literal descendants of the chosen seed to whom the promises were made This order was instituted in the days of Adam, and came down by lineage in the following manner:

—From Adam to Seth, from Seth to his son Enos," etc.

We read again that it should continue in Joseph's lineage until the end of time.

"Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you []oseph the martyr], with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers, for ye are lawful heirs according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God; therefore your life and the priesthood hath remained, and must needs remain, through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began."—D. C. 84 (6): 3.

So we can plainly see that this office belongs only to the seed of Joseph.

By reading the Book of Mormon you will see that this prophetic office descended in the lineage of Jacob. (See Jacob 5: 9; Jarom 1:6).

"And I deliver these plates into the hands of my son Omni, that they may be kept according to the commandments of my father."—Omni 1:2.

This rule we also find in the Christian Church, for James the Lord's brother was the president of the church; for we read the following in Acts 15: 13-21:

"And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me. Simon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written: After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things. Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world. Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God. But that we write unto them that they abstain from pollution of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood. For Moses of of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every Sabbath day.

Paul also considered him the leader, as we can see by reading Gal. 2:9-12. Bingham and St. Jerome, also Eusebius, all claimed that he was at the head of the church, and they ought to know, as they lived near the times of Christ. "Young Joseph" must be the legal successor, for in the law of lineage is also found the law of birthright; that is, the office of the father shall go to the eldest son. This same order is observed in the Melchizedec priesthood as in the Levitical, as you will find by reading Doc. and Coc. 68 (22) 2.

"For the first-born holds the right of the presidency over the priesthood, and the keys or authority of the same. No man has a legal right to this office, to hold the keys of this priesthood, except he be a literal descendant, and the first-born of Aaron.

When Hyrum was appointed to take the office of patriarch in 1841. The revelation said it was his by right; because he was the oldest son of his father. If this is the law, there is no difficulty in knowing who Joseph's successor is, for it can be no one but "Young Joseph." And then we have God's testimony to the same, for in a revelation in 1841 he says—"For this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him." The head must mean his oldest son, "young Joseph." Bro. James Whitehead, who live in Alton, Illinois, states that "young Joseph" was anointed and set apart to be the successor of his father, by his father, in a council in Joseph's house, in Nauvoo, and that Bishop Newell K. Whitney held the oil on that occasion. Joseph's widow says that her husband said that "young Joseph" was the one to take his place. Thus we can see that "young Joseph" was appointed of God through his father.

First, According to the law of lineage; Second, By prophecy and blessing in Liberty Jail, Missouri; Third, By revelation in 1841; Fourth, By a council in Nauvoo in 1844; Fifth, He was ordained to the priesthood by William Marks, Z, H, Gurley and others at Amboy, April 6th, 1860, and was also called to be the president of the church at that time. This must have been a legal ordination for the law (D. & C. 17(2): 17, says:

'Every president of the high priesthood, (or presiding elder), is to be ordained by the direction of a high council, or general conference."

William Marks being the president of the Nauvoo Stake at the death of Joseph, was the highest local presiding officer in the church after the death of Joseph. Z. H. Gurley was a president of the Seventies at the death of Joseph, afterwards one of the Twelve in the Reorganized Church. Another test is in Doc. & Cov. 43:2. The successor shall teach the revelations given to the church through Joseph. This "young Joseph" has done; but none of the other claimants. "Young Joseph" claims to be called and sent of God. Read his address before Amboy Conference, April 6th, 1860:

"I came not here of myself, but by the influence of the Spirit. For some time past I have received manifestations pointing to the position which I am about to assume.

"I wish to say that I have come here not to be dictated by any man or set of men. I have come in obedience to a power not my own, and shall be dictated by the power that sent me.

"God works by means best known to himself, and I feel that for some time past He has been pointing out a work for me to do.

"For two or three years past deputations have been waiting on me, urging me to assume the responsibilities of the leadership of the church; but I have answered each and every one of them that I did not wish to trifle with the faith of the

"I do not propose to assume this position in order to amass wealth out of it; neither have I sought it as a profit.

"I know opinions are various in relation to these matters. I have conversed with those who told me they would not hesitate one moment in assuming the high and powerful position as the leader of this people. But I have been well aware of the motives which might be ascribed to me,—motives of various kinds, at the foundation of all of which is selfishness,—should I come forth to stand in the place where my father

"I have believed that should I come without the guarantee of the people, I should be received in blindness, and would be liable to be accused of false motives.

"Neither would I come to you without receiving favor from my Heavenly Father. * * Some, who had ought to know the proprieties of the church, have told me that no certain form was necessary in order for me to assume the leadership,—that the position came by right of lineage,—yet I know that if I attempted to lead as a prophet by these considerations, and not by a call from heaven, men would not be led to believe who do not believe now. And so I have come, not of my own dictation, to this sacred office. I believe that we owe duties to our country, and to society, and are amenable to the laws of the land, and have always considered it my duty to act on this principle."

Many prophesies were given that he would be called of God to lead the church. One given near Beloit, Wisconsin, November 18th, 1851, to J. W. Briggs, shows that "young Joseph" was the one.

"Behold, I, the Lord, have not cast off my people, neither have I changed in regard to Zion. Yea, verily, my people shall be redeemed, and my law shall be kept, which I revealed to my servant, Joseph Smith, Jr., for I am God and not man; and who is he that shall turn me from my purpose, or destroy whom I would preserve.
"In mine own due time will I call upon the seed of Joseph Smith, and will bring one forth, and he shall be mighty and strong; and he shall preside over the high priesthood of my church. And then shall the quorums assemble, and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be reinhabited, as I said unto my servant Joseph: after many days shall all these things be accomplished."

Since he took the lead of the church, the gifts have been manifested to a remarkable degree, and God seems to be guiding the church in every respect. Again, the following was given to Emma Smith:

"O Hearken unto the voice of the Lord your God, while I speak unto you Emma Smith, my daughter, for verily I say unto you, all those who receive my gospel are sons and daughters in my kingdom. A revelation I give unto you concerning my will, and if thou art faithful and walk in the path of virtue before me I will preserve thy life, and thou shalt receive an inheritance in Zion. [She lived till she was aged seventy-five years nine months, and twenty-one days, and died in possession of her "inheritance in Zion," in Nauvoo, where she resided with her family from 1839 till 1879, forty years, honored and beloved by all. This is good evidence that she was "faithful" and that she walked "in the paths of virtue" in the estimation of God]. But let us proceed: "Behold, thy sins are forgiven thee, and thou art an elect lady, whom I have called."—Doc. & Cov., Rev., July, 1830.

This revelation must have been of God, for it was literally fulfilled. After her husband's death she did not follow any of the pretenders, but when "young Joseph" was called to lead the church, she joined it and accepted her son Joseph as the rightful successor. As the elect, she was not to be deceived by false prophets, Matt. 24: 24, and accepted her son as the leader of the church. This is also strong evidence that he was the right one. Well, I think I have written enough on this subject, and trust you will receive it in the spirit it is written in, and I hope that God will let you see the true way in all its beauty and grandeur. Some other time I will write you my views on the Reorganized Church. Mrs. Daniel Jones.

THE PATHWAY OF THE JUST.

In every age when God has had a people on the earth, the same laws have been given that, by yielding obedience thereunto, man might approximate the divine character, and persevering become perfected. Enoch, the seventh from Adam, a high priest in the church of that dispensation, walked with God, became perfected together with the church over which he presided, "and Zion fled." One of the first things required by the Savior of him, who would become his disciple was,—"Let him deny himself, take up his cross, and follow me." This language, coming from the lips of one of highest authority, marks the outlines of the path he must travel who would make heaven his destination. We read of a certain young man who desired a home in heaven, and with this object in view he approached the Savior saying, "What shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" And when it was told him that he must deny himself the things of the world. and walk in the narrow way by becoming poor for Christ's sake, he went away very sorrowful, and chose to give up the joys of an endless life for the pleasures and van-ities of the world,—"Because straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." We read in the sacred volume of a class of people, Israel, whom God chose out of the world, gave them laws and commandments to govern their conduct, and thus marked out their way by divine appointment. While they walked in the prescribed path they prospered; but when they went after the fashions and follies of the world, they forgot their allegiance to the Divine Being and so apostatized and went into idolatry, for which they were punished by being successively delivered into the hands of the surrounding nations. First, they were subdued by the king of Mesopotamia, after which the Lord raised up Othniel to be their deliverer. Again they forsook the path of duty and were punished by eighteen years of servitude to the king of the Moabites, from whom they were delivered by the enterprising valor of Subsequent to his death, this Ehud. people, after experiencing so many proofs of the Divine favor, again did evil in the sight of the Lord, and the Lord sold them into the hands of Jabin, king of Canaan, under whose cruel yoke they groaned for twenty years, when the prophetess Deborah, and Barak her general, were made the instruments of their liberation. Viewing the line of conduct pursued by this strange people, we are led to the conclusion that the way of the transgressor is hard. Coming down to a later period, we find this same people governed by one who was invested with the holy priesthood. Under his administration their circumstances have changed and the land they inhabit has become a flourishing state, "the husbandman tills the field in peace, and the earth gives forth her crops, and the trees of the plain their fruits, the old men sit in the streets; all talk of their blessings together, and the young men put on the glory and harness of war."

From the foregoing we learn two things. First, that God holds control over the circumstances surrounding his people, and has in every age; also that whenever a people covenants with God to obey him, and then swerves from the path of duty and goes into by and forbidden ones, that people has invariably been brought low in reproach and degradation; while on the other hand, those who pursued the narrow way will find every obstacle give way before them, and their path grow brighter "unto the perfect day." Looking over the world in the present day, we find the greater part going headlong after the lusts of the flesh, while the "greed of gain" pushes them onward with fearful momentum, all the while making swifter time as they approach the final vortex, the enemy of all righteousness leading them, blindfolded, to destruction. "For wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be who go in thereat."

Reader; in which path are you traveling? Do you heed the admonition of Christ?—"Strive to enter in at the straight gate, for many shall seek to enter, but shall not be able?" It is needless that any should be lost; Christ died for all! He is able to save every one who will come in the prescribed way, having faith in His atonement. The power of God is above all power, therefore all powers are subject to his. Satan acts by permission or sufferance. He can tempt us, and try us, and aggravate us; but he can go no further unless we yield, or give up our will-power to him. If we do this, then are we subjects.

Living, as we do, in a dispensation of time in which the prophecies of all previous ones find their fulfillment, a transition period which is gradually and imperceptibly passing into another,—with the dawn of a new era close in the future, how great is the need of energizing every faculty of soul we possess in the interest of the latter day work? By so doing we may be able to "enter in at the straight gate," and thus prove ourselves worthy of a "mansion" in the house of our Father.

BY ELDER D. H. BAYS.

CHAPTER X.

THE TYPES AND SHADES OF THE LAW. THAT the law was to be changed in some respects, is apparent from the following:

"For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law."—Heb. 7: 12.

"For the law having a shadow of good things to come."—Heb. 10: 1,

I wish now to show that one of the very important changes referred to, is that which relate to the day upon which the Sabbath was to be observed. In order to do this, let us take a careful survey of the types and shadows of the law.

THE PASCHAL LAMB, WAVE-OFFERING AND PENTECOST.

The paschal lamb was slain in the evenof the forteenth day of the first month.
This typical feast was called "the Lord's passover," (see Lev. 23: 5), and to be observed by the Israelites as a "feast by an ordinance forever," "in the fourteenth day of the first month at even." On the day following, the "fifteenth day of the same month," begins the "feast of unleaven bread" (v. 6). This feast was to be continued seven days, during which no servile work was to be done. Upon this day a very remarkable type was employed, which cast its significant "shadow" into the future, indicative of "good things to come," namely, that of the wave-sheaf, or "sheaf of the first fruits." The following provisions for this were made:

"And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, when ye be come into the land which I give unto you, and shall reap the harvest thereof, then ye shall bring a sheaf of the first fruits of your harvest unto the priest: and he shall wave the sheaf before the Lord, to be accepted for you on the morrow after the Sabbath the priest shall wave it."—Lev. 23: 9-11.

Fifty days later and we have another very important feast, namely, that of Pentecost. The wave-sheaf was to be offered by the priest, "on the morrow after the Sabbath." The first, and perhaps the most important thing to be settled is, what Sabbath is here alluded to, the morrow after which the wave-sheaf was to be offered by the priest, and from the morrow after which the count of fifty days had to be made for the feast of Pentecost? The fourteenth day of the first Jewish month, Nisan, is the Lord's passover. And on the fifteenth day of the same month is celebrated the feast of enleavened bread. Hence, "the morrow after the Sabbath," the sixteenth day of the month, on which the wave-sheaf was to be offered, was the second day of the feast. (See Josephus, p. 90, where this view is sustained). If the first-fruits were offered on the sixteenth day of the month, and the second day of the feast of unleaven bread, then the fifteenth of the month is a Sabbath. That this is a weekly Sabbath, recurring annually by divine appointment, is rendered quite clear from what Moses, in the same chapter says respecting the feast of Pente-

"And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the Sabbath, from the day ye brought the sheaf of the wave-offering; seven Sabbath's shall be complete: even unto the morrow after the seventh Sabbath, ye shall number fifty days; and ye shall offer a new meat-offering unto the Lord."—Lev. 23: 16.

Here we have reference to eight consecutive weekly Sabbath's. The first on the fifteenth day of the month, the day immediately preceding that on which the first-fruits were offered, and from which the count for fifty days should be made; and the eighth, the day preceding the Pentecost. From a consideration of these facts, the idea that the wave-sheaf was offered on any day other than the morrow after the weekly Sabbath, is rendered alike absurd, and contradictory to the divine record.

We have presented three different types of the law, namely, the paschal lamb, the wave-sheaf, and the Pentecost. These are all the shadows of "good things to come." Let us now follow down the stream of time to the days of our Savior, and witness the striking and significant fulfillment of these typical prophecies. It may be well to bear in mind the fact that the paschal lamb was offered on the four-teenth day of the month, and about the close of the day.

It is a well authenticated fact of history, that Jesus, "our Passover, was sacrificed on the fourteenth day of the month, the same being the Jews' passover," (John 2: 13; 18: 28), and towards the close of the day, "the ninth hour" (Mark. 15: 34), or about three o'clock in the evening. To fix the date with absolute certainty, Mark says the crucifixion occurred "the day before the Sabbath" (Mark 15: 43). These facts taken together, show most conclusively that Jesus, our Paschal Lamb, was slain on the day of the Jewish passover, the fourteenth day of the first month, and "in the evening;" thus fulfilling in the most striking and literal sense, the type of the Jewish passover.

It will be remembered that "on the morrow after the Sabbath," the sixteenth day of the month, the wave-sheaf was to be offered, as the "first-fruits" of the harvest. Jesus was laid away in the new tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, and on that typical night and day, ("much to be remembered unto the Lord,") "on this significant and 'high Sabbath day,' our Lord did not show himself to the inhabitants of our guilty world." On the sixteenth day of the month, being the second day of the feast of unleavened bread, and that on which "the first-fruits" must be offered, the Savior of the world came forth from the grave; and, in the language of another: "Having previously taken the body of our humanity into his own hand and cast it into the dust of death, and having received it back again as 'the first-fruits' of the promised harvest from the dead, waved it before heaven and earth as our high priest with God."

Here we have a most remarkable and exact fulfillment of the type of the wavesheaf, of the first-fruits of the harvest. Christ, the antitypical Lamb, was slain on the fourteenth day of the month, the very day on which the lamb was killed. Then follows the Sabbath; and on "the morrow after the Sabbath," the sixteenth day of the month, he triumphantly rose from the dead, it being the very day on which the "wave-sheaf was offered.

Just fifty days from the day on which the wave-sheaf was offered, the day after the seventh Sabbath, came the feast of Pentecost. Fifty days after the resurrection of Christ from the dead, on the day of Pentecost, the first day of the week, occurred one of the most remarkable events ever known to have transpired among men; namely, the descent of the Holy Spirit, and the endowment of the apostles with "power from on high." The day of Pentecost was celebrated by eating the wave-loaves, with meat "roast with fire." Jesus is "the bread of life," "which came down from heaven," (See John 6: 35-37), and the Holy Spirit sat upon the apostles at Pentecost, as "cloven tongues of fire" (Acts 2: 3).

These types and shadows of the law were, in themselves, of but little importance, only as they represent the divine realities of what was to transpire when the Lamb of God should be offered for the "sin of the world." The law is changed.

"Old things are passed away, and all things are become new."—2 Cor. 5: 17.

We now have a new dispensation, a new law, and it may not be considered unreasonable to conclude that we have a new day to be observed as the Sabbath.

CHAPTER XI.

From the time Jesus rose from the dead, he was engaged, at different times, in teaching the apostles the way of life, "Being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God."—Acts 1:3.

"And beginning at Moses and all the prophets,

"And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself."—Luke 24: 27.

If he taught them "all things" "pertaining to the kingdom of God," he must have taught them concerning the Sabbath day, for this certainly pertains to the kingdom of God, for "the Sabbath was made for man."

"And he said unto them, The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath; therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath."—Mark. 2:27, 28.

As Lord of the Sabbath, we think no man will be possessed of the hardihood to say he had not the right to change the Sabbath day if he chose to do so. The apostles were commissioned to instruct all nations,

"Teaching them to observe all things, whatsoever I have commanded you."—Matt. 28: 20.

It is but reasonable, then, to presume that both Christ and the Apostles practiced, as well as taught, "the things per-taining to the kingdom of God." All nations were to be taught to observe all things whatsoever Jesus had commanded. It is therefore to be presumed, that the Apostles were true to the trust reposed in them, and faithfully taught all things of interest to men concerning the kingdom of God. Whatsoever is not taught, either by precept or example, is not to be observed. Now for the vital question. Did either Christ or the apostles ever teach by precept or example, that Christians should observe the Seventh-day Sabbath? If they did, then the Seventh-day Sabbath is binding. If they did not, it is not binding. We think no Sabbatarian will question the fairness of this position.

If Christ, during the forty days, met with the disciples on the seventh day of the week for the purpose of teaching them "the things concerning the kingdom of God," then we may reasonably conclude he meant to give his sanction to that day as the weekly Sabbath of rest. But if he did not, then, on the other hand, it is reasonable to infer that he withheld his sanction, and no longer recognized the Seventhday Sabbath as being the Sabbath of the Lord

But if, on the other hand, he met with his disciples on the first day of the week, then we have in this example his sanction of the first day of the week, or Sunday, as the Christian Sabbath. Let us, therefore, look into this matter very carefully, and in order to do so systematically, we submit the following proposition, viz: Christ MET WITH HIS DISCIPLES, FOR DIVINE INSTRUCTION, ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK, BUT NEVER ON THE SEVENTH.

To those who have given the subject but little thought, this may be a startling assertion; but we are confident a careful examination of the whole ground will abundantly sustain this view. Upon this point we shall proceed to examine the testimony of the writers of the four gospels. The following is Matthew's testimony:

"In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, to see the sepulchre."—Matt. 28:1.

Now let us note what transpired on this "first day of the week." These devoted women found an angel sitting at the door of the sepulchre, who informed them that Jesus had risen from the dead, and had gone before them into Galilee. They started in great haste to bear the glad tidings to the disciples, when—

"Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet and worshiped him."-(Verse 9).

More of the particulars of this first meeting are given by the other evangelists. Mark's account is very brief, giving the order in which the events transpired. but agrees with Luke, whose narrative is more elaborate. Luke relates that,-

"Upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them."—Luke 24: 1.

The persons referred to are

"Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them" (verse 10).

These women went and told the apostles: "And their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not" (verse 11).

Peter, who was with the other disciples at Jerusalem, to satisfy himself, "ran to the sepulchre," and was astonished as well as delighted to find the women's words were not "idle tales," but really true. Luke thus continues the narrative:

"And behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about three score furlongs. And it came to pass that while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near and went with them" (verses 13-15).

While these two disciples were partaking of some refreshments, (having reached their destination), or soon afterwards, Jesus "vanished out of their sight," having first made himself known to them in the breaking of bread. They at once returned to Jerusalem, where a general meeting of the apostles and others was held, in which the two "disciples" related to those present what had transpired while on their way to Emmaus. While they were thus relating the stirring events of the day,

"Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you" (verse 36).

Then follows the first general discourse of the triumphant Redeemer, to his once forlorn, but now delighted disciples, and that, too, on the first day of the week (verses 37-49).

The Apostle John, in his testimony, gives a few of the particulars of this and a subsequent meeting, which are worthy of our attention.

Some have taken the ground that this meeting was not a first-day, or Sunday, meeting, because it was held in the evening. This witness effectually removed every doubt upon this point, and forever settles the question, leaving no room for cavil. Hear him!

"And the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you."—John 20: 19.

There can be no mistake about this matter,—the disciples actually did meet on the evening of "the first day of the week," when Jesus expounded to them the things "which were written in the Law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning himself.

I want to show by unmistakable proofs, that there was a recurrence of these meetings, weekly, in which Jesus was present to instruct the apostles. Thomas, the doubter, was not present at the meeting referred to above—the first meeting—but was present eight days afterwards, at their next regular Sunday service, as clearly appears from the following:

"But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, * I will not believe. And after eight days [the Sunday following] again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them. Then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in their midst and said, Peace be unto you."—John 20: 24–26.

Just how many meetings of this character were held may not appear; but Matthew refers to another held on a mountain in Galilee, where, according to Robinson's Harmony of the gospels, Jesus met with the apostles and above five hundred brethren. (See 1 Cor. 15:6).

Upon what day of the week this meeting occurred is not stated; but judging from the circumstances which preceded the event, as well as those which followed, it is but reasonable to suppose it to have been on the first day of the week.

In the foregoing we have a recurrence of weekly meetings on the first day of the week. Hence, we have the example of Christ for meeting on Sunday, in which to expound the Scriptures, and give encouragement and spiritual strength to "those of like precious faith with us," thus giving his divine sanction to that day, as a weekly Sabbath of rest.

Among all the sayings and teachings of the Savior, during these forty days, not a word about the Seventh-day Sabbath can be found. Never did he once meet with his disciples on that day. So far, then, as the example is concerned, it is hopelessly against the seventh-day theory, and decidedly in favor of the first day of the week.

We are cordial enough to admit that these circumstances would amount to but little in the way of throwing light on this subject, should the subsequent examples and teachings of the apostles be contradictory to them. But on the other hand, if the apostles continued to meet thereafter with the churches on the first day of the week, then they are of much value in the establishment of the said first-day as the Lord's Sabbath day.

Let us now look carefully into the teachings and practices of the disciples in this regard.

CHAPTER XII.

THE APOSTLES MET WITH THE CHURCHES FOR DIVINE WORSHIP ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK, BUT NEVER ON THE SEVENTH.

We have referred to the day of Pentecost, which occurred fifty days from the time the wave-sheaf was offered by the priest. From the resurrection of Christ to the ascension, was forty days. From the ascension to Pentecost was ten days. The ascension took place from Bethany, a little village on the east side of the mount of Olives. From the mount of Olives the apostles returned to Jerusalem,-

"And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alpheus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James. These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren."—Acts 1: 13, 14.

Thus they were waiting for the promise of the Father, until the day of Pentecost, the same being the eighth Sunday in succession from the resurrection.

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place."—Acts 2:1.

Here we have the first assemblage of the apostles with the people on the first day of the week. Why did they assemble on this particular day? Surely, not merely because it was a Jewish feast; for they being Christians, were not under the law. No Sabbatarian will argue that Christians are to observe the passover, the feast of unleavened bread, or any other Jewish festival. In assembling upon this day they had quite another object in view. Iesus had commanded, saying:

"Tarry in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high."—Luke 24:49.

And I have no doubt that he told them upon what day this enduement should take place. The inference is clear, that Jesus had commanded the apostles to assemble the saints on this occasion. say the least, they were following the example of the Savior set before them in his previous meetings with them for divine instruction. In this great first day Pentecostal meeting, they were witnessing the remarkable fulfillment of the typical prophesy of the typical law. At this meeting, on the eighth Christian Sabbath, they received the promised induement. They are now propared to enter upon their labors of that memorable commission.

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."—Mark 16: 15;
"Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."—Matt. 28: 20.

Let us now follow these divinely inspired men and see whether they teach men to observe the seventh day Sabbath. If they do so teach, then we have evidence, prima facie, that Jesus commanded them so to teach. If they do not so teach, it will be equally clear that he had not so commanded them. The meeting at Jerusalem on Pentecost may be claimed by some as the first meeting of the apostles with the church on the first day of the week, although it is quite probable that such an assembly was held on the Sunday next preceeding the day of Pentecost, even if no mention is made of the fact.

The next place where the day of the week is named in connection with the religious services of the church, is that at Troas, in Asia Minor, mentioned in the 20th chapter of the Acts:

"And we sailed from Philippi after the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days. And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morphylatic and the search and the sea row; and continued his speech until midnight."-Acts 20: 6, 7.

Here we have a very clear account of another first-day meeting. A very important and significant question may be asked just here, and it is this: How came Paul, who was converted to the faith two years after that memorable meeting on Pentecost, and who had been educated to observe the Seventh-day Sabbath in all of its strictness-how came he to meet with the disciples on the first day of the week, for divine worship? Why did he not assemble them on the preceding day, which was the Seventh-day Sabbath, if that were the day binding upon Christians? He remained at Troas "seven-days." Why did he not hold his meeting on Saturday, "to break bread," and preach the gospel to the people, and "depart on the morrow" after the Jewish Sabbath? Besides this, as he departed on the morning of the eighth day after his arrival at Troas, it would make him to have performed a long journey on the preceding seventh day, which is not in accordance with the Jewish idea of keeping the Sabbath. Evidently Paul must have received his ideas of "Sunday worship" from the other disciples. This is rendered still more probable, when we consider that this meeting was not held till nearly twenty-six years after the meeting on Pentecost.

Let this be as it may, Paul, the great apostle to the Gentiles, did meet with the disciples at Troas, "upon the first day of the week." This was not an accidental gathering, but one previously arranged. This appears in the fact that these disciples "came together to break bread;" while at the same time "Paul preached unto them," showing that the object of the meeting was for divine worship. Why all this, if it was the practice of the apostle to meet with the churches on the seventh-day of the week?

Paul left Troas for Jerusalem, the purpose being,—"If it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost"

(Acts 20: 16).

Why was the apostle so anxious to be at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost? Evidently because it was the aniversary of the memorable event that transpired fifty days after the Lord's resurrection, nearly twenty-six years previously. There was to be a grand re-union of the disciples and the church at Jerusalem, on the first day of the week, and Paul desired to be present. He reached Jerusalem in time, but it seems their designs and purposes were all frustrated by the arrest and imprisonment of that apostle. The Apostle Paul seems to have given instruction to the Saints respecting the day on which they were to meet. Writing to the Corinthians, he speaks of the order he had given to the churches of Galatia;-

"Now concerning the collection for the Saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—I Cor. 16: 1, 2.

Now what do we learn from this? (1) That collections for the poor Saints, or some such benevolent purpose, were to be made when Paul should meet withthem. (2)

That these meetings took place on the first day of the week; and, (3) That Paul had "given order to the churches of Galatia" to do the same.

Hence the churches of Greece and Asia Minor were under apostolic "order" to make their collections for the poor when they should assemble for divine worship, upon the first-day of the week, Sunday, or 'the Lord's day." This "pious custom" seems to have been observed throughout the apostle's jurisdiction, as it is expressly stated that the churches at Corinth, Troas, and Galatia, assembled on that day.

St. John, the apostle, was in charge at Ephesus, a city of Asia Minor, and not far from Troas, and it is altogether probable that this apostle and St Paul had a perfect understanding with each other upon this point, and hence the conclusion that John met with the church at Ephesus on the first-day of the week. This view is materially strengthened when we consider that John was "In the Spirit on the Lord's (Rev. 1: 10). And, that this was probably the day upon which he worshiped with the church at Ephesus. He was present at the first meeting on the day of the Lord's resurrection, and all subsequent ones till that grand assemblage on the day of Pentecost. It is reasonable to suppose, therefore, that he held the Lord's day in higher esteem than he did the Jewish Sabbath. None of the apostles, except Paul, were ever known to hold meetings on the Jewish Sabbath. It is true Paul went into the Jewish synagogues, "as his manner was," and "reasoned with them out of the Scriptures" (Acts 17:2). It does not require a careful examination to discover the fact that Paul visited these synagogues solely for the purpose of preaching to them 'Jesus Christ and him crucified" and "risen again from the dead," and not for the purpose of giving any sanction whatever to the Seventh-day Sabbath. The Jews would assemble on their Sabbath to hear readings from the law and the prophets, and the apostle availed himself of the opportunities thus afforded, to declare Christ to them.

It is worthy of remark that in every instance where Paul went into the synagogues, the congregations were fewish,—and not Christian. These assemblies, then, were not meetings of the apostles with the churches; and they prove nothing beyond the apostle's zeal for the glorious truths of Christianity.

In the foregoing we think it has been clearly shown that the apostles met with the churches for divine worship on the first-day of the week, and never on the seventh.

WORLDLY PLEASURE.

OVER the freshest and purest earthly fountains, the hand that never makes a mistake hath written: "He that drinketh of this water shall thirst again." What can we say to our dear young folks to convince them of the truth of the above quotation. Will they listen to the words of one who has passed by the pit-falls of a journey of almost three score years. I look back now with love and gratitude to those who held me back from evil, who constantly advised me for good, and who taught me obedience to the Divine Law.— I shall perhaps never know to what extent I am indebted to these dear ones. for what I now enjoy. Had I not learned the lessons of obedience in early life, I would perhaps not have obeyed the gospel as revealed in these last days, nor the commands contained in the sacred books.

SYMPATHY.

This is a cold world. The fires of sympathy are seldom aroused. A frigid indifference to the feelings and the welfare of others seizes upon us, we lose all interest in their concerns and pass by them in the busy marts of life without giving them a cheering smile or a friendly look. This is wrong. We should cultivate a fellow-feeling toward those with whom we associate, and when troubles come upon them we should strive to ease their burdened spirits. Mankind was formed for society. They were created with social dispositions, which it is their duty to cherish and strengthen. This can be done only by mingling in community and receiving and reciprocating favors. We are dependent beings—dependent not only on God, but on our fellow men. We do not all seem to realize this. We imagine we can act alone; that we need no assistance from others, and that others require none of us. It is not so. We are all one body, and can move in harmony only when we move together. "Men," says Menais, "are the issue of a common parent, and should form but one great family, united by the gentle bond of fraternal love. This family in its growth should have resembled a tree whose rising trunk produces numerous branches, and these again innumerable others, nourished by the same sap and an-imated by the same life." But this is not the case with a large portion of the human race, even in civilized society. moves in a sphere of his own, isolated from his fellows, and pursuing his way without the companionship, the aid, or the sympathies of those around him. Such persons are blinded to their own interest. They deprive themselves of many of the sweet-est enjoyments. They never feel the interchange of warm and tender regard, or the gush of satisfaction and joy springing from the reciprocation of blessings. Their life is that of the misanthrope, their feelings those of the cynic, and their joy like the meteor's blaze, flashing for a moment, and precursing thicker gloom of sadness and despondency. The tears of sympathy water the flowers of pleasure. There is a holy delight in bending over the couch of the sick, and alleviating their afflictions by kindly and constant attentions. Our very sympathies mitigate their pains, and this is a blessed consolation to ourselves. He who can "rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep," has the sweet assurance that he has the right spirit within him, which assurance is a never-failing source of heavenly peace and transport. The fountain of universal sympathy, that which extends to the whole human family, embracing our enemies as well as friends, springs from pure philanthrophy and Christian love. Let us see to it, then, that we have these sacred virtues in each one of our bosoms.

Conserence Minutes.

Miscellaneous.

MARRIED.

BENTHAM—SHARP.—July 26th, 1885, at the residence of the bride's father, Cleveland, Iowa, by Elder John T. Phillip's, Bro. William Bentham to Sr. Celia Sharp. May peace and happiness attend them.

DIED.

STILLMAN.—In Bridgeport, Connecticut, July 1st, 1885, of consumption, Sr. Isabella A. Stillman, wife of Bro. Asa S. Stillman, aged 49 years and 6 months. She was taken suddenly with hemorrhage of the lungs, and rapidly passed away. A short service was held at the house by Elder W. W. Preece. Funeral service was held at the residence of Clarke Saunders, Westerly, R. I., and conducted by Rev. O. U. Whitford of the Seventh-day Baptist Church. The remains were then deposited in Hopkinton Cemetery, R. I. She leaves a husband, three sons, two daughters, a brother and sister, who cherish in memory her loving ministries and Christian graces. She was a member of the Providence Branch, and died happy in the hope of a glorious resurrection.

"Though dark my path, and sad my lot, Let me be still and murmur not; And breathe the prayer divinely taught, "Thy will be done."

"If Thou should'st call me to resign What most I prize—it ne'er was mine— I only yield Thee what was Thine; "Thy will be done.'

"Renew my will from day to day, Blend it with Thine, and take away All that now makes it hard to say, "Thy will be done."

"Let but my fainting heart be blest, With Thy sweet Spirit for its guest; My God, to Thee I leave the rest; 'Thy will be done.'" Hansen.—At Lamoni, Iowa, July 14th, 1885, Sr. Clara A. Hansen, aged 23 years, 10 months, and 24 days. She was the daughter of brother Franklin and Sr. Harriet Leonard, and was born in Walworth county, Wisconsin, August 20th, 1861. She was married to Bro. John Hansen, November 29th, 1883, and left a babe nine months old. She was baptized April 20th, 1879, by Bro. C. H. Jones, and lived a good life. She suffered many weeks before death came, but endured with patience, and departed in peace. Bro. Leonard died less than a year ago, and now Sr. Leonard is again bereaved. The funeral sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Bro. W. W. Blair.

Lee.—At Independence, Missouri, July 27th, of Consumption, Sister Rosa Lee. She was born in Douglas county, Oregon, September 9th, 1872; baptized by T. W. Chatburn, at Independence, Missouri, November 2d, 1884. She passed away with a bright hope of the future. Furneral services by F. C. Warnky.

Jenkins.—At Corinth, Elgin county, Ontario, Sr. Mary Jenkins, third daughter of Bro. William and Sr. Catherine Jenkins. She was born in Dorchester, Middlesex county, Ontario, August 9th, 1868; was baptized and confirmed December 19th, 1880, by Elder G. T. Griffiths. She died of pulmonary consumption, June 24th, 1885. Embracing her mother with tenderest affection, she sweetly feel asleep in Jesus, under the calm and peaceful influence of the Holy Spirit; leaving a father, mother, a brother, and two sisters, who deeply mourn her loss, yet not as those without hope. Funeral services conducted by Elder John H. Lake.

Mary dear has gone to rest; Forever with the angels blest She mingles now her voice to sing. Eternal praises to our King.

SHEARER.—In Sedalia, Missouri, July 19th, 1885, George Henry, son of Bro. and Sr. Shearer, and grandson of Bro. John Taylor, of this city. He was in the tenth year of his age, and was a lad of great promise; universally beloved by teachers, school-mates and all who shared his acquaintance. He was never known to depart from the truth, and had so interwoven himself in the affections of all, that his departure was mourned sincerely by the community, especially the younger ones, who had learned to love him and pattern after him. While heartfelt sympathies are tendered to the afflicted parents, they have the consolation of knowing that he waits their coming in the mansions of the Father, and has left an example worthy to be remembered among the children of Zion.

BISHOP'S AGENT.

Having been notified of the resignation of Bro. N. W. Crowley, my agent of the Eastern Maine District, and the recommendation of Bro. Joshua S. Walker, I hereby appoint Bro. Walker as my agent for said district. Hoping that wisdom and the spirit of the Master may be given Bro. Walker in the discharge of his duties,

I remain your brother in Christ, G. A. BLAKESLEE, Bishop.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR -

- - EDITOR. ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, August 15, 1885.

WE send this number of the Herald, containing the first pages of the notorious "Manuscript Found," of Solomon Spaulding, and the letters and certificates of Messrs Rice, Fairchild, and Kelley relating to it, to numerous persons not regular subscribers. We have not yet decided to publish the balance of it in the Herald, for the reason that we will put it in pamphlet form at an early time, when those who wish can obtain it. Besides, there is a heavy demand on the columns of the Herald for the publication of other and more suitable matter. We shall decide before the next issue.

VINDICTIVE.

THE Desert News in its issue for July 30th revives its animosity to us upon the alleged report of the Chicago Tribune of the discourse presented by us February 22d, 1882. We have twice denied making the statement as given by the Tribune upon which so much has been said, and stated what we did say on that occasion. And if the editor of the News would but stop long enough to think about what was then being discussed by us, he would see that our objection has always been against plural marriage, or polygamy; and that the speech made by us at Chicago was directed against that dogma, and not against the virtue, or good intent of those practicing it, meaning the people as a mass.

If the News were as willing to accord to others the meed of trying to be honest, to think right and do right, as it is anxious to be thought honest and devoted to principles that are true and right, it would scarcely urge again what has been specifically denied. We shall let the matter rest here.

APOSTLE THATCHER REVIEWED. "WHERE there is no vision, the people perish; but he that keepeth the law, happy, happy is he."

The meaning of this text is evidently not, that where the people dream no dreams, and have no visions by day or night, the people perish; but it is, that where the condition or power to see aright is lacking, there the elements of destruction are, and the people may suffer even to perishing.

At the celebration of the Fourth, at Ogden, Utah, after the orator of the day, Judge Powers, had concluded his oration, Hon. Moses Thatcher, a leading man and apostle of the Utah Mormon Church, was called to the stand. In response to the call, that gentleman gave a discourse, pronounced by the Descret News to be "a ringing and appropriate speech." In some respects parts of the speech were appropriate, or would have been, had there been any similarity between the situations appearing in the argument. Referring to the remarks of Judge Powers, he said:

"With what pride and pleasure I listened to the remarks of the honorable gentleman to-day indicating once more the glorious doctrines of Democracy as taught by Adams and Jefferson. It gives me a gleam of hope, and we look for the time when we shall elect a President who shall be bold enough to say to the waves of popular prejudice, 'Thue far shalt thou go and no farther.'"

The popular prejudice, here referred to, is that sentiment of the people which refuses to accept the dogma of Plural Marriage as in harmony with, and included in, the principles of religious and political toleration named in the Declaration of Independence, and embodied in the Constitution and amendments thereto; that sentiment which holds the practices under that dogma to be immoral, and therefore contrary to the genius of American institutions, because destructive of the structure and well-being of society.

Mr. Thatcher introduced his chief points by presenting in contrast an attempt made in Congress in 1830 to secure an act punishing men for disregarding the Sabbath day, and the action of Congress in 1882, when the Edmunds' bill was passed. In both these instances the speaker claimed that there was an improper interference with the state by the church; meaning that the bill was passed because it was demanded by the clamor of sectarian churches.

In making this claim, Mr. Thatcher certainly forgot that whatever influence the churches referred to may have had, it was exercised through popular methods,-the rostrum, the pulpit, the press, and by petition,-methods at all times open to the American public. If such clamor was made, it was so because of the nature of the claim by Utah—as represented by her church officials—that marriage as a church tenet had been by church enactment taken from the province of the legislature. This, too, when such church action was in direct violation of the public statement made by the church that "according to the custom of all civilized nations, marriage is regulated by laws and ceremonies." By the action of the church in thus taking the regulation of the marriage relation out of the jurisdiction of the state, gross violence was done to the principle of government guaranted by the Constitution, and such an interference of the church with the state was attempted, as warranted protest from the people of the country at large, and decisive action of Congress against it.

Mr. Thatcher records himself upon the question of the union of church and state thus:

"And here let me, as a citizen of the United States, announce my opposition to the union of Church and State, that ought to be, and in a republican government must be separate."

Let this statement of Mr. Thatcher be borne in mind in reading the remarks of Col. R. M. Johnson of Kentucky, made in the House of Representatives upon the occasion of the attempt to pass laws punishing Sabbath breaking; in 1830. He said:

"With the exception of the United States, the whole human race, consisting, it is supposed, of 800,000,000 of rational beings, is in religious bondage; and in reviewing the scenes of persecution which history everywhere presents, unless the committee could believe that the cries of the burning victim and the flames by which he is consumed bear to heaven a grateful incense, the conclusion is inevitable that the line can not be too strongly drawn between Church and State. If a solemn act of legislation shall in one point define the law of God, or point out to the citizen one religious duty, it may, with equal propriety, proceed to define every part of divine revelation, and enforce every religious obligation, even to the forms and ceremonies of worship, the endowment of the Church and the support of the clergy.

"It was with a kiss that Judas betrayed his Divine Master; and we should all be admonished—no matter what our faith may be—that the rights of conscience can not be so successfully assailed as under the pretext of holiness.

"The Christian religion made its way in the world in opposition to all human governments. Banishments, tortures and death were inflicted in vain to stop its progress. The framers of the Constitution recognized the eternal principle that man's relation with his God is above human legislation, and his rights of conscience inalienable. Reasoning was not necessary to establish this truth; we are conscious of it in our own bosoms. It is this consciousness which, in defense of human laws, has sustained so many martyrs in tortures and flames. They felt that their duty to God was superior to human enactments, and that man could exercise no authority over their consciences. It is inborn principle which nothing can eradicate.

"The bigot in his pride of authority may lose sight of it, but strip him of his power, proscribe a faith to him which his conscience rejects, threaten him in turn with the dungeon and the faggot, and the spirit which God has implanted in him rises up in rebellion and defies you. Did the primitive Christians ask that government should recognize their institution? All they asked was toleration; all they complained of was persecution. What did the Protestants of Germany, or the Huguenots of France ask of their Catholic superiors? Toleration. What do the persecuted Catholics of Ireland ask of their oppressors? Toleration. * * * "It is the duty of this Government to afford to all-to Jew or Gentile, Pagan or Christian-the protection and advantages of our benignant institutions.

"If the measure recommended should be adopted, it would be difficult for human sagacity to foresee how rapid would be the succession, or how numerous the train of measures which might follow, involving the dearest rights of all, the rights of conscience. It is perhaps fortunate for our country that the proposition should have been made at this early period, while the spirit of the Revolution still exists in full vigor. Religious zeal enlists the strongest prejudices of the human mind, and when misdirected, excites the worst passions of our nature, under the delusive pretext of doing God's service. Nothing so influences the heart to deeds of rapine and blood, nothing is so incessant in its toils, so persevering in its determinations, so appalling in its course, so dangerous in its consequences. The equality of rights, secured by the Constitution may bid defiance to mere political tyrants, but the robe of sanctity too often glitters to deceive. The Constitution regards the conscience of the Jews as sacred as that of the Christian, and gives no more authority to adopt a measure affecting the conscience of a solitary individual than that of a whole community. That representative who would violate this principle would lose his delegated character, and forfeit the confidence of his constituents. If Congress shall declare the first day of the week holy, it will not convince the Jew nor the Sabbatarian. It will dissatisfy both, and consequently convert neither. Human power may extort vain sacrifices, but the Deity alone can command the affections of the heart. It must be recollected that in the earliest settlement of this country, the spirit of persecution which drove the Pilgrims from their native home was brought with them to their new habitation. and that some Christians were scourged, and others put to death, for no other crime than dissenting from the dogmas of their rulers. With these facts before us, it must be a subject of deep regret, that a question should be brought before Congress which involves the dearest privileges of the Constitution, and even by those who enjoy its choicest blessings. We should all recollect that Cataline, a professed patriot, was a traitor to Rome. Arnold, a professed Whig, was a traitor to America, and Judas, a professed disciple was a traitor to his Divine Master.

"If the Almighty has set apart the first day of the week as a time which man is bound to keep holy, and devote exclusively to His worship, would it not be more congenial to the precepts of Christians to appeal exclusively to the great Law-giver of the universe to aid them in making men better-in correcting their practices by purifying their hearts? Government will protect them in their effort. When they have so instructed the public mind and awakened the conscience of individuals as to make them believe that it is a violation of God's law to carry the mail, open post-offices, or receive letters on Sunday, the evil which they complain of will cease of itself, without any exertion of the strong arm of civil power. When a man undertakes to be God's avenger he becomes a demon. Driven by the frenzy of a religious zeal, he loses every gentle feeling, forgets the most sacred precepts of his creed, and becomes ferocious and unrelenting.

"The State has no more power to enforce the observance of Sunday upon moral or religious grounds than it has to compel the citizens to be baptized or to partake of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. It is claimed that man has no right to labor on Sunday, because in so doing he violates God's law. It is not for the Legislature to determine what is or what is not God's law. In this matter it can go no further than to protect all citizens, of whatever faith, in the peaceful exercise of their rights, leaving each to interpret God's law for himself, or to subscribe to the interpretation thereof laid down by the particular ecclesiastical order to which he adheres, or to whose teachings he finds himself inclined, without being amenable to any authority in the State for either his conduct or his conclusions so long as neither leads him to interfere with his fellowman in the exercise of like rights. In other words, so far as the State is concerned, the citizen should be left free to spend his days, Sundays included, just as he pleases, so long as he, in doing so, does not interfere with the exercise of like freedom on the part of others. He must not wilfully disturb or interfere with others in the exercise of their religious rights and privileges. He must allow his neighbors, who feel so inclined, to meet together to worship God in peace and such quietude as the situation will admit of, where each pursues his pleasure in his own way, having a just regard for the rights of all others.

These remarks of Col. Johnson formed the best part of Mr. Thatcher's speech, for the reason that the Colonel was pleading the cause of all classes of religionists, and all shades of belief not included in formulated creeds. The plea of Mr. Thatcher was that of a class, a small per centage of a comparatively small portion of the religious element of the country, in favor of a practice known to all the statute books of all the states forming the United States, to which states the domain of Utah Territory belongs by right of purchase and conquest, to be a crime. This plea is for immunity, under the rule of toleration for religious liberty and the right of conscience, so eloquently presented by Col. Johnson.

Mr. Thatcher's mistake is that of a man who can not see; a case of moral blindness; an inability to perceive.

The assumption is made by Mr. Thatcher, that the few in Utah alone are capable of determining whether "the right of conscience and freedom of action" may continue in America. He does so in these words:

"Our Revolutionary sires digged deep and laid solidly the foundation of the greatest government on earth, making religious toleration the chief corner stone. But some of their sons are fast drifting from the old moorings, while expedients and popular clamor override Constitutional principles. These few, in Utah, are able to accurately calculate how long they may be able to maintain even a remnant of those sacred rights of conscience and freedom of action for which our fathers sacrificed property and blood, and to maintain which they pledged all they had."

The right of conscience, as involved in the free exercise of the rites of the Mormon religion, in all that legitimately belongs to that faith, has never been interfered with by the Government of the United States.

"Freedom of action," where that freedom has involved violation of law, or a disregard for what was in harmony with the genius of the institutions of the American Nation has always been prescribed, or proscribed; directed, or controlled, by laws under the Constitution; law being but the crystalized expression of the public sentiment of the people.

"How can our bosoms swell with patriotic enthusiasm, under that system of perverted Republican rule, that differs in no sense—save in name —from the colonial bondage under which the British tyrant made our ancestors suffer?

"In what respect is the administration of political and judicial affairs in Utah a rule by and with the consent of the governed? Having no voice in the election of the President who appoints, nor in the Senate that confirms those sent to rule over and judge us, wherein consists, to us, the sweets of Democracy?"

By the use of the words "the consent of the governed," Mr. Thatcher ingeniously presents the thought that the few in Utah whose "freedom of action" has been interfered with, have not been consulted in regard to the laws by which they have heen restrained, and their consent thereto first obtained. It is a specious plea, and catches the ear of the thoughtless and the superficial reasoner. But to him who really thinks, it must appear that the principle of republican or democratic rule is that the consent of the majority obtained, the consent of the minority goes with it. Republican institutions require that the will of the people enacted by representatives chosen by the people shall be accepted and acted upon as having been consented to by all; the minority, however respectable in numbers that minority may be, as well as the majority by whom the representatives were chosen.

"Popular opinion is a tyrant, and coercion is his twin brother. We may kiss the hand of each, while praying for those who despitefully use us; but how shall we forget, while doing so, that American liberty is thus made to us but a farce."

"Popular opinion" may be a tyrant; but the principle that the will of the majority fairly expressed, is, in American politics and jurisprudence, the will of the whole people, makes "popular opinion" the law of the land. Laws enacted for the conserving of the best interests of all, are not made in the interest of small minorities, but for the great majorities; hence Mr. Thatcher ought to have known that in the case complained of by him, the popular opinion styled by him "a tyrant," is the result of hundreds of years of progressive thought, and of experiments in sociology. The principle of the domestic family relation in monogamy came over in the Mayflower and the Speedwell with those who fled from the tyranny of a King and religious bigotry; which, however blind in other things, always bowed to the sacredness of the marriage bond in principle. No purer precept or examples of manly honor and womanly virtue can be found in history than those which are afforded in the instances of the settlement of Connecticutt, Massachusett and Rhode Island, among those Dutch and English Puritans. From them, the notions of the virtue of woman, the honor of man, the purity of offspring, which have obtained in American institutions, have largely obtained, and have given color to statutory enactments under the Constitution—crystalized popular opinion—tyrannical only to those who will break the laws, disregardful of the Constitution.

God approved of this puritanical idea, and gave laws to the church in harmony with it; from which the real patriot can only conclude that in this case the voice of the people was the voice of God.

"In the midst of oppression, patiently borne, it has been hoped that President Cleveland, having been elected on the pledge of a return to Jeffersonian doctrines, might afford citizens of Utah some relief, and that a Democratic Administration would re-affirm the principles enunciated in the Declaration of Independence, under the inspiration of which the Nation carved its way to glory, and led to the adoption of the grandest charter of human liberty this world has ever known. It has heen hoped, I say, that a Democratic Administration would again announce that citizens of this Nation, and all others within its jurisdiction, shall be governed by principle and not prejudice, and judged with equity and justice. If President Cleveland and those sent to rule and judge us, have the moral courage to announce these principles, saying to the waves of popular clamor and religious prejudice, "thus far but no further can ye come"—all being equal before the law-our children for generations to come will make garlands with which to decorate their tombs and keep their memory fresh and green in the heart. But if they choose not to do these things we will still trust in God while kissing the chastening rod, until the sons of Utah, faithful, true and loyal, shall stand on the backbone of this American Continent, and beneath the Stars and Stripes, save and maintain inviolate for all, the divinely inspired Constitution of this glorious land."

This peroration has a captivating sound. But who is there acquainted with the position Mr. Thatcher and those for whom he thus essays to speak, who is not blinded by prejudice in favor of Utah's peculiar dogma, that does not know that under Republican and Democratic rule alike, men must obey the common law of the country. The fact that President Cleveland does not choose to block the machinery of the courts and permit a fraction of the society of Utah to break the rule given of Congress to govern that particular portion of the public domain, in which so many States hold tenancy in common, is evidence that the view entertained by that fraction is contrary to sound political and domestic economy; and that as a public servant entrusted with the execution of the laws, he does not choose to foster what Congress has declared to be a crime. Pres. Cleveland could not, if he dared to attempt it, stop the onward sweep of events to culminate in the unity of the law, both in enactment and enforcement in every part of the land over which the Government of the American Nation holds sway.

It is quite safe to predict, that however trustful the men who claim the right to practice plural marriage may be that God will intervene to prevent the falling of the rod, there will be no such interference; but that chastisement and distress will continue until men cease to violate the law; for it is written the "strength of sin is the law;" and, "he that keepeth the law of God hath no need to break the law of the land."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By Salt Lake papers of the 26th ult. we learn that Rudger Clawson, now serving a term in the Utah Penitentiary for violating the Edmunds law, has been sued by Florence A., his legal wife, for a divorce. The complaint sets forth "Adultery with his polygamous wife, and felony." The divorce was granted.

Bro. Frank Hackett of North Freedom, Wis., writes of late date and says, "I intend to take the field and labor for the onward march of the gospel, if nothing happens to prevent."

We would respectfully suggest to the Saints, and especially to the ministry, that they let the ministry in the Rocky Mountain Mission look after the affairs of that mission, and particularly in regard to Utah matters. That is their field and their work, and it is fair to suppose they are best qualified to keep affairs in that region in proper shape, so far as can be. Let every one learn his own duty, and not interfere nor meddle with the duties and privileges of others. Remember the eleventh commandment, and keep it.

We visited the Great Salt Lake at Garfield, one of its bathing stations, on Thursday, July 30th, for the purpose of bathing in the now historical lake. We saw hundreds of people that day, and saw no drunkenness, and heard no loud, boisterous or profane language. The crowds going and coming on the crowded bathing trains and at the bathing station were mirthful, but orderly, and pleasantly disposed. So much in favor of the much accused Mormons; albeit there must have been a considerable mixture of Mormon, Apostate, Gentile and unbelieving people in the crowds. Our own party numbered a dozen or more Josephites, so called here.

The Paper World says that the ten plagues of a newspaper office are bores, cranks, poets, rats, cockroaches, typographical errors, exchange fiends, book canvassers, delinquent subscribers, and the man who always knows how to run the paper better than the editor himself.

Bro. Briggs Alden, in a letter of late date says the Saints will need to discern carefully between faith-healing as ordained of God, and that wrought, or professed to be, by spirits, etc., etc. His letter will be published soon. Bro. Alden also says a brother from Kansas last fall borrowed a book from him, and he has expected it to be returned ere this. He wants it now, and asks that it be returned soon.

Bro. Cantrell of Pineville, Missouri, writes again that he is very anxious some of the Elders should visit him at once. He says he has the promise of a meeting-house at Sulpher Springs, and invitations from Cutler Creek also. He is feeble, and asks the prayers of the Saints.

Ques.—What is meant in section 59, page 180, Doctrine and Covenants, par. 2 "confessing they sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord."

Ans.—It means that, if a person has sinned against another, he or she should confess to those sinned against; and, if any have sinned against the Church, they should confess to the Church; and if they have sinned against the Lord only, they should confess to the Lord only; for this Scripture must be interpreted and applied in harmony with sec. 42:23, Doc. Cov., and Matt. 18:15, 16, 17, both of which provide that private offences shall be settled privately, where it can be done, and that only open—public—offences should be confessed publicly, if practicable; and this to prevent reproach and scandal.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. L. M. Sollenberger writes from Harrisburg, Pa., the 3d inst., saying:

"My faith is good as ever, and I wish to say that I mean to stand firm in the faith of the church as long as life lasts. My relatives here were very much against my belonging to the Latter Day Saints; but prejudice is wearing away, and I hope yet in the future to show them and convince them by my actions in life that I have embraced the truth. Please have the three papers sent on, the same as before. I can not think of doing without them."

Correspondence.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, August 1st, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—After a six weeks' survey of the "situation" we send you a few "notes from the capitol." Of course the Herald hears and talks a great deal about this land "flowing with salt and sin," but we learn that a few are watching for a letter from "us," and lest their organ of sight should succumb under a prolonged strain, we hasten to materialize.

Bro. Alex. H. Smith and the writer left Independence, Mo., June 12th. Of the parting we will say nothing. Let those who properly estimate home and its associations draw on their imagination for what our pen is incompetent to describe. At Council Bluffs we met Bro. Joseph Smith. Remained over Sunday, and listened to two excellent discourses from him in the Saints' Chapel there. Tried to speak to the Saints in the afternoon, by request, but lacked both physical and mental ability to do either ourselves or the work credit. Partook of the proffered hospitality of Brn. Calvin Beebe and J. F. McDowell: enjoyed the exhibition of cordiality among the Saints, and left them, in company with Brn. Joseph and Alexander, on the evening of the 15th, to board the train for the field of our missionary operations. We arrived here on the evening of the 17th, and found a welcome in the homes and hearts of the Saints.

Of Bro. Joseph's efforts in the Opera House and other places in and out of the city, you have already been advised. It only remains for the writer to say, that the skill exhibited and the labor performed attested amply the divinity of his resources, and his uncompromising fidelity to truth. Time is asked before we offer any comments upon the character of the material operated upon. We only pray that it may prove worthy of the labor and care expended. Bro. Alexander proved himself equal to the demands made upon him, and one positive result, at least, can be scored for him, as witnessed by his hearers before he left for California, viz.: they know exactly where he stands-not geographically perhaps, but doctrinally. It will require some ingenious Ward-house poulticing, and tabernacle-plastering to subdue the inflammation, and reunite the splintered Rocky-Mountain-polygamic-philosophy on which his ammunition was expended. Bro, "Aleck" is guilty of that pardonable breach of etiquette, which results in his being frequently found in the pulpit minus his "gloves," and brawny handed at that, when he graces a Utah rostrum. The Utah Church leaders are placed very conspicuously before the public mind just now-by their absence.

The Deseret News has been screaming—"Wolf! wolf!" but the Shepherds don't "materialize" worth a cent. They are busy emphasizing the necessity for obedience to former counsel—"stand up to the rack, brethren, fodder or no fodder." There are swarms of crooks, but 'nary' shepherd.

The writer agreed to act as Moderator for Bro. R. J. Anthony in a debate to be held with Elder Andrew Jensen, on the evening of July 20th, on the following proposition:—"Do the revelations contained in the Doctrine and Covenants (old edition) and the history of the church up to the death of Joseph Smith, as published in the Times and Seasons and Millennial Star, warrant the Saints in locating in the Rocky Mountains. Jensen affirming; Anthony denying.

This same gentleman, (?), after agreeing to affirm the above, went to the lady from whom we had rented a hall for the purpose, (according to agreement), and insisted that she should refuse the building, and demand a return of the key. The lady came, and when a return of the key was refused, wept and stated that this very gentleman (?) had directed her to demand it. Notwithstanding the contract for the house had been fully made, the brother holding the key gave it up rather than permit the lady to suffer at the hands of men whose duplicity places them beneath contempt. Another hall was secured in the little town, (Pleasant Grove), and the debate advertized. The time arrived, and forth we went; but just imagine, if you can, how we felt when this "defender of the faith," this assistant Editor of the Danish paper here, the Bikuben, positively refused to affirm his own proposition; in fact would not lead off in the debate at all. After considerable parley Bro. Anthony agreed, rather than lose the chance for being heard, to affirm the negative of the above proposition. It was the only show, and, at the last minute, without special preparation for such an emergency, he sailed in, and piled up the Doctrine and Covenant's arguments admirably. When the learned Editor undertook a reply, he characteristically passed by all the pointers offered, and read from the Fuvenile Instructor an item copied from the 10th vol. of the Millennial Star, which was said to have been copied from Williard Richards' Journal. The reader will please observe that the 19th vol. of the Mill. Star was not printed until thirteen years after the Martyr's death. Of course that fact could not make it inadmissable as evidence, in the mind "ye Editor" Jensen. The spirit of the proposition under discussion provided that the evidences were to be gathered from the Doctrine and Covenants and history published prior to the Martyr's death; and that was the verbal understanding; but Elder Jensen would not so write it, and neither would he abide by it. But what was this formidable weapon of defense which never appeared in print until thirteen years after the Martyr's death, and then published by residents of the Rocky Mountains to give some kind of color to their former movements, and to offset the charges that Utah was not Zion? Simply, that the Martyr had said to some brother Free Masons, some time near August 6th, 1842, that the Saints should be terribly persecuted and driven to the Rocky Mountains. The Editor seemed to forget that if this was true, it would go to the credit of the prophet, but to the discredit of those who helped to fulfil the prediction: for God had declared a year before this that they should no more be driven except it be on account of their sins; and that their enemies should no more prevail against them except it was permitted as a curse for their transgressions.

To the above was added several statements said to have been made by the Martyr, and several acts interpreted by the Brighamites to mean or point to a Utah Zion; but none of them were ever published until fifteen years after the prophet's death, and that, too, by residents in the Utah Zion, in justification for their course in settling here. At the close the writer challenged the editor to discuss the original proposition, either there or in Salt Lake City, embodying in it, specifically, that the evidence shall be produced from the history published prior to the martyr's death. This was refused on the ground that there was no history before the year 1844. We took up the Millennial Star and Times and Seasons, and showed that there was. But it was no use, the debate must end there and then. Yet a number of that "intelligent audience" failed to discover when he said there was no history before Joseph's death, that he virtually admitted that he had been discussing a proposition which he knew all the time to be false in the essential claim made for it. Bro. Anthony was "there" every time, and spoiled all chances for further discussion with Elder Jensen. The position was taken and maintained throughout by Bro. Anthony. Elder Jensen evidently saw that there was no hope for him in replying to the arguments made, and so contented himself by taking an independent road-much resembling the Underground. We were afterwards informed by a member of the Utah Church that we might have known that nothing but trickery would be indulged in by that man.

And now we are back to the metropolis, to which the sheep gather, and from whence the shepherds scatter. Yesterday we were called away to attend the funeral of Thomas Smith, son of Bro. Wm. P. Smith of Union Fort, who was murdered on the morning of the 28th of July in Wyoming. The services were held in an orchard, Pres. Joseph Smith preaching the sermon, followed by Bishops Rawlins and Phillips, both of whom paid glowing tributes to the memory and character of the deceased. Bro. Joseph was not introduced to the people, formally; but we have reason to believe an excellent impression was made. Next week we move north and expect to remain for a few weeks, then return and start south through the territory. Calls are coming in from all directions, and there is no lack of opportunity for preaching just

The sects here have commenced preaching to the "spirits in prison," having obtained permission from the Marshal to visit the Penitentiary each Sunday for that purpose, much to the annoyance of some of the Mormons who are compelled to give audience there.

Notwithstanding the settled attitude of the Government towards polygamy, that doctrine is being advocated and defended as vigorously as ever, in the vain hope that God, in the hour of their forced extremity, will deliver them with a "high hand and outstretched arm." The appearance of a stranger in any of the settlements is a signal for flight on the part of those who have been kingdom building after the "celestial" order. One man near by, when suddenly aroused by the (?)deputies at midnight, mistook them for burglars and crowded his polygamous wife (instead of his money) up through the man-hole in the ceiling! The Marshal with an axe was about to remove the board forcibly, when the lady stepped off of it and saved him the trouble. She was invited to come down, and did so. The burglar theory, as above, was given before the Commissioner next day by the husband. It evidently was a remarkable case of absent-mindedness(?)

The half-masting of the flag on Independence day was an unfortunate affair. Its results will evidently be wider than its design. Many people who have spent years in Utah, have yet to spend their first day in America. The flag has no significance to them in the sense of real patriotism. We hope, however, that ere long a return of the honest to their allegiance to God and his unchangeable decrees will take place, and without the enactment and enforcement of more stringent laws, the nation will gain from the ranks of Mormondom hundreds who will recognize in the raising up of men to write the Constitution, the pledge of the Almighty to its perpetuity, and will labor to maintain its honor by a frank, complete submission to its demands, knowing that "he that keepeth the laws of God, hath no need to break the laws of the land."

Our health is good, and if so continued we hope to labor on till encouraging results are witnessed. We expect some day to have abundant opportunity here for canvassing the grounds of difference between us and the Brighamites. If we are not disappointed in this hope, there will likely be some material changes wrought both in bringing this about, and in consequence of it. May they not be for good to Israel? Some may be gathered, crushed and bleeding under the inflicted rod. Some from choice, without chastisement; but let us hope, all for the glory of God.

As ever, yours in labor and hope,

Joseph Luff.

Laguna Beach, SANTA ANA, Cal., July 30th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: I drop a line to you that you may know the progress of the cause in this part of the Lord's heritage. I have been trying to spread the word through this district, in connection with my business, during this summer; and having recently been appointed Bishop's Agent, have been bringing the Saints up to an understanding of that part of the work, and am pleased to note that it is accepted by them; and all who profess a love for the work are responding, and will comply as fast as they can make arrangements. I expected the Bishop here in this month. Am not apprised as to what occasions his delay. We shall be glad to see him.

This is the camping season, and I have stopped my business for a time, and am presenting the gospel to the campers here, holding forth in a tent arranged for that purpose; am assisted by Bro. A. W. Thompson; hold services every night; talk every day; have a fair hearing, and many seem to be surprised to know that we are different from the Mormons of Utah, and are pleased to learn that we are not so obnoxious as they had supposed. Have all classes to hear us. What the result will be we can not tell, but hope to sow the seed for good, that God may be glorified and his cause honored. We here are like the rest of the Saints-anxious in regard to Utah affairs; for we hope and trust that the time has now come to deliver the honest out of bondage. Many prayers are being offered that the Lord will stand by Joseph to accomplish the work; for we feel that the time has come that if the work moves there at all, it must be by His divine

I had a prophetic vision just before Bro. Burton left here last winter, in regard to Utah affairs. At a prayer meeting at the house of Bro. Schnell we ail had a good time. My eyes were opened so that I saw the whole of the United States at one sight, and in isolated spots I could see dark clouds hovering down close to the ground, and interspersed between were white, silver clouds. And as I glanced to the Rockies hanging over Utah and her surroundings the clouds thickened, and was lower and but little of the silver lining, gradually diminishing in blackness as it extended either way. While in the vision, I arose and lifted my hand, and by the Spirit uttered the words: "Woe! woe! woe! to the people of the valleys of the mountains; for the Lord will surely hold them to account for their evil works, and his hand will shortly rest heavily upon them, and they will be made to feel his chastening power." After the vision, the impression was vividly left upon my mind, that their troubles would be brought about by political affairs. I hope the honest will take warning by the time the three woes are passed, and come out of her. Bro. D. S. Mills is still on gaining grounds, but slowly; he only goes on his crutches as yet; has preached a few times of late.

Yours for truth,

J. R. BADHAM.

NEWTON, Jasper Co., Iowa,

"July 29th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blarr.—Since reaching my field I have tried to occupy advantageously. The peculiarities of the season have made arduous toil for the farmers, and the consequent busy times have hindered much in getting the attention of the people except on Sundays, and not even then at times. Since June 20th, Sundays, save one, have been occupied in the way of grove meetings; attendance reaching four hundred, and but for doubtful weather, at places would have been much more. There are several advertized for the near future; and such will be the order till cool weather. The ministry of the district cooperate in these; and since the 19th have had the valuable assistance of W. T. Bozarth, who though not in good health, toils steadily on.

The present situation in Utah, and press notices by the papers that have taken Bro. Joseph's work up, certainly are cheering; as also the unearthing of the long-lamented "Manuscript Found." What a tinkering of affidavits our friends (?) will have! It seems to me those who now canvass the latter day work are, if possible, less excusable for rejecting it than any hitherto: for the adage relative to truth—"the eternal years are hers"-is sublime as applying to late events. Were all requirements enjoined by the gospel conformed to by those of the faith, what strides the work would make! This certainly is a far worse problem than the problem of pressure from without. We have heard our District President breathe some sighs of late upon intelligence to come and settle difficulties, "the causes of which and the ashes of a rye straw would be of equal merit."

Though trials come, 'tis found "the way of life" alone secures us peace. Hoping to labor patiently on till honorably acquitted,

I am in bonds.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, August 3d, 1885.

Bro. Blair:-I am pleased to learn that you have the manuscript of that pesky "Spaulding Romance." Had we not got it, I should have had a dream denied, as I had had an intimation that we would get it. I believe in the law of compensation, and the Reorganization has been so favored in its unearthing of things hidden heretofore, that I should have disliked a failure in this. I hope John will rush it out. There ought to be a brief preface with it. Address at Malad for this week; and at Bozeman till the Yours, 15th. JOSEPH SMITH.

BOOK OF MORMON.

We have just received an edition of the Book of Mormon, bound in two styles: Plain Roan at $1,25, as heretofore; and Full Morocco, instead of imitation for $1.75.

Book of Mormon in German language $1.40,

THE "MANUSCRIPT FOUND."

A verbatim Copy from the Original.

Words and sentences underlined were stricken out in the Manuscript. Places marked thus --- the edges of the copy was illegible.

In this issue we begin the publication of the "Manuscript Story" ["Manuscript Found"], of the late Rev. Solomon Spalding. What gives this document prominence is the fact that, for the past fifty years it has been made to do duty by the opposers of the Book of Mormon and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as the source, the root, and the inspiration, by and from which Joseph Smith and Sydney Rigdon wrote said Book of Mormon and organized said Church. It has been popularly and persistently claimed that the plan, subject matter, including prominent names and localities, history of the origin of the aboriginal races of America, with their arts and sciences, civilizations and customs, were identical in this "Manuscript Found" and in the Book of Mormon. Thousands have believed this false and foolish statement, without giving its truth or falsity an hour's fair and unprejudiced investigation, and then fought the book and the church with a readiness and a zeal almost without a parallel. And now that this veritable "Manuscript Found," with an unbroken chain of evidence proving its identity and running back to E. D. Howe, D. P. Hurlbut, Spalding's "old trunk," and so back to Pittsburgh, Conneaut, and to the very pen of Solomon Spalding, has by the providence of God been furnished us, and that, too, by those not of the Church, we take pleasure in exhibiting in the sunlight of solid facts, this hob-goblin of the pulpit, this "nigger-in-the-woodpile" of the press and the forum, that with which they have fooled and frightened the masses and blinded those inquiring into the origin and character of the Book of Mormon.

This seeming huge hindrance and insurmountable obstacle which is always thrown in the way of the investigator with all the skill and power that craft and cunning and malice and fear and blind zeal can invent and command, vanishes from the presence of this original witness in the case; for when it speaks it reveals the flimsiness and falsity of the claim that it was in any way or in any sense the origin of the Book of Mormon, or that there is the least likeness between the two. This newly found "missing link" completes the chain of evidence which proves that the "Manuscript Found" never was and never could be made the occasion, cause, or germ of the Book of Mormon.

Mr. Spalding has been exalted by the opposers of the Latter Day Saints to the very pinnacle of fame, as a very learned, very moral, and very pious man. It is fortunate that his true measure and worth in respect to his learning, his morals, and his piety, is now furnished us in this "Manuscript Story." God judges men by their works, and it is wise for men to judge of each other after this manner. And when we estimate Mr. Spalding by the character of his work as exhibited in this document, we must grade him down to a very low level, whether in respect to scholarship, mental power, moral purity, or pious attainments and tendencies.

HONOLULU, Sandwich Islands,

May 14th, 1885.

MR. JOSEPH SMITH; Dear Sir:-

I am greatly obliged to you for the information concerning Mormonism, in your letters of April 30th and May 2d. As I am in no sense a Mormonite, of course it is a matter of curiosity, mainly, that I am interested in the history of Mormonism.

Two things are true concerning this manuscript in my possession: First, it is a genuine writing of Solomon Spaulding; and second, it is not the original of the Book of Mormon.

My opinion is, from all I have seen and learned, that this is the only writing of Spaulding, and there is no foundation for the statement of Deming and others, that Spaulding made another story, more elaborate, of which several copies were written, one of which Rigdon stole from a printing office in Pittsburgh, &c. Of course I can not be as certain of this, as of the other two points. One theory is, that Rigdon, or some one else, saw this manuscript, or heard it read, and from the hints it conveyed, got up the other and more elaborate writing on which the Book of Mormon was founded. Take that for what it is worth. It don't seem to me very likely.

You may be at rest as to my putting the manuscript into the possession of any one who will mutilate it, or use it for a bad purpose. I shall have it deposited in the Library of Oberlin College, in Ohio, to be at the disposal for reading of any one who may wish to peruse it; but not to be removed from that depository. My friend, President Fairchild, may be relied on as security for the safe keeping of it. It will be sent there in July, by a friend who is going there to "take to himself a wife." Meantime, I have made a literal copy of the entire document—errors of orthography, grammer, erasures, and all—which I shall keep in my possession, so that any attempt to mutilate it will be of easy detection and exposure. Oberlin is a central place, in the vicinity of Conneaut, where the manuscript was written.

I have had an idea, sometimes, that it is due to the Mormons to have a copy of it, if they took interest in it enought to publish it. As it is only of interest as showing that it is not the original of the Book of Mormon, no one else is likely to wish it for publication.

Miss Dickinson, whom you call a granddaughter of Solomon Spaulding, represents herself to me as his grandniece: "My great uncle, Rev. Solomon Spaulding," she writes.

Rev. Dr. Hyde, President of the Institution, in this place, for training Native Missionaries for Micranesia, (a very prominent and successful institution), has written an elaborate account of this manuscript, and of Mormonism, and sent it for publication in the Congregationalist, of Boston. I presume it will be published, and you will be interested in reading it.

Very respectfully, yours,

L. L. RICE.

In a postscript Mr. Rice says he found the following endorsement on the Manuscript

"The writings of Solomon Spaulding proved by Aron Wright, Oliver Smith, John N. Miller and others. The testimonies of the above gentlemen are now in my possession.

(Signed)

D. P. HURLBUT."

COPY OF MR. RICE'S LETTER.

Honolulu, H. I., June 12, 1885.

PRESIDENT J. H. FAIRCHILD:

Herewith I send to you the Solomon Spalding Manuscript, to be deposited in the Library of Oberlin College, for reference by any one who may be desirous of seeing or examining it. As a great deal of inquiry has been made about it since it became known that it was in my possession, I deem it proper that it be deposited for safe keeping, where any one interested in it, whether Mormon or Anti-Mormon, may examine it. It has been in my possession fortysix years—from 1839 to 1885—and for forty four years of that time no one examined it, and I was not aware of the character of its contents. I send it to you enclosed in the same paper wrapper, and tied with the same string that must have enclosed it for near half a century-certainly during the forty-six years since it came into my possession. I have made and retain in my possession a correct literal copy of it, errors of orthography, of grammar, erasures and all. I may allow the Mormons of Utah to print it from this copy, which they are anxious to do; and a delegation is now in the Islands, awaiting my decision on this point. They claim that they are entitled to whatever benefit they may derive from its publication; and it seems to me there is some justice in that claim. Whether it will relieve them in any measure, from the imputation that Solomon Spalding was the author of the Book of Mormon, I do not attempt to decide. It devolves upon their opponents to show that there are or were other writings of Spalding—since it is evident that this writing is not the original of the Mormon Bible.

Truly, yours, &c.,

L. L. RICE.

P. S.—The words "Solomon Spaulding's Writings" in ink on the wrapper were written by me, after I became aware of the contents. The words "Manuscript Story—Conneaut Creek," in faint penciling, were as now when it came into my possession.

OBERLIN COLLEGE, OBERLIN, O., July 23, 1885.

I have this day delivered to Mr. E. L. Kelley a copy of the Manuscript of Solomon Spaulding, sent from Honolulu by Mr. L. L. Rice, to the Library of Oberlin College, for safe keeping, and now in my care. The copy was prepared at Mr. Kelley's request, under my supervision, and is, as I believe, an exact transcript of the original manuscript, including erasures, misspellings, &c.

JAS. H. FAIRCHILD,

Prest. of Oberlin College.

KIRTLAND, O., 24th July, 1885.

PRES. W. W. BLAIR, Lamoni, Iowa:

Herewith I transmit to you the copy of the Spaulding Manuscript prepared by Pres. Fairchild as attested by him, together with his certificate, and photograph sheets.

E. L. KELLEY.

INTRODUCTION.

NEAR the west Bank of the Coneaught River there are the remains of an ancient fort. As I was walking and forming various conjectures respecting the character situation & numbers of those people who far exceeded the preesent Indians in works of art and inginuety, I hapned to tread on a flat stone. This was at a small distance from the fort, & it lay on the top of a great small mound of Earth exactly horizontal. The face of it had a singular appearance. I discovered a number of characters, which appeared to me to be letters, but so much effaced by the ravages of time, that I could not read the inscription. With the assistance of a leaver I raised the stone. But you may easily conjecture my astonishment when I discovered that its ends and sides rested on stones & that it was designed as a cover to an artificial Cave. I found by examining that its sides were lined with stones built in a connical form with - - - - down, & that it was about eight feet deep. Determined to investigate the design of this extraordinary work of antiquity, I prepared myself with the necessar requisites for that purpose and decended to the Bottom of the Cave. Observing one side to be perpendicular nearly three feet from the bottom, I began to inspect that part with accuracy. Here I noticed a big flat stone fixed in the form of a doar. I immediately tore it down and Lo, a cavity within the wall presented itself it being about three feet in diamiter from side to side and about two feet high. Within this cavity I found an earthen Box with a cover which shut it perfectly tite. The Box was two feet in length one & half in breadth & one & three inches in diameter. My mind filled with awful sensations which crowded fast upon me would hardly permit my hands to remove this venerable deposit, but curiosity soon gained the assendency & the box was taken & raised to open it. When I had removed the Cover I found that it contained twenty-eight rools of parchment - & - that when - - - (3) appeared to be manuscrips written in eligant hand with Roman Letters & in the Latin Language.

They were written on a variety of Subjects. But the Roll which principally attracted my attention contained a history of the author's life & that part of America which extends along the great Lakes & the waters of the Mississippy.

Extracts of the most interesting and important matters contined in this Roll I take the liberty to publish.

Gentle Reader, tread lightly on the ashes of the venerable dead. Thou must know that this Country was once inhabited by great and powerful nations considerably civilized & skilled in the arts of war, & that on ground where thou now treadest many a bloody Battle hath been fought, & heroes by thousands have been made to bite the dust.

In the history given of these nations by my author you will find nothing but what will correspond with the natural sentiments we should form on viewing the innumerable remains of antiquity which are scattered over an extensive Country. This is an evidence of the author's impartiality and veracity. But if any should pretend that the whole story is fictitious or fabulous

To publish a translation of every particular circumstance mentioned by our author would produce a volume too expensive for the general class of readers, But should this attempt to throw off the veil which has seculded our view from the tranactions o nations who for ages have been extinct, meet the approbation of the public, I shall then be happy to gratify the more inquisitive and learned part of my readers by a more minut publication. Apprehensive that skeptical illiberal or superstitous minds may censure this performance with great accrimony I have only to remark that they will be deprived of a great fund of entertainment - - - (I) of a contrary disposition will obtain. My compassion will be excited more than my resentment and there the contest will end.

Now, Gentle Reader, the Translator who wishes well to thy present and thy future existence entreats thee to peruse this volume with a clear head a pure heart and a candid mind. If thou shalt then find that thy head and thy heart are both improved it will afford him more satisfaction than the approbation of ten thousand who have received no benefit.

And now permit me to admonish thee that if thou shouldst reside in or travil thro' any part of the Country

CHAPT. I.

AN EPITOME OF THE AUTHOR'S LIFE & OF HIS ARIVAL IN AMERICA.

As it is possible that in some future age this part of the Earth will be inhabited by Europians & a history of its present inhabitants would be a valuable acquisition I proceed to write one & deposit it in a box secured - - - (I) so that the ravages of time will have no effect upon it that you may know the author I will give a succint account of his life and of the cause of his arival which I have extracted from a manuscript which will be deposited with this history.

My name was is Fabius The family name I sustain is Fabius, being decended from the illustrious general of that name. I was born at Rome & received my education under the tuition of a very Learned Master. At the time that Constantine arived at that city and had overcome his enimies & and was firmly seated on the throne of the Roman empire I was introduced to him as a young Gentleman of genius and learning & as being worthy of the favourable notice of his imperial majesty. He gave me the appointment of one of his secritaries, & such were the gracious intimations which he frequently gave me of his high approbation of my conduct that I was happy in my station.

One day he says to me Fabius you must go to Brittian & carry an important - - - (I) to the general of our army there - - - (I) sail in a vessel & return when she returns. Preparation was made instantly and we sailed - - - The vessel laden with provisions for the army - - - Cloath-knives and other impliments for their use had now arived near the coasts of Britain when a tremendous storm arose & drove us into the midst of the boundless Ocean. Soon the whole crew became lost & bewildered. They knew not the direction for to the rising Sun or polar Star, for the heavens were covered with clouds; & darkness had spread her sable mantle over the face of the raging deep. Their minds were filled with consternation and despair. & unanimously agreed that What could we do? How be extrecated from the insatiable jaws of a watry tomb. Then it was that we felt our absolute dependence on that Almighty & gracious Being who holds the winds & floods in - - (I) hands. From him alone could we expect deliverance. To him our most fervent desires assended. Prostrate & on bended nees we poured forth incessant Supplication & even Old Ocean appeared to sympathize in our distress by returning the echo of our vociforos Cries & lamentations. Atter being driven five days with incridable velocity before the furious wind the storm abated in its violance. but still the strong wind blew strong in the strong as I now believe in the same direction. Doubtful whether the wind had not changed her point we gave the ship full sail & let her drive. On the sixth day after, the storm wholly subsided, the sun rose clear and the heavens once more appeared to smile. Inexpressible was the consternation of all the crew. they found themselves in the midst of a vast Ocean. No prospect of returning. All was lost. The wind blowing westwardly, & the presumption was that it had been blowing in that direction during the whole of the storm. No pen can paint the dolorious cries & lamentations of the poor mariners, for the loss of friends for the loss of everything they held most - - - (I) At length a Mariner stept - - - (2) the midst and proclaimed. Attend O friends & listen to my words. A voice from on high hath penetrated my soul & the inspiration of the Almighty hath bid me proclaim. Let your sails be wide spread & the gentle winds will soon waft you into a safe harbor. a Country where you will find hospitality. Quick as the lightnings flash joy sparkled in every countenance. A Hymn of Thanksgiving spontaniously burst forth from their lips. In full confidence that the divine prediction would be accomplished they extoled the loving kindness and tender mercies of their God & promised by the assistance of his grace to make ample return of Gratitude. On the fifth day after this we came in sight of sand, we entered a spacious river & continued sailing up the ... (I) many leagues until we came in view of a town.

Every heart now palpitated with joy, & loud shouts of gladness expressed the enthusiastic transports of our souls. We anchored within a small distance from shore. Immediately the natives ran with apparent signs of surprize & astonishment to the bank of the River. After viewing us for some time, & receiving signs of Friendship, they appeared to hold a counsel for a few minutes. Their King then stept forward to the edge of the bank, & proffered us the hand of friendship, & by significant gestures invited us to Land, promising us protection and hospitality We now found ourselves once more on terra firma, & were conducted by the king & four chiefs into the town whilst the multitude followed after, shouting & performing many odd jesticulations. The King ordered an entertainment to be prepared for his new friends which consisted of - - - (I) fish boiled beans & samp - - - (2) The whole was placed under a wide-spreading Oak in wooden dishes A large clam shell & a Stone Knife were provided for each one. The king then came forward with about twenty of his principal subjects, & con seated us (being about twenty in number) & seated us by the side of our repast. He & his company then took seats in front. After waving his hand & bowing all fell to eating & a more delicious repast we never enjoyed. The repast being finished, our attention was called to a collection of about one thousand men & women who had formed a ring & invited our company to come forward into the midst. After gazing upon us sometime with surprize we were permitted to withdraw & to take our stand in the Ring. About forty in number then walked into the midle of the Ring & began a song with but a discordant and hedious modification of sounds, & such frantic jesticulations of body that it seemed that chaos had bro't her furies to set the world in an uproar. And an uproar it was in a short time for the whole company fell to dancing, shouting, whooping, & screaming at intervals, then dancing jumping & tumbling with many indescribable distortions in their countanance & indelicate jestures. In fact, they appeared more like a company of devils than human Beings. This lasted about one hour. They then took their places in a circle & at a signal given gave three most tremendous whoops, they then instantly dispersed playing many antike capers & making such a confused medly of sound by skreaming, whooping, screaching like owls, Barking like dogs and wolves & bellowing croaking like Bullfrogs, that my brain seemed to be turned topseturvy, & for some time I could scarce believe that they belonged to the human species.

CHAPT. II.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE SETTLEMENT OF THE SHIP'S COMPANY & MANY PARTICULARS RESPECTING THE NATIVES.

As no alternative now remained but either to make the desperate attempt to return across the wide boistrous Ocean, or to take up our residence in a country in a land of savages inhabited by savages & wild ferocious beasts, we did not long hesitate. We held a solemn treaty with the King & all the chiefs of his nation. They agreed to cede to us a tract of excellent land on the north part of the town on which was six wigwams & engaged perpetual amity & hospitality & the protection of our lives & property, In consideration of this grant we gave them fifty yards of scarlet cloth & fifty knives With this present they were highly pleased.

Arrangements must now be made for - - - (I) settlement. Vessel & cargo had received no material damage & by striping the vessel of its plank we could erect a house in which we could deposite the whole cargo in safety. All hands were immediately employed, some in procuring timber which we hued on two sides & then locked together, some in procuring shingles & some in striping the vessel of its plank; & having a large quantity of nails on board, in ten days we finished a very convenient store-house, sufficiently spacious to receive the whole cargo. We also built a small house adjoining which was to be the habitation of the Captain & myself. Having secured all our property, ' we then found it necessary to establish some regulations for the government of our little society. The Captain whose name was Lucian & myself were appointed judges in all matters of controversy & managers of the public property to make bargains with the natives & barter such articles as we did not need for necessaries. As we all professed The next thing to be done was to to believe in the religion of Iesus Christ we unanimously chose Trojanus, the mate of the ship, a pious good man to be our minister, to lead ourdevotions every morning & evening & on the Lords day.

But now a most singular & delicate subject presented itself for consideration. Seven young women we had on board as passenjers to viset certain friends in Brittain. Three of them were ladies of rank & the rest were healthy bucksom lassies. Whilst deliberating on this subject a mariner arose whom we called Droll Tom Hark ye, shipmates says he. Whilst tossed on the foaming billows what brave son of Neptune had any more regard for woman than a Sturgeon, but now we are all safely anchored on Terra firma, our sails furled & ship keeled up, I have a huge longing for some of those rosy dames. But willing to take my chance with my shipmates, I propose that they should make their choice of husbands. The plan was instantly adopted. As the choice fell on the young women they had a consultation on the subject, & in a short time made known the result. Droll Tom was rewarded for his benevolent proposal with one of the most sprightly, rosy dames in the company. Three other of the most cheerful, resolute mariners were chosen by the other three bucksom Lassies. The three young Ladies of rank fixed their choice on the Captain the Mate & myself. Happy indeed in my partner, I had formed an high esteem of the excellent qualities of her mind The young Lady who chose me for a partner was possessed of every attractive charm both of body & mind. We united heart & hand with the fairest prospect of enjoying every delight & gratification which are attendant on the connubial state. Thus ended the affair. You may well conceive our singular situation. The six poor fellows who were doomed to live in a state celibacy or accept of savage dames, discovered a little chagrin & anxiety. However, they consoled themselves with the idea of living in families, where they would enjoy the company of the fair sex, and be relieved from the work which belongs to the department of women.

Our community might be said to be one family, tho' we lived in seperate houses situate near each other. The property was common stock. what was produced by our labor was likewise to be common. All subject to the distribution of the judges, who were to attend to each family & to see that propper industry & econimy were practised by all.

The Captain & myself, attended with our fair partners & two mariners, repaired to the new habitation, which consisted of. two convenient apartments. After having partook of an elligant dinner & drank a bottle of excellent wine our Spirits were exhilerated & the deep gloom which beclouded our minds evaporated. The Captain assuming his wonted cheerfulness, made the following address. "My "sweet, good soul'd fellows, we have now commenced a "new voyage. Not such as bro't us over mountain billows "to this butt end of the world. No, no, our voige is on dry "land, & now we must take care that we have sufficient "ballast for the riging. Every hand on board this ship "clasp hands & condesend to each others humour. This "will promote good cheer & smooth the raging billows of "life. Surrounded by innumerable hordes of human beings, "who resemble in manners the Orang outang, let us keep "aloof from from them & not embark in the same matri-"monial ship with them. At the same time, we will treat "them with good cheer & inlighten their dark souls with "good instruction. By continuing a different people & "prefering our customs, manners, religion & arts & sciences "& other things another Italy will grow up in this wilder-"ness, & we shall be celebrated as the fathers of a great & "happy nation."

May God bless your soul, says one of the mariners, what would you have us do who have had the woful luck not to get mates, to cheer our poor souls and warm our bodies. Methinks I could pick out a healthy plum Lass from the copper colored tribe that by washing & scrubing her fore & aft & upon the labbord & stabbord sides she would become a wholesome bedfellow. I think, may it please your honour, that I could gradually pump my notions into her head & make her a good shipmate for the cupboard & and as good hearted a Christian as any of your white damsels & upon my Soul I warrant you if we have children, by feeding them with good fare, & keeping them clean, they will be as plump & as fair & nearly as white as your honours children. Upon this I filled the bottle with wine & observing to honest Crito that he was at liberty to make the experiment if he could find a fair - - - (I) to his liking. I then expressed the sweet pleasure I received from the addresses of the speakers & wished drank success to the new voige. All drank plentifully, & the exhileration produced the greatest cheerfulness & hilarity. By this time the Sun had hid his head below the horizon & darkness invited all the animal creation to sleep & rest. We retired two & two, hand in hand. Ladies heads a little awri, blushing like the morn & - - - But I forgot to mention that our society passed a resolution to build a church in the in the midst of our vilage.

CHAPT. III.

MANY PARTICULARS RESPECTING THE NATIVES.

Interest as well as curiosity invited an acquaintance with our new neighbors. They were called in their Language Deliwanucks. They were Tall, bodies weel proportioned, strait limbs, complections of a brownish hue broad cheek bones, black wild roling eyes, & hair black & course. To strangers they were both - - - (I) true to their engagements, ardent in their friendship, but to enimies implacable, cruel & barbarous in the extreme. Innumerable hordes of this description of people were scattered over an extensive country, who gained their living by hunting the elk, the deer & a great variety of other wild animals by fishing & fowling & by raising corn, beans & squashes Shooting the arrow, flinging stones, wrestling, jumping, hoping, and runing were their principal amusements, & prizes would often be staked as a reward to the conqueror. Their cloathing consisted of skins dressed with the hair on, but in warm weather only the middle part of their bodies were incumbered with any covering. The one half of the head of the men was shaved & painted with red & the one half of the face was painted with black. The head was adorned with feathers of various kinds, & their ears & noses were adorned ornamented with rings formed formed from the sinues of certain animals, on which were suspended smooth stones of different coulors. Thus cloathed, thus painted, thus ornimented, the Deliwannuck made a most terrif - - - (I) They held festivals at stated times which varied in the manner of conducting them, according to the object they had in view. At one of their annual festivals their ceremonies were particularly singular & different from any that were ever practised by any nation. Here a description would give us some idea of their religion, & would gratify the curiosity of an injenious mind.

When the time arives, which is in September, the who whole tribe assemble. They are dressed & ornimented in the highest fashion. The women in particular have their garments & heads so adorned with feathers, shells, & wampum, that they make a very brilliant & grotesque appearance. The form a circle: their countanances are solemn. A Speaker mounts a stage in the midst. At this moment two Black Dogs led by two Boys & two white Dogs led by two young damsels enter the circle & are tied together. The Speaker then extended his hands & spoke. Hail, ye favorite children of the great and good Spirit, who resides in the Sun who is the father of all living creatures & whose arms encircle us all around, who defends us from the malicious design of that great malignant Spirit that pours upon us all the evils we endure He gives us all our meat & our life & causes the corn & the fruits to spring up & makes us to rejoice in his goodness. He hath prepared a delightful Country to receive us, if we are valiant in battle or are benevolent & good. There we can pick all kinds of delicious fruit, & have game & fish in abundance & our women being improved in beauty & sprightliness will cause our hearts to dance with delight. But wo unto you wicked, malicious mischievous mortals. Your lot will be cast in a dark dreary, mirey swamp, where the malignant Spirit will torment you with musquetoes & serpents & will give you nothing to eat but toads, frogs & snails. But my dear friends, all hail, here is a custom which is sanctioned by time immemorial. Look steadfastly on the black dogs & let not your eyes be turned away, when they are thrown on the sacred pile & the flames are furiously consuming their bodies, then let your earnest prayer assend for pardon & your transgressions will flee away like shadows & your sins will be carried by the smoke into the shades of oblivion.

When this solemn expiatory sacrifice is ended then prepare your souls to partake of the holy festival Each one will receive a precious morsel from these immaculate snow colored dogs, in token that your offences have all evaporated in the smoke of the holy sacrifice. & that you are thankful to him the benevolent Spirit, for the abundance of good things that you enjoy, & that you humbly anticipate the continuance of his blessing that he will defend you against the evil designs of that malignant Spirit, who gives us gawl & wormwood, & fills our bosom with pain & our eyes with tears. He then proclaimed, let the sacred pile be erected & the solemn sacrifice performed. Instantly about one hundred men come forward with small dry wood & bundles of dry sticks & having thrown them in one pile within the circle, they set the pile on fire. The black dogs were knocked on the middle head, & thrown on the top, in a moment all was in a blaze & the flames assended in curls to heaven. The whole company assumed the most devout attitude & muttered in sounds almost inarticulate their humble confession & earnest requests.

When the dogs were consumed & the fire nearly extinguished, the ceremonies of their sacred festival began. The white dogs which were very plump & fat were knocked on the head & their throats cut. Their hair was then singed off, having first their entrails taken out, & being suspended by the nose before a hot fire, they were soon roasted, thrown upon a long table & desected into as many pieces as there were persons to swallow them. The company immediately formed a procession, one rank of men the other of women, the men marching to the left & the women to the right of the table, each one took a piece & devoured it with as good a - - - (2) if it had been the most delicious morsel. Having completed these sacred ceremonies with great solemnity, the whole company formed themselves into a compact circle round the stage ten musitians immediately mounted, & facing the multitude on every side sang a song. The tune & the musical voices of the singers pleased the ear, whilst the imagination was delighted with the poetic inginuity of the composition. The multitude all joined in the chorus with voice so loud & multifarious, that the atmosphere quaked with terror, & the woods & neighbouring hills sent back by way of mockery. sent back the sound of their voices, their vociferation improved by ten-fold confusion. Perhaps, reader, you have the curiosity to hear the song. I can give you only the last stanzy & the chorus.

"For us the sun emits his rais

The solemnities are ended & in their opinion their poor souls are compleatly whitewashed & every stain entirely effaced. A little---(I) will now dissipate the solemnity & inspire them with cheerfulness & meriment. The whole tribe repair to the top of an hill, at one place their is a gradual slope a small distance, & then it desends about twenty-five feet in an almost perpendicular direction, at the bottom of which is a quagmire which is about ten feet in length. & the soft mud is about three feet deep. At each end the ground is soft, but not miry. Down this declivity twenty pair of very suple & sprightly young men & women are to desend. If by their dexterity & agility they escape the quagmire, a piece of wampum will be the reward of each fortunate champion; but if they plunge in their recompense will be the ridicule of the multitude. In making this desent, six young women & five young men by a surprising dexterity in whirling their bodies as they desended, cleared themselves from the quagmire. The rest as their turn came, plunged in & came out most wofully muded to the great diversion of the Spectators. The incident which excited the most meriment, hapned when the last pair desended, by an unlucky spring to clear himself from the quagmire he bro't his body alongside of the declivity & roled his whole length into the midst of the quagmire, where he lay his whole length in an horizontal position on his back neither heels nor head up, but horizontally, soft & easy, but alas, when one unlucky event happens another follows close on its heals. the fair-plump corpulent damsel his affectionate sweetheart came instantly sliding with great velocity. She saw the woful position of here beloved. She wished him no harm, she raised her feet, this bro't the center of gravity directly over the center of his head, here she rested a moment, his head sunk, she sunk after him, his heels kicked against the wind like Jeshuran waxed fat, but not a word from his lips, but his ideas came in quick succession, tho't he, what a disgrace to die here in the mud under the pressure of my sweetheart, however his time for such reflections were short, the tender hearted maid collecting all her agility in one effort, dismounted & found herself on dry land in an instant, not a moment to be lost. She seized her lover by one leg, & draged him from the mud, a curious figure extending about six feet six inches on the ground, all besmeared from head to foot, spitting, puffing, panting & struggling for breath. Poor man, the whole multitude laughing at thy calamity, shouting ridiculing, none to give thee consolation but thy loving and sympathetic partner in misfortune.

Upon my soul, exclaims Droll Tom, Stern foremost.

That bouncing Lass ought to have the highest prize for draging her ship from the mud. She was cleaning the filth from his face.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

BY ELDER D. H. BAYS.

CHAPTER XIII.

In view of the foregoing facts we ask the candid reader to reflect a moment, and then ask himself if the evidence does not confirm the view herein presented. Does it not appear conclusive that Jesus, as "Lord of the Sabbath," had authorized the change of the Sabbath from the seventh, to the first day of the week?

Otherwise, why do we find him to meet with his disciples on the first day of the week, and never on the seventh? Why did the apostle not meet with the churches on the original Sabbath instead of Sunday, the Christian Sabbath? The reasons are obvious; the "Lord of the Sabbath" had authorized the change.

But, says the objector, "The Lord sanctified the seventh of the week, and therefore it must continue to be the Sabbath." Not so fast, please. Are all days which have been sanctified, or made "holy" under the law, to be perpetuated by virtue of their being "holy"? If so, the passover, and a number of other Jewish festivals, must be perpetuated. The mere fact that God at one time set apart the seventh-day of the week as a rest-day for Israel does not argue that such day must be perpetuated for all time to come. Nor does it follow that no other day can be set apart for similar purposes in the future, to be observed by people of another age. Besides this, we wish, in this connection, to call attention to the fact that it was the Sabbath, and not the Jewish seventh day of the week, that the Lord sanctified:

"For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it."—Ex. 20: 11.

God "rested" on the seventh day of the creation, not the Jewish seventh day of the week. We are of opinion that few men, in the face of the revelations of modern science, will undertake to maintain the old exploded idea, that the world was created in six literal days of twenty-four hours each. And then, God only blessed that particular seventh day upon which he rested, and not every succeeding one.

The seventh day which was first observed by the Israelites, as a Sabbath was the seventh after the manna had fallen six. No man has ever yet been able to show, so far as our observation extends, that this was the recurrence, in regular order, of the seventh day from creation. This, as we have already shown, was Israel's first Seventh-day Sabbath. This particular day was given them as a Sabbath, because the Lord, on that day, had brought them out of Egypt "through a mighty hand, and a stretched out arm."

"Therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."—Deut. 5: 15.

This day was given to the house of Israel as "a sign," (Ex. 31: 17) or memorial of God's goodness and power, manifested in their deliverance from the bondage of Egypt. And because of this remarkable event, and to perpetuate the memory of that day, the Lord sanctified it—set it apart to the Israelites, as a Sabbath-day. Upon this now "holy" day they were to rest from all their labors, and worldly cares, and in the devotions of the day recall the mercy, the goodness and power of that God who had so miraculously delivered them from bondage.

If the deliverance of a few thousand souls from human bondage was worthy to be thus commemorated, how much more fitting it will be to commemorate the day upon which the plan of redemption, for the entire race of mankind, from "the bondage of sin" was completed.

This day was commemorated by both Christ and his apostles; and I wish now to remove any lingering doubt, if there be any, as the sanctity of the Christian Sabbath.

If God sanctified the seventh day of the first creation, then Sunday, the first day of the new creation, was also sanctifed in the fullest sense of that term. Paul, referring to the "rest that remains to the people of God," says:

"For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day in this wise: And God did rest the seventh day from all his works."—Heb. 4: 4.

Then referring to Christ as having entered into his rest, he adds:

"For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works as God did from his."—Heb. 4: 10.

Please be careful to observe here that Christ "ceased from his own works, as God did from his." How did God cease from his works? Answer.—By sanctifying the day upon which he "ended," or completed his works, and entered into his rest. (See Gen. 2: 2, 3).

Jesus "ended his work" for the redemption of fallen man on the first day of the week; for the divine plan was not completed until the Redeemer had triumphed over "the last enemy," which is "death." Hence, he "sanctified—set apart to a holy, or religious use"—(Webster) the day upon which he "ended" his work, and entered into his rest, namely the first day of the week, the Christian Sabbath. Otherwise he could not have "ceased from his own work as God did from his."

The Christian Sabbath then is sanctified in the same sense with the seventh day of creation, or the seventh day of the week, under the Jewish law.

That both Christ and the Apostles, as well as the first Christians, observed Sunday as a holy day, or weekly Sabbath of rest, we think has been clearly shown from both their precepts and their examples,

CHAPTER XIV.

I have endeavored thus far to treat this subject from a strictly Scriptural point of view, having never once referred to authorities upon the many intricate questions which incidentally arose. In order that they may be examined by those interested, we here present a few extracts from the early fathers, and authentic historians.

We have said that the law which was promulgated from Horeb was peculiar to the Jews only, and was superceded by Christ and the new covenant. Upon this point, Justin Martyr, who was beheaded at Rome, A. D. 165, in his dialogue with Trypho (a Jew), Cambridge Edition, pages 37-41, says:-

"Moreover, that precept of circumcision which positively commands you to circumcise male infants on the eighth day, was a type of that true circumcision by which we are circumcised from sin and error, through him who rose again from the dead on the first day of the week, namely, Jesus Christ our Lord, for the first day of the week is the first of all the days; but when all the days of the week are gone regularly round again in their course, it is called the eighth, and yet still continues to be, as it really is, the first."—p. 37. "Is there any objection, gentlemen, that you have to make against us, besides this, viz: that we do not live acording to the law; that we are not circumcised as your ancestors were; nor observe the Sabbath as you do?"—p. 38.

"There never was, Trypho, said I, from all eternity, nor ever will be any other God besides him who created the universe, and placed it in such beautiful order. We do not believe either our or your God to be any other than the same that brought up your fathers out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand and outstretched arm. Nor do we trust in any other (for there is no other) than him, in whom you also trust, viz: the God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob. But we trust not in him through Moses, or the law; for then there would be no difference between us and you. But now, for I have read, Trypho, that there was to be a new law, and a covenant of greater and much more extensive power and authority than any other; which covenant now all that desire to obtain a blessed inheritance must observe. For the law which was promulgated from Horeb is now waxen old and was peculiar to you only; but this new covenant extends to the whole race of mankind. And as a subsequent law repeals that which was made before it, in like manner does the new covenant disannul the old. But a new and everlasting law is given to us, namely, Christ, and a faithful covenant; after which no other law, precept, or command shall be given."—p. 40, 41.

Justin Martyr, in the views expressed in the foregoing extract, is in perfect harmony with those of the Apostle Paul, already cited, namely, the old covenant promulgated from Horeb had been repealed, disannuled, by the new.

The same Father referring to the first day of the week as the Christian Sabbath, says:—"In every eucharistical sacrifice we bless the Maker of all things, through his son Jesus Christ, and through the Holy Spirit; and upon the day called Sunday*, all that live either in city or country meet together at the same place.

Upon Sunday we all assemble, that being the first day in which God set himself to work upon the dark void, in order to make the world, and in which Jesus Christ our Savior rose again from the dead; for the day before Saturday (or Saturn), he was crucified, and the day after which is Sunday, he appeared to his apostles and disciples, and taught them what I have now proposed to your consideration."—Agologies of Justin Martyr and Tertullian, translated by Wm. Reeves. p. 123–127. Eusebius, in his Ecclesiastical History, Eusebius, in his Ecclesiastical History, speaking of the Ebionites and their practices, says:—"They also observe the Sabbath and other dicipline of the Jews just like them, but on the other hand, they also celebrate the Lord's day very much like us, in commemoration of his resurrection."—p. 159.

Referring to an epistle to the Romans, which is ascribed to Dyonisius, and addressed to Soter, Bishop of Rome, Eusebius further says:—"In this same letter he mentions that of Clement to the Corinthians, showing that it was the practice to read it in the churches, even from the earliest times. 'To-day,' says he, 'we have passed the Lord's holy day, in which we have read your epistle. In reading which we shall always have our minds stored with admonition, as we shall also from that written to us before by Clement."—p. 160.

Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, who died A. D. 101, and who was contemporaneous with the Apostle John, thus familiarly speaks of the Lord's day:—"Let us not keep the Sabbath in the Jewish manner, in sloth and idleness; for it is written that he that will not labor shall not eat, and in the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat thy bread. But let us keep it after a spiritual fashion, not in bodily ease, but in the study of the law: not eating meats drest yesterday, or drinking lukewarm drinks, or walking out a limited space, or settling our delights, as they did, or dancing; but in the contemplation of of the works of God. And after we have so kept the Sabbath, let every one that loveth Christ keep the Lord's day festival, the resurrection day, the Queen and Empress of all days; in which our life was raised again, and death was overcome by our Lord and Savior."— Heylyn's History of the Sabbath, p.

414, 415. The following is taken from Heylyn's History of the Sabbath, published in London, Eng., A. D. 1681:—"There is (saith Jerome), no sermon of the apostles, either delivered by epistle or by word of mouth, wherein he labors not to prove that the burdens of the law are now laid away; that all those things which were before in types and figures, namely: the Sabbath, circumcision, the new moons, and three solemn festivals, did cease upon the preaching of the gos-pel. And cease it did upon the preaching of the gospel, insensibly and by degrees, as before we said; not being afterward observed as it had been formerly, or counted any necessary part of God's public worship. Only some use was made thereof for the enlargment of God's church, by reason that the people had been accustomed to meet together on that day, for the performance of religious and spiritual duties. This made it more regarded than it would have been, especially in the eastern parts of Greece and Asia, where the provincial Jews were somewhat thick dispersed; and being a great accession to the gospel, could not so suddenly forsake their ancient customs. Yet so, that the first day of the week began to grow into some credit toward the ending of this age; especially after the final desolation of Jerusalem and the Temple, which happened Anno 72 of Christ's nativity. So that the religious observation of this day beginning in the age of the apostles, no doubt with their approbation and authority, and since continuing in the same respect for so many ages, may be very well accounted among those apostolical traditions, which have been universally received in the church of God."—Hist. of Sabbath, p. 411

From Mosheim's Church History, by Maclaine, Cincinnatti Ed., 1863, we quote the following:—"There are, notwithstanding certain laws whose authority and obligations were universal and indespensible among Christians; and of these we shall here give a brief account.

"All Christians were unanimous in setting apart the first day of the week, on which the triumphant Savior arose from the dead, for the solemn celebration of public worship. This pious custom, which was derived from the example of the church of Jerusalem, was founded upon the express appointment of the apostles, who consecrated that day to the same sacred purpose, and was observed universally throughout the Christian churches, as appears from the united testimony of the most credible writers."—p. 27.

"The first Christians assembled for the purpose of divine worship, in private houses, in caves, and in vaults where the dead were buried. Their meetings were on the first day of the week; and in some places, they assembled also on the seventh, which was celebrated by the Jews. Many also observed the fourth day of the week, on which Christ was betrayed; and the sixth, which was the day of his crucifixion. The hour of the day appointed for holding these religious assemblies varied according to the different times and circumstances of the church; but it was generally in the evening after sunset, or in the morning before the dawn. During these sacred meetings, prayers were repeated; the ^{*} NOTE BY WM. REEVES.—"Upon the day called Sunday."—It was called Sunday by Justin and Tertullian, because it happened upon that day of the week which by the heathens was dedicated to the sun, and therefore as being best known to them by that name, the Fathers commonly made use of in their Apologies to the heathen Emperors; but the more proper and prevailing name was kuriakes, or the Lord's Day, as it is called by St. John himself (Rey. 1: 10).

Holy Scriptures were publicly read; short discourses upon the duties of Christians, were addressed to the people; hymns were sung; and a portion of the oblation, presented by the faithful was employed in the celebration of the Lord's Supper and the feast of charity."—Ibid, p. 48.

It is alleged by those holding the seventh day to be the "Bible Sabbath," that the Emperor Constantine, in a royal edict, "changed the Sabbath"; and "elevated Sunday to the throne of the Roman empire;" and Sylvester, who was Pope, or Bishop of Rome while Constantine was Emperor, had faithfully "acted his part in transforming the festival of the sun into a Christian institution."

Had this objection any foundation in fact, it would go far to establish the claim made for the Seventh-day Sabbath. But it has not, as we shall now proceed to

It is a well known fact that the heathen festival of Sunday existed long before Constantine's day, and is even more ancient than the Christian religion itself. Upon this point J. N. Andrews, a seventh-day writer of eminence, in his "History of the Sabbath," beginning on page 224 admits it, and says:-"The festival of Sunday is more ancient than the Christian religion; its origin being lost in remote antiquity."

The day is so called from the circumstance of its being set apart as a sacred day by the heathen of ancient times, in honor of their God—the sun.

Constantine was Emperor of heathen Rome, at the time he made this edict, and was himself a heathen, having not yet professed Christianity, till some two years later. It could not, therefore, have been made in the interest of the church.

This view is amply sustained in the fol-lowing extract:—"Yet we have the most indubitable proof that this law was a heathen enactment; that it was put forth in favor of Sunday as a heathen institution and not as a Christian festival; and that Constantine himself not only did not profess the character of a Christian, but was at that time in truth a heathen. It is to be observed that Constantine did not designate the day which he commanded men to keep as Lord's day, Christian Sabbath, or the day of Christ's resurrection; nor does he assign any reason for its observance which would indicate it as a Christian festival. On the contrary, he designates the ancient heathen festival of the sun in language that can not be mistaken." * * * "That Constantine himself was a heathen at the time these edicts were issued, is shown not only by the nature of the edicts themselves, but by the fact that his nominal conversion to Christianity is placed by Mosheim two years after his Sunday law." Andrews' Hist. of the Sabbath, p.

Some eminent Seventh-day writers and speakers maintain that "a law enacted in support of a heathen institution, after a few years came to be considered a Christian ordinance." This view can not be considered, under the light of all the facts in the case, other than a distortion of the indubitable facts of history, as the most credible writers abundantly attest. We have only to cite such Fathers as Barnabas, companion of the Apostle Paul; Ignatius and Theophilus, Bishops of Antioch; Ireneus, Bishop of Lyons; Justin Martyr and Tertullian; all of whom lived and wrote anterior to Constantine's day, to show that the first day was held in great veneration by the early Christians, and upon which day they met for the purposes of divine worship. Hence, the statement that Constantine's "Sunday law" "came to be considered as a Christian ordinance," a few years after it was proclaimed, has no foundation in fact.

The Council of Nice, held some four years after Constantine's famous edict, does not seem to have taken any action whatever respecting this question. merely settled, among other questions, the disputed point as to the time of celebrating the Easter festival, which was in favor of the customs of the western churches.

Yet adhering to his original views respecting Sunday worship, and finding them in no way inconsistent with the laws and usages of the church, he continued to maintain the sanctity of the day after he became a nominal Christian. And so of this matter Mosheim further says:-"The first day of the week, which was the ordinary and stated time for the public assemblies of Christians, was in consequence of a peculiar law enacted by Constantine, observed with greater solemnity than it had formerly been."-Mosheim's Church History, p. 98.

Numerous other authorities might be cited, but we think it quite unnecessary to multiply testimonies upon this point, for enough has been adduced to show that the positions assumed upon the question of the Sabbath, and the law governing it, are in perfect harmony with the Scriptures, with the early Fathers, and with the most accredited historians.

CHAPTER XV.

I shall now close with a brief summary of the argument presented in the foregoing

First.—We have shown that the observance of the Seventh-day Sabbath had its origin in the days of types and shadows, when Israel was delivered from the bondage of Egypt; and that previously to this time, from Adam to Moses, a period of 2,500 years, there was no known law commanding the observance of a Sabbath. Second.—That the Sabbath was first given to the children of Israel, in the wilderness of Sin, in north-western Arabia, on the twenty-second day of the third month of the Jewish year; and that this law like that of circumcision and the passover, was for the Israelites only, and was to cease when the "promised seed," the "Shiloh," should come. (See Gen. 49: 10).

Third.—The law promulged from Horeb, that is the ten commandments, and in fact the whole Jewish system was to "wax old" and pass away, to give place to "the new and everlasting covenant.

Fourth.—We have shown by indubitable proofs that the apostles and early Christian Fathers understood and declared the law, with all its appointments and institutions, including the Seventh-day Sabbath to have been annulled and superceded by the higher law of Christ, because of "the weakness and unprofitableness thereof," and its inability to "make the comers thereunto perfect."

Fifth.—While the Decalogue, with all "statutes and judgments" based upon it as the organic law of Israel was "abolished," yet there was transplanted from it into the Christian dispensation everything necessary to restrain men from all sinful indulgences and evil practices, preparatory to a higher state of life and being.

Sixth.—We have, in the next place, shown that it was not always necessary in order to keep the Sabbath to have a command for it; otherwise the human family from Adam to Moses kept no Sabbath for the reason that no known command was ever given till about 1,491 years before Christ.

Seventh.—That the types and shadows of the law pointed with unmistakable exactness to the change of the Sabbath day as it occurred in the days of the apostles.

Eighth.—While there is no direct command in the New Testament to observe the first day of the week, the same is equally true of the seventh. There is no recorded command for either; we shall therefore be fully justified and find ample safety in imitating the example of the apostles and early Christians.

Ninth.—We find the examples of both Christ (after his resurrection) and the apostles to be in favor of the First-day Sabbath; Christ meeting with his disciples on the first day of the week, and never on the seventh; while the apostles in their ministry met with the churches for divine worship on the first day of the week, but never on the seventh.

Tenth.—That the First-day Sabbath was sanctified; for in it Christ completed (in his resurrection) the new creation, and rested from his works "as God did from his."

We leave the subject with the reader, confident of the correctness of the position we have taken, and commend him to the word of God as the man of his counsel, assuring him that its light if not obscured by the prejudices and traditions of our fathers, aided by the Holy Spirit's influence, will guide him into all truth.

In the language of the Apostle Paul, "Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind" (Rom. 14: 5), and we feel assured that anybody who will take the pains to carefully examine the question will become satisfied that, since old things are passed away, and "all things are become new," the old Sabbath passed away with the old covedant that gave it birth, and has been superceded by the new covenant, and the first day of the week as the Christian Sabbath.

PERSIA, Iowa, May 27th, 1884.

AFTER closing this very excellent article, it seems appropriate to add, that Joseph the Seer, who by divine guidance founded this last dispensation, evidently understood that our Sunday is now the Lord's Sabbath—rest day—or "Lord's day;" for in his "history," (see Times and Seasons, vol. 5: p. 448, 450-1; also Mill. Star, vol. 14: p. 72, 75, 76, of "Supplement"), he says:—"The first Sabbath after our arrival in Jackson County, Bro. W. W. Phelps preached to a western audience;" and on the 7th of August, (1831), probably just one week afterward, he received and gave the following in a revelation to the church, (see Doc. & Cov. sec. 59), which says:

"Wherefore I give unto them a commandment, saying thus: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy might, mind and strength; and in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve him. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Thou shalt not steal; neither commit adultery, nor kill, nor do anything like unto it. Thou shalt thank the Lord thy God in all things. Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in righteousness; even that of a broken heart and a contrite spirit. And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is the day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments, unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord.

"And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words, that thy joy may be full. Veri'y this is fasting and prayer; or, in other words, rejoicing and prayer."

We reiterate, that it is clear both the Seer and the church understood and honored Sunday as the "Lord's day," the Lord's "Sabbath."—Editor.

Conference Minutes.

PITTSBURG.

This district conference convened at Benwood, West Va., July 25th and 26th, 1885. G. T. Griffiths president, F. J. Reese and A. M. Teagarden secretaries. Branch Reports.-Pittsburg 127; 21 baptized, 2 expelled, 1 died. Lampsville 24; 3 expelled. Fairview 30; 5 baptized. Mansfield 12. Wheeling 29; 3 baptized. Blake's Mills 15. Church Hill sent back for correction. Bishop's Agent, Frank Criley, reported; received since last report $232.93; expenditures $230.62. Balance on hand $2.31. Josiah Ells, G. T. Griffiths (baptized 39), M. S. Sutton, Jacob Reese (baptized 2), D. J. Jones, J. Brown, W. H. Garrett, R. S. Salyards reported. Monroe Branch was declared disorganized, and its members requested to attach their names to the nearest branches. Pittsburg Branch recommends Ephraim Thomas to district conference for ordination as an Elder. R. S. Salyards was recommended to W. H. Kelley and the Bishopric for a mission in this district. We request all Elders that have labored heretofore, and who may be able, to labor in the district as circumstances permit. G. T. Griffiths was continued as district president for the next six months, Frank Criley Bishop's Agent, T. J. Reese secretary, A. M. Teagarden, assistant. The president to appoint grove meetings to be held at Fairview, Lampsville, or wherever he may see fit. Preaching in the evening by G. T. Griffiths; Sunday morning prayer meeting, M. S. Sutton and F. J. Reese in charge; preaching in the forenoon by Josiah Ells; Saints' social meeting in the afternoon, G. T. Griffiths and F. Criley in charge; evening preaching by James Craig, and ordinance of baptism by G. T. Griffiths. Adjourned to meet at Pittsburg, Pa., January 30th and 31st, 1886.

TEXAS CENTRAL.

This district conference convened with the Texas Central Branch, June 20th and 21st, 1885; H. C. Smith in the chair. A. J. Cato, secretary pro tem. Branch Reports:—Texas Central 28, No report from Elmwood, Cheesland, Live Oak and Elkhart. Elders J. W. Bryan, Elias Land, H. C. Smith (baptized 3), and A. J. Cato; Priests S. R. Hay and Ed. White, and Teacher J. L. Dotson, reported. Bishop's Agents report read and accepted. On hand last report $9.34. Received since $57.35; paid out $55.50; on hand $11.19. The committee appointed to solicit means to defray delegates expenses was continued, and notified to report to the next conference. Bro. Ed. White asked conference to consider the welfare of his race, and give him more power; and on motion the matter was referred to the branch of which he is a member. Bro. Land was sustained as secretary of the district. The Bishop's Agent was sustained. Preaching in the morning by A. J. Cato. Sunday morning, prayer meeting in charge of H. C. Smith; preaching in the forenoon by I. N. Roberts, assisted by S. R. Hay; afternoon prayer meeting in charge of A. I. Cato; preaching in the evening by H. C. Smith, assisted by I. N. Roberts. H. L. Thompson was chosen to preside over the district.

CENTRAL MISSOURI.

Conference of the above district convened at Carrolton Branch, in Sr. Blodgett's house, July 4th, 1885. The president being absent on account of the sickness of his wife, Bro. David Powell was chosen president pro tem, E. B. Mullin, clerk. Report of Branches.—Alma 35, one expelled. Carrollton 37, one death. Waconda 41, one death. Elders Westwood, Miller, Herke, Trotter, Powell, Cato, Kizer, and Teacher Hawkins reported. Hereafter all Elders, Priests and Teachers, whether present or absent to report in writing. The president of branches to visit all Elders that were not present or reported at conference, and why they treated the conference with contempt. Elder D. A. Frampton reported by letter; he had baptized six, had preached several times; wanted to do good. Meetings were given out for evening and on Sunday at the City Hall. Joseph B. Belcher was sustained as president, Mart Trotter as clerk.

ADDRESSES.

Pres. Joseph Smith, Box 307, Salt Lake City, Utah. Elder Joseph Luff, Box 307, Salt Lake City, Utah. Elder Peter Anderson, Editor of "Sandhedens Banner," Box 1123, Salt Lake City. Utah. John T. Davis, Box 240 Pittsburg, Crawford Co., Kansas. M. H. Bond, 50 Waverly street, Providence, R. I. Presiding Bishop: G. A. Blakeslee, Galien, Mich. No Credit for moneys received on subscription will appear on the Colored Address Label of the Herald and Hope for this issue, as no changes have been made, except in case of persons desiring a change in P.O. address.

GROVE MEETINGS.

Grove meetings will be held at Hunter, Belmont County, Ohio, on the 21st, 22d and 23d of August. The friends will be met at Belmont station, Ohio. Also similar meetings will be held at Glen Easton, W. Va., the 28th, 29th and 30th of August. Friends will be met at the Station. Elders J. Ells J. Craig, M. S. Sutton, G. T. Griffiths, and probably W. H. Kelley, will be the preachers. A large company is expected.

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

TWO DAY'S MEETING.

There will be a two day's meeting held at Brown City, Sanilac Co., Michigan, on first Saturday and Sunday of September, 1885. We want all the Saints to come, and bring the Spirit of the Lord with them, that we may have a glorious time. We wish brethren J. J. Cornish and Arthur Leverton, and as many of the ministry as can, to come.

MAPLE VALLEY BRANCH.

NOTIFIED TO APPEAR.

Whereas Loyal Kittle and James C. Blackmore, members of the Baddertown Branch, Ontario, have left for parts unknown, and as they have passed beyond the reach of the efficers of said branch; therefore, they are hereby notified to appear before said branch, or write by letter, and make proper restitution on or before 30th of September, 1885, or their names will be dropped from the branch record.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The next quarterly conference of the Texas Central District will be held with the Elmwood Branch, in Bell county, Texas, on the 17th and 18th of October, 1885. Come one, come all, and let us have a good time.

H. L. THOMPSON, Dist. Pres., ELIAS LAND, clerk.

The next conference of the Des Moines District will convene September 4th, at half-past seven o'clock for preaching at the Colwell School-house, in the Des Moines Valley Branch, conference holding over 5th and 6th. Parties coming from Des Moines will ticket to Farnsworth on the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railroad, and be met by Brn. A. Freel, S. Longbottom and J. Boyer. Parties coming from the east will ticket to Runnell, on the same railway, and be met by Brn. John and William Park. State Fair rates can be had to and from Des Moines. Wabash train leaves Des Moines at about two p. m.

W. C. NIRK, Dist. Pres.

BORN.

WILSON.—At Nebraska City, Neb., November 3d, 1884, to Bro. George W. and sister Levina E. Wilson, a son; blessed August 3d, 1885, by Robt. M. Elvin, and named George Alfrey.

DIED

SMITH.—Near Burnt Fork, Wyoming Territory, July 28th, 1885, from being shot by an assassin, Thomas, youngest son of Bro. William P. Smith, of Union Fort, Utah, aged 30 years, 3 months and 22 days; born at Union Fort, Utah, April 7th, 1855. He was an excellent young man, and leaves a wife and five children to mourn him, besides his father's immediate family. Funeral services were held in an orchard near the school-house of the ward, in which Bishop Rawlins and Phillips assisted. Prayer by Elder Joseph Luff; sermon by Elder Joseph Smith, July 31st, 1885.

