Elder Blair speaks of "minds prejudiced by 'old wives' fables;' or hearts warped and biased by a love of worldly honor, &c.; that such "are sure to mislead;" and certainly this looks correct. I don't object to it in the least, but is it an "old wives" fable" that Joseph Smith wrote a letter from Liberty Jail, Missouri, dated December 16th, 1838, in which he denominates such men as Hinkle, Corrill, Peck, Mc-Lellin and Whitmer, not only as "wolves in sheep's clothing," but states positively that "they have been the means of shedding innocent blood." Is it an "old wives" fable" that in that same letter he informs us that McLellin, "who professes to be much of a prophet, has no other dumb ass to ride but David Whitmer, to forbid his madness when he goes up to curse Israel; and this ass not being of the same kind as Baalam's, therefore, the angel, notwithstanding, appeared unto him, yet he could not penetrate his understanding sufficiently so, but what he brays out cursings instead Whoever lives of blessings. Poor ass! to see it, will see him and his rider perish like those who perished in the gainsaving of Korah, or after the same condemnation. Now as for these and the rest of their company, we will not presume to say that the world loves them; but we presume to say they love the world, and we classify them in the error of Baalam, and in the gainsayings of Korah, and with the company of Korah, Dotham, and Abiram." M. S. v. 16, p. 626; see also Numbers, 16th chapter. That the above prediction has utterly failed, I need not state. Wm. E. McLellin, whatever his faults might have been, lived to a ripe old age, and died in quietude at Independence, Missouri. David Whitmer, the other of the two against whom this prediction was uttered, still lives, having passed his 80th birthday; his head is silvered o'er, and I use no words of flattery nor of exaggeration when I say that he stands to-day like a "shock of corn fully ripe," a man honored and loved of God, and of man. I offer the fact of this man's life and character, this man who rejected, and who still rejects the revelations of Joseph Smith as a "rule of faith and practice," as a living, standing protest against the ideas advanced in the argument of Elder Blair; and I may add that the same is true of John Whitmer, deceased. Was it an "old wives' fable" that Joseph Smith, et al, went to Salem, Massachusetts, in 1836, to hunt for some supposed hidden treasure there? and while there in August of that year received a revelation upon the matter, wherein the promise is made, "that I (the Lord) will give this city into your hands, that you shall have power over it, insomuch that they shall not discover your secret parts; and its wealth pertaining to gold and silver shall be yours." M. S. v. 15. p. 822. That this revelation was connected with the interest of the church will be seen upon its examination, as "I have much treasure in this city for you, for the benefit of Zion," &c. These are cited, not for sarcasm, nor for wit, but as facts, from many which could be brought, but if they stood alone, would be I think sufficient to cause the careful and prudent to pause and deeply consider before accepting the "words and commands" of any man the same as if from God's mouth. Ah! but says one, they are not considered "to the church;" well, that can't help the matter, as the argument of Elder Blair in support of his theory, is based upon the statement in the Book of Mormon, "And I will give unto him a commandment, that he (the choice Seer) shall do none other work save the work which I shall command him." 2 Nephi 2:2. See also Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 19:2; and 43:1. If it was true of the church collectively that they "shall receive his word," &c., why not individually, and isn't it true that such was the practice with the rejected church? Of this there can be but little doubt; and certainly if the church in the first instance had the right to reject or eliminate one revelation, we would have a right to eliminate more or all. Elder Blair talks about "digging a pit" for the unwary and unlearned to fall into, &c. Well, as I view it, there is no "pit" quite so deep as that one which robs a man, or seeks to rob him, of his agency, which should be free, by placing a daysman between God and him, and saying that he must accept his words and commands, just the same as God's. While I fervently desire not to do an injustice to Joseph Smith, or any other one, living or dead, I trust that I shall never do such violence to myself, as to bind myself to accept his revelations or any other man's the same as if I heard God speak; but rather follow the still small voice which says, "My yoke is easy and my burden light," "Come learn of me."

The logic of Elder Blair's argument as applied to individuals for "disregarding" the revelations of Joseph Smith, militates against and condemns the Church itself, as I view it, for the simple reason that in 1879, the Church in General Conference at Galland's Grove, Iowa, declared that belief in said revelations was not essential, and declared its intention, by making the "plain provisions of the gospel," as expressed or "set forth in the Epitome of Faith and Doctrine," as the only binding faith of the Body. In apparent harmony with this is the act of the Twelve, and General Conference of last spring, declaring that the "local commands" to the former, or rejected church, are not binding upon this one. I confess astonishment at Elder Blair's argument, when I consider these things, and think most certainly that he forgot himself. So reader it is not so much of interest to us what Melchisedec did, or did not do, nor Adam nor Seth, nor somebody else, but rather, what did Christ Jesus our Lord? What did he teach as essential to life and peace? What did he give as the will of God who sent him? That will is the all in all, the Alpha and Omega, of all that is necessary for man. God will add no addenda to that will, for as Christ said, "the word which I have spoken unto you, it shall judge you in the last day." And in the promise to the apostles, that "whosoever receiveth you receiveth me." It was based upon the condition that they should "teach all nations" that, which he "had commanded them." The Hebrew epistle reasons ably that a will, "a testament is of force after men are dead; otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth." (See Heb. 9th chapter). And from this we may add that it would be foolish to try to add a "codicil" after the "testator's" death as it would be equally illegal.

Without multiplicity of words, not wishing to weary the reader, I submit in conclusion: That there does exist an honest difference between brethren as to the binding effect of Joseph Smith's revelations upon the Church; the sense in which they should be regarded and esteemed. That so long as this division remains, it must militate against progression; that neither party can succeed under such circumstances. That each one is entitled to make their choice is above controversy. That a decision by the Body, clear and definite, (so that a "wayfaring man need not err therein,") should be made, that all may have the benefit of such decision, seems to me but right and just; and I ask how can the Body refuse this? I want to act in all good conscience before God; and in making my choice in matters of this kind, propose to act, as I hope and expect to give an account in the day of judgment, allowing all others the same blessed privilege, choose how or what they may. they may.
Yours for truth,
Z. H. Gurley.

PLHASANTON, Ia., Feb. 28, 1885.

REPLY TO "REVENGE" (No. 2.) BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR.

In the Herald for March 14th, Elder Gurley persists in his efforts to make the revelations of the "choice Seer" teach personal "revenge" and "revenge" by the Saints organized into military bodies also. This is his second effort, at least, in this direction, and deserves to be refuted; for if his statements are true, and his conclusions correct, he should have the credit of making very important discoveries, the church should wipe the accumulated dust of the past fifty-five years from its benighted eyes, confess that Joseph the martyr was a huge fraud, an unparalleled "blind guide," and, that when the Lord said "I will make him great in mine eyes" he simply meant he would be great as a deceiver! For, to say in one breath that Joseph was God's "choice Seer," was "great" in the eyes of God, was "great like unto Moses," and "like unto" Joseph of old, that he did God's "work," and in the next say he gave lying revelations to the church in regard to gathering, tithing, moral duties, and in respect to good citizenship, when organizing and building up the church, is not only ridiculous, but to the writer it is far worse; for it not only reflects upon the wisdom and love of God, but it in effect flatly contradicts His word.

If Elder Gurley had, in his articles alluded to, used the exact words of the revelations quoted instead of substituting other and very different words for them, he would not mislead himself nor confuse his readers. But when he puts the word "revenge" where the text reads "avenge," or "avenged," he perverts the revelations and corrupts their meaning. In sections 95, 98, 100, and 102, the word "avenge" occurs five times, "avenging" twice, and "revenge" barely once, (sec. 95: 5), and this where the Saints are commanded to "not revile against" their enemies, "neither seek revenge." Revenge implies malice, hatred, spite, while "avenge" implies just punishment; and in this sense is it used in the texts referred to. Webster says, "To avenge in modern usage, is to inflict just punishment upon evil doers in behalf of ourselves, or others for whom we act; as, to avenge ones wrongs, to avenge the injuries of the suffering and innocent. To revenge is to inflict pain or injury for the simple indulgence of resentful and malicious feelings. The former may at times be a duty; the latter is one of the worst exhibitions of human character." This will enable the reader to see how unfair, and how cruelly unjust are the perverted texts he uses in proof of his position.

The Lord would have the Saints restored to their lands and redressed of their wrongs in the most peaceful way possible; but if their enemies persisted in keeping the Saints from their inheritances, and would not restore to them the properties they had taken and destroyed, nor allow them the common rights of American citizens, then the Lord would have "just punishment? meted out to them-he would be "avenged" -and points out the manner in which this might be effected, namely, "Let them [the Saints importune at the feet of the Judge; and if he heed them not, let them importune at the feet of the Governor; and if the Governor heed them not, let them importune at the feet of the President; and if the President heed them not, then will the Lord arise and come forth out of his hiding place, and in his fury vex the nation, and in his hot displeasure, and in his fierce anger, in his time, will cut off those wicked, unfaithful, and unjust stewards, and appoint them their portion among hypocrites and unbelievers; even in outer darkness, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. Pray ye, therefore, that their ears may be opened unto your cries, that I may be merciful unto them, that these things may not come upon them." D. C. 98:12. Surely, there is nothing like revenge in this; but, to the contrary, there is great forbearance, loyalty to law, love of and prayer for enemies, plainly taught. Here are God's methods for avenging the wrongs of his Saints, and here is just what he would have them do in effecting it. This follows the "parable," and may be taken as the proper explanation of that which relates to the redemption of the "vineyard." When the "parable" is interpreted as all such alle-gories are designed to be, and its true meaning found, it will be discovered that no such thing as a military effort, or personal violence, was to be used by the Saints towards their enemies in seeking the possession of their lands, their personal property, and their rights as citizens. The "parable" speaks of "a tower," "watchmen," "warriors," and "the strength" of the Lord's house; but it does not follow that these were or were to be parts of a military movement to be organized among the Saints. Tower, signifies security, defence, protection; and as the organization of financial and industrial matters under the law of consecration was to be for the temporal security of the Saints in Zion, this may well be said to be the "tower" mentioned in the parable. The "watchmen," would answer to the local ministry; the "warriors," to the traveling ministry; and "the strength of mine house," to the wise, wealthy, capable, and efficient members everywhere. As large bodies of lands were to be purchased, and various industries to be organized and built up in order to establish Zion, (D. C. 58:12), there were imperative needs for moneyed "strength," also for such "strength" as can be found only with wise, shrewd, skillful, active, and energetic Saints.

In respect to the military terms used in the "parable" mentioned in sections 98 and 102, we repeat what we stated in our article in Herald, January 17th, that "these terms are sometimes used in Bible parlance figuratively as relating to the church or people of God, the ministry, the defenses, and the chief attractive features of God's work." In proof of this we give the following: "The Lord gave the word; and great was the company [army—margin] of those that published it."—Ps. 68:11. "So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army."—Ezek. 37:10. "And he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven."—Dan. 4:35. "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ."—2 Tim. 2:3. "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee, that it may be displayed because of thy truth."—Ps. 60:4. "For thou hast been a shelter for me, and a strong tower from the enemy."—Ps. 61:3. "The name of the Lord is a strong tower; the righteous runneth into it and is safe."—Prov. 18:10. Paul speaks of the "breastplate," the "shield," the "helmet," and "the sword," in Eph. 6: 13-17, all military terms. Again: "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?"

The following, (March, 1829), speaks professedly of the church,—

"In this, the beginning of the rising up, and the coming forth of my church out of the wilderness; clear as the moon and fair as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."—Doc. Cov. 4: 3.

This last quotation is proof positive that the church at the very first in this dispensation was compared to an "army;" therefore our interpretation of the "parable" in sections 98 and 102, is consistent with the Seer's revelations from the first, besides being in strict harmony with Bible usages. Now let us sing—

"God is marshaling his army
For the rescue of his 1ruth,
He is calling now to battle,
Both the aged and the youth.
You can hear his mighty summons
In the thunder of his word—
Let us then be valiant soldiers,
In the army of the Lord!"
"We want no cowards in our bands,
Who will our colors fly;
We call for valiant-hearted men,
Who're not afraid to die.
To see our armies on parade,
How martial they appear!
All armed and drest in uniform,
They look like men of war."
"Am I a soldier of the cross,
A follow'r of the Lamb?
And shall I fear to own his cause,
Or blush to speak his name?"
"Sure I must fight if I would reign;
Increase my courage, Lord!
I'll bear the toil, endure the pain,
Supported by thy word."

We hope this happy combination of "parable," history, and poetry, will quiet the fears and soothe the nerves of alarmists and alarmed. Bro. Gurley says [Elder Blair] he thinks the entire case is settled when he quotes the last clause of 3d par., sec. 102—'for behold I do not require at their hands to fight the battles of Zion; for as I said in a former commandment, even so will I fulfill, I will fight your battles." Yes; I do. I believe that the revelation means just what it says in this quotation. It debars the Saints from carnal warfare. I do not believe in the interpretation forced upon the passage by Elder Gurley when he says, the answer as to how God will fight the battles of the Saints "is fully made in Sec. 100, par. 3, latter part, * * Behold, I say unto you, the redemption of Zion must needs come by power; therefore, I will raise up unto my people a man, who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel." Elder Gurley argues that, for Joseph to "lead" the Saints "like as Moses led the children of Israel," he, like Moses, must be a man of war—slay the Midianites, etc., etc.; for, says Elder Gurley, "it seems to me that as Moses is made the type or parallel case, that to examine his record would enable us to comprehend this latter one, as this one is to be like the former, and to aid us in this investigation, I quote from Numbers 31: 2, 3."

But why does Elder Gurley end his chain of wonderful logic with this quotation? Why does he not follow it further, and be consistent,—and tell us that for Joseph to lead the saints as Moses led ancient Israel, he must go up into the mount and get the tables of the law, build "a tabernacle," appoint its furniture, "smite the rock," lift up the "brazen serpent," go through the Red Sea, curse the land of the Pharaoh's with murrain, frogs, and lice. And why don't he tell us (if he intends to be fair and just) that Christ, because he was like unto Moses, (Deut. 18: 15; Acts 3: 22; 7: 37), must, therefore, do all that Moses did!

The passage—sec. 100: 3—speaks simply of the manner in which the "Moses-man" was to lead the Saints. Moses "led" Israel by direct revelation from God, and this is the manner in which the Moses-man is to lead the Saints in Zion's redemption.

Elder Gurley makes another huge blunder in this matter when he says section 100: 3, is the "former commandment" alluded to in sec. 102: 3. If he will turn to sec. 98: 4, given two months before that relative to the Moses-man, he will see that the said "former commandment" reads as follows, and that it alludes to a still "former" one, which we will quote in its order.

"I have sworn, and the decree hath gone forth by a former commandment which I have given unto you, that I would let fall the sword of mine indignation in the behalf of my people; and even as I have said, it shall come to pass. Mine indignation is soon to be poured out without measure upon all nations, and this will I do when the cup of their iniquity is full. And in that day, all who are upon the watch tower, or in other words, all mine Israel shall be saved."—Sec. 98: 4.

The "former commandment" here spoken of is evidently the following—

"Wherefore, I have called upon the weak things of the world, those who are unlearned and despised; to thresh the nations by the power of my Spirit; and their arm shall be my arm, and I will be their shield and their buckler, and I will gird up their loins, and they shall fight manfully for me; and their enemies shall be under their feet; and I will let fall the sword in their behalf; and by the fire of mine indignation will I preserve them."—D. C. 34: 4.

In this the "shield," the "buckler," the

In this the "shield," the "buckler," the "fight"—all military terms—refer to God's ministers. These two last quotations, and not the one quoted by Elder Gurley, explain how God will "fight" their "battles."

Elder Gurley, to further prove that the said revelations taught and teach revenge, quotes what claims to be church history written by Joseph Smith, (but which was not given to the world till long after Joseph's death, and which may be false), which reads as follows—"I [Joseph] want to enter into the following covenant, that if any more of our brethren are slain in Missouri, by the mob, we will give ourselves no rest, until we are avenged of our enemies to the uttermost."—Mill. Star vol. 15: 728. As usual, when Elder Gurley comments on this he puts revenge for "avenged." The most that can be made out of this covenant, if Joseph uttered it, is to say it was a covenant to procure "just punishment" for such evil doers.

As another evidence that "revenge" was in said revelations, Elder Gurley quotes from the same history, page 727,—"The brethren began to prophesy cursings up-on the enemies of Christ, who inhabit Jackson county, Missouri," and then claims that this was very unchristian. Will he tell us that it was also unchristian for Paul to "prophesy cursings" on men or angels who should preach another gospel than he taught? (Gal. 1:8); or for Christ to curse the fig tree? (Mark 11:21); or for Paul to curse Elymas the sorcerer? (Acts 13:9-11). It these men of God did "prophesy cursings" by the Spirit of God, (as it is claimed they did), they did just what Christ, his Apostles and the prophets did, as recorded in the Scriptures.

Elder Gurley asks to know why a saint has "any more right to mete out justice to an offender than a sinner." To this we reply, they have not any more right; and further, that under the gospel and the special teachings of the revelations which he is fighting, they have less. For under the laws of nature and the nation, the sinner has the right to resist, repel, and repay the violent assaults of enemies, either personally or through the laws of the land; but under the law of the Church, the Saint must exercise forbearance in a most eminent degree, as the following shows:

Now, I speak unto you concerning your families; if men will smite you, or your families, once, and ye bear it patiently and revile not against them, neither seek revenge, ye shall be rewarded; but if ye bear it not patiently, it shall be accounted unto you as being meted out a just measure unto you. And again, if your enemy shall smite you the second time, and you revile not against your enemy, and bear it patiently, your reward shall be an hundred fold. And again, if he shall smite you the third time, and ye bear it patiently your reward shall be doubled unto you four fold; and these three testimonies shall stand against your enemy, if he repent not, and shall not be And now, verily I say unto you, if that enemy shall escape my vengeance that he be not brought into judgment before me, then ye shall see to it, that ye warn him in my name that he come no more upon you, neither upon your family, even your children's children unto the third and fourth generation; and then if he shall come upon you, or your children, or your children's children unto the third and fourth generation, I have delivered thine enemy into thine hands, and then if thou will spare him thou shalt be rewarded for thy righteousness; and also thy children and thy children's children unto the third and fourth generation; nevertheless thine enemy is in thine hands, and if thou reward him according to his works, thou art justified, if he has sought thy life, and thy life is endangered by him; thine enemy is in thine hands, and thou art justified."-D. C. 95:5.

This is receiving smitings on one cheek and then on the other, and more too. Elder Gurley asserts in respect to the defense of personal rights, that "Except to defend one's life as noticed first above, no individual member of this Republic has that right, it being reserved to the law of the land and its majesty to protect the citizen by punishing the guilty." This is another mistake: for the laws of the State provide that persons may protect and defend their families, their homes, their property, and those of their fellowmen in times of exigency, as well as their own lives; and at the time the Saints were driven from Missouri, the laws of that State provided that its citizens should bear arms for defense. This right was claimed and won by our Revolutionary Fathers.

Elder Gurley condemns the destruction of the Nauvoo Expositor, in 1844, and claims it was done "under Joseph Smith's endorsement." That it was done under his official endorsement, as Mayor of the city, is not disputed; but to say he approved of it in the sense of his desiring it, is quite another thing. His son Joseph told the writer over fifteen years ago, and also of late, that he heard his father say to those who destroyed that press, when they came to report having done so, that he called them to witness that he had opposed it from the first, and that trouble would come of it. He said to them: "You have this day made me as your officer do that which we will regret, and which will Joseph, it was said by bring trouble." those who claimed to know would not sign the order of the City Council to destroy the press till the Council sent the second or third embassy with it to him, and then not until Hyrum begged him to sign it.

But, aside from all this, Joseph Smith as the Mayor of Nauvoo had the legal right to sign said order. We can only question the propriety of his doing so.

Elder Gurley quotes the prayer of Jesus-"Father forgive them, for they know not what they do"—as though he prayed for his malignant enemies. If he means that Jesus prayed for those who sought and procured his death—the Chief Priests and leading Jews,—he is mistaken; for it is evident they were not forgiven. Jesus, as the Inspired Translation teaches, prayed for the soldiers-officers of the law-who executed the vicious sentence of death procured against him by the wilfully wicked Jews. As for Stephen's prayer—"Lord, lay not this sin to their charge"-Paul afterwards declared he "obtained mercy, because," said he, "I did it ignorantly, in unbelief."—I Tim. 1:13. But this plea can not be urged in favor of those who persecuted and drove the saints from Missouri-the majority of them knew they were violating the law of God and the laws of the land.

Elder Gurley gives us another specimen of his illogical reasoning as follows, "Because the Church in 1835 adopted the Doctrine and Covenants as a 'rule of faith and practice,' Elder Blair thinks 'it is safer to trust their judgment and experience touching those revelations * * * than it is to entertain the doubts and fears and unbelief of one or many who oppose them, which theory," says Elder Gurley, "would make their act infallibly correct." Not quite so fast my brother; the "theory" would make the "judgment and experience" of that General Assembly vastly more reliable and trustworthy than that of dissenting members or ministers—that is Bro. Gurley says further-"I had supposed that when the angel committed the record containing the fulness of the gospel, with the New Testament, that, had the Church but known it, the 'items of faith' had already been arranged to save the entire race." If this is so, why does the Elder persist in asking that the Church shall now define what is, and what is not, essential doctrine? And further; if it was proper for "the Apostles and Elders" (Acts 15: 1-30) to convene and decide as to what was and what was not correct doctrine, why was it not proper for the assembled quorums to do similarly in 1835? Bishop's Agent's Report.—Cash on hand at last report $9.53; received since $32.10; total $41.63. Paid out $34.13; balance $7.50. John Pett agent.

The question was asked what action, if any, had been taken in regard to the resolution passed by the last district conference, requiring a letter of removal to be granted to Davis H. Bays, or show cause for not doing so, when the following was presented: "Resolved, that we the members of the Galland's Grove Branch of the Church of Iesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, do not consider Davis H. Bays worthy of a letter of fellowship and of good standing in the church, for the following reasons, namely: The rebutting testimony of John B. Hunt in the twe Elders' Courts, branch and district, in which it was shown that he (D. H. Bays) was religiously dishonest; and for sueing John B. Hunt for slander, claiming damages to the amount of ten thousand dollars, and with a determination to break him up. The evidence for this being found in the proceedings of the four courts, namely, two Elders' Courts and two before the world; and as yet he has not confessed to the branch or made restitution. And further, in a settlement between Davis H. Bays and the branch four years ago, or thereabouts, he was owing twelve dollars and fifty cents, which he promised to pay the first money he got, and as yet he has not complied." A committee of three, namely, W. W. Whiting, Charles E. Butterworth and George Sweet, was appointed to examine the reasons, and report this conference.

Saturday forenoon. Ministerial Reports .-Thomas Chapman, Davis H. Bays, Jonas W. Chatburn, by letter; Priest Joseph Seddon, and Teacher Richard Leytham. The report of the committee on the Galland's Grove Branch resolution was called for, and read as follows: "We your committee appointed to consider the reasons given by the Galland's Grove Branch for not granting a letter to Davis H. Bays, beg leave to report as follows: After careful consideration, we concluded that the only paper with which we had to do was the one containing said reasons. We consider the reasons are fully sufficient for withholding a letter of recommendation from Davis H. Bays; but we consider the branch derelict in duty, in not preferring charges against him, that he might be "cast out" if not making restitution." W. W. Whiting, George Sweet, Charles E. Butterworth, committee. The report was on motion accepted and adopted, and the committee dischar-

Afternoon Session, brethren John Hawley, Eli Clothier and John Pett, were appointed delegates to the General Conference. It was Resolved, That half of the expenses of the delegates to the General Conference be paid by the district, and that the secretary notify the presidents of the different branches, and request them to take up a collection for that purpose. On motion, brother James Caffall was requested to use his influence in his quorum to get some one to labor in this district under General Conference appointment.

Two days' meetings were appointed as follows: At Dow City, 23d and 24th of May, Brn. W. Whiting and Ira A. Goff in charge. At the Union Church in Calhoun county, 23d and 24th of May, Brn. John Rounds and Robert Montgomery in charge. At the Salem Branch on the 18th and 19th of July, the president to appoint Elders.

The First Presidency and Bishopric with the several quorums were sustained in righteousness. Brn. Eli Clothier and W. W. Whiting were sustained as president and assistant president of the district till after the close of the next district conference.

A notice of appeal was presented by Davis H. Bays, as follows: To the president and brethren in district conference assembled: I hereby give notice to your honorable body, that I appeal from your decision in adopting the report of your committee appointed to consider the "Reasons of of Galland's Grove Branch," etc., as follows: "We consider the reasons are fully sufficient for withholding a letter of recommendation from Bro. D. H. Bays," etc., to the General Conference to be held at Independence, Mo., April 6th, 1885. Respectfully submitted. D. H. Bays.

On motion Bro. John Pett was appointed to represent the district in said appealed case before the General Conference. The committee appointed to visit the Pilot Rock Branch was continued.

Sunday forenoon, Bro. James Caffall preached; and in the evening Bro. Charles E. Butterworth preached.

Adjourned to meet at Deloit, Crawford county, Iowa, Friday, June 19th, at 2:30 p.m.

Dear brother, agreeably to resolution of the branch, you are hereby requested to report your place of residence, and spiritual condition to the officers of your branch, or send your request for letter of removal, within three months from date, lest you be reported as a scattered member. INDEPENDENCE LOCALS.

We are pained to note the death of J. J. Kaster, Bishop's Agent at this place, from typhoid fever. The Saints feel they have lost a friend, and the church an efficient officer. The bereaved ones have the unfeigned sympathy of the church.-Bro. I. N. White stopped off last Saturday on his way to his Missouri home. While yet in Iowa he had a vision. Saw a large congregation in the Independence church; a certain brother sitting close to the organ, president, invited him to speak. He complied, without a text, with the promise that God would fill his mouth. On entering the church last Sunday evening, the congregation was large. The brother referred to sitting close to the organ, (for the first time), Bro. Pitt, asked Bro. I. N. to preach. He arose without a text, and every one can testify that the Lord did fill his mouth with wholesome words, breaking out in prophecy, "that the sifting time had come, and those who should abide were those who would unflinchingly stand by the books; that God's will concerning this land as revealed, would be accomplished in his own due time, regardless of any man or set of men." The evidence and force of his remarks were felt in every heart. Come again brother.—Bro. C. A. Wickes of Lamoni, was visiting Independence last week. C. A. has an eye to business, and from indications thinks he has "struck ile."-T. W. Chatburn and Co., have a full corps of men working on the Liberty Street Mill, changing it to a full Roller System. A car load of machinery was caught in the strike, and will impede progress to some extent.

MARRIED.

Howland—Rogerson.—At Fall River, Mass., February 8th, 1885, by Elder John Gilbert, Mr. Abner A. Howland to Sister Catharine C. Rogerson, both of New Bedford, Mass. May peace and prosperity attend them.

DIED.

Lewis.—At Youngstown, Ohio, March 4th, 1885, of dropsy, Mary Lewis, wife of Bro. John R. Lewis. Born at Myrther, South Wales, October 31st, 1833; baptized at Brookfield, February 6th, 1866, by Elder John T. Phillips. Funeral services by Wm. D. Williams and D. M. Strachan.

RITTER.—At Baylis, Illinois, March 14th, of membraneous croup, Daisy Alberta, only daughter of Bro. George W. and Sr. Silvina E. Ritter, and grandchild of Bro. H. W. Wetherbee, aged three years, seven months, twenty-three days. She was a bright child, and loved by all who knew her; too fair a flower to bloom on earth.

> "Another hand is beckoning us, Another call is given; And glows once more with angel steps The path that leads to heaven."

BALLANTYNE.—At Moorhead, Iowa, August 22d, 1884, of consumption, Bro. John W. Ballantyne, oldest son of Bro. Andrew and Sr. Jane. Ballantyne, aged 30 years, 1 month, and 15 days. He was baptized when eight years old, by Wm. H. Kelley, at Galland's Grove, Iowa. He leaves a wife and two small children to mourn his loss. Funeral services August 31st, by Elder J. C. Crabb. One by one they leave us.

VREDENBURGH.—At River Sioux, Iowa, September 14th, 1884, of membraneous croup, Frank Vredenburgh, youngest son of Bro. Elias and Sr. Harriet Vredenburgh, aged 2 years, 5 months, and I day. He was given by his mother to her sister. His mother died when he was three weeks old.

JONES .-- At Bevier, Mo., March 11th, 1885, from injuries inflicted by the falling of a rock in the coal pit, on the evening of March 5th, just six days before his death, Mr. John B. Jones. Mr. Jones was born in Wales, and was 34 years and 6 months old at the time of his decease. Inearly life he was, for a time, a member of the Congregational Church. After being taken home with a broken back, and his lungs badly hurt, he told his wife he would die, and he was sorry that he was not in the church. He also told her that while the rock was yet on him in the pit, his leading thought and desire were that Brn. Lambert and Kinnaman could be there and pray for and administer to him. A strange coincidence is, that Bro. Lambert was on the way to Bevier that very night. Mr. Jones was the first to see him as he passed the window on Friday afternoon. He was noted for his liberality and goodness of heart. For many years he indulged in the habit of drinking; but after hearing Bro. Joseph Smith's Temperance lecture last Spring he reformed, and became a strong advocate of temperance, by precept and example. He was not only willing, but anxious, that his wife, who is a member of the church, should support the work by their means. He took real pleasure in feeding and lodging the traveling ministry. He was buried by the Masonic Order, but singing, reading of scripture and prayer were had at his house on the day of his burial. His funeral discourse was preached by J. R. Lambert on Sunday, March 15th, at 2 p. m., in Goodale's Hall.

SOPER.—At her home in Henderson, Knox Co., Illinois, February 7th, 1885, of pneumonia, Sr. Margaret Soper, aged 67 years, and 23 days. Sr. Soper was baptized in Canada, in 1839, and passed through the dark and cloudy day with a firm faith in the ultimate triumph of the work. She united with the Reorganized Church, and lived a faithful, consistent life, as a saint. Her life was devoted to helping the needy, and her many acts of kindness endeared her to all her neighbors and friends. Funeral sermon by Elder C. Hall, of the Church of Christ.

KASTER.—At Lake City, Missouri, March 5th, 1885, of typhoid fever and heart affection, Elder J. J. Kaster. Born at Rucksville, Rush county, Indiana, January 10th, 1839; baptized May 30th, 1864, by S. S. Wilcox, confirmed by W. W. Blair. Ordained an Elder, August 19th, 1865, by Charles Derry. He was a good citizen, a devoted Saint, a faithful Elder, and a loving and indulgent husband and father. Was in the active discharge of his duties as Bishop's Agent when he was smitten with the disease that terminated in his death. In his last letter to Bishop Blakeslee he stated that while teaching the law of tithing he had been more blessed of God than in any of his labors before, and he intended to arrange matters so as to devote his entire time, if possible, in that work. He leaves a wife and six children as chief mourners. Funeral sermon in the Saints' Chapel, Independence, Missouri, by Joseph Luff.

HARRINGTON.-At Armstrong, Kansas, February 22d, 1885, Sr. Lucy Harrington. Born at London, England, August 20th, 1864. Baptized in London, Ontario, by J. J. Cornish. She was the third daughter of Elder Edgar and Sister Harriet Harrington, who, with the remainder of the family, have the sympathy of the Saints in Armstrong, and in Canada, from whence they recently removed. Funeral service at the burial by Priest William Clow, and sermon by Joseph Luff in the Saints' Chapel at Armstrong, March 15th, 1885.

HALL.-At Toronto, Ontario, January 27th, 1883, Bro. William Hall, aged 53 years. He was an employee in the store of William Law, at Nauvoo, in early life, but not a member of the church. After the scattering, he went to Canada, believing that the church had become extinct, except Brighamism, which he knew was not in harmony with the martyr's teachings. He could not accept any of the creeds of Christendom, and so stood alone, until he learned through the public press of the Reorganization, when he almost immediately went one hundred and twenty miles to find Elder J. J. Cornish, in London, Ontario, by whom he was at once baptized, in 1876, since which time he lived to find his chief delight in bearing testimony of the truth. He was ordained a Priest somewhere about the winter of 1876, or 1877; but the dates we can not furnish, without reference to the London, (Ont.), District record, as the branch in Toronto has become virtually disorganized. Church Recorder please take notice.

JOSEPH SMITH

EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, April 11th, 1885.

WE publish in this issue of the HERALD the last reply and counter reply of Brn. W. W. Blair and Z. H. Gurley, for the present. We have been sharply censured by some because we permitted the controversy to appear in the HERALD at all. We have given one reason for so doing, and we now give another. The subjects upon which these articles have been written, have been supposed to be what are called open, or mooted questions. Upon this hypothesis, some have proceeded. In the passage of some two or three resolutions of conference it has been sought to throw them into that category. These resolutions have failed; whether from want of intention upon the part of those who framed them, ambiguity, the want of directness in statement, or from an unfortunate tendency to double meaning in the English language, we do not say.

The gathering is not and has not been an open question at any time since the work of reorganizing the church began in 1851. The affirmation that "there is now no stake," to which the Saints were commanded to gather; did not and could not undo or set aside the principle of the gathering so broadly stated in the words, "that the Saints on all other lands are commanded to gather to this land, preparatory to the re-establishment of the church in Zion; when the scattered Saints on this land will also be commanded to gather and return to Zion, and to their inheritances in fulfillment of the promises of God. And it is the duty of the Saints to turn their hearts and their faces toward Zion, and supplicate the Lord God for such deliverance." This was the opinion of one of the first conferences ever held by the Reorganized Church.

The conference of 1876 passed a resolution which it was supposed by some, interdicted the teaching of the gathering. But the resolution only affirmed the general principle that Elders should not teach contrary to resolutions of conference, and that was all that it did affirm. The preamble to that resolution affirmed that conferences in the past had affirmed "that there was at present no place of gathering." This no conference of the church had ever affirmed. The conference in 1852 affirmed that it was the opinion of those then assembled that there was then no stake to which the Saints were commanded to gather; but did not affirm there was "no place of gathering," as the Saints were commanded to "turn their hearts and faces toward Zion." If there was no Zion, or place known as Zion, how could those who were to pray turn their faces thitherward, when they

In the same Herald in which the minutes of the conference of April, 1876, in which the preamble and resolution referred to were presented and the resolution adopted, the Editor who was the presiding officer of that conference, stated in his editorial in explanation, that "The resolution last passed on this subject must be viewed in the light of the former acts of conference touching the same thing; and must not be construed by any one as an attack upon the principle of gathering."

The resolution passed in 1852 and the revelation given in 1873, affirming the one given on Fishing River in 1834, were quoted, showing that the gathering was recognized as the faith of the church as reorganized.

The gathering is prominently taught in the Doctrine and Covenants; and this book of articles and covenants has been repeatedly adopted, or accepted by the church; and thus the doctrines taught in it have been impliedly affirmed time after time.

The fact that some one, or several Elders choose to put the doctrines of the church, any one or more of them, whether those doctrines be important or unimportant, into dispute by denying them, does not throw them into the number of open or mooted questions, in any case in which the church has spoken; and her faith fairly understood; as it has been on the gathering.

The other question of tithing was stated in the revelation of 1861. It was recognized by the Twelve in their epistle of April 10th, 1876, as published in HERALD for May 15th, 1876, and has been recognized by the church, in the appointment of her Bishops and counselors; and in the repeated receipt and acceptance of reports from them of tithing, offerings, consecrations; and in the receipt and disbursements of moneys so raised. The question of tithing is therefore not an open or mooted question, within the proper meaning of those terms; nor does the calling of that doctrine, or item of faith or church discipline into dispute; either as to the fact of its being a tenet, or as to the methods of carrying it into effect, put it into the list of such questions.

If the calling of any item of faith into question by a member of the church, elder or other officer, puts that item of faith into the list of open questions; it can but be a question of time when all the items of faith will be open and mooted, and for that reason should not be discussed by those favoring each of them, respectively, until the church either reaffirms it, or denies it.

The controversy must rest for the present so far as the HERALD is concerned.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Many of the readers of the HERALD, who were connected with the Reorganization in 1860 to '64, will remember a song which was quite popular, entitled "Tatty and the buggy." Those who remember the circumstances and the song will be both pleased and pained to learn that Tatty, or Tatty Coram, long and familiarly known in the Northern Illinois District as The Gospel Horse, died on the premises of Bro. Israel L. Rogers, in Sandwich, Illinois, February 19th, 1885, lacking only three months of being twenty-eight years old. We beg pardon if any one not acquainted with the circumstances should be offended at this item of

We have received a large number of letters which want of space forbids to print. Among these are Bro. Fulton A. Brown, Boonesboro, Iowa; Arthur Ernest, place not stated on letter, but who acknowledges the help of God in being healed from an attack of rheumatism, after other help had failed. Sister Julia Amvery, wrote from Adelphi, Iowa, that Brn. Roth and Nirk had been there; had baptized one and left a good impression on others. Bro. Carlton wrote from Petrolia, in good spirits. Sr. C. Lloyd from Eldorado Springs, Missouri; Bro. W. R. Calhoon from Cortland, Illinois, who says that his faith is still strong, this, that, and the other adverse, written "to the contrary notwithstanding. He desires the prayers of Saints.

On page 159 of present volume of HERALD, in the death notice of Ralph G. Hulmes, read 1877 instead of 1867.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—In case a branch should meet according to a previous appointment for prayer meeting, and none of the officers of the branch should be present at the opening hour to take charge of the meeting after the expiration of a reasonable time, is it right for the members who may be present to have a season of prayer before going to their homes?

A.—In such a case as this, all those who might choose so to do, not compelling those who felt it would not be right, may choose one of their own number whether officer or member to preside for the time being, and hold a season of testimony and prayer. We have known many of such instances in which the members of the church so holding meetings have been wonderfully blessed by the presence of the Spirit. The injunction in the Scriptures that the Saints should meet together often. while it includes officers, does not prevent, nor should it, those members who meet at stated prayer meetings or times, from enjoying their gospel privileges as they should do.

Q.—When district meetings are held in a branch does it necessarily follow that the sacrament meeting authorized by the branch is in charge of the district authorities?

A.—No. It is the custom where we have attended district conference held in a branch, for the branch to offer the sacrament to the visiting Saints, furnishing the emblems and attending to the administration, as an act and token of fellowship and courtesy.

2.—Very often at conferences sacrament is administered Sunday afternoon. Sometimes this is authorized by resolution of conference and controlled by the district, sometimes by the branch authorities extending an invitation to the conference to partake of the sacrament with the branch?

A.—There is no rule that we know of. The latter custom as we think, is the one stated, for the branch to offer the sacrament. It would be very awkward for the conference to order it, and the branch to refuse the emblems; or to partake with conference.

2.—If the sacrament is offered to those not members, is the offerer or the taker to blame?

A.—The one offering it, if he knows the person is not a member. The church does not permit those not members to partake knowingly.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. James Caffall writing of late date, says:

Dear Herald:—Please say that I am at a loss to know by what modus operands my name became attached to rules, etc., for a system of representation of the Nebraska District, published in Herald for March 21st, 1885.

All we can say of this is that the minutes of conference showed Bro. Caffall's name attached to rules, &c. It would be proper to ask the clerk of conference.

THE Vindicator of Truth, our esteemed cotemporary in England, for March, has reached us in its monthly visits. From it we quote items of news, interesting to the Saints in America, as elsewhere:

We learn by letter from Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, President of Manchester district that he organized a branch of the church at Leeds, on the 28th of February or 1st of March. Of the prospects in that town he thus writes:

"With Elder James Baty in company I attended at Leeds on Saturday and Sunday last; baptized and comfirmed one, and confirmed three others who had been baptized by local brethren. Ordained three of the brethren to office in the priesthood, and organized a branch to be known as the Leeds Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Joseph Naylor, President; Martin Haywood, Branch Priest; Henry Warren, Branch Teacher. We had a splendid time with them, and left them with splendid prospects for the future. There are many more in sympathy with the work in that neighborhood.

On Sunday, February 22d, Bros. Thomas Taylor and C. H. Caton, of Birmingham, and G. S. Greenwood, of Stafford, attended at Nottingham for the purpose of organizing a branch of the church in that town. Organization was effected by appointing Bro. William Shepherd presiding Elder; Bro. A. Wibberley, Priest; Bro. J. Cope, Teacher, and Bro. William Coxen, Deacon. The necessary ordinations were attended to, and every necessary instruction and advice given to enable the brethren and sisters in that place to work a work of which they need not be ashamed.

In the evening Bro. G. S. Greenwood preached, enjoying much liberty and power of the spirit.

Prospects in Nottingham seem to be good. We found the spirit of excitement running high—"armies" of all sorts and shades, "Salvation," "Church," "Secularist," and even the unemployed, with band and banner, the latter stretching across the street with the words "Starvation Army" on it. For our part we have not much sympathy with excitement. As a rule it dies suddenly away, and leaves only dead ashes, which often prove more cumbersome than profitable. What we want is live coals, burning all the time. No doubt in such times of excitement some are led to seek the truth. We hope that such will find, and be found, by our Notting-We left them in good ham brethren. spirits, having enjoyed their company very much."

Through the kindness of Bro. J. Dewsnup we have a letter from Bro. J. Austin, of Sheffield. He writes very encouragingly of the work in that part. Prospects excellent, kind-hearted friends inquiring for the truth, and the daily blessings of God are causes of rejoicing from day to day. He thus winds up,—"So onward we go, treading the good old path which leads to life eternal."

We also get a letter, per same source, from Bro. James Eckersley, of Farnworth, date February 20th. He reports prospects of the work good in that neighborhood. Had had quite a discussion with a leading Primitive, who denied the necessity of baptism. Results time alone can tell. He is feeling well in the gospel, desiring to go on, for he knows it is the power of God unto salvation.

THE following is from the San Francisco, California, Chronicle, for Sunday, March 22d.

THE LOST CONTINENT.

22d. THE LOST CONTINENT.

It seems that the "Book of Mormon" had something to say about the lost continent, on which Captain Churchill has been giving such interesting lectures to the Academy of Sciences. On page 495 it says:

"And the city of Moroni did sink into the depths of the sea and the inhabitants thereof were drowned: and the city of Onihah, and the inhabitants thereof; and the city of Mocum, and the inhabitants thereof; and the city of Jerusalem, and the inhabitants thereof; and the waters have I caused to come up in the stead thereof to hide their wickedness and abominations from before my face, that the blood of the prophets and the saints shall not come up any more unto me against them."

This, the Deseret Evening News assures us, refers to the great Polynesian continent of which the countless islands of the South seas are the only remains. To the ordinary reader the extract from the "Book of Mormon" looks like an imitation from Isaiah, done by an unskillful hand. The inspired prophet would never have written so clumsy a sentence as the one last quoted.

But even the "Book of Mormon" may contain truths by haphazard. The chances now appear to be that some trace of the lost continent will be found, and that it will turn out to have perished from a gradual, or possibly from a sudden, subsidence of the land. At any rate, before we are many years older, we shall know something on the subject. It is curious to note that over a hundred years ago the French Government directed La Perouse to investigate the subject in the interest of anthropology.

Brother Joseph:—Among the many things that appear in the Herald, I see in the number for March 7th, 1885, on page 159, a dream by Sister Mary A. Atwell. It reads as follows: "I saw in my dream that some of the Saints were using adulterated milk, mixed with water. I thought the Saints were establishing an organization that required each family of Saints to give a goblet of pure milk. Those that were too poor to have pure milk at hand, were required to work and buy a goblet of pure milk to put into the organization. By so doing they would ever after have pure milk to use, throughout their families, both rich and poor. Who will give the interpretation."

Upon this dream we remark as follows: 1. The hyperbolical elements of this dream are "milk" and "water." 2. The objective end of this dream is knowledge and reformation. 3. As the elements and objective end of this dream are intrinsically good, the dream therefore is meritorious. 4. As "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights," therefore this dream, being intrinsically good, is of divine origin, and worthy of consideration. Let us see:

I. Milk is used in the Holy Scriptures to represent (1) the simple, easily understood (or easily digested) truths, doctrines, or principles of the gospel of Christ. See 1 Cor. 3:2; Heb. 5:12, 13; (2) the pure unadulterated word of God, see 1 Peter 2:2; Isaiah 55:1.

II. Water is used in the Holy Scriptures to represent among many things, the following things in particular: (1) people, see Rev. 17:15; (2) noise and confusion of people, see Isa. 17:12, 13; (3) afflictions and persecutions, see Ps. 69:1-4; 72:8-10; Isa. 30:20; (4) unlawful pleasures, see Prov. 9:17: (5) mischievous devices of the heart, and strife of men, suffered of God to exist and come upon the world; Prov. 20:5; 17:14; Jer. 8:14-17; 23:15-21.

Now, then, in this dream of Sr. Atwell, milk is put for the word of God, and water is put for the mischievous devices and uninspired opinions of men. Hence we interpret this dream as follows: It was revealed to Sr. Atwell in her night vision, that some of the Saints were using the word of God which has been adulterated with the uninspired and mischievous devices, interpolations and opinions of men,—like as milk diluted, weakened and adulterated by being mixed with water. It was also revealed in her dream, that the Saints were at work establishing the Church of Jesus Christ, that requires, or at least desires, each family to secure a volume of the pure inspired translation of the word of God; as by so doing it would be giving the pure word of God to the entire body of Christ. Those that are too poor to have a volume of the Inspired Translation of God's word at hand, ought to work out and get the means at once, and then buy one; for by each member getting a volume of the Inspired Translation, it would thereby be put into the church individually. By so doing, they would ever after have the Inspired Translation, the pure word of God, to use throughout all their families, both rich and poor. Thank the Lord for gospel dreams! The prophet Joel says, "Ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the Lord your God, and none else; and my people shall never be ashamed. And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions. And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit." Thank the Lord for the Holy Spirit to seal, witness, reveal, guide, teach, comfort and to deliver from the law of sin and death. O Lord, withhold not from the church the Holy Ghost! Amen. HIRAM RATHBUN.

Dear Herald:-We have had Bro. M. T. Short and E. Davis with us for over a week. They left us this morning for Columbus Kansas; they delivered ten discourses in this place. At first there did not seem to be much interest, but towards the last there was quite an interest, and some are very near the kingdom. I think the seed sown in this place will find place in honest hearts of those who will be of service to the Master's cause. The Saints feel strengthened and edified, and have a renewed determination to press on in this work, the Lord being their helper. We desire the prayers of the Saints that we may be able to do the work that the Lord has trusted to our care, and this shall be our prayer for all Saints.

Dear Heraid:-- I have been much pained to read the controversy going on of late in your columns. I fully believe the gathering will take place, for the scriptures, both ancient and modern, contain much evidence that it is the purpose of God to gather his elect. I think if Elder Gurley will reflect, he will in so doing see that he places both himself and the church in a false position; for if his position on the gathering and tithing is true, then it follows of a necessity, that your Editor is a false prophet; for shortly after he became the president of the church, he gave a revelation to the Twelve, confirming the law of tithing, which had been before revealed. If he gave a false revelation at that time, then it follows still further, that the revelation of 1873 is also false; for in it the Lord is represented as speaking confirmatory of the former commandments concerning "Gathering in the regions round about." I also find in the same revelation, what purports to be a call from God, for Bro. Gurley's ordination to the office of an apostle. Either the revelations are true, or Bro. Gurley is not an apostle. I for one speak for myself, and let the "bolt fall where it may," I have the fullest confidence in the word of God which has been given through his servants on the gathering and tithing. I believe in the Bible, Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants. May God enlighten all your readers, so we may not be tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine. Ever waiting for the time when Zion's watchmen shall see eye to eye, I subscribe myself your constant reader,

Saints' Herald: While presenting the importance of the Saints observing the temporal law, and explaining the same, in the branches in this district, I find yet existing so much misunderstanding on this subject, that I believe a brief but plain explanation of the law in your columns would be of general interest and profit to your readers. The church in temporal and other matters, much resembles our State and General Governments. They have their general statutes binding on citizenship under all conditions, under which flourish township and city governments, which enact laws suitable to their own circumstances and conditions. The church thus has a temporal law applicable to her membership under all conditions and binding, (but not by constraint), from September, 1831, to the end of time. This we may call the general statute. It is found indicated in Sec. 64, par. 5, Book of Covenants: "Behold now it is called to-day, (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people."

This is the general law which the Twelve in connection with the Bishopric were commanded to put into execution in 1861. It applies to nearly every member of the church, for it contemplates the payment of one tenth of that which a man has, upon which he has not already paid tithes; and after that one tenth of each year's net productions. The sacrifice is proportionate, and applies to all alike whom God has blessed with the stewardship of temporal means, be it much or little. The above is the general law, briefly stated, for the compliance with which the Bishopric have made wise and systematic provision in every branch and district of the church throughout the world.

Let us now briefly consider a law given later, in 1838, and applicable to the church under new and far different circumstances, that of building up and gathering to the city of Zion. This law is the famous section 106, of Book of Covenants, and is worded so conspicuously as to attract the attention of the reader, who might be led to confuse it with the general law. The above section might be called the "city ordinance." It is the object of this letter to so explain this section that no one will confound its application with that of the general law or statute, as this section was intended for the welfare of a city, having a new and divine city government throughout. The section was given at the time an unsuccessful attempt was made at gathering by the church, among other things applicable to such an undertaking. It reads as follows:

"Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to be put into the hands of the Bishop of my Church of Zion, for the building of mine house, and for the laying of the foundation of Zion, and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the presidency of my church; and this shail be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of their interest annually, and this shall be a standing law unto them forever for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord. Verily I say unto you, it shall come to pass, that all those who gather unto the land of Zion, shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you. And I say unto you, if my people observe not this law to keep it holy, and by this law sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy; behold, verily I say unto you, it shall not be a land of Zion unto you; and this shall be an ensample unto all the stakes

This Zionic law is the theme of nearly all controversy here, and it has been so interpreted generally as to afford all an excuse for not complying with the general law; whereas its conditions are such that it can only properly and consistently come into use for the express purposes namedthat of building the temple, the corner stone of which had then been laid; the purchase of lands, and paying for lands already purchased by the presidency, etc. It is a pity that this word surplus property, should longer furnish any with an excuse for not trying to comply with the general law, on the ground of not having any surplus. I do not think this word has any more reference to us at present in our scattered condition, than it did to Abraham, the father of the faithful, in his dealings with Melchisedec, the father of the priesthood which bears his name. "And God hath set some in the church," among which are "helps, governments," and their laws; and hence from God has proceeded the general laws and governments of the church, as well as this special law and government concerning Zion, and possibly in the future Jerusalem. By observance of this sacred law of tithing, we can bring ourselves into the same relationship with God as was Abraham in his day; and if it did not come to us sanctioned by the authority of Joseph the Martyr, in 1831, as well as his successor in 1861, its justice, charity and mercy would demand, as well as the sacred scriptures, its willing adoption by every member of the latter day work. The writer has often thought of the necessity also which will arise, when Zion is re-established, for this same law in section 106, which will take from the rich their hoarded gold, leaving them a sum the interest of which will be sufficient for the maintenance of themselves and family, and devoting the surplus to the worthy objects and purposes named, and the poor of God's people who lack an inheritance. This special law to govern the city of God, will do away with Wall Streets, banking corporations, monopolists and extortioners, which it ought to do, and place men more nearly on an equality in temporal things, without which they can not enjoy a like degree of spiritual light and knowledge. While nearly, if not all, are subject to the general law now and henceforth, but very few in comparison will be affected by this law concerning surplus property, which will probably come in force when Zion, temporal, shall again make her certain and glorious appearance, as a place of safety, as calling from them such a trying sacrifice.

I present this subject thus briefly, as I understand it, hoping it may help to a greater unity of opinion, and simply believing it not to conflict with the views of those who understand it perfectly. It may also attract the attention of some of the ministry, who by random explanations of this word surplus, might otherwise explain away and excuse any from participating in the sacrifice, which by the law is the duty of all to make in proportion to the metans God has given them.

MAHLON SMITH.

Yorkston, Wyoming Co., Pa., March 23d, 1885.

Bro. Joseph: I have been laboring as my circumstances would permit. I visited Fairview Branch; preached eight times and baptized five, and blessed six children. Never felt better in the service of the Master. Left many warm friends, who had kindly cared for me while there, and strongly urged me to come again. Came to Wheeling; labored there a short time, and baptized one. I then received news of my father's illness, and started home Wednesday 11th, stopping at Pittsburg over night. Met with Bro. Ells and a goodly number of Saints in the hall, and had a pleasant meeting; all seemed devoted to the cause of Christ. On my arrival home, found my father had been placed in the city of the dead. I would have been better satisfied if he had been in the church.

I expect to stay here a short time. I have some calls for preaching, and will respond as fast as possible. I have just returned from Elwell. Found the Saints there well. They are always glad to meet one of the children of God. I have not forgotten the kindness of Saints and friends in my travels; but don't feel to mention any names.

With anxiety I watch the travails of the church, and wonder when we will be able to see eye to eye, and build Zion according to the pattern. That charity that prevents a multitude of sins, seems to be much needed in the church. I feel more like striving for it than ever.

HIRAM ROBINSON.

FRIEND, Neb., February 16, 1885.

Brother Foseph: We are still in the faith. We are trying to do what we can in our weakness. We attended the conference at Wilber. It pleased the Master to bless us all greatly. I never attended a better conference in my life. We were all well pleased with Bro. Caffall's presence and with the good instructions he gave us in the way of gospel sermons. We came home greatly strengthened, and with a determination to do something for this latter day work; for we have the evidence of its divinity and also know, if we are slothful servants, we don't receive that spiritual strength which we should. So I went to talking with my neighbors about the gospel plan, showing them the difference. Of course the old story came up about old Joe Smith and Utah polygamy. I showed them the difference; gave them time and dates. I have been faithfully at work in this way, I now have some four convinced on baptism, and they have expressed a desire to be baptized, if there was an Elder here. These are heads of families and intelligent folks. I have written to R. M. Elvin to come, but sickness in his family hinders him from complying with the call at present. But we are praying that the time may soon come when an Elder can come; for I believe there are good, honest ones here, famishing for the water of life. I am reading the Kelley and Braden Debate. I think if Mr. Braden is the best that the Campbellites have, they would better hold up.

Your brother in the gospel,

Dear Friends and Brethren in the Gospel:-I am sorry that I could not write sooner. I was born in the town of Paoli, Orange county, Indiana, June 11th, 1814. I was raised at Lexington, Missouri, and was baptized into the church in 1832, by the first Elder ordained, Oliver Cowdery; and according to the old Utah account, I am the oldest one living. I have seen all the sorrow that could be placed on any one, but I am now worn out. It is all I can do to live. I have no home, and I am going back to Iowa, near Mondamin, Harrison county. I have never had anything done in the church for me yet, never received anything yet only the Herald. It was given to me. I never get to go to meeting, or see any one here that is a church member. I desire an interest in all of your prayers.

Dear Herald:-I am yet in the faith. Am still trying to move on in the good work, and hope to fully realize the blessings that the nature of the work leads us to expect, when our labors are ended. Peace here, and rest, sweet rest and salvation full and free in the ages to come. We have joy in believing the gospel, as restored, and peace as a gently flowing river. But the incidents common to this life are of such a character, as to mar, at times, the stream of present bliss; and during the last year our experiences have consisted of smooth, sweet, and rough, bitter opposites. But the former gently soothed the latter to our souls in such a manner as to sensibly confirm us in the faith and trust of the gospel. Thus: when called last November to witness the burial of a conscientious, truth-loving father, and was made to realize his loss to us here; to me the ordeal was a trying one. But the promised comfort to mourners, was as a halo of glory bestowed, and to the heart strength was imparted, enabling us to endure. When we mourn, and comfort of tangible character is realized; when in the world we are troubled, and in Christ we receive peace; when by the cold, deadly formalities of the world, also its doubts, darkness and uncertainties, we have become weary, and going to Christ in the way by him indicated, we obtain rest; do we not by these experiences, demonstrate the actual truthfulness of the gospel; and have we not the liberty and right to say, We know the gospel of Christ to be true-divine.

I labored a part of the fall and winter in the vicinity of Lansing, Michigan, where an extensive opening has been made through the efforts of brethren Kelleys, Deuel and H. Rathbun.