Hogson.—At the residence of her son-in-law, Bro. Albert Page, in San Benito, Cal., Sr. Kezia Hodgson, of old age. She was born in Amherst, Cumberland County, Nova Scotia, April 7th, 1793, and peacefully passed away without a struggle July 11th, 1885, aged 92 years, 3 months and 4 days. She was a consistent member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church for over sixty years, but believed that immersion was the scriptural mode of baptism. She came to California in 1869, and in 1873 heard the restored gospel preached for the first time by Elder J. R. Cook, with whom she had many arguments, she being well versed in Scripture; but when convinced of the truth, being honest in heart, she obeyed, and was baptized and confirmed August, 1874, by Elder D. S. Mills. And although she was persecuted by word and by letter, and endured much sorrow on account of it, yet she rejoiced that even in her old age she had the privilige of being!baptized into the kingdom of Jesus Christ. She retained her memory remarkably, and two weeks before her death, at a praper and testimony meeting at our house, with a weak and trembling voice she bore a strong and faithful testimony to the cause she loved and the truth of the gospel, and said she was waiting to be called home. By her request, Bro. J. H. Lawn preached her funeral discourse, and then we laid her away to rest till the resurrection morn. She was mother to Sr. Page, and grandmother to Brn. Hiram and Eugene Holt. MARY PAGE.

McDowell.-Near Chagrin Falls, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, August 4th, 1885, Elder James Mc-Dowell, aged 84 years, 8 months, and 8 days; born in Pittsburg, Pa., November 27th, 1800; was baptized into Christ's Church in 1842, at same place, by, I think, Elder John E. Page, ordained an Elder by Elder Lyman Wight. He leaves an aged wife, three sons, and two daughters with many friends to mourn his departure. Notwithstanding he worshiped for a time with two minor factions, he always maintained, and retained his faith in the simplicity of the gospel of Christ. It was his almost daily theme. He spent many hundreds of dollars for the good of the work in early days; "feeding, clothing, and giving money" to many of the ministry, thus proving his discipleship for Christ. God blessed him with many spiritual blessings, such as spiritual visions, dreams, tongues, interpretation, prophecy, discerning of spirits, healing, etc. Many times has his face beamed with light when exercising the oral gifts. He preached both in the first and Reorganized Church, baptizing several, organizing some branches. At some of his baptisms the marvelous power of God has been manifested. He died firm in the faith. Truly he is asleep in Jesus. J. F. McD.

Duncan.—Near Corning, Iowa, February 2d3, 1885, of asthma, Sr. Margaret Duncan, formerly of Buffalo Prairie, Illinois, aged 56 years and 5 days.

CURRIE.—Near Stockdale, Texas, May 5th, 1885, of heart disease, dropsy, and abscess on left lung, sister Sarah L. Currie. Deceased was born September 17th, 1842, in Hot Springs county, Arkansas. Married to Elder J. A. Currie, August 7th, 1856, in Madison county, Texas. She was a Baptist during early life, but was among the first to obey the gospel when first preached here by the Latter Day Saints. Was baptized and confirmed by Elder D. H. Bays, July 7th, 1878. She has been sickly for twenty-three years; and often found relief when administered to; died strong in the faith. On being asked if she had any advice to leave for her boys or husband, she said: "None; I am satisfied with their condition." She was conscious till death, and gave the family the farewell kiss before she died. She leaves an aged husband, two sons, a little orphan girl, one sister, and other relatives to mourn their loss. The power of God was manifested in the last moment, and gave us evidence that "all is well."

'Twas hard to give that parting kiss,
But oh how sweet to believe
She gained a place where Jesus is,
Where sufferers are relieved.
We can not stay the hand of death,
He's taking "one by one;"
Though grief it gives, 'tis much the best
To say, "Thy will be done."
'Twill not be long till Jesus comes
To cleanse this world of sin,
To be the Saints' eternal home,
And then we'll meet again.

THE FAMILY.

THE Saints, especially, will be pleased to learn what kind of sermons Pres. Joseph Smith preaches in Utah. Others of our readers will be at least interested to know how he meets the issues at stake among the Utah Mormons, therefore we reproduce with pleasure the Salt Lake Thibune's report of a sermon delivered by him in the Opera House in Salt Lake City, the evening of the 19th ult.:

THE LATTER DAY TRUTH,
ACCORDING TO JOSEPH SMITH OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH.

President Joseph Smith of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, delivered a discourse in the Opera House, Sunday evening, to a fair sized audience. He took for his theme the [popular] idea that all classes of believers are saved by sincerity of belief, whatever form of religion they espouse. He could not question the honesty or sincerity of the Mohammedan, the heathen or the members of the different Christian denominations. Personal devotion did not necessarily indicate the truth of the position, for a man might be honest in holding an error.

The text was found in John 17 chap., 17 verse: "Sanctify them by Thy truth, Thy word is truth." The speaker gave his idea of the truth of the gospel as preached by Joseph Smith, and showed there could be no addition to it. Faith in the Scriptures as containing the word of God was enjoined as part of the gospel and a proper exercise of faith would lead a person to repentance. Gospel repentance was not so much an expression of sorrow by tears and penance as it was a reparation for all that was done, where reparation could be made. Baptism was essential to salvation, as shown by the Scriptures and by the example of Christ, who was baptized by John.

Laying on of hands for the giving of spiritual power is as much for the flock as it is for the shepherd. While our religious contemporaries deny to us the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, they practice it for the ordination of the ministry and the setting apart to a holy life and confessing the spirit, by which temptation might be avoided. It was reasonable to believe that Christ intended to grant as much protection to the sheep as to the shepherd. Such protection was sometimes as necessary for the sheep against the shepherd, as for the shepherd against any other temptation.

The office-work of the Spirit was the testifying that Jesus was the Christ. Besides this, it was for the granting of special gifts to members of the church, such as wisdom, knowledge, faith, helps and governments. The better gifts were those named first-wisdom, knowledge and faith. In the present crisis, the gift of wisdom was very much needed in the church. It was highly necessary that it be sought for, seized and exercised, to avert trouble. In its absence, a conflict might be precipitated that would only end in disaster and ruin. There was a distinction between knowledge and wisdom. Wisdom was the right use of knowledge. The gift of government was also needed, in order that a man might govern himself, his family, and those over whom he presided. Such a gift ought to be had by every presiding officer in Utah.

The character would be the criterion of judgment in the day of accounting and the same rule would be applied to the priesthood and the people. He who obeyed was to be saved by his obedience. No power on earth or in hell could deprive him of his reward if he continued faithful in obedience in the Spirit received through the administration of the gospel.

The Saints were to be judged by the truth—by the word of God as found in the Scriptures, the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. It was by the truth men were to be saved. It was the speaker's mission to call the Latter Day Saints back to their allegiance to the truth, to their devotion to Christ as their Savior, who counseled obedience to the laws, and himself paid tribute to Cæsar because it was lawful.

The Reorganized Church was teaching from Maine to New Mexico from Washington Territory to Florida, finding nothing in their religion incompatible with the laws of the land where they lived; finding no demand of the law of the land requiring a disobedience of the law of God.

"EVERY branch that beareth fruit, He purgeth, that it may bring forth more fruit."

This explains a great many of the trials and temptations that the child of God is made to bear.

When cast down by sin and sorrow, wondering "why?" and "how long?" these things must be, it is comforting to know that "whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth," and we are led to believe that our Father sees some life in us, and that by "purging" we may grow stronger and more fruitful in good works.

He does not cut off the branch, but "prunes" it. "None but the unfruitful are taken away.

CURE FOR SORE THROAT.

Everybody has a cure for sore throat, but simple remedies appear to be most effectual. Salt and water is used by many as a gargle, but a little alum and honey dissolved in sage tea is better. An application of cloths wrung out of hot water and applied to the neck, changing as often as they begin to cool, has the most potency for removing inflammation of anything we ever tried. It should be kept up for a number of hours; during the evening is usually the most convenient time for applying this remedy.

"WHAT an amount of self-righteousness there is in the heart! If the Israelites had not been so very bad, then men could understand why God might see no iniquity in them. If men are not quite so bad, then God may have mercy. Thus men make God a Savior of the not very bad ones-forgetting that the only title which any soul can ever have to the mercy of God and its badness. Yes, our sin is our title to the Savior -nothing else. Not our goodness, but our badness; not our comparative freeness from great sins, but our aggravated guilt. This is your title, this your qualification, this your claim on a Savior's grace, and, coming thus, you are ever welcome to Him.—Whitfield.

INTOLERANCE.

THE Elders of the Reorganized Church are not eligible to the pulpits of the Utah Mormon Church, in Utah; and we presume that the interdiction extends to other localities where said Mormon Church controls the places of worship.

In Provo, Utah, we had the use of the First Ward School-house by courtesy of Mr. Halliday, one of the trustees, and by consent of Bishop A.O. Smoot. In Pleasant Grove, we had the school-house for one night; the further use of it was denied.

Our object in naming these occasions is this: We are anxious that houses controlled by members of the Reorganized Church shall be open for use to those who may request the courtesy, upon the broad principle of toleration; and upon the further principle, that he who has the truth has nothing to fear from the attack of another, who may claim to be in possession of a truth, or the truth.

That our Utah co-religionists are fearful of an interchange of views before the people seems apparent, and that they do not wish the people to hear the open attack that the Reorganized Church has to make on the system of marriage so tenaciously held to by them, is quite evident. To prevent this the people are warned to keep clear of the Josephites, as they are "apostates."

We sincerely hope that the brethren of the Reorganization will take a lesson in courtesy and fair dealing from the course pursued toward the Elders in Utah; and views is asked for, let it be granted in all cases where the Elder demanding it is a representative man, though he may be of the Utah way of thought. Retaliation is unbecoming the true follower of Christ. It is better to endure ostracism and intolerance than to be guilty of visiting them on others.

We should be sincerely sorry to hear that a congregation of Saints of the Reorganized Church had been guilty of refusing the use of a place in which preaching was had by them to representatives of other faiths than their own; or to learn that such representatives had received ill treatment of any sort, or any discourtesy, from officers of the church when in charge, or otherwise. Challenge and invite them to an interchange of views, if you will, but be kind and gentlemanly in doing it. Do not be cowardly, but at the same time avoid display, rashness, asperity of temper, or a haughty, overbearing dogmatism. Intolerance is the vice of bigotry.

CANNON'S GALL.

THE extract below is from the Juvenile Instructor of the 1st instant, and is doubtless from the pen of George Q Cannon, its editor. His allusions to those who leave their church associations seems designed, first, to spitefully abuse their reputation; and, second, to warn others not to leave lest they get similar treatment—a sort of priestly bull-dosing.

When he stigmatizes dissenters the "offal and refuse" of their "healthy organization" which throws them "off as unclean and impure," he but follows a custom that was very common prior to 1871, and not infrequent since then in the rural districts of Utah. And when he imputes "blandishments and falsehoods" to President Joseph Smith, he but exhibits "the poison of asps" that is under his own tongue as all will know who are personally acquainted with President Smith's character. The latter has a reputation where he is known, both with the Church and others, which for integrity, moral purpose, and all that goes to make up a noble manhood, is without spot or suspicion. His fellow-Saints have no occasion to apologize where opportunity for the presentation of | for his false statements, exaggerations, dissimulations, mental reservations, nor any thing of the kind; and Mr. Cannon's slander will but recoil upon himself with all those who know the two men.

When Mr. Cannon says he and his like "cling to the rod of iron that leads to the tree of life as described in the vision of Lehi," he makes another monstrous mistake, for he and they have turned from that "rod of iron" and grasped a "strong cord" of the devil-one that is the very opposite of the Book of Mormon, Nauvoo Doctrine and Covenants, and the New Testament—namely, the polygamy revelation and priestcraft. President Smith, instead of seeking to increase the "horrors" of the Utah leaders and their followers, has always sought to lessen them and the danger of them, by pointing out their causes and the only and proper means of escape therefrom. This is all. The leper or the small pox patient, may with equal propriety abuse the faithful physician who seeks to save him and those around him, as for Mr. Cannon to malign the purposes and the work of President Joseph Smith in his efforts to save the Utah leaders, their followers, the Latter Day Saints everywhere, and society in general, from the errors and evils of Brighamism. Mr. Cannon complains of the presence of President Joseph Smith and his associates in Utah. Is not Utah in free America? Has not President Smith and his associates the right to be there, and to preach there? A wise physician will get near his patient, and then apply the proper remedies when and where needed.

When Mr. Cannon states that Joseph has sought to "blacken" himself (Cannon) and his co-religionists before the world, it is true in one sense, but not in another. He has simply sought to set forth faithfully what was the accepted doctrines and customs of the church up to 1844 as contained in the sacred books and public literature of the church. If this has blackened the character of Mr. Cannon and his fellows, then he and they will have to make the most of it. President Smith has in this matter done only his duty to all, as a man of God; and if his lance has penetrated the Brighamite harness, then the harness and those seeking security within it are only to be blamed. President Joseph Smith both by grace and by nature lives infinitely above the low level of a defamer, and has a better work to do than to asperse the motives or the labors of others, even if they do hold views adverse to him. No one ever heard him speak harshly or in any way evil of Mr. Cannon, or even Brigham Young, though he heartily opposes their pet doctrines and oppressive measures.

He did not go to Washington and urge stringent legislation against the Utah Mormons; but rather for the purpose of pointing the national authorities to the genuine faith of the church as set forth in the sacred records of the church; neither did he do all in his power to have the Edmunds Bill become a law; nor would he rejoice to see the Utah people broken up and destroyed; but he would rejoice to see them turn back to the original and pure faith as it was taught from 1830 to 1844, such as is plainly recorded in the books and papers of the church up to that date. He courts the friendship of no one only on the grounds of truth and righteousness; and he would esteem it an honor and a glory to be able to save those among the Saints and in the world from their errors, sins, and perils. He has not driven away from the gospel of Christ his father's followers, nor his own kindred. None of his father's family ever followed Brigham Young; none of his uncles or aunts ever followed him, nor did grandmother Smith; and only a few of his cousins went to Utah, and most of them under age and in the care of their mothers or step-mothers. And when Mr. Cannon says of Joseph, "By his life he has led them and the world to infer that he did not blame them for their cruelties to his father and people," his statement is as false as he intends it cruel, as all who know President Smith and his work will at once perceive.

While Joseph Smith has never claimed personal perfection for his father in all things, he has, nevertheless, labored late and early, by all fair and proper means, to relieve the reputation of his father and the Saints from the reproach and odium brought upon it by those "who privily" have brought in "damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them;" (substituting Adam as their God instead of Christ), and who have succeeded in getting many to "follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth" is "evil spoken of," This he has done, and is doing, while success attends his efforts and will continue to do so despite the malice and mendacity of his traducers. "Let the galled jade wince." Mr. Cannon says:

"We notice that Joseph Smith, who has been endeavoring for many years to destroy the work, of which his father, the great Prophet of this last dispensation was, in the hands of God, the founder, has come to this city. He doubtless has come with the hope to be successful in gathering up the disaffected and the faithless. He has thought it a good time to reach the people of this class, and thereby swell the number of his organigation. It is a strange business for any man to engage in—to be a scravenger in gathering up the offal and refuse-that which is thrown off as unclean and impure by a healthy organization, and especially so for one bearing his name. Yet this is precisely what he is here for. The whole organization with which he is connected is principally composed of apostates, men and women who at various times in the history of the church have followed pretenders who had no authority to lead, such as Rigdon, Strang, Page, and others. Seeing the Saints, as he supposed, surrounded by difficulties, he has come here ready to avail himself of any advantage that may offer and to seduce from the church all who will listen to his blandishments and falsehoods. If there are hypocrites and ungodly persons within our organization who will not repent, it is to be hoped that he will have influence enough to draw them off and to relieve us from their society and presence. Such persons as he, perform in this way a useful work for the church. The Lord overrules their acts for the accomplishment of His purposes, but this does not lessen their wickedness nor the condemnation that awaits them. True Latter Day Saints will not be affected by any such influence, but will cling to the iron rod that leads to the tree of life as described in the vision of Lehi.

"Nothing could better illustrate the disposition and character of this man and his associates than his and their presence in this Territory at the present time. They have never let an opportunity to injure us pass without seeking to improve it. When there has been a storm threatening us, they have sought to increase its horrors and render it more deadly in its effects. By misrepresentation and falsehood of the most malignant character they have sought to blacken us to the world and create hostile public opinion against us. Not content with this, he himself has gone to Washington and urged, with cruel and hateful purpose, the enactment against the people of Utah, of laws of the most oppressive. and destructive character. Others of his followers have done the same. They did all in their power to have the Edmunds bill become law. Now he comes here to reap, as he hopes, the fruits of their base conduct. He would rejoice to see us broken up and destroyed. Hoping that this may be the result of the present raid, he is here to pick up some more fragments to add to the patchwork and fragmentary body he already has. What an employment for his father's son! But what can be expected from a man who has courted the friendship of the people who murdered his father and drove away his father's followers and his own kindred! This he has done. By his life he has led them and the worldto infer that he did not blame them for their cruelties to his father and people. He has been apparently satisfied admitted to their society and to be hail fellow with them."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE hereby tender to Elder John Nicholson, of the Editorial staff of the Deseret News, Salt Lake City, Utah, our thanks for a copy of his work called "The Preceptor." It is a collection of proof texts from the Bible, arranged under topical heads; and intended as aids to young Elders, hence its title. Mr. Nicholson states in the News for August 4th, that he is indebted to Mr. Joseph Smith for a copy of the Braden and Kelley Debate. We beg to assure Elder Nicholson that the indebtedness is more than cancelled by the copy of the Preceptor, so kindly presented to us.

By late Minnesota papers sent us we learn that Elders J. C. Foss and H. L. Holt are active in their ministry at Pelican Rapids, and other points in that region.

The grove meetings at North Coon, Iowa, began June 16th, Elder W. W. Whiting presiding and N. H. Brogdon secretary, held four days and were largely attended. From the first an excellent spirit prevailed; the discourses were timely and able, and the testimonies interesting and profitable. The Lord met with the Saints in power, and the "signs" followed. Six persons were baptized, and a number of children blessed. Elders W. W. Whiting, C. Derry, J. F. McDowell, James Turner, John Rounds, B. Salisbury, Wm. Carroll, R. Montgomery and Jonas Chatburn took part in the ministrations. The sum of the results were largely on the side of good.

Bro. R. M. Elvin writing from Nebraska City the 12th instant, says he was called home by the illness of "Mother Hartwell," his wife's mother. Sr. Hartwell was one among the first to unite with the Reorganization near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and was always an active, ardent, helper in the church. We trust her life and good health may assured for years to come. Of church work he says: "Prospects are promising for good, and the calls ten fold more, than it is possible for us to fill. We are glad to hear of the good news from all parts of the vineyard."

Bro. J. C. Clapp is changing his residence, and hereafter should be addressed at Bozeman, Gallatin Co., Montana.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Ques.—Can any one hold office or membership in this Church of Christ, who believe and advocate Saturday to be the Christian Sabbath.

Ans.—Yes. Bro. Isaac Sheen, first editor of the HERALD, so held and so taught, and vet he wrought in harmony with the general authorities of the church. The church as a whole has now worshipped on the first day, commonly called the Lord's Day, for over fifty-five years, observing that day as a rest day, the day for oblations and sacrifices. No officer in the church can consistently antagonize the church by publicly teaching the Jewish Sabbath for Christian observance, denouncing the Church for not observing that day, no matter what his private convictions may be. If he has views to present on that topic he should present them in proper time and place. If he should make the subject a hobby, and present it in such times and in such fashion as to distract and disturb the unity and peace of the Saints, he does wrong. The Lord's Day has been designated by the spirit of revelation to the church as the day to be observed, and has indicated the manner of its observance; this is sufficient until such time as a change in the day shall be determined in the same way.

Q.—Is it lawful and right,—where there is an organized branch having an Elder, Priest, and Teacher,—for any other Elder or Priest, whether belonging to that branch or not, to baptize and confirm persons within that branch without the knowledge and consent of the presiding officers of the branch?

A.—No. It is disorderly and discourteous. The usages and rulings of the church forbid it. Nothing but extreme conditions could justify such a course.

2.—Has God ever given a revelation concerning the fourth commandment, or any of the ten commandments?

A.—He gave frequent revelations by the prophets, from Moses to the cross, in respect to all the ten commandments, notably the fourth; but since the cross there has been no revelation of God directly upon the fourth commandment, that we now recall. But some other of the ten commandments have been restated and renewed, as in Matt. 19: 17–20; Rom. 13: 8–10; Doc. Cov. 42: 6, 7; 59: 2; etc., etc.

GRANT ON UTAH.

THE late General U. S. Grant in an interview published in the New York Mail and Express in 1884, had the following to say in regard to the political affairs of Utah:

"'What do you think of the Mormon question?"
"'I think that the surest and best remedy would be to take away from Utah her present Territorial form of government and govern the Territory by commissioners, as they do in the District of Columbia, and then enforce the antipolygamy laws and such laws as Congress may prescribe."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. I. F. Scott in a letter dated at Pardeeville, Wisconsin, the 9th inst., has this to say:

"I admire our church organ, every number of which contains such a rich feast of cheering news from the various fields where the latter-day reapers are at work gathering the wheat into the garners of salvation. May the good work roll on until Zion is redeemed and the glory of the Lord shall rest upon her, and Jerusalem shall become a praise in all the earth."

THE clipping below from the San Francisco Chronicle exhibits a very bitter, harsh spirit, yet there are facts in it that are important, as showing the wide-spread and deep seated conviction with the American people that either polygamy or polygamists must go, and that in the near future, and that disloyalty will not be tolerated in any part of the Nation.

THE MORMON CATASTROPHE.

How curious it is that wrong-doers invariably compass their own destruction! The Mormons gained nothing by the silly performance of hoisting the American flag at half-mast on the Fourth, but they seem to have exasperated the country from end to end. There is but one cry from Maine to California, and from Minnesota to Texas, and that is, that the time has come for a settlement of accounts with this nest of foreign vermin. Judge Powers interprets public sentiment by sentencing the two Browns of Ogden to the extreme limit of the law, and it is no secret that further prosecution for polygamy will be forthwith undertaken and conducted with vigor to the bitter end. The twin relic is now going to be extirpated if it takes the entire army of the United States to do it. The Mormons have only themselves to blame for the swift punishment which has befallen them. Like the slave owners who hastened the down-fall of slavery by insisting on planting that institution where it could not grow, so the disciples of Brigham Young have provoked the Government with an intolerable insult, and Uncle Sam is going to lay his heavy hand upon them with a weight that will utterly crush them. It is said that they propose to go to Mexico. Let them go and welcome. They can not take our Territory with them, nor can they induce the loyal citizens of Utah to accompany them on their exodus. It might be cheap for this country to furnish them with transportation. A leading newspaper published in the City of Mexico sarcastically observes that President Diaz will receive them with pleasure, will allot them lands in the Yaqui country, in the state of Sonora, and will leave them to try conclusions with that formidable band of savages. The Mexicans, he adds, will watch the struggle between the Danites and the Yaquis with perfect impartiality.

Correspondence.

Moscow, Nez Perces Co., Idaho, August 1st, 1885.

Elder W. W. Blair.—I came from Montana here to move my family to the Gallatin valley, Montana, so I could leave my wife and little ones in the society of the Saints, while I may be abroad declaring the way of life. I have been greatly strengthened in the great latter day work of late, and I can truly say that I want no greater joy than the gospel of Christ offers in this life, and no greater reward in the life to come.

Day before yesterday I went down into Washington Territory to baptize a cousin of mine by the name of B. R. Turnbow, a brother of uncle Jefferson Turnbow of Kentucky. And here let me say, that about thirteen years ago this brother Turnbow attended a public discussion that your correspondent had with a minister of the Christian Church by the name of R. B. Trimble, in Graves county, Kentucky. At that time Bro. Turnbow was a zealous member of that body, but his faith was much changed by the debate. The Book of Mormon was assailed by Mr. Trimble; and the Spalding Romance, of course, had to be handled. We felt we had successfully answered and rufuted every argument of our opponent, and had driven him even from the "last ditch," yet at the close of the debate we urged the people to read the Book of Mormon, and to read it prayerfully, for we believed God would lead them into the truth. Bro. Turnbow told me the other day that he read the book through once, but got no good from it whatever, and laid it by without any conviction. But afterwards, not being satisfied, it occurred to him to read "Prayerfully." So he again took up the blessed volume, and told the Father that he wanted to know whether it was Solomon Spalding's Romance, or a divine record; and as he read and prayed, the glorious truth was unfolded to him, so that he knows now that the Book of Mormon is one of the precious gifts of God to man. On the day before his baptism I received a note from him, stating that he had been confined to his bed by sickness for two or three weeks, and that he felt that his earth-life was about ended, and that he did not want to pass away until he had been baptized into Christ.

I went immediately and got a team, and drove nineteen miles to see the sick man, and found him sick indeed in body, but full of spiritual life. I stayed with him all night, and early in the morning I helped him into the buggy and drove two miles to the Palouse river, and there, with no witness but the Holy Ghost, (thank God for such a witness), I immersed him into Christ, and he was raised from the liquid grave much stronger than when we entered the water. He got out of the buggy and walked into the house without assistance, and I left him rejoicing in the truth.

I learn by this that we should not be discouraged in our labors, though we may not see the immediate fruits of our labors, silent forces are at work all around us. God is in the work, feeling after the honest in heart. We may plant, as God has directed, and He will give the increase in his own wise way; and even seed sown that falls by the wayside may not all be devoured by the birds, and the best crops are not always those that mature the quickest.

I am trying to get back to Montana by the time Bro. Joseph comes there.

Your brother in Christ, J. C. CLAPP.

PLANO, Illinois,

Bro. Dancer: - You perhaps would like to hear from this place—of the town as well as the branch here. As to the branch, it is keeping along quite well, with once in awhile some yielding obedience to the gospel. Sometimes quite an interest seems to be taken in what is said and taught by us. The good Lord has truly blessed us in our efforts to keep up our meetings. Our congregations are about as large as when the Herald Office left. And that has proved that the Lord is still with us when we strive to do our duty. The town is improving some; not as many buildings going up this year as last; but we are to have a shop for the manufacture of steel wheels. $70,000 have been subscribed for building and furnishing; so this will compensate for less dwellings this summer. The Saints are usually well. Remember us to a throne of grace.

With kind regards, and love to all in the office, I remain yours in bonds,

W. VICKERY.

GRAND MANAN, N. B.,

August 6th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—In this my first direct communication to you, I have the pleasure of writing good news. Sunday before last I had the pleasure of baptizing a very worthy lady, the wife of a Baptist Deacon. She has been investigating for some time past, and she now bears public testimony to the truth of the work.

For a number of years I have been trying to get a chance to preach in the town of Eastport, but without success, until last Sunday, when I went there by invitation from Bro. Whitcomb, who is in charge of the "Washington Street Baptist Church." I preached to large congregations, morning and evening, with good liberty. And the minister assured me at the close of each service that he and his congregation could and did endorse my preaching, and if that was what they called Mormonism, he wanted more of it. I have never been better treated than by Bro. Whitcomb and his church (which is one of the largest and most influential in Eastport). I have the promise of the house for Bro. Kelley when he comes. When will the Saints learn that the success of the work depends largely on their spirituality? The great hindrance to the advancement of the work is, a want of "unity of the Spirit." I trust our eyes are being opened to to this all-important truth. When we understand this as we should, then will the Saints have cause for rejoicing by seeing the honest who now stand aloof, embrace the truth.

I ask your prayers for the success of the work here, and that I may be kept humble and faithful in prosecuting the work.

Yours in bonds,

JOSEPH LAKEMAN.

No. 205 S. Second St., COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, August 6th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-It becomes my painful duty to chronicle the departure of my aged and venerable father, James McDowell, with whom you have been acquainted for many years. 'Twas something we have been trying to prepare ourselves for, for some time past, as he has been alling for two or more years with something like cancer on back of the neck. One by one the aged veterans pass away across "the mystic tide." The grave has always seemed to me a very dark and lone abode. It seems strange that such a mysterious and unfathomably darkened passage exists between this world and eternal glory; this world and eternal despair! Yet I know that we can not emerge from one sunlit day into that of another, without passing through the shadows of a darkened night. There is no rising sun, but that it comes out from seeming darkness. The life of a christian seems like a pearl bridge, spaning the river of time; one end resting in dawning light, the other in the glories of a golden sunset. I think I can say of father:

In the dawning of the morning
He'd recline on Jesus' breast;
In the twilight of the evening,
In His promises find rest.
Through the mists of life Christ lead him—

Through the dark and trial way;
Through life's shadows did Christ guide him.
To the realms of endless day.

Though he suffered pain and sorrow, 'Twas a blessing in disguise, For the blessings of to-morrow, Ever rest in sunlit skies.

A sweet rest was him awaiting,
'Twas a rest at Jesus' side,
It was one his soul was claiming,
In its bliss he shall abide.

There he'll hear the ransomed singing, Who have crossed the mystic tide, And their anthems sweetly ringing, Fill his soul with lasting pride.

He was seeking for this blessing,
He was praying for Christ's love,
That with Christ he might be resting
In bright mansions far above.

Yours, in sorrow,
J. F. McDowell.

Rushville, Schuyler Co., Ill., August 9th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—Bro. M. T. Short came to our place July 24th, found us in a lukewarm state, preached for us a week, baptized two, gave us many good instructions and strengthened us spiritually. Though many of us have neglected our duty as the servants of God, we are very poor and illiterate, and feel that we have been neglected as a branch and as a district. The North Bend Branch, in Brown County, has not had any preaching for three or four years, and near all of them have gone back to the pleasures of the world. It may be Bro. Short will give them a call while in this district.

This is a busy time of the year for preaching in the country. Fall and winter is the time for country preaching, and we would like to have an Elder come here and labor this winter. We will do all we can for him, temporally, to help him.

Yours,

WM. J. CURRY.

Bro. Blair: - Myself and wife have just arrived home from the two-days meeting held six miles south of Brown City. The gathering was rather small on the account of the hurrying time of haying and harvesting. Those in the faith were strengthened, and all seemed to enjoy themselves. Our testimony meeting the forenoon of Sunday will long be remembered by the Saints, and I trust by those not of our faith. The Spirit bore witness to the truth, which made us all rejoice with one accord. While there I preached once in the grove and in the evening in the schoolhouse, and then went to Brown City where they gave us the use of a store, free. I preached three times there, and then left for home, feeling that the result of our labors will not be in vain. While there Bro. McGaethia gave us the use of their horse and carriage, which we remembered as an act of kindness. Since writing to the Herald last we have felt the hand of affliction, and death has separated us for a short time from two of our children, and naturally we mourn; but still we feel the providence of the Lord is all for the best. And, as we now are left without any children to care for, we shall try more to advance the kingdom of God among men by preaching the word. I feel that we are in debt to the Lord one-tenth, which in the book of God is called tithing. The teachings of our Savior, and the signs of the times, indicate the second coming of Christ at hand. And then our spare temporal means will only be vanity and vexation of spirit. Let us work while the day lasts. For my part I am one that feels like sacrificing anything for the sake of Christ and the gospel. I intend now to do all the labor for the Master I can, and I shall put forth an extra effort to spread the truth.

I remain your brother in Christ,
E. DELONG.

Providence, R. I.,

August 10th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—As one among the many, I can bear testimony to the truthfulness of the gospel as taught by this people. Seven years experience has only confirmed my first impression in regard to the reasonableness of the doctrine. As a young man, standing on the threshold of life and looking at the field, I can see that the harvest truly is ripe, but the laborers are few. There is a verse of Scripture that reads, "Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap." This is not only true in regard to earthly things, but spiritual also. If a man sows unlawful teachings, he will reap contention and confusion. God help us to study His law given through His servants the prophets. That we may build well, so that when our works are tried they may stand. I have neither the time or disposition to dispute the truthfulness of the standard works of the church, given us by God through His choice

Seer, but will leave it to those who feel so disposed. The work here in Providence is onward, and if faithful we expect to gain the reward.

Yours in the bonds of love, GEORGE W. ROBLEY.

FONTANELLE, Iowa,

Dear Herald:-I see in your columns for a long time that there is now more than usual said about miracles, faith-cures and the like. I see also that many, and I fear there are some of our Saints indulge in those hopes that all faith cures, so called, are the work of God, or are done by the power of Jesus Christ. This I do not believe. Can any man heal the sick, or do any miracle in the name of Jesus Christ who rejects the Book of Mormon, or Joseph Smith as a prophet, seer. and revelator, a restorer of the gospel of Jesus Christ? Can any man do miracles in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ who in their hearts fight against God? Murmur against heaven? Against his Son? By this time some of your readers may ask, By what power then are we to judge where they come from if not of the Lord? Have you ever read what John the Revelator says on this subject? He says, "The devil has come down to earth, having great power." He knows his time is short. Can any Saint deny this fact and say the devil is not busy? If there is any of this class among us, let them read what the Revelator says in the same book. The devil has power to do miracles on the earth. What for? To "deceive them that dwell (or live) upon the earth." How many of the Saints are aware of these facts, and that we are living in the very day when all this and much more evil is going on, to deceive our race, and the Saints if possible? For one, I have said for fifteen years, that I would rather die than be cured or healed by the devil, or any of his fraternity. The above is what I have been wanting to see in the Herald for several years. Yes, be wise, and better than me. I write this, because I want the Saints to be on their guard against the devil's influence, for it will continue to increase more and more until he is overcome by the Saints and the power of God. Amen and amen.

BRIGGS ALDEN.

MALAD, Idaho, August 8th, 1885.

Bro. Blair: - Bro. Luff and I arrived there by stage from Collinston, on Thursday at seven p. m. Our ride from the station was an agreeable one. A heavy rain on Wednesday had laid the dust and cooled the air; a pleasant wind from the west north-west, a top carriage, made the thirtythree miles of valley travel a pleasure. Bro. John Lewis' pleasant voice and sparkling eye gave us kind welcome.

What a valley this is. Bro. Luff and I climbed up on one of the ribs of the earth, and saw the whole valley from Bear River to Elkhorn, and the pass to Cache Valley, spread out like a map. The air was like wine, the mountain ridge like a ship sailing along, not a sound save the chirp of a bird or the rustle of a grasshopper amid the parched leaves, one could fancy the world was dead, the valley asleep, except here and there a little cloud of dust like a puff of smoke showed where a horse or team was moving; an "outfit," three teams, a wagon, and a hitch, crept along the gray ribbon of road at the foot of the mountain; a led horse, a dog (it might be a rat) crept after; the cows grazing just at the rise of the hills, were like goats; a thin blue mist hung all over the vale through which the whole was seen as a map, colored in fields, roads, paths, water ditches, division lines, green, yellow, dark green, brown, purple and gray.

Three services to-morrow.

Yours in bonds,

Joseph Smith.

CORMORANT, Minn.,

August 10th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: This part of the country has of late been visited by storms, tempests and hail, that has in some places cut down the crops of the earth, buildings were moved from there foundations, while others were blown to pieces. God spoke through Joseph Smith years ago, and said such things would visit the earth. It causes fear to come upon the people. They don't know what may come next. Surely the Lord will do his own work, and leave his mark as he goes, and show to the people that he is Almighty God. To his Saints he has promised blessings, but his judgments shall be poured out on the ungodly.

I in company with my brethren and sisters, are trying to lay before the people the just claims of our Heaven Father. I received your letter, and I will try and get along with what help God has here or will raise up. I learn that brother Holt is doing good in Ottertail county. I bapone Friday last, and one more on Sunday. We are pleased to learn of the efforts of brother Joseph and his co-laborers in Utah. May God work on that people and cause them to see their mistake, is my prayer.

JOHN C. Foss.

St. John, Apache Co., A. T.,

August 4th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph Smith: With pleasure I seat myself to drop you a few lines. I left my home in San Bernardino, California, July 19th, to visit this Territory and see my father's family and to do some work for the Master. Bro. A. H. Smith requested that I should do so, there being several hundred of the Brighamite Church here, of which some of my folks are members. This is a desert, and hard to make a living in. All of the folks are poor; many of them not able to get along. Some of them were sent from here to the Penitentiary for polygamy. Many of them came here with a good property, and now can not get credit for one sack of flour at the Zion's Co operative store. When I first came here they were ready to debate, and one of their High Priests came to see me; but since that they are too busy; or there are none of their preachers here, they say. They claim that the way I take the law, namely, from 1830 to 1844, gives me the advantage of them; but they believe that the Lord will give line upon line, and precept upon precept, forgetting that the Lord is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, in whom is no change nor shadow of turning. There is a cave discovered here which I visited. It is 1800 feet deep, and from 12 to 15 feet wide, and about the same from the floor to the roof. In the back of the cave there is a pile of rubbish, and around it there were found dishes from the size of a common tea cup to the size of a gallon pan, and one hundred and sixty-eight in number, beautifully painted, but not two of them alike. My folks were the ones that found them, and they sold them before I got here. There is great display in the painting. They are beautiful. As they are here I went and saw them, and some of them had food in them, and some had beads, and lots of arrow heads are to be found in the cave. The old Indians or Mexicans that live here don't know anything of them. Another evidence of the Book of Mormon to be added to the already long list.

Ever praying for the triumph of Zion's cause, I am yours, D. L. HARRIS.

> Georgeville, Ray Co., Mo., August 1st, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-I have been reading the History of Joseph Smith; and let me say that, while some things that I have read brings a flood of tears, other things brings a flood of joy and gladness. Joseph the second is my man more than ever for his manly way of coming to the Church and taking up the reins as he did. It shows he wanted to know what he was doing. I thank heaven for this. If some others were like him, the Church would roll on to perfection much faster. I will not accuse any one; but let the truth shine. Yours,

E. B. MULLIN.

BARNARD, Nodaway Co., Mo., August 2d, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-I could hardly keep the tears from my eyes, the time I read Bro. Joseph Smith's letter in Herald August 1st, 1885. Bro. Joseph's humility in dealing with the people in Utah, looks so much like that of a man of God, or like Jesus the time he was pleading with the people at Jerusalem. I believe Bro. Joseph Smith's course is accepted of God, and it seems it is approved of man-wise and honorable men of our country. George Washington said the earlier I see my children read the Bible, the greater is my hope that they will be wise and honorable citizens of our nation. Jesus said the people would be blessed if they would hear the words of his disciples.

When I was living at Goshen, Utah Co., Utah. 1865. I had been reading some Josephite tracts which gave me much spiritual trouble in regard to which church was right—the Brighamites or the Josephites. It seems the thoughts of my heart, the glance of my eyes were turned upward to my heavenly Father for information on the matter. While I was in this condition I had the following dream. Of course, some dreams are vanity and some are of God. I believe this was of God, it was so much of a divine nature.

I dreamed I saw a beautiful stream of water. The water was very clean, and so clear that I could see every rock, gravel, and sand grain on the bottom of the stream, which was also clean and bright. In the stream were walking a group of men. I did not see their faces; but it seemed they were white men. They were dressed in extreme black. It was said to me, The stream is the gospel, the men are the priesthood. Nights and days, weeks and months, this dream was on my thoughts. I could understand the beautiful stream represented the gospel, as I was told; but the priesthood dressed so black, was a mystery to me. I was then a member of the Brighamite Church. I at length concluded that it was the Utah Mormon priesthood that had got their priestly garments blackened with idolatry-idolatrous worship. And when I found the definition of the word black in Webster, which says—destitute of light; very dark, cloudy, dismal. I think I have the full and correct interpretation of my dream. It is evident that the black priest-hood were also destitute of the word of God—the word of God is light. Psa. 19:8.

Yours in gospel bonds, Christen Christensen.

> FRIEND, Nebraska, August 10th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-Immediately after addressing my last to you, I went to the Moroni Branch, and spent ten days with them. Rain, which was much needed in that part, prevented mersome. The Saints there have had their patience tried somewhat, and it would appear that the evil one would delight in the overthrow of the cause. John Ervin, in his seventy-ninth year, took up his cross by baptism. I spent a week at home, and spoke once, and on the evening of the 3d inst., assisted by Bro. J. M. Terry, baptized and confirmed four. The next day found me at Wilber, and a willing helper to Bro. M. H. Forscutt, in holding meetings in the M. E. Church. The attendance was good, all things being considered. Came here last Saturday, and as per arrangements, we held a grove meeting. Brn. Caffall, Forscutt, and your humble servant, gave the word to the people. Much interest upon the part of many was manifested, and several requested us to come and preach for them. There were a few who did not seem to be interested in the word, or at least their noise during and after the service would so indicate. By urgent request Bro. Mark will speak in the town of Friend, this evening. We need more laborers in the field, and more support for those in the field. When, O when will the field be fully occupied! Arise, one and all, and blessings will surely follow your efforts to send and sustain those who declare the right way of the Lord. Some few seem to be willing to help the glorious work, and many seem willing to let them continue to sacrifice and struggle on against the odds that oppose our work. I still have confidence in the promises of God unto his church and servants.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

MERLIN, Ontario, Aug. 2d, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - The Herald is still a welcome visitor, and in every number comes good news of the progress of the work of God. I think the change in the Herald department is an improvement. Formerly I did not get the Saturday's Herald till the following Monday or Tuesday. Now we generally get it the same week it is published, with good news from the "salt land" as well as other parts. My prayer to God is, and shall be, that the labors of Bro. Joseph and others there will be blessed of God. It has a telling effect already here on the minds of some of the people when they read Joseph's letters in reply to those Salt Lake Mormons, yet they will stop and stare and look at it and say, Why, we thought you were all one, but we see you can't be, according to this. Then they say, That's good doctrine-good enough for any person, and that they don't blame me for believing that, for it sounds like Scripture. The work here in Canada is onward. The people are beginning to inquire after "the old paths," and when the kingdom of God, with all its gifts and blessings is presented to them, they say-That's grand; just what we believe. And when we tell them the law that Christ gave to govern his church and people, and to adopt us into the family of God, whereby we become heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ, then if we live worthy, we are entitled to those blessings that the ancient Saints enjoyed, they think that is good doctrine, and if that's what the people call Mormonism, its Bible doctrine, all the same. And when we tell them that in order to receive those gifts and blessings we must obey the same law, and do the same works, and come in at the same door, by proper authority, as the ancient Saints did, or we have no claim on God for those blessings; for whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God. But he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If any come unto us and bring not this doctrine, we are commanded not to receive them, neither bid them God speed; for if we did, we should be partakers of their evil deeds. Therefore we are commanded to prove all things, and hold fast to that which is good. Ever desiring to help on the work of God,

I remain your brother in Christ,
A. McKenzie.

No. 4729, Jacob Street, WHEELING, W. Va., August 7th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-The glad tidings that you bear upon your pages are still interesting and encouraging. You are a welcome guest, and it is with great delight that we hail your weekly visits. Our worthy Bro. E. L. Kelley paid us a visit in June, which was very gratifying to the Saints of this district. I am confident his labors among us will result in much good to the church. He was greatly blest in discoursing on the subject of finance, which was obvious proof to the writer that God has called him to that specific work. Another good principle I discovered in the brother was, that he did not countenance tale-bearers and fault-finders, neither would he suffer any to speak disparagingly of his brethren in the ministry; but gave them to understand that the law which God has given for the government of his children, forbids such unbecoming actions on the part of all professed Saints. Bro. R. S. Salvards of Pittsburg devoted six weeks preaching in different parts of the district, and as evidence of the effect it had, the Saints are anxious for his return. We hope the time is not far distant, when his hands shall be loosed and he devote his entire time in the ministry. It is desirable that the Saints in the district put forth an urgent effort to sustain those who are willing to sacrifice home and family comforts and worldly prospects, with no other desire than to reach perishing souls with the gospel. Bro. James Craig is now ready and willing to take the field for fall and winter, providing he can receive financial assistance. We trust that ample means will be put in the hands of the Bishop's Agent Criley, wherewith to supply all demands. The prospects for preaching the word in new places are grand, and the aspects are growing brighter every day. So let us who hold the priesthood strive to keep the camp-fires blazing.

The conference 25th and 26th ult. past off pleasantly, and is said to be one of the best ever held in the district. Bro. J. Ells occupied the pulpit on Sabbath morning and preached a remarkable sermon, considering he is in his 81st year. Two were added to the church during the session by baptism. Ebenezer Miller of Rendville, Ohio, and Bro. M. S. Sutton's wife of Glencoe, Ohio. A good number attended the conference, all of whom returned home rejoicing in the Lord. On the 30th ult. I received word to go to Church Hill to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Mary D., wife of Bro. W. D. Williams. She was a faithful Saint and died strong in the faith and hope of coming forth in the first resurrection. Bro. Williams feels very lonely and sad. May our Heavenly Father give him strength to endure the present ordeal. We expect to organize a Branch at Youngstown sometime in September. Wm. Harris, Jno. R. Lewis, Bro. Phillips, (formerly of Kewanee) are residents of the above city, with their families.

On my return stopped at Pittsburg, while there attended the young people's meeting, which is a decided success. Bro R. G. Smith has the watchcare, and is a model young man. It would prove a benefit to all the young people throughout the church if they would meet in like manner.

The Saints were well, except Sr. Everett and Bro. Jos. Parsons, the latter growing weaker and feebler from old age.

I expect to preach at the following places during September and October—Clarksburg, W. Va.; Church Hill, Sharon, Diamond, New Philadelphia, Milton, and Kirtland, Ohio. I intend to labor as I am led by the Spirit; so if I chance to be a little behind time, do not get impatient. Ever praying for the spread of truth I remain yours.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, August 6th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - I have often been impressed to write to the Herald and bear my testimony to the truth of the gospel as restored by Joseph the Seer, and also of God's acceptance of the Reorganized Church. Twenty years ago I was in Utah. I then believed that the people called Brighamites were the true church. I saw many things that were practiced there which was contrary to the gospel of Christ, yet I believed God was with that people. I was in the same condition, no doubt, of hundreds that are there now. I was honest in my belief, and would have died in defense of the faith if necessary. When the Elders of the Reorganized Church came to Utah in 1865, I, too, raised the cry "Apostates," "Can any good come from such a source." I never will forget the first time I met Bro. C. G. McIntosh in Payson. Let me state right here one characteristic of my nature-what I believe to be right I was willing to defend. Bro. McIntosh and I began to discuss the differences between us. I thought I was able to show him he was an apostate; but I must acknowledge he showed me I was in the dark. Although he proved from the books that the church in Utah was in darkness, I was not satisfied; I began to investigate and pray to God to show me the truth of the matter. And God in his tender love showed me in a vision that the Reorganized Church was accepted of him; yet I obeyed not. I had the fear of man. I knew the feelings of my brethren against those that opposed the counsel of Brigham Young; yet I could not rest in mind. I have thought my feelings were similar to those that have experienced the bitterness of the damned. I do not know of a word in the English language that could express my feelings at the time. Oh, how I cried unto God for deliverance from that confused state of mind! One day I had been reading. I laid the book down and went out doors. I heard a voice, (or whisper) say, "Fear God who hath power to destroy both body and soul in hell, rather than man." I went the next day and was baptized. The fear left me; and O, what joy filled my heart! No mortal tongue can express the peace of mind that filled my heart. It seems but yesterday; yet it has been twenty long years ago, and in this time we have experienced many seasons of joy, and had assurances that God will save his people.

In conclusion, let me say to all who are in doubt in regard to the truth of the latter day work, let them call on God in mighty prayer-He will give them peace and rest to their souls, and will prove to them that He is the same yesterday, today, and forever. Amen.

Yours in the bonds of peace,

Dear Herald:-It is not to display my one talent, that I so often speak through your columns, but that I may rightly improve that talent-that is, use it for my own development, the good of my fellow beings and the glory of God. I had a desire to write for the press from my youth, but had no success till I became a Saint and a Granger. I rarely can assemble with either, but can study and write on the principles of both at home. I feel to thank God for opening up the way whereby I can speak to the world, and pray that his blessing may attend my feeble efforts. Thanks to those who so kindly accept my work. Always, before attempting to write, I ask God to give me suitable thoughts, and sometimes I ask for a subject, and frequently they come with surprising rapidity and clearness. I not only believe, but I know that the pen of some modern writers is guided by the power of inspiration as well as was that of the ancients. I felt while reading the article from the pen of J. F. Burton, in the July Expositor, that it was a work of inspiration-my whole being was filled-was feasted-and I believe every true Saint will respond, Amen. We feel to say, Go on, all ye periodicals of the latter day work, and may heaven's choiceest blessings rest on your efforts. There are many hands ready to help, prompted by honest hearts, and the great God looks down from above and adds his smile of approval. I feel Him to say through me as his humble instrument:

"Go on my children, go on in the glorious work I have assigned you. Slack not your hand; I am ready to aid those wielding the pen, and its power shall be more mighty in putting down evil and building up truth than all the swords of earth combined. By it, and the voice of my servants, shall a people be prepared to meet me at my coming. To those who can neither preach nor work for the press, I say withhold not your purse because of its scantiness, nor because of vour necessary wants, but offer your mites with a cheerful heart and the prayer of faith, and ye shall not want. The earth is mine and the fulness thereof, and my faithful children shall have their necessary wants supplied as long as the earth stands. Behold I have declared it; therefore fear not. The time to favor Zion has come: she has struggled and bled; she has stumbled, but she has not fallen; mine eye has been upon her, I have held her by my right hand. Arise, put on thy beautiful garments, O Zion; the garments of obedience and humility, and wave high the banner of truth o'er land and sea. It shall be unfurled in all the dark corners of the earth, and the true and honest shall be gathered in one. Blessed are they who shall take part in this glorious work. Their future joy shall outweigh all their privations and sorrows here: they shall sit with the redeemed, and be crowned with the faithful. Think not, ye whose work appeareth small, that it is not important; the raindrops and the dewdrops silently do their work; be as faithful as they. Every child of mine who improves his one talent and one opportunity shall in no wise lose their reward. The final consummation is near at hand; therefore, O ye Saints, see that your work is done, and well done. Behold, when I come I bring my reward, and every one shall be rewarded according as his works have been. Every jot and tittle of the law that I have given to my servants, both in ancient and in modern days shall be fulfilled; not one word shall return to me void, neither shall it be annulled by man. Put away the pride and lust of the heart; search my law; obey the same and live. Let no divisions arise among you, but see eye to eye; for behold I come quickly and will surely receive all those whom I find so doing. Even so Amen."

Bro. Blair.-Do you remember my dream I wrote you of when Morris was in Utah?-of the smouldering house; the ungainly, hateful looking bird fleeing finally from it, and men engaged inside taking out the good timbers ere the building fell? I am reminded afresh of it now, and rejoice in the signs of the times. May God bless Bro. Joseph's visit to Utah to the good of the honest-hearted there, I pray-and pray in faith. My dear companion is away, busy in his mission field; and I at home, sometimes sad, often lonely, sometimes comforted and cheered to the extent that I can rejoice in the sacrifice we make for the gospel's sake. With kindest wishes, yours.

SISTER M. T. SHORT.

BROWN CITY, Sanilac Co., Mich., July 24th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-For some time I have been thinking of writing a few lines to let you know how the work is prospering here." We have a nice branch of fifty-six members, of which twenty has been added in the last year; and I feel if we as Saints are faithful, more than that number will be added the year to come; for there are many honest ones around here. We have just held a two days' bush-meeting, and had a good time; the Spirit of the Master was with us; and I believe some seed fell on good ground, though it may be like bread cast upon the waters.

There seems to be a famine in this part of the land; but not for food, but for hearing the word of God. And I feel that every one who has a sickle should reap. I have been in the kingdom near eight years; seven of that I have been in the ministry, and I never saw a time there was such a call for preaching as there is at the present; and I for one have resolved to respond to the call. I have made resolutions in the past that I would go forth and devote my time in the field, and have failed to keep these resolutions. About two years ago I made up my mind I would take the field as a laborer if the church would help me a little; and the church agreed to, and did; but then I failed to do my duty. Now I have made another resolution, or covenant, that I would go forth and preach the gospel, and fill the mission I am called to, trusting in God for temporal as well as spiritual blessings; and I know God will be with me if I am faithful. I have lived here in Brown City near two years, and have labored around about with Bro. Bailey. Am preaching Sundays and other days as the way opens, and the Lord has blessed us in what little we have done. I hope to remain faithful. Your brother in Christ, J. A. CARPENTER.

> EGREMONT, Grey Co., Ontario, 1st August, 1885.

Dear Herald.—It is some time since I wrote to you, but being one of the few General Conference appointees, I deem it a duty to make some kind of a report of whereabouts and what doing. I was prevented from taking the field from about April 15th to June 24th, partly through sickness, and partly through secular labor and finances. However, about the latter date I got into the field again, and I find a splendid interest at two or three points where labor has previously been expended; particularly in the township of Proton. I also got into the village of Dundalk, where the kindness of Bro. William McMurdy, aided by a Mr. James McLean and two other gentlemen, whose names I do not know, joined to rent the Town Hall. I filled the appointment, and tried to make matters clear to the understanding-particularly as to the lines of difference befween Brighamism and the truth. At the conclusion I had the satisfaction of having some of the leading merchants, etc., come to me in the street and acknowledge that they had been edified, not having known before the difference. But I don't think it will amount to much more with them than it did with the Stoics at Athen's, in Paul's day, who wanted to "see and hear some strange thing." There is a good feeling and interest in the Egremont Branch, and on the 18th Concession, some five miles distant there is a splendid interest, so far as coming to hear the word; but no response by obedience. Yet we hope for better results in time. I am not enjoying good health ever since last October; but I enjoy more liberty in speaking than ever. I often feel very much downcast and discouraged, particularly to see the mutual apathy of people who acknowledge that this is indeed the truth. But is seems like speaking

My prayer is for the faithful little band of heroes battling for truth in Utah against the errors of Brighamism. May God bless them. I desire to be remembered in your prayers; and as ever I remain your brother in love of Zion's welfare. J. A. McIntosh.

ETERNAL LIFE, AND THE SECOND DEATH.

ADAM did not have eternal life abiding in him except by promise. So also of the whole race of man. Adam was created subject to death, providing he placed himself in unison with the powers of death, or rather by not continuing in unison with the powers of life. Whether Adam acted wisely or not in violating the law given him is matter of doubt with many, and for many generations past has been judged to have been a great error at least, without one redeeming quality. But if knowledge of good and knowledge of evil could only be obtained by eating the forbidden fruit, surely there is something grand in the character of Adam when he chose death with knowledge, rather than life without it—for himself and his posterity. In his case the choice was offered him of violating either of two laws; 1st, Thou shalt not eat; 2d, A man shall cleave unto his wife; and she having eaten must leave the garden, and to keep the second law he must eat also. The serpent said, "Ye shall not surely die. God doth know that in the day ye eat * * * ye shall be as gods knowing good and evil." And the Lord said, "Behold, the man is become as one of us to know good and evil." Thus the covenant—eat, and die, and know. Thus knowledge of good and evil was purchased for us at the price of death; and the term death here includes that called spiritual and temporal, as one is the penalty of the other, the spiritual first, the other the necessary result of that. The effect was that man was estranged from God, and death immediately commenced its work upon him, and at the end of his individual probation claimed his body and resolved it to its original elements, "dust thou wast and unto dust shalt thou return." Then, whatever Adam was in the beginning, he is now as we are; and instead of obtaining from him eternal life, we obtain death. And it always will rest with us, whether it shall be éternal or not. But we must have for us a conqueror of death—a Redeemer. Now, we look at the second Adam. Satan did not tempt him with knowledge, but with power. "Command that these stones be made bread." "Cast thyself down." "I will give you all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, if you will worship me." Christ answers: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," (eternal life by knowledge, and it from God). "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," and "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God." And again, hear him on that dread night when he stood in the garden of Gethsemane as much alone as was Adam in Eden's garden-"My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." "O my Father, if it be possible let this cup pass from me!" Three times he uttered this prayer, "and sweat as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground," although "more than twelve legions of angels were at his command." And an angel came unto him, and strengthened him." And having been put to death, he went to the paradise of God that he might receive authority to go to the prison and preach the gospel there. (For although he was the son, he glorified not himself, but became obedient). Then he preached to the spirits in prison, "that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live in the spirit according to the will of God." And after his resurrection he states, "Now all power is given to me in heaven and on earth." And then his grand affirmation so glorious for man: "Fear not; I am the first and the last; I am he that liveth and was dead; and, be-hold, I am alive forevermore, amen: and have the keys of hell and of death." Here then is the mighty conqueror; the Great Redeemer; man's hope; for he has the keys, power, or authority in heaven (including paradise) on earth, in hell, and over death,-therefore the great proclamation to all the world: believe and be saved; go and proclaim to every nation the glad news, not only shall man obtain life again but he may certainly also obtain immortality, if he will believe and obey and follow me. "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life.' And "as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign, * * * unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord." "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." And "this is the record that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his son." Therefore he says, "All power is mine." Thus we have presented to us the two Adams—one giving us the temporal life for probation only; the other restoring to us the temporal life and offering to us eternal life on conditions. But if I do not comply with the conditions of eternal life given by the Christ, I then certainly, in the resurrection only obtain that which I lost in Adam, that is a temporal life, and consequently rise from this first death in the resurrection subject to another or second death; not that I must necessarily die again, but that I will be as Adam was. If I do not place myself in unison with the powers or laws of eternal life, I shall die again. If I do, I will not. But if I should comply with the laws of eternal life, and then wilfully violate them, I then rise in the resurrection subject irrevocably to the second death. And "these are the only ones on whom the second death shall have any power." All others still hold their destiny in a degree in their own hands.

The first principle in redeeming man, and the great fact of atonement rests, not on the thought of Calvary alone, but that over Mount Calvary, down through the deep valley, and into death's dominions went the Great Anointed One to conquer man's enemy for man, and wrest from him the keys of hell and of death; for "Through death he destroyed him that had the power of death." The only possible way man could be redeemed, and Christ Jesus the only possible Redeemer; thus giving a more forcible meaning to the words first spoken by Satan to Eve-"Eat and thou shalt be as God's, knowing good and evil." The key that unlocks death's door and opens the portals of eternal life, is to know. "This is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ." And, "We know that the son of God is come and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true. This is the true God and eternal life." Thus by eating came death and knowledge; and by knowledge we become as Gods-knowing God and Christ-which is eternal life.

Man is Adam's child. If he dies still his child only, he will arise in the final resurrection by the great redemptive power of eternal life. In other words, he will be subject to the second death.

Man is Adam's child. He is offered eternal life upon conditions that he will cease to be Adam's child and become a child of God through Christ Jesus. In other words, to every son and daughter of Adam who desires eternal life, the Christ speaks, saying; "Verily, verily I say unto you, ye must be born again." And this birth must be a re-generation; indeed, a being born again, in fact. In explanation of his statement Christ says: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; (or Adam's child); and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit;"; (or Christ's child) And a man (Adam's child) must "be born of the water and of the Spirit, (thus becoming Christ's child) or he "can not enter the kingdom of God."

How to be, or to get, changed from the Adam-state to the Christ-like state has ever been a momentous question. There seems to be this much true of it, that an Adam's man can not grow or develope into a Christ-man. If he grew or developed at all, it would be merely a developed Adam-man. There must be a change, a vital change, as from darkness to light; from death to life—"Ye must be born." Then the Adam-man may not attain to eternal life by getting better and better himself, and so increase in goodness until he should arrive to eternal life. If so then no redeemer was needed. The fact is, the Adam man has not the germ of life in him; and as spontaneous generation from matter to Adam-life is impossible, so spontaneous generation from the Adamman to the Christ-life is also impossible. "Ye are dead in trespasses and in sin;" consequently no life to Our temporal life here is a develop. gift granted us for a season, upon conditions. And so of the temporal life herehereafter; the resurrection comes to us as a gift, and the life thereafter is granted on conditions also. But immortality is attained also by gift on conditions. Ye must be "begotten again" and "born again." John says—"We know that whosoever is born of God continueth not in sin, but he who is begotten of God, and keepeth himself, that wicked one overcometh him not." The unbegotten and unborn child can not in this life have anything to do with its own begetting, or birth, but the analogy between the natural and spiritual birth may not hold good in all points, for the terms upon which death—spiritual and temporal—were accepted (which made this birth necessary, perhaps), forbidoit. Adam said—"I will die both temporally and spiritually, but I must have know-ledge of good and evil." He then found himself dead in sin; but the knowledge came which was able to restore the lifetemporal, and the life everlasting. It is significant that the first commands the Lord gave Adam after his expulsion from the garden was given without reasons for explanations—"You worship God;" "You offer the firstlings of your flocks;"whether it was a tenth, or more, or less. It was obligatory upon Adam to obev. After he had obeyed, an angel asked him "why do you offer sacrifice?" He answers—"I know not, save that the Lord commanded me." By this we may judge that it is not man's right to ask God why He commands thus or so; but to obey, though the command may appear foolish to man. What connection was there between offering the firstling of the flock and eternal life to Adam before the angel explained it? But Adam was obedient; and then the Lord explains. So by the terms of the covenant-eat first, then know-so God still says:--"Obey first, then know."

The gospel is that which we obey, by which comes immortality to man. Then this is the key, "Life and [also] immortality are brought to light through the gospel;" not created by it, but brought to light by it so it can be seen, or known. Life is given without conditions, but immortality only by knowledge. promised knowledge was given, and man now may have this thought, that he stands as did Adam, to chose for himself. Life and immortality, or life and a second death. Life being a gift to all, he chooses between immortality and death. Desiring immortality, one must use the knowledge freely given. Neglecting this, death ensues. The man with two talents used them—they were doubled. He with one, hid it; and it was taken from him. It is also significant that the gospel's commands and promises are without reasons or explanations. Believe, be baptized, and you shall be saved. Eternal life is to know God. But how believe in Him of whom I have not heard? How hear without a preacher? How preach without being sent with a message to preach? We don't know first; but obey. We believe and obey first, then know. The first Adam brought death; the second Adam gives life, because he conquered it for man. But to do so, he must go to death's dominions. This required, 1st, Some relation to the first Adam; for he was the only intelligence, seemingly who must go there. Angels could not go there. 2d, He must he sinless, or, going there he could not come away. And being sinless, death had no power over him. But he received from God "power to lay down his life, and take it again." So he took upon him the nature of man, and was baptized, and was thus made free. But to conquer for man he became subject to death, and was buried, and arose again triumphant. And now God demands of each Adam's-child to do as did his Son for us. If we desire to stand side by side with him we must be "buried with him in baptism," and "arise in newness of life;" "born of the water," after having been "begotten" by the power of the holy Spirit through Christ's ambassador who delivers the message in the "demonstration of the Spirit," so we can "see the kingdom." "All those who humble themselves before God, and desire to be baptized and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins shall be received by baptism into his church."—D. C. 17:7. Now we have obeyed, we desire to receive the promised knowledge.

And "no man knows the things of God but by the Spirit of God." Then we must be "born of the Spirit," to obtain know-ledge unto eternal life. Christ manifests himself again by the preacher sent from God, who by imposition of hands and prayer, pleads with God, who bestows the marvelous gift of the Holy Ghost by which the knowledge of Christ and God are obtained, which is life eternal. comes as a free gift-"we may hear the sound of it but can not tell whence it comes or whether it goes." Now, the proposition to man is, Will he eat and die that he may live forever? If he eats of the tree of knowledge which Christ gives, he will surely die as to Adam-to sin;but will be "made alive" as to Christ; will be "born again." Such an one is now no longer an Adam's-man; he has voluntarily died as to Adam, and is "alive in Christ." Now there is no condemnation to him; for he is "in Christ Jesus," and "walks after the Spirit, and not after the flesh;" and "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made him free from the law of sin and [also] of death." Therefore, such are "joint heirs with Christ" to eternal life. Such has now become Christ-like. They no more live after the law of sin and death. Their "life is hid with Christ in God." "He that hath the Son hath life."

Satan enticed the serpent to betray Eve and bring death into the world; but it brought knowledge also. Satan enticed Judas to betray Christ and bring death upon the second Adam; but through death Christ entered its dominions and conquered death, and gave the race life again. And when the race knows this, every knee will bow in humble submission and loving gratitude to him. All who accept the terms of eternal life, and live in unison with it, obtain immortality; but perhaps not to "dwell in the light which no man can approach unto." Before Christ left the earth, he knew all good, even to the Paradise of God; and all evil, even through death to death's abode, and thus obtained the keys of "the sum of all evil," (death), and offers to man the great boon—to eat of the tree of knowledge of good unmixed with evil. "We shall know as we are known," and eating of the tree of life in the paradise of God, may live forever.

But "he that hath not the Son, hath not life." Therefore, he is subject to deathanother death—a second death. "Whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death. "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire." Death, (or those who do not have eternal life), and Hell, (or those who are sons of perdition), shall be cast into the lake of fire, their punishment, which is the second death; while the gift of God is immortality; eternal life. Proof is wanting to establish the thought that any death is necessarily and absolutely unending. No stronger unconditional language has been used in reference to any death than that first used to Adam, "In the day thou eatest thou shalt surely die." And we may say of that death, It is an everlasting death; for it is entailed upon the whole race to the end, but not in the sense that it shall not give place to life again under proper conditions.

The inferential argument from Adam's condition is in favor of the thought that all death may eventually give place to life in some degree of happiness; with, perhaps, the exception of those who become sons of perdition, whose happiness consists in their misery.

The tree of life is in the midst of the paradise of God; and those who are not worthy to enter there—past the flaming swords—can not partake of it; consequently must die again. Christ came to give life again, and also to give it more abundantly. And God says: "This is my work, and my glory, to bring to pass both the immortality and eternal life of man." The race—when?

JOSEPH F. BURTON.

"WHY SO?"

In Saints' Herald August 1st, 1885, page 496 please read: "Paul already had the training of the schools and the early vigor of a splendid intellect when the heavens opened over him on the road to Damascus, and a great new truth was flashed upon him; but he did not at once become a teacher, he went into Arabia, and spent three years in silent meditation before he took up the pen that was to address Jew, Greek and Roman, with a wealth of thought, a glow of conviction, and a splendor of speech such as they had never had before."

In comparison read: "But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace to reveal his son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood; neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus. Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days,"—Gal, 1; 15–18. Here

Paul seems to say that he did not go up to see Peter until three years after his return from Arabia to Damascus. But "Why Not" seems to teach that after he had spent three years in silent meditation in Arabia, he then returned to Damascus, and then on up to Jerusalem to see Peter. How shall we harmonize this. Paul doesn't seem to tell the Galatians what he was doing in Arabia, nor what he was doing from his return to Damascus, until he went up to see Peter and to remain with him for a time. Now, if because of his seeming silence in this matter we must have him silently meditating while in Arabia, it seems to me, if harmony we must have, we will have to continue him in his silent musings for not less than three years after his return to Damascus. A long time surely for a man to spend in silence, who expected to be guided in his ministrations by the power of the Holy Ghost. And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales; and he received sight forthwith, and arose and was baptized. And when he had received meat he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus. And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God. Acts 9: 17-20.

Here after he has been struck blind in the way, is again healed by the gift of God, and again strengthened and been with the disciples at Damascus certain days, (not certain years in Arabia), straightway he begins his mission, not conferring with any as to his course. But all that heard him were astonished, and said: Is not this he that destroyed them that call on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests. But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is the very Christ.

Acts 9: 21, 22.

Proving that this is the very Christ—
"beginning at the top" surely—trying to handle a subject that the greater than which, no preacher could presume to maintain before the people of that day. Our Saul may have done his work "well" at such a time, but did he do it "supremely well." And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews took council to kill him. Acts 9: 23.

How many days was that—as many as would make three years. Take three hundred days which is less than one year; should we call that few or many. They took council to kill him; and for what—for what he had said before those many days. "Why Not" seems to have him in Arabia, and to remain there not less than three years before he presumes to teach any thing. But should he have him preaching his cause during those many days, there would be no time for any silence yet. But the enemies of the truth seeing his preaching gaining favor among the people day by day, and their own craft thereby being more and more endangered, the reason becomes too apparent for the silence theory, why they should take council to kill him. But their lying in wait was known of Saul and they watched the gates day and night to kill him. Then the disciples took him by night, and let him down by the wall in a basket. And when Saul was come to Jerusalem, he essayed to join himself to the disciples; but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple. But Barnabas took him and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus. And he was with them coming in and going out at Jerusalem, and he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed with the Grecians; but they went about to slay him. Acts 9: 24-29.

On this occasion, as will appear from the statements, he is at Jerusalem not only as a refugee from his would be slayers, but also to apprise those whom he had once persecuted, that he was now one with them. Though many days had passed since he left Jerusalem for Damascus, the length of time, as yet, did not seem to be sufficient to bring the returns; and had not Barnabas confirmed his claims before the apostles, he would no doubt have been rejected by them at that time.

But what shall we do with our silence theory. An wer. Just let one Saul go to meditating at once somewhere at Damascus; and let him be at such profound silence, that no apostle shall know of his conversion for over three long years. In this way our silence theory, though it may loose its Arabic fitness, yet flames. And our Saul may now address Jew, Greek and Roman with a wealth of thought, a glow of conviction, and a splendor of speech such as they had never had before.

LETTER FROM ELDER BOND.

Eds. Herald.—My last was written at Woonsocket, R. I., from then I went to Douglass, Mass., found a few Saints in the faith; but about wore out with their struggles in the past, sometimes when no preacher is there a half dozen or so of the once large congregation come together, sometimes they don't-oftener they don't. A good chapel and organ, no one to occupy, no preacher, why? *I've done blaming the world for all our troubles. I tried to preach the word and hold out the gospel inducement for faithful continuance in well doing, promising to return in a month. The Providence Branch is probably among the best in the district, having learned what belongs to success somewhat by the things they have suffered in the past.

Attended a meeting of the Salvation Army. Their ignorance, Scripture misapplication and assumption of near following and close relationship to the Lord surprises no one so much as a Latter Day Saint;

but after deducting all this, and psycological effects produced through excitement and manipulation of the senses, I believe it is possible that they may have something in common with others, that the wisdom of this world don't know anything about; though whether this organization, like the Athenians in Paul's day, or heathen in any day, in their "feeling after God" are more likely to find him than the intelligent honest infidel critic, is a puzzle in my mind.

Thursday went to Scituate in company with Bro. Robley, a young man of promise and usefulness in this district, had a good meeting. I preached the following night in Sandersonville with good liberty. The following Sunday in Boston, where I was blessed with spiritual liberty, good attention and fair audiences, especially in the evening, amongst whom were interested strangers; one confirmed with the sanction of the Spirit. Tuesday was joined by Bro. Gilbert, and two or three days were spent among the friends, though the most interesting, and I believe profitable part of our time was spent with people who never heard the gospel, among whom were doctors, and an ex-minister. We tried to show that there was none so smart or so good in the great city of Boston, but that the gospel might make them better, or learn them something they didn't know.

The following Sunday found me at Rehoboth, Mass., a new field. Through the influence of Sr. Clark and her friends of the Baptist Church, consent had been obtained and arrangements made as was supposed by announcement that I should occupy the pulpit of the church that day. When I walked into the church an entire stranger that morning, I supposed the pulpit vacant for the day. As I sat in the pew, the minister came to me with an unsigned note, and asked if I was the one referred to. It turned out that he hadn't given the note the previous Sunday, as was supposed owing to the carelessness of our friends, which was taken advantage of; though there was a larger congregation than usual, owing to the circulated report and understanding that a Latter Day Saints Minister was to preach in the church. The minister returned to the pulpit and opened his service, when one of the church trustees advanced to the pulpit, and gave him to understand that it was through technical error, that he ought not to take advantage of or disappoint those who come expressly to hear me. I had come for that purpose, and ought to occupy the pulpit. Said the minister, Do you assume the responsibility? I do! Do you say he shall preach? I do! And I who had began to think my trip a failure, yet nevertheless had been sitting back in the pew silently praying that God would order for the best, was invited up; and as I walked up the aisle I felt happy to think that it is always true, "that no weapon that is formed against us can ultimately prosper." Before this compulsory invitation, however he took occasion to prejudice the audience in my favor, by remark about "Joe Smith"; and that he understood that this people assumed more authority than other ministers; that he considered himself the peer of any minister, etc. It was almost a surprise to me that any one who looked so slick and sanctified, should even know any thing about so bad a man as Joseph Smith. I retaliated by inviting him, as he was getting out of the desk, to conduct the opening service, which he did, and making no reference to his remarks, I tried to show with the help of the Lord, that one of the best evidences by which we could rely upon God, was his unchangableness. The minister endorsed what I said, and I hope he meant it, and didn't think worse of a Latter Day Saint than before. How strange to think that the Bible and God's truth should make ministers enemies. I really don't think they like our strong endorsement of the mission of Jesus, and record of the word of God spoken in all ages, even though we don't particularize and strive to avoid offense, too many facts and too little poetry. These people are wise enough to detect when the alarm of danger sounds, even afar off. The conflict is irrepressible. Bro. Blair, and I hope the Lord will forgive me if I am at any time unwise or uncharitable; but its a fact, that I haven't got sense enough to tell the difference between a Pharisee in the first or the nineteenth century. I know by the record that they act alike, and I wouldn't wonder but that their general physical make up, and facial appearance was a good deal the same; a man with the Spirit of God can tell them as far as he can see them. "Be ware of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy." Its a bad thing to get into a former or a Latter Day Saint; such a religion will only serve as a passport out of, instead of into the everlasting kingdom and its honest associations. The minister was not there in the evening; but I was, and the congregation, including the trustee. With excellent liberty from God, I endeavored to prove that we had authority to preach the gospel—by preaching it. We feel satisfied that the Lord was with us all the time and blessed our efforts, and that there are not ministers enough in Rehoboth to prevent the preaching of the gospel, whether inside or outside the churches. We were well treated, and expect to go again. As a result, also, we have an invitation to preach in the Baptist Church at Dighton, about eight miles from there, I think, and will occupy soon, if the Lord will.

Last Sunday was at Douglass again; more strangers out, and am sorry the place can not be looked to oftener. Sunday, expect to be with Bro. John Smith, New Bedford; he complains that the missionaries shun him; as a matter of fact we need him, but he don't need us; they are better off for ministers than most branches.

Hav'nt got to the Cape yet, but expect to be in Plymouth the oth.

The work is progressing slowly; fast enough perhaps, considering the crippled condition; enough labor has been bestowed in the past to have occupied higher ground than we do. As I pass around the district I find the work in some places where once the church was represented by a large membership in a sadly dilapidated condition, other localities they scarcely hold their own and a general complaint some-times of lack of interest by the world, small attendance at branch meetings, lack of interest by the Saints. Just how to gauge the responsibility for this state of affairs and rightly judge is not an easy matter always. When I first became acquainted with the church I remember how that my imagination was exalted by large stories concerning precocious preachers, and the impression seemed to have been made that ignorance was a sort of qualification rather than a hindrance to the making of a wonderful preacher. I could wish that I was the only one that ever heard this story and that the mistake had become entirely unpopular. A stream can not rise higher than its fountain—a man can not tell that which he does not know. The counsels of God as given in his revelations to the church should not only be studied by those who attempt to represent the church, but heeded and practiced. Jesus said, "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached." This logically carries with it the idea of a knowledge of the laws and duties as well as privileges of the officers in that kingdom by those who would represent this government of God. David said, "All thy works shall praise thee, Oh Lord, and thy Saints shall bless thee; they shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom," &c. It is just as well to talk about these grand things which have engaged the minds of such men of wisdom, character, and experience, and high favor of God, as Abraham, Job, David, Isaiah, Daniel, Jesus, Paul, Peter, and Joseph Smith, as to look for nothing more than signs, or wonders, or miracles, and indicating by our preaching that that is our understanding of the faith which was once delivered to the Saints, which Jude exhorts to contend for. It is true that as a result a sign, or a testimony of the correctness of that faith, individuals were enabled to "put to flight the armies of the aliens, stop the mouths of lions; women receive their dead to life," &c.; but overcoming our enemies, subduing wild beasts, or even raising the dead; but to die again is not what Tude meant, nor Paul understood when he said, "I have kept the faith." The signs do follow the true believer in the gospel, but are not a certain test of the correctness of our faith; if so, then we are in dangerous competition with a score of other religious and some anti-religious organizations. should covet the best spiritual gifts, and that which will edify; but the greatest gift, we are informed in the Book of Covenants, is eternal life. I give unto them eternal life, said Jesus. To work a miracle, or even raise the dead, was a great sign, an evidence, an argument; but Lazarus died again, and I must die, for death is past upon all men, for all have sinned and come short of God's glory. What is my faith, my hope? This is life eternal, to know thee the only true God." To know a man is to become acquainted with his character, that is known by his purpose, his power, his designs, his will; how shall we know God? Paul says "that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of Glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him; the eves of your understanding being enlightened; that you may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance among the Saints.' Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will."-Eph. 1. "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which I also am apprehended of Christ Jesus; that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection."-Phil. 3.

What must we preach as servants of Christ? How shall we wage successful warfare against foreseen and unseen. "Finally," says Paul, Eph. 6, "my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might; put on the whole armor of God;" but that's not all: something beside armor is necessary, for not only defensive, but offensive warfare. How foolish "The sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." God's word spoken by all the prophets, Jesus, his apostles, his servants in our day, is necessary to enable us to wage successful warfare, and as under the power of God the soldier of Christ wields the blade which flashes and scintillates with the light of the Spirit which comes from God, striking terror into the hearts of his enemies, and rejoicing the friends of truth, he comprehends the necessity of Jesus' commands—"Search the Scriptures." What fitted Timothy for his ministry, "that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures." Not one jot or tittle of the law nor prophets shall pass until all be fulfilled. Holy men of God spake and wrote. How necessary to know about these things. What did God inspire men to write for, if it was not for our profit and learning? "All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for Doctrine, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Gifts and signs and wonders, and our desire to baptize somebody has worked mischief for us in the past. "Not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; they'll get their reward, but they won't get there. Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, is likened unto a foolish man. This can not refer to those who have never heard the sayings of Christ, "Many will say unto me, in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, cast out devils, and done wonderful works," and yet never knew God nor Christ. (Matt. 7, I. T.)

God is not seen as by Moses and the Elders. We may only know him by the record of his dealings with others and with us, enlightened and interpreted by his Holy Spirit, the gifts of the gospel, the sure word of prophecy fulfilled and being fulfilled, the signs of the times, and the cloud of witnesses that surrounds the Saint of God. We shall need the whole armor to stand the approaching day of trial. The Lord will come as a thief in the night,

Scoffers will come in the last time, already saying, Where is the promise of his coming? This is foolishness with the world that knows not God by its wisdom, nor will not obey the gospel of his Son; but I believe the word spoken, for God teaches me by his Holy Spirit concerning the word with regard to these things No one knows the things of God, but by the Spirit of God; and the fate of this planet can only be known but by a revelation from him who formed it. I can not sufficiently thank God for the wisdom and understanding, and because of these things, the confidence I have in regard to our destiny. How easily should I wander away into scepticism and doubt again, when I look out at night upon the world and stars and suns, seen and unseen, that surround this little speck, called earth, and I in turn but a speck upon it, had I not received the message of quiet to my fears from him who yet so great, yet is his greatness manifested in that he careth for the sparrows, much more for the creature made in His image. I do not doubt but that he that spared not his own Son, but gave him for us, will freely give us all things as fast as we can learn to wisely appropriate them. "The wise shall understand," said Daniel, and shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever. This is what I am trying to preach the gospel for, and not to always please men; for if I sought to please men and ignore God's word, I should not be the servant of Christ. The righteousness of God is revealed by faith, and faith comes by hearing the word of God. This faith should precede baptism. I suppose I have been censured for objecting to baptism before I thought people ready. You ask a candidate why they want to join the church:— "because I like the people," "because I believe in immersion," or "the preacher is a nice man and a good preacher," "I believe in the gifts," etc.

While it is unwise to commence and end our preaching about nothing perhaps save Joseph Smith, the Book of Mormon, and revelations; on the other hand I believe it wrong to receive any one to membership in this church, without a plain understanding of our position in regard to these things; and generally speaking, the more they know before they come in about these things, the less trouble they'll make afterward. As a minister of the church, I desire to build permanently; to convert people as well as baptize. I write for the benefit of the young men of this mission, of whom we have several of great promise, I think; that we may begin to improve upon the mistakes of the past. Don't be in a hurry to baptize everybody; make them believe, the gospel first. There's always somebody nearly everywhere, especially in new places, either lacking in character or understanding, that is willing to be baptized for any reason but the right one. It won't save them in the kingdom unless they are fit to receive the Holy Ghost through intelligent belief and repentance from former transgressions, besides perhaps putting a stumbling-block in the way of people who are willing to receive the seed in good soil; but are determined if not turned away from us altogether by our haste to get some one into the church and report baptisms. You will find it easier, sometime, perhaps, to get people baptized, than to take care of them afterward; keep them from going out; getting them out if you should try; or making you lots of trouble while in the The enemy will grow tares church. Don't preach gifts too much. enough. God will see that the signs will follow; we needn't run after them. Make people believe the gospel if you can, then baptize them, and God will see to the rest, and confirm your ministry by baptism which he alone can bestow.

THE HOUSE OF GOD.

I now endeavor to write a few lines on the subject of making the house of God a house of merchandise, and if I am wrong in my belief, I hope some one will put me on the right tract. Will here quote the words as found in St. John 2: 13-17, which reads thus: "And the Jews' passover was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem and found, in the temple, those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting; and when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables; and said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise. And his disciples remembered that it was written: The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up."

Now, brethren, what I wish to say is this: Is it right for us to go on, with these words of Christ before us, and have some kind of doings in the church or house of God, and have a fish-pond, post office, and all kinds of lotteries to raise money for church purposes? Does God require it of us? I say, nay. He has said in his word. that if we are faithful, he will bless us, and I do not think that he requires, or will accept of any such offering. I believe if we are faithful, and do our work well, the Lord will provide a way for his work to go on, and if he does not provide a way we may know that we have not done our duty.

We will see what Matthew says in 21: 12, 13: "And Jesus went into the Temple of God, and cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers; and the seats of them that sold doves, and said unto them: It is written, that my house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves."

Now, some may say that Christ was talking to the Jews; well, that is all true enough; but if those words were good then, why are they not to-day? I say they are surely as good to-day as they were then. Again, they may say that they do it to get money for a good cause.

I say it is not for a good cause, or it would not be necessary for them to obtain it in that way. I will leave this subject for some one who is more competent, hoping some one will take it up who is more capable of writing than I am.

THE SABBATH.

Many who violate the Sabbath are those whom it is thought do not read their The law is so plainly set forth in the Old Testament Scriptures that none can possibly mistake their meaning. The sin of Sabbath breaking is not confined to the young and thoughtless, but men and women sometimes look after things on the Sabbath day that they have failed to take time to look after during the week. The Sabbath day, and the general law regulating its observance, have never been repealed since "in the beginning," when God established them. They are just as binding upon us as they were upon the ancient Israelites. We find it recorded that the Sabbath is to be a sign, between God and his people forever; death was to be the penalty of its violation under Moses' What shall be done upon God's holy day, and what shall not be done, has been so exactly specified that none can misunderstand. Throughout the New Testament teachings, the law of the Sabbath is observed. Jesus kept the day, and went into the synagogue as his custom was. His disciples kept it; and the women who followed Him to his crucifixion, after they had seen where the precious body was entombed, went to the city and bought spices to embalm him, but were obliged to wait, the next day being the Sabbath. But early on the morning of the first day of the week they hastened to perform their office of love. We shall soon enter upon the second Sabbath of creation, and if we have not kept the Sabbath, how can we hope to be permitted to enjoy the Sabbath of a thousand years. MRS. H. B. EMERSON.

FORBEARANCE.

It would not make me sleep more peacefully
That thou wert wasting all thy life in woe
For my poor sake. What love thou hast for me
Bestow it ere I go.

Carve not upon a stone when I am dead, The praise which remorseful monrners give To woman's grave—a tardy recompense— But speak them while I live.

It is not sufficient to constitute ourselves just men and women, that we strictly pay our debts, keep our promises, and fulfill our contracts, if, at the same time, we are stern where we should be kind, hard where we should be tender, cold where we should be sympathetic; for then we pay only half our debts and repudiate the other half. What lessons of forbearance we would learn if, in the daily detail of life, there were a living realization of the sentiment couched in these words! And what vain regrets we should be spared in remember ing lost opportunities for kindness!

In every sphere, from that of most abundant luxury and ease to the daily round of most commonplace, treadmill existence, there is frequent and ample opportunity for gentle consideration and kindly forbearance as we come in contact with the foibles and peculiarities of even the most rounded and symmetrical lives, for none are without them. And how strange it seems that when those about us pass away from sight, these same foibles and peculiarities that were wont to rasp us in life, and that failed to call forth from our hearts kindly consideration and gentle forbearance, we now gild with a halo of tender memories, so that, as a part of the individuality of those gone from us, they become in our eyes either traits which attract us, or, if not so positive as this, they call forth tenderness and commiseration rather than hardness and condemnation.

How much better had we allowed them thus to appeal to the best within us during life! Alas! that then they were so apt to call forth sarcasm, cutting retort, or cold criticism. It does not seem strange that in life we are so much more apt to look upon and speak of those things that to us seem defects in the character of those about us, than to have mind and heart directed toward the many good qualities that we would surely see were our range of vision directed more frequently through the lens of love. And how much more helpful our influence were our vision and our comments thus directed. We are little aware how these affect those about us or how an injustice or unkindness, growing out of a want of kindly consideration may set far away from us under the cold tethers of a constraint which binds with gyves not easily broken, those whom our hearts should hold nearest and dearest and toward whose foibles we should extend the most kindly forbearance. For we should remember we are not without our own objectionable qualities and these may be very apparent to other eyes. Our sight is quite as apt to be closed to our own defects as it is to be open to those of others; but when we are conscious of them how grateful to us that gentle consideration and tender forbearance which loving ones extended to us. It melts the heart and warms it with aspirations after the good and ennobling.

It seems to me here is the sweet secret of the Lord's dealing with us, "The Lord is as if he did not see and perceive the sins of men; for he leads them gently; thus he bends and does not break in withdrawing them from evil and in leading them to good; wherefore he does not chastise nor punish as if he saw and perceived." And how fragrant and helpful the sphere of those who, emulating His example, allowing Him to fill them with His own Spirit of gentleness and love, according to their finite measure, exercise the spirit of charity and forbearance towards those about them. In the home, in society, everywhere, their influence is felt, and the measure of that influence for good eternity alone may tell, for it is likewise true that "all contact leaves its mark," and that "we are taking into ourselves the world about us, the society in which we move, the impress of every sympathetic contact with good or evil, and we shall carry them with us for-ever. We do not pass through a world for naught; it follows us because it has become a part of us." At the same time let us remember it becomes a part of those about us, and the character of that part may be more largely affected by our contact with and necessary impartation to them than we are aware. Remembering this, shall we not be the more kind and forbearing?

TALKED LIKE A MAN.

Good for Apostle John H. Smith. His talk in the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City last Sunday is the first bit of common sense that has been delivered there for months. He said bluffly that he did not approve of half-masting the flag, that he was an American and loved his country, and did not endorse any overt acts of insult to the flag. Compared with the treasonable harangue sent out by Taylor and Cannon on Pioneer Day, the sentiments of Apostle Smith ring like pure gold. The two addresses show at a glance that the present rule here is English through and through. The American says: "There is nothing to mourn for, if our religion is true we ought rather to rejoice, and at any rate we have no right to insult the flag of the United States." The others say: "So long as we can not defy such laws as we please to, we ought to consider ourselves in mourning, and if we please to express our grief by dishonoring the flag, none but bad men, who want to get up a revolution here, would ever think of objecting."

If Taylor and Cannon had issued just such an address in England as they did here on the twenty-fourth, before this time their hiding place would have been sought out, they would have been safe in Newgate, by next week they would be arraigned on a charge of treason and by week after next they would be on the way to some penal colony. They know by experience that they can talk treason in the United States and go unscathed; that the country which they live in is so free that the sentiment of the people is not to restrict any one's speech or thoughts, and they impose upon that generosity. They would not dare do the same thing in their native land, for they know that there justice is both sure and swift. They overdid the thing a little on the Fourth, for what they did gave them a glimpse of the fact that, slow as this Government is, there is a point beyond which the people will not wait for the Government. To conciliate that spirit, the address was given out on the Twenty-fourth; but, read closely, it is as treasonable a document as ever a band of criminals issued.

By comparison, the words of the American apostle shine like diamonds. There was no disloyality there; no excuses for ever having done a mean thing; no whining like a baby; no talk of oppression, but the manly talk of one who has the courage of his convictions, and who, no matter what differences there may be of opinion, still loves his country and respects her flag. The contrast is worth noting by Mormon people, and they would be wise if they would ignore the English rule under which they groan, and all keep in mind that they ought to be Americans!—Salt Lake Tribune.

ANOTHER SAM* JONES SERMON.

A TALK ABOUT MATTERS IN GENERAL BY THE ELOQUENT SOUTHERN REVIVALIST.

An idea is a thought worked into shape ready for hand, tongue, or foot. As you think, so you are. Tell me what you are thinking about to-day and I'll tell you what you'll be doing tomorrow. So, let me tell you, brethren, you'd better mind what you are thinking about to-day, if you know what's good for you—if you would have any respect to what you may be doing tomorrow.

You partake to the nature of the men and things by which you are surrounded. You are very much like the world around you-like your circumstances and associates. Place the worst man in Murfreesboro in good company and he'll be as good as anybody. No man can stay with me an hour and not be as good as I am—and I don't mean to say that I am over good. I only need to say that, in my presence or in the presence of any other minister of the gospel, he will not swear. I know no good man would-or, I should say, no gentleman would. I have overheard men swear who, on noticing my presence, would begin to beg my pardon. "Poor man," I have answered such, "you'd a great deal better be on your knees begging God's pardon, not mine."

There are two characters in Murfreesboro, one of whom is a Methodist. I say Methodist, for I never refer critically to any other denomination. I feel free to rebuke Methodists, and I find that keeps me as busy as I want to be kept. [Laughter] It's all I can find time to do to tote my own Methodist skillet around. [Laughter].

Well, of those two characters I am speaking about, one is a Methodist. He prays in his family, pays the preacher, and goes to prayer meeting. In fact, he does everything the church requires of him. But he swindles his neighber every chance he gets.

The other character is an outsider, outside of the church, but he won't swindle any one out of a penny. He is charitable and kind-hearted, and gives liberally to the poor. "Which is the better man of the two?" you ask. "Why, I'd better be like the big-hearted, generous, manly sinner," you say. And so would I. And on this excuse many keep out of the church. But why be a fool and be exactly like either of those characters? [Laughter]. As for me I'll come into the church and pay God what is due Him, then I'll pay the world its dues. If I rob anybody it will be you—it won't be God—and every man out of the church who hasn't given his all to God is robbing God of all the dear Father wants. ["Amen, Amen."] But I'll do right toward God and my neighbor—for such a man is in the army of Jesus Christ, and trying to do right by all.

I was called "good" myself while out of the church. O, yes; I was good! I was goodness on wheels. [Laughter.]

I know a merchant by the name of Lee. I once saw a customer come into his store to buy a plow, and he asked whether the blade was hard enough. "It seems to be too soft," was Mr. Lee's reply. Wasn't he a strange merchant? I asked him why he hadn't told the man that perhaps it wasn't hard enough, or something of that sort, but he wouldn't tell a lie. I should suppose a merchant of that kind would feel lonesome in most places—lonesome about in spots. [Laughter].

A man can lie and never open his mouth. That's the way a horse-trader lies—not knowing that to keep his mouth shut is the biggest sort of a lie. [Laughter]. I have heard men brag about cheating conductors out of a ride, and then the conductors, catching the disease, steal from the roads. Some fellows think they have done a smart trick if the conductor overlooks them and they get a free ride. Before I would do such a thing as that I'd hunt the conductor from the "smoker" to the "sleeper," and then chase him down with a pack of hounds. [Laughter].

Its ten thousand times harder to be just than generous. It is easy enough to give a poor woman a dollar, but when it comes to following a straight line, being just in all things—just to God, to your family, to your children, to all men—it is a different thing. Some men are never just to their wives. They pay their cook five dollars very willingly Saturday night, but when the hard-working, economical, painstaking wife asks for a little money Monday, the brute will say: "O, wife, what do you want with money?"

I knew a fellow in Georgia who had been married ten years. His wife one morning suggested that that was her birthday, and he said to himself: "I've got a good wife; she has been kind, self-sacrificing, and true in all respects; I must buy her a present." So he went downtown that day and walked into a store and bought himself a new hat, consoling himself that nothing would more please a good wife than to make her husband a present of a new hat. [Great laughter, especially among the married ladies]. He's the meanest man I ever saw, [laughter], and there are a great many men just that way.

We are too often unjust to our children, exacting of them things we don't do ourselves, and berating them with our tongues when they don't understand what we want. And then we are too mean to say ten words to make one of them happy. O how unjust we are to wives, husbands, children!

If you'll put a little downright justice in your conduct with your children you'll have happier homes. Did you ever start anywhere with your wife and keep hurrying her up when you ought to know she has not only to dress herself, but five children besides, while you have nothing to do but get ready. "Hurry up, hurry up;

I don't want to be too late! If you don't hurry I'll go on by myself." And after a while she tells you to "go on, husband; I'm afraid I can't get ready in time for you; I don't want to hinder you."

I've done just that way. [Laughter.] I have walked off, out the gate, and fifty yards down the road, and then I'd stop and think. I'd say, "Sam Jones, you are the meanest man living, and you sha'n't go to church nor anywhere else till you learn how to behave yourself." And then I walk back and go in and find worry in my wife's face and tears in her eyes, and I go up and put my arms around her and kiss her—there's nobody there but us two [laughter] and say, "Wife, I'm as mean as a dog; I know I am, and I want you to forgive me," and she forgives me and we get ready and go—and find ourselves the first ones there. [Laughter.]

The Lord have mercy on us; how unjust we are to our wives, our children, our brothers and sisters, and our neighbors.

There are men in this very town who meet a neighbor's wife on the street and take off their hat and bow and smile as sweet and tenderly. "How are you, madam?" and then go home and wound their own wives with their tongues. Clever to all wives but their own. And so it is with some wives; they are all smile and kind words in company, and cut their husbands to the heart with their tongues. God pity the man who has such a wife as that.

I don't scold; if I do, I intend to scold somebody else's wife. [Laughter.] I have heard mothers say, when a neighbor's child would break some article of value. "O, it doesn't matter," when, if their own child were to do it, they'd slap him clean across the room. [Laughter.] Lord give us a religion that will make us good to our wives and children and friends and neighbors. ["Amen! Amen!"]

A SENSIBLE MAN.

Editor Tribune:—Two of the brethren were noticed a few nights since on the corner of Second South and First East streets in earnest conversation on the present situation. The principal, who did nearly all the talking, was a large man of dark complexion, and he seemed deeply in earnest. He wanted to know what was to be done under the present pressure of affairs. He contended that without further delay the people should assemble and discuss freely and without restraint what was best to be done; that nothing could be clearer than the fact that the present church leaders were altogether incompetent to carry them through the difficulties and dangers that now surrounded them. As an evidence, he cited the foolish orders from headquarters to half-mast the flag on the Fourth. By so doing the whole Nation had become incensed and indignant. That the flimsy, weak and childish excuses to justify the act were unfortunate, and only made things appear worse. That if the people did not now come together and take some steps to remedy the present state of affairs they would deserve to be looked upon by all men as being mere serfs and slaves, incapable of making a single manly effort in their own behalf. "Now is the time," said he, "for some bold and fearless spirit to step forward and take the helm from the hands of those imbeciles whose commands are followed by the people only to sink them deeper in the mire. Where was Jennings, Sharp, John H. Smith and others of their prominent men? Could they stand and look coldly on without making an effort to save the people?" This was the time for some one among them who had the true ring of manhood about him to bring the people together and start the ball rolling to free them from the present unfortunate state of affairs. CHRISTIAN BRAVERY.

Bravery and cheerfulness are important elements in the Christian character. There are hard battles to be fought, wherein these qualifications are necessary for a successful contending with the adversary. Christian life is by no means to be a passive one; it has need of all the energy and determination of which the human mind is capable. The Christian must not yield to discouragements; through faith in Christ, he is continually to rise above them. He is never to give way to despair, even though hard pressed on all sides by his ever-watchful foe-even though all is dark about him, and there seems to be no hope of victory. For his Leader is omnipotent. He in whom all the Christian's strength resides is stronger than the strongest foe; and that divine strength is all available for him—all freely offered for his use. There is no need of discouragement, no need of defeat on the part of any soldier in the army of that great Captain. With his armor continually buckled about him, he is equal to the fiercest conflict.

But spiritual inactivity and sloth are not consistent with such success. Those hindrances to victory must be bravely conquered first, or there will be no heroic Christian life to meet the loving approval of the Master. Christ's soldiers are to lead no easy life of spiritual indolence; but, summoning all their energies, are to "fight the good fight of faith" as long as their Leader sees fit to keep them on the battlefield. We must "endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ" before we can hope to win the glorious prize he holds out. The time for ease and rest is not yet. It will come when the words have been pronounced "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy

In that hour of final victory will every Christian be able to realize, as he has not done in this world, how entirely he is one with his Lord. Then will he realize that it is Christ who has been fighting with him, and for him, and in him, in every battle of life. And then will he enter upon a new life, wherein the temptation will never come to him as it does now, to sever himself practically from that blessed union with his Lord.

Miscellaneous.

SAINTS' REUNION.

Final arrangements for the Reunion to be held at Wheeler's Gove, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa, have been made. The meeting commences Saturday, September 5th, 1885, holding over two Sundays. The camp grounds are on the lands of Bro. Carlos Smith, five miles east of Macedonia, which is the nearest Railway station. The grove is a fine one for the purpose; plenty of water, wood free to all, hay and grain will be furnished at reasonable rates; tents will be pitched on the grounds for the use of those coming from a distance by Railway; meals will be furnished on the grounds to those belonging to the church at twenty-five cents each; there will also be a lunch counter and fresh beef and bread daily. The preachers will be provided for free.

All who arrive Friday and Saturday, the 4th and 5th, at Macedonia, will be conveyed to the camp free. Conveyance thereafter to and from the depot will be charged for. Parties coming over the C. B. & Q. Railway must time their departure from home so as to arrive at Hastings, Iowa, before noon, as there is but one train each day up that branch to Macedonia, and no train at all on Sunday. Reduced rates have been secured at one and one-third fares for round trip over C. B. & Q. road as far east as Chariton. Rates have been applied for over the C. R. I. & P. Railway. Persons coming over that road must change at Avoca for Carson, thence for Macedonia. (Arrive at Avoca early in the morning). Bring sufficient bedding with you. Straw will be supplied. Any one wishing further particulars can write me at Henderson, Iowa.

Brethren W. W. Blair, J. R. Lambert, C. Derry, M. H. Forscutt, James W. Gillen and Joseph Mc Dowell will be with us, and probably E. L. Kelley and Bishop Blakeslee. We anticipate a large gathering, as we are in the midst of large districts from which we may always expect a large turn out. This, in connection with our splendid camping advantages, will tend to make it a very pleasant time. Come one and all and chjoy the blessing of the Spirit.

Yours in the faith,

D. Hougas.

PARK BLUFF CAMP MEETING.

Excursion rates of one and one-third fare for the round trip to the Park Bluff camp meeting at Montrose, Iowa, to commence September 20th, has been secured over all the lines of the C. B. & Q. R. R., in Iowa, and in Illinois, as far up as Kewanee and New Boston; also over the C. B. & K. C. Tickets will be sold commencing Saturday, September 20th, good to return on the 29th. Arrangements are also being made for reduced rates over the H. & St. Joe, and the Des Moines and Keokuk branch of the C. R. I. & P. Notice will be given in due time, when the latter is ascertained. Let every body take advantage of this opportunity.

ELDER H. C. BRONSON.

Montrose, Iowa, Aug. 13, 1885.

MARRIED.

CRUM-COMLEY .- At the residence of Elder W. Vickery, near Plano, Illinois, June 25th, 1885, Bro. George F. Crum to sister Hattie Comley, both of Plano; Elder Vickery officiating. May their pathway be smooth all through life, with peace, joy and happiness.

WILLIAMS.—At Church Hill, Ohio, July 29th, 1885, Sr. Mary D., wife of Bro. W. D. Williams. She was born December 20th, 1820, at Cepn-Cold-y-Cymer, Wales; united with the church in or about the year 1850; and after coming to America she became identified with the Reorganization at Brookfield, Ohio. She bore a strong testimony to the truthfulness of the latter day work on her dying bed, and exhorted those around her to faithfulness, so as to be worthy to meet her in the kingdom of God. She also stated that her present suffering was nothing to be compared with the degree of happiness which she would enjoy in the paradise of God. The funeral sermon was preached by Bro. G. T. Griffiths, in the Presbyterian Church, to a full house,

"Bereaved friends, weep not for her, Whose place is vacant here; Your loss is great, but she has gained A brighter, happier sphere.'

Logan.—In Philadelphia, Pa., May 17th, 1885, Elder James Logan, in his sixtieth year. He was for some years an Elder in the church in the times of Joseph the Seer, and united with the Reorganization about six years ago. He was a firm and enthusiastic believer in the restored gospel.

THE MULLEIN PLANT.

A GOOD deal has been written lately about the mullein plant and its efficiency as a cure for consumption. Extracts and decoctions of this plant (Verbascum thapsus) were recently exhibited at the Cork Exhibition, but the judges would not pass any verdict, as the chemical and physiological properties have not yet been investigated. It is, under the synonym of cow's lungwort, popularly looked upon as of value in diseases of the respiratory organs.

In reference to the use of the above, Dr. Quinlan, of Dublin, writes to the British Medical Journal that three ounces of the green leaves should be boiled for ten minutes in a pint of new milk. The liquid is then strained, sweetened to taste and drank while warm. This dose can be repeated twice or three times a day. This high authority has no doubt of its efficacy as a curative in the earlier, and a palliative in the later stages of pulmonary consumption. Care should be taken to use the leaves of the great mullein, known by its thick, mucilaginous and woolley leaves.

PHOTOGRAPHING LANGUAGE.—The idea has occurred to a foreign teacher of the dumb to photograph the movements of the lips when articulating the different sounds which go to make up an ordinary speech. It will easily be imagined that the model chosen for the pictures must be some one whose lips will give expressive action. But once photographed, the pictures can be multiplied by the thousand, and can be used as alphabets for our afflicted fellows all the world over. It is said that the pictures are so well adapted to their purpose that anyone can see at a glance what sound is indicated by each lip movement portrayed.

THERE is nothing to be more admired than a true man, a man of sincere and honest convictions, who is true to his principles, and who cannot be induced to abandon them by any prospect of preferment or worldly gain. Such a man has a conscience, and a sense of his responsibility. He regards truth, and right, and duty as paramount to everything else, and no consideration can induce him to disregard them. Such a man is always reliable. You know where to find him. He will never deceive you, nor betray your confidence.

THE "MANUSCRIPT FOUND."

IT has been deemed best to not print any more of the "Manuscript Story" in the HERALD, but to publish it at once in pamphlet form and place it on the market. It will make a book of about the size of the Voice of Warning, and will cost, postpaid, twenty-five cents in paper covers, and forty cents in fancy cloth. A liberal discount will be made to agents and booksellers.

THE following letter from Pres. Joseph Smith furnishes further evidence that the Utah leaders are afraid of their craft, for it is evident they dare not encourage nor even permit their followers to hear President Smith on vital questions at issue. They ought to reread the books they profess to believe, and carefully note the promises made to the "lineage" and "seed" and "posterity" of Joseph the Seer, and then ask themselves if their treatment of the eldest son of the Seer is consistent with their professions of faith in and veneration for the great prophet Joseph. The traditions of the Utah church up to 1860 were that "Little Joseph" would eventually occupy his father's place at the head of the great latter day work. In view of this Brigham often said, in public and in private, that he was "neither a prophet, nor the son of a prophet," but that he presided because the people chose to have it so; and that "young Joseph" would at some time lead the church. But after Joseph, in 1860, began active opposition to polygamy and kindred heresies, then Brigham Young said David would lead the church. The Lord promised Joseph the Seer, Dec. 6th, 1832, in Doctrine and Covenants, that his priesthood would continue in his literal seed after him, in these words: "Ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God; therefore your life and the priesthood hath remained, and must needs remain through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began." This is the decree of heaven; and if the Utah leaders believed and honored it, they would not commit the evil of rejecting the "lineage" to whom these divine promises are made, nor refuse to hear him, and also refuse to give him a house in which to speak.

The Lord said to Joseph the Seer in the revelation of January 19th, 1841, Doctrine and Covenants: "For this anointing [of the Holy Priesthood] have I put upon his head, that his blessing [Prophet, Seer, and President of the Church] shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him; and as I said unto Abraham, concerning the kindreds of the earth, even so I say unto my servant Joseph, in thee and in thy seed, shall the kindred of the earth be blessed." By this the Utah leaders may learn that heaven has ordained and decreed that the "seed" of the Seer, "the head of his posterity after him," must and will succeed him in blessing "the kindred of the earth," and that when they dishonor that "seed," that "posterity," they dishonor God's appointments and are fighting against Him. And further, in 1844, Joseph the Seer wrote to Hon. John C. Calhoun in behalf of the interests of the Latter Day Saints, and in that remarkable letter is this prediction in respect to the work of himself and posterity: "While I have powers of body and mind; while water runs and grass grows; while virtue is lovely and vice hateful; and while a stone points out a sacred spot where a fragment of American liberty once was, I, or my posterity will plead the cause of injured innocence."-Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 295.

And yet with all these immutable promises before them, the Utah leaders refuse to hear the "seed" of the Seer, refuse him their houses of worship, and deny to him the courtesies they readily extend to political orators and sectarian ministers. What is the meaning of all this? And what will be the end of it? The Utah leaders can not blot out history; they can not defeat the decrees of heaven; neither can they frustrate the designs and purposes of God. They should be consistent with their professions, and so gain the favor of God and good men.

SODA SPINGS, Idaho, August 12th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: It it as I feared here. The Bishop, Lowe, refuses us the meeting house, point blank. An effort will be made to get the school house in the upper town. If that can not be had we will try the lower town school house. Apostle F. D. Richards is here, leaves this afternoon for Salt Lake or Ogden. Whether the Bishop here acts on his direction or not, I can not say. I met him this forenoon, and had a little desultory chat. He expressed a desire to have a chat on doctrine, "not by way of controversy," but for "information," of course.

A leading man here married an old woman having a daughter. He had a number of children by the old woman (?). At the adoption of the Edmunds' law he put away the old woman, and at once married the daughter—devilish!

I met yesterday evening a son of the late Judge J. C. Wright, once of Brigham City. He is bitter toward the Utah Church. His father seriously mistreated his step-mother, his mother dying at Council Bluffs, Iowa. And after his father reached Salt Lake, he married this man's step-mother, and in course of time took a sixteen year old girl for a second. This girl first took the best rooms in the house, and finally turned the wife out of doors, "neck and crop." The old man then took a Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Plural, and in the whole business led "a — of a life; thirtyeight children as one result." Truly here "a man's enemies are they of his own household."

Aug. 13th.—We had excellent meeting at Malad, using the Court House. Bro. Luff spoke in the forenoon, congregation fair in number, and attentive. I spoke in the afternoon and evening; house full at night, and attention excellent. Bro. John Lewis presided at each meeting, and an excellent spirit seemed to be present. Bro. Lewis thinks that good was done. Several were over from Samaria, across the valley to the west, who expressed a desire that we should pay them a visit over there on our return, which we have promised to take into consideration. We left them feeling well at Malad. The branch is building a neat little chapel, 26 x 40 feet in size. Plastering is now being done. It is thought that they will be ready to dedicate it by September 1st to 10th. We will return then (Bro. Luff and I) for the occasion, nothing intervening to prevent.

Bro. Nels Johnson brought us over to McCommon, yesterday, and we came up on the freight, reaching here at 10-10 p.m. Captain John Codman was waiting at the depot, and escorted us to his home, where we were made welcome. He and his wife are sojourners here for the summer. I am their guest while I stay: Bro. Luff being at Sr. Eliason's. We will stay over Sunday.

Franklin D. Richards and son are here. The young man is making a home here for the summer. There seems not to be much of a chance for meetings, though we will see. Heber J. Grant's family are here also. Frost was observed here at Bro. Anderson's, near Sr. Eliason's, this morning. It is quite cold, as compared with the weather at Salt Lake City the last two weeks of my stay there.

Aug. 14th.—Capt. Codman and wife are very pleasant people, making my stay here very agreable. Both are well informed in regard to the territories and the Mormons in them; and I am gaining information, as well as enjoying the most leisurely four days I have experienced for years. The air is sulphurous, especially at night. At first it was oppressive, but now I breathe more freely. This is 5,830 feet above sea level, and dry as dust and air can be. Were it not for the exuberance of the exudations from the pores of your mother and mine-earth-there would be no water here. Capt. Codman is of the opinion that there is an increased rain-fall, and that sooner or later the climate here will be no healthier than in other places. I find the grasses more abundant and in better variety than in Utah or the Malad Valley, so far as I can judge by casual observation.

I thank you for the clipping sent me. If the gods have not made some of the Utahians mad, the Devil or lust has made them blind so that they can not see either the signs of the times, or "when good cometh." Bro. Luff and I are going to Sulphur Lake this forenoon, driving the Captain's team.

August 17th.—After I last wrote you stating that that meeting-house had been refused, Sr. Caroline Eliason went to the Bishop, Mr. Lowe, and by her method of persuasion obtained the house. Not only that, but the officers of the Sunday School gave us their time 10.30, so that we had the meeting house for that hour and at 4:30 in the evening, an hour after the adjournment of their testimony meeting at 2 p. m. Bishop Lowe was present, and with some of his folks did the singing for us. I attended their meeting in the afternoon and was invited by the Bishop and Mr. Rose, one of the counselors, to sit with them, which I did. I heard Mr. Lowe, F. S. Richards, (the lawyer-son of F. D. the apostle) and a Mr. Hopkins, the only ones who spoke. All that was said was respectful. Mr. Richards warmly commended one point I made, and that was, I complained of being called an apostate, &c., and showed why I was not, and denied the right of any disciple of Christ to so sit in judgment on his fellow men.

In the afternoon at 4.30, we had the house again. This time, Mr. Horsley led the singing, and a daughter of Bishop Lowe played the organ—the music was good. I spoke from Matt. 24: 14, and tried to show the close relationship the prophecy had to the latter day work, and why nothing should be permitted to intervene to prevent us taking active part in fulfilling it; that whatever debarred the fulfilling of it was not in accord with the will of God as expressed in the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. I used the books I found lying on their own table. I had good audiences and excellent attention. Young Mr. Richards had told some of them that they need not fear to go and hear me, that I gave my views in a frank and respectful way. I talked upon principle and plainly, mentioned no hames in disrespect, but claimed the right to examine the publicly stated views of all men.

This is the first place where I have had a house owned and controlled by the church dominant, and I feel desirous of stating it. If you have my letter stating the refusal of the house here in type, or any reference to, please correct. Bro. Anderderson went for the house and was refused; Sr. Eliason went for it and procured it.

I have had a pleasant visit with Capt. John Codman and wife; and with father Bowman, Nels Anderson and family, H. Moore and wife, Sr. Eliason and family, Sr. Peacock, and some of the Saints from Blackfoot and the Springs, Bro. H. Hansen, wife and wife's mother. Mr. Horsley, the keeper of the co-op store here, visited the Captain's Saturday evening, and we had a pleasant visit. His mother is a Josephite, from England, came two or three years ago.

Bro. Moore was cut off the Brighamite church at his own request because he could not stand the "trimmings,"—plural wifery, &c. His wife, three years in the country now, was cut off because she married a Gentile. So it goes.

Our visit here will result in good I think; but how and when, time must tell. We have at least had a rest, and recreation; besides the benefit of this wonderful laboratory of Nature's own devising. If J. B. Gough, had ever been here, he could have had spices for his glowing description of the places where the sparkling nectar was brewed. Brigham Spring is, to my taste, the finest water, but it is plain, and seems heavy after drinking of the Lane, Octagon, Hooper, Ninety per cent., and the spring at the Old Ford, in lowertown. The Williams Spring I have not tasted. But of all the others, and a spring at the sulphur beds, and of Sulphur Lake, I have. Take two dozen eggs gathered in the late summer from the dirty nests and the setting hens, &c., wash them in a small quantity of water, kept clear if possible, throw in some salt, sulphur, soda, ipecac, or any rotten stuff you can get, and you have Sulphur Lake water. Faugh!

Bro. Bowman, Sr Eliason, Luff and I go to Swan Lake this forenoon.

Yours in bonds,

Joseph Smith.

RAMBLING MINISTERS.

A FAITHFUL minister in the field writes of late, saying: "I know the Church expects some returns for labor and means expended; but if the labor of one is to be extended over so much territory, but little can be accomplished in the way of additions to the Church."

The advice of the First Presidency is now what it has been to the ministry, to work thoroughly and well the field they occupy, and to use as little time and means in traveling from place to place as at all practicable. In other words, the minister should by prayer and careful investigation find a good field for his labor, a field to which he is every way fairly well adapted, and then labor and pray and wait with all the energy of his soul, and gather in all that is possible as fruits of his labor.

Occasionally there are ministers who make their labors more like a pleasure tour than the work of Christ's harvesters, fishermen, or shepherds, and such should reform radically, or quit their efforts. Ministerial duty means work—honest, faithful, wise and persistent work! The brother who writes us, is not of the slack or rambling kind, but is a humble, active, spiritual minister; and he repels this hurtful practice of rambling around wasting precious time, including temporal means.

Any minister who will fritter away time or money should be reported to those having charge, and if speedy and suitable amends are not made, then he should step down and give place to those more worthy. The church has plenty of room for wise, spiritual, energetic workers, but has no place for the idle, and the lovers of pleasure.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In another place it will be seen that Bro. J. B. Rodger wishes a carriage maker and repairer to locate in the shop adjoining his blacksmith shop in this place for mutual benefit. This is a promising chance for some competent, energetic worker.

Bishop G. A. Blakeslee and Counsellor E. L. Kelley have been with us for the past few days, actively engaged in their special work—the temporal concerns of the church. Last Saturday and Sunday (15th and 16th) they held services at Pleasanton, twelve miles east of here, and report large congregations and excellent interest. Their labors in this place and vicinity have been arduous, and results are promising. They start to-day (19th) for Lucas, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Salt Lake, and San Francisco. They are faithful, true, and trustworthy.

Five have recently been baptized into the church here at Lamoni by Brn. H. A. Stebbins and A. S. Cochran. Others are likely to follow at no distant day. Bro. Stebbins did some preaching at Lucas and Cleveland late in July and early in August, and attended as district president to some branch affairs. He baptized one man while he was there.

The lower story of the Latter Day Saints' Chapel will soon be ready for meeting purposes.

Sr. Harriet Royales of Anglesea, Cape May Co., N. J., writes us under date of the 15th inst., that her husband, brother Robert Royales, was drowned when bathing in the sea, at about 11 a. m., Wednesday the 12th inst., and that the physicians think he was seized with cramp or heart disease. We sympathize with the sister in her sudden bereavement.

Bro. C. H. Hassall of Manchester, England, sent us a fair article in refutation of statements made in the Bolton (Eng.) Guardian, in relation to the origin of polygamy among the Mormons and the meagreness of British emigrants to Utah, but we had in press a similar article by Elder Joseph Dewsnup, which will be found in this issue, and so do not publish the one from Bro. Hassall.

Lamoni and the country around it continue to improve in a steady and substantial way, and prospects for future developement are good.

The weather has been dry and cool of late. Grasshoppers are doing some harm to meadows. Health of the community is generally good. Crops promise fairly, and fruit only middling.

Elder F. M. Sheehy writes that "church interests are working quite nicely" in his field, and promises us a letter of details soon.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Levi Gamet says in a late letter: "I think any man who, without prejudice, will stop long enough to compare the Book of Mormon with the "Manuscript Found" will have no mon with the "Manuscript Found," will have no trouble in seeing that there can not be the remotest connection between the two. Thus, in the providence of God, one of the chief obstacles that has served to obscure the light of truth is being removed."

A highly esteemed member of the church, a talented contributor and correspondent says:

"I have read Bro. Bays' article on the Christian Sabbath with deep interest. Some of his arguments seemed good, and others seemed poor. But the revelation of August 7th, 1831, settles the question for me. (The Seventh-day Sabbath having always been in my mind an established fact, I suppose I had overlooked the true significance of the revelation). I now gladly accept the Lord's day as the Sabbath."

A worthy Elder writes us of late as follows:

"The amount of nonsense that has been indulged in by some ministers in the past is bearing ripened fruit. The law that should have been understood and honored in reference to baptisms, ordinations, the exercise of the gifts, &c., has been almost totally ignored. No man is fit, in my opinion, to safely represent the church as an Elder, who does not read the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, nor take nor read the Herald. Good Saints have been and are distressed. The cause has been seriously hindered, but happily there are signs of improvement in some quarters, although there is much work to undo by some one."

Brother Peter Anderson writing from Pleasant Grove, Utah, to Bro. Scott, under date of 11th ult., says:

"Last Sunday I spoke to the Scandinavians in this place at the house of Bro. J. C. Jensen, and had a good congregation. A number of our people here believe in the Josephite doctrine. I shall probably remain here all of this month."

Elder Hiram Rathbun writes from Marshall, Michigan, the 12th inst., and says:

"Our meetings here are of some interest. While some reject, there are others willing to investigate the truth, and there are a good many respectable and attentive listeners."

THE Pleasonton (Iowa) correspondent of the Leon Journal has this to say of Elders Blakeslee and Kelley, and their sermons in that place the 15th and 16th inst.

"We have heard a great number of begging sermons during our short church experience and some prior to that time, and can say we never enjoyed them much. But we are now willing to admit that they can be presented in an interesting manner when properly handled. Bishop Blakeslee and Elder E. L. Kelly filled the pulpit for the Latter Day Saints on last Saturday evening and Sunday morning, and also at night. Their subject was tithing. Bishop Blakeslee presented the claims of the church in this respect in a very interesting manner. He was followed by Elder Kelley Sunday night on the same subject, the Elder laying down the law to the church members in a plain, practical discourse, which opened the eyes of many who heretofore have been profoundly ignorant on this subject. Elder Kelley is a preacher of pleasant address, and follows the four rules when speaking formulated by Dio Lewis, viz: Rule 1-Stand erect. Rule 2—Use a low key. Rule 3—Speak deliberately. Rule 4-Articulate distinctly."

THE REBELLIOUS.

Below will be found a clipping from the Middleton, Manchester (England) Guardian, of the 25th ult., which brings vividly to mind the prophecy of the young Seer, given November 1st, 1831, in respect to "the rebellious." A rebel is one who revolts against or renounces "the authority of the laws and Government to which he owes allegiance." The rebellious are those engaged in "traitorously renouncing the authority and dominion of the government to which allegiance is due."-Webster. Applying this principle to the Saints, it is easy to find "the rebellious;" for the revelations to the church in the Doctrine and Covenants, in connection with the Book of Mormon and the New Testament, did constitute, and do now constitute, the law for the government of the church. The Doctrine and Covenants is the "authority" of the Lord's servants (D. C. 1: 2, 5; 41: 1, 2; 42: 5, 16), in a pre-eminent sense. The first section in said Doctrine and Covenants plainly declares, as a matter of first importance for the ministry and people to know, that said book embraces the "authority," and was the "authority by which the ministry were to be governed, and govern the church:—"Behold, this is mine authority, and the authority of my Servants." Section 41: 1, 2, (Rev. Feb. 4, 1831), confirms this view:

"Hearken, O ye elders of my church whom I have called; behold I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together to agree upon my word, and by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church, and have all things right before me And I will be your Ruler when I come; and behold I come quickly? and ye shall see that my law is kept. He that receiveth my law and doeth it, the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you; for it is not meet that the things which belong to the children of the kingdom, should be given that are not worthy, or to dogs, or the pearls to be cast before swine.

Another evidence for this position is found in Section 42: 5, and 16. (Rev. given Feb. 9th, 1831):—

"And again, the elders, priests and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them."

"Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues."

Here then is shown the "authority" of the ministry, and upon what must ever rest the "government" of the church. When any one in the Church revolts from or resists this authority—this government—they are "the rebellious" spoken of in these revelations. The ministry are bound to govern the church by this law; and they themselves are personally bound to honor and obey said law; and when either member or minister wilfully fails to do this, they are "the rebellious."

It is a painful duty—yet a duty it is—for the Lord's servants to point out the "iniquities" and "secret acts" of the rebelious. But it must be done, and it will be done, for the Lord said through the young Seer,—(then but twenty-six years of age):

"Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of him who dwells on high, and whose eyes are upon all men; yea, verily I say, hearken ye people from afar, and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together; for verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape, and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated; and the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow, for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the house-tops, and their secret acts shall be revealed; and the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days, and they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I, the Lord, have commanded them."—D. & C. 1:1.

The "posterity" of the Seer are engaged in reproving and rebuking the errors and evils of "the rebellious" in a most public way—"on the house-tops"—and Elder Dewsnup and many others are doing similarly; and thus it is that the work and the revelations of the Young Seer and proven to be of God.