The results so far are, that several have been baptized by the brethren whose names have been mentioned, and myself. Strong opposition is urged against our brethren there; but notwithstanding, others there are investigating and believing. In one place near Dimondale, the folks felt so bad to find the gospel on our side, that they, in absence of their preacher, concluded to investigate for themselves. So by direction of their minister, who was absent, began to hold meetings at the school-house; and their standard of evidence was "Crimes and Mysteries of Mormonism in Utah," by Beadle! By appointment of the others, one of their number would read about two chapters at each meeting. One night after the third or fourth meeting, the school-house took fire and burned down. Have not been informed as to further results there. Brethren there are standing firm. The weather was so intensely cold, and the snow so deep during February, that meetings in Central Michigan, could be held with no degree of success. On the 27th of February I left Galien, and started westward, expecting to work my way to General Conference. Came to Plano same day. Staid there and attended the conference February 28th, and March 1st. Bro. Patterson presided, and the session was a pleasant one. By invitation I spoke twice. Came to Kewanee March 3d; and while there preached three times in their neat, pleasant chapel. Felt blessed. Attended conference at Montrose, Iowa, March 8th and oth. Was at Montrose one week, laboring with good Bro. Bronson, preaching to crowded houses, and kindly cared for by the Father's children. March 14th, I left Montrose, and went to Keokuk. Here I was kindly entertained by Saints, and had the privilege of speaking nine times, concluding our efforts there the 23d, with a happy surprise of a very gratifying character, being attended by about fifty-eight persons, Judge Miller of the city among the number. I felt complimented by this effort of Maggie and Aggie, our sister and friend. I did not visit the city of the Saints, Nauvoo, on account of the uncertain condition of the ice on the river; but like Moses did of old, I went upon Mount Park Bluff, on this side Jordan, and viewed the land from the distance. I left Keokuk on the 24th, and came to Bro. D. C. Millikin's, where I am at this writing. Have spoken here twice in the school house, and have appointments out for Sunday. Am thankful to God for his blessings, and to the Saints and friends for their kindness to me.

With love to all Saints in Christ,

C. Scott.

Dow City, Iowa, March 17th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph: Bro. John Rounds and I have done some preaching in what is called Charter Oak. We delivered eleven discourses, and we expect an ingathering soon. On my return home I baptized one more of Bro. John Young's family, Romalia by name, and we look for all the family by and by. I am not discouraged in this work, although I see some of our leading men in darkness and under condemnation. I say this because I believe the commandments in the covenants which say, If you can not make one like the least of the commandments, you are under condemnation if you do not bear testimony that they are of God; and upon this statement, I am justified in saying that any man that will write his disbelief in the revelations is under condemnation. You may remember that at our last spring conference, I framed a resolution, which had it been adopted, it would have cut off every man's unbelief of the revelations ever coming before the people in the Herald; but it was voted down, and expunged from the minutes, the body thinking the resolution uncalled for, as the Herald was not a paper for that purpose. I framed that resolution to cut off Bro. Zenas H. Gurley's desire to have the Herald opened for that purpose; but the brother has gotten already all he wished in his report last spring to get before the people, without the church giving their liberty by vote, and I am in fellowship with some of the reproof my brethren have given the Editor.

JOHN HAWLEY.

Manassa, Colorado,

March 10th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-I will now enter the political arena of these Polygamists, and portray the low, cunning intrigue of these pseudo-immaculate priests of Brighamism. The first thing in order is the introduction of a lot of Gentile candidates for the various offices of state and county. And as the Brighamites claim the balance of power in the county, they are an important factor to the numerical strength to either party; therefore, they are in election times courted by both sides; and therefore it is a harvest, or rainfall, to the crafty, avaricious leaders, as their pockets feel the metal weight which has been brought to bear on them; as there is no doubt whatever of their selling the vote of their dupes in times past for several hundred dollars. But not one cent has ever found its way into the pocket of the poor voter, who really needed it. Scene the first, is in a store. Enter a candidate with a box of cigars under his arm, and a bottle in his pocket. Boss with some of his henchmen present. Cigar box is opened and passed around, and all hands take one and commence smoking. Then the bottle is brought forth, and all take a drink. Joke and laugh awhile, then take another pull at the bottle, when the conversation takes a confidential tone. Candidate arises to retire, says good, hands over some money, says that it will help to build your school house, henchman receives it, takes it and buys books, then sells them to the school patrons at a large profit on cost, pockets the money, which is the last the school knows anything of it. Scenes number two and three about the same, only candidates are more numerous, but each one must have a talk with the boss. The coast is now clear. Boss calls a priesthood meeting, and names the lucky candidates. All his henchmen say amen. Then a general meeting of the muggins is called, when the ticket as gotten up by the boss is placed before them, that they, too, may have the privilege of endorsing it; when it is declared the unanimous choice of the people. And as the Brighamites claim that they are non-partizans, the ticket is about equally divided between the two parties, according to the weight that has been brought to bear upon the pockets of the leaders, which facts muggins is not cognizant of; but on election day, walks up to the polls and casts his ballot for the candidates that have been thrust upon him by his boss; for he is well aware that if he don't vote that ticket that he will be considered weak in the faith, and a promoter of discord and disobedience, as unanamity is the constant cry of the leaders, for they know that it is the only way which they can have power to hold the minds and actions of their dupes. And they, poor ignorant souls, think that they are rendering service to God by so doing. One good old soul, who was born free in one of the Southern States, and was better raised, delivered a harangue in a public meeting, and said, if any one wanted to know how he was going to vote they could just ask the boss, as he was going to vote for whoever the boss said. But we can look over his manifested zeal, as he had got polygamy on the brain, and he thought that he had the thing for sure; but he came up short, not only of a young wife, but thirty or forty dollars besides, which he says the boss swindled him out of. The game of being united worked awhile with the more intelligent, as long as they took a religious view of it; but just as soon as their eyes were opened to the fact that they were only merchandise in the hands of the crafty leaders, some thirty or forty kicked out of the harness-when the leaders made an example of one or two, thinking it would intimidate the others; but instead of accomplishing their object, it only hastened the revolt of those who yet had not lost the spirit of independence. For they immediately held a meeting in which resolutions were, passed, declaring themselves an independent body; also requesting the Brighamites to erase their names from the church book. But no sooner did the Brighamite leaders see the great blunder which they had made by their imbecile actions, and that the blow which was intended for others had rebounded back on themselves, than they were very anxious to conciliate matters by granting concessions; so they resolved themselves into a teachers' committee of the whole, to visit the unruly members, and grant unto them the privilege of voting for whom they pleased, and they could believe in polygamy, tithing and obedience to the priesthood, or not, just as they saw proper. But they had thrown off the yoke of priestcraft, never more to endure its galling burden. And as we had in the outset started out to find the Kingdom of God, if it was on the earth, we determined to hold to the rod of iron, by living by the word of God as was taught in the gospel of his Son Jesus; and the better to sustain and encourage each other, we organized ourselves into a religious body, thinking we were the only people who entertained the views that we did, not having had the privilege of examining the doctrine and tenets of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. But while in this great dilemma, without a head or name, the Lord in his great mercy directed the footsteps of that good and noble servant of his, Bro. Blair, to our rescue, who by the power of the Holy Spirit made the way of life and salvation so plain, that we were convinced that we were on the right track and had made a lucky escape from the adversary. And after a series of discourses on the gospel truths, Bro. Blair led eleven of us down into the water where we were buried with Christ in baptism, covenanting with him that he should be our pattern and guide, whose teachings we would follow to the end of our mortal existence; and when called behind the vail, that we would be numbered with the just, and receive a glorious resurrection, and be crowned with everlasting life in the Kingdom of our God and his Christ. But Bro. Blair did not tarry long enough to gather in all the honest in heart. We were loth to part with him, as he had endeared himself to us all. But other localities demanded his attendance, so we took his parting hand, after he bestowed his blessing upon us. But not many days intervened, before Bro. Caffall appeared on the field, and commenced action in earnest. He made, I think an average of one discourse per day, while he remained with us some sixty or seventy days. He is an indefatigable, zealous worker in the Lord's vineyard, and before he left us, he had the satisfaction of leading down into the waters of baptism, twelve more, making twenty-three in all, leaving others that intended to be before he went away, which fact he did not know, as he could not see the parties on account of high water. And thinking that he had harvested the last sheaf, and that his services were in greater demand in other parts of the field, he too, after leaving his blessing with us, bid us good by. But before leaving, he had the pleasure of witnessing the departure of the greater portion of those who had taken upon them the name of Christ, from this sink of polygamy and secret corruption, to a moral locality, leaving only three bona fide members, but a host of sympathizers, the greater portion of whom will eventually enter the fold.

Ever praying that the Lord will speed the time when all the honest in heart will be gathered into the church of the First Born, I remain your brother,

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, March 8th, 1885.

Dear Brother Foseph:-I was told last Fall that the law of tithing was of no benefit to us now. But I desire to give the Herald my testimony to the law of tithing. One day before conference I prayed to God to know whether the law of tithing was for us now, tithing or free-will offerings; and the next morning, as the conference come on, a small voice said, "Listen to me, and come up to my house, and bring your tithing, or offering;" and I did as the Spirit commanded me; and it will be seen hereafter, that we shall know the tree by its fruits. I have been a constant reader of the Herald for some time, and have closely watched the arguments of brethren Blair and Gurley, and don't think I can endorse all points of Bro. Gurley on Joseph the Seer; for I have seen him in a dream. My dream is as follows: I was standing in a large building, and a few Saints were standing by me in the building; and there was a great light, and in that light there stood the Martyr, and the angels with him; and the Martyr came near me, and looked at me, and in his hand he held out a pure white handkerchief; and as he passed me the Spirit said, "Follow me." The interpretation is this: The handkerchief is the pure law, and to follow his

May God help us to be firm in the faith once delivered to the Saints. I remain your brother in the gospel, Thos. Conners.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

March 27th.—Lord Granville telegraphed England's ultimatum to Russsia yesterday, demanding an immediate reply. An answer was received to-day from M. de Giers saying that a full response would be made to the communication of the British Government not later than Tuesday. It is not thought, however, that Russia's reply will be definite or satisfactory. It is generally believed that the Russians are advancing as fast as possible over the disputed territory, and that the next move will be a riot at Penjdeh, which will give Russia an excuse for occupying the town. The Afghans are reported to be full of martial enthusiasm. In case war occurs within the next three months the total British force which can be thrown into the field will be about 85,000 men, of which number 45,000 will be native Indian troops. In England great preparations are being made at Aldershot and Chatham for the reception of the army services and the militia. In the ordnance department there great activity in preparing vessels for immediate service. It is reported that the naval reserves are to be called out. The Government has given contracts for 100,000 uniforms.

Statistics collected by the naval Bureau of Intelligence concerning the relative strength of the two Powers show that while Russia's standing army is more than twice the size of England's; England's navy is nearly double that of Russia. The British navy comprises more than 75,000 officers and men, against 44,000 in the Russian navy. Russia estimates the war footing of her active army at 1,008,000 officers and men, increased by the reserves, cossacks, and local troops to nearly twice that number. These are Russian figures, however, and may be exaggerated.

Gen. Negrier's position at Dong-Dang is said to be an exceedingly precarious one. Forty thousand Chinese troops are massed on the frontier not far distant. An editorial in one of the leading Paris newspapers, closes as follows:

"Cease to question the Ministers and invoke the guillotine."

The examination of Cunningham and Burton has been finished. Both men this afternoon were formally committed on the charge of treason-felony.

The last British detachment evacuated Korti. Advices frum Kassala report that the town is still holding out against the Mahdi.

Advices from Ottawa, Ont., report that Maj. Crozier left Fort Carltot to-day for Duck Lake to obtain a quantity of supplies stored there. His force consisted of 100 mounted police and civilians. At Beardy's Reserve several hundred rebels were encountered, and Maj. Crazier was forced to retreat after a hard fight, in which he lost twelve men killed and eleven wounded. Two rebels who tried to wreck a train carrying troops west from Winnipeg were captured. There is a rumor that a quantity of stores belonging to the Hudson Bay Company has been seized by the insurgents. More troops are to be sent at once to the scene of the disturbance from Winnipeg, Quebec, Kingston, and elsewhere.

Several skirmishes are reported between the forces of Honduras and San Salvador in Central America. Honduras takes the part of Gen. Barrios and Guatemala. San Salvidor puts her whole army into the field, Nicaragua provides 4,000 men, and Costa Rica contributes 1,000. President Zaldivar of Costa Rica will assume chief command of the allied forces. More than twenty veteran Mexican officers have left the City of Mexico to join the forces of San Salvador and Nicaragua. The hostile feeling toward Barrios is growing more intense in Mexico day by day, and aggressive measures are advocated.

March 29th.—The rebellion in the Northwest appears to be even more serious than was at first anticipated, and the Canadian mounted police seem totally unable to cope with the insurgents. According to dispatches from the front, the defeat of the troops at Duck Lake was followed by the evacuation of Fort Carlton, which was burned to prevent it falling into the hands of the rebels.

Dr. Rauch, Secretary of the State Board of Health, while admitting that the cholera will pay this country a visit this summer, states that the work of preparing for the scourge has already been begun.

The Celestials have scored another victory. Friday they carried the intrenchments at Langson, securing the key to the position and forcing the invaders to retreat beyond Dong-Dang along the Lougkoi. The losses are unknown. The Orientials have 50,000 men and seriously threaten the French lines of communication with the south. Gen. Briere de l'Isle has asked for 20,000 men. As a result of these continued reverses great excitement prevails in Paris, and the Government had such a narrow majority on Saturday's vote of confidence that the Opposition organs predict the early fall of the ministry.

March 30th.—Lord Hartington announced in the House of Commons that the prospects of peace between Russia ank England were greatly improved. He said, however, that no reply to England's ultimatum had as yet been received from M. de Giers.

The convoy which left Suakin at an early hour this morning has arrived at McNeill's zareba. It is reported that the whole of Osman Digma's force has been withdrawn from the surrounding country and is now concentrated at Tamanieb, where it proposes giving battle to Gen. Graham. El Mahdi has sent large reinforcements to the Arab garrison at Berber. Mount Hamund, to the north of Berber, has been strongly fortified by the enemy.

A spy from Tamai reports that Osman Digma is deserted by almost his entire force, only about 100 followers remaining with him. A large convoy has arrived at the zareba on the Tamai road. It was not molested en route.

A serious outbreak of disease resembling cholera has occurred at San Felipe de Jativa, Provinve of Valencia. Fifteen persons died within twenty-four hours, of colic, with choleraic symptoms. The report has spread that the province is threatened with a return of the cholera epidemic, which would complete the ruin caused by the earthquakes. The people are panic-stricken and begging further assistance from the Government.

Five hundred and eighty men left Toronto for the Northwest Territory. A Quappelle dispatch reports that the Indians on Hill's Reserve nave risen. Three companies of rifles and a battery with one gun left for Fort Quappelle. Advices from Winnipeg report that a general uprising of the Indians is imminent. The telegraph line is still down beyond Battleford. The Indians in the neighborhood of Calgary are reported greatly excited. Several chiefs have put on war-paint, and the settlers, who are quite at their mercy, are alarmed. Gen. Middleton has asked for 2,000 more men.

Russia is offering every inducement to the Sultan to form an alliance with a view of closing the Dardanelles against the British fleet in case of war, and placing all the means of defense, including the torpedoes, at the disposal of Turkey. The Porte's special mission recently dispatched to Berlin has been ordered to ascertain Prince Bismarck's views on the subject of defense. The meeting of the Ameer and Lord Dufferin, the Queen's proclamation calling out the reserves for active service, and England's great preparations in troops, ships, and commissariat are producing an impressive effect on the Porte and his advisers and foreign residents.

At the opening of the session of Ministers' Council, Prime Minister Ferry presented the Government's request for a credit of $40,000,000 on account of the military operations in China. M. Ferry at once moved for the appointment of a committee to examine and report upon the credit, and he demanded that the motion be given priority. The motion was rejected by a vote of 308 to 161. M. Ferry immediately announced the resignation of the entire Ministry.

Gen. Hatch telegraphed to the War Department at Washington announcing that Couch, with six or eight hundred followers, still threatened to delay the President's proclamation and invade Oklahoma. There was a conference at the White House, the result of which was that orders were issued to arrest Col. Couch and the other leaders of his band.

The British steamer Orestes, from Liverpool for Penang, collided with and sunk a Chinese steamer. Seventy persons were drowned, March 31st.—Osman Digma is said to have evacuated Hasheen and Tamai. Gen. Graham will advance early to-morrow. Heavy fighting is expected.

It is said that a French advance upon Pekin is for the present impossible. De Freycinet will not be able to send more than 50,000 men to Tonquin, and there will be considerable delay owing to lack of transports. It is expected that General Billot will be the new Minister of War, Rouvier the minister of finance and Constant Minister of the Interior. The Chamber of Deputies voted yesterday the first installment of $10,000,000 of the Tonquin credit of $40,000,000 asked for by Prime Minister Ferry. The Government has received a dispatch from Gen. de l'Isle entreating the War Office to send him reinforcements immediately. A revolt against the French is reported from Cochin China.

Dispatches from Teheran confirm the report that the Russian outposts were advanced to within eighteen miles of Penjdeh March 22d. The Marquis of Hartington said vesterday in the House of Commons that the Government must decline to give any information at present concerning the progress of negotiations with Russia. The war cloud is thought, however, to be disappearing, and the belief is general that the Russo-Afghan difficulty will be soon adjusted. Russia's reply to England's ultimatum was received last night. Its purport is not known, but it is understood that it agrees to nothing except the proposal to leave the positions of the troops unchanged and to set the International Boundary Commission at work. A correspondent at St. Petersburg telegraphs that the Russian army at Merve has been strongly reinforced, and that thousands of Russian reserves are easily leaving the Caucasus for Central Asia.

The rival of El Mahdi is named El Makki. The number of his adherents is increasing. He has occupied El Obeid. The followers of El Mahdi are alarmed.

United States Consul-General Adamson at Panama telegraphed the Secretary of State this morning as follows: "Gen. Preston, the rebel leader, has seized the Pacific steamship Colon and imprisoned the Captain and purser, the agent of the company, Consul Wright and other Americans. I urged Commander Kane of the Galena to rescue the citizens and property at all hazards. Instructions desired." Upon recept of the dispatch the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Navy held a consultation. Secretary Whitney then ordered by telegraph Admiral Jouett, now at New Orleans, to proceed to Key West with the Tennessee and the Swatara and await further instructions. An order was also sent to the Commander of the Alliance, now at Key West, instructing him to proceed at once to Aspinwall. The Secretary also telegraphed Commander Kane of the Galena at Aspinwall, and asked why he had not protected American citizens and property in the trouble yesterday. He directed him to afford all protection possible while the dificulty continues. It is understood the matter is now under consideration at the Cabinet meeting. The Following is the dispatch sent by Secretary Whitney to Commander Kane of the United States steamer Galena at Aspinwall: "You were ordered to Aspinwall to protect American interests and the lives and property of American citizens. All that is implied in these words is expected to be done by you to the extent of the force ender your command. If the Colon has been seized restore her to her officers if in your power." The cause of the above action is as follows: The steamer Colon was seized Monday at Aspinwall by the revolutionists, who demanded the delivery of a shipment of arms on board for the revolution. The agents refused the delivery. Connor the Locas Superintendent of the Pacific Mail Company, was the first arrested, and later the Captain and purser of the steamer were placed on board. Subsequently Capt. Dow, General Agent of the Pacific Mail Company, Mr. Wright, United States Consul, and a Lieutenant of the American man-of-war Galena were arrested and marched off to the citadel. They were released at six o'clock in the evening on condition that the arms should be delivered, which was done. The American and English war ships did nothing to protect foreign interests, because the revolutionary chief declared that he would resist their interference by force.

The losses of Gen. Negrier's forces at Langson, Tonquin, are now estimated at 1,500 men. Gen. Negrier was wounded in the breast by a bullet, and one of his aide-de-camps, Col. Berge, received a bullet wound in the head. Gaulois says one-fourth of the whole effective French force at Langson was left on the battlefield. One hundred thousand Chinese troops are advancing on Chu and threaten to destroy the French forces there before a chance is afforded of being reinforced. Gen. Glovenelli is intrenched at Hu-Dohan. He is also in a critical position, being surrounded and the line of retreat cut off by 12,000 Black Flags. The Chinese have recaptured all their positions in the vicinity of Langson.

Advices from Battleford, Northwest Territory, confirm the report that the Indians have sacked the town. At last accounts they were preparing to attack the barracks where the inhabitants are intrenched. They have asked Indian-Agent Rowe for a conference. Sir. John Macdonald said last night in the Canadian Parliament that he had received two despatches from the Northwest—one intimating that the Indian revolt at Battleford was likely to mee with a satisfactory solution, and the other that Crowfoot, Chief of the Blackfeet, had promised to be loyal. Crowfoot is the most powerful Chief in the Northwest, but his word is not to be depended upon. Riel is said to have 1,000 men with him. Troops are being sent to the front as fast as possible from every direction.

April 1st.—The war scare in England is gradually passing away. Russia's reply to England's recent communication is said to have been courteous and pacific in tone, although its purport has not yet been made public.

A general advance is to be made to-day by the army under Gen. Graham from Suakin to the Hasheen zareba. Tomorrow morning the troops will march upon Tamai, which is occupied by a large force of the enemy.

Dispatches from Battleford, in the Northwest Territory, report that the Stony Creek Indians have retreated to Poundmaker's reserve, about eighteen miles distant, but contemplate an immediate return. The savages are massacring the white settlers. Advices from Winnipeg say that the barracks at Battleford, where the the inhabitants are intrenched, are closely besieged.

A cabinet conference was held in Washington to determine the course of the Government in reference to the rebeilion at Panama. It was decided that this Government is bound by the treaty with Grenada to secure free and uninterrupted transit across the isthmus. Telegrams were accordingly sent to ascertain whether transit was open and whether railroad and steamship property had been interfered with. Orders were also sent to the Brooklyn Navy Yard to gather the available marines and some Gatling guns and to have them in readiness for immediate transportation.

A dispatch dated Hanoi this morning states that the situation of the French army there is critical. A large Chinese force under European leaders the dispatch says, is endeavoring to cut off the French. Gen. Negrier has arrived at Hanoi. He is making good progress toward recovery from his wounds. The people at Hanoi are calm. Gen. Briere de l'Isle telegraphs from Hanoi, under date of yesterday: "After a fresh encounter with the enemy at Dongsong yesterday evening, Gen. Herbinger continued his retreat in good order along the Kep and Deoquam routes. Gen. Negrier's present condition is favorable. After seeing him I hope to rejoin the Second Brigade in defense of the rivers."

Orson P. Arnold, a polygamist, was arrested at Salt Lake City, Utah, last night on an indictment for unlawful cohabitation and released on $1,500 bail. A. M. Musser former Superintendent of the Deseret Telegraph Company, was arrested to-day on the same charge and also released on bail.

Herr Rudolph Kalb, the German scientist who has of late years attracted attention by his predictions of earthquakes, has given cause again for solemn reflection. He announced an earthquake for March 30th, and on that date one occurred in Spain. He now announces that there will be trouble the 12th of June and the 12th of July.

April 2d.—Gen. Sir Peter Lumsden's proposal of a new frontier line six miles south of the lowest boundary yet claimed by Russia has created a sensation in England. This arrangement gives Chamin-I-Baidh, an important fortified town, to the Russians. The town is the key to Herat, and it is said that if Chamin-I-Baidh is to be given up Herat might as well be surrender.

ed at the same time. The impression grows that peace will be patched up somehow between England and Russia.

The Chiefs and Princes of India, assembled in convention, have tendered to Lord Dufferin their loyalty, their money, and their troops for the service of England in any war with Russia over the Afghan boundary. It was the anticipation of this hearty co-operation of the natives of India. which was assured by Lord Ripon's popular administration, that gave England the confidence of strength displayed in her recent warlike demonstrations. A conflict between Russia and England might be of doubtful result, but with myriads of natives to call upon, who have been accustomed to modern warfare and who would be marshalled under British officers, England will not hesitate about going to war with Russia in defense of her Eastern interests.

Gen. de l' Isle telegraphs as follows from Hanoi, under date of Wednesday: "Gen. Negrier is making favorable progress toward recovery. He has no feverish symptoms. The evacuation of Langson seems to have been slightly hurried, especially after the success of our counter attack, which was made without serious loss. French brigade has twenty days' ammunition and provisions, and is able to await convoys. No further reason is given in regard to the very rapid evacuation of Dongsong. The Chinese so far only appear desirous of reoccupying the former positions to the northward of Deoquan and Deovan. The situation is better than the overdrawn accounts of the last four days had led me to believe. Col. Desbordes today assumed command of the Chu brigade." Gen. Briere de l' Isle telegraphs under date of Wednesday evening: "The second Brigade reached Chu at noon in good order. It was in contact with the enemy until two o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Our losses were trifling. The enemy's pursuit was slow." The French, Monday, began an attack on the Pheng Hoo, or Fishers' Islands, situated in and commanding the channel between Formosa and the China mainland. The engagement lasted until late Tuesday, when the French succeeded in securing occupation. The French losses are reported to have been but trifling-only three killed and three wounded-while it is said the Chinese lost 600.

Gen. Graham's army advanced from Suakin to McNeill's zareba, reaching the latter place at 10 a.m. In the afternoon a balloon was sent up to reconnoitre, and the enemy being only visible in small numbers the march was resumed. At 3 p. m. high ground to the east of Tamai was occupied.

Circuit Judge Connor of Des Moines, Ia., has decided that under the new prohibitory law druggists have no right to sell liqor without special permit from the Board of Supervisors. Many supposed that under the provisions of the State Pharmacy act such a permit was not necessary, and have been selling without it. To-day the drug-store of Weaver & Marsh was searched under a warrant, sworn out on information that they were selling liquor illegally. The officers found a barrel of alcohol and a quantity of other liquors. It is expected that the druggists will soon make a test case of this question, and there is talk of its being done by the State Pharmaceutical Association.

A dispatch from Commander Kane of the Galena at Aspinwall reports that transit across the isthmus is closed. Steamship and railroad property is safe. The United States Government will take immediate action to clear the passage across the isthmus and to protect the interests of American citizens. Two hundred marines will be sent to-day by the steamer City of Paris, and Admiral Jouett has been ordered to leave New Orleans at once for Aspinwall.

Trouble is reported from Quappelly, in the North-west Territory. The Indians have gathered there in war-paint and have an ugly look. The situation at Battleford is extremely critical.

Mr. Atkins, United States Commissioner of Indian Affairs, has rendered a decision to the effect that Secretary Teller's action in causing an executive order to be issued opening the Crow Creek Indian Reservation to settlement was illegal and void because it was a violation of the treaty of 1868. Commissioner Atkins recommends to Secretary Lamar that the extensive order which opened the lands to settlement shall be revoked. Secretary Lamar suspended the order some time ago.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The failure of Scaramanga & Co., grain merchants of London, with branches of the house at St. Petersburg and Rostoff, has created a great sensation in financial circles. Privy Councillor Bunge, Minister of Finance, has sent the Governor of the State Bank to Moscow to confer with the bankers of that city. The purpose of the conference is to devise means for averting a financial crisis, which is believed to be imminent. Within the last thirty days five of the largest tea and sugar importing firms in the Moscow have failed.

There were 212 failures in the United States last week, a decrease of thirty-five as compared with the preceding week.

Reports from the chief wheat-growing States of the country regarding the condition of the wheat crop are discouraging.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grait trade for the last week, says: Fine weather brought spring sowing nearly to a close. Sales of English wheat during the week 52,062 quarters at 32s. 7d., against 57,243 quarters at 38s. Id. for the corresponding week last year. Foreign wheat recovered from its depression. Officoast business was confined to the sale of one cargo of Oregon at 35s. 4½d. and one cargo of California at 35s. 3d. Nine cargoes arrived. Two corgoes were withdrawn and ten remained. There are due twentyfive cargoes, mostly California. The market to-day is unexcited. Flour steady and 6d. dearer; maize and oats, 3d. dearer; barley firm.

Chicago elevators contained last Saturday evening 15,904,217 bushels of wheat, 1,914,428 bushels of corn, 540,901 bushels of oats, 134,525 bushels of rye, and 77,939 bushels of barley; total, 18,572,010 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 22,116,639 bushels a year ago. During last week the stock increased 317,149 bushels of corn. For the same date the secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 48,088,987 bushels of wheat, 7,891,206 bushels of corn, 2,799,931 bushels of oats, 385,302 bushels of rye, and 1,019,504 bushels of barley. These figures are smaller than a week ago by 341,447 in wheat and larger by 730,172 in corn.

There were 3,658 business failures in the United States during the last three months, an increase of 362 as compared with the corresponding quarter of 1884. The liabilities foot up $46,181,951, an increase of nearly $6,000,000.

The decrease in the public debt for the month of March is $483,000.

Three banks at Norfolk, Va., closed their doors April 2d,— the Exchange National Bank, the Franklin Savings Bank, and the banking and broking firm of Bain Brothers. The concerns were closely connected with one another. The liabilities of the Exchange National will not be less than $150,000, although nothing is positively known as yet.

The St. James Gazette this afternoon reports that Benn Davis, solicitor, of No. 6 Cork street and Bond street west, has failed. His liabilities are placed at $1,000,000, and it is stated that he has fled to Spain.

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS.

BOOKS.

When Job said "O, that mine enemy had written a book," he must have had in thought how fickle and changeable the words and speech of his fellows were. Had his enemy written, then Job could have taken what was so presented into the still watches of the night, and there have prepared his answer to it, undisturbed by the things of the day. Had Job lived later, the complaint that he made would possibly have been removed; his enemy would most likely have rushed into print.

Book making began a great while ago. For since the invention of letters by the Phoenicians, as it is said, two thousand years before Christ; and hieroglyphics by Atholes, son of Menes, who wrote the history of the Egyptians, before Christ 2,122 years, records in book form of some sort were doubtless preserved; but of them we are left to conjecture formed from fragments similar to the footprints of ancient races left in the rocks, the tumuli, and the mines.

The early books of the Romans were sheets of wood, lead, or copper loosely joined at the back by rings. Subsequent improvement hollowed out the sides of sheets of wood leaving the centers thin, but protected from contact by thickened edges. Upon these sheets of wood wax was spread, and upon this soft tablet, so prepared, the writing was made; when these sheets joined at the edges, like our school boys' double slates, made the book. How crude and frail, and yet how imperishable these records, may be inferred from their material, and the care bestowed upon them. Furnished with a book like this the student sat at the feet of his teacher, stylus in hand, and wrote down the thesis presented to him; and when the impression of what he had written was made upon his mind, he resmoothed the surface of his waxen slate and was ready for his next lesson.

This sort of books was in use for records, and for epistolary purposes, until after Christ. It is thought that some of Paul's letters reached the churches to which they were written, in this form. We may contrast our records at the county seat, with the same records kept in this ancient manner—how small the building would be compared with the huge piles of wax covered wooden sheets such method would require.

In some sense this form was modified by the strips of papyrus, fastened by one edge in a roll, and bound to an embellished stick of metal, or ivory.

An Athenian, Phillatius, was the first who made an effort at a larger book. He sewed a few leaves of papyrus together at the edges and preserved them in outside covers of wood. To do honor to this inventor his countrymen erected a statue in marble; but to us his memory is kept in the better monument of the book maker's

From these crude books the successive steps of securing the inscribed leaves in covers of wood, richly bedecked in cloth, or leather, with corners of iron, brass, silver or gold, with sides embossed in carved and embossed imagery, were rapid; but not until the art of printing became known, did book making cease to be a slow and laborious, careful business. Indeed, it was not uncommon that the labor and expense bestowed upon a single volume, would equal the cost of a house.

Nor was the cost put only upon the binding; for the title page, chapter heads, and initial letters all offered opportunity for the exercise of the skill of the scribe—and they were very cunning workmen, were those monks of the olden time.

St. Cuthbert's Gospel and epistles, now in the British Museum is supposed to be the most ancient book in existence. It was written in the beginning of the seventh century, by Eafrid, Bishop of Durham; was illuminated by Ethelmund his successor, and was bound by Bilfrid, a monk of Durham, about 650 A. D. It is bound in boards, covered with velvet, and edged with silver, and enriched with plates of gold set with precious stones.

As soon, however, as the art of printing had made the multiplication of Books an easy matter, more care began to be bestowed upon their binding to secure a good cover, devoid of the long objectionable bulky form, and at a less cost; for to own a book anciently, was almost to be independent. With their increase the costly forms of binding became more rare and newer, more portable and elegant forms took their places. In this work, as in music, painting, and sculpture, Italy took first active part; and by appreciative employment and remuneration encouraged skillful artists to design and execute decorations for books, and "in the land where Michael Angelo, Da Vinci and Raffaelle produced their great works, under the Medici the art of book binding flourished."

Jean Grolier, of this age, was the first to introduce lettering upon the back of Books. During the reign of Francis First, the French took the lead in binding; but towards the close of the eighteenth century, England assumed the superiority; a result to which Roger Payne, a skillful and tasty man, who lived about 1770, largely contributed.

In reference to the art now, France leads in elegance, England in strength, and America in her ceaseless invention—her Yankee faculty of rapid construction by doing nothing by hand that can be done by machinery.

The art of Book making is also the art of preserving them when once made at least, the one branch is closely allied to the other; and one peculiar branch of the art preservative is that of restoring old books to their original forms, including the defaced and worn out printed page.

This branch has been brought to great perfection in the city of Paris. Indeed, to such an extent does the skill of these men go, that they will replace parts destroyed by rats, worms or moths, make and re-instate missing words, lines or pages, even replacing margins with such exactness that it is difficult to tell the new from the old.

From the advancement made in the mechanical arts, the making of many books has become an easy matter; and so cheaply is this being done that books are within the reach of the multitudes.

All over the land, in every hamlet, the foot prints of Time are being remeasured, and the scenes of busy life in all ages are being lived again; by the reader for pastime to fill up the measure of the hours; and by the student who loves the lore he so carefully and laboriously peruses, for its sake alone, and the added power that it brings to him. And we can but think that the multiplying of books is one result designed of the divine mind to follow the peopling and the repeopling so wide a land as that we live in.

It was but yesternight that one of our associates read to us a chapter out of the record book of ages, respecting the physical growth of our county—just a scrap from the many interleaved volumes, with which the bosom of mother earth has been embalmed by the busy fingers of the minutes as they cast the shuttle of time, and built up, with a patience and skill exceeding those of the most dexterous monk that ever wore cowl, the tomes of eternity.

But our brother had held in his hand the books of Priest, Baldwin, Hugh Miller, and other of the giants that were in the land, while he rested in the shade, from the researcher's arduous toil. So also the Light that our brother so deftly took to pieces and analyzed for us, had been much of it sifted through the wide spread leaves of the Books, of the scholar and philosopher; nor did he who taught us the simple elements making up the grand fabric of statement and proof, forget the lessons that had come to him from the dead, though living, Aristotle, Plato, Bacon, Locke and their later compeers. All, all of us have communed with these men of a similar school, but a different age, and by the books they have written have we known them.

How natural then that we, though we may not like them leave so broad a mark across the cycles of time by the books we may write, as have they by the ones they have written, shall strive so far to imitate them in diffusing the knowledge they have so lavishly given, by interchanging their works with each other, and by so doing honor them while we benefit ourselves.

Books are the mental souls of the men who have written them; the thought-life of those who may die, but leave this better part of themselves to live on. Those who read them are fed and thrive upon the mental life blood of the superabundant flow. Those who neglect, or refuse to read can not know what strangely exhilarating draughts the "book worm" drinks, from out this charmed spring of life.

Friendship is a peculiar thing and takes its strangeness from diversity-from the royal love that neither knows, nor sees a fault in the object loved, through all the manifest gradations from the coldness of indifference to the vindictiveness of hate. Man has made friends to himself of the animal kind, and has bound himself to them by his demeanor towards them; and woe betide him who forgets the dues of his friendship to them. But, while man has thus made friends with the animate of nature, he has likewise made friends to himself of the inanimate; and found a response in their voiceless caresses of beauty and fragrance, to the nobler and higher emotions-those which make him "but a little lower than the angels." fragile daisy, the fragrant tuberose, the larch, and the giant tree of the Yosemite Valley-all answer to the chords of tenderness and regard of the heart, and man, cultivated or savage, finds in them friends. With them he communes, asking nothing but the privilege of companionship with which the Creator of both has endowed

But human friendship, the dumb submission and trust of the higher type of animals, the companionship of the inanimate, are not enough-the soul, the sentient, living man demands more—and it is found in those friends of the past and present age, whose faces of flesh we have not seen; but whose individualities, forces and graces, have been fashioned and moulded for us in their books. Ah, my friends, the subtle magnetism of the friendship we have for our books. How gentle, how gracious, how strong.

Once a gentle shepherdess, living on a peopled plain, was found to know the separate animals of her woolly charge by their faces, and could tell the age and history of each member of the flock, as a mother the ages and characteristics of her children. So too, are we familiar with these silent companions of ours, the books we have learned to love. And what an influence these friends have had upon us; how sweet and clear the memories of our earlier ones, how invigorating the perusal of our latest. The writer remembers with piquant pleasure his first romance; and how intensely he identified himself with the warlike Sir William Wallace, of the Scottish chiefs; and with what avidity and mental relish he conned the poems of Pope and Byron and Moore and Scott; the keen delight with which he followed the creations of Dickens and Shakespeare. Nor can you forget how tenaciously you have clung to the book-friends you have made, from the primer to the Bible.

These friends are not exacting, they make no demands upon us; they are not coy, they never evade our approaches; they are truthful, wearing the same face to-day that they wore yesterday; "They invite no confidence, and they betray none," as has been aptly written. Let us then learn that while we appreciate them, and regard them as they stand upon our shelves, or lie upon our tables, as the shadows-real of the souls of men and women living, or dead, and care for them tenderly, cherishing our love for them as men of nobility cherish the friends of their every day life.

Then gather these friends from their places of rest,
Wait not the angel to trouble the pool;
Loving them all, bring the truest and best,
Honor the Master who giveth the rule.
What men, in their goodness may offer to you,
Do ye for them, in your greatness of mind;
Bring what our social tie safely may see—
Bring all your book-friends, leave none behind.

Bring all your book-friends, leave none contact.

Familiar and worn though their faces may be;
Clothed in their rags, or embellished with gold,
The thoughts that are in them ought to be free,
The story they're telling should ever be told.
Bright in their newness, or dimmed by their wear,
Each one has something we all long to see—
Thus sharing the burdens, the pleasures we'll share,
And "Good will to all," our blest guerdon shall be.

REPLY TO "REVENGE" (No. 2.) BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR. (Concluded).

"I AM informed," says Elder Gurley, "by David Whitmer in a recent interview, that these very revelations [in Doctrine and Covenants] were not taught as law to the church in the first few years of its existence, neither was it considered essential to so regard them, as the Bible and Book of Mormon were held and taught as the only law of God to the church; and all that was necessary for man. And that the idea of arranging the 'items of faith' and incorporating the same together with Joseph's revelations as a 'rule of faith and practice,' was never talked, nor heard of to his knowledge, until quite a while, perhaps some years, after Sidney Rigdon came into the church, December 30th, to whom he charged the origin of it; hence his writing the lectures on faith. Whitmer stated that the 'lectures' and 'revelations' contain many good things in his opinion, but that he opposed accepting them as a rule of faith in 1835, believing it wholly unnecessary, and a mistake; and that his experience only confirmed him in that belief. It is quite evident that these 'Lectures on Faith' and 'revelations' did not become law to the body until August, 1835, when by their vote they adopted them. It is equally evident, that the law to the body prior to that date, was the gospel as revealed in the New Testament and Book of Mormon."

Referring to the above statement we have to say, it is both humiliating and painful. For if David Whitmer ever made the above statement, he has either forgotten in respect to these matters, or from some other cause misrepresents the plain, palpable facts in the case. Either Elder Gurley or David Whitmer assaults the plainest facts of church history-facts which are interwoven with it and in it from 1827 till 1841, at least. Law is "A rule of order or conduct established by authority; * * a fixed regulation; an expressed command; a decree; an order."-Webster. In this sense the revelations of the Seer were recieved and acted upon from the very first by the Seer himself, by Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and all others who were baptized into and continued in the church. The revelations through the Seer were law to him in respect to procuring and translating the Book of Mormon; (D. C. 2:1-6; 4:1-6; 5: 1-16; 9: 1-10); they were law to David second one subscribed to "An appeal" issued by the church in Missouri, and printed in the Evening and Morning Star, August, 1834, says: "Whereas the Church of Christ, recently styled the Church of the Latter Day Saints, contumeliously called Mormons, or Mormonites, has suffered many privations, afflictions, persecutions and losses on account of the religious belief and faith of its members, which belief and faith are founded in the revealed word of God, as recorded in the Holy Bible, or the Book of Mormon-the revelations and commandments of our Savior Jesus Christ; and whereas the said church, by revelation, commenced removing to the western boundaries of the State of Missouri, where lands were purchased of the Government, and where it was calculated to purchase of those who were unwilling to reside with the church as a society, all lands that could be bought, for the purpose of building up a holy city unto God, a New Jerusalem, a place which we were desirous to call Zion, as we believe a place of refuge from the scourges and plagues which are so often mentioned in the Bible by the prophets and apostles, that should be poured out upon the earth in the last days; and whereas the inhabitants of Jackson county, Missouri, have leagued and combined against said church, and have driven the Saints from their lands, and took their arms from them, and burned down many of their houses, without any provocation; and whereas we have petitioned the Governor of this State, and the President of the United States, for redress of wrongs, (the law being put to defiance in Jackson county), and for redemption of rights, that we might be legally repossessed of our lands and property; and whereas the said inhabitants of Jackson county, have not only bound themselves to keep us out of that county, but have armed themselves cap a pie, and even with cannon, for war; and whereas our people, residing in the Upper Missouri, have recently armed themselves for military duty and self defence, seeing their arms taken from them by the inhabitants of Jackson county, were purposely kept from them; and whereas a number of the members of the church in the east [this was the 'camp'] have emigrated to this region of country to settle and join their brethren, with arms to answer the military law, which has created some excitement among the inhabitants of the upper counties of this State; whereupon, to show that our object was only the peaceable possession of our rights and property, and to purchase more land in the regions round about, we met a committee from Jackson county for compromise; and our emigrating brethren [the 'camp'] met some gentlemen from Clay and other counties to satisfy them that their motives were good, and their object peace, which they did; and whereas the propositions of the Jackson committee could not be accepted on our part, because they proposed to buy or sell, and to sell our land would amount to a denial of our faith, as that land is the place where the Zion of God shall stand, according to our faith and belief in the revelations of God. * * To be obedient to the commandments of our Lord and Savior, some of the heads of the church commenced purchasing lands in the western boundaries of the State of Missouri, according to the revelations of God, for the city of Zion. In doing which no law was evaded, no rights infringed, nor no principle of religion neglected, but the laudable foundation of a glorious work begun for the salvation of mankind in the last days, agreeable to our faith, and according to the sacred Scriptures of God. * * It will be seen by a reference to the book of commandments, [printed, imperfectly, in fall of 1833], page 135, that the Lord has said to the church, and we mean to live by his words, 'Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; therefore, as the people of God, we come before the world and claim protection, by law, from the common officers of justice, in every neighborhood where our people may be; we claim the same at the hands of the Governors of the several States, and of the President of the United States, and of the friends of humanity and justice in every clime and country on the globe.

By the desperate acts of the inhabitants of Jackson county, many hundreds of American citizens are deprived of their lands and rights; and it is reported that we mean to regain our possessions, and even in Jackson county, by the shedding of blood.' But if any man will take the pains to read the 153d page of the Book of Commandments, he will find it there said, 'Wherefore the land of Zion shall not be obtained but by purchase, or by blood; otherwise there is none inheritance for you. And if by purchase, behold you are blessed; and if by blood, as you are forbidden to shed blood, lo, your enemies are upon you, and you shall be scourged from city to city, and from synagogue to synagogue, and but few shall stand to receive an inheritance.' So we declare, that we have ever meant and now mean, to purchase the land of our inheritance, like all other honest men, of the Government and of those who would rather sell their farms than live in our society. * * The faith and religion of the Latter Day Saints, are founded upon the old Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, and direct revelation from God; and while every event that transpires around us is evidence of the truth of them, and an index that the great and terrible day of the Lord is near, we entreat the philanthropist, the moralist, and the honorable men of all creeds and sects to read our publications, to examine the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the commandments, and listen to the fulness of the gospel, and judge whether we are entitled to the credit of the world, for honest motives, and pure principles." * *

These were the wise, brave, Christian words of David Whitmer and his fellows, in July, 1834; and they will live through all time as exalted evidence of their unshaken faith, their godly zeal, and their lofty trust, in the hour of peril and persecution. This is excellent reading just now, and pays well for a careful, thoughtful perusal. It proves that the "camp," and their breth-ren resident in Missouri, did not intend to take possession of their lands and properties by the force of their own arms; it also proves that the Saints received and acted upon the revelations through the Seer as the law to the church; and it also proves that both David and John Whitmer accepted, obeyed, and publicly defended the revelations given to the church through the Seer. To this we add a memorial "To His Excellency, Daniel Dunklin, Governor of the State of Missouri," made by E. Partridge, W. W. Phelps, Isaac Morley, John Corrill, A. S. Gilbert, John Whitmer, and others, in October, 1833, which reads: "We, the undersigned, citizens of the Republic of the United States of America, inhabitants of the State of Missouri, and residents of Jackson county, members of the Church of Christ, (vulgarly called Mormons) believing in God, and worshiping him according to his revealed will contained in the Holy Bible, and the fulness of the gospel contained in the Book of Mormon, and the revelations of God through Jesus Christ, respectfully show, This shows that the church then held "the revelations" given to the church to be of equal authority with the Bible and Book of Mormon. When John Whitmer resigned the Editorship of the Messenger and Advocate, March, 1836, he said as follows:

"It may not be amiss in this place, to give a statement to the world concerning the work of the Lord, as I have been a member of this Church of Latter Day Saints from its beginning; to say that the Book of Mormon is a revelation from God, I have no hesitancy; but with all confidence have signed my name to it as such; and I hope that my patrons will indulge me in speaking freely on this subject, as I am about leaving the editorial department-Therefore I desire to testify to all that will come to the knowledge of this address; that I have most assuredly seen the plates from whence the Book of Mormon is translated, and that I have handled these plates, and know of a surety that Joseph Smith, Jr., has translated the Book of Mormon by the gift and power of God, and in this thing the wisdom of the wise most assuredly has perished: therefore, know ye, O ye inhabitants of the earth, wherever this address may come, that I have in this thing freed my garments of your blood, whether you believe or disbelieve the statements of your unworthy friend and well-wisher.

"It is no trifling matter to sport with the souls of men, and make merchandise of them; I can say, with a clear conscience before God and man, that I have sought no man's goods, houses or lands, gold or silver; but had in view for my chief object. the welfare of the children of men, because I know that I have been called of God, to assist in bringing forth his work in these last days, and to help to establish it, that as many souls as would believe, and obey the truth, might be saved in his kingdom; and also assist in bringing about the restoration of the house of Israel, that they might magnify his name, for what he has done and is doing for the fulfillment of the prophecies of all the holy prophets that have written on this great and important subject since the days of Adam to this present time: and while I have been in the editoral department, I have endeavored to write, obtain and select such matter as was calculated to promote the cause of God, as far as my judgment was capable of discerning: and wherein I may have erred, I am conscientious and innocent; but do cheerfully and humbly ask pardon of those whose feelings in any wise I may have injured by digressing in the least from the strictest path of rectitude.

"I would do injustice to my own feelings, if I did not here notice, still further the work of the Lord in these last days: The revelations and commandments given to us, are, in my estimation, equally true with the Book of Mormon, and equally necessary for salvation; it is necessary to live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God: and I know that the Bible, Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints, contain the revealed will of heaven. I further know that God will continue to reveal himself to his church and people, until he has gathered his elect into his fold, and prepared them to dwell in his presence.

"Men at times depend upon the say of others, and are influenced by their persuasions to embrace different systems. This is correct, inasmuch as the principle is a just one: God always commissioned certain men, to proclaim his precepts to the remainder of the generation in which they lived; and if they heeded not their sayings, they were under condemnation."

Messenger and Advocate, p. 286, 287.

All these testimonies prove beyond reasonable question, that the faithful ministers and members of the church up to 1836, at least, held the revelations in the book of Doctrine and Covenants to be "equally true with the Book of Mormon and equally necessary for salvation," and therefore to be law to the church. How, then, can it be possible that David Whitmer should say what Elder Gurley claims he did! The facts are, Elder David Whitmer owes his membership in the church, his authority in the priesthood, his call to be a witness to that marvellous book—the Book of Mormon—and his appointment to the various missions which he was called to fill, to the revelations through Joseph the Seer. And it is a further and most important fact, and one that all should understand, that the latter day work was begun, the Book of Mormon translated, the priesthood restored and organized, baptisms administered, the church organized, based, and builded upon, and by virtue of, the revelations of Jesus Christ through Joseph the Seer. These revelations were the first cause and the divine authority, for founding and building the church of Christ in this dispensation. The Bible and Book of Mormon were and are indispensible in furnishing doctrine, prophecy, history and the like, but they do not and could not furnish the authority—law—for the founding and building up of Christ's church and performing God's "marvelous" work in these last days.

As to the "Lectures on Faith," Elder Gurley is the first, to the knowledge of the writer, to even suggest that they were given as "law" to the church. It was held that "the lectures were judiciously arranged and compiled, and were profitable for doctrine." Mess, and Advo., vol.

1:161, Mill. Star. 15:300. Instead of Sidney Rigdon writing these lectures, as claimed by Elder Gurley, it is historical that Joseph Smith prepared them; for he says in his "History," Mill. Star. 15:204—"During the month of January, [1835], I was engaged in the School of the Elders, and in preparing the Lectures on Theology for publication in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants." If Sidney wrote them in any sense, it was in the capacity of a scribe.

ELDER BLAIR'S ERRORS COR-RECTED.

In Herald for March 7th, is an article from the pen of Elder Blair, in which he makes some singular charges, and takes some singular positions, which I will notice only in brief. If his position, or definitions be true and correct, as they relate to the faith of the church and her positions, then I say that deception, intentionally or unintentionally, has been practiced; and the sooner the mist is removed, the better for all parties. Had I believed that the church held as Elder Blair now defines her position, I should not have accepted ministerial authority at her hands the second time, as I did in 1879, at Galland's Grove, Iowa; and so far as Elder Blair's references to me be concerned, let it be distinctly remembered, that upon the adoption of a certain resolution at Council Bluffs, Iowa, in September, 1878, I sent to the church my resignation as an officer, which was accepted, the reasons for resigning being contained in the paper itself, and published in the minutes of the Conference, held at Plano, Illinois, in the spring of 1879. succeeding autumn, at Galland's Grove, Iowa, to the General Conference, was presented a resolution from Decatur District, asking the Body to define its position relative to faith essential to membership, &c., (I have not the resolution at hand or would insert), which was referred to the First Presidency, and upon which they made their report, which was unanimously adopted. I asked the officer of the Conference for a copy of that report, and received from his hand what purported to be either the first draft, or copy thereof, of said report, and from that manuscript I have quoted just as it reads on page 4, where the statement "as set forth in the Epitome" &c., occurs, supposing it to be correct; hence Elder Blair's charge, that I "dropped the word and and put as in its is entirely a mistake, is not the case in fact, I having no such purpose, design, or intent; but simply quoted from the copy in my possession, as stated. The mistake most probably occurred in copying, as I am now authoritatively informed that in the official copy the word and instead of as is found. However, to my mind there is not that difference as to the effect of the use of these words as Elder Blair would have us believe, and when he states that the use of the word as, instead of and, "vitiates said report, and, makes it mean the very opposite of both what was written, and what was intended to be written," I say of such language and such statement, that it is the veriest folly. Webster in his "Unabridged" defines the word as to mean "like, similar to, of the same kind, or in the same manner with;" and whether used as above, or as defined in the 5th definition—"the adverb limiting the view to certain attributes or relations; as, virtue considered as virtue," it in neither case changes the sense so as to "make it mean the very opposite of both what was written, and what was intended to be written." Nothing of the kind; which fact will appear even to the "unlearned" of whom Elder Blair has spoken so frequently; so if the "copy" from which I quoted be in fault, Elder Blair's version and application of it is a far greater one.

We will now turn to the Report as published by Elder Blair, and which is accepted as correct. But let the reader first notice the Resolution, at foot of said report in same column, and adopted (Elder Blair says "at Galland's Grove, Iowa, September 7th to 15th, 1878," but I think it was done at Council Bluffs, not Galland's Grove); and after a careful perusal then turn to the Report and read that, "We are further of the opinion, that it is not the intent and meaning of the said resolution, (the one passed in 1878), to make a belief in the revelations in the Book of Covenants, or the abstract doctrines possibly contained in it, (neither the one nor the other), a test of reception and fellowship in the church;" now, if these are not a test of fellowship as provided for above, why do Elder Blair, et al seek to make them such? And why does he arrogate such power and authority unto himself as to denounce those as apostates, who dare to "disregard" some of those revelations? when the position of the church as seen above allows them to do so.

Let us proceed with the Report. "We are further of the opinion, that, while it is not intended, or indeed practicable to bind, or proscribe the liberty of conscience, whereby violence is done to the honesty and integrity of the people, by prescribing dogmas and tenets other than the plain provisions of the gospel, as affirmed in the New Testament, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, and set forth in the Epitome of Faith and Doctrine." language can mean anything, this act of the church does affirm as its faith, and obligatory upon its members, not all the revelations, or doctrines contained in either book, but simply "the plain provisions of the gospel," as affirmed in the three, "and set forth in the Epitome of Faith and Doctrine." The reader will conclude whether they are "set forth" in fact, or not, the church declared they were. Elder Blair seems to think quite differently, and to regard the Epitome as good as far as it goes. Well, it either is an "Epitome of the Faith and Doctrines of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" as it professes to be, or else it is not. If it is not, then it ought to be so amended, so that it will be. But if it is, then in that case it ought to remain intact, Elder Blair to the contrary notwithstanding.

Elder Blair refers to the pleadings before Lake County Court, Ohio, wherein Plaintiff avers that the Church was founded upon, and believed in "certain well dea fined doctrines set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants." The reader will notice at once that this position does not commit the church to all the revelations, or doctrines contained in either book, but to well defined doctrines." Now what are they? What those "well defined doctrines?" Again, Elder Blair refers to the "Articles of Incorporation," and quotes that, "The church adheres to the doctrines and tenets of the original church, &c., as organized by Joseph church, Smith." At this point the question again rises, "Has the church defined, and declared what these "well defined doctrines" and "tenets" are? To which I answer yes, as seen above in the Report adopted at Galland's Grove, Iowa, in September, 1879, (with which act all former ones must be made to harmonize), and also in the paper presented to Secretary Frelinghuysen, wherein the committee say that "The church by her President Joseph Smith in 1844, (just prior to his death) gave to the world an epitome of faith and doctrines, which were held sacred,—and the only principles necessary to salvation. This if we mistake not, was made in answer to the inquiry of Hon. John Wentworth, of Chicago, and published by him in his paper the Democrat, and also published by I. Daniel Rupp, in his History of the Religious Denominations in the United States, during that year, and is as follows:" Here follows the "Epitome of Faith and Doctrine" and after it is enumerated, the committee say to his Honor, that the Reorganized Church of to-day, affirm this (the faith as there presented), as their faith, and as the faith of the church; and that by law and of right, "it is now and must necessarily ever remain as the only and true faith of said church." See Herald for April 28th, 1883, page 265.

This report was both received and adopted by the General Conference, at Kirtland, Ohio, in April, 1883; and when Elder Blair, by pettifogging, special pleading and otherwise, seeks to ring in upon that faith, and upon that position, the law of tithing, gathering into Jackson and adjoining counties in Missouri, armies very great, temple building, Patriarch, baptism for the dead, Order of Enoch, and a boarding house called the Lord's, which things are taught in the Doctrine and Covenants—as part of the gospel of Christ Jesus, essential to life and peace, and binding upon all who unite with the body, I say it's monstrous and outrageous; and we are guilty of deception unless we teach these things to those who enquire after truth, provided we hold them as Elder Blair advocates. The church has both the right and power to declare her position upon these things, and her voice in that regard, is final so far as I am concerned. I with other Elders have regarded these things last named as "local," and therefore not binding upon us; but, if the church shall say in definite language, that they are essential elements to life eternal, essential to membership, &c., as indicated by Elder Blair, then this controversy will be at an end; and each one will have the benefit of such decision, and be permitted to make their own choice in the matter.

This whole case may be summed up in a very few words: The gospel contains certain principles to be believed; certain ordinances to be obeyed, and blessings to be enjoyed. Upon this the church declared at Galland's Grove, by report of Presidency, and at Kirtland, Ohio, upon paper, presented to Secretary of State. positions do not affirm the doctrines referred to above, and contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, neither are they by these acts enjoined as argued by Elder Blair; hence the necessity of a declaration authoritative, and final. Elder Blair affirms that I deny the faith, when I "reject the gathering," &c. And yet on page 138, of Herald for February 28th, the president of the Twelve declares that principle an "open question;" and also that the practical part was "settled authoritatively when the church said there is no place to gather to;" and further on he treats the subject as a "local matter, and as such can not be part of the gospel." This position is quite the opposite of Elder Blair's, and its author is one of the fathers of this Reorganization. Reader, don't you agree with me that a decision, clear and plain, ought to be made upon these various points of controversy?