Elder Dewsnup says:

"MORMONISM."

[To the Editor of the Guardian].

Sir,-From the paragraph on "Mormonism," that appeared in your issue of the 11th inst., it would seem that the missionary efforts of the "Elders" of the Utah Mormon Church are meeting with a fair amount of success, chiefly amongst the Danish and Scandinavian peasantry. The English artisan and agricultural laborer have become more wary, and are not so easily entrapped by the representations of these energetic Elders. Speaking from personal knowledge of these matters, I may say that Utah Mormonism is at a very low ebb indeed in Lancashire and Yorkshire, and I believe that those shires represent very fairly the whole of this country in its attitude towards that system. The estimates of Mormon emigration for the half-years ending June 1853-4, show that the emigration of residents of Great Britain amounted to no less than 1,722 in the first period, but in the following year the number had fallen to 1,300, and from that time to the present the decrease has been more or less continuous, showing, according to the report in your last issue, an average of 356 of the subjects of the Queen for the half-year ending the 30th ult., and I have little doubt but that many of that number were children, and non-members of the Mormon Church. The statement that "Joseph Smith, the son of the Vermont farmer," was the author of the so-called revelation, upon which is predicated the practice of polygamy in Utah, is open to serious question, Brigham Young and the energetic Elders to the contrary notwithstanding, for there is not a scrap of evidence of any such bias in the public records of the preachings and teachings of Joseph Smith up to the time of his death in June, 1844, but wherever he had occasion to mention the practice, it was only to condemn and denounce it as a crime contrary to the laws of God and man. Many people assume that the authority for this practice is obtained from the "Book of Mormon," but like many other assumptions, in reference to the Latter Day Saints, it is the opposite of the truth, for in that book polygamy is denounced as a crime and "abominable in the sight of God," and the Book of Covenants and Commandments to the church classes the crime of fornication and polygamy together, declaring that a "Man shall have one wife, and a woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either are at liberty to marry again," thus conclusively showing that these energetic Elders who are teaching and preaching polygamy are apostate to the cardinal principles upon which the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was originally founded, and that church can not in justice be held accountable for the barefaced attempt of the late Brigham Young to engraft heathen sensuality upon a western and Christian institution. The energetic Elders would have us believe that their system is a necessity, and conducive to social purity. Social purity indeed! Facts prove that so far it has been conducive to the opposite, having much to answer for, in hearts broken, and homes destroyed, through its grossly carnal and pernicious influences. An example of Utah social purity may be found in the following extracts from the evidence of a so-called "plural wife," given so recently as the 27th May last, before United States Commissioner, McKay, in the case of Charles Seal, examined on the charges of polygamy and unlawful cohabitation. The witness, Maria Buckridge, stated that she "had gone through the endowment house with him, and was sealed to him for elernity. This was on August the 2d, 1883. Did not consider sealing to be marriage. Made no vows or covenants, and did not remember the ceremony of sealing. She had understood that she was to be defendant's wife for eternity, but not for this life . . . had never occupied a bed room with defendant at his house. . . . Examined by Mr. Dickson-Have you ever been in bed with him in any other house?-Yes. After you were sealed to him?-Yes. Cross-examined by F. S. Richards--Had never been acknowledged as Seal's wife here, but expected to be in eternity. Did not consider there was any sin in living with him here. She understood the relationship of husband and wife was to exist in eternity, and she was not to be acknowledged as his wife here. Defendant had never acknowledged her as such." Salt Lake Deseret Evening News, (Church Organ), May 28th, 1885. How is this for social purity? And it is for such a system that hearts are blighted and homes destroyed, while the canting, sneaking hypocrites, the energetic Elders, are sniggering at their success in building up this monstrous iniquity, which preys upon our wives and daughters, in the name of God and religion, with the sole object of increasing their numbers by procreation. and at the same time gratifying the lustful desires of leading men in the Utah Church hierarchy. As a sample of the home breaking proclivities of these energetic Elders, I will give you an instance that occurred in your immediate neighborhood within the last three years. A Mr. R. (an Elder) formerly a resident of Middleton Junction, aged about sixty years, did clandestinely leave his aged wife, and embark for the "promised land." After a time he condescended to communicate with her, and eventually informed her that he would be obliged to take another wife, because the authorities of the Church had directed him to do so, under pain of losing his priesthood. Another recent instance may be mentioned that occurred in the family of a gentleman of means, also residing near Manchester. The gentleman here mentioned had been formerly connected with "Mormonism," but had withdrawn himself therefrom some years ago, permitting his wife to continue her connection therewith. Some two years ago this foolish woman became infatuated with the desire to go to Utah, but her husband would not give his consent. However, by some means she obtained her passage money, and under the pretence of visiting her friends at a distance, she took the opportunity of embarking at Liverpool, and from there making her way to the land of her dreams and prayers. Since her arrival in Salt Lake City she has communicated with her family, who find her, now the glamour has worn off, eager to return to the arms of her husband and the bosom of her family. I might repeat numbers of such cases, but your space forbids, for I am afraid that I have already trespassed too much upon your time and patience, but trust that my earnest desire to prevent others being entrapped into this vicious system, as represented by the energetic Elders of the Utah Mormon Church, may be accepted as a sufficient excuse in asking a place in your columns.

I remain yours obediently,

JOSEPH DEWSNUP.

JARMAN REFORM.

WE have before us a Sheffield, (England), paper containing a lengthy and fair spirited editorial entitled "Anti-Mormon Riots in Sheffield," which gives the details of a most disgraceful attack by one W. Jarman and a large body of fellow-mobbers upon a Utah Mormon Conference in Temperance Hall, in that city. It seems to have been a thoroughly premeditated and prearranged affair, and that Jarman was actuated by at least two base motives—one to procure notoriety and secure large attendance at his professional "anti-Mormon" lectures; and the other, the wreaking of malignant hate upon the Mormons.

This same Jarman traveled and lectured in the United States against the Mormons with but very indifferent success; for the American people will not long tolerate what smacks of persecution, even though it be under the guise of morality or religion. And it strikes us that the average "Britisher" will not tolerate a "reformer" who violates, in a most public and flagrant way, the ordinary civilities and decencies of society and also the laws of the land. Mobs are brutal—the relics of barbarism—and their promoters and abettors should be frowned down, and, if necessary, crushed out by the strong arm of civil law.

We have heard of this Mr. Jarman and his career in Utah, and that, too, by others than the Mormons. And if the estimate placed upon him by those who professed to know him be near the truth, he should engage in the work of reform in his own life for at least a quarter of a century. We are no friend to Mormon evils and errors, nor have we any respect for the Jarman—kind of reformers. Out on them!

MOUND CITY, Missouri, August 10th, 1885.

Editors Herald:—From the tenor of the Editorial note at the close of our article on "Tithing and Gathering," in the Herald June 6th, 1885, we are satisfied that the Editor did not understand the points we endeavored to make as objections to the teachings as found on first page of Herald for January 17th, 1885. We urged two points as objections to the teachings there presented.

1st.—That simply "a certificate from the Bishop," stating that a person had been tithed, was short of the requirements of the law, as our understanding of the law was that the Bishop was to give him who complied with the law, "A writing that shall secure unto him his portion, that he shall hold it, even this right and this inheritance in the church." And in another place it speaks of the "portion that is deeded unto him," and this in order to "make all things sure according to the laws of the land." Not being able to understand that simply a "certificate" was equivalent to a "deed," we objected, and claimed that it fell short of the requirements of the law just as much as a certificate fell short of being a deed.

2d.—The teachings in Herald for January 17th, 1885, says: "If an agreement was not reached between the member and the Bishop, then the Bishop was to go his way leaving the matter as it was before," without any intimation that anything further should or could be done to effect the object in view. To this our objection was, that instead of the Bishop dropping the matter then and there—as the teaching seemed to indicate—he was to proceed to lay the matter before a council of twelve High Priests, as the instructions of Joseph Smith to Bishop Partridge plainly taught. The "writing" or "deed" from the Bishop to the member of course being legal and valid, whether obtained without or with the aid of the council of High Priests.

The reason of the appearance of this explanation at this late date is from the fact that I have sent an explanation—in connection with other matter intended for the Herald—in two other communications which have failed to make their appearance in the Herald.

Yours, &c.,

Joseph Flory.

"THE Law and its Teachers," in the HERALD for January 17th, 1885, does not intimate that no further action might be had where a person wishing to consecrate of his property could not agree with the Bishop's opinion and judgment in the matter. It does not intimate but that the party could appeal from the judgment of the Bishop, and so require the Bishop "to lay the case before" a council of "twelve High Priests" for final adjustment. It simply omitted to mention that such procedure might be had, if the party who objected to the ruling or judgment of the Bishop saw fit to require it. The Bishop could not compel said party to appeal to the said council, therefore, the initial steps must be taken by those who object to the official judgment of the Bishop in the premises. Yes; persons consecrating to the Bishop are to receive back "a writing that shall secure unto him his portion [whatever he receives back at the hands of the Bishop] that he shall hold it, even this right and this inheritance [whatever it may prove to be] in the Church." On this point the Editorial says: "This certificate constituted the individual a steward over his own property, as a steward unto God, not the church, and filled the law."

The editoral in question did not intimate but that the Bishop, after agreeing with a party in regard consecrations, and giving him a "certificate," could then "deed" to him whatever of right and in law should be deeded.

And as to the non-appearence in the HERALD of the articles alluded to by Bro. Flory, we have to say:—1st, we exercised the right given, and discharged the duty imposed by the Board of Publication and by General Conference, of rejecting what in our judgment antagonizes the pronounced and confirmed policy, doctrine, and rulings of the church; 2d, because one of said articles proposed to discuss either the right, or propriety, or both, of the Editor in rejecting a previous article. And now that all may see whether the said editorial conflicts or harmonizes with the letter of the Seer to Edward Partridge, we give the said letter below:

BRO. EDWARD PARTRIDGE; Sir:-I proceed to answer your questions, concerning the consecration of property:-First, it is not right to condescend to very great particulars in taking inventories. The fact is this, a man is bound by the law of the church, to consecrate to the Bishop, before he can be considered a legal heir to the kingdom of Zion; and this, too, without constraint; and unless he does this, he can not be acknowledged before the Lord, on the Church Book: therefore, to condscend to particulars, I will tell you that every man must be his own judge, how much he should receive, and how much he should suffer to remain in the hands of the Bishop. I speak of those who consecrate more than they need for the support of themselves and their families.

The matter of consecration must be done by the mutual consent of both parties; for to give the Bishop power to say how much every man shall have, and he be obliged to comply with the Bishop's judgment, is giving to the Bishop more power than a king has; and, upon the other hand, to let every man say how much he needs, and the Bishop be obliged to comply with his judgment, is to throw Zion into confusion, and make a slave of the Bishops. The fact is, there must be a balance or equilibrium of power between the Bishop and the people; and thus harmony and good will be preserved among you.

Therefore, those persons consecrating property to the Bishop in Zion, and then receiving an inheritance back, must shew reasonably to the Bishop that he wanis as much as he claims. But in case the two parties can not come to a mutual agreement, the Bishop is to have nothing to do about receiving their consecrations; and the case must be laid before a Council of twelve High Priests; the Bishop not being one of the Council, but he is to lay the case before them.—Mill. Star, vol. 14, p. 450.

WALLSEND, New South Wales, July 14th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:-I am trying to get the branches and Elders in line with the church in records, certificates, reports, etc. We have received twelve by baptism in this branch since we have been holding meetings here; we expect to baptize a young man next Sunday. I expect to start week after next, either to Victoria or Nambuccra, according to word, which I expect to get from the brethren in those places. The wet, cold, dismal weather continues, so we can not do any outdoor preaching. The Saints have engaged a good hall, in which they will meet twice Sundays, for Sunday School and testimony meeting, and preaching. We are well, Emma and Addie are quite contented. We will move into a small house in the settlement, and the brethren will take care of them while I am away. I prize the Herald more than ever, and am much pleased with the Expositor. The latter day work seems to be on a firmer footing now than it ever was. May it continue to be stronger and brighter, until the bridegroom will come. May peace abide with you and all the Israel of God.

Joseph F. Burton.

CHESTER, Illinois,

August 12th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Our little branch in striving to live as becometh Saints, although we have many trials to undergo, in the scorn and contempt of the people; for while all is quiet, they do not seem to think anything about religion. Yet when we lift a warning voice they begin similar to those of old, "Great is the goddess Diana of the Ephesians," etc. We are led to rejoice greatly with the work, and our prayers are that Bro. Joseph may be like unto Moses, that he may lead the children of Israel out of bondage. For this we shall ever pray. I think our church publications are just splendid. [We hope they may prove worthy of such praise.—Ed.]

Your brother in the one faith,

JASPER M. TOUSLEY.

Buchanan, Henry Co., Tenn., August 11th, 1885.

W. W. Blair, Beloved Brother:-I have been very busy since coming here, preaching in different places in Kentucky and Tennessee. It is somewhat difficult to get a fair hearing, but I think prejudice is givingway to some extent, as I have been permitted to speak in places where the brethren were formerly locked out. I have been blessed with most excellent liberty in presenting the word, and the power of God has been displayed in a marvelous manner in healing the sick, to the great joy of the Saints. On Sunday last I had the privilege of replying to an indirect attact on our faith by an old Campbellite minister. on the subject of miracles. I spoke an hour and a half, he interrupting me from time to time. At the close he asked liberty to make a few remarks, which, of course were granted, and he acknowed that I might be right. This occurred at a place where heretofore we have not been able to get a hearing at all, and I hope will be the means of doing a great amount of good. Altogether I feel encouraged to press on, being assured that we shall reap if we faint not. I rejoice in the prospects of other missions, and am glad to hear the good news from Utah; but the responsibilities of this extended field, without help, rests heavily upon me. I know that the church expects some return for labor and means expended, but if the labor of one is to be extended over so much territory, but little can be accomplished in the way of additions to the church. I desire your prayers, as also any suggestions you may think for the good of the work in the field.

I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

George Montague.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - By special request I went on the 10th ult., to St. Joseph, Missouri, to open a new place for worship for the Saints of that city. The burning of the Court House in which they had occupied a room, resulted beneficially for them. They are now situated on the corner of Fourth and Felix streets, over a Saving's Bank, second floor. The hall is about nineteen by sixty-eight feet, facing on Fourth street, with two large double windows which are made in perfect imitation of beautiful patterns of stained glass. These were presented to the branch by the kindness of Bro. and Sr. Winning, who like to have things in good shape. The pulpit platform is nicely made, the front representing a cherry finish, elegantly carpeted, as also six feet in front across the hall; and the long aisle passes softly under the treading feet. The walls are richly papered, ceiling paneled; fine gas fixtures, good chairs, good organ, good choir, good folks, good president; and when I saw all they had done, and themselves, I pronounced the whole "very good."

The branch has the best place for worship it ever had. It is pleasant, inviting, and comfortable. Bro. Eli T. Dobson is their excellent president. There are people in this world so afraid of pride that they utterly fail to appear even respectable. Cleanliness and good clothes are no more a sign of pride than uncleanliness and rags are a symbol of humility. We can't get a house too grand for God. Read about Solomon's temple, "the holiest of holies," what a richly furnished room God desired to enter to talk to the high priest once a year! Some places may suit us, but will they suit God? He asks the best we can give. Any thing won't do for Him.

On the 16th ult. I went to a camp meeting held in Bro. Salisbury's grove, seven miles from Glidden, in Carrol county, Iowa. Brethren Whiting, Derry, Rounds, J. W. Chatburn, and others whose names I've forgotten were present. Attendance was good, on Sunday very large. Six were baptized. The preaching and social services were abundantly blessed by the presence of the Holy Spirit. To speak for myself, never have I been more blessed than while there.

I am heartily glad that manuscript has been "found." What will Satan do now? How well he used the lie, and, O, how long! O, what a resemblance (?) there is between the manuscript and Book of Mormon! How much they don't read alike. It is worse than "Spaulding's Prepared Glue," "it don't hold worth a cent." I presume Satan thought it would never get back from Honolulu alive; but it did, though slightly crippled. Poor thing! I wonder if Mr. Saulding's bones move with grief at the news of its publication? What about Hurlbut? Where is Mr. Braden? Where are all our sectarian friends? Don't all speak at once!

I remember of once hearing the Lord say by voice of his Spirit: "My work shall be accomplished; all my promises shall be fulfilled, for I am able to perform all I have purposed, and no man shall stay my hand." I hope ever to be thankful for His everlasting goodness, and the endless expressions of His mercy and love. The news from Utah is cheering. May the kind Father ever bless you, and all his Israel, and save us by his power. In hope of final triumph, I am, fraternally,

J. F. McDowell.

No. 78, Peel St., Farnworth, MANCHESTER, England, August 8th, 1885.

Dear Herald: Thy weekly visits are welcome, thy pages of varied matter are read with interest, editorial items, extracts from letters, summary of news, missionary and conference reports, original and selected subjects, etc., all claim our careful attention. Joy is felt at cheering news of new fields opened, hearts made glad by acceptance of the gospel, a prayer bursts from our lips ever and anon as this brother or that sister asks the prayers of the Saints; now and then a tear falls at the recital of trials, sorrow or affliction, some dear one is passing through,-if one member suffers we all suffer. Now we rejoice with some thankful one for mercies bestowed, now yearn towards some lonely one who calls for sympathy and help.

"Praise to the Lord for the great restoration, Brought by an angel to Joseph the Seer, Blessed to open the last dispensation, The church to establish, the gospel declare."

Praised be God for the Reorganization of the scattered members of the church on the original platform, under the leadership of the seed of Joseph. How many faithful Saints among the eighteen or twenty thousand forming our church membership realize keen and heartfelt gratitude to God for bringing them into fellowship with each other and the Lord. I have seen and felt great joy and satisfaction by adoption into the family of God, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and am more inclined to press forward with increased vigor, looking for guidance from the promised Comforter.

Yours in Christ,

C. H. HASSALL.

RICHLAND, Union Co., Dak., August 16th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—You bring us such good news we wish to express our thankfulness, and pray your every effort made to establish truth may prove a blessing. The early rise of our Church has been falsified again in this town, (ignorance was the cause), and I think it has done good. The people are reading for themselves. Brother Holt was here a week and set the kettle boiling, and I think the scum has boiled into the fire and is consumed.

I thank the Lord for the restoration of the "Old Romance." It must surely teach the peothat truth will prevail. Many have testified falsely concerning that old document. But we don't forget that God has said "They that honor me, I will honor." Saints, let us earnestly pray for knowledge, and wisdom to use it aright, and walk wisely before the world, giving no offense to any one; and surely continued blessings shall be ours.

I remain a firm believer in the latter day work.

MRS. MILES SMITH.

PLYMOUTH, Massachusetts, August 16th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—I am young in the cause, but I must say God has blessed me thus far on the way. We have had rejoicing times here, and the Lord has promised us great blessings. I am sure these blessings will come, for Satan has made his appearance, which is a sure sign we shall prosper by holding to "the rod of iron." I was a member of the First Baptist Church before I heard the gospel. I took my gun and went in pursuit of wild ducks, one year ago last January. I found no ducks, but I found a man chopping wood, who proved to be a servant of God. He shook my faith in the Baptist doctrine. I thank God for his guiding Spirit that led me to obey the truth.

Bro. N. R. Nickerson presides over the branch, and God is with him. Elder J. Gilbert was here about four weeks ago. He stayed two days, exhorted the Saints, and spoke in the hall once. Elder M. H. Bond came here August 9th and stayed four days. He preached three times in Union Chapel; but the attendance was small. We were strengthened and encouraged by their words, which were of the Spirit of truth. May God bless them. My mother and my wife have obey the gospel since I have, and my heart was made to rejoice.

In gospel bonds,

WM. B. LELAND.

FRIEND, Neb., Aug. 15th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—I am a very poor hand to write, but perhaps a few lines from us would be of interest to some at least. We like to read the many letters found in the columns of the Herald. We have no branch here, but we have the Spirit to cheer and comfort us. Bro. R. M. Elvin visited us in May, and as we could not get the school house in our own district, we obtained one in an adjoining district, and he delivered three discourses to very intelligent congregations. The inclemency of the weather and the business of farmers made it advisable to move the meeting to my house. There he imparted the word. At first had a very slim turn out, but at last they came out well. All were well pleased. He removed a great deal of prejudice. The interest seems to warrant Bro. Elvin's return in the near future. We concluded to hold a Grove Meeting, due notice was given, and James Caffall, Mark H. Forscutt, L. Anthony and a goodly number of the brethren of the Wilbur Branch attended. All were made to feel the influence of the Spirit, both Saint and sinner. On the whole the meeting was a success. I heard many say since, it was the best preaching they ever heard. Bro. Elvin had provided a lot of tracts, free to all. When our meeting closed all felt that we had been greatly strengthened. By the very urgent request of friend Bartter, Bro. Forscutt consented to speak in the town of Friend. The Opera

Hall was secured. There was a goodly number out, but much prejudice. Bro. Mark gave them to understand upon what ground we stand. At the close of meeting we took the parting hand, feeling sorry they could not remain longer.

We can see God's hand in all of our movements, we have been blessed with health and strength and plenty of work, thereby being able to supply earthly wants, also gaining a great many friends who were once enemies to the latter day work.

We extend an invitation to all traveling Elders and Saints to call on us.

Yours in bonds,

Bro. & Sr. Bowen.

CORMORANT, Minn.,

August 12th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-In Detroit City sixteen days ago brother J. T. Chester fell from a building, and broke his left arm in two places, and split the bone in several places. He sent his little girl for brother Shaw, who came to the house where he fell, and administered to him in the name of the Lord. Brother Chester says, My mouth was not big enough to take in the blessing that God bestowed. When the people wanted him to have a Doctor to set the bones, he said to brother Shaw, You and the Lord can set the bones without a Doctor. They rolled a bandage of cloth around the arm from the shoulder to the the wrist. He was administered to four times when he first got it broke, and to-day he took the bandage off, and as he requested me, I washed it out with my own two hands and tied it on brother McLeod's fence for a memorial. The Doctor at Andubon a few days ago examined his arm and said it beat him. For he could not see how he set the bones by only wrapping a thin cloth around the arm. The Doctor said the arm was badly broken, but doing well. The people said, The ninth day you will have pains, for it will commence to knit together, but brother Chester says the ninth day he was thinking about taking the bandage from the arm. He says,—I feel I am in the family of God, for they have been so kind to me. He offers thanks to them all, and to the God of Heaven for smiling upon him in healing him. Yours ever,

John C. Foss, for J. T. Chester.

CLITHERALL, Minn., August 9th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-In order that the California Saints may know how we like their kind of Elders, would say in regard to Bro. Holt that if they have any more like him they had better send them out. He is doing good work here. He preaches the word with the Spirit and with power. I like to travel with him and talk with him and pray with him. He has raised quite an excitement among the Methodists, has baptized two of their flock, and more are coming. He has also delivered three excellent sermons to the old Cutlerites, which I trust will prove a blessing to them and to us. I see by brother Badham's letter, that he thinks he could do the most good among that people. If so, he had better come and try it. We would like to see him out here and show his colors. Elder Holt delivered an excellent sermon to the Saints to-day on tithing. It wakened us to a realizing sense of our duty, and I trust will prove a blessing to us all if lived up to.

If the Saints of California live up to the law of tithing as he preached it here, I don't wonder they are blessed; and so will all the Saints be if they do the same. May the Lord help us all to give heed to the teachings of his servants on this matter, and keep the law in full, so that the work may prosper, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

C. A. SHERMAN.

Mondamin, Iowa,

August 13th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—Thinking a few words from these parts might be of interest to some, I will venture a few lines. It has been very wet here this season. Early cut grain has been badly damaged; some was lost entirely. Some farms that produced good crops last year have scarcely anything on this.

In regard to the latter day work, I still have faith, and rejoice in the same, believing the gospel has not lost its saving power yet; but that all who continue steadfast to the end will inherit eternal life. I find that to enjoy Christianity one must take part in the same. It requires an active and energetic life to get the real benefit of it.

A word or two in regard to Reunions, and then I close. My attention was called to it by one out side of the church, and if they outside take notice of it, should we not. It is this—it has been the practice heretofore of allowing those who put up booths on the ground, to sell almost anything they chose to, and when they chose. Now I think there ought to be some restrictions placed on them. It seems to me that tobacco ought not to be sold on the ground, I believe it would prevent a great deal of unpleasant odor. Another thing; Why should they be allowed to hold open on Sunday? If we are the light of the world, let us set an example in this respect.

Your brother in Christ,
J. L. Gunsolley.

Mesa City, Arizona,

August 12th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - Owing to financial embarrassment and family necessities, I feel it my duty to return to California. I shall start within the coming week. Not being under any regular appointment, I deem it to be my privilege, especially as I have borne all my own expenses so far, (with the exception of fifty cents, given me by a faithful old sister in San Bernardino, who insisted on my taking that amount), and shall pay my own car fare going back. Expenses each way will amount to sixty dollars, or more. For this and my labors since coming here I do not ask or expect any compensation in this life, the whole being voluntary upon my part. If I thought my labors here were of sufficient worth to justify a longer stay, I would try to put off going to California a while longer; but it seems to me that I have accomplished about all that I can without the assistance of some Elder more able to hold meetings and preach to the people. My labors have been from house to house, reading and talking in the family circle, awakening among them an interest quite favorable toward the Reorganization. I have also kept them well informed with regard to the efforts of Bro. Joseph, in Utah; and here as well as there, people are watching the results of his mission, but are slow about changing their base of operations. But it is no wonder that they hesitate, for they have so long been schooled to do as they are told, that they seem afraid to move without the advice, or consent—and council of their leaders—that is those who have been the faithful ones. And those who have dissented, and refused to be governed by the priesthood, are like a child that has been burned in the fire—they fear to take hold anew, having had their confidence betrayed by false teachers. But the time will come, and I don't believe it is very far distant, when the line of demarkation will be so distinct that those who are truly honest will see it so plainly that they will not then hesitate to come out on the Lord's side. May God speed that day, is my prayer for latter day Israel.

Please to continue my Herald, and for the present change the address from this place to care of box 1228, Los Angeles City, California. When my financial circumstances are in a better condition, and there is a competent man to come with, or meet me here, I will return and assist all I can; and I believe that quite a large branch of the church can be established in this place.

Yours in gospel bonds,

SHEFFIELD, Yorkshire, England, August 5th, 1885.

Dear Brother Joseph:-You will doubtless be glad to hear from this part of the globe. I send you report of Sunday School for the Hope. The work in this part is very fair; the harvest is ripe, but the laborers are few. There are many souls that could be gathered in, but we feel the need of Elders who could spare the whole of their time to preach the gospel. The branch is now in better condition than has been for many years back. God has worked wonders. His ways are not man's. He has brought those into the Church who at one time were the greatest enemies in this town, and has removed a great deal of prejudice, so that we can obtain a fair hearing now. Our branch numbers thirty-nine, instead of twenty-four as published in the General Conference minutes. Ever praying for the prosperity of Zion. Yours in bonds of the gospel,

F. BEAUMONT.

MILL CREEK, Fremont Co., Iowa, August 15th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—Our conference held at the Keystone Branch, came off on the 25th and 26th of July, and we had a very good time. Elder Charles Derry was with us and done the preaching. The Spirit and power of his calling was with him, and all hearts were made to rejoice in listening to the eternal truths of God as revealed in the gospel. He preached in the branch one week after the close of the conference, and notwithstanding the busy time, the people turned out to hear, and expressed their satisfaction.

We had not as large a representation as on some similar occasions, but I think I am safe in saying we had a good one. The business was transacted without a jar. The brethren started home feeling they had done their duty, and that the blessing of God attended them. Bro. Goode was with us, and gave his experience to some extent, with testimony of the work; also Bro. Wilcox, George Kemp, and many others, who still feel strong in this glorious work, and are ever willing to manifest their faith by their works. I left there for Shenandoah, Bro. Derry returning home. I spent one week in the above place, stayep over Sunday, preached and visited the Saints, and done the best I could in connection with Bro. Wilcox. We are in hopes the work will revive in the hearts of the people. We opened up in the school house last night to a fair audience in this place, and intend to labor, God willing, here and at Hamburg, until the Camp Meeting to be held at Wheeler's Grove, commencing September 5th, when we hope to have the pleasure of meeting you, dear brother, with many others who are called to minister for God. We have endeavored to present the truth to the people with an eye single to the glory of God, fully realizing, according to his word, that such only can claim his promise. We find the people are willing to hear, but seemingly slow to obey. However, we are by no means discouraged. We shall continue to sow the seed and plant the good word of God in the hearts of the people, believing now is an opportune time. I humbly pray for grace divine that I may walk in the narrow way in such a manner that I shall bring no opprobrium on the cause of our God.

Ever praying for the prosperity of the work, and the salvation of souls, I am yours in bonds, HENRY KEMP.

Long Valley, Cal.,

August 6th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—For such indeed you are to us, away out here in the wilds of Calfornia, especially in Long Valley, where we have but little true gospel preaching. You are indeed a welcome visitor. How eagerly we peruse your pages, and the comfort and joy we receive from them is beyond expression. I send a poem for your pages. I have read it over many times when in great trouble, and it has soothed my troubled spirit. And thinking it might comfort some other weary heart, I send it. Yours in hope, Mrs. Ella J. Holmes.

Summary of News.

THE WORLD'S UNREST.

FIVE years ago, those who are given to reading the alphabet of the sky, assured the world that the earth was about to pass into certain conjunctions with other planets, which would, if we might judge the future by the past, be attended with certain unusual phenomena upon our sphere; among which would be noticed fearful extremes of heat and cold, great droughts, excessive storms both of wind and of rain, peculiar violence in sickness and extreme fatality wherever a contagion raged. The year 1885 was fixed upon as the one when these unusual phenomena would be at their The present summer seems to hight. point back to the prediction as a real prophecy. See what a flood has done in China; mark the sick unattended and the dead unburied in Spain; follow the wreck and death of a cyclone through the suburbs of quiet old Philadelphia; remember the story which came from Vermont in the early spring, where men were dying of sunstroke only a few rods away from snowbanks; read the stories of Atlantic ship masters which have filled the newspapers for months, of meeting storms of unprecedented fury and duration; read of the ships which this year have sailed from port and have never been spoken or seen since; mark the unprecedented number of electric storms which have raged in our Eastern States; the deaths by lightning; the fury with which disease has raged in quiet eastern hamlets which never before knew a contagion; the contagion of pneumonia in New York City last winter and spring; the locking of all the great Lake Michigan with ice last spring; the extreme heat of the summer in the Eastern States, and other unusual phenomena, and we see at a glance that whatever the cause may be, certainly there is such unrest and destruction on our planet as has not been known before for a long period.

The same effect is noticeable on the human race. Deeds of violence and of shame make a chapter in every morning paper, and the passions of men seem to have more mastery over their possessors than in any preceding year. This is all important only in one sense. If by the experience men learn wisdom, then even the calamities suffered will not be altogether an unrecompensed evil. Within a few years—less than forty—the progress made in discovering the paths of the currents in the sea and in the air has been wonderful. The former has been reduced almost to a perfect chart, and while the latter can hardly be reduced to certainty, so much progress has been made that mariners have been able to reduce greatly the period of long voyages, and the quiet watcher from a signal station in mid-continent can warn the ships in port not to proceed to sea for a certain time, for a great hurricane is even then calling up its legions and will strike the coast within a given length of time. In other branches of science quite as much progress is being made. medical profession is particularly active in its researches, and the results are such that the whole theory of the cause of certain diseases and the remedies to be applied, have been changed. This work is still going on, and with each new discovery some mercy is born to mankind.

Modern science has demonstrated clearly that the Tower of Babel was destroyed by an electric storm. That is, it was overwhelmed by a cyclone of frightful fury. The brick that still remain reveal that fact as plainly as though the record had been written upon a tablet of stone and left for succeeding generations to read. that day to this cyclones have been the terror of the earth. They come almost without notice; they do their fatal work and pass away almost with the quickness of thought, and before them man stands but an atom in immensity. But if man is to have dominion over the earth, that includes cyclones also, and if science can devise no general means of resisting them, it should be able to study out the causes which produce them and be able to warn men of their coming. This, too, is something in which the Government should lavish money in investigating, for really the dread of electric storms takes away half the comfort of living in some portions of the Eastern States. So far the West has been wonderfully spared from these commotions which rack the continents elsewhere. We should be most grateful, but in obeying all the laws of health and in seeking to remove everything which tends to produce or to feed disease, we should be most vigilant, for the stars are not yet right, and the earth responds to the stars, even as the tides of the deep sea ebb and flow responsive to lunar attraction.

DROUTH IN BRITIAN.

The British Isles have this year suffered unusually from drouth. Their fields are parched up, and the pasture lands for which England is so famous are described by the press as having turned to a brown hue long before the frosts of autumn are due. The effects on the crops of cereals is described as deplorable in many places, and it appears that the total harvest yield to the United Kingdom must be materially reduced in consequence, while the root crops are only a small part of what they amount to in average years.

It is well known that the English climate is naturally a moist one. It is traditional that the careful Britisher never leaves home without an umbrella, no matter how bright may be the sky with promise of a fair day. In not a few parts of the country the showery day is the rule, and the twenty-four hours which do not bring at least one shower are the exception. In some years the rainfall is so large and persistent as to drown out the crops, and the wheat-growers of the United States have more than once found their best opportunity in a bad failure of the Euglish harvest through a superabundance of rain. This fact makes all the more singular the drouth of the present year, which is so absolute as to have left many a well dry and rendered it necessary to carry water great distances for stock as well as for human needs.

The moisture of the English climate, with the resulting far-famed juiciness of its vegetation, appears to arise principally from the fact that the country lies in the track of an important arm of the Gulf Stream. The prevailing westerly winds take up the moisture from that ocean river and scattered it over the land, to be condensed by the chopping currents due to irregular land formation. The position of that stream in the Atlantic Ocean is continually changing back and forth over many miles of distance, and occasionally the course of the current is such that comparatively little of its treasures is deposited on the domains of Queen Victoria, while at other times those islands receive the maximum, as the central part of the stream bears full on the British shores.

"HARD TIMES."

An effort is about to be made in England to investigate, by means of a Parliamentary Commission, the cause of the present industrial gloom, which is supposed to be a depression, and is called "hard times." It is also proposed to institute a similar inquiry in this country. The idea seems to prevail rather extensively that it is possible not only to discover the cause, but to find a remedy—on the old fashion theory that "A knowledge of the disease is half the cure."

In that country, and probably in this, the commission will take a vast mass of testimony from workers, employers, and mere theorists, at a great expense, which will add little to the common fund of knowledge on the subject and be of no value in enabling the people to reach a solution of the problem. It will only tell us, what is already well known by every thinking man, that the so called hard times of the present are simply normal conditions, arising from the intellectual development of human selfishness; and that the better times which are so much desired would but resemble the physical fever which is surely followed by a relapse. The whole difficulty lies in the fact that brains are continually at work trying to discover how to dispense with muscle by the introduction of labor-saving processes, as in the endeavor to open up new fields of laborand succeeded in the former direction more than in the latter. Tre progress of invention within the average lifetime of to-day has enormously widened out the field of human effort, and has added vastly to the comforts of the humblest among those who toil for the means of subsistence. The cheapening of production has made a given sum of money worth very much more now than it ever was before as a buyer of comfort for the body or mind; but the ability to produce has increased more rapidly than the power to consume, or rather, than the ability to purchase for consumption. Hence an increasing difficulty in finding employment for the lower order of brain-power as well as mere muscle; and the difficulty is all the time growing, so that the problem presses for solution more heavily each day than it did the day preceding. It will be more pressing when the commission concludes its labors than at the time of beginning the investigation .- Chicago Tribune.

THE IOWA CROPS.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 19.—The report of the Secretary of the State Agricultural Society shows that the condition of Iowa crops up to August 10th was as follows:

Corn—Recent favorable weather has done much for the crop and has added many thousand bushels to the prospective yield, a remarkable gain over July. Sixteen hundred and nine reports place the condition for August at 98 per cent against 93 for July.

Broom-corn-Two hundred and thirteen reports give the condition at 92 per cent, against 91 per cent for July. Sorghum-Eleven hundred and eight reports give the condition at 93 per cent, as against 90 per cent last month. Flax-Eight hundred and thirty-nine correspondents give the condition as 93 per cent. Buckwheat-Reports received from 885 points give the condition at 89 per cent. Millet-Six hundred and two townships give the condition 95 per cent. Meadows-Fifteen hundred and seventy-two townships place the condition 100 per cent. Pastures-Fifteen hundred and ninety-five reports received give the condition at 102 per cent. Irish potatoes -Condition reported at 98 per cent by 1,596 correspondents. Sweet potatoes-Eight hundred and twenty-two townships show condition 92 per cent. Apples-Fourteen hundred and fifty townships place the condition at 58 per cent. Grapes Reports received from 1,323 townships and report the condition 60 per cent. Three hundred and twenty-one reports make the yield of winter wheat 143/4 bushels; 1,253 make the yield of spring wheat 14 bushels; and 1,361 make the yield of oats 3534 bushels per acre. Nine hundred and ninety-two reports make the yield of winter rye 16 bushels; 129 make the yield of spring rye 17½ bushels; and 638 make the yield of spring rye 25¾ bushels.

Aug. 4th.—Jewish citizens of New York propose to erect a monument to Sir Moses Montefiore in Central Park.

A terrible cyclone visited Smyrna, Del., yesterday afternoon, totally destroying property for miles, in a swath three hundred feet wide. Stock was killed and orchards, cornfields, etc., were destroyed. No lives are known to be lost.

The weather is the hottest ever experienced in the San Joaquin Valley, Cal. The thermometer is 114° in the shade.

The Spiritualists of the United States are holding their sixth annual camp-meeting at Cassadoga Lake, Chautauqua county, N. Y.

Storms of great violence swept over the northern and central parts of Spain on Sunday. Many persons are said to have been killed.

It is announced from Brussels that England has consented to let the Zulficar question be settled by the Anglo-Russian Boundary Commission.

There were nearly 4,000 new cases of cholera in Spain on Sunday, and over 1,300 deaths.

The progress of the cholera in Spain is almost unprecedented, both in rapidity and fatality. Breaking out at Valencia in June, it traveled rapidly north and south along the coast, reaching the confines of France and Portugal within a few weeks. Almost at the same time it started for the interior, reaching Madrid during the middle of July, and has thence spread to every point of the compass, until nearly every province in the Kingdom has been invaded by the terrible destroyer. Up to the 4th of July it had attacked 28,-044 persons, of whom 12,347, or nearly one-half, perished. Another month has now elapsed, showing an increase of the fatality in proportion to the number of cases. The daily average of new cases is over 2,000 and of deaths over 1,000. During the last four weeks the total of cases has reached nearly 70,000 and the total of deaths over 35,000, showing a marked increase of the fatality.

August 17th—In the whole of Spain yesterday there were 4,696 new cases of cholera and 1,556 deaths.

There have been slight riots at Logrona, due to the resistance of the inhabitants to certain sanitary regulations.

The Governor of Granada has been attacked with cholera.

The places in Spain in which the principal increase of cholera occurred yesterday, as compared with Friday last, were Tarragona and Valladolid. In the former case there were seventyseven cases and thirty deaths, and in the latter sixty-one new cases and ten deaths. The official returns show that in Granada the disease has reached its hight, and remains stationary. In Albacete yesterday there were twenty-eight new cases, and twenty-three deaths; in Castellon de la Plana, twenty-two new cases and seventeen deaths; in Cuenca, 154 new cases and 32 deaths: in Teruel, 46 new cases and 32 deaths: in Valencia, eighty-two new cases and forty-nine deaths; and in Madrid, twenty new cases and two deaths. All of these returns show decreases in the numbers of both new cases and deaths.

There have been 109 deaths from cholera in Marseilles, France, since Friday.

Refugees fleeing from the cholera in Marseilles have introduced the disease into Sisteron and other villages in the Alpine Provinces in France.

The loss by the fire at Toronto, Canada, early yesterday morning, is now estimated at about $1,000,000.

Aug. 20.—The secretary of war struck a blow that was almost as crushing on army dudes as Cleveland's proclamation was heavy on the cattle barons. Mr. Endicott believes that there should be no favoritism in the army, and accordingly has ordered that the officers who have been lying around Washington for years, or stationed at watering places, shall at once pack their gripsacks and go to their regiments. The army dude will now have a chance to get acquainted with cactus pie in New Mexico and Arizona.

A French scientist who says he has investigated 5,400 shocks of earthquakes, attributes them, like tides, to the influence of the sun and moon. The interior sea of fire, he argues, is subject to the same laws as the surface sea of water.

The New York Evening Mail and Express says: It is rumored that the latest plan of campaign laid out by the Mormon leaders is to raise an immense corruption fund and buy their way into Statehood through the next Congress. If this be true, the apostles and elders will find that they have detatched more than they can comfortably masticate. Utah is not going to be admitted as a State, polygamy or no polygamy, as long as it is ruled by a "ring" of Mormon priests.

Tuesday there were over 4,200 new cases of cholera in Spain and nearly 1,400 deaths.

Wednesday there were 4,100 new cases of cholera and over 1,500 deaths from the disease in Spain.

Cholera has appeared in England. A sailor from Marsailles died in Bristol of Asiatic cholera.

Reports covering the whole South from Virginia to Texas show that the prospect for the crops and the outlook for business in that section are remarkably good.

Aug. 21st.—The expulsion of Russians from Eastern Germany continues.

Maxwell, the St. Louis murderer, was called on Monday by members of the City Council, the Secretary of State, three pastors, one priest and twenty-two women. After his trial and acquittal it is intended to run him for Mayor.

Merely as a suggestion to pastors who are having a good time away from their pulpits, the Western Christian Advocate remarks that "the Devil never takes a vacation. Temptation and death are as busy in summer as in winter." There are reasons for believing that the Western Christirn Advocate's information on the matters alluded to is substantially correct.

NO CROSS, NO CROWN.

Father, grant this to me, that I may see The one true way:

And keep the narrow path that leads to Thee, Nor go astray.

Take Thou'my hand, and when dark waters roll About my feet; When surging billows shall my stricken soul

In sorrow steep;

Then the deep gloom of dark clouds lowering On every side,

Will seem to me the shadow of Thy wing, With Thou my guide.

No flowery paths of ease 'twas mine to tread Without a care;

No rays of peace their soft effulgence shed O'er days as fair.

The hopes of youth, dreams as brief and fleeting, So soon they passed,

As buds that perish ere their blossoming In one chill blast.

Through many years a heavy cross I bore, E'en faith had flown

Nor understood Thy stern but chastening lore-No cross, no crown.

What though the rugged way be long, and still Beset by foes.

It leads to heights, where all the weary will Find sweet repose.

Then, Lord, O Lord, I suppliant come to Thee, Take Thou my hand.

Do with me as Thou wilt, but let me see The better land.

Land of the Infinite, of life and light, Where at Thy shrine Dwells peace eternal, every pure delight, And love sublime.

IS IMMERSION BAPTISM?

Is immersion baptism unconditional, or does it become such only under certain conditions? If only under certain conditions, what are they? Some who rest in the belief that immersion is the only and proper mode, as they call it, seem to take it for granted that because they have been immersed, therefore they have been bap-tized. But is this true? Is an individual necessarily baptized because he is immersed, any more than if he had been sprinkled or had his feet washed? Because a man has been immersed in water, has he therefore been baptized with water? A. sets forth that he is a proper minister of Christ, and can minister in the ordinances of the gospel acceptably. C., demands immersion at the hands of A. A. considers him a proper subject, and accordingly immerses him. But suppose he has no authority, no matter how confident he may be that he has, did he baptize C., or did he only immerse him? But suppose A's authority is all he claims for it. Is that immersion which he may minister necessarily baptism? Is authority the only condition? A., as before seen, considers himself a minister of Christ, which we will suppose he is. And C. as before comes to him, and they two repair to a certain place. When there it is found to be a font, roomy and elegant, and supplied with water clear and refreshing, flowing in at one end, and on and out at the other. A. takes in the situation at once, and says to himself, why can't I perform this immersion without going into this font? what's the use of my going down into the water? Thus he reasons and immerses his candidate over the edge of this font, just as the good farmer dips his lambs over the edge of a tank prepared for that purpose. But did he baptize him? Who will say he did more than to immerse him? But suppose A. and C. both go down and stand in the water, and A., not saying a word, proceeds at once to immerse C., without so much as calling him by name. Is he baptized now? He is immersed, surely. Who will say he is not? As for coming forth again out of the water, it would be hard to conceive how immersion can be performed without this condition. For so long as the parties concerned are not out of the water, so much of their bodies are yet immersed. Therefore to complete the act, they must of necessity come entirely out of the water. Could Naaman have been healed without washing seven times, and that in the Jordan? Can immersion ever be baptism only under certain and definite conditions? As for the candidate, it is required that he shall repent of his sins, believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and desire to be baptized in His name. But suppose that through some wicked or selfish purpose he were to submit to the form of an immersion, could we call it baptism? Is a man or a woman necssarily baptized with water simply because he or she has been immersed in water? And here, if we may again turn to the question of authority, how is a man or woman to know that the party who immersed him or her had authority from Christ so to do? Is a man a minister of Christ just because he says he is, or because some church says he is? If this is the rule, does it not follow that Christ's ministers are very much divided among themselves? Some teach that sprinkling is as valuable as immersion; others that baptism, as they call it, is not necessary to salvation; and others again, that all the little ones that have died without what they call baptism have gone to hell. Are all these his ministers? If not, who are they? Are they the most pious, wise and learned, and who carry with them certain church credentials? If these are they, has not God chosen the wise and the noble to confound the foolish? And if he has chosen this sort, has he not then chosen those who may glory in his presence, and the very ones in whom others may glory? Is there no way to try those who say they are the ministers of Christ? Is there no way to test them, and to catch them in the fraud and presumption, provided they are not his ministers?

Anciently the saints had some way to try those who said they were apostles, and if they were not, so to determine. And are the people now to be any the less favored? If it was needful then that the people should know how to detect impostors, is it any the less needful now? To come at once to the point, What is man without the spirit of a man which is in him? Had any one gone to the ancient Saints, claiming to have authority to minister in the ordinance of the gospel, yet not even presuming to minister in any of its gifts, would they not have rejected him as an impostor? Or does it matter whether we are imposed upon or not, so long as we feel well, and our ministers are very pious, and wise, and learned, and eloquent?

CHARITY.

FEELING deeply impressed to pen a few lines relative to the subject above indicated, I hope you may take no exception to what I may say, as I trust it will be said in the Spirit of Christ and for the good of his

There seems to be such a lack of charity with God's Saints. I think it will apply to us all. To err is human, and to love is divine. Hence we may be able to derive a great deal of good through the medium of the pen if we will allow the Spirit of Christ to wield it. Charity is placed at the head of all the Christian virtues by St. Paul. It is the foundation of all the Christian graces; without it, religion is like a body without a soul, our friendship a mere shadow, our alms the offering of pride and hypocrisy. Was this heavenborn, soul-cheering principle the mainspring of human action, the all pervading motive power that impelled mankind in their onward course to eternity, the polar star to guide us through this world of sin and gloom, the trials and sorrows of life would be softened in its melting sunbeams, a new and blissful era would dawn auspiciously upon our race, and pure and unde-filed religion would then be honored and glorified. Wars would cease, envy, jealousy, and revenge would hide their hateful heads, slander and persecution would be unknown, sectarian walls in matters of religion would crumble in the dust, the household of faith would become what it should be—one united, harmonious family in Christ—infidelity, vice, and immorality would recede, and happiness before unknown would become the crowning glory of man; Christianity would stand forth, divested of the inventions of men in all the majesty of its native loveliness. The victories of the cross would be rapidly achieved, and the bright day be ushered in when our blessed Savior shall rule King of nations, as he now does King of Saints. The beauty of a religious life is one of its greatest recommendations—what it professes—peace to all mankind. It teaches us those arts which will render us beloved and respected, and which will contribute to our future happiness. Its greatest ornament is charity. It inculcates nothing but love and simplicity of affection, it breaths nothing but the purest delight. It is that charity which, hoping all things, believing all things, contents not itself with a Be ye warmed, and be ye clothed, but performs the good which it desires. It is that love which throws its embraces around all human kind, and loves its neighbor as itself. It seeks not its own preferment: its kingdom is not of this world; it is too high to envy the proudest, too meek to despise the humblest; it despiseth not your brother because he differeth in opinions. Charity covereth a multitude of sins.

But there are more ways than one of showing kindness to the unfortunate, and there is another kind of charity which is cheaper, and of which we should not be forgetful, least we should exclaim—Thank God I am not as other men. We must not turn the man or women off who in the hour of temptation yielded to a first fault, we must bear with them yet a little longer, give them another trial. While we condemn their missteps, we will urge them on to good deeds for the future, remembering we are not perfect ourselves. If we cast them off forever; they may reel blindly and continue to fall till ruin shall have fixed her seal upon them for all eternity. We must make due allowance for the weakness of poor humanity. A gentle word, a kind look, an encouraging smile, may save a human being from the abyss of despair. How sweet is the remembrance of a kind act, as we rest on our pillow, or rise in the morning. It gives us delight; we have performed a good deed toward some poor, lost soul. Sweet, Oh, how sweet the thought. There is a luxury in remembering the kind act. The kind act rejoiceth the heart, and giveth delight inexpressible. Who will not be kind? Who will not be good? There is only one path passing over the earth which is safe, which is light, which is honorable. It is that which Jesus Christ has marked out in his word and which leads to the paradise of

We must let conscience speak when we are tempted to treat our enemies with contempt, or to neglect any known duty, and she will urge us by all the high and holy motives of eternity to live for God, to give our powers to him, to seek his honor in all that we do. He thunders no anathemas, he asks no reproaches upon the wicked, he chides them not in wrath, nor does he mete to them according to the measure of their deserts. His forgiveness knows no limit, his mercy is inexhaustible. Though we sin seventy times seven, he is ready to But forgiveness is not to be practiced by God alone; it is enjoined upon man by divine precept, as well as by divine example. The old law of Moses, it is true, said, "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," but the new dispensation introduced a milder code, and a greater than Moses said, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you." There is no virtue in the human heart which so adorns the life and character of an individual, nor duty more enjoined upon the Christian than that of forgiveness. For proof of this, look at the example of Christ, who, while suffering on the cross by the hands of his enemies, exclaims, in the anguish of his soul, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." How noble the sentiment! How pure its author! And shall man, created but a little lower than the angels, fail to imitate the example of Him in whom there was no guile? or shall he so deface himself toward his brother man? So prone are we all to stray from the path of rectitude and duty, that we find ourselves often called upon to forgive the faults and errors of those who, in an unguarded moment, do us an injury; and unless we do this, hatred and revenge will reign triumphant in every heart, and sin hold an unbounded sway. But on the other hand, if we forgive those who trespass against us we shall, by so doing, obey the injunction of Christ and contribute to the enjoyment of those who offend us, and advance our own happiness. We should see less of the spirit of retaliation which now reigns in our midst and like the destroying pestilence spreads desolation wherever it goes. If the poisonous darts of slander are hurled to crush our hopes and darken our prospects, we should remember that to "err is human," and freely forgive the offender. It will only increase the amount of guilt by cherishing ill will toward our fellow men, however great the offense may be. But "Oh, 'tis blessed to forgive," to do unto others as we would they should do unto us, thus filling the hearts of the sons of men with joy, and not grief. Let us then, if we would render ourselves ornaments to society and be beloved by the worthy and virtuous, cherish the Christ-like spirit of forgiveness, and we can not fail to be happy. Let us go search the ponderous tomes of human learning-explore the works of Confucius—examine the precepts of Seneca, and the writings of Socrates-collect all the excellencies of the ancient and modern moralists, and point to a sentence equal to the simple prayer of our Savior, "Father, forgive them." Reviled and insulted, suffering the grossest indignities, crowned with thorns and led away to die, no annihilating curse breaks from his lips. Sweet and placid as the aspirings of a mother for her first-born babe ascends the prayer of mercy for his enemies, "Father forgive them." Oh, it was worthy of its origin, proving incontestably that his mission was from above.

If the above be true, then let us be kind to the unfortunate; dry the mourner's tears, that memory may have a store of sweet thoughts to live upon when the reality shall no longer stand before us. The everlasting hills will crumble to dust, but a good act will never die. The earth will grow old and perish, but a charitable act will be ever green, and will flourish throughout eternity. The moon and stars will grow dim, the sun roll from the heavens, but the truly charitable man or woman will grow brighter and brighter, and not cease to exist while God himself shall live. "Though I speak with tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal; and though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly; seeketh not her own; is not easily provoked; thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth."—I Cor. 13:1-6.

Kindness will go farther, and bring us more happiness in this world than all the haughtiness and asperity we can possibly assume. How much easier, too, it is to act kindly and naturally to our fellowmen? A kind word, a sympathizing word from the lips falls like oil upon the ruffled waters of the human breast. And this is the great secret of life. Good-nature in one of the sweetest gifts of providence. Like the pure sunshine, it gladdens, enlivens, and cheers in the midst of anger and revenge. It is good-nature that elevates, purifies, and exalts. Then who will not strive to posess this glorious trait of character! The heart is easily overcome by acts of kindness. A kind word may fall like drops of rain upon the drooping flowers. Every kind act we bestow will have its influence, and eternity will reveal it.

The charity bestowed upon the unfortunate, the tear we have wiped away, the glass of cold water we have lifted to the parched lips, have had their influence, and have not been unnoticed by Him who is worthy of worship. We should remember, then, in the hours of affliction and death, however small the charities, they have helped to swell the broad river of mercy and goodness, and will help to pave the way to that "city whose builder and maker is God." Every great and noble feeling which we exercise, every good action which we perform, is a round in the ladder which leads to God. Men think very little of the value of a bow, or a smile, or friendly salutation; yet how small the cost; how often great the return. By a soft word and pleasant look, enemies have been made friends, and old attachments renewed that had been annulled for years. A smile, it beams upon the lover's heart like a ray of sunshine in the depths of the forest. A nod, a kind look,—it has gained more friends than wealth and learning put together. A grasp of the hand; it is more potent in cementing the ties of affection than all feelings of self interest. Let us be kind then; for memory is an angel that comes in holy night-time, and unfolding its wings beside us, silently whispers in our ears our faults or our virtues, and either disturbs or sooths our spirit's repose. He who will turn away a friend for one fault, is a stranger to the best of the feelings of the human heart. Who has not erred at least once in his life? If that fault were not overlooked, to what depths of infamy would not thousands have descended! We know not the peculiar and pressing temptations to which another may be exposed. He may have fought manfully for months against the sin, and still kept the secret locked in his own bosom; at last he was overcome; in a moment he yielded, and afterwards he would give worlds to recall the act; he has mourned over it in secret, and repented in the dust and ashes; Shall we forsake him! Earth and heaven, justice, humanity, philantrophy, and religion cry out—For-give him. He who will not forgive must possess the heart to a demon. Surely, the love of God is not in him. "Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard: Behold these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig tree, and find none, cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground, and he answering said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and if it bear fruit, well, and if not then after that thou shalt cut it down."—Luke. 23:

7, 8, 9. We must not let the hope of worldly recompense prompt us to good actions. We should be content with the approval of heaven and of our own soul. The human heart rises against oppression, and is soothed by gentleness, as the waves of the ocean rise in proportion to the breeze into mild-ness and serenity.

In my concluding remarks on so important a subject, I would again and for the last time urge all the Saints to remember that "now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."—1 Cor. 13: 13.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 12.

BY S. F. W.

THE DISPERSION OF ISRAEL.

THE mingling of divine and human elements in the history of the Hebrew nation leads to two distinct veiws of the causes and conditions that resulted in the dispersion of the Ten Tribes of Israel. The merely human view is, that the claims of the Hebrews to be the chosen people of God, and the subjects of special care, and miraculous guidance and deliverance, is principally imaginary, and a delusion. This view necessitates the assumption that the professed history of events was written so long after the time of the assumed events that legends could be set forth as facts; that the ritual that marked the end of the developement of the system was attributed to the beginning; that they were at first Fetichists, and that Moses taught the worship of a tribal God, and by the Ten Commandments first introduced moral ideas into their worship; that it was the contest with Canaanitish antagonists that consolidated nomadic tribes into a nation; and that in a protracted struggle with the priesthood the prophets led the people by gradual steps to a belief in Jehovah as the Supreme God. Those holding this view farther assert that the transfer of the ark to Jerusalem caused the building of the temple there, and this resulted in the increase of the priestly influence, the extention of the ritual, the institution of more festivals, and a reconstruction of the ceremonial worship; and that the priesthood became "a deviser and custodian of an increasing and deversified oral law;" that it was not till the days of Hezekiah that the ceremonial law was formulated that is now attributed to Moses. The Ten Tribes added to their barbari-ties and general immoralities a return to the Egyptian worship. There was idolatry, despotism and corruption throughout the two hundred and fifty years of their separate existence. "Usurpation followed usurpation, revolt and regicide became common events." "Rotten, and decayed" through barbarism, despotism and anarchy, the kingdom could not withstand the repeated onset of powerful foes. "Providence was on the side of the heaviest battalions." Tigleth Pileser carried away the people of the northern and eastern provinces. Shalmaneser and Sargon completed the depopulation of the whole land of Israel, and all the people of that kingdom were transplanted to the northern provinces of the Assyrian empire, where their idolatrous habits, say the authorities, made them likely to lose their nationality, and to soon disappear among their neighbors, "though scattered remnants may have occasionally emerged at later periods, and in various countries.

A better, truer view I need only glance at: As the physical history of the race at one time centered in Noah, so the spiritual history of the race at a later time centered in Abraham; and in a promise spoken to him from the heavens was embodied the destinies of the race, and in it was a forshadowing of all human history down to the end of time. We have seen in the geological record of creation a wisdom that left nothing to accident, that designed the end from the beginning. voice to Abraham represented that same wisdom, and that same power to carry out his designs—the same that Christ recognized when he said, Not a sparrow falleth to the ground without the Heavenly Father's notice. This promise was repeated to Isaac and Jacob, and probably directly to Joseph, with additional specifications, and then upon his sons, with other particular blessings, and all ratified by revelation to Moses, and to the whole line of prophets.

It was confirmed by covenants and oaths, and ratified by miracles that are and have been an astonishment to the millions of earth's inhabitants past and present, and which must be a matter of interest to the intelligent beings in spheres above our own. The theme is too great for the uninspired pen. I forbear to tread on ground made more sacred and more glorious by songs and sermons through all the times past from that ancient day to this. In the light of this view, detraction is sin, and doubt is insanity.

So long as God's cause continues in the earth there will be prophecy and miracles, for they are a part of it; yet the time of dividing of seas, and forecasting the fate of empires, may not come again. Individuals have their successive periods of life which passed, return not; so the race of mankind has had its childhood, its adolescency, full vigor, and is now, possibly, verging to a period of decline. The great globe itself, as we have seen, has had its periods of progressive developement. For instance, the Carboniferous formation divides geological time into two distinct eras. Before that time, was a low marshy, steamy earth, a dank, fumous, poisonous, semiopaque atmosphere, and abundant swamp forests, still and tenantless. On this side of that epoch was a clear sky, air-breathing animals, tall conifers, climatic zones. The analogue of this era, in human affairs, it may be said, is the deluge. Before it is a hazy zone, in which we half discern giants, long lived patriarchs, monsters of crime, troglodytes, &c. On this side, men like ourselves, cities, canals, books. may next notice in the story of the earth, the mountain forming period. We behold the world at the evening of one day, made up of flat lands, islands and archipelagos; the next morning-morning of God's time —lo! the Alps, the Appenines, the Himalayas, the Cordilleras, the Alleghanies, Arrarat and Nebo. If news should come from some distant part that a granite mountain, or island, had just been lifted up, our scientific journals would not publish the report. The islands and mountains of late formation are volcanic rock. The true era of mountain making is past. To this era in the world's history we may liken the early ages of prophecy. As the boundaries of future continents and states took shape from the raised mountain ridges, so those old prophecies were projected out into human annals marking out the lines of human action down to the last days. Such prophecies would be superfluous now when the history is so nearly made up. The time for them, of course, was in the beginning. We come in geological history to the Glacial Age. Mountain loads of ice were pushed over the earth, grinding down its crags, sloping its precipices, filling its chasms, smoothing its hills, leveling its vallies, distributing the comminuted rocks as soil. We may find something like a parallel of this in human affairs, in the Grecian armies trampling over the whole know world, overturning thrones, obliterating dividing lines, disseminating philosophy, laws, arts, language. Then in like manner the armies of Rome, preparing the way for other events and eras. Thus human affairs advanced; they have reached the quaternary now and there will be no revulsion.

It was in this age of prophecy, when the foundations of history were being laid, God the Creator, granted mortals a view, in advance, of that which he alone knew would be, that which through natural and human agency he would bring to pass, telling how it should be done, by what special methods, and by whom; designating his agents by specifications and even by name, and promising the spirit of prophecy, of miracle, and of translation, so that the faithful disciple in any age of time might know whether or not the work in which he was engaged was the special work of God or not; and know whether he was co-operating with the unseen forces of the universe or ranging his puny might against them.

If the critical view of Israelitish history above sketched were the true one we might be content with the decision above quoted, of the probable fate of the ten tribes, taken from the American Cyclopedia, that they had mingled with neighboring nations; but looking back to the original promises and considering the great history that grew out of them, and the great history remaining to complete their fulfillment, we are compelled to try to trace the covenant race through all its vicisitudes, to see what shall befall them in the latter-day.

The two and a half tribes were placed in the regions of the modern Khabour, a tributary of the Euphrates, probably five hundred miles from Jerusalem. Naphtali, Asher, Issachar, and Zebulun, were distributed in and on the borders of Assyria, where Tigleth Pileser built cities and says of them, "people, the conquest of my hand, in the midst of them I placed."

Many of the captives were taken to a mountainous region between Assyria and Media. Tobit, author of a book in the Apocraphy, shared the fate of his brethren of the tribe of Naphtali. He was made perveyor by the king.

Wilson, in Watchman of Ephraim says: "The Ninevah marbles record the rebellion of a people called Esakska, who called themselves in their country "Beth Isaac." Mr. Granger in Seed of Isaac, whose authority I am following, says Esakska and Sakia were but corruptions of the name of Isaac. Tobit informs us that after Sargon's death Media was in such a state of revolt that he could not go there. It seems that the Israelites joined with the Medes in a war with Sennacherib, the successor of Sargon. After the defeat of Sennachereb in Judea, when the angel of the Lord went out and smote of the camp of the Assyrians an hundred and four score and five thousand, he returned to Ninevah and took revenge upon the captive Israelites, and Tobit for burying some of the corpses, had to flee, at the sacrafice of his possessions. Is was in the time of Sennacherib that Josephus savs "the dominion of the Assyrians was overthrown by the Medes," which it is supposed brought the Israelites comparative freedom. Rawlinson mentions the Gimri as the same as the Saka or Sacae, and as occuring "on the Babylonian column of the Beheston," and other inscriptions. The meaning of Gimri, in Hebrew or Greek, is said to be The Tribes, and means, or belonged to, Israel. At least these names are applied to a people in the region of the tribes within the first quarter of a century after the captivity. (Granger).

Rawlinson says again: "The Babylonian title of Gimri, as applied to the Sacae, is not a vernacular, but a foreign title, and it may simply mean the tribes generally. Gimri Sacae is made to mean the Tribes of Isaac. A branch of the Gimri or Sacae migrated to a foggy land above the Euxine, and were therefore called Cimmerians (and later Cimbrians) and were driven thence into Thrace. The Cimbrians are next found in Denmark, which is called the Cimbric Chersonese. Among the Cimbrians were the Kymry. Pezron says: "These Cimbrians, the offspring of the Asiatic Sacae, were, without doubt, the true Celtae. Rawlinson, again, says: "One division of the Celtic people has always borne the name of Cimry "In all branches of the Celtic the C, or K, was interchangable with the G. The Kimry pronounced their name Kumri, which strictly accords with Khumri, the name by which the Assyrians designated the country of Samaria. The Welch and ancient Bretons were Kimry.

Our author next takes up the case of the Danes, and finds Danaaus is the Irish for Danes. Donians is the same word, and applied to the primitive Scotch. The Irish Tuatha-de-Danaaus is made to mean tribe of Dan. The Danes were called Suordonians, by Tacitus, and the name is equivalent to children of Dan. A part of the Suordonians were the Anglo Saxons, who called themselves Asae.

Going back to Habor, Hazah, and the river Gozan, we find that Reuben, Gad and the half tribe of Menasseh were mentioned as living there still, by Ezra, two hundred and ten years after their settlement there. Proofs, for which I have no room, are given that the tribes were, or became, the nation of Massagetae, which was a contraction of Manassah and Gad. They in connection with the Sacae became very numerous and powerful, and are known in general history as a part of the Asiatic Scythians. The Sacae seized the country of the Bactrians and penetrated the confines of India, and extending northward took possession of Sogdiana, "and the regions upon the Iaxartes; and from thence they extended eastward to the ocean, calling their new settlements Sacaia. They also acquired possession of the upper part of China, which they called Cathaia. derers passed over to the islands of Japan, one of which was called Sacaia. Later Massagetae, Sacae, Sacassani, and Dahans are mentioned as allies of Persia.

The scene is now changed to the region of the Danube where Getae are in occupation. Here also dwelt the Daci whom Justin says were descendants of the Getae. Again the Daci are variously called Daans, Dai, Dians, and Free Thracians. It is made to appear that the principal rivers of Europe, known to the Greeks by their ancient names of Tanais, Boresthens, Tyras, and the Ister, were subsequently known under the names of Dan, Danapris, Danaster, and Danubius. The three latter are supposed to be formed by a compound of Dan and several false divinities, as Astarte, Anubis, etc. "According to Saxo Grammaticus, Denmark signifies country of Dan." Dan was the name of the first king of Denmark. Sharon Turner, in a foot-note, says: "The Vetus Chronicon Holistiae, p. 54, says the Danes and Jutes are Jews [Israelites] of the tribe of Ďan."

Our author stops short of a possible extent of Dan's career in history, for many Danes have migrated to Utah.

Concerning the Saxons it is stated they came into Germany about 26 B. C., or according to Mallet, 70 B. C., and came from the neighborhood of the Tanais or Don, north of the Euxine and Caspian Sea. By a passage in the geography of Ptolemy "it is ascertained that before the year 141 after Christ there was a people called Saxones, who inhabited the country on the north side of the Elbe. Camden wrote two hundred years ago, "The Saxons are descended from the Saci, the most powerful people of Asia; that they are so called as if one should say Sacasones, that is the sons of the Sacae." "Some have thought that Arsareth was in Thrace, and as this peaceable multitude is said to have crossed the narrow passage of the Euphrates, (Esdras) they must have passed through the north of Asia Minor, and Phrygia, thence into Thrace.

Many volumes have been written to prove that the Saxons were Israelites. What I have given above is a fair specimen of the lines of proof relied upon. It is reasonable to conclude that many Israelites went with the early colonies to Europe. But there is is a philological difficulty in the way of believing that whole tribes of Israelites migrated together there. Languages can not be so readily stamped out. This objection applies still more against the supposition that that the ancient Britons were Hebrews. Their language is Aryan. Old Saxon is also an Aryan language.

THE LAST PASSOVER.

THERE seems to be a diversity of opinion concerning this passover, whether Jesus Christ did or did not eat the regular Jewish passover just prior to his death, Commentators differ, (as usual), but I think the evangelists are definite. we will observe that there was a feast of the passover pending: "ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of Man (God) is betrayed to be crucified." Matt. 26: 2. Mark 14: 1. Mark 14: 1. "Now the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, whih is called the passover." Luke 22:1. John 13:1. You will observe that it was nigh; (not far off). "After two days." It was generally known by all-"ye know" says Jesus to his disciples: the Jews said—"not the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people." Matt. 26: 5. Notice also that this passover was just prior to his betrayal and crucifixion. Now, inasmuch as Jesus was in the habit of observing the passover as well as all zealous Jews, the disciples (apostles) came to Jesus on the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, saying, "Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover?" Matt. 26: 17.

"And the first day of unleavened bread, when they (that is the Jews) killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the passover?" Mark 14: 12. Luke 22: 9. "Go into the city to such a man and say unto him, The Master saith, my time is at hand; I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples." Matt. 26: 18. Mark 14: 13, 14, 15. Luke 22: 10, 11, 12. "Jesus sendeth two of his disciples to make ready the passover." Mark 14: 13. "And he sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat." Luke 22:8. "And the disciples did as Jesus had ap-Luke 22:8. pointed [instructed] them, and they made ready the passover." Matt. 26: 19. Mark 14: 16. Luke 22: 13.

Jesus says—"I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples." Matt. 26: 18. Jesus had desired to eat this passover with his disciples before he suffered [i. e. crucified]. Luke 22:11, 15. "Now when the even [evening] was come, he sat down with the twelve." Matt. 26: 20. Mark 14: 17. "I shall eat the passover with my disciples."—the latter clause of Luke 22: Jesus eating the passover. Matt. 26: 21. "As they were eating." Matt. 26: 26. [Here the communion was introduced while eating the passover]. See also Mark 14: 18, 20, 22. Jesus sat while eating the passover. "And when the hour was come he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him." Luke 22: 14. Matt. 26: 20. The apostles were also seated—"And as they sat and did eat" Mark 14: 18.

Now I would have the reader observe that I have quoted from but four chapters namely, Matt. 26th, Mark 14th, Luke 22d, and John 13th. Now if the reader will go to the trouble to carefully read those chapters, he will find that they are all treating upon the same subjects, namely, the observance of the last passover, the introduction of the communion, (bread and wine), the traitor (Judas) exposed, etc.

I have shown, (1) That the passover was nigh; (2) That the disciples were instructed to prepare the passover; (3) That they did prepare the passover; (4) That Jesus desired to eat the passover; (5) That he sat down with the twelve; (6) That they did eat; (7) That the passover was generally known by Jesus, the apostles, and the Tews.

But now, however clear this may seem, there are still some objections. It is urged that Christ could not have eaten the passover, because the evangelist John 18:28, says the Jews went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled, but that they (the Jews) might eat the passover. This, they claim, was after Jesus had eaten the supper, which is certainly correct. Now I think it is easy to reconcile the evangelists, and show that Jesus did eat the passover, and that the Jews could also eat it after Christ's crucifixion. It almost seems to me I can hear the objector say-No, sir. Now if you will turn to Exodus 12: 16, you will find that the lamb was to be slain on the fourteenth day of the month; but the feast of unleavened bread lasted to the one and twentieth day of the month, (Ex. 12: 18, 19, 20), making seven days for the observance of the passover.

Now if you will turn to the evangelists —Matthew 26: 17, Mark 14: 12, Luke 22: 1, you will find that it was this very feast of unleavened bread that they were observing. Now it is evident that all of the feast, the seven days, was called the passover. John says,—"Now before the feast of the passover"—calling the feast the passover. Luke 22: I. "Now the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the passover. I do think the evangelist Luke is very definite in calling it "the feast of the passover." does not say—"Now the first day of the feast is called the passover," but "the feast," evidently all of the seven days' feast of unleavened bread, was called the passover. Here is where I think the whole difficulty arises-not in the testimony-but in the phraseology of the evangelists. Now to convince the reader that they were observing the seven days' feast of unleavened bread, you will notice the peculiar expression of the evangelists, Matthew 26: 17, also Mark 14: 12, now "the first day" shows that there were at least two, and no doubt there were to be six to follow. Having determined that all of the feast is called the passover, and that it lasted seven days, the passover might well have been observed after Christ's crucifixion, and the Jews participate in it, if undefiled. By this time we are prepared to understand why the disciples inferred that Judas was to buy those things which they had need of against the feast, because it lasted seven days. John 13: 29. (Jesus however was referring, not to the feast, but to the betrayal). There is still another objection. In John 19: 31 we read that because it was the preperation day. I will just remark it was not the preperation day proper, for killing the lamb, but for the Sabbath and the continued passover. Mark is very definite-"And now when the even was come, because it was the preparation;"—that is, the day before the Sabbath. Mark 15: 42.

Now we see why John should call that day (the Sabbath) an high day, John 19:31, from the fact that it was not only a Sabbath, but also one of the days of the feast of unleavened bread, or passover. It is also argued that Jesus did not eat the passover, because it is called a supper. There is certainly nothing strange about that, from the fact it was the evening meal of the passover, and not breakfast, or dinner. It is urged that Jesus instituted the feast of charity, instead of keeping the passover that night, and that if Jesus did keep the passover, he is an impostor. Which is the worst, to make Jesus an impostor, or a liar? Jesus certainly did say "I will keep the passover."—Matt. 26: 18.

"Be not harsh with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God; for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth; therefore let thy words be few."—Ecclesiastes 5:2.

ASIATIC CHOLERA.

IT is now plainly evident that the cholera is epidemic. It is literally "upon the people." It is no longer confined to isolated spots, but is ravaging wide areas in the Old World. Reproducing in some parts of Spain the horrors of panic as well as of death which marked the visits of the plague in the Middle Ages, desolating populous cities in France, and now making its apthan at any previous time since attention to sanitary laws became a recognized part of the duty of a civilized government. And there are yet more than two months of the time in which it may be expected to do its deadliest work. The dependence of human health upon the seasons is the same in kind now, if a little less strongly marked in degree, as it was when the sages of more than a score of centuries ago placed the Scorpion in the Zodiac in recognition of the fact that the time corresponding to our month of October was the most sickly portion of the whole year.

As the prostrating effects of the heated term debilitate the system, and thus render it less able to ward off the attacks of disease, it is but philosophical to expect that the unusual irregularity of the summer weather this year has caused a depression of the vital forces of humanity to a point considerably below the average due to the season. With this key to the philosophy of the situation there is no need for attributing the spread of the cholera to poison germs in the atmosphere, or striving to cloak our ignorance by the use of a big word, and ascribing it to that much-abused agent, "electricity." That force is undoubtedly varied in its intensity, but it is as an effect, not as a cause—its changes from the latent to the energetic condition, and back again, being dependent, both meteorologically and physiologically, on those two great factors of force-heat and moisture. For the first, it is now well known that the cholera is a disease of the alimentary canal, and is not communicated by means of a poison breathed into the lungs. This accounts for the well-known fact that it does not jump rapidly from one place to another except when carried by an individual who has caught the infection, or perhaps by a flow of sewage from an infected district. It is not even contagious, in the strict sense of the word, not being communicable by the mere "touch." But this is merely a distinction of terms scarcely worthy the energy recently displayed in India to prevent the disease from being referred to in the medical reports as contagious. There is no reason to doubt that the poison has ere this caused death in this city by being absorbed through the skin as well as by swallowing. But there is no proof that it can be engendered by malarious gases, not even those arising from the decomposition of animal matter, though that may debilitate the system so much as to make it susceptible to the action of the cholera germ, which would fail to harm a vigorously healthy constitution. The seeds of that and of other epidemics probably exist in countless millions for every one that takes effect on the human system.

The most effective precaution against the spread of cholera that can be taken in an associative way is in the direction of preventing the water from being contaminated by the excreta from cholera patients. Too much care can scarcely be exercised, or trouble taken, in this particular. The removal of garbage from the streets and pearance in the ports of the British Isles, alleys may be otherwise desirable, but is it has taken a much wider and deeper hold not to be compared with that in point of importance; and the removal of ashes is mere child's play, as that material when dry is an absorbent of malarial gases. The best preventative measure that can be resorted to by the individual is a thorough boiling of all water that is used in the preparation of food and for drinking purposes, and even for washing the person. The boiling process destroys not only the cholera germ, but renders innocuous all other animal matter, the presence of which would otherwise imperil the health. Of secondary consequence, but still important, are the keeping of the mouth closed in the act of inspiring air in which case the nasal passage act as strainers to prevent deleterious matter from entering the system, and the avoidance of excess, which would lower the tone of the constitution and thus invite the attack of disease.

It would be well for our readers, each and every one for himself, to begin the adoption of these precautionary measures at once. Their use would of great value in warding off the attacks of other diseases if the cholera does not come, while in the event of a visitation from the scourge it would not find them unprepared. On the contrary, they could look forward to it with confidence, so far as they were individually concerned, and be ready to render valuable service in helping to ward off the danger from the rest of the community.

Conference Minutes.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA.

The above district met with the Deer Ceek Branch in the vicinity of Burnette, June 27th 28th, 1885. James Caffall, president pro tem, J. H. Jackson secretary pro. tem. Columbus branch reports 39 members, Deer Creek 26, and Clear Water 67. The following Elders reported in person: G. W. Payton (baptized 2), W. S. Barbee (baptized 3) James Caffall, G. S. Hyde; Priest C. N. Hutchins; Teacher J. H. Jackson; Deacon Pain. Elders Charles Brindley, H. J. Hudson and Levi Gamet, reported by letter. C. Brindlev, Bishop's Agent, reported that since the first of January, he had received $41, which he turned over to Bishop Blakeslee. The resolution adopted at the conference of June, 1884, was rescinded. Whereas, the law in the Doctrine and Covenants provides that the several churches comprising the Church of Christ send one or more of their Teachers to attend the several conferences held by the Elders of the church with a list of names, etc.; therefore, be it resolved, that we respectfully suggest to all the branches of this district to more faithfully carry out that order. G. S. Hyde was sustained as district president. A two days' meeting was appointed at Glen Alpine, for July 25th and 26th. Levi Gamet was sustained as district secretary. The Sunday sessions were devoted to preaching the word, Bro. James Caffall being chief speaker. Adjourned to meet with the Clear Water Branch, September 26th and 27th, 1885.

CUT OFF.

What a terrible word that is? Cut off. What significance is made to attach to this sentence in religious circles. In none, perhaps, has it been made to do more tremedous duty than in the Utah Latter Day Saints. When and where the cutting off, the slaughter of unbelieving ones begun is not now material; but it has become a matter for a few words.

We suppose that from the safeguards given the church, by which the continual transgressor was finally to be "cast out" from among the people as worshipers, came the afterwards overdone custom of cutting members off. This custom is most likely given greater significance because of the prevalence of the idea that unto certain officers in the church, on whom special priesthood had been conferred, power had been given to not only cut persons off the church on earth; that is to deny them the right of fellowship with the body of believers, including the communion of the Lord's Supper, but also to erase their names from whatever record is kept in heaven of those who by obedience on earth become entitled to life eternal. Under this idea the threat to "cut off" has become a dreadful thing for the faithful to contemplate.

We have thought much over this subject; and tried to think with a view to correct conclusions, and the chief one we have reached is this, that "withdrawing" from the fellowship of those who walk disorderly was intended, when the order, or rule was instituted to act as a means to recall the person so dealt with to a sense of the condition he was in. Cutting off, in the sense we have here portrayed it, could never so work; but in the majority of cases would throw the person so cut off into a careless and indifferent state of mind, if it did not produce downright infidelity at once; the one penalty being inflicted for all classes and grades of offenses, from overt wickedness to "disrespect to the priesthood," whatever this last may mean.

We have now in mind two persons, one of whom, a man, became dissatisfied with the precepts and practices of plural marriage as taught in Utah and the several settlements; and he so stated to the members of the branch where he lived and asked to be released from his allegiance to those tenets. The Bishop moved that he be "cut off" the church, and it was done by a vote of six or eight voting yea, and no one voting nay; though many were present. He had done nothing immoral, or wrong in conduct, be believed in all that was taught him in England when he heard and obeyed the gospel; he believed the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, and that Joseph Smith was called of God to the mission he endeavored to fill; but he was "cut off" twenty years ago for apostacy, and delivered over to the buffettings of Satan. The other was a woman who was "cut off" for marrying a Gentile. This was her sole offense. Her mother and herself had received the missionaries in England, fed them, housed them, gave them money and did all they could to aid them. But when marrying she chose to listen to her own convictions, or the decisions of her own heart rather than the "counsel" of the Bishop, and she was "cut off."

In these out of hundreds of similar ones, we see the working of a system, based upon an imperfect understanding of a good rule; or a false assumption of power.

We cannot fail to ask our own thoughts—Did the recording angel that writes the names of those who on the earth are successfully obedient write the names of this man and this woman in the record of the family of God in heaven? If so, did he when they were so "cut off," blot their names from that family record? Or did he smile at the proud vanity of those busy cfficers and let the names stand as recorded! We wonder which.

To our way of thinking, that divine statement "whatsoever ye bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; whatsoever ye loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven," does not contemplate, either binding or loosing at the mere caprice of a man, or men; but does contemplate the existence of specific and fixed laws by which things are done on earth to be recognized in heaven as according to the will of God; and notwithstanding men may assume to exercise heavenly powers on earth, so surely as the acts performed by reason of such assumption are not in purview and keeping with the purest and broadest terms of God's mercy to mankind and the commission, "Go ye and preach the gospel to every creature," just so surely will no attention be paid in heaven to such acts. In the cases in point granting the offenses named to be the only ones the parties cut off were guilty of, who dares to say that the sentence was in accord with the gospel economy, and recorded in heaven.

THE Desert News, of August 14th, has the following:

"Elder L. A. Shepherd writing to the Southern Utonian, of Beaver, from Sylvan Mills, Tenn., July 29th, states that the enforcement of the unconstitutional law recently passed by the Tennessee Legislature prohibiting the freedom of speech and of the press, as far as the Latter Day Saints are concerned, has had the effect of causing the removal of all the Elders from the western part of the State except himself and Elder George I. Woodbury. They, however, are working to good advantage, and within two weeks have initiated six honest hearted persons into the fold, with good prospects ahead. He closes his letter as follows: Since the passage of the late act here in Tennessee, we are not allowed to circulate the News, or lend any of our books that treat on polygamy; so we can not make the progress we would like to. The Voice of Warning and Book of Mormon can be used with perfect safety. Any one desiring to help the cause along can do so by sending a copy of either of these works, as they do a great deal of good wherever read."

This letter is a most truthful and damaging commentary on polygamy. It states in effect that polygamy hinders the preaching of the gospel, but that such anti-polygamous works as the Book of Mormon and Voice of Warning are not hindrances, but helps. Polygamy, Adam-God, secret oathbound endowments and their like, have clogged, crippled, and cursed the efforts of the ministry and the Church from 1844 up to the present time; and particularly is this seen in 1852-3 and thereafter. The reputation of the Church had been sadly defiled by the oft repeated charge of polygamy from 1844, and the progress of gospel teaching wasgreatly retarded thereby, though the charge was stoutly and persistently denied by those contaminated with it. But in 1852, and after, when that abomination—that "crime" against God, the Church, and the race—was proclaimed a virtue, a means of salvation and glory, an essential doctrine of the Church of Christ-after that time this accursed Ishmael, whose "hand is against every man, and every man's hand against" it, has stood before the Church like the dragon of the Apocalypse, to hinder and destroy. In fourteen years—from 1830 to 1844—150,000 to 200,000 were added to the Church. In 1852, and up to the time of the introduction of polygamy and its kindred evils in the fall of that year, the Elders preached the gospel in the British Isles with such success that many thousands were baptized yearly. In June, 1852, their numbers were 33,257. (See Mill. Star, vol. 15, pp. 73, 74). And the number of baptisms in the same mission for the half-year ending December 31st, 1852, were 3,400, or at the rate of 6,800 per year. (See Mill. Star, vol. 15, p. 78). How is it now? From that fatal period the British Mission like all the rest began to rapidly decline, and for years past has been a thin vanishing shadow of what it once was. Had polygamy and its associate evils never appeared, and had the ministry preached the gospel in its purity as contained in the sacred books of the Church, there is good reason to believe that the number of members would have increased in an increasing ratio, until now they could have counted their numbers by the millions. But when the "twin relic" cast its cold, black shadow across the gospel-pathway, the dank mildews of spiritual death settled heavily upon the latter day work, until it came to pass that, "instead of a sweet smell," there was a "stink;" and "burning, instead of beauty" in holiness. The enemy of the Church "came in like a flood" till all who bore the name of Latter Day Saint have suffered the reproach and shame. And till everywhere "the way of truth" has been "evil spoken of." Polygamy and its resultant evils are largely, very largely responsible for obstructing the gospel highway of King Immanuel; but God has set his hand to clear away these obstructions, first, by persuasive words of instruction and warning; second, by threatenings of His wrath; and, third, His hand has now laid hold on judgment, and woe betides those offending, except they repent speedily.

Why can not the Utah people see that their sorrows, oppressions, disappointments, reproaches, threatenings and bondage, have grown out of polygamy and auxiliaries? Why can they not see that their condition is similar to that of Israel anciently when in rebellion against God? And why can they not see that now and for years past the kingdoms of the world have prevailed and do prevail against them, and that this is evidence that their leaders, and some others have become like salt that has lost its savor, and "is thenceforth good for nothing only to be cast out and trodden under foot of men," as predicted by Joseph the Seer, in Doctrine and Covenants, revelation of Dec. 16th, 1833? Why will they not be instructed by the standard books of the church used in the days of Joseph the Seer? Why will they not see the utter failure of the promises and prophecies of Brigham Young and his fellows, as they are made in Stars, Deseret News, and Fournal of Discourses? Why will they not see the folly and falsity of Brigham's promises and prophecies in respect to the popularity and triumph of polygamy made the very day he first publicly taught it—Aug. 29th, 1852? Why will they not be admonished by this voice from Tennessee? And why not learn that God said of apostate Israel, "the leaders of this people cause them to err; and they that are led of them are destroyed?"

CHRIST, LIKE MOSES.

A BROTHER writes us saying: "I write you in reference to the words of Moses in which he says—'A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you like unto me.'—Deut 18: 15, 18. Of whom speaks the prophet this? If of Jesus, please give the proofs."

We cheerfully comply with this request, as it involves matters of high importance, and those about which there have been some division, contention, and quibbling, by a few of those called to be Saints, and even by some who have been called to the ministry.

The argument on one side is, that if any one is a prophet like unto Moses, they must necessarily give a "law of carnal commandments," kill an Egyption or some one else, and do all things that Moses did. This is bad logic, and worse theology! God is speaking in the text of the prophetic office and calling of one who should be like unto Moses, and not of his personal character. Moses was a prophet, seer, revelator, lawgiver under God, and a founder of a dispensation. Another would arise after of him from among Israel, who should possess all these distinguishing offices and callings, and many prophets and apostles of ancient and modern times, in Asia and America, (including Jesus), have testified that that promised prophet was Jesus Christ, as the following texts fully prove. Hear Jesus on the point:

"Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken! Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? And beginning at Moses, and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself."—Luke 24: 25-27.

"Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father: there is one that accuseth you, even Moses, in whom ye trust. For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?"—John 5: 45-47.

Philip is very clear:

"Philip findeth Nathanael, and said unto him, We have found him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph."—John 1:45.

The Apostle Peter goes right to the point in his testimony:

"And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: Whom the heaven must receive, until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets, since the world began. For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things, whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people."—Acts 3: 20–23.

And this is confirmed by the angel to Joseph the Seer, September 21st, 1823:

"While I was thus in the act of calling upon God I discovered a light appearing in the room which continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noon-day, when immediately a personage appeared at my bedside standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor. He had on a loose robe of most exquisite whiteness. It was a whiteness beyond anything earthly I had ever seen; nor do I believe that any earthly thing could be made to appear so exceedingly white and brilliant; his hands were naked and his arms also a little above the wrist. So also were his feet naked, as were his legs a little above the ankles. His head and neck were also bare. I could discover that he had no other clothing on but this robe, as it was open so that I could sec into his bosom. Not only was his robe exceedingly white, but his whole person was glorious beyond description, and his countenance truly like lightning. The room was exceedingly light, but not so very bright as immediately around his person. When I first looked upon him I was afraid, but the fear soon left me. He called me by name and said unto me that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Nephi. That God had a work for me to do, and that my name should be had for good and evil, among all nations, kindreds, and tongues; or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people.

"He said there was a book deposited, written upon gold plates, giving an account of the former inhabitants of this continent, and the source from whence they sprang. He also said that the fulness of the everlasting gospel was contained in it, as delivered by the Savior to the ancient inhabitants. Also that there were two stones in silver bows, and these stones fastened to a breastplate constituted what is called the Urim and Thummim, de posited with the plates, and the possession and use of these stones was what constituted seers in ancient or former times, and that God had prepared them for the purpose of translating the book. After telling me these things he commenced quoting the prophecies of the Old Testament, he first quoted part of the third chapter of Malachi; and he quoted also the fourth or last chapter of the same prophecy, though with a little variation from the way it reads in our Bibles. Instead of quoting the first verse as reads in our books he quoted it thus: 'For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall burn as stubble, for they that cometh shall burn them saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.' And again he quoted the fifth verse thus: 'Behold I will reveal unto you the Priesthood by the hand of Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord.' He also quoted the next verse differently: 'And he shall plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers, if it were not so the whole earth would be utterly wasted at his coming.' In addition to these he quoted the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, saying that it was about to be fulfilled. He quoted also the third chapter of Acts, twenty-second and twenty-third verses precisely as they stand in our New Testament. He said that that prophet was Christ, but the day had not yet come when 'they who would not hear his voice should be but off from among the people,' but soon would come.

"He also quoted the second chapter of Joel, from the twenty eighth to the last verse. He also said that this was not yet fulfilled, but was soon to be. And he further stated the fulness of the gentiles was soon to come in. He quoted many other passsages of scripture and offered many explanations which can not be mentioned here.

"Again he told me that when I got those plates of which he had spoken (for the time that they should be obtained was not yet fulfilled), I should not show them to any person, neither the breast-plate with the Urim and Thumim, only to those to whom I should be commanded to show them, if I did I should be destroyed."—Times and Sea sons, vol. 3: p. 753.

See also Millennial Star, vol. 14, pages 4 and 5 of Supplement. And to conclude this lengthy array of evidence, we give the testimony of Nephi, who places the final fulfillment of Moses' prophecy concerning Christ, so far as relates to those who shall be "cut off from among the people" for rejecting the words of Christ, in the last days:

"And after our seed is scattered, the Lord God will proceed to do a marvellous work among the Gentiles, which shall be of great worth unto our seed; wherefore, it is likened unto their being nourished by the Gentiles, and being carried in their arms, and upon their shoulders. And it shall also be of worth unto the Gentiles: and not only unto the Gentiles, but unto all the house of Israel, unto the making known of the covenants of the Father of heaven unto Abraham, saving, In thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed. And I would, my brethren, that ye should know that all the kindreds of the earth can not be blessed, unless he shall make bare his arm in the eyes of the nations. Wherefore, the Lord God will proceed to make bare his arm in the eyes of all the nations, in bringing about his covenants and his gospel, unto those who are of the house of Israel. Wherefore, he will bring them again out of captivity, and they shall be gathered together to the lands of their inheritance: and they shall be brought out of obscurity, and out of darkness: and they shall know that the Lord is their Savior and their Redeemer, the mighty one of Israel. And the blood of that great and abominable church, which is the whore of all the earth, shall turn upon their own heads; for they shall war among themselves, and the sword of their own hands shall fall upon their own heads, and they shall be drunken with their own blood. And every nation which shall war against thee, O house of Israel, shall be turned one against another, and they shall fall into the pit which they digged to ensnare the people of the Lord.

"And all that fight against Zion shall be destroyed, and that great whore, who hath perverted the right ways of the Lord, yea, that great and abominable church shall tumble to dust, and great shall be the fall of it. For behold, saith the prophet, the time cometh speedily, that Satan shall have no more power over the hearts of the children of men; for the day soon cometh, that all the proud and they who do wickedly, shall be as stubble; and the day cometh that they must be burned. For the time soon cometh, that the fulness of the wrath of God shall be poured out upon all the children of men; for he will not suffer that the wicked shall destroy the righteous. Wherefore, he will preserve the righteous by his power, even if it so be that the fulness of his wrath must come, and the righteous be preserved, even unto the destruction of their enemies by fire. Wherefore, the righteous need not fear; for thus saith the prophet, they shall be saved, even if it so be as by fire. Behold, my brethren, I say unto you, that these things must shortly come; yea, even blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke must come; and it must needs be upon the face of this earth; and it cometh unto men according to the flesh, if it so be that they will harden their hearts against the Holy One of Israel; for behold, the righteous shall not perish; for the time surely must come that all they who fight against Zion shall be cut off. And the Lord will surely prepare a way for his people, unto the fulfilling of the words of Moses, which he spake, saying: A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, like unto me; him shall y: hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that all those who will not hear that prophet, shall be cut off from among the people.

"And now I, Nephi, declare unto you, that this prophet of whom Moses spake, was the Holy One of Israel; wherefore, he shall execute judgment in righteousness; and the righteous need not fear, for they are those who shall not be confounded. But it is the kingdom of the devil which shall be built up among the children of men, which kingdom shall be established among them which are in the flesh: for the time speedily shall come, that all churches which are built up to get gain, and all those who are built up to get power over the flesh, and those who are built up to become popular in the eyes of the world, and those who seek the lusts of the flesh and the things of the world, and to do all manner of iniquity; yea, in fine, all those who belong to the kingdom of the devil, are they who need fear, and tremble, and quake: they are those who must be brought low in the dust, they are those who must be consumed as stubble: and this is according to the words of the prophet. And the time cometh speedily, that the righteous must be led up as calves of the stall, and the Holv One of Israel must reign in dominion, and might, and power, and great glory. And he gathereth his children from the four quarters of the earth; and he numbereth his sheep, and they know him; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd; and he shall feed his sheep, and in him they shall find pasture. And because of the righteousness of his people, Satan has no power; wherefore, he can not be loosed for the space of many years; for he hath no power over the hearts of the people, for they dwell in righteousness, and the Holy One of Israel reigneth. And now behold, I, Nephi, say unto you, that all these things must come according to the flesh. But, behold all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people, shall dwell safely in the Holy One of Israel, if it so be that they will repent."-Book of Mormon, I Nephi 7:2-4.

These evidences should forever settle the fact that Jesus of Nazareth was the prophet spoken of by Moses in Deut. 18: 14-18, and that Jesus was, in his prophetic character, though not in many personal characteristics, "like unto" Moses.

THE following letter from Elder Kelley furnishes interesting items in regard to the movements of Elder Kelley and Bishop Blakeslee.

Омана, Nebraska,

August 20th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—We had a pleasant, yet lively meeting at Lucas last night of three hours' duration, (prolonged to this however by our audience), and then took the 145 a.m. train and reached here in time to prepare for our journey, which we resumed at 7:30 this evening. We procured tickets to San Francisco at clerical rates, with an extension of thirty days on road, should we desire. We go over the U. P. R. R. Bro. Blakeslee is in good spirits. This will let you know we crossed the big bridge safely and still wend our way.

Hastily, in gospel bonds,

E. L. KELLEY.

THE ADVOCATE.

In another column we publish an appeal in behalf of the Advocate by Elder Joseph Luff. As stated therein he now becomes the Editor of it, and we bespeak for it a liberal patronage.

From his experience in the Rocky Mountain Mission, his general and thorough knowledge of the latter day work as presented in its sacred books and standard literature, and from other qualifications, natural and acquired, we have no hesitancy in recommending the editorial fitness and ability of Elder Luff and soliciting the Saints and friends to respond heartily and promptly to his appeal. We desire to see the Advocate live, and flourish, and develop into a paper of large dimensions and wide circulation in the Rocky Mountain Mission and elsewhere.

W. W. BLAIR.

"Joseph Smith, president of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, has seized the opportune moment afforded him by the present trouble the Utah Saints are having, and has gone to Utah, and is making persistent and vigorous efforts to bring the Saints out there back to 'primitive purity.' His presence and preaching just at this particular time is causing a good deal of stir and fear. The Utah Mormon priesthood and press fight him bitterly, yet, nevertheless many hear him, and his work will no doubt have a telling effect. His principle mission is to induce his brethren of the Utah Church to abandon polygamy, and thereby not only put themselves in harmony with the church of which he is the representative head, but also to put themselves in harmony with the laws of this country. This is a commendable work, to do which no man is better fitted, or could be more successful than Joseph Smith, son of the prophet."

Yes; President Smith has gone to Utah to call the Saints out there back to "primitive purity" as set forth in the authentic and authorized church standards as taught to the church and the world everywhere up to 1844. His work there is to save the people from the errors and evils into which they have fallen by following leaders who have in many things taught them the very opposite of what is set forth as divine in those books which are peculiar to the Latter Day Saints-the Book of Mormon and the various editions of the Book of Covenants up to 1857, and even up to 1876. There is not a line in those two books that can be made to favor polygamy, sedition, disloyalty, priestcraft, secret oath-bound endowments, unity of church and state, supremecy of the church over the state in political and legislative affairs, etc., but they are most emphatic and clearly pronounced in their denunciation of all these evils. If the Utah people would heed the call of Pres. Joseph Smith and hear him patiently, they might readily see their way out the difficulties and perils which now beset them. The Utah Mormon Church is no more like the church over which Joseph the Seer presided from 1830 to 1844, than the Catholic is like the Christian Church of the first century. Just as radical and striking differences exist between them, and for similar reasons—"damnable heresies," brought in "privily" by "false teachers."—2 Peter 2: 1.

THE following letter from the senior Editor will interest our readers:

DEER LODGE, Montana,

August 20th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Bro. Luff and I left Soda Springs, Tuesday at 6:20 p. m., or thereabouts, and changing to the Utah and Northern at Pocatello, at near ten p. m., we reached here at I p. m. Wednesday. We footed it out to Bro. A. Christopherson's.

Our Christian friends had heard of my coming into the Valley, from some source, and had last Sunday decided to permit us the use of their house for Sunday night next. We are therefore booked for that. We shall go to Race Track this afternoon; Bro. Christopherson is going down with us. We shall try for one or two services there, Friday and Saturday, one, or both. We will not reach Bozeman until the 23d or 24th inst.

This is a beautiful valley, in some respects handsomer than Malad or Soda. I saw what to me was some wonderfully beautiful mountain scenery on the way here, after leaving Silver Bow. I never saw finer hillsides; cedars and shrubs, the smooth, green and soft gray slopes were very beautiful. One grand slope was as fine as anything I ever saw.

Capt. Codman and wife maintained their courtesy and kindness to us all the time of our stay in Soda Springs. He was much affected by the heat, ("Insolation" is the fancy medical term for it); exhaustion and lassitude. He is seventy, and so far as I can see, his mental force is unabated. He talks clearly upon the subjects of our common interest, and has a good conception of the relative positions of the Utah people and ourselves. He respects all sincere men; but thinks the warfare made by some of the Gentiles on the Utah Church, more a question of loaves and fishes, rather than one of good to the Mormons.

Yours, and in bonds,

Joseph Smith.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Elder Hiram Rathbun writing from Lansing, Michigan, the 20th ult., says:

"On Monday the 17th inst., I left the people in the town of Lee for the present favorably impressed, and some investigating the truth. I met with some opposition publicly at the commencement, but it was soon vanquished, and the truth triumphed. We now have the ears of the people in that locality and trust that sooner or later they, like the church at Rome anciently, will "obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto them."

Elder A. J. Cato, in a letter dated Jacksborough, Texas, the 15th ult., says:

"I am to engage in a debate with a Campbellite preacher the first Monday in September. * * * Prospects in this mission are encouraging; more so I think than at any time since I came to the mission."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Ques.—Is it proper for a minister to administer the ordinances, and especially the Eucharist, while using "the weed"—tobacco?

Ans.—There is no specific law against it; yet we do not think it proper to minister under such circumstances, for tobacco is not good for man ordinarily, and especially when engaged in religious exercises. The command of God is, "Be ye clean who bear the vessels of the Lord."

Q.—Is it right to pay tithing or send money to the church if the sender is in debt?

A.—Yes; unless by sending such moneys the persons are prevented from keeping their engagements. Persons may owe debts and still be in a condition to aid the church. All members should deal conscientiously and honestly in the matter, and their duty will be plain to them.

Q.—Is it wrong, and wicked, for Saints to attend circuses, theatres, and dances?

A.—There is no law of the church nor scriptural injunction directly touching these matters, further than that all Saints should "shun the appearance of evil;" should not mingle with the corrupt, giddy, or vain ones; and should do nothing to offend, or cause the weak to stumble. The Editor has conscientious scruples in regard to these matters and would hardly attend any of them, for the reason, at least, that time and money can be used in a better way, and that better associations can be had.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letter from Pres. Joseph Smith dated at Soda Springs the 18th inst., we learn he and Bro. J. Luff would start at once for Deer Lodge, Montana, via the Utah Northern R. R., and thence to Bozeman, He says the feeling toward the church is generally good at Soda Springs since their services the previous Sunday. He was in excellent spirits and promises to keep us posted in his movements.

Elder M. T. Short writes from Hannibal, Missouri, the 22d ult.; that he will be home next month (September) to attend conference. He expects to be in Keokuk for labor the last week in August. He was when writing preaching in Hannibal, and had good audiences. Bro. Short's confidence is weakened in those who persist in the use of tobacco. He thinks its use tends to make the user unspiritual, neglectful and unfaithful.

The Iowa State Fair at Des Moines opens the 5th inst, and continues until the 11th. Prospects are good for a very successful meeting.

The Brockton (Mass.,) Gazette of the 20th ult., contains a fair statement of the faith of the Reorganized Church and of the work of President Joseph Smith in Utah

Bro. H. Havey, writing from Brown City, Michigan, wishes us to say that a Rev. Sims of the Evangelist order and Elder J. J. Cornish have had a discussion, in which this Reverend undertook to prove that the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints is of the devil, because the primitive Christian Church, he claimed, had but twelve apostles in all, and there had not been and could not be any more. Bro. Havey says the Rev. Sims "made a bad failure," and that "he swore several times at Bro. Cornish," and "offered ten dollars to see a sign." Also that he got so wrathy he would not shake hands with Bro. Cornish. He further says Elder Cornish handled his subjects skillfully, gained a great victory for truth, and made many friends to the church. He thinks there were one thousand persons in attendance, and that most all of them finally held that Elder Cornish was the victor.

Elder John Pett of Dow City, Crawford county, Iowa, writes August 22d, to say that arrangements have been made to begin the Reunion Meeting at Galland's Grove, Iowa, on Saturday, October 3d, and that rates will be procured over the C. & N. W., C. M. & St. P. and C. B. & Q. R. Rys., and that further notice will be given in the Herald. We expect to see a very excellent and important gathering at that time, and hope to be there for a few days.

We have just learned of the death of Bro. Thomas N. Hudson, at Armstrong, Kansas, and that he was buried at Independence, Missouri. It is with sadness we chronicle the fact; for Bro. Hudson was a good man, a willing helper in the Lord's work in many ways, a devoted husband, a loving father, a worthy Christian, a faithful minister and a patriotic citizen. He will be greatly missed by all, and his memory will be fresh and pleasant for all time to come. It is well with him; and may heaven and God's children bless his sorrowing wife and children.

Elder Alex. Hale Smith, writing from Oakland, Cal., the 21st ult., says he is preaching Sundays in Oakland or San Francisco, with fair congregations, and good interest. He also says the brethren are striving nobly to make the Expositor a success.

All persons who write to Bro. A. H. Smith will please write his name thus: Alex. Hale Smith. This is to avoid confusion with other Smiths, and to prevent delay or loss of mail matter.

Wheeler's Grove Reunion.—Bro. J. M. Kelley writes that application has been made for rates over the C. R. I. & P. railway, and that the agent assures him they will be granted. Persons going by railroad to either Carson or Macedonia will need to start so as to reach there by Saturday's (Sept. 5th) forenoon trains, as there are no afternoon trains over either road, and none on Sundays. A large attendance is expected.

Bro. Isaac W. Wolsey writes the 22d ult., and says that in and about his town—Middle Branch, Nebraska—there are good lands to be obtained at reasonable prices; that the country is beautiful and healthy. He offers to meet any of the Saints desiring to settle there, at O'Neil, take them home with him and care for them the best he can, without charge, while they look for homes.

MINISTERIAL MISTAKES.

How wofully some mistake their gifts and callings, we sometimes see in the pulpit. And when seen there it is more than ordinarily unpleasant, and at times really painful. There is an eternal law of fitness ordained of God in all his works of nature and of grace, and when men violate this, or by any means fail to honor and observe it, inharmony, discord, disgust, and harm follow. But when the law of fitness governs, then comes edification with all its joyful train of blessings and delights. Suitableness, adaptability, and propriety in subject matter and manner, pertain with telling force to the efforts of all public speakers, and to none more than the minister of Christ. These facts should be kept constantly in view.

When you see a minister scream and shout and roar to a small congregation, or in a small room, that is a violation of the law of fitness. That sort of vociferation may be barely tolerable in a woods-meeting, but even there it is not best, and is sometimes harmful to hearer and speaker. This should be avoided. When you see a minister speak so as to be heard only by those very near him, you feel that he is not adapted to the occasion, and should either amend or quit. When a minister acts the part of a clown, you may laugh at his antics, but your better nature revolts and your soul condemns his manners as not fitting the occasion. He dishonors his calling. When a minister turns jesterputs away the candor and sobriety, the dignity and the elevation of his high and holy calling—you feel he has exchanged the keen flashing "sword of the Spirit" for a rotten reed, and that his labor is graceless, fruitless, and worse than lost. When a minister boasts of what he has done, can do, and will do, you feel that he sees more in himself than in Christ; looks more unto himself than "unto Jesus;" and that he seeks to represent himself rather than the Master who sent him. Such should reform so as to be able to say: "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake." Humility and self-denial give virtue, and power with God and man. When you see a minister undertake to preach upon a subject he is not at all familiar with, or on one not suited to his hearers' capacity, or one not suited to the time and occasion,-you feel that his efforts are unprofitable, and it may be, absolutely harmful. This evil should be studied and shunned.

When you see a minister attempting to preach when he has neither the Spirit of God nor the attention of his hearers, you feel that he is dishonoring Christ and his church, prejudicing the people, wasting his own time and that of the audience, besides bringing discredit upon himself as a teacher. Such should remember the law which says,—"And if ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach." We once saw one of the ablest and most ready and eloquent of the ministry sit down in the very midst of his sermon because the Spirit withdrew from him. His hearers loved him and revered him for it. We have seen other able ministers do similarly, with excellent results in each case.

Presiding officers should not commit the folly of calling poorly qualified ministers to preach to large and critical audiences, especially when able and experienced ministers are at hand. It is imposing duties that can be discharged properly only by matured minds or by direct and full inspiration. It is asking too much of the untried and unqualified; and should the speaker fail, it wounds his spirit and dampens his ardor. If the Spirit of God directs in a clear way the choice of an inexperienced minister to preach, then follow such direction. But if left to wisdom, then use it, and let genuine wisdom direct.

Persons should never attempt to preach for the mere practice and discipline of the effort. It may cost the congregation too much; and it may cost the minister too much also. The servant of Christ should "study" to shew himself approved of God and of men. First, be sure they have a message from God to man, and then carefully and meekly deliver it in the Spirit of its Author. Grace will attend, edification result therefrom, God will be glorified, sinners will be warned and pointed to the Savior, transgressors will be taught the law of the Lord, light will be increased and the love of God abound.

TEARING DOWN.

"A SOCIETY calling themselves Latter Day Saints and vulgarly termed Mormons, held a camp meeting three miles north of town Saturday and Sunday, and wound up by a meeting Monday evening at the rink. Many spoke of the speaker as a very good talker, but the speaker went outside of the path marked out by our Savior, to open a tirade on what some supposed outsiders had been heard to remark. This may be in accordance with the doctrines laid down by Joe Smith according to Gen. Beadle, but is hard to find in a close patronage of the life and teaching of Christ. Christians ought to reflect the image of their Master and deny the scoffs and jeers of the world in a pure and undefiled life, not in tirades or on the stump, where it is said that the one who told the last lie is ahead. The world's people, although not saints, often make splendid critics."-Telegraph.

To this the Blue Valley Blade, Nebras-ka, adds:

"To the careful observer, two things seem to go in to make up the elements of success on the part of the so called religious factions of this country. First, a capability of berating and tearing down other factions, on the ruins of which they themselves would build, or by adding a humbug to the already acknowledged system by which they distinguish themselves from other factions, and, as is the case with the body referred to in the above article, claim to have something new and wonderful to give the people on a religious score, called, as a matter of course, the "fulness of the gospel." When men learn to observe the Golden Rule; to be human in all their ways; to take on in a higher degree a civic cast, then will they have all that is required to make them useful and happy without any extraordinary howling about how much superior they are to others.'

Replying to both the Telegraph and the Blade we state that, "berating and tearing down other factions" is contrary to the spirit and genius of the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints. Wherever the teachings of their church books touch these points, it is only to condemn. Joseph the Seer said to the ministry "by way of commandment" March 29th, 1836, to "go in all meekness, in sobriety, and preach Jesus Christ and him crucified; and not to contend with others on account of their faith or systems of religion, but pursue a steady course. This (said the Seer) I delivered by way of commandment; and all who observe it not will pull down persecution upon their heads, while those who do, shall always be filled with the Holy Ghost; this I pronounced as a prophecy, and sealed with hosanna and Amen."—

Millennial Star 15:727.

The ministry of the Reorganized Church find nothing in the counsel or example of the present President Joseph Smith to justify them in indulging in "a tirade" against any person or society, nor in "berating and tearing down other factions." That is not his style, nor does he engage in that kind of work.

The fact is, the evils complained of are no part of the faith and policy of the church, but utterly contrary to them. There is nothing in the sacred books of the church upon which such conduct can be predicated or justified. Such things, if they are done by the ministry, simply show that such are not faithful and true to their calling and mission. But it sometimes happens that ministers are accused of what they are not guilty. How it is in the case in hand we do not know. Suffice it to say, such procedure as is complained of, neither the church, its standard books, nor its leading ministry teach, defend, excuse, or in any way support, but ever condemn. Whatever may result from a meek, truthful, plain, and charitable statement of gospel facts, the gospel teacher should not be blamed for. If error and evil fall thereby, to God and his Christ be the glory.

RETRIBUTION—IS IT?

THE Deseret News and some other Utah Mormon papers complain, bitterly, that an employe of the Western Union Telegraph Company in Salt Lake City was discharged because (they say) he was a Mormon. This charge is denied by the telegraph office officials, and others claiming to know the facts. But, suppose he was discharged because he was a Mormon, have not many "apostates" and Gentiles been discharged by their Mormon employers because they were such? That they have is a fact too notorious to be successfully denied. "Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap." This is seen in all the past, and doubtless will now hold good in Utah. If so, it would be well for those interested to carefully scan Utah's past history, and then prepare for the sure and swift return of what has been sown. "Give, and it shall be given unto you, good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again."—Jesus.

We feel troubled over the condition of the Utah Mormons, and tremble in view of the impending fate of many of them.

MORRISITE PHILOSOPHY.

A BIT of Morrisite philosophy makes Seth, Enos, Cainan, Mahalallel, Jared, Enoch, Mathusaleh, Lamech, Noah, Shem, Arphaxed, Selah, Eber, Peleg, Reu, Serreg, Nahor, Terah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Reuben and Dan to be the Twentyfour Apostles; and gives to each [wives?] in ratio of sevens; as for instance to Seth 7,000, to Enos 14,000 and to Dan 161,000; that is, if we understand the chart sent out to enlighten the world. It is a curiosity.

How much of strange perversity of belief there is in man! The work of Joseph Morris left no tangible result; no organization, and no leader; yet there are numbers who are still waiting, anxiously expecting some "son of promise" to arise and revive the work.

The reincarnation, as set forth by James and George S. Dove, the latter of whom now claim to be the successor of Joseph Morris, is the old theory of metempsychosis or transmigration of souls, or the continuing to be born until perfection is reached, when the end of being born is accomplished. We quote:

"Is man only to have one short lesson in the constant and active whirl of joyous and fresh existence. How small would be his experience if limited to the term of one probation or existence on the earth. The intelligent creatures of God appear in more than one body on the stage of mortal existence. They have just as many probations as are required to bring them to the position that their birth-right calls for."

THE JOURNAL ON JOSEPH IN UTAH. This is what the Chicago Journal has to say of the work of President Joseph Smith in Utah of late.

"Joseph Smith, Jr., ought to have encouragement and to receive his reward. He is doing a good work. Inside the pale of Mormonism, the son, and claiming to be the natural and legitimate successor of its founder, he is making war on the barbarous system of polygamy in its strongholds, and is assailing it in a vital part. He denies that polygamy has the sanction of a Mormon revelation, and denounces it as an offense equally against good morals, good Mormonism and the laws of the land.

"Mr. Smith is the Editor and publisher of a Mormon newspaper at Lamoni, in Iowa. He has recently been on an apostolic visit to Utah, and he there exhorted and argued against polygamy as zealously and forcibly as he does through the journal which he publishes, and before the non-polygamous Mormon sects in Iowa and elsewhere. In his paper he also denounces the malignant and disloyal brayado of the Utah

Mormons in displaying the United States flag at half-mast last fourth of July, and he demands that it be disavowed by all loyal and law-abiding Mormons. He claims that but two in a hundred of the entire Mormon population in Utah are practical polygamists, and he says that these few offenders against the laws constitute a still smaller portion of the entire Mormon population of the country. In making this exhibit, he calls on the 98 per cent of non-polygamous Mormons in Utah to vindicate pure Mormonism from the stain and reproach of polygamy, to drive those who practice it 'to the rear,' and to cease defending it, apologizing for it, or conniving at it. If the Mormons will take his advice it will be the best day for their sect that it has ever experienced.

"The American people are not making a war upon Mormonism as a mere form of superstition and fanaticism. They are making war on polygamy as a lawless, immoral, filthy and barbarous system. Divested of polygamy, they would be glad to let Mormonism alone, to decline and disappear, or to prosper and increase as its fortunes, the processes of nation development and the decrees of Providence might provide."

MORMON MIGRATION.

THE following was a dispatch to the San Francisco Call, from Santa Fe, under date of August seventeenth,

"Brigham Young Jr., passed up the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe line yesterday, enroute from the City of Mexico to Salt Lake. He admitted to your reporter that his mission to the capital of our sister Republic had been to negotiate with the Mexican authorities for the purchase of large tracts of land for Mormon colonization purposes. 'You Gentiles seem to have a lively interest in everything concerning the Mormons,' said he, 'and I may say to you that my mission was a successful one. The land has been selected, and although not yet purchased, it will be soon, and in a very few months our people will begin to move toward Mexico. The land I have selected lies in the northern part of the state of Chihuahua. The Government is entirely willing that we should establish colonies there, but with the distinct understanding that we obey the laws. This we expect to do, of course. We are not fleeeing from the Government prosecutions in Utah, but we are pretty cramped and must have room to expand. Mexico presents the best field, and I went down to prepare the way.'"

There is only one significant line in the foregoing. The assertion that the Mormons intend to obey the laws, "of course," of Mexico, may be taken for what it is worth. It looks to us as though it was intended as a loop hole through which the polygamists hoped to escape without a full surrender. Chihuahua—especially, in the northern part—is but a sparsely settled region. With a good foothold there the Mormons ought to be able to control the State in ten years. It is quite possible that it will be found that Chihuahua was the place originally intended for the building of the Temple and for the promised second coming.—Salt Lake Tribune.

Correspondence.

Quick, Iowa, Aug. 25th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—Permit me to say to the many disappointed Saints and friends in my field of labor, that I felt it a duty to come here with my family. Our aged relative is somewhat recovered, and I will at once return to duty. While here I was permitted the privilege of speaking five times in Armour Hall; the attendance was large and well behaved, and more than a usual interest was exhibited by those who came out to hear. I was strongly pressed by a respectable number to return and preach some more to them. Here is a favorable opportunity for some faithful and wise servant of the Master establishing an altar unto righteousness. In times past I have been blessed in this part of the vineyard, and now believe that a good work is waiting some active laborer.

In gospel bonds,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

Hamilton, Ohio, August 23d, 1885. Editor's Herald:—I arrived here to-day, on my way to Jackson, to see the Saints, and if need be stand in the breach and defend the faith against a Mr. Taylor of Dayton, who proposes to demolish it if he can.

Last week I attended, for five consecutive evenings, a discussion between Bro. C. Scott and Rev. R. C. Wiley, Presbyterian, held at Ray, Indiana. The attendance was large, and Bro. Scott made a very able defense of the cause of truth. Mr. Wiley took the ground that the Church of Christ exists wherever there are two or three believers; text, "Where two or three are met together, there I am in the midst," &c. He said that the apostles made a "mistake" when they selected Matthias to fill the office made vacant by the fall of Judas, and held that there never was but twelve apostles-"no place for thirteen." He then changed and held that there were but twelve apostles that was ever called "The Twelve." Objected to the Book of Covenants, because it teaches that Christ was called the Son because of the flesh. "He is the eternal Son of God," said he; and so said Calvin. On the fourth night he made a few criticisms of the Book of Covenants, that showed some merit in debating; but his objections were fully answered by brother Scott on the fifth night, so far as time would permit, and so much so that his opponent scarcely refered to them afterwards. Braden-like, he held back his worst till the last speech, on next to the last evening of the debate. Then he touched lightly on the Spaulding Story, charged polygamy, the polygamist revelation, chicken-stealing, &c., on Joseph Smith; read as authority Mrs. Stenhouse's work. He demanded signs and wonders in order to attest our claims to an organization similar to that recorded in the New Testament.

In the main he was gentlemanly; but failing in Bible proofs to sustain his positions, he resorted to the old tactics, in order to work up sentiment. "Joe Smith; chicken-thief; polygamist; bank truant," etc. It sounded so much like 'gluttons, wine-bibbers," etc. But it pleased some of the hard headed old veterans present, whom it would be just about as easy to create a world out of nothing, as to get them to see a point different from that already received. They were on hand the last evening however, to vote; boys, middle aged, and the old,-many not there before,-so said. And vote they would. But a desire for fairness with the better class, and indifference with others, and a misunderstanding by still others, as to the resolution, they failed to get up the boom they had arranged for. The moderators advised that the respective churches directly interested be requested not to vote, and leave it to the impartial ones. But no; they came to vote, and vote they would!

Brother Scott literally deluged his opponent with Bible texts and references, defeating him at every turn, and even turned his own historical text book against him. The only thing that Mr. Wiley made any show at being even with brother Scott, was with reference to Matthew 16: 18, as to the proper antecedent of the pronoun "it"; and this he said could be fairly construed as held by the affirmative, from the English reading; but not the Greek,—of course!

There is no question with the thoughtful as to who advanced sound argument, and took defensible, Bible positions. A large number heard the gospel. It will stay with the honest. The Saints were strengthened in the faith, and we are all happy in the the truth.

Wm. H. Kelley.

CABOOL, Texas Co., Mo., August 16th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish to bear testimony to the latter day work. God works with us as he did in the personal ministry of Christ, bearing testimony to his work. Last winter our son sixteen years old was attacked with a severe fever and deafness. At bed-time I administered to him in the name of the Lord, that he might be relieved from the fever. Next morning he seemed to be entirely free from it, yet deaf, could not hear the noise of railroad trains, the road one fourth of a mile from us, the depot half a mile. At bed-time next night I administered to him for his hearing, and next morning he could hear common talk. Part of Jesus' mission was to testify to the truth. "If ye will do the will of the Father ye shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God." The blessings and evidence I have testified to, do not accompany the doctrine of men.

Your brother in the one faith and work,

B. A. ATWELL.

RADCLIFFE, lowa,

Aug. 23d, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:—If there should be an Elder coming in this part of the country, they will oblige me by stopping here. They will find us two and a half miles east of Ridcliffe, and four miles west of Hubbard. Bro. Jacobs was here in the spring, and held meeting twice, and there seems to be a good feeling among the people. I think if there could be a good Elder come here to preach and stay a week or so, it might do some good in the future. I have lived here five years, and have not heard any Elders preach until Bro. Jacobs came here. I joined the Church of Latter Day Saints in the year of 1863, at Prairie-Du-Chien, Wisconsin.

GEO. HOUCK.

Magnolia, Iowa,

August 23d, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Sickness is quite a common thing in this county at present. I do not remember a time when there was more fatal sickness. I am preaching from one to three discourses every Sabbath, but doing no labor during the week except now and then a funeral sermon, or attending to administering to the sick. My desire to labor grows daily, I believe; but my privilege for continuous ministerial labor grows less. I shall though, of all I possess, cast in my mite. May God bless this work and all his workmen. Your brother, J. F. Mintun.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., August 26th, 1885.

Beloved Friends in the Covenant of the Lord:-Heaven's peace be with you! Since I, through the mercy and grace of the Lord our Father, have been blessed to know and understand the truth of the gospel, I have had much joy and comfort in the same; and more and more do I rejoice in meeting with the Saints, receiving "word upon word, line upon line," through the preaching of our brethren, the servants of the Lord, by inspiration from on high, as well as through the testimony and exhortations of the Saints. When thus blessed, as I indeed consider myself, I often think of those far distant from the churches, (branches), who never have, but who long and pray for such privileges and blessings as only can be obtained where the Saints dwell together and meet in unity to worship God. But as for you, in distant lands and lonely places, as far as the blue arch of heaven extends, the land belongs to our Father in neaven. And as far as you may ne senarated from this people, with whom you would love to dwell, so far does his loving hand reach for you. Therefore do not be cast down. Remember your first love; let not the tempter have any influence with you, but know that you have a most faithful Friend who is ever near; cling close to Him-the Savior; rely on His mighty arm; seek Him daily in prayer; trust in His strength; feed on His word; then shall the Eternal Father's watchcare be over and around you; then will he lead and guide you; yea, feed your souls with his gentle Spirit of love and peace, till he shall gather you home to His house to feast with His people upon the good things of the kingdom to dwell in His presence with all the righteous. Oh, Salvation! to dwell in His divine presence henceforth.