Elder Blair states that "we do not know what Jesus taught in those ninety-nine parts which we now have not." Just so Elder Blair, so accepting your statement as true, then it follows that those "ninety-nine parts, nor no part of them, have been revealed through the "choice Seer," and after all your loud sounding claims and pretensions, you confess yourself in the dark upon the "ninety-nine parts" which you affirm "we now have not." Again, Elder Blair says, "If these ninety-nine parts of Christ's teaching were the "will of God," then it is certain that in the Book of Mormon we lack ninety-nine parts of it at least. If Elder Blair means by this, that we can not do God's will, and be saved in the celestial kingdom, without knowing those "ninety-nine parts," then certainly we are all yet in sin, and Christ's mission a failure, and the dead in Christ would be without hope because they did not know what the "ninety-nine parts" were. The sophistry of Elder Blair upon this point is but calculated to deceive; for certainly if Christ Jesus did not give to the race sufficient of God's will to save it, we have no reason to expect nor to look for it through any choice seer, be he who he may. If Paul and associates did not understand that will, and of which they have testified to the world in writings which we have, declaring "though we or an angel from heaven preach any other, let him be accursed;" if they did not, certainly we can have no confidence that Elder Blair does. Of the record of those twelve apostles of the Lamb, the Book of Mormon bears testimony of the truth of their statements, and is a unit with them touching the gospel of Christ as taught by them, claiming as we have, that with the New Testament it contains a fulness of the gospel. The gospel is "the power of God unto salvation," hence, if we have a "fulness" revealed to us in the Book of Mormon, we in that "fulness" would have enough to save the entire race, hence the saying in Nephi 5: 9—"And whoso shall declare more or less than this, and establish it for my doctrine, the same cometh of evil, and is not built upon my rock; but he buildeth upon a sandy foundation, and the gates of hell standeth open to receive such, when the floods come, and the winds beat upon them." If the gospel revealed in New Testament and Book of Mormon be but one hundredth part of what Christ taught and did, I take it that it is enough, or else those men who saw and heard him teach would have testified of more, for Jesus certainly said to his apostles, "and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."—Acts 1:8.

Those apostles are dead, but they yet speak; their testimony still going to all the earth, just as Jesus declared should be; and when Elder Blair or any one else, adds to that gospel, to that will of God, the Jackson county gathering, paying of sur-plus property to build a temple with, and building of a boarding house, &c., by which they seek to establish such things as the doctrine of the gospel, they make a fatal mistake in my opinion; for such things are not necessarily any part of it, but are matters purely of a local character; and though a controversy of this kind may be deplored in some regards, let it be remembered that those who first "threw down the gauntlet" must bear an equal portion of the responsibility; and just so long as elders shall affirm and seek to establish the ideas and positions taken by Elder Blair, that just so long will it meet with the extreme and positive resistance, which such extreme and ultra positions deserve, and if any one is living in a religious "glass house," they should be careful how they throw stones. In bonds,

Miscellaneous.

WARNING.

To whom it may concern:—Sometime in the early part of the year 1883, (I believe), one calling himself Wm. Falkler, imposed himself upon the Elmwood Branch of the Church, was baptized, confirmed and ordained an Elder by Bro. H. L. Thompson. He soon disappeared, carrying with him a certificate of baptism, and an Elder's license, signed by the officers of Texas Central District. Recent investigation has satisfied me, that he is an impostor. The following from the Fort Worth Gazette, (Texas), states the facts so far as I am able to learn.

A TREACHEROUS PREACHER.

Lumpkin, Ga., Nov. 2.—A sensational divorce vas granted here to-day. The Rev. J. W Falkler was ten years ago the most noted Baptist revivalist in the South. It was developed on him here that he had deserted a wife in Louisiana, where he had worked at the printing business. Church people, however, stood firm by him, and he continued his labors without going through the formality of getting a divorce from his Louisiana wife. He married Miss Jesse Yar-borough of Greensboro, N. C., a tender maiden The other denominations were scanof fifteen. dalized by the act, but the Baptists still upheld He was assigned to the pastorate here. Soon tales of intemperance and abuse of his wife began to be circulated, and the sensation culminated, in the filing of a suit by the child-wife, seeking a divorce on the grounds of drunkenness, etc. Falkler disappeared between two suns, and is now preaching in Texas under an assumed name. The Baptists of Georgia have publicly cut him off from their connection. Mrs. Falkler is allowed to resume her maiden name and the privilege of remarrying, but it is decreed that Falkler must remain a grass widower.

The said J. W. P. Falkler, alias Wm. Falkler, is hereby forbidden to act in any official capacity within the limits of the South-western Mission, and the Saints warned to beware of him. Should he present his credentials elsewhere, the Saints will be warned and can take action accordingly. He has also called himself in some places Captain Price.

HEMAN C. SMITH,

Pres. of South-western Mission.

PAIGE, Texas, March 22d, 1885.

MARRIED.

DIGGLE—ALLEE.—At the residence of Mr. Charles Allee, Valley View, Harrison county, Iowa, March 26th, 1885, by Elder David Chambers, Bro. Edward Diggle, to Miss Jennie Allee. May peace and prosperity attend them through the journey of life.

Anderson—Julian.—At the residence of the bride's sister, 1967 Grove street, Oakland, Cal., March 22d, 1885, by Elder J. B. Price, Elder William Anderson, of Oakland, Alameda Co., to Miss Minnie E. Julian, of Lafayette, Contra Costa county, both of this State.

Scott—Bass.—In Lamoni, Iowa, at the home of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. S. P. Bass, on March 29th, 1885, Mr. Carter Scott of Davis City, Iowa, and Sister Lulu M. Bass; Elder Henry A. Stebbins officiating in the marriage service.

McDonald—Simpson.—At the home of Bro. and Sr. William Simpson, in Cleveland, Iowa, March 31st, 1885, their daughter Minnie was married to Mr. James McDonald, also of Cleveland. The marriage ceremony was performed by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

RABLEY—SIEGRIST.—In Providence, Rhode Island, March 22d, 1885, by Elder E. O. Toombs, Bro. George W. Rabley to Sr. Annie Siegrist, both of Providence.

DIED.

Scott.-On Monday morning, March 23d, 1885, at Chariton, Lucas county, Iowa, of heart disease and dropsy, Sr. Jane Scott, in the 64th year of her age. At the time of her death, was on her way from Salt Lake City, Utah, accompanied by her youngest son, Joseph, to make her home in Lamoni, Iowa, with her oldest son, Bro. John Scott, who resides there. The funeral services were conducted by Pres. Joseph Smith, assisted by Elder H. A. Stebbins, and the funeral sermon preached by Elder W. W. Blair. The services were held in the Saints' New Church, Lamoni, and the body laid away in Rose Hill Cemetery, to await the resurrection of the just. She was the mother of six children, all of whom she lived to see married and settled in life: five of whom are left to revere her memory. She has twenty living grandchildren.

SANFORD.—At her residence in Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, March 12th, 1885, of heart disease, Sophia A., widow of the late Leander Sanford, aged 43 years. Sr. Sophia was, at the time of Joseph Burton's first missionary work in Nova Scotia, a consistent member of the Baptist Church. Upon hearing the "Faith once delivered to the Saints" expounded, she was baptized and confirmed a member of the Church of Christ, by Elder Burton. From that time until her death, she lived a life of faith in Christ and his word, and availed herself of every opportunity of spreading the latter-day work. Her only real request was, that her three young children, now orphans, should be brought up among the Saints. Although living in a community which is very severe upon "the doctrine," yet her remains were followed to the place of interment by a large concourse of mourning friends. Rev. Robinson, Baptist, conducted the services. Sr. Sanford was a sister to Emma Burton and George N. Davison.

EDWARDS.—Near Bevier, Missouri, March 19th, 1885, Sr. Elizabeth Edwards, lacking about five weeks of being 77 years of age. She has experienced the latter-day work for long years; been in Utah; found her errors while there; returned to the states, and joined the Reorganized Church by baptism, May, 1873. Suffered sickness for about one year before she died. Died strong in the faith. Services by Wm. L. Williams, at the house, and benediction at the grave by J. T. Williams.

FRICK.—At Missouri Valley, Iowa, March 28th, 1885, Sister Eliza Frick, wife of Bro. M. S. Frick, aged 29 years, 8 months, and 8 days. Baptized at Reunion of 1884. Burial services conducted by Elder J. C. Crabb. Preaching services will be held by Elder Charles Derry, April 19th, 1885, at Missouri Valley, Iowa.

TERRY.—At Crescent City, Iowa, March 20th, 1885, Myrtle Clara, daughter of Mr. and Sr. H. A. Terry, aged 4 years, 10 months and 7 days. Her father and hired hand had been burning brush during the day; and after they quit work in the evening, this little girl, with other children being out playing, it is presumed went to making fire, when her clothes were caught by the flames, and burned her so that she only lived till the day following. The parents feel keenly afflicted by the sad circumstance. Funeral services by H. N. Hansen.

ROBERTS.—In Boomer Township, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa, February 5th, 1885, Bro. John Roberts, aged 85 years, 16 days. Bro. Roberts was born in London, England, January 19th, 1800; became a member of the church in Canada, in 1832; gathered with the church at Nauvoo, and shared in the trials and tribulations that came upon the Saints at that time. He was ordained a Seventy before the death of the Seer, and labored considerably in the ministry. During the dark days of apostasy, he remained, faithfully trusting in God, and refused to follow any of the factions that came into existence, until the message of the Reorganization saluted his ears, when he received it with gladness. He remained faithful until death, and though unable of later years to perform ministerial labor, he lost no opportunity to testify to neighbors and friends of the truthfulness of the latter day work. All who knew him, though some might differ from him on the subject of religion, could but esteem him for his uprightness and sincerity. His companion in wedlock, who shared with him the pleasures and toils of life for nearly sixty-four years, survives him; and with nine children, and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren, mourn his loss. Funeral services by H. N. Han-

BARRETT.—At Box Elder, Colorado, March 14th, 1885, Marcellus Moses, oldest son of Bro. Thomas and Sr. Barrett. Born in Colfax Co., Neb., July 15th, 1870. Deceased was killed by a colt. Funeral sermon by Elder Richard Starah.

Bunt.—At Box Elder, Col., March 21st, 1885, Margaret Maria, daughter of Bro. H. Bunt, aged 3 years, 9 months and 11 days. Funeral sermon by Elder Richard Starah.

WHITE.—At Bevier, Missouri, March 22d, 1885, after suffering many years with consumption, Bro. John White, aged 57 years. Bro. White spent some years in Utah; united with the Reorganized Church May 12th, 1876, being baptized by T. W. Smith. Services conducted by G. T. Griffiths, at the Saints' Chapel, assisted by George Hicklin. May God comfort and bless Sr. White in her lonesome condition. Having no children to take interest in her behalf in her old age, may the Saints look after her, and see that she is provided for temporally; and may God bless and comfort her spiritually.

BOOKER.—At Whynott, Miss., March 3d, 1885, Bro. G. Booker; born in Monroe county, Alabama; was baptized by Bro. R. J. Anthony. He was in his right mind to the last. He leaves a father and mother, and three brothers, to mourn his loss.

This is a reply by Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Adventist Society, and is an important work to be in the hauds of the ministry of the Church, especially; and it is a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon.

DITOR

Lamoni, Iowa, April 18th, 1885.

FROM the Chicago Tribune of the 20th of March, we quote what follows in reference to the supposition that at the conference of the Utah Mormon Church there may be considered a proposition to discard polygamy as a tenet.

"The church organ breaks silence tonight for the first time on the rumor of the coming abrogation of polygamy at the spring conference. It argues against it but does not absolutely deny it, and admits that a portion of the church favors the step. It closes a long editorial saying: "Members of the church who feel and talk favorably for the abrogation of doctrinal points are the reverse of 'strong.' They probably belong to a class who believe in the fulness of the gospel as restored through Joseph Smith and almost wish they didn't, or, at least, that it was not true. . . . They desire to adhere to the church because they can not rid themselves of the conviction that it is the power of God unto salvation, but they would like its doctrines and ways more in conformity with those of the world, that every species of friction which causes discomfort, and temporal disadvantage might be avoided. In fact, they are conservative Mormons. . . . But, coming back to the starting point, all anticipations and predictions regarding the reception of revelations to the church are necessarily premature. The faithful who seek to know and do the will of God will not be shaken of purpose, neither will they abandon their religious principles in whole or in part under any kind of pressure They would hold to their integrity in the full expectation of sooner or later beholding the salvation of God."

The church organ referred to in the extract is the Descret News,

The Salt Lake Evening Chronicle of March 17th, referring to the same supposed event says:

"A crisis is evidently close at hand, and an important one. The Mormons will not fight the United States; they will not much longer resist the laws of the United States; and thirdly and finally, they will not emigrate from the soil of United States. This, then, is our "Revolution"—a revolution which may be counted upon as confidently as the continued revolution of mother earth upon its axis—Utah is about to revolve into line. So there is not to be a revolution in Utah, but rather a revolution of Utah—which has been at a standstill lo these many years. And the prime issue as between this troublous Territory and the general government is what it always has been, to wit, the repression of polgg-

We have not seen the full text of what the Deseret News may have stated about such proposed action at the April Conference to be held at Logan, instead of Salt Lake City, for obvious reasons; but if such a proposition is entertained at that conference in an honest endeavor to put away the evil, we trust that it will receive the hearty support of the people, and be faithfully observed by all priests and people alike.

We seriously doubt the purpose of the leading men to submit such a proposition to a vote of the people. If, however, Pres. John Taylor has, or does present to the conference what may purport to be a revelation from God to the effect that the precept and practice of plural marriage shall be, or may be abandoned, we look for lively times in Utah. We do not doubt that if God speaks to that people on the subject at all, it will be precisely to that effect.

Would John Taylor have the courage to say to the polygamic men and women already in the practice of plural marriage, and to the thousands to whom the dogma has been so industriously taught and its practice urged so strenuously.

"Thus saith the Lord, your Redeemer and your God; Hear ye, O my people in the mountains and valleys of Utah, and listen to my voice. Lo these many years ye have been following in devious paths and I, your Lord, command you, that ye no longer walk in them. Let all those among you who have taken unto you more wives than the one wife of your youth, put them away from you. Provide for them and their children that they have borne to you, according to the riches and goods ye possess; but put them away even as I commanded Abraham of old to put Hagar away. Let those among you whose first wife is dead, (or is married to another), and who had more wives than the first wife living at the time of her death, take the one first chosen to be plural wife as your companions; and be ye married unto her as provided in the law given to my church, and published in my Book of Doctrine and Covenants before the death of my servants Joseph and Hyrum Smith; and put all other of your plural wives away from you and live no longer with them as your wives. And this shall ye do that ye may keep the law of the land, and no longer incur my displeasure."

This would most likely be the tenor if not the text of such a revelation as God would give in the case if he should speak like himself as he is revealed in the three standard works, Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants.

BBO. B. A. ATWELL of Cabool, Texas county, Missouri, has been preaching for a time at home, and aroused the indignation of some preacher, who gets after Bro. Atwell, and his teaching in the Cabool Weekly Record as follows:

HEALING THE SICK.

"The healing of ills by prayer alone has become widely enacted around Cabool, and it is turning the word of God to ridicule. Certain persons have wrested passages of Scripture from the Holy Book, and point to them as authority for their belief. Jesus himself healed the sick, but he neither rebuked nor condemned the physician. Paul took for his associate the apostle Luke, who was a skillful and trained physician. It was Doctor Luke who looked after his bodily infirmities, felt his pulse and perhaps gave him soothing draughts. The doctrine of these faith-cure people is often devoid of common sense; they will never use a mustard plaster, for fear it may destroy the effect of the prayers. There is no authority in the Bible for this phase of skeptical philosophy which they have adopted. Some perhaps, have been healed through their agencies, but these cases have been mainly nervous or imaginary troubles. Because most of those who teach this folly have been Christians, or thought to be such, little has been said heretofore of their weakness; but it is now time for sensible, Christian people to condemn the practice. The murder is no less a murder because the patient dies in the arms of a matron who is praying for him in a faith-cure hospital, while the remedies within reach are not made use of. The system is a deformity that injures society, the body and the soul. The boards of health in all communities should be required to investigate and report all faith-cure hospitals and societies. The police should arrest those individuals who stay the use of proper remedies in cases of sickness, and Christianity should deny what has become a scandal to т. А. Ј." common sense.

To this Bro. Atwell replies as follows: HEALING THE SICK.

"If you are M. D. I can relieve your curiosity and interest in the practice of medicine and sale of drugs, by stating to you long as the world remains in its present state of existence there will be enough unbelievers to support the practice of medicine and sale of drugs. If you are a Right Reverend, then you have drawn your line of battle between yourself and the Scriptures. If you are representing some pet collection of human opinions you choose to entitle church, come forth from your hiding place, show your colors, we will know better how to dish up to you. I thank you for the timely article, it will give the public a chance to choose the plain teachings and promises of God through the Scriptures to man, or the jumped at opinions of uninspired men, or men as they are borrowed from tradition. Empty assertions are easily made, furnishing proof for the same is very, very difficult. Read-er, you will bear in mind the Master teacher did not fully commission his servants to build up the Church of the King of Heaven till after his crucifixion. Reader, bear in mind the battle is between T. A. J. and the Scriptures; read Mark 6: 14-20.

"Next examine the Master's promises for proof of their fulfillment to believers after his crucifixion; James 5: 14, 15. T. A. J. states that Paul took with him Dr. Luke, (he Luke), examined cases and felt pulses at Lystra. Did Luke feel the cripple's pulse? If he did, we would like to know it. See Acts 14:8-11. Did Luke feel Paul's pulse when he received his eyesight? Acts 9: 17. Did Luke feel Paul's pulse when the snake bit his hand? Did Luke feel Publin's pulse? Acts 18: 1-11. Reader will bear in mind the Master sent out his servants two by two. T. A. J. says Luke was with Paul, Luke could not be with Peter and John at the same time he was with Paul. Peter and John separated from Paul and Luke, and preaching the gospel in another part of the country at the same time. Who felt the lame man's pulse at the gate of the Temple? Acts 3: 1-17 Tell us please, whose pulse Dr. Luke felt? Bible readers have the choice in plasters, who are sensible people, those who fear the Lord. Does a belief in the positive promises of God through Christ effect murder? In sickness what are the proper remedies for a believer in Christ to use? See James 5:13-15. If you are a popular skeptic tell us please what part of the Bible you believe? If you are an open atheist, tell us please what Sanhedrim authorized you to exercise jurisdiction over the people's conscience? Who is it turns the word of God to ridicule? Read Matthew 12th chapter, notice the 30th to 50th verses closely; next read Matthew 28th chapter. A scandal to common sense, is to be wise in your own conceit.

B. A. ATWELL."

WE commend the following to the readers of the HERALD for the good sense found therein:

POISONOUS WALL-PAPERS.

"Medical Record:-From inquiry we have made there can be no doubt that, with one exception, all grades of colored wall-papers manufactured in the United States contain more or less arsenic. This practice of introducing a poisonous substance into a covering for walls is the more reprehensible from the fact of its being totally unnecessary. One firm in London, England, and one in New York produce wall-papers having the most varied and brilliant coloring, which have not even a trace of arsenic in their composition, and there appears to be no reason for other manufacturers using poisonous colors, except that by doing so they make a higher profit on their manufactures. Arsenical colors are strong and about half the price of non-arsenical colors, and herein lies the secret of their persistent use by wall-paper manufacturers; and it appears to us that the action of the Legislature is called for to put a stop to the practice.

"We find, also, that a class of colors used by wall-paper manufacturers (who claim to sell non-poisonous wall-paper), which have not arsenic as a base, really contain much of this substance. We refer to colors composed of some white compound, such as whitening as a base, which is stained with aniline. These colors are very largely in use, and of course contain arsenic introduced with the aniline. The vehicle usually employed to give body and adhesiveness to the coloring being glue, often made from hides prepared with arsenic, this substance is constantly introduced by such means. It is therefore clear that the practice followed by the firms in question, of employing permanently an expert chemist, who tests every package of color and glue by the Marsh test, which indicates the presence of the twenty-thousandth part of a grain, is the only method by which non-arsenical wall-papers can be produced. The public appear under the impression that arsenical poisoning from wall-papers is due to portions of arsenic in powder being dusted off the walls. Such is not the case, the chief danger lies in the fact that in damp weather the arsenic undergoes decomposition, and forms, in combination with other substances present, arseniurretted hydrogen, which diffuses in the room, and being a deadly poison causes sickness to the inmates. This form of arsenical poisoning is more to be dreaded than that from the particles removed by attrition; the latter, however, being also a source of danger to health."

"An emment London physician, Dr. Graham, says: 'It is not a correct practice, after a cold is caught, to make the room a person sits in much warmer than usual, to increase the quantity of bed-clothes, wrap up in flannel, and drink a large quantity of hot tea, gruel, or other slops, because it will invariably increase the feverishness, and in the majority of instances prolong, rather than lessen, the duration of the cold. It is well known that confining inoculated persons in warm rooms will make their small-pox more violent by augmenting the general heat and fever; and it is for the same reason that a similar practice in the present complaint is attended with analogous results, a cold being in reality a slight fever. In some parts of England, among the lower order of people, a large glass of cold spring water, taken on going to bed, is found to be a successful remedy, and, in fact, many medical practitioners recommend a reduced atmosphere, and frequent draughts of cold fluid as the most efficacious remedy for a recent cold, particularly when the patient's habit is full and plethoric?'

"Dr. Graham further says: "It is generally supposed that it is the exposure to a cold or wet atmosphere which produces the effect called cold, whereas it is returning to a warm temperature after exposure which is the real cause of the evil. When a person in the cold weather goes into the open air, every time he draws his breath the cold air passes through his nostrils and windpipe into the lungs, and consequently diminishes the heat in those parts. As long as a person continues in the cold air he feels no bad effects from it; but as soon as he returns home he approaches the fire to warm himself, and very often takes some warm and comfortable drink to keep out the cold, it is said. The inevitable consequence is that he will find he has taken cold. He feels a shivering which makes him draw nearer the fire, but all to no purpose; the more he tries to heat himself the more he chills. All the mischief is here caused by the violent action of the heat. To avoid this, when you come out of a very cold atmosphere you should not at first go into a room that has a fire in it, or if you can not avoid that, you should keep for a considerable time at as great a distance as possible, and, above all, refrain from taking warm or strong liquors when you are cold. This rule is founded on the same principle as the treatment of any part of the body when frost-bitten. If it were brought to the fire it would soon mortify, whereas if rubbed with snow no bad consequences follow from it. Hence, if the following rule were strictly observed -when the whole body or any part of it is chilled, bring it to its natural feeling and warmth by degrees—the frequent colds we experience in winter would, in a great measure, be prevented."

We take the following from a late issue of the Chicago Tribune. It is interesting because it is in harmony with the idea given in the Book of Mormon, that the horse and other animals were found here by the immigrants from beyond the sea, of which the history is given.

"A precept of the founders of the Celestial Empire was 'To retain laws and customs according to the traditionary manner, and to extend these laws and customs to other lands. But this extension is not to be effected by the oratorical powers of single messengers, nor through the forces of armed, hordes. This renovation, as in every other sound organic growth, which forces itself from within, can only take place when the outer barbarians, irresistibly compelled by the virtue and majesty of the Son of heaven, blush for their barbarism, voluntarily obey the image of the heavenly Father and become men."

"Acting in accordance with this precept, so diametrically opposite to the practice of good Christian nations from the dawn of their history. a Buddhist missionary, Hoei-shin, or Hui-shen, returned to China from a long journey from the East, full five hundred years before the Norsemen discovered Vineland. He wrote a report which was, in the year 499 A. D., copied into the official Year Book of the Chinese. That report forms the oldest known writing describing the location, productions, people, and customs of America. The information thus given by that Buddhist missionary relates to a period which antedates the most remote times mentioned by the obscure traditions of the Aztecs. By the latter horses were unknown, but two varieties of wild cattle then ranged in herds on the plains of the Rio del Norte. One of these varieties may have been the bison, the other was possibly descended from animals described five centuries before by Hoeishin as follows: 'The horns of the oxen are so large that they hold ten measures. They use them to contain all manner of things. Horses, oxen, and stags are harnessed to their wagons. Stags are used here as cattle are used in the Middle Kingdom, and from the milk of the hind they make butter.'

"Geology tells us that this continent was the original home of the horse. In the writing of that Chinese teacher of a philosophy and a morality that shames the practices of modern civilization, there is a clear and distinct statement that horses, oxen, and stags were domesticated and used as beasts of draught, in the manner with which the missionary was familiar at home in China. There is absolutely no room for doubt as to the meaning that ancient explorer intended to convey, and no proof that his story was not correct seems to have been offered."

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

THE following we clip from the Kansas City Fournal of April 7th:

"SAINTS" IN ANNUAL COUNCIL.

"The forty-seventh annual conference of the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints is now in session at Independence. This session was convened yesterday morning, and will be continued during the entire week. Representatives of this branch of the "Mormon church," known as the Josephite branch, are present, and the session will be a most interesting one. Fully 150 delegates will be present, a large number of whom have already arrived, and were in attendance at the opening session yesterday. They are being entertained by the resident members of the church at Independence, and are charged $2 for board during the conference.

Elder Joseph Smith of Lamoni, Iowa, son of the founder of the church, is president of the conference. He manifests marked executive ability in presiding over the deliberations, and is looked upon with great respect and the highest esteem by all the members. A number of the delegates had arrived Sunday and preaching was held in the church by Elder Joseph Smith and in the court house by Elder A. Smith.

The sessions of yesterday morning and evening were taken up with the organization, and receiving reports of the various ministers from all over the world where this doctrine is being preached. In the evening a large congregation heard Elder J. W. Gillen preach at the church, where all the sessions will be held. The programme for to-day is, prayer-meeting at nine a. m.; preaching or spiritual meeting at 10:30 a. m.; business meeting at one o'clock, and preaching at 7:30 o'clock. This will be the general programe for the week, to be varied as occasion demands. The speaker for each evening will be announced at the business session by the president

The following we clip from the Kansas City Times of April 8th, which is only a fragment of that paper's report or General Conference proceedings:

SECOND DAY'S SESSION OF THE CONFERENCE.

"The following resolution was introduced by Bishop George A. Blakeslee and E. L. Kelley, and was adopted unanimously:

"Resolved, That it is with great sorrow and solicitude that we are compelled to chronicle the fact of the severe trial and affliction of that great patriot, soldier and beloved countryman, General U. S. Grant, and that during the conference we invoke in his behalf our united prayers that if it may please our Heavenly Father he may yet be spared to the joy of his family and countrymen."

President Smith then delivered a short address to the conference during which he said that experience had taught him one great lesson and that was, "Order was heaven's first law," and that heaven's children were sometimes derelict in following this law. "All say they love the work we are engaged in and are willing to make sacrifices for the work. If that be true why do we not do things that do not require any great sacrifice. Our secretary has labored hard to get his reports in readiness for the work of the session. Yet I am pained to observe that many have been delayed. I have looked at this neglect with a degree of anxiety, as it is certainly a violation of the first law. I dislike red tape if it hinders progress, and want to cut it short; but if I find it facilitates, I want to let it roll out. It is only by a system of order that we have obtained a place on the world's platform, for which we have been battling for years. Let us not neglect it in this hour of success."

How the word of God is being spread abroad! During the year 1882 we are told that the British and Foreign Bible Society issued 2.964,636 copies of the Bible, and in whole or in part, it was translated into 298 languages or dialects. Who can estimate the amount of good it is thus doing.

Correspondence.

859 Broadway, Oakland, Cal., April 2d, 1885.

To the Latter Day Saints in all the world, Greeting: The Expositor has now been published for three months at this place, and the fourth number will be out on the 8th inst. We are delayed in our issue by having to get our work done at another office, and having to set up all our adds., or standing matter, again. We do not expect such an occurrence again. We have sent by mail our paper to about five thousand, for three months. We thank the Saints for their liberal patronage, and for the words of good cheer and encouragement which we have received. But we have not yet nearly enough subscribers to make the paper self-supporting, the Editorial and all other work thrown in. It will therefore be impossible for us to continue to send the paper to so many non-subscribers, although our wish and desire would prompt us to do so. Already its influence is felt for good, as is shown by the large congregations which assemble to hear the word preached, and the kindly greetings the paper receives from the non-members, as well as by the kindly remarks of the newspapers generally, to which we have sent The Expositor.

We hope and trust the Saints in all the world, will see the necessity of continuing the publication of this paper, and of its free distribution on this coast; as we intend to make each succeeding number better than its predecessor, if possible; and place before the world our principles in such a plain and lucid way, that the most obtuse mind can comprehend the great latter day work. Already we have secured the talent of some of the best and wisest in the church, both male and female; and we justly feel proud of the record we have already made. We ask the hearty cooperation of the purest and best, with their money, with their pens, and brains and prayers, and good wishes. That we may continue to merit the approval of our Heavenly Father, and the good wishes of our brethren,

We remain yours in Christ,

H. P. Brown, Editor of The Expositor.

LITTLE RIVER, Decatur Co., Iowa, March 23d, 1885.

Dear Herald:-You are a welcome-visitor to us, your prompt appearance every week furnishing food and nourishment for the mind in interesting articles from the laborer's in God's great vineyard, is a source of comfort to us. Your columns have been very efficient in disseminating the principles of truth, convincing many honest souls of the truthfulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the necessity of obeying the same. But of late we are constrained to say, that in our opinion your valuable columns are shaded with articles too averse to the faith and doctrine of the church which you essay to represent, to accomplish much good for the cause. But we sincerely hope that the pages of our much loved Herald will soon attain their wonted splendor, and be like the trumpet that gives not an uncertain sound.

I am encouraged in this great and good work; and can say that I know that the gospel of Jesus Christ is just what the inspired Paul said it was, "the power of God unto salvation; for therein is the righteousness of God revealed." It is consistent with the teaching of the sacred word, that in every renewed dispensation of the gospel of peace, some would be favored with more of the heavenly light than others. If this is not the case, why did Amos write, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." I am free to confess that I am one of the few that firmly believe Joseph Smith to be one of the favored, whom God in these last days chose to revive his work, and to restore the primitive gospel of Jesus Christ. Any one acquainted with the religious history of Joseph Smith, if he will read the twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah, will see part of his prophetic work beautifully illustrated, pertaining to the translation of the Book of Mormon, which is referred to by David in his eighty-fifth psalm, as "truth springing out of the earth." Joseph's work did not end here; for in compliance with the instructions of the heavenly messenger, he organized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, after the primitive pattern; and the gifts of the gospel were bestowed on the church, in token of his divine calling, and God's acceptance of the church. I recollect hearing my mother tell of many good meetings she has enjoyed in the early days of the church, when the Spirit was poured out without measure. Many arose and testified that they knew the work was of God. In many cases their sick were healed, the blind received their sight, the deaf heard, and the lame walked. On one occasion, an aged lady by the name of Faunce, who had been afflicted for years with a spinal disease, so that she could not walk without crutches; and when led into the waters of baptism by Simeon Carter, in mid-winter, through a hole cut in the ice, she swooned and fainted, and the servant of God raised his hand toward heaven, and said in a loud voice, so all could hear, "If I am a servant of God you shall be healed;" and she came out of the water rejoicing and praising God, declaring that she was healed. She threw her crutches away, and never used them after. Many circumstances of this kind could be referred to, showing there was no mistake in the inspiration in those days. Now, if we do not attain to the spiritual blessings that the old church had, it is not God's fault, but simply our own. It may be in consequence of treating lightly God's law, that he gave to the church through the choice Seer, which was held in high esteem by the Saints during the greatest spiritual prosperity of the church.

I will relate a dream; it may be of interest to some. In my dream I was in company with some of the Saints, and one of the brethren spoke, and said that we are now on the very ground that the prophet Joseph used to walk on. That interested me, and I looked around to view more accurately the situation of the place; and as far as I could see, the ground was green with a healthy looking grass, and occasionally there were large and well shaped trees, which afforded a splendid shade. As we were walking leisurely along, the same brother spoke up again, and directed our attention to a ledge of rock which we were nearing, and said, there were writings on those rocks that were engraved by the prophet's own hands. I said, Let us go by and read it; he said, Oh it is so defaced that it can not be read now, and passed on without halting a moment. I left the company, and went to the rock, and sure enough there was the writing, but badly defaced. We were about to turn away in despair of making out even a syllable, when I looked again a little more closely, and it all appeared plain, and I could read it as well as any print. I said to Bro. Edward Stafford, who was standing close by, that it could be read; and he put his glasses on, and came close to the rock, and after looking very closely at the writing a minute, he said, Sure enough it can be read, and appeared to be very much pleased. I awoke reading, but could not remember the words; but it left a lasting impression, and that dream has strengthened my confidence in the Book of Covenants. Yours for truth,

J. M. Brown.

GREENVILLE, Mercer Co., Pa., January 25, 1885.

Dear and ever welcome Herald: -I will try to tell you how I was brought into the fold of the Master. It was in the year 1865 that my mother and my brother, who had just previously been baptized into the kingdom, began talking Mormonism to me. At first I felt no fear that they could ever convince me that there was anything good among that deluded and evil-spoken-of people. I even felt a kind of contempt for them myself, thinking they were blind followers of a false prophet. I was then a regular attendant at the Universalist Church, and had been attending their Sabbath School for several years; but I consented to go and hear the Latter Day Saints; so I went, and Father Ells preached. The first sermon did not make much impression on my mind. I felt very indifferent about whether I ever went again or not; but not so with mother and brother. They had found "the pearl of great price," and were determined to leave no stone unturned, or prayer unsaid, that might bring me nearer to Christ. Alas, I knew not how far in in the dark I was. On the following prayer meeting night, at their urgent request, I went with them. When it was over, the kind Saints came and shook hands. Their cordiality pleased me, but that was all so far; but to please my mother and brother, whom I did not like to displease, I continued to attend preaching and prayer meetings with them; but kept on going to my own in the forenoons of the Sabbath. At last I was forced to see the truthfulness of the teachings of the Saints, and how the preaching I had been hearing for years could not bear comparison with the word as preached by these despised people. As a constant dropping wears away a stone, so the constant dropping of the words of truth into my ears, had at last reached my heart, and worn its pride aud hardness away; and I felt that I was adrift in the world. I gave up going to the church I had been attending, telling them where I had been going to church. They said it was only another branch of the Devil's church. I told them I was not a member yet, but I felt that I could not go to any other. That was on Sabbath morning. I went right from there to the hall, and heard Father Ells preach. His words were true and faithful, and very comforting to me; but I shall never forget that day. I felt as though I was cast adrift, having left one church because not able to believe its teachings, and still not willing nor ready to obey the gospel, lest I should be deceived. The trouble was, I could not bring myself to believe in Joseph Smith as a prophet, or in the Book of Mormon as sent of the Lord. I was very like doubting Thomas; but the good Father was very merciful to me. All that Sabbath day I kept my thoughts to myself, for I felt that no earthly friend could give me what I now wanted. I made up my mind, that when the quiet evening should come, I would go to our room, (mother's and mine), and shut myself in, not letting any one know where I was, and there pray as I had never prayed before, to God, to show me the way that I should go; for I felt that he alone could help me in this trying hour. Everything seemed so dark to me just then. Accordingly that same evening I went to my room, knelt down in secret prayer, with a deep, intense desire in my heart to find out the right way of the Lord, whether this was the way or not. Before I had more than half expressed my desires, there came to my ear a sweet, low, penetrating voice, and these were the words that it said unto me: "This is the way, walk therein;" and with the words came a power that thrilled through me, filling me with such joy, peace, and light as I had never felt before, and never expected to feel while in the flesh. Few and simple were the words, but they were to me such a testimony of the truth of this latter day work, that though I were called upon to suffer, yea, even death itself, yet I could not deny the hand of the Lord in bringing me, all weakness and unworthiness as I was, into the marvellous light of the gospel, as restored in these latter days. I was baptized on the next Sabbath evening after this great blessing was given unto me; and, O, how easy it was to be obedient to God's commands when I knew this was the right way to salvation. I have found many times great cause to praise God's holy name, that my feet were planted in the straight and narrow path, that will lead all into the glorious presence of our dear Redeemer. May God help all his believing children so to live, that they may dwell with him at last. EMMA GARRET.

ELKADER, Ia., March, 1885.

To Whom It May Concern:- The Saints who read the Braden and Kelley book, will find a slanderous libel printed in that book, uttered by Clark Braden against the character of William Smith. Mr. Clark Braden, nor any other person, can obtain a written affidavit from any respectable man or woman living, in proof of the statement made by Mr. Braden against the character of William Smith. I notice also in reading over this debate, that there are numerous other statements made by this Mr. Braden, that I personally know to be false allegations brought against the character of Joseph Smith; and I am firmly of the opinion that Mr. Braden himself does not believe that there is one particle of truth in this trash and gabble he has gone over in these debates against Joseph Smith and Mormonism; and all he does it for is to get gain, and to tickle the ears of a few Mormon haters. This then is the sum of Braden's warfare on Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. Infidels are fond of just such fun (trash). I was not a little surprised when reading Braden's slander on me, that my friend, E. L. Kelley, did not place a club against it before it went into print. But it may be all for the best the way it is. One can profit by experience sometimes as to the knowledge of men and things; for while I am alive I can follow this slander up in my own defense, both before the Saints and the world; while the slandered dead are not here to speak for themselves. In conclusion I wish to say to the Saints and to my friends generally, that I am not much in favor of debates on this Mormon question, with men who have no principle of honor about them. Debates with such men are productive of more harm than good, as their budget of lies will always be increased at every turn of the wheel; and with men who have no other wish, falsehood will gain the ascendancy, and outrun the truth every time, while in the hands of corrupt men and devils.

A friend to truth,

Bro. Foseph:-I found this gospel fourteen years ago the second day of July coming, and I have never been sorry since I received it; for I know that it has been the power of God unto salvation to my soul, although my heart was young and tender at that time; nevertheless, I rebelled somewhat, but the power of God was too great for me to rebel long against it. I thank my Heavenly Father, that in his infinite mercy, he ever called after me, and brought me to the light and truth of his gospel, knowing that I have much to thank him for, because of his goodness to myself and companion. We were baptized in Providence, and belonged to the Providence Branch, but did not remain there long before the voice of the Spirit directed us to come to Plainville, which was my companion's birthplace. He held no office at that time, but we were told there should be a branch raised up, and a great work done, and he should be the one to teach that people, and many of his loved ones should be brought into the fold. We heeded the teachings of the Spirit, and came alone into the wilderness, as it seemed to me then. We commenced holding meetings with the help of the brethren from Providence, and before long my companion was Teacher; and the thirty-first of December, 1876, he was ordained a Priest. His loved ones were brought into the fold, his mother and sister, two aunts and his brother's wife. Others came slowly. Meetings were held at our house and at the school house, and soon he was ordained an Elder. Every word which was spoken to us was fulfilled to the very letter. Our branch now numbers fifty-six members, including one Elder, Priest, Teacher and Deacon.

Although I have received many blessings, I have passed through many trials. We stood alone so long before we had any brothers to help us. Satan has tried in many ways to destroy our branch, but the Lord has given us strength to hold out thus far, and I hope and trust it may be so to the end. We held meetings at our house more or less, six years; but now we have a little chapel, where we can worship, and there is no one to molest us or make us afraid. God's Spirit has been manifested there many times. Our hearts have been made glad from time to time, to hear the voices of our good brethren that have come from the West. Our souls have been more than fed as they taught us the laws of the church. There are none too old to learn, and I feel that we have much to learn. Brother Gurley made us a flying visit. Both the brother Kelley's have been here. I never met with two finer men than they are. May God bless and keep them unto the end, is my prayer. Brother Bond left our house to-day, expecting to go west soon to conference. I pray that God will bless and keep him; for we shall miss him if he does not return, for he has instructed the shepherd of this flock very much. He has done a great deal of good in this branch, but I realize that he can not continue in the field, unless his family is cared for. May God put it into the hearts of his children to remember the pennies to support our missionaries, that their families may be well cared for. If it is the will of our Heavenly Father, I sincerely hope that our brother may return. I hope that my brothers and sisters will remember me in their prayers, in behalf of my afflictions; for I have been sick more or less for eight years. I do so want to have strength to minister to the wants of my brothers and sisters, as they come here from time to time. I have kept a "Saints' Hotel" for many years. I want to many more, if God spares my life. I so much desire wisdom, faith and His Spirit. We so lack wisdom many times. May God give me knowledge and more understanding of his gospel.

We have a "Sisters' Society," which was started a year ago last February. We have made quilts, aprons, sweeping-caps, and other small articles of use. We have been to some expense, but we cleared fifty dollars in one year with five members. We gave it to the brethren to help pay the debt on the Chapel. May the Lord ever give us strength to do whatsoever our hands find to do, although this is a hard place to labor in. The hearts of the people have grown cold, and their ears dull of hearing. There is a great deal of prejudice here, but I realize that the harvest is great, and the laborers few; but there are more honest souls yet to be gathered into the fold in this place. Hoping that peace, love and joy may ever abide in the hearts of his children. I remain your sister and well wisher in gospel SARAH B. F. COOMBS.

CUBA, Kansas, March 21st, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:—The Saints here are contending for the faith, although deprived of late of regular meetings. We are about to get things in shape for the summer. We have secured a hall in town at a low rate for every two weeks, where we would welcome any Elder, who may feel like calling. I now live two miles east of town.

We have had our weekly feast on the good things in the Herald, but have wondered if Jonathan and his armor-bearer, had not crept into camp. Oh, how completely Paul points out the Church of Christ, in 1 Cor. 12; and God's laws are so full and complete that if the body through neglect of the law of health, becomes diseased. the members are all to suffer. Thank the Lord for the law that makes all sympathize. And when the blood becomes clogged with impediments, it frequently causes a very unpleasant sore, and the body all suffers. Sometimes a member has to be severed to save the life of the body. Then what regrets! But the law of health has been transgressed, the penalty must be paid, it is nature's demand. But in the body of Christ, we have an advocate, if the offending member will only ask. May God help us all to seek relief, and so live up to the law as not to cause the Spirit to leave any member; but let the life-giving quality thrill the entire body; and let every pulse beat in harmony with the laws God has given, that the world may know that Christ still lives. Your brother in the one faith,

G. W. BEEBE.

UBLY, Huron Co., Michigan, April 2d, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—I have only been a member of the Church of Christ about four weeks. I feel happy in the gospel. The promises of God are certain. There have been seventeen baptized in this place since last August; more believing. There are some of the Disciple persuasion here. They sent for one of their elders by the name of McKeller, for the purpose of demolishing Elder J. J. Cornish. He arrived a few days after Bro. Cornish had left for Canada; and if he was disappointed in not meeting Bro. Cornish, he was worse disappointed in meeting our brother, William A. Sinclair, who met and utterly defeated the would-be Mormon slayer, to the satisfaction of all the honest in heart, both in and out of the Church. Bro. Sinclair has been a member about two years and a half; is a Priest, and an able speaker. Your brother in the truth,

HUGH ARMSTRONG.

Grand Manan, N. B., April, 1885.

Dear Herald:-At present, I am unable to speak publicly, owing to a weakness of voice, the result of a severe cold. The present is full of stirring events. All of our surroundings indicate that these are the days spoken of by Jesus and the prophets. Do we, as professed Latter Day Saints, appreciate the position we occupy before the world. When I read, see and hear of the efforts put forth by the professed Christian world to crush out, vilify, misrepresent, and destroy the work that we have consented to stand by until death, I take fresh courage, and am determined in the name of the Lord, to press on with renewed diligence. I hear some expressing regret, because of some things that are transpiring in connection with the Church, fearing that, through internal strife the Church will be destroyed. I have not yet partaken of these feelings or fears. I know that the "doctrine is of God, and the Church is of his right hand planting;" consequently, it is not within man's province to successfully hinder or destroy the work. Can you imagine, or conceive of a grander, or more noble position, or a safer platform to stand on, than that guaranteed to us by the Lord? When I am holding and defending the truth, and doing so in righteousness, I feel strong in him; and with the apostle can say, "I can do all things through Christ." If our trust is in the Lord, who can harm us? Of whom are we to be afraid? The combined powers of earth can not mar or destroy us, if we are in Christ. There has been, and is now, a most determined effort put forth by the religious world, to destroy or invalidate the claims set up by us for the Book of Mormon, and the Martyr, Joseph Smith as a prophet of God. We who profess to believe these things, if we have come in at the door, will be able to understandingly defend our position from the Bible, and to do so with all kindness, and manifest a Christian spirit. I am pleased to know that every effort put forth against this Church, for its destruction, has resulted in strengthening her position and increasing her numbers. If any want the consciousness of having done right; and if their love for truth, is strong enough to overrule their love for the applause of the world, then let them build on the foundation of Apostles and Prophets. With what independence and confidence one stands on the truth. Winds of doctrine have no effect on such an one; knowledge of the truth makes his foundation sure. I would rather stand isolated and alone on this foundation then on a doubtful and insecure one, having all the world with me. How comforting and cheering it is, when reading the law of the Lord, to feel and know that your faith is in perfect harmony with it. After years of careful, prayerful study, I am prepared to defend the doctrine as held by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and prove from the Bible, that it is in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the primitive church, as taught by the apostles. Brethren, do not be discouraged, the Lord is at the helm, and we are sure of vic-Joseph Lakeman. tory.

Dear Herald:-In a late issue I notice an article in which the author states that of late your columns have been made the vehicle for carrying of matter which is not worthy of notice. As I have been a contributor of a few articles in times past, and thought that whenever circumstances or occasion demanded it, I would continue to contribute in the future; therefore, if I am the one whom he alludes to, I am sorry that I have been the cause of reproach being cast upon the main exponent of our faith as Latter Day Saints. The Lord is my judge, that since I enlisted under his holy banner, have ever tried to prove myself worthy of the sacred armor which I had buckled on. It is true that my knowledge of the heavenly tactics is not as great as that of some of our captains and subordinate officers; neither have I the gift of speech to command a host; but I am ever ready to do all that lies in my power for the cause of truth.

According to Scripture, the wicked are to have no rest; also they flee when no man pursueth. which facts are now witnessed in polygadom. As our District Court convenes this week, with one case of polygamy or adultery on the docket, standing over from last term, the polygamists of this locality, have taken a sudden notion of enjoying a bridal tour, taking with them their latest invoice of connubial stock. Others, whose locomotion is somewhat impaired by time and want of finances, have put away the newer half of their better halves for the time being, who are now known as Miss so and so, who in times past have acted rather imprudently, which is the cause of their being matrons so early in life. But there are communities in this great Republic, who would compel the sweet damsels to divulge the name of the favored one who caused their downfall. But what will be done in their cases I can't say, but I am fully persuaded, that although they may shirk the responsibility at this time, sooner or later they will meet their just deserts; for the time is not far distant, when their money and balance of power will avail them but very little. as a virtuous and indignant people will take the matter into their own hands. Then those who are now upholding and defending the perpetrators of such heinous crimes against the laws of God and the land, will be amongst the first to denounce and hunt them down, though they are now cheek by jowl with them for the sake of gain and petty offices. Just as soon as the goose quits laying the golden egg, they will help kill her.

I do not believe that there will be any convictions this court, but it is impossible to tell before hand what the verdict of a petit jury will be. But these windfalls are great blessings to the legal fraternity, and would if they could be, kept as heir-looms, like an old English chancery case. But the honest, upright citizens, will not tolerate much longer such a gross outrage on decency. The breach in the Brighamite ranks is still widening, as the more virtuous of the honest proselytes are witnessing the great commotion which is now going on amongst the faithful in Polygadom; and also by hearing the warning counsel or commands of the leaders, that the time has now arrived, when all members should hold their peace, and not tell anything concerning any brother or sister which would prove deterimental to their safety or welfare; for if they did after this warning, that they would be summarily dealt with by harsher means, which means is left for conjecture.

Your brother in the truth,

F. B. MOYERS.

Magnolia, Iowa, March 20th, 1885.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:-I have been deprived of abiding the disposition of my labors made by the last conference, but I did what I could, and submitted to its disposition until I was caused to my sorrow and regret to hesitate and consider the necessities of the circumstances growing out of obligations, God ordained, imposed upon me from another direction. I shall in all probability be obliged to leave the missionary field for a season, however sad it may be to some of you, and to many who know not the way of salvation; and yet I breathe the prayer divinely taught, "Thy will be done, O Lord." I have sought to minister instruction to the Saints wherever I have been since I last wrote you, and still am seeking to so minister as opportunity offers, and in this duty alone do I in anywise feel content, because I see so much of it to be done. While the weak Saints are partaking of intellectual poison, fed by some of the leading shepherds of the church, it causes a general debility of the whole body; and many when they need truth. find the chaff only to feed upon, and their souls still hunger. While I am satisfied that no one should be debarred from presenting his view of how the instructions to the church should be fulfilled, I do not believe the organ of the church, from whence many of you, dear readers, seek to find comfort, not being blessed with the privilege of hearing the word of God through his servants, should be filled artciles denying the revelations of God as accepted by the church, and thus denying the inspiration of the church as a body. And yet as far as you can see by the position of the Herald, their positions are in equal repute as those written in defense of the revelations of God. I pray you to trust not in the arm of flesh, and yet deny not the revelations of God, when you do not just see how they are to be fulfilled, just because they came through man; for not a single word have we from God save it has been given to us through the instrumentality of man. God spoke, men have recorded it, and we have it as recorded. Christ spoke but not one written word have we from his pen, and that which he spoke is on record as placed there by men; the Holy Ghost moved upon men who spoke; angels committed instruction to men, who have left it on record; and yet we all as Saints have by accepting that which men have borne record of, proven it true; and that same power which moved upon men to speak and write of the things of God, still is powerful to the confirmation of the truth. when all the conditions upon which an assurance of that truth is promised are fulfilled. When an obligation is placed upon the church or children of God, one of two things will always be proven, by a failure to obtain the blessing promised, that is, either the obligation was not God given, or else the obligation was not properly kept, and it will be but a truism to conclude "as a twig is bent so the tree is inclined." Some will at once conclude that it was not God given, just because the promise was not realized, while some will hesitatingly so conclude; but still others will at once give the credit of a non-fulfillment of the promise to a lack on their part, especially when they can see that the obligation has been properly sanctioned before being imposed. They will at once seek to find wherein the error on their part was made, and if one is found they will at once conclude that this must be the reason the promise was not enjoyed; and will yet believe in the instruction. and that in a proper time the instructions will become effective in producing the promised bless-

Saith the Lord, "Search these commandments, for they are true, and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled." Whenever the church receives an obligation though the proper channel, and properly sanctions it as from God, by the proper authorities, I shall not reject it until I receive stronger evidence to the contrary; and then I shall be very careful not to sit in judgment against God, or his people, so long as their desires as a church are for the salvation of men, and are in their proper sphere in seeking to accomplish those desires.

Yours in hopes of salvation,
J. FRANK MINTUN.

St. Thomas, Ontario, March 31st, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:-Bro. G. Henley from London, has been staying here twelve months. Four members were found. Myself and the few members so found, assembled with much joy, and afterward went out into the open air to preach the gospel. In so doing, were told by newspaper reports that our meetings should be cancelled; but as yet they have failed in doing so., Bro. R. C. Evans has visited us in the good work, and the result is eight members have been added to the little flock by baptism, and three children blessed. Bro. R. C. Evans preached four sermons to the satisfaction of all who came to hear and did hear, regardless of prejudice. All are anxious to hear Bro. R. C. Evans, the boy preacher as they call him, again soon; and also Bro. J. H. Lake; for his visit to us on March 2d, also Bro. Arthur Leverton's and Bro. John Taylor's for two nights, the sixteenth and seventeenth of March, did us much good. Some are anxiously enquiring, and seeking the kingdom with much interest; and I am thankful to the Lord, that he is preparing others to enter. Having a number of children surrounding us, have started a Sunday School, and some with much interest have helped us by giving some books for library, and some testaments, to whom I feel very thankful. Trusting the Spirit of the Lord will rest with his servants in his good work for the Saints' salvation; for all the redeemed of Israel; and to the fulfillment of all righteousness.

I am yours in gospel bonds, T. T. REYNOLDS.

Summary of Aews.

GENERAL NEWS.

April 3rd.—All news from the seat of war in the North-west Territory has been cut off by the interruption of telegraphic communication. United States troops are being concentrated at Fort Assinaboine to enforce neutrality and to restore the Fenians.

It is authoritatively stated in Paris that delegates from France and China have agreed to a preliminary convention to settle terms of peace. China will execute the Tietsin treaty, giving Tonquin to France. Until the treaty is signed France is to maintain the blockade of Pe-Chi-Li and will continue to treat rice as contraband of war.

Gen. Graham continued his advance and took possession of Tamai and Khor with but little opposition. The water at the springs was found to be very bad. The Arabs had retired. Tamai was set on fire and the British returned to Mc Neill's zareba. Another account says that after firing Tamai Gen. Graham proceeded on the road to Tamanleb. The enemy was found intrenched a short distance beyond Tamai, and a battle ensued.

In a dispatch from Aspinwall, Commander Kane says that he holds two of the chief insurgents who assisted in firing the town. He does not think it safe to hand them over to the Colombian authorities, who would premit them to escape. Application has been made to the War Department at Washington for tents to shelter the destitute people of Aspinwall. The department was only able to give fifty hospital tents. Admiral Jouett left Orleans for Aspinwall to-day Two hundred and fifty marines left Brooklyn to-day for Panama, and 200 more will sail Monday. It is expected that by the time they reach their destination the revolution will be over. Secretary Bayard says that the American citizens will be protected and the transit across the isthmus kept open at all hazards.

Gen Boulanger, the French commander in Tunis, has been ordered to Tonquin, and will soon proceed thither to assume the chief command.

The British flag has been hoisted over a part of Hamilton, an island in the Corean Atchipelago.

The postal authorities have begun to make war upon the publishers of the prize-subscription newspapers. G. S. Mayo, who is known as the editor of the Chicago Post and Courier and the Illinois Agriculturist, was arrested to-day.

Dr. Townshend, the health officer at Washington, has made a thorough inspection of the city and has directed that the greatest precautions be taken to prevent an outbreak of Asiatic cholera. He thinks there is no doubt that the cholera will reach this country this season. Probably some of the large ports of the coast will be attacked first.

April 5th.—M. Henri Brisson has consented to attempt the formation of a new French Cabinet.

It appears that Gen. Negrier and Col. Herbinger were in such a hurry to leave Langson that they left behind them their guns and moneychests. Both artillery and treasures fell a prey to the Chinese. This news has intensified the feeling against Premier Ferry, and a mob gathered in the streets leading to his residence to-day intending to attack the house. The police drove the rioters away.

Arab deserters who have come to Gen. McNiell's zareba report that Osman Digma has only 150 followers at Ekrotat, together with the members of his household. They assert that if Gen. Graham will offer a sufficient reward the Sheiks are ready to deliver Osman Digma a prisoner.

The reservations made by Turkey on signing the Egyptian financial agreement are as follows: First, that the Suez Canal Convention shall give Turkey the right to defend Egypt in the event of internal troubles or foreign invasion; second, that convention shall not deal with the expenses of the English occupation of Egypt; third, that the mention of a mixed tribunal in the financial convention does not imply an indefinite prolongation of the tribunal; fourth, that the Porte reserves the right to recognize any commission of foreigners deputed to inquire into the financial resources of Egypt.

The steamer Marinpol has foundered in the Sea of Azof. Thirty persons lost their lives in the disaster.

Dispatches from Prince Albert report that the situation there is extremely critical. The Teton Sioux have taken the war-path and it is feared they will join the half-breeds and attack Prince Albert. The police and settlers have intrenched themselves in a sort of apology for a fort. They are not supplied with sufficient provisions for a siege. Col. Irvin has telegraphed from Prince Albert to Ottowa for at least 1,500 reinforcements. The report that Riel has formed a provisional Government is confirmed. Reinforcements are rapidly araiving at Winnipeg, and are being puspushed on at once to Quappelle.

Commander Kane has telegraphed from Aspinwall to Secretary Whitney that everything is quiet there. There are about 100 Colombian Government troops at Colon, holding a large number of prisoners, but rendering no assistance in preserving order. Transit across the isthmus has been stopped by the insurgents, and the telegraph-wires are cut frequently. Two hendred and fifty more marines will be dispatched to Panama to-day.

The rumor has been confirmed that China is really anxious to conclude peace with France, and she is even said to be willing to pay a small indemnity.