At this place we had a glorious New Year's feast, Sunday morning, January 4th. When the Saints assembled at the church to worship, they were gladly surprised to meet there three brethren from a distance. These were Henry and George Kemp and Father Goode, who had agreed to go together to this city to meet the Saints in worship. They came, with a longing and a love for the grace of heaven above, bringing with them the Spirit of everlasting joy and peace, thus prepared to bless and receive blessings, when they met the Saints. All having the same purpose of heart; all having received the same Spirit of promise, we felt that we were one. The brethren staved with us three days. We were richly blessed in each of our meetings. The power and Spirit of the Lord was manifest amongst us in tongues, interpretation, prophesying and great testimonies. That these brethren have great interest in the spiritual welfare of the Saints, we know. And it is a joy to know this, and to know that there are many such men upon the earth in our time; for many of our faithful brethren we have seen, and heard, and read of, who live for the good of others, for the bringing of souls to Christ, who would be willing to lay down their lives for the work of the Lord.

When I was a child I thought, Oh if the Lord had suffered me to live in the days of our Savior and his apostles, that I might have heard and received the truth from them, pure and undefiled as it is in heaven! But blessed be the name of the Lord that he has given me to live in this glorious age of the world, in which he has again given the gospel plan of salvation, which I, through His infinite mercy, have been led to see and understand as the eternal light and truth of heaven, pure and perfect as it originated with God from the beginning; and have seen, felt, and feasted upon His manifold love from time to time through the sweet influence of the heavenly spirit. In like manner all mankind may be blessed throughout the land who will receive and obey the word of the Lord, even as they who lived in ancient times; and more blessed still may we consider ourselves now in this day; for many of us may live to see the fulfilling of the word of the Lord spoken through his inspired prophets, and finally have the chance to prepare ourselve to meet our Savior when he shall come again, not to suffer or to leave us, but to remain with his people as their Redeemer and King for evermore. Your sister.

NICOLINE THOMSON.

Amboy, Ills., August 25th, 1885. Bro. Blair:—I drop a line to inform you that I am still working for the cause. Since I wrote last I have been laboring as best I could through the hot weather, dispensing the word when opportunity offered; at Mission, also in Livingston and Ford counties, returning by way of Chicago, where I found the few that have united with the branch striving patiently to live their religion, and advance the interest of the cause. I gave what aid I could on two successive Sundays. Since then I have tried to get up meetings at this place, but heavy rain storms prevented our meeting on Sunday last. I still intend making an effort before leaving. I shall extend my labors north from here, as the way may open up before me. My health keeps moderately good, and I feel encouraged to press onward, for I have unshaken faith in the ultimate triumph of God's work, notwithstanding the wrongs that men connected with it may do. I am pleased that you concluded not to sully the pages of the Herald further with the Spalding trash. I watch, and pray for the success of the effort now being made in Utah.

With kind regards for all in the Office, I remain as ever, your fellow laborer in the Master's cause,

JOHN S. PATTERSON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 21st, 1885.

Dear Bro. Blair:—All goes well with us. Bro. Alexander H. Smith spoke for us here last Sunday; had a fine congregation, who seemed much interested. The attendance continues good. We look for several additions to our branch soon. A good portion of the Spirit is ever present with us. May God continue to bless his cause.

Yours in the faith,

GEO. S. LINCOLN.

Summary of Aews.

Aug. 25th.—Consul Lewis, who is stationed at Sierra Leone, sends the Department of State a remarkable story regarding a Mohammedan African named Samadu, who has raised an army of 100,000 men and gained control of the country from Timbuctoo to the West Coast. His mission is to suppress paganism and open up trade at seaports.

The steamship Etruria made the run from Queenstown to New York in six days, five hours, and thirty-one minutes. This is the fastest time on record.

Letters from Dublin, Ireland, bearing date of Aug. 16th, reaching Chicago yesterday at 9 a. m., taking only eight days, the quickest time on record of the transmission of mail between the two countries.

Sunday there were nearly 6,000 new cases of cholera in Spain and 1,950 deaths from the disease.

The situation at Marseilles and Toulon, France, is alarming. In both cities people are dying by the score from the cholera daily, and the death rate is increasing.

Fifteen Salvation Army people were arrested at Elgin, Ill., for making too much noise. The case come up in court to-day.

The southern Utes residing in New Mexico are said to be starving, and it is feared they will go on the warpath as a last resort.

Aug. 26th.—A cyclone swept over Charleston, S. C., yesterday morning which unroofed one-fourth of the houses in the city and much damage to the shipping. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000. Great havoc was also caused along the entire Southern Atlantic coast.

Brigham Young's son who is the husband of two wives only and the father of ten sons and eleven daughters, is now in Chihuahua prospecting for 10,000 of "the best Mormons," who, he predicts, will migrate from Utah to Mexico

Miss Kate Field is lecturing in the East with great success.

On learning of the deplorable condition of the Southern Utes the Commissioner of Indian Affairs made arrangements for supplying the half-starved savages with 10,000 pounds of beef and 3,000 pounds of flour weekly.

STRENGTH ENOUGH

The morning mists that lie
About the day, that comes so softly in,
Hide all its secrets from the searching eye,
And none may tell what want, or pain, or sin
Shall break, new-risen, from the enfolding shroud,
Nor what is in the cloud.

Before the busy feet,
In the hot noontide 'neath the blazing sun,
Shall with their rapid step-sounds fill the street,
Before the willing hands their work have done,
There may have burst some great and new surprise
Before our shrinking eyes.

It may be ours to stand,
Forsaken, single-handed, in a fight
With a determined and a hostile band,
For the dear cause we honor as the Right,
And either be o'ercome or win a crown
Before the sun goes down.

We may be called to take

Some noble work that needs the wise and strong,
And do it faithfully for Jesus' sake,
Though no great talents may to us belong;
It may be ours to seem to stand alone
Before the Master's throne.

Or we may have to-day
To lay all work aside, and in the gloom
That suddenly creeps up around the way
Take the short journey that shall find the tomb,
And see the earth-home fade before our face
In some strange place.

But howsoe'er it be,

We dare go forth to meet the dim unseen,

Tranquil and patient, God is near, and He Will be our helper as He yet has been;

And let the day for us be fair or rough,

We shall have strength enough.

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

I HAVE heard the doctrine of "universal salvation" preached so much by some of the Elders in the Reorganized Church that I begin to wonder if they have ever read the Book of Mormon, or, having read it, if it be possible that they believe it. For my part I can not find that doctrine sustained by either the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants; but if others think they can, it is their privilege. I do not propose to have any controversy with them upon the subject. Before our heavenly Father we all stand; unto him we have to answer. The issue, therefore, is between the Lord and ourselves, not between each other. But I thought it would not be amiss to make a few brief quotations from the Book of Mormon which speaks as plain as language can express it, and tells us the duration of the punishment of the wicked. In the 6th chapter of the 2d Book of Nephi and 6th verse, we find

"And assuredly as the Lord liveth, for the Lord God hath spoken it, and it is his eternal word, which can not pass away, that they who are righteous, shall be righteous still, and they who are filthy shall be filthy still; wherefore, they who are filthy are the devil and his angels; and they shall go away into everlasting fire, prepared for them; and their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames ascendeth up forever and ever; and hath no end."

Again, see Jacob 2d chapter and 11th verse:

"O my brethren, hearken unto my word; arouse the faculties of your soul; shake yourselves, that ye may awake from the slumber of death; and loose yourselves from the pains of hell, that you may not become angels to the devil, to be cast into that lake of fire and brimstone, which is the second death. And now I, Jacob, spake many more things unto the people of Nephi, warning them against fornication, and lasciviousness, and every kind of sin, telling them of the awful consequences of them."

I most earnestly recommend the reading of the entire teachings of Nephi and Jacob upon this all important subject. They labored with their mights to try and persuade the people to redemption, and an obedience to the gospel of Christ, telling them "that unless a man shall endure to the end, in following the example of the Son of the living God, he can not be saved."

They were not alone in presenting these sacred truths. King Benjamin, in the 1st chapter of the Book of Mosiah, speaks plainly upon this subject; and in the 11th verse he says:

"And now, I say unto you my brethren, that after ye have known and have been taught all these things, if ye should transgress, and go contrary to that which has been spoken, that ye do withdraw yourselves from the Spirit of the Lord, that it may have no place in you to guide you in wisdom's path, that ye may be blessed, prospered, and preserved; I say unto you that the man that doeth this, the same cometh out in open rebellion against God; therefore he listeth to obey the evil spirit, and becometh an enemy to all righteousness; therefore the Lord has no place in him, for he dwelleth not in unholy temples. Therefore, if that man repenteth not, and remaineth and dieth an enemy to God, the demands of divine justice doth awaken his immortal soul to a lively sense of his own guilt, which doth cause him to shrink from the presence of the Lord, and doth fill his breast with guilt, and pain, and anguish, which is like an unquenchable fire, whose flames ascendeth up forever and ever. And now I say unto you, that mercy hath no claim on that man; therefore his final doom is to endure a never ending torment.

Lest some of the Elders may say "never ending torment" will be but of short duration, we will let Alma settle that question. In speaking of the punishment of the wicked after death, he says:

"Now repentance could not come unto men, except there were a punishment, which also was as eternal as the life of the soul should be, affixed opposite to the plan of happiness, which was as eternal also as the life of the soul," This, to my mind, settles the matter, but inasmuch as our Savior, Jesus of Nazareth, has spoken upon the subject, confirming what these men have said, I quote from his teachings to the Nephites after his resurrection, as recorded in the 12th chapter and 4th verse of the book of Nephi, in the latter part of the Book of Mormon, as follows:

"And it shall come to pass, that whose repenteth and is baptized in my name, shall be filled; and if he endureth to the end, behold, him will I hold guiltless before my Father, at that day when I shall stand to judge the world. And he that endureth not unto the end, the same is he that is also hewn down and cast into the fire, from whence they can no more return, because of the justice of the Father; and this is the word which he has given unto the children of men. And for this cause he fulfilleth the words which he hath given, and he lieth not, but fulfilleth all his words; and no unclean thing can enter into his kingdom; therefore nothing entereth into his rest, save it be those who have washed their garments in my blood, because of their faith, and the repentance of all their sins, and their faithfulness unto the end."

Now who am I to believe; Jesus of Nazareth, and the word of the Lord as clearly set forth in the Scriptures of divine truth; or these disciples of Nehor of whom we read in the first chapter of Alma, in the Book of Mormon, who taught the people "that all mankind should be saved at the last day, and that they need not fear nor tremble, but that they might lift up their heads and rejoice for the Lord had created all men, and had also redeemed all men; and in the end all men should have eternal life"?

These very words of Nehor I have heard used by some Elders in the Reorganized Church, and also read them in some articles in the Herald. For my part I prefer to believe Jesus and the word of the Lord; for Jesus says his Father "lieth not, but fulfilleth all his words."

This Nehor sought to establish his doctrine and priestcraft by the sword, and killed Gideon, a man of God, for which crime he was condemned to death; but before his death he acknowledged "that what he taught the people was contrary to the word of God," and Alma condemns it as false doctrine.

WHO WILL HELP?

SEVEN years have elapsed since the publication of the Saints' Advocate was commenced. During that period a fund of information in regard to the rise, early history and development of the church, together with a clear expose of the various phases of apostacy—especially that under the leadership of Brigham Young and John Taylor has been furnished to hundreds in the church, who could not have been put in possession of it, except through such a medium.

It's chief object, however, has been to enlighten and reclaim from the bondage of Brighamism the many honest hearted, whom it seemed impossible to reach by means of public preaching. The degree of success attending it in this direction can not now be estimated, and may never be fully known; but certain it is to those who have labored in this important field, that an effective work has been done by it in opening the way and preparing the hearts of many for a return to the old paths from which thousands have strayed.

The present condition of affairs in Utah has long been looked for, and the Advocate has sought faithfully to warn the inhabitants of approaching trouble. The people are now, to a considerable extent, aware of the fact that a time for action has come, and, with their leaders fugitives from the law, the United States Deputies constantly in sight, and indictments ever on the increase, together with the settled attitude of the government in relation to polygamy, they are made to keenly realize that the only hope for deliverance extended to them is through an immediate and perfect compliance with the requirements of national law.

Appreciating the time as an opportune one, the various religious denominations are expending tens of thousands of dollars annually with a view to speedy and golden harvests. Churches, missionaries, schools, colporteurs, periodicals, tracts, &c., are flooding the country, one denomination alone having spent over $20,000 in this direction during the past year.

The Reorganization, at present writing, has but four active missionaries in this field, and but little local help, and a depleted treasury upon which to fall back for assistance in prosecuting the work. In view of these and other facts, we call attention to the following matter, asking a serious consideration of it.

With the present number of the Advo-cate Elder W. W. Blair stops its publication, unless some one shall be found willing to take it in hand and carry it forward. Increase of responsibility, and the addition of new duties render it impracticable for him to continue its publication. To lose the Advocate's assistance in this mission is a thought almost intolerable to the missionaries here. Therefore, after counselling with Pres. Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, R. J. Anthony, and others, the writer has resolved upon making an effort to continue its publication, the intention being to use it largely as a tract for gratuitous circulation in Utah. At no time in the history of this mission has its worth and need been more fully realized than at present. Shall it be sustained? The writer is not able in addition to his labor as a self-supporting missionary, to publish the paper at a financial loss to himself, and therefore makes this appeal to the Saints and friends everywhere to rally to his support.

By swelling the list of paying subscribers sufficiently, we may be enabled to circulate at least one thousand copies per month, gratis, in the Rocky Mountain

For consideration, the mailing lists have been transferred to us, and we have agreed to furnish all subscribers whose term of subscription has not expired. Those in arrears will please remit the amount of indebtedness, and a years subscription in advance, if possible and convenient, to David Dancer, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa, or the writer, Box 307, Salt Lake City, Utah. If unable to pay at present, and wishing the paper continued, drop a card or letter to that effect to either of the above addresses.

If you have friends in Utah to whom you desire the paper sent, furnish us with the addresses, and we will supply them, whether you are able to pay for them or not. If able to do so, subscribe for yourself and a number of others, who may be reached and won by this quiet missionary.

We will endeavor to maintain the standard of excellence attained by the Advocate in the past, as nearly as our ability will allow, and, though laying no claim to peculiar natural or acquired fitness for this important work, we trust that in essaying a task, having for its object the glory of God and the rescuing of imperilled Israel, we shall find favor at the Master's hands, as each emergency presents itself, and lack no qualification that such work may demand.

Contributions bearing upon this important branch of the church's work, earnestly solicited. We wish to make the Advocate a paper peculiarly adapted to the needs of the Utah mission, and generally instructive to all classes of readers. We need help both in a literary and financial way. Who will respond?

In order to extend the circulation, and as a slight inducement to those who can find time and opportunity for soliciting subscribers, we offer a card size photograph (front view) of Joseph the Martyr, copied from the only dauguerrotype ever taken in the life of the Martyr, or one of Pres. Joseph Smith, of the Reorganization, to every one sending us the names of five subscribers for one year, accompanied by the cash. For twelve subscribers for one year, with cash, we offer both the above pictures, or one of either, cabinet size, and a copy of the Advocate free for one year. For twenty subscribers for one year, with cash, we offer both the above pictures, cabinet size, or one of either 8 x 10 size, for framing, and one copy of the Advocate free for a year. For thirty subscribers for one year, with cash, we will send a copy of either the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, or the Saints' Harp, or any book catalogued in the Herald, not exceeding $1.25 in price. For forty subscribers for one year, with cash, we will send a copy of the Inspired Translation of the Scriptures, (sheep), or any books in Herald catalogue, not exceeding $1.50 in price, and a copy of Advocate free for one year. For fifty subscribers for one year with cash, we will send the Herald and Advocate free for one year, or books as catalogued in Herald, not exceeding $2.25 in price. For one hundred subscribers for one year, with cash, we will send anything catalogued in the Herald, not exceeding $4.50 in price.

It is to be understood, however, that the above is offered for new subscribers, or those not already on our list, and the subscriptions to commence with September, 1885. All subscriptions to be for one year, or more, and accompanied with the cash. Write all names and addresses plainly, and send with P. O. Order, Postal Note, Registered Letter, or by express to either of the addresses given above.

The subscription price is fifty cents per year. The traveling ministry supplied free, if they send their addresses.

To branch presidents, general and local ministry, also the laity everywhere, we in conclusion, appeal for help. Who will respond?

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.-No. 13.

BY S. F. W.

FROM a history of the Ten Tribes by Dr. Edrehi, I quote: "The learned Pistol is firmly persuaded that the Ten Tribes passed into Tartary; he quotes the authority of several Armenian historians. Orteleus, that great geographer, giving the description of Tartary, notices the kingdom of Asareth, where the Ten Tribes, retiring, succeeded the Scythian inhabitants, and took the name of Gauther, because they were very jealous for the glory of God. In another place he found the Naphtalites, who had their hordes there. He also discovered the tribe of Dan, in the north, which has preserved its name. There is another kingdom, called by the Jews, Thaber. The Tews have still kept up their residence there, though they have lost part of their sacred writings and books. The country has received its name from them; for it is in the middle of Tartary, and is called Thabor, from the Hebrew, which signifies navel. . . . very name of Tartars which signifies 'remains,' perfectly agrees with the tribes dispersed in the north, which were the re-mains of ancient Israel." "They found amongst them the footsteps of ancient Judaism; as, for instance, the circumcision of children."...

"It is further conjectured, and with very good reason, that part of the Ten Tribes went as far as the East Indies and China."

J. Crosset, in Herald of November 17th, 1883, says: "In January, 1879, it was revealed to me the Mongolians are of the Tribes of Israel. This great nation, which in the times of Ghengis Khan conquered Asia, has been dwindling into a mere Their tradition is that they came from the west of Thibet, somewhere, and that after undergoing still greater chastisements than they have yet received, even when their numbers will be reduced to a few, comparatively, they are to be led back to the land of their fathers. . . They expect a Savior from heaven to appear and bring them back to the land of their fathers." "If anything is certain to me, it is that they are of the same race as some of the tribes of the North American Indians. Boudinot in his "Star of the West," holds that view, and gives_two cases of persons—one a woman from Florida-"who were at home in both continents."

Around Lake Urumiyah, in northern Persia, the people claim to be Israelites. The Afghanistans claim to be descended from Saul, King of Israel, and perpetuate many Hebrew names.

"The Russian traveler and journalist, W. J. Remerowich Dantscheriko, has just published in a very interesting work, enti-tled 'Wogin Stwvjusci Israil,' the results of his recent travels in the Caucasus. He has discovered, on the highlands of Daghestan a tribe which has been settled there for thousands of years: and although they are of warlike temperament, and closely resemble the Cossacks in appearance, there is no doubt at all that they are really Jews, for they strictly follow the Mosaic law in the Biblical interpretation of it. It is strange that this people has hitherto escaped the notice of Ethnographers, for they themselves affirm that they have lived in the same spot since the days of Salmonassar. They are ignorant of Talmudic literature, and of the building of the second temple, and they retain the old Jewish names in use in the days of the wanderings and the first kings. They manufacture largely a red wine, which is said to be the best in the Caucasus, and they adhere strictly to the Mosaic law that a man must marry his deceased brother's wife."

The Beni-Israel are a "remarkable race in the west of India, who practice a mixture of Jewish and Hindoo customs. Their ancestors, they say, came to the coasts of India from a country to the northward about sixteen hundred years ago. Fourteen escaped shipwreck and found refuge at Navagaum. There and at Bombay, where they have located since it came into possession of the English, their descendants are still to be found. Their number is estimated at 8,000. They resemble in countenance the Arabian Jews. They regard the name Jehuda, when applied to them, as a term of reproach. They ask a blessing from God, before and after meals, in the Hebrew language. Their Hebrew names are conferred on the occasion of circumcision, and their Hindoo names a month afterward. They profess to adore Jehovah, the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob; but some of them worship the gods of the Hindoos. In their synagogues there is Sepher Torah, or manuscript of the law, as the Jews have. They admit however the authority of all the books of the Old Testament. It is only lately that they have become familiar with the majority of the names of the inspired writers; and it was not without hesitation that they consented to acknowledge the later prophets. The five books of Moses form their standard of religious law. The divine statutes, however, are but partially regarded. At the time of circumcizing, the Kazi invokes the prophet Elijah and the expected Messiah. They reckon their days from sunset to sunset, and call their months by Hebrew names. They have the name Reuben among them, but not Judah or Esther."

SECOND DISPERSION OF ISRAEL.

Zedekiah the last ruler of the house of David revolted against Nebuchadnezzar, contrary to the dissuasion of Jeremiah. Jerusalem was taken, the temple and palaces distroyed, the king's sons slain, the king's eyes put out, and he and the principal citizens taken to Babylon. Many fled to Egypt. Some it seems went to India and still remain there. They were visited in 1807 by Dr. Buchanan, who received from them the following:

"After the second temple was destroyed, (which may God speedily rebuild) our fathers, dreading the conqueror's wrath, departed from Jerusalem-a numerous body of men, women, Priests and Levites—and came into this land. There were among them many men of repute for learning and wisdom: and God gave the people favor in the sight of the king who at that time reigned here, and he granted them a place to dwell in, called Cranganor. (A. D. 490)

The royal grant was engraved, according to the custom of those days, on a plate of brass. This plate we still have in our possession. Our fathers continued at Cranganor for about one thousand years, and the number of heads who governed us was seventy-two. Soon after our settlement other Jews followed from Judea; and among them came that man of great wisdom, Rabbi Samuel, a Levite of Jerusalem, with his son Rabbi Jehuda Levita. They brought with them silver trumpets, made use of at the time of the Jubilee, which were saved when the second temple was destroyed. There joined us also, from Spain and other places, from time to time, certain tribes of Jews, who had heard of our prosperity. But at last, discord arising amongst ourselves, one of our chiefs called to his assistance an Indian king, who came upon us with a great army, destroyed our houses, palaces and strongholds, dispossessed us of Cranganor, killed part of us, and carried part into captivity. By these massacres we were reduced to a small Some of the exiles came and number. dwelt at Cochin, where we have remained ever since, suffering great changes from time to time. There are amongst us some of the children of Israel, (Beni Israel), who came from the country Ashkenaz, from Egypt, from Tsoha and other places, besides those who formerly inhabited the country."

The Boras are a remarkable race found in all the larger towns in the province of Guyerat, in Hindustan, who though Mohammedans are Jews in features, genius

The Abyssinians explain their adherence to so many Jewish customs by alleging their descent from the race of Jewish The whole, indeed, of their sacred ritual, as well as civil customs, is a strange combination of Jewish, Christian and Pag-

A Jewish remnant still exists in Abyssinia who expect the Messiah, and pray to the angels for his coming. They live in the most ascetic manner, fasting five times every week, sleeping only upon wooden benches, and scourging themselves with thorns. They join outwardly in all Christian exercises, but are regarded by all the perple as Jews and socerers.
"One of the strangest peoples with whom missionary enterprise has to do are the Falashas of Ethiopia. They are black Jews, about two hundred thousand in number, who have as their holy writings the Old Testament in an Ethiopic version, and who still rigidly adhere to the Mosaic ceremonies and laws. Undoubtedly they are not of pure Jewish descent, although to some extent they are the children of Jewish immigrants who, in the time of the great dispersion, settled in Abyssinia and married wives of that nation-something not strange, as the Ethiopians are Semitic in nationality and language."

TITHING.

WHAT IS IT FOR? AND WHAT SHALL THE GIVER GAIN?

MAN requires many things in this life to make him happy. Some he can supply, others he can not. God knows them all, and has made provision for them, for it is the will of God that man should be happy here, as well as hereafter. For all the real wants of man God has provided a way to supply them, or a way by which he offers to assist man in obtaining those things which will help make him happy. For be it known that all the laws of God are for the benefit of man here as well as in the future. We do not live, as some suppose, entirely for the future. Master desires us to enjoy this life. Why give us all the blessings in the next? Better give us some here, which will increase our faith in those of the future. Now does poverty increase our happiness in this life? Is it a fact that in any sense it promotes our welfare and increases the pleasures of this life? I have not found it so. Many of us are poor in this world's goods. If we obey the law of tithing will it make us still more so? If so, then God's laws are not for our good. But all his laws are for our benefit. If this law is calculated to increase our poverty, then it is a blessing which I have never been able to properly appreciate. What says the word of God concerning this matter? It should be of weight with Saints, either the law will increase or diminish our substance. If the former, then all the Saints, especially the poor, ought to observe it. For the many blessings we need, there are as many laws. Wealth rightly used is a blessing; and to obtain it the Lord says, "Bring all [not a part] of your tithes into my store-house,"—to the man God has appointed to receive it. For a man must be appointed to receive it, even if it should go into a house. He can put it into a house or not. It will make no difference with us, so far as our blessing is concerned, which is, "I will bless your land that the nations will call you a blest people." Why blest? Because of its abundant crops. If the Lord had not considered riches a benefit to us here, he certainly would not have promised it to us as a reward for sacrifice. same law of increase is spoken of in Proverbs 3:9: "Honor the Lord with thy substance . . . so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." Showing that it always has been the will of God to bless his people temporally.

The Jews were a wealthy people, and increased rapidly in wealth when in favor with God. So did Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. They were immensely rich in gold, silver, and cattle—they were cattle kings—all keep the law of tithing. With these examples before us, who can doubt the promise? If the promise that God will remit sins through baptism and give the the Holy Ghost through the laying on of hands, is fulfilled unto us, should we not have faith in the author's promise? Surely, if one is true, the other is. We know the former is, why not test the latter as He requests us to? "Prove me;" see if I will not do as I say. We hear a continued wail coming from them who have good cause to make it, of poverty; and ofttimes hear the wish expressed, "I wish I had something to help on the work with, and make myself comfortable!" Why not have it? The Lord says He will give it upon the above conditions; and that it is good to have these earthly things, if we gain and possess them under the law. Otherwise they will be burdensome, destroying happiness, and leading into sin. The faithless rich man is in constant dread of losing his wealth. So great at times is it that it destroys all happiness he has in its possession. But those who gain by the blessing of God will have no fear; besides having the continual evidence that He is with them.

What a joy in our fields, at our every day avocation, to realize that the mighty God is watching over us, and we dwelling in his favor! Such, surely will lessen the burdens of life, and enable us to cheerfully await the coming of the Master. The thought that temporal blessings are detrimental to our spiritual welfare, is a mistake, as will be easily seen from the above. God will not give us a stone when we ask for bread; he will not give us here that which will work harm to us hereafter. Some suppose that after we come under the law, our obligations to the law are greater, and that to come under it is to pay something as tithing; that until we do so we are not under the law. In a certain sense such is the case, but in the main wrong. We are under no obligations to the law until it has claim upon us, but it is a sad mistake to suppose it has no claim on us until we make a first payment. We have no right to the blessings of the law until we honor it with our substance. We are under the law as soon as we owe anything to the Lord; and the law has claim upon us just the same when we don't pay as when we do. A brother said to me once, "Hiram, if you don't keep right on paying tithing you will no doubt lose all you have given." How will it be with you, I replied; for I was well aware of the fact that he had not paid a cent. "O, I haven't commenced, so I am not under the law yet." What a strange idea! We both owed the Lord. I had paid Him part, he not a cent. God would not punish me for not paying all, and let him go free because he haden't commenced. The Lord doesn't look upon these matters as some of the Saints do. Now let it be distinctly understood that the law of tithing is not to make us poor, but to increase our riches and happiness. The starting, or beginning in this matter of tithing, as in many other things, seems to be the hardest. But it does seem that the Bishop has made it so plain that none need to doubt the manner of commencing. Yet some still cling to the idea of having a surplus as necessary to the beginning of tithing. If such is the case it is very unjust; for a poor man has no surplus, and so because of his poverty he can not come under the law, and of course can not receive of its blessings outside of it. This is a mistake. The blessings of the law of one tenth

The blessings of the law of one tenth has, and always has had a general application to the people of God. Temporal prosperity is desirable by all people at all times. It is obligatory only in the sense that if we do not comply, we will not be blessed by the Lord above other men, but no special blessings or protections can the Saints expect as when they obey the law of one tenth. The Master says—"It is vain ye say Lord, Lord, unless ye do the things I say." Is it not vain to pray for His protection and blessings, and yet disregard this law? "If ye do the things I say, then am I bound," says the Lord. He can not bless us unless we do; for by so doing He would be breaking His covenant with us.

HIRAM L. HOLT.

SILVER LAKE, Minn., Aug. 14th, 1885.

"GOVERNING THE TONGUE." JAMES III: 2-4.

THE apostle is speaking here of the government of the tongue. He says the degree in which a man, woman or youth governs their tongue is an index to the whole moral state. You know what an index finger is? A finger on a watch? The mark on a sun dial? An index to a book? They all more or less relate to a certain thing, the progress of time traveled. Similarly our lives, our habits, our progress, is either going backward or forward, east, west, north or south. The tongue is spoken of in the illustration as a bridle, bit, rudder, &c. We all know what these are for? To determine the course of the ship, the horse, &c. They do not hinder, but direct the course of the ship, horse, sun, watch, &c., they direct their course. As you govern the tongue, the more closely you come to perfection, as the text implies. If you believe you can tell lies, speak angrily to a brother or sister, indulge in vain words and imaginations, jokes, &c., and yet be called a good Latter Day Saint, it is contrary to God's word. I will not flatter you, I will deal sincerely with you, it is erroneous. Actions, words and feelings, are fully represented here in the course of the ship, horses, etc. Weigh it well in your mind; govern your tongue as you would be found going on to the Saints' rest-to perfection. Let us make a self-examination. Self-reliance, self-respect, self-control, are all invaluble here. The tongue is not only represented as an index, but an instrument to determine our moral state. Self-gratification, self-appreciation, all feed on pride. A woman got up at a testimony meeting in Chester and said her greatest stumbling-block was envy; another said hers was jealousy. Oh think of the wounds those women must have made during their lives! By restraining your tongue you will save hours of anxiety and trouble. A gentleman once said he experienced a great bereavement, which tested his soul and trust in God's providence beyond any previous trial of his life. "One night," he said, "I was sitting with my little boy on my lap, mourning over my loss, when my eye caught on a favorite text over the mantel piece. The eyes of the child were also turned in the same direction, and without any request on my part he read the text aloud, "The law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul;" and as I heard these words from the child they seemed to sink deeper into my heart than ever before. And to my surprise the child asked the question: "Papa, what does perfect mean?" My heart was too full to make a prompt reply, and before I could break the silence the child supplied the want itself and said: "Papa, doesn't it mean that God makes no mistakes?""

How important then that we make our lives a blessing to others? The poet says:

"I live for those who love me,
Whose hearts are kind and true;
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And waits my spirit too.
For the cause that needs assistance,
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I may do."

CULTURE.

WE hear much said nowadays about culture, as if it ought to be the chief aim in life for all intelligent, refined human beings. That it is as a talisman to refined society, and also an element of success in fashionable society, all must admit. But when these worldlings claim that their object in life is the highest and best, the Christian claims that they have something higher and better. While worldly culture only fits for worldly society, Christian culture will not only admit its possessor to the best earthly society, but fits them for the society of Heaven. Heavenly culture as far exceels worldly culture as righteousness exceed sin. The best lessons for its attainment are found recorded in the New Testament as they fell from the lips of the prophet of Gallilee. Mrs. H. B. Emerson.

ETERNAL LIFE, AND THE SECOND DEATH.

ADAM, before the fall, was in a state of never-ending existence dependent upon conditions, therefore he had eternal life, but was neither immortal, nor mortal. One of the conditions upon which he might have retained eternal life was this declaration of the Creator. "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; nevertheless, thou mayest choose for thyself, for it is given unto thee; but remember that I forbid it; for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."—Gen. 2:19-22. I. T. But man ate of the fruit of the tree, and then God said; "Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil."—Gen. 3:28. Thus this knowledge of good and evil was purchased for man, and the price which was paid was death; and because of disobedience a spiritual death, and the penalty temporal death. The immediate effects were, man was estranged from God, and death commencing its work claimed his body, and at the end of his individual probation resolved it to its original elements: "Dust thou wast and unto dust shalt thou return."—Gen. 3:25. Thus "by man came death," (1 Cor. 15:21), a first death, an everlasting death, for it sweeps down the ages, through all the race of man. And until it was an accomplished fact there was no intimation that it would ever give place to life again. But then there came this assurance to the woman, in God's declaration to the serpent: "I will put enmity between thee and the woman; between thy seed and her seed; and he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."—Gen. 3:21. And when the "seed of the woman" (not of man) had bruised the serpent's head (through calvary and the resurrection) he regained life for man, saying, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore, amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."—Rev. 1:18. Thus, "by man came also the resurrection of the dead."—1 Cor. 15:21. Man has presented to him the two Adams; the one giving him the temporal life under the death penalty; the other restoring to him the temporal life, which can never be taken from him again, whether righteous or wicked; for "they can not die, seeing there is no more corruption. Book of Alma 9:3. And also offering to him the spiritual or eternal life. Thus eternal life was purchased for man, and the price paid was death—Christ's death—who died "that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death." Heb. 2: 14. "For ye are bought with a price." I Cor. 6:20. If there were no other principles involved than a temporal death, we might judge that when man was resurrected he would be restored to the same condition in which Adam existed before the fall. But disobedience to God's command was an act of rebellion against heaven's authority, which necessarily resulted in man's banishment from his presence, which is spiritual death. And the knowledge of good and evil which he received, increased his responsibilities as it enlarged his powers, by his agency, thus extending the conditions under which he might have eternal life. And as man voluntarily disobeyed God, which resulted in death, so God has ordained by an immutable law that eternal life shall not be restored to man except by obedience to the principles governing that state of existence. Therefore the resurrection only restores the temporal life; but the spiritual or eternal life is determined by other principles and conditions. key that opens the portals of eternal life is knowledge-"This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ." John 17:3. "And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding that we may kuow him that is true; "This is the true God and eternal life." I John 5:20. Therefore, as a result of Adam's eating the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, man obtained power to receive knowledge during his probation through obedience to the gospel, which would give him not only eternal life again, but a glorified body, with power to receive instruction through the next stage of his existence —or millennial reign of Christ—by which he may go on towards immortality.

We find mention of three classes of mankind in the future. 1st. Those who shall inherit eternal life. 2d. Those who shall be subject to the second death. And 3d, those who must die the second death. The first of these will receive a glorified body in the first resurrection and eternal life through Christ, by the reception of knowledge through the Holy Spirit, by obedience to the gospel, which is the law governing that condition of existence in the world to come.

The second class are those who remain in the prison until the judgment day, when they will be assigned a place of reward or punishment according to their deeds, the penalty [liability] of death—the second death—still upon them; but may be avoided if they will learn by counsel, or by the things they suffer.

The third class are those who have committed the unpardonable sin; who must die the second death, "And the only ones on whom the second death shall have any power," (Doctrine and Covenants 76:4), therefore they can not be forgiven, "neither in this world; neither in the world to come." Matt. 12:27. And as there is no more corruption after the resurrection, the second death necessarily is a spiritual death, which involves separation from God, and from the glory of his power, in everlasting darkness. How fearful the punishment of transgressors! Thousands yearly kill themselves hoping thereby to avoid it here; but if man will not learn by counsel, or by the word of God, he must learn by the things he will suffer, though it should take cycles of ages to do so.

Then we find that all men are "dead in trespasses and sins, and that eternal life is only obtained by obedience to the gospel of Christ. All the rest of the race of man are subject to and in danger of the second death, in some sense or degree; and with the exception of the sons of perdition, their destiny will rest with themselves measurably. Proof seems wanting to establish the thought that any death is necessarily unending. No stronger language has been used in reference to any death than that first used to Adam, "Thou shalt surely die." And that death having been entailed upon the whole race of man, is everlasting; but not in the sense that it will not give place to life again, under proper conditions. The inferential argument from Adam's life and death is in favor of the thought, that all death may give place eventually to life, in some degree of happiness, with perhaps the exception of those who become sons of perdition.

Satan entered the serpent to betray Eve, and bring death into the world. Again, Satan entered Judas to betray Christ, and bring death upon the second Adam. But through that, Christ conquered death and gave to the race life again, that all who will may also receive eternal life. The tree of life "is in the midst of the paradise of God," and those who are not worthy to center there can not partake of it, consequently may die again—a second death. Those who "have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb" shall be permitted to pass the "cherubim and flaming swords," and partake of the tree of life, and then shall partake of the tree of knowledge of good unmixed with evil—"we shall know as we are known." The great Redeemer says, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10:10. And God says, "This is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality, and eternal life of man."

ON DANCING.

RECENTLY a friend handed us a pastoral letter with request to publish; a young lady member of the Baptist Church, her friends here soliciting her to attend dances, wrote to her former pastor for advice; we give an extract:

"I once had a very dear friend who loved dancing and was led astray and ruined under its pernicious influences. There are some who quote the Bible as saying a time to dance; if you read the Bible very carefully you will find (1) that the sexes never danced together; (2) that dancing was sometimes done to indicate joy in religious worship, as David before the ark and Miriam at the deliverance of the Israelites; (3) that when dancing was done for mere pleasure it was by abandoned women, as, the daughter of Herodias when John the Baptist was killed; certainly your friends would not want this kind of dancing. Again, dancing leads young people to disobey and dishonor their parents; many and many a girl goes to a dance when her mamma's heart aches with sorrow; anything that will make a child do that can not be good for a child; again, many a girl has exposed her health in such a way as to lead to an untimely death; under such influences girls are generall careless; again, you are constantly thrown into the company with persons that are immoral and with whom you would not speak at other places; again, no professing Christian that dances is active for Christ, it kills all religious enjoyment; Christ is not welcome in a ball room or at a dance; dances are not opened with prayer; again, it unfits the mind for study and good reading.

It is just the same with the roller skating craze and the euchre craze. I can not get the young people that are engaged in these to love good reading, so they grow up ignorant of so much that they might enjoy. Again, it grieves the best members of a church; does a young Christian find it good to do those things that grieve the people of God? What good does dancing do? It is pleasurable for a while, but it confers no lasting happiness. So far as dancing is concerned, the most ignorant blockhead in town can be the most graceful dancer; it does not show that one knows anything because he can dance. Again, the general idea is that the world has laid hold of that exercise for its own, and that it does not belong to Christians. I think it is so.

Then, my dear young sister, there are so many things that are pure and holy, why not cultivate them? why not cultivate the mind and spend the time that others give up to dancing, in some useful way, and when you get older you will be glad. I have had to urge hard to get some of my girls not to dance, but now they are glad they did not. I know the world will call you silly and weak, etc., but they called the Savior bad names. I do hope you will resist all such temptations, cultivate purity of thought, word and acts and you will be richly blest. May God keep you. Wm. C. Learned.

SALT FOR THE THROAT.

In these days, when diseases of the throat are universally prevalent, and in so many cases fatal, we feel it our duty to say a word in behalf of a most effectual, if not positive, cure for sore throat. For many years past, indeed we may say during the whole of a life of more than forty years, we have been subject to a dry hacking cough, which is not only distressing to ourselves but to our friends and those with whom we are brought into business contact. Last fall we were induced to try what virtue there was in common salt. We commenced by using it three times a day-morning, noon, and night. We dissolved a large tablespoonful of pure salt in about half a tumblerful of water. With this we gargled the throat most thoroughly just before mealtime. The result has been that during the entire winter we were not only free from colds and coughs, but the dry hacking coughs have entirely disappeared. We attribute these satisfactory results sololy to the use of salt gargle, and most cordially recommend a trial of it by those who are subject to disease of the throat. Many persons who have not tried the salt gargle have the impression that it is not pleasant to use, but after a few days' use no person who loves a nice clean mouth and first rate sharpner of the appetite, will abandon it.

Truth never need be in a hurry, but a lie must keep all the time on the jump; a lazy lie soon tires itself out, and ends in confusion.

Men usually follow their wishes till suffering compels them to follow their judgment.

PARK BLUFF CAMP MEETING.

We want to say to all those coming to the Camp Meeting at Park Bluff, that board and lodging will be furnished to all that wish to board for fifty cents a day; this includes three meals and lodging. Can any one stay at home cheaper than that? A late letter from Bro. M. H. Forscutt states that he will be here, no preventing providence. Excursion rates over the H. & St. Joe and C. R. I. & P. Roads could not be obtained. Those coming over the C. B. & Q. west of Burlington will change cars at the latter place for Montrose; get your tickets clear through at one and one third fare the round trip. Those coming over the C. B. & Q. Road from the east will also change at Burlington. Those coming over the C. B. & K. C. will change at Veile, six miles above Montrose, and take the C. B. & Q. It is stated that the C. B. & K. C Road will run a special train through to Montrose. Can not say positively; enquire at your stations.

The prospects for the meeting still grow more flattering.

ELDER H. C. BRONSON.

KEWANEE DISTRICT.

It is the wish of the District President that the members of the district, and especially the Elders, be present at the Kewanee District Conference, and if they contemplate attending the Camp Meeting at Montrose, they can leave here on Monday morning, and arrive at Montrose at ten o'clock the same afternoon. Those who contemplate visiting conference at Millersburg by railroad will please notify J. W. Terry at Millersburg, and there will be arrangements made to meet them at Aledo with conveyance.

By order of Pres. J. W. Terry,

J. L. TERRY, clerk.

EASTERN IOWA.

The members of the Eastern Iowa District Conference will meet in the Saints' Hall Fourth Street, Clinton, Iowa, at half-past ten in the forenoon, on Saturday, September 5th, 1885. Members of other districts are cordially invited to atthe conference.

JEROME RUBY, Pres.

NOTICE-J. R. LAMBERT.

Some time after the Spring Conference I became convinced that I would not be able to labor in the field this summer, or in any other respect properly perform the work that should be done by the missionary in charge. I laid the matter before brethren J. Smith and W. W. Blair, to whom I proposed the advisability of relinquishing my presidency of the mission, and so advertising the Saints through the Herald. It was thought the better way would be to retain my charge, do what I could by way of correspondence, and take the field as soon as practicable. Since that time I have been almost wholly engaged in temporal affairs, and I have sometimes thought it would have been better for me to have given up my charge entirely.

My present purpose is to take the field at an early date—perhaps by September 20th or October 1st. Ill health of myself and family, or the fear of it stands most in the way. But we will try and do our part, and leave results in the hands of God. Death has made another inroad into our little family. "One by one" they are taken away. Three lie side by side in Rose Hill Cemetery, while two only are left with us. The loss can not be supplied this side of the resurrection. LAMOMI, Iowa, August 24th, 1885. J. R. LAMBERT.

JOHN CAIRNS.

No. 811, Walnut Street, HANNIBAL, Mo., August 3d, 1885.

ELDER W. W. BLAIR; Dear Brother: -- I herewith enclose copy of Bro. John Cairns' petition and acceptance by the branch; for I think you will be glad to greet him in the commonwealth of Israel. He has received several congratulatory letters of late, from old time friends in the gospel. He has resided with daughter, Mrs. Almeda Lines, No. 117, South Fourth Street, in this city, nearly one year; during which time we have become quite intimate. I have often read to him and written for him, as his eyesight has become much impaired, and his general health has been feeble. He is in his seventy-seventh year; but he talks with the vigor and fire of youth, and hopes yet to be of service in the cause we love. I have become much interested in his welfare, and during our frequent conversations have learned many episodes in his career, which would possess interest for the Saints.

In the spring of 1842, a Presbyterian clergyman in Quincy, Illinois, Dr. David Nelson, sent a challenge to Joseph the Seer to debate with him. He replied that he would send some of his boys, and Brethren Cairns and Ells were selected for the purpose. Bro. Ells made short work with the clergyman, after which arrangements were made for preaching in the grove near by, and Bro. Cairns was chosen to preach. He took for his text these words, "Knowing this first, that no prophecy of scripture is of any private interpretation, but holy men of old spoke as they were moved upon by the Holy Spirit." He addressed with good liberty, a large audience. At the close Bro. Joseph introduced him to Gov. Ford, who occupied a seat on the platform, and said to him, "You have done well. I don't speak that you should feel proud; but you have discharged your duty faithfully," In his early ministerial career he labored much in Canada between Kingston and the head of the Bay of Quintie. Jehiel Savage, a successful Methodist minister, received the gospel gladly at his hands, became a warm advocate thereof, and afterwards moved to Nau-

In East and West Loughborough, he labored after the retirement of Brigham Young, following up the route of his travels with marked success. He held two debates in Dundee, Scotland, with a Socialist; the result being a revival of interest in the gospel and new additions daily. His forte then was debate, and he became noted as a controversialist. Doubtless many will remember his name, connected as it was with so many discussions. He was laboring in Kilmarnock, Scotland, when news came of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum. He went immediately to Glasgow his native place, where a hall had been properly draped, and there he delivered a funeral discourse to an attentive audience of one thousand persons. Bro. John Taylor, now of this city, was then present. The discourse was reported and favorably commented upon by the local papers.

He traveled much in England, Scotland, and the north of Ireland, sowing the seed for those who came after. His has been an eventful history, not only in his ministerial career, but during the years since. In regard to his Eldership and position in the High Priest's Quorum, you will know best what action to take.

Yours in gospel bonds,

HANNIBAL, Mo., July 24th, 1885. TO ELDER JOHN TAYLOR,

President of the Hannibal Branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the members of the Branch:-

It is my desire to unite with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and I make this my application to you, to be received into the Hannibal Branch of said church. I was born in the city of Glasgow, Scotland, October 21st, 1808; was baptized in Leeds county, Canada, in the spring of 1834, and confirmed at the same time, by Elder James Blakeslee, (father of your presiding Bishop), and was ordained an Elder under his hands at the time of my confirmation. From that time until the spring of 1842 my time was principally given to preaching. I then moved with my family to the city of Nauvoo, and was there received into the High Priest's Quorum, during the summer of that year, and was sent under the administration of Joseph Smith the Seer, on a mission to Scotland and England. I accompanied Elder Reuben Hedlock from New York to Liverpool, England; he being appointed to take charge of the British Mission. Under his direction, and by appointment of the Liverpool Conference, I was sent to visit the principal cities in England and Scotland; remained in the city of London six months, laboring there. I returned to Nauvoo with a company of Saints in the month of March, 1845, and attended that conference. Becoming fully satisfied that there had been a vast departure from the faith, and looking upon the self-styled authorities as shepherds whom I could not trust, I therefore quietly removed with my family to St. Louis. Now, being fully satisfied that the true Spirit and power of God is with the Reorganization, I respectfully ask to be received among you. JOHN CAIRNS.

Lamoni, Iowa, September 12, 1885.

In a letter written to the HERALD from Pleasant Grove, Utah, we used the following language respecting an annoyance encountered while preaching there in a "hired hall."

"Two or three female sprigs of the plural celestiality of Utah stood in the street in front of the hall last night and cut up pranks, and mocked while I was preaching; three or four of the same ilk talked and chatted almost aloud the first night not far from the stand. The spirits which waited so long for tabernacles in plurality (?) have some of them made poor choice of tenements of clay."

To this the Provo paper takes exception, as follows:

"The following is an excerpt from the latest number of the Saints' Herald, a letter written by Joseph Smith, President of the Josephites, from Pleasant Grove in this county. During his lecturing tour through the Territory lately he expressed a large amount of respect for and good will towards the people here, and denounced certain reports of his lectures with vehemence, denying having uttered anything of a derogatory character against the people here, and sought by smooth ways and expressed good feeling to in gratiate himself into the sympathy of the people."

Is it speaking derogatorily of the virtue and integrity of the women of Utah to state that some of their children disturbed, or were rude at a public preaching service held by us in Pleasant Grove, Utah? Is it to be that no notice is to be taken of what the children of polygamists do or say? Or is it to be taken for granted that such children can do no wrong; or that there is no necessity, or reason why such children should not deport themselves in an orderly manner at public meetings, though such meetings may be held by those of adverse faith? Suppose that the Editor of the Provo paper had been preaching in Lamoni, Iowa, and the daughters of Joseph Smith had been rude and disorderly in the building, or within hearing outside of the building, would not the Editor have felt justified in noticing such behavior? Would he have used more respectful terms in referring to it than did we in the case referred to? We doubt it.

One of the theories advanced by Elders in defense of plural marriage is, that there are hosts of spirits waiting to take tabernacles; and that this system was instituted for the purpose of bringing into the world, from wise and noble men and women, good tabernacles for such spirits. The system is called a CELESTIAL one. We could not write the daughters of such and such a man, or men, were a little sprightly, at our meeting on such and such an occasion, and do justice to such "hoodlumism." They were girls, hence females; they were children of the plural wife system, hence celestial; they were young, hence sprigs or slips. If we had written that the spirits of these children were bad in the unseen world before taking tabernacles, it would have been more than we were aware of. If we had written that their conduct was good, we should have lied about them, as their conduct was unbecoming any body's

If our offense lies in the statement that "two or three sprigs of the plural celestiality of Utah;" in what sense is that derogatory of the people in Utah? In no other place than Utah is the system of plurality as a Celestial system practiced, and hence it is "of Utah." If there is nothing derogatory to the people, in the thing itself, how can a reference to it of the nature referred to be regarded as derogatory? The conduct of the young folks referred to was reprehensible. We so felt at the time, and so feel now. It deserved rebuke. And if the Editor of the Provo paper desires visitors, friends, or enemies to the plural theory to be impressed with the beauties of it, as exemplified in its practice, both in the children, and their representative men, he will read the young people a lecture, and denounce "hoodlumism," whether those guilty of it be of high or low degree. We tried to write of the occurrence in such a way as to reprove it, and bring it into contempt, just as we would like the Editor of the Provo paper to do were the occasion so changed that he were the speaker trying to preach to those who choose to hear, and our children were the ones disturbing or annoying him; and we have no apology to offer to children or parents, or to the Editor of the Provo paper for what we wrote. If to notice acts of bad behavior, and write or speak of them when such acts occur, is to speak "against the people of Utah in a derogatory manner," should we see any more of such conduct we shall certainly speak and write of it. Insist upon fair, becoming, and admirable conduct, on the part of the children, Mr. Editor, and you need have no fear that we shall notice disorderly conduct in any terms, for there will be none; but uphold the young people in such acts, repress notice of it yourself, and deprecate denunciation of it in those who choose to notice it and speak or write of it, and there will likely be plenty to complain of. In the language of the Editor "Let the whole affair, language and all "speak for itself."

THE JOURNAL'S ERROR.

THE Utah Journal, published at Logan, Utah, of the 26th ult, says: "The efforts made by the so-called Reorganized Church to gain a little notoriety are conspicuously futile."

This is about as correct as a thousand other things said and done by these Utah Mormon teachers. In the first place the Reorganized Church only seeks that "notoriety" which will enable everybody to know of its doctrines and practice, that all may see they are truly Christian, and that they act in harmony with the teachings of the Book of Mormon and the edition of the Book of Covenants endorsed and used by Joseph the Seer, and that in its faith and doctrine and authority, it is the very same as that church organized and presided over by the Seer. It seeks "notoriety" with the Utah Mormons, and for the purpose of calling them back to the original faith and teaching of the church as set forth in the standard books of the church from which they have departed, and upon which they have brought reproach and disgrace; and likewise to warn and entreat them to "return to their first love," and thus avert impending harm and ruin, and gain "honor and fame" with God and all lovers of good things.

In seeking to gain this kind of notoriety the efforts of the Reorganized Church have not been "conspicuously futile," either; for in the last twenty-five years it has, though few in number, and obscure in the beginning, fought down hosts of prejudice, cleansed and lifted up the reputation of the doctrine and standard books of the church, all of which had been shamefully defiled and degraded by unfaithful Mormons; it has gathered into the fold many thousand members, established the work of the church in nearly all English-speaking countries, and elsewhere; brought the great latter day work so prominently before those in authority, that their prejudice and enmity are measurably removed; it has forced its work among the Utah Mormons, until they have largely changed their system of tithing, modified their polygamic doctrines and practices, denied or amended their system of blood-atonement, retired their "Order of Enoch," closed their "School of the Prophets," disowned or emigrated their Danites, and now suffer the "Josephite" Elders to preach in Utah without threatening to "send them to hell across lots as "nasty apostates" a la Brigham Young. No, Mr. Journal; its efforts have not been "conspicuously futile. It has become a power in the land for good. It is builded on "the rock." Its rapidly growing influence is felt and acknowledged for good in many places; and it is respected by the nation. Its President, Joseph Smith, can be trusted; and he is trusted, like Joseph in Egypt; and like Ezra, Nehemiah, Daniel, and many other worthies in their times, by the nations where they dwelt.

The Reorganized Church is saving, and will save the original doctrines and authorities of the Church of Christ, organized April 6th, 1830; while that church organized and indoctrinated by Brigham Young and his fellows will close out its inglorious career at no distant day, and its errors and follies and evils will be made known "upon the housetops."

"Live your religion, be humble, be virtuous, be honorable, be honest, preserve your integrity and keep the commandments of God, and he will sustain you in time and throughout all the eternities to come. Zion shall yet rise and shine, and the glory of God will rest upon her. The Saints shall see the salvation of Israel and their enemies overthrown. They shall join in sacred songs and anthems in praise and glory to the Most High, saying, Hallelujah! Hallelujah! for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth, and will reign until He has put all enemies under His feet. Therefore rally around the standard of freedom, uphold the flag of the Republic, sustain the principles of human liberty and maintain inviolate the Constitution of the United States and all laws in accordance therewith, and God shall smile upon you, and you and your generations shall be blessed in time and throughout the eternities that are to come. We must still bear the same record that we have heretofore borne to you; woe to them who fight against Zion, for God will fight against them."

Had these men explained to the people what they mean when they say "Live your religion, * * * keep the commandments of God," their counsel would not be so ambiguous and mystified as it now is, especially to outsiders. If they had advised their people to live the religion of Christ as taught in the New Testament and Book of Mormon, and to have remembered "the church articles and covenants" contained in the book of Doctrine and Covenants, used during the life-time of Joseph the Seer, and professedly in use by nearly all Mormons up to 1876, then we could understand what was intended. But when they say—"Live your religion," their counsel is entirely too vague and indefinite for comprehension. And when they urge them to "keep the commandments of God," the advice is good, if it is applied correctly. But when applied to what claims to be "the commandments of God," great harm may result; for there have been, and there now are, many things professedly from God which are justly doubted, rejected, and condemned. What are really and truly "the commandments of God" are all right; but that which claims to be of God, and yet flatly contradicts and contravenes what we have already received and accepted as from God, we must reject. All truths harmonize. In God's word there is unity. His "paths are straight;" and "His word is light." He never puts "evil for good," neither does He contradict himself-"God is not a man that he should lie." If these men design that in keeping "the commandments of God" their people should practice polygamy, resist "the powers that be" in civil governments, accept Brigham's Adam-God doctrine, engage in secret, oath bound endowments, and follow the file-leaders irrespective of their own judgment or the accepted teachings of Christ, then their counsel is bad, and it may be said of them—"The leaders of this people cause them to err; and they that are led of them are destroyed."

When these men counsel their people to "rally around the standard of freedom, uphold the flag of the Republic, sustain the principles of human liberty, and maintain inviolate the Constitution of the United States and all laws in accordance therewith," it sounds well to the ear, and is pleasant reading. But if they mean that they and their people shall do all this in the manner they themselves may choose, and not in the manner provided for under the Constitution and laws of our country, then their counsel is deceptive, misleading, dangerous, and tends to harm. For if these men and their people, have the right to decide how and when and where they will do all this, irrespective of the laws and customs of our national Government, other men and other peoples may do the same, and then anarchy would take the place of government and reduce society to chaos and ruin. Who shall decide what laws are "in accordance" with the Constitution? This is a grave point; for these men instruct their people to "maintain" such laws. Shall their people, individually, decide this matter? Shall their councils and conferences decide it? Or shall these heads of the Utah Mormon Church decide it?

If the Mormons as individuals, or in conference capacity, or by their leaders, have the inherent or delegated right to so decide, have not other individuals, other societies, and other church leaders equally as good right to decide as they? If this question was left to the decision of each individual, or to religious societies or their leaders, the Utah Mormons would stand a far worse show than they do now, for they constitute but a very small minority in our Nation. In the very nature of civil society there must be decision as to what is constitutional law, and decision means authority to decide, and authority means law; for all authority is derived from and sustained by law. The constitution and laws of our Nation wisely provides that the constitutionality of laws shall be decided by the Supreme Court of the United States. And when any body of people undertake to decide such matters for themselves, they in effect resist lawful authority, dishonor the Government, usurp the functions delegated and reserved to the Supreme Court, and assume rights and authority superior to the state.

And when men counsel their people to "maintain inviolate the Constitution of the United States and all laws in accordance therewith," and at the same time reserve in fact to themselves or to their people the right to decide what is and what is not constitutional law, they are dangerous advisers, and they and those who follow them will eventually "fall into the ditch together."

God inspired the Constitution; he therefore inspired that section which provides that the Supreme Court—the Supreme Court alone—shall decide what is constitutional law. This, then, is the ordinance of God; and it follows that whosoever resists this ordinance, whether by counsel or by an overt act, resists the ordinance of God; and the Holy Scriptures say—"They that resist shall receive to themselves damnation."

Plain, pure teaching is a jewel. The Utah Mormons have never seen a time when it would profit them more than now. A crisis in their affairs is impending, and only straight, godly work will avail them. Evasion, bluster, ostracism, skulking and double-dealing, will not win. They need to teach and carry out the plain and pure principles contained in the New Testament, Book of Mormon, and Nauvoo Doctrine and Covenants, then all will be well.

HEATHEN NATIONS REDEEMED.

A BROTHER writes to know what the following passage means:—"And then [after the glorious advent of Christ. Ed.] shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection; and it shall be tolerable for them."—D. C. 45: 10.

The "part in the first resurrection" which they are to enjoy is seen in the following:

"And after this, another angel shall sound, which is the second trump; and then cometh the redemption of those who are Christ's at his coming; who have received their part in that prison which is prepared for them, that they might receive the gospel, and be judged according to men in the flesh."—Doc & Cov. 85: 28.

This event immediately follows the resurrection of the sleeping Saints, the changing of the living Saints, and their joint translation to meet Christ in the cloud of glory,—

"And immediately there shall appear a great sign in heaven, and all people shall see it together. And another angel shall sound his trump, saying, that great church, the mother of abominations, that made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, that persecuteth the Saints of God, that shed their blood: she who sitteth upon many waters, and upon the islands of the sea; behold, she is the tares of the earth, she is bound in bundles, her bands are made strong, no man can loose them; therefore, she is ready to be burned. And he shall sound his trump both long and loud, and all nations shall hear it. And there shall be silence in heaven for the space of half an hour, and immediately after shall the curtain of heaven be unfolded, as a scroll is unfolded after it is rolled up, and the face of the Lord shall be unvailed; and the Saints that are upon the earth, who are alive, shall be quickened, and be caught up to meet him. And they who have slept in their graves, shall come forth; for their graves shall be opened, and they also shall be caught up to meet him in the midst of the pillar of heaven: they are Christ's, the first fruits: they who shall descend with him first, and they who are on the earth and in their graves, who are first caught up to meet him; and all this by the voice of the sounding of the trump of the angel of God."-Doc. & Cov. 85: 26, 27.

"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort one another with these words."—1 Thess. 4: 13-18.

"And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah: and the Lord my God shall come, and all the Saints with thee."—Zech. 14: 4, 5.

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."—Matt. 24:

This view is further confirmed by this testimony:

"And again, we saw the terrestrial world, and behold and lo; these are they who are of the terrestrial, whose glory differs from that of the church of the First Born, who have received the fulness of the Father, even as that of the moon differs from the sun in the firmament. Behold, these are they who died without law; and also they who are the spirits of men kept in prison, whom the Son visited, and preached the gospel unto them, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterwards received it; these are they who are honorable men of the earth, who are blinded by the craftiness of men; these are they who receive of his glory, but not of his fulness; these are they who receive of the presence of the Son, but not of the fulness of the Father; wherefore they are bodies terrestrial, and not bodies celestial, and differ in glory as the moon differs from the sun; these are they who are not valiant in the testimony of Jesus; wherefore they obtained not the crown over the kingdom of our God. And now this is the end of the vision which we saw of the terrestrial, that the Lord commanded us to write while we were yet in the Spirit."—Doc. & Cov. 76: 6.

These wise and wonderfully benevolent provisions made for those nations living in the dim twilight of heathenism, aid us in understanding how God can and will, in justice and in love, reward all men according as their works shall be, and provide for them future conditions of bliss and glory such as they shall be qualified and prepared for; and they also enable us to see the application of the following and similar texts of Scripture. Col. 1: 19, 20; Eph. 1: 22; Phil. 2: 9-11; 1 Cor. 15: 25; Rev. 5: 13; 1 Tim. 4: 10; 1 Peter 3: 18-20; 4: 5, 6; Prov. 24: 12; Jer. 32: 19; Matt. 16: 27; Rom. 2: 6; 2 Cor. 5: 10; Rev. 22: 12, etc., etc.

That those who died without the gospel of Christ should be participants according to their righteous deeds, in Christ's saving power, in some measure of felicity—that this was understood to some degree in the Church during the first centuries may be gathered from the books of the chief Christian writers of those times. In the Pastor of Hermas supposed to have been written about A. D. 160 to 170, the writer says-"These apostles and teachers who preached the name of the Son of God, after falling asleep in the power and faith of the Son of God, preached it not only to those who were asleep, but themselves gave them the seal [baptism. Ed.] of the preaching." The Pastor, p. 49. This is repeated in The Stromata, Book 2, chapter 9; and the following lengthy extract gives still further light as to their faith and teachings on this point:

"Wherefore the Lord preached the gospel to those in Hades. Accordingly the Scripture says, "Hades says to Destruction. We have not seen His form, but we have heard his voice." It is not plainly the place, which, the words above say, heard the voice, but those who have been put in Hades, and have abandoned themselves to destruction, as persons who have thrown themselves voluntarily from a ship into the sea, They, then, are those that hear the divine power and voice. For who in his senses can suppose the souls of the righteous and those of sinners in the same condemnation, charging Providence with injustice?

"But how? Do not [the Scriptures] show that the Lord preached the gospel to those that perished in the flood, or rather had been chained, and to those kept 'in ward and guard?' And it has been shown also, in the second book of the Stromata, that the apostles, following the Lord, preached the gospel to those in Hades. For it was requisite, in my opinion, that as here, so also there, the best of the disciples should be imitators of the Master; so that He should bring to repentance those belonging to the Hebrews, and they the Gentiles; that is, those who have lived in righteousness according to the Law and Philosophy, who had ended life not perfectly, but sinfully. For it was suitable to the divine administration, that those possessed of greater worth in righteousness, and whose life had been pre-eminent, on repenting of their transgressions, though found in another place, yet being confessedly of the number of the people of God Almighty, should be saved, each one according to his individual knowledge.

"And as I think, the Savior, also exerts His might because it is His work to save; which accordingly He also did by drawing to salvation those who became willing, by the preaching of the Gospel], to believe on Him, wherever they were. If, then, the Lord descended to Hades for no other end but to preach the Gospel, as He did descend; it was either to preach the Gospel to all or to the Hebrews only. If, accordingly, to all, then all who believe shall be saved, aithough they may be of the Gantiles, on making their profession there; since God's punishments are saving and disciplinary, leading to conversion, and choosing rather the repentance than the death of a sinner; and especially since souls, although darkened by passions, when released from their bodies, are able to perceive more clearly, because of their being no longer obstructed by the paltry flesh.

"If, then, He preached only to the Jews, who wanted the knowledge and faith of the Savior, it is plain that, since God is no respecter of persons, the apostles also, as here, so there, preached the Gospel to those of the heathen who were ready for conversion. And it is well said by the Shepherd, 'They went down with them therefore into the water, and again ascended. But these descended alive, and again ascended alive. But those who had fallen asleep, descended dead, but ascended alive.' Further, the Gospel says, 'that many bodies of those that slept arose,'—plainly as having been translated to a better state. There took place, then, a universal movement and translation through the economy of the Savior.

"One righteous man, then, differs not, as righteous, from another righteous man, whether he be of the Law or a Greek. For God is not only Lord of the Jews, but of all men, and more nearly the Father of those who know Him. For if to live well and according to the law is to live, also to live rationally according to the law is to live: and those who lived rightly before the Law were classed under faith, and judged to be righteous,it is evident that those, too, who were outside of the Law, having lived rightly, in consequence of the peculiar nature of the voice, though they are in Hades and in ward, on hearing the voice of the Lord, whether that of His own person or that acting through His apostles, with all speed turned and believed. For we remember that the Lord is 'the power of God,' and power can never be weak.

"So I think it is demonstrated that the God being good, and the Lord powerful, they save with a righteousness and equality which extend to all that turn to Him, whether here or elsewhere. For it is not here alone that the active power of God is beforehand, but it is everywhere and is always at work. Accordingly, in the Preaching of Peter, the Lord says to the disciples after the resurrection, 'I have chosen you twelve disciples, judging you worthy of me," whom the Lord wished to be apostles, having judged them faithful, sending them into the world to the men on the earth, that they may know that there is one God, showing clearly what would take place by the faith of Christ; that they who heard and believed should be saved; and that those who believed not, after having heard, should bear witness, not having the excuse to allege, We have not heard.

"What then? Did not the same dispensation obtain in Hades, so that even there, all the souls, on hearing the proclamation, might either exhibit repentance, or confess that their punishment was just, because they believed not? And it were the exercise of no ordinary arbitrariness, for those who had departed before the advent of the Lord (not having the Gospel preached to them and having afforded no ground from themselves, in consequence of believing or not) to obtain either salvation or punishment. For it is not right that these should be condemned without trial, and that those alone who lived after the advent should have the advantage of the divine righteousness. But to all rational souls it was said from above, Whatever one of you has done in ignorance. without clearly knowing God, if, on becoming conscious, he repent, all his sins will be forgiven him.' 'For, behold,' it is said, 'I have set before your face death and life, that ye may choose life.' God says that He set, not that He made both, in order to the comparison of choice. And in another Scripture He says, 'If ye hear Me, and be willing, ye shall eat the good of the land. But if ye hear Me not, and are not willing, the sword shall devour you: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken these things."

In all the foregoing we see that ample provisions are made of heaven for the heathen, and in it we see the wonderful wisdom of God, and the most exalted evidences of His boundless care and love for all mankind, the living and the dead. We also see that it is the purpose of heaven to bring all the race under the domain of God's law, either in this life or in the hereafter, that Christ may reign supreme; and that all who will, in this life or beyond it, believe and accept the law of life in Christ, may be made partakers of His salvation and be rewarded according to their deeds.

In conclusion: Is it not marvelous that the young and illiterate Seer, Joseph Smith, should obtain, and should declare these wonderful truths so amply sustained by Scripture, by the early Christian writers, and by just and benevolent reason? Is it not conclusive proof of his divine calling and mission?

FAIR DEALING.

THE following clipping from the Salt Lake Tribune of the 27th ult. contains some points which ought not to pass unnoticed, for it has for so many years said many hard things concerning everything and everybody pertaining to Mormonism, that now, when it admits that the church in the beginning "drew to it some sterling men and women," we think this charity and fairness should be credited, and handed down the future.

It has been the writer's good fortune to know many of those who united with the church in its first years and after the most of whom were large minded, liberal hearted, and noble souled men and women; persons who loved right and truth better than all else. Thousands of these and their children may now be found settled throughout the United States, the Canadas, with some in foreign nations, and whereever they are, they occupy enviable positions in society. We are glad the Tribune wisely distinguishes between Mormons on their merits; and when it does the same fully in respect to true and false Mormonism—that contained in the written standards of the church and that foisted upon public notice which if false, and utterly contrary to those standards—its efforts to reform the Utah Mormons will be far more successful. The best means to recover that people from their errors and evils is to exhibit to them, in a kind way, the evils and errors of their system in sharp contrast with the true and right, acknowledging cheerfully, whatever of good their is in them or their system, and censuring only that which is false and tends to harm.

While we think the Utah Mormons have "a merciless creed," and that theirs is a cruel "despotism," we nevertheless think that among them are many who are upright in purpose and good in their intentions.

When men condemn Christianity because of the bad things taught and practiced in the name of Christianity, they are one-sided and unjust. They should judge of it on its merits as publicly set forth in the acknowledged teachings of Christ, its founder. Mormonism—Latter Day Saintism—should be judged after a similar manner, and it is beginning to be, with good results to all concerned.

Facts, unvarnished, and without distortion or exaggeration, are the things needed for the good of all.

The Tribune says of the Church:

"When the institution was first launched, it drew to it some sterling men and women. They were people who were weary of the clashing of creeds and who hoped in a new and simple faith to find rest. But of late years, since it has been generally known that one of the tenets taught and enforced, placed the creed on a lower level than Mohammedanism, the recruits have been only from the barren lands of the country and from the slums of the cities; only from among those to whom the leaves of the book of knowledge have never been turned, and who, because of the sufferings which poverty has entailed upon them since childhood, have from the cradle doubted both the mercy and justice of God. This is the class who can be made content and even grateful on a few acres of land, and all the profits of their toil can be exacted and paid into the coffers of the merciless creed which laid a mortgage upon their lives even before they crossed the sea to come here. How natural it is then for the organ of this despotism to inveigh against any plan which threatens to lift even a few of these out of the toils which now bind them body and soul; how natural it is in the "boundless charity" which encircles the Mormon church to descend to low abuse of gentlemen who, for a pittance, are wearing out their lives in preparing young men and women to be able to live better and higher lives than they possibly could live under such advantages as the system under which they were born, supplies! One would think that from within the despotism itself some brave souls would spring up and denounce the horrible fraud. That they do not, shows, first, how desperate is the superstition which enthralis them; and, secondly, how almost helpless they know their fate would be were they to dare oppose the chiefs who have rule here, and still try to earn a living in Utah."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE letter of W. Kelley, found in another column shows how truly men will, in due time, reap what they sow. Mr. Braden by his lectures, and Mr. Riedel by his paper, did all they could to bring hate, disgrace, and mobbing upon the Saints at Stewartsville, Missouri, last fall, and since. Haman hung on the gallows he made for humble Mordecai; and these men have fared similarly. We saw and knew this would be the case last September, for "there is a God in heaven who revealeth secrets;" and their fate was then made known, as many of the Saints there will remember. This should be a source of strength and encouragement, and an incentive to meek and humble devotion to God and his work. The Lord has said, "I do not call on mine Elders to fight the battles of Zion; I will fight your battles;" and when the Saints do as he requires, God is bound; and he will fulfill.

Among the letters, one from Elder J. H. Lake gives an account of a very joyful case of healing in Hibbert, Ontario, and published in the London Advertiser and Mitchell Recorder, by those not connected with the church,

The Sisters' Mite Society of Lamoni have lately purchased a fine bell for the new chapel at this place, and now its clear sweet tones call to town and country for miles around the appointed hours for service. All honor to the ladies.

Elder J. A. Robinson, secretary of the Fifth Quorum of Elders, requests that those who write him address him at Fort Madison, Iowa, after September 20th.

By letter from Elder John H. Lake dated at St. Marys, Ontario, the 29th ult., we learn that he and Elder R. C. Evans were actively engaged in the interests of the church in that mission.

Letters from Pres. Joseph Smith dated the 26th and 29th ult., will be found in the letter department.

The HERALD readers will find interesting matter in the article entitled "Origin of all Things," in the last three numbers, including the present one. The history of Israel in their dispersion is a theme dear to all Bible believers, and Bro. Walker's papers furnish valuable information in respect to it. They will pay for careful perusal.

Bro. Briggs Alden writes that the book he lately advertised for came back to him in better condition than when it went away, and he feels pleased.

Sister Addie E. Hull writes from Pierport, Manistee county, Michigan, the 31st ult., requesting that an Elder be sent there to preach. Herself and sister are the only members there, but they feel confident a competent, wise, faithful minister could soon build up a branch there. They are two and a half miles southeast of Pierport. Let the ministry in charge of that field see to this call, soon.

We thank Bro. William Street and others for papers sent us.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Wm. Leeka of Plum Hollow, Iowa, writing under date of 31st ult., says: "Times are rather dull here at present and business much depressed. Corn crop prospect is excellent, small grain rather indifferent. Health moderately good; rather quiet in spiritual matters; our faith is firm, and our hopes are growing brighter in the promises of the Lord. Our family is still on the increase—we had a promising son born to us on the 28th inst.; his mother is getting along finely."

He further says:

"We feel very much encouraged over the present outlook for the prosperity of the work, especially since the discovery of the long lost "Manuscript Found." Truly, the Lord moves in a mysterious way his wonderous work to perform. Our news papers all comment on the find, and express the opinion that the old Spaulding story has now lost its force as to the origin of the Book of Mormon. Tho published efforts of Bro-J. F. McDowell at Council Bluffs has created quite an interest in the minds of many in reference to the Inspired translation."

Three more were baptized at Lamoni by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, on Sunday, August 30th. Bro. Stebbins says:

"Our prayer meetings are usually excellent and spiritual, Sabbath after Sabbath. The Sunday School is fairly prosperous, and we have had some of the best sermons from the Elders lately that it seems to me were ever preached. Peace and harmony prevail among the Saints; no wrath or bitterness existing that I am aware of."

Elder R. J. Anthony writes from Salt Lake, August 28th, saying he had made a tour just previous to his writing, to Green River, (Wyoming), Montpelier, Dingle Dell, Preston, and Soda Springs, Idaho. He found the Utah Mormons in these places pretty bitter against him, though a few heard him gladly. In speaking of the work of the Reorganized Church in Utah and Idaho, he says:

"Bro. Blair, I can plainly see, wherever I go, the fruits of the faithful, patient labor that has been done. No one just passing through the city (Salt Lake) can properly judge of the labor done; yet Bros. Blakeslee and Kelley had very correct views of the general work here."

Sr. Josephine Wood, (daughter of the late Sr. McHenry, and grand-daughter of the late Pres. William Marks), of Dunlap, Iowa, writes under date of the 30th ult., saying:

"I feel thankful to the Lord that he has opened my eyes to the truth of the latter day work, for I see its beauty and grandeur more and more. I was baptized when I was eleven years old, lived at Bigler's Grove. I did not hear the Saints preaching for some years till of late, but when I did, it all came back to me with overwhelming force. I have not had the chance to meet with them often. I do truly love the Herald. I look for it with greater joy than letters from my nearest friends. It seems to me I could not live without it."

WE see it stated in a Salt Lake paper that "What few Saints there are in southern and eastern Nevada are very fast apostatizing from their faith," and that "the Mormons in and around Panacca are going back on those in authority."

Speaking of Miss (?) Starkey, the Salt Lake Tribune says:

"This polygamist wife, a seventeen year old girl, has been confined in the penitentiary during the entire summer, but appears to be in excellent health and spirits. But how contemptible must the wretch be who, in order to save himself from the penalty of his misdeeds, allows such a girl to remain for months in the penitentiary!"

Correspondence.

DEER LODGE Mont.,

August 25th, 1885.

We held one meeting at Race Track, Sunday morning, August 23d at eleven, by the kindness of Elder Hendrickson, having the use of the Chapel at that place. Had a fair audience, and the best of attention. We returned to Deer Lodge and occupied the Christian Church there. The Pastor, Mr. Wood, was present and led in the prayer and singing service. A fair congregation was present, though it was a rainy night. The folks came from Race Track.

Bozeman, Aug. 29th.—Yours of 22d was handed me by a brother last evening at the meeting in the Chapel, Bro. Luff doing the speaking in good liberty. Father Reese, as he is called, has been quite sick. It was feared for a day or two that he would not rally, but yesterday he was much better; so much so that he was up, dressed and eat a hearty supper, after his usual style. Harvesting and haying are being prosecuted vigorously, most all being through, or nearly so. Wheat, oats, and grass are good this year. Bro. Tom Reese's twine for his harvest will cost him $72.00. Weather has been showery, cloudy and smoky, so that we have not seen the full extent of the Valley, [Gallatin]; though the afternoon sun has lighted up the west side of the mountains to good advantage; a wonderful sight to the man accustomed to prairie views only.

I can not yet tell you where to direct letters; though I think it likely that Butte will be the point. It is expected that we will be here all next week, speaking here, (the Chapel at Reese Creek), and in the city; as some desire is awakened there to have service there. How or when not yet determined. Bro. Clapp is here and is full of zeal. He has a capital wife who will help him in legitimate work for Christ. I have had two weeks of pain and distress in my face, and I am going to Bozeman this forenoon to get a tooth extracted, hoping for relief. Yours,

Joseph Smith.

OSBORNE CITY, Kansas, September 1st, 1885.

Bro. Blair: We have just closed our grove meeting with good results. Commenced August 27th and closed the 31st. Bro. James Caffall was with us. Had a good representation from all parts of the district. A good spirit prevailed throughout the session. Six were baptized, and several more are near the kingdom. Bro. Caffall called a Priesthood meeting the 31st, giving instruction to the Elders, Priests, Teachers, Deacons, and members. It was good, and I hope we will be able to make practical use of it. Bro. Caffall will stop with us a few days; will hold a Grove Meeting at the Goshen Branch, in Brother H. R. Harder's grove. All are invited to come out. The Saints went home from here rejoicing. I had the pleasure of conducting my brother, Otto Parsons, and my aunt Lousia Wiles, my mother's only sister, into the church. Had a time of rejoicing. Ever praying for Zion, A. H. Parsons.

Dow City, Iowa,

September 1st, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—I have enclosed notice for Reunion Meeting too late for this week's Herald. Have been waiting for a letter from Bro. Cadwell in regard to a reduction in railroad rates. As soon as I hear from him will notify you, so that it can be published. Every arrangement will be made so as to make all as comfortable as possible, and the meeting a success. Bro. M. H. Forscutt is here; he preached at the Grove on Sunday; this evening and to-morrow evening he preaches at Dow City; then leaves on the morning train for the Reunion at Wheeler's Grove. We are busy haying now, weather pleasant and cheerful after so much rain as we have lately been having. Prospect excellent for a good corn crop.

In gospel bonds, JOHN PETT.

Buchanan, Tennessee,

August 26th, 1885 Editor's Herald:-Thinking a few words from this part of the Lord's vineyard would be of interest to some of the Herald readers, I essay the task to write. Since my last to you, I have been constantly engaged in my work, trying to set before the people of Tennessee and Kentucky the grand truths of the everlasting gospel. On a few occasions we have had a fair hearing, but as a general thing the attendance at our meetings has been small. It is the annual time in this country for protracted meetings and religion-getting, and the people are very busy, and the poor despised Mormons, find but small encouragement from priests or people. At Foundry Hill, in this county, on the fourth, I had the pleasure of baptizing one; and again on the sixteenth, in Kentucky, two more, all young ladies, just blooming into womanhood. May God keep them I pray. We have just closed a two-days meeting here. On Sunday we had a good audience, and was very much blessed in presenting our thoughts, and closed at night with a very good feeling and apparent interest; but on Monday morning, returning to the meeting ground, our attention was called to a notice posted on a tree forbidding us to preach here or any other place in the county, under pain of the rope. I put the precious document in my pocket, and we went on with our meeting. I presented the subject of the Book of Mormon with most excellent liberty, and was followed in the afternoon by brethren Seaton and Griffin, both making some excellent points in favor of the truth. Altogether we had a good time, and trust the seed sown will yet bear fruit to the glory of God in the salvation of souls. This country does not present the most inviting field for the traveling Elder. I notice quite a contrast in the reports of Elders in other fields from any report that I can make. It may be, and probably is, owing in some measure to my own inefficiency as a laborer, that I can report no large audiences, and no great enthusiasm among the Saints. I should be more inclined to this view of the causes, were it not that other and abler men have preceded me. who have found the same difficulty in getting anything like a fair hearing. The opportunities we get for preaching here, we have to make. The warfare is, in every respect, an aggressive one. There is no "Macedonian cry"-Come over and help us. They want none of our help. They only want to be let alone. The more I study the problem of this Southern Mission, the more I am convinced that nothing but a persistent and continued effort can ever accomplish much good. I expect to visit other parts of the Mission as the way may open. I rejoice in the prospects of the Lord's work in other fields. But, brethren, while you are enjoying your Reunions and spiritual feasts, do not forget the missionary striving to stem the torrent of sectarian prejudice and bigotry alone and unaided, except by the Spirit's consoling influence, and pray that wisdom may be given to labor wisely and well, and that success may crown the efforts put forth in weakness to bring back the erring, and point the way to the tree of life.

With love to the household of faith, I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

GEO. MONTAGUE.

VIOLA, Iowa, Aug. 31st, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—I have taken a number of subscriptions here for the "Manuscript Found." They are much needed here where we have had a running fight for two years. I am desirous of acting as agent, please book me for fifty of them of the paper covers. When they are in print will send where to forward them to. Had an excellent time here the 28th to 31st.

Yours in Christ, R. Etzenhouser.

CLEVELAND, Lucas Co., Iowa, August 31st, 1885.

Brother Blair: - I have not written to the Herald for some years. The last time I wrote was from South Wales. I left many friends in the Welsh Mission, and also in the English Mission, who have not heard from me since I have been in "Joseph's chosen land." It was commonly said in the Old World that when Saints came to America they forgot their friends, and that their love for Zion grew cold. But for one I would like my brethren of the Old World to know that I believe more and more in the children of God gathering to this land, which, in my mind, is the best of all lands. True, the climate is hard here, but he that controls all things can control that for the good of his Saints. I may also state that the Bishop, with Bro. Kelley, was in our branch some few days ago. They spoke well on the law of tithing. After they got through they were cross questioned on the law, and I am pleased to say they gave good satisfaction to all the branch; and I believe that the Bishop will see fruits for his labor in Cleveland. My mind upon tithing is this-The same God that said, "Thou shalt not steal," &c., also said that "Thou shalt give one tenth of thine increase." And one command is as necessary to be obeyed as the other. I pray God to bless Bro. Joseph on his mission of love. I hope before long to pay a visit to you and Bro. Stebbins, and the Saints of Lamoni.

Yours in bonds of love,
ALMA N. BISHOP.

GLEN EASTON, W. Va., August 27th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—Our Grove meetings at Hunter, Ohio, were hindered somewhat by rains. Bro. James Craig and myself were the only preachers in attendance. Our meetings at this place commence tomorrow. Bro. Josiah Ells is with me, and is enjoying fair health. It is very cold here to-day.

Yours in gospel bonds, G. T. GRIFFITHS. St. John, Apache Co., Arizona, August 27th, 1885.

Dear Brother Blair: -- I received the notes on the Scriptures and also the Advocates and tracts, for which accept many thanks. I shall try and put them to a good use. There is a few here interested, and in time I think they will unite with the Church. The Mormons have closed their doors against me here, which will do good for our cause, I think, as the fair-minded people see that they are afraid an investigation of their claims will prove detrimental. There is a little settlement of Brighamites in New Mexico that wants me to come and show the difference between the two churches; but duties at home demand my attention, and I shall not go there. I think there could be a good work done here if it could be kept up.

I visited many old ruins of cities that are numerous here. Some of them have from two to four feet of a wall standing, and many of them are of cut stone. There is a tribe of Indians that have lived here in one place for over three hundred years, and they don't know anything of the parties that have once inhabited where these ruins are. They have an old church standing in their village, with two silver bells still hanging there; and there is quite a mound where their village stands, made from ruined buildings; and they still continue to build on them, till it has become a mound sixty feet high. There have been all sorts of stratagems used to get those bells, so I have been told, but the Indians will not part with them.

I would like to see this field worked, and am willing to do all that I can, and if some one could be sent here to labor in this Territory, good could be done. Yours,

D. L. HARRIS.

St. Mary, Ontario,

August 31st, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—I am stopping with Bro. Robert Brown. And as there has been a very remarkable case of healing, that of his grand daughter, I thought it would not be amiss to send you the notice of the case as published in the London, Ontario, Advertiser, taken from the Mitchell paper, near where the case happened. It is thought the physician himself made the report, as none of the Saints did. The report is very fair with the exception of not giving the name of the church, and the time of the child's sickness. The child had suffered five days with the stoppage of the bowels. Bro. Samuel Brown and R. C. Evans were the Elders that officiated.

"The Mitchell Recorder tells the following tale: A curious case has been reported to us from Hibbert. A little daughter of Mr. W. H. Grey was taken very ill last week, and medical aid was sent for. The medical attendant soon discovered that her ailment was a stoppage of the bowels, caused by displacement. He applied the usual remedies without effect, and finally called another physician to consult with him. The two decided that nothing could be done except to relieve the pain, unless an operation was performed. The parents of the patient not favorably disposed to such a course, the medical attendants left with very little hope for the life of the suffering one. Not so with the parents. They had faith and hope in a more than human skill, and they telegraphed on Saturday to London for some of the Elders of the sect to which they belong, and on the arrival of the Elders the latter placed their hands upon the patient and prayed over her. On Sunday morning early the bowels resumed their normal condition, moved freely, and the patient at once recovered."

Yours for truth,

JOHN H. LAKE.

OAHALLA, Burnett Co., Texas, August 31st, 1885.

Dear Herald:—The meeting we were holding near Heidenheinier, when I wrote last, resulted in the baptism of four, who have become members of the Elmwood Branch, making fifteen additions by baptism since our return.

July 28th.—We completed the organization of Elmwood Branch, by ordaining Bro. Charles A. Norwood a Teacher, and Bro. Samuel W. Simmons a Deacon. The brethren have gone to work zealously and faitfully, and will doubtless do much good. May God keep them humble and prayerful.

On August 12th, we left Elmwood for Coryell County, accompanied by Brn. C. A. Norwood, S. W. Simmons and J. O. Skinner, traveling with team and wagon. Arrived at Bro. Storm's, near Pidcock's Ranch the 14th inst., where we were heartily made welcome. Commenced meeting the next day, but as the neighborhood is a Methodist one, our audiences were small.

On Sunday night, the 16th, when we came to the place of worship we found written upon the blackboard the following: "Remember the Mountain Meadow Massacre in Utah, and now you are in Texas, so go slow." Probably the plous wretch who wrote that knew no better, so we will not call him names.

The 17th, the brethren from Bell started for home, leaving Bro. Roberts and I to hold the fort. We enjoyed their compamy, and felt somewhat lonely when they left us. The same day witnessed the baptism of sisters Mary and Susan, daughters of Bro. Storm, who will no doubt prove vessels of honor in the Master's house.

We held two meetings in the church at Pidcock's Ranch; but failing to get the consent of the trustees to use the house, we closed. Some of our friends were indignant at the way we were used, but could do nothing to prevent it. There are a few friends of right there who do not endorse the persecution of men for opinion's sake, among whom may be mentioned Messrs. Newbery, LeBaum, and the Bates Brothers.

The 22nd, Bro. Storm, accompanied by his daughter Susan, brought us to this place, where we found a welcome at the home of Mr. H. B. Alexander, who heard me at Pidcock's Ranch last year and became much interested. We began a meeting the same night, which is still in progress. Bro. Storm remained with us until Monday the 24th. We shall ever remember his kindness, and the pleasant hours we spent with himself and family. Brn. B. V. Springer and I. T. Kinnaman will remember Bro. Storm, as he was baptized at the same time Bro. Kinnaman was by Bro. Springer. Our meetings have been largely attended as a rule, more present than could get in the house. Good liberty has been graciously given us, and we have rejoiced.

On the 27th, one lady was baptized, Bro. Roberts officiating; and yesterday four more put on Christ through baptism; including our host and hostess.

The sects are becoming alarmed. Yesterday, just as we were assembled at the water, I saw a smooth-faced, clerical looking gentleman beckoning me; as I approached him he introduced himself as Mr. Black, and added: "Me and my friend wish to see you to arrange for a debate."

I thought this rather abrupt, as no challenge had ever been passed, and this was the first word spoken in regard to it; but I managed to ask, "When do you wish to see me?" "Right now," was the answer. "Well, we are busy right now" I replied, "but will see you after baptism." Accordingly we met, and found he was a Christadelphian, and wished to arrange a debate for one A. R. Miller of Lee county. After awhile we succeeded in arranging the following: 1st. The spirit of man is conscious between death and the resurrection." 2d, "The kingdom of God willnot exist until the Second Coming of Christ." I affirm the first and Miller the second. The debate will commence November 16th, continue for six sessions. I have never seen Mr. Miller, but he is said to be a very able debater.

Last night, after meeting, a Campbellite preacher approached us and asked, "Do you claim that the prophecy of Joel, referred to by Peter, was not fulfilled on the day of Pentecost?" "Yes, Sir." "That's all I want to know," and he was off. We called after him to say we were glad he was satisfied, when some one standing by suggested we would "find out how he is satisfied before he gets through with you." Well, we will need to wait until we learn more from the Elder, I suppose, before we know our fate.

Bro. Roberts will remain here to keep the work moving; while I leave to-morrow for Jack county to be present at a debate between Bro. Cato and a Campbellite oy the name of Thurman, and to labor awhile in that section of country.

Hopefully, HEMAN C. SMITH.

STEWARTSVILLE, Missouri, September 1st, 1885.

Bro. Blair: We have just closed one of the best conferences ever held in Far West District. Cases of an aggravating nature were sprung, and disposed of in a brotherly way, and with the Spirit of the Master prevailing in every sense. The rulings and decisions of our worthy district president met the approval of the body. In fact the Saints returned home renewed in spirit and mind, and all seemed determined to press on in the cause of Christ. We had some very good social meetings in which the gifts were manifest, and especially the great gift of wisdom. Preaching very good. And, as a mam, not a Saint as vet, told me that the Sabbath meetings caused him to feel that it was the happiest day of his life. He is now ready for baptism. And so the good work moves on.

We have just seen a load of traps pass our door for the depot, belonging to one F. W. Riedel, once a member of the kingdom; but he proved himself unworthy of an inheritance with the Saints, and returned to his "wallow" and became a bitter enemy of the Saints and a firm advocate of Clark Braden. The way of the transgressor is hard. The pit that he digged for his neighbor he fell into himself. In the heading of an article in his paper, the Investigator, about three months ago, he said: "The Mormons Must Go." Then followed a lengthy article on the qualifications of individuals who should be permitted to live in a Christian community; and now, this Christian community whom he appealed to to drive the Saints, has driven him away, and his poor family will have to follow this poor miscreant, no one knows where. He was not permitted to go, however, without getting a horse whip used upon him by a lady of this Christian community, (but not a member of our church). And thus do the external evidences of this latter day work multiply where it says, "They that fight against Zion shall be turned one against the other;" and any "weapon that is formed against thee shall not prosper," &c.

As for this section of country we can safely say that the cause has taken and is taking a grand stride in the advance, and its representatives are lifting on high the banner of Immanuel; and thus with the Spirit of Christ burning in their breasts, and with the Bible in their hands, they go forward.

Yours in the kingdom of God,

W. KELLEY.

San Bernardino, Cal., August 21st, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—Have just returned from San Jacinto in company with Bro. Richard Allen and family. There is a health resort at the hot springs. We found a good many people there, and I had a good opportunity for preaching. I held several meetings, with good liberty. Some were anxious for more preaching, but circumstances would not permit my remaining longer now. I baptized two old members. I hope to return there, as it is the wish of some of the people. I now preside over the San Bernardino Branch. Yours, Wм. Gibson.

Summary of News.

Aug. 28th.—The "Salvation Army" has been endured patiently in Chicago for some time, and the quality of its work has become pretty well understood. It is not likely, therefore, that much sympathy will be wasted on the motley group of "Captains," and "Lieutenants," and "Sergeants" who were arraigned before Justice Kersten vesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct, and who will go to the bridewell in default of payment of the fines imposed. The Salvation Army is a nuisance, but it is something worse. Ridiculous street parades, blatant discourses before gatherings of hoodlums, and an imitation of religious rites which must seem to many little less than blasphemy are performances which can not result in good, and which must bring, to the ignorant and unthinking, a contempt for the religion these street performers profess. That they have parodied religious ceremonies, too, is not the only charge to be brought against these people. So far in this city there have been no revelations of immorality among the women and men engaged in the fantastic crusade, but elsewhere there have been disclosures of vice so gross that the authorities have been compelled to interference in the interests of all decency. There is no reason to suppose that the same evils would not obtain here were the Salvationists allowed to continue in Chicago their singular performances and community of living. The right to serve God in one's own way does not involve the right to do so in violation of all instincts of propriety.

Cornaro is the only centenarian who has left the world a clear account of his habits. In the first place, he resolved to live to the age of one hundred years. He kept his mind free from trouble and passion. He avoided exposure, and undue labor and idleness. His daily diet was three rolls, the yolk of an egg with meat and soup, the whole weighing twelve ounces, and fourteen ounces of wine. This was his idea of a temperate regimen. He did not, however, advise every one to follow this diet. On the contrary, he recommended each man to find out for himself what quantity of food and drink suited him, and to live accordingly.

The St. John (Arizona) Herald of the 20th says that Bishop David K. Udall, High Priest of the Apache county stake, has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment at the Detroit House of Correction. He was found guilty of falsely swearing to the land entry of Miles P. Romney, late editor of the Orion Era. Romney is also under indictment for the same offense, but has skipped to Mexico, leaving his bondsmen in the lurch to the tune of several thousand dollars. The Herald adds: "In conversation with several of the leading Mormon citizens of this town we were surprised to learn that the conviction, for perjury, of Bishop Udall is generally considered by the best members of that organization as a godsend to the poor people of that church, and also to those who were unfortunate enough to own stock in the Co-op store which has been under his management.

Sept. 3d.—The Government is much perplexed over a new form of agrarian crime, which is becoming alarmingly prevalent in Ireland. At the last assizes in County Kerry, Judge Palles decided that persons whose cattle had been stolen were not entitled to compensation under the Malicious Injuries act, although those whose cattle had been houghed or hamstrung were entitled to such compensation. Under this decision the mutilation of cattle has become unpopular among the moonlighters, since by these acts they inflict no injury upon the owners of the cattle, and only cause suffering and death to the unoffending animals. Instead of mutilating the cattle of obnoxious landlords, bailiffs, etc., the moonlighters now steal the cattle outright and run them off to remote parts of the country and keep them snugly concealed until the hue and cry is over. The cattle-thieves are well organized, and the animals are kept moving, being passed along from one gang to another until they have been driven across two or three counties, and to a distance of hundreds of miles from the scene of the raid. Robberies of this kind are now of nightly occurrence in some parts of Ireland, and of all the cases which have occurred the police have not yet succeeded in tracing and reclaiming a single animal.

A telegram was received at Dublin Castle tonight from a divisional magistrate stating that there was a series of outrages last night in the low lands of Tulla, County Clare. The houses of a man named Grogan and another were surrounded at midnight by armed men, who fired into them and posted notices threatening the inmates with the death of a dog if they paid their rent. Similiar notices were posted on the doors of the houses of many other tenants in the same town.

The small-pox epidemic at Montreal still continues. Thirty-five new cases were reported there Wednesday.

Wednesday there were over 2,900 new cases of cholera reported in Spain and 1,000 deaths. The plague still keeps its grip on Southern France and has gained a foothold in Algiers.

Advices from Rock Springs, Wyoming, show that the raid on the Chinese was more determined and sweeping than Wednesday's reports indicated. Over 500 Celestials were driven from the town and 100 houses burned. The bodies of fifteen Chinamen have been discovered already, and it is thought that as many more perished in the flames.

The precautionary measures taken for the Czar of Russia's safety at Kremsier are nothing compared to those deemed necessary for his Majesty's security at home. This took place the night of the 25th, and it was only four days later that the majority was released. The rest were detained in consequence of the alleged discovery of a plot against the Czar's life. This is the third conspiracy against the King reported from Russia within the last few months.

Selected Poetry.

IF I SHOULD DIE TO-NIGHT.

If I should die to-night,
My friends would look upon my quiet face
Before they laid it in its resting place,
And deem that death had left it almost fair;
And, laying snow-white flowers against my hair
Would smooth it down with tearful tenderness,
And fold my hands with lingering caress.

Poor hands, so empty and so cold to-night!

If I should die to-night,
My friends would call to mind, with loving thought,
Some kindly deed the icy hand had wrought;
Some gentle word the frozen lips had said;
Errands on which the willing feet had sped—
The memory of my selfishness and pride,
My hasty words, would all be put aside,

And so I should be loved and mourned to-night.

If I should die to-night,
Even hearts estranged would turn once more to me,
Recalling other days remorsefully.
The eyes that chill me with averted glance
Would look upon me as of yore, perchance,
And soften in the old familiar way,
For who could war with dumb, nnconscious clay?
So I might rest, forgiven of all, to-night.

Oh! friends, I pray to-night,
Keep not your kisses for my dead, cold brow.
The way is lonely; let me feel them now.
Think gently of me; I am travel worn.
My faltering feet are pierced with many a thorn.
Forgive, Oh! hearts estranged, forgive, I plead!
When dreamless rest is mine I shall not need
The tenderness for which I long to-night.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 14.

BY S. F. W.

LOCKWOOD, of the Greeley expedition, planted the United States flag at 83 degrees and 24 minutes, north. Cape Robert Lincoln, the supposed northern limit of Greenland was sighted in 83 degrees, 35 minutes. No land was seen north of that, only the rough frozen ocean extended out from thirty to sixty miles to the horizon. Animal life was abundant at the highest point reached. Traces of hares, lemmings, ptarmigan, snow buntings, bears and musk oxen, were seen twenty miles above Cape Brittain, the highest point reached by Beaumont of Nares' expedition. A hundred musk oxen were seen by Lockwood's party, between the camp at Lady Franklin's bay and the highest point. During the two seasons passed at Lady Franklin's bay, Greeley's men killed seven wolves, seven foxes, eight ermins, eight lemmings, one hundred and three musk oxen, nineteen seals, fifty-seven hares, one hundred and twenty-eights ducks, sixty dovekins, seven gulls, twenty-one terns, one hundred and seventy-eight sknas, eighty-four geese, seventy-eight ptarmigans, one hundred turnstones, twenty-seven knots, eighteen owls, one walrus, two phelaropes, two plovers, one sandling. The musk oxen do not migrate; they feed through the winter on saxifrage, and on the short grass which they uncover with their feet. In the interior of Grinnel Land Greeley saw open rivers and partly open lakes. This region was called an arctic paradise. Here also was seen the winter quarters of Esquimaux, who had had dogs, and iron. Two years were passed at Lady Franklin's Bay without a death, or much suffering. It was two hundred and fifty miles farther south where so many perished.

"The fact that two of Greeley's sledge parties were stopped by open water in the polar basin, and that both were at times adrift in strong currents which threatened to carry them helplessly away northward, would seem to show that the polar basin is not the solid sea of ancient, immovable ice which Nares described, and which he declared was never navigable."

Greeley says that when the tide was flowing from the north poles it was found by his observations "that the water was warmer than when flowing in the opposite direction." It is evident that there is a funnel-shaped polar basin (the conception is my own) into which the summer sun throws its perpendicular rays, making it warm and habitable; but it is limited, and not more than seven hundred miles in diameter. Any southern race going in there would have to first adopt Esquimaux habits, which would require much time, and involve the loss of their civilization and identity.

ABRAHAMIDÆ IN AMERICA.

The Biblical argument in favor of the theory that the American Indians are Israelites is well known; it is extensive and conclusive; it need not be reproduced.

Ancient Jewish history is different from other history in containing prophetic and miraculous elements. These are correlated, each proving the other true. prophecies reaching down through all time, can be proved true, and the miracles, as being less wonderful, are therefore believable, i.e., should not be rejected because wonderful, when the associated prophecies, more wonderful than they, are susceptible of proof. This miraculous history being a fulfillment of the associate prophecies is proof that both are from the same source, and the wisdom that dictated the prophecies controls the powers and forces that fulfilled them. The power that fulfills prophecies is the power that controls the forces of universal nature. The intelligence that attends the universal force is the universal intelligence, the infinite wisdom, called in scripture Jehovah, by us God. The Infinite, represented by angels, by voices and by the Son and the Holy Ghost, aided the prophets and miracle-workers of old, and thus the vast scheme of generation and redemption was inaugurated on the earth, and thus carried on, and is thus to be con-

Now the question is raised, or is to be considered: Has that mighty scheme fallen midway in its course? Has the mighty stream "that flows fast by the oracles of God," sunk from sight to rise no more?

Did God promise and forget? Covenant and fail to perform? Inaugurate and then discontinue? Assume responsibilities and desert them? Start to build without counting the cost? Put his hand to the plow and then looked back? Has he transgressed his own laws, changed his own ordinances, and himself broken the everlasting covenant? The Jews, wailing through millenniums of suffering, blind "in part," yet know better than to doubt the promised deliverance. Christians know all that they do, and all that is contained in their own books besides, and have that much more reason to believe. Way back in the beginning Joseph could say, "God will surely visit you." After having witnessed in history the grand unfolding of the drama through nearly four thousand years since then, shall we doubt that it will be carried to the end predicted by Jacob "in the last days?"

Considering a single one of the promises made to Abraham—that concerning the great number of his posterity—has it been fulfilled? Will the five millions of scattered Jews, the only recognized posterity of Abraham, answer to the phrase "as the sands of the sea." The promise of Shiloh was fulfilled in a measure that is the astonishment of all. Why should not that concerning the "multitude of nations" be as completely and triumphantly fulfilled? The original promise to Abraham included these two items: In thee shall all nations be blessed; and, Thy seed become as the stars and sands. These two prominent features were emphasized in the promise of "Shiloh" to Judah, and "a fruitful bough" to Joseph. This last point is the only one related to the inquiry under present treatment. There should be in the earth somewhere now, and should have been at all times past since a remote period, multitudes of men whose ancestry reached back to the "father of many nations." We can not look to Judah for a fulfillment of both elements of the original promise? Yet that is what we must do if the Jews are the only Israelites on the earth. What then shall we do? Do as we have been doing in these pages, search throughout the earth for Israelites. We have found some in Europe, some in Asia, and some in Africa, not generally known to the world. Why not look in America? Here we find millions of unclaimed children of some common ancestor. How natural then and proper that we institute a search here; and as American history reaches back through unknown ages, how likely the success of our search! These reasons have been recognized from the time of the first discovery of the American continent and of the multitudinous tribes on it.

Geologists teach that every district of country on the globe has a special fauna adapted to the physical conditions of that locality. Agazzi elaborated the theory at greater length than others, and published a map, in Types of Mankind, dividing the earth into many districts, separated by mountain chains, seas, degrees of altitude, parallels of latitude, degrees of barrenness, humidity, &c. In these districts the animals were not only named, but pictured, and with them the separate creations of mankind adapted to each particular habitat. He found something in the conditions of the high table lands of Mongolia and Tartary to correspond to the yellow races inhabiting them. The low plains and islands of the Torrid Zone would account for the brown races, without argument. The mountains of Caucasus sent out the white race by a law that nobody questioned. Coming to America he found a land of many zones, and very diverse altitudes, and he made many separate districts, filled with animals seen nowhere else; but strange to say, had only one kind of men (Esquimaux excepted) for all these differently conditioned districts!

The Antiquarian, No. 1, vol. 11, takes up the subject of the "correspondence between the status and social condition of the American tribes, and their physical surroundings," and finds the country "too continuous for the geographical features to impress themselves upon the race." From Alaska to Cape Horn is continuous, indeed! I only wish to present the fact that the American races violate the rules of science in persisting in being, simply, Indians, wherever found, and are therefore proper subjects for speculating about.

The Guane, of Colombia are "noted for their fine forms and their very light color, notwithstanding their territory was in the hot country."—Barney.

There is a non-Semitic school of archæologists, and that school includes nearly or quite all who have a respectable standing in the fraternity represented by the Journals; and obloquy is cast upon those who hint at the theory that there were ever Hebrews on this continent. Mr. H. H. Bancroft however is milder mannered, and admits that there are vastly more facts brought forward by the advocates of this theory than by the advocates of any other. Brasseur Bourbourg, the greatest of the Americanistes, and many other noted authors have given a more or less full endorsement of the theory; but the object of these papers is to test the theory by an array of facts, independently of men's opinions. The principal authorities deride all theorizing, but the greatest discoveries in every department of investigation and exploration have been made by comparing and testing theories. This is the method in courts of law. The contending parties each have a theory, and when the evidence is before the jury, the attorneys canvass the evidence, so that the jury may determine to which theory it gives most support. This may be done honestly or dis-Science demands absolute honestly. honesty at her bar. There are kinds of proof that science as now formulated does not admit at her bar, and therefore there may be true theories not demonstra-

We have abundant apriori reasons for supposing that Israelites reached this continent, also that they were of the tribe of Joseph. The first things next in order, are consideration of their probable way of getting here.

We have seen that the Ben Israel of India, reached that land by sea. They were sailing and were wrecked. Where they were sailing to does not appear. They may have been on their way to America. Or if they had not been wrecked on the coast of Malabar they might have been wrecked on the coast of America. When persons go to sea they do not know which side of it they will land on.

Again, the Israelites had prophets with them up to the time of their dispersion; possibly they had after that and could be led intelligently to the "isles of the sea," and to the "utmost bounds of the everlasting hills." Even the heathens had prophets and inspired leaders. Socrates heard and obeyed voices. Medieval times produced the heroine of all ages, and her guidance was voices and visions.* And, then, if God had a purpose, declared or undeclared, what are seas to Him?

One more preliminary: What should be the color of persons who would meet the conditions already arrived at by reason? They must be Abraham's posterity, and Joseph's posterity, and yet the only men found in America were dark. meet this last named condition we must remember that the Hebrews were dark complection originally, and that Joseph married an Egyptian. His two sons doubtless married Egyptians, for there were none else for them to marry. may suppose then these grand children being more Egyptian than Israelitish would continue to mate with the aristocratic maidens of the Nile, for another generation. This would make the original Josephites as dark as many tribes of Indians are; but in the lands of Canaan and Goshen they doubtless shared the common lot, and lost some of their Egyptian characteristics. (though they never lost their Egyptian predilections, as seen in the fact of their having reverted to the Egytian worship in the days before the dispersion). Their lack of color I will take the liberty of supplying, and make up a colony partly of those tribes of Joseph and partly of Bedouin children of Abraham, who are blacker than need be. We will next suppose our colony sailing by the coasts of India, eastward bound, as those were of whom we have given the history. It is next necessary, too, to have them wrecked at sea and carried by trade winds and equatorial currents to America, or else have them led by a seer. This latter alternative is preferable from considerations already given, though many have been wafted to these shores from Japan in recent times; and ethnology and philology require that the process should have been going on in all ages.

We have next to suppose they landed on the western shore of South America, for so the conditions demand. The traditions say that the first colonists came from the west in ships. Bourbourg places Tula on the other side of the sea and asserts "that it was the region from which the wanderers came from time to time to the north-west coasts of America, and thence southwards to Anahuac and Central America." To agree with this finding I will suppose, for the present, that Tula was Jerusalem, and that more than one colony came from there. Tula was Jerusalem because some of the traditions speak of a place beyond the sea (as we will find) where a great temple was. Zamna came from the west. The Chilians say their ancestors came from the west. *

The name Colhua was in former papers applied to the first colony because it was the oldest name found in the books. There is no certainty of its being the correct one, and might be applied to the Hebrews. The next oldest, and with some authors the oldest, title is Olmecs. This latter designation is used of the oldest Mexican nation. For the nations of South America there is no ancient name.

We will find that both by the traditions and the ruins, all the nations to be treated of, Olmecs, Toltecs, Aztecs, can be traced from Guatemala. We will find also that that civilization originated in Peru.

Myths of the flood, dispersion, &c., are common to all the Noachian races, so should be common to the different races on this continent, and can not be made to distinguish the first colonists from the second. Those that have been given are a few out of many and need not be repeated.

The Peruvians were acquainted with the deluge, and believed that the rainbow was the sign that the earth would not again be destroyed by water. "This is plain," says Kingsborough, "by the speech which Manco Capac, the reputed founder of the Peruvian empire, addressed to his companions on beholding the rainbow rising from a hill. . . . This is a propitious sign that the earth will not be again destroyed by water."

"Peruvian legends speak of a race of giants who came by sea, waged war with the natives, and erected splendid edifices, the ruins of many of which still remain. Besides these, there are numerous vague traditions of settlements or nations of white men, who lived apart from other people of the country and were possessed of an advanced civilization."

Midway between Lima and Cuzco, Peru, and near Huamanga or Ayacucho, are ancient ruins, described by Ceca de Leon, remarkable for size; and the tradition of the natives is that they are the remains of a city "built by bearded white men, who came there long before the Incas, and established a settlement." The traditions of Peru are more reliable than those of any other part of America. There has never been there such dashings back and forth of the waves of diverse civilizations, as in more northern lands. In respect to this very plausible tradition we may suppose those colonists were Hebrews and the date between 500 and 600 B. C. This date is too recent to accomodate some of the conditions of the problem. I choose it with reference to the Israelitish dispersion.

THE SABBATH.

I have been a constant reader of the Herald for nearly two years, and I have received much instruction from the articles contained therein. I have been reading with a great degree of interest the arguments presented by Elder Bays in regard to the Sabbath; and although I agree with him in regard to the keeping of the first day of the week, yet I fail to see that he has proven that there was no command to observe the Sabbath until such time as the children of Israel arrived at the wilderness of sin. I admit that the article is "able," but I think it is open to criticisim, and feeling that nothing should be accepted as proven unless the evidence is conclusive, I desire to submit a friendly criticism on said article.

Bro. Bays argues that the word Sabbath signifies rest. This is of course accepted; but when he says—"The Israelites labored in the land of Egypt, and toiled in the wilderness on the way to the promised land, and were in a pre-eminent sense in need of Sabbaton—a rest," and that "this rest was instituted for their especial benefit," I fail to agree with him. When we consider that they had just been liberated from a condition of absolute slavery, and had been enjoying their liberty but one month, (for as the brother stated they left Egypt on the morning of the fifteenth day of the first month, and arrived at the wilderness of Sin on the fifteenth of the second month), they could not be said to be in "a pre-eminent sense in need of a rest," for the change from laborious labor to journeying, without any cause for haste, would prevent us from accepting such a theory.

Allow me to note what seems to me to be an error in regard to time. After giving a description of their travels from Egypt to the wilderness of Sin, the brother says: "It is a remarkable fact that the Israelites went into this encampment of the fifteenth day of the second month, just two months to a day from the day of their departure from Egypt." As they left Egypt on the fifteenth of the first month, and arrived at the wilderness of Sin on the fifteenth of the second month, it was but one month after their departure, and not two as stated by the brother when they arrived at the "encampment." Nor can we accept the reckoning in regard to the time of the giving of the command. He quotes—"In the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day (fifteenth), came they into the wilderness of Sinai."

We do not think "the same day" has any reference to the fifteenth, unless the brother can prove that it does, his argument must fail. It will be found by reading the eighteenth chapter of Exodus, that Moses' father-in-law, Jethro, had been visiting with Moses; and by reading the last verse of the 18th chapter and the first verse of the 19th chapter of Exodus in connection, we have the key to the words—"the same day," upon which Bro. Bays bases his argument.

"And Moses let his father-in-law depart; and he went his way into his own land. In the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day came they into the wilderness of Sinai."—Ex. 18: 27 Ex. 10: 1.

It is strange the brother should connect

"the same day,, with "third month," or that he should say "same day" means the fifteenth; as there is certainly no ground for such argument. "In the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt;" or, in other words, counting from the time they went forth out of the land of Egypt, is simply a parenthetical clause, and has nothing to do with the fact stated, except that the day in which Jethro left the camp of Israel, and also that Israel came into the wilderness of Sinai, was in the third month. No intimation is made as to what day of the month; but the simple fact is stated that it was "in the third month." It must therefore be apparent that the conclusion arrived at by the brother that "the Israelites had not previously kept a Sabbath is found in the fact that they started from Egypt on the fifteenth day of the month, which in the regular order, dating back from the day when the Sabbath was commanded from Sinai, would have beeen the Sabbath," is null and void; for unless he can establish the fact that they arrived at the wilderness of Sinai on the fifteenth of the third month, he has made no argument. Nor can I see any force to the brothers argument, that "they encamped in the wilderness of Sin on the fifteenth day of the month, which recurring in its regular order from the day they left Egypt, would have been the Sabbath."

It is a self-evident fact that, if it would have been the Sabbath day when they left Egypt, counting back from the date upon which the brother claims the Sabbath was instituted, then it could not have been the Sabbath on the fifteenth of the second month from their departure, nor could the first Sabbath have been kept on the twenty-second; for taking his count for it, it was just "two months to a day from the day of their departure from Egypt" to their arrival at the wilderness of Sin. Counting thirty days to a month, there were sixty days from the time they left Egypt to their arrival at the wilderness of Sin; and this it will be seen at a glance will not support the brothers argument; for if they left Egypt on the Sabbath, they would have arrived at the wilderness of Sin on the fourth day of the week. If we take what we consider the proper time, (one month), that would make them arrive at the wilderness of Sin on the second day of the week. If the brother disputes this count, he destroys his count back from Sinai. And even then, to make his figures correct, he has to accept the correction as to the time they were traveling from Egypt to the wilderness of Sin; for if they were two months in traveling to the wilderness of Sin, and their arrival at the wilderness of Sinai on the fifteenth of the next month and waited there until the third day before the covenant was given, it would be ninety-three days, counting from their departure from Egypt. This, it will be seen, would bring the time of the giving of the covenant, to the second day of the week. claim the brother has failed to sustain his argument as to its being the seventh day of the week when they started from Egypt, counting back from the giving of the command either at Sinai or in the wilderness of Sin, even if we should admit that the twenty-second was the day upon which the Israelites were commanded not to gather manna in the wilderness.

The anology which the brother seeks to establish between the passover and the Sabbath is not a strong one. The first they are commanded to observe as a feast, to commemorate their liberation from Egyptian bondage; the second is the Sabbath of the Lord, and is to be observed for a perpetual covenant, and as a sign between the Lord and the children of Israel forever; "for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested and was refreshed." The Lord does not say, "this is my passover." The strongest language used is, "Ye shall keep it a feast unto the Lord throughout your generations." But of the Sabbath he says, "The Seventh-day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the Seventhday; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it."-Ex. 20: 10,

Elder Bays tries to prove that the command was binding upon the children of Israel only by quoting,—"It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever." I think it would have been better if the brother had given the reason of its being a sign-"for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested and was refreshed." There appears nothing strange to us in the statement that it was a sign between the Lord and the children of Israel, from the fact that they were God's covenant people; but it appears very strange that God should have given them a Sabbath, commanding them to keep it as a sign and a covenant, and giving as a reason there-for—"that in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day"—if this was the first time a Sabbath had been instituted. We fail to see any analogy between the children of Israel leaving Egyptian bondage, and the Lord making "heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and resting the seventh day and hallowing it."

If we were to accept this view, we should have to think that through the dispensations preceding the Mosaic the Lord had not seen proper to place this as a sign between himself and his people. But as the law was "added because of transgression," if the commandments are the law, as argued by the brother, then there must of necessity have been laws given prior to their being issued at Sinai; and because of the laws previously given, being transgressed the commandments given at Sinai were added. If this be true, and we do not doubt it, then the Sabbath should have been kept prior to this but had been transgressed, and as there can be no transgression without law, it is evident that a command must have been given prior to this time.

It argues nothing to say there is no proof of it in Scripture; for we have no written account of laws governing God's people prior to the time of Moses, and yet it is evident to the Bible student that they had laws; and it is probable that they were not unlike, in general principle, to those given after. For instance, we read in Genesis 38th chapter, that Er, the son of Judah, died and left his wife childless. whereupon Judah gave her to his second son, Onan, to wife; but Onan displeased the Lord and he slew him, after which Judah promised to give his third son, Shelah, to her for a husband, but failing to do this, Tamar committed an offense which, when it was told to Judah, he said—"Bring her forth, and let her be burnt." Here is the same law of marriage as was taught by Moses, and yet the circumstance happened before the children of Jacob went down to the land of Egypt. It also shows that Judah had authority in the case and had the right to administer justice; for although the charge had been preferred before him, and he had said "let her be burnt," yet when she put in her plea and demanded righteous judgment, Judah said—"She hath been more righteous than I"—and her life was spared. From reading the account of the command as given in the wilderness of Sin, I am likewise led to believe that a former command had been given, but not kept.

Notice the first words uttered in regard to it—"This is that which the Lord hath said, Tomorrow is the rest of the holy Sabbath unto the Lord." The Sabbath is not here instituted; they are simply commanded to keep it; nothing said about their needing a rest; but it is "the rest of the holy Sabbath unto the Lord," they failed to obey the command, the Lord reasons with them by Moses, saying, "How long refuse ye to keep my com-mandments and my laws." "See, for that the Lord hath given you the Sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days." The Lord hereby places before them the inexcusableness of their conduct in breaking one of his laws, when he has made the necessary provision for the same being kept. Elder Bays says—"Although they had observed a Sabbath in the wilderness of Sin, the Sabbath law was not binding till it was propounded from Horeb." How strange the Lord should ask the question-"How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and laws?" before the law was binding.

I fail to see anything consistent in God's people living in the dispensations prior to the Mosaic not being required to observe a Sabbath, and those living in the Mosaic dispensation, and those coming after, being required to observe one. Nor is it any argument to say we read of none; for as Elder Bays remarks, there is no command on record for the keeping of the Sabbath in the Christian dispensation; nor was there any command given in this dispensation prior to August, 1831, nevertheless the endorsement of the custom of keeping the Sabbath is very emphatic in the revelation as given at that time—"And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself un-spotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer, and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High: nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord. And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words, that thy joy may be full."—D. C. sec. 59: 2, 3. Bro. Bays says—"It is clear that no command was ever given to observe the Sabbath till the days of Moses, some 1491 years before Christ. It is equally clear that no command to observe the Sabbath, by either Christ or his apostles, is to be found as a matter of record in the New Testament."

It is true we have no command on record as touching the Sabbath prior to the time of Moses, nor have we any command as touching a Sabbath in the teachings of Christ or his apostles; but the first case is different from the last. For as "the law was added because of transgression," it proves that a law had previously been given. But the fact of keeping a Sabbath by the early church is admitted by the brother in his argument, and the fact of the day as kept by custom being endorsed by the revelation as quoted from D. C. substantiates the argument that, a Sabbath has been kept during the two dispensations prior to this, and the statement that "the law was added because of transgression and the fourth commandment being a part of that law, and the further fact of the statement that "It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever; for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested and was refreshed" (Ex. 31:17) proves to us that it must have been a law to God's people in every dispensation.

I agree with brother Bays that it is "the Sabbath, and not the day that is sanctified." This is settled beyond controversy by the revelation before quoted; for if the Lord's "holy day" had not been kept on the proper day of the week, it would most assuredly have been put right at that time.

SABBATH SCENE IN NAUVOO.

MARCH 20th, 1884.

A LARGE assembly of Saints gathered together at the place of meeting at an early hour, to hear a discourse delivered by President Joseph Smith upon the subject of baptism. A child of Mr. Windsor P. Lyons being deceased, the body of which lay before the assembly, called forth many remarks from the speaker upon the subject of death and the resurrection which were in the highest degree interesting and edi-fying, as were also his remarks upon the subject of baptism.

The following is a brief synopsis of some of the items delivered by the speaker. President Smith read the 14th chapter of Revelations and said:

"We have again the warning voice sounded in our midst which shows the uncertainty of human life; and in my leisure moments I have meditated upon the subject, and asked the question, Why it is that infants, innocent children are taken away from us? especially those that seem to be the most intelligent and interesting? and the strongest reasons that present themselves to my mind are these:—This world is a very wicked world; and it is a proverb that the 'world grows weaker and wiser.' If it is the case, the world grows more wicked and corrupt. In the early ages of the world, a righteous man, and a man of God, and of intelligence, had a better chance to do good, to be believed and received, than at the present day; but in these days such a man is much opposed and persecuted by most of the inhabitants of the earth, and he has much sorrow to pass through here. The Lord takes many a way even in infancy that they may escape the envy of man and the sorrows and evils of this present world. They were too pure, too lovely, to live on earth; therefore if rightly considered, instead of mourning, we have reason to rejoice, as they are delivered from evil, and we shall soon have them again.

"What chance is there for infidelity when we are parting with our friends almost daily? None at all. The infidel will grasp at every straw for help until death stares him in the face, and then his infidelity takes its flight, for the realities of the eternal world are resting upon him in mighty power; and when every earthly support and prop fails him, he then sensibly feels the eternal truths of the immortality of the soul. We should take warning and not wait for the death bed to repent. As we see in the infant taken away by death, so may the youth and middle aged, as well as the infant suddenly be called into eternity. Let this then prove as a warning to all, not to procrastinate repentance, or wait till a death bed; for it is the will of God that man should repent, and serve Him in health, and in the strength and power of his mind, in order to secure his blessing; and not wait until he is called to die. Also the doctrine of baptizing children, or sprinkling them, or they must welter in hell is a doctrine not true, not supported in Holy writ, and is not consistent with the character of God. All children are redeemed by the blood of Jesus Christ, and the moment that children leave this world they are taken to the bosom of Abraham. The only difference between the old and young dying, is one lives longer in heaven and eternal light and glory than the other, and is freed a little sooner from this miserable wicked world. Notwithstanding all this glory, we for a moment lose sight of it, and mourn the loss; but we do not mourn as those without hope.

"My intention was to have spoken upon the subject of baptism, but having a case of death before us I thought proper to refer to that subject. I will now however say a few words upon baptism as I intended. God has made certain decrees which are fixed and immovable, for instance: God set the sun, the moon, and the stars in the heavens; and gave them their laws, conditions, and bounds which they cannot pass, except by his commandments. They all move in perfect harmony in their sphere, and order, and are as lights, wonders, and signs unto us. The sea also has its bounds which it can not pass. God has set many signs on the earth, as well as in the heavens; for instance, the oak of the forest, the fruit of the tree, the herb of the field; all bear a sign that seed had been planted there; for it is a decree of the Lord that every tree, plant, and herb, bearing seed, should bring forth of its kind, and can not come forth after any other law, or principle. Upon the same principle do I contend that baptism is a sign ordained of God, for the believer in Christ to take upon himself in order to enter into the kingdom of God; 'for except ye are born of water, and of the spirit ye can not enter into the kingdom of God,' saith the Saviour. It is a sign, and commandment which God has set for man to enter into his kingdom. Those who seek to enter in any other way will seek in vain; and God will not receive them, neither will the angels acknowledge their works as accepted; for they have not obeyed the ordinances, nor attended to the signs which God ordained for the salvation of man, to prepare him for, and give him a title to a celestial glory. And God has decreed that all who will not obey his voice shall not escape the damnation of hell. What is the damnation of hell? To go with that society who have not obeyed his com-Baptism is a sign to God, to mands. angles, and to heaven that we do the will of God; and there is no other way beneath the heavens whereby God hath ordained for man to come to him to be saved, and enter into the kingdom of God, except faith in Jesus Christ, repentance, and baptism for the remission of sins; then you have the promise of the gift of the Holy Ghost; and any other course is in vain. What is the sign of the healing of the sick? The laying on of hands is the sign, or way marked out by James, and the custom of the ancient Saints as ordered by the Lord; and we can not obtain the blessing by pursuing any other course except the way marked out by the Lord.

What if we should attempt to get the gift of the Holy Ghost through any other means except the signs, or way which God hath appointed? should we obtain it? certainly not; all other means would fail. The Lord says do so, and so, and I will bless so, and so.

There are certain key-words, and signs belonging to the priesthood which must be observed in order to obtain the blessing. The sign of Peter was to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, with the promise of the gift of the Holy Ghost; and in no other way is the gift of the Holy Ghost obtained. There is a difference between the Holy Ghost, and the gift of the Holy Ghost. Cornelius received the Holy Ghost before he was baptized, which was the convincing power of God unto him of the truth of the gospel; but he could not receive the gift of the Holy Ghost until after he was baptized. Had he not taken this sign or ordinance upon him, the Holy Ghost which convinced him of the truth of God, would have left him. Until he obeyed these ordinances and received the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of hands, according to the order of God, he could not have healed the sick, or commanded an evil spirit to come out of a man, and it obey him; for the spirits might say unto him, as they did to the sons of Seeva:-'Paul we know, and Jesus we know, but who are ye!' It mattereth not whether we live long or short on the earth after we come to a knowledge of these principles and obey them unto the end. I know that all men will be damned if they do not come in the way which he hath opened; and this is the way marked out by the word of the Lord.

"As concerning the resurrection I will merely say that all men will come from the grave as they lie down, whether old or young, there will not be 'added unto their stature one cubit;' neither taken from it; all will be raised by the power of God, having spirit in their bodies, and not blood. Children will be enthroned in the presence of God, and the Lamb, with bodies of the same stature that they had no earth, having been redeemed by the blood of the Lamb, they will there enjoy the fulness of that light, glory, and intelligence which is prepared in the Celestial kingdom; 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them.'

The speaker before closing called upon the assembly before him, to humble themselves in faith before God, and in mighty prayer and fasting to call upon the name of the Lord, until the elements were purified over our heads, and the earth sanctified under our feet; that the inhabitants of this city may escape the power of disease and pestilence, and the destroyer that rideth upon the face of the earth; and that the Holy Spirit of God may rest upon this vast multitude. At the close of the meeting President Smith informed the congregation that he should attend to the ordinance of baptism in the river near his house, at two o'clock; and at the appointed hour the bank of the Mississippi was lined with a multitude of people, and President Joseph Smith went forth into the river and baptized with his own hands eighty persons, for the remission of their sins; and what added joy to the scene was, that the first person baptized was Mr. L. D. Wasson, a nephew of Mrs. Emma Smith, the first of her kindred that have embraced the fulness of the gospel. At the close of this interesting scene the administrator lifted up his hands towards heaven, and implored the blessing of God to rest upon the people; and truly the Spirit of God did rest upon the multitude, to the joy and consolation of our hearts. After baptism the congregation again repaired to the grove, near the Temple, to attend to the ordinance of confirmation; and, notwithstanding President Smith had spoken in the open air to the people, and stood in the water and baptized about eighty persons, about fifty of those baptized received their confirmation under his hands in the after part of the day. While this was progressing great numbers were being baptized in the font.

Those who wish for further information concerning the scenes of the Sabbath in Nauvoo, or any other day in the week would do well to "come and see."

BE IN EARNEST.

THERE is something about a person who does everything as though he was thoroughly in earnest that commands attention and respect. Success never comes from any half earnest attempt, because there is too much competition in this world to permit of such "lagardism," either in business, social intercourse or friendship. Probably one of the most repugnant tasks which a man may sometimes be obliged to perform, is that of borrowing money; but the one who seeks a capitalist in an earnest, confidential manner, showing by his actions that he is sanguine of meeting obligations when due, is far more likely to get the accommodation than the one who walks and talks timidly in such business operations.

Earnestness and confidence in one's own abilities and skill to perform certain acts, form a kind of personal capital which goes a long way in this world towards making a man's life a success. It does not matter what a man is doing, if he puts no enthusiasm or earnestness into his work, it will drag and the wheel will move slowly and creek with friction. Now, as we hold that this earnestness of character is but a habit which may be cultivated or suppressed, either in individuals, families or nations; becoming hereditary under certain conditions and extinct under others, it is therefore in this view, not a matter of theory or speculation but something which should command our earnest attention.

Parents in particular should carefully avoid suppressing a show of earnestness in their children, for there is little danger from an exhibition of too much, though there may be a need of proper direction. The child who has been encouraged to do everything in an earnest manner, will generally retain the habit through life, and the only thing to be considered is the proper directness of this earnestness, for it must be admitted that the same faculties may be turned either to do good or evil, and the more they are cultivated and strengthened the more pronounced the results. Still, we must adhere to our first proposition of being in earnest in the performance of every act, whether it be as children playing ball, going a fishing, or engaging in any other similar amusement. Then, in later years the habit having become fixed, we will find men and women entering upon the sterner duties of life all in earnest, and obstacles which might appear formidable to persons lacking this habit, will be brushed aside without a moment's hesitation or notice.

We like to see men follow a plow as though he enjoyed seeing the fresh soil turned over and their faces lighted up with a peculiar expression which says, "I am thinking of the crops which will be reaped here next fall, or next year." Such men will walk briskly to their labors and home lightly when they are finished, and many an acquaintance will marvel at the elasticity of the step when age is supposed to stiffen joints and enfeeble the frame, not having learned the great lubricating and strengthening powers of earnestness of character and habit.—Rural New Yorker.

THE JOSEPHITES AND BRIGHAMITES. THE lowering of the flag on the natal day by the polygamous hosts of Utah has called forth a vigorous rebuke from all parts of the Union. But while such criticisms are proper, the great majority of the newspapers, either from ignorance or design, class together all elements and branches of the church descendent from the original faith. There are many thousand adherents to the original faith, as taught by Joseph Smith, (and which declares against polygamy in the most vigorous terms), all of whom are patriotic, law abiding citizens. The Book of Mormon says that "no man shall have save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none." The bitterest enemies to Mormonism must concede the high moral tone of the book. It is as unjust to classify the Josephites, or Latter Day Saints, with the followers of the infamous Brigham Young, as it would be to associate any other Christian body with that great nest of Utah filth. The most practical, and therefore the most successful fighters against polygamy have been the Latter Day Saints. They have "carried the war into Africa;" they have bearded the lion in his den, and instead of being abused by the press they deserve its compliments for their vigorous campaign against the great evil of polygamy. anti-polygamous Mormons are all united and embrace nearly 20,000 converts ready to ably second the efforts of law to suppress polygamy and reclaim those who have wandered from the doctrines of the prophet. The vigorous measures taken since the inauguration of Cleveland bid fair to exterminate Utah polygamy, those rooted in the faith making ready to seek a more congenial Holy Land in Mexico.— Crawford County (Iowa) Bulletin, July 28th, 1885.

MASSACRE OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW. At the meeting at New Rochelle, lately, of the Huguenot Society of America, Mr. Jay, on taking the chair, referred to the important official correspondence of the Roman Court recently brought to light and said:

"Our thanks for the disclosure of these conclusive letters are due to that accomplished historical writer, Lord Acton, who, as you know, is an eminent layman of the Roman Catholic Church, and one who tells the simple truth without fear or favor.

And this trait of the true historian reminds us that among the societies which have sprung into being here and abroad since the Huguenot Society was organized is the United States Catholic Historical Society, presided over by an eloquent advocate and learned jurist of French descent (Mr. Coudert), aided by able associates, who will find in the early French missions and the gallant services of the French army and navy, who came to our assistance during the historic War of the Revolution, an ample field for research, rich in material interesting alike to Roman Catholics and Americans.

"Lord Acton, in a letter to Mr. Gladstone, after referring to Pius V., had said: "'His next successor (Gregory XIII.] on learning that the Protestants were being massacred in France, pronounced the action glorious and holy, but comparatively barren of results, and implored the King during two months, by his Nuncio and his Legate, to carry the work on to the bitter end until every Huguenot had recanted or

"This plain statement of facts, where each word had been weighed and had its meaning, called forth marked dissent, and the 26th of November, 1874, Lord Acton contributed to the London Times (sixth page) the proofs of its correctness, in extracts from original letters in French and Italian of the Pope's Nuncio, Salviati, and of the Cardinal Orsini. These show that the Pope, after being informed by Salviati the 2d of September that the report that the massacre of August 24th, 1572, had been provoked by the detection of a Protestant conspiracy was an utter falsehood, so far from expressing his horror at the massacre which had occurred, or seeking to prevent its extension, caused the King to be advised by the Nuncio of the desire of his Holiness, 'for the great glory of God and the greatest welfare of France, to see all the heretics of the Kingdom extirpated'-tous les heretiques extirpees du royaume-and he advised that the edict of pacification should be revoked. That advice, announced the 22d of September, was followed by Salviati's writing, the 11th October, that the Holy Father had experienced an infinit joy and great consolation in learning that his Majesty had commanded me to write that he hoped that in a little while France would have no more Huguenots'—qu'il esperait qu'acant peu la France n'aurait plus de Hugue-nots. The 19th December Cardinal Orsini, who had been dispatched as Legate from Rome, congratulated the King on the glory of the massacre, and 'pressed him to renew his promise that not a single Huguenot should be left on the soil of France.' Lord Acton quoted the Egerton MSS. 2,077, and in the Paris library the Italian MSS. 1,272, and the Proces Verbaux des Assemblees du Clerge, 1 Appendix 28, and referred with satisfaction to the fact that among the applauding Cardinals one voice was raised in protest, that of Montalto, who became Sextus V.

"It is gratifying to find among the liberal and high-toned Roman Catholic laity such a frank and proper contempt for the Jesuitical treatment of history, and such a manly and scholarly exposure of the pitiful historic inventions by which it has been attempted to falsify the truth and to conceal the part borne by the Pope, his Legate and Cardinal in approving and stimulating that infernal massacre. Of its bloody record in the Provinces and the larger cities some particulars, not generally familiar to Americans, have been recently printed by our associate, Gen. De Peyster, who records many honorable names which should never be forgotten—of nobles and high officials who refused to become the instruments or abettors of ecclesiastical or royal murder; and who, in some cases, maintaned their honor and their humanity by the penalty of their own lives."—New York Tribune.

Adjourned to meet at Clear Lake, Indiana, in October next, the president to appoint the time, with the understanding that October be the month.

Miscellaneous.

RE-UNION AT GALLAND'S GROVE.

The anniversary of the Reunion authorized by General Conference at Kirtland, in 1883, will this year be held in Galland's Grove, Iowa. The time first appointed was October 17th; but the committee in charge have, with the concurrence of church authorities, changed the time from October 17th to October 3d, thus making the appointment two weeks earlier than at first designed, and will close on Sunday evening, October 11th.

The meeting will be held on the ground of brother B. T. Homer, close to where Fall Conferences were formerly held. Brother Homer kindly gives fire-wood free, that is, wood on the ground, such as fallen trees or broken branches, called here "down wood." Hay will be furnished at reasonable rates. Meals will be also supplied cheaply to those wishing them. The active ministers officiating in the services, and the traveling ministry and others, as far as possible, will be cared for by the open-hearted Saints in this region.

October 3d will fall on Saturday. Teams will meet passengers by rail on the 2d and 3d at Dunlap and Dow City, on the North Western Railroad; and at Earling, on the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad.

A goodly number of our able ministers are expected, among them Elder W. W. Blair; and it is hoped that as many as can will come, and come in the Spirit of the Master, not only expecting to "have a good time," but determined to do their part towards making it such.

Committee { John Hawley, John Pett, Gideon Hawley. P. O. address, Dow City, Crawford Co., Iowa.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Kent and Elgin District conference will be held in the Blenheim Branch, October 3d, 1885, commencing at ten o'clock. The Elders and Saints of the district are respectfully requested to attend. It is expected Bro. W. H. Kelley will be in attendance.

RICHARD COBURN, Dist. Sec. Blenheim, Aug. 29th, 1885.

The London District Conference will be held at Corinth, Elgin county, Ontario, October 10th and 11th, instead of the 11th and 12th, as it reads in the minutes of the London District Conference of June 6th and 7th, 1885.

SAMUEL BROWN, Dist. Sec. Blenheim, Aug. 29th, 1885.

NOTICE TO JAMES A. McINTOSH.

I hereby silence James A McIntosh from acting as an Elder in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints for unchristianlike conduct, and for bringing reproach on said church.

JOHN H. LAKE,

President of the Canada Mission.
Cameron, July 28th.

REUNION MEETING.

In the Daily Gate City, and Daily Constitution, of Keokuk, Iowa, will appear the proceedings of the Park Bluff Reunion, including synopses of sermons, etc., and giving much more than is likely to appear in the Saints' Herald. All wanting these papers will be furnished at five cents a copy, by addressing R. Etzenhouser, Montrose, Iowa, enclosing postal note or stamps for the number wanted, at five cents each, or thirty-five cents for the eight-days' proceedings. Please have all orders in by September 18th, so a list can be made at once. These papers will also be sold on the ground.

R. Etzenhouser.

AN INIMITABLE SUMMER RESORT.

The largest majority of health or pleasure seeking tourists that have not the requisite wealth and time to visit the mountain resorts of Colorada or the various water resorts of Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota, long for a resort that will combine the benefits of easy access, pure air and enough natural attraction to entertain and invigorate the spirit. Oregon, Ogle county, Illinois, possesses the combination in the greatest degree; on the Burlington Route, but 99 miles from Chicago, and reached from that point twice per day in less than four hours, with good and ample hostelries; numbers of springs gushing forth pure and health giving water; the beautiful Rock river; towering hills and massive rocks, one can well imagine that all the popular and interesting resorts of the continent have been merged together to be enjoyed at this delightful place. Detailed information furnished upon application to Perceval Lowwell, General Passenger Agent, C., B. & Q. R. R., Chicago, or M. L. Ettinger, General Ticket Agent, C. & I. R. R., Rochelle, Ill.

BORN.

STREET.—At Denver, Colorado, September 24th, 1883, to Bro. Albert and sister Addie Street, a son. Blessed February 14th, 1884, by James Caffall, and named George Francis.

Brannon.—At Denver, Colorado, October 30th, 1883, to Mr. John and sister Ella Brannon, a son. Blessed February 14th, 1884, by James Caffall, and named Samuel Francis.

LAMB.—At Denver, Colorado, September 22d, 1884, to Mr. Andrew and sister Hannah Lamb, a daughter. Blessed by James Kemp, January 23d, 1885, named Ella Violeta.

MARRIED.

THOMAS-EBELING.—GILMORE-THOMAS.— By Elder G. T. Griffiths, in the Saints' Chapel, at Benwood, W. Va., August 19th, Bro. Abram M. Thomas to Sr. Lydia J. Ebeling, and Mr. Andrew Gilmore to Miss Mary A Thomas. The ceremony was witnessed by a large audience.

"O guide them safe this desert through, 'Mid all the cares of life and love; May they with joy thy glories view, In the eternal world above."

DIED.

WILSON—At Persia, Iowa, of cholera infantum, Nina, infant babe of Wm. Heber and Francis M. Chapman-Wilson, aged 10 months and 4 days.

Sweet babe, thy voyage on the sea of life indeed was short; When scarcely landed, with sail set free, thou reached the heavenly port.

AUNT JANE. WILSON.—Sr. Ann Wilson passed from earthlife at Keokuk, Iowa, August 30th, 1885. Sister Wilson was born in Preston, Lancashire, England, July 29th, 1820. She with her family have been residents of Keokuk for over thirty years, with the exception of a few years of late, when they removed to Lamoni, which at present is their home. Sister Wilson being in poor health, returned to Keokuk some few weeks ago to visit friends and receive medical help if possible; but it seemed the will of God that she should go. She bore her suffering with Christian fortitude. Her last words were, "Tell my Brothers and Sisters I want to meet them on the other side." Funeral services conducted by Elder H. C. Bronson, at Latter Day Saints' Chapel, Keokuk.

Higginson.—Brother William Higginson was born December 28th, 1831, at Atherton, Lancashire, England; died at Kewanee, Illinois, August 24th, 1885. His disease was cholera morbus, which turned to anemia of the brain. He had been connected with the old church, but seeing its apostacy, he became a member of the Reorganization, was baptized by Elder James Lord, July 15th, 1867, and confirmed by J. D. Jones. He was indeed a true and devoted lover of the latter day work. He remarked to several some few days before his death that he was perfectly resigned to die, but he would rather stay a little longer with his dear family, consisting of wife and three daughters, who now mourn his loss, but not as those without hope. The funeral brought quite a host of his friends together, professors and non-professors, who listened very attentively to the gospel oration delivered by Elder John Chisnal, from these words-"For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."-Rom. 8: 2. Suffice it to say that the gospel was presented in spirit and power, to many that probably would never have heard it, if it had not been for the loss we suffer-for we all loved him. Peace to his ashes.

> We wept affection's tear, and cried Aloud-Alas, my brother. While cruel death sternly replied "Earth's gordian tie I'll sever," Would not forbear,

When we would not our brother spare.

Yet firm in pray'r, in solitude The eye, through faith, discover Through Christ the Lord with life imbued Our dear departed brother— Washed clean from sin, Saint's paradise just entered in.

To rest in peace till Christ appear In clouds from heaven desending, His saints to raise immortal here, All praise to God ascending. Faithful till then, We shall our brother hail again.

JOHN D. JONES.

PERSONAL RIGHTEOUSNESS.

THERE are two things that all Latter Day Saints should diligently, and if need be laboriously, strive after; personal right-eousness and to spread the gospel abroad.

"Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord," should ever be in the minds of Elders and Saints alike. For however good precept may be, it falls comparatively without impression it unsupported by example. The best examples spring from ardent desires to be altogether worthy—in deed as in word.

The laborer who is diligently striving to attain unto purity of thought and correctness of deportment feels more than twice armed for the warfare. He feels worthy of being sustained by the Spirit, as well as by good and worthy co-laborers. Hence, all should strive for this personal righteousness,—it is that of Saints. The object had in committing the gospel was that it might be declared in all the world for a witness. Until that object is reached, there can be no cessation to gospel labor. He who only dreams of preaching the word, is only half a laborer. To dream is good, for it shows the desire; but to actively engage in the work of promulgating the way of life, is to be instrumental in aiding others; is to do good to them who may need; it is therefore better than dreaming-it is accomplishing.

The Lord confounded the language of the builders at Babel, on the plains of Shinar, for the reason that they were failing to fulfill the command to multiply and replenish, occupy and subdue the earth. They sought heaven upon a human plan. They endeavored to make a grand city the first object in their efforts, as it was in their affections. The will of God was fateful, and they were compelled to scatter abroad to fulfill the command already given.

The Saints in a similar way apparently, seemed to forget the primary object of their church organization—the preaching of the gospel preparatory to the coming of the Great King.

We most earnestly believe in the rebuilding the waste places of Zion; in the establishing of cities and villages in which peace may be found, and in the final building of a temple in which holy principles may be taught and holy rites be performed. But we believe in all these as secondary—as following the preaching of the gospel—as a necessary result, rather than as the main object to be pursued by the Saints.

The conferring of the apostolic priest-hood was for the purpose of endowing a ministry to travel and proclaim the news of a Redeemer, the plan of salvation, the "repentance and remission of sins" which began at Jerusalem; and was not for the purpose of selecting twelve men from among their fellow laborers to be local potentates, to be endowed as rulers to "lord it over God's heritage;" or to settle as patriarchs to huild up to each a family and a tribe.

The preaching of the doctrine of Christ; the baptizing of men into the church; the effort to effect the gathering of the pure in heart into socities, or branches; and the endeavor to instil principles of virtue and uprightness of life into the hearts of all who may believe, are all compatible with the idea of the final establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. The temporal Zion is but co-ordinate and of secondary importance to this great and final work; which to us is to be done under Christ in person, after the period in which the gospel of the dispensation of preparation is to be proclaimed. For this reason we deem it of the greatest importance to the Saints, all of them, preachers and people, that an unexampled effort be made to send the news abroad.

The time for such an effort is preeminently propitious. The portents are ominous. The world's commotion is favorable. The growing disposition everywhere manifest to recognize Mormonism proper contradistinguished from the perverted article, is making such a work, not only possible but practicable. The moral tone of the ministerial body is far in advance of what it was years ago. There seems to have been an endowment of spiritual power since the assembling at Kirtland and Independence. In short, everything points to the necessity for such an effort. Let us make it.

Bro. Luff and I began holding service in the Chapel at Reese Creek, on Thursday evening. I spoke upon that occasion, and Bro. Luff on the Friday and Saturday evenings following.

On Saturday a number of the brethren gathered at Bro. Thomas Reese's and arranged seats and a stand in the little grove near his house. Here, at eleven o'clock, we had a good audience. Numbers besides the members of the church came from all the country round, and from Bozeman. I occupied the hour with moderate liberty. An intermission was had until two o'clock, when I again occupied as chief speaker. A more attentive audience no one need to ask for than was present on this occasion. The weather was splendid; the feeling excellent. All seemed to enjoy the exercises. It was resolved to hold services at the same place next Sunday at the same hours, and due notice of the appointment was given. Bro. Luff spoke in the Chapel in the evening; house quite well filled. He had excellent liberty; as much so as I have ever heard him. Much good was apparently done. Bro. J. E. Reese presided at all the meetings. He had been very sick the week before, but was able to be present, although weak in body. To-morrow night, by invitation, we go to the River, and speak in the Grange Hall at that point, about four miles from Bro. Reese's. The song-service at our meetings has been conducted by Bro. John Pritchard, and was very good indeed. So far as one can judge, a good impression was made, and a good spirit prevailed at all the services.

We go into Bozeman for Thursday and Friday evenings next, expecting to occupy

Col. Chesney's hall, which is offered without charge, a Mr. Pulford proposing to see that it is seated—the chairs having been removed for some reason. Some curiosity is excited, and a query is made, Why can not a church be secured? I did hear yesterday that some controversy had been indulged in between our friends in town and some of those controlling the church. I hope it is not true. The Saints have many friends in the city and the valley outside of the city. These friends are not all religionists, but believe that one honest man's faith should be as much respected as another's; hence, that Latter Day Saints ought to be heard, &c. In urging their views they use emphatic language, and thus hurt the objectors.

One very great detriment to advancement in this valley is the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors, and the ease with which the habit is indulged. And it is not in this valley alone, but in the other valleys of the mountains where the Saints are located; it is a sore bane to spiritual life. It creates distress in the minds of all, lowers the standard of example that should be set by the membership of the church, brings discredit upon the discipline of the officers, ruins personal righteousness, and endangers the salvation of the man. But all this is in a sense moral; and this habit of drinking puts disgrace, want, and shame upon wife and children, which they must bear, though they are not in fault for causing them. In this sense it is material, for it makes physical suffering a fact, which a sober father would strenuously avoid, both for himself and for his family. Intoxicating drink is a great leveler, but its power is not that which brings up that which is lower to a higher plane; quite the contrary; it brings down to a common level of ruin and final degradation. Poverty and rags are the designs that should be emblazoned on the saloon doors, and whatever properly represents shame and disgrace be put on the dram drinker's.

We find believers who think that prohibition, the putting of drink out of the reach of the dram drinker, is derogatory to the manhood which is in man. They think that all that the advocates of prohibition ought to do, is to show the evils, the sad things that follow after the drinker, and then leave the man to obey the dictates of his own will in the premises. At the same time some of these same men, who thus advocate this idea, join with a certain class of non-religionists who say that if God knew that man would fall he ought not to have suffered him to have been tempted. That he ought to have fixed the tree, of whose fruit man was not to partake, in such a way that he could not eat of it. That while "Thou shalt not eat," was a prohibition, yet it was not sufficient while the tree was of easy access. That it would have been as easy to have set angels to guard the way of the tree of the "knowledge of good and evil" before the fall, to keep man from partaking of it, as it was to set them to guard the "Tree of Life" after the fall. That had they, these men, had the ordering of affairs, they would have made "prohibition prohibit," because they would have so fixed the garden that the fall could not have occurred.

One unfortunate thing against these reasoners is that they know the evils that follow the course of the inebriate. If one attempts to tell them, they say: "We know all that. There is not a single woe that can happen to the drunkard, or one misery to his family that we have not seen and felt, just as keenly and clearly as you can set them before us. But what remedy do you suggest?" If we answer, prohibition of its sale, then the same stereotyped refuge comes up, "Show the evils of intemperance; but don't interfere with the right to drink.

We put maniacs into asylums, for the safety of society and their own good. We even pad the walls and put mittens on the hands of those with suicidal tendencies, to prevent them from doing themselves injury. We do this because these unfortunates are not in condition to resist the impulses to injure themselves and others. Our brother with desire to drink strong drink is a maniac, with tendencies to do society, his family and himself great and lasting injury. . We have the right to restrain him by shutting him in, away from the opportunites to do this great wrong; why have we not then the right to put the opportunities away and thus save our brother to his own good, the benefit and satisfaction of his family, and the well being of society.

We admit that our first duty, as religious teachers by precept and example, is to make drinking strong drink as odious and contemptible as it is wrong. But when this is done, the crowning act is to so fix the common affairs of the community that no man can so degrade himself, by removing the opportunity. We can, it is true, withdraw from the fellowship of the drunkard; we can also excommunicate him from our society, by vote declaring him unworthy of place among us. This is to leave him to his own devices; and while he does not pause to regard the duty he owes to us, he does not fail to feel, and that keenly, any failure on our part to do Christian duty towards him. And it not unfrequently happens that he makes the very act by which we protest against his evil course, the cause of his continuing in his downward way. He forgets his duty to his God, society, his church and family, but remembers the duty of society and his church to him. Is he who is in such condition of mind in a position to be left to the manhood which is in him? Has he enough of manhood left to make a successful appeal to? If not, is it not right to to act for him and put the probability of his destruction away from him, if we can not entirely shut off all possibility of his falling? We think so.

JOSEPH SMITH.

PRE-EXISTENCE OF SPIRITS.

A BROTHER asks if there is not a resolution of conference forbidding the Elders preaching upon the subject of pre-existence of spirits." To this we reply that we know of none. A question was raised in the minds of some on this subject, by the teachings and writings of two of the ministry. A charge was preferred against one of them on this account for heresy, but no special decision was reached upon the point by council or conference as to whether the subject was orthodox or otherwise. Indeed, the question involved in the accusation was as to whether the Elder denying, and teaching against pre-existence was not guilty of heresy.

The very conference where these charges were preferred, (September 7th to 15th 1878), passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That this body, representing the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, recognize the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, the revelations of God contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and all other revelations which have been or shall be revealed through God's appointed prophet, which have been or may be hereafter accepted by the Church as the standard of authority on all matters of church government and doctrine, and the final standard of appeal in all controversies arising, or which may arise in the Church of Christ.'

And this was, in effect, confirmed by conference, September 29th, 1879, and now stands the rule of the church. At the latter conference the First Presidency advised (and the conference concurred) that "the Elders should confine their teaching to such doctrines and tenets, church articles and practices, a knowledge of which is necessary to obedience and salvation, and that in all questions upon which there is much controversy, and upon which the church has not clearly declared, and which are not unmistakably essential to salvation, the Elders should refrain from teaching; or if called upon, in defense of the church, or when wisdom should dictate, they should so clearly discriminate in their teaching between their own views and opinions, and the affirmations and defined declarations of the church, that they shall not be found antagonizing their own and others' views as a conflict in teaching upon the part of the church."

The question at issue was as to whether denying and teaching against pre-existence was heretical, or not. Persons may do harm by improperly discussing any doctrine or historical fact of the Scriptures; and then the evil would lie, not in the fact or doctrine, but in the unwise and improper way in which they are treated. So of this matter of pre-existence of spirits. The advocacy of that subject is not forbidden. But wisdom should be used in treating it as to time, place, methods, etc. Objectors to pre-existence would do well to read John 1: 1-16; 6:6; 8:58; 17:5,24; Heb. 1:2, 8-10; Col. 1:16; 2 Cor. 8:9; Heb. 2: 13-17; Eccl. 12: 7; Ether 1:8; 1 Nephi 1: 5-7; 3: 10-12; Book of Nephi 1:3; Doc & Cov. 28:8; 49:3; 90:1,4-6.

ADVERTISING FOR AID.

It has been customary in times past for the Herald to publish calls made by persons asking aid when in want by reason of accident, fire, or other calamities, including famine, and also for persons or committees asking aid to build chapels; and however proper this may have been in the past, to many it has become objectionable, for the reason that not a little unpleasantness has grown out of it; and for the futher reason that the Bishopric, whose duty it is to look after the temporal concerns of the church has, agents appointed in all quarters of the church, to whom and through whom such appeals should be made to the Bishopric, and they, if they think it proper, to advertise through the Herald for the desired aid.

The Board of Publication having taken these matters under consideration, have decided that hereafter they will not publish calls of the kind mentioned, except they come from the Bishopric, or are endorsed by them. Therefore, all persons or committees desiring aid from the church outside of their immediate localities should appeal to those having the oversight of the temporal concerns of the church, and in this way avoid any occasion for misunderstandings and offense, prevent opportunities for imposition, and thus honor the law of the Lord and those officers provided under it, who minister in its temporal affairs.

We feel confident the Saints will see the wisdom of this policy when they consider it well. It is the safest, most effective and business-like. Try it.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In another column will be found a notice to "Delinquents" on HERALD, HOPE, and book accounts. Those interested should read it and act promptly on its suggestions. No one should permit their papers to go unpaid for when they can do otherwise. Many of those delinquent are so because of inattention, and not because they are reckless, or want their papers without pay, and at the proper time. The patrons of this office should aid it all they can, and do so with promptness. When aid is given this office, it is given to the church, for the office and its interests belong to the church and consitute a mighty power for the church. All should aid in the sale of its papers and its books, and in all other legitimate ways.

By letter from Bro. Thomas J. Andrews, San Francisco, California, we learn that Brn. Blakeslee and Kelley reached there safely and were actively engaged in their duties.

Bro. W. H. Kelley, in his letter in another place, gives a refreshing account of the debate he held lately in Ohio, and the fairness of his opponent. This is gratifying.

Bro. George H. Hilliard of Jeffersonville, Illinois, writes the 7th instant, saying—"I will do what I can to increase the circulation of our church papers." This is just what every other minister and member should do, and do so heartily and cheerfully, and good returns would be had. Let all try it, and do so at once.

In the last issue of the HERALD, the date at the heading of the article Sabbath Scene in Nauvoo, reads 1884, but should read 1844.

Bro. M. R. Scott writes from Galena, Indiana, the 5th inst., and feels assured the doctrines of the church are more inquired for and are more acceptable in that region than ever before. He says he is doing what he can for the spread of the work, and intends to continue so doing.

Bro. J. M. Wait writes from Whitcomb, Wisconsin, and says he has preached twice at Antigo; four times at Wittenburg; eight times at Whitcomb, twice at Marion, and had good liberty in speaking. He says he intends to preach what he can this fall and winter, as his health is good, and though seventy-four years old, he feels young in spirit and strong in the faith of the gospel and intends to press on to the final victory.

Bro. Eri B. Mullin informs us that the Central Missouri District Conference will convene the first Saturday and Sunday in October, and an invitation is extended to all to attend, but especially for officers in the district to attend, or report.

Bro. M. H. Bond in a late letter says, "Send me the Advocate, and I will solicit subscriptions. Hope brother Luff will succeed in making an attractive publication."

In the letter department will be found an important note from Bishop George A. Blakeslee, penned at Oakland, California, in which he calls attention to the fact that all who will aid with moneys for tithing, free-will offerings, and the like, should send to his address at Galien, Berrien Co., Michigan, as heretofore. And he asks that the Saints should come forward as soon as they can with such aid that the work of the church may be pushed with vigor and success in every available field. All should respond who can, and do so readily and promptly. Don't delay.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Did God know before Adam was tried that he would transgress and fall?

Ans.—Yes; and provided Christ as the ransom, the Savior, and Redeemer, even "before the world was." See 1st Peter 1: 18-20; Rom. 16: 25; Eph. 3: 9; 1st Cor. 2: 7; 2nd Tim. 1: 9; Titus 1: 2, 3; Rev. 13: 8, &c.

2.—Has a conference authority to ordain a member living in a branch to the office of an Elder, without the vote of that branch?

A.—Yes; but if said conference is held within the limits of the branch of which said person is a member, it would be an act of courtesy to first have the voice of said branch. See Doc. & Cov. 17: 13, 14, 16.

Q.—What is "the sign of the prophet Jonas" referred to, Matt. 12:39; Luke 11:29?

A.—Jonah "was three days and three nights in the whale's belly," therefore dead and buried so far as the world was concerned, and yet he was delivered therefrom and preached to the Ninevehites; so Christ was "three days and three nights in the heart of the earth,"—dead and buried—yet he was delivered therefrom and preached to his disciples, and through them to Jews and Gentiles.

2.—Is it right for the presiding Elder of a branch to baptize a person who had previously been expelled from said branch, without that person coming before that branch in meeting?

A.—If that person has made restitution and reconciliation for offenses, so far as lies in his power, the presiding Elder may baptize him, if such person complies with the following: "All those who humble themselves before God and desire to be baptized, and come forth with broken hearts and contrite spirits, and witness before the church that they have truly repented of all their sins, and are willing to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ, having a determination to serve him to the end, and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, shall be received by baptism into his church."-Doc. & Cov. 17: 7.

2.—Is a branch justified in granting forgiveness to a member who has not made nor sought to make reconciliation with those offended?

A.—No; if the branch is aware of the facts: For the law says "If he or she confess, thou shalt be reconciled." (D. C. 43: 23). "By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins. Behold, he will confess them and forsake them." D. C. 58: 9. Confession, and restitution so far as practicable, should precede forgiveness.

A TIMELY WARNING.

THE Salt Lake Tribune of the 28th ult. utters these harsh words in respect to Utah Mormonism:

"The Mormons should remember  and make terms with the authorities here while yet they can, for there will come a time when the people will rise up behind the Government, even as they did in 1861, and smash not only what is bad, but what is good in Mormonism. Church rule and polygamy are two things which will never be accepted, and will not long be tolerated by the American people."

We have been thoroughly impressed since 1865 that the time would come when, if the Utah leaders did not put away polygamy and Church rule in affairs of State, that the nation would crush it out in hot wrath. And since 1869, and more especially since November, 1879, we have been convinced that wrath would be visited upon Utah with heaven's approval, and that the abominations complained of would meet with desolation and destruction. We remember distinctly that, as early as 1860, at Cresent City, Iowa, it was foretold in great power and with much assurance, that fierce judgment would overtake the Utah leaders, that many of the wicked among them would flee to the mountain fastnesses for refuge, become the Gadiantion robbers of the last days, and be a scourge to this nation. Some who heard this at the time are still living. We have pondered these things, and watched with painful anxiety the approaching storm for the past years, and it now appears nearly ready to burst forth with terrible and resistless fury, sweeping down "not only what is bad," but much that is good among the Utah Mormons.

The storm gathers force and volume daily, and the course of the Utah leaders in hiding, skulking, evading, resisting, boasting, threatening and advising their followers to violate national law, serves only to widen and deepen the gulf that lies between them and the Government. They are daily making reconciliation less and less possible—their every act for the past thirty years has tended in this direction—and now the indications are that they have reached a point beyond which they can not count on the nation's forbearance, and that unless they make a complete surrender to "the powers that be," the worst will come, and with it much harm to ignorant innocence and the fanatically blind. Utah seems blind to the fact that this is the day of her visitation. She must abide the results for the good and the bad.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. T. Dobson writes from St. Joseph, Mo., the 10th inst., and says:

"Since the Herald has become less the battle-ground of controversialists I wish to make use of it as a "tract" here in the city. I wish, individually, to procure a number of copies for free distribution. I, therefore, write to know what reduction, if any, you can make from the regular terms for five copies six months. You may begin sending that number, independent of my regular subscription, to my address, with the next issue, and I will continue them as long as I feel that I can afford to do so."

We are pleased to see such faithful efforts made to teach by means of the HERALD the doctrines and doings of the Church for the benefit of those not of the Church. Who, then, will adopt the policy of Bro. Dobson?

Correspondence.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah, September 5th, 1885.

Brother W. W. Blair:—Yesterday I sent you a slip from the Provo Enquirer, with Graham's tirade against the "Josephites." From the reading of that, one would think the Utah people, and especially those in Utah county, had opened their doors and invited President Joseph Smith into their public halls and meeting houses. The truth of the matter is this; I called on President A. O. Smoot at his bank in Provo, and asked him for their meeting house for President Smith to speak in; and he said—"I could not afford to do it." These were his exact words. Judge Dusenberry was present at the time, and he told me we could have the First Ward School-house. Just a few days before that, I had been in Provo to see if I could get a suitable place for Joseph to speak in. At that time Pres. Smoot was absent. I called at the office of Thurman and Evans, and told Mr. David Evans what I wanted. He introduced me to Mr. V. L. Halliday, Judge Dusenberry, and others. I asked the Judge for the use of the Court-house, or whether he thought there would be any objection to our using it for holding services in. He said they had decided to not allow it to be used for other purposes than those for which it was built. Other places were suggested, and so far as to their being practicable, it was thought they were not. Mr. Evans went with me to the New Theatre. It was near its completion. Mr. Graham, Editor of the Enquirer, had charge of it. Mr. Evans told him what I wanted, and asked him if he would not allow President Smith to lecture in it. Mr. Graham said it was not completed, hence was not suitable. Mr. Evans then told him that the builder said it would be ready for occupancy by a certain time, and asked Mr. Graham if he could not let us have it then. He said, No; the Theatrical troupe would not like it, as they wanted to occupy it first.

We had been tendered the use of the M. E. Church. I had then sought for all the suitable public buildings in Provo controlled by the Utah Church, and was positively refused. I then returned to Pleasant Grove where brother H. B. Sterrett had asked the Bishop-Brown-for their meeting house and was positively refused; and by him the people were warned, or advised, not to go and hear Joseph. One lady had offered her orchard in case the Bishop refused the house; but in order to poison the minds of the people against Joseph, that article in the Descret News was read and commented upon as being an extract from Joseph's speech in Chicago. Upon the strength of that the lady sent a note, stating she could not allow a man of that character to occupy or preach on her premises. Brother Sterrett had seen the Trustees of the school-house, and they agreed to allow Joseph to occupy it one night. Joseph occupied it one night as per agreement, and at the close of his discourse, when they were asked for the use of the house, he was refused it. I then went to Provo, expecting to publish our meetings in the M. E. Church. But as I stated before, I called on President Smoot and asked for their meeting house, when Judge Dusenberry told me that Mr. V. L. Halliday, Trustee of the First Ward School-house would let us occupy that, that they had talked the matter over after I had left the other day. President Smoot then said he thought it would be best for us to occupy the school-house. I so announced the meetings, and President Smith spoke in that

We then returned to Pleasant Grove and occupied the Order-Hall. That had been hired by brother Hosea Sterrett for the purpose, for one dollar per night. It was not seated, and we borrowed benches and boards to seat it for the occasion, and Bishop Brown was opposed to that. Now, where have the Utah leaders shown Joseph any favor? Since Joseph's preaching here and at Provo, the Teachers it is said, have been busy. Both men and women teachers have visited some that went to hear Joseph, and have wielded the priestly lash over them, with a view to whip them into line. Besides this, the Deseret News, Salt Lake Heraid, Provo Enquirer, Juvenile Instructor, and papers of lesser note, have all published and sent abroad to their readers, false and slanderous statements against Joseph and his co-laborers, besides all the unwarranted productions of such cranks as that of W. W. of Michigan, E. Petersen of Independence, and others, doing all in the power of the Priesthood, from G. Q. Cannon down to the female Teachers, to forestall Joseph's mission here. And by their combined efforts they have lashed their followers into a phrenzy. It is said-"Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad." From outward appearances this people are about ready for the destruction. They are afraid of their craft, and well they may be.

Brother Blair, this state of things can not exist long, Brighamism is tottering, and will fall. Let them rave. God is moving the Reorganized Church, and He will prevail.

Yours in gospol bonds, R. J. Anthony.

> COLDWATER, Michigan, September 3d, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-From Hamden (not Hamilton), I went directly to Jackson, Ohio, and was kindly received by Bro. J. J. Trexler, who resides in a very conspicuous and pleasant part of the city. Through his kindness I was conveyed by private conveyance a distance of nine miles, over a very hilly and broken country to Limerick. Here we found the Saints of the district in a conference session, in a neat little chapel built by the Saints. I came in at the "eleventh hour," but was cordially received, and so lent a helping hand the remainder of the session. I was taken just a little by surprise to find such a heroic little band of Saints convened in the Ohio hills; this being my first visit to that part of the country. They will compare favorably with the Saints elsewhere, and in point of unselfish devotion to the cause, unity, true and trusting friendship, high esteem for one another, and genuine appreciation of the cause, it would be difficult to excel them. Best of all, the Spirit of the Lord was with them.

Bro. Thomas J. Beatty (Baty) was president, and Bro. A. B. Kirkendall secretary. These with Brn. L. R. Devore, James Moler, Jacob Doble, J. L. and J. F. Williams, of West Virginia, L. W. Torrence, James Perry, Geo. W. Barton, J. J. Trexler, J. L. Goodrich, with others whose names are not remembered, constituted the main working force; together with the noble band of sisters who are of note among the brethren as faithful and devoted workers. And altogether, one scarcely meets with a body of Saints more deserving. The business was transacted with a united spirit and sentiment, and the Saints returned home comforted and encouraged in faith.

This district was neglected by the General Conference last spring when making appointments, none being made for this section at all. Some of the Elders are doing all they can possibly for the work, however, because of their devotion to it. Some constant laborers should be put in the district at once, as it can be done without any great sacrifice to the church, and there is no better field of labor. [The Bishop please take notice]. Brn. Ells, Devore, Beatty and Moler are remembered as laborers here.

Conference over, on the morning of the 26th I entered upon a discussion with Elder J. B. Taylor of the Christian Church (popularly known as Newlights, or Bible Christians), from Dayton, Ohio. He came well recommended, supposed to be as able as any they have in Southern Ohio. He would not condescend to debate with any ordinary representative, wanted something highsounding, tough and solid, so that he would be doing something-wanted to conquer a world in a few days. Well, we managed to get far enough away from home so as to get up a reputation large enough to tempt the gentleman from his covert to make a strike for new laurels and increased fame. When pressed hard he was able to get in quite a sprinkling of Greek, which is really convenient sometimes, when the English language doesn't help a fellow.

The respective claims of the two churches to be the church was discussed, each affirming in turn his to be the right. The debate lasted four days, four hours each. The weather was fine, and the audience large and intensely interested. Preachers, lawyers, doctors, and common people came and filled the house, doors, windows, and every other available place of hearing. My opponent was an old debater and had implicit confidence in the justice of his cause, and depended on its merits for success. He acted the gentleman and Christian all through, and would not swerve from the line of honorable debate to please either admirers nor advisers. I might go on to give results, but will leave that to others, lest I might lose my reputation of being a "modest man." Ah! yes that's it! Any way, there was "music in the air" a good deal of the time, especially the last two days when he was affirming that the "Christian Church is the Church of Christ," and I had nothing to do but to pick at it, find its fault, and show up its inconsistencies. The last ditch was crossed toward the close of the last day's debate, when he affirmed that the name "Christian" was given to the church by the authority of the Bible. He said that he would not live with a woman that would refuse to be called by his name: that he would get a divorce from her; that Christ was the Bridegroom and the church was the bride, and hence she would be called by the name of her husband-that of Christian. "Mrs. Christian," said he is her name; not Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, &c."

I called on the legal fraternity present to get ready for a fee, that there was going to be a divorce case; denied that there was any authority in the Bible for calling the church "Christian Church;" and further, denied that "Christian" was the name of Christ; but that he was to be called "Jesus," and was so named soon after his birth; hence, in full, Jesus Christ; that the church should take his name. She was therefore, "Mrs. Jesus Christ," and not "Mrs. Christion,' as held by my opponent. We called on him to procure a divorce at once from "Mrs. Christian." Considering that they claimed their church name was invulnerable, it created no little stir and surprise among their followers at this turn of things.

A good spirit prevailed throughout the debate, and there was evident good accomplished by the effort. Some were baptized nearly every day while there. On Sunday morning following, a large audience attended services at the Saints' Chapel. Some were present who had been so prejudiced before that they would not be seen at our meetings. The few days' controversy had effectually broken down these old lines of prejudice. This meeting was a most excellent one. A number of children were blessed, several persons were administered to, and the preaching services were comforting and assuring.

In the afternoon, by the kindness of Bro. Barton, I went to Jackson and occupied the large hall there, procured by Bro. Trexler. Preached in the same place the next evening. There was but a small turn out, however,—the jubilee singers were in town. A number of the Saints came over from Limerick and other points, to attend the meetings, and we all had a pleasant stay together and was kindly cared for by Bro. Trexler and his very kind family.

Happily engaged, Wm. H. Kelley.

Independence, Missouri, September 2d, 1885.

W. W. Blair; Dear Brother: - While reviewing the past months of my membership of the Church of Christ, I remember distinctly the morning preceding my baptism. In conversing with you that morning, I told you I had made up my mind to unite with the Reorganized Church, and that I would be baptized that day, when you made the remark, "You will find what we claim, to be as true as heaven." Now this phrase is very commonplace, and in a great many instances might not have much significance, but in this connection it is of vast importance, and embraces an immeasurable amount of truth; and to-day the words are still ringing in my ears as though heralded through a trumpet, and an echo to the sound seems to testify from every source, and at all seasons. An answer is received from the clouds, from the mountain side, from the earth beneath; and all space replies. We may hear it at midday or midnight, in seasons of repose, or in the hours of labor, and the words of the voice are, "Verily, my servant has spoken a mighty truth."

Now, dear brother, I did not at the time give you credit for half as much truth concerning this gospel as I ought. What incredulous creatures Satan has taught us to be! and how apt we are to question the truthfulness of testimony concerning the Kingdom of God!

A man may stand before the world with an undefiled record for varacity, honesty, and uprightness, and should he declare, "I know the latter day work is as true as heaven," there would not be one of the admirerers of his virtuous character believe his words, but only give him credit for a gust of enthusiasm over a hobby, which is testimony in any other matter under heaven would be eagerly accepted. As the grand privilege is extended to all, and the terms I read in John 7: 17, I determined to know for myself how true it was, and thanks to the good Father, I am nowable to multiply your wonderful truth by itsself; and by the grace of God I hope to continue adding and multiplying until I become a full grown man in the knowledge of the wonderful works of God. I say by the help of God and our mediator Jesus, I hope to attain to this perfection; for I realize the inability of mortal man to rise to that plane of spiritual knowledge and happiness so much desired without zealously, earnestly, and constantly seeking God's favor and approbation. Then with love in our hearts, and a unreserved determination, with constant prayer cometh the blessings of knowledge and understanding until all the mysteries of the kingdom of God are revealed. Without this love of God in his heart, what is man? Sometimes in meditation I believe him to be the most unworthy of all God's creation.

He is endowed with powers almost divine, there is an inborn knowledge that constrains him to confess an overruling providence, from whose hand all wants are sulpplied, whose mercies are boundless and free, and yet not a moment is spent in thanksgiving; not a word of praise passes his lips. What is the hope of such? Undoubtedly only the pleasures the world affords. This is a vain hope—an infatuating delusion—a bubble. Oh can they, and when will the mass of humanity be brought to the knowledge of their pitiable condition! God only knows. Surely the harvest is great, and a mighty labor yet to be done. The time is short, for the sun is fast sinking in the west-the day is almost gone, and verily the dawning of the new day must soon follow in which will appear the Son of Man, taking vengeance upon those who know not God nor keep his commandments. I do thank God that He has given me a spirit by which I am enabled to search diligently, that I may know my duty.

And now may God bless you in your office work, and also others who assist. The Herald is a great comfort to me, I receive each number with a throb of pleasure, and I pray it may continue to herald the glad news of the kingdom until the day when that which is perfect has come.

Your brother in the cause of Jesus Christ, M. S. Frick.

> Oakland, California, September 5th, 1885.

Bro. Wm. W. Blair:—We arrived in this place one week ago, and have since been trying to talk to the people upon the matter of temporal duties. There are many things needing attention for the good of the work where we have been on the coast, and it is hoped that time will bring about a more earnest, united, and persistent effort for the spread of the truth, than is now apparent.

We made but a short stay in Utah, but long enough to trace some of the evil effects of sin, and apostacy from the word of God, that are so marked in the work built up in that territory; and to witness the molding influences by the mills of the government, as they are gradually breaking down the barriers to a full and free exercise of the rights of liberty of conscience, and thus making possible the preaching of the word that bringeth the witness of the spirit. The Jews were not more violent and determined in their opposition to the work of the Savior and the Apostles, then are the Utah polygamists against the Elders and work of the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints. And it seems almost miraculous that the same meek and humble spirit which the Jews so feared and hated in the early saints, should also be the basis of criticism and attack by the polygamists in their tirades against the Elders of the Reorganized Church. The Jews were looking for a Savior in the time of Jesus, but they wanted one who would come in pomp and splendor and with a war whoop to deliver them from the Roman power. They cared nothing for the Spirit that was the real type of the Christ. So it is with Utah:—They are praying for deliverance, but it is a deliverance, but it is a deliverance from the government in their sins, not from them, and such a one they would hail with joy! But to accept the work of one guided by the meek and humble spirit of Christ is altogether too becoming in the true disciple, for those who have been hardened in error and sin, lording it over the people and "smiting and beating their fellow servants."

It is wonderful that the very objection made to the mission of President Joseph Smith in Utah by the polygamists, is the very principle that is characteristic of the true servant of God, namely, a humble and tolerant spirit. And the failure to see and appreciate it on the part of those who profess to have such great respect and faith in the mission of his father, shows how terrible has been their apostacy. If he had gone to them with a rod of oppression, as is indicated in the common ruler of the Utah priesthood, and had accepted the people with their errors and sins, how great would have been their rejoicing for a season; but since it is upon principles he stands, and invites investigation upon that written in the law and testimony, they are ready to cry, "we know that God spoke to Joseph, but as for this his son, we don't know nor care from whence he

I wish you would call special attention in the Herald to the fact that I have not changed my post office address, and that I receive remittances at Galien, Michigan, for the support of the work and the care of the poor and needy, as though I was present there. The Saints must not slacken in their diligence if they wish the work to move forward. This is an hour when every man and woman should work, "the night cometh when no man can work."

We are in this place and San Francisco over next Sabbath; at Stockton the 8th, for one week; Sacramento the 15th, for one week; Uniontown the 21st inst.; Spruce Grove, 25th; Santa Rosa, 28th; Sacramento again, October 2d; and at Hollister, [San Benito.—Ed.], Central California District, October 6th; and thence to the Southern District.

May peace and love attend the Saints in making a united effort to establish the work, and the evil be rebuked, is my desire. For the truth's sake, I am as ever, in gospel bonds,

G. A. BLAKESLEE,

JEFFERSONVILLE, Illinois, September 7th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—Our quarterly conference is just over. We had a very fair time. The Elders seem determined to try and do more to advance the cause of Christ than heretofore. The calls for preaching in our district were never so great. Bro. Morris and I have lately been to Crawford and Franklin counties, Illinois. The interest in Franklin county is the greatest I ever saw in a new place. We baptized three while there, and left several more nearly ready. Large church houses were filled to overflowing, and the almost universal cry was, "come back soon and preach again." The work languishes for the want of more active laborers, and it some times suffers because of evil doers. But the outlook for an increase in the membership of our district in the near future is encouraging. My confidence in the ultimate triumph of the work is perfect. I have been blest with the light and power of the Spirit in my ministrations of the word and ordinances. I intend to try to get the Saints alive to their duty in temporal things. I think all should be satisfied with our papers. My interest in the spread of the gospel was never greater, nor my desires stronger than at present. I watch the Utah Mission with prayerful anxiety. May the Lord speed his work.

G. H. HILLIARD.

South Durham, Me., September 2d, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair .- As already indicated to you, I now comply, that you may be informed somewhat concerning church interests hereabouts. I have spent the summer chiefly in Eastern Maine, making Jonesport a center from which to operate into the surrounding country. Jonesport is the only branch of Eastern Maine that has really survived the trials and withering blight that seems to have attacked the work in this district, which at one time numbered several branches in what to them appeared a flourishing and healthy condition. But alas! time, the great tester of all things, reveals that their health was only abnormal and somewhat inflated. The present state of things hardly leaves us the skeleton. That this unpleasant state of affairs is the result of unwise building, laying too much stress on certain parts, building up in special departments to the detriment of other parts, one part of the body, if not saying, strongly implying that "We have no need of thee."

A remark was made to me by one who was at one time a prominent Elder here, that the reason why Jonesport has not fallen is because it had nothing to fall from. This had reference to the "gifts," such as "tongues" and "prophecy." The great objective point with the fallen branches seemed to be to attain unto one of these outward manifestations, and when obtained was held as evidence of close rapport with the Divine mind, thereby elevating the individual above ordinary mortals, giving them a prestige in the minds of innocent, honest, and unstable ones that belong tổ no one on this mundane sphere. If one did not possess the power to either speak in tongues or prophecy, they had not received the gift of the Holy Ghost! So all hands aimed thereto; meetings of long duration were held until daybreak; fastings and prayers of an unreasonable sort were resorted to as a means to attain unto those hights, or outward ornamentation, which are all right in their place, but decidedly not good when out of place. The divine economy wisely provides for other material, such as wisdom, knowledge, faith, healings, discerning of spirits, ministering, teaching, exhortation, etc., as well as tongues and prophecy.

However disagreeable these things may be to relate, they are solemnly true. You can use your discretion about publishing them. Encouragement can be taken from the thought that these failures are not attributable to the church system proper, or the use of the things necessary for its upbuilding, but rather the missuse. While it is exceedingly discouraging to see so good a cause affected so, yet it seems to be the fate of about every thing that man has had a hand in, even when he has had the Holy Spirit to co-operate with him. It is human to err. Probably after we have had a millennial to practice in, we will get so we can do right, and properly apply and appreciate. "Charity covereth a multitude of sins."

A powerful auxiliary to the work in Jonesport is the Sisters' Society, composed of as capable women as is seldom our lot to see. These sisters meet together periodically and work, doing what their hands find to do-sewing, knitting, quilting, getting up suppers for public demonstrationsin fact doing every thing lawful and proper according to their profession, acting as true helpmeets in the great work of human redemption. As a result of their labors the poor are helped, the hungry fed, and many acts of kindness and Christian benevolence are ministered to those in need. The struggling messenger of the cross, who makes his appearance among them, is also looked after. Since the finance question has been expounded by our Bishopric, they are endeavoring to comply therewith by way of tithings as well as free-will offerings.

May many more such noble aids as these find place among the sisters of the church. Should any desire information as to the means and methods employed by them in their success, they will find it cheerfully given by the secretary, Eliza M. Walker, Jonesport, Maine. Our people in Jonesport are a credit to any church, as they include some of the best citizens. The attempt on the part of some there to apply the social ban does not work very successfully. The worst form of opposition comes from members of self-styled evangelical churches. It is really surprising to notice how low people who are otherwise apparently good folks, will stoop, and the unfair means they will resort to in their opposition to the advancement of the gospel. Narrow, selfish creeds are abominable, confining noble minded people within their limits, they hinder them from receiving good when it comes to them. I don't wonder that Christ said proselytes to such were made ten fold more the child of hell, which is true as far as the reception of the truth is concerned. Just as soon as conversion sets in, intolerance towards us also begins, at least such is my observation. I have been blessed with liberty, generally in preaching.

Besides my appointments at Jonesport, I have preached at Indian River, Addison, Jonesboro, and Epping, the latter being a new point. While there I occupied the Union Church, holding a series of meetings, until we thought it advisable to stop on account of the having season. A good opening was made for the future, when we can attend to it. One mile and a half off a Methodist revival was in progress, having been continued for about a year, nearly every night. The converts were kept under the rein so, going every night, that it began to be a kind of second nature to them, and by force of habit they felt when night came that they had to go to meeting. It was reported that the converts were instructed to keep away from my meetings, and not to hear me. One night I went to their meeting, and it happened that their minister was absent. After waiting for him without avail, the deacon arose and said that he understood there was a minister present, and would like to have him go ahead with the meeting, which I accordingly did. After the opening remarks I gave them opportuhity to exercise as they were wont to do. Nearly all took part; after which I made some closing remarks, and the converts that were not allowed to go to my meetings to hear me, had a chance to hear in their own meeting. One old lady in answer to some who spoke favorably of what I said, saying it was just as good as the Methodist, replied, "Ha; that is just the way they do until they draw you into their meshes." I was materially aided in my labors there by Sister Hall, of Addison, with her team and otherwise. Taking leave of Eastern Maine, I went to Sedgwick, the home of Bro. Pert, president of Western Maine District, who procured a place for me at Sargentsville, for Sunday, August 23d. We held three meetings at the house of Mr. Parker Billings, a liberal minded man of no church. Monday and Tuesday evenings we had the school house.

From there I went to North Blue Hill with Bro. Frank Carter, who was the means of getting the opening. The gracious Lord enabled us to sow the seed of gospel truth there during our seven meetings that we are confident will not all be lost. From there I was called home by telegram. Our babe, eleven months old, was attacked with that terrible foe of children, cholera infantum. On my arrival home the child was better. We have lost two children by a similar disease, and we felt anxious. With steady, patient labor, the work in Maine will grow. I find that much of the prejudice existing against us is the result of ignorance of just what our doctrines are, together with confusing us with Utah Mormonism. The clouds caused by that concern are being rapidly lifted. Bro. Joseph's present work there is contributing largely towards it. The secular press have taken hold, and some excellent notices of his efforts there have recently appeared in some of the leading dailies. We are anxiously awaiting the advent of Brn. Kelley and Scott this way, as we expect lots of good from their labors east.

Yours in Christ,

F. M. Sheehy.

Stewartsville, Missouri, September 3d, 1885.

Dear Herald: Upon reading Bro. W. H. Kelley's letter in regard to Bro. Columbus Scott's debate, in present issue; it reminds me of a debate began in August, 1884, in Highland Station, Kansas, with Elder Williamson of the Christian Church, and concluded July 29th. I returned to that place July 22d, and began reasoning with him soon thereafter. He would not debate on the Lord's Day, so I preached in the forenoon and afternoon, after which we had the pleasure of baptizing six into the fold. One other, a married lady, was also very anxious to follow Christ, but had promised her husband if he would let her come to hear, she would not be baptized that day. Others are very favorable. It seems that this so enraged the adversary that on Monday evening, before an unusually large audience, (who had been specially invited to witness the ceremonies, as I was afterwards informed), I was presented with a good sized bottle of Prussic acid by my opponent, with a request to partake thereof, to forever obviate the necessity of any further debate between Saints and Christians, although he was affirming that they were identical with the early church in doctrine, organization, etc. And after I had given the true Scripture exposition of such a doctrine amidst great applause and merriment amongst the audience, he being a lawyer thought he ought to prosecute me for slander. However, I escaped, and retained possession of the bottle of poison which he had borrowed for the occasion and had to pay for, as I learned, to the great amusement of many. I have been preaching some here, and north-west and north-east of here some five miles, to good congregations. Went with Bro. Flanders on Sunday last and assisted in preaching, when one of the Christian's announced his intention of opening his battery upon us soonwas not just ready yet-being so astonished to see us so soon resurrected from Rev. Braden's Christian burial last spring. Many are investigating here. One to be baptized next Sunday. Saints are in good spirit.

Riedel of Investigator fame, (your vulture in vision), was whipped out of town this week by a woman with a cowhide. He has fled to Kansas City, we hear.

Your co-laborer in the good cause, D. S. CRAWLEY.

CLEVELAND, Iowa, Sept. 6, 1885.

Bro. Blair:-I now make my first attempt to write a few line to the Herald, which I prize so much, and which I often think I could not do without, as it furnishes so much food for the soul and also informed us with regard to the prosperity of latter day work in every part of the world where it has a foothold. We look with the same eagernesss for the Herald and also for the Advocate as we do for our daily bread, and think they ought to be supported by every Latter Day Saint that has the work at heart. I know, through the testimony of the Spirit, that the gospel we have received is the true gospel; and if I was as positive of receiving eternal life, I should be relieved somewhat of the thought that enters the mind of every true Saint, which is, Shall I be found faithful, with oil in my vessel, when the bridegroom comes?

Ever praying for the welfare of God's people, and the united efforts of each to bring about the gathering, I remain your brother in Christ,

JOHN ALLEN.

OIL CITY, Ont., Sept. 5, 1885.

Editor of the Herald, Dear Brother:—I am yet alive and doing some labor for the Master. I live in Oil City, but the most of the labor that I do is in Petrolia. We could not get any room to speak in, so I have spoken twice on the market square. The sun being very warm, we got the privilege of the shade of a hotel, on its front steps, three times. I can only labor on Sunday, as I have to work to sustain my family through the week. I baptized one last Sunday.

Yours in the bonds of faith,
J. N. SIMMONS.

HIGHMORE, Hyde Co., Dakota, September 5th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Perhaps a few words from the polar regions will be of interest to you, and the readers of the Herald. It is quite cool up here, but not so much so but what we have yet left a portion of the warming power of that blessed "Comforter" that makes us one in Jesus. We have organized a branch here, to be known as the Lone Star Branch of Dakota, with Bro. F. Sheen, clerk; Father Sheen acting Priest, and the writer as presiding Elder. By the grace of God we mean to press on. If all goes well, I mean to visit the Saints in Potter county as soon as work is over. I rejoice greatly to see the progress the latter day work is making. The finding of "Manuscript Found" and Joseph's visit to Utah, are matters of interest and encouragement to the people of God. We had a light frost last night. Crops are turning out poorly in this locality. Highmore and vicinity are fast recovering from the effects of the cyclone, through the timely aid received from Minneapolis and St. Paul. Yours in bonds,

G. Reese.

THREE RIVERS, Jackson Co., Miss., September 4th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—At the earnest request of the Saints here in Jackson county, who sent me money to defray my expenses, I have come over here to labor in the "word and doctrine." Heavy rains are now interfering with our holding meetings, but we hope the elements will be more propitious soon. I look eagerly forward to the Herald coming. It is to me a messenger of peace, a comforter and instructor.

Your brother in Christ,
FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

Summary of News.

THE MORMONS AND MEXICO.

Mr. Brigham Young, Jr., who seems to be the administrative man of the Mormons, has been busy of late in perfecting a plan which may yet solve the Mormon question, so far as the United States is concerned, by transferring the burden to our neighboring Republic. He now announces that arrangements have been made with Mexico, in pursuance of which several bodies of the Saints will in a few months set out for Chihuahua and settle there. Their first project was to negotiate with the Yaqui Indians for land in Sonora, but as these Indians are very hostile, and even the Mexicans themselves can not control them, the outlook was not very peaceful and the plan was abandoned. Then the Mormons treated directly with the Mexican Government for a grant of land in Chihuahua, and, according to Mr. Young's statement, found the Mexicans willing that they should go there, provided the laws were obeyed. This, of course, the Mormons readily promised, though it is apparent on the very surface that they will not obey them, for the laws of Mexico are even more rigid than our own against a plurality of wives. The Mexican Government is dominated by the Roman Catholic Church, which sets its face like a flint against polygamy. The immoral practices of the Mormons will find no favor in that country. If, therefore, the Mormons fancy that by going to Chihuahua they will find a region where they can isolate themselves from law and civilization and practice their lustful code without restraint, they will speedily find themselves mistaken.

The Springfield (Mass.) Republican intimates that the new project does not contemplate the abandonment of Utah, and Brigham Young, Jr., himself was careful to say in his interview that they were not flying from Government prosecution in Utah, but, as they were very much cramped, they must have room to expand. During the last few years, as is well known, they have overflowed to a considerable extent into the adjacent Territories of Idaho and Arizona, while a few have found their way into Nevada. They have not been welcome visitors, however, and the Territorial Legislatures have hedged them in with restrictive measures, or at least those who practice polygamy, so that their lot has not been a very happy one. The anti-Mormon sentiment continually increases in these Territories, and it is probably for this reason that the leaders are now looking still further away for some place outside of the jurisdiction of the United States which may serve as a shelter for those who cannot afford to abide in Utah, where their peculiar practices expose them to the penitentiary, as well as to the loss of political privileges.

The new project shows that the Mormons recognize the fact that they can not longer remain in the United States and practice polygamy and at the same time shut themselves out from responsibility to the law. Day by day and month by month the law tightens its grasp upon them. They may set up their harbor of refuge in Mexico, but when they have discovered that the law is more inflexible there than here, being based not only upon political but also upon religious principles, they may come to the conclusion, in spite of Mr. Storrs' oratory, that it will be better for them to become part of the body polity and obey its laws like other good citizens. Whether they do or not, they will be forced to discover that they can not any longer remain in this country, or any other civilized region, and shut themselves up to be a community by themselves for the enjoyment of immoral and illegal practices. They can find no place on this continent, unless they go to the Arctic regions, where they will not be in the way of law, personal decency, and the moral sentiment of mankind. The Mexican project will not help them.-Chicago Tribune.

Brigham Young, Jr., and his associate Mormon leaders, who were so enthusiastic when at Paso del Norte, Mexico, over the coming of colonies of Latter Day Saints to Mexico, where they said they were to be allowed greater license than in the United States, are probably doomed to disappointment. The success and influence of the saints already planted in the republic are causing widespread alarm, and the provincial papers. The Financier, and other leading journals in the City of Mexico are violently demanding their expulsion and the prohibition of others from entering the country. The papers say that if the Mormons are too filthy in their practices for the United States, Mexico will not be able to endure them. The priests of the Catholic Church are also doing gallant service in the worthy crusade, and the chief Mormon Elder and his followers, when they arrive in the winter, will be astonished at the change that has taken place in public sentiment.

Public feeling in Mexico is exceedingly hostile to the Mormon settlements recently planted in that country, and the expulsion of the Saints is demanded by the leading journals.

Mr. Edward Hickman, a pioneer citizen of Missouri, died at his residence in Adair county, near La Plata, on the 30th ult., aged 73 years and 7 months. Deceased was the father of the noted Bill Hickman, "the Destroying Angel," one of the most conspicuous figures in Utah Mormon history. "Uncle Neddie" leaves a large circle of relatives in this locality to mourn the loss of one they loved so well.

I WONDER WHY.

I wonder why this world's good things Should fall in such unequal shares; While some should taste of all the joys And others only feel the cares? I wonder why the sunshine bright Should fall in paths some people tread, While others shiver in the shade Of clouds that gather overhead?

I wonder why the trees that hang
So full of luscious fruit should grow
Only where some may reach and eat,
While others faint and thirsty go?
Why should sweet flowers bloom for some,
For others only thorns be found?
And some grow rich on fruitful earth,
While others till but barren ground?

I wonder why the hearts of some O'erflow with joy and happiness,
While others go their lonely way
Unblessed with aught of tenderness?
I wonder why the eyes of some
Should ne'er be moistened with a tear,
While others weep from morn till night,
Their hearts so crushed with sorrow here?

Ah, well: we may not know indeed
The whys, the wherefores of each life;
But this we know—there's one who sees
And watches us through joy and strife.
Each life its mission here fulfills,
And only He may know the end,
And loving Him we may be strong
Though storm or sunshine He may send.

THE EVILS OF STRONG DRINK.

ALL lovers of strong drink, those who have given way to the lusts of the flesh, and let habit, custom, and their perverted nature rather than the voice of reason rule them, seek in vain to shield themselves behind false reason. Like all lovers of the ways of evil, their sins do truly find them out, and expose their nakedness to view. They all would fain have others believe it is good to drink that which stupefies men's brain. steals their senses, makes them worse than brutes, destroys all the manly qualities in true manhood, and transforms him into a low, grovelling, degraded wretch, and causes him to commit the acts of a demon. There are those among the lovers of strong drink who call themselves the 'moderates.' They would fain have others believe they are the true temperance men, and that those who advocate that all strong drink, in any form, is evil, are a set of fellows much to be despised, for all such seek to rob them of their rights and liberties.

These 'moderates' are the dangerous class among all lovers of strong drink, for it is from their ranks that all drunkards, rogues, criminals, paupers, and wicked men are recruited. Standing in the ranks of respectability, playing with the monster as a child would with a firebrand, they call others to witness their so-called virtues, and thus allure young men and maidens, the simple and unthinking, to the first step that begins the downward way, that far too often leads them onward to the destruction of both soul and body. are they who fight the Prohibitionist in every possible way, believing all such to be destroyers of liberty and human rights. They have never paused to consider that many laws are prohibitory; that the laws that says, Thou shall not kill, steal, coin money, bear false witness, etc., are laws that prohibit those who would do evil from imposing upon society with impunity; so that in reality the Prohibitionists are a class of people who only seek to establish a higher law, in order to remove all temptation from the weak and irresolute, and those who can not protect themselves from the self-virtuous, who far too often are the first to cry out against the falling ones in their ranks, kick them out and disfellowship them, though many of themselves are fast following in their footsteps; yet so gradual are the allurements of evil that they themselves can not see it, and would scorn if such a thing is even hinted to them. A great many of the "moderates" in the church seek to hide behind Christ the Lord; for did he not make wine, and attend a marriage festival! It is well known that the juice of ripe fruits is good for the body, and pleasant to the taste, while in a fresh and unfermented state; and that the juice of the grape was so used is a fact of history. And as it takes the juice of all fruit some time to ferment, the wine that Christ made could not have been fermented, as it was made right at the time; besides, it was said to be the best had at the marriage. Marriage as the world knows it, is far too often a time of riotous mirth when all the passions of evil is indulged; when in fact it should be a solemn occasion, when all the finer feelings of our nature should be aroused; for solemn obligations are taken before God and men. persons agree to fulfill the laws of their being in love and virtue, with an eye single to God's glory. Such was the character of the feast that Christ our Lord attended; for we may be sure He would not countenance any other.

And there are many proofs in the Scriptures of the use of unfermented wine, which the ancients knew very well how to preserve for years. And many of the Jews, and others of to-day, make use of such wine. It is said the wine of the passover is usually the liquor from raisins, boiled in water; and raisins were much in use by the Jews. 1 Samuel 25: 18; 2 Samuel 16: 1. A great many people throughout the world to-day use such wine in their churches. The juice of the grape in its natural state is wholesome and nutritive. This is the wine that maketh glad the heart of man. But when grape juice is fermented it loses much of its nutritious qualities, and is the wine which is "a mocker; it bites like a serpent, and stings like an adder." All this goes to remove one of the many scoffs the unbeliever has for that much abused book, the Bible; which if we search with an eye single for truth, seems plain to the understanding. To describe the effects of strong drink on the human body would fill a large book. B. W. Richardson, one of the greatest of London's physicians, says all parts of the body is affected by its influence; the heart suffer sin the destruction of muscular fiber, and its power to propel the blood is enfeebled; the blood vessels are attacked, and their elastic coats impaired, often rendered helpless, or sometimes become clogged with congulated blood, causing rupture, which leads to rapid dissolution. He describes a form of consumption that the moderate drinkers suffer from-ever drinking, yet never drunk; ever in need of being primed for work, retaining their health of body, though not able to stand excitement, or unusual fatigue; passing for healthy men, drinking deeper in their cups till they are a complete wreck of themselves. And he declares there is no remedy whatever, but the victim must struggle in much suffer-ing to the bitter end. The liver, kidneys and eyes are diseased; the nerves unstrung, epilepsy, paralysis, insanity, and that horror of all diseases, delirium tremens. And yet men will drink; yes drink such a cup that they can not help but see will surely lead to a premature death in all its worst form. True, some may scoff and cry exaggeration; yet who has not seen the poor victim as he staggers and reels, lost to all feelings of true manhood! All is lost but the low cunning, mischievous, wicked lear. Happiness, health, friends, name and fortune—all that was ennobling, heroic, manly, brave, is turned into strife. They would smite their dearest friends; bring death and destruction to themselves and all those who are near and dear. They have spurned and driven forth for that cup that is ever thirsting, yet never satisfied. It is a sad picture of lost manhood; and half has not been told. men who claim to be sane and in their sober senses, will not only fight for its defense, but daily trifle with such a monster, and they with their eyes open to all its doings! It is claimed by the "moderates," that drink is a medicine, and as such must be good to use. But taken inwardly as a medicine, it has done much evil; for such has been its use with women in sickness that many have become habitual drunkards; their babes have suffered the effects of intoxication; who, if able to live through such a childhood, live to become habitual drunkards. To such an extent does this evil prevail in large cities that even drug doctors have become alarmed, and advocate its use with great caution. As a cure for snake-bite it has been used with success; but in cases of fevers it has never been successful; and the only way it can be recommended is as a wash for fevers and burns, and is the only way it should be used by "the children of the kingdom."

Men who have lived the life of moderate drinkers have often been surprised to see their children at an early age become habitual drunkards. Had they paused to think that they themselves had been the cause, they might then see the magnitude of the evil. They never seemed to think their children would inherit their vices, as well as their virtues. They, themselves, may have inherited a good constitution from temperate parents, or may have begun their drinks in the prime of their manhood with faculties all in full vigor. In their children it was constitutional, and nurtured in the evil from childhood, it had become part of their nature; so that they could not be expected to resist. There is no clearer illustration of Scriptural truth that the sins of the father are visited on the children to the third and fourth generation than in the children of the drunkard—as is the tree, so are the fruits.

The children of the world may seek to excuse and defend the drinks they love; but for "the children of the kingdom"there can be no halfway measures; no standing on the fence ready to take whatever company offers; no going to the rum shop and associating with the low and vulgar scorners and scoffers to-day, and to church to-morrow with those who love the laws of God and rejoice in the blessings of the gospel. We can not serve God and the devil. To-day is the day to choose. What can we think of the Elder who drinks; thus trying to have the smiles of the world and also the fellowship of the children of God! By their works they are truly known. What good have they done the sinners by their presence among them? Have they sought to turn them from the evil of their ways by teaching the gospel plan? We fear not. For past experience tells us they are the hail-fellowswell-met, who are pointed to for excuse by men who may be staggering from the paths of virtue. And even among the brethren, when we would fain admonish the weak and erring, some will say: Oh! why brother, so and so drinks; and it must be right! They, poor fellows, looking unto man for wisdom; and, alas! lead at times far astray. Christ did eat and drink with publicans and sinners; but publicans are not saloon keepers, as many seem to think. As for sinners, we are all sinners and it was to teach such the way, the truth, the will of God the Father, that Christ came. His mission was to "call sinners to repentance." He stood in the lanes and highways and proclaimed the tidings of joy, "Peace on earth, good will to men." And so should our Elders act— And so should our Elders act our local Elders, on whom there is a great responsibility—for they by their good acts can show forth much for an example to friends and neighbors, and in the spirit of meekness, kindness, loving charity, reprove the erring ones, and lift the fallen on the road of life, and so show to the world that they are truly what they profess to be, followers of Christ their Lord in thought, word, and action,

Egypt too presents a remarkable fulfillment of prophecy. From the oldest and one of the greatest, it has become "the basest of kingdoms" a mere foot-ball to be kicked by the stronger nations of Europe. It is well to remember too that there is an unfulfilled prophecy of a day of prosperity to that land of oppressions (Isa 19: 19-25) and that the nations and rulers that now heartlessly oppress and murder the poor will find a day of retribution.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 15.

BY S. F. W.

Montesinos the historian of Peru makes Cuzco Valley the place first settled, but as Ayucucho is nearer the sea, and the two points not far apart, we may suppose Cuzco Valley settled by a part of the same people who had begun the building of Ayucucho. Montesinos wrote about a hundred years after the conquest. He was a man of superior qualifications for his task and spent fifteen years in studying and investigating. He lived among the natives, conversing with them in their own language, and learned from the old men things they had learned from the amantas, and from those who could read the guippus. The guippus was a system of colored and knotted cords, and was a complete substitute for writing. The amantas were a perpet-ual order of picked and trained men, who by aid of the guippus, and by special cultivation of their memories, were able to do what other people of the same or less degree of civilization do by the less intricate device of writing. There is no intimation that there ever was a time of barbarism in Peru, and it is therefore probable there was not; and probable that accurate knowledge of the earliest period was transmitted to the time of the old men with whom Montesinos associated. (Much of the early poetry and history of Greece, Wales, India and Scandinavia, was perpetuated for centuries without the aid of writing). "No one equalled" Montesinos "in archæological knowledge of Peru." "He became acquainted with original instruments which he occasionally transferred to his own columns, and which it would now be difficult to meet elsewhere." He divides Peruvian history into three periods. The first reaches down to the second century of our era, and includes a list of sixty-four sovereigns, the first of whom was Pahua Manco, or Ayas-Ucha-Topa, the youngest of four brothers who led the settlers to the valley of Cuzco, to whom the "neighboring nations" gave willing submission. The mention of neighboring nations is confusing, but the same difficulty is met in starting all history both sacred and profane. The second king was called Manco Capac. who is described as a warrior and conqueror. The third was Huainaevi-Pishua, and during his reign was known the use of letters, and the amantas taught astrology and the art of writing on the leaves of the plantain tree. Another king won victories and adorned and fortified Cuzco. Still another king divided the country into districts, perfected the civil administration and instuted the year of three hundred and sixty-five days. The sixth king, Manco-Capac II. "made the great roads leading from Cuzco to the provinces." A great plague is mentioned. The twentieth ruler "gave all the provinces new governors of royal blood, and introduced into the army a cuirass made of cotton and copper. The twenty-first sovereign, "being addicted to astronomy, convened a scientific council, which agreed that the sun was at a greater distance from the earth than the moon, and that they followed different courses. In the next twelve reigns are indications of a religious controversy. The thirty-fourth ruler, Ayay Manco, assembled the amantas in Cuzco to reform the calendar, and it was decided that the year should be divided into months of thirty days, and weeks of ten days, calling the five days at the end of the year a small week. They also collected the years into decades, or groups of tens and determined that each group of ten decades should form a sun.

The thirty-eighth and fifty-first were celebrated for astronomical knowledge, and the latter intercalated a year at the end of four centuries. Manco Capac III. is supposed to have reigned at the time our era begins, at which time "Peru had reached her greatest elevation and extension." Tetu-Yupanqui-Patchacuti, the last of the old line, was killed in battle with a horde who came from the east and south-east, across the Andes. After him "many ambitious ones, taking advantage of the new king's youth, denied him obedience, drew away from him the people, and usurped the several provinces. Those who remained faithful to the heir of Tetu-Yupanqui conducted him to Tambotoco, whose inhabitants offered him obedience. From this it happened that this monarch took the title of King of Tambotoco. Twentysix reigns were confined to this little state. The rest of the country was overrun "by many simultaneous tyrants" and "all was found in great confusion; life and personal safety were endangered, and civil disturbances caused the entire loss of the use of letters."

"The art of writing seems to have been mixed up with a religious controversy in the time of the old kingdom. It was prescribed now, even in the little state of Tambotoco, for we read that the fourteenth of its twenty-six rulers, "prohibited under the severest penalties, the use of quelca in writing, and forbade, also, the invention of letters. Quelca was a kind of parchment made of plantain leaves." It is added that an amanta, who sought to restore the art of writing, was put to death. This period of decline, disorder and disintegration, which covered the 'dark ages' of Peru, lasted until the rise of the Incas brought better times, and reunited the county."

The earlier age is recognized by all competent authorities. "There existed in the country a race advanced in civilization before the time of the Incas."—Prescott. "Critical examination" indicates two very different epochs in Peruvian art, at the least so far as concerns architecture; one before and the other after the arrival of the Inca."—Rivero. "Cuzco of the Incas appears to have occupied the site of a ruined city of the older period."—Baldwin.

It was in the earlier part of the history that the great roads were built. "No ancient people has left traces of works more astonishing than these," says Baldwin, "so vast was their extent and so great the skill and labor required to construct them. One of these roads ran along the mountains through the whole length of the empire, from Quito to Chili. Another, starting from this at Cuzco, went down to the coast." "The road passing along the mountain was a marvelous work. In many places its way was cut through rock for leagues. Great ravines were filled up with solid masonery. Rivers were crossed by a curious kind of suspension bridges." "It was quite a long as the two Pacific railroads, and its wild route among the mountains was far more difficult." It was built on beds of deep under structure, paved with well cut dark porphyritic stone, and was twenty feet wide, with a wall on each side a fathom in thickness. One of the modern Incas repaired these roads, but it is distinctly asserted that he did not build them and that they were the work of the ancient kings.

These roads, with the massive and elegant ruins of cities, evince a civilization inferior to none of that era on the eastern continent, and considering the want of facilities for such works they are astonishing in their execution; and the statesmanship that devised and maintained them is unsurpassed in any age. It is evident that the first age in Peru was the greatest of all, and it overthrows the great heresy of this age—evolution from savagery. In all the lands and ages treated in these papers thus far, that theory has been found at fault, and the Biblical theory of descent from intelligent ancestors sustained; and inseperably connected with this great fact is the other, that the nations of the two continents, so much alike in the qualities that make up full manhood, must have had a common parentage in Noah at least —the particular branch to be yet deter-

Whatever may be the case concerning the solidity of the theory herein advocated. the works of the old builders are of the solidest kind. "No people ever had a more efficient system of industry." On the islands of Lake Titicaca are the ruins of great palaces or temples and other edifices, built of hewn stone, with stone sills and door posts. "At Tiahuanco," says de Leon, "are stones so large and so over grown that our wonder is excited; it being incomprehentible how the power of man could have placed them where we see them. They are variously wrought and some of them, having the form of men, must have been idols. Near the walls are many caves and excavations under the earth, but in another place, farther west, are other and greater monuments, such as large gateways with hinges, platforms, and porches, each made of a single stone. It surprised me to see these enormous gateways made of great masses of stone, some of which were thirty feet long, fifteen high, and six thick." "Large masses of sculptured stone ten yards in length and six in width," were converted into grinding stones for a modern chocolate mill. A vast mound covering several acres seems to have been a great edifice; fragments of columns, stone slabs, and huge monolithic gateways are seen. "The whole neighborhood is strewn with immense blocks of stone elaborately wrought, equalling, if not surpassing in size, any known to exist in Egypt or India." This same class of ruins are found at Cuelap in Northern Peru, at Old Huanuca, and other places:

Tradition places the earliest civilization as we have seen in the valley of Cuzco, a table land 12,846 feet above the sea. Motesinos supposes the name of Cuzco derived from Coscos, the Peruvian for the heaps of earth that abounded on the site where modern Cuzco was built, supposed heaps of ruins. A definite classification of the ruins according their ages has not been effected. Further investigation will doubtless reveal the analogies required by the principles laid down in these papers.

One of these anologies is the use of iron by the ancient Peruvians. The question with regard to Peru is like what it was with regard to Egypt a few years ago, when it was not believed that iron was not known in ancient Egypt, and yet it was inconceiveable how the stone work of that land could have been done without it. Just now, we read of iron clamps in the great pyramid. It is a wonder still how the stone work of Peru, so like that of Egypt, could have been constructed without iron, and still it is not admitted that iron was used in any part of the American continent in pre-historic times. Iron ore was always abundant in Peru, but that is against the supposition of its use unless excavations show that it was mined. Aerolites however could have supplied enough of iron to supply the deficiency of copper implements; and no iron implements could have lasted to historic times unless excluded from the air. Some of the languages of the country, and perhaps all, had names for iron; in official Peruvian it was called quillay, and in the old Chilian tongue panilic. In the Mercures Peruno it is stated that, anciently, the Peruvian sovereigns worked magnificent iron mines at Ancoriames, on the west shore of Lake Titicaca.

The origin of the Americans is a great unsolved scientific problem. The attempts of the Darwinian evolutionists to solve it have led to a multitude of absurdities. They should be lenient if a few absurdities attach to theories opposed to theirs. No Hebrew inscriptions are found on the Peruvian monuments. This is a difficulty, but it is the same one that attends every theory of a foreign origin of the American peoples; yet, a foreign origin is the logical antecedent of nearly all the facts and conditions.

The absence of pyramids and pyramidal temples from the old Peruvian ruins proves that the oldest civilizations, as the Babylonian and Egyptian was not transferred to those shores. We must then look for a source among nations of a later era as the Grecian, Roman or Israelitish.

The grecques, fret-work gargoyles, &c., of Central America are pagan, (and not the oldest). The best works of Greece were a result of her philosophy and not of her faith. The nearer a nation gets to the truth in religion and philosophy the nearer they get to the true standard in art. The last triumph of art is to paint the human fact correctly. A nation of Israelites in America should (at first, at least), build as the pilgrim fathers built, or as they themselves built in their original home; intelligently, elegantly, substantially and grandly; not fantastically nor disgustingly.

The only explanation of Hebrews failing to leave Hebrew inscriptions is the supposition that they had for some reason quit writing Hebrew, and after the lapse of centuries had adopted a new style. If this be an improbability it may be offset with the impossibilities of other theories. We have supposed the first settlers made up of mixed elements. We may farther suppose that part of the people retained the graces of civilization, while others wandered away and fell into the habits that characterize hunters and nomads; that these substituded signs for letters and adopted sun worship, grew numerous, or-ganized governments, despised the old system and its adherents, made war, obtained the mastery, drove out the old civilizers, obliterated the symbols of the old worship, abolished the old literature and forbade the exercise of the old faith and the restoration of any part of the institutions, by enactment and penalties. This is supposition, yet the history has hints of such proceedings. I repeat: "Following the reign of the first sixty-four kings as given above there was a period of disintegration, decline and disorder, introduced by successful invasions from the east and southeast, during which the country was broken up into small states, and many of the arts of civilization were lost." The country as we have seen, was over run by rude invaders, semi-barbarous.

The San Francisca Alta of 1882, has this report: "Rudolf Falb, a German Professor, recently arrived at San Francisco, after spending two years in South America, and now on his way back to his native country, authorizes us to announce," etc.

. . "While in Bolivia he studied the Aymara tongue, which was in use before the Spanish conquest, and is older than the Quichua, which was spoken by the Incas and their subjects in Peru. This Aymara language, still spoken by eight million people of the aboriginal blood, bears an unmistakable and near affinity to the Semitic tongue, in which the radical form of every verb has three consonants. The Arabic and Hebrew are the leading languages of this class, and the relationship of the Aymara to them is strong and unquestionable throughout. . . . Four miles south of Lake Liticaca, 13,000 feet above the sea, in Bolivia, is the ruin of an Aymara temple, with a large stone covered with carved hieroglyphics or figures. These hieroglyphics Prof. Falb claims to have interpreted, and he finds in them the proof that this temple was erected as a memorial of a great flood. One of its principal figures contains Masonic signs, which mean the light, the thought, the word, the beginning; and the signification and history of these signs, after having been lost for thousands of years, are now again to be brought within the general comprehension. Figures, used as religious symbols in very remote days, were preserved long after some of their meanings were forgotten. The philological world will look with interest for Prof. Falb's revelations."

Sun worship and Masonry had by violence obliterated the ancient worship, and done all they could to stamp out the ancient language and religion, but after two thousand years have passed, traces of both remain.

Furthermore; The old Peruvian ruins do contain inscriptions and they are not Hebrew. The old difficulty presents itself in this guise and must be disposed of in this way. The Peruvian Hebrews did not write Hebrew. Moses was a Hebrew and he did not write Hebrew. This is accounted for by another seeming paradox Hebrew did not then exist. Egyptian was the written language of Israel for four hundred years after Moses wrote, and a full transition from Egyptian may never have been completed. Some families (especially the families of Joseph) may have retained the practice of writing Egyptian to the last day of Israel's nationality. The change of place, the lapse of time and many modifying conditions that attended the transformation of a mixed colony of Israelites and Ishmaelites into a powerful and populous nation, resulted in such a change of language that the inscriptions hitherto found can not be read. When it is found out what language Moses wrote in and what ones Jesus spoke, it will be time to dogmatize.

As farther proof against the orthodox scientific view that the first Americans were savage autochthones, I quote from Mr. Baldwin: "Here as in Mexico and Central America, there was in the traditions frequent mention of strangers or foreigners who came by sea to the Pacific coast, and held intercourse with the people; but this was in the time of the old kingdom." "According to old traditions of both Mexico and Peru the Pacific coast in both countries was anciently visited by a foreign people, who came in ships."

The valley of Quito is remarkable as being next to Titicaca, the center of the most ancient civilization. The building material used was freestone. The history of the city of Quito goes back to a remote antiquity. About A. D. 280, the city is said to have been captured by certain foreign invaders, who under the name of Siris maintained their dominion until the invasion of the Inca, Huayne-Capac.

Ancient ruins are found in Columbia and Venezuela, but no classification has been made between those of the older and later periods. In the province of Panama no ruins of ancient date are found.

"All the old and new investigators who swarm around Palenque," says Dr. Flint, "and its neighboring ruins, if they confine themselves to that limited field, will never arrive at the true solvtion of the origin of its builders. They must traverse the Cordilleras from Mexico to Bolivia, where they will find inscribed on the eternal rocks the rise and progress of a race whose labors culminated in the neighborhood of Palenque and Esquintlar. The workmanship seen on the tablets of the latter are more complicated and better executed than those on the monoliths of New York and London, and had an equal amount of money been expended on American research, more astonishing results would have been reached. All around the burders of Lake Titicaca are found remnants of a remote civilization... These [tombs] are distinguished with great facility from the Incas, as they are generally covered; and wherever encountered in other places, aside from the rocks, are surrounded on all sides with stones of slight depth. Exceptions to this are seen at Cah, Columbia, where the depth is from eight to eleven varas, but there no stones are used. In Nicoyah, Costa Rica, the writer has seen a similar mode of burial; also at Teustepe, and on the coast of Nicaraqua, where sides, bottom and top, are covered with rock. Pettery and metal ornaments also occur, and now and then large urns with the entire skeleton in a sitting posture, probably some chief. Inscriptions on the rock at Vilcacayo, Peru, also occur, the same as those described, but no sepulchres, but in a region lower down at Hachumayo, I encountered tombs in natural excavations of the rock, with bones of both [savage and civilized] races similarly placed as those at Selembela, in Ecuador, also near Drezmo, Peru, the same artificial caves and bones of both races. Near Telimbela, on a small calcareous sierra filled with natural caves, the immense exodus had converted them into sarcophagi."

Baldwin says: "I find myself more and more inclined to the opinion that the aboriginal South Americans are the oldest people on this continent; that they are distinct in race... The Colhuas may have come from some other part of this continent. In my judgment, it is not improbable that they came from South America. . . . The hypophesis of a migration from Nicaraugua and Cuscutlan to Anahuac is altogether more consonant with probabilities and with tradition than that which derives the Mexicans from the

ETIQUETTE.

This term as commonly used implies a proper cultivation of the graces and that true refinement which render agreeable and happy the domestic and social relations of life. We doubt whether any human mind is sufficiently gifted to draft a set of rules that may serve as a guide to old and young in all cases and under every peculiar circumstance. It is safe, however, to say that the basis or groundwork of this fine art is a love for, and a true appreciation of, our fellowmen. Studied, mechanical efforts to follow the written conceptions of professors of the art will prove unsatisfactory. Every body wishes to appear well; all like to be well thought of, which is as it should be. And as we are principally known by what we say and how we say it, what we do and how it is done, our success in life, whatever our profession or avocation may be, depends measurbly upon a wise cultivation of this attainment.

I don't imagine that for one to simper in talking, and mince as they walk, or to nibble at the table as though they never were a bit hungry, or to eat exclusively with a fork, are evidences of good breeding, sound judgment, or polished education. A judicious selection of words with which to express our thoughts, the cultivation of a buoyant, graceful step; and a moderate satisfying of the appetite in a natural and humane way, are habits of which we need not be ashamed, at home or abroad.

Our features, both of visage and person, are tell-tale, and loath to keep a secret; so that to be at once a home-churl and a societv favorite is well nigh impossible. The Father of all good said, "he that prayeth in secret shall be rewarded openly;" so it is with regard to any secret act of our lives; although not fully known, it is stamped upon our form or revealed in the countenance. Hence, whatever grace or trait of character we wish others to behold in us, we should cultivate in the moments of our retirement and absence from them.

Our greatest educator and assistant for the accomplishment of any good design is the gospel of Christ. Christ is the perfect pattern. Methinks I see in that fair form the graceful touches of nature's hand, and in that countenance luminous with the light of truth, the evidence of true gentility and refinement. People ought to appear to be what they are; and in attempting to evade this we are less likely to deceive others than ourselves, and we should try to be what we would wish others to believe us.

Home is the anchorage of our physical and moral existence. There are the most sacred relations, and there should exist the holiest influences. Our chiefest endeavors to appear well, in short, our best example, should be shown at our own table and by our own fireside. I will venture the prediction that he who is truly refined at home, will have no difficulty in appearing well and setting a good example among friends or strangers. We naturally assimilate the elements that daily surround us, and form a liking for the habits of our every day life, so that when brought in contact with something altogether different, we feel uneasy, and out of place. If during the week we have allowed our manner to be careless, rough, and uncouth, it will be a hard matter to suddenly exchange this costume for one more becoming on the Sabbath morn. Or if suddenly thrown into the society of those who do regard the rudiments of self-government, we shall discover the necessity and worth of every-day culture. Modesty, especially in the young, is like the delicate, lovely tint of a summer flower. It lends a charm to every feature; it softens and modifies every word and expression; it casts a halo of purity over the entire being. It does not necessarily render one subject to easy embarrassment, but protect them against it. It is that quality of the understanding which, while retaining a becoming personal dignity and selfrespect, is always conscious of its weakness and the limitation of its ability. We should not be profane. Even the reiteration of a profane joke of which we are not the author, is unwise and may be productice of much evil. God's name should be taken upon our lips with reverence and consideration. And anything that tends to profanity or vulgarity we should carefully avoid. Let our conversation be pure and chaste, and never speak disrespectfully of the sacred relations of life.

If we would be loved by all who know us, let purity dwell as the ruling elements of our heart. Cherish a kind regard for all, and malice toward none. Have a kind word and pleasant smile for everybody. Make sunshine, and enjoy it. Seek the face of the Lord always. Importune at his feet for grace and help in time of need, and make it the effort of your life to do good. Then, when this earthly journey is done, the scenes of your past life will be a source of pleasure. Happy days; welcome thought! The countless joys of eternity are before you!

The time has come when soon you will stand in the presence of God; and the elysium of eternal bliss is yours to enjoy for ever more. Life is made up of littles; yesterday, to-day, and to-morrow, are samples of our existence. Do not wait for the opportunity or ability to do some great good. A kind word, a simple deed, a cheerful countenance—these are what make life pleasant and happy. Form such associates here as you will wish to meet in the world to come. Make friends here and you will have them there.

"Let me live the life of the righteous, and may my last end be like his."

G. S. HYDE.

SAINTS INDEED.

THE Saints of God, viz., God's people in all ages of the world, have been known as a peculiar people, and different from any other class. They have been a plain peo-ple; plain in dress and address. They love the truth, the way, and the light. They know the shepherd's voice; and he (the shepherd) knows the sheep when they cry. They wear no superfluous ornaments of any kind, and when they walk circumspectly as children of the light, they are not extravagant in their dress. They know that anything that is not consistent with a plain walk in the narrow way must be hurtful, and directly at war with that humilty and godly example that proves our relationship to Christ, and makes us preeminently Saints indeed. The religion of our Lord and Savior does not consist in dress. Morover, when we see the perishing millions of our own land in their sins, and in their worldly condition perishing for the gospel, and this gospel is not sent to them because the "Lord's treasury" is in want of means to support the missionaries, may we not well question our own selves? Are we doing right in keeping our means back? In adorning our bodies? In associating with the world? In not making little sacrifices in things we can do without? And in a score and one things too numerous to mention here? The Apostle tells us, "Whether ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ve do, do all to the glory of God." Now, let us apply this rule to our own consciences, and I have no doubt our piety will decide in favor of the sacrifice we ought to make and the good example we ought to set. The duty of family prayer is a very important one to the Saint. I remember when I was a little boy my parents had gone to visit some of their friends, to have tea, and to hear the anniversary sermons pect the light and influence of the Spirit; at the Methodist New Connection Chapel, in Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancashire, England. When I found out where they had gone, I hurried to find them, and lo, I found them at their friend's house all knelt in prayer. The sight made an impression upon me I shall never forget. God has given the head of every family a responsible position. If children are to be brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, how can parents be innocent before God and neglect this important duty? Has not God threatened to pour out his wrath on all people who will not call on his name? How many children will forever bless God because of Christian parents? O, parents! think of the happy results of the discharge of this duty. God bless the young people's prayer meetings throughout Zion. Prayer meetings have always accomplished great good, and both male and female ought to take part. Every Saint that enjoys his religion, and that desires to feel its mighty comforts, if he understands them, will really love and attend them.

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire,
That trembles in the breast.

Cum privilegio.

It is a dear old relic, presented to Bro. Rohrer by my father, Elder J. Bailey, of England. Many editors and lovers of antiquity have taken notes therefrom.

We wish to add a few words to sceptics and those inclined to oppose the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints. We ask you to read and investigate the works and compare them with the Bible, both Old and New Translations. We must surely admit that the new fangled styles and systems of this day are the changes of man; for God changes not. If ye are thirsting after truth and light and the blessings of heaven, and to know how to obtain them, reading and doting over the Bible of what others did and the feasts they enjoyed, this will not save you, nor appease your hunger; nor will it prove a savour of life unto life, unless you and I are willing to obey its sacred teachings. When done, we can then exand unless born of the water and of the Spirit, the Holy Ghost, we can not enter in. We are thought strange and fanatical —a visionary people. God has said that without vision the people perish. Our beloved prophet was called a visionary man, and truly he was, for when he inquired of the Lord which was the way, the truth, and the light, God showed him by vision and by angels; and moreover call him and set him apart to renew the good old apostolic creed or teachings of God to this benighted generation who have lost sight of the precious truths and have built churches to suit the times; and the times require a fine salaried minister with a college education. We do not disapprove of the latter; but God has a certain way of calling his ministry, and that is by revelation. Now we find by Bible history that the covenant has been broken, and the ordinances changed. But they are now established again on the earth, and we can feast as well as the ancient saints, for the same cause will produce the same effects. We entreat our readers to try it, and see for themselves if these statements are not true. It is a blessing for you and for me, and 'tis the power of God unto salvation unto all that receive and live to it. Shall we be satisfied with another's knowledge? No, we are promised a knowledge for ourselves if we obey. We can here testify that we have seen and felt the gifts and power of the gospel. A short time ago I was seriously sick, and prayed that some Elder, or Elders would come and administer the ordinances that I might be blessed. The next day Elders Vanfleet, Thompson and French called. The latter administered in tongues. The interpretation was very encouraging, and that I should recover. I felt to rejoice and give thanks. Next day I traveled thirty miles, to Laguna, to visit the Saints and our beloved brother Mills, who was suffering from a fall and a broken limb. He is worthy of our most devoted prayers and faith for his recovery and restoration to his sorrowful family and to his field of labor. Do we understand the principle of faith? How many of us can come to the mercy seat and ask without a doubt or fear? How much they crowd our minds and how much we lose thereby? We ofttimes become impatient, or tired of asking and knocking.

Our Bible teaches that God will mock at the fears and calamities of the wicked, but to those who obey his voice and precepts he will save. When He cometh they shall have a righteous reward in the resurrection of the just. Is it presumption to expect the blessings promised? think not. If it were not so, we might, like many, turn infidel. We ask all Christian friends to read the works, and if they will not stand the test, cast them then aside as dross. We have watched the beauties and blessings, and trials of the church and people for about thirty years, and still pray to stand unshaken by prejudice or pride. The Book of Mormon is a stumbling stone to some. Turn to Bible pages—Job 32:8; 13:8; Prov. 29:18; Amos 3: 7; Jer. 23: 4; 31: 31; 34; 33: 6; Ps. 85: 10, 11; Luke 17: 26; Rev. 14: 6, 7, 10, 19. We ask pardon for intruding so long, and say in conclusion, we sympathize with the "shut in society," as we are in a similar situation. This is a small and rather lonely settlement. No Saints or Elders come to cheer us yet; but our faith tells us they will, and we will not shut them out, but bid them all welcome to the cottage and grove near the sea, where the ships are in view and the breeze is fresh and the birds build high, singing sweet in their nests; and here is the Bible so old. Come and test.

THE WEALTH OF THE INCAS.

HOW AN EMPIRE WAS RUINED BY ITS ENORMOUS RICHES.

THE riches of Peru have been her curse from the time when Pizarro invaded the continent to the plunder of her nitrate deposits by Chili. It is true that few countries have suffered from the evil, but it is, nevertheless, a fact that the wealth of this republic has been the cause of its disasters. For 350 years the Peruvians sat with folded hands and enjoyed the profits of the development of their natural resources by foreigners, and now, stripped of them, the people sit impoverished, mourning the departure of their prosperity.

Just how much plunder Pizarro got in his raids upon the Incas is not known, and can not be estimated; but millions went to the King of Spain as his twenty per cent.; the Catholic Church got millions more as her share; Sir Francis Drake, John Hawkins, and other pirates got away with an immense amount of gold and silver, and the quantity expended in the erection of churches, convents, monasteries, and palaces for the Viceroys, is incalculable. Historians assert that ninety millions of dollars worth of precious metals was torn from the Inca temples, and the faithful subjects of Atahuallpa filled the room in which he was imprisoned with gold, in their endeavor to satisfy the avarice of the invaders. Prescott and Robertson and other historians tell fabulous stories of the wealth of the Incas, and we know it was enough to restore financial prosperity to Spain, and give every cutthroat who came to the coast a fortune. The name of Peru was synonymous for boundless riches, and this country was the only El Dorado which the Spanish adventurers ever succeeded in finding.

After they had expended the wealth they found in the hands of the Indians, the Spaniards worked the mines of Potosi and Cero del Pasco, and found them wonderfully productive. Millions after millions were secured from each of these deposits, and they were abandoned only when as great a source of wealth was discovered in the guano islands of the sea. This was so much more readily obtained and paid such an immensely greater profit that the silver mines in the Andes, 15,000 feet above the sea, were left for the patient, plodding Indians, and Peru commenced to sell fertilizing material to the world.

Guano is only found in rainless regions, and, while there is said to be some on the coast of Mexico and in the islands of the Gulf of California, it is only along the arid deserts west of the Andes, where the clouds never precipitate moisture, that the deposit has been a source of wealth. Guano is a mixture of the excrement of birds and seals, the decomposed bodies of both. and the bones of the fishes which they have taken upon the land for food. Along the coast of Peru are to-day, as there have been for centuries, myriads of sea birds. The sky is often darkened with them, and their heavy shadows fall upon the ocean's surface as they fly from one to another of the islands upon which they roost and breed. These islands are swarming with sea lions also, and the rocky shores are fringed with them in multitudes beyond the power of man to number. They live on the islands with the birds. Here both live, die, and decay with the other animal life they bring from the ocean, and the guano of commerce is the filth they have left upon the rocks. There has never been any rain to wash it away, and the wind scarcely ever rises above a gentle breeze, so it has been allowed to accumulate for countless ages, until it is in some places hundreds of feet deep, dried and baked by a tropical sun.

The amount of money which Peru has made from her guano deposits can not be estimated any more accurately than the plunder stolen from the Incas. The exports have continued from 1846 to the present day, and the annual shipments have amounted to millions of tons, valued between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000, and this to the profit of a State whose population has never reached 2,000,000, threefourths of whom were Indians who have had no share in its benefits. The exhaust-ed lands of the Old World required this manure to revive them, and their owners paid high prices for what cost Peru noth-The result of this revenue was to continue the extravagance among the people which was practiced by their forefathers when the mountains poured out streams of silver. It was an epidemic of riches, and instead of wisely hoarding this source of wealth and protecting it, the Government of Peru plunged into a system of reckless expenditure, until the end of the war found its revenues cut off and the country burdened with a debt of $250,-000,000, which it can never pay.

But even if Peru had been robbed of all her guano, the deposits of nitrate of soda, in the deserts along her southern coasts, would have made her rich again, but Chili has stolen these also. The whole coast, from the twenty-third to the twenty-fifth parallel of latitude, appears to be one solid mass of this valuable mineral, fit for a hundred different uses, and worth in the market from forty to sixty dollars a ton. It was discovered in 1833 by an accident, the hero of the discovery being a forlorn old Englishman by the name of George Smith. There is no telling how much lies in these mines, but it is the opinion of those who have explored the country that at the present rate of excavation it will take eight or ten centuries to dig it away.

Under the surface of drifting sand is a crust of clay three to five inches thick. This crust covers a bed of crude nitrate from three to six feet deep, the limits of which have not been measured. Years ago, when its value was not fully recognized, private parties, mostly Englishmen and Germans, went into the nitrate beds, and by the self-enacted laws which exist among all mining settlements each was allowed his claim. Then the Government of Peru and Bolivia stepped in and prohibited further locations, but not until enough had been taken up to supply the market for the rest of this century. The cost of mining is not much greater than the cost of digging a ditch in ordinary clay, and the deposits are fifteen and twenty miles from the seaports.

The nitrate is shipped crude to the market for fertilizing purposes, but there are factories along the coast in which the raw product is purified for chemical uses. This purification is accomplished by boiling in water. The impurities rise to the surface, and are removed by skimming, and the heavy nitre settles at the bottom of the vat and chrystalizes at a certain degree of heat. Then the water is drawn off and distilled, producing the iodine of commerce, an article so valuable as to be measured by the ounce and selling at $3 or $4.

The nitre is shipped in bags of one hundred pounds each, and the iodine in casks made of hard wood, which are protected by having hade covers shrunk around them. Most of the product goes to Europe, and but a small proportion to the United States. The harbors of Iquique, Pisagua, and Antofagasta, which are nearest to the nitrate beds, are full of the ships of all the European nations, but the product is under the control of a monopoly, the producers having formed a combination or pool to keep up the price.

It was this product which caused the war between Chili and Peru. The motive was the jealousy of Chili, and her desire to acquire this rich territory, which belonged to Bolivia and Peru: but the ostensible casus belli was the act of the Bolivian Government in imposing an export duty of ten cents per cwt. upon nitrate. At the port of Antofagasta a Chilian company had nitrate works, and refused to pay the export tax. The Bolivian Government seized the works, and was about to sell them at auction when a Chilian man-ofwar appeared, landed a force to protect the property, and the struggle began, which ended in the seizure of all the Bolivian territory on the coast and the most southerly province of Peru.

The Chilian Government has emphasized its consistency by imposing a tax of $1.25 per cwt. on all nitrate exported since it obtained possession, and the firm of Hicks & Company, who brought on the war by protesting against a duty of ten cents, now find good reason to regret that they ever did so.

The most useful to mankind of all the natural products of Peru was quinine, the drug made from the bark of the cinchona tree, which was discovered by a Franciscan friar in the early days of the conquest, and called cinchona in honer of the Countess of Cinchona, whose husband was the Viceroy of Peru in the early days of Spanish dominion. She introduced it into Spain as a remedy for fevers, and there is no drug in the catalogue that has been used in such quantities or with such success by suffering mankind.

The entire supply formly came from Peru, and it was known as Peruvian bark, but afterward the forests along the entire chain of the Andes were found to contain it, and it furnished one of the chief articles of export from South America for three centuries. The supply has been greatly diminished by the destruction of the trees, it being the habit formerly to cut down the trunk and strip it as well as the branches of the bark. Nowadays the forests are protected by law, and the trees are allowed to stand, a portion of the bark being stripped off each year, which nature replaces again. England, with that provident foresight which characterizes much of her political economy several years ago sent agents into Ecuador, Peru, and Bolivia, under the direction of the celebrated botanist, Mr. Spruce, and made a collection of cinchona plants, which were taken to Java, Ceylon, and India, and there have been transplanted and cultivated with great success and profit. It is found that under proper treatment the trees produces a very much greater amount of quinine, of a much superior quality, and at less cost than the bark can he gathered in the mountains of South America, so that shipments from Peru have almost entirely ceased, and the market receives its supply from the British possessions. Thus Peru has lost her quinine, which was formerly a source of great revenue.

The indigo trade also has almost entirely ceased, the East Indies and West Indies furnishing a superior article than Peru can produce. Indigo is made by boiling the leaves of the indigo tree and letting them ferment. After a certain amount of fermentation the boiling process is renewed, the water is drawn off, and the sediment at the bottom of the vat is subjected to a degree of heat sufficient to cause crystalization.

Thus have departed one by one the sources of the wealth and prosperity of Peru; but while she held them they were a constant cause of turbulence, as they brought great revenues to the State, which all the politicians strove to secure control of. The amount of money that has been stolen from the Government is incalculable, and the number of human lives that have been sacrificed in the attempts to obtain an opportunity to steal is equally beyond estimating. During the 300 years she was under the yoke of Spain, Peru had forty-three viceroys. Since her independence in 1824, a period of sixty years, she has had sixty-seven different rulers, and one of them governed the country for twelve years, leaving the remaining forty-eight years to be divided among sixty-six Administrations. It has been plunder and revolution, revolution and plunder ever since Pizarro set the example, and the wealth which nature endowed the country with has been the bone of contention.

Now that she is stripped of everything except her silver mines and sugar plantations, Peru ought to have peace, but the life of ease and luxury her people have led will never return to them. It will require industry and energy to recover prosperity, and the present generation does not possess it. Peru is going through a system of discipline like that to which the planters of the southern part of the United States were subjected to after the emancipation of the slaves. The wealth of its people has been swept away by war, and they will have to begin anew and grow up with the country. The people formerly lived upon the revenues of the Government, which were very large, from sales of guano, nitrate, and from the silver mines, and now for the first time in the history of the country, the Government finds it necessary to live upon the people. It has tried flat money, but that won't work. The first issue, called Incas, is entirely worthless, and doesn't bring as much in Lima as the notes of the Southern Confederacy in London. The present circulating medium, paper sols, are worth about five cents on the dollar, and can't hold out much longer. There are ninety millions of this sort of stuff to be redeemed, not including the universally repudiated Incas, and a debt of $250,000,000.

A very nice international question comes up here. To the redemption of the foreign debt the revenue from the sale of guano was pledged, and Chili has got the guano. Did the obligation go with it? The Peruvians think it did.

THE SOUL CAN REANIMATE THE BODY AFTER GOING OUT.

THE New York Tribune says that Dr. Leland, who recently died in Georgia, was a great sufferer from asthma, and to all appearances died several times before the final dissolution took place. On more than one occasion his family made preparations for his funeral, and a day or two before his actual death he told a remarkable story of how he witnessed the arrangements. "Unable to lie down I passed all my sickness in an easy chair. My body died several times. I, that is, my spirit, would go away from it, and standing in an opposite corner of the room, would look back at the flesh and blood in the chair and wonder how I was ever induced to pass so many years in its company. 'Poor old body,' I thought, 'your troubles are nearly over. They will soon put you away under the ground where you will be at rest for-ever. I saw my family gather about my old frame as it leaned back, dead in the chair, and it gave me pain to see them weep. Then I would feel something pulling me toward my body again; I could not resist it, I was powerless, and in a moment I had taken possession of it. Then there was an instant of pain, and I opened my eyes and breathed. Each time this was repeated I was more reluctant to return to my body.

DIVIDED CHRISTIANITY.

"A STATEMENT made by the Rev. Dr. Hopkins at the recent Congress of Churches is very suggestive. 'No less than nineteen varieties of Christianity,' he said, 'are at present trying to convert the Japanese. The nineteen do not agree as to what the ministry is, nor as to what the Word, some including the Apocrypha and others discarding it altogether, and many differing as to the meaning of the Scriptures. Nor are they agreed as to the sacraments; so, too, on doctrine, discipline, and worship. There are all sorts of contradictions of belief. Now if the Christians, with eighteen centuries of accumulated traditions, can not agree, how can they expect the heathen to solve the riddle."

[Ah, yes; it is these "accumulated traditions" which professed Christian teachers have inflicted upon the church for the past "eighteen centuries" that has mystified, blinded, divided, and well nigh destroyed Christianity. Genuine Christianity is a divine unit in all things.—Ed.]

DIED.

THOMAS.—At Malad City, Idaho, January 29th, 1885, Syrelda-E., daughter of Bro. Richard and Sr. Eliza Thomas, aged 10 years, 11 months and 24 days.

MAYO.—At Independence, Mo., August 11th, 1885, of consumption, sister Izadora, daughter of Bro. and Sr. S. G. Mayo, aged 19 years. She suffered patiently for nineteen months. Before the seperation of spirit and body, she called all the family around her, and told them of what she had seen in vision and counselled all her brothers and sisters to live worthy to meet her. Short services at the residence of the parents, conducted by Stephen Maloney.

ADVISORY.

While we have no right or desire to assume to dictate the Saints as to how or with whom they make contracts to hire, or who they may discharge from their employ, in consideration of recent developments we respectfully suggest to the Saints in Kansas, especially those of the North West District, that the Annual Conference and those immediately appointed by that body, with the First Presidency, Bishopric, District Conferences, and Presiding Elders thereof, according to the gifts and callings of God to them, have something to do in regulating the ministry. And that to effect arrangements to transfer an Elder from a distant point, at the outlay of a large sum of money, on the strength of private correspondence, without first consulting those the church deems worthy to act as watchmen on Zion's walls, is to expose themselves to trouble, and perhaps imposition and confusion. We would not have you suspicious by any means, but on due reflection the probability of there being "wandering stars" among the Latter Day Saints, must be apparent. And further, in consideration of the great demand for faithful laborers in every part of God's moral vineyard, if one capable of representing the cause makes extraordinary efforts to get from one point where labor is needed, (and he by a judicious course could there help the cause) to a far distant point, for this great anxiety to go to another point of the campass, there must be a cause. Would it not, therefore, be well to pause, and by legitimate inquiry find out the cause, at least, ere you subject yourself to inconvenience, and perhaps loss by investing a large sum of money, and that it be then made to appear that the sum you did invest was insufficient, and a second investment be called for? The church will care for her ministry as far as possible; and in the event of one being in a climate where his physical health was in jeopardy, would strive to remove him to a more genial clime; and a worthy brother so situated, need not negotiate for such a change in any other than an honorable, legitimate manner, by which he would secure friends.

MOVING ON.

NEWSPAPERS contain notices of an interview said to have been held by a correspondent with the son of the late Pres. B. Young, of Utah, in which Mr. Young states that he had been into Mexico on a tour of inspection and inquiry, looking to the settlement of some, or all of the Mormons on Mexican territory. We know nothing of the correctness of this newspaper story; but it is suggestive at least of the question: Why should the Mormons move voluntarily, or be driven from the United States? What is there in the system that needs expatriation? If the statement of a missionary from Utah lately writing from the southern states, that the Book of Mormon and the Voice of Warning; the former one of the standard books, and the latter a much esteemed missionary work, of the church as originally founded by Joseph Smith, can be safely circulated in the States, whence the Elders who believe and teach polygamy, or plural marriage are by law excluded, be taken as indicative of what Mormons hold that needs to be suppressed, even to the sending it out of the country, as contemplated by this newspaper notice, no one need to hesitate in deciding.

But, here rises a serious question. Can those who have so long been teaching the doctrine of a plurality of wives safely abandon the theory, and by so doing remain where they are and become good citizens in fact as they are citizens in name; or is it essential to their present and eternal welfare that they continue to persist in the belief and practice of the dogma? The comparatively small number of the men who are practical polygamists, and thus law breakers by act and liable to lawful arrest and punishment, makes it not only possible but reasonable to believe that the majority should exercise its right and refuse positively to be put in jeopardy, either in reputation or in person, for the sins of the lesser number. This majority should see to it that they nor their families should be compelled to abandon homes and home surroundings because a few of their brethren choose to continue in a practice of doubtful origin, and of a most thoroughly impracticable character. After thirty-three years of experiment from the public avowal of a belief, when so little of real or permanent good has been realized to the people that prominent men engaged in the practice counsel their children to keep out of it, ought to teach those who have ability to learn that to longer continue is foolish. And that the remedy lies with those who are not implicated in the practice, however much they may have thought the principle divine when first presented to them.

It is in the power of the majority of the men in the Utah Church to take the course of perfect safety, by declaring their freedom from the policy of the shortsighted few who are leading to ruin, soon or late. There is no just reason to believe that it is in any sense right for two per cent of any number of co-religionists to endanger the peace and prosperity of the whole body by continued persistence in practices that are not open to all. Once let the resolution be formed to rid the church in Utah from the domination of the plural wife philosophy, and it will be easy to see the way to such a degree of good citizenship as will leave no ground to suppose a removal to Mexico, or elsewhere, necessary.

THE SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS.

A WRITER asks us to state through the HERALD, (1), "Who the founder of the Seventh-Day Advent Church is;" and, (2) "Where did he get his authority from to establish a church?"

To this we reply, that the Second Adventists owe their origin to William Miller, born in Pittsfield, Massachusetts, in 1781; who began lecturing on the speedy coming of Christ in 1833, claiming that He would come and the world be destroyed in 1843—fixing the very day for the advent. When his interpretations of Scripture signally failed, the Adventists soon broke up into fragments. Their numerous "set times" from 1843 until now have failed them, utterly, in relation to the second coming of Christ.

That fragment known as the Seventh-Day Adventists originated about 1844, and the late Elder James White was one of the first organizers of the sect. In 1875 they numbered 8,022. Mrs. Ellen G. White, the relict of Elder James White, is their prophetess.

It may be said, then, that Elder James White and others were the founders of that church. As to their authority to found and organize a church—their church -they had that which they derived from the church of which William Miller was the founder. And if it be asked where William Miller and his fellows obtained their authority, we can only say we do not know that they had any except that which they obtained from each other, or brought out with them from the various churches from which they seceeded when organizing and uniting with the Advent Church. While they probably claim that God is the author and founder of their church, as do all other sects for their respective churches, yet we are not aware that any of these church founders claim authority derived by special, divine call, and by ordination under divinely appointed servants of God -angels, or persons holding genuine priesthood-persons called and sent of God, as was Aaron, (Heb. 5: 4, with Ex. 28: 1), and Joshua, (Deut. 31: 14-24), and Samuel, (1 Sam. 3: 4-21), and David, (1 Sam. 16: 1-13), and John the Baptist (Luke 1: 76; 3: 2-4), and the ministers of Christ, (John 15: 16; Acts 1: 24; 13: 1-3); and as God promised to call and send his servants in these last days. (See Jer. 16: 14-19; Mal. 3: 1-7; 4: 5, 6; Luke 14: 17-24; Matt. 20:6,7; Rev. 14:6,7; with 16: 6, & 18: 4, 20, 24).

ernmnents-the kingdoms of men-and it is of far greater importance in the church and kingdom of God. Jesus repudiates human, man-made authority in the things of God, in these words; "I am come in my Father's name, and ve receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive. How can ye believe, which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only."-John 5:43, 44. Here Jesus speaks of his authority as a minister, and of the source from whence it came, in contradistinction to that held and respected by man-made sects. Join to this the emphatic statement of Paul, and we see a divine, and not a human call; a divine, and not a human ordination, are just what God has appointed for his ministers-"And no man taketh this honor [of priesthood] unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron."—Heb. 5: 4. When men take this honor to themselves, heaven will not accept and endorse it, and all that is done under it will be without divine authority and sanction. The church and kingdom of God is founded by God, through divinely called and appointed ministers, and is builded on God's revealed laws and commands, and His work will receive the divine seal of the Spirit, as in all past ages. All else is vain.