April 6th.—A serious riot is reported from Cyprus, growing out of an attack upon a religious procession of the Greek Church. The mob threw stones at the processionists, and the troops were called out to quell the disturbance.

The Viceroy of the Chinese Provinces of Yunnan and Kwechung has issued a decree commanding the slaughter of all foreigners, and directing that all Catholic converts shall be killed and the convents of the church destroyed. Several Catholic settlements have already been wiped out of existence and several hundred converts have been killed. The Viceroy says he ordered the massacre because he was informed that the Catholics contemplated a revolt against the Chinese Government.

Dispatches from Suakin report that the guards and the Australian contingent are marching in the direction of Handoub with orders to build a zareba at that point. This will be called "Station No. I," and the railway will be pushed in that direction as rapidly as possible. The whole army will start on the march toward Handoub Wednesday. Fighting is expected. The heat grows worse and the sick-list is increasing largely. Gen. Wolseley has arrived at Wady-Halfa. He is to be sent to Suakin to succeed Gen. Graham.

A new French Cabinet has been formed. It is said to be as follows: President of the Council, M. Brisson; Minister for Foreign Affairs, M. de Freycinet; Minister of the Interior, M. Targe; Minister of Finance, M. Clamageran; Minister of Justice, M. Goblet; Minister of War, Gen. Campenon; Minister of Public Works, M. Carnot; Minister of Agriculture, M. Mangon; Minister of Post ond Telegraphs, M. Cuvinet; and Minister of Marine, Admiral Galiber.

One hundred sailors and 250 marines sailed from New York for Aspinwall. When they reach their destination the United States will have a force of 1,200 men and 100 officers on the isthmus. Four Gatling guns and two three-inch rifles were also sent yesterday with 100,000 rounds of ammunition. The entire force will be under the command of admiral Jouett, who is expected to arrive at Aspinwall tomorrow. The fleet at Aspinwall will consist of five vessels—the Tennessee, the Yantic, the Galena, the Swatara, and the Alliance.

Notwithstanding Russia's pacific assurances. orders have been sent to India by the British Government to continue actively the preparations for war. There was a grand review of British and native troops at Rawil-Pinde to-day in the presence of the Ameer of Afghanistan, Lord Dufferin, and all the native Chiefs. The railway to Quetta is to be completed at once. The Maharajah of Nepaul has offered England the service of 15,000 picked Goorkas. In England the Radicals are complaining of the cost of the war preparations. They say that as much has been already paid for a demonstratian in India as some wars have cost. The Admiralty Office has had special reports prepared to show the number of merchant steamers capable of being converted into cruisers in case of an outbreak of hostilities. The fast ocean steamships will be armed. They will have ten guns each. Two thousand men will be drafted at once for regiments serving in India.

The general annual conference of the Mormon Churche at Logan, Utah, closed this afternoon To-day's proceedings were not marked by anything specially important. The epistle read yesterday gives Mormons general satisfaction. The church organ at Salt Lake City tonight refers bitterly to the "persecutions" going on against its people and defiantly proclaims their purpose to stand by their practices and their covenants. It is understood the officers will meet this with renewed vigor in prosecutions. A committee will be appointed to go East and plead the Mormon cause. It is claimed President Taylor and George Q. Cannon have fixed up the slate of missionaries so as to include most, if not all, the main witnesses against them in their indictments.

April 7.—A preliminary peace convention has been signed by France and China, according to the terms of which France is to abandon her claim to an indemnity and is to raise the blockade of Formosa pending the evacuation of the island.

Russia is putting the great naval and military station of Cronstadt in a state of complete defense. Hundreds of torpedoes have been sunk in the harbor. Lord Dufferin sent a long dispatch from Rawii-Pinde, warning the Government to beware of Russian intrigues. It appears that many Russian officers have visited Kabool during the last few months as spies.

In the French Chamber of Deputies M. Henri Brisson, the new Premier, said that France would insist upon a recognition by China of a French protectorate over Tonquin and Annam, according to the provisions of the Tien-Tsin treaty; otherwise the war would be renewed with increased vigor. The Premier asked for a vote of credit for 150,000,000 francs to carry out its policy in relation to China. The credit was voted.

The Colombian troops and the citizens at Aspinwall are destitute and starving. The railroad company and the United States ship Galena are feeding the soldiers. There is great anxiety among foreigners at Panama. The additional United States troops which have been ordered to Panama at Commander Kane's request started for the isthmus to-day. There were five companies of fifty men each, 150 sailors, and a battery of six guns. Dispatches have been received from San Salvador confirming the report of the death of Gen. Barrios.

Advices from Fort Quappelle in the Northwest Territory report that the Indians in that region are highly excited and anxious to fight. News from Fort McLeod is alarming, and a detachment of troops will be sent thither at once. The Piegan Indians are on the warpath, and raids are feared. Reports brought in by scouts indicate an excited feeling all over the country. The settlers at Turtle Mountain are surrounded by several thousand half-breeds, who are in sympathy with Riel. The navvies at the end of the Canadian Pacific Railway track are riotous, and the company has sent for troops. The Indians near Battleford expect to be joined by 3,000 Sioux from the American side.

April 8.—Charles Thomas Floquet was elected President of the French Chamber of Deputies

An official proclamation has been issued at Constantinople condemning the Mahdi as an impostor and a robber.

Peace negotiations between France and China are not proceeding so smoothly as has been reported. A preliminary convention has been signed, and no further hostilities are expected at present, but the two Powers can not make up their minds as to which shall let go first. Premier Brisson has decided that China must first of all evacuate Tonquin. As soon as this is done France will raise the blockade of the ports on the Chinese coast. China objects to this, and proposes that her withdrawal from Tonquin and the raising of the blockade by the French squadron shall be simultaneous. It is suspected that France has merely entered into these peace negotiations to gain time to mass reinforcements upon the frontier and to recover from Gen. Negrier's defeat. At any rate, the attitude of the French Government at present does not look like peace. The French Senate yesterday voted a credit of 15,000,-000 francs for the carrying on of operations in

It is asserted that a leading Mormon Bishop of Salt Lake City, Utah, has declared that the priesthood have concluded it would be cheaper to buy a Statehood for Utah than endure the annoyances polygamists are now being subjected to by the enforcement of the National laws. Among the laity this is now considered to be the plan of the Mormon campaign. The Mormon Bishop (Stewart) and Elder C. J. Robinson, of Phœnix, Arizona, indicted for polygamy, were permitted to plead guilty to the lesser count of unlawful cohabitation, and were sentenced to ninety days in the Territorial Penitentiary.

There being fears that the Mormons of Utah are negotiating for the purchase of land in Sonora for the purpose of transferring their entire colony there, the Mexican government has asked for information from the government of Sonora. Public opinion in Mexico is strongly against allowing the Mormons lodgment there.

April 9.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Gladstoee confirmed the intelligence of a battle between the Russians and the Afghans, but said that no official information had been received corroborative of the report that the Russians had occupied Penjdeh. Mr. Gladstone declared that England had demanded from Russia a full explanation of what seemed to have been an unprovoked and unjustifiable attack upon the Afghans. Russia claims that the Afghans provoked the conflict. The war feeling is strung to a high pitch in England, and it is believed now that nothing can prevent an immediate declarafion of hostilities. Everybody is inclined to agree with Lord Dufferin that war is inevitable, and that it had better come now than later. A large garrison is to be thrown into Herat at once, and it is hoped that the 70,000 Brisish and Indian troops now stationed along the Northern Indian frontier may reach Herat in time to prevent the capture of that important town by the Russians. It is rumored that England has arranged with Italy to supply the entire force necessary to garrison Egypt and the Soudan, in order that the British troops may be withdrawn at once for service in Asia.

The Mahdi has been severely defeated at El Obeid. He has made the announcement that he will not attack Dongola until after the fast of the Ramadan, three months hence. Gen. Wolsely has been ordered to withdraw one-third of his entire force from the Soudan for service elsewhere.

There seem to be no longer any doubt that Gen. Barrios of Guatemala is dead. A formal alliance is to be made between Mexico and Nicaragua, and the alliance armies will march at once into Guatemala. Although Barrios is dead his spirit still survives, and it is considered necessary to crush out the present Government in Guatemala and substitute another for it.

Riel, the half-breed leader, has completely cleaned out the country between Humboldt and Prince Albert, and the Prince Albert country has been turned into a desert. Fugitives from the North are flying to Quappelle in large numbers. There is every indication of a general Indian up-The reports that American Indians have crossed the border to join in the revolt are not confirmed.

The markets all over the country have been favorably affected by the war news from Asia, and wheat, corn, oats, flour, and meats have gone upward with a rush.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS. There were 225 failures in the United States during the last week, an increase of thirteen as compared with the preceding week.

The Mark Lane Express, says: The fine weather is favorable to spring sowing. Flour is in increased demand for consumption. Foreign wheat has declined, owing to the prospects of a continuance of peace between England and Russia, the probability of abundant crops, and the large quantity of breadstuffs afloat. The trade in cargoes off coast is sluggish. There were twelve arrivals and two sales. The week's business has been generally of a holiday character.

The colliery owners in Derbyshire and Staffordshire, England, have resolved to join those of Yorkshire in making a 10 per cent reduction in the wages of miners. The miners of Yorkshire already on strike against' the reduction, which went into operation in that county April 1st, number nearly 30,000. The Derby and Stafford mines will resist the reduction and go on strike. The mine-owners in the three counties are subscribing heavily to a mutual assistance fund to enable the owners to resist the strikers. Miners' association of England has levied on its members for a special fund to support the men on strike. The present strike is the greatest that has occurred for many years in England. It threatens to last for many months, and will soon effect over 500,000 people who have depended on coalmining for a livelihood.

Clearings at the principal cities in the United States last week show a decrease as compared with the corresponding week of 1884 of 34.6 per cent. The decrease in New York was 39.7 per cent. In Chicago the decrease was 19.2 per cent. Chicago elevators contained April 4th, 15,881,- 150 bushels of wheat, 2,037,835 bushels of corn, 533,613 bushels of oats, 135,353 bushels of rye, and 50,438 bushels of barley; total, 18,638,389 bushels of all kinds of of grain, against 20,976,223 beshels a year ago. During last week the stock increased 66,379 bushels, including a decrease of 13,067 bushels of wheat and an increase of 123,-407 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Borad of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 47,567,318 bushels of wheat, 8,885,963 bushels of corn, 2,664,498 bushels of oats, 357,941 bushels of rye, and 856,434 bushels of barley. These figures are smaller than a week ago by 521,669 in wheat and larger by 904,757 in corn.

began April 7th.

Ryerson & Brown, livery-stable keepers, failed April 7th, in New York with liabilities estimated at $500,000.

Forty thousand coal-miners are on strike in Yorkshire, England, against a 10 per cent reduction in wages.

The Farmers' Bank of Norfolk, Va., closed its doors April 8. The liabilities are estimated at $250,000.

Fifteen hundred men in the stone-quarries at Lemont, Ill., struck work April 10th.

FIRES-STORMS-ACCIDENTS. April 3.—Thornton & Mawley's hosiery factory at Leicester, Eng., was burned. The loss is $200,000.

Adril. 5th.—Loss by fire at San Francisco, Cal., $30,000. Three Chinese were burned to death. Dallas, Tex., $25,000. Cape Vincent, N. Y., $50,000. Weston, Mich., $18,000. Pott's Grove, Pa., $30,000. Madison, Wis., $6,000. East Saginaw, Mich., $6,000. Sioux City, Ia., $5,000.

April 6th.—Fire at Tokio, Japan, March 19th, destroyed 1,200 buildings. Marysville, Tenn., destroyed 1,200 buildings. Marysville, Tenn., was nearly destroyed by fire. Loss by fire at Fond Du Lac, Wis., $35,000. Humbolt, Ia., $3,000. Near Papenean, Ill., $4,500. Detroit, Mich., $20,000; four hendred and fifty men thrown out of employment.

The estimated loss by fires during March in the United States and Canada is $9,000,000. This is in excess of the record for any corresponding month. During the years from 1875 to 1884, inclusive, the average fire loss reported for March has been less than $7,000,000. The New York Bulletin gives the total loss by fire in the first three months of 1885 as $27,500,000.

THE STRANGER.

AN EASTERN LEGEND.

An aged man came late to Abraham's tent, The sky was dark, and all the plain was bare. He asked for bread; his strength was well nigh spent; His haggard look implored the tenderest care. The food was brought. He sat with thankful eyes, But spake no grace, nor bowed he to the east Safe-sheltered here from dark and angry skies, The bounteous table seemed a royal feast. But ere his hand had touched the tempting fare. The Patriarch rose, and, leaning on his rod, "Stranger," he said, "dost thou not bow in prayer? Dost thou not fear, dost thou not worship God?" He answered, "Nay." The Patriarch sadly said: "Thou hast my pity. Go; eat not my bread." Another came that wild and fearful night. The fierce winds raged, and darker grew the sky. But all the tent was filled with wondrous light, And Abrakam knew the Lord his God was nigh. "Where is that aged man," the Presence said, "That asked for shelter from the driving blast? Who made thee master of thy Master's bread? What right hast thou the wanderer forth to cast?" "Forgive me, Lord" the Patriarch answer made, With downcast look, with bowed and trembling knee, "Ah me! the stranger might with me have stayed, But, O my God, he would not worship Thee.' "I've borne him long," God said, "and still I wait; Couldst thou not lodge him one night in thy gate?"

JOSEPH SMITH.

In the Banner of Light, a paper devoted to, and published in the interests of, spiritualism, among the questions answered through the trance mediumship of Mr. W. J. Colville, is the following by M. Hamilton. "Question:-It is claimed by some that the Book of Mormon is divinely inspired, and that Joseph Smith was ordained to the Aaronic priesthood; is there any truth in these statements, and if Smith was ordained, by whom was it done? Answer: If Smith was ordained to the Aaronic priesthood, he was ordained to the priesthood of a bygone dispensation; therefore ordained to something thousands of years behind his time. If he was ordained to this priesthood by any one, he could have been ordained only by the spirits of departed Jews, who had not unfolded out of the Israelitish sphere into the sphere of the universal heavens. Undoubtedly Joseph Smith was a medium, and reflected the ideas of a company of spirits in spirit-life, who were ancient polygamists. No doubt they were those connected with the Israelitish dispensation, as polygamy was undoubtedly the practice of Solomon and many of the leading kings of Judea. regard Joseph Smith as a medium; and the Book of Mormon as inspired, yet not inspired by the highest spiritual intelligence-not inspired by intelligence equal to your degree of intelligence here in this mortal body, in the nineteenth century, in Boston."

In the above communication is revealed something of the uncertainty that characterizes a great many communications professedly, (and really, I believe), from spirit source; unfortunately, however, these spirits seem to have progressed in a crab fashion, (backward), sort of a way, or they should have learned what a great many mortals have learned, and others might learn, by a little personal investigation of the revelations of Joseph Smith, or the Book of Mormon; that Joseph Smith if a medium, reflected in his spiritual claims something other than "The ideas of spirits in spirit life, who were ancient polygamists." With all due deference to those whose opinions differ from mine, from my present status of knowledge, I think I can say that if the revelations of Joseph Smith to the world can do no more towards enlightening me in regard to the existence of a supreme ruler of the universe, his will and design in creating me, and future or ultimate disposition of myself, than what I have been enabled to learn from modern spiritualism, the visions of Emanuel Swedenborg, Ann Lee, or many who in the past have been called seers, I could never make up my mind to sacrifice what I am called to in contending for the faith delivered by angel dispensation to this man.

In the first revelation in the Book of Commandments given through this man, is contained the following, par. 5:

"Behold I am God, and have spoken it. These commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness after the manner of their language, that they might come to an understanding."

Now let us see if these commandments and purported revelations are worthy of the character of the Ruler of the Universe.

"And after having received the record of the Nephites, yea, even my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., might have power to translate through the mercy of God, by the power of God, the Book of Mormon, and also those to whom these commandments were given might have power to lay the foundation of this church, and to bring it forth out of obsurity and out of darkness, the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth, with which I, the Lord, am well pleased," &c.

What is the Church of God? Paul said to Timothy that it was "the pillar and ground of the truth." I Tim. 3:15. When Jesus ascended on high, he led captivity captive, and gave precious gifts to men, and set in order in his church, first Apostles, secondarily Prophets, &c., with gifts of spiritual things. Fourteen centuries of learned ignorance have taught us, that to reinstate these things in the Church of God, is a heresy; or to claim the existence of prophets a species of fanaticism; and yet Amos says, "The Lord God will do nothing "without" them. Spiritual gifts were placed in the church, Paul says, to edify and instruct. All, when exercised under the law of God to be the mind of God and the Spirit of truth, the Holy Ghost, "the other Comforter," which, while abiding under the law, was to lead them ultimately "into all truth." Remember, these things were placed originally in the Church of God, for the education of the members (body) of Christ in spiritual things, the things which lie outside of man's natural ability to comprehend, "for the perfection of the saints." How long to remain? As long as the church remains, or a necessity for its existence, or as long as mankind remain imperfect; or, as farther stated, "until we, in the unity of the faith, all come to a perfect knowledge of the Son of God [life eternal] "unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ," Look at yourselves, ye modern Christians; measure your moral and spiritual stature of attainment with that of Jesus Christ; and if you find no difference, then I am ready to dispense with the perfecting agencies which God placed in his church for our elevation toward himself. This is the church which Joseph Smith in ignorance of worldly wisdom, with other elders, according to the commandments and wisdom of God, organized upon the sixth day of April, 1830. The gospel revealed as per announcement of the angel, which John saw in prophetic vision on Patmos Isle, (Rev. 14:6); which Paul declared to be God's power unto salvation, to those who believed it; and which men or angels were forbidden to preach any other under curse,-this same original gospel, in the hands of an unlettered ministry has challenged an intelligent and fair disproval by the world, with all its accumulated wisdom, for over fifty years. Not only do the mission of Joseph

Smith and the character of the work God wrought by him surround itself with light, but to my mind reflect this light way back upon history as contained in the Bible. The history of Moses as a prophet becomes luminous in the light of the history of the modern seer. Egypt worshipped Osiris and Isis. Moses was an Egyptian priest, and "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," like Paul in the school of Gamaliel and theology of the Pharisees; yet how sudden and startling the transformation, the change of gods and of worship. The story is that, while watching the flocks, the I Am, the One God, Jehovah, appeared to Moses in the burning bush, to order a fulfillment of prophecy made to Abraham, Gen. 15:13, 14. The moral code, surrounded by the ceremonial law, made necessary only by the ignorance of the people, and which could only serve as a discipline, schoolmaster, Paul says, was so much higher than that of the surrounding countries, so opposite to the teachings and traditions which he had learned among Egypt's priests, that it looks not like an education altogether, but a revelation; and as Moses' fortune led him to Midian to receive the true priesthood of God, so was Joseph Smith led to the State of New York, and near the records which were to be brought forth to the convincing of Jew and Gentile, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. In the second book of Nephi of this record, it is written prophetically of the modern prophet, "He shall be a choice seer, he shall do my work, and he shall be great like unto Moses." Now, what did Moses do? "This Moses plainly taught the children of Israel in the wilderness, and sought diligently to sanctify his people, that they might behold the face of God; but they hardened their hearts." Doctrine and Covenants 83:4. Paul says, "Therefore the law was added because of transgression, a law which could make no thing perfect in things pertaining to men's consciences; but the bringing in of a better hope, where-by we draw nigh unto God." When Jesus hung expiring upon the cross, he exclaimed, "It is finished," "the vail of the temple was rent in twain," and the way into the holy place open once, and for all who would become obedient to the "will of God," through faith in the eternal covenant of God with men, now sealed by the blood of its appointed mediator. The mission of Joseph Smith as a servant of God, was for nothing more than to reveal through a restored church and gospel, a process by which man might approach the author of his being, and father of his spirit, and introduce a school of moral and spiritual education, by which mankind might become possessed of that faith by which Abraham became "heir of the world."

Jeremiah sixteenth chapter, speaking prophetically of the restoration of the Tews, and display of God's power in their latter day deliverance, says: The Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, surely our fathers have inherited lies and vanity, and things wherein there is no profit. Shall a man make unto himself gods and they are no gods." The fulfillment of this prophecy in regard to the "Gentiles" awakening to the fact that false gods that are no gods," and false worship, "vanity and lies and things wherein there is no profit," had been the inheritance of their fathers, is placed by the context either in, or a day subsequent to, our own day, or time, in the world's history. See fourteenth and fifteenth verses. This prophecy might apply in a sense to all heathen worship; but evidently refers particularly to those civilized Gentile nations, who accept the authority of the Scriptures. Jesus said to the Pharisees, who really believed in sound doctrine in some cases, the resurrection, for instance, "In vain do ye worship," &c., and why? Because so mixed with tradition and superstition, as to make the law of God of none effect. Under the persistent, self-sacrificing, heaven-illuminated efforts of himself and his disciples, Jesus established a worship which only can be truly acceptable to God, and profitable to the devotee, conducted "in spirit and in truth." How all important that both these should be joined. But the night of apostasy from the true faith, as predicted by prophets and the apostles, drew on; "men of their own selves arose speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them," and the fatal period of a popularized and prostituted church under Constantine, presents itself in the history of the world. Behold him-self and bishops, not only altering and changing the ordinances which Christ established in his church; overthrowing the heavenly government; robbing the church of its priceless jewels; but actually dethroning Jehovah, and enthroning a god made from the chimera of men's brains, "gods that are no gods;" and from the choice of three presented by the bishops, the one "without body, parts or passions," was set up; and neither the wisdom of the Romish church, nor her Protestant daughters, the Pope, Henry the Eighth, Luther, Calvin, Knox, or Wesley, have had the spiritual discernment to discover the difference between this paradox of all idea or sense, and the God of the Bible, or the authority which could consistently entitle man to be an embassador of the heavenly government; and the authority which has repudiated and excommunicated them, neither many of the "vanities and lies and things wherein there is no profit," brought from the old creed into the new. With singular fatality have the creed makers copied from the errors of the past, and the daughters of the old mother, as one by one they have been born into the world, displayed the earmarks that betray their origin. Thus, for centuries have the Gentiles, as were the Corinthians in Paul's day, before they had obeyed the law, and received the spirit of adoption, been "carried away unto these dumb idols," "gods that are no gods," even as they were, and are led by blind leaders, who have taught us predestination, of not only men and women, but angels and infants, of fixed number, to the literal fires of Edwards and Calvin, not because of their own will, or that they had power to alter their fate; "but for the praise of his most glorious justice." See Presbyterian creed. "Vanities and lies and things wherein there is no profit."

Thus dawns the nineteenth century upon a world distracted with religions and gods, until the churches themselves are honeycombed with skepticism. Charles Darwin, the great scientist, abandoned the orthodox church at the age of forty, and claim of revelation, "because," he said, "it was not supported by evidence." A writer it The Cotemporary Review, says that as a result of this general skepticism and feeling of indifference, and I might add, carelessness, it has come to pass that a question has been mooted, which to our fathers would have seemed preposterous, is it of any consequence what we believe, or whether we believe anything? Suppose that by and by we all arrive at the conclusion that religion has been altogether a mistake, and renounce with one accord the ideas of God and heaven, having outgrown the theological stage of human progress, as says M. Compte, what then? Will it make any serious difference to anybody?

to speak. He has spoken; but Joseph Smith, nor any of the servants of God, have not only had men and doctrines of men, but devils and doctrines of devils to contend against. If there are spirits at all, why may there not be seducing spirits with seductive doctrines to contend against?

It was time for God, if there was any,

Any day or night, in the city of Boston, you can get a revelation from the "angel world," to dovetail with the moral status and desire of the individual, attended, too, with "signs" and "phenomena," that will make the hair of the uninitiated stand on end. Spiritualism is making thousands of proselytes, devotees too, who do not appear at their public meetings or lectures, but are seen Sunday in the fashionable churches; but who, sub rosa, consult familiar spirits, ordered up on short notice by the payment of the necessary fee, in regard to dead friends, lost property, bodily sickness, &c., "signs," which Jesus said an adulterous and wicked generation sought after, and which should be given, though "not unto salvation." I admit that spiritualism has produced an argument which may be hard to explain on any hypothesis but that of immortality, or life after death; but under what condition, or rule, or estate, is life in the future to be administered? The Revelations through mediums from Maine to California, of A. J. Davis, Swedenborg, &c., are as vague, dreamy, unsubstantial, contradictory, so utterly unlike the hopes of the prophets, Jesus, his apostles, and of the final "inheritance" that their appeals to scripture support, only reveals to the true Latter Day Saint their real character. I recognize their power of seership and reality of "signs" and "wonders," performed through trance speakers and physical mediumship. Nations and rulers of nations have entertained themselves of them. Nebuchadnezzar, king of the earth, did not retain them at his court simply as performers of leger-demain, or sleight of hand; no more does England's queen today; but to confound them with the seership or mission of Joseph Smith, is ignorance; to place their revelations thousands of years in advance of his calling, is the baldest absurdity, and reveals to me, either that these spirits, if other than those of men, instead of being "advanced," are altogether too ignorant of known facts to be valuable instructors, or that they belong to that order who, having "kept not their first estate," are roaming unseen, as subjects of the "Prince of the power of the air," whom Jesus refer-red to when he said, "I saw Satan fall as lightning from heaven;" who having fail-ed there, his next theater of action was this globe of ours.

No revelation is necessary to know "that sin is in this world" of ours, "and death by sin." These calamities and distress, all belonging, not to the realm of fiction, but of hard, sorrowful, every day fact, suggest need of deliverance; Christ, the promised, undertakes the awful mission, angels and archangels watch its beginning, and announce first by special messenger, "the angel of the Lord, whose glory shone round about them," saying to the shepherds, "Fear not; for behold I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people; for unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." Immediately the grand chorus was taken up, "and suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, and good will toward men." Jesus having taken upon him "not the nature of angels," but our infirmities and discouragements, faces the enemy in the very first of his mission, to establish a kingdom of heavenly origin among men, who sought first to corrupt him by appeal to the strongest passion of his human na-ture—ambition. "All these, the kingdoms of the world and their power, and the glory of them, if thou wilt worship me, acknowledge my authority, all shall be thine." "Get thee behind me!" said Jesus. There is but one safe authority; failing in this, the more subtile tactics of scripture quotation and misapplication are employed, a challenge to Jesus to assert or prove his power by throwing himself from the temple's pinnacle. Jesus knew what all must learn, that angels will only guard us against unavoidable evil, or unnecessary trial. The kingdom was established, but not in earthly power; organized, preached to, understood and entered into by men, received the sanction promised by Jesus when he went away, suffered violence, and was overcome by the wiles of its common enemy, its ambitious, subtile, and spiritual foe, and the ignorance of men who understand not the scriptures, nor the power of God sufficiently to enable them to discern the enemy, who, by cunning craft, lying in wait to deceive, or blind leaders, who familiarly quote, "It is written," in order to draw away disciples from the truth. But much had been accomplished, that which "the angels desired to look into," which the spirit that was in the prophets testified to before, of the sufferings of Christ, the Judgment Hall, Gethsemane, the cross, "and the glory that was to follow," the women's return with spices to the tomb, the stone rolled back, the body gone, the men in shining gar-ments, saying, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen; remember the words which he spake unto you," &c. The rebuke to the two disciples journeying to Emmaus; the appearance to, and upbraiding of, the eleven for their unbelief in the scriptures; the showing to the multitude spoken of by Paul, this was in fulfillment of prophecy clearly foretold by the prophets. Shall we say that the prophecy was a fiction, and its fulfillment a fraud, as said the Pharisees? Jesus' friends say that the priests bribed the soldiers to circulate the story of the tomb-robbing. Their story is the most reasonable, the seal and watch were sufficient. There's nothing in the history of Jesus' disciples that will permit our reason to assent to the idea of such a fraud being entertained by them. Their hopes were blasted, their members scat-tered, and the chief priests, with their cunning, remembered better his words After his ascension, the than they. promise of Jesus was received; and under its power they went boldly forth, declaring the testimony of God to them, and what they had seen con-cerning him whom God had appointed to be a Prince and a Savior. Banished for this testimony on Patmos Isle, Jesus appeared in glorious surrounding to the disciple John, saying, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forever more, and have the keys of death and hell. Write the things which shall be hereafter." What he did write as commanded, was this: "And I saw another angel flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach [or deliver] to men that dwell on the earth"—this earth.

Fourteen centuries of vain attempts through the wisdom of men have failed to preach a gospel which Paul said was God's power unto salvation, and a curse to follow men or angels that should preach any other, or restore the church, which is "the pillar and ground of the truth." Churches and forms of religious faith multiplying everywhere, but no heavenly intelligence to check the tide of unbelief and skepticism, blown about by every wind of doctrine, confusion and doubt concerning the true import of the scriptures, when lo! an angel surrounded with heavenly light appears, as on Bethlehem's plain to the humble shepherds, to Joseph Smith, the obscure boy, upon a like mission, the fulfillment of prophecy, clearly predicted, now, thank God, as clearly and literally fulfilled. The direction concerning the plates from which the Book of Mormon is transcribed, the manner and testimony surrounding its coming forth, the facts fulfilled so clearly predicted so long ago, the preaching of the restored gospel and kingdom, foretold by Jesus, by an unlettered ministry since that time, the power of the Holy Ghost that has attended the preaching of this gospel, all this and more, much more, to be set aside by such men as Clark Braden, or disposed of in the more gracious and more dangerous anti-Christ theories of modern revelation of spirits whose employment and business are to destroy the existence of the kingdom of God, and the character of the work of his servants, by dismissing with a gracious and patronizing air, behind the curtain of the past, the literal and veritable Kingdom of God, which has been organized and established, as much as ever as in Paul's day, happily no more to be taken from the earth until Jesus shall give to the poor and oppressed of earth,—an equitable, just, and peaceful government and habitation. But it has its foes as did the first church. Celsus, his name might have been Clark Braden if he had lived in the nineteenth century, the first writer against Christianity, said that "Mary was divorced from her husband, and wandering about fell in with a Roman soldier by the name of Pandera, who was the father of Jesus." Stories were urged against the early saints of cannibalism of infants at their service of the Lord's supper, and tales too ridiculous to relate. Good people were kept from joining the church by malicious slanders; and even Tacitus, the renowned and just historian, was prejudiced against them by these and other's slanders; Clark Braden, his name might have been Celsus, has given us another historian of like caliber and disposition. Men are fallible. The Church of Christ as a means of perfecting humanity is infallible, "the pillar and ground of the truth." The church and Kingdom of God is a fact in our day. Joseph Smith's work in relation to it is all important, and will not hurt us to remember it. The Spirit bears witness to its truth, Amen.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 9, 1885.

HE DID NOT.

BROTHER JOSEPH.—In a late issue of the Herald appears an article headed, "Is there anything suggested in dreams that is reliable?" The writer, after having related his experience in regard to persuasions, etc., to unite himself to the "Masonic Fraternity," goes on to relate a vision which he had, in which vision he saw one who had broken the oath of that order put to death in a peculiar manner—should what follows happen to interest any one let them read the article again, if they wish to refresh their memory. In conclusion the writer says: "This vision is real. What does it mean? Who can interpret it? Is it wrong to join lodges? Would you have joined after seeing this, had you been in my place? What say you? Did I join or not?"

Of course, Bro. Joseph, not knowing the writer, I am not prepared to answer this last question; but I am prepared to make an affirmation in the case, which is this: If he did join, to my mind, the first three of this brother's questions are entirely superfluous, since he himself is better prepared to answer them than any one outside of the fraternity; and if he ever finds one inside of it willing to answer him right to the point, I should like to see that one, for in all my life heretofore I have never met such an one.

Once in conversation with a friend upon events in his past history, in relation to our Civil War, he told me that he was shown by the Spirit, That he who voluntarily placed himself in a position to shed blood, was guilty of that blood, if it was shed." I believe, that so far as the Christian at least is concerned, this is a correct principle; and if correct in regard to the shedding of blood, it is also correct in regard to the violation of every other moral law, either written upon tables of stone by the finger of God, or written upon every closely interwoven fibre of man's moral, mental, or physical nature. To be plain, I hold, that he who so far forgets what he owes to God, as to take an oath upon God's word in the presence of fellow men, calling God to witness that under certain circumstances he will violate the laws of God, by doing such things as God has forbidden-I hold, I say, that that man, then and there, consents in his heart to do those things, and his very action (being voluntary and that as a free agent) shows the intent to do the deed-should the occasion demanding it ever arise. What follows. In the intent lies all the moral quality of the act. His intent is to do the deed contemplated in the nature of the oath; therefore, morally it is completed, whether the occasion for doing it does or does not arise.

"What say you?"

Last night while reading the vision before referred to, memory was busy, and imagination coming in, the two went to work somewhat in this wise.

Memory: "But why are you so critical and strict upon this matter. Have you forgotten that yourself took such an oath? Now, Imagination, let me stand by you, while you faithfully portray the scene. Do not let me mislead you, for the plain unvarnished truth is bad enough."

Memory. "No! I never took an oath to shed blood, or commit murder. There you mistake."

Imagination. "Not to commit murder I admit. But just look here while I portray before you what you did swear to do; and then answer me if it is not as bad?"

"What say you." I am not going to give the readers of the Herald a pen picture of the painting Imagination brought out in bold relief upon the canvas of Memory. I am not yet ready to "perform unto the Lord my oath." And as this oath was taken before I obeyed the gospel, I believe that with other sins, it was remitted unto me at that time; but this much I am prepared to say: If it be a sin and a crime to place one's self in a position to do what God has forbidden—not only to place yourself there, but to swear solemnly before God, calling upon him to witness that you will perform that which you have sworn; then I say, if you want to keep your soul pure from such crime and such stain the Masonic Lodge is not the place in which to do it.

I have written the above in the fear of God. He knows that it is true; and I am willing to answer to him in the last great day. Should it fail to be in harmony with the feelings of those who to the obligations of the gospel of the Son of God, have added those of Masonry, I can only regret it, for they too know it is true.

PROGRESSION.

"BE ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."-Christ.

Who is there believing the spiritual teachings of Jesus the Lord, that can be content, or rest satisfied with the present condition of self? Or who is there among Saints or Christians, who are so wise or so pure, that mental and moral progression are not needful for them?

The gospel may well be called "the perfect law of liberty." How infinitely high is the standard to which we are cited as a pattern for our lives, and by which we shall be judged. Proportionately, we think, as we conform to its righteousness, we shall be blessed. Narrow and upward, is the royal pathway, leading heavenward, and none can walk therein "except the Father draw him." Indeed, its royalty is obscure to all except those whose love for "righteousness" has secured to them the favor and blessing of God. It is paved with the rich jewels of heaven, and upon the right and left are blooming, in sweet splendor and never fading beauty, the fragrant flowers of life and happiness. Happy, joyful children of light and glory, press with eager feet onward toward the blissful realms of peace, virtue, and immortal glory.

Inherent in the human soul, is the desire for happiness. It is the goal for which we seek, and the desideratum of our lives. We are taught, and so we believe, that in heaven our fondest hopes and desires may be realized. Doubtless, in the providence of God, the idea of location will not be forgotten, but in reality, heaven to us, consists, not so much in location as condition. Though our surroundings may and do affect us internally, more or less, the happiness we seek, and so much desire, arises mainly from inward state, and not from outward surroundings. The two great essentials promoting felicity, are intelligence and purity. Without the latter, beatitude is unknown. Sin originates and is maintained in anarchy and confusion, elements foreign to peace and enjoyment. Where intelligence is associated with purity, happiness ranges in proportion to its degree; hence, being "pure in heart," the more intelligent we are the greater our joy will be. Little children are not susceptible of the same degree of enjoyment as are adults; not because they are impure, but because of mental incapacity. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," refers not to their intellectual ability, but to their condition of innocence. Sin is not imputed to them. In more ways than one "knowledge is power." In all of our gettings, we should get wisdom by a proper cultivation of the mind and heart. The superiority and pre-eminence of man over the brute creation, is due to his superior intellect. It is the power by which the universe, visible and invisible, is governed. Omniscience and purity being associate attributes of deity, are the key to perfect bliss.

In obeying the divine injunction, by which we are made "perfect," the mind must be cultivated, enlarged, developed, while increasing purity and God-like love must pervade the soul, thus, together, elevating and refining the mental and moral natures, in making them more and more like our Father in heaven.

Scriptures teach, that the work of God is to bring to pass the eternal life and happiness of man. Adam and Eve, while dwelling in Eden's simplicity, knew not good from evil,-knowledge, which we affirm, is essential to a high degree of bliss in attaining to the character of and becoming like God. When Satan tempted the father of our race, "he knew not the mind of God, but sought to destroy the agency of man;" and though God does not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance, in that he is pure and holy himself, and desires all others to become like him, it seems necessary that, by practical experience, man should know good from evil, and finally receive the former from choice, in order to become like God.

Though the earth is veiled in darkness, and the children are bowing beneath the weight of sin, methinks in the golden future I see the bright crowns and spotless robes of those who "were made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope," "coming up through great tribulation" to receive their reward; and I discern that the good in them is a positive quality, being the result of choice after knowing good and evil. Man's agency and power of choice were not lost in Eden; but now as he knows evil and its terrible consequences, and good with its rich reward, he is prepared to "choose whom he will serve." I see a grand preeminence in the resurrected Adam over the Adam in Eden. The condition of the latter was simply a negative quality, being the opposite of evil-mere innocence; while that of the former is positive goodness resulting from choice after being capacitated to choose intelligently. "Then why should we mourn, or think our lot is hard? All is well, all is well." It is time we cease to mourn over what our foreparents did. They sinned and learned its consequences; and through the plan devised before their fall, and "before the foundation of the world," they were repossessed of their lost estate, being made so much better than the angels, in that they have gained the crown in the kingdom of our God and his Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen.

Probably none will doubt the security of Adam's condition in the presence of God now; but the fact that he did transgress, in Eden, proves that his condition was not a perfect one, and that the experience undergone by him and his posterity was, and is essential to that final exaltation which secures eternal life and happiness to God's creature, man. Again, Adam's safety, present and future, does not lie in that he has lost his agency, individuality, or power to choose; but, in that through past experience he knows how and what to choose. Practical knowledge is gained in the school of experience, and can not be well learned elsewhere.

As regards Adam and Eve having posterity without the fall, let mother Eve answer. See New Translation. I have none with me, so can not quote verbatim, nor give chapter and verse. "Without our transgression our eyes would not have been opened, and we would not have known good from evil, neither would we have had seed." [Gen. 4:11.—Ed.]

Now "let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." Every intelligent mind, unbiased and unveiled by inordinate passion or desire, will quickly discern this to be true; but supposing we did not know the consequence of transgression, there would be an actual deficiency in our vital being incapacitating us for remembering perfect service to God.

He that does good simply because there is nothing else he can do, is worthy of no special reward; but, vice versa, those who are encompassed upon every hand with evil, and are beset by every allurement that Satanic power and influence can devise, and still maintain a love for the pure and good, are worthy, yes, thank God, they are worthy, and will receive rich re-

We have drank the bitter cup of sin; we know its follies, disappointments, and terrible end; and we who have received the glad tidings of peace, have tasted the sweet waters of life-the flowing cup of salvation has quenched our burning thirst; from heaven's fountain our souls have been satisfied; in God and Christ we have found peace. Then with joy we will wend our way to heaven. By dilligent application, close observation, and prayerful solicitation, we shall succeed.

As oft in time my heart grows weary,
The path of life seems sad and dreary,
Sweet hope with smiling face draws near me
To cheer my soul.

Hope is humanity's great treasure; It spans the dark and silent rivers, And brings to man eternal pieasure From realms above.

The soul, careworn with earthly fetter,
Aspires to something higher, better
Than wealth and fame or pomp and glitter
Can e'er bestow.

Within the human heart lies hidden, A germ of life and light, and bidden, Rejoices in the hope of heaven, Our future home.

NUTS WITH MEAT IN THEM.

I can not be a follower of Christ and bear that horrid name, Latter Day Saint; for people would ridicule me, and call me a 'Mormon.'

"Whosoever, therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels."—Mark 8: 38.

It is on account of the daily walk, and the inconsistencies of some who profess to be Latter Day Saints, that I cannot consent to unite with the Church.

"So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God."—Rom. 14:12. "Let no one deceive himslf that he shall not account for his stewardship unto me."—Doctrine and Covenants, 18:4

I am not yet ready to deny myself of the fun and pleasures of society, and live as it becomes a true worshiper of God. There is yet time enough for me, and after a while I will turn over a new leaf.

"For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"
—Mark, 8: 36, 37. "Behold now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation."—2 Cor. 6: 2. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him."—Heb. 2: 3.

I am somewhat fearful, that should I make the effort to lead a religious life, that I would not be acceptable in the sight of God.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls."—Matt. 11:28, 29. "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out."—John 6:37.

O, I am not good enough to join the church. I am afraid that I could not live aright, and might bring a reproach on the cause. I would rather go it alone, than to be a stumbling block to others.

"Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."—Isa. 1:18. "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."—Jas. 4:7. "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door."—Gen. 4:7.

I might add to the above, but will rest the matter here for a season, hoping that some may obtain meat in due season, to their present and future well being.

GO ON UNTO PERFECTION.-No. 2.

WERE it not that our title and work were given, and plainly indicated by revelation, it would be sheer presumption for us to attempt to write or treat upon this all important subject, that has ever been the cause of darkness and destruction, and hindrance of the church of Jesus Christ in all ages of the world and that is the total loss of our proper and only infallible teacher and guide, the Holy Spirit; and that this loss in the primitive church, occurred through their unfaithfulness to the requirements of the word, (the gospel), is also very evident. Our object is to relieve and build up the church according to our ability and opportunity, with our desires and efforts for the church, and all of its members, to go on unto perfection, and I may add with the apostle, "This will we do, if God permit."

First we call attention to the fact that the primitive church was perfect, first in its organization, secondly in its doctrines, thirdly in its power and adaptability. This we believe is warrantable from the character of its author, "who was the wonderful councilor," and had all power in earth and heaven conferred upon him. Matt. 28: 18. First we would notice that the cause of darkness, distraction and apostasy, was the lack of the proper teacher and guide, the Holy Ghost, and its loss resulted from unfaithfulness and neglect to comply with the requirements of the gospel of Christ. Had man proved faithful in every particular, the church would have continued "perfect." This promise is proved by the following scriptures: "Now are ye clean, [perfect] through the word I have spoken unto you." John 15:3. "Abide in me," is the command, in order to work effectively. Again, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John 14:7. This is positive, that if men had obeyed this order, and been faithful in the duties and requirements of the word, (the gospel), they would have remained as they were, (perfect). Here we have the key to the apostasy and darkness of the primitive church, under and through the human influence and counsel that had crept into or raised up in the apostolic church." Jude 12, and onward; and 2 Peter 2:10; Heb. 12:15; and the church organized in 1830, shared the same fate, by the same means, and was rejected; and the present church will share the same fate if she pursues the same course that they did, or will lack power and efficiency in proportion as she fails to comply with the primitive pattern in the gospel. "Let no man deceive you by any means," is just as applicable as when written; for deceptions have increased, and all the sects have been deceived, more or less, by trusting to men to teach and guide them. The "Spirit is our guide." Neither are we to depend upon an angel. They are liable to err, and very many worldly wise are being deceived by them to-day, by what is termed Spiritism. The Holy Ghost, when obtained and retained in its regular gospel order, is our all-sufficient guide. To be dependent upon either of the above principles militates to that extent against present revelation; and to that extent "grieves the Spirit," and darkness and destruction ensue; and God's children lose the "unity of the Spirit," which we are to strive to keep, and can keep by giving "heed to the more sure word of prophecy whereunto we do well to give heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts, knowing this first," &c., for the Spirit is our guide, "and the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy;" Rev. 19:10; and if we have the testimony of Jesus, (see verse 3), we have the spirit of prophecy, whereunto we should give heed, and "be guided into all truth;" and all doctrines and usages added to the primitive pattern given us in God's word, "must be shaken out" in order to the advancement of the cause of truth, and the kingdom of Christ in our world.

We submit, that we do not attempt to controvert or oppose the true order, lest we be found fighting against God and his truth; "for he that is not against us is for us," so saith the infallible Christ, who is no more infallible than the Holy Ghost, though it may be given through mediums that are in some degree imperfect and fallible; and whatever imperfections the Seer of Palmyra might have been subject to, and however many failures he might have made in his plans and efforts in his day, there are some very, and all-important truths of the gospel restored through him. First we call attention to the restoration of the gifts of the Spirit to the true Bible status, see 1 Cor. 12; Eph. 4:11; and he also brought forth and taught the perpetuation and power of the Melchisedec priesthood. By what power, or in what way these principles were brought forth is not our purpose to argue at this time, but only the fact that these principles, which are strictly Bible doctrines, were brought forth and taught by him; and that they are rejected, and have been, by all other reformers and churches and men, since the apostasy of the original, apostolic church. I wish to call attention to the fact, that these doctrines faithfully adhered to would have purified and perfected the church of 1830; but the facts are—"history repeats itself"the church partook of a human element, and was rejected and scattered to the four winds. But now, under the order, economy and toleration of the Reorganized Church, the same doctrines are held and attained, and will finally accomplish the purity and perfection of the church, if faithfully adhered to; or contrariwise, if not.

We wish to notice some two or three of these doctrines peculiar to us as a church and people. First I call attention to and offer a few suggestions in regard to the gifts and offices of the Holy Ghost or Spirit. We first notice that it is promised, John 14:15-17:

www.LatterDayTruth.org

"If ye love me, keep my commandments, and I will pray the Father, and he will send you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever, even the Spirit of truth, whom the world can not receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you."

This promise is from an infallible source, and therefore it must be infallible. We call especial attention to the fact that the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, is to "be in you," not us baptized into it. We next call attention to the fact, that this promise was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, Acts

"And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a mighty rushing wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. [But this was not the fulfillment of the promise]. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them; [and neither is this the fulfillment of the promise, for they were not baptized with wind nor sounds, nor with tongues, nor yet with fire]; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." This is the fulfillment of the "infallible" promise "of him that spake as never man spake;" this is the first and general spontaneous outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and at the house of Cornelius was the second, and these are the only instances of the kind, and were the introduction of the gospel, first to the Jews, and then secondly, to the Gentile world; and after this it is transmitted in every instance recorded, by the imposition of hands of those in authority, and endowed with the Spirit. Next I would call attention to the absolute necessity of the attainment of the Spirit, in order to belong to the family of God. Rom. 8:9: "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." This surely is conclusive, and yet there are many in the church that frankly admit that they have not the Spirit.

Next we notice the offices of the Spirit. First, it is our teacher. As the law was a school master, (teacher), to bring us to Christ; so the Spirit is our teacher, to bring us to the celestial kingdom; and if we abide in him, and his words abide in us, then he will guide us into all truth. There are conditions affixed to this promise, as there are to every promise God ever gave to mortal man; but as the promise is to all, the conditions are such that all may attain to it simply by obeying the gospel, and continuing faithful to its requirements. There is a diversity of requirements, "according to our several abilities" and responsibilities, as is plainly shown by Paul's answer to the jailer, Acts 16:30, "Believe and thou shalt be saved;" and Christ's answer to the young man that was rich, as to what he must do to be perfect."

Matt. 12:21: "Jesus said unto him, if thou wilt be perfect, go and sell what thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven, and come and follow me." This we see requires not only the surplus, and then one tenth of his interest, but it required all he had, and also his time and all his ability consecrated to his service. This the young man thought was too much, and so went his way sorrowful, and that is the last we hear of him. But a few years later he probably lost it all, and his life also, in the siege and destruction of Jerusalem. Thus we see there are different requirements and different duties, and these duties are required according to our several abilities and positions of trust. If any one, high or low, prove recreant to the teachings of the Spirit, just to that extent he "grieves the Spirit;" and just to that extent darkness ensues, hence comes our wranglings and dissensions in high places, and also in low, all through the body; and in place of keeping the unity of the Spirit in bonds of peace, we are trying to settle these vexed questions by arbitrary, intellectual discussions, while in darkness on account of the neglecting of some known, or willfully unknown duty. But thanks be to God, there is a remedy for all this. By rendering implicit obedience to the teachings of the Spirit, which plainly forbids these discussions and vain wrangling, about "genealogies." We will close with the apostle's prayer for the Gentile converts, recorded in Eph. 3: 14,21:

"Wherefore, for this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, that he would grant unto you according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all Saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth and height; and to know the love of Christ which passeth [human] knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God. Now unto him that is able to do exceedingly abundantly, above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church, by Jesus Christ, throughout all ages, world without end. Amen."

LIBERAL CHRISTIANITY.

OPINIONS RESPECTING BAPTISM, HELL, AND CHURCH RAFFLES.

AT THE Latter Day Saints' Church, Council Bluffs, Iowa, on Sunday evening, March 29th last, the Rev. J. F. McDowell delivered an eloquent and highly instructive discourse, expressing the most sensible views in regard to the looseness of modern Christianity, where an effort is made to support liberality of sentiment and profess religion at the same time.

It is to be regretted that want of space will not permit here the introduction of an extended report of the sermon, but an idea of the views entertained may be derived from the following brief synopsis.

The phrase "liberal Christianity" would seem to imply that there is another kind, that might possibly be called "illiberal Christianity." These may be the two extremes necessitating the golden mean which would be "Christianity proper." I once saw a paper, one of the head lines of which read, "Devoted to the interests of liberal Christianity." I am aware that in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries there existed a very illiberal form of Christianity-straight jacket Christianity-limiting the power of thought and the privilege to speak and act. Between 1650 and 1653 it was opposed in some of the writings of those days, and many people in England, especially in London, rebelled against this class of Christianity. An antipathy was stirred up against the prevailing faith of the times. It was brought into this country in 1620. We refer to the old blue laws of Connecticut. Blue, because they had a good deal of brimstone in them; blue, because they made people's minds blue; blue, because they turned upon people like a vise, and there really was a good deal of vice in them.

There was a change, and a reaction had to occur. It was bound to come. A writer produced a work which opened a door that admitted of people's breaking away from this strict religious life, which they took advantage of in France and other countries to such an extent that they ran into a state of depravity and licentiousness as the great extreme of this illiberal form of Christianity.

Christianity has passed through many phases till we come down to our own day, and find something of the kind now. In some respects it is a little better than it used to be, and in others a little worse.

Liberal Christianity in the first place dispenses with water baptism. It says that water cannot help your soul, and that the person who says that water baptism is essential to salvation and should not be dispensed with, is too strict, and so it dispenses with the necessity of the use of water baptism.

The next step is to dispense with the devil; a very good thing to dispense with and be rid of. But it cannot be done simply by saying that we do not believe in him. For all that he may still exist. A certain writer says the word devil has no application to an individual, being, or spirit. It means the sum total of corrupt desires and evil thoughts. But we discover that this is never in any one place at a time. It appears to be generally diffused throughout the world. But this idea of a devil dispenses with some other things that we do not believe can be dispensed with if we abide by the New Testament; and if. the New Testament is a true mirror reflecting the actual views of the founder of Christianity, nothing should be done to that mirror to cause it to produce a distorted reflection. We must let it reflect just as we have it, and showing the reflection theologically it presents the doctrine of a devil. If there is no devil, why did Christ come into the world? What was the prime object of his mission? John said Christ came to destroy the works of the devil. According to liberal Christianity this would be a being that never had any existence, hence incapable of committing any works.

Liberal Christianity necessarily dispenses with the doctrine of a hell. A certain infidel lecturer says that a Christian can never talk about heaven without he has to talk about hell. I should like to know if you could talk about the comforts of home and friends without talking about jails, prisons, and penitentiaries. They exist and must exist. They are for transgressors. That is what we want a hell for. Hell is God's penitentiary. But if a person goes there that is no reason that demons are going to jump around him, and poke him with forks, any more than a man's going to state's prison would imply that he is to be horse-whipped all the time he is there. The punishment is banishment from God's presence. We need both hell and heaven.

Liberal Christianity is a destructive force and a dangerous one. Make a man believe that there is no hereafter, no spirit, no punishment, and that man will make life as miserable, low and degraded as appetites of a depraved nature can render it. We have an example in Lord Bolingbroke, and he died rotten with the sins of wickedness. It has its indulgences. It says it is no harm to take a drink once in a while just so you don't get drunk. I do not believe that any one professing Christianity has the right to go into a drinking saloon. He may have the privilege, but not the right. There is a difference between right and privilege. Show me a man professing to be a Christian who without any hesitation pushes back the swinging door of a saloon and goes in and takes his dram, and I will show you a man who has no regard for his Christian character or for the church to which he belongs.

The following is from a copy of a handbill advertising a church benefit in New Orleans: "Near the dancing platform is a tent in which are reserved seats for women and children. A restaurant is near at hand filled with refreshments and confectionery, and also a splendid bar stock of choicest liquors of all kinds and the best cigars." This is conspicuously posted around in the city of New Orleans, under the head of "Benefit for Christ's church." Do not call it Christ's church. Anything but that.

Again, the church raffles are complete specimens of gambling. It is as really gambling as the operations of the faro bank or the card table, but we give it the sacred sanction of religion. If the church fiddles the world will dance, of course—"Like priest, like people." The church may well bow penitently under the world's accusation and confess that it deserves the scourge of the old proverb, "Physician heal thyself."

If liberal Christianity is to take the lead, by and by the church will have sacred fairs on the Sabbath; sacred base ball games; sacred horse races; everything under the head of "sacred" until we find that there is no Sunday; no church; no

Christians.

Now, I am not opposed to amusement, but I think there are lawful and unlawful pleasures, and where the Bible speaks about being lovers of pleasures, it is in this sense, that they are lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God. People who are carried away to that extent that they forget God, forget His house and forget His day, are that kind of lovers of pleas-

Exercise your judgment about the enjoyment of pleasure, and remember that your duties to the church are laid down as a sacrifice if you love pleasure more than your life.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR

ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, April 25th, 1885.

SALUTATORY.

In taking the position of Associate Editor of the HERALD and HOPE, we only need to say to their patrons that we shall seek by every proper means to serve in that capacity to the best of our ability. These are stirring times; God is moving the cause of Zion for good, in many ways; the wheels of progress are revolving rapidly; abominations both in and outside of the church are being developed and laid bare, and are doomed to desolation speedily; the walls of separation built up by the hands of blind bigotry and sectarian superstition are rapidly crumbling everywhere, and lovers of truth and righteousness of every name and nation are yearning for increased light, and for the final triumph of the right.

The Saints have a work assigned to them, and blessed are they who shall be found faithful therein. We trust that in our new field we shall have their prayers and confidence, and so attain success and give full satisfaction.

W. W. BLAIR.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION NOTES.

MARCH 30th last, the Board of Publication in session at Lamoni, adopted the following: "Resolved; that the Editor of the HERALD be instructed to refuse to publish anything in the HERALD that is in conflict with the commonly received doctrines of the church; and that he shall point out any and all historical errors he may discover in the HERALD articles, and do so in the same issue in which the said faulty articles shall appear; and, that he shall exercise such supervision in the matter and spirit of the subject matter of the HERALD as to make it the teacher and defender of the doctrines of the church as set forth in its accepted and authorized

The above was intended, not to cut off legitimate discussion on any and all proper questions, but rather to prevent making the HERALD the battlefield in respect to doctrines and usages already settled and decided by the conferences and councils of

At a meeting of the Board in Independence, Missouri, the 14th inst, the following was adopted: "Resolved, That David Dancer be the Business Manager of the Board." Resolved, "That Joseph Smith be the Editor of the HERALD and HOPE and that W. W. Blair be Associate Editor."

THE Annual Conference closed at 10:30 a.m., on the 15th inst., after a session of ten days. Unity, peace, and brotherly love prevailed throughout, and almost without Order and effectiveness of any exception. method marked the work of both conference and council. Much of the work done was of the highest importance to the integrity and progress of the church. The services were of the practical kind, and of a high grade of ability. The prayer and testimony services were largely attended and generally very spiritual. The word of the Lord through the President of the Church was given on some questions of vital importance, by which doubts were removed and concert of action secured. The resident Saints were hospitable, the citizens kind and interested, the press both at Independence and Kansas City, were fair and full in their reports and courteous in their treatment. The preaching servi-ces were crowded and intensely interesting. On Sunday, the 12th inst., the Opera House was packed to its utmost, and many who came could not find even standing room. Pres. Joseph Smith delivered a practical discourse, which was "meat in due season" to both saint and sinner. At seven p.m. the Opera House and Chapel were filled with interested and appreciative congregations. Prominent citizens remarked that it was the largest religious assemblage ever convened in Independence; and that the conference was the finest body of representative religionists they ever saw. Truly, God is giving "favor and grace" to the Saints, and that, too, right where they once were put to shame.

Altogether the session was one of the most interesting and important ever held by the church. The dark clouds of pre-judice melted quietly away before the bright beams of the Sun of Righteousness, while joy and gladness reigned in the souls of the tried but trusting Saints. God's hand has set anew the bow of promise, marking the fact that the Lord is coming forth in power and majesty to bless and redeem the children of Zion, and restore to them "much glory" now that their "much tribulation" is passing away. D. and C. 58: 2. And while so much to cheer and gladden was seen at our conference, the heart was made sad at the condition of the Utah people who held conference at Logan, a small town far away from the great Tabernacle where such bodies usually meet. Their leaders were in hiding from the uplifted hand of our great nation, and the people sorely distressed and humiliated. What a contrast! Will that people now pause and consider! Will they not read the hand writing, "Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting."

Though sad and pained over the outlook in the affairs of the Utah Mormon Church, we feel joyful in the fact that God and the nation are doing marvelously in exposing and rebuking the errors and evils imposed on the confiding and honest ones of that society, and in breaking the power of the deceiver and oppressor. The Reorganized Church for the past twenty-five years and more has warned that people of their errors and consequent dangers whenever and wherever they could; but the Utah leaders have spurned and mocked and cast them out, while the body of their people have misunderstood and shunned them. The Lord said through the seer in respect to those leaders-"After their temptations, and much tribulations, I, the Lord, will feel after them; and if they harden not their hearts, and stiffen not their necks against me, they shall be converted, and I will heal them."—D. C., Rev. July 23, 1837. And now that the favor of God is seen upon the Reorganized Church in the "center stake" and elsewhere, and the wrath of God and the civilized world is seen upon the Utah leaders and those whom they have fettered with Polygamy and Gadianton Endowments, will the erring ones "learn obedience, if it must needs be by the things which they suffer?" Great events are transpiring, and greater events are at hand. Happy shall they be who are found on the Lord's side. W. W. B.

Among the Kansas City Journal's notes of conference proceedings for the 14th inst., is the following:-

PROGRESS OF THE SAINTS.

Yesterday was the eighth day of the conference of the Reorganized Church, Latter Day Saints, at Independence. The business of the conference was not quite completed and a short session will be held at nine a.m. to-day. The business of yesterday consisted chiefly in the appointment of missionaries to the various missions. A proposition was received from Mr. Cornell Crysler, postmaster at Independence, to form an association for the purpose of developing a quarry of fine marble, which Mr. Crysler has recently discovered on some property of his. In connection with this proposition was one to the effect that enough stone would be given the Saints if they would quarry it, to build them a temple at Independence. The proposition was referred to the bishopric, with an expression of thanks to Mr. Crysler. The customary services were held at the church last night. The morning prayer meeting at nine o'clock was in charge of Elder Robinson, assisted by Elder Deuel. The morning sermon was preached by President Smith; subject, "The Gathering and Church Unity."

THE Kansas City Times of the 16th inst., in its notes from Wyandotte, has this to say of our Senior Editor's sermon at the latter place on the evening of the 15th inst.:

THE PROPHET JOSEPH SMITH.

Dunning's Opera House was well filled last evening with a representative audience to hear Christianity expounded by the prophet, Joseph Smith, president of the Re-organized Church of the Latter Day Saints. The preacher held the Bible as the statute law of God and argued that all should follow its teaching in spirit and truth to secure a place in the book of life. The sermon was argumentative and convincing, and many who went for curiosity were impressed with the undeniable truth set forth by the great expounder of the revelations of God to his chosen followers.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A good letter from Sr. Mary S. Gill, of Wheeling, W. Va., is omitted for want of room to insert. Sr. Gill has had many trials, sickness being one of them, but still adheres to the faith of the Saints. She writes feelingly of Bro. and Sr. Griffiths, whom she holds in the highest esteem. She bears her testimony to the beauty and justice of the law of tithing, and the truth of the gathering feature of our faith.

Bro. L. D. Hoisington, of Union, Cass county, Nebraska, would like an Elder to preach the gospel in that locality.

WE clip the following from the Oregonian, Portland, Oregon, kindly sent us by an unknown hand:

John Codman of Massachusetts has found a new solution of the Mormon problem, and has recently made the same public in a small pamphlet. It is no less than the general support by Christian people throughout America of the Joseph Smith branch of the Mormon Church, by donations of money and such other assistance as may be deemed best to strengthen their numbers. This branch of the church is opposed to polygamy, and it is claimed by the author, is composed of an excellent class of citizens. They are poor, and can support few missionaries, but embrace nearly 20,000 members all told, over 1,000 in Utah and surrounding territories. Mr. Codman's plan has the merit of a peaceable solution of this vexed question, and will doubtless meet with wide approval, yet doubt will be felt as to whether the work of proselyting will go on as rapidly as plural marriages in the Brigham Young branch.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS BY THE BISHOPRIC.

I.—Is THE law of tithing as referred to in Book of Covenants, page 300, a law to the church?

Ans.—It is not considered that the reference to surplus properties is applicable to the church in its present state. With the rules given to the church in 1831, sections 42, 64, 72, and in 1834, it enters into the basis on which the financial affairs of the church rest. Some of the objects named in the law of 1838 referred to, for which moneys are to be paid into the church treasury are not now contemplated, and are not now to be served. There is now no commandment to build a house, (other than the houses of worship different branches may erect for their own use and convenience), to be called the House of the Lord, or a Temple. There are no debts of the Presidency to be provided for, as the Presidents of the church have not in their work for the church contracted any for which the church is held responsible. For these objects, therefore, it is not needful that any contributions, or other exactions be laid upon the people. For all the other necessities of the church and its work, we believe that the observance of the rule of tithing and free will offering will be sufficient, leaving the weightier and more stringent matters of surplus and consecration to be executed when further commands may make them desirable and necessary, as provided for in the revelation of 1873.

2.—What is the beginning of tithing?

2.—What is the beginning of tithing?

Ans.—For a person to contribute a tenth of all the means with which the Lord has blessed him over and above the living.

3.—What properties are exempt from the general law?

Ans.—I. That required for the living.
2. That upon which a person has already paid a tenth.
3. Any that a disciple of Christ may have, (if such a thing be possible), for which he is neither indebted, nor thankful to the Lord. Tithing under the gospel is founded in the principle that all given to us here, is by the mercies of God; and as a consequence, he may justly demand that a reasonable proportion be given for the good of his church. This demand recognizes the free agency of the individual, and hence, in its operation is upon the same basis of all other commands to the church; and made by our heavenly Father a means of discipline, and test of faithfulness in us as his children.

4.—Does the revelation of 1861, speaking of tithing, refer to the revelation in section 106; and if not, why not?

Ans.—The revelation of 1861 should be construed as referring to the law of tithing as a whole. In whatever the revelation of 1838 is applicable to the financial concerns of the church, it must be taken as being contemplated by the giver of the revelation of 1861; as would be all other laws given on the same subject, nor is it competent for the Bishop to say that this, or that rule previously given to the church was, or was not in the mind of the Lord when the revelation was given.

5.—If tithing, proper, is a tenth of all we possess, please cite to two, or more evidences outside of the law of Moses as applied to the law governing the Saints?

Ans.—Genesis 15: 39; Heb. 7: 2 and 8; Book of Mormon, (Alma), ch. 10, par. 1; Book of Covenants sec. 64, par. 5; and sec. 114, par. 1. The last two citations are determined as to amount, by the definitions of the words tithe and tithing. These terms were used as in the law when committed, and signify a tenth; and are so used twenty-five times in the Old Testament and twice in the New. The word tithe in the language of our own day also means a "small part or proportion."

6.—After the beginning of tithing is made, on what is the balance of tithing obtained;—or increase, interest, or income?

Ans.—It is on whatever is gained thereafter; whether called income, interest or increase. We are required to be industrious and economical in habits; and after thus employing our time and talents, whatever we shall find ourselves blessed with, let us feel thankful to God for, and consecrate a tenth part to the building up of his work. If we wish to do more than this, it is our privilege, as we may deem best.

7. If there are but two classes—one to pay and the other to receive—where, and how much should a member pay who is just able to make a living?

Ans.—Let such one show to the Bishop that he has lived rightly, and been wise and industrious, and the Bishop will, when satisfied on these points, issue to him a certificate of compliance as though he had laid down $100; and let him go his way rejoicing.

8.—If a man is in debt is he tithable? How much and where does he begin?

Ans.—The question of indebtedness is not considered in the law. It it easy to ascertain what a member is worth so as to pay on the same; (he is not called upon to tithe his debts). After paying upon what he has, let him pay upon what the Lord blesses him with thereafter, (over and above the living), without reference to debts. The tenth of his gain is a debt due the Lord, and the true Latter Day Saint will pay all his creditors.

9.—By what rule of law, or evidence, do you dispose of the surplus clause; as that seems to be the direction that the Lord gave for a beginning?

Ans.—At the time the revelation in which the "surplus clause" is found was given, there was need of more than the tithing furnished to the treasury; to furnish this need whatever could be spared was asked for, in answer to inquiry, How much dost thou require, O Lord. As we stated in answer to question one; some of the objects there had in view being now in abeyance, we deem it unnecessary to urge the observance of the clause asking for the surplus; the Bishopric being satisfied that compliance with the rule of tithing will provide for the present necessities of the work.

10.—By what rule, or law, do those who have no surplus (or do not make one) pay tithing?

Ans.—By the rules found in the general law governing the finances of the church, as stated in answer to question two. Doctrine and Covenants, sections 42; 64:5; 72; 106; and the necessity for the receipt and disbursement of moneys, in carrying on the purposes of the church in its organization. Persons having no surplus, can not contribute a surplus. If a person should be blessed with an increase much larger than his living and his business required; he may if he chooses, pay all, or any portion of it more than the tenth of such increase; and be credited with such amount, either as surplus, free will offering or consecration. Should such person, or any one who has a surplus desire to pay into the treasury such surplus, he may do so and receive a certificate in token of such payment, the arrangement for an inheritance, under the law of inheritances, to be made and consummated when the time for apportioning them is determined either by revelation and command, or by the counsel of the Elders as provided for in revelation of 1834 and 1873; such payment to be by agreement and understanding satisfactory to the Bishopric.

at any time, have credit so as to apply on an inheritance when the time to thus obtain shall come?

Ans.—Such person will receive credit on the books now; and the duty thus performed will be to their credit in the time of such appointment. But no inheritances can be given either by the church, or the Bishop until such time as lands have been purchased, either by the church out of funds raised for that purpose; or by individuals singly, or in associations of two or more, and devoted to that object.

12.—Will not persons receive the same credit who pay free will offerings into the hands of the Bishop?

Ans.—No; not if it is meant that the offering is of a different amount than the tenth. All amounts paid into the treasury are free will offerings, including a tithe; but all free will offerings are not tithes. If one pays less than a tenth, he will not receive the same reward as one who gives the tenth. If he should give more there is provision by which it may go under the name of free will offering. Free will offering, or consecration, the term being determined by the circumstances and condition of the donor, and the sacrifice made by him in the giving. These are not demanded, though permissable.

13.—Is not tithing a tenth of what is to be tithed; and more than that, too much; and less, too little?

Ans.—As tithing, certainly.

14.—Can tithing be properly paid at promiscuous intervals and promiscuous times?

Ans.—Yes; if circumstances make such payments necessary, or desirable.

15.—Can a person tithe any part of his property that he may wish?

Ans.—Yes; but in making his returns he should so state; and tithe other property when he can.

16.—Is it desirable that every member of the church should pay tithing and so have their names recorded on the Bishop's books, or should heads of families be responsible and taught to pay?

Ans.—Every member whom the Lord blesses should contribute to his work, and the upbuilding of his kingdom. Teach the children to act for themselves.

17.—Should elders who have some means who labor under the appointment of the church and draw from the Bishop's funds, pay tithing?

Ans.—If they have means it should be tithed as was Abraham's means. If they gain thereafter, they should pay upon such gain. But it is not expected that elders who draw their support from the Bishop wholly will gain much. If an elder who has means gives his time wholly to the ministry and supports himself, he will in such way, aid the church more than would his tithing if paid in dollars and cents; provided he is as competent, judicious and careful in his ministry as an Elder should be; and the amount so expended by him such tithing would be.

18.—If an Elder preaches and sustains himself and family, should he have credit, either for time so spent, or expenses defrayed? If so, how much and on what basis? If not, why not, should such pay tithing? Ans. -Tithing is on the basis of a debt due the Giver of all Good; and the payment, simply the cancellation of the claim as we pass along. No one should take too much credit for paying his debts, or performing an act of gratitude. ever amount of tithing one is able to give, he should give with the thought that he is only returning to the Lord what is the Lord's own. For this reason the reward for rendering tithes relates equally to the man who is able to pay his one dollar, and does it; and the one who is able to pay his ten thousand, and does that. The Elder who preaches and sustains himself and family, should therefore receive credit in the same way, and upon the same basis as the faithful and obedient preacher of the word who is compelled to receive this aid from the church. If one can both preach and pay tithing it is hoped that he will not fail to do all the good in his power. The servant to whom but two talents were given, received the same reward as was promised to him on whom five talents were bestowed. Neither had done much so far as comparison with the reward is concerned; but each had wrought according to the blessings of the Master unto him; and talents (goods) were given to each according to his respective ability.

(time and expense included), be more than

19.—Should the law of tithing be taught

19.—Should the law of tithing be taught to the world; or only to persons after they have come into the church?

Ans.—It should be taught as any part of the gospel and its economy, in time and place, to every one who may desire to hear. The Saints need to understand it, in order that they may live in accordance with its provisions; the world, in order that they may properly judge of the systems practiced by many. The law is not of our making, and requires no apology There is no other system of finance known to mankind today that is so just and equitable in its application to all the members of the church as the system of tithes administered by Melchisedec and observed by the Father of the faithful in Christ. In it there is everything to commend, and nothing to condemn. In the hands of just men among a faithful people, its operation will injure none; but will serve the best interests of all. Let us not be frightened at a shadow. We are to teach the law, not to make it.

Beloved Saints and Readers of the Herald: -Although I am in my ninety-first year, my zeal to promote this work is not in the least abated. The chief object of my life for the last sixty years, has been to obtain salvation; and by a long experience I have learned this important fact, that there is no possibility of obtaining salvation, only by keeping all the commandments of God; and having said so much by way of introduction, my text is found in the 58th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, last clause of the 4th paragraph: "For verily I say unto you, my law shall be kept on this land." In penning a few thoughts for your consideration, I shall show some causes why the law should be kept. In the third paragraph it reads, that on that land, the Zion of God shall stand; and that a feast of fat things might be prepared for the poor, yea a feast of fat things of wines on the lees well refined. We can see by consulting other texts of Scripture on this subject, that it is designed to be no small affair; but to accommodate many thousands or millions. The curse must be removed from the land, or such provision never could be made. This is why the Lord has commanded his law to be kept. By transgressing God's law, man brought the curse on the earth; and by obedience he must take it off. This is in accordance with the Lord's word to Israel in Deut. 28th chapter. If they kept the commandments their land would produce in abundance. All the sacred books teach the same doctrine. It is for the best interest of all Saints to learn to keep all the commandments of God as speedily as possible. Every commandment was given for the purpose of qualifying man by keeping them, to abide the presence of God, in whose presence is fulness of joy. The nearer we approach him, the more joyful we are. This fact should stimulate us to diligence.

We are anxiously waiting for a revelation to organize a stake in the center of Zion; and if we are not pure in heart, we can not stay there. It is better to stay where we are, than to go there and be driven away again. Let us double our diligence, and learn to keep every particle of the law, in keeping of which the Psalmist says, there is great reward.

Your brother in the Lord,
John Landers.

Bro. Joseph:-We have just closed one of the best conferences that I have ever attended since I have been in the Church, (something over eight years). Nothing transpired to molest our peace, or prevent the flow of the Holy Spirit, which was abundantly in our midst; so much so that we did all our business in less time than I have ever known a conference to do before, and I verily believe the Saints returned to their homes feeling that we have had a profitable waiting on the Lord. But while we felt to rejoice in the goodness of God, and in the manifestation of the Spirit, there was a wave of sadness came rippling over our minds as we missed the companionship and cheering and wholesome counsel of one of our standard bearers, our beloved brother, John Carmichael, whom God in his wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst; yet while we feel our loss, we realize that our loss is but his gain. May God grant we may be also ready, having our work done, and well done, when the Master shall see fit to call us hence is my earnest prayer.

Yours in Christ,

J. F. KINGSBURY.

Bro. Foseph Smith: I have tried in the past year to lift up the banner of truth whenever time and opportunity have permitted; and in all my feeble efforts the Master has verified his promises. He has ever been with me while in the discharge of my duty. I have not been without my trials, but I read that all things work together for good to those that love the Lord. He who wishes to live without a trial, wishes to die but half a man. I have found often, that a certain amount of opposition is a good help. Hardships are the native soil of manhood and self reliances. An acorn is not an oak tree when it is sprouted; it must go through long summers and fierce winters. It has to endure all that frost and snow and thunder and storm and side striking winds can bring, before it is a full grown oak. These are rough teachers, but rugged school masters make rugged pupils. I realize that one of the means that our Father uses to burn out the dross, is fiery trials. I know this work is of God, and if I let it have its effect upon me, it will qualify me to dwell with the redeemed. I hope to be able to stand by the books, the Bible, Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants. I believe them to contain God's eternal truth. I understand them to be as a light to my pathway, and a guide to my feet; for books sometimes true, sometimes false, are worse than none; just as a guide sometimes trustworthy and sometimes treacherous, is more dangerous than no guide at all. I intend by the help of the Master, to stay on board the gospel ship, though billows may foam and the tempest rage. The good captain is at the helm, and he will bring her safely into the haven of rest.

I have labored in Sr. Thomas, St. Marys, London and other places, and have had the pleasure of baptizing twenty-three since last I wrote you. May the good work roll on, till it winds its way to the dark caverns of the earth; till all the honest are gathered into the fold. I hope the battle will soon be over, the victory won, that we may be worthy to enjoy the rest that is prepared for the people of God.

Bro. Foseph: I wish to say to the Saints that as I am very badly afflicted with the rheumatism, so that I am not able to work, and one of my little grand daughters is afflicted with sore eyes, I desire the prayers of the Saints in our behalf, that the Lord will, in his goodness and mercy, heal us. I trust in the Lord, for I know that he is merciful to all who call on him; and I realize that the prayers of the righteous availeth much. So, dear Saints, remember us in your prayers. I am alone, the only Saint here, with little orphan grand-chilbren to raise, with no one to help me. I have need of the prayers of the Saints. I will also say to all, that I have one of the best receipts for putting up all kinds of fruit and vegetables without cooking or sealing air-tight. Can be put up in stone jars, or glass. Will keep good for as long as desired. Have used it for two years, with the best of luck. To any one desiring to procure one of the receipts, I will send it for one dollar, with full directions. Address me as above, with full name and address, so there will be no mistakes. It will be a great benefit to me, and you also; for after you have tried it, you would not do without it. Very little cost in putting up fruit, which is so nice when kept in its natural state.

With love to all Saints, your sister in the one faith, EMILY SHUMWAY.

Dear Herald:—I desire to tell of God's goodness to me. Seven years ago I had cancer on my shoulder, and I suffered a great deal for about three years; but by the power of God I have been restored to health again. I have no pain now, which I feel very thankful for. Dear sisters and brethren, if any of you are afflicted, put your trust in God; for he is willing to help you. I know that God hears our prayers. I desire to live faithful that I may obtain the prize. Your sister,

CHRISTIANA HANSON.

BURNETT, Nebraska, April 8th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—We are holding meetings here, and have pretty good audiences, and I think if nothing happens, a number here will come into the church before long. The Lord is working with us here to the convincing of the people of the truth of his word.

I have been called to administer to a number of sick ones, and our Father has healed them to the convincing of the honest ones of the truth of the gospel. One among them had the rheumatism, and had not been able to do any hard work for eight years. He did not belong to the Church. A year ago last January, I think it was, he was taken worse; the rheumatism settled on his heart. and he sent for the doctor. As the doctor did not come soon enough, for some reason being detained, his mother told him he had better send for an Elder; for she believed the doctrine of Christ, although she belonged to the Baptist Church: but when she heard the truth, she believed; so he sent for me, and I went. Before I had been there long, the doctor came, and examined him, and said nothing could save him; for the inflamation had caused his heart to swell till there was no circulation of the blood. So the doctor left him some powders, and went away expecting soon to hear that he was dead. After the doctor went, he said he wanted to be administered to. It was done, and he said he felt the disease let loose of his heart, and go away; and last summer he carried on his farm, taking care to preserve the doctor's powders as a witness that he was not cured by medicine. When he got well, he and his wife and his mother obeyed the gospel. He is now Bro. Arthur Lewis, and he and his wife and mother heeded the lesson.

I remain your brother, and ask your prayers. I hold meeting next Sabbath eight miles from here.

OSCAR BEEBE.

FONTANELLE, Adair Co., Iowa, March 25th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-Your columns I see continue to come mixed with various ideas. To some of your readers I suppose they are all good; to others not quite so agreeable; yet they may do good. As for myself, I have but little to say, being too old in the estimation of this learned and wise generation; yet poor, feeble and silly as I am in the estimation of some who think they know it all, I am pleased and glad in my heart to know how the Book of Mormon came into its present existence, and let the college bred gentlemen and ladies all join in the attempt to destroy its virtues, it will outlive their stories, and it will prove itself yet, with the testimony of the servants of God, to be the best book and record that the Lord has yet revealed to establish and build up the kingdom of God, the Zion, the heavenly Jerusalem, as seen in Isaiah 60th chapter, on this continent.

Though some of them have much to say about our Mormon affairs; yes, I see some of your Ohio friends indulge in the belief that Elder Rigdom was in connection with Joseph Smith in getting up the Book of Mormon. Here let me tell all men and women on earth or in heaven, who have read the Herald, and who read what I say, that Elder Rigdon had no more to do with the bringing into existence the Book of Mormon, than the Queen of England had. Elder Rigdon lived in Ohio when the plates were found, and remained there till it was printed, and in circulation nearly one year, before he heard of it or saw it. And let me tell your readers, that Parley P. Pratt, in the month of November, 1830, gave the Book of Mormon to Elder Rigdon, the first time he ever saw or ever heard of it. These being the facts in the case, what nonsense to talk about Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon stealing and lying to get the Spaulding Romance to conjure up the Book of Mormon. I thank God that Saints have no occasion to resort to any dishonest means to sustain the Book of Mormon, nor any principle of truth found in that book. O what a silly set of foolish ones the college bred gentlemen will be seen in a few years; many thinking that the honest and just, because they are unlearned, are like themselves trying to deceive some of their fellow-mortals. But remember that no honest, wise man, condemns a good book or doctrine, till he has read or heard it. Let all who love truth better than they love sectarianism, get hold of a Book of Mormon; and read the 11th, 12th, and 13th sections of second Book of Nephi; then read 14th chapter of Book of Nephi. Then if you have any faith in what you have read, you will see and feel the force of Nephi's language in behalf of the Gentile nations. "Hearken O ye Gentiles, and hear the words of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God; which he hath commanded me that I should speak concerning you; for behold he commandeth me, that I should write, saying, Turn all ye Gentiles from your wicked ways, and repent of your evil doings, of your lyings and deceivings, and of your whoredoms, and of your secret abominations, and your idolatries, and of your murders, and of your priestcrafts, and of envyings, and your strifes; from all your wickedness and abominations, and come unto me, and be baptized in my name, that ye may receive a remission of your sins and be filled with the Holy Ghost; that ye may be numbered with my people, who are of the House of Israel." Now, all you who read this, see to it, and remember that Nephi, nor no other man on earth ever wrote this revelation to deceive, but to invite, to persuade all to come to Christ. See ye all do it. As ever,

BRIGGS ALDEN.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 21st, 1885.

Dear Herald:-I have received much comfort and edification from the contents you bring to our cots from time to time. Your message is one of love, and your object to bless all men, but especially the household of faith. It is a great pleasure to me to read the many truthful letters, which bear such faithful testimonies to the truthfulness of this great latter day work, which will most assuredly accomplish all that our Father has appointed it to do. I think all of my brethren and sisters feel that we have a great warfare to wage; and it is not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and spiritual wickedness; and that in high places. Seeing that we have come to a knowledge of the position of enemies. it is also necessary that we should know our armor, and by whom it is made secure, and by what means. Our Master has fully revealed the kind of weapons, and as Paul says, The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but spiritual and are mighty to the pulling down of the strongholds of sin and Satan. Jesus said that we were to enter into our closets, and pray to our Father who seeth in secret, and our Father who seeth in secret shall reward you openly. Again, "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation." If latter day Israel will gather up all the strength of the house of the Lord, and put on the whole armor of God, they will soon be sufficiently strong to throw down the towers of their enemies, and scatter them. The servants of God are to bind up the law and seal the testimony. Then what will be the condition of both spiritual and physical enemies of the church of Christ. "Behold, I say unto you, were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church, and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now; but behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil; and do not impart of their substance as becometh Saints," &c. Doctrine and Covenants 102:2. "Therefore, in consequence of the transgressions of my people, it is expedient in me that mine elders should wait for a little season for the redemption of Zion, that they themselves may be prepared, and that my people may be taught perfectly, and have experience and know more perfectly concerning their duty. * * For behold, I do not require at their hands to fight the battles of Zion; for as I said in a former commandment, even so will I fulfill, I will fight your battles." Par. 3. Again, in paragraph 11, "And again, I say unto you, sue for peace, not only the people that have smitten you, but also to all people; and lift up an ensign of peace, and make a proclamation of peace unto the ends of the earth; and make proposals for peace unto those who have smitten you, according to the voice of the Spirit which is in you, and all things shall work together for your good; therefore be faithful, and behold and lo, I am with you even unto the end. Even so, Amen."

I can not see where it is possible any one can infer from the 102 section of Doctrine and Covenants, that the Saints were to take up carnal weapons to destroy their physical enemies. I think there is some piquancy about the matter. Just as well infer from the beautiful hymns we sing that we are to arm ourselves with coats of mail, spears and swords, as from them.

"Am I a soldier of the cross, A follower of the Lamb? And shall I fear to own his cause, Or blush to speak his name?" "Soldiers of Christ arise, And gird your armor on." "Hark, listen to the trumpeters, They sound for volunteers; Commissioned by the King of Kings, Behold the officers. Their armor clean, and glistening bright With courage bold they stand; Enlisting soldiers for their King, Soldiers of Zion's land. Their King is Christ, their armour truth, The word of God their sword, Their shield the power of mighty faith, Their General is the Lord. It sets my heart all in a flame A soldier brave to be; I will enlist, gird on my arms, And fight for liberty. Lift up your heads, ye soldiers bold, Redemption's drawing nigh; We soon shall hear the trumpet sound, That shakes the earth and sky. The trumpets sound, the armies shout, They drive the hosts of hell; The conflict's ended, vict'ry won, Hail! King Immanuel."

The hotter the battle, the brighter the Saints should keep their armour, and have all the sentinels performing their duties; viz., watching and praying, lest we enter into temptation, and be overcome, before the victory's won.

We held meeting all of last week here in Des Moines, and there was a perceptible improvement both in the Saints and congregation. The Saints seem to realize the necessity of living their religion, and there is a spiritual improvement and growth; and yet there is room for improvement. Wishing and praying for the welfare, peace, and prosperity of the church which shall never be destroyed, but shall break in pieces all other kingdoms. It is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes; and it is not "by might, nor power, saith the Lord." This is our hope, and crown of rejoicing, that the hour of redemption is nigh, even so, amen. Love to all Saints. Your brother,

JOSEPH P. KNOX.

Canaan, Jefferson Co., Indiana, April 6th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—We have been comforted by the presence of Brn. M. R. Scott and I. P. Baggerly, who came to this place the 28th, to conference. They held meetings one week after conference. The result was good. Two united with the church, and there are more who seem to be deeply interested. They were blessed by the Spirit; had good delivery. Splendid order prevailed during the meetings. The prospect in this place is good. Hope some Elders may drop in here soon. I feel encouraged in the work. I would like to see more accept the truth. May God bless all of us.

James D. Porter.

Bro. Foseph Smith: There is an article in the Herald, July 19th, 1884, headed "The Kingdom." James the son of Zebede, is placed in the chair as Judge referred to in Acts 15: 19. Still it is plainly revealed in Acts 12:1, 2, that he was killed by Herod. I believe that the James referred to in Acts 12: 17; 15: 13-20; 21: 17, 18; and 1 Cor. 15: 7; and Gal. 1:19; 2:9; was the brother of the Lord Jesus, referred to in Matt. 13:56. I believe his father Joseph, was a prophet, referred to in Matt. 1: 18-25, second and third chapters Inspired Translation, and Patriarch for that generation; and his first-born son, James, was Patriarch by right, as referred to in Doc. & Cov. 83: 2-4; and lawful heirs according to the flesh, 84:3; as your grandfather Joseph Smith, Sr., was a Patriarch for this generation, and his first-born son, Hyrum, took the office of priesthood and Patriarch, referred to in 29 verse, and was placed at the head of the priesthood in the church, 37, 40 paragraphs.

I believe the Apostle Paul placed the pillars in the right shape in Gal. 2: 9, James the first president, Cephas (Peter) and John, counselors; and again when Peter was delivered out of prison by the angel, as recorded in Acts 12: 17, made use of a phrase concerning James. And at the conference at Jerusalem, James was surely the First President: Paul went unto James, and all the Elders were present, Acts 21: 17, 18, as I and other Elders came to your house in Plano in 1881. The Brighamites frequently claim that Peter was the President of the Twelve, and after Christ, he was the First President of the church, with two Counselors; and Brigham Young they say had the same right after Joseph Smith's martyrdom To my understanding there is no proof for lhat in the New Testament Scriptures. Christ promised to give Peter the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, Matt. 16: 20. Did he receive the key on the mountain referred to in 17th chapter? There is no evidence that he did, nor any evidence that they, Peter, James and John, were ordained or separated to any office; but in a vision, and they were forbidden to tell of it, 8 verse, Moses and Elias appeared talking with Christ, 2 verse. The mission of Moses was to restore the Holy, or Melchisedec Priesthood, as Moses was taken out of Israel's midst, and the Holy Priesthood also, Doc. & Cov. 83:4; and I believe Moses ordained Christ unto the Melchisedec priesthood; and Elias was with him, and held the key to the Aaronic Priesthood, as Christ before might have received from Elias, or John the baptist, and on the mountain received the Melchisedec. Read Hebrews 5: 7-10. Matthew 17:4. A voice out of the cloud which said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." Christ called twelve, and gave them power, (Matt. 10:1); but no ordination as apostles, or Melchisedec Priesthood, but he sent them to preach the preparatory gospel, which gospel is the gospel of repentance, and of baptism and the remission of sins, (Doctrine and Covenants 83:4). Christ prayed to his Father for his disciples, and said he had sent them, as the Father had sent Christ; and the glory God gave Christ, Christ had given his Apostles, (John 17:17, 23). He gave them power to preach the gospel, and power over unclean spirits to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sicknesses, and all manner of diseases, and to baptize with water. But after Christ was risen from the dead, and ascended to the Father, and came again to his disciples, he saith, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you, receive the Holy Ghost." -John 20: 21, 22. I believe the disciples then received the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and afterwards the ordination as Apostles in the forty days. I understand an Elder and Apostle is in possession of the Melchisedec Priesthood, and has the right to administer the gifts of the Holy Ghost. Moses and Elias appeared on the mountain to Christ, before he said, "Receive the Holy Ghost," and administered bread and wine; for there required an ordination first, even if the twelve were called. In the Book of Mormon we read that twelve were called, (Nephi 5:9). One was ordained to break bread and bless it, (8:6). I believe as a Priest laying on hands, he gave them power to give the Holy Ghost, 8: 10, and ordained them, Book of Moroni, second and third chapters. The keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, Matt. 16:20, I believe are the authority to adopt into the Kingdom, through the ordinances, after they believe the gospel. And the first time Peter turned the key was the Day of Pentecost for the Jews, Acts 2:38; and for the Greeks, or Gentiles, Acts tenth chapter. As Paul said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power God unto salvation, to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."-Rom. 1:16; Eph. second and third chapters. And Peter, James and John had evidence as to where Christ got the authority; and they were to hear him on the mountain. Matt. 17; and as Christ received the gospel, he gave it to them. And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Mark 16:21. As the prophecy shows, the authority was to be taken away, John 16:2; Acts 20: 29, 30; 2 Thess. 2; 2 Tim. 4: 3, 4; 2 Pet. 2: 1 -3; Rev. 13:4-8; Isa. 29:10; Doctrine and Covenants 84:1. A promise concerning the times of restitution of all things, Acts 3: 19-26; Eph. 1:3-12; Psa. 84:9-13; Isa. 26:9; 8:19, 20; 11:10, 11; Rev. 14:6, 7; Gal. 1:6-12; Matt. 24:32. How can we know when God has restored the gospel? It must be in a proper way, and by the rule of God, "Surely the Lord will do nothing, until he revealeth the secret unto his servants the prophets." Amos 3:7; Malachi 4:5, 6, to whom God has committed the keys of bringing to pass the restoration of all things. John the Baptist appears to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, and confers on them the Aaronic Priesthood, Life of Joseph the Prophet, page 43, and Doctrine and Covenants 26:2; the first priesthood. And the greater priesthood administereth the gospel, and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God, Doctrine and Covenants 83:3, 4. Now this gospel and power of authority by ordination to the Melchisedec Priesthood, was restored to Joseph Smith the Martyr and Oliver Cowdery, Doctrine and Covenants 26:3; 84:2-4. This is my belief, and a rule to follow and test all reformers by.

Yours for truth,

PETER N. BRIX.

MANCHESTER, Red River Co., Texas, April 6th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph: I am still by the help and power of God, trying to spread the gospel in this wide land. Bro. Heman Smith writes me favorable letters from the western part of the state, and I think the work is brightening here. We preached Sunday last, at Fleming Chapel, on Peter's Prairie, at 11 o'clock. We have an appointment there for the first Sunday in each month, and the people seem to be manifesting much interest in the cause. The Baptist brethren concluded they would stop us, so they locked the door on us. It being a Union Church House, our friends wanted to brake the door open, but we told them not to do that. The school house was close by, and was opened, and we were welcomed in. Our friends sympathised with us and said they were sorry. We proceeded to preach, and was blessed with God's Holy Spirit, and good liberty. told the people from the bible what was Christ's religion. After service, we were invited home by Mr. Tucker. I stayed Sunday night with Mr. Tucker, and presented our belief in full to him and family. It rained Sunday night, so I could not get home Monday, and I staved Monday and Monday night. The young ladies and men came in, and we engaged in singing praise to the Lord. They are splendid singers. The Saints here are till trying to hold the fort. We know if we only do our part, God is not slack concerning his promises. I pray for the time to come, when the gospel can be preached all over thls wide land, without molestation.

I. D. ERWIN.

FLORA VISTA, Rio, Arabia Co., New Mexico, January 5th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I feel that my faith in the course can not be marred, and continue to defend it to the best of my ability, whenever an opportunity presents itself. There are many in our midst who are anxiously awaiting the appearance of a minister to introduce the doctrine that I uphold. I have not as yet met a person here who will attempt to oppose it. Many express themselves surprised, and say that I advance ideas that they had never thought of. I do not seek flattery, but insist that they hearken, and investigate the truth. A gentleman, Mr. John S. De Luche, of Jenet, P. O., Rio, Arabia Co., New Mexico, spent the night with me of late, who is well informed as to the polygamic doctrine; and supposed, and contended, that you represented the same, until I proved to him the contrary. He is very much taken up with the Herald, and promised to write, but I think he failed to take your address. He resides twenty-seven miles from here, and urged that I should let him know when I am to be baptized, and he would surely come. Can not you give me some encouragment, when to look for an official to call and establish a branch at this point?

As ever, yours in bonds,

E. N. BEACH.

BEAVER CITY, Utah, April 7th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith: We are feeling very much encouraged here as a branch; and the signs show that the day is at hand, when the Reorganized Church is to do a greater and more effectual work than it has done in the past. The people are surrounded by circumstances of late, which have caused very many to stop and think. Some have so done, until a shadow of light has shone across their minds. There is a greater desire to listen and investigate on the part of very many, who one year ago would not listen, but would shut their eyes and stick their fingers into their ears, as it were, so they should not hear, for fear they would be converted. But a different spirit has come over the people, in this place, and through the territory. We had a very agreeable visit from Bro. R. J. Anthony a short time ago. He stopped with us two weeks, I think. We were much pleased to see him, and hear him speak the words of encouragement and eternal life, and we all felt to praise the Lord for his good Spirit which aided him in his efforts, not, only him, but aided six others-convincing them that our positions and principles were correct, and they were added to our flock. Two heads of families and several others are very near the door. Bro. Anthony is an able expounder, and an exemplary man, full of good works. His preach ing was generally well received by those who attended regularly. He had good congregations. Our Methodist minister was very liberal. He gave him the use of the M. E. Church.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

April 10th.—Gen. Graham has issued a proclamation in which he urges the Arabs to submit to the British. The Suakin-Berber Railroad has been completed as far as "Station No. 1" at Handoub.

In the House of Commons Mr. Gladstone said that Russia had asked Gen. Komaroff to explain his conduct in attacking the Afghans, but that no explanation had been received as yet. The Russians do not occupy Penjdeh, but have retired to the positions they occupied before the battle with the Afghans. It is reported that England has given Russia twenty-four hours to recall Gen.Komaroff. The alternative is war. Sixty thousand men from the army reserves and the whole of the militia will be called out. The naval reserves will be relied upon for home defense. Various plans are being considered for striking Russia at vulnerable points outside of the present field of hostilities. The theory is that if England and Russia are to fight, Russia should not be permitted to choose the battlefield. One plan, which is seriously contemplated, is to attack the Russian Transcaucasian Provinces on the east coast of the Black Sea. If such a scheme were put into execution the friendship of Turkey would be of great importance to England, on account of the control of the Dardanelles. The Tories predict that Mr. Gladstone will again back down, as he did two weeks ago. The Russian newspapers charge Lord Dufferin and Sir Peter Lumsden with provoking the war by advising the Afghans to march into Russian territory. It is reported that the British Government has ordered an army of 30,000 men to be raised in

It is semi-officially stated now that as soon as a decree shall have been issued by China ordering the execution of the Tien-Tsin treaty and the evacuation of Tonquin the French military operations will be stopped, the blockade of Formosa and Pakkoi will be raised, and Patenotre, the Minister to China, will go to Tien-Tsin or Pekin for the purpose of executing a definitive treaty of peace.

News was received of the killing of fourteen white settlers at Frog Lake, eighty miles from Battleford, by the Cree Indians. One woman was captured. Fort Pitt is in danger. Battleford is surrounded by 1,000 Indians, but no attack has been made as yet. A general rising is feared.

A telegram from Commander Kane at Aspinwall reports that United States troops are now guarding both ends of the Panama Railroad. Everything is quiet.

Gen. Barillos has succeeded Gen. Barrios as President of Guatemala.

Last Monday the Governor of Ohio received through the mail a small wooden box, from one end of which hung a string. The Governor's suspicions being aroused, he caused the cover of the box to be removed, and a carefully-arranged infernal-machine loaded with dynamite, slugs, and spikes was disclosed to view. The string had been so adjusted that to have pulled it the Governor would have caused an explosion and doubtless lost his life.

The Dominion Government has stopped warlike movements against the half-breeds, for the purpose of officially investigating their claims.

April 12th.—Von Moltke is said to be busy on a scheme for the thorough reorganization of the German colonial army.

There is now an almost unanimous consensus of opinion that England has been outwitted by Russian diplomacy. But the chances of peace are distinctly improved, and the most cool-headed observers believe that all reasonable excuse for further puttering is destroyed. The ground for this belief is the general conviction that the Cabinet must regard Gen. Komaroff's dispatch regarding the battle on the Kooshk, and its antecedent manoeuvres, as being virtually Russia's reply to Lord Granville's demand for an explanation. Gen. Komaroff's dispatch is published officially to-day in the Praveitelstvenni Viestruk (Government messenger) of St. Petersburg. He explains tha the Afghans crossed the Kooshk and encamped on the Russian side of the river Wednesday, March 25th. Wishing to avoid a collision, Gen. Komaroff remained quiescent during a few succeeding days. The Afghans continually increased in boldness, and eventually captured certain hights occupied by Russian pickets, forcing them back. Gen. Komaroff asked the Afghan leader to retire to the opposite bank of the river. The reply of the Afghan chief was that he was acting under English advice, and he refused to retire. A second friendly request to the same effect was made, but received no reply whatever. Monday, the 30th ult., five days after the Afghans crossed the river, Komaroff advanced upon the Afghan position. The Afghans opened fire, which was of course returned by the Russians. A battle ensued, which resulted in the total rout of the Afghans, who fled toward the south. This report, or defense, of Gen Komaroff, as it is variously termed, absorbs attention in military political circles tonight. The imputation that the English instigated the Afghans to advance is scouted by the politicians, but the report of Capt. Yates on this point is anxiously awaited. Gen. Sir Peter Lumsden has already described the Afghan movement as an act of purely defensive strategy, but his brief dispatch was based upon the report of his staff officer, Capt. Yates, and the details of the latter's report are needed to establish the facts to the satisfaction of military ex-

In view of the threatened rupture between England and Russia, the geopraphical and strategical situation in Afghanistan and on its borders should be clearly understood, and this may be easily done by studying a good map of Central Asia, as the field of operations in that quarter will be a comparatively limited one. The first move, according to Sir Peter Lumsden himself, was made by the afghans nearly two months ago. Upon the pretense that the Russians were threatening Ak-taps, which is near the confluence of the Kooshk and Murkhak Rivers, and about ten miles from Penjdeh, they csossed the river and advanced beyond Ak-taps to Puli-Khisti, which brought them within a short distance of the Russian advance post, and ultimately provoked the collision which occurred the 30th ult. After their defeat, the Afghans retired to Maruchak, which is on the Murghab River, twenty-eight miles south of Penjdeh, and within about eighteen miles of Bala Murghab, which has been the headquarters of Sir Peter Lumsden. The Russian Government claims that its forces returned after the battle to their lines. The English, on the other hand, claims that they occupied Penjdeh. Such is the situation at present. Meanwhile Sir Peter Lumsden, with his 500 soldiers and such an Afghan contingent as he may be able to collect, has been ordered to occupy the Robat Pass, which intersects the Barkhut Mountains and commands the approach to Herat, about eighty miles distant from that city. It is a narrow mountain defile, 900 feet in hight, which it is believed can be held by Lumsden against the Russians until the English troops arrive from the east via Quettah. In case of war, therefore, the Robat Pass will be the centre of strategic operations for the present. The english already have a considerable force in the territory between the Lower Indus and the valley of the Pishin River, of which Quettah, a strongly fortified post 490 miles southeast of Herat, is the central point. This latter place is not in Afghanistan, but in Kelat, one of the Beloochistan Provinces, and in one direction is within 100 miles of the railroad, which runs from Lahore to Kurrachee, on the Arabian Sea. It is said that a considerable distance of a branch line to Quettah has already been finished, and that it will now be pushed as fast as possible not only to Quettah but also to Condahar, about 280 miles southeast of Herat, which the English would approach through the Bolan Pass and over a comparatively good road along the base of the mountains. The troops in Egypt probably will be landed at Kurrachee, a terminus of the road, whence it is said they can reach Quettah and crossing the boundary into Afghanistan, it remains to be seen whether the march of the troops wilt be left uninterrupted. The Afghans of that section are more devoted to Ayoub Khan, who is now an English prisoner, than to the present Ameer, and their hostility to the English is so strong that the latter Power has already cautioned Lord Duferin that the English forces passing through there must be on the lookout. As to the number of the force now in the field, it is difficult to make an accurate statement. The Afghans are reported to have four corpsone at Herat, the second at Sir-i-pui, about 150 miles east of Penjdeh; the third at Takh-ta-pui, eighty miles further away; and the fourth at Kabool; the whole aggregating about 50,000 men. The English had some time ago 26,000 men on the Puettah line, and have probably largely increased the force since the trouble began, while India, all told, can probably send in 75,000 men, without estimating the forces the feudatories may tender the Government. Nearly 30,000 of the best of the English troops are in Egypt, and when needed will be quickly transferred. The Russians have probably about 60,000 men east of the Caspian Sea, and heavy reinforcements have been moving in that direction for some time, though to what extent is not known, as the Russian censorship effectually conceals their movements.

The Easter week has been a bloody one. It is well known that the anti-Semitic agitation, especially in Hungary, is founded on the assertion that the Jews need the blood of Christians for the Easter festivities, and for that purpose kill Christian girls and boys. To that agitation must be ascribed this year three Easter murders. In Krakan a girl was killed by a Christian couple in the cellar of a Jewish house. Through accident the bloody deed was detected, and the fact was established that the murder was committed for the purpose of stirring up an anti-Semitic riot. The plan miscarried, but the poor girl is dead. In the Liptoer Comital, in Hungary, a fourteen year old girl named Paula Zvara was induced to tell a story to the effect that she had been threatened by two old Jews with butcher-knives. Persecution of the Jews was the result. A number of Jewish business houses were destroyed and several people were wounded. The girl afterward confessed that the anti-Semitic agitators had induced her to tell that story. The most horrible of all is the third case. A State official, named Ballanties, chose the Jewish Easter for the purpose of killing his sweetheart, Veghpeczech. The motive of the deed was jealousy. He murdered the beautiful girl, who was twenty years old, by ripping her open. The deed was done in the house of a Jewish dentist, where the girl lived. Rosa Buday, the little eight year old cousin of the murdered girl, witnessed the act. The brutal murderer, noticing the little girl, also seized the child and cut her throat. The murderer then fled, and the anti-Semites of Buda-Pesth declared the Jews responsible for the murder, for it was the Jewish Easter, they said, and they needed Christian blood. After three days of terrible excitement the murderer was captured. He confessed the deed, and it seems evident that he chose for his revengeful murder the Jewish Easter in order to cast suspicion upon the Jews. Most luckily the murderer was captured, else a formidable riot against the Jews would have been the consequence.

An enormous emigration from Italy to America is expected this season. As a result of last year's cholera epidemic Italy is suffering from an almost unprecedented commercial depression, and all branches of industry show a lassitude which amounts in some trades to almost stagnation. In the rural districts the depression has caused almost total failure of the production of wine and oil, and other crops have suffered a severe check. The strike among rural laborers at Mantua is growing into larger proportions daily, and the authorities restrain the strikers from acts of violence and bloodshed with dificulty. Thus far 170 strikers have been imprisoned. The tyranny of the Government in making unwarranted arrests, suppressing or destroying telegrams containing truthful statements of the situation, and seizing all newspapers who are outspoken in their protestations against high-handed official acts, is widely denounced. The treatment meted out to such journals as have given voice to the existing misery and denounced the acts of the officials is almost unprecedented. The journalists are organizing a league for mutual protection against prosecutions which threaten to overwhelm them.

Cholera certainly exists in different localities in Spain. Cases of supposed cholera are reported from Cleveland, in the United States.

The proposed corn tax which was intended to keep American corn and flour out of Austria has been abandoned, it having been decided to keep the tariff question in abeyance.

"Buffalo" Miller, the President of the Western whisky pool, is of opinion that high license has proved beneficial to the whisky trade.

Khartoum is the chief city as well as the capital of the Soudan country claimed by Egypt. It is located on the peninsular formed by the junction of the Blue and White Nile. The dockyard and principal landings are on the Blue Nile. The water in the river is about 1,400 feet above the level of the sea. There is an extensive quay on the banks of the river, where the principal commerce of a large country naturally centres. A great part of the city lies low, so that at high water it is flooded, which renders it unhealthy, but it is believed that some day a remedy for that evil will be provided. The gardens around the city are extensive, and contain long rows of date palms, many of which are half a century old, and have become very valuable. The view of the city from the side of the river is very fine. The city is 1,500 miles from Cairo. The climate is severe. From June until October the thermometer ranges from 95 to 100 in the shade and is about 80 in winter during the day time.

Descret News:—"Our dispatches announce that two more of our brethren in Arizona have been convicted of unlawful cohabitation with their wives—Charles I. Robson, Counselor to the President of the Maricopa Stake, and O. M. Stewart, Bishop of the Alma Ward of the same Stake. They plead guilty to the charges in the idictments, and were sentenced to ninety days each in the Territorial penitentiary, so that doubtless they are now in durance vile in Yuma."

April 13th.—It is now thought that no further trouble need be expected on the Isthmus of Panama.

It is reported that the Chinese forces in Tonquin have received orders to cease hostilities.

The French Ministers at London, St. Petersburg, Berlin, and Vienna have been ordered to remain at their posts during the Afghan crisis.

In the House of Commons Premier Gladstone made a statement regarding the Anglo-Russian difficulty. Explaining the delay of the Government in reaching a final decision with Russia, Mr. Gladstone said the reports of the Russian officers who took part in the Penjdeh affair and those of the English who witnessed the engagement differed so materially in substance and effect that the Government felt obliged to make an independent inquiry. This was proceeding now, and the Government was doing everything in its power towards ascertaing the facts. The Earl of Dufferin is to meet the Maharajah of Cashmere at Lahore, and will probably secure his active support for the English. Meanwhile Sir Peter Lumsden has occupied a strong position at Tirnul.

The Fenians are said to be organizing for a fresh raid on Canada, and the news comes by the way of Detroit that they are now secretly drilling in Chicago. Riel, the leader of the half-breed revolt, is said to be in communication with the promoters of the proposed demonstration.

April 13th.—The War in Central and South America has ceased. Gen. Barrios, the active cause of the war is dead, his successor, P. Barellos in office, and a basis of peace has been agreed upon between San Salvador and Guatemala.

Deserters from the Mahdi's army report the evacuation of Birti and Metemneh. Italian troops have occupied a station on the Red Sea, and the flag of King Humbert now floats beside that of the Khedive.

Turkey is believed to have received tempting offers of alliance from both England and Russia. It is expected that the Sultan will join forces with the Power which he may regard as standing the best chance of victory in the coming contest, which it is thought is England, on account of her immense floating steel forts, and her ability with them to force the Dardanelles, and afterward blockade them.

Gen. Sir Gerald Graham in his report to-day to the home government says the road between Suakin and a point eight miles west of Handoub is now in condition to make work on the Suakin-Berber Railway easy. Convoys go daily to Osman Digma, Gen. Handoub undisturbed. Graham says, is trying to collect followers for the purpose of compelling the desert tribes to furnish him with supplies. The percentage of sick in the British force is reported by Gen. Graham to be but 4. The British cavalry this morning visited Otao, eight miles beyond Han-No hostile Arabs were encountered. Water was found to be plentiful. The country appeared to be entirely open. The Arab population freely sells supplies to the English. Deserters from the Mahdi's army report that the rebels have evacuated Berti and Metemneh, and that the garrisons of those two places have gone respectively to Berber and Khartoum. Numbers of the Bishareens are leaving Osman Digma's country and taking their families to Berber.

Dispatches from Shanghai received this afternoon state that there is a hitch in the final arrangements for the execution of the definitive treaty of peace between France and China owing to some concession which China asks and which M. Patenotre, the French Ambassador, refused to grant. A Hong Kong dispatch states that the difficulty encountered in adjusting the terms of the treaty of peace between China and France is found to be of such a serious nature that the French Government is seriously considering the advisibility of substituting M. Bouree for M. Patenotre, the present French Envoy at Pekin, in the negotiations. Notwithstanding the above dispatches the following telegram was received at Paris to-day from M. Patenotre, the French minister to China: The Official Gazette of Pekin to-day publishes an imperial decree ordering the execution of the preliminiary treaty of peace between China and France. The decree orders the Viceroy of Canton to send a Customs Commissioner and a Mandarin to Hanoi to make arrangements with Gen. de l'Isle for the evacuation of Tonquin by the Chinese troops. Luhninphuoe, Chief of the Black Flags, has received a title equivalent to that of Baron, and will be made Governor of a Chinese province, and will receive a large sum of money to enable him to pay and disband his followers.

Mr. Gladstone's hesitancy has emboldened Russia, who now in her turn is demanding explanations and withdrawals. Mr. Gladstone, in the House of Commons this afternoon, stated that word had been received from Sir Peter Lumsden which showed that there was no confirmation of the report that the Russians had advanced to the Murghab River after the battle of Penideh, Continuing, Mr. Gladstone said that the result of the Government's communications with Russia concerning its reported advance ammounted to a renewal of Russia's assuranc that no advance will will occur if the issue of a contrary intention can prevent it. Earl Granville, Foreign Minister, stated this afternoon in the House of Lords that the Government was still engaged in making inquiry into the reported advance of the Russians to the Murghab River. Refering to the Queen's message calling out the reserves, Earl Granville said that whatever measures might be taken they would entirely meet the requirements of the Indian Government. The British fleet intended for blockading, cruising, and fighting purposes in the Baltic if war is declared is now ready for sea. It could sail tomorrow if ordered, and could be in the Baltic Sea within four days thereafter. Every day's delay, however, is utilized by the Admirality Office in strengthening the fleet. The Government has decided to purchase four more steamers similiar to the America and to equip them as armed cruisers. The number of British men-of-war now being prepared for service is so great that it is believed that active offlcers cannot be found for them all, and that it will be necessary to resort to the retired list. steel armor-plated turret ship Colossus, of 9,150 tons register, and 7,490 horse-power, one of the most formidable ironclads in the British navy, will be soon ready for sea, and, it is believed, will be attached to the Baltic fleet. Gibraltar and other British strongholds are to be put in a complete state of defense. Additional supplies of torpedoes of the latest approved pattern are being forwarded to all naval stations, both at home and abroad. A dispatch has been received from the Imperial authorities by Lieut.-Col. J. Vanc Gravely and Capt. H. J. Snelgrove, at Toronto, Ont., inquiring if the offer made some time ago by those officers to raise a Canadian contingent of 300 men for service in Egypt, which offer was provisionally accepted pending the decision of the Government, would hold good in case of hostilities occurring between Great Britain and Russia. Owing to the rebellion in the Northwest, which has drawn off large numbers of Canadian militiamen, the question of furnishing colonial aid has experienced a new phase, but the officers anticipate no dificulty in raising for foreign service the force named. A large draft of marines has been ordered to join the Baltic fleet at Devonport to-morrow. Lord Dufferin has informed the Government that the Ameer consents to the passage of British troops through Afghanistan. At Cirencester, in Gloucester, to-day, during a parade of 250 Gloucester militia, recruits, were invited to join the regulars and 148 men responded to the invitation. Victoria, B. C., advices say: One thousand men will be enlisted immediately for service if war breaks out. All the batteries are being connected by telephone. The harbor of Bombay has been lined with torpedoes so as to prevent a Russian fleet from entering it in the event of war, and 4,000,000 cartridges have been landed at Bombay. [Bombay is situated on a neck of land at the southeast extremity of the Island of Bombay. The name means "good harbor," and good anchorage is afforded for ships of the largest burden. Bombay is the chief Indian port connected with the establishment of steam navigation between India and Great Britian.] The Russian Grand Duke Vladimir has been ordered to Archangel to review the troops and fleet congregated at that port. [Vladimir is the oldest brother of the Czar. Archangel is a seaport town of Russia in Europe, the Capital of the province of the same name, on the Dwina, twenty miles from its embonchure in the Bay of Archangel, and 670 miles northeast of St. Petersburg.] The British foreign office has sent directions to the British Minister at Teheran to organize a courier service to fill up gaps in the telegraph lines by which communication is had with Sir Peter Lumsden.

There is news from Russian Poland to the effect that the Russian police are searching all the chateaus and castles in Podolia and Ukraine for arms, seizing all they find unless the possessors hold a special license to own them. This is attributed to a fear of a Polish uprising in the event of war between England and Russia. [Poland had a Constitution of its own from 1815 to 1830, and a separate government until 1864, when it was deprived of the last remnant of its administrative independence. There had been a great revolt for the two preceding years, and an imperial decree Sept. 1st, 1864, after its suppression ordered the kingdom placed under the rule of eight Military Governors, depending from a "Council of State" established at Warsaw, the Polish Capital. In 1867 the entire administration of Poland was transferred to a commission siting at St. Petersburg, and finally in 1868 the commission was dissolved and the Government of Poland absolutely incorporated with that of Russia.