By the Huron Times, of Michigan, sent us of late, we see a Mr. Somebody rushes into print to enlighten the world on the "Founder of Mormonism." This zealous mortal revamps many of the stale and oftrefuted yarns hatched up by Howe, Hurlbut, Kidder, Ellen Dickinson, Braden, et al, all avowed enemies of Mormonism. If he had the wit of a —, or the honesty of a Jesuit, he would know and admit that such parties crucified Christ, slew his disciples, persecuted the church of God, massacred the Reformers, kindled the fires of Smithfield, burned witches in Europe and America, ostracised and murdered the Massachusetts Baptists and the peaceful Quakers everywhere, and that such have been and now are a disgrace to the Christian name, disturbers of society, and a foul blot on the fair fame of genuine manhood. Why don't he take the testimony of those friendly to justice and equity for Joseph Smith and the Mormon's, instead of running greedily to those who seek to make money and obtain notoriety in belying a rising religious sect? The history of these defamers, when laid along side that of other times made by their class, is seen to possess the same diabolical features—they are one in their work. Genuine Mormonism will live and flourish, be the admiration of the just and the wise, the confusion and terror of the ungodly and vile, while its persecutors and maligners become in the world's history like Sodom and Gomorrah, and like the "whited sepulchers" upbraided by the Son of God. Justice may be slow, but it certainly is sure

Bro. J. J. Cornish replied to this covert enemy in a manner fitting the occasion, and proved him to be a prejudiced partisan, a quibbler, and a — well, a person who needs to be converted from the evil of his ways. The replies of Bro. Cornish were apt, and breathed the forbearing, gentle, wise spirit of the Master.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Richard Ellis writes from Sydney, New South Wales, the 13th ult., saying: "Bro. Burton is well; has done much good at Wallsend; about twelve added to the church there. He was with us in Sydney about nine days; left again on Saturday, 8th of August, for Nambucca, three hundred and forty-two miles by sea from Sydney. He is expected back in two months; then he will leave us again for Queen's Ferry, Victoria, five hundred miles from Sydney. He leaves his family at Wallsend while he travels."

Bro. A. I. Kenison, writing from Eagle Rapids, Kansas, and remitting for his HERALD, says of it:

"I have taken it eight years, and I do not see how I can do without it. I have read hundreds of papers published by the different sects, but never have I seen one that gives me the satisfaction that it does. There are many of the Saints who do not take the Herald. This is a pity. Some of them take two or three of the world's papers, and it seems as though they ought to take their own church paper."

You are right, Bro. Kenison. All who can should sustain the church publications cheerfully.

TONGUES AND PROPHECY.

By letter from Elder F. M. Sheehy, in our last issue, it is seen that some bad results have obtained down in the state of Maine from the too anxious desire of some to enjoy these gifts, and from the professed or pretended use of them. The wise use of the gifts when given by the Spirit of God, is right and proper. But when pretended gifts are exercised, whether they are by the "spirits of devils" or the weakness, fanaticism, or craft of men, harm will follow.

When the spiritual gifts were first bestowed on the membership in Ohio and New York, Joseph the Seer warned the Saints that Satan and wicked or fanatical persons would impose their spurious gifts on the people, and he taught how the Saints could detect the evil and avoid harm therefrom. These warnings and instructions are found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and in Joseph's Church History. The Seer's warnings proved true and timely; for spurious manifestations were seen both in and out of the church at an early day, and especially from 1833, and more especially since Spiritism has become so prevalent and popular. Joseph's predictions in respect to these matters prove him to have been the servant of God, and "a wise master-builder."

God's people in every age have been tried and perplexed with false spirit manifestations: "When the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, Satan came also among them." (Job 1:6). Zechariah saw "Joshua the High Priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him." (Zech. 3:11). When Jesus entered upon his wonderful ministry in Judea, Satan sought to corrupt Him and destroy His work. (Matt. 4: 1-10). Tesus said to his Apostles James and John, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of" (Luke 9: 55). In view of errors and deception in spirit manifestations among the early Christians, the Apostle John wrote this instruction: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world" (r John 4: 1). And the Apostle Paul, in view of errors imbibed, evils practiced, and the consequent discredit brought upon the spiritual gifts, counselled the Saints thus:-"Quench not the Spirit. Despise not prophesyings. Prove [test] all things; hold fast that which is good." (t Thess. 5: 19-21). And owing to the disrepute into which spiritual gifts had fallen with some, he again says: -"Wherefore, brethren, covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues." All of this shows that the early-day Saints were tried over the gifts, for various reasons; and it ought not to surprise well informed people, when similar trials occur among Latter Day Saints. Similarity in these things is clear evidence of identity as Christ's Church—the churches of both former-day and latter-day Saints are identical in their troubles and perplexities in respect to their spiritual things.

Bible believers should know that the prophecies declare there would be many and terrible deceptions by spirit influences and manifestations in these last days. Jesus warns us of them (Matt. 24:11). So does Paul, (1 Tim. 4:1), in which he foretells that "seducing spirits," and "devils" will deceive, corrupt, and mislead; and this, too, among those who once were in "the faith"—the gospel faith. In his second letter to the Thessalonians he again foretells how and why some in the church just prior to the second coming of Christ will be deceived by Satanic craft and power (2 Thess. 2: 1-15). John the Revelator, also, foretells these evil things (Rev. 13: 13, 14; 16: 13, 14; 19: 20).

The Saints should study the Scriptures, ancient and modern, for they testify clearly of these things, both in history and in prophecy, from the temptation by Satan in Eden all along up to the present time. These trials will continue with mortal man till Jesus comes in glory, and with some till Satan and his hosts are cast into "their own place."

To the Saints we say, in the word of the Apostle Peter: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy."—I Peter 4: 12, 13.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A BROTHER in Canada asks if it is proper and wise to unite with a Lodge of Orangemen, as friends are pressing him to do.

Our reply is, that all secret societies are expensive; they are exclusive and clannish in their tendencies; and error and evil can more readily get, and retain a foothold in them than when exhibited to the light and scrutiny of the public.

There are no provisions under the gospel of Christ for any kind of Secret orders or Societies; but, to the contrary, that Great Teacher taught by precept and example against anything of the kind. Hear Him:-"I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret I have said nothing."-John 18: 20. Jesus would have His disciples follow Him in this respect, for He says-"Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill can not be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."-Matt. 5: 14-16.

Again He says:—"For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known. What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops."—Matt. 10: 26, 27.

The prophet Nephi teaches thus:—"The Lord God worketh not in darkness. He doeth not anything, save it be for the benefit of the world, for He loveth the world even that He layeth down His own life, that He may draw all men unto Him." 2nd Nephi II: 15. And the prophet Moroni, over 400 years after Christ, says—"The Lord worketh not in secret combinations."—Ether 3: 12.

All these testimonies are plain and clear, and prove that God and Christ have not provided for secret organizations of any kind, neither are they pleased with them, whether they be in the church, in the state, or in any other department of society. And while we hold no bitter antipathy toward benevolent or beneficiary secret societies, we are confident none of them are of God, and that society would be vastly better without them. We therefore think it best that none unite with a lodge of Orangemen.

The writer inquires, further, if we think Joseph the Seer sinned in joining the Masons. We reply, (1), we do not know that he joined the Masons; (2); if he joined them he did what is not provided for in the gospel economy. As to whether such an act is held by God to be actual sin, we are not the judge. God is judge himself.

The writer further inquires:—"Is that [his joining the Masons] why the Lord said of him,—'He that putteth forth his hand to steady the ark of God, shall fall by the shaft of death, like as a tree is smitten by the vivid shaft of lightning.'—Rev. Nov. 27th, 1832." And to this we reply, we do not know.

There are many other ways in which a servant of God may put "forth his hand to steady the ark of God;" (which implies disobedience of important commands, substituting fleshly, human wisdom for the wisdom of God); and without exact knowledge in the matter it would be presumption to sit in judgment on the case and parade an opinion.

One thing is certain; God points out a narrow path—the path of present and future safety—and it is the duty of all to enter it and follow Christ, the captain of our salvation, and beware of all things that are not plainly provided of God. "Great peace have they that love thy law, and nothing shall offend them."

A BROTHER wishes to know if it will "do for a lay member to give his opinion on passages of scripture;" to which we reply, Certainly, brother; but none must try to force their opinions upon others, nor get vexed if others do not accept their opinions; nor should they be troubled if the HERALD does not publish them. Opinions are cheap commodities. True and suitable facts are what all need.

This life is too short to spend time on opinions, unless they are on important subjects and are well supported by proofs. The affairs of this age are sweeping on with the speed of steam and electricity, and certainty—not speculation; truth—not conjecture; solid fact—not fiction; useful knowledge, and not fanciful theories, are for the best good of the race.

Persons who have opinions and wish to publish them to others, should be certain, first, that they are on important and timely subjects; second, that they are correct; and, third, that they have conceived them so clearly and maturely that they can express them plainly and with edification to others. In other words—"Be sure you are right; then go ahead."

Let all who write for the printer write only on one side of the paper; write on paper no wider than eight inches; write plainly; and correct thoroughly. Leave nothing to be guessed at.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Many at Beaver, Utah, are anxious to see and hear Pres. Joseph Smith on the issues over which the Utah people are sorely distressed at the present. This we learn by late letter from Bro. W. W. Hutchings of that place.

Bro. F. B. Moyers, of Conejos, Colorado, writes for extra Advocates to distribute, and he thinks Brighamism in his locality is rapidly weakening. He reports killing frosts in the valleys, and mountains nearby covered with snow.

In another column will be found a notice of a special conference to be held in Salt Lake City, October third.

Judge O. W. Powers, of Utah, is reported as saying he has recently had an audience with President Cleveland, who informs him he "is determined upon a vigorous policy against polygamy in Utah and has ordered a rigid enforcement of the law."

It is currently reported that about one o'clock Sunday morning, the 13th some "revengers" threw two quart cans of privy-vault filth through the parlor windows of U. S. Commissioner McKay, ruining the room; also threw the same at the windows of U. S. Attorney Dickson, aimed at the bed where he slept, but fortunately struck the wall outside. Two were thrown in the house of assistant Attorney Varian, where his wife was alone with a sick child, doing much damage.

Much indignation is felt over it, and the transaction will serve to intensify the bitterness felt towards law-breakers in Utah. Of course it will be held to be a Mormon outrage, whether it really is or not, and the best thing the Mormons can do is to free themselves from suspicion in that direction, if they can. It is a generally received opinion that no such work is done except by counsel of those in authority among the Mormons. This may or may not be true. At any rate, it is largely in the interest of the Mormons that they find and soundly punish the offenders.

We regret to learn of the dangerous illness of Bro. Josiah Ells at Wheeling, W. Va., as reported by Bro. G. T. Griffiths, and hope his life and usefulness may be prolonged much farther.

In the last HERALD there appeared an obituary notice of the late Sr. Ann Wilson, which omitted to say she was the wife of Elder George Wilson, and mother of Sr. Hattie Wilson. Her mother, the late Sr. Ellen Nightingale, of Keokuk, Iowa, will be well remembered by many Saints as an active, ardent member of the ehurch, both in England and America. Mother and daughter endured faithful to the end and have gone to their reward among the righteous ones.

Send in your conference minutes in good time, lest the notice of adjournments be not published in time, and harm be done.

Elder J. W. Gillen on his return from the Reunion at Wheeler's Grove, the 5th to the 13th insts., informs us that the meetings, notwithstanding the heavy rains, were very excellent; that a fine influence pervaded their assemblies, and that on Sunday the 13th inst. they numbered from two thousand to three thousand hearers. Nine were baptized, and a similar Reunion was appointed for the same place for 1886. Bro. R. M. Elvin is to furnish a report of the meeting in detail soon.

Read the notice for a steamboat ride at the Montrose Camp Meeting the 28th instant, in another place.

Elder M. H. Forscutt preached two excellent discourses in the Saints' Chapel here, the evenings of the 16th and 17th inst. He is on his way to the Park Bluff Reunion at Montrose, Iowa; and is in good health and fine spirits. May heaven ever direct and bless him.

The annual meeting of the Decatur County Sabbath School Convention will be held at Davis City, Wednesday and Thursday, September 30th and October 1st, beginning at 3:15 p. m. An interesting "Program" has been provided, and all who have charge of schools, including teachers, can make it profitable to attend.

A brother sends us a card, commending Mr. L. F. Henry, Land Agent, Stewartsville, Missouri, as a fair dealer and a gentleman. To publish the card entire would be to do free advertising on too large a

Correspondence.

Bozeman, Montana, September 11th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - Enclosed I send letter from Bro. B. V. Springer. It is in excellent feeling, as I take it, and I wrote him that I saw no reason why he should not take the field, under the conditions named.

As I wrote you that Bro. Luff and I had been invited to speak in Bozeman, we went in and found the appointments for Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in the M. E. Church. Bro. Luff had the first evening, and the audience was about fifty in number. He did well. I spoke Wednesday evening, seventeen being the number of my audience. The church is about the size of our Plano one, and has just such an echo, if not worse. You can guess how things went. Seven of the seventeen were our folks. One reason why no more were present, it is to be presumed, was that it rained a little quite up to the hour of assembling, the janitor failed to give Bro. Hamilton the key to the bell-tower, and so no bell was rung. We were not over much enthusiastic, and so were not disappointed or hurt-no harm was done.

Bro. Benjamin S. Hamilton, residing in town, made us welcome as his guests, and did all he could to make the meetings successful. For his sake we are sorry that no larger audiences greeted us. There were not near so many in the church as attended in Col. Chestnut's hall. This hall could have been procured, we suppose, but it was thought advisable to accept the use of the church when granted us. Mr. Story and Mr. Aylsworth, trustees of the church, and Mr. Stull, pastor, consented for us to have it.

We shall go to Willow to-morrow, nothing preventing us, by team. We shall be there over Sunday, then return here for the next Sunday after, to hold social meeting in the afternoon. The weather is cool; snow fell on the mountains last night, yesterday and night before last; rain has been falling on the other side of the valley and on the mountains, at intervals all day; frost last night and will be to-night. Threshing is being done. Bro. James Smart's wheat crop went fifty bushels. Eleven acres for Bro. J. E. Reese, sixty-three bushels and a fraction per acre.

Yours,

JOSEPH SMITH.

KEMPNER, Lampasas Co., Texas. September 10th, 1885.

W. W. Blair, Dear Brother in Christ:-Heman C. Smith and myself began a series of meetings here on the 22d of August, continued together until September 1st, when Bro. Smith mounted the cars for Jack county to attend the debate between A. J. Cato and a minister of the Christian Church. I have continued the work here until Sunday night the 7th inst.; have been greatly blessed of the Lord in teaching the word of truth, prejudice has given way, and many have expressed themselves satisfied that we have the pure gospel. On Tuesday night, the 1st inst., a Christian minister came to hear. He had many questions to ask; but after hearing us he told his friends he would not ask the questions that night. So they finally agreed he should visit me the next day, and talk the matter over. On Wednesday he came. We had a pleasant chat, I answered his questions satisfactorily. At night he went with me to church. I loaned him some books, and I have heard since that he believed what I had preached, and what he had read could not be got around. He also said he was torn to pieces. He is a good, nice man to converse with, and I believe honest in his investigation. On Sunday, the 7th inst., at the eleven o'clock service, when I got through, there was another preacher of the Christian Church there. He called the audience to order and gave out that he would lecture at three o'clock that evening on some points he thought I had misapplied. He invited me to come and he would give me half the time to reply. I gladly accepted the offer. The result was, his folly was made known before the large crowd of people present. At night he was there again. At the close, he said, That is the truth, and I will never fight it again. So the good work is gaining ground rapidly in Texas. I begin meetings to-morrow night six miles south of here, at what is called Rocky School-house. I have three other places waiting for me when through at the above named place. I miss my worthy companion, H. C. Smith, very much. We have worked unflinchingly together, and know that the Master worked with us. I will remain here until the conference in Bell county, which I shall attend if all is well. I feel to rejoice in the good cause, and thank the Lord for the blessing of health and the influence of His Spirit since in this mission. Any one wishing to correspond with me will please direct to Oenaville, Bell county, Texas, in care of Heman C. Smith.

ISAAC N. ROBERTS.

Manassa, Colorado, September 10th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-I am thinking that you and your good readers would like to hear again from this imaginary Zion of Brighamism. While absent two months in the east last Spring, I attended our conference on the 6th of April, where I was edified and spiritually benefitted beyond my most sanguine expectations. It was in very deed a feast to my hungry soul, in witnessing the power of God as was manifested on that occasion. How few of us can comprehend or realize the sensations and feelings that take possession of the heart at such times, unless witnessing the same. But it enables us to know for a certainty that the Lord does fulfill his promises to the true believer to the very letter; for signs do follow in confirmation of their faith and acceptance with God. And as I write, my heart and soul goes out in thanks and adoration to our heavenly Father for his great and marvelous mercies unto the children of men. And although the combined powers of darkness may strive to hinder the advance of the work of God; and although Satan's emmisaries may rage, vilify, traduce and bear false witness; and although they may deceive many who will follow their pernicious ways who are "giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils," yet the cause of Zion is onward and upward, and the Master builder will complete and finish his work in his own due time, while those who fight against and resist the truth will go down to perpetual darkness and despair. But, O, how my heart yearns for those honest seekers after truth, who are ignorantly blind, being led astray by false teachers! But those who have almost escaped the toils of the adversary who wilfully turn again "like the dog to his vomit," and go into abominations and corruption, such will receive their portion of the penalties of the children of perdition; for they will have nothing to plead before the great Judge in justification of the course they have pursued; for they have knowingly and wilfully disobeyed, and rejected the plain teachings of God's holy word as written in the books, and have followed after the precepts and obeyed the commandments of men, and have made flesh their arm. How inconsistent is the human heart, is fully demonstrated in the rapks of the Utah leaders and their poor deluded adherents. For their Elders go forth through the world teaching that the signs and the gifts of the gospel follow all those who unite with them and gather to the body of the church. But now, at this late date, some of their leaders tell their people that they did once have them, in the days of the old prophet Joseph, but that through disobedience and transgression they have lost them. And now, instead of advocating them, they ridicule the idea of any organized body possessing that power of God; but say if they do have such exhibitions, it is of the devil. But the strangest part of the affair is, that some of those who bit at and swallowed the false bait of the wily missionaries, now gulp down the latter bait also without questioning. But the wedge has entered their ranks and split off the most honest, God-loving and God-fearing portion; and those who are entirely cut loose from them never let an opportunity pass to give the wedge a blow.

Their quarterly conference here has just closed, and about the only public business of importance transacted was the sustaining of John Taylor and other authorities in their skulking, cowardly conduct in seeking safety from the grasp of the officers of an outraged law, while from their hiding places they hiss on their willing followers by telling them to hold fast to their endowment vows and polygamy covenants, even if they have to fight for them. There was only one of their "boss" Elders here from head quarters, who, if reports are true, after leaving his latest acquisition of celestial stock in one of the Southern States, is now fleeing from place to place with his older partner of glory eternal. But while here he dealt out considerable venom on all newspaper reporters who write anything against Brighamism. And as his wont is, he dealt at some length in falsehoods in relation to those who have shaken off their gross abominations, but more especially one who never was a participator in them, namely, old Father Whitmer. He said that Father Whitmer has lost his mind, and could not tell anything about the early history of the church. And I have heard the same party say that after a person turns away from Brighamism they lose all recollection of the things they formerly knew of the church. He knows he is not preaching gospel truth. But there are many who act like young birds; they keep their mouths open and are ready to swallow whatever is put in them.

I see by the papers that Bro. Joseph and others have bearded the lion in his den. But they can not get him to engage in an open field. His days are numbered; his doom is sealed, and that, too, in the near future. The Lord is hastening his work, as any whose minds are not enveloped in gross darkness can see. But they will not surrender one iota of their wretched doctrine.

There was several families left here this morning, bound eastward, who have had their fill of Brighamism; and there are many more who will follow them just as soon as they can arrange their business affairs. These say that they are firm in the faith as delivered through Joseph the Prophet, yet they will not unite with us until they get back to some of our branches. And I firmly believe that within four or five years there will not be a Southerner who has any independence of mind who will be numbered amongst the Utah Mormons.

On the 25th ult., I had the pleasure of receiving one precious soul into the church by baptism and my fervent prayer is that the day is near when the Lord will say to all Israel "Come home." Your brother, F. B. Moyers.

No. 4727, Jacob Street, Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 13th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Our worthy and aged brother, Josiah Ells, is very sick at my house. He has been confined to his bed nearly two weeks, and is in a precarious condition at the present. If he is restored to perfect health again, it will be by the mercy and power of God. He bears his long and trying affliction with a marked degree of patience. We are still in hopes that our Heavenly Father will spare him for years to come.

Our Grove meetings which were held at Glen Easton, W. Va., 28th to the 31st ult., were a grand success in every respect. Indeed, it was a time of rejoicing, and a time which will ever be remembered by the Saints who were present. The sweet and comforting Spirit of God was with us in great power to strengthen and encourage His pople in the latter day work. Four young souls were baptized by the writer.

I am greatly pleased with the good news from Utah. May the kind Father continue to bless the labors of His servants whom He has sent to warn that erring people of the calamities which will surely befall them if they finally reject their counsels. I sincerely trust that they will forsake the evils of their ways and return to God and walk in the way of life.

I prize the Herald more than ever, and am much pleased with the Saints' Advocate, and have great faith in its present editor. Truly, the Lord is raising up men to carry on his work. The future to my mind seems to be growing brighter. I never felt more hopeful for the final triumph of the church than at present. May God help us to be true and faithful to the great trust that He has committed to us as his people, so as to be worthy to enter into His glorious rest at His coming. Some time during last January I dreamed the following: I seemed to be at a General Conference, which was held in a very large building. At the farther end I saw two platforms, one about three feet higher than the other. The top platform was not near so long as the other. On the largest platform sat twelve men, in a half circle, facing the top platform, upon which sat three men, brother Joseph Smith in the center and addressing the twelve. On his right sat Bro. W. W. Blair. The brother on his left I did not fully recognize. In another part of the house I saw four men who had been called into the Quorum of the Twelve, three of whom I knew. It seemed to me that they were called into the quorum, two at a time, as they stood two and two, about twenty feet apart.

Dear Herald:-It is with gladness that I write to you. We have had a big meeting down here lately. Brn. G. H. Hilliard and I. A. Morris, of Wayne county, came down and preached twelve or more discourses on the gospel plan, they being the first of our Elders to preach here. They first preached in the Baptist Church house here; then in the Methodist, to large congregations. A part of the time the houses would not hold the people who came. Several of them said it was the first time they ever heard the gospel preached in its fulness. A great many are investigating, and want to hear more gospel truth. Three were baptized, two from the Campbellite Church and one from the Baptist Church. Bro. Hilliard intends to come back again soon. Then we look for more to come into the true fold. Brn. Hilliard and Morris are noble workers for the cause of truth. We want all the Saints to pray for us here, that we may live as becometh Saints, and that there may be a branch of the Church built up in this locality.

Your brother in the one faith,

AARON BURLISON.

WHEELER'S GROVE REUNION.

I was solicited near the close of the above reunion, to write up the same. I do so from memory, not expecting to be so called upon, and therefore did not take notes for that purpose. The ground was the property of brethren H. and C. Smith, and sloped to the west and north. The shade of the beautiful grove was ample. The perfect atrangements told plainly that the committee were both energetic and faithful in performing their trust. None had a just cause to complain of their treatment.

The first meeting was held the afternoon of the 5th; brethren H. Kemp and W. W. Blair occupied the hour. Brethren W. W. Blair and C. Derry were appointed to have charge. The Sabbath dawned upon us, and the clouds weeping copiously upon the camp, in seeming sympathy with brother and sister Wilson over the loss of their little darling. The clouds parted and the genial sun made cheerful faces; the people gathered, and the meetings were continued. On Monday the rain fell most of the day, but no meeting failed, which was true of the whole time. When it was too stormy to meet on the ground we gathered either to the church or one of the large tents. The following brethren did the preaching:-W. W. Blair, C. Derry, M. H. Forscutt, J. W. Gillen, J. F. McDowell, H. Kemp and R. M. Elvin. Prayer meetings were held at half-past nine in the morning. The people who thronged to the services during the pleasant weather, expressed themselves highly pleased with the preaching. The last day, the largest congregations assembled that were ever seen in that vicinity, on any occasion. A meeting to consider the propriety of holding another camp meeting in 1886 was held, and an affirmative vote prevailed. Brn. D. Hougas, C. Smith and S. Wood were chosen as the committee to have full charge; to appoint time and place, and to provide speakers. The writer was authorized to state that the next meeting would be held in the light of the moon in September.

During the meetings, eight were baptized. I hope those most interested will excuse the poverty of this description, and will simply say, that under the circumstances, the Reunion was a grand success. May the "camp fires" be shining in the darkness from east and west, north and south, till all have been warned in the spirit of power, wisdom, and meekness, bring about an increase of righteousness that God may be worshiped in spirit and in truth. I baptized one at Farm Creek on last Tuesday. Reached home last evening tired and weary. Family well. I go to Greenwood, a "Christain" stronghold, on Saturday.

In gospel bonds, Robt. M. Elvin.

HAMILTON, Australia,
August, 11th, 1885.

Dear Bro. Foseph:-I thought I would, by the help of my Heavenly Father write to the Herald. that my testimony might be added to the many that have gone to nearly the whole world through the press, to testify of the truth of the working power of our God in these last days. It is twelve months last February since I was baptized; and my dear brothers and sisters, I have proved that by obedience to the ordinances of the gospel of Christ, that God will reveal to each one that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that we may know for ourselves of the truth that is in the word that he spake to all his servants in days of old, and also in these last days to Joseph his chosen prophet, by a holy angel from heaven. I feel so thankful that I have been permitted to live in these days. For this cause I was searching for truth, the word of God. My Savior has said that man should "not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." I was one of the prominent officers in the Salvation Army, and not one particle of a hypocrite to the cause, but willing to give my life for it. And I was about to lay a good trade off my hands, and give up everything in this world, as I thought for the gospel; but oh, the goodness of God in keeping watch over all them that are willing to lay everything aside for the truth's sake, and that alone, and not to please man. I would to God that there were agreat many more in this Salvation Army in Newcastle. And my dear comrades I will tell you how much that I was deceived; for after God had convinced me of the truth through brother David Williams. and I had obeyed the first principles of the gospel, I thought I should soon have quite a number of my old companions unite with the Saints; but how sadly mistaken I was; for I had quite a great many come to overthrow the truth that I had received; but the devil and his angels, with all the agencies he employs, can not do that; and soon they found that it was to no use, so they soon came to the conclusion to leave me alone: and I soon saw the necessity of clinging to the word of God with prayer which is one of the strongest props that holds the Saints up in the trials that we have to meet in this life. And I am glad that our Heavenly Father has heard and answered my prayers on the behalf of my companion, for I have had the great pleasure of seeing her come in to the church with others as well. And when I was told that the children of the world were spiritually drunk, I wondered how that was possible; and as I went one night to hear the salvation soldiers give their testimony, I had not been there over five minutes until it brought tears to my eyes to see what a wretched state they were in, and it was then that God gave me the power to see them in that drunken state. And this is what the Spirit revealed to me; that if there were twelve drunken men closed in one one room, they would not be able to see their folly; but if I took one away until he became quite sober, and then take him back and put him with the eleven that were still drunk, he would soon see their folly; and so I had been spiritually drunk, and I had now received the gospel, and that I was now sober and had come to see my old companions. I was now able to see their folly in being led by "the blind." My prayer to God is, that very many that are now without sight may soon receive sight, and be able to lead some to the Savior, who can save to the uttermost all that will come as a little child. Dear comrades, let us still sow the seed, (the word of God), and sow it free from all tares—keep it pure as the sun; then if it should fall on good and honest soil, when it springs up it will not be wheat and tares. I love the word when it is pure; for it is sweet to my taste. We have brother Burton, sister Burton and their daughter, visiting the Saints in Australia, and I find them a great help to me in giving good council to the church here in Wallsend. But brother Burton has gone to other parts to visit the Saints.

I love the Saints, because there is such a different principle with them than with any other body of people. And so there ought to be, for the Spirit of Christ makes "new creatures" of us; and to God be all the praise for it. I sent Bro. Joseph some tunes for the Music Book, but have never heard whether they arrived safe or not. My prayer to God is, that we all who have received the true light, may walk in it, and enjoy much of it, that it may shine in our homes, by our firesides, that our children may see it, and in the workshop, behind the counter, and on the scaffold, that our laborers may see it, and that our neighbors may know it by our kindness to all, is my prayer and practice.

Yours in the liberty of the Spirit of Christ, H. BROADWAY.

> Wellsville, Kansas, September 1st, 1885.

David Dancer: - Most dear and beloved brother. Inclosed you will find five dollars. I want it applied to help the Advocate, believing that the Advocate has done, and will do if continued, a great deal in opening the eyes of the Utah Mormons. I have a great desire for the welfare of our brethren of the Brighamites. We must do our best to convince them that we love them. and are trying to get them back in the good way, that in which they once started, the good way of life and salvation. Many of them have suffered a great deal. Witness their sufferings in Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois, and what they underwent in going to Salt Lake, and since they have been there. When for the wrongs that they suffered in Missouri they humbly appealed to our Government for redress, the President and Congress did not heed their prayers, and for the murder of Joseph and Hyrum, but one man went to jail, and he only for a short time.

It seems that at one time the people of the United States looked upon the Mormons as outlaws, having no rights in common with other citizens of the country-that law never was made for a Mormon. Now all of this neglect and suffering caused by the people of the United States has been taken advantage of by their Utah leaders, and cunningly handled to harden their hearts against the people of the United States, and to encourage retaliation. Had the Utah leaders taught the pure doctrine of Jesus Christ-"Pray for them that curse you, do good unto them that hate you;" and "love your enemies"—if the above and all the rest of the law of the gospel had been set before them, they would to-day be altogether a better people.

Your brother,
L. B. RICHMOND.

Editors Herald:-Among the host of congratulations of which you are the recipients, please accept mine, for the prosperity of the Herald and the growth of the work. The efforts of the Herald, the well timed work of the Advocate, the earnest work of the ministry from "63" to the present hour, aided and abetted by that stalwart (young though able) warrior—the Expositor—is now culminating in the fruitious fulfilment of the promises long ago made, that the pure in heart should be re-gathered from the land of Salt, and help to rebuild the waste places of Zion in this land. I am thankful to say that while all eyes are now watching the success of our loved Prophet and his helpers in the valley, the work is not forgotten nor neglected "in the regions round about; but that members and ministry are being wrought upon by a reviving animus to do more and better work than ever before. This part of the vineyard has caught a portion of this progressive spirit, and the "sleepers in Zion" are waking up to renewal of industry and energy, calling to each other, and answering from the watchtowers of duty.

The re-union held at Osborne city is reported as one of the grandest meetings yet held in the North-west Kansas District; five additions by baptism have been the means of another blessing to receivers and received, and the conference which followed seems to have closed with a rejuvenated ministry enthused with the spirit of preaching mightily upon them. I did not have the privilege of meeting with the brethren there. but in lieu thereof I seized my "grip," which contains those beautiful books so kindly presented to me by the Scandinavian Branch, and other dear friends, and hied me away to Thayer county, Nebraska, where I met Bro. Love, who had prepared openings in three school houses, with appointments in each. I arrived on Friday evening, spoke on Saturday evening to a very large audience, (for a country place), with excellent liberty and favorable results. Sunday forenoon spoke again in the same house, but the earliness of the hour, together with a very rainy prospect, resulted in a decreased attendance; Had fair liberty and good attention, and I was enabled to leave a good impression on the hearers. Sunday afternoon I addressed a full house in another building, speaking on first principles, dwelling particularly on their essentiality. At the close I had a little cross-firing with a Methodist brother, who had been baptized in infancy-without essentiality or effect—and he claimed to have received the Holy Ghost in riper years, with no signs following save that of a "holy life," which was the greatest evidence ever given of apostolic Christianity. A few pointed questions enabled me to use him as a living specimen of modern orthodoxy, and contrast the same with the Christianity of the Pentecostal period. With all his effort to appear complacent, it was plainly evident that the comparison was not desirable on his part. Another gentleman thought it ungenerous to assume that his ancestors should be doomed to misery after having lived at peace and in harmony with all men, yet died without a knowledge of the gospel as we preach it. When I informed him of the "kingdom from the foundation of the world" for the noble and good of earth, and the "mansion" to be prepared for a dwelling place with Christ as our elder brother, and that the gospel was to prepare us for that mansion, rather than to enable us simply to escape hell; he seemed perfectly satisfied.

After three hours' detention at this last place, we had barely time to travel one and a half miles, take a hasty lunch somewhat after the manner of the Israelitish passover in Egypt, i. e., hat on, loins girded, and staff in hand, then haste away three and a half miles for the evening service, where we found a full house of deeply interested hearers, who refused to let me go without a promise to address them again, which I promised to do on Tuesday evening following. Thus, after three sermons, (which with the extra detention in the afternoon), consuming nearly six hours all told, and riding eleven miles in a lumber wagon, I found rest and sleep welcome guests.

Monday evening I spoke in the city schoolroom of Hebron, the county seat of Thayer county. The audience was not large, but very attentive. At the close of my remarks, sundry reflections were cast on the life and character of "Joe Smith;" the gold Bible;" the character and fellowship of the Utah Mormons; which, with their answers; detained us till ten p. m., after which we had to drive seven miles to Bro. Love's residence, in the face of an approaching storm. The darkness became so intense, that we could not see the horses attached to the wagon, except when the lurid glare of the lightning lit up our surroundings for a moment with a dazzling light, then left us in a darkness more intense, if possible, than before. The horses getting bewildered, could not keep the road, and we were obliged to stop on the open prairie. After a few minutes the storm burst upon us with no protection but an umbrella, which broke the violence of the storm, but did not prevent the water reaching us, until it ran from our hats in a stream. After some twenty minutes we were able to follow the road, and make the best of our way for the remaining four miles, while the rain continued to fall, but with much more moderation.

On Tuesday evening I met my friends again, according to promise; had a full house and the best of order and attention. I left them with a promise to revisit them on the 19th, with a course of eight lectures on the principles of the gospel. Bro. and Sr. Love and family are not ashamed of of the gospel of Christ, and have made a good impression on the neighbors regarding the work. I never entered a neighborhood where I felt more at home, or was more kindly treated. The brethren in whose district I have been laboring will please take notice, and if I am trespassing, please to so instruct me. I was gone exactly six days, preached six times, and traveled five and a half miles on foot and ninety-two miles by wagon, an average of sixteen miles and one discourse per day. If the blessed influnces of the Spirit, and the consciousness of having done my duty is pleasure, then this was a pleasure trip, and I richly enjoyed it. If the natural change of scenery, the extra labors of sisters and friends to provide the toothsome morsel, or the restful couch, is the sum total of pleasure, then please excuse me, for these are a weariness of body. And I find more enjoyment in my garden, home, or in my office among my exchanges, type, or at my desk. But blessed with the Spirit, my measure is full.

In the latter part of July I visited Red Cloud and Amboy, Nebraska, where Brn. Parsons and Beebe had made an opening before me. I reached there late on Saturday night, found Sr. Saladin, husband and family, all of whom gave me a generous greeting. Mr. Saladin, though not a member, merits the warmest esteem for warm-hearted generosity extended toward us as a people, in administering to our comfort and necessities. Like all wise and honest men, he want a fact to set his foot on at every step of investigation, and when he finds the fact, he readily adopts it. I am exceedingly thankful that for such there is a condition prepared better than this world affords. But I earnestly hope he may yet receive a brotherhood in the kingdom of Christ, rather than be a ministering servant in the king's household. Sr. Saladin is wide awake, earnest, thoughtful, and well informed, bearing the impress of the Spirit of the Master as received through the ministration of him who confirmed her a member of God's household while she was in the salt land. I preached twice on Sunday, and returned home on Monday.

In the early part of August I visited Warwick, in the north-west corner of Republic county, where I found Bro. and Sr. Wilkins, who received me kindly, and spared no pains to make my visit an agreeable one. While Bro. Wilkins' sympathies are largely with us, he has never accepted the fulness of the testimony. A few months after receiving adoption and a part of this ministry (Teacher) a Mr. John R. Goodenough, whom I met a few years ago in discussion in Iowa, while he was ministering for the Seventh Day Adventists, at which time he denied the succession of Matthias to the apostleship—the continuation of the apostolic, prophetic and miraculous evidences, and order of the church militant, who, leaving the Advent fold came to Kansas and organized a class called the Church of God, into which Bro. Wilkins became a member by the ordinance of baptism. He now seems to be alone, holds rigidly to the seventh-day, the unconscious condition of the spirit after death, and as I understand him, denies the existence of hell. I spoke Friday and Saturday evenings, and twice on Sunday. In the last discourse I touched on rewards and punishments, which seemed to arouse Bro. Wilkins, who made a brief reply, resenting our position, and ended by a challenge to combat; which challenge I neither accepted nor rejected, as he represented no one but himself. Before leaving I arranged with the citizens so that if they desired to have the subject discussed in their town, with friend Wilkins as the negative, and would make the necessary arrangements, they might count on my presence. And thus the matter stands at present. If I have appeared prolix in this letter, I hope my brethren will pardon me on the same ground that the Irish sailor urged an answer to his prayer when shipwrecked—it has been a long time since I have written to the Herald.

For Zion's cause, I am fraternally,

IOHN D. BENNETT.

Brocton, Mass., September 7th, 1885.

Pres. Blair, Dear Brother.-I believe that in the past the devil has had sins to bear for which he was not responsible; but there is an unsettled difference, in my mind, between myself and the printer's devil in the Herald Office in regard to several errors in letter of issue of August 22d. If the mistakes are those for which I am responsible, tell the typos I am willing to be forgiven for hasty writing, &c., and will endeavor to do my own translating hereafter; only I did wish, when I scanned it in print, that they hadn't followed so closely "the letter that killeth," but had "guessed again," as e. g., page 549, third column, second paragragh, read "forces seen and unseen," for "foreseen and unseen," and in other places the sense confused by wrong or lack of punctuation,

Since that writing I have visited New Bedford, Plymouth, Dennisport and Fall River, besides doing what I was able in other directions as led by the Spirit. I have been blessed with the comfort and direction of the Holy Spirit in my moves, with success and failures enough to show me where my strength lies. Had an excellent social meeting yesterday forenoon at sacrament service in this place. Spoke in the afternoon with only fair liberty, but was blessed in the evening. Some interested strangers were out, and all were satisfied. I think that good is being done, and the Lord is moving upon some to obey the truth as manifested in the word and Spirit.

We are expecting brethren Kelley and Scott soon, and will hail their coming and aid. A large attendance at the Providence Conference is indicated.

The advance sheet of the Spaulding story is out. If it holds out as begun, what a monument it will prove to the genius and piety of the Rev. Presbyterian! Exit Braden! I felt the Spirit upon me when I first heard of the discovery of the manuscript, and am satisfied that it is the original and only.

But then the devil has neither died nor exhausted his repertoire of lies, and we needn't be surprised at anything in the way of invention by him, or his clerical agents especially, that promises to keep the people from the investigation of the truth of God. Braden's misfortunes having seemingly taken him out of the way, his henchman, Mr. Demming, probably realizes "that its an ill wind that blows nobody good," and is anxious for the manuscript, that "the Mormons burned up." He might succeed better than Messrs. Howe and Hurlbut, and turn an honest penny by nogotiating with the Police Gazette! I wonder what Ellen Dickenson will think of her great uncle's novel? Too much piety [of the kind] in the Spaulding family! Howe, Hurlbut, Braden, Demming, et al, seem to be troubled in the same way. The time will come when these people or their children will learn that they can not afford to be willingly ignorant, or wilfully unjust toward those who defend unpopular truths. Ellen Dickenson has misrepresented and slandered the Saints in this country; but the people are getting their eyes opened, and Phariseeism must procure new cloaks. Miss Dicksenson, too, wants her Uncle's manuscript! and thinks she ought to have it! Perhays she had!

Thanks be to God for his care and the diligence and wisdom of our brethren. Our interests are wisely and safely covered, so far as that is concerned, in any event. But it wouldn't help her new book which is to destroy Mormonism, and which she fondly hopes will be the humble means of—making money.

Editor Herald:-Thinking a few words from this part of the Lord's vineyard would be of interest to some of the Herald readers, I write. The work of the Lord will prosper if we do our part. I strove to get an Elder into this part of the vineyard to speak to the people, and Bro. John D. Bennett from Caba, Kansas, came and preached six discourses on the first principles of of the gospel, which received gladly by the people, and he was invited to come again. He is to be here the 19th to hold a series of meetings on the design of the gospel of Christ-faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of the hands, &c., also that prophets are needed, and that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and the Book of Mormon is divine in its origin and purports. The people seem to be much interested in his discourses. May the good work roll on, is my prayer.

Yours is gospel bonds,

M. A. LOVE.

CLITHERALL, Minn., September 2d, 1885.

Dear Herald:—I have been a member of this church since March. Every meeting I go to helps to make me stronger in this faith. Brother Holt has been with us since conference and has done a great deal of good; he has baptized four, and more will come with us in the near future. One meeting was held about ten miles from where Bro. Holt was staying; he preached there in the forenoon, and announced a meeting for afternoon. After services closed at noon, a committee and several others (said to represent the community) waited on brother Holt and requested him to leave and not preach there any more, which of course he declined to do, and told them as long as the door was not locked he would preach. When they saw they could not frighten him away with words, they of course locked the school house. We learned afterwards that a meeting was held in the hall not far from there, where the people decided to send a committee to forbid us the house. There was nothing in the sermon which he preached that they objected to; but because he believed Joseph Smith to be a prophet, which they would not have known by his preaching if they had not have asked him directly the question. In the afternoon not far from there we held a meeting, two were baptized.

Next Sunday the meeting will be held at this end of the town. Brethren Foss and Holt will both be there. Some thought we would have more opposition than before; but the Saints do not think so. This northern branch is growing rapidly, and has received many blessings. Brn. Holt and Foss are going to leave us in a week, but brother Holt is coming back to remain with us through the winter. We have quite a large branch here. I had not heard this doctrine till about two years ago. It gives one great joy to read the letters in the Herald.

Your sister in the one faith,

CORA CRANE.

Nephi, Juab Co., Utah, September 5th, 1885.

D. Dancer, Esq., Dear Brother:—Having read the Herald some time in the past, and to my entire satisfaction, I would not be without it for much; for it is always freighted with good instruction. And to me, like to many others, it is the only preacher I have. I am just proud of such a paper, as also the Advocate; for they set forth the truth as it is in the Scriptures. And I hope you may have success in the future, that the Herald may continue to flourish and point out the good way.

ANDREW P. LARSEN.

Summary of Aews.

Sept. 13th.—At Salt Lake City, Utah, this morning at one o'clock some parties, evidently Mormon revengers, threw two two-quart jars full of privy-vault filth, mixed with sand, through the window of the parlor of United States Commissioner McKay, who has heard most of the unlawful cohabitation cases One burst, spattering floor and furniture ruining the room. Two were also thrown at the window of United States Attorney Dickson, aimed at the bed where he slept, but struck the window-casing, bursting over the outside walls. Two were thrown in the house of Assistant-Attorney Varian, where his wife was alone with a sick child, doing much damage. There is no clew, but much indignation.

Sept. 15th.—Judge Powers, of Michigan, the new Chief Justice of Utah, is in Washington, having been called by the President to talk over Mormon matters. Mr. Powers says that Mr. Cleveland is determined to wage as fierce a war as possible against the Mormons, and has instructed the judicial officers to carry out the law to the fullest and most rigorous extent. He was pleased to hear from Judge Powers that the war was working well, and that polygamists greatly fear it. A large number of leading Mormons are now under indictment, among them being John Taylor and George Q. Cannon, the latter being at the present time fugitives from justice.

Sept. 16th.—The grand jury at Salt Lake City, Utah, to-day found five indictments under the United States laws. Judge Zane, responding to the request for instructions, ruled an indictment for unlawful cohabitation was proper for every distinct violation of the law shown. The offender might be indicted every day an offense was shown. Ellen Birmingham, the second wife of Thomas Birmingham, was before the grand jury to-day, and said she had been married eight years, and had three children, one four years ago by Birmingham and two others since, but didn't know who was the father. She couldn't remember like some folks. Eliza Shafer and Elizabeth Starkey were sent to the penitentiary for contempt on their refusal to answer questions as to the polygamous relations of the first with John W. Snell and of the second with Andrew White.

A POLYGAMOUS BISHOP FINED.

HE PROMISES TO HEREAFTER RESPECT THE LAWS OF HIS COUNTRY.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept. 18.—Bishop John Sharp, the Utah director of the Union Pacific and one of the wealthiest and most influential Mormons living, appeared in court to-day and pleaded guilty to unlawful cohabitation. He claimed that the plural marriage was entered into before there was any statute against it and that the marriage was contracted in good faith according to the Mormon religion, but he recognized the supremacy of his adopted country's laws, and would live within them henceforth. He would not advise any one else to break them. He was fined $300, and discharged on the payment.

The statement is made that England does not intend to support Germany in her claims respecting the sovereignty of the Caroline Islands, but offers to mediate with Spain for the settlement of the question. The London Times says: "England has done nothing further than officially to notify Spain of her adherence to the note of 1875, and advise her to agree to Germany's proposal to submit the question to an arbitrator."

A New Haven, Conn., dispatch says: "While the Rev. Mr. Clark was preaching in East Haven Congregation Church, and had finished the prayer preceding the sermon, a dove alighted upon the center gallery, in full view of the congregation, and began cooing. When he had finished his prayer the dove perched on the gallery railing opposite the clergyman. When he read the first chapter of St. John's gospel at the thirty-second verse—"I saw the spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him"—the dove flew to the desk and perched upon the open page of the Bible. The pastor's text was from the fourth verse. It then settled upon the platform below the pulpit during the sermon.

At the conclusion the pastor engaged in sacramental services and closed the Bible. The bird thrice stepped from the book and on again, and then nestled by its side. When he had concluded the pastor referred to the interruption and coincidence, and said that the winged visitor might be taken as emblematical of the spirit in the church. Then the bird perched upon the pastor's head. The effect was electrical, and many ladies were in tears. The pastor took the dove and held it to his breast and gave the benediction. It was Stephen Bradley's pet dove which had followed his sister to church. The rest of the family had tried to drive the little thing back, but it followed the young lady in, and flew by the way of the gallery stairs. Much comment is made in East Haven, and it is regarded as almost miraculous.

The remedy for corpulence, according to the Lancet, is in the method of eating and drinking. If we only ate more deliberately, it says, we should find half of our accustomed quantity of food sufficient to satisfy the most eager cravings of hunger. Let men of all classes who lead healthy lives resolve to eat and drink slowly.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

OF all the blessings which it has pleased Providence to allow us to cultivate, there is none more freely given than the blessing of health. Do we ever wonder why many do not receive the blessing when resorting to the prayer of faith? I will now give you a very common reason, and that is disobedience to the laws of health. If I put my hand in the fire and burn it, and then ask God to relieve me of the pain, He will not hear, because I am the cause of the harm. I will have to suffer the consequences. And if I continually disobey the laws of health, and bring sickness upon myself, and then ask God to bless me with health and strength, he will not hear me; but I will have to suffer a The Lord is always willchastisement. ing to bless us in our efforts to promote health, if we do not receive immediate relief.

I noticed an article in the Herald a few numbers back, in which the question was asked, Shall we sleep with windows open? One says yes, and another emphatically no. Now I will give my answer according to my judgment and experience. If the room is a small one, by all means ventilate it, but not from both sides, as this will cause a draft. It is better to lower the top sash. as the impure and warm air is lighter, and will ascend to the top of the room. This will sometimes give us cold. But why? Simply because of the change of habit, and vice versa. A person who is accustomed to the habit of bundling up his neck with a scarf, upon going without it once, will take cold, because of the change of habit and conditions; but this is no reason why all should form the habit of wearing The four things essential to health are ventilation, exercise, diet, and clean-

I have often entered the sick room, where impure air and odious drugs were enough to make a well person sick. It seems to me that enlightened people lack wisdom on this point more than the heathen.

Now a few facts concerning the word of wisdom. I am well aware that many continue the use of strong tea and coffee, and I may as well say tobacco and liquors, from the belief that it is a supporter of vitality; that it stimulates and gives strength to the weary. But I will say to all such, you are laboring under a great mistake, that it produces the opposite result, and diminishes instead of giving strength. Here I will quote the words of Dr. Kellogg:

"Does alcohol give strength, or is alcohol stimulating? If by a stimulant we are to understand something which imparts force to the body when weakened by disease or fatigue, then it is evident that alcohol can be of no service in this direction; for it is incapable of supplying force, undergoing no change in the body. stimulant is meant something which excites nervous action, which calls out the manifestations of force, then alcohol is certainly a stimulant. And it is in this sence only that it is a stimulant. The lash is a stimulant to a tired horse. It does not increase his force, or make him any less tired. It only compels him to use a little more of his already depleted strength. A goad, a spur, a red-hot iron, would have the same effect. So with alcohol."

Dr. Edmunds says:

"A stimulant is that which gets strength out "A stimulant is that which got out of a man. Such a process could not be very beneficial to a person already debilitated. weary man feels better after taking wine, because he does not know that he is weary—that his tissues need repair. If he continues to labor, he continues to wear out his tissues, and increases the necessity for rest, even though he may not know it."

Then it is plainly shown that alcohol appears to do the very thing that it does not. The same may be said of tobacco, tea, and coffee. I will refer to a case that came under my observation. A certain lady who was at one time a slave to tea drinking, was never free from headache. Sometimes her suffering was intense; and the only relief she could find would be in taking a strong cup of tea, which temporaliy relieved her. On being advised by myself and others to reduce the amount of tea taken daily from a half dozen strong cups to one weak cup she resolved to try. At first her suffering increased, but after a few days it gradually subsided, and her general health improved.

There are those who can clearly see the injurious effects of these habits of intemperance, but continue to drink on the plea that they can not give it up. Let me say to all such, that all kinds of habits, no matter how old or of what nature,—can be, and have been entirely conquered. But how this end is to be acomplished is of importance to consider. There is but one way to meet with perfect success, and that is by and through a strictly pure and chaste life, together with dependence upon God for blessings. God will take away appetites and passions, but we must depend upon our own strength and resources for a perfect restoration, if we continue to break the laws of health.

He is a hero stout and brave, Who fights an unseen foe. And puts beneath his feet at last. His passions, base and low.

ELDER J. CAFFALL'S REPORT.

HERALD.—Thinking the body should know to some extent at least, of the doings of its representatives, I write. After the adjournment of the Annual Conference, I visited, and spent one Sabbath at Armstrong, Kansas, and was some time in consultation with Bro. Wm. Newton of Wyandotte, relative to church mat-Nothing is more essential for the spread and building up of the church than frequent consultation with officers, from Deacon to President; all have to deal with the souls of men. This fact certainly involves a necessity for continuous efforts with members and quorum to produce and retain a feeling of assured confidence and esteem, instead of suspicion and distrust; a feeling of cordial support, instead of watchful dread that one should get in advance of the other in exercising more authority than would be due. It is very clear that duties imposed on the apostles by Christ led to work with members subsequent to their adoption as before, and it would sometimes seem as if the latter was more arduous. For me to boast of knowledge, would be wicked, and I feel so far from doing it as to mourn because of my barrenness. Yet, interrogations on, and effects made visible through a failure to observe the recognized church discipline is surprising indeed. And the words of Paul foom up to my mimd:—"For when for the time, ye ought to be teachers, ye need that one teach you again," etc. And I think of the simplicity and adaptability of the church discipline to all capacities, and conclude that trouble through its nonobservance, is the result of ignorance, or wilfulness, either of which would render any Latter Day Saint of a sane mind culpable. Your columns have been laden with precious instruction to the effect that, while the body or members thereof are not all equally intelligent, we may be equally godly and zealous.

Why don't we learn, and become more thorough in practice of that which is practicable? But so dazzling does the theoretical appear, that the grandeur of practice seems well nigh eclipsed. Simple in its construction, but wonderful in its results, is the gospel economy inaugurated by Christ made effective to the souls of men by the sheding of His blood. Its promulgation necessitates such an organization, which essaying its support, or aid in its perpetuity, more effectively exhibits man's traits of character than any other known system. We talk of and seek to impose humility, contrition, submission, self-abnegation, etc, on others. But O how we like to play the sovereign! We insist on others saying they are wrong, but what a gigantic work to say "I did wrong;" or, "I'am wrong." We depreciate dogmatism and an unwarranted persistency in others, but how noble are the exhibition in self (?). Sharp practice and intrigue are evidences of moral degradation in others, but to what an elevated pinnacle does self raise Mr. Self, when by such godless tricks he reaches a point, or gains an end! The advocate of free thought stands aghast as his searching eyes fall on the answer to Saul of Tarus' interrogation, viz, "Lord what will thou have me do?" and sees the words, "It shall there be told thee what thou must do." This calls into question his abilities to demonstrate the fact what the word "must," means; and a step taken in keeping therewith is the entrance into bondage, etc., by which man forfeits his right making himself a serf, when he should be a sovereign. If it can be proven (which I don't admit) that accepting and doing as bidden by the above command makes us serfs, it is quite clear we are kept serfs. For all subsequent commands are just as imperative as those by which we become members of the kingdom, or body, nor can we retain a standing without the same implicit obedience as we exhibited in seeking to become members. It is an admitted fact that all law is arbitrary; and who can change this solomn fact! And the latter day prophet taught that "that which is governed by law is preserved by law," etc. "And to all laws there are bounds also, and conditions." Nothing more consistent or true could escape the lips of mortals. And notwithstanding its advocacy, absolute rights and absolute freedom is absolute nonsense. Nor is the advocacy of an exclusive system, by which we can alone be made citizens of the body of Christ, and the retention of that membership by doing as we please, whether we please to observe rules and laws equally authoritative, are no less absurd.

The cause of the latter day apostacy may be attributed to a failure to prevent innovation; and whether that innovation was effected by a designing and despotic priesthood, or by the persistency of the body under the pretext of liberty, so far as the finality is concerned, it is immaterial; as one is as subversive of the designs of God as the other. For Christ said to his apostles, "Who rejecteth you rejecteth me;" which meant that in whatever work their appointment authorized them to engage, they were to be sustained, or it meant nothing. And though the revelation of 1882 falls like the gentle dewdrop, it is significant, nevertheless, but extends no special right, or license, for all are amenable to law. None, none exempt. The laws of adoption adopts irrespective of age, ignorance, intelligence, riches, poverty, nationality, race or color. And the method of adjudication is alike broad, and no more savors of partisanship than does the pure of the base metal, which has been seven times purified. And though a torturing of plain stated facts to evade, or subvert justice to reach a coveted point, might be crowned with success, yet when retributive justice, in its triumphal car, shall dash on to claim its own, joy thus gained will be turned into the bitterest sorrow. How pregnant with meaning is the declaration, By thy words thou art justified, and by thy words shalt thou be condemned."

The advocates of the strange and marvelous latter day work are not called upon to compromise with those preaching a perverted gospel, nor are they designedly to render themselves obnoxious, to raise the ire of their opponents and then congratulate themselves in being persecuted for righteousness' sake. And so we are commanded not to "boast of mighty faith nor talk judgment," with promise that we "shall find favor in the eyes of the people," etc, But this don't amount to a guarantee that all who hear will embrace the gospel; nor does it warrant efforts to captivate by adopting the silly forms of modern Babylon. For 'tis impossible to adorn the gospel in her habiliments, and if we can not stand the native simplicity of the primitive gospel, it were better to turn orthodox at once, for there is no affinity between the two. And though there are many honorable men and women on the earth, the effects of a general apostacy from the primitive gospel are visible. It takes the gospel to produce gospel excellence and secure celestial glory. The declaration of Christ was doubtless true; viz: "There is none that doeth good, no not one," "all have sinned": etc. But in what sense was it true, and how shall we apply it? Were there none who spoke a kind word to the unfortunate, fed the hungry, or clothed the naked? None who delighted in virtue? May we not rather say, because of the nonobservance of heaven's order, through which the good that can only lead to God can come. He declared none were doing good. For it must be admitted this was the good he came to point them to, and inspire them to aspire, live, contend, and work for. Then as God reveals the method through which good is to come, ought we not to know that we are seeking good through his appointed method before we take honor to ourselves for doing good? For what of all our works, however stupendous, if they do not receive God's seal! And how shall they receive his seal unless wrought through his appointed method? I wonder what use it is for the church to say there should be organized quorums of Elders, if all do not enroll? And if one may refuse, why not another, and another, even all. And if all, what becomes of the church order, and what of the church? If some are expected to labor under General Conference appointment meet and endure the ills, toils, fatigues, changes of diet, water, association, etc., incident to the life of a traveling Elder, why should others be indulged in entering into arrangements by which they are sheltered from these inconveniences and changes? I know there are brethren who have given the best days of their manhood to the church, now growing feeble. They should be cared for and their burdens lessened. But all whose acceptation of a position obligates, ought to willingly share the burden, unless physically or otherwise disabled, or prevented. Innovation on established order should not be tolerated, through any false delicacy or cunning pretext, nor special favors lavished, because of talent or position. Nelson's memory would have perished long since, if in the midst of shots from the foe he had said, "England expects every man this day to do his duty," and then left his men alone to face the foe. But since the grand man stood side by side with his men in the practical and arduous work, and thus fell, his name is still green in the hearts of his countrymen for doing his duty.

The wonderful explosion of the Spaulding romance, with the development of the fact that polygamy is an innovation on the doctrine and practices of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, stamps this as a providential period, were the pious, oxthodox people blest, (or cursed) with a deceptive clairvoyance, and so imagined that they could see the famous "romance" in Mr. Rice's trunk where it slumbered for forty-six years? or did they deliberately lie when declaring the Book of Mormon was made from it? which! Will the joy of these pious ones become so intense at seeing their loved "romance" in its native simplicity as to induce them to rise and explain? We shall see. From June 29th to August 16th, eighteen Grove-meetings were held within the limits of the Central Nebraska District. Attendance and interest exceeded expectation. Six adults were added, more investigating; many heard an exposition of our faith for the first time; a great change is seen in Mrs.—who had become despondent in the thought of having sinned away the day of grace. The tracts received in June were well distributed; we want more, say one hundred thousand, for Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, and Wyoming, with a few thousand of the Voice of Warning, and Joseph Smith's visions "for gratuitous distribution. What is the prospect? Are there not some Saints who want to add new lustre to their already dazzling reputation, by giving a few hundred dollars to the tract fund? We want tracts. The silent messengers can go and remain where a noisy Elder dare not tread. A copy of the "What is oxthodoxy," should be sent to every orthodox minister in Europe, and America. It might be hard for their theological stomachs to digest, but with some, it might work the needed revolution, while it would not materially injure any.

Elder R. M. Elvin is pushing the cause in Southern Nebraska District; Bro. L. Anthony president thereof moving as his circumstances permit; E. C. Brand operating with effect in the Northern District. Bro. Wm. Rumel as president, is active. On my way to this point, I attended the conference of the Central Kansas District, at Netawaka, August 22d and 23d. There was a fair representation, Bro. D Williams presiding. There is not much labor being done, though the brethren are anxious, and striving as circumstances permit. Bro. H. Green secured a hall in Whiting, where I delivered three discourses after conference adjourned, well attended.

I came here in time to attend the conference of the North-West Kansas District, a report of which Bro. Parsons has forwarded, and that will suffice. I might add, however, that according to Bro. M. Smith's report (Bishop's Agent), the financial prospect in this district is brightning though meeting with opposition from within. Elder A. H. Parsons and Bro. Case of Blue Rappids, have traveled and preached incessantly during the past three months. Brn. G. Shute, Beebe, and others, are arranging to spend some time in the field this fall. Kansas has many openings, as has Nebraska also. Bro. G. S. Hyde, of the Central Nebraska District, expects to spend some time in the field this fall. His detention at home to attend to secular matters, the Spring and Summer, was a necessity. Members moving into new localities can facilitate the work of organizing new branches by getting letters from branches, and evidencing that all matters were straight from the last place left. Wrongs are not adjusted or atoned for by fleeing to a dfferent point of the compass.

Self-sustaining Elders can find ample labor in Kansas. But I would respectfully suggest that troubles come fast enough without criticism to the effect that the Bishop is partial in disbursing the church funds. And those who delight in such ungodly work are not wanted. If the Bishop is wrong, there is a legitimate way to reach him, as there is every other official. There can be no more diabolical, hypocritical work than for Elders who presume to reprove the world of sin, to thus seek to blast the reputation of brethren who are giving their time and strength to build up the cause. Let shame crimson the face of any and all who take delight in such a soul-destroying practice. And let heads of families, presidents of branches and districts rise up and maintain their dignity in legitimately and persistently discountenancing such ungodly practices when resorted to by any one, where they have jurisdiction. Where is the consistency in an Elder occupying the sacred desk for an hour, in reproving the world of sin, and enjoining moral excellence, and then going to a private house, and berating his brethren who are not there to defend themselves against his ungodly attacks?

Calls are bewildering. I can not respond to all. It is impossible. But I am doing the best I can to utilize the time as it seems to pass with lightning speed. Joseph's visit and labors in Utah are having a salutary effect. We are gaining prestige. But as in the beginning, and in all its incipient stages the Reorganization gains nothing but what is contended vigorously for. If we "hold the fort" it will be by every one standing in his place, and faithfully doing his duty. Why should there be any lack in this direction? The vast ocean is kept pure by constant agitation; and the continuous dropping wears the solid rock. So does the mind that has become susceptible of gospel impression keep pure, wearing away the carnal, bringing it subject to the divine, by a continuous activity in duty's path. This God-appointed course prevents our troubling or interfering with others, until duty marks our course, then, we move to save. OSBORNE, Kansas, Sep. 3d, 1885.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 16, BY S. F. W.

"The races that rose to wealth and power in Central America did not succeed any rude spear maker. The Spaniards conquered a people who had themselves figured in the role of invaders."—DeCosta.

"There are specimens of architecture among the pre-historic works here, especially among those found in Central America, which are certainly quite as far advanced as some of those found in Egypt, Assyria or Greece."—Peet.

At Kaba the cornice running over the door ways, tried by the severest rules of art recognized among us, would embellish the architecture of any known era."—Stephens. The ruins known as Kaba are on the site of what must have been one of the most imposing and important of the more ancient cities.

"It is a point of no little interest that these old constructions belong to different eras in the past, and represent somewhat different phases of civilization. Uxmal... is plainly much more recent than Palengue. Quirigua is older than Copan, and Copan is older than Palenque. The old monuments in Yucatan represent several distinct epochs in the ancient history of that peninsula. Some of them are kindred to those hidden in the great forest, and remind us more of Palenque than of Uxmal."

"The evidence of repeated reconstructions in some of the cities before they were deserted, has been pointed out by explorers. At Palenque as at Mitla, the oldest work is the most artistic. Copan may have become a ruin during the time of the Toltecs, which began long before the Christian era, and ended some five or six centuries, probably, before the country was invaded by Cortez. It was built before their time, for the style of writing, and many features of the architecture and ornamentation, show the workmanship of their predecessors. Though not one of the first cities built by that more ancient and more cultivated people with whom the civilization originated."

Mr. Baldwin's books is small but contains much; he seems to have studied deeply the meaning of the facts he wrote. For instance: "The cosmogony and mythical lore of the Quiches seem to have their root in the beliefs and facts of a time far more ancient than the national beginning of this people." A similar wise remark is made concerning the religious traditions of the Aztecs. They were so much in conflict with the revolting practices of the people that they must have come down from a purer age.

He also recognizes the naturalness of the Quiche national history contained in the "Popul Vuh:" "It enables us to see what they admired in character, as virtue, heroism, nobleness, beauty; it discloses their mythology and their notions of religious worship; in a word, it bears witness to the fact that the various families of mankind are all of one blood so far, at least, as to be precisely alike in nature."

Berro concludes from his linguistic researches that the Palenque civilization was much older than the Toltec and distinct from it. Bradford says the ruins in the South, have undoubted claims to the highest antiquity. Miller says, "The Usumacinta seems a kind of central point for the culture of Central America." The institutions and language of the Olmecs were the same as that of the Toltec peoples, that nominally succeeded them. Like the Toltecs they became extinct as a nation.

"The Maya and Nahua nations have been, within traditionally historic times practically distinct, although coming constantly into contact. This fact is directly opposed to the one, accepted theory of a civilized people, coming from the far north, gradually moving southward with frequent halts; constantly increasing in power and culture until the highest point of civilization was reached in Chiapas, Honduras, and Yucatan, or, as many believed, in South America. This theory is rendered untenable by want of ruins in California, and want of resemblance between the New Mexican and Mexican monuments, by want of Maya and Nahua dialects in the north, and finally by the contrasts between Nahua and Maya monuments and language. Fourth, the monuments of the south are not only different from, but much more ancient than those of Anahuac, and can not possibly have been built by the Toltecs after their migration from Anahuac in the eleventh century, even if such migration took place."

Only a small part of modern Mexico is included in the region where the ruins are situated. Many of those explored in later times were unknown to that people, just as others, more in number doubtless than those already described, remain unvisited and unknown in the great and almost imperetrable forests of the country. "This vast forest which is spread over the northern half of Guatemala and the southern half of Yucatan, and extended into other states, covered an area considerably larger in extent than Ohio or Pennsylvania. Does its position relative to the known ruins afford no suggestion concerning the ancient history of this forest-covered region? It is manifest that in the remote ages, when the older of the cities now in ruins were built, this region was a populous and important part of the country; and this is shown also by the antiquities found wherever it has been penetrated by explorers who knew how to make discoveries, as well as by the old books and traditions. Therefore it is not unreasonable to assume that Copan and Palenque are specimens of great ruins that lie buried in '-Baldwin.

Squier says: "By far the greater proportion of the country is in its primeval state, and covered with dense, tangled and almost impenetrable tropical forests, rendering fruitless all attempts at systematic investigation. There are vast tracts untrodden by human feet, or traversed only by Indians, who have a superstitious reverence for the moss-covered and crumbling monuments, hidden in the depths of the wilderness. • • For these and other reasons, it will be long before the treasures of the past in Central America can become fully known."

Mr. Plongeon makes the statement that part of this forest is guarded from approach by implacable native tribes.

This forest of dead cities I will make the seat of an empire formed by the people driven out from Peru, conjointly with a Hebrew colony that landed at Panuca and settled on the upper Usumacinta. To this southern source of the Maya civilization many of the authorities are committed, while all the pre-Toltec history centers in the locality of the great forest. Chichimecs, Toltecs and Aztecs are traceable back to it. The succession of events in that populous region has not vet been determined, nor the great eras marked out; nor have the ruins been classified so as to show definitely which class belonged to which particular age or nation. The history, too, is mixed up with that of Anahuac. For the present we must assume that the nation here became great, prosperous and wicked, and that the cause of desolation was judgments in physical disturbances. In this connection like facts must be marshalled

Professor Orton in "The Andes and the Amazon," agues in favor of an extreme antiquity of the Peruvian ruins: "Wilson has traced six terraces in going up from the sea through the province of Esmaraldas toward Quito; and underneath the living forest, which is older than the Spanish invasion, many gold, copper, and stone vestiges of a lost population were found. In all cases these relics are situated below the high tide mark, in a bed of marine sediment, from which he infers that this part of the country formerly stood higher above the sea. If this be true, vast must be the antiquity of these remains, for the upheaval and subsidence of the coast is exceedingly slow." In 1860, Mr. Wilson found on the coast of Ecquador, "ancient or fossil pottery, vessels, images, &c., some of which were of gold, in a stratum of surface earth, beneath a marine deposit six feet thick, in a geological formation, 'as old as the drift strata of Europe,' and identical with that of Guayaquil, in which bones of the mastodon are met with." Sir Murchison says: "The discoveries Mr. Wilson has made of the existence of the works of man in a stratum of mould beneath the sea level, and covered by several feet of clay, the phenomenon being persistent for sixty miles, are of the highest interest to physical geographers and geologists. The facts seem to demonstrate that, within the human period the lands on the west coast of Equatorial America were depressed and submerged, and that after the accumulation of marine clays above the terrestrial relics the whole coast was elevated to its present position.

Mr. Willson's and Prof. Orton's conclusions that "Sorato and Chimborazo have looked down upon a civilization far more ancient than that of the Incas, and perhaps coeval with the flint lakes of Cornwall etc.," is based upon the slow subsidence and upheaval of the coast, regardless of the rapidity with which such oscillations sometimes occur, while the time required to form the deposit of clay is not considered. The reference to the bones found at Guavaguil proves nothing to the point, as that animal continued down to traditional times; and the mention of the flint flaks of Cornwall is confusing, for the flint flakes of that locality and gold implements do not represent the same era, nor the same state of civilization.

I will take the liberty of connecting this phenomenon with the kindred occurrences in the mountains of this same region: "The geological conditions of Colombia are equally extraordinary and perplexing. Every where are found traces of stupenduous cataclysms, and a disarrangement and intermixture of primitive and sedimentary rocks which seem to set classification at defiance. In some places great rivers and even small streams have cut through mountains of the hardest rocks, leaving dizzy escarpments on each side; in others are enormous subsidences in the earth, as if the props of its surface had suddenly given way, or vast caverns glistening with stalactites; while everywhere collossal masses, lifted high above the general level, attest the violence of volcanic energies. These agencies are still active in places as in Batan near Sogamoso, where the soil is so much heated that, although in the heart of the Andes, it produces all the fruits of the tropics. The celebrated The celebrated Colombian geologist, Joaquin Acosta, describes great glaciers which he saw in the Paramo of Buiz, a phenomenon which escaped the attention of Humboldt and of Boussengault. Col. Codazzi demonstrated that in the highlands of Bogota, Tunja, and Velez, where is now the densest population, there once existed a system of broad, deep lakes, which, breaking through their barriers, precipitated themselves through what is now the river Suarez, or Sogamoso into the ocean, leaving the traces of their irruption boldly marked on the face of the country. The same authority conceives that this great cataclysm may have occurred within the past four centuries. Some evidence in support of his theory is afforded by two great stones which have been discovered on opposite sides of what must have been the borders of the principal lake; both face toward the points of rupture of the mountains, and the faces of both are covered with sculptures, among which are discoverable figures of the frog (the Chibcha sign of water) with outspread feet, and human figures with upraised arms, in the attitude of surprise and alarm"

De Costa speaks of a submerged continent to the west of Central America, and Dr. Flint of Nicaraugua says: "There is evidence on the west coast of Nicaraugua, and Costa Rica of a submergence of land, under the Pacific, whether a continent or not, I am not able to decide, but on the strip left at Nicoya, jade has been found in abundance." West of San Rafael, and also at Cafares, rock insciptions are seen at low tide, showing a submergence under the Pacific, already noticed." "Brasseur de Bourbourg claims that there is in the old Central America books a constant traditions of an immense catastrophe of the character supposed; that this tradition existed everywhere among the people when they first became known to Europeans; and that recollections of the catastrophe are preserved in some of their festivals, especially in one celebrated in the month of Izcalli, which was instituted to commemorate this frightful destruction of land and people, and in which princes and people humbled themselves before the divinity, and besought him to withhold a return of such terrible calamities." "The land was shaken by frightful earthquakes, and the waves of the sea combined with volcanic fires to overwhelm and engulf it. Each convulsion swept away portions of the land, until the whole disappeared, leaving the line of the coast as it is now. Most of the inhabitants, overtaken amid their regular employments, were destroyed; but some escaped in ships, and some fled for safety to the summits of high mountains, to portions of land which for the time escaped immediate destruction. Quotations are made from the old books in which this tradition is recorded which appear to verify his report of what is found in them. To criticize intelligently his interpretation of their significance, one needs to have a knowledge of those books and traditions equal at least to his own."—Baldwin.

PREACHING TO THE POOR.

REV. S. J. McPherson preached at Chicago, September 6th, on "The Gospel of the Poor." The text was: "To the poor the gospel is preached."—Luke 7:22.

He said that in the fact that He preached the gospel to the poor Jesus gives a proof of his Messiahship. The proof He places on the same level with miracles, virtually alleging it to be as convincing a wonder that a teacher should address himself to the poor as that he should open blind eyes, cleanse lepers, and raise the dead. Among the nations of Christ's day, the poor were little better than slaves. They had no political power, save in the outlawry of mob force. They were regarded as naturally beneath the pale of real society. Education seldom discovered that they had minds. Philanthropy overlooked their manhood. Christianity had not yet come to appraise their immortal souls at a value superior to all the fleeting distinctions of time. In Rome the poor were menial servants, or soldiers to stop the deadly missiles of an enemy, or colonists to go to the ends of the world, or brutes to fight in the arena. In Sparta helots were regarded as Americans regard "poor white trash." To the refined Athenians a peasant of Bœtia was the type of dull stupidity. Among the Jews the poor were better cared for, as they are also among modern Hebrews. Yet it is obvious to the Bible-reader that even the poor of Palestine were often oppressed by the powerful, despised by the wealthy and ignored by the learned.

Indeed, notwithstanding all improvements in the condition of the poor, Christlike preaching of the gospel to them is still almost as rare and strange as a miracle. In half-civilized and barbarous countries their state is simply horrible. Look even at our own favored land. Capital and labor are in daily conflict because there is so little reference to the gospel in either. Money is the magical "open sesame," which alone admits to many an exclusive circle. The Protestant churches are trying with great efforts and small success to recover Christ's lost art of making the common people hear the gospel gladly. Nay, speak we never so democratically of the dignity of honest toil, we are all likely to feel hearty prejudice both against poverty itself and against those whom it touches with leanness and want.

But in the text Christ reverses this worldly judgment. He not only permits the poor to hear the gospel, he actually addresses Himself to them in particular. Instead of patronizing them, he makes them specially eligible to his kingdom. This fact he uses not as an isolated incident of his life, but as a characteristic evidence of his divine mission. Prophecy had specially predicted this as a peculiar mark of the world's Savior. One day, therefore, Jesus stood up in the synagogue of Nazareth, and read from Isaiah these words: "The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor," etc. His comment was: "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." It was for that very purpose of preaching to the poor that he was anointed or ordained to be the Christ. His whole career on earth was exactly in line with this prophecy. was born in a class which was low in the social scale. Joseph was a carpenter, and trained him to that trade. His first thirty years were obscure, spent largely, no doubt, in earning his own living. It is altogether probable that his education, in the ordinary sense of the term, was to say the best of it, very limited. His public ministry was passed in great poverty, at first leading him to a change of homes, and afterward to the lack even of such places of abode as the foxes and birds possess. He was sometimes dependent on others for his daily bread. In his poverty, too, he gathered poor people about him as his disciples. The twelve apostles were undoubtedly all poor men except Matthew, and he was despised for his mean occupation. Among his other friends, Zacchaeus, Nicodemus, and Joseph of Arimathea, and possibly, two or three women, seems to have been nearly all that could make any claim to wealth or worldly position. It was the common people and not the Pharisees or priests that heard him gladly; the multitude and not the sanhedrim that wondered at his gracious words. Nor was this in any way an accidential or exceptional thing; it was strictly in accordance with his peculiar purpose. He came to seek and save the lost, and sent his preachers out into the highways and hedges to compel the lowly and outcast to come in to his gospel feast. The fundamental fact is that, by his incarnation, Jesus Christ came down to the level, not merely of the favored classes, but of humanity itself. He was distinctively "the Son of Man." carried purity to the very bottom of the pit of sin; light he beamed into the lowest depths of darkness; love and power he exemplified with the most wretched reaches of selfishness and helplessness. was, in fact, his characteristic policy. Now let us note the reason which underlies this policy. Why did Christ preach his gospel to the poor.

I answer, first, because the poor are, prospectively, the most influential class. I know that at present they often have comparatively slight influence. In business or society, before the law, or even the church, their rights and interests are too apt to be neglected. But such vested wrongs can not in the nature of the case continue forever, because they depend for their existence not upon natural differences, but upon adventitious and temporary advantages in the rich and fortunate. The poor are certain at last to exert a controlling influence for the simple reason that they are the most numerous. The best and mightiest thing about men is their manhood, and manhood belongs to the essence of their humanity, and not to anything extraneous or conventional or sectional. Manhood outraged has made the poor terrible in many an ancient revolution, and both the power and the value of the poor are attracting special attention in our day because manhood is becoming better understood. Modern history is recognizing this change in its very form. Histories used to be for the most part but the biographies of kings, the annals of courts, and the journals of successful warriors. But now the people themselves are beginning to emerge as the chief subject of the histor-Green's "History of the English People," completed a few years ago, and Mr. McMaster's "History of the People of the United States," now issuing from the press, are familiar examples in point. Politicians are beginning to appreciate the poor man for his vote's sake. The right of suffrage is a great revealer of manhood. In this country the majority rules; yet this peaceful principle of popular government is a legacy to us from the countless generations who shed their blood to bring it in. Great Britain has just enfranchised another army of voters in her cautious approaches to manhood suffrage. France is a republic, because the great revolution, with all its hideous, bloody rites, was the final funeral service over that dead fiction, the divine right of kings, and the decisive inaugural of the living principle announced by Christ in our text, the human rights of Every monarchy in Europe feels itself limited by the demands of the people, even if it be not yet constitutional. Luther long ago unfettered the human conscience, and Victor Emmanuel has more recently unprisoned its palsied tyrant, a monomaniac on the subject of his own infallibility, in that old doubting castle called the Vatican. Even the pitiable millions of Asia are beginning to feel their souls stir within them. Manhood is gradually making its way to the top of the seething world. Gradually, therefore, the world is approaching the nineteen-hundred-year-old conception of the far seeing Christ, who preached his emancipating gospel to the poor because he had determined eventually to win all humanity to himself. He loved the despised poor, and despite the ten great persecutions, this leaven, rising from the humble step by step toward the throne, at length leavened the whole lump of the Roman empire, until in A.D. 325 it penetrated the mingled elements of Constantine's heart, and made him the first Christian emperor. Gradually and silently along the centuries, too, it has leavened schools, literatures, governments, societies, until now Christianity, tainted indeed by human sin, but resistless with a divine energy, is coterminous with true civilization. This tremendous fact is at once the effect and the reason of Christ's preaching to the poor.

their existence not upon natural differences, but upon adventitious and temporary advantages in the rich and fortunate. The poor are certain at last to exert a controlling influence for the simple reason that help to the destitute. For they that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. Jesus is the Savior, and he calls not the righteous, but sinners, to repentance. The gospel is not pearls cast before swine, but food to appreciative hearts, for Jesus thanks God that things hid from the wise and prudent, who are full and indifferent, are revealed unto babes. His mission is not to destroy men's lives, but to save them. Hence his gift is not a waste, but a means of recovery, of restoring lost manhood, of satisfying the bereaved heart of the Heavenly Father. Christ, therefore, has his own definition of the poor. They are not simply the moneyless, but the needy. How often are the wealthy most in need of all real goods! The priests and Pharisees of his day were moral paupers. The Sadducees deprived themselves by want of faith of all eternity, and were consequently not less needy certainly than those who but lacked temporal comforts. Herod in unlawful possession of Herodias was infinitely poorer than John the Baptist languishing in the prison of Machaerus for rebuking him. All in need, however rated in the commercial agencies, fall within the purview of Christ's grace. "He came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd." Hence, he incurred the reproach of the worldly by sitting down with publicans and sinners. Prodigals and harlots, who are still simply disgusting to skin-deep respectability, he rescued from such lawabiding inspectors as Jauert, and tenderly pardoned and reclaimed. The sick and hungry were the subjects of his most marvelous miracles of mercy. He healed them, fed them, forgave their sins. Those of little faith, like Peter sinking in the sea, he took by the hand and instructed. Lazarus he translated from the society of the rich man's dogs to the bosom of God's friend, Abraham. With the bereaved he wept tears of sympathy, while he kissed away their pain with the hope of an endless home in heaven. Helpless little children, warned away by his officious disciples, he especially invited to his open arms. He cursed whoever offended these needy little friends. He even went so far as to make a dependent and trustful infant the model of all who would hope to gain an entrance into his kingdom. Thus he paved the way for placing a stupendous emphasis upon his primary beatitude: "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." The poor in spirit, the needy who have discovered their own need, are Christ's poor. To them he preaches, to them alone he can preach, his gospel of

Therefore, observe, in the third place, that Christ preaches the gospel to the poor because they are the hungry. Not only are men themselves limited by ther own capacity or need for the gospel, but Christ also is limited by their desire for it. Hence there emerges another great beatitude: "Blessed are they who do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall [they alone will] be filled." In Nazareth, His early home, Christ could not do many mighty works because of His townsmen's unbelief. They curtailed His grace by their apathy and distaste toward it. Martha, troubled about many things lest her dinner should fail to be served in a manner worthy of her great guest, could not choose the better part and sit with Mary at Christ's feet to hear the gospel; but the alien Syrophænician woman was so hungry for His help that, even if He would He could not repulse her. Chorazin, Bethsaida, Capernaum, cities of Galilee in which many of His mighty works were done, had no taste for His gospel and so rendered His preaching useless to them. He reluctantly left them desolate, and they indifferently heard His retreating voice sadly saying: "Woe unto thee!" woe greater than Sodom and Gomorrah! Because they had no hunger for the bread of life. Today the very places on which they stood are matters in dispute among the antiquarians who stumble through the rank weeds which fatten on their tombs. Over Jerusalem, the city of David, the home, the dungeon, the tomb of generations of inspired prophets, and the scene of His own chief labors, he could only weep the unavailing tears of God before He went to be murdered by her. The Scribes and the Pharisees who sat in Moses' seat as leaders of God's chosen people were so gross of heart and dull of hearing that they crucified Him to be relieved of his offers of salvation. They were not poor in spirit enough to be hungry for the gospel. They had laid up their treasures in phylacteries and traditions and tithes and pompous vanities, and the hunger of their hearts for such things led to their final starvation. Money is good in its place, if only it do not grow ravenous to usurp the place of the gospel. Dives trusted in his purple robes and his fat feasts, and at last famished in hell for but one drop of water. Riches are good, but trust in riches is the disease which paralyzes the hunger, and therefore the capicity, for Christ and heaven. The poor are those who, because unsatisfied by earthly things, are ready and eager to receive the gospel; but "how hard it is for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God." If these things are true, they present us with great lessons ready made.

The old feud of rich and poor is to be ended only by the acceptance of the gospel. Manhood is greater than money, greater than education, greater than all the appliances of modern life. These things are but the ministers to manhood. Christ anticipated Burns in teaching us that for a' that and a' that a mam's a man. Let all men be poor enough to see their own need and to feel true hunger for the gospel. Then let all men perceive the inevitable supremacy which is coming to the many, and emulate the omniscient Christ by appealing to the manhood of the poor, who are the many, in diligently preaching the gospel to them. Strikes and lockouts, communism and oppression, will cease together when we ring in the golden rule of the gospel of Christ. Capital and labor find their true unity and peace in His great commission: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The salvation of humanity is the safety of every class. The church forsakes Christ just in proportion as it fails to address the gospel to the poor. The gospel is not a class institution; it belongs to humanity. Salvation is neither a mere lien on fat pocket books nor a charm against all pain and poverty. Salvation is a regenerating of man, so that his belongings shall all be subordinate to his manhood and, consecrated to his God and his spirt, conformed to that of Christ, shall be superior to every outward condition and assured of the abundant and external life that Christ promises beyond the grave. Hence the gospel, and with it the church, belongs by primitive and perpetual right to all who need it and are desirous of getting it. The poor, the world, for Christ is the motto of every true church. The Good Samaritan is the appointed model for every true Christian.

There is no bar to personal possession of the gospel except indifference. Those who are full can have no sense of need. Those who are content or clogged because their hearts are fat, can not feel hungry. Hence, they are shut out from the gospel, from repentance, moral purification, fellowship with the Son of Man, and the hope of perfect peace and life in heaven. But to the needy, the hungry, in short, the poor, the gate of salvation stands wide open. When we are weak, then are we strong. When we feel least worthy, we are ready to welcome perfect worthiness. What a stimulating message is this gospel of Christ to all who are dissatisfied with themselves. What comfort for the sorrowing; what solace for the discouraged; what a tonic for the enfeebled; what hope for the despondent; what a vision of joy for penitent sinners. Mary was the true historian of Christ. "He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things, and the rich He hath sent empty away."

CENTRAL KANSAS.

The above district conference convened at Netawaka, Kansas, August 22d and 23d, 1885. Jas. Caffall, president pro tem; G. George, clerk. Report of Branches.-Netawaka 32. Centralia 25; 1 baptized. Good Intent 28; 2 received by letter, 1 marriage. Scranton 37; 2 received by letter, I marriage. The following Elders reported in person: D. Munns, W. Hopkins, J. Buckley, J. D. Jones, H. Green, A. Dodd, G. George, D. Williams; by letter: C. Herzing, J. B. Jarvis, P. Adamson. Priests H. Parker, J. McDougal and E. Guinand; Teathers Watson and Thatcher; Deacon W. Menzies, reported. H. Parker, Bishop's Agent, reported on hand last report $7.20; present $13.16. Daniel Munns to continue his labors in Atchison city. Elder D. Williams to visit the branches as often as practicable. James Caffall was sustained in charge of the mission. The present officers in the district were sustained. Saturday evening and Sunday were devoted to preaching the word, Bro. Jas. Caffall being chief speaker. Prayer and testimony at two o'clock, in charge of J. Caffall. Adjourned to meet at Good Intent, Kansas, November 21st, 1885.

STRING PRAIRIE AND NAUVOO.

This district conference was held at Rock Creek, Hancock Co., Illinois, September 5th and 6th, 1885. H. C. Bronson, District President, in the chair; D. D. Babcock, secretary. The forenoon was devoted to prayer, and the president gave an earnest exhortation to those present. Branch Reports.—Burlington 66; 1 removed by letter. Rock Creek, same as last report. Keokuk 49; 1 baptized. Montrose 63; 2 disfellowshipped, 1 added by letter. Report of J. H. Lambert, Bishop's Agent: On hand last report $15.95, received since $24.10, total $40.05; paid out $21.25; balance on hand $18.80. Elders' Reports.—B. F. Durfee by letter. M. T. Short reported his labors at Keokuk and Burnside. S. J. Salisbury reported an opening for preaching at LaHarp. Whereas, a resolution was passed at the March conference, 1885, granting a request of Montrose Branch, that Bro. Thomas Simpson be ordained to the office of a Deacon. The same not being complied with. Therefore, be it resolved, that the same be and is hereby repealed. The above supposed ordination was published in the Herald. For good reasons the ordination did not take place. The president to visit the Saints at Elvaston, Ill., and report to December conference. The district president and secretary sustained the next three months. The next conference to be held at Burlington, Iowa, December 5th and 6th. All the authorities of the church were sustained in their several callings, while acting righteously therein. In the evening M. T. Short delivered an interesting discourse. Sunday morning prayer service until near the preaching hour. H. C. Bronson preached in the forenoon. Sacrament and testimony meeting in the afternoon. A peaceful time was enjoyed by the Saints; many strong testimonies were given, strengthening and encouraging one another. In the evening, Bro. Short again addressed a large audience on the resurrection.

POTTAWATTAMIE.

The above district conference was held at Crescent City, Iowa, August 29th and 30th, 1885. Elder H. N. Hansen, president; R. McKenzie, clerk pro tem. Council Bluffs Branch 147; 1 baptized, 5 received by letter and vote, 3 died. Hazel Dell 30; 8 received by letter and vote. North Star 60; 1 died. Crescent City 65; 8 removed by letter, 1 died. Andrew Hall, Bishop's Agent, reported on hand last report $3.25, received since in tithings and offerings $100.50, total $103.75; paid out $70; on hand $33.75. As District Treasurer he reports: on hand last report $15.55, paid out $12.50; on hand $3.05. Committee appointed to audit the Bishop's Agent's books found them correct to January 1st, 1885. Committee appointed to labor with Peter Oleson reported that he is still of the opinion that Saturday is the Sabbath. Report of Elders D. K. Dodson, H. Hansen, A. Hall, J. F. Drebis, - Hardin, H. N. Hansen and L. P. Jensen; R. M. Elvin reported by letter. Whereas, we learn that the Council Bluffs Branch refused their house of worship to missionaries from Utah; and whereas, we are assured that truth has nothing to lose by a comparison with views of others, we believe that said refusal was unwise, and injurious to our own work; therefore, be it resolved, that we disapprove of said action, but recommend to the ministry and Saints to be courteous and kind to those of different faith, and do to all as we wish to be done by. Whereas, it is of the greatest importance to the work of God that there be a unity of action among Elders representing the church; therefore, be it resolved, that no Elder who speaks against the church books, or in any way antagonizes the accepted doctrines of the body, shall be permitted to represent the church. Whereas, it is the duty of all Saints to be an example and light unto the world, and to abstain from all appearance of evil; therefore, be it resolved, that we deem it unwise and unbecoming for members of the church to visit drinking saloons and gambling houses, to attend dances and like places of worldly amusement and folly, believing that the influence of such places leads to evil and sin. Hans Hansen was sustained in his mission. H. N. Hansen was appointed president for the next term, and F. Hansen was sustained clerk. Three children were blessed. Preaching by Brn. Andrew Hall and J. F. Mc-Devell. Adjourned to meet in Council Bluffs, on the last Saturday in November, 28th, 1885, at at half-past ten o'clock.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The conference of the above district convened at James Hall, Brockton, Mass., May 30th, 1885. The report of the Bishop's Agent, and of the District Treasurer, were read and referred to a committee, and subsequently reported correct. Preaching on Sunday forenoon by Elder J. Gilbert, and in the evening by Elder F. M. Sheehy. The next conference to be held in Providence, on the last Saturday in September. The Bishop's Agents report was as follows: balance due church last report $103.72, income $143, total $246.72; expenditures $182.62; balance $64.10. District Treasurer's report: income $15.25, expenditure $12.26, balance $2.99. The committee appointed to investigate the matter existing between Bro. W. S. Jackson and the district president, reported in favor of sustaining the action of district presi-

Miscellaneous.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN MISSION.

To all the Saints in the Rocky Mountain Mission, greeting: President Joseph Smith is now in this mission, laboring for the emancipation of the erring and oppressed. With a view to more successfully prosecute the work in Utah, Idaho, and all other parts of the mission, we call a special conference to convene in the Mission Chapel, Salt Lake City, on the 3d day of October, at two o'clock in the afternoon. We will be pleased to have as many of the Elders, and especially branch presidents and Saints as possibly can, to attend; and we earnestly request the branch presidents throughout the mission to have a full and complete statistical report of their respective branches, giving all the changes since last October, of additions by baptism, certificate, or letter; deaths, and those expelled, with dates. The church secretary, H. A. Stebbins, has called upon us for such reports. I hope the brethren will see to it in time, so as to have a report that will be acceptable. We have the promise of half-fare rates over the Denver and Rio Grand, the Utah Central, and the Union Pacific Railroads. We shall have the tickets made good for ten days. If there are other arrangements in regard to time, we will give due notice. Let those who come with teams, and those near by, provide for their temporal wants.

Let all come with prayerful hearts, and may the burden of that prayer be that the Lord will bring his peace to this afflicted people, and give comfort to his children.

President Joseph Smith, Elders Joseph Luff and Peter Anderson, and others, will be with us to break the bread of life. You have all labored, prayed, and patiently waited for the coming of Joseph. He is here now. Come and see him, and hear him. We can not promise you when you will have such a favorable time to see him again. Come together with joyful hearts, that the Master's love and peace may abide, and His wisdom direct.

R. J. Anthony,

Missionary in Charge.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The district conference of Michigan and Northern Indiana will be held at Clear Lake, Steuben county, Indiana, beginning on the 17th day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon. A good representation is desired. Do not forget to make out reports in time. See that they are correct. Officials, please attend, as many as can conveniently. Scattered members (those whose names are not enrolled on any branch record in the district) will also please report. Some good elders will be secured, if they can be had, to take charge, and if at all practicable, answer some of of the urgent demands for preaching in the district thereafter. Take the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad at Jonesville or Hillsdale; get off at Ray station, or at Fremont. Enquire for Jackson Adam, Peter Smith, Teeters, Chandler, Single, or Mackelhany. May this be a memorable gathering for good.

W. H. KELLEY, Pres. of Dist.

BRANCH REORGANIZATION.

Meeting was held to-day at the house of Bro. H. B. Hulse; all of the members of the Lawrence Branch being present, who are regular attendants at the meetings, except two. After preaching, sacramental and social services, the following business was transacted. Bro. Henry Manee, of Hartford, was ordained to the office of a Priest, under the hands of Elders Wm. H. Kelley and Charles M. Bootman. The Lawrence Branch was divided and organized into two other branches, to be known respectively as the Hartford and Marcellus branches. Elder C. M. Bootman was chosen president of the Marcellus Branch, and Bro. Chancey E. Goodenough, secretary and treasurer. The following named members united with the Marcellus Branch: -C. M. Bootman, Mary E. Bootman, Caroline E. Bootman, Chancey E. Goodenough, Mary E. Goodenough, Katie Goodenough, Grace Goodenough and John

The following are the names of the officers and members of the Hartford Branch:—Herman B. Hulse, Elizabeth Hulse, Robert Crawford, George C. Conelly, Mary M. Conelly, Francis Robertson, Anna Robertson, Jennie Turnour, Henry Manee, Samantha Manee and Merinda A. Crawford. Br. Henry Manee was chosen president; Francis Robertson, Teacher; and George C. Conelly, secretary and treasurer. Bro. Francis Robertson being called to the office of Teacher, and ordained under the hands of Elders Wm. H. Kelley and Charles M. Bootman, by the voice of the branch. Good order, and the spirit of peace and unity prevailed during the entire meeting.

All members of the said Lawrence Branch, whose names do not appear in the above lists, are hereby requested to report to H. B. Hulse, the former secretary of Lawrence Branch, with instructions to have their names enrolled with either the Hartford or Marcellus branches, or give notice of their intention to unite with some other, by January 1st, 1886, or they will be held as scattered members. Address: H. B. Hulse, Decatur, Vanburen county, Michigan.

All of which respectfully submitted,

H. B. Hulse, Sec'y.

The Saints are all well here, and are comforted and encouraged in the faith, and withal are doing what they can to promote its interests.

W. H. KELLEY.

A GRAND STEAMBOAT EXCURSION.

There will be an excursion on the steamer Rescue and barge, under the auspices of the Church of Latter Day Saints, on September 28th, from Park Bluff, down the river to Warsaw and return, taking in Nauvoo and Keokuk. Fare for the round trip fifty cents. This will give all those attending the reunion meeting a fine opportunity to enjoy themselves, and have a nice boat ride. Railroad excursion tickets will be good until Tuesday, the 29th. Meeting will close on Sunday, the 27th, thus giving Monday for the excursion.

H. C. Bronson.

TO DELINQUENTS.

We wish those in arrears for Herald or Hope to pay up as soon as possible, and renew for them. In February last we struck from our lists a large number of delinquent subscribers, many of whom have not yet renewed, and we soon will have to again correct the lists, striking off the names of such as do not renew or give us good reasons for failing to do so.

Those owing for books should remit at once; and hereafter all persons ordering books should send the money with their orders, unless they arrange otherwise with us.

D. DANCER, Business Manager.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR

ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, October 3, 1885.

OPEN DOORS.

WE are informed by letter from brethren A. Hall and L. Davis, of Council, Bluffs, Iowa, that the branch there by vote refused the use of their chapel to an Elder of the Utah Mormon Church. We regret this action on the part of the Council Bluffs Branch, for we had assured several, when in conversation upon the fact that we had been refused the use of houses in Utah, that the places of worship controlled by the Reorganized Church were available to all accredited ministers of other denominations, including the Mormons of Utah. And this assurance has been publicly given from the stand by Elders of the Reorganized Church. We gave this assurance from our understanding of what were the expressed sentiments and views, as well as the course pursued by the branches where we have lived, labored and visited. It would appear that we made a mistake in regard to the Council Bluffs Branch, either from lack of information, or a correct understanding of the views of the officers and members of that branch.

We confess to a feeling of mortification at this action of the Council Bluffs Branch, for two reasons. One is, we had formed opinions of a larger and freer liberty than such a refusal shows; and the other is, we have stated that all houses of worship controlled by the Reorganized Church should, so far as our influence could go, be open for investigation, and that ministers from other denominations, the church in Utah included, would be permitted the use of such houses, when not in use by the branches where they were located. We now have to admit that we made a mistake, that all the houses so controlled were not open as stated, and that the influence that we had was not sufficient to secure the result we desired.

We disapprove of this action of the Council Bluffs Branch, most decidedly; and shall now feel much less inclined to ask for the use of places of worship held by the Utah people; and shall not feel disappointed, nor indignant when refused, because we shall know that it is a return measure for what was meted by us to others; that we can not confidently feel that we had done to others as we would that they should do also to us.

Of course the branch at Council Bluffs, as are all other branches, is at liberty to govern its own affairs in its own way; and we can neither control nor direct in other than an advisory manner; but we can and do feel that the policy shown by such refusal of the use of the meeting-house is a denial of the principles of fairness and liberality which we have claimed was characteristic of the Reorganized Church, that we are ill prepared to receive at the present juncture of human affairs.

POLYGAMY RULED A CONTINUOUS OFFENSE.

THE following ruling of Judge Zane we clip from the Salt Lake Tribune of the 19th ult., from which it seems the learned Judge holds that a person stealing the same article at different times, may be punished for each and every act. If this proves to be correct ruling, then the Utah polygamists are at the very doors of a fiery furnace. They ought to turn and read Brigham's boastful predictions and promises of the coming popularity and triumph of polygamy, in his sermon of August 29th, 1852, when that crime was first publicly proclaimed. (See supplement to the Millennial Star, vol. 15, page 31.)

At that time Brigham said as follows:

"The principle spoken upon by Bro. Pratt this morning, [polygamy], we believe in. And I tell you for I know it—it will sail over and ride triumphantly above all prejudice and priestcraft of the day; it will be fostered and believed in by the more intelligent portions of the world, as one of best doctrines ever proclaimed to any people. Your hearts need not beat; you need not think that a mob is coming here to tread upon the sacred liberty which the Constitution of our country guarantees unto us, for it will not be."

How false and delusive this promise has proved! And how much of suffering and shame it has caused! May God help the people to see the ruinous blindness of such leaders, and turn away from them.

JUDGE ZANE MAKES A RULING THAT FILLS POLYGAMISTS WITH DISMAY

Judge Zane yesterday morning threw a bombshell into the camp of the unlawful cohabitants that will fill them with consternation and accomplish a great deal toward suppressing that crime. The Grand Jury came into court about 11:30, and their foreman stated to Judge Zane that they desired further instructions on a certain point, and suggested that District Attorney Dickson state the case to the court. Mr. Dickson then briefly stated the circumstances, as follows:

A case had come up for investigation by the Grand Jury, in which a man was charged with unlawful cohabitation, and the evidence tended to show that since February, 1883, he had lived a portion of each each week with each wife. Mr. Dickson had informed the Grand Jurors that they might, under those circumstances, if they believed the evidence, present a separate indictment for each month and each week during that period, and had suggested the propriety of finding at least an indictment for each one of the three years. Some of the jurors were in doubt as to the legality of such a proceeding and they had come into court for instructions.

Judge Zane thereupon informed the Grand Jurors that the position taken by the District Attorney was correct, and that it would be entirely competent in them to find an indictment for any period during which it was found that there had been cohabitation with more than one woman; that they might find separate indictments for each year or for lesser periods.

The Grand Jurors then retired. It is impossible to tell wnat particular case was under consideration, as several were being investigated yesterday morning, but it is intimated that the defendant is a pretty high official in the church.

It is very easy to forsee the effect of this ruling. It will entirely do away with the cheap "martyrdom" that the incarcerated brethren have been parading. It has been the general opinion of those who desire to see these crimes suppressed in Utah that the punishment for unlawful cohabitation was entirely too light, compared with that imposed for polygamy. In a majority of the unlawful cohabitation cases continuous cohabitation for three years is shown, and under this ruling an indictment for each month or even each week may be found. An indictment for each month would be thirty-six in all, which, with six months for each offense would send the criminal to the penitentiary for eighteen years. As these cases have been conducted in the past, but one indictment has been found, and the culprit could only be given six months, and if he behaved himself during imprisonment he was entitled to a reduction of one month, leaving only five to serve. The sincerity of those lawless offenders who have been declaring that they would continue to violate the law, even though they were sent to the penitentiary for life, may possibly be tested. Altogether the outlook is not a refreshing one for the would-be "martyrs" to contemplate.

PRIEST'S AUTHORITY.

A BROTHER inquires: Is it right for a Priest to lay on hands with an Elder and assist to confirm a person a member of the church? No. The law of the church reads thus:

"The Priest's duty is to preach, teach, expound, exhort and baptize, and administer the sacrament, and visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties; and he may also ordain other Priests, Teachers, and Deacons; and he is to take the lead of meetings when there is no Elder present, but when there is an Elder present he is only to preach, teach, expound, exhort and baptize, and visit the house of each member, exhorting them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties. In all these duties the Priest is to assist the Elder if occasion requires."—
D. & C. 17: 10.

Here the duties of the Priest are specified, and the laying on of hands to confirm and for the gift of the Holy Ghost is not permitted. The office of the Priest pertains to the Aaronic priesthood (104:5,40); and of this priesthood the angel said to Joseph and Oliver, in May, 1829, what is here recorded in Joseph's "History:"

"We still continue the work of translation, when in the ensuing month, (May eighteen hundred and twenty-nine), we, on a certain day, went into the woods to pray and inquire of the Lord respecting baptism for the remission of sins, as we found mentioned in the translation of the plates. While we were thus employed, praying and calling upon the Lord, a messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands upon us, he ordained us, saying unto us: "Upon you my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness." He said this Aaronic priesthood had not the power of laying on of hands for the gift of the Holv Ghost, but that this should be conferred on us hereafter, and he commanded us to go and be baptized, and gave us directions that I should baptize Oliver Cowdery, and afterwards that he should baptize me."-Times and Seasons, vol. 3, page 865.

This may also be found in supplement to Millennial Star, vol. 14, p. 15. Of the fact and manner of the conferment of this Aaronic priesthood, Oliver Cowdery wrote September 7th, 1834, as follows:

"The Lord, who is rich in mercy, and ever willing to answer the consistent prayer of the humble, after we had called upon him in a fervent manner aside from the abodes of men, condescended to manifest to us his will. On a sudden, as from the midst of eternity, the voice of the Redeemer spake peace to us, while the vail was parted and the angel of God came down clothed with glory, and delivered the anxiously looked for message, and the keys of the gospel of repentance! What joy! What wonder! What amazement! While the world was racked and distracted-while millions were groping as the blind for the wall, and while all men were resting upon uncertainty, as a general mass, our eyes beheld—our ears heard. As in the "blaze of day;" yes, more-above the glitter of the May sunbeam which then shed its brilliancy over the face of nature! Then his voice, though mild, pierced to the center, and his words: "I am thy fellowservant," dispelled every fear. We listen--we gazed—we admired! 'Twas the voice of an angel from glory-'twas a message from the Most High! And as we heard we rejoiced, while his love enkindled upon our souls, and we were wrapt in the vision of the Almighty! Where was room for doubt? Nowhere; uncertainty had fled; doubt had sunk, no more to rise, while fiction and deception had fled forever!

"But, dear brother, think, further think for a moment, what joy filled our hearts, and with what surprise we must have bowed, (for who would not have bowed the knee for such a blessing?) when we received under his hand the holy priesthood, as he said: Upon you my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer this priesthood and this authority, which shall remain upon earth, that the sons of Levi may yet offer an offering unto the Lord in righteousness!"—

Messenger and Advocate, vol. 1, p. 15.

All ministers should be careful to not officiate in duties not pertaining to their office and calling.

SENATOR MANDERSON.

THE clipping below is from the Chicago Tribune of the 19th ult., and if Mr. Manderson is reported therein correctly, he has made statements which are wide of the mark. It is not true that the people of Utah "with the exception of the small Gentile element" hate the National Government. While it is true that many of the Utah Mormons may be classed as disloyal, there are not a few among them who love and revere the Nation, and to these may be added others, who are neither Utah Mormon nor Gentile, who are second to none in their love of country.

If Mr. Manderson had visited other points than Salt Lake City and Ogden he might have found many who do not endorse nor affiliate with the "followers and practitioners of a polygamous creed." The writer has been there much of the time during the past six years engaged in missionary work and feels competent to judge of these matters.

And when the Senator assumes that the Utah Church is "the church of Joseph Smith," he is wrong again. The church organized by Joseph Smith was rejected of God, and broken into fragments, as far as related to its organization in 1844; and the Utah Church was organized by Brigham Young and others in December, 1847, out of some of the broken fragments, after which it was led away, and planted in "the salt land and not inhabited."—Jer. 17: 6.

The Utah Mormon Church is no more like "the church of Joseph Smith," than the Catholic Church of the dark ages was like the church of the early Christians of New Testament times. The "church of Joseph Smith" was pre-eminently loyal in all its provisions. It was also monogamic in all its ecclesiastical rules and regulations. And besides all this, it was devoted to educational interests. Joseph Smith, though illiterate up to 1831, and later, was a lover of learning, and an ardent patron of education. Witness his zeal in this direction in the fact that at Kirtland he took special pains to have first class schools established. The celebrated Dr. Newman got a taste of that fact when he met the late Orson Pratt in debate in Salt Lake City in 1871.

The writer was told by the late Dr. Wm. E. McLellin that Joseph Smith was the most zealous and successful scholar in Kirtland, that he ever saw—and the doctor was a good scholar for his times, and had been long engaged as a teacher.

No, Mr. Manderson, you are sadly mistaken on some points, or else you are misstated. The "Church of Joseph Smith" was in its very genius and avowed purpose, heartily devoted to education, and its laws actually command that it be diligently sought after, and we hope you may learn these facts and profit by them for the good of all parties concerned.

Here is what the Senator says:-

"Senator Manderson, who is a member of the Committee on Territories, returned this morning from a four-weeks' tour of the West and Northwest. He spent the greater portion of the time in Utah, and has returned with very pronounced opinions upon Mormons and Mormonism. Said he to a representative of The Tribune to-day: "The people of Utah, with the exception, of course, of the small Gentile element, are an alien nationality. They hate the National Government, and chafe at the restrictions of the country's laws and the presence of Federal officials as an unholy interference and a barbaric invasion. The spirit of sedition is so deep-seated that no one can contemplate the situation without wondering that it has not long since broken out in open rebellion. Outside of Salt Lake City the people are environed with no other influence than that of the Mormon Church. They read nothing but the Mormon organs, hear nothing but saintly exhortations, and see none but followers and practitioners of a polygamous creed. It is no credit to the church of Joseph Smith that its followers are thus densely ignorant. Education is not a vital principle in the social and moral ethics of Mormondom, and its devotees run more to tangled hair, spare visages, and gaunt limbs than to brains. There must be some legislation of a most heroic and vigorous character enacted to crush out the hydra-headed monster, as it has so often been denounced in editorial thunders. I believe that the people of the United States and their Representatives in Congress are awakening to a realization of the full enormity of the condition of affairs in Utah, and that a few months will witness the passage of some law through the National Legislature that will attain the end so much required. I have frequently been asked if the Edmunds law would prove effective in this great dilemma, and I have been constrained to express my doubt about it. Something of a more vigorous nature is demanded, and Senator Hoar's bill, for which I had the pleasure of voting last session, is nearer to the point. The Utah question is, in my judgment, the most important of all matters which now press for consideration. I see by the morning telegrams that Bishop John Sharp has pleaded guilty to the leading charge, and has suffered the imposition of a merely nominal fine. It will be interesting to observe the effect of his action, as Sharp is one of the leading men of the Mormon Church, and in my judgment a diplomat and business genius with few equals in the West. It may set a precedent that will prove salutary to Utah, and be the first step to the Territory's self-redemption."

"The Senator was in Salt Lake City at the time of the stink-pot outrages, and witnessed several important trials of Mormons charged with polygamy before the Federal Court. He says that under the present laws justice is powerless in the face of perjury and contempt of court."

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 19th.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. N. Webster writes under date of the 16th ult., and says:

"The church in Boston, (Massachusetts), is gaining in numbers; seven have been baptized since last conference. I baptized a very worthy man this morning, a Baptist deacon, well versed in religious matters, who has faithfully investigated the claims of the latter day work, and was convinced of its superiority."

Bro. H. A. Stebbins, president of the Decatur District, says:

"We had an excellent time at our conference of September 19th and 20th. It was held in a grove on the farm of Bro. C. H. Jones in Harrison county, Missouri, fourteen miles south-west of Lamoni. The fine days and quiet, moonlight nights were enjoyable, and the Lord's Spirit was with us in business, in prayer and in preaching sessions, the only ripple being a small matter on Saturday afternoon. There was a large attendance from Lamoni, Allenville and Lone Rock, particularly on Sunday, and a fair attendance from the surrounding country. Those who came to stay through the two days, and all others who needed, were bountifully provided for by the brethren of that region, the chief burden falling upon Bro. and Sr. Jones, but it was shared in by brethren Sandage, Johnston, McPeek, Bell, and others."

He says further that Brn. J. W. Gillen, C. A. Jones, S. V. Bailey, O. B. Thomas, J. R. Lambert and T. J. Bell have been doing some good work in villiage and country school-houses in this region. Here at Lamoni seven more have lately been baptized by Brn. H. A. Stebbins and A. J. Moore.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE notice in the Stewartsville (Missouri) Independent of the 19th ult., that Elder Crawley of the Latter Day Saints, and Elder Kerns, of the Seventh Day Adventists, were to commence a discussion of the "Sabbath" question at the L. D. S. church in that city on the evening of that date.

In the same paper we see its Editor, C. L. Fowler, is fully vindicated by many of the leading citizens of Stewartsville against the malicious and mendacious attack of the Investigator, edited by one F. W. A. Reidel, whom the Saints disfellowshipped long ago for his intolerable badness, and who has left for other fields. We despise his meanness, and greatly pity his family.

A brother writes from Missouri that he rejoices greatly in having lately returned to the fold of Christ. It appears he united with the church in 1877, and being sorely opposed and harrassed by his relatives he united with the Christian Church for a season, but was called a Mormon by them, for he would hold to the doctrines of Christianity, as taught by Christ and his Apostles and recorded in the New Testament His heart is made twice glad now, from the fact that his wife, who once was an opposer, is now with him in the faith and has been baptized, with him, into the Church of Christ. He thinks others in their neighborhood will soon follow.

Bro. C. G. Lanphear writes of late from Obi, Alleganny county, New York, that he has held three meetings there of late, and looks for additions to the church. He sends new subscribers for church papers, just what we wish every other Saint to do.

By letter just received from Elder Geo. Montague, dated at Farmington, Graves county, Kentucky, we learn that the work of the church moves rather slowly in that mission, though a few had united with the Saints, and prospects good for some further additions.

Autumn with its promise of abundance is here, and so is dreamy, smoky "Indian Summer." They are the fitting finale of a rather pleasant and prosperous summer.

Elder Joseph R. Lambert and family left home on Tuesday, 22d ult., for a short tour to Eastern Iowa and Western Illinois. Elder Lambert is re-entering the field with the intention of doing all that his health and ability will permit for the cause of Christ. His permanent address is Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, but he may be addressed at Adrian, Hancock county, Illinois, till after October 20th.

Elder H. L. Holt was laboring at St. Peters, (Minn.,) of late, and seemed confident the church interests were gaining in all that region, wherever faithful ministers were at work. He says he seeks to make his missionary efforts much more than a pleasure trip. We hope so; for when a minister stops to consult his own personal pleasure, he is not fit to represent the Church of Christ.

We have just had a call from Brother Joseph Younger, of Monona county. He seems quite happy spirited, and is about as eccentric as ever. His health has been poor of late, and old age is bowing his form and writing upon his features its story of trials, and of accumulated years. May heaven and mankind be forbearing and kind to the old brother, and smooth his pathway into a bright and happy hereafter.

The Columbus (Nebraska) Democrat, of June last, contains an able and patriotic "Address of Hon. H. J. Hudson," delivered in the Opera House in Columbus on Decoration day. Bro. Hudson did himself and his theme ample justice, and had we received the paper in season should have been pleased to give it to the HERALD readers.

WRITING FOR THE PRESS.

WE have just finished correcting and preparing a communication for the HERALD, which, while it possesses some merit in its subject matter, is so full of imperfections we have been often tempted to cast it to the dogs. It is written on very thin, sleazy paper, and so fine and close together that but little space can be found to insert needed corrections. It abounds with misspelled words, bad punctuation, bad grammar, and garbled quotations of Scripture. Now, it is expected that the printer will take this bantling, born into the world not half made up, clean it, clothe it, adorn it attractively, and send it forth in a highly presentable way, having a somebody's name affixed to it as its real author.

If such writers knew how much time it takes to decipher the meaning, correct the spelling and punctuation, amend the grammar, correct the misquotations and other errors in such manuscript, they would not wonder at the pyramids of manuscript which "go out at the gate" in the wastebasket. We do not exaggerate when we say that this class of articles takes more time in their correction than it would to write them.

Contributors should write on nothing worse than smooth, clean paper. Write only on one side. Write plainly. Make your letters full and clear. Spell out all your words. Don't punctuate your articles too much. Consult your dictionary, and spell your words correctly. When you quote anything, do it truly, and exactly; for a mis-quotation is a species of falsehood; and besides that, it tends to mislead and mis-educate those who read it. Inasmuch as the printer is expected to send out nothing imperfect from his hands, contributors should send their articles and correspondence to him in at least a tolerable shape. We have many excellent writers for the press, both as to matter and manner; but there are some whose productions would shiver the patience of Job and tend to make great sinners of the printers. Let such mature well their thoughts, and then write them sparingly, and with great care. We need valuable communications to send out to the HERALD readers, and we invite all who are thoroughly posted on suitable matters to write them up clearly, plainly, attractively, and correctly so far as in their power, and send them

The world is famishing for the word of life, and they need sober, serious, saving truth, instead of fanciful theories, fiction, fables, and nonsense. They need "the sincere milk of the word," and "a portion of meat in due season." The Master cries—"Feed my sheep!" Let this food be wisely selected, and then let it be presented attractively.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is it right and proper for a minister to take his family with him when he goes to preach in a new place, that they may assist in singing?

Ans.—Yes; decidedly.

Q.—Does section 17; par. 10 of the Doctrine and Covenants, teach that the Priest shall take the lead of meetings when there is an Elder present, only as occasion requires him to assist?

A.—"The Priest," "an Elder," "no Elder," and "the Elder," mentioned in that paragraph have been held to refer to branch officers; and in this light the Priest has no authority to take the lead of meetings when the branch presiding Elder is present, but may assist him. officers are to fill just such places, and perform such duties, as they are selected for by the branch; and no minister should attempt to officiate in an organized branch unless chosen to do so in a regular, lawful way by said branch, or are invited to do so by competent presiding authorities. course will preserve and promote harmony, and prevent intrusion, usurpation, and disorder. This is and has been the ruling of the church from the first. "Let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed."—D. & C. 104: 44. "Authority" to act in branch offices is conferred by appointment made by the branch itself, and the highest branch officer present should preside in all branch meetings, unless the said officer, or the branch by vote, select another. In unorganized assemblies, it is the prerogative of the greatest in authority to preside; but when a formal organization takes place, that body fixes the question as to who shall be its officers, and no one should usurp their duties nor seek to fill their places.

2.—Does not the Lord require that his people shall sue [seek] for peace?

A.—Yes. God has made it a duty for his Saints to do all they can to both procure and promote peace. The Lord speaks "peace unto his people, and to his Saints. * * * * Righteousness and peace have kissed each other."-Ps. 85: 8. 10. When the angels announced the mission of Jesus, it included—"on earth peace, good will toward men."-Luke 2: 14. James says:-"The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace."-4: 17, 18. And Paul says:-"If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men."-Rom. 12:18.

Q.—Is it right for a Priest of a branch to falsely accuse a brother in a public meeting, and then never rectify the same before the public?

A.—Personal accusations, though truthful, should be made elsewhere than in a public meeting; and false accusations should never be made; but, if made, then the reparation should be made as public as the offense, and that speedily and cheerfully, as the Lord demands in Matthew 5:23, 24; 18:15; and in Doc. & Cov. 42:23. If persons would do to others as they would that others should do to them, there would be but little cause for hardness and accusation. Self-denial is the key-note of the gospel of Christ, and all should carefully put it in practice.

2.—Is it right for a member of the Church to encourage debate, and strife, especially where they have recently had disquiet and persecutive controversy to endure?

A.—No. They should carefully avoid anything likely to prolong or renew bitterness, or unrest:—"Give none offense, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God."—1 Cor. 10: 32. He that courts strife, "is like one that taketh a dog by the ears." "Renounce war, and proclaim peace, and seek diligently to turn the hearts of the children to their tathers, and the hearts of the fathers to the children."—Doc. & Cov. 95: 3.

Q.—Is it right to hold members in the Church contrary to their wishes, and when they reject the officers of the branch and are not willing to obey the law of the Church?

A.—If members, after due labor and patient efforts have been made by the officers of the Church to set them in order, still persist in wishing to withdraw from the Church, or reject said officers and will not be governed by the law of the Church, then they should be disfellowshipped. Some branches have simply "blotted out their names," without formal trial.

2.—What is meant by "the former commandments," in Doctrine and Covenants 83:8.

A.—The passage and its immediate contexts reads thus:

"And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon, and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written, that they may bring forth fruit meet for their Father's kingdom, otherwise there remaineth a scourge and a judgment to be poured out upon the children of Zion; for, shall the children of the kingdom pollute my holy land? Verily, I say unto you, nay."

From this it is clear, that the words, "the former commandments" refer to the revelations which God gave to the Church through Joseph the Seer, which some of "the children of Zion" had "treated lightly." The date of the revelation in which these words occur is September 22d and 23d, 1832. Israel has ever cursed themselves with the sin of unbelief in the words of living prophets. They generally professed great veneration for the dead prophets, but as generally evaded, misapplied, or violated their teachings.

JOHN SHARP IS SENSIBLE.

If the Utah polygamists would follow Bishop John Sharp, doing "the works of Abraham," in Genesis (21:12-14) as he is doing it, all Utah could be delivered from a curse greater than the bondage of Pharaoh, and the Miriams of that blind church could well re-enact the song of deliverance chanted at the Red Sea. Thank God the bands are breaking, and a bright future invites others to cast off their shackles.

The following is Bishop Sharp's statement in Court, in Salt Lake City, when on trial:

"I hold myself amenable to the laws of my country, and in whatever degree I may have infringed upon the provisions thereof, am ready to meet the penalty.

"I am the husband of more than one living wife, and the father of a number of children by each of them. The most of my children have arrived at their majority.

"I respectfully submit to this court that the marriage covenant that I entered into with each of my wives was made at a time when there existed no law upon the statute books which made an offense of the plural marriage relations as contemplated in our religion, and that we entered those marriage relations and made those marriage covenants with the most profound conviction that we were obeying the law of God. Furthermore, from the time we made those sacred covenants to the present, we have sustained the most devout reverence for the sanctity and divine origin of that law, and we have not designedly placed ourselves in conflict with any of the laws of our adopted country in embracing this cardinal doctrine of our religion.

"Your Honor can readily conceive my discomfure and that of my wives when we learned that Congress had enacted what is known as the 'Edmunds law,' which not only subjected us to political disabilities, but also forbade us the right to live together as we had done for so many years. By this new law we are made transgressors and deprived of many of the privileges of our citizenship; and, while I consider this a harsh law, yet it does not, as I understand it, nor as I understand it to be construed by the courts, require that I shall disown the mothers of my children as my wives or abandon them to the charity of an unsympathizing world.

"I expect to remain under the political disabilities placed upon me, but I have so arranged my family relations as to conform to the requirements of the law, and I am now living in harmony with its provisions in relation to cohabitation, as construed by this court and the Supreme Court of the Territory, and and it is my intention to do so in the future until an overruling Providence shall decree greater religious toleration in the land."

SADDENED AND SOURED.

THAT is the condition of the News' apologists for polygamy and unlawful cohabitation. Their wail is one of desperation, and their boast is "the shout of a retreating army." The boy in the graveyard whistles to keep his courage up, and the News editors find themselves among the tombs. We have a wish that they yet may be found "clothed, and in their right mind." Here is what they say of sensible Bishop Sharp.

BISHOP SHARP'S ACTION.

"To state that the position assumed by Bishop John Sharp yesterday afternoon, before the Third District Court, created a high degree of interest in the public mind, tells the tale but tamely. The effect of his action amounted to a sensation.

"With the gentleman named it was a supreme occasion. It was the one opportunity of his life to sustain a principle which he had accepted emanating from a divine source in the form of a sacred obligation. It was within his power also to act in such a manner as to probably relax the general bitterness felt throughout the country toward his co-religionists, and, by the consistency of his own course, cause Latter Day Saints having confidence in his integrity to cheerfully follow a brilliant example. This culminating circumstance of a long, useful and capable career he chose to turn in a direction the antipodes of that which every true and consistent Latter Day Saint had a right to expect of him.

"But, stepping aside for the moment from the obligation he was under to the religious community of which he was an official, we may be permitted to go still further and assume that an attitude the contrary of that which he chose was, to our conception, a duty he owed to his fellowmen generally, outside the pale of the church to which he belongs. His ecclesiastical position, combined with that which he holds before the country in financial and other influential circles, renders him largely conspicuous. Consider this fact together with the popular feeling toward, and opinion concerning, 'Mormonism.' It is looked upon as a religious imposture, and the claim that God has spoken in this day from heaven and given revelations as in days of old, is treated with ridicule. The effect of Bishop Sharp's action of yesterday afternoon can have but one effect in that connection-so far as its influence extends outside of the church-it serves to intensify the inimical feeling and confirm the adverse opinion

"If, on the other hand, Bishop Sharp's stand had been in consonance with his religious obligations, men who have opposed the system with which he was connected both in their views and feelings, would have, to some degree at least, been inclined to believe that, after all, there must be something in it to cause men to brave everything for its sake. Especially for such men as he, with liberal wealth and other facilities at his command, to stand upon such noble ground.