An engagement between the half-breeds in the Northwest territory and the Dominion forces, is daily expected. Riel has drawn up a manifesto. A long account is given of the proceedings of the deputation which went to Ottawa in 1881 to put before the Government the complaints of the half-breeds of St. Albert and the Saskatchewan country. He says the appointment of the Half-Breed Commission is a confession that the halfbreeds had not received justice. Strong representations had been made by Archbishop Taché and others, the answer always being that "something would be done." This went on until 1876, when Gov. Laird advocated a general settlement. In 1876, 1877, and 1878 urgent representations were made to the Government. In 1879, when Sir John Macdonald came into power, these representations were received. Riel says Mr. Dewdnev must have misled the Government; that the Dominion surveyors had no sooner ceased to harass the half-breeds than timber inspectors began to fine settlers for taking timber off lands which they had been cultivating for years, though the patents had been withheld. Riel appeals to the white settlers to testify to the mismanagement of Saskatchewan and Alberta since 1870 and to the tyranny and dishonesty of the officials, and says his people did not fire upon Crozier until that officer fired first; that war is being forced upon them, though the Parliament knows they have been wronged. In conclusion he says they must die fighting.

This document, together with the bill of rights of September and the new bill of rights, will be sent to Gen. Middleton. Gabriel Dumont is the most active man in the rebel ranks and compels many followers by threats of death to stand out. He denies having incited the Indians, and says they are avenging their own sufferings and showing the Government they will not submit to Dewdney any longer. The rebel leaders say that if they are driven out of the Saskatchewan country they will go to Pease River and form a territory of their own and will not submit until other officials are appointed.

April 15.—In the English Cabinet council the Anglo-Russian situation, it is said, was represented to be as follows: England and Russia have agreed upon a basis for a delimitation of the Afghan frontier subject to a satisfactory explanation by Russia of the recent attack on the Afghans. According to this scheme it is said that Penjdeh will be ceded to Russia provided the Ameer consents. Despite this statement, however, recruiting for the British navy continues with great activity. The Admiralty have invited navy pensioners to volunteer.

Revolutionary disorders have been renewed in Cochin China. The rebellion in Cambodia, has not only been revived with increased strength but it has already got beyond the power of the Governor to suppress it, and he has urgently demanded reinforcements.

The Indians and half-breeds now in revolt against the Canadian Government have laid waste a large section of country to the north and west of Battleford. Over 1,000 settlers are rendered homeless by the raid.

The Mormon church organ [Deseret News] denounces the action of O. P. Arnold in pleading guilty to the charge of unlawful cohabitation and the declaration that he would live within the laws and give moral aid and support to the same. It says: "Notwithstanding that the course taken by Brother Arnold received the ecomiums of court, its officers and the approval of spectators, his example is not one that any consistent Latter Day Saint can afford to follow. The spectacle he presented is not a noble one. If every member of the church similarly situated to Mr. Arnold were to pursue a like course, it would appear as if men who profess to be observers of the commandments of God were overcome by the influence of fear. The Latter Day Saints can not afford to renounce any principle of their religion or any of its obligations, no matter what may be the degree of pressure brought to bear to compel them to be recreant to their duty. If they repudiate that which God has established, the Lord will throw them out and all lovers of consistency, and those who admire men who maintain the courage of their convictions, will despise them. We regret that Bro. Arnold should have assumed the position he has taken."

April 16.—At yesterday's Cabinet meeting it was decided to issue a proclamation notifying settlers on the Winnebago lands in Dakota that the country was illegally opened to settlement and that it must be vacated. It was also determined to remove the fences on public lands and to take prompt action on the Oklahoma question.

Gladstone's reply to various questions asked him in the House of Commons about the Afghan imbroglio is said to have satisfied neither his friends nor enemies. It seems that the Premier is anxious to avert hostilities even at the cost of concessions which would have appeared intolerable a few weeks ago. It is announced that the British Government has found it impossible to obtain a sufficient number of able seamen to man the ships ordered to prepare for service. The Lord Mayor of London presided at an indignation-meeting called to denounce the authorities for their neglect of the navy.

The British troops have occupied Otao, eight miles west of Handoub, Egypt. They encountered no opposition. Natives report that Osman Digma's forces have gradually dispersed as the British troops have occupied the places upon which the hostile Arabs depended for water and forage.

Admiral Courbet, commanding the French fleet in Chinese waters, reports that before he received notice of the peace between France and China, the French cruiser D'Estaing had captured a Chinese vessel with all on board, comprising 750 soldiers and three Mandarins. In a dispatch from the Pescadores, dated April 12, Admiral Courbet says that the Chinese vessel captured by the D'Estaing is a wooden ship named Pingon, and is of no great value. The vessel was conveying official Chinese dispatches from Formosa to the mainland, which were thrown overboard before the vessel was captured. Gen. de l'Isle, in a telegram from Hanoi, dated April 15, says that he sent envoys to notify the Chinese of the cessation of hostilities, but that before the envoys were able to deliver the notice 2,000 Chinese troops, unaware of the conclusion of peace, attacked Kep the 14th inst., and were repulsed beyond Bacle. The French loss was one killed and seven wounded. The garrison at Honghoa made a sortie and dispersed a Chinese detachment which had attacked the French gunboats containing envoys to Honghoa to give notice of the cessation of hostilities.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: A slight rainfall has brought spring grain all forward. The imminence of war between England and Russia has caused native wheat to advance 3s. $5s. The actual business done has been very small. The sales of English wheat during the last week were 42,809 quarters at 33s. 3d., against 47,770 quarters at 37s. 9d. during the corresponding week last year. It is believed that from three-fourths to four-fifths of the English wheat crop of 1884 has already been marketed, and that millers hold but little stock. These conditions, together with the small reserves of foreign wheat and the fact that half of the 3,000,000 quarters of foreign breadstuffs on passage are from two to four months off, would warrant belief that the position is sufficiently elastic fo bring about an advance of 20 shillings per quarter within a week should war be declared. Values are so low that there is plenty of room for such an advance without making wheat dear. How long such an advance would be maintained would depend upon the action of American speculators during the next two months. At present trade is experiencing an extreme tension which deters both buyers and sellers from operating. Foreign trade is greatly excited on account of the war rumors. The off-coast market is in a state of suspense. Ten cargoes arrived. Six cargoes were sold, five were withdrawn, and eleven remained, including six of California. About nine sailing vessels with cargoes are due. To-day, in the absence of definite news regarding the probabilities of war, the tension of the market was extreme. English and foreign wheats since Easter have advanced fully 4s. Flour today was very firm. American corn sold at 24s. ex-ship, an advance of 1s. 6d. Round corn was scarce. Barleys were 1s. 6d. dearer. Oats showed an advance over a fortnight ago of 2s. Beans and peas were 1s. 6d@2s. dearer.

Six hundred or more employees of the Chicago Malleable Iron Works struck April 10th, for an advance of 15 per cent in wages. The officers of the company agreed to an increase of 10 per cent, which the men accepted.

There were 174 failures in the United States during the last seven days, a decrease of fifty-one as compared with the preceding week.

Chicago elevators contained Apr. 11 15,881,150 bushels of wheat, 2,037,835 bushels of corn, 533,613 bushels of oats, 135,353 bushels of rye, and 50,438 bushels of barley; total, 18,638,389 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 20,976,223 bushels a year ago. During last week our stock increased 66,-379 bushels, including a decrease of 23,067 bushels of wheat and an increase of 123,407 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 46,851,232 bushels of wheat, 9,958,466 bushels of corn, 2,418,310 bushels of oats. 312,799 bushels of rye, and 755,570 bushels of barley. These figures are smaller than a week ago by 716,086 in wheat and larger by 1,072,503 in corn.

The April returns to the Department of Agriculture indicate a reduction of over ten per cent of last year's area of winter wheat. The aggregate shortage amounts to 3,000,000 acres. A decrease is reported in every State except Oregon. It is 22 per cent in Kansas and Virginia, 20 in Mississipi, 15 in California, 14 in Alabama, 12 in Tennessee, Illinois, and Missouri, 11 in New York and North Carolina, 10 in Maryland and Texas, 8 in New Jersey, West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana, 7 in Georgia and Ohio, 6 in Pennsylvania and Delaware, 5 in Michigan, 3 in Arkansas, and 2 in South Carolina. The present condition of wheat as reported is worse than in 1883. It is 77 per cent against 96 last year and 80 in 1883. In 1881, the year of lowest recent rate of yield, the condition April 1 was 85, and serious loss was sustained afterwards. The real status of the crop will be better shown a month hence, when the vitality of the roots has been demonstrated and the character of the spring determined.

The statement of the National banks made March 10, shows that in three months the amount of gold certificates held by these institutions increased over $27,000,000. Treasury officials regard this as an indication of a purpose to hoard the precious metal.

Unfavorable exhibits are still being reported at the prominent clearing houses. The volume of business last week shows a decrease of 20.7 per cent as compared with the corresponding week of last year. Outside of New York the decrease was but 6.7 per cent. The unfavorable report is made more noticeable by the fact that six days of 1885 are compared with but five days ot 1884, Good Friday having intervened last year. In Chicago the decrease was 17.3 per cent.

Good Friday having intervence and Chicago the decrease was 17.3 per cent.

The president made the following appointments to be Consuls of the United States: Charles T. Russell of Connecticut at Liverpool, England; A. Haller Gross of Pennsylvania at Athens, Greece; William W. HOLLISTER, Cal., April 11th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—I have just attended the conference of the Central California District, held at Watsonville, Santa Cruz county. We had a good conference. The Spirit of the Lord was with us in our business sessions and preaching meetings. And we were all made to rejoice that we are numbered with the Saints of God.

I expect to return to Santa Rosa again, in a few weeks; and God being my helper, I shall try to hold the fort in that place, and keep the little band of Saints together.

Your brother in Christ,

C. W. HAWKINS.

STRENGTH ENOUGH.

The morning mists that lie
About the day, that comes so softly in,
Hide all its secrets from the searching eye,
And none may tell what want, or pain, or sin
Shall break, new-risen, from the enfolding shroud,
Nor what is in the cloud.

Before the busy feet,
In the hot noontide 'neath the blazing sun,
Shall with their rapid step-sounds fill the street,
Before the willing hands their work have done,
There may have burst some great and new surprise
Before our shrinking eyes.

It may be ours to stand,
Forsaken, single-handed, in a fight
With a determined and a hostile band,
For the dear cause we honor as the Right, o
And either be o'ercome or win a crown
Before the sun goes down.

We may be called to take

Some noble work that needs the wise and strong,
And do it faithfully for Jesus' sake,
Though no great talents may to us belong;
It may be ours to seem to stand alone
Before the Master's throne.

Or we may have to-day
To lay all work aside, and in the gloom
That suddenly creeps up around the way
Take the short journey that shall find the tomb,
And see the earth-home fade before our face
In some strange place.

But howsoe'er it be,
We dare go forth to meet the dim unseen,
Tranquil and patient, God is near, and he Will be our Helper as he yet has been;
And let the day for us be fair or rough,
We shall have strength enough.

HEAVEN AND HELL.

HEAVEN.

We claim that the word "heaven," is improperly used when applied to a world, a locality. In the first chapter of Genesis, eighth verse, we read: "And God called the firmament heaven." It was spoken of as space, illimitable space. "In the accepted version of the Bible, Rakia is translated, "firmament." Shamayim, "the heaven and earth." Maram, "heaven." Ps. 18: 16. Shamaram, "upper and lower regions." Shechakim, "Expanses," with reference to the extent of heaven."—Smith's Bible Dictionary.

I believe the word paradise should be used instead of the word heaven. Paul says: "How that he was caught up to paradise."—2 Cor. 12: 4; Rev. 2: 7. "To the idealist school of Alexandria, of which Philo is the representative, paradise was nothing more than a symbol and an allegory. Spiritual perfection was the only paradise. The trees that grew in it were the thoughts of the spiritual man."

We must have, not only one paradise, but many; and if one hell, various departments. We have good society; the rights and liberties, social joy and happiness may constitute its pleasures and reward for a compliance with right principle. We have evil society or transgressors of law, and for such we have prisons of various kinds. Upon like principle God operates, and purposes dealing with humanity, spiritually.

A place of enjoyment and pleasure, to the present finite condition, inconceivable. A prison for violators of his spiritual laws. "Every transgression receives a just recompense of reward." If it is just to punish wrong doing here, it is equally just for such to be done in the hereafter. But, incarceration constituting the punishment, which consists in a denial of the enjoyment of liberty, must be performed with the object of bringing about a reformation of character in the person so "suffering."

"Heaven has been viewed by many as being a place "beyond the bounds of time and space" (!) A place of comparative idleness. The highest aspirations unto which the major part of the Christian world has attained, are experessed in the following: "Simply to thy cross I cling" -nothing (?) in my hand I bring." A robe and a crown shall our labor (?) reward." "I want to be an angel, and with the angels stand; A crown upon my fore-head, a harp within my hand." People have thought and taught that all Christians were going up, and all sinners going down. They inform us that they get the idea "out of the Bible," I believe a great way out of it too. The Bible emphatically teaches that Jesus shall come to earth; that the ransomed throng, disembodied as yet, sang that they should "reign with Christ on the earth." "And God himself shall come down." "Behold the tabernacle of God is with men. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."—Rev. 21: 3-5.

This language gives us to understand plainly, that the place the righteous are to inherit is a place where sorrow, pain and death had once existed. Do such things exist in the "heaven" people talk about; if so; then it shall be their eternal habitation. But not so. We know that in this world such things exist, but the former things shall pass away. When a child asks its parent, "Where is heaven, ma?" "Up in the sky!" How definite, how comprehensive the answer. Paradise is a worldcelestialized, revolving in space like "our own world." It is common sense to believe, that having been born in this world, forming an acquaintance therewith, becoming inured to its surroundings, discovering what of ill we see, that it is productive of many misfortunes, &c., and having com-plied with the terms upon which God has promised an inheritance here, that when resurrected, or changed, we remain and gladly discover how beautifully God has re-adorned this world, removed therefrom the grievous "former things." highly appreciate the change, the grandeur of our then present surroundings, compared with the state of things we once mingled with. We will, moreover, "feel at home." Rejoice in God's goodness, walk here and there, view "old homesteads" beautified; remember old time acquaintances, "know as we are known;" see as we are seen, and dwell forever in a state of blessedness and peace. We will plant our own vines and fig trees; and assist in making every thing beautiful. Having had the light of the sun and moon, we will no longer need them on account of the grander and more glorious light we will have. We want to have our home here. Herein we agree with the skeptic who says, "one world at a time." Our hope implies such; we are only preparing to live in immortality on this earth renewed. One world at a time. The skeptic fails to damage gospel truth.

HELL.

Concerning hell: As it has been advocated by many, I can not accept, nor endorse. I believe with Thomas Paine, that "any religion that has connected with it anything that shocks the mind of a child, can not be true." I am willing that the religious principles, the basis upon which Christ founded his church, should be tested by this "rule." It has been taught, and is yet, that hell is a place of torture, severe torment. This torture is to be inflicted by a God, who tells us in "time" that He is merciful and kind. We have been taught that the happiness of the saved shall consist in part, in witnessing the sufferings of the damned, in hell. That after the damned have drunk down whole draughts of brimstone one day, they shall do the same the next. Every part shall fry in the flames; the hands, the feet, &c. This is abominable! Horrible!! Blasphemous!!! Hell is God's great prison house. The Rabbi's of our Savior's time, taught that there was a region of the dead of Sheol, in the heart of the earth. Gahenna was on one side with its flames and torments; paradise on the other, the intermediate home of the blessed. Hell is not a place of literal fire. What sense would there be in placing anything in a fire that could not be consumed, such as immortality of existence. If the wicked are to be cast into outer darkness, this darkness being literal as is urged, how can it be a place of fire? Is not fire always luminous? If in it there is to be weeping, such being productive of tears, can moisture exist in "fervent heat?" Read Prov. 25:22; Isa. 9: 18; 31:9; Jude 23; Luke 12:49; and you will discover that literal, actual fire is not implied. Hell is a place of confinement. Various conditions may be a hell to man. Jonah 2:2. We read in Ps. 9:17, of persons being turned into hell. Again, we read in Rev. 20: 13, 14, of their being turned out, and hell destroyed; no new one made. Hence we ask, How can people "forever" remain in a place that is not itself to exist forever? It is the height of folly to so be lieve, and yet more absurd to so teach

DURATION OF PUNISHMENT.

We must understand the use of words and their connections. For instance: "The boy is learning his letters; Dr. Johnson is a man of letters; the merchant is writing his letters." Here the word letters is used in three different respects. So with the terms eternal, forever, everlasting, perpetual, &c. We read in Lev. 17:34, of a statute to make an atonement once a year, it was to be an "everlasting statute." Ex. 21:6. Only a natural life time. Jonah 2: 6. "Bars of the earth compassed me about forever;" three days and nights. Jude 7, "Sodom and Gomorrah suffered the vengeance of eternal fire;" only lasted a few hours. Mark 9:43-4, 49 is explained in Isa. 66:24, Isa. 30:33, Jer. 19:2. When the demands of justice are satisfied, (and shall they never be with God?), the prisoner must be liberated, and rewarded for his good deeds.

Jesus said: "Whosoever shall give unto the least of these my disciples a cup of cold water, * * shall in no wise lose his reward." Whosoever. It makes no difference whether that person believed in any church, Bible, God, or any such thing -"he shall in no wise lose his reward. To eternally inflict punishment upon a person, would, in my estimation, be a poor way in which to tender a man a vote of thanks for services rendered. To reward people for good deeds, necessitates a cessation of imprisonment, by the way of punishment for wrong doing. Shall we say that there is one person who never did a good thing in his earth career? If so, we would be in favor of releasing him from being punished to give an opportunity for doing good, in the sweet bye and bye. To inflict punishment without aiming to endeavor to work out a reformation of character, would be to punish mercilessly, without any sense of propriety. Moreover, it will not be corporeal. If so, who will torment or torture? God? If so, how will he do it? What means will he employ? And while suffering, hearing the cries of suffering ones forever, he will not extend a hand of relief throughout "the countless ages of eternity;" we have not conceived of a demon half so cruel, half so tyrannical. A God with an ear of eternal deafness, and heart of adamant. Horrible blasphemy! I do not believe God will damn any man for the entertainment of honest convictions, let those convictions be favorable or no toward Christianity, its principles, its author. That person must be rewarded for his goodness, and that reward consist in an inheritance in a world of glory. If any are to inherit a "kingdom not of glory," it can not be one of humanity's sons or daughters. I have never met with that person who believed and held so tenaciously to the dectrine of "eternal hell fire punishment," that would be willing to try by way of experiment its torture, one moment. While they are perfectly willing that some one else should forever, worlds without end, Amen. We have been taught that not a holy thought, nor desire enters the mind; nor is expressed in hell. Please read Luke 16. We have heard that no comfort was to be found there under any circumstances. Read Isa. 24: 22; Ezek. 32: 31; Job. 3: 17-20. We are asked: "If punishment has an end, will not joy and happiness have an end also." No. Because it is compatible with the character of God to do all the good he can for the benefit of his creatures, we are all his creatures, all of humanity. God's good creatures; God's bad creatures; God's rich and poor creatures; God's learned and unlearned creatures; God's wise and unwise creatures. He the creator, we all, the "creatures of his care." Anything that represents God as a being of cruelty, of tyranny, I can not and will not accept, nor endorse, it matters not to me what book may so represent him. I believe God manifested himself to humanity in the great and good person of Christ, who presented to the world a life pure and blameless; who lived without spot or blemish, to mar or defame the character he possessed, and maintained, and continued to present to the world during his earth life.

The thought of immortality, the hope of a rest in a life beyond the tomb, is fraught with good. It cheers the heart, gladdens the soul, enlightens the mind, comforts, consoles, gives joy unmixed with grief, enriches, enlivens, encourages to do good; it is all radiant with life and light, and brightens as the day-star of the soul. The thought of an "orthodox hell" is laden with gloom, despondency, misery, woe, weeping, wailing, anguish of soul, horror, fear, untold of terror, wrath, vengeance, fierceness, cruelty, fire and brimstone, gods worse than demons. I despise the doctrine. It was born of worse than heathenism, of a heart void of mercy, love and justice. I treat it with the utmost contempt. For the man who believes in such, I have pity. I believe in all that is good and pure. I believe in all that tends to elevate my estimation of God, as a divine, merciful, kind, loving, benevolent, just, pure and holy being. All that represents him to me in a different manner, I reject. I can love only that which is lovable. I love all that is beautiful in nature and art. I love humanity. I love to see the mountains, with their summits capped in snow, towering far in the firmament. I love to see the starry sky. I love to see the sunlight, the effulgence of the moon. The craggy, rocky mountains' steeps. The forest with its foliage. The valleys with their wide expanse of living verdure. The widespreading prairies. The beautiful rivulet. The gurgling fountains. The birds of beautiful plumage, warbling forth their songs of praise. I love music, because it is ennobling, and enlivening to the soul. I love beautiful pictures of varied kinds, tints and hues. Give me these! and whosoever will may have their satisfaction and joy in a burning hell, and all connected with such an abominable doctrine.

"I think heaven will not be shut forevermore, Without a knocker left upon the door, Lest some belated wanderer should come, Heart-broken, asking just to die at home; So that the Father will at last forgive, And looking on his face, that soul shall live."

WHAT IS APOSTASY.

Apostasy is to abandon the party, sect, or religion to which one has belonged or adhered, according to Webster. In many communities, to forsake or abandon old associates for something new, is simply horrible, unorthodox, insufferable, and is generally treated in a contemptible manner, sometimes a cold shoulder; ruled out of society; deprived of employment; boycoted; in some instances robbed, property destroyed; waylaid with intent to murder, &c. In every instance slander, vituperation, falsehoods, are put in circulation, when the wonder is, that people did not know of this before, and how it had all been found out. This seems to be the condition of the world and society, and I think more particularly of religious societies.

We might draw these conclusions in particular, in regard to those who style themselves Latter Day Saints—located in Utah; or in regard to any other people whose self-righteousness precludes investigations, who have no question to discuss, whose religion has become a fixed fact, whose priesthood is infallible, who are above sin and reproach, do what they will, and whose calling and elec-Some may think that tion are sure. we have drawn our picture a little too strong, but we know what we are say-As one of old testified, "We speak that we have seen and testify which we know." Now it is a fact, when we lay aside our prejudices and look the matter square in the face of facts, all denominations of religionists send out their elders to proselyte among all religious societies, without discrimination; and if they should succeed in gaining any increase to their numbers, a large proportion would be apostates from other churches. When the Book of Mormon was printed and the Church of Christ was organized in 1830, men were ordained to preach the gospel, and sent out with authority to administer Those that its ordinances to believers. believed as a general thing, were apostates from other churches. Many of those now in power in the Utah Church, were apostates from other churches, as were their fathers, many of them, yet they are the first to cry, apostate, and are the most cruel in their treatment of others of their brethren; and it seems for this reason, because they are in power and can make their power felt. But to come to the point at issue, is the Utah Church the Church of Christ organized in 1830? If it is we have no case to discuss; but should it appear that it is not the same church, then we have our point. In evidence we will quote Judge Sherman in a suit for the Kirtland Temple, Lake county, Ohio, February term, 1880. Here the facts were presented in court; Reorganized Church, plaintiff; the church of Utah, of which John Taylor is president, defendant. disinterested witness states:

"That the church in Utah, the defendant of which John Taylor is president, has materially, and largely departed from the doctrines, faith, laws, ordinances and usages of said original church; and has incorporated into its system of faith the doctrines of celestial marriage, and a plurality of wives, and the doctrine of Adam-God worship, contrary to the laws and constitution of said original church; and the court do further find that the Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints is the true and lawful continuation of, and successor to the said original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints organized in 1830; and is entitled in law to all its rights and property."

all its rights and property."

This is confirmed by the laws of the land. Now if we find direct testimony characterizing the Church from the Almighty who established it by revelation, and the testimony of the Holy Ghost, it will answer our purpose at the present time. In 1851, in answer to prayer, the word of the Lord came: "Behold, I the Lord have not cast off my people, neither have I changed in regard to Zion. * * In mine own due time will I call on the seed of Joseph, and will bring one forth, and he shall be mighty and strong, and he shall preside over the high priesthood of my church, and then shall the quorums assemble, and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be reinhabited; as I said unto my servant Joseph, After many days shall all these things be accomplished."

The Reorganized Church resolved in conference, that the whole law of the church is contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, and these were adopted as the law of the church; whereas the Rigdonites, Bickertonites, Strangites, Brighamites, and other organizations of the church, had all practically laid aside the books containing the law given to Joseph the Martyr. Now we will quote the voice of the Spirit given to Joseph in 1863, where he acknowledges the church through him, presided over by

"Hearken unto me, O ye Elders of my church. Lo! I have seen your efforts in my cause and they are pleasing unto me." Again in 1865 he testifies that this is his church. "Hearken, ye elders of my church, I am He, who hath called you friends. Here we have the direct statement by the Lord backed by that of the Holy Ghost, to confirm the word to all true believers; besides any amount of evidence in the Scriptures pointing out the great apostasy of the last days, before the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Now we have briefly shown that God accepts the church under Joseph the son of Joseph the Seer, and that the Utah Church is a rejected church, for rejecting Jesus Christ and his words, the three books containing the law to the church. This rejection of the law is manifest as in the case of B. Young assuming that he was the law unto this people, and at one time a god; (the people feared and obeyed him as a god); denouncing the Scripture as of no value; claiming in himself to be a living law—the mouthpiece of Jehovah; exalting himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; claiming infallibility in himself, and endorsed by all his subordinates, until his extravagancies were thrown up to him and then changing the name to priesthood, which it remains to the present day, and which is considered to mean the same thing by the Now that this is an apostate church we have all the testimony of the word of God, the prediction of prophets and apostles, and the voice of the Lord and of his Spirit the Holy Ghost, and the record of heaven. Now who are the apostates? If placing ourselves under the law of a pure gospel, and in communion with heaven, and in harmony with the law of the land and true saints, is apostasy, let us rejoice that we are found worthy to suffer contumely, falsely, for Christ's sake and the gospel's.

PROVIDE FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

"But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he has denied the faith and is worse than an infidel."—I Tim. 5:8.

Would Paul have us suppose by the above quotation, that if any have failed to provide for their own families, they have denied the faith, even though they deny themselves and take up their cross, leave the comforts and peace of home in obedience to the call of the Master, to proclaim to the inhabitants of the earth the glorious gospel of liberty and peace, as it was preached in the beginning? They do this because of love toward their fellowmen, their faith in God, and for the hope of the rest which remains for the faithful. For this cause many willingly suffer privation. Now shall we say of such, they have denied the faith? Surely not; for Paul says in the seventeenth verse, "Let the Elders who rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially those who labor in word and doctrine;" but to understand more fully what he means, let us see what he has written to the other brethren on the subject. In Galatians sixth chapter and tenth verse he says: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto the household of faith." Now we begin to understand what he means. It is those who have covenanted with God to keep his commandments, and have entered into his kingdom, and are members of the household of faith, or as it is written to the Ephesians in second chapter, nineteenth verse: "Now, therefore, ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but have full fellowship with the saints, and are members of the household of God." This then is the house. Paul admonishes the Saints' everywhere to see that it is amply provided for. Even the house of God, in which our faith rests; and in failing to provide according to our means, do we not show by our acts, that we do not fully trust the promises of God, which were given to the prophet Malachi; and whose words Jesus caused to be written by the Nephites for our remembrance and our good? Could each individual member realize the necessity of keeping the commands of God in words and deeds, to insure the fulfillment of his promises, what a glorious work could be done for the Master. His cause would no longer languish. Those who are laboring for the ingathering of the honest in heart, would not have to leave the good work, to labor for that which perisheth; for there would be meat in the house of the Lord; and he in turn would pour us out such blessings that there would be no room to contain them, and ours would indeed become a delightsome land. Do we as saints believe this? For remember the promises of the Lord are yea; and in him amen. Should any doubt his promises, and fail to comply with the conditions, are they not denying the faith unto themselves. And if we profess faith unto others, would we not appear unto the searcher of the hearts worse than an infidel. For it is written, that faith without works is dead. It is also written, that without faith it is impossible to please God. Let us as Saints try to square our lives by the word of God. And when scorners see us partake of the delightsome fruits, let us not be ashamed, but let our light shine on all, that others may be constrained to say, "God is with them of a truth, and they are the people whom the Lord doth bless.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER TO FRIENDS.

"In such times of need, I advise you to put your trust in the Lord; for he is able to help. He is "mighty to save, or to destroy;" mighty to save the obedient to his law with an "everlasting salvation," or to destroy the rebellious and unbelieving. Whatever the Lord has or ever will say to us in his law unto us, he has said in Luke 13:3: "I tell you, nay, but except ye repent ve shall all likewise perish." And in Matthew 7:7-11: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. Or what man is there of you whom if his son ask bread will give him a stone! Or if he ask a fish will he give him a serpent? How much more shall your. Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him." When Jesus had cursed the fig tree, and it withered away and died, he said to his disciples, Matthew 21:21, 22: "If ye have faith and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to this fig tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done. And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." From the last quotation it is shown that we are to ask in faith, believing that we will receive the things we desire, and stand in need of; and that we will not receive anything until after we exercise faith. To make this more plain I wish to quote to you again. Mark 11:22-24: "Have faith in God. For verily I say unto you, that whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith. Therefore I say unto you, what things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." It is evident from this that this promise was not to the apostles only, but "whosoever," that is to you or me or any one else.

In James 1: 5, 6, the promise is seen again in these words, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men [or people] liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith." It is so often repeated that we must ask in faith," that it is impossible for us to misunderstand, that to ask in God's way is to ask in faith. John 14: 13, 14: "And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name [Jesus Christ] that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it." From this it is shown that we must always ask in the name of Jesus Christ. We must first get into Christ, and wear him as a garment; and then we can ask in his name, and receive. See John 14: 20. But we can not expect to enjoy many mighty blesings from God, unless we obey his law. We have seen that a part of his law is repentance; and when we do this, and humble ourselves before him and say, I ask thee, O Father, in the name of Jesus Christ, to give me so and so, or something you really need, it is impossible to withhold from us. But we want to see what further law we must obey, that will bring us nearer to God, that we may be worthy to enjoy his richest blessings in this life, and insure us eternal life in the world to come. In Mark 1: 14, 15, Jesus preached the gospel, and said: "Repent ye, and believe the gospel." The gospel was preached by Peter on the day of Pentecost. Acts 2: 38, 39. "Then Peter said unto them "Repent, and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, from the apostles' days, even to us in the last days] even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

In order to prove that immersion is the only proper mode of baptism, I will only have time to bring a couple of the many passages that bear on it. Matthew 3: 16: "And Jesus when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water;" showing he had been in the water. If a handful of water had been sprinkled in his face, or a little poured on his head, why did not the passage say so? Acts 8: 36-38: "And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water; and the Eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Phillip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still. And they went down both into the water, both Phillip and the Eunuch, and he baptized him." It is very plain that this person was not sprinkled in the temple, for they were going "on their way" no doubt in the woods, and came to "a certain water,"

"and they went down both into the water," that Phillip might lay him under the surface of that deep water they had found.

There is another ordinance of equal importance to baptism, and still it is as you know not practiced by the many churches of our day. It is the laying on of hands, for the conferring of the Holy Ghost; and confirming members of the Church of Christ. Acts 8:17: "Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." It is evident that they did receive the gift. This I think is one of the greatest gifts of God to man. The Holy Ghost is the Holy Spirit of God. Is to be in us forever, and teach us all truth. Bring to our remembrance all things, whatsoever Christ has ever said to us, and show us things that are to come, which you will see by reading John 14: 16-26; 15: 26; 16: 13.

Now I wish it understood that I do not believe in asking the Lord to give us this day our daily bread, and then leaning on the fence all day, wondering why prayer is not answered; but I believe that priests and people should earn their living by the labor of their own hands. The Lord will help them that help themselves. We must work and watch and pray.

I send you the Epitome of the faith and doctrine of the church to which I belong. You are at liberty to ask any question. EDWARD T. DAWSON.

GODLESS BENEVOLENCE.

SATAN has many carnal traps of financiering, as a counterfeiting for Christian benevolence. Not only does he gull people into giving balls and unclean theatricals to raise money for orphans' asylums and hospitals, but by putting on another coat of whitewash on his face and dressing in the livery of heaven, he rushes amongst the people to raise funds to carry on fairs, festivals, pleasure parties, doll-baby shows, spelling bees, all under the guise of Jesus' love, and for dear pity's sake! It is false love. Benevolence that has to be gotten up by oyster suppers, ice cream and water melon parties, is a base counterfeiting of Christian giving; yet thousands are so duped as to think it benevolence, because ministers and their accomplished wives and other noted personages are there. They have lived on the devil's grace so long that they do not know God's genuine coin of true Christian benevolence. When the people have fallen and lost the joy of Bible truths, they seek enjoyment in carnal excitement and worldly amusements. When a people has lost its first love for the faith "once delivered to the saints," and for Christ, which promises true benevolence and abundant reward here and hereafter, its covetousness is evinced by furnishing the ungodly and the vile, with worldly fun in order to obtain money for the treasury of the Lord, a foolish attempt to induce Satan to pay Christ's bills, when Christ is able and willing to pay his own when his people walk aright. They meet and pray and sing, and testify for Christ one night; and the next night fool, frolic, and flirt. Be not deceived! The world loves its own. You are known by the company you keep. Do you belong to a church, having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof? If so, from such turn away. God says, "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Turn from the wickedness which makes "God's house a house of merchandise and a den of thieves." What do you think of a king's son or daughter being yoked together with Satan's partners? The clean and the unclean; the converted and the unconverted; the sheep playing with the wolves. "If sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

When leading officers, and members of Christian churches can abandon all religious services except Sunday preaching, denouncing special providence, denying the inspiration of the Bible; print, sell, and buy, and encourage Sunday newspapers; take their wives and their children to the theatre; gamble in wheat, deal in lotteries, drink, and encourage the sale of intoxicating liquors; and use profane language, I think it is time the sons of Levi should buckle on the armor, and the true badge of the cross. For if preaching the everlasting gospel will bring prosperity, faithfulness, and persecution, then I say let the truth, the diamond truth be preached. There is little hope of having true prosperity outside of Christ's Church. Because very few of the ministers outside of Christ's fold, perseveringly preach the truth, the whole truth; and fewer churches will even tolerate such true preaching. When most of her clergy and church officials worship their lodge idols and mammon more than God, it is a well known fact that they are in the adversary's clutches, and either wink at or directly promote these fashionable sins. Christ is pleased with the conversion of sinners, and the entire sanctification of believers; but the taking away from the churches of those vanity fair sinners, who willfully and habitually break their baptismal vows and church covenants, and will not repent-is a work that God must do by his tried servants.

Real prosperity must be transient even in a church where its members will not separate themselves from the world. "Remove the decaying garbage from your midst, or else seek a home amongst the living." The Psalmist says:

"Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor. In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord. He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not. He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be removed."—Psalm 15.

REV. W. H. THOMAS ON FU-TURE PUNISHMENT.

A WEEK ago last Sunday evening [in May, 1876,] we had the good fortune to hear the Rev. Dr. Thomas preach in the First Methodist Church, Aurora, Illinois, on a subject of intense interest to all who have any thought of the hereafter. The preacher, though a Methodist, has gained some reputation of being "liberal" and unorthodox, and we were glad to hear him on the much discussed question: Is there punishment in the future?

The beautiful church was crowded to its utmost on that evening; the pulpit platform was beautiful with calla lillies in bloom, a gorgeous scarlet cactus in luxuriant flower, and other fine flowering plants and boquets decorating the whole platform. The Doctor has a pleasant service, and it is quite novel to one accustomed to only the routine of ordinary church services. There was much to attract the curiosity of a stranger. Old fashioned tunes and hymns were sung by the congregation led by a large organ and choir; the preacher does not kneel in prayer, as is customary among Methodists, and he weaves in scriptural readings, hymns, prayer and choir voluntaries very pleasantly. He is a mild-spoken man, tall, thin, with hollow cheeks, and mustache and hair of auburn tinge, as it looked to us in gas light, but he has a deep, thoughtful, convincing manner as he quietly talks to you which fastens every eye and every mind upon him.

We went to his church prepared to dislike him as an overrated, assuming preacher; we came away convinced that Dr. Thomas was a deep thinker, a sound reasoner, and a Christian minister whom we should like to listen to every Sunday.

THE SERMON.

The text was from St Matthew 25: 46. "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." He commenced to speak of the future state, and of the differences of opinion among the best men of the world on the question of eternal punishment; then made the statement that God had an organized government and laws which must be obeyed, or the consequences follow; followed by the theory of orthodox churches and of the Universalists, with texts by which each supports his theory, following with the belief of Swedenborg and others, closing with his own (Dr. Thomas's) theory and belief, which we copy in full from the Aurora Herald:

PERSONAL VIEWS.

Turning from the various theories that have obtained on this subject, you may now want me to tell you my own views, and I have no reserve in expressing them. In the first place, I believe in the eternal and immutable distinctions between right and wrong. I believe in the everlasting principles of right. In the second place, I believe that the laws of God are unchangeable, and that the laws of God in this world and in all worlds are the same, that the same laws that abide here will abide yonder, now and forever; that what is right in this world is right yonder, and what is wrong here is wrong there. I believe, further, that there is what in moral philosophy is called the law of sequence, that certain results follow certain courses of conduct; if a certain act be performed, a certain result will follow-it may be immediately, or it may be long delayed; and that the laws of sequence are as immutable and certain as the law of gravity or any law of chemistry or of the natural world. Believing these things, it seems to me that both heaven and hell begin in this world. Men begin the formation of character in this life.—They array themselves on one side or the other of these questions; they become, as it were, parts of right or parts of wrong: they have characters which assimilate to the right or the wrong, according to the nature of their associations; and with these characters men are passing through the gates that open into the endless beyond. Believing this, I have not a shadow of doubt of after-death punishment for men who die in sin. The opposite of this would be to me illogical and unreasonable.

But the great question you would ask is, Will this punishment be eternal? The answer depends on the answer to two other questions: First, will there be after death a period of probation that will probably eventuate in a reformation of character? The scriptures are painfully silent on this subject of an after death probation. While there is less than is generally supposed to teach that there will not be a future probation, they nowhere affirm that there will be. I would not for my right arm lead any soul to believe that there is an after-death probation. I do not know the fact. Nor am I able to affirm certainly that there may not be. I do not know what changes may be effected as the soul journeys on. I can only say that while there is nothing that would encourage the thought of a probation beyond the grave, there is nothing which positively forbids the thought. After years of study and agony on this subject, that none but myself can know, I can only say I don't know.

—It is a risk I ask no soul to take. The other question is: If there be a probation will it certainly eventuate in the reformation of character. If it will, then the doctrine of Universalism will be true. But holding, as I do, to the doctrine of the freedom of the human soul, I can not certainly predict the turning around of a free being. I can not say with certainty that sometime it will turn from the wrong and do the right. We hear people say, "Oh, if I could have another trial, I would live differently;" or, "If I could live my life over again, I would live a better life." You do not know the fact. If there be another trial, and another and another, each trial must begin where the other left off. If there be a trial after death that trial must begin where this trial leaves off, and if the life lived here has sent its roots down into lust, or if it has perverted its powers of truth and justice, it must begin the next world just as it leaves this. So that I can not say, if there be a probation, that it will certainly mean reformation; nor can I say that it will not be a reformation. Admitting the doctrine of the soul's freedom, I do not see how any man can form an opinion as to what will certainly be the result. Of this I am certain, that so long as there is sinning, so long there will be suffering. If men sin in the future, they will suffer in the future. There can be no heaven without purity.

THE NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

As to the nature of future punishment, I do not and can not believe in a literal lake of fire into which human souls are plunged to burn forever. I do not and can not believe in the terrible ideas of hell that have come down to us from the past centuries, such as the representations of Dante, Milton and Pollock, and Allien's Alarm. Such severe literalism, such awful pictures of torment are enough to negate the idea of God, to render the thought of God an impossibility. That a God of love could so torment His lost children is absolutely unthinkable. Nor can I believe in a punishment that is warful or vindictive. I must forever stand by the thought of the Eternal Goodness. To me it seems that it is more a suffering than a punishment that comes upon lost souls—a suffering of the consequences of wrong doing, of the remorse of conscience, and the deep sense of loss of what they might have been but are not, and then there may be the raging of angry passions, and the fire of human lusts, and the dark companionship of evil spirits. Such a hell we can readily conceive, men carry it out of this world with them, and in some such suffering mankind can easily enough believe; but there is evidently a very general turning away of the public mind from the ideas that have come down to us from the darkness of the past. To preach such a hell now, is either to disgust sensible men with the idea of religion, or to drive them into infidelity. As long as God reigns and the sentiments of justice live in human breasts, there must be some respect to what is reasonable and right even in our ideas of hell.

But the reaction from the old view is likely to carry us too far in the opposite direction. We are in danger of losing the strength and character that can come only from a proper conception of law and justice and reward and penalty, and lapsing into a weak and irresponsible sentimental-The ideas of law and penalty can not, with safety either to the individual or to society, be let go. They are founded in fact, and must be held fast in theory. In parting from the old and over-statements concerning future punishment, we are in danger of losing sight of the truth that still remains. The real hell of the Bible is certainly as much a fact now, and as much to be feared now, as ever, and as such should be preached from every pulpit.

And it is to be feared that not a few ministers, feeling unable in a good conscience to state the doctrine in the old way, and dreading to encounter the criticism that would come upon them if they preach a modified view, say nothing at all.

I have detained you fully as long as I ought in the discussion of this painful subject. Let me bid you look to a higher and different ground. I assure you that, if any soul dreams of going to heaven on the slender hope that there may be a trial after death, and on that hope continues the love and practice of sin, that soul is very far from heaven. That soul has got to reach a point of character that turns from the wrong, that has left the wrong and clung to the right. It must be so in the nature of things. If you would be sure of a blessed life hereafter, turn in this life to the right. Do right for the sake of right, and not from the low motive of escaping punishment. The highest type of virtue is that which turns away from wrong with aversion, and cleaves to the good because it is good. There is darkness along the way of sin, so far as we can see, here and hereafter. The wisest thing is to break with sin in this world. Unite yourselves to the right here, and enjoy the sweet consciousness of the hope of endless life in the regions of right hereafter .- Kendall County Record.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES.

APRIL 6TH TO 15TH, 1885.

The forty-seventh annual conference of the Church of Christ, being also the thirty-third since its reorganization, convened at Independence, Missouri, at ten o'clock, on Monday, April 6th, 1885.

Bro. Elijah Banta was chosen as temporary chairman and Bro. H. A. Stebbins as secretary. The service began by singing the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel," and prayer was offered by Bro. I. L. Rogers, after which the assembly sang, "Nearer my God to thee, nearer to thee."

Bro. Banta addressed the conference upon our duties, privileges, and obligations as ministers for Christ and members of his body, the church, after which a committee of five on credentials was chosen, namely, brethren H. J. Hudson, R. M. Elvin, Heman C. Smith, John Pett and W. H. Kelley. Also brethren T. W. Chatburn, J. W. Waldsmith and Charles Derry, were chosen as committee on permanent organization, after which adjournment was had until two o'clock.

At the appointed hour the hymn, "Let us pray for one another" was sung, and Bro. J. W. Waldsmith offered prayer for the blessing of God to rest upon his people.

The committee on credentials reported. The report was received and the committee continued till all the delegates shall have arrived and presented their credentials. Bro. Heman C. Smith being also delegate from the Texas Central District it was deemed a violation of the rules that he should also represent the Oak Island Branch as its delegate, and the report of the committee was amended by striking ing out said vote. The report was adopted, after further amending by authorizing the Secretary of the Church to insert the proper numbers, according to his records where district officers have not stated the totals of their districts in the credentials given to their delegates. Bro. E. L. Kelley having mislaid his credentials as delegate from the Philadelphia District was on motion accepted as the delegate from said district. Subsequently, by report of the committee, other names were added till the total representative delegation was as here given:

We, your committee on credentials, find that the various districts are entitled to delegates and votes as follows:

London, Canada:--Joseph Luff, John H. Lake 13 Southern California: H. L. Holt, E. J. French 12

Jorth-Western Kansas:—H. R. Harder, A. H.

Kelley

The paper presented from Eastern Maine is not signed by the district officers, nor dated, therefore it is not available. The Malad Sub-District is without a delegate by reason of Bro. W. W. Blair having been previously chosen to represent the Utah District.

H. J. Hudson, chairman. R. M. Elvin, secretary.

The committee on permanent organization reported:

We, vour committee on permanent organiza-We, your committee on permanent organization, report that we recommend as follows, namely: Joseph Smith as president and W. W.
Blair as vice-president of the conference; Henry
A. Stebbins secretary and W. C. Cadwell assistant secretary; F. W. Barbee chorister.
T. W. Chatburn, Charles Derry,
J. W. Waldsmith, committee.

The report was amended by substituting the term associate president for that of vice-president, and was then adopted.

President Smith requested the various quorums to be seated together in their order after to-day's session. He also outlined the business to be transacted at this conference, the reports to be heard, etc.

MINISTRY REPORTS.

The secretary read the following re-

Elder W. W. Blair, of the First Presidency, present, reports:

The Semi-Annual Conference of 1879 having appointed me to labor in and preside over the Rocky Mountain Mission, and the Annual Conference of 1884 having released me therefrom, appointing Elder R. J. Anthony in my stead, who could not come to the mission till as late as last August, about the first part of the same month I took steps to remove to Lamoni, Iowa, where I located in the same month, my family following me the first of the following October, where we now reside.

When I entered upon that mission, November, 1879, (in connection with Elders C. Derry, J. Luff, R. J. Anthony and Gordon E. Deuel), it was found to be in a state of lethargy and partial disorganization. Since that time more thorough organization has been had, and more active work done all through the mission, which comprises Utah, Idaho, Montana, Eastern Nevada and Western Wyoming. Many have been added to the church, many others have been freed from the errors and evils of Brighamism, the bands of Brighamism have been notably weakened, the true doctrine of the church has been vindicated and become better known throughout the Mission and abroad in the world, and the way better pre-pared for the crushing out of polygamy, the over-throw of the hurtful doctrine of the unity of church and state. These, with other important ends have been gained, all of which serve to remove the reproach and condemnation which have been brought upon the name and fame of Latter Day Saints by their disobedience to God and apostasy from the doctrines of his church.

A commodious, substantial chapel has been built near the center of Salt Lake City, also one at Reese Creek, Montana. Much credit is due to the few Elders sent as missionaries to that field during my connection with it, and much praise to the Saints in various parts of that Mission—especially Montana—for the cheerful, liberal aid given to sustain it, both for means to build chapels and to sustain the ministry and their families.

It was found advisable to appoint a Mission Treasurer, (Bro. R. Warnock), who has done well in that capacity, and the financial affairs of the Mission from its organization, have been continued, mainly, under the order as begun, till I left the Mission. If a change in these matters is deemed advisable by this conference, I would respectfully suggest that it be so ordered.

Since my return from that mission, I have, by the counsel of Pres. Joseph Smith, made one trip to Independence and Richmond, Missouri, one to Stewartsville, Missouri, another to Independence, Missouri, one to the "Reunion" in Harrison county, Iowa, also some to other points in the Decatur District, Iowa. Aside from this my labors have been devoted in doctrinal and historical research, in writing, and other duties which properly appertain to my office and calling in the Elder Jos. R. Lambert, of the Twelve, present, reports:

One year ago, by action of your honorable body, I was placed in charge of Iowa, Missouri, and Kansas. I have tried to do all within my power to advance the interests of the work, and am thankful to be able to report a fair degree of success. Much of my labor, however, has been of that peculiar kind which is neither apt to be seen or appreciated by the masses. At Burlington, Iowa; Bevier, Missouri; and Goshen, Kansas; considerable of time and much labor have been spent in the adjustment of difficulties, some of which were of long standing, and had, as usual, developed party and party spirit in the branches. In this unpleasant work I was ably assisted by

Brn. Stebbins, Foss and Kinnaman.

I have spent about seven months in the field; and when at home, have not been idle, nor unmindful of the important work entrusted to my My correspondence in the interests of the work in my mission has been quite large, and some of it difficult and trying. On the other hand, I am pleased to say that communications received from numbers of the missionaries and other brethren, indicate faith in God, and the latter day work, as we have received it. brethren are co-laborers indeed. As a rule, the missionaries in my field have done well; however, there is some room for improvement, and when all are willing to observe just rules and proper discipline, they may become still more useful to the cause, and they will not be so liable to lose influence in the church. The financial condition of the church has crippled some and stopped the labors of others. Brn. Geo. Hicklin J. M. Terry felt compelled to guit the field on this account, and others have been sorely worried and perplexed. Those who reject tithing as taught in Doctrine and Covenants, have not yet filled up the coffers of the church with their weekly donations—have not yet purposed in their hearts to practice the teachings of Paul. But when this purpose becomes fully established in their hearts, it is safe to predict that but very few will be found stumbling at the law of tithing, or discerning any conflict between that law and the teachings of Paul. In some parts of my field the cause has languished for the want of proper labor; while in other parts the local ministry have come to the rescue and their labors have resulted in great good to the cause. Taking as comprehensive a view as possible of the work in this field, I discover that we have taken some steps in advance, and the outlook for the future is en-Should I be continued, I hope that couraging. Kansas at least, will be dropped from my charge and assigned to another, as my field is entirely to large; neither time nor means will permit me to meet all the emergencies that arise and seem to demand my presence.

Elder Thos. W. Smith, of the Twelve, writes from Papeete, Tahiti, Society Islands, as follows:

Although it is two full months till the meeting of the Conference, yet if I do not write now you can not get it in time, because the next vessel after the one leaving February 12th would not arrive at San Francisco till after you have met, and probably adjourned.

I learn that Bro. Joseph F. Burton and wife left San Francisco the latter part of November for Australia. I have not heard from him yet. He will no doubt write you direct from his field. We reached here on November 6th, 1884, after We were cordially received thirty-five days' sail. by the native Saints. However, I found quite a division among them, as two men whose names have appeared several times in the Herald, Tehopea, and Terohea, were cut off, some two years ago, and a number who at that time lived here at Ziona, as it is called, refused to lift hands against them, and they all were laid aside. I found that the best course would be to insist on the return to the Church of these parties by baptism. gave Tehopia and Terohea ample time to appeal their case, and have a rehearing, but they did not avail themselves of the opportunity. So on December 21st I baptized some forty-seven, including Tehopea and Terohea; and, on the Sunday following, I organized them at Papeete (Pah-paytay) into a branch, called Sharon (or Tarona by the people here). Tapuni (Tah-poo-nee) as presthe people here). Tapuni (Tah-poo-nee) as president. They appear to get on very well. It will no doubt grow much faster than this one. Where we live is some seven miles from Papeete, and on the mountain side. We have a fair view of the ocean, and the locality is much more healthful than in Papeete. I think that I can ere long get Tehopia started off with some other Elder to try and get an opening in some of the islands where our faith has not been preached. These people are like many that I have found elsewhere, who are first rate in promising to do, but they soon forget their resolutions; this is true, in a good many directions. They need constant urging and directing. In many ways they are just like children.

I have not been away from this island as yet, nor have we seen much of it. I have been very busy in preparing works for translation, in writing words of instruction to different branches, and in a number of things, have I been kept busy. It is no different with me to what it was in America. I find but little time to read, and not one tenth as much time to study the language as I need. There are some eleven branches, and about eight hundred members in this part of the mission. At Aana, an island of considerable size, there are some two hundred who are waiting to get a better understanding of our position than they now have, they were baptized by Grouard about 1841 and 42, that is many were, and others have come baptism since. I think there will be no difficulty in bringing them into the Reorgan-ization. I aim to visit them soon after the conference, which will be held at Matea, (an island) on April 6th, and I hope that we will not be forgotten in your prayers at that time, that, when you meet for prayer in the mornings, you will not fail to pray for us and especially that we may speedily master the language. My memory is very poor, compared with what it was when I was a school boy. If I had such a memory now as I had then, I could have preached in Tahitian by this time.

I find that there is a great mistake existing in the minds of many as to the matter of clothing of the people here. I have not yet seen a woman who was immodestly dressed.

In regard to our living: We have bread, meat, potatoes, onions, cabbage, beans, bananas, cocoa-We have a good frame house, with glass windows, and a small plot fenced in. no one lives near us, or nearer than Papeete, who can talk English, or American rather, for some kind of English we could not understand as well as we do Tahitian. David Brown who is an East Indian, and not a white man, as we all supposed in America, talks so we can understand him, but he does not always understand us, or if he does he fails to correctly represent us at all times. He is one of that kind of men who have ten enemies to one friend. Whose fault that is you may guess. We get pretty thoroughly disheartened sometimes, and then again we feel cheered and hopeful. One thing is certain, this mission must not be abandoned, and for several reasons. One is that it has a good foothold here, and it can spread from here to many other islands. Other denominations have considered these islands worth spending tens of thousands of dollars to evangelize as they call it, and still are spending much to keep their missions up. And again, we have a good deal of church property here. There are several good, substantial frame structures here. And further, there is no native here that I have yet found who is suitable to take charge of the mission. Now I hope that the Church will send a youngerly man, one of good memory who can soon grasp the language. Bro. John J. Cornish and his wife would do, I think; or Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths and Sr. Hattie; or a couple of men, two Elders, or an Elder and a Some one ought to be sent, who can come here right away, who can get accustomed to the work before we leave. If you can not do any better send a young Elder out here alone, or some one who has got a good retentive memory, and some grit. If Bro. Mahlon Smith thinks he could put in a couple of years here send him.

In regard to the other part of the field, I feel that the Church ought not neglect New Zealand. I hope that Bro. Heman C. Smith, and any one that he may select for a companion or fellow Elder, will be sent there. That is a fine field, one that the Brighamites are appropriating all to themselves. It ought not be neglected The fact that the revelation of 1882 says that "Ye can not now prosecute missions in many foreign lands," implies that you can prosecute missions in some foreign lands. In New Zealand, the preaching would be among English speaking people. But do not forget to send a couple of Elders here to Tahiti, or an Elder and his wife. If an Elder only can be sent, would like Bro. Clapp to come. But I do not wish to dictate, nor do I name any on the ground of personal preference, but such as I believe would be suited to the work. Yet I have faint hope of having my desires granted in this matter. The United States is a much more desirable field. The branches here are fully organized, and are in about as good condition as the average is in the States. I have just finished a pamphlet of some seventy-five pages, which is being translated. I expect to continue in this field a year at least.

Elder Charles Derry, President of the High Priest's Quorum, present, report:

Since my last report I have tried to labor in the field assigned me, and in harmony with my brethren. I have done some preaching in Shelby and Pottawattamie counties, Iowa; but my chief labor has been in Harrison county, Iowa. live I have performed all the duties, except that of baptizing, which an Elder is called upon to perform, such as preaching the gospel, confirming members, administering to the sick by night or day, solemnizing the marriage rite, blessing of children, etc. My labors have not been as ex-tensive as I would have made them had not circumstances prevented; but I have labored faithfully to preach the gospel of Christ in plainness; others have watered the seed I have sown; and all the honor and glory is the Lord's. I still love the cause in which we are engaged; I believe in the restoration of the gospel in these last days; that it still is "the power of God unto salvation; in the literal gathering of Israel, whether they be of Israel, whether they be of the literal seed, become the seed of Abraham by adoption. I believe in a literal Zion, to be on the land chosen of God and pointed out by him in these last days. I believe in all the means God has ordained for the accomplishment of his purpose, so far as I can understand that means. I believe in the final triumph of truth, the establishment of God's kingdom on the earth. For that I labor and pray, and still expect to labor and pray, as God may direct my efforts.

Elder Henry A. Stebbins, of the High Priests, present, reports:

By arrangement between Apostle J. R. Lambert and Bishop G. A. Blakeslee I was appointed to labor six months in the active ministry, and was so informed on April 30th. From that time to November 4th I was constantly engaged, either in the district over which I preside, or in other regions of Bro. Lambert's charge, as desired by him; and always, so far as I know, in harmony with his views and wishes in the matter.

I preached in Davis City, Lamoni, Pleasanton, Union Hill, Lucas, Burlington, Zero and two points near Creston, all in Iowa, and in Allendale, Lone Rock, Bevier, and another point in Missouri. I was reasonably blessed, and I endeavored to make my preaching plain and in the saving power of God's Spirit. I still believe that God's work will triumph and that his word in the three books will be fully justified in due time and the truth be proven; also that Zion will yet flourish as a substantial city, and that the kingdom of God will be established according to His promises in past ages, the dispensation that His prophets foretold being the one in which we live.

Since November I have made but three trips away from home, one of these was in answer to telegram from Bro. J. R. Lambert to come to Bevier, Missouri, and assist him and Bro. Kinnaman at that place. The rest of my time has been occupied in labor upon the Church Records and in Secretary's work. I ought to have taken more time to these than I did, in order to have done all the work that should have been done.

During the year I have baptized seven souls, at unnumbered times have administered to the sick, also officiated in ordainations, and in blessing children, and united six couples in marriage.

I expect to devote more time to the Records the coming year, but will preach in district as time and opportunity permit, without compensation from the Bishop, because of the present condition of finances, though I may not be able to labor nearly so much.

Elder C. G. Lanphear, of the High Priests, writes from Greenwood, Steuben county, New York:

My faith in the gospel and latter day work has not changed, but is the same as heretofore, be-lieving all things that have been given by the word of the Lord concerning Zion and the gospel are of vital importance and needful to be accepted and properly observed and adhered to by the church. Should any question arise in Conference touching the validity of the revelations in the Book of Covenants, and a resolution obtain favoring the erasing or expunging any part or portion of the revelations, my voice would be decidedly opposed to any such movement of making any change in the book whatever. But I trust that wisdom and understanding may be had, that such things as are enacted may be for the permanent good of the cause, and that error may be held in check from destroying the hope of the Saints, and that their prospects may grow brighter until the perfect day.

As my letters in the Herald have given account of my labors here in the east, I will not supplement them. But my desire is, as heretofore, to do what I can by the help of the Lord to build up his kingdom, and both by precept and example to make a record that may be to my credit when the great day of final reckoning shall come. To this end may I continue to be remembered in your prayers. There are some here who desire that Bro. Kelley or some other of the Elders should come into this part and lend a hand in should come into this part and fend a name in showing the people gospel light, and where the good way is. But there is a great amount of bigotry, superstition and prejudice. Neverthe-less certain ones see the light when it is presented to them, yet few embrace it for fear of the people, their faith being weak.

Elder E. C. Brand, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since last Conference I have traveled four thousand thirty-six miles, laboring in Utah, Idaho, Nebraska and Iowa. Have preached one hundred and thirty-nine times. Ordained two Elders, one Priest, one Teacher; organized one Danish branch in Utah, baptized eighteen, blessed seven children, sat on three Elders' Courts, held two days Elders' Council Meeting. Responded to every call to administer to the sick and in many cases with most blessed results. Have endeavored to hold to the rod of iron that leads to the tree of life, which rod I understand to be the word of God, as contained in the three standard works of the church. I have preached as follows: In Utah: Salt Lake City 5, Bountiful 4, Centreville 2, Farmington 2, South Weber 3, American Fork 1, Provo 3, Carterville 1, Springville 2, Levan 2, Scipio 9, Richfield 15, Elsinore 7, Pleasant Grove 2, Horn Silver 2, Holmes' Hall 1, Wanship 2, Kamas 2, Nephi 1. In Idaho: Albion 6. In Nebraska: Omaha 2, South Omaha 1, Webster 22, Frement 5, Carrell Clark ha I, Webster 22, Fremont 7, Crowell I, Clearwater 10, Jamestown 4. In Iowa: Plum Creek 9, Raglan I, Shady Grove 2, Crescent City 5, Council Bluffs 2, Plum Hollow 1. Total 139. In almost all places preaahing services are acceptable and the work of the Reorganized Church is daily more understood and appreciated. Amongst the Saints I find much dissatisfaction expressed on account of the publication in the Herald of so many controversial articles, thereby rendering it useless as a tract to hand to their neighbors; and many are discouraged by the laxity with which the law is enforced, or rather not enforced, in the case of transgressors.

Elder J. S. Patterson, of the Seventy, present, reports:

The following summary of labors performed in the field assigned me at Stewartsville, is hereby offered. After the close of conference I returned to my home in Illinois, where, with but one or two exceptions, I was kept by the sickness and subsequent death of my companion in life, till the latter part of May, when I so arranged my affairs that I could take the field. And although my heart was made sad by my recent loss, and because my future worldly prospects were the reverse of encouraging, yet I realized that there was but one safe course open before me, if I wished to obtain the prize I had so long hoped for and labored for. So concluding to let the future take care of itself, I went forth to battle. will not particularize, as this might be tedious. But as Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin was the field assigned me, I there devoted my time continuously to the spread of gospel truth, and in doing so I was blessed and comforted individually while striving to instruct and comfort others. And all things considered I have had a fair degree of success; have made quite a number of openings in places where no preaching had been done previously, removing prejudice, making friends, and in some instances adding to our numbers. As the Northern Illinois District is in the field assigned me I have, by request of its members, held the presidency and done what I could to regulate its affairs, all in harmony with the local officers. I have also succeeded in reorganizing several branches which from various causes, had in the past become disorganized. The prospects are fair for said branches to continue as they have commenced. I have also found it expedient for the interests of the work to ordain two one an Elder, the other a Priest, and to place them over two branches, one in Illinois, the other in Wisconsin, by consent of members in said branches. The severe winter brought on me an acute attack of rheumatism from which I am still_suffering, and which has hindered me The spiritual condition of the Saints in my field, taken as a whole, may be said to be fair, yet there are localities where this could not be truthfully said; still I have the consolation of knowing that I have done the best I could to bring about harmony and activity among the members. Some unpleasant duties have fallen to my lot, yet I have tried to meet them in the fear of God. Although financially embarrassed, and temporarily hindered by physical afflictions, I yet desire to give my time and ability, such as it is, to assist in the advancement of the work. And in keeping with the wishes of the Northern Illinois District as expressed in their last conference, and in accordance with my own wishes and circumstances, I request to be returned to my former field of labor. I trust that the acts of this conference may result in good for the cause that we all love and labor for. have unshaken faith in the ultimate triumph of truth and its defenders.

Elder J. C. Foss, of the Seventy, present, reports:

At your last session, I was assigned a mission to labor under J. R. Lambert. I have labored to he best of my ability for the onward progress of the gospel. Last summer I was called by Brother Lambert to visit Goshen, Kansas, to assist in settling a little business there. I responded, but aside from this I have labored in the state of Missouri. I found in my travel many God fearing saints who want to see the work roll on, and they so express their desires by aiding the ministry. But some others are fond or strong arms, and they love to growl, growl, and are always finding fault. Nothing goes right, because others don't conform to their unhealthy ways. And when they are called upon to observe the word of wisdom, the answer is, "It is not a command-ment, hence we can do as we please." Paul advised Timothy to take a little wine, so I find a few that takes advantage of Paul's advice to Timothy, and instead of their taking a little, they are sure to take a good deal. May God have mercy on such poor souls. Can we drink the cup of devil's, my brethren, and the cup of the Lord Jesus, too? No, verily no! Come to the front comrades and stand to the law of God, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Cov-Take these books from us, and where What have we to be governed by? If I take the ground that I can throw away one of the revelations, and that you throw away another, and some one else another, then we virtually say, "We have but little faith in the prophets and servants of God."

I have been blest of my heavenly Father in standing for the works of the church, and so will every Elder in this Church of Christ. But woe, woe to the one who goes contrary to the revela-tions of God. I baptized fifteen, organized one branch, and reorganized another, preached in four different churches to colored people, in St. Louis and East St. Louis, which has set the colored folks to thinking, and they are very anxious to hear more of our faith.

Elder G. T. Griffiths, of the Seventy, present, reports:

At your last session I was assigned to Bro. J. Ells' field, which comprises Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. I have labored constantly but have not complied with every call, for I was unable to do so. Have endeavored to preach the truth in simplicity, and have been greatly aided by the Holy Spirit. Have opened several new places for preaching. My labors have been confined principally to the Pittsburg District, over which I preside. The work in some parts of the district is making very slow progress, but in other parts we are gaining rapidly. A greater work could be accomplished if the officers in their respective branches would only put forth an urgent effort to reach the people in their immediate vicinities

Bro. M. H. Forscutt has been very successful in his labors in the city of Pittsburg, and the Saints urgently request the conference to return him to the east. I am pleased with the present prospects that are before the church. I am not in the least discouraged over the debate that has been going on in the Herald, for I believe that all of these grievances will be adjusted by and by. Wisdom suggests that we exercise much patience and wait the Lord's time. I have baptized thirtyone, confirmed twenty-one, blessed eleven children, ordained one Deacon, solemnized one marriage, administered to several sick people, both to those in and to those out of the Church, in some instances with mar results. Am still anxious and willing results. Am still anxious and willing to labor for the Master's cause, providing that the necessaries of life can be provided for my family. I earnestly pray that wisdom may characterize our deliberations and God be glorified.

Elder Heman C. Smith, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since my re-appointment in charge of the South Western Mission by the Annual Conference of 1884, I have, with the exception of a few weeks, been constantly in the field. I have usually been blest with good liberty in presenting the word; and in defending it against oppo-sition I have felt to rejoice at the perfection and strength developed therein. Right here permit me to say that I have listened to a great many new and plausible theories in connection with this latter day work, but my experience is that in time of controversy the modes of defense, the manner of presentation, and the interpretation of Scripture usually adopted by the early defenders of the church are the easiest to stand by, and in this course I have been more liberally blest with the spirit. The present controvesy in the Herald is affecting the work in this mission to some extent; and I fear it will prove the overthrow of at least a few. I think however the final result will be good. I notice a marked difference between be good. I notice a marked difference between those leaning to the one side of the controversy and those leaning to the other. With the one class hope, peace, faith, strength, devotion, humility and love are on the increase, while with the other it is plainly apparent that discouragment, distrust, coldness and apathy are increasing. It is not necessary to explain to which side these conditions apply. May God overrule in this matter as in all others, to his own honor and glory, and to the salvation of his covenant people. I have not lost faith in the great latter day work, nor am I discouraged in working for its advancement. The cloud will lift by and by, and those who shall have been steadfast will be and those who shall have been steadfast will be satisfied. My labors have been confined to the Texas part of the mission—have not been able to either go or send to Arkansas, Indian Territory or Louisiana, though I would have been very glad to have prosecuted the work in those re-gions. I have opened some new places, baptized several, cheered and encouraged the saints to the best of my ability. My co-laborers, Brn. W. T. Bozarth and D. H. Bays, who were appointed at your last session to assist me, both came and la-bored zealously for a season, but they retired from the field sick.

Their retirement crippled us sorely, and my plans for the future were to a great extent thwarted. In harmony with a resolution passed at the Stewartsville Conference Bro. A. J. Cato was appointed to labor in the mission the present year; and he has done considerable work in Northern Texas, some in the western part of the state, and he is now laboring in this vicinity. He will probably report to you more fully than I can. By agreement with the Bishop I also called Bro. J. A. Currie, jun., to my assistance, and he has been traveling with, and assisting me for the past three and a half months. The local Elders, for reasons in part justifiable, have not made as great efforts and sacrifices as in the past. Bro. J. D. Erwin a young Elder from the Red River Branch however has labored considerably in his own county, and also extended his labors into Arkansas. I am still at the disposal of conference to go where directed. I would feel more justified in leaving this mission than ever before, but am willing to remain if thought advisable. Whether I remain or not I hope the conference will supply this field with more laborers than it has been supplied with heretofore. that had my recommendations last Spring been confirmed the work here would have been in far better condition; but I will not complain.

Elder George Montague, of the Seventy, present, reports:

A report of my labors in the South Eastern Mission up to January 30th, has appeared in Herald. During the months of February and March my work was mainly confined to Florida District. I visited each branch, holding two day meetings and other meetings as circumstances permitted. In the series I enjoyed the liberty of the Spirit; and notwithstanding the weather was cold and disagreeable, the meetings were reasonably well attended. I believe that the efforts will result in good to the work.

I can not report the work in a very prosperous condition. In some parts the interest is fair, in others but very little. There is great need of labor throughout the entire mission, and if possible, more Elders ought to be sent there.

As to the future of my labors I have this to say: If my family can be sustained I am ready and willing to continue to work in whatever field it is thought I can do the most good; but if there is no prospect of my family being better sustained then during the past year, I shall have to remain with them and labor for them, as in duty bound.

Elder R. J. Anthony, of the Seventy, writes from Salt Lake City, Utah:

At your last session you saw proper to send me to the Rocky Mountain Mission; but, owing to a change of my location from Iowa to Nebraska, and because of a multitude of other difficulties. I was not able to reach my field until the latter part of September. From that time until now I have traveled and labored without ceasing.

On my arrival in Salt Lake City I found the branch in charge of Bro. R. Warnock. The Saints were feeling well spiritually. They had just been enjoying a spiritual feast under the able preaching of Brn. A. H. and T. W. Smith and E. C. Brand, but these brethren had all left and I alone was to take up the laboring oar. Bro. Blair had also left, so I was compelled to enter upon my duties without counsel or advise, except such as I received from Bro. Blair by letter. A number of additions had been made prior to my coming and a few were made after my arrival; but a reaction seemed to set in. The United States Courts began a vigorous prosecution of the polygamists, which seemed to them as wormwood and gall. The courts were denounced by the leaders of the Utah Church as mission judges, "scallawags" and "tramps," while we, as "Josephites" came in for our share of abuse, and were accused of being the instigators and abettors of the "persecution," as they called it. Hence, for a time, the way for preaching was pretty well blocked.

But, as the courts went on with their prosecutions, drawing the cords closer, and as the law began to reach out its strong arms for the First Presidency and a number of the Twelve, another reaction came. Up to this time John Taylor and his immediate co-workers had been brave, defiant and boastful, telling the people to stand true and faithful to their covenants and the Lord would defend them. In a public discourse last winter President Taylor told the people that they wanted no "trembling in their boots," neither, "shaking in the knees;" that they never would give up their religion; "no never." But two days after one of his rabid and boastful sermons in the Tabernacle he and his counselors, with many others, were fleeing from the officers of the law. parts of the territory presidents of stakes, bishops, and noted polygamists are fleeing. It is the same in Idaho and Arizona, while the people that have been faithful to counsel remain smitten with astonishment. Their shepherds have fled and the sheep have been left to the beasts of the field. The people hardly realize their situation at present, and when asked what they think of the conduct of the leaders the general answer is, "It beats hell." Hundreds, yes I may say thousands have lost confidence, and others are watching and hoping for a change. It is like the drowning man catching at a straw; it is hope against hope.

At this present writing this is the best time I have ever seen in Utah for the Reorganized Church. I have visited the Weber District where I found a fine interest; also Beaver, two hundred miles south of the Salt Lake City, where the interest was most excellent. I remained there some time, and it was remarked by all, that such an interest had never been awakened in Beaver. Not many have broken loose, yet the collapse has been so sudden that they hardly know what to do. Many are now asking for Joseph. "Why don't he come?" is the cry now in very many places. Brethren, we want help. Now is a good time. What it may be by and by I can not say, but now is a good time. My mind is for brother Joseph to come right away with what help you may think best to provide. There may not be a great many unite with us just now, but Joseph's coming will give strength to the mission and confidence to the troubled in spirit. I have only baptized nine, but I am happy to report a bright-ening up all along the line. I have not been able to visit Idaho and Montana yet. Let us have help that the Saints there may be visited, as they have aided us with temporal blessings and we desire to minister to and for them in spiritual blessings. Bro. A. H. Smith knows of the spirit of the work in the city, and I have written the Presidency also of the general outlook in Utah.

I am at your service. If you deem it wisdom to sustain me I will do all and the best I can. you should think best to send me to other fields or put me on the retired list I will say, Amen, conscious that I have in the past done the best I could. May the Lord's peace be with you in all your sessions and that the Church may pass the fiery ordeal purified and sanctified.

Elder Jos. C. Clapp, of the Seventy, writes from Moscow, Idaho:

Acting upon the advice of Bro. Blair, I have been trying to break loose from my entangle-ments and go into Montana as a defender of the faith. I tried to get over there last fall, but did not succeed in making the necessary arrangements. I have now got my family so situated that I can leave them, and I have written to several of the Saints in that Territory notifying them of my willingness and readiness to come, providing I can raise the funds to defray my traveling expenses from here into that field. It is an easy matter for us in this country to get food for the body, but money is quite out of the question. My little property in Moscow will be quite saleable when the railroad is finished, but at present it would bring but little more than enough to pay my debts. So I will not sell now, but will leave wife and babies here, with instructions to sell when the boom comes. If there is any other field that you, in your wisdom, think would be more suited to me, or that I could do more good in, let me hear from you. I am now (God helping me) going to spend the balance of my days in the service of God. I have heard the Macedonian cry long enough without going to help, and if the way now opens so I can get into the field, I shall use what little talent I possess and what God may give me in telling the old, old story. And I ask the prayers of all Saints that I may come boldly once more to the front and be a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed." May God's kind hand lead and his wise council instruct us in all of our labors.

Elder T. E. Jenkins, of the Seventy, in charge of Welsh Mission, writes from Dowlais, Wales:

My feelings are good towards the church and the work of God. I have retired from all temporal labor, and the company for whom I worked sixteen years give me now a monthly retiring allowance, so that I could spend my whole time in the work of God without aid from the church, but I am weak in body, constitutionally so. At the district conference, March 8th, eleven of the Elders resolved that at a special hour, every Sunday morning for seven weeks, they would pray earnestly that God would strengthen me. I hope that their prayers will be answered. I also ask a part in your prayers at conference, that God will strengthen me and enable me to perform my duties to the benefit of his work and the glory of his name. I have preached at Merthyr, Aberaman, Rhondda, Nantyglo, Morriston and Llanelly, all rather short sermons.

Elder B. V. Springer, of the Seventy, writes from Davis City, Iowa:

For the year last past I labored almost continually in Missouri and Iowa; baptized, confirmed, ordained, blessed children, and administered to the sick; sat in Elders' Courts, and, in short, performed the duties of my calling to the best of my ability; and as this is perhaps the last report I shall ever be called upon to make, I desire to make a statement for the consideration of your honorable body in relation to the past and present, so far as my labors and connection with the church as a mintster are concerned. It was well understood two years ago that my family should be provided for; it was agreed that my wife should receive $10 per month. When I returned home I found that she had been compelled to go in debt $74.39 for her living, including the surgeon's bill for attending to her broken arm, and the taxes, etc. Having nothing else to pay with, I let our little home go to pay the debt. Again on the 18th day of July last, a telegram came to my wife from Montana, calling her to the bedside of our dying child. She had no means to go with, nothing but the promise of $10 per month. A good brother promptly came forward and offered to stand as security at the Davis City Bank for the required sum of $65, six and a half month's promise from the church. From July 18th to March 18th, eight month's pay due my wife, just $35 has been paid. The remaining $30, with bank interest, I have to pay. The $45 actually due my wife up to March 18th, makes a sum total of $119.39. what think you? Is it right, is it just, after having labored faithfully for nearly twenty-five years, going wherever the church choose to send me, enduring all kinds of hardships, privations and persecutions, often with my life threatened? You know I never flinched, nor tried to shirk from duty; and now, in my sixtieth year, I am turned out like the "old horse" to die. I ask again, is it just? I will not say as some have said, that the good name of the church demands that this money shall be refunded to me, for I do not think I am of sufficient importance to affect the good name of the church, whether it does right by me or not, but if I had been fortunate enough to be some other man, $500 would not be considered too much to pay to save the reputation of the church. I do not ask nor expect the church to again assume the responsibility of sustaining me as a missionary. As I wrote the Bishop, my poor, weak labors costs the church too much, and I am willing to drop out as an active minister. But am not willing to drop out of the faith, no, never. The testimony I left among the hills of Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska, was and is true. Further, I do not ask nor expect my quorum to retain my name on the roll while I am inactive. I need say no more at present only to ask your honorable body to consider the matter of right in my claim on the church for the money, which I think would be but a simple act of justice, in my poverty and struggles to live. Sympathy is a very good thing in its place, but it will not buy a shelter nor bread.

Praying that God will bless you my brethren, in your councils and deliberations, that all may be done for the best interests of the cause, and to the honor and glory of God. My address hereafter will be Lucas, Iowa, where I expect to make a struggle for life. I need help and need it now

Elder Wm. T. Bozarth, of the Seventy, writes from Cameron, Missouri:

Having been appointed by the April Conference of 1884, to labor in the South-Western Mission, I began as soon as conference was over to prepare for the work. While making preparations to go, I continued to preach in DeKalb and Caldwell counties, Missouri, what time I could spare. On June 1st I started for my field. Stopped at Wyandotte, Kansas, where I spoke twice. I waited there and at Independence a few days for Brn. H. C. Smith and D. H. Bays, but as they did not come when I expected, I moved on, and arrived at Elkhart, Anderson county, Texas, in time to attend the conference of that district; spoke there four times with fair liberty. I continued to preach in that vicinity for a while, then moved east to Houston county, where I again tried to tell the gospel story. By this time the weather was getting extremely warm and very dry. and out door speaking began to have a bad effect on my vocal organs, so much so that I was compelled to take rest. I returned to Anderson county, and after resting some, began work again there with good effect. Then went to Hearne, Robertson county, where I met the Saints of the Central Branch. I began preaching here and continued as long as I could possibly endure it to talk. Here I had the privilege of baptizing two precious souls. I went with Bro. William Sherrill to Burleson county, and tried to get the people out to hear, but did not succeed. After recruiting I went to Temple, Bell county, where I had the pleasure of meeting Brn. Bays and H. C. Smith. We went to the Elmwood Branch, and after a little rest, meetings were announced for Bro. Bays and myself. The day before the meetings began Bro. Bays was taken very sick, so that he could not attend, also Bro. H. C. Smith had gone to fill another appointment, so that the labor fell on me alone. On Sunday at eleven o'clock I tried to preach as best I could, but discovered ere I was through that I was going down too. However at the close of the service it was voted for me to preach at three o'clock, which I agreed to try to do, but when the hour came I found I was too sick to preach, so I dismissed the congregation and sought for rest. returned to where Bro. Bays was and found him quite ill. By this time I was quite sick and continued so; then the ague set in in earnest. By the kindness of Bro. Ballew we were removed to Temple, but I got no better. So, feeling that I was now completely broken down and my lungs in such bad condition, I started for home, where I arrived completely exhausted. After coming home it took me some time to recruit so that I As soon as I was able I reported to could talk. Bro. Joseph Smith my condition and desire to be He referred me to Bro. Lambert, and I wrote to him; he gave me permission to labor in his field. Since then I have been trying to do what I could, under the circumstances that have surrounded me. I had the misfortune to get thrown from a sleigh while going to preach and was crippled so badly for a time that I could not do anything. Since last conference I have baptized eleven, blessed five children, and have administered to the sick. I still desire to labor for the Master, and can say that I never felt a greater interest in the work than I have for the last few months. I do earnestly hope that I may be able to do more in the coming year than in the past. My poor health and the circumstances that have surrounded me the last year have worked against me; but through it all, I have hoped and prayed that a brighter future would come. I am willing and ready to labor as directed by you.

Elder Duncan Campbell, of the Seventy, writes from Pleasanton, Iowa:

My report of labor is very limited. As I was on the eve of starting for the field of labor appointed me by last Annual Conference, I was seized by affliction and laid aside from the prosecution of my ministry. During the summer we lost two of our children by death, and this was followed by ill heath on the part of my wife. My own infirmities continuing at beginning of winter I was compelled to still remain at home; and now the state of my health is such that I can not offer my services as a missionary for the present. The labor done last year has been local and must of necessity be of the same character in the near future. May the Spirit of peace and wisdom preside over your deliberations.

Elder J. F. Mintun, of the Seventy, writes from Magnolia, Iowa:

In pursuance of my appointment, I entered upon missionary labor as soon as arrangements could be made. On account of special business connected with my former mission (Nebraska), I labored there from May 30th till July 2d, leaving my home on May 25th, stopping at Missouri Valley and at Modale in Harrison County, Iowa, to hold services. This labor was done by permission of those in charge of the mission to which I was assigned and those in charge of the field where I labored, and by their special request. On July 11th I again left loved ones to make acquaintance with strange faces, and on my way attended a two days meeting held at the Union Center Branch of Litttle Sioux District, and also at Little Sioux and River Sioux. Arrived in Minnesota July 22d, where I remained till the 30th of September, spending my time wholly in Rock and Noble Counties. I opened some new places, but the most of my time was spent in regulating the affairs of the Grand Prairie which was much scattered, and the membership had become very neglectful of their duties. I found honest hearts there, but false spirits and worldly influences had nearly overcome them. While there the branch was disorganized, on account of removals. The people in that mission were very prejudiced, but as soon as the prejudice was removed I found them to be a kind and liberal people, wish some exceptions, and those exceptions were with those who had an ax to grind, while others turned the stone, generally.

Wherever the Utah Elders had been they told the people they had been sent to preach the gospel, but on being pressed, they would acknowledge their belief in polygamy. This caused the people to be quite urgent to feel of us and see where we stood; but when they had carefully examined our belief, they did not find the club (polygamy) with which to misuse and they felt worse, I believe, than if they had found it, for they had doted somewhat on the use of polygamy as an excuse to justify them in not accepting—as they called it—"Mormonisn" ing—as they called it—"Mornions.

After enjoying the Reunion and a visit with loved ones at home, I started again; but I did not reach my field for the reason that I could not get the means to arrange my affairs at home and get my family sufficiently supplied for me to remain away during the cold weather; and, knowing that if the winter was as past ones have been, that I would be blockaded in Minnesota, and I might not be privileged to return before Spring, I felt that I could not leave my family that long, for the reason before mentioned. Hence I labored in North-Western Iowa, at Little Sioux, River Sioux, Sioux City, and Akron, Persia, Missouri Valley and Magnolia, as far as I could. I have baptized six persons and have attended to all the duties of my calling when called upon, except preaching, and other things being considered I did as much of that as I could. Wherever errors have been made they have been of the head and not of the heart. I have labored as God has given me strength and wisdom.

In theoretical belief the church is my home; in practical belief—like the sectarian world—the church is not true to Christ-the head, by which to merit the confidence of those who look to it as worthy to be trusted in all things. Yet I still shall do what I can by the grace of God, to remove that which in practice belies our profession as the church of the living God, whom we claim should be our ever present guide, until the bride shall be fitted for the bridegroom, without spot or blemish or any such thing. I probably shall drop from the active ministry for a time, how long God only knows; it may be for all time. I shall desire that my life shall be one ray of light, that I may be found worthy to abide with the celestialized; and I ask your prayers that slothfulness shall never be revealed as the cause of my not being able to stand, or that zeal shall not be the cause of my overthrow.

Elder Peter N. Brix writes from Aalborg, Denmark:

Since my last report I have baptized two. It is going slow with the gospel to be spread. The people have not rightly before seen the difference between us and the Brighamites. "Sandhedens Banner" (the Truth's Banner) is doing well and some of the Brighamites are reading it with interest, and some others are well pleased with it. I believe the prospects will be better now for the Mission than it has been. May the good Spirit lead the conference.

Elder J. F. Burton writes from Sydney, Australia:

I arrived here December 20th, 1884, having been assigned this field of labor under the presidency of Bro. T. W. Smith by the committee appointed at the General Conference of April, 1884, for this purpose. As arrangements to proceed at once to this mission could not be effected, I was requested to labor in California till such could be done. I therefore did so, in connection with Bro. D. S. Mills, H. Holt, Wm. Gibson, A. W. Thompson, E. J. French, P. M. Betts and others, in the counties of Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Ventura, until November 19th, when I left Southern California for San Francisco and Sydney.

Since my arrival I have visited the Saints of this place and vicinity, Newcastle, Wallsend, and places contiguous, and have written to the brethren in the more distant parts of this continent; and by request of the brethren, have began a crusade in this city. We have hired a hall for crusade in this city. three months, in which we preach every Sunday evening; and every Sunday afternoon we hold forth on the "Public Domain," a large grassy plat with shade trees here and there and a few flower plats. Here the citizens flow by thousands every Sunday afternoon, and all sorts of speakers are allowed here to give vent to their overflowing feelings. So you may hear Blue Ribbon, Army men, Methodists, Temperance orators, politicians, free thinkers, and now-a-days a genuine Latter Day Saint, all spouting as loud as possible, and each trying to interest and keep his audience. No sleepy sermonizing or generalities will do there. Drop into a prosy style and from a congregation of three hundred or six hundred, you will be left alone in five minutes. It is the hardest place I ever preached in, and is far from being congenial to my feelings. But as it is thought to be the only way we can get ourselves into notice, so that the people will either hear us or fight us, we feel perforce "the Elder must go," and intend to give it a fair trial. As we can not hold meetings during the week, I publicly invite any persons who feel disposed to investigate our principles to meet me at my rooms evenings to reason together, and some have come. During the day I distribute tracts, having our appointments on them, through the suburbs. These were kindly furnished by Australia's Bishop, R. Ellis. The Saints I have met here or heard from are desirous of helping on the work and anxious for the missionary work in this land to prosper. But some have been assailed by strong temptations and the adversary ever watchful, has caused grief, sorrow, and coldness. But as they all seem to desire to overcome, we have hopes that by God's rich blessings, all, with many more from this land will be able to overcome evil and be permitted an entrance, redeemed, past the cherubim and flaming swords to the tree of life. I have had the pleasure of sealing my ministry in this land in baptizing a fine young man, who ere long will be a Lamonite probably. He is Bro. Ellis' convert. I also since last report have baptized fourteen in California and two in Missouri. I do not see anything very bright in the future for this land, only that by continuous "fighting the good fight," and in meekness proclaiming the gospel, a few here and there may be brought out of great darkness into the marvelous light and liberty of the "sons of God."

Elders Torahia and Teavin, pastor and clerk of the Church at Sharon, Tahiti, Society Islands, write:

We were very much pleased on receiving your kind and affectionate letter, we received it on the first of the year, and perused it with attention and pleasure, and we are all much pleased in contemplating the way through which the Lord our God hath led us. Our brother is now with us; he and his partner in life, and we are very, very much pleased with the fact. We receive them cordially, in love and friendship. We also ask you whether the works we sent you have been printed, those that were translated into Talitian. We refer to the first Book of Mormon. Some time has elapsed since it was translated, it ought to be now ready. Try and have it sent out. Salutations and love to you.

Elder R. M. Elvin, President of the First Quorum of Elders, present, reports:

Immediately upon the close of last session, I entered actively in the work of spreading the good news of the gospel, in the field appointed me, and continued until the warm weather and political interests, made gospel work almost impracticable. I returned home the latter part of October, and by the advice and consent of the President of the Church, I assumed the secular duties of Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, while he and Bro. Mark H. Forscutt made an effort to do some missionary labor in the "Keystone" State. Since that time I have been detained at home, on account of the protracted illness of my wife, and the death of our little one. I might have devoted the past month in the field, but found it necessary to work for to provide bread for my "camp followers." I have preached in Missouri Jowa and lowers." I have preached in Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska; have baptized three, and performed other duties incumbent upon an Elder. My success has not been as great as I could have desired, but I have no compunction of conscience, under the circumstances. Several have been added to the church in the localities where I have preached, and there are still some awaiting baptism. Have used my pen in defense of our cause, in the public press, and I believe some good was accomplished. I pray for the triumph of Zion's cause.

Elder R. Etzenhouser, President of the Fifth Quorum of Elders, present, reports:

Since last report with small exception I have labored continuously. Entered my field on June 18th and continued to labor in it till March 16th. The varied experiences of the missionary was had, from the pleasant to actual danger of personal violence; but never before have I seen the manifest care of the Master as in the year just closed. In preaching, and the administrations in the line of my calling I have been blessed, and sometimes in an unprecedented manner. I have baptized five, on other occasions having branch officials officiate, as also temporary associates; confirmed or assisted in behalf of some thirty or more; administered to the sick, often with excellent or fair results. Preached and held other services as often as opportunities afforded, from one to three on Sundays, or one to ten weekly. Am pleased to have it to report that the prospects are good, both among Saints and others for the advancement of the work. While there are some unpleasant cases and difficulties, the entire situation is decidedly better than at any time within the last five years. A number of promising points have been opened in several counties, as also the old ones kept up, making the outlook for accesions good.

Bro. I. N. White's departure from Central Iowa is justly deplored by the Saints and friends to the work there, for few if any districts, have more faithful and energetic workers. Should there be none of the general ministry in that locality the number of points worked will necessarily decrease, although the district forces can and will do much. It might be proper to mention, that by being an attendant of the Reunion and reporting to the Daily Iowa State Register the proceedings, some good was done, for I found that favorable impressions were made at different places by it, where we had been repulsed before. I am led to think the press could be used more by us than it is. I have felt the responsibility of my calling more and more as experience increases; am ready and willing to serve the church still, if it shall be found expedient to retain me as a traveling minister.

Elder Joseph Luff, present, reports:

According to an understanding had at last conferance I left home September 8th, 1884, for the mission in Canada and Michigan. While in Canada I labored in several townships, making some new openings. Found considerable encouragement everywhere. Canada is becoming an inviting field and ought to be supplied with more laborers to meet its demands. After four months there, I went to Michigan, and for the remaining two months of my stay in the mission I acted under the direction of Bro. W. H. Kelley, visiting several towns and doing what I could to meet the demands made upon me. Here as in Canada, I found excellent opportunities for our ministers. I have baptized six since last conference, and officiated in other ordinances frequently. My faith in the work becomes more My faith in the work becomes more settled, and my hope brighter as I gain experience in this work. I am at the disposal of conference and shall strive to honor its decision regarding me, whatever they may be.

Elder G. E. Deuel, present, reports:

Since the April Conference I have preached in Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, and the Dominion of Canada. Was in Lampton county (Moore township), and Petrolia, and visited Oil City, all in Canada. I married one couple, baptized three and confirmed them. In Indiana I baptized six in Clear Lake, and confirmed them. In Michigan I baptized four in Branch county, seven in Ingham county, one in St. Clair county, and twenty-eight in Lapeer county, and confirmed them. Blessed twenty children and ministered to the sick many times. The Lord blessed and healed some, praise his name. Have preached two hundred and twelve times, baptized forty-nine and confirmed them.

Elder Henry Kemp, present, reports:

I have spent my entire time in the ministry, and chiefly in the Fremont District, doing the best that I could according to the ability God had blessed me with. I am happy to state that the work is in very fair condition. Prejudice is giving way to reason; many are investigating our claims as a church, and they express a strong belief in the doctrine. Have baptized fifteen during the last year; some more have been added to our numbers in the district. Have administered both in word and in deed, in all of the ordinances of the gospel pertaining to my office and calling as an Elder. I have sought to labor diligently and effectively by precept and example, with an eye single to the glory of God, and for the general good of the cause. Am still willing to do what I can for the advancement of the work.

Elder Willard J. Smith, present, reports:

Since my appointment by General Conference, 1884, have been almost continually in the field, and have endeavored to discharge my duty to the best of my ability; have labored both in Michigan and Canada. Have baptized and confirmed nineteen, have organized three branches, and otherwise officiated in the ordinances of the Gosple, such as blessing children, administering to the sick, etc: Have also ordained two Priests, two Teachers, and two Deacons. Have been blessed in my labors and felt encouraged in the faith.

Elder Thomas Nutt, present, reports:

After Conference in 1884, I returned to Shelby, Iowa. Preached some, baptized one and administered to the sick. From Shelby, went to Wheeler's Grove by special request, baptized and confirmed two. Returned home to make ready for my mission. On my way to Minnesota and Wisconsin, preached at Des Moines. The Saints there remembered my necessities, for which I thanked them. After arriving at Minnesota, preached at four different places. Attended district conference at Girard, which passed off very pleasantly. Six were baptized and confirmed. After conference, started for Becker county. While in this State, preached at nineteen different places, eleven of which were new places; was blessed with success, and there is a good prospect for the future. Baptized thirty-one. The Saints in Minnesota were very kind in supplying my many wants. From Minnesota, went to Western Wisconsin, the other part of my field. But owning to the amount of snow and the inclemency of the weather, was not able to do as much had it been otherwise. Attended district conference at North Freedom. Then traveled in five counties and preached in seven places. The outlook in these places was good. While in Wisconsin, was invited to preach in a Christian Church, and had very good attention. There are some very good members in Wisconsin, those who are trying to do what is right. Bro. F. M. Cooper is a man able to do much good. He is striving to build up the cause of Christ. There are but two branches in this district now in working order; there are many calls for preaching. Had the pleasure of seeing old Bro. Newkirk, who is not long for this earth. He is as firm in the faith as the pillars of heaven, and is rejoicing in the Spirit. From Wisdonsin, returned to Wilber, Nebraska, found all well, and Dr. L. Anthony awake to the cause. He requested me to take the stand and battle for the truth, which I have been trying to do ever since. March 15th, four honest souls were baptized. Since my last report to General Conference, have preached two hundred and sixty-three times, besides attending other meet-During the time I have baptized thirtyeight, blessed several children and administered to the sick with good results. Met a great deal of opposition, but God blessed and supplied my many wants, for which I feel thankful.

Elder Peter Anderson, present, reports:

Since last Conference I have labored in the field assigned me. Have preached in Council Bluffs, Weston, Omaha, Fremont, and Blair; and also a few times in Nodaway County, Missouri. Have baptized two. My work as Editor of the Danish paper I have endeavored to perform to the best of my ability. As you are all aware, we succeeded in getting out the first number in October last. Some of the Scandinavian brethren are interested in the matter, and I am happy to learn from encouragements received, that my efforts have not been in vain. My endeavors in the future shall be to so act and labor as to retain the confidence and good will of our people.

Elder A. H. Parsons, present, reports:

My labors were bestowed in the following counties: in Kansas: Clay, Mitchell, Jewell, Osborne, Marshall and Ellsworth; and Webster, Nebraska. Preached a few times in Nemaha and Jackson. Have enjoyed fair liberty in presenting the word; baptized five, blessed a number of children, and administered to the sick. The work is progressing as fast as could be expected with the number of laborers and the labor bestowed. It is a large field, and needs more ministers. There are more calls than I have been able to answer. Am willing to work for the advancement of this cause.

Elder F. P. Scarcliff writes from Lamberto, Alabama:

Since my last report, have labored in the mission assigned me, and have baptized nine. Financial matters have hindered me some, but I have tried to keep at work for the Master. The condition of the work in this mission Bro. Montague will report to you; I will only remark that the mission needs help, and that proper labor would result in good to the work; for I still believe that a good work will yet be done in the south. My health has improved during the past year, and if sustained by the conference will continue in the missionary field.

Elder A. J. Cato writes from Paige, Texas:

Since your last session I have continued to labor in Texas, and have acted according to my understanding; and can further say that whatever my errors may have been, all that I have done has been prompted by the purest motives. Have preached as often as health and circumstances would admit of; the most of the time has been spent in new fields. Have baptized eight, administered to the sick when called upon. The prospects for preaching in this mission were never better, and if Brn. Bays and Bozarth could have remained in the field there would have been considerable work done the past year. Smith has done all his circumstances would He has labored zealously to impress upon the minds of the Saints the necessity of a faithful discharge of their spiritual and temporal duties, but to what extent he has succeeded I can not say. His efforts have not been entirely fruitless. have been away from home four years next May, and the time seems to be long, yet I know for whom that time was spent; and notwithstanding I have received money from the Bishop to assist in getting home. am willing to remain in this mission, if you think best, another year at least. The counties of Bell, Young, Jack, Parker, Dallas, Bandera and Bastrop, are the field of my labors since the last General Conference, and there are good openings in all of these counties.

Elder J. J. Cornish writes from London, Canada:

Having been appointed by you to labor in Michigan and Canada, I now report that I could not get out of my business and take the field at once, but have spent nine months in the ministry, chiefly in Michigan. Made four new openings, and labored where it seemed most necessary; and have been blessed by the good Spirit of the Master. The work is onward; have baptized thirty-three, chiefly heads of families, and attended to other ministerial duties; and feel encouraged to go on in the good work. May the Lord bless you all in the conference, and may you be directed by his Spirit for good.

Elder John Gilbert writes from Fall River, Massachusetts:

Having been appointed by the General Conference of 1884, in charge of mission in Massachusetts, I hereby report having continued in the field until the middle of October, when for reasons not wise to state here, I was in a measure-compelled to retire from the active ministry for a season. My labors were in Fall River, Providence, Scituate, Georgeville, Plainville, Douglas, Cumberland, Arnold's Mills, East Attleboro, New Bedford, Little Compton, Boston, Fitchfield, Plymouth, Cohasset, Beechwood and Brockton. Baptized five, and confirmed a number; ordained several in the branches, blessed several children, preached funeral sermons, solemnized several marriages, and attended generally to what is expected of a minister of the gospel. When I left the field Bro. Bond took charge, and no doubt will give proper report of the condition of the work. Although I have not traveled constantly, yet have not been alltogether idle, but have preached as a local Elder on the Sabbath as opportunity presented, both at home and abroad; have always been kindly received by the Saints. Shall be at liberty to enter the field again by the 1st of June, provided I am so appointed. Hope you will kindly remember the East. There is a great field here, "the harvest is truly great, but the laborers are very few." Many things arise which are perplexing, and which require patience and the exercise of wisdom for their proper disposal. May peace be with you in your assembly, that good may result from your gathering, and may the mists soon clear away that we may "see eye to eye" in things that pertain to the peace and prosperity of Israel.

Elder M. H. Bond writes from Providence, Rhode Island:

Since last conference I have been laboring according to appointment, though it has been mostly to the Massachusetts District. confined And of this part of the eastern mission only, can report advisedly. Have endeavored to preach the word as much as wisdom would allow. not always sought to please men, but to testify in regard to our necessities as a church, and feel sure many times that our intelligence does not permit as yet a standard of judgment that is always just or wise; but we are growing and The Massachusetts Saints are watchlearning. ing with interest the outcome of the discussion of the "mooted questions," the proper place for which would seemingly have been where and when "the Elders" meet from time to time to transact business, instead of choking babes with strong meat. But if we are among those "who have taken the Holy Spirit for their guide" the outcome will not be serious, perhaps. pel will save; there is no discussion upon that point, thank God. I do most earnestly profess my faith in Jesus Christ and the ultimate triumph of his government over all opposition; and the rarest moments of this life are while testifying to the world of the great ultimate which God has revealed for all the race through the gospel of his Son under the sanction and approval of the Holy Spirit. The Eastern Mission presents a field of labor in the interests of truth large enough to satisfy the ambition of more than one "good Elder." The Kelley brothers, Bro. C. Scott, Joseph Luff, or others I might name, would supply to us a lack under which we are suffering. It is quite probable Joseph Lambert might improve in health nearer the salt sea, and am certain he would do good for the cause. Men of wisdom, experience, and intelligence are now needed in the large cities of the east, to be able to place the gospel standard anywhere and defend it against opposition from every quarter. For such there are plenty of opportunities, and the interests of the church demand their presence. We shall never take the place before the world, nor wield the influence we might, until the intellectual and spiritual standard of the ministry is raised. Paul's experience taught him that study was necessary to approved workmanship, and a man needs to get farther than "the signs" in his teaching, or he is liable to build for others to recon-The branches need help and there is plenty of opportunity outside for ministerial labor. There is no one in this field but myself. This district is entitled under the circumstances to the labors of Bro. F. M. Sheehy. We urge the Macedonian cry

Elder J. M. Terry, writes from Stewartsville, Missouri:

Some time after the last conference, I took a mission from the First Presidency as a protege of Bro. J. R. Lambert. On May 22d, with Bro. I. N. Roberts, I started for Blue Rapids and held meetings for one week; thence to Goshen Branch, and attended quarterly conference. Labored extensively in Glen Elder, Mitchel county, and opened the work there for the first time, with good interest and large attendance. Bro. B. D. Warren took me into Jewell county, on Little Oak Creek, where I occupied their stone school house with a small audience. Returning to Glen Elder I held forth with fair interest. At Linn, in Washington county, I held a series of meetings with good attendance. Returning to Blue Rapids resumed operations, but hearing of the sickness of my wife, I returned home. Have since visited Kingston, Caldwell county, Missouri, and held some meetings with most excellent liberty. I distributed 95 tracts, and traveled by rail and otherwise 678 miles, preached 38 times. Lately have had charge of the Stewarts-ville City Branch. My heart is wholly in this work, and I hope that the time may soon come when I con engage all my talents for its advancement.

Elder H. C. Bronson writes from Kewanee, Illinois:

During the year past my entire time has been spent in the ministry, trying to do for the Master's cause and for the salvation of souls. A great part of my labor, have been associated with M. T. Short, and a portion of the time with Columbus Scott. Have labored in the following places: Kewanee, Buffalo Prairie, Millersburg, Joy, Aledo, Rock Creek, Burnside, Rushville, Hindsborough, Maro, and Princeville, Illinois, and in Clinton, Inland, Buffalo, Barlington, Montrose, String Prairie and Keokuk, Iowa. I tried to do what I could in all places, but there still remains much for some one to do. I think the conference should make farther provisions for this field of labor. The mission embracing Western Illinois and Eastern Iowa should be continued, for local laborers are scarce. It has fallen to my lot to be chosen Presiding Elder of the Nauvoo and String Prairie District, which position I am now trying to fill. Have baptized five.

Elder L. R. Devore writes from Creola, Ohio:

On December 27th our district conference convened at Centerville, West Virginia, at which time I was released from its presidency. From that time until January 20th, Bro. T. J. Beatty and I labored together, holding meetings almost every night, and frequently in the day time. During the time four were added by baptism, all heads of families. After that date he returned to Ohio, and I continued preaching at Centerville, Tom's Creek, Wayne C. H., Cassville, and Queen's Creek, and baptized seven more, making eleven added to that branch since the December conference. Since April last I have baptized twelve, and ordained one Priest. There has been above thirty added by baptism in the district since last April. The work is onward, but this district needs a lengthy visit from our Bishopric; hope they will visit us at no very distant day.

Have never in all my ministerial labors had

Have never in all my ministerial labors had the measure of liberty in presenting the word of life as during the past winter. Should you deem me worthy of a reappointment to this field, will do what I can to keep the little stone rolling.

Elder David Chambers writes from Persia, Iowa:

At the last General Conference a mission was assigned me to California, unexpectedly to me; and by counsel, I went to Utah. My health was poor when I started; and it continued to get worse, so I returned home, doing but little good, but I trust no evil. I have labored locally as my health would permit, and have baptized five. My desires are to do some good in the Master's cause as my health permits.

Elder Albert Haws writes from Oakland, California:

Having been sustained by the General Conference as a missionary on this coast, I report my labors. They have been limited on account of my health. Have preached in Sacramento, in connection with Bro. Alex. H. Smith, and near Brighton, with good liberty. Have administered to the sick several times with marked effect; have worked what I could in connection with Bro. Brown and others on the Expositor. My faith is unshaken in the great work, and hope to do all that my health will allow. May the spirit of peace and wisdom prevail in your conference, that all difficulties may be adjusted and prosperity reign supreme.

Elder Thomas Daley writes from Sacramento, California:

I have not been able to devote much of my time in the field; have been working in the mines. Have devoted some time to preaching since the 19th of November, 1884, and the Lord has blessed my labors. Have preached in Eldorado and Sacramento counties, and baptized five since the above date. Never had better liberty in presenting the word. Had full houses in Eldorado county, and have letters requesting me to come back. Am anxious to get my mine open so that all of my time can be devoted to the service of my Master. May the Spirit of God control every mind and tongue, that his righteous will may be done.

Elder Harbert Scott writes from Scottsville, Indiana:

As I am not able to be with you, I take this method of reporting my labors in the ministry during the past year. Financial embarrassment and bad health have hindered me from prosecuting my mission, so my labors have been mostly confined to Floyd and Jefferson counties. The work in Southern Indiana needs more care than it has received in the past; the district is almost destitute of ministerial workers. Bro. I. P. Baggerly has been laboring in Crawford and Perry counties this winter. Bro. V. D. Baggerly is holding up the standard in the southern part of the district, and Bro. J. G. Scott is doing some labor in the northern part. This constitutes our force, and they are only partially employed. As I am unable to magnify my calling as a missionary of the church, I ask you to release me, not wishing to hold a position I can not serve. I pray for the spread of truth and for the establishment of righteousness in the earth.

Elder Isaac P. Baggerly writes from Madison, Indiana:

By permission of the First Presidency, December 17th, 1884, I came to this field (Indiana), and have been engaged ever since in the counties of Dubois, Crawford, Perry and Jefferson. Have delivered thirty-five discourses, baptized two, and administered other rites of the church, done the best I could under the circumstances, and feel thankful that my labors have not been in vain. When this field is supplied with efficient men, much good will accrue to the church. Two or more Elders are needed. The church in general is in a healthy condition, so far as I know. Bro. M. R. Scott ought to be continued here. We attend to the ordinance of baptism tomorrow. I have partially agreed to remain here three months more, but will be governed in the matter by you. Should you continue me for the coming year, would like a change to the north part of Missouri. This will be nearer my home, and I could see after business matters pertaining to my family. May peace and harmony prevail in your councils.

It was resolved that the president of conference have the appointing of the meetings, and those to preach and to have charge. He announced that prayer meetings will be held at nine o'clock in the mornings, preaching at ten thirty, also at seven thirty in the evenings. Business meetings at one o'clock. He appointed Bro. J. W. Gillen to preach this evening, Bro. Roderick May to assist him. Announcements were made for the Seventy and the Fifth Quorum of Elders to meet to-morrow morning, and conference adjourned.

At half-past seven in the evening, after singing, also prayer by Bro. R. May, Bro. J. W. Gillen preached one of his forcible sermons.

TUESDAY, APRIL 7TH.

At nine o'clock the appointed prayer meeting was held. It was in charge of brethren John Hawley and G. E. Deuel.

At half-past ten, sermon was preached by Bro. Hiram L. Holt, assisted by Bro. Willard J. Smith.

At one o'clock, sang hymn "Lord of the harvest hear." Prayer was offered by Bro. H. C. Smith. President Blair presided over the afternoon session.

The minutes of yesterday were read by Secretary Stebbins. Pres. Blair announced that no reports of the ministry will be received after tomorrow, unless in exceptional cases.

The committee on credentials reported the additional delegates, and the report was adopted. This additional report will be found incorporated with the original report of yesterday. It was received and the committee was continued. The credentials of delegates from the Spring River District were read, and the delegates were accepted.

MINISTRY REPORTS.

The secretary read the following additional reports that had been handed in.

Elder J. W. Briggs, of the Twelve, writes from Wheeler's Grove, Iowa:

In view of the appointment of your last session to labor in the field in connection with that of preparing a History of the Reorganized Church, etc., I respectfully report, that immediately upon the adjournment of conference I proceeded to New York, and entered upon the work of the history and continued this until about the first of August, visiting and preaching at intervals in the following places: Brooklyn, (a number of times); Bridgeport, Connecticut; Fall River and New Bedford, Massachusetts, (attending the district conference at the latter place); Providence, R. I. and Philadelphia, Pa.; also Hornerstown, New Jersey. In all of these places, while some variety of sentiment exists in regard to the details of faith and policy supposed to be held by the body, the Saints compare favorably with a like number anywhere for earnest effort to promote the interest of the church.

Ill health of myself and in family made it necessary to return to this place, which has interrupted the anticipated progress in the history. I have devoted what time I could to it, but circumstances above my control impeded the work. I shall continue the effort to complete that work just as fast as circumstances shall permit.

It is impracticable for me to attend your session, but in view of the variety of sentiment upon vital points of the faith and policy of the church, I offer for your consideration the following suggestions and recommendations:

1st. I suggest the defining of what constitutes "the General Assembly" provided for being called by resolution of the April Conference of 1874.

2d. I suggest that Pres. Joseph Smith who was charged by that conference with the fixing of the time for the calling such assembly, be called upon to report why this has not been done. And further, if it shall seem wise and proper, that the conference fix the time for the calling of such "General Assembly."

3d. I suggest and recommend the passage of a resolution declaring that all subjects and points of controversy upon "faith" and policy are, and shall be considered open questions, until passed upon by the said General Assembly.

And in any event, I ask that these suggestions and recommendations be spread upon the minutes. Invoking upon you the full endowment of the Spirit—of practical truth.

Elder J. H. Lake, of the Twelve, present, reports:

Since your last session I have been laboring in Canada, the mission assigned me. My first duties were to attend the two district conferences. At the close of the London conference, Bro. James A. McIntosh and I went east in the mission. Our first effort was at Price's Corners; preached a few times; removed some prejudice, and made friends to the cause. Bro McIntosh held one night's discussion with P. H. Howe, Adventist, on the Sabbath question, but his opponent did not have sufficient argument to make it interesting. We next went to Victoria county, preached first in a grove on Mr. Levi Wildon's farm. He is my brother-in-law. On invitation we next went to Cameron, preached twelve times in the Methodist Church, and were notified that we could not have the house any longer. By the kindness of Mrs. Deuel, we obtained her pleasant hall, and there we unfurled the Banner of King Immanuel, and proclaimed the gospel of Christ, continuing until twelve had been baptized. Then Bro. McIntosh went to Napanee and I went to Irondale, preached twice while there. It was a new place. There I preached to and baptized John Boland, a Lamanite. While explaining to him the coming forth of the Book of Mormon how it revealed the true history of the fore-fathers of his race coming from Jerusalem, also showing him that the time had come for the Lord to remember his covenants with Israel, his dark eyes sparkled with delight, and the tears coursed down his cheeks. Isreal is remembered. spirit attends the word of the gospel when it is preached.

I returned to Cameron and baptized those who desired it, and September 8th, organized the Cameron Branch with thirty-three members, and ordained G. F. Robinson presiding Elder, also on the 21st a Priest and Teacher was chosen and ordained.

October 4th and 5th attended the Alliston Conference. We had a pleasant session. October 11th and 12th attended the Kent and Elgin Conference, visited and labored among several branches in the two districts. December 27th, I went to St. Mary's. Bro. Robert Brown bought the old M. E. Church, and Bro. Joseph Luff, R. C. Evans and A. Leverton labored there. January 20th, went to London and Corinth. While at the latter place, Bro. R. C. Evans came from London and we went into Houghton township, a new place. Preaching was commenced there by Christopher Pearson. We left some enquiring after the old way. Then returned to Corinth and Bro. Evans to London. Febuary 27th, I went to St. Thomas, and baptized three, and March 2d organized a branch of thirteen members, with George Hanley Priest; Samuel Evisan Teacher; James Reynolds Deacon and clerk. Went to London, Blenhiem, and preached.

The work in the mission is onward. local laborers have done well. Bro. McIntosh has devoted all his time and has done good work. Samuel Brown has spent most of his time, and has done well. Bro. Luff's work was good. Bro. W. J. Smith's labors were blessed. I learn that Bro. Deuel was in the mission, and that he was battling for the truth. 'J. J. Cornish is laboring in the Mission. I know of no very serious troubles with the members in the Mission, and only one case with the officers. I have preached one hundred and twenty-five times, organized two branches, baptized forty persons, blessed twelve children, ordained four Elders, two Priests, three Teachers, one Deacon, and have assisted the offi-cers of the branches. I can truly say the Lord has cers of the branches. I can truly say the Lord has greatly blessed me in the discharge of my duties during the last year, and my desire is still to be found true to the Gospel of the Lord Jusus Christ, and to the great latter day work, which was brought forth by the power of God, in fullfilment of the word revealed in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, the three witnesses. I have no other desire than to labor the balance of my life in helping to preach the Gospel and in building up and establishing Zion, that Jesus may appear in his glory. To that end

I hope to be remembered in the prayers of all of God's people.

Elder A. H. Smith, of the Twelve, present, reports:

Last April I was appointed in charge of the Pacific Slope Mission, and also as one of a committee on examination of manuscript of Book of Mormon. The work of the committee and other causes prevented my starting for my field until August 28th. On my way stopped at Salt Lake City, and labored until September 25th. On the 27th reached Sacramento, California. Here the little band of Saints were completing a very nice chapel. By sacrifice, prayer, and hard work, they have a house that does credit to the faithful ones who reared it. God's Holy Spirit met with us to cheer and comfort, giving us an earnest of the joys held in reserve for those who make covenant by sacrifice. October 3d, was warmly welcomed to my field by the Saints of the Northern District, in conference. This mission is a large District, in conference. This mission is a large one, and I could scarcely expect to go over it in a twelve months. A long and arduous work lay before me, but loving hearts and willing hands were extended to aid in the work, so far as circumstances would permit. I did not find the work in as good condition as hoped for; improvement came when a better understanding obtain-A willingness was manifest upon the part of all to do their very best. During the conference the Spirit was present in a marked degree, and all felt that a better day was dawning for the work in California. The suggestion was made that a newspaper in the interest of the work on the coast was needed, and would do much good in reaching many of the hundreds of old Latter Day Saints scattered all over the coast, and that it would also be the means of showing the west-ern world the radical difference between the true Church of Christ and the apostate church in Utah. As a result, Brn. G. S. Lincoln, A. Haws, H. P. Brown, T. J. Andrews and Richard Ferris organized a board of publication, and "The Expositor" sprang into being. Three numbers have itor" sprang into being. Three numbers been printed and sent out all over the land. work is receiving a new impetus, and much good is being done by the little visitor.