"It has been openly calculated by the opponents of the Church that whatever might be the position he should take when placed in jeopardy, it would largely influence his co-religionists in the same relation. There may be some degree of correctness in this assumption, but we are confident that its effect in that direction will be but small, and will not be of sufficient magnitude to interfere in the most remote degree with the main question, which is unalterably fixed as the everlasting hills and will never be receded from, come what may. Neither will any person be induced to follow his lamentable example who is not already predisposed in that direction. Individuals elect their own line of conduct. They can stand by what God has revealed, or they may recede from it at the approach of danger. But let no man run away with the erroneous impression that because any person or persons—no matter whether prominent or obscure—recede from the obligations of the law of the covenant, that such a course is approved by the church as a body. There is but one side to the question with the body-religious, and that ground will be maintained, sink or swim.

"Because of the anticipated effects that a retreating action on the part of Bishop Sharp was expected to have on the leading issue, great anxiety has been manifested by the enemies of the people that he might recede from his religious obligations. Doubtless he has been powerfully and persistently advised to adopt that line of conduct. How much influence these considerations may have wielded in his case we are not in a position to state. Doubtless, he acted, after hearing statements on both sides, entirely and independently on his own volition. And it will be held by some people who have a predilection for neutral ground on strong questions, that Bishop Sharp has taken a course consistent with his religion and the law as interpreted by the courts, and is therefore on an unequivocal base in both directions. The entire precedings bears the marks of having been ingenuously manipulated to give the matter that appearance on the surface. But questions of this character are of too great moment to be dismissed after having been merely submitted to a skimming process.

"We propose to strip the cunningly constructed skeleton of the transparent fabric in which it has been clothed and go directly to the kernal of the subject; and now lay down the incontrovertible proposition that no man can occupy the two positions in the issue. To assume that he can is no more reasonable than to maintain that a man can hold both the affirmative and the negative positions on any question at the same time. There is no neutral zone, and a person must take up his post on one side of the line or the other.

"The court is the party that imposes the conditions upon which leniency or immunity is grounded.

"The condition is that the party on the other side must agree to obey the law according to the interpretation of the courts. The courts interpret the law to require that plural wives shall not be any more regarded in the wifely relation, not only so far as lates to practical conduct, but also in theory. The rulings or interpretations of the court before which the Bishop appeared to be dealt with are too familiar to the public to require that they should be quoted. The judicial position in the case of Orson P. Arnold, of A. M. Musser and Angus M. Cannon comes in point. Such conditions are utterly incompatible with the most sacred obligations of a Latter Day Saint, and he can no more assume them than he can throw aside baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, or any other doctrine of the faith of the true Gospel.

"But it may be held that the defendant's written statement embodies a declination to renounce the relatiouship by the total severance of the marital tie. This is true, but the agreement to obey the law according to the interpretations placed upon it by the courts came subsequent to the reading of the statement, and therefore the latter position, though in conflict with the other, is the one that was adopted, and will be so held by the Court.

"Right here it may be proper to draw attention to the utterly unprincipled position of the Court. The defendant in his written statement actually broke the law as interpreted by Judge Zane himself, because in it he made an acknowledgement of his plural wives. Yet the Court with this fact staring it in the face, drew the defendant along into an agreement that he would cease the acknowledgement which he had in writing expressed his intention not to relinquish.

"In another particular the attitude of Brother Sharp was at direct variance with his position in the Church. He entered into an express agreement not to "teach others to violate" the Edmunds law. This means that he will not teach the principle of plural marriage. While it might not be necessary for him to engage in that kind of teaching, if he proposed not to do so, as far as he could consistently go was simply to refrain from it. It is a doctrine, however, of the Church in which he holds an official position, and in any event to enter into such an arrangement is a species of humiliation which can only be looked upon by his genuine friends with unqualified regret. Even aside from the principle involved in other respects it was an unqualified surrender of the right of free speech.

"There are many considerations that might be offered in extenuation of Bishop Sharp's line of action, besides his wealth, social standing before the world, etc. They should be used and given due weight. His health is precarious, and incarceration in prison might have proved disastrous, if not fatal to him. There are many things connected with his condition that made the ordeal one of tremendous trial for him. And no one knows the pang that it has cost us to learn of the position he has taken, and the reluctance with which we approached this criticism of his course. We have lived under his jurisdiction as a Bishop, we have always esteemed him as a warm personal friend, with whom we have ever been on the most amicable and kindly relations, 'We have been the recipient of personal courtesies at his hand, but friendship and every other consideration must not interfere with duty. Neither must a man's wealth, influence, social or official position, screen his public actions for being excepted to when they involve not only an eternal principle of truth, but inimical results that might follow were silence on the part of the News to give even an appearance of endorsement or acquiescence.

"To Latter Day Saints we would say: 'No matter what position any single man or number of men may take in regard to what God has given, the truth must be sustained and vindicated at all hazards. No matter how dark the clouds that are now apparently, frowning upon the people of God, the good ship Zion will weather the storm. It may rage for a season, after which the turbulent waters will subside. Meanwhile there must be, of what God has given to the Saints, no surrender."

THE following is the array of cases for the present court term in Salt Lake City, for unlawful cohabitation. In the Third District Court, on Monday, Judge Zane made the following settlings for the law and motion and criminal calendar:

September 28.—United States vs. John Sharp; United States vs. H. B. Clawson; United States vs. H. Dinwoodev.

September 29.—United States vs. W. A. Rossiter; United States vs. A. Miner; United States vs. Abraham Cannon; United States vs. Edward Brain.

September 30.—United States vs. Emil Olson; United States vs. A. W. Cooley; United States vs. D. E. Davis; United States vs. Isaac Groo; United States vs. Samuel H. Smith.

Correspondence.

JACKSBORO, Jack Co., Texas, September 21st, 1885.

Dear Herald:—I left Bro. Roberts, as I expected when writing my last for your columns, and went directly to Temple, where I found Brn. Norwood and Renfro awaiting me, and with them went to Elmwood. I stayed there two days, preaching twice to fair audiences with good liberty.

On the 4th inst, Bro. Simmons took me to Troy, where I ticketed for Fort Worth, thence to Weatherford, arriving there about ten o'clock at night, I found Bro. and Sr. Cato awaiting me. The next day we traveled about thirty-five or forty miles by wagon, arriving at Bro. J. L. Hains' about dusk, where I am now. The next day, Sunday, we held meetings in an arbor near by, where we met some who had obeyed the truth, and some who were interested in hearing. Bro. Cato has been the only one to do much labor here, and he has been successful in leading some into the light, and awakening a lively interest.

The 7th, the day appointed for the debate between W. S. Thurman and Bro. Cato, we assembled at the arbor. Mr. Thurman did not come, and we had a day of preaching. I spoke at eleven o'clock, Elder Pritchard, of the "Christian" Order" in the afternoon, and I again at night. We continued our meetings during the week. In the meantime C. M. Wilmeth came to Whitt, a village about twenty miles distant, and the opposition brought him, and arrangments were made to put him in the breach, and discuss the same questions, which were to have been met by Elder Thurman. So on the 14th we met again, and it was decided as one change had been made in speakers, to make another, and so I stood for our side.

Bro. Cato and a Mr. Davis, of Whitt, a member of the opposing church, acted as moderators. They did well, and when called upon for decision acted promptly and impartially. For two days of four hours each, the following was discussed: "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is in doctrine and polity in harmony with the doctrine taught by Christ." There was nothing new in the opposition worthy of notice—the same old song, sung to the same old tune, which the Elders are meeting everywhere. It may be new, however, to your readers to learn that they believe and practice the instruction of James in regard to the sick sending for the Elders, and they praying over them, anointing with oil, &c. Mr. Wilmeth declared that they did practice this in their church. Those who heard our first debate in Bell county will remember his remarks about this subject then. Strange!

You can form some idea in regard to the strait he was driven to, when he first acknowledged the Reorganization taught no polygamy, and then went back and brought all the rumors of polygamy he had ever heard.

The 16th we discussed the proposition: "The Christian Church (vulgarly called Campbellite) is the Church of Christ." It was agreed that there should be two days devoted to this proposition, and Mr. Wilmeth said he would stay, and published a notice himself in the Rural Citizen, that the debate would last four days. But he would not agree to stay the time out, (after coming on the ground), saying he could not reach his next appointment and remain. This appointment he said had been announced a year, and he was aware of it when he entered into this debate. Yet when I intimated that he had enough of the debate, he leaped to his feet saying: "If he says I am trying to run out of the debate, he is lying. I am not afraid of him. Bro. Smith, don't you know I'm not afraid of you." I presented their discipline as contained in the "Christian System." and asked for an explanation harmonizing with the statement that they were built upon the "Bible and Bible alone."

The only explanation he *gave was that they did not use it. When asked what they published and kept it on sale for? He made no answer. Some of the members, however had never heard of it before, consequently it created some consternation. The next day appeared in the Rural Cilizen, the following notice: "Elder P. J. Taylor will preach at the Christian Church next Sunday, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, at which time that Campbelite Creed, or Book of Discipline, will be exhibited and examined." Previous engagements prevented us from attending; did not care much about it any way. I don't care what they do with it for my part.

During the discussion of the first proposition, Mr. Wilmeth tried hard to bring in the Book of Mormon, but I refused to notice it, so far as the question of its inspiration was concerned; but told him I would discuss it whenever we could agree. At the close of debate he expressed his willingness to meet it, but could not tell when, until other arrangements were made, and said we would arrange the time by correspondence. Out of respect for the body Mr. Wilmeth represents, I will meet him any time they see fit to put him up; but for him as a man, I have but little respect. I have some hesitancy in signing rules to consider any man my equal in "desire for truth," who treats an opponent with no courtesy or respect, and shows no regard for veracity, or the rules of honorable controversy. We continued our meetings until last night. To-morrow we go to Young county, thence to Parker county. Late news from Bro. Roberts left him feeling well, with prospects flattering. The outlook is encouraging.

Asking the prayers of all your readers, that we may faint not by the way, I am in bonds of peace,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

Lyons, Walworth Co., Wis., September 21st, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: Since I wrote you last I have been displaying the gospel banner at East Delavan, and also at this place; and as a result of the labors of the local brethren and myself, I was called upon on yesterday to again trouble the waters of White River, near Vorce, once known as the headquarters of James J. Strang. Five more precious souls were buried in the liquid grave to help swell the innumerable throng, "marching onward," to the celestial city. We held confirmation meeting at the house of our respected sister, Ann Davis, where we spent a pleasant and profitable hour, the Holy Spirit giving joy and comfort to all present, and we separated, praising God for his loving kindness in remembering and bringing us joy once more. So may God bless the labors of all his faithful servants till the victory is won.

I expect to leave these parts soon for other fields of labor. Still trusting for the promised aid to assist me in the discharge of duty, and ever praying for Zion's weal, I remain your fellow-laborer in the Master's cause,

John S. Patterson.

Limerick, Ohio, Sept. 21st, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - Thinking a few lines from these parts might be of interest to the Herald readers, I pen a few thoughts. In addition to what Bro, W. H. Kelley has said in regard to the discussion held here the latter part of last month, I desire to say that it was a grand success. It being the fourth one held at this place, the people are learning our position, and they are learning to love the truth. The great latter day work lost nothing by the investigation, but gained. Four heads of families, good, respectable men and women, yielded obedience to the gospel during conference and the discussion, and two were baptized since. I can truly say, and speak the sentiment of the entire body of Saints who attended the discussion, that Bro. W. H. Kelley as a debater, as a Christian gentleman, and an Apostle of Christ, has won the confidence of the Saints; and it is with pleasure that our minds dwell upon his grand defense of the truth, and his seasonable advice to the Saints. Surely, Mr. Taylor was pressed hard in the debate. It was made very plain to all unbiased minds that the so called Christian Church is without authority from God. As Bro. Kelley testified that they were usurpers, the Spirit confirmed it to me, as much so as if God had spoken it. Summing up the whole of the visit of Bro. Kelley, our position in regard to Utah is much better understood by outsiders; much prejudice is removed and the Saints greatly strengthened and encouraged. As for myself, I am feeling stronger, and have a desire to spread the truth. On Saturday following the close of the discussion I started on a short mission to Vinton, and Meigs county, Ohio, laboring in the vicinity of the Vinton Branch. Preached ten discourses to crowded houses of eager listeners, baptized ten, left others near the kingdom, administered to several sick folks, mostly with good results. If I could have stayed ten days longer, there might have been as many more added; but my work at home demanded my presence. How I long to be released, that I can constantly labor in the vineyard of the Lord. While I was thus engaged, Brn. Devore and Beatty were holding forth in a new place, and baptized four. There are many calls for preaching in this district. May there be more laborers sent out to dispense the truth. The work is onward in this locality. Praying for the triumph of truth, yours truly,

Austin Avenue, CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 17th, 1885.

JAMES MOLER.

Dear Herald:-There are from eight to twelve who meet with us once on Lord's day at ten thirty a. m., at 213 West Madison Street, Room 2. Some times a few strangers come. I feel that we need to be very humble and prayerful, above all things knowing what we have gone through in this place. We have had some preaching by the president of Northern Illinois District and once by a Bro. from Pittsburg, Bro. Hulmes, who was passing through. He spoke to us on the first principles. We do what we can, or at least some does, to forward the work here And all Elders that may be passing through are invited to call. We have the privilege of advertising in the Times, Tribune and Inter Ocean, free of charge.

I always want to be found humble, and willing to do something for the work which God has surely shown me is His own. Bro. S. C. Goode is our president; Bro. Meutze our Priest; and Bro. Allen our Deacon; about eighteen altogether I think

We ask all to pray for us, and we shall try to do what we can and keep our hearts in the interest of Zion's weal as far as we know and can see. I thank God that through five years of trial and and darkness we have come through—sickness, death and other trouble—He has kept me, preserved me, and been merciful to me. And I thank Him that I have not as yet lost sight of the work which was given to me near eight years ago in St. Thomas and London. May heaven bless my brethren in those places, and in Canada in general and in my old home, England.

Since I was in London, Canada, several have come to the states—Independence, Armstrong and surrounding country, and hope God will bless them in their homes. I am glad to see Bro. J. J. Cornish is on the onward move for the work in Michigan.

"Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." But if any are doing wrong they must be chastened, or else we are not His sons. I remember well our trials together in St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada, and meditate on the impressions of God's Spirit given to us in our childhood's simplicity, after entering in at the door of the gospel kingdom, and partaken of the sincere milk of the word. May God ever keep us, that we may not be found unfaithful to those little things God has given us that we may make the way possible for more, that He may "add line upon line, and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little."

Yours in gospel bonds, T. A. PHILLIPS. Rexburg, Idaho, September 16th, 1885.

I am reflecting on President Joseph Smith's mission to these regions. An eminent writer once said—"He that steals my purse, steal trash; but he that robs me of my good name, takes that which enriches him none, but makes me poor indeed."

We can see how applicable this is in the case of certain parties in the Utah Church who are seeking to defile the good name of brother Joseph. It is written that the Lord of the vineyard sent his servants into his vineyard, and the husbandmen beat and ill-treated them and sent them away. Then said the Lord of the vineyard, I will send my Son; peradventure they will reverence him. But when the husbandmen saw him they said-"Here comes the heir; let us kill him, and then the heritage will be our." (See Luke 20: 9-18). This has been repeated in part in Utah already in respect to "Young Joseph;" and shall the latter part of that parable have a re-enactment there also? If some of the Utah people can blacken Joseph's character in any way they will rejoice in that kind of success. We know them, and their works. They raise the war cry of apostate! apostate! when anyone dares speak forth the principles of truth and righteousness and oppose their notions; and they seek to make people believe an "apostate" is too vile for any-Yours, thing. S. S. THORNTON.

WHITING, Kansas, September 21st, 1885.

Bro. Blair .- I wrote two letters to you before, but they were not sent, for the reason that each time I wrote, others had done the same, to my satisfaction, and they were published in the Herald. They were commending your manly and Godly zeal in reviewing Bro. Gurley's attacks on the accepted faith of the church. It was not desirable that Bro. Gurley should take the course he did; yet I believe that much good came out of it by the explanations given by you on several revelations which I think were of a doubtful character, with some, heretofore-such as "avenge," the "debts of the presidency." etc. I am satisfied that more good came out of the controversy, even for many Elders of high and long standing in the church, than all the harm that Brother Gurley could possibly do; because he affected none except those who were already like himself. Your instructions recently to the ministry were needed, and are of much value for the church. I agree with you as touching the spirituality of the church as a whole, and especially in the preaching of the word by some of our Elders too. It is painful sometimes to hear an Elder repeating several times, in a sermon, the weak points and inconsistencies of some noted divine, or revivalist of good report with the world. It is known that some who were friendly to our Church were made enemies to the cause, for a season at least. I shall pray our heavenly Father to continue to bless you with wisdom to admonish and instruct your fellow-laborers in the gospel. We feel sorry that we now see no prospect of your visiting this country very soon. We had Brother Caffall with us lately, and we had a good place for him to preach in Whiting. The people were very friendly; they gave up their own meetings and came to hear Brother Caffall, and he said he felt good-had good liberty to preach to them. We are, in common with others of like faith, much interested in the mission of brother Joseph and others in the west; and we are also joyful in the recent discovery of the "Manuscript Found;" not for the good of the Saints alone, but more so for the good of them that know not the truth, who are so blinded that they will not see the light by reason of their prejudices.

The field, wherever I have been, is very inviting for preaching. And to preach only once or twice in a place does not much good, as a general thing. And that is just the way it is in this country, for a long distance around here. There are many things in my mind as touching the prosperity of the church, but my letter is getting too lengthy, and I must close with the best wishes for your prosperity and all that faithfully labors in the interest of the church and humanity.

Your in the gospel of peace,

HENRY GREEN.

GLEN EASTON, West Virginia, September 18th, 1885.

Dear Saints:-Through the columns of our dear paper I thought to let you know I am still striving to be a Saint, and every day I live this work is more precious to me. Since I first learned the truth, and obeyed the laws required to make me an heir of the kingdom, the blessings I have enjoyed, and the manifestations of God's goodness to me, I can't find words to express. When I obeyed the gospel I left all to follow my Lord and Savior; stood alone in the work for near six years; had many things to endure for the work's sake, but the Lord supported me, and I have tried to serve him in sickness and in health. I was healed from severe sickness by his mighty power, and have had many other testimonies of this being the true work of God. I could not doubt it for one moment, for I know by the power of God it is his work; and to-day I have greater reasons than ever to rejoice, for I have had the privilege of seeing all my family, except one, baptized into the kingdom of God; and I hope if I am faithful to see the day when all will be with me. We had quite a good time here the last Saturday and Sunday in August. Brn. G. T. Griffiths, J. Ells, and J. Craig, with several other Saints assembled at our place and had a three day's meeting. The Elders had good liberty in preaching, and on Monday morning before separating, we had a prayer and testimony meeting, the best I ever was in I think. The Lord spoke to us by his Spirit many words of cheer. The Saints were all refreshed, and after meeting three were baptized. The next morning one more was baptized, four added to the kingdom while the brethren were with us. I hope an Elder will be directed here soon, for I think more good can yet be done in this place. May God bless and prosper his work, and sustain his children everywhere, is my prayer.

Your sister in the covenant of God, CAROLINE WAYT.

LOGAN, Iowa, Sept. 21st, 1885. W. W. Blair; Dear Brother: We had a fairly good session of conference of late at Little Sioux. Not a very large attendance, but the best feeling prevailed that we have had for some time. A good healthy addition to our membership in the district, and some encouraging signs for the future:
Your brother in the faith,
WM. C. CADWELL.

Edward Thomas has been arrested at Beaver, Utah, on complaint of Charles C. Schmidt, for unlawful cohabitation. On being brought before the U.S. Commissioner he waived an examination and was bound over to await the action of the grand jury in the sum of $1,500, and many witnesses have since been before that body on Thomas' case.

A jury is now being empaneled for the trial of James E. Twitchell, on a charge of unlawful cohabitation. From 25 jurors catechised, seven passed the ordeal. One juror was asked if his wife was a Church member and paid tithing. An open venire was issued for 12 jurors, from which number four passed muster, and two only are now lacking to fill the panel. Another open venire has been issued for six more.

The question is asked, "When will we have the equinoctial storm?" It may be answered that we probably had it last week. The storms that are due about the time of the sun's equinoctial passage often occur a week or two before the sun is on the line in the autumn, and as much later in the spring. It is not difficult to understand the reason of this if we remember that owing to the preponderance of water in the southern hemisphere the center of the trade-wind system averages a few degrees of latitude north of the zone to which the sun is vertical. Hence the change in atmospheric conditions, which is due to the passage of the sun from one hemisphere to the other, does not necessarily coincide with the time when the sun is on the equator.

A DIALOGUE

RESPECTING THE CHURCH OF CHRIST IN THESE LAST DAYS, THE CHURCH OF CHRIST IN FORMER DAYS, AND THE CHURCHES OF SO-CALLED MODERN CHRISTENDOM.

BETWEEN DR. TWINETEXT AND ELDER D.

Dr. Twine-text.—My friend, please pardon the freedom I now take: I do not like to play the part of eaves dropper, but as I sat near you I heard the conversation between you and your friend, and I gathered from that, that you had some knowledge of the Scriptures, and that you belonged to some one of the many religious bodies, and my curiosity leads me to enquire which of the churches you hold fellowship with.

Elder D.—I make no boast of my scriptural knowledge, but I have read the Scriptures pretty thoroughly, and have thoughtfully considered their contents, as I believe it is the duty of every one to do; and the more I read them the more I am interested therein; for they reflect new light upon my mind in respect to the things that immediately concern me, viz., My present life, my relation to God and man, and also the future life. As to the church I belong to, my answer may provoke a smile, or a sneer, or move you to pity, according to the mood you may be in; but without regard to either, I have the honor of belonging to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

T.—To that degraded and despised people! I am astonished!

D.—Despised we may be, sir; but I am not willing to admit the degradation more than that of other religious bodies. But if believing in the sacred historical facts, the prophecies, and promises, together with the commands, precepts and ordinances recorded in the Holy Scriptures is degrading, then we may plead guilty, more than any other people; but my experience teaches me that the more intelligent faith we have in those things, [and there can be no intelligent faith in them without careful reading or hearing, the brighter and higher is our conception of our duty to God and man; also that by reason of this faith we are led to desire, and to determine to perform those duties. And thus we become better men and women than we could be without that faith. But we not only learn our duty to God and man, but it enables us to understand the glorious privileges and blessings that God has secured unto all who believe and love Him.

T .- That sounds very well, my friend, but if I understand your faith, it is fanatical, and contrary to all other churches; in fact, it is a strange, anomalous faith; and being contrary to the faith of all modern Christianity, it must be degrading:

D.—Have you taken pains to learn what

T.—No sir; my time is better occupied. I have read of it through the press, and heard it spoken of from the pulpit, and am satisfied to know that it is contrary to that of all the religious world, and hence degrading. I have no time for the investigation of delusions.

D.—I am surprised to hear a man in your standing denouncing a faith without investigating it. Nicodemus, in answer to the Pharisees of old who condemned the Son of God unheard, put this pertinent question, which was a scathing rebuke to them, and may serve as such to the Pharisees of this day-"Doth our law judge any man before it hear him?" And Solomon said:-"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame to him."

T.—I told you I had heard it spoken of by the most pious divines of the churches, and have read of it extensively through the newspapers, and such eminent authors as Beadle, Howe, etc. Hence your rebuke and that of Nicodemus, will not apply to me.

D.—If you have never investigated the faith of the Latter Day Saints as represented by their standard works, and by their ministry, as you declared you had not, how do you know that "the most pious divines" you have listened to, together with the newspapers, and "such eminent authors as Beadle, Howe, etc.," have properly represented the faith and doctrine of our church? If you would examine these "pious divines" and editors, you would be likely to find that they, like you, based their representations on hearsay, or vain imagination. And if you would compare their representations with the real doctrines of the church they denounce, you would find they were grossly misinformed, or had maliciously misrepresented the facts as they exist; and hence are unworthy of credence.

T.—Why, sir, I repeat, your faith is different from those of all the churches in Christendom! and the whole world declares you are in error; that you are fanatics, and hence degraded. It is not possible that the learning of the nineteenth century can be wrong, and the mere handful of Latter Day Saints be right.

D.—Your argument—if it can be properly called argument—that we must be degraded because we believe different to all others, is a weapon that is much keener at the back than the front edge, and may be found more damaging to the man who wields it than to his opponent. It is a well known fact that every church of so-called modern Christendom, believes differently from every other church. If they did not, there would be no cause for division, unless such division originated in jealousy, (and jealousy is one of the eldest born of hell). And if the fact of the Church of Latter Day Saints having a different faith from the rest of mankind tends to degrade it, then, as "the same cause will produce the same effect," every other church must be degraded, because of their faiths being so widely different from each other. And we would simply say, "physician, heal thyself!" Moral degradation follows, not as the result of a difference of faith from that of our fellows; but is the result of a departure from the faith of Christ. If the faith of the Latter Day Saints is contrary to the faith of Christ—

"The faith once delivered to the Saints" as recorded in the Holy Writ, then, sir, your charge is just, and the dread sentence must hold against all whose faith differs from that of the great Teacher. And since so many different faiths can not be the "one faith," modern christendom must justly bear the reproach your own argument places upon them-moral degradation! Again: you say, "the whole world declares you are wrong!" The apostle James gives us to understand that "the world is at enmity with God," (James 4: 4), hence it is not likely to speak favorably of His church. The whole world declared that Noah was wrong when he cried out against their abominations. prophets shewed ancient Israel their sins, and cried aloud because of their transgressions, Israel donounced them and declared them unfit to live. When Jesus came to His own, they received Him not, because He taught a different faith; one which came in contact with their corruptions. They declared He had "a devil," and was too degraded to live; and they finally cried out, "away with Him! crucify Him!" They refused to calmly investigate His claims, and condemned Him unheard; and they treated His disciples in like manner. The popular voice has rarely been in favor of truth, because "the friendship of the world is enmity with God."

T.—It is the height of blasphemy to compare yourselves with Jesus Christ; but it is in keeping with all your arrogant assumptions.

D.—We have not compared ourselves to Jesus Christ, as standing on the same exalted plane of righteousness. We have leared our true condition too well for that; but as his servants, we may compare the treatment we receive with that which our Divine Master received, and we find it is strictly in accordance with his written utterances. 'He said, "The disciple is not above his Master, nor the servant above his Lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his Master; and the servant as his Lord. If they have called the Master of the house, Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household." (Matthew 10: 24). And Paul says, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution." (2 Timothy 3:12). Jesus said further, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake." (Matt. 5:11, 12). "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own," etc. (John 15: 18-

T.—I admit that was true of those barbarous times, in the early age of Christianity; but things have greatly changed. Christianity has made rapid strides; millions upon millions have embraced it. The wise, the noble, and the good of nearly all lands are its advocates; and these millions of pious and learned men are united in their denunciation of your doctrine and people; hence it is very evident that, as a system, you are corrupt.

D.—Before I can accept your conclusion, I must enquire, What is Christianity?

T .- It is that system of religion established by Christ, and expounded by his Apostles.

D.—"That system." Those words indicate that there was only one system established by Christ. Is that your view?

T .- Exactly; for we read, "There is one faith, one Lord, and one baptism."

(Eph. 4: 5, 6).

D.—I am glad to hear you quote that precious truth, and as you admit that Christ established but one faith and one baptism, which of all the churches holds that one faith? Do they all hold and teach it? If so, what constitutes the differences between them? Can that one faith be susceptible of so many and widely different interpretations? Can truth clash with truth? If not, how can so many discordant faiths be the true interpretation of original Christianity? And if all these contradictory theories can not possibly be the true one, then please tell me which is the true one? If "a house divided against itself can not stand," how can modern Christendom?

T.—I admit there is a great deal of confusion, but it is the result of differences of opinion upon non-essential points.

D.—Are there any non-essential points in that "one faith" which constitutes original Christianity? Is it in keeping with the Divine character to ordain a system, a part of which is non-essential, unimportant, having little or no relation to the well-being of man or the glory of God? Do the Scriptures teach that any part of that divine system is non-essential, and if not, what right have you, or the churches, to set up this plea? Is it not a flimsy veil thrown over to hide the "confusion" that you, tar-dily, confess is among you? But remember, "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace." (1st Cor. 14: 33). I demand the answer, which of all the many contradictory systems is true and uncorrupted Christianity?

T.—Here I must confess myself at a loss to properly draw the line between the churches; but would you be so uncharitable as to say there was no good in modern Christendom, as you are pleased to term it?

D.—You are begging the question now. You have been uncharitable enough to condemn the Latter Day Saints upon the mere and unwarrantable assertion of socalled pious men and women, of every shade of contradictory faith that can well be conceived of; and now that you find that such contradictions are not of God, and that these so-called pious men and women have been playing the same role that the Pharisees and hypocrites of old played against the Son of God and his followers, you beg for charity; and you ask, "Is there no good in modern Christendom?" The proper question is not "Is there no good in modern Christendom;" but, Is that "modern Christendom" the pure and un-defiled Christianity the "one faith" established by Christ, and expounded by his Apostles? Until this is proven in the affirmative, I can not accept your conclusion, that because we are denounced, and our doctrines declared false by the "millions of pious men and women," so-called, that it is therefore evident that, as a system, the Church of Latter Day Saints is corrupt, and its members degraded. On the contrary, such condemnation is the verification of Christ's words to his Apostles and the church of their day, and is one seal of the approval of God, and the hatred of the world: "For if they have called the Masof the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household? Further, your plea of "non-essentials" in the gospel, is one of the great errors of the world; one of "the foxes that have spoiled the vine" and caused it to bear sour grapes. One man has declared this part of the gospel non-essential; and another, the other part; and while they have taken away one part after another, they have added their own theories and imaginations in the place thereof, until there is but little of the pure principles of Christianity left, and that which is added is no more like that which Christ established than darkness is like light.

T.—My time is limited. I regret that I can not continue this conversation now; but at some future day I would like to renew this investigation; for while I frankly acknowlege the cogency of some of your reasoning, I am not prepared to admit what you seem to claim, viz., "That there has been a general departure from the order of Christianity established by Christ;" for, did he not emphatically declare that "the gates of hell shall not prevail against" his church? and did he not further promise his disciples, just prior to his ascension, "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world?" In view of these facts, how could it be possible that there should be such a general departure from the orig-

D.—Christ did promise, respecting his Church, that "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it;" and he also assured his apostles that he would be with them to the end of the world. But in these statements he could not mean that he would take away the agency of the church, or barricide it in such a manner that neither the individual members, nor the body as a whole, could depart from the order as then established. It is evident from all his instructions to the church that he recognized the fact of their individual agency, as also that of the body entire, and cautions the church against the danger of falling away; else why does he say to them, "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation?" Again, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love;" and, "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered," (John 15), and many like words, which, I submit, he would not have used if it had not been possible for the church to have departed from the Lord. But as you are in a hurry, and as you have been kind enough to propose another interview, we will renew the subject when we meet again. Adieu.

GOD'S POWER IN HEALING.

Upon the 25th of July 1885, J. T. Chester, of Detroit, Minnesota, fell while at work on a building in this town. There was no one present at the place" and time of the accident besides his little girl, of about ten years old. When he recovered sufficiently, he directed her to go and tell Mr. Shaw to come at once to him. In about fifteen minutes I was there, and found brother Chester lying on the ground but a few feet from where he fell, unable to get up. He said he had tried to get up, but could not. He also said his arm was broken in two places, and he pointed out where. He said his shoulder was either broken or out of place, and that something was wrong with his back-putting his hand to his chest and stomach, saying it was "awful bad." To use his words—"I am almost killed; I wanted to vomit; and when I was going to do so, I thought of what I had heard, if any one vomited when so hurt, they were sure to die; so I tried to keep from it and have not; but have spit blood. I want to get up and go home."

I administered to him on the ground, after which he arose and walked home, some forty rods distance, without any assistance. Upon arriving at the house I wrapped the arm with a cloth, administered to it, and then went away. In about an hour I went back, this time having some consecrated oil. I anointed him and administered again, asking the Lord to cause the bones to grow together. I held the arm in my hands a short time, that with faith, in that three minutes there might be as much accomplished as there ordinarly is in several weeks. My prayer was heard. I placed no splints or stays upon it, and there has been no swelling nor fever from that time on, and his arm continued to get well. As to the back, chest, and stomach, they seemed to be all right after the second administration. Truly, it is a great gift from God—the gift to be healed. O, that the Saints would strive for this. Brother Chester has this gift in a remarkable degree—all praise to the Lord for such a gift. is a great miracle; and many times I have thought that it would be a strength to me to witness such a divine manifestation, and now I have beheld, and was the one who was the instrument in the hands of God to say the word, and according to the brother's faith it was done. Some two weeks after the accident, a doctor examined his arm, and he said there were evidences of the breaking of the bones, and pointed out where, in two places, and said the bones were in place, all right. He further remarked that it beat him, (surprising to him), how the bones were kept in place without the aid of splints, and that it got well so fast. In this we see that the rich blessings of God to his Saints are but foolishness to the world. Truly, the things of God are known only by the Spirit of God which abides in us. Hence the necessity for the Saints to make their bodies fit temples for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit—"for it dwells not in unholy temples."

Now, I give this my testimony unto all that may read this, that this account is true; that in this God maketh manifest that if we have faith, he will even mend the broken bones, and will heal us; and when necessary will send a ministering spirit unto us in such times of need as in this case. I also give my testimony that I have beheld sight restored to the eyes, the casting out of evil spirits, the healing of the consumptive, and a great many kinds of diseases, and the lame made to walk. Yea, God is the same to the Latter Day Saints as he was to former day Saints. He is the same to-day as yesterday. Yea I would say this same God calleth upon men everywhere to repent and come unto him and live. This is eternal life "to know God and Jesus Christ who he has sent." And we come to a knowledge of him by his manifestations unto us: and as long as we do good, and have faith in him, he continueth to be a God of miracles unto us. "And if miracles are done away, it is because of unbelief; for as long as the world shall stand, God will work among the children of men according to their faith," and continue to do them good according to his loving mercy.

Marcus Shaw.

BUT ONE.

A COLLOQUY BETWEEN NABAL DOUBT-FUL AND DAVID GOODWILL.

"Well, neighbor Goodwill, how did you like that Mormon's preaching last night?"

"Think we had a good Bible discourse, but I don't know what you understand about Mormons."

"Don't you? I mean these folks who are out preaching what they call the gospel; but it seems to be a new gospel, or something."

"I understand it to be the same gospel that Jesus Christ and his apostles taught." "It don't seem so to me, it is not like what our preachers teach; and besides, I don't like the class they started from."

"Do you know what class they started from?" queried Goodwill, rather pointedly.

"Well, yes; I suppose I do; they say they all sprang from Joe Smith and Brigham Young."

"Do you know it to be so?"

"Know it? Yes; just as well as I want to," replied Doubtful, decidedly. "Then you have made an investigation."

"Then you have made an investigation."
"No; but I've always heard so, and to my mind it is a fact."

"So there has been many things said about you, and I, which were false; and many who did not investigate received them as facts, very much to our disparagement. So is the case in question. I have investigated; and I am fully convinced that the two men differed widely in their views, practices, and teaching; and so did their successors, and so do all their followers, and the fact will soon be plainly shown to all the world."

Ah, indeed; but I do not like their style of preaching. They seem to think that they are right, and all other churches wrong, and that I call uncharitable."

"They are very decided and square in their views, I will admit; but not without good reasons."

"But I can not see any consistency in thinking that one is right and all the rest wrong," replied Nabal.

"That is a question, truly; but Christ and his successors gave but one code of laws, and they promised that certain signs should follow obedience to those laws. Now if a church obeys those laws and receives the promised blessings, they must certainly know that are right. Again; if every church should govern itself by those laws, could there be more than one church? said David in an earnest, friendly tone.

After a moment's pause Doubtful replied with a puzzled look, "Well, I don't know as there could; but I never thought of it before; and I can't believe Joe Smith was the only man that knew, and I shan't follow his teaching, I know;" strong emphasis on the last words.

"I will admit that he did not know better than other men, till God revealed it to him, and—"

"O, fie!" cried Nabal, "revealed it to him! Why should he reveal it to him, and no one else?"

"I will answer your question by asking why he revealed his secrets of old to men of humble rank? Why did he choose the poor fishermen to be his apostles."

"O, that was the way he worked then; but in this enlightened age he works differently."

"Nabal Doubtful, if your views are right he is not a God; for he must have changed. But as he is an unchangeable God, I advise you to study his word; study his dealings with his children in the present; pray in faith believing that he is the same God, and you will soon know that his dealings with his own are the same in all ages,"

"Perhaps it is so in some cases; but I can't believe in all those new ideas they preach. The old way is the best, in my opinion, if it does have some errors."

"I've made up my mind that the new way, as you call it, which is nearly two thousand years old, is the safest way. We will admit, for argument, that it is not perfect, but even then it is as safe as others; for all are imperfect, or there could be but the one, you know, if all were right."

"Two thousand years old!" in a tone of surprise—"I can't see it. It seems to me just like something gotten up to delude people."

"My friend, it is the very same gospel that Jesus and his followers taught, and all will find it so who will honestly compare it with the pattern. You are not the only one that has thought it a strange doctrine; so did the non-investigators of old; but never those who went to God sincerely and earnestly for help."

"Well, I don't understand it."

"Many have not understood it, for the very reason they would not. Now, Mabel Doubtful, I wish you would show me a church that can be traced back through the dark ages to the primitive church, with an unbroken chain."

A moment's pause, and the answer is, "I don't know as I can. Neither can I or any other person. After the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, the church dwindled away and in a few hundred years inspiration and all the gifts ceased to be had among men, and the church went into the wilderness as foretold by John the Revelator in chapter twelve. Now the question is, Who had authority, or who could have it, to reorganize that church except God gave it to him? Or how could any man get the pattern except God gave it?"

"Get it from the Bible, to be sure. Many have claimed to get their pattern from the Bible, but hardly two persons agree. The fact is, the pattern is given in such a way no man can work perfectly from it, except he is inspired by the Author of that pattern. It is a spiritual work, and must be worked by the Spirit, man being only the instrument."

"You have got hold of some pretty deep ideas, friend Goodwill."

"Again, if a man be ever so faithful, can he give the blessings that were promised only by God through his Son?"

"Well, I don't know. I never gave that much thought."

"In order to re-establish the church by the primitive pattern, God himself must choose some person to commence the work. And it matters not whom, whether it be you or I, the world and the power of darkness will cry out against it. Only those who are willing to be led by the Spirit can see it. The strong opposition, and the testimony of the humble believer, both are reliable evidences of the authority of the work. Such you know was the fact in the early ages, and all the way down to the present."

"Well, well; I never thought of such ideas," accompanied by a puzzled look.

"You know that the Revelator in chapter fourteen shows us that near the end of time an angel will be sent to bring the everlasting gospel to the children of men. Now, if the gospel has been preached in its fulness since the days of the apostles up to the present, what is the necessity of the angel's bringing it? And as God's word never returns void, it must surely be brought, if it has not. The Latter Day Saints say that they have a spiritual knowledge of the fact that it has been brought and delivered to all who will receive it. That being a fact, Woe to every one who is found fighting against it! They also say, and I know them to be reliable people, that they have the same witnesses of the fact that was promised all those who embraced the gospel as taught by Jesus. Now can any reasonable thinker condemn them for making it known? It looks to me as though they would be under condemnation themselves if they did not. It would be hiding their light, or the light of God, under a bushel."

"Well, well; I declare friend, I will think of it," replied Doubtful, thoughtfully

"God grant that all may think of it to their soul's salvation; for the time is near at hand when all shall know that what they preach is true, and what has been prophecied of it true," replied Goodwill, with feeling.

"But I can't believe anything in old Joe Smith's being a prophet. I don't know but he was a good man, but we don't need prophets in this enlightened age."

"As for that matter, Joseph Smith must have been just what he claimed to be, or he must have been a notorious liar and an impostor. But as his prophecies have been so invariably, and so perfectly fulfilled, many have no doubt of his divine mis-The prophet Amos tells us that 'The Lord God will do no thing except he first revealeth it to his servants, the prophets.' In all ages when he was about to do a great work, he chose some one through whom he made known his will and purpose to the children of men, and if they gave heed it was well for them, otherwise it was not. He invariably chose those of humble birth and habits; and the Latter Day Saints firmly believe that he chose Joseph Smith, for reasons known to himself; that he was abont to perform a marvellous work in these the last days,

"But we read of false prophets arising in the last days."

"Certainly we do; and we know that there are many false prophets in the world, and for that very reason we may believe that there are true prophets. God would not suffer the false to exist, except he had the true to lead his own; for where would his power and love be manifested toward them if he left them without a guide? That is one evidence of the fact; another is, this man fifty years ago and more uttered prophecies, giving the date and place. Such have been fulfilled, and many not until after his death. Who then can honestly say he was not a prophet of God!"

"But we don't need such things in this enlightened age. Why, my friend, education was never so universal, so—"

"Yes; but the wisdom of man is foolishness with God; and as the wisdom of God is foolishness with men who are not led by the Spirit, there never was a time when revelation was needed more than now. God never gives that which we do not need; and he wants us to make wise use of what he does give; as regards our individual wants we need revelation, or the gift of prophecy, just as much as did the ancients; and as there never before was so many Christian beliefs, we as a people need the spirit of prophecy to show us which to embrace. Now, as Christ promised that those who obey his commands, (not the commands of men), 'shall know of the doctrine' whether it be of men or of God, there can be no mistake about it. The thing is just as plain and sure as the sunshine or the rain-bow.'

"I never supposed that revelation was needed, or was to be enjoyed in one day," replied Doubtful.

"I will ask how you or any other person can know that he is converted, and accepted of God, unless God reveals it? Neither is there any other way whereby the work of God can be fully understood. This knowledge is free for all; and he who will may accept it. It can be attained, however, only by strict obedience to the gospel plan, that Christ Jesus delivered to the children of men. My friend, the way looks so plain it seems that a wayfaring man though a fool can not err therein."

"But it don't seem so to me," replied

Doubtful, thoughtfully.

"Those who lack wisdom should go to God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and if he goes with a humble, sincere heart, he will surely receive the desired knowledge. My friend, God grant that you may be one of that number."

"Well, I will think of it;" was the response.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 17.

DR. FLINT says of the cave of San Andres, in Nicaraugua: "A sudden upheaval to the north and east of the cave, from out of the sea, would cause the retiring waters to pass over and flood the cave and disappear in the Pacific, cutting a channel more or dess deep. . . . I see no other way of forming the sandstone. The present sedimentary rock was plastic at that time. In support of its plasticity, impressions of a tiger's tracks in line, with those of a man and an animal of the wolf species, are seen; and rising the slope about six leagues above San Rafael the imprint of the man, as he jumped a small ravine in pursuit of or pursuing a tiger. Human foot-prints and those of a tiger can be seen at Pinon on the nearly flat bed of the Rio Grande, near the border of the stream. The tiger seems to have turned about a number of times; the prints are sharply defined; the rock is extremely hard, of light slate color." Dr. Flint has more recently reported human foot-prints in a deep stone quarry in Nicaraugua, where the rock is vol-

Until more definite knowledge is obtained it will be as well to combine all these convulsions of South and Central America in one grand cataclysm. The date of it is not entirely conjectural. I will, with Ixtlixochotl, fix it at about the close of the ancient Peruvian period and the beginning of the Christian era; or more definitely, coincident with the crucifixion—the greatest scientific fact in the records of this planet, either historical or geological. Cruden notices but two earthquakes as recorded in the Bible. I quote from him: "Another very memorable earthquake was that at the time of the Savior's crucifixion. Many have been of the opinion, that this motion was perceived by all the world. Others maintained that it was sensible only in Judea, or even in the temple, the gates whereof were shaken, and the vail rent asunder. It must have been attended with very terrible circumstances, since the centurion, and those who were with him, were induced by it to acknowledge the injustice of our Savior's condemnation."

I hope the hypercritical reader will not turn away from following the course of this history at this particular stage, after having followed it through uncipherable myriads of ages, and seeing that it is a continuous story, without a break, with a perfect method, and conscious purpose, and a recognizable plan; nothing adventitious, nothing unprovided for, and the end declared from the beginning in chaos, and Christ, "the Lamb slain from before the foundation of the world."

In order to connect physical phenomena on this continent with the crucifixion, other evidences of Israelitish occupation are in order.

In Antiquarian of September, 1879, is: "Comparative study of the Sanscrit and Nahualt, by Director Mendoza of the Mexican National Museum.

Sr. Mendoza enjoys a beautiful language, his expressions are highly poetical. He is penetrated with the idea of the unity of human language, consequently of the unity of the race. To him, the Sanscrit is the original mode of speech. Therefore, he gives us nearly four pages of comparisons between Sanscrit and Nahuatl words. Some of these are striking, while others are, of course, rather evidences of good and honest intention on the part of the author, than anything else. The whole subject should be treated by a thorough linguist, (like Mr. Gatschet, for instance), who would be better enabled to form an opinion of the real value of Sr. Mendozas' observation and conclusions.

It is of course exceedingly interesting and valuable to make attempts like the one now under treatment, but they are exposed to great danger. Still the mere attempt must be hailed as a step in the right direction. But on he plunges, into the depths of Indo-Germanic tongues, thus wandering far away from the present home of the Mexican idioms. Let us suppose that Sr. Mendoza should attempt to establish once the affinities between the Nahautl and Torasco, Maya and Gquiche, and other Indian modes of speech, occupying areas contiguous to the Mexican? Our own distinguished linguist, Mr. Albert Gatschet, is doing and has done such a handsome work in the idioms of New Mexico and Arizona."

Cyrus Thomas, of Washington, D. C., is engaged translating the "Manuscript Troano," an ante-Columbian Maya document. Some of the characters are phonetic and have been satisfactorily established.

"It is impossible," says Kingsborough, "when reading what Mexican mythology records of the war in heaven, and of the war of Zontemonque and the other rebellious spirits; of the creation of light by the word of Tonacaticutli, and of the division of the waters; of the sins of Yztlecolinhqui, and his blindness and nakedness; of the temptation of Suchiquecal, and her bisobedience in gathering roses from a tree, and the consequent misery and disgrace of herself and all her posterity,—not to recognize Scriptural analogies. But the Mexican tradition of the deluge is that which bears the most unequivocal marks of having been derived from a Hebrew source. * *

"The Peruvians had several flood-myths. One of them relates that the whole face of the earth was changed by a great deluge; attended by an extraordinary eclipse of the sun, which lasted five days. All living things were destroyed except one man, a shepherd, with his family and his flocks.

Herrera gives a native tradition which relates that long before the time of the Incas, there was a great deluge, from which some of the natives escaped by fleeing to the mountain tops. * * *

"The Mexicans have a tradition of a journey undertaken at the command of a god, and continued for a long time under the direction of certain high priests, who miraculously obtained supplies for their support; this bears a striking resemblance to the Hebrew story of the wandering in the desert. It is argued that the Americans, if of Jewish descent, would have preserved the Hebrew ceremonies and laws. It is however, well known that the Ten Tribes from whom they are supposed to be descended, were naturally prone to unbelief and back-sliding. It is not strange, therefore, that when freed from all restraint, they should cease to abide by their peculiarly strict code. Moreover, many traces of their old laws and ceremonies are to be found among them at the present day. . . . They burned incense, anointed the body, practiced circumcision. They had the same laws concerning the purification of women, the same laws concerning sexual intercouse with relatives, slaves, divorce and marriage, and kept the ten commandments."

IS IT PERSECUTION?

THE mournful Herald [Salt Lake] is sure that Judge Zane's last ruling is persecution. Let us suppose that the editor of the Herald owned five fine horses, that one of them should be stolen, would he think it persecution to arrest and punish the thief? Hardly. Suppose, then, that it should transpire that while the said editor was out searching for the first animal stolen, the thief were to skulk back and steal a second one; would the editor forgive him for his last offense, because of his first? What would he think were some one to tell him that to punish the man for stealing the first horse was proper enough, but to harass him on the second count, while it might be law, it was clearly enough persecution. The trouble is the Mormon people do not look upon polygamy and its attending practices as wrong. They read in the law that for a man to marry a woman while he has a living and undivorced wife, is a felony, but they will not subscribe to that doctrine, and hence, while they are willing to punish men for all other crimes, when it comes to that they in a moment cry out, "Persecution!" So, when the courts insist and persist in treating that crime precisely as other crimes are treated, there is an instant clamor that the officers are monsters who are persecuting a peaceable and harmless people. The officers can do no less than they are doing, and this should be recognized. No man can longer live in polygamy without standing forever, day and night, in the shadow of a conviction, and for all such the doors of the penitentiary are perpetually open. One of two things should be done; either the practice should be given up, or when convicted there should be no squealing. There is no record of the early apostles denouncing the courts every morning as they were consigned to dungeons. Rather they went smiling to their chains. Of course it is useless to remind the Saints that if they are right in their position, some other sect may rise up and hold that God commands that there shall be no marriage relation, but that every man shall be entitled to assault a woman whenever he meets her, or any other extravagant demands may be made and the Constitution may be cited to show that so long as anything may be done in the name of religion, the courts must not interfere. Society is founded on law. It can not exist a day after that anchor is taken away. Again when men can, in the name of religion, defy one law, their respect for all laws is broken down and chaos is not far off. To stop this work in Utah the Government has interposed its penalties. Those penalties polygamists can avoid in but one way, and that is to come within the safe grounds. If they will not do that, then it is not brave to scold, or complain, or lament, when caught and convicted. It ought to be clear enough to the dullest of them that if this law at which they rebel shall ever be repealed, it will be simply to substitute a more binding one. Is it not about time for them to conclude that it is useless to fight the inevitable and the irresistible, and to surrender. That would be the brave and wise course, and the reward would be the exalting of Utah and bring such prosperity as this region never enjoyed before. Salt Lake Tribune.

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

MR. J. B. Baily, of Reading, writes to the St. Fames' Gazette as follows, with reference to the desirability of exploring the Great pyramid: Now that Great Britain is dominant at Cairo, would it not be a good plan to clear away the sand and rubbish from the base of the Great pyramid, right down to its rock foundation, and try to discover those vast corridors, halls, and temple, containing priceless curiosities and treasures, with which tradition in all ages has credited the Great pyramid? This wonderful building, of such exquisite workmanship, was erected many years before any of the other pyramids, which are only humble imitations, built by another nation, and also for other purposes; for neither King Cheops nor anybody else was ever interred beneath this mighty mass of stone. The smaller pyramids also exhibit neither the nicety of proportion nor the exactnesss of measurement, both of which characterize the first pyra-

From internal evidence it seems to have been built about the year 2170 B. C., a short time before the birth of Abraham, more than four thousand years ago. This one of the seven wonders of the world in the days of ancient Greece-is the only one of them in existence. The base of this building covers more than thirteen square acres of ground. Its four sides face exactly north, south, east, and west. It is situated in the geographical center of the land surface of the globe. It was originally 485 feet high, and each of its sides measures 762 feet. It is computed to contain five million tons of hewn stones beautifully fitted together with a mere film of cement. And these immense blocks of stone must have been brought from quarries five hundred miles distant from the site of the building. The pres ent well-known king and queen chambers, with the various passages, might also be thoroughly illuminated by means of the electric or lime lights. The astronomer royal of Scotland some years since carefully and laboriously examined all that is at present known of the interior of this enormous building. He states that measurements in the chambers, etc., show the exact length of the cubit of the Biblenamely, twenty-five inches. This cubit was used in the building of Noah's ark, Solomon's Temple, etc. He also maintains that the pyramid shows the distance of the sun from the earth to be 91,840,000 miles.

A PERILOUS NIGHT RIDE.

AN INCIDENT OF MORMON TIMES IN HANCOCK COUNTY.

CAPTAIN Phelps told us the other day of one of his pioneer experiences that is worthy to be recorded. It occurred in 1844the year when Joseph and Hyrum Smith were killed at Carthage, Ill. He was then in business here with William Kelley, and had to go to St. Louis for a large sum of money. The water was so low in the Illinois river that he went with a team to Warsaw, and then took a boat on the Mississippi for St. Louis. Arriving in that city he got ten thousand dollars-partly in silver, partly in gold, and the remainder in paper money. It made quite a bulk, and was a big pile of money to have in those days. Returning up the river to Warsaw, just after dark, he and his fellow-passengers were surprised to see many lights on the opposite side of the river from Warsaw. But they soon learned that Joseph and Hyrum Smith had been killed by a mob at Carthage, and that the Mormons had swarmed out of Nauvoo to lay waste all the land(?). So Warsaw had been deserted, the people having all crossed the river and camped out, supposing that their town would be destroyed and that they would be murdered if they did not escape. boat landed at Alexandria (opposite Warsaw) where these facts were learned. Captain Phelps was warned that he would be robbed and murdered if he attempted to go overland to Lewistown. He thought over the situation for a few moments and made up his mind that both Mormons and Gentiles were desperately afraid of each other, and that that very night was exactly the safest time for him to get out of that county with his big pile of money. He asked the ferryman (an old friend) to set him over the river. He was implored not to go; robbery and murder were inevita-The prairies were full of bloodyminded Mormons(?). But Capt. P. persisted that if he got into trouble it was his own fault-he would take the risk. And so he was ferried over the river; and we doubt not his old friends regarded him as as fool-hardy in the extreme.

Warsaw truly was deserted. Not a dog had been left in the town; not a light gleamed out from any house. But he secured his team and drove away across the hills and prairies. As he neared Carthage he could see many lights glistening across the prairies from the town. The Mormons were there, and encamped in the public square. He did not care to interview them, so he made a circuit of about one mile around the town. He was exactly right in his guess that everybody was scared—everybody except himself. The Captain insists that he was not a bit scared. But he confesses that he drove as if the devil was after him. He was not the least particle frightened, but he felt more comfortable-like when he was making about ten miles an hour.

He reached Macomb just at daylight, and got home that same day with his big bag of money.—Lewistown Democrat.

Our old friend Capt. Phelps describes the situation in Hancock county at that time very accurately. But the lights he saw in Carthage that night were doubtless multiplied by the distance he was from them. The fact is that the evening Joseph and Hyrum Smith were killed, Carthage became in a short time almost wholly depopulated. Nearly everybody fled, expecting that the Mormons hearing of the death of their two leaders would come on the town before midnight and destroy it and kill the inhabitants. About the only persons that remained in the town were Artois Hamilton and his family, Fred Loring and family, a widow lady (name not remembered) who had a sick child, and two or three men who were guarding the bodies of the Smiths at Hamilton's hotel. David E. Head, then circuit clerk, assisted by William R. Hamilton, put the county records into a wagon and took them to the farm of Thomas Owens, some six or seven miles east of Carthage, where they remained several days, or until the threatened raid by the Mormons on the town was

The following day Samuel Smith, a brother of the prophet, accompanied by four or five Mormons came to Carthage and took the bodies to Nauvoo.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"DE odder ebenin' I heard an orator say dat dis was de aige of wisdom," remarked Brother Gardner as the meeting opened in perfect harmony. "Let us analyze de assertion an' see what it am made of.

"Has dar eber bin an aige when de records showed more commercial failures?

"Has dar eber bin an aige when statesmen made more foolish speeches?

"Has dar eber bin an aige when de people displayed more reckless extravagance? Fur ebery one man workin' on a salary who saves a dollar a week, twenty am libin' beyond what dey airn.

"Has dar eber bin an aige when murder, robbery, embezzlement, an' de odder crimes on de calendar war' mo' heard of? It am an aige in which you may doubt your kindest naybur and best friend.

"Has dar eber been an aige in which reckless speculation, gross mismanagement, corrupshun in high an' low places, conspiracy to defraud; queer decisions by courts, queer ackshuns by congressmen, an' a gineral disregard of honor an' honesty war' so plain befo' de eyes of de people?

"De aige of wisdom—yum!

"An' dat same orator asserted dat de next ginerashun would solve all scientific problems, make great advances in invenshuns, control de elements, an' live on a fur higher plane. Let us see.

"Take de present ginerashun an' fur ebery one perfeckly healthy man, I'll fin' you nine who am ailin'. De majority smoke, chew, drink, keep onreasonable hours, an' prepare demselves fur de grave at fifty. Consumption, liber complaint, dyspepsia, kidney disease, neuralgia, rheumatism an' scrofula am ebery day complaints. Drunkenness, gluttony, an' immorality no longer excite surprise. Dat's de seed fur plantin' de nex' ginerashun.

"Fin' me one perfeckly healthy woman an' I'll fin' you fifty who am ailin'. Take boat sides of de longest square in Detroit, or any odder American city, an' it won't average two healthy women, no matter how clusly de houses am built. Newralgia, rheumatism, weak backs, near-sightedness, terrible headaches, an' cancers, tumors, and a dozen odder ailments am keepin' the doctahs busy. Paint, powder, thin shoes, thin clothes, reckless exposure, late hours an' a total disregard of common sense in eberyting am de cause. Dat's de groun' on which to sow de wheat.

"De nex' generashun in dis kentry will need to double up our idiot an' insane asylums. State prisons an' jails will need to be enlarged. Honesty an' morality will be strangers in de land, an' friendship will have a mighty lonesome time. De seed an' de groun' am ready, and de crop will come in due time. I say to you dat dis am de open doah to de black man. Lib soberly, sensibly an' widout abuse. Lib morally and honestly. Consult your health in your dress an' diet. Avoid whatever will degrade you morally an' injure you physically, an' de second generashun from dis will make de laws fur de white man an' run his kentry. De one am deteriorating, de odder am creepin' up. De black man has de bowers in his hand."

Giveadam Jones moved that the communication of the Hon. Sendoff Taylor, of Quebec, offering to lecture before the club on the subject of cholera for the sum of twenty-five dollars be taken from the table and acted upon.

"De cha'r decides de moshun outen order," replied the president. "As to de cholera, we all know what it am. As to what'll cure it we mus' depend on de doctahs. As to how to escape it, let me say to you: Keep clean; let trash alone; keep slops outer your stomachs; slick up yer back yards; use plenty o'lime an' copperas; keep good hours; depend somewhat on Providence an' a heap on yerselves."

DIED.

CAIRNS.—Bro. John Cairns died in Hannibal, Missouri, September 11th, 1885. His complaint was disease of the heart and dropsy. He was born in Glasgow, Scotland, 21st October, 1808; was baptized in Leeds county., Canada, in the spring of 1834, by Elder James Blakeslee, and by him ordained an Elder. Entering the field at once, he spent ten years in preaching the gospel, and in debate, for which he was eminently qualified. Traveling extensively in Canada, England, Scotland, and the north of Ireland, he aided largely in spreading the gospel, and in elevating the standard of truth among the children of men. Declining to follow the counsels of "the man of sin," he removed from Nauvoo to the city of St. Louis, where he engaged in a lucrative business, gaining not only substance, but a high position in the estimation of the community. He was for six years a member of the City Council, and was also President of the Board of Health in that populous city. In the evening of his life, he came to Hannibal, where he was received into the Reorganization in a renewal of his covenants. He possessed a mind righly stored with useful information, culled from every valuable source; for he was an ardent investigator, and eager in the pursuit of knowledge. Able in argument, and ever ready to converse upon the principles so vital to our welfare; it was pleasant and instructive to listen to his words, while his varied experience, through a long and eventful life, made him wise and useful in council. Speaking of his departure, he said: "I fear not the article death, it is but the unfolding of the flower." Thus has another of the early heralds of salvation been gathered to the fathers. E. L. P.

McIntosh.—Near Hill City, Graham county, Kansas, of dropsy, Barbary E. McIntosh, wife of Elder C. G. McIntosh, aged 54 years, 11 months and 5 days. She died as she had lived, a faithful member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord. Funeral service by Rev. Mr. Farr.

HYDE.—At the residence of her sister, Sr. Fuller, in Little Sioux, Iowa, August 25th, 1885, Sr. Cynthia A. Hyde, aged 62 years. Deceased was born in Ohio. Was first married in Wisconsin, in 1846, to William Perce. Soon afterward came to Iowa. Two sons were born to them; one died in childhood, and the other is still living in the far west. She was left a widow in 1861. In 1868, was again married, to Samuel Hyde. She united with the Latter Day Saints in 1831, and was a faithful member, lived her religion, and was much esteemed by her acquaintances both in and out of church. She lived to the ripe age of 62 years, and enjoyed good health up to a short time before her death. She leaves a husband, son, three sisters and one brother, and many mourning friends. She was a true Christian, friend, neighbor, mother, wife, beloved by all who knew her. Elder J. M. Putney, of Preparation, preached the funeral sermon before a large congregation, at the Saints' Church.

With thy lamp well trimmed and burning bright, With the record of well spent years, Thy passing away to the regions of light Was unclouded by mortal fears.

CONFRENCE NOTICE.

Conference of the Independence District will convence at half-past ten o'clock at the Saints' Chapel at Independence, Mo., October 3d.

F. C. WARNKY, Pres.

The North-East Missouri District Conference will meet at Renick, Randolph county, Missouri, on the first Saturday in November, 1885, at two o'clock. Let every branch in the district be properly and fully reported; and as district officers will probably be chosen at that time, it will be necessary for as full an attendance of Saints and Elders as practicable.

> JOSEPH R. LAMBERT, Missionary in Charge.

Change of place of meeting of the St. Louis District Conference. The quarterly conference of the St. Louis District will be held at the time before stated, on the first Saturday and Sunday (3d and 4th.) of October, but in hall at No. 1447, North Broadway, instead of No. 1302, North Broadway. Conference will convene at two o'clock on Saturday.

CHAS. J. PEAT, Dist. Pres.

TO DELINQUENTS.

We wish those in arrears for Herald or Hope to pay up as soon as possible, and renew for them. In February last we struck from our lists a large number of delinquent subscribers, many of whom have not yet renewed, and we soon will have to again correct the lists, striking off the names of such as do not renew or give us good reasons for failing to do so.

Those owing for books should remit at once; and hereafter all persons ordering books should send the money with their orders, unless they arrange otherwise with us.

D. DANCER, Business Manager.

INDEPENDENCE (MO.) LOCALS.

Bro. D. S. Crawley, of Stewartsville, is again on our streets, and he filled the pulpit last Sunday evening with his usual ability.

Bro. E. Rannie, of Nebraska, lit up our sanctum vesterday, on his way to Clinton, Mo., where he has accepted a position with White Brothers.

Brn. Goreham and Curtis started overland, yesterday, for Galland's Grove Reunion, October 3d. Others will go from here by rail.

The Central U. S. M'f'g Co., are running full time, and are far behind on orders. See ad. in

E. Peterson, of celibacy fame, has concluded to quit preaching-"people will not endure sound doctrine," and go into the patent right business.

Bro. R. May's cooper shop is a very noisy place at present; four men, turning out the best apple barrels in Missouri.

The Herald and Advocate are unusually interesting of late; no contention, no controversy. We like the change hugely.

Sister Hardman has just returned from an extended visit to Iowa.

From the present indications an addition to our Church will soon be very necessary, or a larger one built in the not distant future.

Sister R. Salyards, of Pittsburg, Pa., Bro. Joseph Smith's daughter, is visiting friends here.

Carrie Lake, daughter of Bro. J. H. Lake, arrived this morning; will remain with T. W. Chatburn for the present.

The father and mother of Sister H. R. Mills are visiting here, and are favorably impressed with Independence.

WANTED A PARTNER

With fifteen hundred or two thousand dollars, to buy one-half interest in a well established and paying business. None but reliable men who can give good recommendations need apply. I prefer a brother in the church. Address, with your own hand writing, Robert Johns, 605 Illinois Avenue, Peoria, Illinois.

PARADISE.

Apostle Moses Thatcher, at Logan, Utah, August 23d, 1885, preached a sermon which was published in the Utah Journal, September 2d, in which he says:

"Thus it would seem that paradise is a place "where the disobedient are imprisoned; and as "Christ preached his gospel to them, it is not un-"reasonable to suppose that the thief also heard "there the conditions upon which he could be "saved."

In this Mr. Thatcher follows his "file leader," Brigham Young, and wanders off into the mists, and contradicts some of the plainest teachings of the three standard books of the church, and also the personal teachings of Joseph the Seer.

Brigham said in a sermon in Salt Lake City, December 3d, 1854, as follows:

"It is understood, and is so written, that when the inhabitants of the earth pass through what is called the valley of death, that which is in the tabernacle leaves it, and goes into the world of spirits, which is called hades or hell. The spirits that dwell in these tabernacles on this earth, when they leave them, go directly into the world of spirits. What, a congregated mass of inhabitants there in spirit, mingling with each other, as they do here? Yes, brethren, they are there together, and if they associate together, and collect together in clans and in societies as they do here, it is their privilege. No doubt they yet, more or less, see, hear, converse, and have to do with each other, both good and bad. Jesus himself went to preach to the spirits in prison; now, as he went to preach to them, he certainly associated with them; there is no doubt of that."

Journal of Discourses, vol. 2, page 137. In another sermon he stated that the murderer and his victim, the prophet and his persecutor and slayer, all went to hell at death, and remained there till their resurrection.

But the Psalmist David taught to the contrary. He said: "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God."-Ps. 9:17. And of the righteous he said: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."—Ps. 116: 15. Jesus fully confirms this view when he says wicked Capernaum should "be brought down to hell" (Matt. 11: 23); and that the faithful, overcoming saints, shall "eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God" (Rev. 2: 7). He further teaches this in what he says concerning the rich man and Lazarus, in Luke 16:19-31. Here he locates the wicked "in torments" of hell, and the righteous in a place of comfort and "good things" called "Abraham's bosom," known by Josephus and the Jews, as well as the Saints of that time, as paradise. Mr. Young and Mr. Thatcher teach that the righteous and wicked all go to one place—hell, the prison—at death, and that they all associate together there; but Jesus declares that good Lazarus was "far off" from hell and the rich man, and that there was "a great gulf" that separated the rich man from Lazaruss; and further, that the latter was not permitted to approach and give the wicked money-lover a drop of water to "cool" his tongue.

Who is right in this matter? Jesus and the Psalmist? or Messrs. Thatcher and Young?

Besides these testimonies, we have statements in the Book of Mormon which go right to the point, and harmonize exactly with Jesus and the Psalmist, and at the same time prove Messrs. Young and Thatcher to be "blind guides" and false teachers:

"O how great the goodness of our God, who prepareth a way for our escape from the grasp of this awful monster; yea, that monster, death and hell, which I call the death of the body, and also the death of the spirit. And because of the way of deliverance of our God, the Holy One of Israel, this death, of which I have spoken, which is the temporal, shall deliver up its death: which death is the grave. And this dead of which I have spoken, which is the spiritual death, shall deliver up its dead; which spiritual death is hell; wherefore, death and hell must deliver up their dead, and hell must deliver up its captive spirits, and the grave must deliver up its captive bodies, and the bodies and spirits of men will be restored, one to the other; and it is by the power of the resurrection of the Holy One of Israel.

"O how great the plan of our God! For on the other hand, the paradise of God must deliver up the spirits of the righteous, and the grave deliver up the body of the righteous; and the spirit and the body is restored to itself again, and all men become incorruptible, and immortal, and they are living souls, having a perfect knowledge like unto us, in the flesh; save it be that our knowledge shall be perfect; wherefore, we shall have a perfect knowledge of our guilt, and our uncleanness, and our nakedness; and the righteous shall have a perfect knowledge of their enjoyment, and their righteousness, being clothed with purity, yea, even with the robe of righteousness."-2 Nephi 6: 4, 5.

"And now I would inquire what becometh of the souls of men, from this time of death, to the time appointed for the resurrection? Now whether there is more than one time appointed for men to rise, it mattereth not: for all do not die at once: and this mattereth not; all is as one day, with God; and time only is measured unto men; therefore there is a time appointed unto men, that they shall rise from the dead: and there is a space between the time of death and the resurrection. And now concerning this space of time. What becometh of the souls of men, is the thing which I have inquired diligently of the Lord to know; and this is the thing of which I do know. And when the time cometh when all shall rise, then shall they know that God knoweth all the times which are appointed unto man. Now concerning the state of the soul between death and resurrection. Behold, it has been made known unto me, by an angel, that the spirits of all men, as soon as they are departed from this mortal body; yea, the spirits of all men, whether they be good or evil, are taken home to that God who gave them life. And then shall it come to pass the spirits of those who are righteous, are received into a state of happiness, which is called paradise; a state of rest; a state of peace, where they shall rest from all their troubles, and from all care, and sorrow, &c.

"And then shall it come to pass, that the spirits of the wicked, yea, who are evil; for behold, they have no part nor portion of the Spirit of the Lord: for behold they choose evil works, rather than good: therefore the spirit of the devil did enter into them, and take possession of their house; and these shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping, and wailing and gnashing of teeth; and this because of their iniquity; being led captive by the will of the devil. Now this is the state of the souls of the wicked; yea, in darkness, and a state of awful, fearful, looking for, of the fiery indignation of the wrath of God upon them; thus they remain in this state, as well as the righteous in paradise, until the time of their resurrection. Now there are some that have understood that this state of happiness, and this state of misery of the soul, before the resurrection, was a first resurrection. Yea, I admit it may be termed a resurrection; the raising of the spirit or the soul, and their consignation to happiness or misery, according to the words which have been spoken. And behold, again it hath been spoken, that there is a first resurrection; a resurrection of all those who have been, or who are, or who shall be, down to the resurrection of Christ from the dead."—Alma 19: 5. 6.

To this we may add that good King Benjamin expected, when he died, his "immortal spirit" would "join the choirs above in singing the praises of a just God." Mosiah 1:9. Alma said of the martyrs who perished in the flames, "The Lord receiveth them up unto himself, in glory." -Alma 10:7. Jesus said to some of his Nephite apostles: "After that ye are seventy and two years old, ye shall come unto me in my kingdom, and with me ye shall find rest."-Book of Nephi 13:3. Of them it is further said: "Yea, even an hundred years had passed away, and the disciples of Jesus, whom he had chosen, had all gone to the paradise of God, save it were the three who should tarry, and there were other disciples ordained in their stead."-Book of Nephi, who is the son of Nephi 1:5.

And in concluding Book of Mormon testimony, the prophet Moroni said, "I soon go to rest in the paradise of God." Moroni 10:2. Joseph the Seer explained that the four and twenty elders described | y John, (Rev. 4:4-10), "were elders who had been faithful in the work of the ministry, and were dead, who belonged to the seven churches, and were then in the paradise of God."-Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 595. He further says of the faithful ministers who are dead: "These men are in heaven, but their children are on earth. Their bowels yearn over us. God sends men down for this reason."-Matt. 13: 41. And the Son of Man shall send forth his his angels, &c. All these authoritative characters will come down and join hand in hand in bringing about this work."-Mill. Star 17:311.

From all this we see the sacred books of the church locate the righteous in paradise, and the wicked in hell. They also separate the wicked from the righteous at death, putting them "far off" from each other, and fixing the righteous in conditions and a place of rest, peace, and glory; while the wicked are fixed in a place and in conditions of unrest, and actual torment. These positions are amply sustained by the teachings of Joseph the Seer, for we see he speaks of the souls of the righteous being in paradise; but in the following and in other places he follows the standard books in fixing the souls of the wicked in hell.

July 2d, 1839, soon after John Taylor, W. Woodruff, and J. E. Page were made apostles, he warned the Twelve of their danger of apostasy, and denounced their fate, if they did apostatize, in these prophetic words, which harmonize precisely with the sacred books quoted.

"Let the Twelve and all Saints be willing to confess all their sins, and not keep back a part; and let the Twelve be humble, and not be exalted, and beware of pride, and not seek to excel one above another, but act for each other's good, and pray for one another, and honor our brother, or make honorable mention of his name, and not backbite and devour our brother. Why will not man learn wisdom by precept at this late age of the world, when we have such a cloud of witnesses and examples before us, and not be obliged to learn by sad experience everything we know? Must the new ones that are chosen to fill the places of those that are fallen, of the Quorum of the Twelve, begin to exalt themselves, until they exalt themselves so high that they will soon tumble over and have a great fall, and go wallowing through the mud and mire and darkness, Judas like, to the buffetings of Satan, as several of the Quorum have done, or will they learn wisdom and be wise? (O God! give them wisdom, and keep them humble, I pray.)

"When the Twelve or any other witnesses stand before the congregations of the earth, and they preach in the power and demonstration of the Spirit of God, and the people are astonished and confounded at the doctrine, and say, "That man has preached a powerful discourse, a great sermon," then let that man or those men take care that they do not ascribe the glory unto themselves, but be careful that they are humble, and ascribe the praise and glory to God and the Lamb; for it is by the power of the Holy Priesthood, and Holy Ghost they have power thus to speak. What art thou, O man, but dust? And from whom dost thou receive thy power and blessings, but from God?

"Then, O ye Twelve! notice this Key, and be wise for Christ's sake, and your own souls' sake. Ye are not sent out to be taught, but to teach. Let every word be seasoned with grace. Be vigilant; be sober. It is a day of warning, and not of many words. Act honest before God and man. Beware of Gentile sophistry; such as bowing and scraping unto men in whom ye have no confidence. Be honest, open, and frank in all your intercourse with mankind.

"O ye Twelve! and all Saints! profit by this important Key-that in all your trials, troubles, temptations, afflictions, bonds, imprisonments and death, see to it, that you do not betray heaven; that you do not betray Jesus Christ; that you do not betray the brethren; that you do not betrav the revelations of God, whether in the Bible, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants, or any other that ever was or ever will be given and revealed unto man in this world or that which is to come. Yea, in all your kicking and flounderings, see to it that you do not this thing, lest innocent blood be found on your skirts, and you go down to hell. All other sins are not to be compared to sinning against the Holy Ghost, and proving a traitor to thy brethren."

-Millennial Star, vol. 17, page 295.

Now, we hold that when Brigham and his fellows teach and practice contrary to the doctrines and commands of the New Testament, Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants then in use by the church, they "betray Jesus Christ;" * * * they "betray the revelations of God, whether in the Bible, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants;" and this, if not repented of by them ere their death, their future condition is "hell," and not paradise.

Mr. Thatcher argues that because Jesus said to the penitent thief, (Luke 23:41-43), "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise," and that Peter said Christ after death went and preached to "the spirits in prison, (I Pet. 3:18-20; 4:5,6), that, therefore, paradise and the prison are one and the same place. But this does not follow, for many reasons. Jesus, at death, could go to paradise—and "see his seed," the righteous, (Mosiah 8:4-6; with Isaiah 53:10-12),—and after that go to the "prison" and preach to the spirits of the wicked.

Joseph the Seer held that the penitent thief had been baptized, and was a disciple. This position is fully confirmed by the fact that the thief knew and acknowledged the Messiahship of Christ, believed in Christ's "kingdom," and in his power to save him to the uttermost. The faith of that dying man has few parallels in Holy writ; and his speech and entire demeanor on the cross show that he was intimately acquainted with both Christ and his doctrine, and that he had unvielding faith in Him as the Savior. All this could not have been unless he had been a well instructed disciple of Christ. But, being a disciple, and having committed theft, he repented sorely of it, and suffered death, relying upon the mercy and saving power of Christ, who promised that he, that day, should be with him, not in hell, but in paradise. This very case utterly disproves the irrational and unscriptural teachings of Brigham and his fellows, and is one of the many proofs that the righteous, at death, are forever freed from the society and conditions of the wicked, except as they may go to them and minister for them, as good people in this life minister to the wicked in prisons, houses of correction, and other unhappy localities.

The doctrine that the righteous and the wicked at death go to the same place, and are not separated in their associations, so confidently affirmed by Brigham Young and reiterated by his followers, is simply horrible, and basely heretical. Think of it! The pure and virtuous, old and young, male and female, all going at death to the same place! Well did the Apostle Peter say that that disciple of Christ who lacked the Christian virtues he enumerates, (2 Peter 1:3-9), "is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins;" and well did Joseph the Seer say in 1844, in conference at Nauvoo, in council also, and to the late Bishop Hunter and others, that if Brigham Young ever got the lead of the Saints he would lead them to hell! Brigham's teachings with regard to the condition of the dead is no more false than upon marriage, Adam-Gad, endowments, temple building, loyalty, the relation of the Church toward civil governments, priestly dictation, etc., etc., all of which lead to darkness and to hell.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We expect to get the Spaulding "Manuscript Found" on the market in a few weeks, and will announce its issue in due time. We have much other matter to publish that should have the precedence; hence the delay. Be patient.

President Joseph Smith was at Stuart, Montana, the 23d ult., and had held services there with fair sized congregations of attentive listeners. He and brother Luff would soon start for Malad City, Idaho, en route for Salt Lake City.

Elder Luff has sent for the October Advocate some ringing, timely, and incisive articles on Utah Mormon affairs. He fully appreciates the situation, points out some of the chief evils, and indicates in a clear way the proper remedies therefor. We are confident he will make the Advocate a little giant for the overthrow of error and evil, and for the proclamation of saving truth. God speed the Advocate!

In another place will be found a brief but interesting letter from Elder John T. Davis. His remarks on Utah affairs result from his intimate acquaintance and connection with the Utah Mormon Church, as a prominent minister in it in Wales, and a lengthy and varied experience in it and out of it in Utah. It would please us to furnish our readers with occasional productions from his pen on Utah Mormon matters, and on other important and timely topics. Let us hear from you brother John, and we will send your thoughts out to many who will be glad to hear you again, even through the press, if they can not in person.

*Sr. Perla Wild has taken her pen again to gladden the hearts of the Hope readers. We are sure all will bid her welcome to their homes and read her word-painting with their wonted pleasure and interest. Where is Sr. Lena? and others, contributors to the Hope? Come; please let us hear from you for the good and gratification of the "Hopes of Zion."

The October number of "Dio Lewis' Nüggets," a monthly magazine devoted largely to hygiene, is placed on our table. We find it well freighted with attractive and valuable matter in its line, and suggest that those wishing information in the subjects of which it treats will be well repaid in its perusal. It is published at 69-71, Bible House, New York.

Bro. F. C. Warnkey of Independence, Mo., in a late letter informs us that their branch holds weekly priesthood meetings, teaching one another the doctrine of the kingdom" and discussing current church topics, with good results. The ministry there are seeking to extend their labors into the neighborhoods near, also the towns and cities, but that there is no great amount of interest manifest among the people to hear the word.

In many places the calls for the ministry are numerous and pressing, and in some of them the interest taken in the word preached is great, and good in results. The Lord's fishermen should "cast the net on the right side of the ship" where the fish are; and then cast it just in the manner the Lord commands, and leave results with Him.

Sr. H. F. Williams, writing from Bay City, Mich., expresses the hope that some of the ministry will call and labor in that place soon. She says the church papers are the only preachers who visit them, and that she would feel lost wituout them. She writes that she feels "weary of this world of sin and care, and longs for the She further says:-"The final rest." gospel is glorious. I was baptized by brother Lake eight years ago last spring, and have found a peace that can not be told. I see the dear old sister who told me of this gospel, is gone to rest. How often have I heard her say how anxious she was waiting, and how she longed to go." God bless and comfort these weary ones, and make them joyful in their wait-

We have just received letters from Elder T. W. Smith, Society Islands, dated April 15th and 17th, also July 19th and 26th. They will appear in due time in the Herald. He says there are now about twenty-five branches, and near one thousand members in that mission, and thinks the mission will be self-sustaining.

The associate editor and wife start today (October 2d) for the Galland's Grove, Iowa, Reunion, to be away five or more days. This may delay replies to correspondents. Be patient.

Bro. S. F. Walker in this issue furnishes another interesting paper on the "Origin of all Things," giving some valuable facts in respect to Hebrew and Christian civilizations on this continent prior to its discovery by Europeans. Evidences of this class are multiplying, and now if another Champollion should read the silent records chiselled on the temples, tombs, and other monuments of Central, South, and portions of North America, the world might learn the great truths held by the Latter Day Saints for the past sixty years in respect to the inhabitants of Ancient America.

Was there ever before such a carnival of crime as now! Surely, Satan rages in the hearts of the race. The atrocity and vileness of men and women in many instances are without parallel. The angel told Joseph the Seer, in 1823, of these evil times; and they are clearly portrayed in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants; and yet we are pained and appalled when these things come to pass. The "end draweth nigh."

By letter from Elder M. T. Short we learn the Saints had "a nice camp-meeting" at Park Bluff, near Montrose, Iowa, from the 20th to the 28th ult. We have received no detailed report of it up to this writing.

BISHOP JOHN SHARP'S COURSE.

THE following is from the Salt Lake Tribune and shows how that paper views the conduct of Bishop Sharp under his late indictment for unlawful cohabitation. To our mind the bishop has evinced more solid Christian sense in the affair referred to than has been shown by all the Utah leaders combined in respect to the Utah Mormon evil.

"Bishop John Sharp did a manly thing yesterday, and confirmed the impression which his daily life makes upon those who see him as a thorough, high-minded man. He has the sense to see that the position of his people before the country is that of a people who are in open defiance of the laws. He knows that in his business, if an employee only obeys such instructions as he pleases, there is every moment danger of collision, confusion and anarchy. So he knows that when a faction of people within a Republic assume to judge for themselves what laws of that Republic they will obey and which they will deride, either they must give up their position or it can be only a question of time when the Republic itself will topple and fall in ruins. Knowing his full responsibility to his church and to his adopted country, he yesterday, before the court, promised to hereafter live within the laws and never to advise anyone to do anything else. If John Taylor and George Q. Cannon would come from their secret hiding places and do the same thing, and advise their people who are involved as they are, and as Bishop Sharp was, to follow their example; they would come nearer proving that they are fit to be the shepherds of their flock than by anything else that they have done for a year. Until John Taylor does that, his own record will be against him. He declared before his people in the Tabernacle last winter that he from the time of the passage of the law had strictly conformed to its provisions. Ever since the world has been asking: "Did he tell the truth then?" If he did, why is he hiding? If he did not, what kind of a shepherd is he? What kind of a creed is it that while in daily communication with heaven, must still resort to falsehoods that would disgrace a police court?" By his act Bishop Sharp shows that he has too much self-respect to skulk, dodge or evade his full responsibility, and so he meets it like a man. We ask all Mormons to consider the position that he has taken, and then to answer to their own souls if they do not hold that it is altogether more manly for a man so involved, to frankly do what will enable him to support and look to the welfare of those whom by every obligation he is bound to do the best he can for, than to have women, whom he has sworn to cherish, dragged into court to commit perjury, or to go to the Pen for refusing to answer, or to go themselves to earn a cheap reputation for martyrdom, leaving those dependent upon them helpless and defenseless."

"Bishop John Sharp, the Utah director of the Union Pacific Railroad, and one of the wealthiest and most influential Mormons living, appeared in court at Salt Lake City, Utah, September 18th, and pleaded guilty to unlawful cohabitation. He claimed that the plural marriage was entered into before there was any statute against it and that the marriage was contracted in good faith according to the Mormon religion, but he recognized the supremacy of his adopted country's laws, and would live within them henceforth. He would not advise any one else to break them. He was fined $300, and discharged on the payment."

The foregoing would indicate that there are some men in Utah who have the sagacity to see the gravity of the situation and the courage to promise obedience to the law. If the same policy is pursued toward Mr. Sharp, by the Mormon press, and pulpit, as was penned in the case of O. P. Arnold, when he took a similar course as that taken by Mr. Sharp, some serious results may be looked for; as Mr. Sharp is in a position not to be bulldosed, or censoriously criticised, even by his friends. The News will hardly care to treat Mr. Sharp cavalierly for the course he has elected to pursue.

It is within possibilities that Mr. Sharp's example may be followed by others against whom suits are pending. If so, those who are so valorous in defying the law, and in denouncing those who concede the supremacy of the law and the courts by confession and accepting the mercy of the courts, may have their hands full to satiety.

Correspondence.

MATEA ISLAND, South Seas, April 15th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph.—With the consent of numberless mosquitos, who are thirsting for my blood with savage earnestness, I will try to write a little, as I may not get an opportunity to send a letter to the post-office at Papeete for some time if I do not improve the present one; as it is, this will not leave Papeete before the 15th of May, or a month from now. The Tahiti mail-ship leaves Papeete to-day, and we are nearly a hundred miles away.

I find after much investigation that a general reconstruction is necessary in this mission. For to become members of the Reorganization, (the doctrine of which, despite his evil course, Nelson plainly and correctly taught), the people desired to be baptized by him. But since I have had some of the law and order of the church translated, they have learned points of importance to them in the case, and that every Elder, Priest, Teacher and Deacon, is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains him. They decide that a man who lives as Nelson did continually, could not have the Holy Ghost to abide in him,—that it would not dwell in an unholy temple. So they universally question their baptism and the ordinations administered by Nelson. I told them that Nelson was not then expelled from his office as an Elder, and that although decidedly an unworthy man, and totally unfit for the office, yet his official acts would be recognized until he had been removed from office. But the idea of being baptized by a man so unworthy, is very disatisfactory to them, and the demand is universal for baptism at my hands. And in view of all the circumstances in the case, (these named, with some others), I have concluded to make a general reorganization, or reconstruction of the work here. I have refused to command any to be rebaptized, but have intimated my willingness to baptize any who demand it, under the circumstances, and by request, I baptized here on April 5th, one hundred and thirty-nine persons, in about an hour and a half, and confirmed the entire number the same day. To-day I have baptized ten more. The place of baptism was in a cave, fully a hundred feet from the entrance; that is, a hundred feet deep. We had to clamber down over the rocks that distance. It is a subterranean river; and fulfils a dream. which many remember hearing me relate, which I had sixteen years ago, wherein I saw myself descend a steep rock-bound shore, or banks of a river, and of sweeping the river with a net which reached from shore to shore, and to the bottom of the river, until nearly every fish in the river was caught. I have learned that all but about ten living on the island were baptized-most of these being boys. On the 6th of the month I ordained a number to the office of Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons. The branch was reorganized, and all seem to be satisfied. It is evident that many have received great light, and are glad of the work of reformation begun here. I have been over three months looking into this question, and am satisfied that the step is a wise and benificent one.

I think of leaving here in a week, and go to Tikahau, and Rairoa, and to Koukura, and then get around to Tahiti sometime in June. This Island is a high, bluffy one. That is, the entire shore is formed of a perpendicular bluff, some two hundred feet high, while the top of the Island is nearly level, not mountainous and irregular, or composed of mountains, hills and vallies, like Tahati; nor low and flat like the Paumotus. It is peculiar in its formation. The largest church, or meeting house, is here. It is a 40 x 80 feet frame, with glass windows. Some churches have no sashes, but blind shutters. Cocoanuts, breadfruit, limes, oranges, and a species of bananas grow here. The cocoanuts are superior to those which grow in Tahiti, while the oranges, bananas, and bread fruit are inferior; the limes are the same on both Islands. We use cocoanut water entirely for a beverage; it is sweet, and very refreshing, and as clear or transparent as pure spring water. The great drawback to this Island is the absence of a harbor. There is no chance to anchor a vessel. Ten feet from the coral reef shore, the water is six hundred feet deep. Vessels have to keep laying off and on, all the time, and when the wind blows hard on shore, they have to put off a mile or two. The Island would sustain several hundred more people; but being out of the range of the Paumotus, and not on the line of any regular coasters, it is not often a person can get away when once here.

Bro. Metuaore from Ziona, (Papeete), brought our mail. We are grateful to Bro. Andrews, Bro. Anderson, and Bro. R. M. Elvin for papers sent; and to some good soul, for the New North West, and Daily New York "Graphic," which papers are specially interesting to us. All others who have sent us papers heretofore, will please accept our thanks. A regular weekly newspaper would be very acceptable. I sent money by the captain of the "Tropic Bird" for the Kansas City Journal, but he forgot to send it; and I sent a dollar to the Chicago Inter Ocean by mail, but I have not seen the paper yet. The trouble here is, that there is no money order office, nor registered letter arrangement. There is no American paper money to be had here, and French Colonial paper would not be accepted by the publishers in America; and it would cost a good deal to send silver by mail, and it would then be discounted at ten cents on the dollar if sent. If I had brought a few dollars, American Greenbacks with me, it would have been a wise thing. There are no banks in Papeete, and it is only by the courtesy of merchants trading in San Francisco that we can send money for any purpose, and they will not be bothered with a small sum. This mission will be entirely self sustaining, and I think that we will be able to pay for what printed matter we will hereafter call for. I have not as yet had any occasion or necessity to use any of the money advanced by the Bishop to take us to Australia from here, and do not think that we will have to use any for personal expenses. The Saints would have much more money to help the cause with, were it not for the exorbitant prices they are compelled to pay for everything they buy from a class of human sharks, called traders. For instance, cans of beef worth fifty cents in Papeete, cost from eighty cents to one dollar in these islands. In Matea and the Paumotus, lamps costing $1.25 in Papeete, cost $2.50 here. The church here bought two recently for $5. I bought one for our own use for $1.50, precisely like the two, and from the same trader. Prints costing fifteen cents in Papeete, (five and six in San Francisco)-sell for thirty cents per yard here. These goods are brought by the traders' own vessels, which carry a load of cocoanuts, shells, &c., to Papeete, and must return of course. The only expense would be carrying of the goods from the stores to the vessels, of probably a dollar on a thousand dollars worth of goods. It is simply the same system of robbery practiced in the States by traders among the Indians. These vultures in human flesh, will have a heavy bill to foot in the "day of judgment," and thank God, there will be a day of judgment. Some of these 'greedy dogs' have asked me to advise our native brethren to not engage in trading; for, say they, they can not give proper attention to their duties, and will be compelled to more or less cheat, and have trouble. How considerate, and at the same time conceding that they are themselves dishonest. But it will be after to-day when I advise them to not follow any legitimate business. I have heard a number of white men express themselves as being glad if the natives were all dead, or the Islands free of them. The idea is, of course, to get possession of their lands, and so get every cent that can be got from the cocoanuts, oranges, &c. How gratifying the thought that a just God, and a revenger of the wrongs of the down trodden and oppressed still lives, and as I said above, I thank God that there will be "a day of judgment."

There is no fault to be found with the Government here. No Government would be more liberal and kind than the French are to this people. It is these human leeches called traders that I write of; and they are Yankees, Dutch, English, and all sorts or nationalities nearly. If permission from the French authorities could be obtained, and a trade direct with the Islands and San Francisco could be carried on, it would be a great blessing to the natives; but there are two difficulties in the way. First, the Custom House; and, second, the stores in Papeete would suffer too much to allow that sort of an enterprise. The expenses of the Colonial Government are considerable, and are to be met by revenue from imports to a certain extent. There is one way that the natives could help themselves, and that is by a co-operative system, a sort of Grange movement; but alas, they are too childlike in their mental make up for a work of that kind. I have seen enough of their character to enable me to judge that they could not carry out a company enterprise. Yet if they would or could do it, they could save hundreds and even thousands of dollars yearly. There is nothing but the lack of energy and perseverence to hinder one or two of the many little sloops and schooners owned by brethren, being employed in running to Papeete, and buying goods in large quantities, or the aggregated amount of flour, rice, soap, cloth, &c., required by each community at the time. But I have no ground to hope for any effort of this kind being carried on, even if begun. The only hope for improvement in their condition lies in their emigration to some salubrious clime, and where, under the direction of some careful, and judicious white persons, they could cultivate fruits, grain and vegetables. They are very apt to learn any kind of trade, and are able-bodied, both men and women, much more so than the Chinese; and the objection raised against the latter of being heathens will not apply to them, and being republicans, or citizens of a Republic already, they would readily adapt themselves to the usages of a republican form of government. There is but one difficulty that I can see in the way of their change of location, and that is a kindly climate. Strange however as it may appear, they suffer more from heat than we do, and appreciate cool weather. I have not encouraged the thought of going to America; but it is a universal desire with them, and a plan looking toward a location and employment might as well be entertained by the church authorities first as last. Their temporal, mental, and moral advancement and improvement demand a change of circumstances and surrounding that will never come to them here. Nothing but the interference of the authorities or lack of means, will prevent numbers from going to "America" as they call the United States, when they learn that we have gone there. It is only our promise to return, and the refusal of the ship masters to take them, that prevents numbers from following us from one Island to another. And some do go.

Yours,

T. W. SMITH.

ELMWOOD, Nebraska, September 22d, 1885.

Dear Herald:—At the solicitation of the committee having in charge the Wheeler's Grove camp meeting, I took a leave of absence from my field of labor to comply with their request, and while at the meeting endeavored to make myself agreeable and useful. I herewith return my thanks to the committee for the "saw-buck" presented me. On my way home I stopped one night at Farm Creek, and administered baptism to one. I pray that she may have grace sufficient to sustain her in "the faith once delivered to the saints," that she may fight the battle patiently and faithfully and obtain the crown that fadeth not away. Spent one night at Glenwood. I would suggest to the authorities of the Fremont District that some effort should be put forth to aid the neglected sheep at that place. I arrived at home on the afternoon of the 16th and left on the morning of the 19th. The evening found me at Greenwood, a stranger among strangers. I found a resting place with Mr. Thos. C. Anderson. His wife accepted the gospel under the preaching of Elder Peter N. Brix, over in Denmark. They have lived in Greenwood, for the past three years. She is very lonely without the fellowship of the Saints, no one in that vicinity having any interest or faith in the doctrine of Christ as we teach and understand it. I explained to Sister Anderson the rule of General Conference, and of the district, that all members are required to unite with the nearest branch, she cheerfully gave me her letter to deposit in the branch here. I make a note of this by reason of the fact that there are so many who are careless or neglectful of this duty and requirement; and thereby both the church and the individual suffers loss. There are four churches at Greenwood, and Mr. Anderson was refused the use of two of them. His third application was successful, in obtaining the use of the "Christian Church," for the afternoon. Upon my going to the house of worship for the morning service the pastor, Mr. Cyrus Alton, invited me to the pulpit, and to occupy the hour. The house was well filled, and I spoke with a good degree of freedom, from 1 Cor. 3:11, upon the principles of faith and repentance. In the afternoon the congregation was not so large. I spoke from Mal. 3:6, upon the unchangeableness of God and his law for the salvation of man. In the evening the pastor again requested me to occupy his pulpit, and I did so upon the topic of baptism. I was blessed with most excellent liberty of thought and expression. To have in store the knowledge and the evidence of gospel subjects, is profitable, that in the very hour of need the Holy Spirit may bring from a well filled mind to our remembrance such things as will prove interesting and beneficial to the people. I thirst for knowledge! I pray for divine wisdom! I will diligently toil for understanding!

I was much pleased with Bro. F. M. Sheehy's notes on "Spiritual Gifts." My experience and observation have been parallel with his. I deplore a misuse of the sacred gifts of heaven. God hath wisely admonished us upon this very important item. I pray that, ere long all Saints may learn and understand, that in doctrine, government, and correction, the written law, and not Spirit manifestations, are the rule of action in the church.

The present is the most pleasant season of the year. In common parlance it is called "Indian Summer." The days are warm and smoky, while the nights are clear and cool. Farmers are very busy haying. Corn is all out of danger of "Jack Frost," and promises to be a heavy yield.

On duty,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

No. 429, Jacob St., Wheeling, W. Va., September 30th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—Bro. Ells is still confined to his bed. His recovery, viewing form human standpoint, is doubtful, as his age and present physical weakness is against him. Still our heavenly Father is able to raise him up if it be his will, which we hope and pray will be the case. The Saints and friends who are expecting a visit from me will please be patient, as it is impossible for me to leave home while he is ill. We request an interest in the prayers of all Saints in behalf of our brother. Yours for the truth,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

PARRISH, Franklin Co., Ills., September 29th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: -- We have had another ten days meetings here in the same houses as before, Baptist and Methodist. The Methodist local preacher first said we could not have their house. until he saw that that was not popular with the people, and after we had gone to the trouble and expense of making a stand and seats in the grove near the house, then he said we could have it; so we accepted. Bro. Isaac M. Smith came first and preached five discourses in the Baptist church; had good congregations and good interest. On Monday night commenced at Mt. Etna, in the Methodist church, Bro. G. H. Hilliard coming down on Wednesday. The meeting continued there until over Sunday night last, with house full most all the time. A great many people are investigating, and a good many belonging to other churches, and those that belong to none say they preach the truth, and are defending the same. Six more were baptized this time, all heads of families, and several others almost ready. Bro. Hilliard will be back here in three or four weeks, then we expect to see several others come into the true fold. We want you and all the Saints to pray for us, and that the good work may go on in this vicinity and the honest in heart be gathered in.

Your brother in the gospel,

AARON BURLISON.

Ові, Allegany Co., N. Y., September 15th, 1885.

Brother W. W. Blair:-It has been quite a long time since I reported to the Herald Office of my whereabouts and of my efforts in the gospel cause. My circumstances have been such that I was not able to do but little public preaching during the summer months, my time being employed, quite a share of the season, at carpenter work in the region of Greenwood, Steuben county, where I have been for quite a long time past. I came out here last week, where our good and worthy brother, C. N. Brown, (who is now gone to his rest), a few years ago opened up the work, and it had its good effects with quite a number of the people in this vicinity, who are now quite desirous to learn more gospel truths as held to by the Latter Day Saints. Last Monday night I preached in a school-house to a fair sized, and quite attentive congregation. I left another appointment for Friday night.

Last Sabbath I attended meeting in the United Brethren Church near here and tried to get an opportunity to preach at three o'clock p. m., in their house. After some consultation with the preacher and Trustees who were present, they finely concluded not to open it for me. But I improved the occasion to announce my appointment for the school-house, Monday night. Several of the people did not approve of the course they took in shutting their house against the Latter Day Saints. There was formerly in this vicinity quite a large society of the United Brethren, but many of them have become disaffected and have withdrawn from them, but are still in want of "the true bread that cometh down from the Father of Light." I am now at the house of a kind friend by the name of Brunnel Childs and wife. Though not yet members of the Saints, they are very much in favor of the doctrine, and have taken the Herald and Hope for some time. They are very kind people, indeed, and we hope to see them embrace the gospel of the kingdom in the due time of the Lord.

Last night on my way returning from meeting I stopped, by invitation, with a family by the name of Merritt, who were very kind. I left with them my Book of Mormon and hymn book. On my way here I called on our aged and most worthy sister, Hyde, of Belmont, who owns a house and lot there, and is living with her son, a very kind and promising young man. Sister Hyde is very fortunate in having a family that all express so much pure love and affection toward her. Her great anxiety is, that her family may be numbered with the Saints in the kingdom. She points with pride to a rocking chair that she has kept in her possession, once owned by her parents, in which Father Joseph Smith, Elder Austin Cowles, and others of the Elders in the early days of the Church had rested, when on missions in the neighborhood of her father.

I do not know what the final result of my efforts will be in this part. Sister Childs told me she dreamed last night she heard me give out word in a meeting for baptism. I told her I hoped it might prove so. We look some for Bro.

W. H. Kelley here, as he wrote me some time ago he would make an effort to call, when on his way to Providence, Rhode Island. This is in the oil region, and I expect there may be over a thousand oil wells on the rail road route between here and Wellsville, a large town about twenty miles east of this. Many burn gas for fuel in their stoves here. Lest I weary you, I will close with kind regards to all the Saints.

Yours.

C. G. LANPHEAR.

RICHFIELD, Sevier Co., Utah, September 19th, 1885.

Bro. Blair: - We arrived at this place yesterday almost covered with red dust. I wonder why they did not name this place Redfield! We left Ephraim on the 17th. At that place they called it fifty-two miles to Richfield, but we traveled two days, thirty-five miles each day, which makes the distance about seventy miles according to mine arithmetic. The trip would have been a very pleasant one had it not been for the hot sun and red dust, besides a continual lack of interest on the part of the ponies to make good time. While in Ephraim brother Anthony spoke to the people twice, and I once; the interest being very good considering the busy times. I am not now as well acquainted with this people as I may be after a little, but I am of the opinion that many of them are far better than their religion. Among the Danes, I find many who are anxiously waiting for the redemption of Zion, and some have frankly confessed that they believe brother Joseph to be the man appointed of God to take his father's place. And it is a wonder to me why any man professing to be a Latter Day Saint will dispute this, when the revelations of God, the voice of prophecy, and the fulfillment thereof, all speak in confirmation of that fact. Neither Brigham Young nor John Taylor could ever fill the bill.

"Uncle Sam" seems to be determined now to to take posession of "the key to the gospel of Abraham," and when that is done, I hope that many of the people of this Territory will come to the light and remain therein.

Yours,
PETER Andersen.

PLAINVILLE, Mass., September 23d, 1885.

Brother W. W. Blair: - The work of the Lord is progressing in this place and the regions round about. We continually hear the Macedonian cry: "Come over and help us." And after the District Conference, brother Coombs assisted by myself and others will try to proclaim the good news of the everlasting gospel in new places in Attleboro. Brother Coombs is awake to Zion's cause, and is working as the Lord directs. His companion is assisting by prayer and conversation to bring some to a "knowledge of the truth." and her prayers have been answered and her efforts blessed. The brother is worthy of a higher position in the church, having built up a Branch of 60 members since 1876. He has baptized five in the last three months, two of which were members of the "Christian Church," and one more is ready to be baptized. The Branch is in better spiritual condition than it has been for some time past, and our motto is "onward to victory," under the banner of the cross, as we tread the narrow way, clinging to "the rod of iron." The gifts and plessings are with us from time to time as the Lord wills, to the edification of the believers and perfecting in righteousness. The Sisters' Sewing Society held two successful ice cream sales, and obtained money to improve the Chapel and its surroundings. Since we have added to the branch such as should be saved, the heathen have raged and people imagine vain things; but the Lord is breaking with the "rod of iron" and he will hold them in derision even as the Psalmist says.

The Attleboro Advocate gave us a favorable notice when we held services in that place, and we commend the paper to all the Saints wishing news from Attleboro and vicinity.

Bro. Bond and wife made a visit to Plainville the 8th of September, and brother Bond stayed to comfort and instruct the Saints. Bro. H. H. Thompson was also here about the same time. and we learn that he is sowing the good seed of the kingdom with the right effect. It would be well for the Saints here and everywhere to put in practice the Word of Wisdom in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. "This body," Paul says, "is the temple of the Holy Ghost," and we should be careful to keep it pure, morally and physically. Praying for the advance of truth, and the redemption of Zion, I am your brother in the gospel. ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

> JEFFERSONVILLE, Illinois, September 29th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:-I have just returned from Franklin county, where Bro. I. M. Smith and I were holding a series of meetings. We had the pleasure of baptizing three on Sunday last, and three more yesterday morning. Many more are believing, and some nearly ready for baptism. The prospects are good for a branch of the church to be established there soon. Bro. Smith is an excellent worker, especially in the pulpit. We hope to go back there at no very distant day, and effect an organization. I have never received a greater degree of the Spirit in my ministrations than I did there. Even men out of the church could see that in confirmation those administered to received some supernatural power. Bro. and Sr. Burlison deserve great credit for their work there among the people, in scattering tracts and getting them to investigate, thereby preparing them for the preaching. There are but few of us to go out preaching here, and the calls are many. Yours in gospel bonds,

G. H. HILLIARD.

CORMORANT MILLS, Minn., September 21st, 1885.

Brother Blair:-I am still presenting the word of the Lord to the people in this part of the country, although it seems like up-hill business, when so many say they believe the gospel we preach is true, and then don't obey it. I have had the best of liberty since I came here in dispensing the word of life. The Saints have been revived, and all, I may say, feel happy in the Lord. Many have come under the law of tithing, and we hope all the rest may. Some are in debt and say they want to clear themselves, and then come under the law of tithing; while some others felt that they should not wait until they were clear of debt. I think the latter is right, although the former are giving considerable for the onward progress of the cause, but have not yet done as Abraham did, that is for the commencing of being tithed, to give a tenth of all they possess. Some have done this. I found a good class of Saints in this State. The Elders are working hard this summer to lay in store for the winter, and then they expect to labor what they can. I met with the Saints and friends here yesterday, and spoke twice to them. I meet with the Saints next Sunday at Brother Andrew Tabbut's house. I leave here next Sunday evening, and shall labor in Northern Illinois through the winter. Bro. H. L. Holt will preach around in this state this winter, so he says. He is well liked by all the people, in and out of the church; that is, all who love truth.

I expect to baptize one or more on Sunday next. Brn. Way and Martin expect to preach some this coming winter. They are two good men, and I hope they will do good. Old father George Gould, as he is called, has left off the use of tobacco; can't every Saint of God do the same? Try it my brethren; try it, and you will find it to be a great blessing to you. God has spoken and says it is not good for man. Yes, sisters; and you who use the weed, try to put it away.

Last week's Herald came to us containing a letter from our beloved brother, F. M. Sheehy, who gives a sad account of the condition of the Eastern Maine Saints. Paul said, "Reprove, rebuke, with all long suffering and doctrine." It will be remembered that the brother has only been laboring a small part of the time, in the past two or three years in Maine, and I am satisfied he has been wrongly informed. He says this unpleasant state of affairs is the result of unwise building, and tries to make it appear that it grew out of putting too much stress on certain outward manifestations of the gifts of the gospel, so much so, that the individual was elevated above ordinary mortals, and that if one did not possess the power to either speak in tongues or prophecy, they had not the gift of the Holy Ghost. I want to say this is a mistake; better guess again, brother Frank. I am the man who by the aid of God's Spirit raised up some of those branches, and assisted in raising up the others; and for the twelve long years that I was in Maine preaching, I never taught, neither did I hear a member of the several branches say, that unless they had the gift of tongues, or prophecy, they had not received the gift of the Holy Ghost. No, no, my brother; they were taught that, as God devided those gifts, and gave to every man, that either of the gifts carried with it a knowledge of the gift of the Holy Ghost, and for all to be contented with what the Lord gave to each one. We never elevated any that spoke in the gifts above ordinary mortals. No, my brother; if any of those Saints have fallen from what they once enjoyed, give them credit for the good they have done; for if I am called upon, I can tell you of many a prophecy and interpretation of tongues, that had its literal fulfillment; all of the other gifts were enjoyed.

There never was a meeting held till daybreak in the Eastern Maine District, that I know of. The latest ever held was at a conference at Little Kenebec, which lasted till two o,clock in the morning, and that was a God-blessed meeting, one long to be remembered by all present. If I remember well, the gifts of tongues was given eight times, prophecy several times, besides visions; several were administered to and healed. I well remember that night, and it never can be blotted out of my mind. After the meeting I had to go a mile and a quarter to get to my home, and the moon shone so bright that I took my scythe and went into my field and mowed a long time before daylight appeared. I felt happy in the Spirit; and knew that God had remembered his people as in days of old.

I saw nothing unreasonable in our fasting and prayers. If any Elder or member of this church will look into the books that we profess to believe, they will find that the God of heaven has told us to fast and pray. Paul had much fasting and prayer, and by it received great blessings. And I am satisfied that if we as a people did not think so much of our stomachs, we could gain many a God-given blessing now. And I do feel that when the proper man, whose right it is to regulate the church, goes among the people of Eastern Maine, and sees to it that they take God's law in their hand, and execute it, the little spark of fire that is in those who have wandered away will be rekindled and the Spirit of Israel's God will once again be given them, and the cause will be made to flourish again. The Lord has said to the Elders, "Ye shall see that my law is kept." Go to work Elders, as the Lord has said, and we will not have so many "stars falling."

Yours truly, John C. Foss.

MATTOON, Ill., Sept. 28th, 1885. Bro. Blair:-Yesterday I went to fill an appointment at Macon, Macon Co., Ill. The gentlemen who extended the invitatation got frightened I guess; so I was left out in the cold While sitting in the hotel meditating, I thought I came here to preach, and was going to do it. So I went and got the key of the Tabernacle, hired three boys to sweep clean, and dust; then wrote out plain notices of meetings, and then went to the churches and had them announced. I then traveled over the town from house to house, inviting the people to turn out. In the afternon, I had a good house and poor liberty. In the afternoon, house crowded, and for an hour and a half I poured in a stream of Mormonism on that audience, that fairly astonished myself, and made the people think that if our people are fools and cranks, we have lots of method in our madness. I was invited to perform miracles before the people. This I declined upon the principle that it was not wise to cast pearls before swine. This morning I was invited to return, and a place promised to stop at. This whole central Illinois never heard the gospel. Oh! when will they? I shall be in Fort Madison after this week.

Yours, J. A. Robinson.

PITTSBURG, Crawford Co., Kan., September 24th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Yours concerning Utah Mission was duly received, and it gives me perfect satisfaction. It is wisdom to observe the proper "times and seasons" in applying all our labors. There have been great efforts already made for the good of the Utah people. I hope they will heed the worthy and timely efforts of Brother Joseph and others. If not, I pity them for the consequences which will follow. I am glad for the sake of the work at large and the honest ones in the Utah Church that the lines of distinction are so sharply and finely drawn between the laws of God and of our country on the one hand, and the error, priestcraft, bondage and rule of terror in the Utah Church on the other. A "city of refuge" in Mexico for the polygamous portion of the Utah priesthood is just the thing I have been expecting for some years; for they can not afford to lose polygamy, and the kingdom to support it, without a desperate struggle. That scheme was planned years ago, in case they could do no better, and so "build temples all the way through to Independence, Missouri."

The conference of Spring River District is just over. A good and peaceable time was enjoyed. Baptized three, with prospects of some more soon. The feeling here is good, prospects promising, and the efforts of many of our local Elders are commendable. We have prospects of some debates. Bro. Warren Peak is to commence a debate with an Adventist next week at Oplis, Kansas. Bro. E. A. Davis and Elder Foure of the Adventists are negotiating for a debate to be held at Galesburg, Missouri. We have good fields for labor, and intend to occupy.

In gospel bonds,

J. T. DAVIS.

NORTH BRANCH, Kansas, September 23d, 1885.

Bro. Blair:-The interest in the Herald in the mind of the Latter Day Saints in this mission, so far as my travels have extended, is increasing. There are several reasons for this. One of the most prominent is, that within its pages the doctrine of the church appears in such plainness. Those maculate doctrines that have hitherto appeared upon its pages have made some weaker and more faithless in their confidence in the Church and its relationship with Christ, while some delighted in the economy of God as revealed in his word. But while all this was transpiring there was a general timidity in encouraging the reading of the Herald, especially among those not in the kingdom of God. But now that timidity is passing away, and the Herald steps forth as the representative in fact of the Church of Jesus Christ. The position the Church took last Spring in accepting Book of Doctrine and Covenants has aroused some that have been watching and waiting to cry "priestcraft." What is the cause of such a proclamation! Has not the Church taken action upon this matter time after time before! But, says one, The Church never took so decisive a step on it. On what? Why, tithing; that seems to be the stumper. One says, I never heard of tithing till of late, and it must be an addition to the original doctrine of the Church. Let us see what Joseph the Seer taught-Turn to Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 102, par. 1, 2; sec. 72, par. 3, 4; sec. 64, par. 5; sec. 106, par. 1. This is not all that God had to say through his servant. As early as September, 1831, he began to teach the law of tithing. Does it look like a new thing! Let us see what the Reorganized Church said upon this subject in the beginning. Read conference minutes of September, 1878, concerning certain revelations as early as October 7th, 1861. Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 114, par. 1, 2; sec. 117, par. 10. Here we discover that the present Joseph only takes his father's place in this, teaching the same system of tithing. Who was his instructor? Every Latter Day Saint would say, God was. Whose duty was it to teach tithing? The Twelve and Bishop and his Agents, (D. & C. sec. 114, par. 1). This we understand to be the special duty of the Bishop and his Agents, while I do not understand it prohibits those who are called to preside over branches or districts to teach and instruct on proper occasions. But when either, or all, or part fail to teach tithing, here or there, does that change the law? Is that failure any evidence it is a new thing? See what the books, the standard works of the Church teaches. Gen. 14:18-20; 28:22; Heb. 7:1-10; Alma 10:1; 2; Book of Nephi 11:1-7. There is no coercion in the matter. We only have to meet the loss if we reject the counsel of God. D. & C. 64:5.

The work in this district is onward, but slow. The able counsel and instruction of Bro. James Caffall for the past three weeks on church polity, will bless us, if each one will study and learn his or her duty as members of the body of Christ. Peace and love and unity will prevail instead of discord. Let us try it, brethren and sisters. I appeal to you of North West Kansas District, and especially Goshen Branch, to remember the covenants we have made with God. Let us strive to keep our covenants and strive lawfully. What others may do, does not license us to vary from the path of duty. Let us pray as well as watch. By thus doing we will enjoy the gifts of the gospel. Yours in Christ, A. H. Parsons.

Summary of Aews.

Sept. 30th.—At Palermo, Monday, there were 159 new cases of cholera and 89 deaths.

The total exports of produce from New York during last week were valued at $5,610.253.

Four negro asssains, three men and one woman, were lynched night before last near Pittsborn, N. C.

The mercantile failures in the United States for the quarter ending Sept 30th, number 2,123, and in Canada 254.

Charles Taylor, aged twenty-one, Mayor of Van Buren, Ark., shot and killed a man who attacked him on the street night before last.

Floods in Bengal have destroyed a vast amount of property. An area of 3,500 square miles is under water. Many lives have been lost.

Seven members of the Dunwood Primitive Baptist Church, Decatur, Ga., have lately been expelled because they had put lightning-rods on their houses, and dug pits in their cellars for places of retreat in case of a cyclone. The other members held that this action argued a lack of faith. The expelled members now claim to be the true church, and have brought suit for the church property.

The potato-rot is so extensive in Wyoming County, N. Y., that less than one-quarter of a crop will be secured. Buyers refuse to purchase, and many farmers are so discouraged at the prospect that they are plowing up their fields of potatoes and seeding to grain. In other countries in this region the crop is similarly affected.

The skeleton of a man nine feet one inch in hight is said by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat to be on exhibition at the office of a firm in Thayer, Oregon County, Mo. The skeleton is said to have been discovered by a party of men who were exploring a cave some three miles in length, situated about nine miles from Thayer.

The telegraph brings the information that the priests in Montreal have encouraged the French-Canadians in resisting vaccination, and have taught that a remedy for the disease "lay in the more frequent visitations of shrines and more copious prayers and confessions." If this be true, it is scarcely subject of wonder that the French-Canadians are a race held in a sort of contempt by those about them. Religion is one thing and superstition is another, and people who in the year 1885 can be influenced by spiritual advice of the sort which was current in the dark ages of superstition must be ignorant indeed. Thousands have died of the loathsome pest in Montreal, and yet the French of that city, at the instigation of their ignorant priests, resist vaccination and mob those who propose it. It is this slavish bigotry and narrowness of thought which have kept the French Canadians from making progress with their neighbors. One generation of a system of American free schools for the French-Canadians would make of them another race-one to be respected. They are thrifty and industrious; they lack only the means of acquiring intelli-

Sept. 30th.—In the Salt Lake District Court yesterday Bishop Hiram B. Clawson was arraigned for unlawful cohabitation. He asserted that his marriages were all entered into in good faith. His wives had grown old with him. They would retain their covenants. If he should abjure he could not look his wives and children in the face. His brethren, friends, and neighbors, whose opinions he respected, would look on him with indignation and scorn. He would be ostracised, looked down upon, and dishonored in the community. Judge Zane told him polygamy had always been against the law; no matter when entered into, it was an illegal relation; that it didn't speak well for the moral courage of a man to claim to be a citizen of a country, claiming the protection of its laws, yet be afraid on account of local prejudice to support those laws which thousands of good men had laid down their lives to maintain. The sentence was the full extent of the law-six months' imprisonment and $300 fine and costs.

Truman O. Angel pleaded guilty to unlawful cohabitation. Being a poor man he was fined $150 and no imprisonment.

Septimus W. Sears, assistant superintendant of Zion's big co-operative store, pleaded guilty and was fined $300. He promised to obey the law in the future and counsel others to do the same.

Henry Ward Beecher's latest sermon, dealing with the idea, and teaching it, of a diffusive and universal God, is uncomforting in some of its similies. Said the preacher: "Plato is dead, but Plato's writings exist, and Plato exhales from them, and there is a living Plato and a living Socrates. Thus we have personality as determined by matter and personality as determined by mind." What comfort is there in a personality determined by mind and defined in this way? Plato and Socrates may be thus "living," in one sense of the word, but how do they enjoy themselves? How can we better illustrate the insufficiency of this idea?

A somewhat remarkable result from a flash of lightning occurred near Deer Lodge, Mont., where 1,400 sheep were grazing, with a herder in charge. The flash and report appeared almost instantaneous, and were terrific. The herder and horse were both knocked to the ground, and when the herder recovered and looked around, it seemed to him the entire flock was down. Seven sheep were killed throughout the band by the flash, and two of them were 200 yards apart.

New regulation "regimental" suits have been issued to al. the prisoners in the United States penitentiary in Utah, lately. The "trusties" were called into the warden's office, one by one, the proper size selected, and pants, coat and vest issued to them, which they were required to put on immediately. The material of the suit is a heavy woolen cloth, with black and grav stripes about an inch and a quarter wide running around the body. The prisoners returned to the yard rather sheepishly and their reappearance was the signal for hoots and shouts of derision and laughter. "See the zebra!" "Fresh fish!" yelled the prisoners, as they gathered around their striped companions and made a critical examination of the clothes. Among the Brighamite Polygamists thus "robed" were F. A. Brown and Moroni Brown, of Ogden, Job Pingree, Rudger Clawson, Angus M. Cannon, Parley P. Pratt and A. M. Musser. Brotner Watson, who was herding turkeys a short distance away, was called in, but after a most thorough search it was found that no suit of sufficient proportions had been provided. We wonder if they had their Brighamite "Endowment Robes" on under Uncle Sam's "Robes." All convicts who have over thirty days to serve are also to be closely shaven. Brothers Cannon, Musser, Pratt and Watson will be exempt from this regulation, but Job Pingree, Rud Clawson, the two Browns, of Ogden, and several other polygamists will soon appear with shaved heads.

The Mexicans have begun a warfare against polygamy, and well-grounded rumors are afloat there that a demand has been made of President Diaz that he rescind the grant of land in Northern Chihuahua to the Mormons. The Catholic Church is at the head of the movement, and demands that the laws against polygamy be enforced. The church is supparted by a strong public sentiment, especially in the Northern States of the republic. The entire press and the politicans have also taken strong grounds against the colonization of Mormons on Mexican soil.

The following little straw is taken from the Chicago Tribune for September 19th: Rich and zealous pilgrims have changed things so much in Jerusalem lately, that land there has doubled in value, and many modern dwelling-houses have been erected.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Road has closed a contract with a colony of Mormons, to transport them from Salt Lake City to Navajo Springs, on the line of the Atlantic & Pacific Railway, says the Denver Tribune-Republican. Navajo Springs is a small place a short distance west of the New Mexico line, of not much present nor prospective importance. It is about forty miles by rail from the valley of the Little Colorado River, in which there are a large number of Mormons. This proposed movement of Mormons is indicative of nothing of importance. The Mormons have been numerous in Eastern Arizona for years, and this colony will be only an unimportant addition to the number already there.

JUDGED BY OUR WORKS.

THE gospel is the revealed will of God to man, in answer to the demand inherent in the race; said demand we think being clearly manifest in its history. The hopes and aspirations of the race are not the creations of the race, but are a part of the creation itself—a part of the divine economy of the great Creator.

How fitting and essential it is that this should be the case. What a world of misery this would be, but for this divine principle which a wise and benificient Creator has planted in the bosom of his creatures—the principle of hope! sage and the philosopher, the rich and the poor, civilized and uncivilized alike, all rushing through time towards eternity, each one experiencing their joys and sorrows, their hopes and fears, pleasures and disappointments, mingling with sunshine and storm.

What is it that gives strength to the mind, and courage to the soul to endure under the trials of adversity, disappointment, and death, but that principle of hope which looks forward in anticipation of a better time to come—that "behind every cloud sees the silver lining," proving the statement of the apostle true-"For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly; but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope."-Rom. 10: 20.

"Hope, springs eternal in the human breast. Man never is, but always to be blest."

While this principle is everywhere manifest in the history of man, from Adam down, yet the gospel of Christ reveals to the Christian a hope for the future not enjoyed by those who are "without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenant of promise having no [true] hope, and without God in the world." Those who enjoyed this hope, in the past were enabled to endure "as seeing him who is invisible," even to the "spoiling of their goods," and "confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." "But now they desire a better country; that is, a heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city."—Heb. 11: 16. "Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the vail."-Heb. 6: 19.

While in the city of Brooklyn recently, the writer was met with the statement that the Saints were expecting to obtain more in the world to come than other people; and this was presented to prove that they were presumptuous in their hopes of the future. We confess we can see no wrong in the thought; neither can anything be produced against it, either from reason or from Holy Writ; but we will make bold to say, that if any one thing is taught clearly in the Scriptures, it is the fact that there will be a difference in the rewards of the future, as well as the punishments. Else what does Jesus mean when he says-"For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 16: 27. taught this reasonable doctrine likewise:-"For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."-2 Cor. 5:10.

God's unchangeableness in this is manifest in his revelation to John on the Isle of Patmos:—"And, behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."—
Rev. 22: 12. Paul says:—"There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory, so also is the resurrection of the dead."—I Cor. 15:41, 42.

These and other scriptures prove that there will be a difference in the rewards to be meted out in the future. Then why should the Saints be ridiculed for believing this most reasonable, and most eminently scriptural doctrine? Why should they not teach now in harmony with what the inspired apostle Jude wrote eighteen hundred years ago, as recorded in his epistle, to wit:—"Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the Saints."-Jude 1.

In the beautiful description of the "Holy City," the "New Terusalem" which John saw "Coming down from God out of heaven" given in the book Revelations, we can learn something in a brief way of the condition of those who come under "the common salvation," spoken of by Jude as follows:-"And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God did light it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it."—Rev. 21: 23, 24. Here are two classes spoken of; they who walk in the light of the city, and those who should enter into the city. None are permitted to enter into it "but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."verse 27.

"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolators, and whoso-ever loveth and maketh a lie."—22: 14, 15.

Yes; here is the line drawn between those who are worthy and those who are not. This is what Jesus had reference to which was to to be counted of far greater importance than all the miracles men may have power to do. At His command His disciples went out to preach and returned rejoicing, saying that even the very devils were subject to them. Jesus says:-"Glory not in this, but rather glory that your names are written in heaven."—Luke 10: 20. He said to his followers:—"Let not your heart be troubled; ye believed in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."—John 14: 1-4.

To be with Christ has a broader significance than the way it has been preached and sang about in the past, and by some at the present.

"Then right before my Savior, So glorious and bright, I'll play the sweetest music, And praise him day and night."

There is something of more importance than merely singing and playing—a hope more tangible and more substantial. That hope was voiced by the four and twenty Elders when John the Revelator heard them sing that new song:-"And they sang a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation. And hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth."—Rev. 5: 9, 10. Daniel foretold it:—"And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the Saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Dan. 8: 27. John says: "And the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever."-Rev. 11: 15. At that time Jesus will reign, and his people shall reign with him. will the nations be healed by the leaves from the tree of life, and the promise be fulfilled which God made to Abraham, "That in thee and thy seed, shall all nations be blessed."—Gal. 3:8, 16.

At present the object of the preaching the gospel, is to call out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, a people who shall be "a peculiar people." But not that their peculiarity shall consist in credulity; or, in other words, shut their eyes and swallow everything, (as it is ludicrously illustrated by Mr. R. G. Ingersoll, in the man who couldn't believe in the fiery furnace, or Jonah and the whale). The idea that a man, because he fails to accept religion, perhaps because of the inconsistencies he sees in professors and their creeds, he must be sent to eternal perdition when he dies, is neither scriptural nor rational. God and Christ do not say they will judge a man according his mere belief, but for his works. And his people will be a peculiar people, for they will be "zealous of good works."—Titus 2: 14. prove by their works that they are worthy to receive such an exalted station as to be God's chosen people, "a royal priesthood, a holy nation," to dwell with Christ and to reign with him.

The governments of men are defective, and why? It is because of the corruptions of men? Many who are law-makers and executors, are law-breakers; and these defects will continue until men first learn how to govern themselves. We hold that no man is fully qualified to rule his fellowmen, until he has first proven himself capable of ruling himself. The gospel reveals to us the law by which this can be fully accomplished. It is the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus." It reveals to us that Jesus, the Christ, is the pattern for us to follow. That as he became obedient to the righteous law of God, (Matt. 3: 15), so also should we be obedient. As he obtained the Spirit of God through his obedience, so is the promise made to us, and to all who will obey, (Acts 2:38). As he overcame temptations, and subjected himself to the will of God in all things, so are we commanded to follow him as the "captain of our salvation." In a word, when we shall, through a close application of our lives to "the law of the spirit of life," develop a grand and noble character, as exemplified in the life and character of Christ; when we are willing to sacrifice for the good of others, and return good for evil, love our enemies as well as our friends, bless them that curse us, and pray for them that despitefully use us and persecute us, then shall we become the children of our heavenly father, who sendeth rain upon the just and the unjust. When we are able to live this law, then we shall have demonstrated that principle of self-government so beautifully exemplified in the life of Christ. And we will then be counted worthy to dwell in his presence, and also to reign with him. Jesus exemplified that, "He that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city."

The writer's conception of the heavenly kingdom is, that heaven is not made up of those who have been frightened into it. Its inhabitants are not a set of cowards, who are simply trying to escape well merited punishments for their deeds. But they are grand and noble men and women, who have lived honorably and uprightly in this world; who have had the moral courage to do right here for the love of right, although in so doing they have had to encounter the opposition of bigots and evil minded men. If this is a proper conception of the hope of the Saints, then should we be the last ones of all God's children to ridicule the faith of others; for all will not see as we see. But whatever our duty in life calls us to do, let us do with our eye single to the glory of God, that the whole body may be "full of light." That at last we may hear that welcome plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will now make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord," J. GILBERT.

A VISION.

THE following vision was sent us by Bro. E. N. Webster of Boston, Massachusetts, who is personally well acquainted with

Sr. Healey. Some time in the year of 1882 the following vision was given me in open day. It was not long after I was baptized and united with the Reorganized Church in Boston, Massachusetts. I was zealous for the cause of Christ, and whenever oppor tunity offered would present the claims of the gospel. One day while conversing with a lady concerning my faith, I failed to present it so as to convince her of its truth. I gave her an Epitome of our faith. While she was perusing it I was thinking how I should answer the questions she would probably ask. The Spirit said to me, You think you know concerning the gospel, but you do not, only in part. Immediately the room began to expand until it seemed to comprise the world. There appeared a table before me; around it sat three men. Upon the table was grain having the appearance of white corn. I then beheld the Garden of Eden-the most beautiful and lovely of anything I ever looked upon. There were our first parents dwelling in peace and happiness, with everything the heart could desire. I saw the temptation, the fall, and the expulsion from the garden. And, oh! I can never forget the sorrow and despair shown in every feature as our first parents went forth from the presence of the Lord. In their afflictions they were administered unto by the angels, and the Savior promised the gospel revealed. When this was revealed, one of the men at the table moved a kernel of corn in line, and a passage of Scripture would be given relating to it. I will here observe that my mind was illuminated so that I could understand perfectly every event as it was presented. It seemed to me I was present. At this time I had never read the Old Testament. I saw the killing of Abel, and the pewer of Satan manifested; also the power of God among his people; the preaching and prophesying of Enoch, who labored earnestly to turn the people to the Eord. I saw the city of Zion; her children dwelt together in unity and love, keeping all the commandments of the Lord, and were exceedingly happy. The ungodly became more wicked and corrupt until the earth was filled with violence, and but few remained who were righteous. Noah and the work he had to perform came before me. He preached the gospel in great plainness, and the power of God was with him; yet the people heeded not his teachings, but turned a deaf ear to his warnings. When he began to build the ark they pointed the finger of scorn and derided him. When Noah and his family entered the ark, and the floods came rushing in and the earth began to be covered with water, the consternation among the inhabitants was dreadful to behold. After the flood there was righteousness and peace for a season. Then mankind began to turn away from the Lord, vielding to sin and wickedness. I saw the tower of Babel, the confounding of language, and the confusion and perplexity of the people, the calling of Abraham, Joseph in Egypt, the famine, Jacob, and the blessings, Israel's bondage, their deliverance, crossing the sea and journeys in the wilderness, the grandeur and majesty of Mt. Sinai, all of which defies description, also the passing of Jordan into the promised land, and a glance of Israel's history until the coming of Christ.

I saw the Savior as he lay in the manger, also as he grew in years. He was indeed a wonderful child, exhibiting great wisdom, so that the people marveled. I saw him in the temple disputing with the doctors of the law; the choosing of the disciples, preaching upon the mount, and his travels to and fro, the multitudes following and thronging him until he was weary and worn, and when he would retire to the mountain to pray. I also saw his baptism and the Holy Spirit descend upon him in the form of a dove; his temptations, afflic-tions, and sorrows. Saw his terrible struggle in the garden which can not be described; his betrayal, and when he was in the judgment hall, the crown of thorns and purple robe as they led him away to be crucified; then upon the cross and the dreadful agony there, the mocking of the soldiers and others, his death, the earthquake, the rending of the rocks and the darkness.

What passed before me in the vision before this was indeed wonderful to me, but this scene far surpassed all others, and so vividly is it impressed upon my mind that time can never efface it. I saw him taken down from the cross and laid in the sepulcher, and his glorious resurrection. I beheld him with his disciples, and his ascension into heaven. This was a view of surpassing beauty, delightful to behold. The work of the Apostles was now presented to me, their wonderful success in the gospel, their persecutions and sufferings, their travelings, trials, temptations, afflictions and sorrows. The gospel was unfolded in plainness and power, the Holy Spirit attending all their labors with signs and miracles, the growth of the church, and the gospel spreading far and and wide. I will here remark, that in the days of Christ and the Apostles the grain upon the table was all arranged in beautiful order. I saw the terrible persecutions of the church and the death of the Apostles. The saints began to be divided, some going one way, and some another, until there was strife and confusion and hardness one toward another. Yet there were many humble followers of Jesus, and the Lord was with them. It now began to grow dark, and darker still, until the church was disorganized and scattered among the people as in a wilderness. Then the corn upon the table was all in disorder.

The darkness now was intense; sin and wickedness everywhere. After a long time there appeared a glimmer of light, and a ladder that seemed to reach from earth to heaven, and a few who were striving to ascend holding on by faith in Christ. Others started well, but failed. Churches began to multiply, having some of the pure principles of the gospel, but all failed in their organization. There was contention and persecution. Many were killed for their faith. The corn upon the table continued still in disorder, and there was only here and there a ray of light, Gloom hung over the world. By and by I saw a bright light, very small at first, but it grew and soon began to roll, and the men around the table began to set the grain in order, until it was nearly the same as in the apostolic age. When the small, bright light presented itself, the thirty-third verse of the last chapter of Genesis, just as it is in the Inspired Translation came before me. I had not at that time read, when I did I found it the same. The light continued to roll and grow in There was much persecution, some lost their lives for their faith, others were driven and despised, the gospel was preached in power and the church increased in numbers. The light rolled swiftly, when suddenly it burst into fragments. Darkness was everywhere; but within the gloom I could perceive lights scattered in all directions. Among them there was one larger and brighter than the rest, around which the different lights began to gather and unite. Then it began to roll like the first; not as fast—but steadily. All the gifts, powers, and blessings, accompanied this as at the beginning. The companied this as at the beginning. darkness began to disperse, and the glory of the Lord surrounded his people. Order was again nearly restored. Then immediately it was renewed from the beginning, and rehearsed to me with the fullest explanation, so that I could not misunderstand. Then the vision closed.

I am utterly unable to describe the beauty and glory of this manifestation of the goodness of God to me. When the lady had finished reading the Epitome of faith and doctrine, and began to question me in relation to it, there appeared before me a map with answers to every question, and all the principles of the gospel inscribed thereon, so I was able to convey to her mind clearly and distinctly all she wished to know. She was astonished, knowing my natural inability. In all my unworthiness, the Lord has been graciously pleased to manifest unto me many wonderful things, confirming me in the latter day work, so that I have the fullest assurance of its truth. There is no doubt in my mind concerning the fulfillment of every promise which the Lord hath made.

Your sister in Christ, ELLEN F. HEALEY.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

"And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus."—2 Tim. 3: 15.

Many of those divines who have proved most eminent for their piety and usefulness, have in a particular manner experienced the benefit of parental instructions; and especially have received religion from the piety and example of their parents.

Dr. Doddridge, before he was able to read, was instructed by his mother in the history of the Old and New Testament, by the assistance of some Dutch tiles on each side of the fire-place, where they usually sat. Flavel says:—"I bless God for a religious tender father, who poured his soul to God for me; and this stock of prayers I esteem above the fairest inheritance on earth."

Bishop Hall says:—"How often have I blessed the memory of those divine passages of experimental divinity, which I heard from my mother's mouth! What day did there pass without being much engaged in private devotion? Have any lips read to me such feeling lectures of piety? In a word, her life and death were saint-like."

The names of a Wesley, Augustine, Hooker, Newton, Cecil, Dwight, Buchannan, are here mentioned as instances of the blessed effects of parental instruction in religion. This should encourage parents to bring up their "children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." For this is a course, which has been so often crowned with success, and which is seldom, or never perhaps, in vain.

It is evident that the pious endeavors of Lois and Eunice, in making young Timothy acquainted with the Holy Scriptures, laid the foundation of all his greatness, eminence, and usefulness; in which he was inferior to none but the apostles. The Scriptures warrant high expectations on this subject.

Hooker used to say:—"If I had no other motive for being religious, I would most earnestly strive to be so for the sake of my mother, that I might requite her care of me, and cause her widow's heart to sing for joy." Walk, believing God's word, when you can not see the light of His countenance.

ONLY Quetzalcoatl, among all the gods was pre-eminently called Lord, in such sort, that when any one swore, saying, by our Lord, he meant Quetzalcoatl, and no other, though there may have been many other highly esteemed gods. He taught only virtue, abhorring all evil and all hurt. Twenty years this good divinity taught in Cholula, then he passed away by the road that he came; carrying with him four of the principal and most virtuous youths of that city. He journeyed for a hundred and fifty leagues, till he came to the sea, in a distant province called Goatzacoalco. Here he took leave of his companions and sent them back to their city, instructing them to tell their fellow citizens that a day should come in which white men should land on the coasts, by way of the sea in which the sun rises, brethren of his, and having beards like his; and that they should rule the land. The Mexicans should rule the land. always waited for the accomplishment of this prophecy, and when the Spaniards came they took them for the descendants of their meek and gentle prophet; although, as Mendicta remarks with some sarcasm, "when they came to know them and to experience their works, they thought otherwise,"

Another author says: "The ideas of Brasseur with regard to Quetzalcoatl have their roots in, and must be traced back to the very first appearing of the Mexican religion, or of the religion or religions by which it was preceded."

Abbe Dominech says, "After the enfranchisement of the Olmecs, a man named Quetzalcoatl arrived in the country, whom Garcia, Torquemada, Sahagun and other Spanish writers took to be Saint Thomas. It was also at that time that the third age ended, and that the fourth began, called 'sun of fire,' because it was supposed that the world would be destroyed by fire."

Kingsborough again says:

"Quetzalcoatl is he who was born of the virgin called Chalchihuitli, which means the precious stone of penance, or sacrifice. He was saved in the deluge, and was born in Zivenaritzcatl where he resides. His fast was a kind of preparation for the end of the world, which they said would happen in the day of four earthquakes, so that they were daily in expectation of that event. Quetzalcoatl was he who they say created the world, and they bestowed on him the appellation of lord of the wind, because they said that Tonacatecatli when it appeared good to him, breathed and begat Quetzalcoatl. They erected round temples to him without any corners. They said that it was he who formed the first man. He alone had a human body like that of man; the other gods were of an incorporeal nature,

"They declare that their supreme deity, or more properly speaking, demon, Tenacaticotl, whom we have just mentioned, who by another name was called Citinatonali . . . begat Quetzalcoatl, not by connection with a woman, but by his breath alone, as we have observed above, when he sent his embassador, as they say to the Virgin of Tulla. They believed him to be god of the air, and he was the first to whom they built temples and churches, which they formed perfectly round without any angles. They say it was he who effected the reformation of the world by penance, as we have already said; since, according to their account, his father had created the world, and when men had given themselves up to vice, on which account it had been so frequently destroyed, Citinatonali sent his son into the world to reform it. We certainly must deplore the blindness of these miserable people, on whom Saint Paul says the wrath of God has to be revealed."

"The Oajacans believed that "in very remote times, about the era of the apostles, according to the padres, on old white man, with long hair and beard, appeared suddenly at Huatulco, coming from the southwest by sea, and preached to the natives in their own tongue, but of things beyond their understanding. He lived a strict life, passing the greater part of the night in a kneeling posture, and eating but little disappeared shortly after, as mysteriously as he came, but left as a memento of his visit a cross, which he planted with his own hand, and admonished the people to preserve it sacredly, as one day they would be taught its significance."

Wixepecocha taught gentle doctrines of reform like Quetzalcoatl, he was persecuted and forced to wander from place to place, and at last disappeared, leaving his followers to hope for a better future.

Boturini tells us that he possessed certain historical knowledge concerning the preaching of the gospel in America by the glorious apostle St. Thomas. Another proof in his possession was a painting of a cross which he discovered near the hill Tianguiz, which cross was about a cubit in size, and painted by the hands of an angel a beautiful blue color with various devices. Boturini also possessed a painting of another cross which was drawn by means of a machine made for the purpose, out of an inacessible cave where it had been deposited in Pagan times.

That a marble cross was found in Peru by the conquerors and placed by them in the Cathedral at Cuzco, no one has ever questioned. The cross, we are told, was the most common religious symbol seen in the ruins of Central America; and in Mexico they were numerous in times before the conquest. A cross worked with thread in a small flag was displayed in funeral ceremonies, by the Nahua nations. Within a sacred enclusure on the island of Cozumel, a cross nine feet high was seen by the first invaders.

"Quetzalcoatl is said to have been a white man, with a strong formation of body, broad forehead, large eyes, black hair and a heavy beard. He always wore a long white robe, which, according to Gomara, was decorated with crosses." "In taking leave here of Tlaloc, I may draw attention to the prominence in his cult of the number four, the cross, the snake."

The frequency of this symbol is not an argument, for to the Americans it was a symbol of the rain god, and may have had reference to the four winds, and four cardinal points; but taking into consideration the other Christian relics, it must be regarded as an original Christian emblem, perverted from its former use and meaning.

The goddess Chalchihuitlicue held in her hand a vessel in shape of a cross. Guatulco was likewise one of the many localities described by the early Catholic writers as containing a wonderful cross, left here probably by Saint Thomas, during his sojurn in America. Under the northern building of this palace (at Mitla) there is a subterranean gallery in form of a cross. At Metlaltoyuca is the figure of a woman bearing a cross. At Miztitlan is a sculptured cross on a lofty almost inaccessible cliff. At Zacualtipan is a sculptured cross.

"Near Chacala, still further south there is a tank and near it a cross, well carved, and on its foot certain ancient unknown letters, with points in flve lines. On it was seen a most devoted crucifix. Under it are other lines of characters with the said points, which seemed Hebrew or Syriac." There was a celebrated "cross of Tepic." At Zuni Coronado was found "not only crosses but three Christians." One of the most wonderful emblems of Maya worship in the estimation of the conguerors, was the cross.

"The cross is to be found in Mexican M.S.S., and appears in that of Fevervary, with a bird, which as an inhabitant of the air, may be said to accord with the character of the symbol."

Mr. Bancroft, from whom these facts are taken says the frequent occurance of the cross is "one of the most striking evidences of the former recognition of the reciprocal principle of nature by the Americans, especially when we remember that the Mexican name for the emblem, tonaquacahuitl, signifies 'tree of one life, or flesh."

The cross was a common emblem also among the Indians of the United States, to whom it represented the four spirits of the winds.

The idea of the Mayas of the most primitive period of their hstory, like the idea, entertained by other nations whose annals have been presented, was connected with the arrival of a small band from across the ocean.

"To account for the fact that but one language is spoken in Yucatan, and that closely related to thase of Tabasco and Guatemala, Orozcoy Berra supposes that the Mayas destroyed or banished the former inhabitants. They were evidently bar-barious, as shown by their abandonment of the ruins; perhaps they were the same tribes that destroyed Palenque." The Tutul Zivis, a cultivated people, came into Yucatan before or about 400 A.D. They came from the capital of Tula, the same place from whence the Nahua nations migrated.

"After the overthrow of the original Votanic empire, we may suppose the people to have been sub-divided during the course of centuries by civil wars, and sectarian struggles into petty states, the glory of their former greatness vanished and partially forgotten, the spirit of progress dormant, to be roused again by the presence of the Nahua chiefs. These gathered and infused new life into the scattered remnants; they introduced some new institutions, and thus aided the ancient peoples to rebuild their empire on the old foundations, retaining the dialects of the original language."

"The Quiche Cakchiquel empire was at the time of the conquest the most powerful and famous in North America, except the Aztecs. It was then about three centuries old; before that the history is a blank. Ututlan was their capital. They resisted the Spaniards till nearly anihilated and many fled to the mountains and are defiant still. It is safer to suppose that the nations of Guatemala were descended directly from the Maya builders, yet the difference between the Cakchequil structures and the older architectural remains of the Maya empire indicate a new era of Maya culture, originated not improbably by the introduction of foreign elements."

The Toltecs, Chichimecs, Nahuatlacas, Aztecs-all the modern nations of Anahuac, are immigrants. All have a fabulous story of wanderings that have a general resemblance to that given of the Toltecs. All the governments on the whole American continents, North and South, at the time of the discovery, were modern, and were occupying the seats of ancient dominions. In all these cases there is an admission of a period of confusion and disruption between the two eras of regular government; and this period is generally found to be referrable to the first few centuries after Christ. Reliable records extend back to this period of disruption. What is beyond has to be guessed at, or inferred from vague traditions, from myths, beliefs, customs, and ruins. The ruins would of course determine all poins if the inscriptions could be read; without that aid they reveal but little. What could be learned from the ruins of Troy, without the Iliad as a key? Ancient American cities that were deserted, are now probably obscured from sight in forests. Those that were successively occupied were doubtless changed. We read of such reconstructions, remodelings and refoundings in Central and South America.

Plongeon tells us that no intelligent study of any of the ruins has ever yet been made, while all admit that exploration of them and the lands is yet imperfect. No matter to me whether I can prove the suppositions and assumptions in these papers true or not, from archaeological science in its present state. The main theory of Israelitish occupation is supported by such a preponderance of facts, that future developements can not reverse the situation.

I perceive more than I can at present prove.

The laws of development laid down in these papers show that the civilization formerly dominant on this continent must have been Jewish and Christian. And some of the facts herein presented can have no other interpretation; and as facts never conflict with facts, future discoveries must harmonize with these facts.

If it be proven that Hebrews once existed on this continent, it becomes necessary to admit that a knowledge of Christ was known here also; for he was sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel; and as he appeared to the Jews after his resurrection, justice would make it probable that he would appear to others of the inheritors of the great promises. Seas are not dividing lines in the spirit realm. The traditions of Quetzalcoatl and the culture-heroes would find an explanation, if it could be made apparent that Christ himself appeared to the ancients of this continent. In some way, miraculous or otherwise, a knowledge of Christianity did obtain here.

WATER AND FIRE.

In the beginning the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." "Not at any time have I given unto you a law which was temporal, neither any man, or the children of men; * * * for my commandments are spiritual, they are not natural nor temporal, neither carnal nor sensual."

The gospel is cleansing and purifying in its nature, and its operations are through and upon the intellectual, physical and moral, as well as upon the spiritual man.

The subject of baptisms of water and of fire has always exercised the minds of the thoughtful, and many books have been brought into requisition in order to reveal, if possible, the "mysteries of God's plan, laid before the foundation of the world. Research of ancient and modern lore, in its every department, can never satisfactorily solve the problem. There is but one source from which to obtain the knowledge of the doctrine of the Father, and that source can be successfully appealed to only through willing obedience to God as taught in his revealed word. Jesus saith, "I am the way, and the truth and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me;" and whosoever believeth on the Lord's words, them will he visit with the manifestations of his Spirit, and they shall be born of him, even of water and of the

While the Spirit of God abides in us as his Saints, by its assistance we are led to ponder these things in our hearts; and it teaches us that as creatures of God, according to what we know and feel, the elements of water and fire are essential to the wellbeing and development of the physical So also as regenerated sons and daughters of the Great Jehovah, all that is lovely and of good report, all that lifts us up into the realms where love dwells, and the light of God shines evermore, that causes the heart to swell with the divine impulse, that enlightens the mind, that impels the tongue to speak and sound forth the praise of God, that quickeneth all things and guides into all truth, that manifests the gifts of the gospel,—all things pertaining to the well-being and development of the intellectual, moral, and spiritual man in Christ Jesus are nourished and sustained and purified by the water and fire of the word, "yea, even the Holy Ghost." "Whosoever drinketh of the water which I shall give him shall never thirst," and "they will hear my voice and shall see me, and shall not be asleep, and shall abide the day of my coming, for they shall be purified even as I am pure."

For this dispensation of the Spirit ushered in by God through the angel Moroni, as children of the kingdom let us be thankful. Be patient in afflictions, revile not against those who revile, and walk in the meekness of his spirit; then shall we have peace in him, for the promise of eternal life is unto us who have "come after," should we believe in the gifts and callings of God by the Holy Ghost which beareth record of the Father and of the Son.

A PROMINENT JEW ARGUES THAT HIS PEOPLE WILL BE RESTORED

BENJAMIN Levi, a highly educated Jew, who has traveled extensively, both in this country and Europe, and who is connected with a Jewish publication in New York, passed through Pittsburg, Pa., September 19th, on his way to Chicago. In conversation with a Dispatch reporter,

Mr. Levi made some statements concerning the hopes and prospects of his people, which are of sufficient importance to lay before the public. He adheres to the orthodox faith of his people, and thinks they will ultimately be restored to their ancient heritage in Palestine.

"When do you" think this event will take place?" was asked of the gentleman. "I can not tell how soon," he replied, "but all the signs point to it at no distant day. The Jews are almost ready for it now-ready, I mean, in a temporal sense. In most countries they have been enfranchised, have all the rights and privileges of other people, own and dispose of their property as they please, and are free to come and go as they wish. The only countries in Europe where they labor under political disadvantages are Russia, Poland, and some parts of Germany. But even in those countries their burdens are being lifted, and I have no doubt they soon will be as free there as they are in the United States or England. Then they will be ready to turn their faces toward the land of their fathers, and enter upon the glorious career foretold by the prophets of old.

"Another thing," he continued, "and one of the strangest in modern history, which can not be accounted for by any process of human reasoning, is the fact that Turkey-a barbarous nation, at war with nearly every principle held sacred by the civilized world-is permitted to retain control of Palestine, the cradle of the faith of both Jew and Christian, where David and Solomon reigned, where Elijah and Elisha denounced idolatry, where the Maccabees struggled for liberty, and where Christ lived and died. In olden times this country was the garden spot of the world. In the time of Solomon, and for ages afterward, it was the wealthiest and most powerful nation on the earth. Good governernment would soon lift it from its present condition of abasement and make it an important factor in the world's affairs. Why is Turkey permitted to retain control of this sacred spot? In my judgment, this anomaly in modern politics is the work of Providence. When the Jews are ready to return to it, the grasp of Turkey will be released. She is merely holding it in trust for them. The rest of the world looks on while this drama is being played out.

"Do you expect a temporal ruler?" "We do. We have prophecy for it, and we can not doubt that. The Jews are to be gathered home, Jerusalem is to be rebuilt upon a more splendid scale than under Solomon, become the capital of the world and the seat of power of the Messiah, who will reign one thousand years the acknowledged sovereign of mankind. There will be but one nation, one ruler and one language. The confederation of the human race will be complete. To show that this is not impossible, it is only necessary to glance at the condition of the world when Christ was born. The Roman Empire embraced all the nations of the earth. No rival dared to lift its head. Over all this vast territory Augustus reigned as undisputed master. What has been may be."

"Your people have preserved their national traits under very trying circumstances. Do you think this has any special significance?"

"I do. I regard this as positive proof that we are still the favored children of the Most High. French, Germans, Italians, English and others come to this country, and in a few years become so thoroughly Americanized as to lose their national identity altogether. Not so with the Jews. Although they mingle freely with the people wherever they may be—and they are everywhere—they are not absorbed by them. They remain Jews. Could this be possible with any other people? Could it be possible with the Jews unless they were under Divine guidance and protection? I think not, and all history sustains me in the belief. One of the principal causes of our long-continued individuality is the observance of the old law of nonmarriage with outsiders. When Ezra, the prophet, priest and statesman, returned from Babylonia to Jerusalem, he was affected by the sight of a custom which had grown up during the captivity of inter-marriage with adjacent tribes. He succeeded in causing the foreign wives to be repudiated and the old law to be enforced, which separate the Jews from all other nations. I think it is this stern law which, under Providence, has preserved our nationality in all our wanderings and mis-fortunes. Without Divine assistance this would have been impossible. Surely God is holding something good in reservation for us. What can it be except restoration to the land promised to Israel and his descendants?"

among your people making much progress?"

"In the United States there has been some backsliding from the old faith, but not enough to occasion alarm. Those who have identified themselves with the schism can not long maintain their position. They can not live half Christian, half Jew. Their instincts and traditions are against

RAILWAYS FOR THE NEXT WAR.

THE facts appear to warrant rather stronger language than we used in speaking of the postponement, now pretty well assured, of the war between England and Russia over the Afghan frontier. The postponement is thrown almost into the plain presentment of a mutual grant of time. The gigantic preparations for defense are heavily continued on both sides, but the most noticeable feature of the preparation is the swift rush of railroad building. The days seem to be approaching when a nation going to war will just simply push a railway into the enemy's country and make no great move beyond that line of communication. That is, she will mass her troops along the line, hold it strongly and advance its head like the head of a great constrictor raised barely high enough to see the way. The weighty advantages of this method of warfare are self-evident; the convenient transport of artillery so heavy that it could not be conveyed by the ordinary transport service, the sure reliance on plentiful supplies of every sort, the rapid conveyance of fresh troops to the front and of invalided men not merely to the rear, but in luxurious hospital cars clear away back home. These and many other things will make the future wars of the great nations positively luxuries for those who have to be killed. England and Russia can fight as handily in the Paropamissus as in Belgium; it is only a question of money enough.

The Russians, we have stated, are building strategic railways on both sides of the Caspian. It is as though they recognized a definite mission in Central Asia, and were moving as relentlessly forward as fate. We may add that the last report speaks of laborers going forward by thousands, and leaves little room to doubt that Penjdeh will be made the seat of a massive fortress. On the English side, a season of sound reason had taken the place of the period when everybody wanted to go to Herat. We showed repeatedly at that time that the Russians had all the advantage in that portion of Afghanistan. The English are now hastily building a rail-road to Kandshar; at that important city there will be an enormous fortress, with two more behind it, one at Quetta, and one at Kurrachee. Some further improvements will transform Kurrachee into one of the best ports in India; it is twenty-one days by steam from London, and the railroad then to Kandahar will continue the British line of advance—or, if you choose, defense of India. The sea route will be well guarded; the Indian Government has just annexed the coast of the Arabian Gulf from Ras (Cape) Hufun to Zeila, near the British Island of Mushakh, not far from the French annexation of Obok, and covering the whole Egyptian coast of the Gulf of Aden. This rather startling proceeding means the certain and definite defense of Britain's hold on the Red Sea against all comers.

That this has aggravated Germany may easily be believed; the German papers are seizing the occasion of the use of armed force by the Sultan of Zanzibar (to repress the attempts of German capitalists to occupy under pretext of treaties with alleged chiefs, a vast empire claimed by Zanzibar) for the purpose of indulging in a loud trumpeting against both England and Italy. As there is no better ground for it than the fact that Zanzibar is in a misty sort of a way a protectorate of England, which last has not moved yet in the affair, and since even this would not introduce Italy into the quarrel, it remains that the real cause of German aggravation must be the annexations of Italy on the Egyptian coast of the Red Sea and of England on the Egyptian coast of the Arabian Gulf, both which enterprises point too markedly against the German desire to monopolize the Eastern Afric shore. The talk of the German papers is more warlike than it has been at any time since Sedan. It will be one of the curiosities of an intricate situation if England and Italy have to fight France and Germany over African annexation before the Anglo-Russian boil bursts.

The distance by rail from Kurrachee to Sibi, to which point the railroad was built before its stoppage at the hands of the present Liberal administration, (it was one of Lord Beaconfield projects,) is about 500 miles. From Sibi to Kandabar is 240 miles further. England will therefore practically be within twenty-three days' steam of her great Afghan fortress and begins to think that Herat is no great matter after all. It is 360 miles from Kandahar to Herat.

ENGLAND VERSUS RUSSIA.

As to the efficiency of the armies of the two countries on the brink of war, it is hard to judge, as their recent training and experience have been so different. has just emerged from a war wherein her opponents were nearly equal in numbers, better armed as to the infantry, both in the matter of range and penetration, fairly disciplined and organized, and behind earthworks, not probably much inferior to any troops in Europe. From this test Russia emerged with great honor and She suffered some bloody and serious repulses, but in every case they were bloody because her troops persevered, with the most obstinate courage, in repeated assaults upon strong field-works, most ably defended. They showed a most commendable readiness to profit by the lessons of history, and proved themselves close observers of the tactics of other nations. The dense and unwieldly column which had contributed so much to their defeat at the Alma and Inkerman had been replaced by the line and company column, and while two assaults at Plevna were made in an injudicious formation, the one commanded by Skobeleff not only showed an admirable employment of successive lines of skirmishers, but, was as magnificent an instance of heroic courage, and the highest qualities of a leader, responded to by the most touching devotion on the part of the soldiery, as can be found in recent history. Their cavalry was not efficient, failing even in the duty of keeping a touch of the enemy, due probably to a want of vigor in the conduct of that arm.

So competent an observer as Lieut. Greene, bears strong testimony to the excellent fighting of the Cossacks on foot, and to their relentless and untiring energy in the pursuit and rout of a broken foe. The artillery although superior in strength to the Turkish, played a very inferior part, and had little or no effect upon the result of the battles. The most serious defect was the one apparently inherent to their nation in its present social and political conditions, an utter want of individuality among the troops of the line, making them entirely dependent upon the presence and commands of their officers, but this same quality, in the hands of a genius like Skobeleff, can be wrought up to an insensibility to danger and death which makes them at such times the most formidable infantry on the continent.

Conserence Minutes.

EASTERN IOWA.

The above district conference convened at Clinton, Iowa, September 5th and 6th, 1885. Elder R. Etzenhouser in the chair, pro tem.; D. L. Palsgrove, secretary. Apostolic Branch reported 39 members. No reports from other branches. Elders reported in person: J. Johnson, C. C. Reynolds, D. Holmes, R. Etzenhouser, M. Maudsley, W. Turner (baptized 3), and J. Ruby; by letter: Priests, J. Bradley, D. W. Clow and D. L. Palsgrove. Elder Jerome Ruby continued as president of this conference district; and that the present secretary be retained; and that the Bishop's Agent be retained and sustained. Five minute speeches were participated in by J. N. Wilson, D. Holmes, James Johnson, C. C. Reynolds. M. Maudsley, J. Bradiey, Mother Ruby, D. L. Palsgrove, D. W. Clow, and R. Etzenhouser. The next conference to be held at Clinton, low, December 5th and 6th, 1885. Bro. D. Holmes preached on Saturday evening. On Sunday morning and evening preaching by R. Etzenhouser. Sacrament meeting in the afternoon, conducted by Elders Etzenhouser and Johnson. Peace and harmony prevailed, giving us a profitable conference.

DECATUR.

A grove meeting and conference of the above district was held in the Lone Rock Branch, Harrison county, Missouri, September 19th and 20th, 1885. H. A. Stebbins, president; A. S. Cochran, clerk pro tem. Branch Reports.-Lamoni 540; 15 baptized, 4 received, 4 removed, 2 died. Lucas 226; 9 baptized, 3 received, 3 removed. Pleasanton 102; 1 baptized, 2 received, 3 removed, 3 died. Davis City 62; 1 baptized, 2 received, 1 removed, 1 died. Lone Rock 55; 3 baptized. Allendale 39; 3 baptized, 1 died. Greenville 24; 1 baptized. Official Reports.-H. A. Stebbins reported as president of the district and of Lamoni Branch; had baptized 11. J. Johnston, president of Lone Rock, reported in person; and A. N. Bishop, president of Lucas, reported by proxy. C. H. Jones (baptized 3), and J. W. Gillen of the Seventy; and Elders E. Banta, S. Ackerly, J. P. Dillen, M. McHarness, L. Gaulter, J. S. Snively (baptized 2), J. L. Richey, D. Dancer, A. S. Cochran (baptized 1), and M. H. Gregg, reported much good labor and gave excellent testimonies. Priests B. F. Drake, A. J. Moore (baptized 10), R. Johnston and J. Traxler, reported; Teachers J. Wilkenson, A. K. Anderson, S. Rew and Jos. Hammer; and Deacon N. W. Smith. Teacher John Allen by letter. By request the president read the resolution against dancing that was adopted March 1st, 1873. On motion, all further action on the subject was deferred till next session, and the president said that he would furnish those branches desiring them with copies of the present ruling. The document submitted to the last conference by E. H. Gurley was taken up and considered, and the following was moved and adopted: Whereas, Bro. E. H. Gurley asks the district to request the publication of his reasons for sending in his license; be it resolved, that his article be returned to him, and if he desires it published in the Herald, that he make his own request of the Board of Publication. The acceptance of his license was referred to his quorum for consideration. Resolved that the officers of the Lamoni Branch are requested to labor with its members who live in the limits of the Lone Rock Branch, and advise them to ask for letters, and to unite themselves with the latter branch. H. A. Stebbins was re-elected president and A. S. Cochran was chosen secretary of the district for the ensuing year. Brethren A. J. Moore and A.S. Cochran preached in the grove in the evening; and Bro. J. W. Gillen, assisted by Bro. E. Banta, preached in the Lone Rock School house. Sunday morning testimony meeting was in charge of brethren Gaulter and Dillen. In the forenoon Bro. E. Banta preached; in the afternoon, Bro. Gillen; in the evening, Brn. Stebbins and Jones. Brethren Ackerly, Richey and Johnston, assisted in the services of the day and evening. Adjourned to meet at Lamoui, December 19th and 20th, 1885.

BEWARE.

The Saints are hereby warned against one Aaron S. Bensen, who recently came into the church in Jamestown, Nebraska, under false pretences. He married a girl there, and is reported as having a wife and children in the east. He has been expelled from the church, but has a certificate of baptism. He has fled to parts in Iowa, it is thought. By the president of Northern Nebraska District, W. M. Rumel.

FOURTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Brothers: I have been thinking some time of writing to you. The summer is past, and autumn is at hand. All should try to labor some this fall and winter. The good Father has favored us with a good season, and a prosperous time. As soon as fall work is so we can, let us all try and do more for the cause than we have ever done in the past. I feel zealous in the work, and I pray that our labors may be found of great worth at the next conference. Let us rally to the standard, and sustain the gospel banner. I have received some letters from my brethren, asking about the work. The work is onward and upward—in good condition. Our old hero, brother D. S. Crawley, has just closed a debate in Stewartsville with an Advent minister, and the good Lord was on our side. I would not wonder if that minister would embrace the fulness of the gospel soon; I hope so at least. Pray for the redemption of Zion. Let us hear from you all.

Your co-laborer in Christ,

J. D. FLANDERS.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Southern Nebraska District Conference will convene on the 18th of October, 1885, at Wilber, Saline county, Nebraska, at half-past ten o'clock. We hope all branches and Elders will send their reports to me at the above address. Let as many as can come, and see if we can commence a vigorous winter's campaign in the district. Now is a favorable time for us to get the attention of the people.

J. B. GOULDSMITH, Dist. Clerk.

The conference of the Northern Illinois District will convene at Mission Branch, LaSalle county, Illinois, October 17th and 18th. Saints of said district, take notice; and branch officials, be ready with your reports. Come and bring the Spirit of the Lord with you. Communications, reports, &c., may be sent to the care of W. Vickery, district secretary, Plano, Illinois.

The Northern Michigan District Conference will convene with the Hersey Branch, on the 17th and 18th of October, at the town of Hersey, Osceola county, Michigan. Parties coming via Port Huron, take the narrow guage to Saginaw; change cars there, and take the F. P. M. to Hersey. We hope to have the president of the Mission with us. Come one! come all! That we may rejoice together in the Spirit.

Andrew Barr, Dist. Pres.

KEOKUK PAPERS.

We wish to say to those who sent subscriptions for the Keokuk Gate City and Keokuk Constitution, that those papers used us very strangely and unfairly. Constitution's limit being three inches, after one or two articles. The Gate City were entirely indifferent at first, finally gave us a fair insertion, and then would not supply us with papers except at double prices agreed upon. We tried the Hawkeye of Burlington, with similar results. We used every effort to get the articles out of the three, but were folled. Sent to all as many as could be had. If any are not satisfied, we hope they will report at once.

OUR FOOD.

THE laws of man's constitution evidently show us that the plainer, simpler, and more natural our food is, the more perfectly these laws will be fulfilled, and the more healthy, vigorous, and longlived our bodies will be; and consequently the more perfect our senses, and the more active and powerful the intellectual and moral faculties be rendered by cultivation. By simple food is meant that which is not compounded, and complicated, and dressed with pungent stimulants, seasoning, or condiments; such kinds of food as the Creator designed for us, and in such condition as is best adapted to our anatomical and physiological powers. Some kinds of food are better than others, and are adapted to sustain us in every condition. And such, whatever they may be, (and we should ascertain what they are), should constitute our sustenance. Thus we shall the more perfectly fulfill the laws of our being, and secure our best interests.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W BLAIR -

- - EDITOR ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Lamoni, Iowa, October 17, 1885.

HOW IS THIS?

THE Utah Journal, published at Logan, Cache county, Utah, in its issue for August 29th, replies to an article by us in HERALS for August 15th, in which we reviewed the speech of Hon. Moses Thatcher, at Ogden, July 4th. This reply closes with the following language:

"It seems from the whole tenor of the review, that popular favor is earnestly sought by the sect led by Joseph Smith, the son of the Prophet. Its action at Washington during the time of the pressure of influence on the Mormon question, and here in Utah lately, indicate that it wishes to gain notoriety and to build itself up in the good-will of the nation. Its efforts are vain and the result will be failure.

"The closing part of the review is not of much force. The writer should know that when God established His church, raised up Joseph Smith to be a prophet, brought forth the Book of Mormon and introduced the great dispensation of the last days, that he made no mistake. The work designed will be accomplished according to his laws, and they will be found to be higher and of more force than the laws of man. And he that keepeth the laws of God will not break any Constitutional law of the land, but if any law is made to entrap the worshipper of God, as in the case of Daniel, the true believers will follow in the example of Daniel, obey God and suffer the penalties which unmerciful man may inflict, as some noble men are doing to-day."

We commend to the Utah Journal that its Editor reads the revelation given to the church on Fishing River, Missouri, in which the Lord says:

"Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works; but carefully gather together, as much in one region as can be consistently with the feelings of the people; and behold, I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety, while you are saying unto the people, execute judgment and justice for us according to law, and redress us of our wrongs."

If to take the word here given as indicative of the will of God expressed to his people, and to act upon it, is to seek for popular favor, then does the Reorganization so seek. If to observe the command of God to maintain the Constitution, "the glorious Constitution," and the laws of the land under it, is to indicate a wish to "build itself up in the good will of the nation," then the Reorganization is doing that. The question of failure will be determined further on.

We do know that "when God established his church, raised up Joseph Smith, and brought forth the Book of Mormon," "He made no mistake." It is because we know that when God did all this he made no mistake that we refuse utterly, to accept the idea of the Utah Journal, and its compeers, that since the establishing of the church, and the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon, other things have been added which are of a nature entirely incompatible with what was given at such establishing of the church. For, if God "made no mistake," at such establishment of the church, and the laws governing it at the time, then no such addition, or proposed amendment could be legitimately made. If he did make a mistake and this can be shown by the Utah Journal, we shall then be ready to accept a statement from God to the effect that he had erred, and now wished to correct the error; when that statement is made, we shall be ready to state what our action will be.

That "the work designed will be accomplished," we fully believe. That it will be in accordance with the laws of God, we also believe. But that it will be done to foster and gratify the wishes and desires of two men in each hundred of Utah's believers in polygamy, to the continued distress and annoyance of the rest; the sorrow of the true wives of men untrammeled in plural meshes, we do not believe for one single moment.

So far as the closing part of our review having been "not of much force," is concerned, the whole may have been weak for that matter; we make no claims to extraordinary wisdom, but propose to exercise what little we have in ways that we believe to be legitimate. But does the Utah Journal forget that "God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty."

BISHOP SHARP'S ACTION.

WHEN Bishop John Sharp, of Salt Lake City, appeared in Court before Commissioner McKay, according to notice given by his attorney P. L. Williams, he withdrew a former plea of "not guilty, and pleaded "guilty" to a charge of unlawful cohabitation pending in the Court. His attorney in his behalf presented and read to the Court the following statement:

"I hold myself amenable to the laws of my country, and in whatever degree I may have infringed upon the provisions thereof, am ready to meet the penalty.

"I am the husband of more than one living wife and the father of a number of children by each of them. The most of my children have arrived at their majority.

"I respectfully submit to this Court that the marriage covenant that I entered into with each of my wives was made at a time when there existed no law upon the statute books which made an offense of the plural marriage relations as contemplated in our religion, and that we entered those marriage relations and made those marriage covenants with the most profound conviction that we were obeying the law of God. Furthermore, from the time we made those sacred covenants to the present, we have sustained the most devout reverence for the sanctity and divine origin of that law, and we have not designedly placed ourselves in conflict with any of the laws of our adopted country in embracing this cardinal doctrine of our religion.

"Your honor can readily conceive my discomfiture and that of my wives when we learned that Congress had enacted what is known as the "Edmunds law," which not only subjected us to political disabilities, but also forbade us the right to live together as we had done for so many years. By this new law we are made transgressors and deprived of many of the privileges of our citizenship; and, while I consider this a harsh law, yet it does not, as I understand it, nor as I understand it to be construed by the Courts, require that I shall disown the mothers of my children as my wives, or abandon them to the charity of an unsympathizing world.

"I expect to remain under the political disabilities placed upon me, but I have so arranged my family relations as to conform to the requirements of the law, and I am now living in harmony with its provisions in relation to cohabitation, as construed by this Court and the Supreme Court of the Territory, and it is my intention to do so in the future until an overruling Providence shall decree greater religious toleration in the land."

In addition to this statement Bishop Sharp promised that he would not only only keep the law himself, but that he would not advise others to violate them.

This action has been declared to be cowardly and a betrayal of sacred covenants, by the News, the church organ. In referring to it the News says:

"We now lay down the incontrovertible proposition that no man can occupy the two positions in the issue. To assume that he can is no more reasonable than to maintain that a man can hold both the affirmative and negative position on any question at the same time. There is no neutral zone, and a person must take up his post on one side of the line or the other."

It further appears that the News seems to interpret that the conditions of Mr. Sharp's obedience to the law are that such obedience to the law is to be according to the "interpretation of the courts." These are stated by the News to be out of the question thusly: "Such conditions are utterly incompatible with the most sacred obligations of the Latter Day Saints."

To us it seems abnormally strange that in a country which was chosen of God as the one in which to plant a church, and permit its completest development, it could ever transpire that an obedience to the law should be incompatible with the sacred obligations of that church. This is to impugn directly the foresignt and foreknowledge of God; a most disastrous thing for Latter Day Saints to do. If God knew, at the time he commanded the church to observe the law of the land until Christ should come, that the church would finally be brought into conflict with the national laws, by reason of commands which he would give, and which he then designed to give, it was the refinement of subtile double dealing and cruelty so far as the moral nature of the people so commanded to observe the law was concerned.

It is useless to attempt to deny the conclusion that the Lord intended that the church should be established and continued unto its final triumph under the ægis of the American National Government; whether that government might be in the hands of Whigs or Tories, Republicans or Democrats. And in complete compatibility with this design is the command to observe the national law. God knew then as he knows now, that the domestic relation of husband and wife, under the genius of the American Government, according to the constitution and laws of all the states, was monogamic; and it was and is in harmony with this idea of knowledge on his paft that the command was given: "thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart and cleave unto her and none else;" thus making the constitutional provision of the church on this subject to conform to the institutions prevailing, and likely to continue in the land where the church was established.

We believe it to be sound common sense, and that it will ultimately be declared to be good law, that citizens of one, or several of the United States, can not remove into territory belonging to all the States, and there set up practices and enact laws, either in contravention of the laws of the States, or contrary to the genius of the institutions of the country, and those citizens be permitted to persist in those laws and practices under the fostering care of the Government.

For the reasons above recited among others, we are prepared to commend the action of Bishop John Sharp in stating to the Court that he accepts the logic of the situation and will abandon the acts construed to be a violation of the law, and will advise others to do likewise. For the same reasons we think the censure directly, or impliedly cast upon Bishop John Sharp by his brethren of the Deseret News, is decidedly improper and unjust; and if it has any effect at all upon the Bishop it will either arouse his indignation at such treatment from his compeers against which he will stoutly remonstrate within the ranks; or it will exasperate him and men who think upon the subject as he does in the Mormon Church and drive them out of the ranks in similar fashion as Tullidge, Godbe, Harrison and others have been.

But as we opine that the News is the church partizan whip, we shall expect to hear the lash sing and the cracker to snap over the backs of recalcitrant members, so long as the present policy continues in the church in Utah.

Correspondence.

MALAD CITY, Idaho, September 28th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—Bro. Luff and myself left Bozeman on the 21st and reached Stuart, Deer Lodge Valley, the 22d. Bro. Isaac Harris at once circulated notice of meeting in the school-house, just north of the Stuart station, and at candle lighting we were met by a small audience; larger, however, than from the shortness of the notice we had expected. I spoke to them with fair liberty upon the plan of salvation, and was listened to quite attentively.

The next day Bro. Harris walked to Willow Glen, some four miles nearer to Anaconda, the town where the smelting works of the Anaconda mines of Butte are located, and gave notice to Bro. John Eardly of a meeting to be held there that night. Bro. Eardly and others, former members with Elder Joseph Morris, at Weber, circulated the news; the result was that when we reached the school house there was a goodly company present. Elder Wm. James, whom we understand is in charge of a few members of the former followers of Canaan, (George Williams, now deceased), was present and led in the singing of our opening hymn. - A good feeling prevailed, and we enjoyed fair liberty in showing the position occupied by the Reorganization. Bro. Eardly at the close informed us that he was of the opinion that there were not more than a half dozen present, who were not now, or had been connected with some phase of the latter day work. We think no one misunderstood the views we stated.

From Stuart, Bro. Harris, with his wife and daughter, took us over the "Hump" to Butte, a mining town of some sixteen thousand inhabitants, located in the hollows and on the sides of a mountain, near six thousand feet above sea level. Bro. E. M. Bowen, whom we went to see, had gone by train to Stuart to meet us; so that we had to wait all day for his return. In the meantime we went out to walk and view the city, when we met, very unexpectedly to us, G. E. Maule, of the business firm of G. E. Maule & Co., provisions and grocerles, on Park street. He invited us to his store, where he introduced us to his brother and partner, David. These young men are the sons of Bro. and Sr. Donald Maule, of Magnolia, Iowa; and you can well imagine what pleasure it was to meet them in a city where we thought we knew no one only Bro. Bowen. G. E. at once secured a carriage and drove with us over a large part of the city and environs, showing us the various mines, and giving information concerning them, as suggested by his own thought, or our questions. It was both enjoyable and instructive; and we were much pleased with the kind attention shown us.

In the evening Bro. Bowen returned, and we had a pleasant evening with himself, family, a Bro. Powd and wife, and one or two others. We sang the songs of Zion, and at an hour for retiring, bent the knee in prayer together.

We decided not to make an effort to preach in Butte, because we could only speak once according to our time; and so contented ourselves with the visit.

We left Butte in the evening of the 25th, and reached Malad City, whence I now write, on Saturday evening the 26th. Here we found appointments for Sunday 27th awaiting us. These we filled in the Court House, to small audiences for the morning and afternoon services, but a full house for the evening. Bro. Luff, at Bro. John Lewis' suggestion, took the morning service, and I the two others. Both enjoyed a good degree of liberty. One thing that affords some pleasure is, that at the close of the day's services we were assured by Bro. Lewis that the topics treated upon had been made the subject of inquiry by some anxious to hear our views. We were apparently both led to the discussion of things needful to be explained here. A decided compliment to one of the discourses was paid by a young man, who stated to Bro. Jenkins that it was the first sermon that he ever listened to that he stayed to hear to the end. At the close of the services, by request, meetings were appointed for to-night, to-morrow night, and the night after,—all of which we shall try and attend to.

Bro. Luff is suffering from slight cold; I am in fair health.

Parties over from Samaria, eight miles away across the valley, attended all day yesterday; some were down from the Elkhorn, and sister Eliason and son were over from Soda. Invitations are extended through Bro. John Lewis from some places in Cache Valley, which we shall try and fill. We leave, however, Thursday for Salt Lake City, and the conference called by Bro. R. J. Anthony.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 2d.—Bro. Luff and I reached here last night, after spending the last four days of September with the Saints at Malad City. The chapel was not ready for dedication, so in compliance with Bro. R. J. Anthony's call for conference, we came on here. We had excellent audiences on Sunday, and each succeeding evening; Bro. Luff and I speaking alternately. Those present were attentive and respectful; and we are assured our efforts were not in vain. Certainly I never enjoyed greater liberty than on Sunday and Tuesday evenings. Bro. Luff seemed to have freedom, though troubled a little with a cold.

Yours,

JOSEPH SMITH.

NEWTON, Iowa,

September 30th, 1885. Bro. Blair:-I have had no preacher but my Herald for many years, not since brother Gurley, Senior, preached at Stump Grove. I live seven miles south-west from Darlington, and five miles north-east from Shullsburg, Wis. I would be very glad if an Elder would call and see me, if they were passing through Darlington or Shullsburg. There is no branch of the church no where around. I sent my name as belonging to North Freedom Branch, but I don't know whether it is right, and I want my name in some branch. I joined the church in England in 1840. I wrote in my last letter how I was afflicted; both my arms are almost useless, besides I am very deaf. I will be seventy years old on Christmas Dav. I should be very glad if I could meet with the Saints as I used to in England; but I have not had the same chance to meet with them here. I came to America in 1845, so you see the Herald is all my preacher. When I heard brother Joseph had gone to Washington sister Harker of Elk Grove told me about the Herald, and I have been taking it ever since. I am firm in the faith.

Your sister in Christ,
Susan Matthews.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—I thought I would write a few lines to let the Saints know that I am a full believer in the great latter day work. I found this gospel about six years ago. I can say like many of our dear brothers and sisters, I know this is the true church of the living God. I thank my heavenly Father, that in his infinite mercy he ever called after me, and brought me to the light and the truth of his gospel. I ask the people of God every where to pray for me, that I may be able to preach the gospel, for I love the cause. Your brother,

S. Shearer.

On the way to Anna,
July 19th, 1885

Dear Bro. Joseph. - Not knowing whether we can reach Papeete before the mail-ship leaves for America or not, I write a few lines by this vessel which will go to Papeete by August 1st, by a circuitous route. We were at Koukura when I wrote last. We went from there to Manitu, where I baptized a number and reorganized the branch. Went from there to Takaroa, where I baptized some, and organized a new branch. From there to Tapoto, where I found two branches-one claiming to be the original Church of Jesus Christ, as established by Grouard; the other, while calling themselves "Israel," professed the faith of the church. I formed them into one branch, after showing them that while the people who belong to the church may be Israelites, or Gentiles, or male and female, bond or free, the name of the church is that of the Lord Jesus

There has been quite a division caused throughout all these Islands, on a most trifling subject. Nelson introduced the singing of three hymns during a meeting; namely, one hymn, then reading of the Scriptures, then prayer, then another hymn, then preaching, then a final hymn and prayer; while Elder Grouard taught, one hymn at the beginning, and one at the close of the meeting. I tell them that God has never considered that matter of sufficient importance to give a revelation or law concerning it, and that each branch can settle that matter as suits their fancy. As I wrote months ago, I repeat now, with fourfold assurance, that these people are merely grown up children; a dozen lines would not convey my meaning better. In stature and age they are men and women, but otherwise they are children.

We left Tapoto about ten days ago, and after calling at several Islands, where we did not land, but with which the vessel had business, we reached Hikueru, where I baptized some; and called after at Taenga Maratua, Katihu and Raraka, only a few hours at each place, and now we are nearing Anaa, where there are some two hundred or more of people who were brought into the church by Elder Grouard, and Elders whom he ordained.

I have some native Elders at work, missionarying where I can not go yet. I have had no mail since the first of April; have not seen conference minutes yet.

I wish you to say for me in the Herald that I heartily endorse the position of E. Stafford in his article on the Doctrine and Covenants. It is sound and sensible. A matter revealed or written by the inspiration of the Spirit of God, must be comprehended by the Spirit. No man can properly understand the things of God unless he has the Spirit of God. And all men who have that Spirit will understand Spiritual things alike. Whether A B or C has the Spirit, can be determined by the rule of judging a tree by its fruits. I can not determine whether this or that one possesses the Spirit in any other way, than by knowing whether he brings forth the "fruits of the Spirit." A man who does "the will [the whole will] of the Father," lives by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God, is in a condition to know the doctrine of God, otherwise there is no guarantee given of knowing. A man who doubts, or disbelieves a proposition, or refuses to obey a command to which a promise is attached, will hardly be able to know whether the proposition is true, or obtain the favor, privilege, or blessing promised.

I would like to say also that I had read the revelation concerning receiving Joseph's words as if spoken by the mouth of God many times in the past eighteen years, yet I never once understood it as Bro. Z. H. G. does. I have always understood, and do now understand, that it meant that what was spoken by Joseph by the inspiration of God, was of as much force, and authority; was as much the word of God as if God was personally present and spoke out of his own mouth. The same idea is taught in section , paragraph , of the Doctrine and Covenants. Joseph himself could not have understood the case as Bro. G, does, or he would not have taught that revelations should be tested before being received, but would have demanded that his ipse dixit should be received without question by the church. For God to confer that power upon a man would be the same as making him equal to himself as far as making laws and directing the affairs of the church is concerned, and would lead to a conflict of authority; for Joseph might teach differently to the Almighty, especially when his own (uninspired) words were equal in authority with God's own words. Reason and revelation both teach me that what the Lord meant was, that Joseph as his mouth-piece must be regarded as if he, himself, spoke personally-the agent to be received as the principal, or as the employed, or as Jesus told the Apostles, that those who received them received him, and not only him, but the Father who sent him. I do not think that the revelation referred to will bear any other interpretation law-

Anaa (Chain Islands), 200 miles East of Tahiti, July 26th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph .- I write a few lines to-day as I may get a chance to send it to Papeete in a few days. I wish you to send me by return mail a certificate of appointment as President of the South Sea Islands Mission. It should read:-"Missionary in charge of the South Sea Islands Mission; including the Society, Paumotu, and Chain Islands." I lost my other lately, by it being blown overboard while on the way to this place. I want you to send me a copy of Voice of Warning, and a copy of Bro. Ells' pamphlet. I do not know when I will get to see the Herald, as I may not reach Papeete before September 1st, and if the mail was sent to me it might not find me. It is not extremely convenient to live on these Islands, as regards mail matters; you are not sure of your letters going safely to Papeete, and of being brought to you without being disturbed or forgotten. Some are curious to know what is written to America, especially the spies and tools of Catholic priests; yet I am willing to finish my work here, as soon as I can believe it to be the Lord's will. I came here because I knew it was my duty, and I stay for the same reason. It is positively necessary that there should be a white missionary here in charge of this mission. No native is competent.

Many here were baptized in 1841, '42, '43 and '44, and never forsook the faith, nor were cut off. Some are fearful of receiving me, and at the same time fearful of rejecting me lest they should in turn be rejected by me. But they are getting over their scare quite fast, and in a few days will understand the matter, I think. There are some old grey-haired men here who were baptized forty-two and forty-three years ago. The have never been taught Polygamy, nor any of the specialties of Brighamism. But they are not fully informed on church history. Elder Grouard was quite young when he came here, and I guess was not informed much beyond the first principles.

Tell Bro. Blair to not let the Advocate drop. I would not take one hundred dollars for my back numbers for the past six years, if I could not replace them. They are simply invaluable.

I would like to have the history of your father, written by your grandmother. I have none, and it contains some information that I want.

If I get the five branches here into the Reorganization we will soon have all the rest, and if so, we will have fully twenty-five branches, in these parts, and about one thousand members, or more.

We are well as usual. Hope you are all well at home and in the office.

> Your brother in Christ, THOMAS W. SMITH.

Bro. Blair :-- The camp-meeting held at Wheeler's Grove created quite a stir, and many have become more familiar with our doctrine. Nearly all express themselves well satisfied, and say they never heard better preaching. I have preached south of the grove since the meeting; had fair congregations. Some that attended the camp-meeting came four miles every night to hear. Last Sunday I preached the funeral sermon of brother and sister Needham's babe-house full. Held services again at night. Certainly, the people are willing to come and hear the gospel. We think this meeting has had a good effect, to say the least, upon the minds of those who are honest.

Tabor, Oct. 6th .- Bro. Brand has preached some six discourses in Tabor of late, and we trust it will have an effect for good. Our meetings at the Gaylord and Ross School-houses, were well attended on Sunday last. Love to yourself and all in the office. Yours in bonds, HENRY KEMP.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, October 2d, 1885.

Bro. Blair: - Bro. Joseph and I returned to the city last night, feeling well and encouraged. We find the District Court with its hands full, and dispatching business promptly. The Brighamite conference is to be at Logan again. It is sad, indeed to see a confiding people deserted by their leaders in the hour of their worst extremity. I feel sorry for them; but that which becomes "a law unto itself," need not expect protection from law outside of itself, especially when proclaiming hostility to it. May God open their eyes to an appreciation of the exact situation, and be glorified in their deliverance.

I see by the Herald that Bro. F. B. Moyers, of Conejos, Colorado, has applied for extra Advocates. He gets twenty-six, but change his numto fifty, if he can get them circulated. They can go where we are denied admission, very often, and may God bless their visits.

Bro. Joseph is being served like his Master. He is abused most by those to whom he offers the greatest good. His heart of mercy and his hand of blessing are alike despised and rejected. George Q. Cannon, in the Juvenile Instructor, gives us a "send off," as church "scavengers," whose mission is the removal of filth and offal from their church, thus leaving it improved and purified. If he and his fellows only believed that, or were honest in stating it, they would never have taken the pains to denounce us; but would have hailed our approach and labor with delight. They have learned that there is nothing in the doctrine of the Reorganization, that possesses attraction for any but the good and true, and thus they resort to the old method of besmearing, not the body this time, but the reputation.

If God is with us, we shall succeed, and if He is not on our side, we do not want success. The consciousness that He is directing us makes us willing to continue until his pleasure shall be manifest in ordering a halt.

I will not give you any details of our travels, for Bro. Joseph attends to that. We have not yet mapped out our course for the future. Conference convenes to-morrow. Bro. Joseph's movements are approved by the few who are with us in faith. As a man of God he is admired and loved wherever known, and not more so by any than his asssociate in this field of labor, and your brother,

JOSEPH LUFF.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-I wish to bear my testimony, that I know that I am in the Kingdom of God. And I do rejoice that I ever found the true Church of God, after so many years of weary search. I know for myself that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true Church of God. If we as God's children live as we are taught from the Scriptures, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, we surely will have all that is promised to the honest in heart. I am doing all I can for the Master here. When I first came here the people would not hear me, for they said I was a Utah Mormon. But, thank our heavenly Father, they are now coming to the light. I have the privilege of the school-house every fourth Sabbath in each month. The Lord is able to teach those who seem to be blind to all truth. I wish to say to the Saints that, in this county, many fine homes can be made on Government and Rail Road lands, in small and large tracts, as will suit the purchaser. My address is Box Elder post office, Larimer county, Colorado.

Yours in gospel bonds,

W. H. BARRETT.

Editor Herald:-Since you were here, my father (aged seventy-five years) and my youngest brother have arrived from England, and are staying with me. I am pleased to say that since their arrival they have seen the necessity of complying with the everlasting gospel, and it made my heart glad when one evening I had the pleasure of uniting my father, brother and eldest son, (three generations), to the church, through the waters of baptism. Whilst writing home to my friends in England my father desired me to tell them that he never heard the fullness of the gospel until he came to America. He, with my brother, were greatly blessed at the time of their confirmation. Sister Censer, during the confirmation was in vision, and saw my wife (who has been dead over four years) enter the church, and walk through the aisle, and lay her hands on my father's head, after which she left the church, going out at the opposite end from whence she came in. There was also the gift of prophecy on both. My brother has been a Captain for three years in the Salvation Army. I am in hopes that the time will speedily come when he will be the instrument in the kingdom of God of doing much good. Since that time I have baptized one more. We are doing the best we can under the existing circumstances. I have a desire to proclain the gospel far and near. I long to see the time come when my hands shall be liberated, and I shall be free. Pray for me, as I feel the need of the prayers of the Saints.

I remain your humble brother, WILLIAM NEWTON.

> CLINTON, Iowa, September 27th, 1885.

Dear Herald: On this beautiful Sabbath evening, a still small voice within, prompts me to pen you a few lines. It has been some time since I wrote for our dear paper, and during that time, God has blessed and strengthened me wonderfully in this latter day work, for which I feel to thank him.

This afternoon, in company with several of the Saints, I visited an aged colored sister here; and my faith was strengthened by her fervent testimony, for she is a valiant soldier in the army of the Lord. Let me give a few words of explanation, and possibly some of the Saints may know her. Her name is Sarah Stebbins. She was baptized by Bro. Chas. W. Wandell, in Norwalk, Connecticutt, about 1840, and with a company of Saints, under the direction of Bro. Wandell came overland to Nauvoo, in the Spring of 1841. She describes vividly that journey, the trials and sufferings, also the blessings and rejoicing on the way; their reception at the "Mansion House" by "Bro. Joseph and Sr. Emma," and the many seasons of rejoicing held there. Indeed, as she recalled the events of the persecution of the Saints, the attempts on the life of Joseph, and the final massacre of Joseph and Hyrum; the dreadful time following, and then the perplexity as to who should lead the Church. She seemed to live the time over again; her soul seemed on fire in her emotion, and there was not a dry eye in the house. All felt that God had been good indeed to her, in thus prolonging her life, and keeping her firm and unshaken in the gospel tidings as taught by Joseph the Seer. She had never united with any of the factions, but remained true to the faith. She, in company with many many others, went as far as Council Bluffs, on the way to Utah, but she says, "we had a meeting and God told us by the power of his Holy Spirit, that Brigham was leading us from the narrow way;" and she and her husband returned to Keokuk, where her husband died firm in the faith and fully assured that God in his own time would raise up a prophet from the seed of Joseph. She has never found any of like precious faith, until she found us, at Clinton. We are all rejoiced at thus finding so staunch "an old-time Saint." If any of the Saints knew her at Nauvoo and would like to hear more from her, I would be pleased to hear from them, and such may be sure it will be of interest to her as well as my-

We had a splendid session of conference here the 5th and 6th of this month. The Saints rejoiced at having so able a defender of the gospel as Bro. R. Etzenhouser, and the fnterest he awakened here has not abated; for there are those that are investigating the work, and ere long, I think, will be united with the church. We are to have a nice new church here. It is to be commenced next week, and we hope to have it finished by the next session of conference, which convenes at Clinton the 5th and 6th of December.

I love to read the letters in the Heruld. It does me good to hear of God's blessings to his people; and my earnest prayer is that he will continue to bless them, and that the work may roll on, until all may come to a knowledge of Christ. Dear Saints, let us all prove faithful, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints;" and above all let us "pray for one another;" for we need the prayers of the just, to lighten and help us on our way; and how true is

"How sweet the peace that all have felt, Who at his feet have humbly knelt: Who cast on him their every care, _ And call on God in faith and prayer."

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am your sister in Christ,

CARRIE E. BRIGGS.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., September 24th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:-I will write you a few lines to let you know that I am still alive in the body, and growing stronger in the faith from day to day. I speak freely of our faith and hope to all who will hear. I have visited the few Saints who live in Sedalia. In June last I had a very pleasant visit with the Saints in Hannibal. I made the aquaintance of Bro. Jno Taylor in 1863, and I had not seen him again till last June. I went on purpose to see him, and I found a warm welcome from him and family and all the Saints. I was with them in meeting on the Sabbath, and in prayer meeting, and I found them earnest and strong in the faith, and respected by their neighbors who are not in our faith. A pure and upright life will always command respect from the thoughtful. I will go to St. Louis this week or next. I want to meet with the Saints. It does me so much good where I find them earnest and faithful in the work of the Lord. We have had a three weeks' revival in our fashionable S. Methodist church. A Rev. Mr. Godby from Ky. He denounced dead churches and fashionable Christians. He said such members and churches were going down to hell. He asked me to pray with them and for them, and I did with good freedom. He said my prayers did much good. I gave him the "Epitome" of our faith, and he said I was a Christian and had the Spirit of God with me. I could pray with them earnestly when they were seeking after a purer and a higher spiritual life; but when they came to the mourners seat and round the altar, I felt pity for them and prayed to our Savior to send them the true light. But I am afraid many would not receive the light if it were sent them. But there is a great awakening among the sects.

We have much to thank God for that he has spoken unto us in these last days, and that we have been brought out of darkness into light. O, that the reproach of Salt Lake Mormonism was put away. Bro. Joseph is doing a good work out there. If they do not hear him, they will be without excuse. I am well pleased with the Herald, and the work seems to be growing and improving all over. May God give us more Spiritual power and faith in His promises. had a great desire to go to Utah this summer. I have many dear friends there who yielded to iniquity in obedience to their Priesthood. If they had obeyed the authorized books and the Spirit of God, they would not have been in trouble now. But I could not afford to pay my way out there. * * *

Yours in the Lord. JOHN MCKENZIE.

LIMERICK, Jackson Co., Ohio, September 22d, 1885.

Bro. Blair: - As nothing yet has appeared in the Herald from our brethren of this place concerning the late discussion held between Elder Taylor of the so-called Bible Christians and Elder W. H. Kelley, I take it upon myself to give the results. First, will say, I feel a little ashamed of our brethren here-husband included-for standing back in the shade after having been so elated over the results of the discussion. Each one is able to give a glowing account of it, yet all have failed. However, some have been zealous in declaring the word since; others attending to the affairs of the branch; and all engaged in temporal affairs, which often unfits one for writing; so I will excuse them. In my blundering style I will endeavor to give results as far as we have learned. The Saints with one accord are greatly built up, and are perfectly satisfied with the effort of Bro. Kelley. And to crown our joy, in the closing speech of Bro. Kelley, on the first proposition, while every Saint's heart was lifted to God in prayer that truth alone might prevail, the Spirit of the Lord came upon him then. O, how grand! how glorious! how God-like! With what heavenly power was our glorious cause presented to that people! The ringing words vibrating through every fiber of each individual present; a solemn stillness pervaded the entire audience, and silent tears of gratitude and praise to God coursed down the cheeks of many of the Saints present, because He had honored his truth, His servant, His Saints. I can even yet call up the look of his servant with the power of the Spirit upon him; the look of the Saints filled with praise to the Lord upon their lips; the clasp of the hands of the two sisters that sat near me. It was enough. Our cup was full. I firmly believe that every soul who heard that closing speech believed it, if only for a moment. The speech of our opponent had not in it sufficient to destroy in the truth-loving what had been said. Every stake that had been planted by the affirmative still remained. Our opponent suffered not himself to abuse or vilify the Church, for which we give him honor. His time was mostly used in reading Greek, and telling little foolish tales which caused the audience to roar with laughter. He tried to prove that Matthias was not one of Christ's apostles, letting go many golden moments that he might have been trying to pick flaws in the doctrine set forth by the affirmative. The second day it began in earnest. Elder Taylor presented doctrine in his first speech with full assurance, confident his church would stand the storm. But he reckoned without his host. The lightning of Elder Kellev's argument flashed so brilliant that it stunned him, although he had been warned of it the day previous, by his opponent, and had made answer that a little thunder would accompany it. But if there was thunder at all, it grew weaker and weaker; and before the close of the two days, it had, with its little tales, ceased altogether. Over and over did Bro. Kelley show him and that people, by their own history, and by the word of God, that the Christian Church was built upon the little word "if," and added a "bit," and a "perhaps." Each day the crowd grew larger and more interested. Long before the time to commence every seat was full. At each speech, except the last, the affirmative tried to drive new nails and clinch them; but was forced to witness them drawn out with the prints staring him in the face. In his closing speech he said he had done the best he could, and thought no other man could do better; (so we all thought); and expected to shake hands with Elder Kelley in friendly manner at the close. The Saints extended their hospitality to him, to their ministers and strangers. They are much refreshed, and the Elders are greatly encouraged to break the bread of life. The Christians, we learn, with but few exceptions, think or say Elder Taylor won the prize, yet are silent on the subject; while we learn from influential persons that all not members of either Church say that Elder Kelley gained the day completely. We have all been much encouraged by the visit of Bro. Kelley to this place; pleased with his preaching, his instructions, and his kind deportment towards each one. A visit from him at any time will be highly appreciated. Two more have recently been baptized.

As ever for the truth,

ELLA R. DEVORE.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., October 7th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-At the time of my last communication I was at Elmwood, where I spent a week, and spoke five times in the Christian Church; the attendance was good, and interest excellent. I regretted the necessity of leaving so inviting and promising an opportunity, especially so when it will be remembered that heretofore we have met more or less opposition. The last was untruthful statements by Elder N. B. Alley; however the Oracle, published at Des Moines, by D. R. Lucas, was kind enough to publish my side of the issue. I am not only thankful to the paper, but acknowledge the many kindnesses bestowed by the Christians to me for the past six months. I firmly believe that which we sow we shall also reap; we can not afford to be narrow or selfish. To be frank, free and charitable, does not necessitate the compromise of a single truth. I hope the day is near at hand when the Elders and Saints will not consider it an essential mark of acceptance with God, that we have the ill-will, opposition, and hatred of all who do not belong with us; as like begets its like, it is of paramount importance that we are submissive too, and carry out the instruction, "I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves; be ve therefore wise servants, and as harmless as doves." Our sending and work is the same as those to whom the Savior spake.

My next stop was at Plattsmouth, where I spent a week; spoke on week night at the house of Bro. Philo E. Knapp, the attendance was small; however, I sought to build up and encourage those who came. For the Sabbath the Saints hired a pleasant hall, and for some cause the attendance was not large. Where there is a lack of unity, the work as a general rule drags. The most effectual clog in the way at Plattsmouth is the unwise actions and unbecoming life of some counted as Saints. There is hope for the cause there, and those who will abide in the truth may yet rejoice in the good time coming, when the drift-wood has floated away and has been forgotten. The Spirit that prompted Ham to expose his father's shame and folly, has not yet been abolished from the earth; hence many hearts ache, and the cause suffers by the unwise blazing abroad the short comings and folly of some. The rule to take the one who may be overtaken in a folly or wrong, and tell them of their fault alone, is many times neglected.

I visited the Moroni Branch; through some misunderstanding there was no meetings arranged for, and I passed on to my earthly adode. Spiritually I feel strong in the work, bodily I am slightly under the weather, with a severe cold.

In gospel bonds,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

CITRUS, Los Angeles Co., Cal., September 28th, 1885.

Bro. Blair: The conference of the Southern California District, held at Covina Branch, has just closed. We had an unprecedented spell of hot weather, yet had a good attendance, excellent preaching, and enjoyed the Spirit in power in prayer and testimony meetings, receiving instruction and edification through the gifts of tongues and interpretation, causing our hearts to greatly rejoice in the latter day work. Bre. D. S. Mills was with us, and it did every body good to hear him sound the gospel trump again, with his accustomed power and clearness. Our little branch is in good condition, and I think many are interested, and some near the kingdom. Praying for the welfare of Zion, we remain yours in the one WM. P. PICKERING.

> HEBRONVILLE, Mass., October 6th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:-A word of encouragement is always acceptable from any part of the Lord's vineyard, and I will say in regard to the work here, that the Saints are united, prayerful and zealous; trying to let their light so shine, that it may be seen of men, and thereby they be led to see the beauty of the gorpel as it has been revealed in these last days, and accept of it. Meetings have been held in houses most of the time: lately we hired the G. A. R. Hall, and Brn. Bond, Gilbert, Potter, Whiting and Coombs, have presented the word to the people. Prejudice is removed, and a number are investigating, with a prospect of some being added to the kingdom. We expect Bro. C. Scott to preach in the town next Sunday.

I send the following resolutions adopted by the mission to you, as we desire that the ministry may know how to act in harmony with us.

At a meeting of the members of the Attleboro mission, plans were discussed for forming the mission for active work during the next quarter, that all things may be done in order according to the wisdom given us by God. Elder Charles Coombs of Plainville, President of the mission.

U. W. Greene, Priest, officer in charge. At the meeting the following resolutions were adopted. Thomas Shallcross to procure places of worship, whether house or hall. John Maichington to advertise all meetings held in this town. Sister Mary Braley to act as treasurer. Sister Lizzie Maichington to act as secretary. We ask the traveling ministry to come and help us in the work of spreading the gospel. A fund to be established towards defraying the expenses for a hall, and for the Elders that may come. We respectfully ask our brothers and sisters to help us all they can, both with their money and their talent, so that we may carry on the work in this town. The expenses of the traveling ministry to be paid when they come. We ask the local Elders and officers to come when they can, but they must defray their own expenses, except we otherwise arrange with them. That we meet every Wednesday evening for prayer meeting. All Elders to notify Bro. U. W. Greene when they can come, at least two weeks before hand.

Yours for truth,

II W GREENE

Camp Grounds, near Dow CITY, Iowa, October 8th, 1885.

Bro. D. Dancer:—The weather is fine, the camp increases in numbers daily, the exercises grow more and more interesting and spiritual, and prospects are good that by Saturday and Sunday next the congregations will number thousands. There were fourteen baptisms yesterday, and other candidates have come forward. The Spirit of God is with the Saints in great measure; the gifts of prophecy, tongues, and interpretation, and other gifts abound. The preaching services are of a high order of ability, and excellence in matter. The Saints afe full of joy and gladness, and the session thus far may be truly said to be a love-feast.

Unless I am called back, I shall not expect to reach home till next Monday or Tuesday.

Yours ever,

W. W. BLAIR.

Boston, Mass., October 6th, 1885.

Elder Blair: Our conference at Providence, R. I., was a most excellene one. Brethren W. H. Kelley and C. Scott were there, and their presence, and the word spoken by them, encouraged and edified the Saints, and was convincing to the large numbers who attended who were not of the church. Sunday forenoon prayer and testimony meeting was attended with the gracious influence of the Divine Spirit, melting the large company of Saints to tenderness and tears. And, dear brother, as I looked upon the number of happy faces gathered there from different parts of this district, my mind reverted to the time of our first conference at Fall River, that you called by the revelation of God's will, and felt to say what hath God wrought. While there are yet some things to discourage and impede the progress of the work, there is also much to encourage and strengthen us in the hope of future prosperity. Bro. Kelley is on his way east; he preached two excellent discourses in our hall; we feasted upon the word, and rejoiced in the hope the gospel gives. Our faith was strengthened. My prayer is that God may bless and prosper him in the work. We are glad that Bro. Scott can remain awhile in the district; we expect good will result from his labors. I am still in the faith, and hope to so remain, and be a humble instrument in doing some good in the cause of Christ.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your brother in the gospel,

E. N. WEBSTER.

Summary of News.

Oct. 3d .- At Salt Lake City, Edward Brain was convicted of unlawful cohabitation yesterday, with his latest wife, a Danish girl, testified freely as to their marital relations. He made a long statement to the court, maintaining the truth of his gospel, and said he knew it by direct revelation of God to himself. His covenants were made for eternity. He would stand by them at all hazards. Judge Zane reminded him him that there were two of his wives in this eternal covenant. He spoke about his being already divorced from his first wife, dishonored in her old age, and to talk of this being an eternal covenant under Divine command was blasphemy. The Judge said he was tired of hearing such hypocritical cant, and thereupon sentenced Brain to six months in jail and a $300 fine.

Rains, drouth, and worms have done much damage to cotton and corn in the South.

A large amount of stock has died from hydrophobia in Guthrie County, Iowa.

Oct. 6th.—Five polygamists were sentenced in the Third District Court, Salt Lake City, Utah, yesterday — Isaac Gross, Alfred Best, David E. Davis, Charles Seal, and Andrew W. Coley. All refused to pledge themselves to obey the law, and were sentenced to the full limit of the law—six months imprisonment and $300 fine.

In the Tabernacle yesterday apostle Heber J. Grant said: "Wo be to the Judge who sits on the bench of the Third District Court. We will not stand his abuse much longer. He can not insult honest men and revile virtuous women with immunity by calling them concubines and bastards (a few Sundays ago this apostle loudly proclaimed himself a bastard and gloried it.") The apostle warmly lauded those of the brethren who refused to submit to the law, but bade the court do its worst. He continued: "Judge Zane has taken a course that has made him a coward and unfit to be called a man, and condemnation will fall upon him and the heads of his children. Remember there is a limit, and this limit must soon be reached." His remarks were greeted with a shout of "Amen."

Oct. 9th .- A fire broke out at five o'clock yes. terday morning in the Charter House buildings, a row of thirteen eight-story warehouses in Aldersgate street, London. The flames spread with such rapidity that in a few hours all of the buildings, including their contents, were almost totally destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown. The row was mostly occupied by fancygoods dealers, furriers, toy stores, and printingoffices. One bank was also in the buildings. This institution was the only one that escaped being burned out completely. It was badly damaged, but not destroyed. The firemen had great difficulty in getting the streams from the engines to play on the upper stories of the buildings. Many narrow escapes are recorded, owing to the desperate attempts of the firemen to get at the flames. The damage is estimated at £3,000,000 so far.

The fire was the largest which has occurred in London within the memory of the present generation. The flames spread with phenomenal rapidity, and the firemen attribute this fact to the excessive number of iron girders and posts used in the chief buildings. This iron work expanded and twisted into all manner of shapes, opening great cracks in the floors and walls, through which the flames rushed furiously. The chief officer of the fire brigade, is strongly opposed to the use of iron for architectural purposes, and is making a special report upon to-day's disaster, with the view of urging builders to be more sparing in the use of it.

The buildings destroyed were in a most historic part of the British Capital, and were just east of Charter House square on Aldersgate street. Back of them are the Charter House gardens, and the historic pile itself. The buildings comprising the Charter House are now occupied by the Merchant Tailors' School. Not far from the scene of the fire is Smithfield Marketplace, where the martyrs were burned. St. Bartholomew's church, the oldest sacred edifice in England, is not far away. The buildings destroyed were not part of the Charter House property.

Soon after five o'clock last evening the streetcar strike at St. Louis, Mo., culminated in a riot. The mob, which numbered about 10,000 persons, began work on Pine street, between Sixth and Tenth, and in an extremely brief space of time succeeded in wrecking twenty cars. All the conductors escaped, but a driver who was knocked down and thrown under the wheels can not live. A number of mules were so badly injured that they had to be shot. During the progress of the fight, Superintendent Scullin of the Union Depot line was knocked down. An attempt to secure his assailant brought on a fierce fight between the mob and police, which ended in the triumph of the latter. Over fifty arrests were made while the original outbreak was at its hight, and many more followed in the evening. The mob later on sought other means of wreaking vengeance on the street-car companies, and the entire night proved an exceedingly turbulent one for the city by the big bridge.

PROSECUTIONS OF POLYGAMISTS.

"The brilliant scheme of Brigham Young, Ir, to establish a harbor of refuge in Mexico for "persecuted" Mormons with plural wives does not appear to work well. It will be remembered that he obtained, or declared he had obtained, a grant of land from President Diaz in the northern tier of States of that Republic, where he proposed to colonize those polygamists who were resolved not to submit to the laws of this country, with the design of ultimately transferring the entire Mormon population, or at least that part of them who were indisposed to give up their allegiance to the peculiar doctrine of the church. Now it turns out that the Mexican people do not want them. The Roman Catholic Church, which is the dominant church of that country, is more rigid in dealing with polygamy than any other, and intimations have been made to the Mormons that they had better remain where they are. As the people of Mexico are very peremptory and vigorous in their treatment of unwelcome visitors it is not likely that the Saints will try the experiment of going there

"This reduces the Mormons to an unpleasant predicament. If they go to Mexico they are liable to run foul of the law and the priesthood and to find themselves run out of the country by mob violence if they set up their polygamous practices. If they remain in Utah and continue to defy the law, and the courts enforce the law as vigorously as they are now doing, the polygamists will all sooner or later land in the penitentiary. They have been striking at some pretty high game lately, some of the Bishops and the editor of the Deseret News being among those who find themselves in trouble from their muchmarried proclivities. They are also receiving some very significant advice from Judge Zane, as well as punishment. When Bishop Sharp, who has ten or twelve wives, submitted under protest and announced that he only gave up polygamy until such time as he could practice it legally, he was informed that the Federal officials would see to it that he did not cohabit with more than one wife until that time; and when Bishop Clawson, Brigham Young's son-in-law, who has taken among others some of Brigham's wives, pleaded that the abandonment of his wives would be a hardship, that he would be ostracized by the community, and that he made his marriages in good faith, he also was informed that, while this mght be true, he knew they were unlawful and criminal, and that if his neighbors ostracized him it was only an additional reason for enforcing the law until obedience to it was not looked upon as sufficient ground for ostracism.

"The Mormon leaders will undoubtedly try to escape the law by all sorts of cunning evasions, and some of them may conclude to prefer what they call "martyrdom" to submision, and the church itself will use all its power to save its lustful prerogative. All this, however, is simply the expression of their determination to defy the law. The answer to this is to keep on entorcing the law and sending them to the penitentiary, even if the Government has to build a few more prisons to accommodate the multitude. The Government has at last the whip hand of them, and if it maintains its position it will sooner or later compel them to yield. It is open to them at any time to save themselves by abandoning their lustful If they will not, then they should take the consequences, and there should be no let up in the prosecutions. A vigorous enforcement of the law will bring them to their senses. Some of them have already submitted. It has only been their past belief that the Government would not dare carry out the law to its penalties that has encouraged them to defy it. There are not many of them who prefer the penitentiary to monogamy. Those who do should be accommodated as fast as the courts can send them there."—Chicago Tribune, Oct. 5.

ABOUNDING.

No one can read Paul's writings without seeing the frequent occurrence of the words abound, abounding. There is nothing meager in Paul, everything is large and abounding. His heart is too large to exhort men to love each other—they must abound to it. Every grace, every appeal to a life full of holiness is filled full and overflows.

He applies the thought of aboundingness to giving. "As ye abound in everything—see that ye abound in this grace also." Here is no niggard giving, no bestowing what we can not use, but large and generous giving. It is not simply a giving, but abounding in it. The blessedness of giving has been learned. The spirit that seeks opportunities of doing good dwells here. No deficiencies in the treasuries of the Lord's cause would occur if the churches would get this by heart.

He applies this word to love for each other. "Ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another; we exhort you, brethren, that ye abound more and more!" He exhorts to larger hearts. This abounding love will sweep away all feuds, schisms, enmities, divisions. Little-mindedness and selfishness can not live in this new atmosphere. He praises them for their present tenderness of heart and helpfulness -but he urges them to a larger life and the getting of bigger hearts. He applies the word to Christian activity. "They abound with every good work." Here lies the thought that moved Dorcas and Paul, and every one whose life has been one of usefulness. The spirit of Jesus Christ widens into a life-filling it with larger plans and making the hand one of usefulness. The life may not be conspicuous, but it will enrich the world in its own vicinity. Such a life will not need urging from outside, it will have the motive of aboundingness in it.

Every Christian must abound in hope, Rom. 15: 13. He builds no Doubting Castles, makes no Sloughs of Despond for the believer. He does fill the heart to overflowing with a hope that will put the soul in the Land of Beulah. Is there a good hope in the soul? If the answer comes: Yes, Paul answers: Do not rest in this; abound in it.

Every child of God must abound in holiness, I Thess. 4: I. "We exhort you that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and please God, even as ye do walk, that ye abound more and more." Here is the secret of the real higher life. No one should depreciate a higher life. There is no saint who might not be saintlier, no good man who might not be better. A man who has realized his ideal of the Christian life must have exceedingly small plans. To the mind of Paul the life in Christ stretched out in every direction. Do you please God? If you do, rest not in this, Paul says—but abound in it. Form for yourselves larger conceptions of it—live more devotedly in it.

As Paul looks up to God he sees here abounding love and plans for us. "He hath abounded toward us."—Eph. 1: 8. God's love to us is no stinted thing. And this begets in us a like nature toward God and all duties.

The Pauline conception of the Christian life is that of abounding. To abound is to be full and running over. The Christian is incomplete; he must grow. The Christian is a saint, he must be more saintly. Duties must be done in a large way. The ever growing life will present a widening horizon of a larger life yet to be lived. There are better things to be thought, to be done, better lives to be lived than any Christian man has yet attained to.

GEN. GORDON'S creed was well summed up in these words: "Our mission in life is the government of self; it is not to remedy or rule the world, which is under sentence of condemnation. It is far better to speak a sympathizing word to a poor body than to govern all creation; the latter passes under, the former will remain forever. Therefore I have no great interest myself in vast schemes to better the flesh; I only care for the true self of all, not their coats or dresses. . . . No one should be content to be praised. For me, I assure you I look on it as the bitterest mockery, feel sure it is so, though not meant as such. It is paganism to give or receive praise."

THE TEST.

Is THERE no way to try those who say they are ministers for Christ? Is there no way to test them? I find these questions in an article in Herald of Aug. 29th. In Matt. 28: 19, 20, we find this language: "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things, whatsoever I have commanded you, and Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Here we have the commission that the Master gave to the Apostles, with the promise that he would be with them unto the end, based on the condition, that they taught the people to observe all things he commanded them. How was he with them? We answer, By his Spirit, the Holy Ghost, which he promised. Now we hear him again, saving, "Except a man be born again he can not see the Kingdom of God. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the Kingdom of God."—John 3: 3, 5.

The apostles were those chosen and ordained to preach the gospel and build up the kingdom. This choosing and ordination and giving the Holy Spirit, endued them with power, and authority to preach the gospel, and induct men and women into Christ's kingdom, the kingdom of God. It follows that if these chosen servants went forth to build up the church, that they would build according to instruction received, or the Master would not be with them as promised. Now the question is, how did they build and what did they teach? We turn to Acts 2d chapter. Here we find an audience being instructed by Peter while under the influence of the Spirit, the gift of the Holy Ghost; and in answer to a certain question he says: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, for the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

Here we have manifest the Spirit, the Holy Ghost, by which Jesus was to be with the apostles, promised to all whom God should call. It does not matter in this connection whether called to preach the gospel or called to repentance; they, the called, were to receive the promised Comforter, by which Jesus would be with them to the end of the world. Let us follow these chosen and authorized servants of Jesus a little further in their teaching. In Acts, chapter 8, we find Philip preaching Christ to the people of Samaria. They believed and were baptized, both men and women, and there was great joy in that city. We will now see what the apostles, those who were especially endowed, empowered and authorized by the Lord Jesus Christ, will do. Let the record answer. In verses 14, 15, 16, and 17, we read that Peter and John were sent unto them who prayed and laid their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.

Please bear in mind that these men were to teach the people to "observe all things" that Jesus had commanded them, and then he would be with them "to the end of the world." For further proof that this was their manner of teaching and building, we refer the reader to the 19th chapter of the Acts, verses 1 to 6, where Paul puts to the test certain disciples by asking them the question, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" And when Paul had baptized these he laid his hands upon them and they received the Holy Ghost. Now that we have learned that Jesus was with his servants while they thus taught and practiced, let us inquire what the office work of the Holy Spirit is, that we may learn whether it is received and enjoyed by the ministers in question; for it can not be that it will change in its work, for we are taught by these same ministers that it is a part of the Godhead, and the word of God teaches that God is without change. "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you."—John 14:26. Again, 16th chapter, 26th verse: "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of Truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me."—Again, 17:13: "Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of Truth is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak, and he will shew you things to come.

We learn from these quotations that the work of the Spirit was to teach all things, and bring to memory all things that Jesus commanded, or said, unto them; and when we remember that he only promised to be with them to the end on condition that they taught the people to observe all things that he commanded, we see how very important it was that they should receive this aid. And further, it was to testify of him, and shew them things to come, which would constitute them prophets and witnesses for Jesus.

We learn from the language of the angel to John, Rev. 15:10, that "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." Now for our test. These ministers in question claim to preach the same gospel that was taught by the Lord Jesus and the Apostles, and also claim to preach by the same commission. Let us try them first by the doctrine taught, and ask them, What shall I do to be saved? The answer will be something like this: "Believe on the Lord Jesus; accept him as your Savior and come forward to the altar, and we will pray for you, and you will get religion and forgiveness of sins and the Holy Spirit; then you can be baptized and join the Church." What did Jesus say when asked this question? "Keep the commandments." Matt.

"Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2:38:39. quite a contrast in the answers given, one of men, the other given of God. Men teach that the Holy Spirit is given and remission of sins obtained before baptism; whereas the Lord says, "Except a man be born of water [first] and the Spirit [second] he can not enter into the Kingdom of God. Witness his own baptism; first baptized of John in Jordan, then received the Holy Ghost. (Luke 3:21, 22). Witness also, the Samaritans—baptized first of Philip, then received the baptism of the Spirit through the laying on of hands.

But, says the objector, none but the apostles ever held the right to lay on hands. Ah; but I thought you were preaching the same gospel and by the same commission. That commission authorized those sent to lay on hands, as is abundantly proven by the fulfillment of the promise: "Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." And it follows, logically, that if the ministers of to-day are preaching by the same commission, that the promise is good to them; and if they are teaching the nations to observe all things that Jesus commanded, he will be with them, as he was with the Apostles; and they too, have authority to lay on hands. But the orthodox says, No; that was only for the Apostles in that day." Then we answer, No one in our day can enter the kingdom of God. "But we are born of the Spirit," they say. If so, how, we ask is it manitest? As it was in the case of the people in the day of Pentecost? Or at Ephesus, where they spake in tongues and prophecied? Or in the manifestations of the Spirit as taught by Paul, first Cor. 12 chapter, where he teaches that to one is given the word of wisdom, to another the word of knowledge, to another faith, gifts of healing, working of miracles, prophecy, discerning of spirits, divers kinds of tongues, interpretation of tongues? This is the way the Spirit they were born of manifested itself in those days. Now it seems to us, that men claiming to preach the same gospel, under the same commission, and claiming that God is with them, should teach the same things, build the same way, bring forth the same truits, and, if they do not, we are not bound to receive them as Please turn to the 16th chapter of Mark, 15-18, and read this same commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned; and these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name they shall cast out devils, etc. We have here a command to the Apostles to go and preach the gospel to every creature. We ask, does it extend to our day and time? If not, where do the ministers of our day get their authority to preach? for they tell us that the day of revelation is past, and God will no more speak to man. But if, as some claim, this is the identical command that authorizes them to teach, how much of the commission applies to them?

We have here, besides the command to go and preach, too distinct promises. One is to be realized when we have obtained the last victory, passed the last trial, and reached the pearly gates and re-joice in a complete and full salvation. It was to be the grand and blessed reward for obedience to the gospel! The next promise was to be enjoyed here, and now, and includes the gifts of the Spirit as enumerated by Paul, or some of them at least, and were given as especial helps to Saints. Now, while men claim this commission, and to preach the same gospel under it that Christ and the apostles taught, does God own their work? or is Jesus with them as he promised? In obedience to their teaching do the truly penitent receive the Holy Spirit? and is it manifest in gifts of wisdom, knowledge, tongues, prophecies, etc? or, does the Lord work with them, confirming the word with signs following, as he did when the commission was given, as in Mark 16: 20? If they can not abide the test, are men bound to acknowledge them as the ministers of Christ? They tell us that signs and gifts of the Spirit were for the apostles only, and ceased when the apostles passed away. If that is so, how did they transmit authority to men in our day? It would be absurd to say that the commission that authorized Peter, John or Paul, also authorized all the preachers of the nineteenth century, or any other but themselves only. And further, if these signs and gifts ceased with them, then it follows that Jesus is no longer with them as promised, and that men no longer enter into the kingdom of God, for by this gate they were to enter,-"Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

A CALL TO UTAH.

Dear Friends in Utah: - I feel a deep interest in your welfare, and can truly sympathize with you; and have a great deal of charity for you; for I have been taught from my earliest recollection to believe in the gospel as is has been taught there by Brigham and others of that church; and until within the last ten years, believed that there could not be any other church right but that one. Feeling perfectly satisfied that it originated with God in the beginning through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith, I believed as many as do today, that if they were right at first they must continue right; and believing as I did, that Brigham and all those that were at the head of the church, had been called to their offices through inspiration, that whatever they taught must be inspired; and aithough I had the privilege of reading in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, of the many failures that had been made by those that were in the beginning just as zealous, just as faithful, and just as positive that the Lord was at the helm as we were; for they were inspired in the beginning, and were permitted to have a knowledge for themselves of its truthfulness; and many of them received great manifestations of the power and love of God. So great, that when we read of them now, we often think that if we could have the privilege of enjoying and seeing the great manifestations and testimonies that they received, we would never doubt, or permit men to change our honest convictions in regard to the laws and ordinances, from what they were in the beginning, as they often did, making such great changes, that in a very short time there could be discerned but a small resemblance to the original church; and because of the confidence that the people had in those that were at the head, because they had been inspired at the beginning, they could not tell when the changes were made; or if they did see them, they probably thought as many think to-day in Utah, it must be all right anyway, if those in authority said it was; for they surely ought to know. Never thinking that there would be any danger of going astray, as long as they obeyed the counsel and instructions of those who were in authority; for they were inspired at the beginning, and of course they must always continue the same. How can those who have once enjoyed that blessed Spirit, which emanates from God, with its convictions and evidences of the weakness of man, and his liability to err, put their trust in the arm of flesh. It is because their minds have become darkened through carelessness and neglect of their duties that they owe to God. Little by little they have allowed themselves to be deceived by the cunning and craftiness of men; given way to temptation, again and again, not realizing at the time, that they were really doing wrong, because they had done as those at the head, had counseled them to do, and as they themselves were doing, until that Spirit which all of the faithful children of God are permitted to enjoy, has been withdrawn from them, and they are left in utter darkness. O how great is that darkness. It is far worse for them than if they had never known or seen the light.

Dear friends, I have been brought out of that terrible darkness into the true light, for which I feel continually to thank and praise my Heavenly Father. I testify to you that I have received some of the blessings that are promised to the faithful children of God. I have many times been permitted to enjoy the Spirit of God, and have seen and received many testimonies of the truthfulness of the gospel since I joined the Reorganized Church, which I never enjoyed before; and I testify that the gifts and blessings of this gospel are made manifest in this church as they were in the beginning, in visions, tongues, interpretations, prophecy; and the sick are healed, and the blind are made to see: and all that are honest in heart, and have a desire to know whether the work is true or not, can and do obtain evidences for themselves.

Dear friends, I exhort you to return to the old paths. Humbly seek the Lord in prayer and supplication; ask him for wisdom and understanding, and for his Spirit to guide you. He will then help you to see the true light; and will bless you once more with his Holy Spirit, which brings that perfect satisfaction, comfort, peace and joy, that is worth more than all the riches and honors this world can give. That all the honest in the land of Utah, and in every land, may yet be permitted to see and know for themselves, whether they are right or not, is my humble prayer.

HEAVEN.

WHAT IS IT? AND WHERE IS IT?

In all ages of the world men have differed widely in their ideas of the future. Heaven signifies a place of future happinessall men are seeking happiness—hence the desire to go there. But where is it? What is it like? When will we get there? What will our pleasures consist of? These are questions of importance. Is it to be on the earth? On some near planet? Or is it really "beyond the bounds of time and space?" Would not a realization of its pleasures add greatly to our determinations to go there? To bring it within the scope of our minds, is to give an increasing desire to get there. Much of the success of the Mohammedans may probably be attributed to their vivid and comprehensible description of the future. Heaven to them means a supplying of all earthly wants and desires. All that the mind covets here is promised there. From this, doubtless, arose their wonderful zeal, and unparalleled successes.

The rude Indian also pictures to himself there, in that "happy hunting ground," all that his heart desires here. It has been left for the modern man of letters and supposed knowledge to place heaven entirely out of existence—("beyond the bounds of time and space")—and still assert his desire to go there, and his consequent belief in it. Heaven should not be placed so far off, nor be made so vague, so unreal. Better bring it within reach of our minds, where we can mentally realize some of its joys—where the mind can prospectively enjoy its comforts and obtain rest from the sorrowful, trying scenes of this life, that so constantly beset us. Open the doors and let some of the glorious scenes of our future home be revealed to brighten life's weary journey.

It is clearly taught that the earth will be the final abode of the Saints:—"The meek shall inherit [possess, control,] the earth." How often we think of its glories, and long to see it as it will be then, during that thousand years of uninterrupted reign of our king!

manifest in this church as they were in the beginning, in visions, tongues, interpretations, prophecy; and the sick are healed, and the blind are made to see; and all that Let us view it in the light of prophecy: From two beautiful cities—Zion and Jerusalem,—shall go forth the words of Jesus, and the blind are made to see; and all that magnificence and grandeur may be obtained from seeing the capitals of the na-Grand as they are, their magnificence will sink into insignificance, when compared with the capitals of the world, when the sea is rolled back to the north, (D. C. 108), and the inhabitants are as the sands of the sea in numbers; when the treasures of the whole earth shall flow into it; and those who refuse to contribute for its support, "upon them shall be no rain." Zech. 14:17. It seems that is the means that will be resorted to in order to enforce the law. Bear in mind, our king has all power over death and the elements, examples having already been furnished of that. Who shall build these splendid cities and do this immense labor? Much of it will be done before the king comes. Isaiah says: "The sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, * * * and strangers shall stand and feed your flocks. And the sons of the alien shall be your plowmen and your vinedressers."—Isa. 60:10; 61:5. All kinds of proper work will be carried

It will be clearly seen that this time is after Christ comes, by reading Isa. 60: 19, 20. Who will those "strangers" and sons of the "alien" be? Probably they will be the remnants of the nations that are not consumed at Christ's coming. If that should be objected to on the grounds that all will then be destroyed but the first-born, who of course will be in the city, and if such is a fact, then they will be the heathen nations, and the honorable men of all ages, who, the Doctrine and Covenants says, pages 214 and 155, shall have part in the first resurrection. The only reason that could be urged for honorable men of other generations being allowed to have part in the first resurrection and those in this, not, is this generation will all hear the gospel. But it is quite evident the honorable men of the terrestial glory all have an opportunity of hearing; for it is stated as a reason why they did not obey, was because they were blinded; not because they could not -they were not convinced of its truth. If this statement has reference to past dispensations, it is equally true of this.

So we conclude, that the honorable men of this and all past dispensations, the heathen nations, and those who receive the gospel in the "prison-house," will be those who will dwell upon the four quarters of the earth, in the terrestrial glory. Their numbers are as the sands of the sea, over whom the Saints will reign. That will be the duty of the Saints. Not to live in idleness, or sing on clouds, but to execute the laws of the land; to be the political rulers of the whole earth; and to teach and prepare the people for the next great change, the greatest and the last struggle that will ever be upon this earth.

The promise is, if now, faithful over what is given us, temporal or spiritual, we shall then be made rulers over much. To be officers of King Jesus, when the earth will teem with its millions, peace and plenty abounding on every hand, the curse having been removed, thorns and thistles no more troubling the husbandman, will be no small thing. To be a Saint, is to be great and mighty to do good. rivers, green fields, pleasant groves, and stately dwellings, will everywhere greet the eye, while songs of joy and praise will fill the air with sweet melody. No sorrow; no pain or sickness there, all will be peace and love; all of one mind; kindred spirits after long separation will there meet; hearts that have long sorrowed for each others' love will there dwell in glad unison no more to tremble at parting; no dark forbodings of coming evil will throw a shadow over that joyous life. O, hasten! glorious day! The knowledge of God shall then cover the earth, by which we will see the folly of wrong doing. The Saints' life within those cities is worth striving for.

We now begin to realize the necessity for railroads and telegraph systems. An immense amount of earth's produce must flow into those cities, and a vast amount of travel and traffic will necessarily be, when the earth is ruled by its capitals. All useful, wonderful inventions are heralds of the approaching day, of power and glory. Those whom the King chooses to execute his laws will, of course, partake of his power. Think of being an officer of such a king! We sometimes envy the officials of our land their position when we see them riding in their superb carriages, or rolling along in Pullman Palace Cars, or living in their stately dwellings surrounded with all the comforts that wealth can give. But if these petty princes and rulers can give such favor, how much greater will our king do for His servants? It is written, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Ye who toil and labor now under poverty's oppressive hand will soon enjoy all good you are now deprived of. Poverty will not always be your lot. Every man shall sit under his own vine and fig tree. "My people shall long enjoy the work of their hands.

But who will those favored ones be? Those who are now doing the work of the King, who are preparing the earth for his coming. His work is, and will then be, to make men happy. If our desires are to do likewise, he will choose us; now is the time he is proving us. All would willingly serve him then. "If the master of the house had known in what watch the thief would come he would have watched." If the Saints knew or could fully realize these things, they would prepare for so great an event. But by faith we must walk. His servants must be filled with love for the people, as He is, or he will not let us serve him then. Any other desire than the good of the people must not actuate us. If any other should, we can not reign. The same desires we then will have. The change sires we then will have. that then takes place will not change our desires; but only increase our abilities. "He that is filthy let him be filthy still." If now we love to do good, so will we then." O, happy day, hasten on! Yet a little while and the dark, silent tombs must open at the command of our King fand our loved ones come forth; not as they were laid away, out of our sight, worn out with old age and the cares of life, but radiant with joy, and in the bloom of perfection. What a meeting this will be! Trials all over; toils all ended; and victory won. A thousand years before us, with those we love around us!

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 19. BY S. F. W.

THE later books not otherwise lost were destroyed by Aztecs and Spaniards. coatl an Aztec sovereign destroyed many of the Toltec books. "His aim was, probably, to extinguish among the people all memory of the previous times." Such things have been done with similar motives, we know, in other countries, by successful usurpers and conquerors. We learn from Spanish writers that a still greater destruction of the old books was effected by the more ignorant and fanatical of the Spanish priests, who were established in the country as missonaries, after the conquest. There is record of a great conflagration under the auspices of Bishop Zumarraga, in which a vast collection of these old writings was consumed. Las Casas says "many were burned at instigation of the monks, who were afraid they might impede the work of conversion.

These repeated attempts to obliterate the former beliefs of the previous ages, is a good explanation of the difficulty of proving directly that Judaism was ever the prevailing religion of America.

Sahagun gives a history of a colony who came from the east and located in Guatemala, having landed at Panuco. They had wise men and prophets for leaders. After they were settled part of their wise men and their god re-embarked and returned to the place from which they came, leaving these words to those left behind: "Know that our god commands you to remain here in these lands, of which he makes you masters, and gives you possession. He returns to the place whence he and we came, but he will come back to visit you when it shall be time for the world to come to an end; meantime you will await him in these lands, possessing them and all that is contained in them, since for this purpose you came hither; remain therefore, for we go with our god. Thus they departed with their god," &c.

This written tradition is doubtless the origin of the faith held by the Aztecs, who thought Cortez and his men agents from this departed divinity. It seems like a confused account of Christ's departure and promise of return. The most important historian of ancient Mexico is Ixtlilixochitl, son of the last king of Tezcuco "from whom he inherited all that were saved of the records in the public archives."

I will now give his history from Bancroft's translation: "At the end of the first stage of the world or the 'sun of waters,' the earth was visited by a flood which covered the loftiest mountains. After the re-peopling of the earth by the descendants of a few families who escaped destruction, the building of a tower as a protection against a possible future catastrophe of similar nature, and confusion of tongues and consequent scattering of the population-for all these things were found in native traditions by Catholic ingenuityseven families speaking the same language kept together in their wanderings for many years; and after crossing broad lands and seas, enduring great hardships, they reached the country of Tlehue Tlapalan, or Old Tlapalan, which they found to be fertile and desirable to dwell in. The second age, the 'sun of air,' terminated with a great hurricane which swept away trees, rocks, houses and people, although many men and women escaped, chiefly such as took refuge in caves which the hurricane could not reach. After several days the survivors came out to find a multitude of apes living in the land; and all this time they were in darkness, seeing neither the sun nor moon. The next event recorded, although Veytia makes it precede the hurricane, is the stopping of the sun for a whole day in his course, as at the command of Joshua, in the mythology of the old world. . . . Next occurred an earthquake which swallowed up and destroyed all the Quinames or giants—at least all who lived in the coast regions, together with many of the Toltecs, and of their neighbors the Chichimecs. After the destruction of these Philistines, "being at peace with all this new world, all the wise Toltics, both the astrologers and those of other arts, assembled in Huehue Tlapalan, the chief city of their dominion, where they treated of many things. The calamities they had suffered and the movements of the heavens since the creation of the the world, and of many other things, which on account of their histories having been burned, have not been ascertained, further than what has been written here; among which they added the bisextile to regulate the solar year with the equinox, and many other curiosities, as will be seen in their tables and arrangement of years, months, days, weeks, signs, and planets, as they understood them.

One hundred and sixteen years after this regulation or invention of the Toltec calender, "the sun and moon were eclipsed, the earth shook, and the rocks were rent asunder, and many other things and signs happened, though there was no loss of life. This was in the year CeCatli, which the chronology being reduced to our systems, proves to be the same date when Christ our Lord suffered."

"Three hundred and five years later, (A. D. 338), when the empire had been long at peace, Chalcatzin and Tlacamentzin, chief descendants of the royal house of the Toltecs, raised a revolt for the purpose of deposing the legitimate successor to the throne. The rebellious chiefs were after long wars driven out of their city of Tlachicatzin in Huehue Tlapalan, with all their numerous families and allies. They were pursued by their kindred of the city or country of Tlaxicoluican for sixty leagues, to a place discovered by Cecatzin, which they named Tlapallancongo, or 'little' Tlapalan. The struggle by which the rebels were conquered lasted eight years—or thirteen years according to Veytia—and they were accompanied on their forced migration by five other chiefs. The departure from Huehue Tlapalan seems to have taken place in the fifth or sixth century.

They remained at Tlapalan Congo three years, and toward the end of their stay the seven chieftains assembled to deliberate whether they should remain there permanently or go farther. Then rose a great astrologer, named Hueman, or Huematzin, saying that according to their histories they had suffered great persecutions from heaven, but that these had always been followed by great prosperity; that their persecutions had always occurred in the year Ce Tecpatl, but that year once passed, great blessings ensued; that their trouble was a great evil immediately preceding the dawn of a greater good, and consequently it did not behoove them to remain so near Moreover his astrology their enemies. had taught him that toward the rising sun there was a broad and happy land, where the Quinames had lived but so long a time had now passed since their destruction that the country was depopulated; besides the fierce Chichimecs, their neighbors, rarely The planet penetrated those regions. which ruled the destinies of that new country yet lacked many years of carrying out its threats, and in the meantime they and their descendants, to the tenth generation might enjoy a golden and prosperous country. Again the threatening planet did not rule that nation, but that of the giants, so that possibly it might do no great injury even to their descendants. He advised that some colonists be left here to people the country, become their vassals, and, in time, to turn upon their enemies and recover their native land and original power. These and other things did Hueman counsel, and they seemed good to the seven chiefs, so that after three years were passed or eleven years from the time when they left Huehue Tlapalan they started on their migration. * * * After long wanderings and many stoppings they established their capital in Tollan. Their stay in Tulancingo completed an age, or one hundred and four years since the departure from their country. According to Ixtlelxochitl the Toltecs reached Anahuac in the sixth century, or according to Veytia and others who have attempted to reconstruct his chronology near the end of the seventh

The tradition of the Toltecs, continues Bancroft, affords in itself no sufficient data from which to locate accurately Huehue Tlapalan, their most ancient home in America.

The name is interpreted as ancient 'red land, or land of color.' Pedro Alvorado writing from Santiago, or Old Guatemala to Cortes, in 1524, announces his intention to set out in a few months to explore the country of Tlapalan, "which is in the interior fifteen day's march from here. It is pretended that the capital is as large as Mexico." This indicates that at the time of the conquest the name was still applied to a region which may correspond very well to Honduras, Peten, or Tabasco. Ixtlilxochitl mentions Tlapalan, a province which lies toward Honduras. Brosseur says the the name applied to northern Guatemala, and that Tlapalancongo was Tlapalancingo. There is nothing on the northwest coast to answer to the description of Tlapalan or the other places above mentioned. All the features of this tradition seem to represent a vague memory of events already familiar to us, as having occurred in the central region, in the Votanic empire of the Tzendal traditions; in the Xibalba, Paxil, and Tulanzuiva, or seven caves, of Quiche record; and especially in the Tamoanchan and Sonacatepetle of the annals gathered by Sahagun.

The Toltecs went out from Huehue Tlapalan, which is equvilent to Xibalba. After their migrations of 104 years they returned to the original locality in Central America. The Chichimeos were their associates from first to last, showing that what was called Toltec was continental. So Chichimec can be interchanged for Toltec and the seven caves from which they came is interchangeable with Hue Tlapalan, and the latter with Tamoanchan, Tulan Amaquemecan, and probably all with Xibalba. The evidence points toward the Central or Usumacinta region as the most ancient home of the civilization we are considering.

I shall suppose this flight included the land of the mounds in the region of the Mississippi basin, and that it was a continental war, in which the old civilization was obliterated, that it was essentially the same strife that was begun in Peru, and the eleements of the strife were the same with the exception that the Jewish worship of one party had been exchanged for the Christian. The other party were the old foes, the sun worshipers and masons. This latter term I use in the sense of an oathbound secret order, and use the term only because others have furnished it for me, though some other name would otherwise have suited me. Mrs. Plongeon in Harper, writing of Uxmal says "The building on the top consists of three rooms very interesting, for they contain certain symbols pertaining to masonic rites. * * * The portal to the sanctuary is the largest among all the ruins. On the cornice are masonic symbols, and on the under part of it rings are cut in stone. A curtain was formerly suspended from them to inclose the house completely, and vail from public gaze the mysterious ceremonies therein performed.

At Straddle Creek, Illinois, is a group of mounds of which Mr. Pidgeon says: "After thorough examination, I was satisfied that there had either been a change at some past era in the common mode of burial, or that this region was inhabited by an immense population, at different eras, who practiced tumular burial in two different ways. The traditions of Decoodah sanction the latter conclusion, and it is further coroborated by the fact that, west of the Mississippi, as far as our researches have extended, we have found, in all burial mounds examined, the traces of fire in a deposit of charcoal and ashes; while on the east side of that river, from the junction of the Missouri to the falls of St. Anthony, we have only found an occasional isolated mound of that description, with the single exception of the group on Plumb river.

* * * From these facts, in connection with the traditions of Decoodah respecting the ancient inhabitants of those regions, as of various languages, customs, and color, we are led to the conclusion that at least two distinct races of men have occupied this territory at different eras, and that both became nationally extinct, anterior to the to the occupation of the present Indian race. * * *

"We may suppose the Mississippi to have been the point at which those ancient nations came in contact with each other, from the fact that at that point a marked difference appears in the general form of their tumular monuments, and, moreover, the amalgamation or mixture of forms in the construction of those mounds or embankments exists to a greater extent along this river, than any other region. This circumstance probably originated by the chances of war, in conquest; as these border nations would necessarily, from time to time, advance over one another's border in alternate acquisitions of territory, and during their intervals of occupancy each would erect monuments according to their own taste and design. The fact that both nations were in the habit of rearing tumular monuments seems to militate with the belief that either was nationally connected with the North American Indians, as the latter have never been in the habit of erecting tumuli at any era known to history or tradition."

On this subject of different nations, McLean says there was a belt of country running through central Ohio from east to west, that is entirely devoid of ancient earth-works; that south of this belt are numerous military and religious enclosures, and north of it numerous military works, but no sacred enclosures; and that the latter are not so formidable as those of the southern part. It appears then, that the country was occupied by two distinct nations with a belt of neutral land between, or at different eras. It is probable also that the nation that occupied the northern part was retreating and fighting, and did not have time to erect religious enclosures. (The animal mounds of Wisconsin are anomalous, and possibly built by a third Another distinction is made: "Between the mounds of the Ohio valley and those west of the Mississippi there is much difference. The latter were towns and cities, as indicated by series of little square-shaped mounds from one to two feet in height, ranged in straight lines at right angels, each of which mounds was a habitation.

"Every indication shows that they were expelled by force. When they were harassed by the inroads of the warlike bands of a foreign race, they erected their strong fortifications, for retreats during the predatory raids." "On the temple mounds were probably scenes of carnage. They never would submit to give these places up without resistance. It is true that we do not find the implements left on the field of battle, nor the remains of the devastating fires. It must be remembered that to these places both the conquerors and Indians had access."

As further proof of sudden expulsion some entrance-ways to the enclosures are filled with rocks and dirt, mingled irregularly.

* * * "It is difficult to suppose that the authors of these extensive works had any other than a south-western origin. They entered the country at the south and began their settlements near the gulf. * * * The resemblance in building is not due to chance. * * *

The remains show clearly that the Mound Builders had commercial relations with Mexico and Central American countries.

The overthrow of the Toltec empire was portended by omens, and attended by cosmical calamities, internecine strife, spiritual decline, demoralization, unnatural excesses and a general conviction that the judgments of God were upon them in fulfillment of prophecy.

The conquest of the Mexicans was more by spiritual than physical causes. They thought their prophets had doomed them to their fate. They were frenzied by fanaticism. Their bloody rites made them a terror to neighboring tribes and a horror to the philosophers of their own nationality and to the Spaniards; and Cortez preached continually to his men that their cause was a crusade.

Many omens are noted in the history of the overthrow of the Cakchiquels as well as of the Mexicans.

Of the Mayas Bancroft says: "Intertribal strife, with hurricane, famine, deadly pestilence, and constantly recurring omens, and predictions of final disaster, so desolated and depopulated the country that the Spaniards found the Mayas but a mere wreck."

PRAYER A SWEET REFUGE.

What a calm, sweet peace, clusters about the word prayer.

"Precious gift, that brings so near The things that seem so far; Heaven itself let down to earth, With gates ajar."

He who does not know and appreciate the worth of prayer, is ignorant of the most precious blessing and privilege which God has given unto man. It is a comfort in sickness, a shield in temptation, a solace in grief and disappointment, and a source of strength in weakness. It is a heaven bought privilege, and the only medium by which we can approach unto God. We may sometimes think our lot is hard and envy the rich their position, and think we would be happier if we had more of this world's goods. But while the riches and honors of this world may in a measure conduce to our happiness, and relieve our temporal wants, how fleeting they appear when compared with the sweet privilege of approaching the mercy seat; there to breathe forth our wants, and desires, one who is ever waiting to bless. are times when the heart is bowed in grief. When all the world looks dark. When friends grow cold, and we seem to be left entirely alone. At such times we feel that our trials are peculiar, and that we must have sympathy. How painful to rehearse all to an earthly friend. But there is one to whom we can go who knows us as we are; with whom is no variableness, or shadow of turning. We can go and tell Jesus with our hearts. He will understand us though our lips be sealed with sadness. To approach in any way those to whom the things of this world have seemed to make our superiors, would summon our best courage. But not so when we would ask any thing at the hand of God. All we need is to feel our want, and ask with childlike simplicity. Thanks to his great name, he has promised never to turn us away empty. lieving this, how it rests the burdened soul to shut out for a season the world, with its many cares, and hold communion with God, and feel that we are "casting all our care upon him, for he careth for us.

"There is a balm in secret prayer,
That comforts and relieves us;
And all who would this blessing share,
Must humbly come to Jesus.

"If trouble comes, with dark despair,
And those we love deceive us;
Then let us kneel in secret prayer,
And tell it all to Jesus.

"And when from this sweet hour of prayer, Our Savior doth relieve us; There's peaceful rest from all our care, Found in the arms of Jesus."

MISSIONARY WORK.

THERE is no doubt that the action of Bishop Sharp is stirring the Mormon Church more profoundly than any other event ever has in all the long years that the organization has been in Utah. There have been trials before, dangers perhaps, but they have all been from the outside. This act of the straightforward bishop is a notice that the pressure from within is starting the hoops, and the most resolute feel such uncertainy as they never have before. We are aware that the chiefs of the organization affect not to care for advice from The Tribune, but they have often, in the past, made serious mistakes in not heeding it, and being a missionary journal, we can not forbear pointing out to them that the opportunity of saving their prestige, and all that is of value of their power, is rapidly slipping away from them. They have made as good a fight as they could, but the matter has reached a point now when the doors of the Penitentiary gape for every one of them, and when the sentiment of the country behind Congress will not permit them to hope for any favors until they shall extricate themselves from the position which places them in defiance of the laws, and closes the gates of sympathy against them. They are in the face of a double danger now; danger of extreme legislation against them, and danger of a schism in the solid ranks of their organization, which, once started, will shiver it in pieces. have often charged that the wish and design of The Tribune were to despoil their people of their property. Now, to save to them their property for themselves and their children, we beg of them to do what Bishop Sharp has done, and to advise their people to do the same. If they would but do that, and would take the restrictions from their people in the matter of choosing and electing political officers, their church would have no more opposition; they would have the satisfaction of seeing it expand; their capacity for doing good would be multiplied tenfold, and, at last, to them would come peace and the respect of civilization. They have practiced polygamy openly for something like thirty years. They dare not submit the keeping of it any longer to a vote of their people, because its workings have been over the broken hearts of ten thousand women, and their own homes are a standing reminder to them that it would not be a success, even if all opposition were taken away. other matter, the keeping of their people forever under an iron discipline, naming for them their officers and giving them no choice and no right of opinion in the matter of voting, is what vexed them for years, and finally drove them, naked and despairing as was Hagar, into the wilderness. For them to adhere to such a programme