From Sacramento, went to San Francisco and Oakland, and labored in those two cities till called by telegram to Lake county, on the occasion of the sickness and death of Bro. Wm. Cobb. I found very much prejudice existing there, but after a few efforts much of this was removed, and four were baptized. At Healdsburg I made several efforts, but found prejudice very strong. Went to Windsor, and aroused quite an interest. Went to Santa Rosa and found a little branch of good Saints, the greater part of whom are sisters, presided over by Bro. C. W. Hawkins, a noble soldier who is young in the work but full of zeal and courage. From Santa Rosa returned to San Francisco and Oakland. Baptized two in Oakland, and then went to the Southern District, laboring in Newport Branch, Laguna, Los Angeles, Azusa, Green Meadows, and San Bernardino. While laboring in the latter place, assisted in confirming three. In this Southern District I found there had been a more united effort; and a better condition was the result. I make honorable mention of Brn. Mills, Burton, Holt, Gibson, and R. Badham, and other Elders who have kept the stone rolling until nearly all the available ground in the Southern District has been visited with the gospel sound, and still the good work goes on, and prospects of a better day for the work in California are brighter.

Oregon and Nevada, parts of my field, I could not visit. I have felt in my labors of late the great wisdom in the commandment, "two by two let them be sent." It was the order of Christ our Lord to his disciples; it was enjoined through the Seer to the early church; and again God said through our present prophet, "two by two let them be sent." Do we not err in departing from the rule as given by commandment?

On my way here I again visited Salt Lake City, and again lifted a warning cry, asking the deceived and oppressed ones to come out of the darkness into the light of the true fold. I would urge upon the conference the necessity of continuing the good work begun in California; send, if possible; two efficient ministers to the Pacific Slope Mission. If it is the will of God and the church that I should return, I shall try and do so; will try and do my duty, and put my trust in God, for I love this work. May God speed it.

Elder James Caffall, of the Twelve, present, reports:

My last report was from Manassa, Colarado, where I remained until last June. Five were added. All members save four migrated to more congenial climes, with many who believed, and others prepared to follow in the Fall. From thence I proceded to Starksville, Colorado, and held a few meetings. Thence to Coal Creek, remaining there long enough to hold thirty-three Three were added and a branch organized of eight members; but the fact of most parts of Colorado being composed of a floating population, it is difficult to retain an organization, or establish the work therein. After visiting Hutchinson, returned East in September, and since that time have been quite busy in responding to calls from branches and districts in Nebraska and Western Iowa, and have sought to build up, as my limited ability and opportunities permitted. More frequent conferring, with corresponding efforts to co-operate according to the given pattern, with branch and district officials for the building up of the cause, is necessary; and this can only be effected by a realization of responsibilities incumbent by virtue of our profession and calling. Nebraska offers many oppor-tunities for the presentation of the word, nor is Western Iowa as yet fully evangelized. Hence, for each locality we need an increase of ministerial labor. And, with such an increase, and a corresponding increase of zeal, and labor by the local ministry, with God's inspiring and guiding power, we hope to keep the gospel banner floating in the breeze; and to contrast its beauty with the folly and assumption of man.

Elder Josiah Ells, of the Twelve, present, reports:

Since last conference I have traveled and labored as conditions presented and opportunity afforded, and expect to so continue; but the hand of Old Time weighs heavily upon me. This being known, beyond a man's ability nothing is required. My principal labor is striving to confirm the Saints. I urge "the old paths" as the way of life, the renewed covenant in the latter day, involving the gathering of Israel as a part of the restitution, and the law of tithing as a part of an eternal law. These things have with me become fixed facts, I expect they will so remain.

Elder John Landers, of the High Priests, writes from Blue Rapids, Kansas:

Beloved Saints; my prayers do and will ascend to heaven for you that you may enjoy a fulness of love to God and man so long as vour conference continues, that you may depart to your several fields of labor as giants refreshed with new wine. I am prevented from being with you by circumstances which I can not control, for I am far advanced in my ninety-first year. I still preside over this branch, and have preached once nearly every Sabbath day all winter, and am blessed with a good measure of the Spirit of the Lord. I love the cause as well as ever, and only wish to live to promote it, and am one with you in faith and doctrine, and pray that harmony and love may prevail and discord cease.

Elder Columbus Scott, of the Seventy, present, reports:

During the year past I have tried, to the best of my ability, to honor the calling vested in me. My labor in the ministry has been hindered to some extent by ill health, and by a visit to Southern Indiana consequent upon the death of my father in November last. I was able only to respond to a few of the very many calls in my field of labor, Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana. The greater part of my work has been in Michigan. Much labor is greatly needed as is the case in fact, in all parts of the mission. While on my way here, calls came for me from two different points in Indiana. There is a much greater demand for preaching than we are able now to supply. I have traveled some two thousand miles; have lost no opportunity to hold forth the word of life, occupying new grounnd most of the time. Have met strong opposition. Have baptized nine, confirmed ten, blessed a number of children and administered to the sick with blessings attending in many instances. Have been signally blessed in my efforts in the cause, still feel strong in the faith, and have a desire to see the work move on to victory and glory.

Elder I. N. Roberts, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since last conference I have labored in Kansas and Missouri to the best of my ability. Have baptized forty-one, organized one branch, blessed nine children, and solemnized two marriages. The work is advancing rapidly in Kansas, and needs more labors. My heart is in the work. I desire to continue in the ministry if the means to sustain my family can be procured.

Elder M. T. Short, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since last appointment I have preached in four or five states, at times and in places too numerous to mention. In the Kewanee District insubordinate malcontents claimed much of my time.
One Charles A. Hall was silenced for what was deemed proper and sufficient reasons; but he has set up on his own hook, and styles himself "an Elder of the Church of Christ." Who will be the next to follow? I served one quarter as presiding Elder of the Nauvoo and String Prairie District, and felt greatly blest while in that charge. My labors were confined almost wholly to South Eastern Iowa. In Keokuk baptized five, one in Farmington, and one at Vincennes; used my influence to have father Warnock, Sr. Cameron, and Bro. McKiernan join the Farmington Branch, which they did cheerfully; was called to Buffalo, Iowa, to preach the funeral of Sr. Page, and the day following immersed her married daughter. At Seligman, South Western Missouri, I delivered a score of discourses and administered the rite of adoption to a lady of eminent piety. Elder Isaac Stapleton of the M. E. Church South reviewed me in five efforts, to all of which I responded in two two-hour sermons. The Baptists raised ten dollars for Rev. Bone of Pea Ridge; and some border ruffians said that he could have two revolvers to do me up. Since my departure he has contented himself in branding us as liars, theives, robbers, and murderers. His feeble, unjust, and false endeavors rendered him and his confederates odious, and created a strong and abiding sympathy in favor of the cause of truth, and transferred ten dollars of alien change into my pocket. The interest was wrought up to a fever heat. The multitude was mixed, but the thinking, sincere, intelligent part, bid me a reluctant farewell, with the promise to pay my way over the railroad when I could resume operations. From thence went to Pleasant View Branch, Kansas; had a glorious conference. Evan A. Davis, the young but able district president, accompanied me around the old stamping ground. At Webb City, Missouri, the sectarian waters were troubled while the Saints were refreshed and strengthened. One old, praying sinner thought we ought to be mobbed out of town, for we were ruining all the evangelical Christian Churches. The Campbelites of Mound Valley, Kansas, agreed to let us have their house for a respectable length of time, but all at once they got uneasy and remembered that the Mormons were disloyal, and Old Joe & Co. stole hogs for a living. We were his followers and all explanations were as useless as the feeding of "wild asses on the east wind." I baptized a young man near Columbus. Elder Lake and I called on David Whitmer, and he affirmed as heretofore.

Elder John T. Davies, of the Seventy, present, reports:

I have endeavored to fill the mission assigned me to the best of my ability under existing circumstances. The field is large and promising, and it needs persistent and continued effort. The work is looking upward. The local Elders are giving good aid and life to the work by their good and faithful preaching. Several baptized, more coming; the faith of the Saints stronger, and their hope and love broader,—but they object to contentions in high places.

Elder George S. Hyde, of the Seventy, writes from Clearwater, Nebraska:

Nebraska was given me as a field of labor. I have done but little effectual work, but have sought to be loyal to God and his church. his economy and the polity of the body I have seen poorly exemplified in some instances. About all the consolation I gather from some of the experiences of the past is in the belief and hope that an effectual lesson has been learned. Circumstances render it impractitable for me to labor as an itinerant minister for the ensuing year. As opportunities shall present, I hope still to do good in publishing the gospel of peace. The Burnett Blade has favored me in printing a short introduction to our faith, and it gave promise to repeat the favor as space may allow. cherish the desire and hope of future usefulness in the work of God, and crave the prayers of the church in my behalf. Our district conference has just closed. It was a peaceful and very profitable session. Elder James Caffall was with us and did the preaching. It is the expressed wish of the conference that Bro. Caffall should be returned to this mission. As the president of this district I shall seek to magnify my calling.

Elder J. T. Kinnaman, President of the Third Quorum of Elders, present, reports:

I have labored almost entirely in the Far West District. Am still president of the same. Have visited the Saints at Good Intent, Kansas, and preached for them. Attended a series of grove meetings last summer and strove to help forward the work in my district. Was called to Bevier, Missouri, by Bro. J. R. Lambert, and for about three weeks assisted him to bring about peace and harmony. Since the last of February have been engaged in district affairs, also was in Gentry county, and preached a number of times to full houses. Had good liberty and good attention, and left a good impression. Baptized and confirmed one. Have only baptized two, but have done about all practicable under the circumstances. Have traveled at my own expense except in my visit to Bevier. That branch paid my traveling expenses there and back. Am willing to still work for the Master, if thought worthy. I hate red tape, hence claim no honor: to God be all honor and glory.

Elder Alfred White, present, reports:

After my appointment last April, went to Cedar County, May 3d, where I continued up to the 25th, setting in order the Clintonville Branch. Was called to Grundy county in July; and August 30th, went with Bro. Foss to the quarterly conference at Stewartsville. Labored in Cameron and Kingston, mostly in connection with Bro. Bozarth up to September 22d. October 1st returned to Cameron, but found it inexpedient to continue preaching as the minds of the people were wholly occupied in the affairs of the Presi-dential election. Went to the Reunion, and refreshed my memory and rested from labor a few After Reunion attended the debate held in Marshall county, between Rev. Scull and Bro. I. N. White. From thence went with Bro. Bro. I. N. White. From thence went with Bro. Etzenhouser to Viola, where we broke the bread of life to the few who loved to hear. Returned home November 28th, and found sickness in my Since then have done little labor abroad. Visited Kansas City and Armstrong a few times and labored during the interim with local brethren. Have administered to many sick, and in some cases with marked effect. When my family have fully recovered from illness, am ready to continue my mission.

Elder George Hicklin, present, reports:
Since my appointment one year ago to the North East Missouri District I have labored in and acted as the president of that district. Also preached a great number of times in places outside the branches, as well as visited and labored in the branches. The branches are in fair condition, but one. Have labored all the time from April up to December 16th, and then had to go to work in the mines as I was without means and in debt. Have paid my debts, and one branch is now indebted to me. Have labored in the following named counties: Macon, Randolph, Knox, Linn and Chariton. When I had to leave the field, the work was the most interesting. Several were on the eve of coming into the Church, as I then understood. Am ready and willing to do all I can in the time to come; and if my wife can be cared for, am ready to go anywhere this conference may need me or deem wise to send me.

Elder F. C. Wanky, present, reports:

My labors during the last year have been in Jackson, Johnson, and Cedar Counties, Missouri, and in Cherokee, Labette and Wyandotte counttes, Kansas. Part of the time have acted as President of the Independence District. Have preached fifty-seven times, including a discussion of twelve nights; baptized five, confirmed three; blessed two children, solemnized one marriage, and administered to many that were sick. Have been made to feel the loving influence of God's approval in my labors.

Elder E. W. Cato, present, reports:

I left home December 5th, 1883, for the South. Began preaching in Washington county, Alabama, at Lamberta. From there went to Beaver Meadow and Whistler, in Mobile county, then to Monroe county. I met Bro. F. P. Scarcliff at Lone Star Branch, reported to him, and began laboring under his direction, until brother Montague arrived. I preached one hundred and thirty times while in the South. The brethren were very kind in helping me around. I preached in Biloxi, Mississippi, where no preaching was ever done before by our Elders. The people were well pleased with the doctrine. Preached at a new place in Santa Rosa county, Florida. I baptized five, administered to the sick, ordained one Teacher, and did all I could in the great work. May the Lord bless the Saints of the South with wisdom and knowledge to guide them through.

Elder E. A. Davies, present, reports:

I have not been able to devote all my time in the field, but have done all in my power to promote the great work. Have labored in Kansas and Missouri. Have met with success as a general thing. Am also in charge of the Spring River District. It is in a prosperous condition, with few exceptions.

Elder F. M. Sheehy, writes from Green's Landing, Maine:

Since my appointment to this mission I have labored constantly in the ministry. My work in Maine has been chiefly at Jonesport, Indian River, Jonesboro, Green's Landing and Bray's Mountain; n Nova Scotia, at South Rawdon, Delhaven, and Parrsboro, although other places have been visited by me. Have been signally blessed and sustained by the Holy Spirit, and have enjoyed greater liberty and power in preaching than ever before. The territory assigned me was more than one man could do justice to. The mission is sadly in need of laborers. The work in Maine has been on the retrograde in consequence, decreasing in-Where labor of late has stead of increasing. been bestowed, prospects are brightening. I feel to urge the necessity of your increasing the missionary staff here. The Church can not afford to lose the labors that have been bestowed in the past, which will be the case if not provided for. In regard to Nova Scotia the work of Bro. Burton can not be commended too highly. material composing the little nucleus there is exceedingly good; but they need help from you, for the disadvantages they labor under are greater than usually attends the opening of the The intolerance, bigotry, work in new places. and prejudice there is almost unbearable. Saints are maintaining themselves bravely against it, and are expecting help from your strong arm, for they are in their infancy. May they not be for they are in their infancy. May they not be disappointed. The opportunities for preaching in this mission are abundant, and will render a good fruition if attended to. One missionary in all this vast field is entire inadequate.

Elder Samuel Brown, writes from Blenheim, Canada:

Not being able to meet with you, I forward a summary of labor done for the Master the past year, by the assistance of the Spirit of God. Have preached seventy-nine times, baptized five, confirmed nine, assisted to confirm two; administered to twenty-five sick with good results, and assisted to administer to others; blessed ten children, conducted twenty-six prayer and testimony meetings; preached three funeral sermons, made three new openings, ordained two, and organized one branch. Have been blessed in the discharge of my duty, and still desire to labor to the end; but the way things are with me at present, can not devote all my time in the field. I have a wife and one child to care for, and having nothing ahead, deem it wise to get a home. I could devote my time next fall and winter if you deem it wise to sustain my family.

REPORT OF CHURCH SECRETARY AND RECORDER.

Elder H. A. Stebbins read his report as Secretary and Recorder of the Church, as fellows:—

ORGANIZED BRANCHES.

The Church Records show the present membership of branches as follows:

My annual report to the church is as follows, concerning the numerical standing of the branches of the church throughout the world, also of fragments of branches and scattering members so far as placed upon the record. Since November last I have written nearly three hundred letters to branch, district and general church officials concerning the records

FRAGMENTS OF BRANCHES

The following members still stand upon the records of disorganized branches, or those broken up by removal. The district officers in which such fragments are left should see to the records of such past branches, and obtain possession of them, also so far as possible they ought to see that all losses by death or expulsion of such members are reported to the General Church Recorder, that a record of the fact of loss may be kept, as done with organized branches.

There are 519 branches and fragments of branches mentioned above, 19 of which are now put on record for the first time during the past year: One in England, six in Canada, one in Colorado, one in Illinois, two in Iowa, one each in Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Rhode Island, Texas and Utah More have been baptized during the past year than were during either of the two preceding years, but through the bad custom of "dropping" names from the branch records because the parties are absent from the branch without letters, and also because there have been many expulsions during the past year for cause, or at their request, they having grown weary in the race, on these accounts the net gain has only been six hundred and twenty-six, (626), or eighteen (18) less than the net gain shown a year ago.

By a persistent correspondence I have been able to obtain nearly full corrections in records in reply to my three hundred letters, so that my records agree, or within one or two numbers of doing so, with nine tenths of the branch records, and correspondence is continually being had upon existing differences so that errors in branch reports, or neglect to report, may not be passed by till the records become that much harder to correct.

I append a table showing the aggregates by States and the net gain by branches for the year. gain means those branches that have had increase of membership over loss and the net loss means those branches whose loss has been greater than the gain, hence the total loss and gain in the branches is not shown by the table; that would be a great task to tell for every branch throughout the church. One column shows the net gain by States or loss by States, as the case may be, that each State may know whether it has lost or gained during the year.

Bro. T. W. Smith writes me from the Society Islands that there are eleven branches there aggregating between seven hundred and eight hundred members, and at his request I have had blanks sent to him upon which to make full copies of their records, as he has kindly offered to do, that they may be placed upon the General Church Records. See his report to the present conference in which he gives a statement of the number of those native Saints on the Islands of the Sea. He is among those most willing and able to do such a work, being one of the ministry who makes it his interest to see to the records wherever he goes. There are also in hand various calls for the labor of the ministry, with petitions from some regions that those whom they love and honor may be re-appointed to their former fields. These I hand over to the Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve.

DISTRICT REPORTS.

I present the following synopsis of district reports that have been sent or handed to me:

Welsh Mission: 8 branches, 149 members; last total 160; during the year 9 expelled, 2 died; net decrease 11 members Thomas E Jenkins, president; David Lewis, clerk. Bro. Jenkins writes that the majority of the Saints in Wales are faithful ones. Some of the Elders are becoming aged and feeble, but some are very faithful, especially those of Aberaman. They have preached at every opportunity and are determined to continue, though their success has been limited. The Saints are anxious to see the work prosper there. Peace and union continue in the branches.

Canada, Kent and Elgin District: At last report 9 branches and 233 members; 4 branches added and present total 386 members also 14 scattering ones, or an aggregate of three hundred During the year 34 have been baptized and 1 expelled. Richard Coburn

Nova Scotia District: 2 branches, 23 members; 3 baptized during the year, 1 died. They need a laborer there very much, that the work may be continued. Alabama and Florida, Mobile District; 5 branches, about 165 members. A new district formed by dividing an old district. F. P. Scarcliff, president. He writes that in most of the branches the Saints reside far apart and but few meetings are held, also very little preaching is being done by local Elders. Yet it is expected that the organization into a new district will prove beneficial to the work.

Illinois, South-Eastern District: 5 branches contain. ing 265 members, also 8 who are not recorded in branches, total 273, including 1 High Priest, 13 Elders, 7 Priests, 8 Teachers, 4 Deacons. Bro. I. A. Morris, the president, states that the district is in a very good condition.

Iowa, Decatur District: 8 organized branches and 3 fragments aggregating 1051 members. During year 57 received by letter, 34 baptized, 22 removed by letter, 4 expelled. 9 died, one branch of 10 members withdrawn to Des Moines District; net gain 46 added to 1005 last years report, making 1051 members. As shown above there have been a fair number of baptisms, though only a limited number of Elders, compared with the total of them, have labored in the ministry. Those who have been out have been encouraged by attentive listeners and good results.

Henry A. Stebbins, president; E. H. Gurley, clerk.

Iowa, Des Moines District: 6 organized branches and 2 fragments, total 400 members During the year 72 baptized, 38 received by letter and vote, 31 removed by letter. 2 died. W.C. Nirk, president; John Sayer, clerk. Bro 1. N. White reports that the district is in fair condition. The number baptized indicates an upward tendency. The field is large, more than the local Elders can attend to, and he considers that a good man should be appointed by the General Conference to that field because the necessities of the work demand it. The Saints of that district are deep ly interested in the success of the work, and they look for the redemption of Zion if it needs be by power.

Iowa, Fremont District: 7 branches, 352 members besides 43 scattered ones, total 395, including 33 Elders 13 Priests, 12 Teachers and 7 Deacons. have been 24 baptized. 3 received by letter, 23 removed by letter, 4 died, making gains and losses equal. Henry Kemp, president; J. M. Stubbart, sec-

Iowa, Galland's Grove District: 12 branches, 662 members besides 15 scattering ones. There are 3 High Priests, 3 of the Seventy, 40 Elders, 18 Priests. 19 Teachers and 2 Deacons During the year 40 have been baptized and 6 received by letter and vote; 4 have removed by letter, 2 been expelled and 4 died, leaving a net gain of 36 members. The Franklin Branch of 7 members has been disorganized. Eli Clothier, president of district; John Pett, clerk.

Iowa, Little Sioux District: Present membership in five branches 577, including 3 High Priests, 3 of the Seventy, 38 Elders, 12 Priests, 11 Teachers, 7 Deacons. Seventy, 38 Eiders, 12 Priests, 11 Teachers, 1 Deacons. Changes since last report: 18 baptized, 47 received by letter or vote, and 2 gained by error in previous report. Total gain 67. 17 removed by letter, 1 expelled, 13 died. Total loss 31. Net gain 36. The scattered membership of the district is estimated at 103. Total membership of the district 680. J. C Crabb president, Wm C. Cadwell secretary.

Iowa, Pottawattamie District: 5 branches, 440 members, including 3 Apostles, 5 of the Seventy, 26 Elders, 13 Priests, 11 Teachers, 6 Deacons. During the year 10 have been baptized, and 3 were received by letter; 1 was expelled and 8 deaths, leaving a net gain of 4 H. N. Hansen, president; Fredrick Hanmembers.

Maine Eastern District: Bro Joseph Lakeman president, writes that some things are not as they should be, but he has been trying to bring about a better condition. Bro. F. M. Sheehy has labored faithfully and wisely, thereby aiding the work and making many Bro Lakeman recommends that Bro. Sheehy he re-appointed and that he be appointed only to the Eastern Maine District. A vear's work there by him would bring great results, Bro. Lakeman thinks, and What is needed he feels encouraged at the prospect. is the labor of wise and consistent Elders there as well as elsewhere

Maine, Western District: 5 branches, 141 members, including 9 Elders, 4 Priests, 5 Teachers, 4 Deacons. During the year 6 persons have been baptized and 1 was received by letter: 3 were expelled and 2 died, leaving a net gain of 2 in the district. Wm. G. Pert, president; M. R. Cousins, clerk. Bro. Pert writes that the work is losing ground because very little labor is done: but the Saints who stand fast are increasing in parnestness and love for the work. Bro. F. M. Sheeby, missionary in charge, has recently arrived at Green's Landing, and was preaching every evening when Bro. Pert wrote last. Bro. Pert suggests that if Bro. Sheehy was appointed only to Maine, not to Nova Scotia also, that he could do them much good, and his help is greatly needed throughout Maine.

Massachusetts District: This district includes the States of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecti-There are 10 branches with 611 members. John Smith president, Thomas Whiting clerk. Bro Whiting writes that the district is in a good condition, and the prospects are bright. The Elders in the district are alive to the work and are improving their opportunities to preach the word. The only General Conference missionary in that field is Bro. M. H. Bond. Bro John Smith presides wisely and judiciously, over the district

Michigan, Northern District: 14 branches, 475 members, including 11 Elders, 16 Priests, 9 Teachers, 6 Deacons. Andrew Barr, president; Willard J. Smith, clerk. During the year 54 baptisms have taken place, 20 have been received by letter and vote; 4 have been expelled and I has died leaving a net gain of 69 for the year. There are from 50 to 75 members in the district not numbered in branches. The work is in good condition, as a rule. The chief labor has been by Elder G. E. Deuel, J. J. Cornish and W. J. Smith, and also Elders A. Barr, J. J. Bailey, J. A. Carpenter and E. Delong have done considerable preaching.

Missouri, Independence District: 5 branches, 477 members, including ! Apostle, 1 High Priest, 2 of the Seventy, 41 Elders, 20 Priests, 10 Teachers and 11 Deacons. The spiritual condition of the district is very fair, except for a few discordant elements caused chiefly by lack of confidence in brethren F. C. Warnky, president; T. W. Chatburn, clerk.

Missouri North-East District: 4 branches, 210 members, including 14 Elders, 8 Priests, 6 Teachers and 4 Deacons. As a whole the district is not in good working order. Many calls for preaching, but owing to troubles in the past there has not been much labor done, but a better feeling is gaining ground among both officers and members. Bro. J. R. Lambert labored faithfully in one part of the district, assisted as faithfully by Brn. J. T. Kinnaman and H. A. Stebbins It is hoped that their labors may be crowned with blessings. Here is a large and a good field and it is needful that each officer should learn his duty and not neglect to pray for divine aid. Geo. Hicklin president, J. T. Williams clerk.

Missouri, St Louis District: 9 branches, and 2 fragments of branches, 503 members, including 2 High Priests, 27 Elders, 18 Priests, 11 Teachers, 6 Deacons. During the year 30 persons have been baptized, 18 were received by letter and vote; 20 removed by letter, 9 died and 3 were expelled, leaving a net gain of 16 members Noah N. Cooke president, J. G. Smith clerk.

Nebraska, Central District: 5 branches, 163 members, including 1 High Priest, 1 of the Seventy, 13 Elders, 9 Priests, 4 Teachers and 4 Deacons. During the year 22 have been baptized and 26 received by letter and vote; 3 have removed by letter and 1 has died, leaving a net gain of 44 members. There are about 20 members within the bounds of the district who are not in any branch. There have been some serious difficulties that for a time retarted progress, but through the aid of Brn. Brand and Caffall there has been an improvement in affairs. Geo. S. Hyde president, Levi Gamet clerk.

Nebraska, Southern District: 6 branches, 335 memhers, including 2 High Priests, 1 of the Seventy, 15 Elders, 15 Priests, 7 Teachers, 9 Deacons. During the year 12 baptized, 15 received by letter and vote, 8 removed, 1 died, leaving net gain of 18 members. The laborers outside of the local ones were Brn. James Caffall, M. H. Forscutt, R. J. Anthony, Heman C. Smith, Henry Kemp and A. H. Parsons, to a limited degree Prospects are considered good if they only had men to occupy the inviting fields. Levi Anthony president, J. B. Gouldsmith clerk.

Tennessee District: 2 branches, 33 members, including 2 Elders, 1 Teacher, 2 Deacons. No increase or decrease during the year. What little labor has been done was done by Brn. P. B. Seaton and W. H. Grif-P. B. Seaton president, S. L. Cooper clerk.

President Blair remarked upon the statement made in the report concerning the custom of dropping members from the branch records, that he considered that it should not be done, and that the ministry ought to discountenence the custom wherever they see it manifested. Unless Letters of Removal are issued to the members they ought to be retained on the record as scattered members.

It was moved to refer it to a committee of three, but no books of the Board being present, a motion to receive and spread upon the minutes, was substituted, and it was so ordered.

On motion it was

Resolved, That a committee, consisting of Brn. W. W. Blair, S. Maloney and I. L. Rogers, be appointed to confer with the committee appointed by the brethren of the Church of Christ known as Hedrickites.

The appeal of Brn. W. O. Thomas and H. C. Bronson vs the Saint Louis District was, on motion, referred to a committee consisting of Brn. J. W. Chatburn, Charles Derry and J. W. Gillen.

The report of the committee on Sabbath

School lessons was read by Secretary Cadwell, accepted, and the committee was continued:

We, your committee, to whom you delegated the work of preparing a series of lessons, for Sabbath School study, in the Hope, would respectfully report: That, owing to circumstances over which we had no control, we were unable to do any work in the line of our appointment until about the first of September, 1884. That, at that time we prepared and forwarded the first attempt, as we believe at such lessons in the history of the church; and from that time to the present we have endeavored to keep that department of the Hope supplied, as in our wisdom and the assistance of the Spirit of God we were enabled to do. If there has been any lack of interesting matter, or error in doctrine or arrangement, we plead your indulgence, in view of the inexperience of your committee, and their inability to do better under the circumstances; while on the other hand, whatever merit may have been developed in the preparation of these lessons, should credited to Him who has promised to be light and wisdom to his children in every hour of need. Few are prepared to appreciate fully the difficul-ties attending a work of this kind. The responsibility resting upon those who undertake the training of the young, is among the greatest that is connected with this work, The youthful mind is so easily influenced for good or evil, so susceptible to impressions of either correct or false doctrines, that it would seem that none should be hastily burdened with such a task, nor should any one attempt to assume the task of teacher, who can not look to God with a full assurance of his divine favor in granting such wisdom and knowlege as will enable him to plant the feet of the young in the ways of righteousnesss and truth. But while realizing the difficulties that surrounded the work, we should not permit those difficulties to blind us to the importance of continuing its prosecution.

There has always, until lately, been a backwardness among Latter Day Saints in undertaking Sabbath School work. One of the principal reasons of this is, the claim that it is a species of sectarianism. That there is no direct command for its institution, and that the mission of the church being to preach the gospel, when that mission is filled, our responsibility as God's servants ceases. That our attempt to adapt ourselves to the spirit and method of modern Sabbath School work, amounts to an attempt to ape after modern religious methods and thoughts. These objections call to our mind the incident in the life of Christ, where his disciples are represented as objecting to certain men pretending to cast out devils in the name of Christ. He gave them to understand that he that is not against us is for us. So we understand that any line of work undertaken in the spirit of meekness and righteousness, that is not contrary to God's commands, and seems necessary to be done from force of attending circumstances, can be made auxilliary to our work, and should not be frowned down. We do not feel, however, that any argument is needed at the present stage of the latter day work, in favor of a continuation of Sabbath School labor; as we believe those who oppose are now comparatively few, and that the great body of the church is prepared to say a hearty God speed to our efforts.

The most that can be said of the work of the committee is, that it is but an experiment as yet; and that if continued by this committee or by others, new thoughts will be continually presenting themselves, and new methods will without doubt be adopted, as the Spirit shall direct or the needs of the hour demand. We submit our work in the hope that it will meet with at least a fair measure of approval, and that having acted to the best of our ability the part of torch bearer, to show the way, some more competent brother or sister, or committee of such, may be found to take up the work where we now leave it, and carry it on. We would recommend that the work be continued in the general manner pursued so far, and hope that the friends of the enterprise will make an especial effort to so increase the circulation of the Hope that the paper can be enlarged, and more space can be allotted to this department; or some means devised to give it more elbow room as it shall develop and seem to demand it. In gospel bonds,

The following was moved by Brn. G. A. Blakeslee and E. L. Kelley, and adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved That it is with great sorrow and solcitude that we are compelled to chronicle the fact of the severe trial and affliction of that great patriot soldier and our beloved countryman, Gen. U. S. Grant, and that during this conference we invoke in his behalf our united prayers, that if it may please our Heavenly Father he may yet be spared to the joy of his family and countrymen.

It was stated that Bro. Thomas Nutt had been called home by telegram, and it was moved that Bro. George Kemp be appointed as alternate delegate from the Northern Minnesota District to act in the absence of Bro. Nutt. Such an appointment by the conference was considered as being contrary to the rules and was defeated.

On motion the name of Bro. E. W. Cato was dropped from the delegation of the Texas Central District, and placed among those from Central Missouri, where it was stated he was also chosen as delegate.

President Joseph Smith addressed the assembly, saying that he doubted if any felt the odium attached to association with this work more than he did; also probably none have any greater repugnance to what is called priestcraft than he has. It has been said that order is heavens first law, and the speaker said that he distrusts the man that quotes that saying, and yet does not show a willingness to be subject to order. The statement that the children of this world are wiser in their generation than are the children of light, applies to a great extent to us as a people. would be the opinion of the Saints of me if I would fail to obey and carry out their instructions when regularly given. can not blame any one for calling representatives to account for non-observance of the accepted laws of the church. If red tape at all facilitates the work of the church, then let it be used; if it hinders, then cut it. Our Secretary has labored hard to have the reports prepared and ready that have been handed in, but there has been a remissness in duty, even with those who ought to be the foremost to observe order of this kind, and to send in their reports early. In the past I was grieved by delay resulting from the old system of conducting conference business, but I have seen some of the evils overcome. The partial system of representation now in vogue has also aided in expediting business, and has resulted in good to the cause.

Announcements were made for meetings to-morrow of the Quorum of High Priests, of the Seventy, and of the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth Quorums of Elders. A hymn was sung, and the benediction was pronounced by Bro. W. C. Cadwell. According to appointment, the evening sermon was by Bro. Charles Derry; he was assisted by Bro. J. W.

Chatburn.

The Saints' Menald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR. W. W. BLAIR - - ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, May 2d, 1885.

THE conference which has just passed, was in some respects the most important of any held by the Reorganization since 1852. A feeling of unrest, in some of downright dissatisfaction, and in others of annoyance and distress, had gone out into the different districts of the church, and affected the delegates when they came together, in regard to the affirmation of the belief of the church. The delegates to the conference, and the members by virtue of their office, came into the session with this feeling, and it was made apparent before the reading of the reports of the Elders in the field had come to a close, that the church as a body was in no immediate danger of disentegration. A strong determination to stand by the standard books, as heretofore endorsed, was manifested from first to last; and the idea that the church had spoken with sufficient definiteness to be understood by her representative men was not entertained by any. Great harmony of both sentiment and spirit prevailed from first to last, with scarcely an exception. By some it is thought that in this respect it was the best session ever held in the Reorganization.

The two leading papers of Kansas City had each a reporter in attendance, and gave fair, and for the most part very accurate reports of the proceedings daily; and for their issue for Sunday, the 12th, the Times gave a four-column article very favorably written, giving an outline of the history of the church from the beginning. The reporters were in their demeanor respectful and attentive.

The citizens of the city of Independence were friendly, and showed courtesy to the visitors from abroad; seemingly willing to give the Saints credit for the best of intentions.

The representation was large, and the best by far that the church has had. All was present for the best good of all the people, and had come to attend to the business in hand, full of keen appreciation of the situation, its gravity, and its consequences; as well as cheerfulness and determination. The interest was intense and was maintained to the end of the proceedings.

Some of the business men of the place requested Bro. S. G. Mayo to invite those of the delegates and visitors who might so desire to a ride through the city and its suburbs, directing him to provide the carriages at their expense. Some of the Saints were pleased with this attention, and availed themselves of the opportunity, and were delighted with the country.

The attempt to force the church into the declaration of a formula ed creed, failed as heretofore. There was no disposition to build the "iron bedstead" upon which to stretch the devotee. It was equally apparent that the body had little sympathy with any effort to destroy the integrity of the revelations of God to the Church. It was considered that to declare upon this point at the demand of one, involved the precedent to declare on another point at the demand of some one else; and if for these, then at the requirement of any who chose to rise up and demand a declaration of dogma, the church would have to yield, the result of which would be to finally eliminate the liberty of individual inquiry, quench the teaching of the word of God, and practically deny the office work of the Spirit in leading into truth. Once involved in the intricacies of such formulated declarations there could be no abiding lines of demarkation drawn where belief might safely rest and dogmatism assume the rule. It was and is far safer to affirm the books of the church, as with one so with the other, than to build a creed.

There was no ambiguity in the declaration of the Presidency in the fall of 1879; nor any mistake in the adoption of their report. The affirmation of the report respecting the ministry was clear in each of the articles where a faith in the books was named; and any one, with the clearness of perception to make him a representative of the faith of the church so far as the Bible and New Testament are concerned, need be under no dubiety as to the affirmation concerning either the Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants.

So far as any attempt being made by the church to compel any one to accept this, that, or the other decree, or suffer the pains and penalties of purgatory is concerned, it is scarcely needful to say none has ever been made, and it is not likely any will be. It is equally certain that the church, the body of Elders and members constituting the body, will not submit to the process of having any man's particular hobbies of belief, or disbelief, prescribed for it.

BISHOP G. A. BLAKESLEE and the Editor visited Alton, Illinois, from Independence, by the way of St. Louis, Missouri, stopping at the latter point over Sunday and meeting with the Saints at their hall, No. 1302 Broadway. The day was reasonably pleasant, and the services were fairly attended under the circumstances. The visit was hastily decided upon after conference, though contemplated for some time—snow falls and blizzards last winter spoiled two agreed upon—and hence the notice was but partial, and a funeral service of one of the Saints in another part of the city; prevented many from attending.

The Editor addressed the audience at eleven in the forenoon; the meeting being in charge of the Priest, brother Joseph Cole, a young and promising laborer. In the afternoon, the presiding Elder, Bro. J. G. Smith being present, after sacrament, the Bishop gave a short, pleasant address upon the duties of members toward the finances of the church. It was apparently well received. At the evening hour the Editor tried to interest the people in a rapid discussion of the position and work of the Reorganization. He received the best of attention.

We here greeted many with whom we had met from 1864 to 1875; but missed sadly the faces of some whose bodies now lie waiting the summons of the Master, who shall quicken both small and great. The visit to Bro. Whitehead, of Alton, who was at Nauvoo in the office of Joseph Smith during his lifetime, and employed largely in writing for the church; both in keeping the books and attending to the correspondence and records, kept in that office. This brother is in his seventy-third year, is quite hale, and bears a strong testimony to the work. He was an active participant in the stirring scenes at Nauvoo, from his arrival there in April, 1842, to his removal in the Spring of 1847. He remembers quite well many things that came under his observation; and though conversing freely, shows that the goodness of his heart and purity of his purpose, has kept him from bitterness in his memories. He remembers what men did and said, but judges not, feeling pity rather than malice. He has served the people of Alton as a member of the City Council, and as a Justice of the Peace, for several years; peremptorily declining one election tendered him on the 21st of April at the annual city election.

The branch at St. Louis feels the need of some one to be actively engaged as a preacher there, and in the district as well. Bro. N. N. Cooke, who lives at 2723 Rutger street, is at present presiding over the district. He is a master mechanic, employed in a large railway works, and can not spend the time from his employer's service that the needs of the district demand; though he does what he can. He has refused promotion, and places where larger wages would be paid, because such situations required Sunday work; this he could not engage to do, and neglect his Christian duty as would be required of him.

The district has had the labors of Brn. A. H. Smith, Joseph R. Lambert, B. V. Springer, J. C. Foss, H. C. Bronson and M. T. Short, at intervals during the past two years, who have all tried to do good. There are several young brethren coming into labor in the city, who will, by and by, fill up the decimated ranks, replacing those veterans who have fallen at their posts, and those who have moved from the city into other parts. The Saints are talking of building a church as soon as the chief difficulty can be overcome—that of obtaining a suitable central site on which to build.

St. Louis is a thriving city; very great changes have occurred and improvements been made since our last visit to the city. To those Saints of the city and district whom the Editor could not stay to greet, he offers his regrets for the shortness of his stay.

Joseph the Seer said to the ministry at Kirtland, March 30th, 1836, that they should go forth "in all meekness, in sobriety, and preach Jesus Christ and him crucified; not to contend with others on account of their faith, or systems of religion, but pursue a steady course. This," said the Seer, "I delivered by way of commandment; and all who observe it not, will pull down persecution upon their heads, while those who do, shall always be filled with the Holy Ghost; this I pronounced as a prophecy, and sealed with hosanna and Amen."—Mill. Star vol. 15, p. 727.

We have observed during the past thirtyfour years that those ministers who have followed the course so clearly indicated in the foregoing have done best for the cause of Christ, while those who have gone contrary to it have lost friends both with those in and those out of the church. The ministry are called "fishers;" and they should use the sagacity, patience, and wisdom of fishermen, and do nothing to drive the fish away from the gospel "net."

They are called "shepherds," and should manifest the gentleness, faithfulness, and untiring care of the true shepherd in hunting for the "lost sheep of the house of Israel," leading them into the true fold, into "green pastures," and beside the still waters." The true minister will study and seek to emulate "the gentleness of Christ," and do nothing to unnecessarily offend, either by word or deportment. "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body."—James 3: 2.

"Whatever ye do, do all to the glory of God. Give none offense, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church or God; even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved."—Paul—1. Cor. 10: 31-33.

"No one can assist in this work, [ministry], except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope and charity, being temperate in all things."—D. C. 11:4.

"Be patient; be sober."—D. C. 5: 8.

THE Deseret News of April 14th has the following, from which it is seen the Utah Mormons have little favor to expect from the present administration:

"Secretary Arthur L. Thomas has returned to this city from this nation's capital, where he went to attend the meeting of the Utah Commissioners, held there on the 31st ult." * * * *

"The Secretary, on being questioned in relation to the interview of the Commissioners with President Cleveland, said it was necessarily limited as to time, but that the President, (whom he described as a firm, solid-looking man, with but little resemblance to the usual pictures shown of him,) during the conversation upon Utah affairs, expressed a determination to enforce the Edmunds law, with the provisions of which he manifested considerable acquaintance. On it being stated to him that there was an idea among some people in Utah that under his administration a change in affairs would take place more favorable to the "Mormons," the President answered that he knew of no reason on which to base such a hope. He also said that Hons. George Q. Cannon and John T. Caine had paid him a visit, but that he gave them no hope for any relief. The President further stated that he would give the question at issue thorough consideration, and requested the Commissioners to keep him fully informed concerning events in Utah.

"Attorney General Garland was also visited by them, and he stated that the Presitent had the "Mormon" question very much at heart. Mr. Garland gave them to understand that the course of the Federal officers here, in the prosecution of polygamists, would be strongly backed up by the Administration."

THE United States Supreme Court has affirmed the decision of the lower court in the case of Rudger B. Clawson, not long since arrested and tried upon a charge under the Edmunds Law. We clip from the St. Louis Globe Democrat for the 21st of April.

THE CLAWSON POLYGAMY CASE.

A decision was also rendered by the Supreme Court to-day in the polygamy case of Rudger Clawson against the United States, brought here by writ of error from the Supreme Court of Utah. Clawson, plaintiff in error, was indicted for polygamy at the April term of 1884 of the District Court of Utah, and after trial found guilty, and sentenced to a fine of $800 and four years' imprisonment. He appealed to the Supreme Court of the Territory, and that tribunal, having affirmed the judgment of the District Court, he brought his case here for review, upon the ground that the grand and petit juries by which he was indicted and tried were illegally constituted. The alleged illegality in the impanelling of the Grand Jury consisted in the exclusion upon challenge of persons who believe that a man had a right to have more than one undivorced wife living at the same time, and in the case of the petit jury in the drawing of jurors from an open venire after the whole annual jury list of 200 had been exhausted through the exclusion of polygamists. This Court, in a carefully prepared opinion by Justice Blatchford, decided against the plaintiff in error upon both the points raised. Section 5, of the Edmunds act, provides "that in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation, under any statute of the United States, it shall be sufficient cause of challenge to any person drawn or summoned as a juryman or talesman, that the he believes it right for a man to have more than one living and undivorced wife at the same time." This Court holds that proceedings to impanel the Grand Jury which finds indictment for one of the offenses named, under the statute of the United States, against a person not before held to answer, are part of the prosecution, and that the indictment is good, although the persons drawn and summoned as grand jurors were excluded by the Court from serving on the Grand Jury, and being challenged by the United States for the cause mentioned in the act, the challenges having been found true. With respect to the alleged illegality in the case of the petit jury, the Court holds that where, under section 4 of the act of June 23d, 1874, relating to courts and judicial officers in the Territory of Utah, the names in the jury-box of 200 jurors provided for by that section are exhausted, the jury being only partly impaneled, the District Court may issue a venire to the United States Marshal for the Territory to summon jurors from the body of the judicial district, and the jury may be completed from persons thus summoned. It is held that the record shows no error, and the judgment of the court below accordingly is affirmed.

This decision ought to convince the "two per cent" polygamous men of Utah, that when common sense occupies the Judicial Bench of the United States, it will take more than a technical objection to the enforcement of law to vitiate a well founded charge against a wrong doer in the United States Courts.

Any one of fair understanding should have forseen what the ruling of the Court would be. But we presume that the appeal was made for the purpose of testing the law in the facts attending its enforcement, as well as its validity under the Constitution. Both the validity of the law, and the facts of procedure, in one case at least, have now been tried. Will those people who claim to be lawabiding now yield to the decision of the courts. We shall see.

Correspondence.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, April 22d, 1885.

Editor Herald:-Upon my return trip from conference, I stopped at Chicago, at the earnest request of Bro. M. E. Culver, so as to meet the late cut Elijah, alias Bro Branch; but in fact, simply W. W. Styles. The position of this pretender was, that he had a message to deliver of vast importance to the human family, and that eventually he would gather the people to Palestine There was no place else. What made things appear in his favor, too, was the fact that he wore his hair very long, and combed it a little different from ordinary mortals, tucking it up under an old stove-pipe hat. He had but one eye, and consequently could not be called a Seer, and hence claimed to be a dreamer of dreams. Of course, all of this told heavily on people who are never found either watching or praying. Elijah was also very straight and circumspect in his moral ideas. He would not accept the Inspired Translation of the Scriptures, or the revelations in Doctrine and Cevenants given after 1834, for the reason assigned that Joseph Smith was in transgression after that time. This was another of Satan's old dodges. He never pretends to raise an issue upon the principles contained in the writings, and to stand or fall by the things taught; but falls to accusing and slandering others. No wonder that "he abode not in the truth" from the beginning.

It was in this case as in all others that I have probed to the bottom, too, this party knew nothing about any transgression of Joseph Smith, and in fact never saw the man. He had gulped down all of the stories. Well, I waited till the brethren should bring around this embodiment of morality; but alas! The messenger returned with the sad news that "Elijah" had again left the society of his friends. This time he had failed to pay his rent to the landlady; had failed to settle with about a score of whom he had borrowed small sums of money; and they said that he was living with two women as his wives at the same time he was talking morals to others. I give this history in a mild form in comparison with what was the general history of the affair as told me there; but hope this will be sufficient to put the Saints at least on their guard as to these self-righteous frauds who are traveling about to deceive. If the one half be true that is stated of this very alias, who has been trying to lower the character of the dead in order to build himself up so as to deceive the unguarded, he ought, to-day, to be working at a trade in Jollet prison; and yet he has deceived some by slandering Joseph Smith. When will the people learn the lesson, that a person having a message must stand or fall upon the facts connected with that; and not upon what some other person may have done, whether good or bad? "Let every tub stand upon its own bottom," is a pretty good injunction; and one that can not do it is a very sorry pattern. "He that is of God heareth God's words." But those who are pretenders only, hear the false tales and run with this kind of a message. Whatever others do, I hope the Saints will be equal to the task of making and giving a hearing upon the true issues.

For the truth.

Joseph Cook, in talking of students who did not have time to go to prayer meeting, said that when he was in college he always took time for such things. "When a student becomes unspiritual," said he, "his mind is beclouded; but when he is lifted into a high spiritual atmosphere by the influence of an hour or two of prayer, he can swoop down upon his studies like an eagle on his prey." Very few students would deny that "prayer is the highest occupation of the human soul," and yet it is a common thing to see professedly Christian students deliberately neglect the prayer-meeting where it seems to conflict with social or intellectual pursuits.

Alas for the man who refuses to accept of the guidance of the great Leader-who has never yet, it may be, taken the first earnest step on the consecrated, upward path! That man, whosoever he be, is "yet in his sins"—he is "unjust still." He knows no comfortable communion with God on earth, and has no hope of beholding his face in righteousness.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES.

APRIL 6TH TO 15TH, 1885.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 8th.

The morning prayer meeting was placed in charge of Bro. John Hawley and R. Etzenhouser

Bro. W. W. Blair preached at half-past ten o'clock, assisted by Bro. Joseph Luff.

At half-past one, after singing, "Watchman, tell us does the morning;" prayer was offered by Bro. J. Caffall. President Blair presiding, appointed Bro. W. B. Tignor and G. E. Ross as ushers and door keepers during conference.

The minutes of yesterday were read.

MINISTRY REPORTS:

The following additional reports of the ministry were read:

Elder W. H. Kelley of the Twelve, present, reports:

As a special field of labor you assigned me to Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, New York, and Pennsylvania. Have been able personally to do something in the way of defending the cause in all of these states, except New York. There is an interest to hear, and opportunities to present the word. There is work for the careful, consistent laborer all the time. He will be encouraged with the thought that he will see desirable fruits for his labors. The ministers have been too few to answer all the calls for preaching. They have done what they could, some even in making more of a sacrifice to keep in the field than justice demanded. We have labored together in harmony; and confidence and respect have been extended by all by all.

The declared intention of the church at last session of conference, to stand by her authorities sent abroad to look after the interests of the church has had a salutary effect in that inciters of party spirit and discord among the brethren, in opposition to proper authority, church rule and discipline have ceased to show themselves. It is not needed that I mention by name the laborers sent to that mission, as each will doubtless send an individual report. We need more efficient workmen, however. Much of my time during the last year has been taken up with duties aside from regular mission work. As a committee man, comparing the printed and Manuscript copies of the Book of Mormon, the months of June and July were mainly devoted to that work and preparing for it. Our report is as published in the Herald. In the fall, by request of the Presidency, I went east to the Philadelphia and Massachusetts districts. Held meetings in Phildelphia, Hornerstown, Brooklyn, Providence, Fall River; Plainville, Attleborough, Boston and on Cape Cod. There are good Saints in those places, and many are doing what they can to aid the cause. The Philadelphia District needs help the most of any. In a word, the East demands a wise able missionary. There is much resident help in Massachusetts. The conference should, in my judgment, supply the East with some efficient laborers, making it a first consideration. There has never been so opportune a time to preach in Ohio, and portions of Indiana and Michigan as now. Local laborers are doing what they can, and the Saints are in the faith and striving to honor the cause. This is the rule. They are not all dead spiritually, either. I feel well in spirit about the faith, and have been blessed in my labors. That there is a wrong somewhere that is working an injury, and militating against our progress—making some faint hearted, I believe. This should be righted. By request, Bro. E. L. Kelley accompanied me to the East. I had a premonition that he should go, and this proved correct all the way around. My traveling expenses have been necessarily heavy, as may be seen by looking at the territory passed over. This please take into account when reading up the finances.

Elder M. H. Forscutt of the High Priests, present, reports:

At the last Annual Conference I was assigned to labor in Bro. Wm. H. Kelley's field, conditionally on the Bishop being able to meet the requirements for my family. This was not arranged till July, so that I could leave home. Since then, I have labored as best I could, preaching in Kansas and Nebraska previous to my permanent engagement in the field assigned me. I preached at points in Iowa, enroute, and in Illinois. Have labored in Michigan and Pennsylvania chiefly; my labors in the latter state confined mostly in Pittsburg and vicinity. During my labors have baptized 29 into the church, and done such other work as properly fell to my calling. Am still willing to work if the Master shall so direct, and this conference so appoint.

Elder E. L. Kelley, present, reports:

During the past year my time has been constantly employed in the interest of the church as best I knew, either in duties connected with the Bishopric or general work. In part, however, these labors have already been reported, and I can not attempt a further summary now. My labors have been in Northern Ohio, Pennsylvania, St. Louis District, and the eastern states, with some little work in Michigan. Notwithstanding many discouraging things, so far as I have been able to judge, the work is upon a firmer and more sure basis than heretofore, and I am still in the firm belief that our Heavenly Father's hand is directing in the work.

A letter from Bro. D. S. Mills, to the Bishop was read.

The report of Bro. G. A. Blakeslee, Bishop of the church, was read as follows:

Herewith is respectfully submitted for your consideration my third annual report of the state of the church treasury. The net receipts for the fiscal year just ending are $14,634,90, against $74,17,87 for the preceding year, showing a net increase in the receipts of $457,503. The expenditures have been $16,355,80, as against $15,160,02 for the previous year, or an increased outlay of $1,204.07. In addition to the foregoing, the ministry has received and expended of individual contributions, so far as reported by them, moneys to the amount of $3,321.64, making the aggregate paid for the year $17,956.54, and expenses $19,677.53.

At the last General Conference it was determined by the body to supply the Australian and Tahiti Mission, which has been done at the necessary expense of near Two Thousand Dollars, and this in part accounts for the increased expenditure, as shown in the general report.

For the past year there has been a total of ninety-four ministers who have been receiving aid from the church, as against sixty-five for the preceding year, which increase in the number of laborers has also necssarily increased the demand upon the treasury. At the last session of the conference these laborers were placed in the field in the hope that by the earnest effort of the body the proper wants of the same might be met; but by reason of the closeness of the times, and more particularly the undue controversial agitation through the church organ, the increase in the receipts have not been so great as was anticipated at the last session. For this reason a number of the Elders who received appointments at the last conference have not been supplied as was proper, and just complaints have arisen by reason of this. The church should and must perform her obligations.

In supplying the Elders under these circumstances, I have endeavored at all events to look to the wants of the families of those who were called great distances from home, and placed the burden of shifting, for the time being, in part upon those more convenienced, but without any thought of unjustly injuring any thought of unjustly injuring any.

I call attention again to the increased expenditures for the year in caring for the poor, and the fact that conference has taken no action upon the recommendation to provide for the lessening this expense, as made in my report for the previous year.

It is believed that the exhibition of the financi-

It is believed that the exhibition of the financial report has been so arranged by the faithful work of Elder M. H. Forscutt, that the conference will have little trouble in the examination of the same, and I therefore submit without further summary.

G. A. BLAKESLEE, Bishop.

The Bishop's financial report was received, and referred to a committee, consisting of Brn. J. C. Crabb, H. J. Hudson and E. C. Brand.

A request having been made by one of the local papers for a synopsis of our proceedings, Bro. R. M. Elvin was requested to furnish such synopsis.

The following reports were read:

QUORUM OF THE TWELVE REPORT:

We, the members of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles, present, beg leave to report: As the First Presidency have decided, as a quorum we are unable to act, in matters wherein decisions affecting the body is concerned, by reason of there being only six of the quorum present, that all matters of appeal made to the quorum will necessarily have to await our next convening. But as it has also been decided we can act advisory upon missions, and other matters of a general nature referred to us, we hereby notify the body we are ready to act so far as possible in that direction.

A. H. Smith, Acting Sec'y.

The appeal in the case of Bro. D. H. Bays and the Galland's Grove District was presented, and a committee was appointed to consider the case and report as to what disposition shall be made of it, consisting of Brn. E.

L. Lelley, I. L. Rogers, M. T. Short, J.

C. Foss and Joseph Luff.

The following was moved by Brn. M. T. Short and J. T. Kinnaman, and tabled subject to call:

Resolved, that the true names of all contributors to our publications be attached in good faith.

It was moved by Brn. M. T. Short and G. T. Griffitth, that the name of David H. Smith be dropped from the Quorum of the Presidency of the church.

Remarks were made by Joseph Smith, E. C. Brand, M. T. Short, Joseph Luff, J. W. Gillen, and J. H. Lake, when a substitute moved by E. C. Brand, and I. N.

Roberts as follows:

That we sustain Joseph Smith as President of the High Priesthood of the church, and his two counselors.

This was ruled against, as being of so different a nature from the other, as to be out of order as a substitute. It was then moved by B. F. Durfee and D. J. Powell.

That we sustain Bro. D. H. Smith as a counselor in the First Presidency of the church, with our earnest prayers for his recovery.

This was spoken upon by Josiah Ells, W. H. Kelley, J. H. Lake, F. G. Pitt, and Columbus Scott, and then the following was moved by Joseph Luff and E. L. Kelley:

Resolved, that this conference present the case of D. H. Smith and the condition of the first quorums of the church, before the Lord in special prayer, and that information be sought from Him, through the President of the church, in relation thereto, that we may act wisely concerning the matter.

This amendment to the substitute was adopted, as also the substitute as thus ammended.

The following was moved by Brn. R. Etzenhouser and W. M. Rumel:

Whereas, some of the acts of the General Conference have at least been lost sight of for a time, and there is a possibility of transcending the rules, as enacted by the body; therefore, be it Resolved, That measures be taken for the compilation of all resolutions and acts now binding, and that all of these be numbered, and kept in schedule form from time to time, and be it fur-

Resolved, That a committe of three, of which the Church Secretary shall be one, be appointed to make such compilation, and report to this body in April, 1886.

It was taken up by sections and adopted, after which the following named were added to the committee with Bro. H. A. Stebbins, namely Brn. R. Etzenhouser and D. F. Lambert.

Brn. A. H. Smith and H. A Stebbins moved the following:

Whereas, In the usage of the church in the past a departure from the law has been made, in the selection of courts of Elders to try transgressors to the virtual exclusion of the Bishop as a common judge in Israel; Therefore be it resolved, That in all cases in the future when it is possible the Bishop or his councilors be appointed on all cases coming clearly within their jurisdiction.

It was spoken on by Brn. A. H. Smith, E. C. Brand and W. C. Cadwell, when it was moved to substitute the word "practicable" for the word "possible," which was discussed by Brn. Charles Derry, John Hawley and G. H. Hilliard, and being put to vote, this effort to amend was defeated. Then the original was spoken to by Brn. J. C. Crabb, and W. H. Kelley and a vote being taken it also was declared lost.

The following from the Pottawattamie District was presented by the delegates therefrom:

Whereas, much discussion has been had in columns of Saints' Herald on items of doctrine long entertained by the Church, and whereas, by these discussions the validity of certain doctrinal tenets in some revelations in Book of Doctrine and Covenants has been questioned, thereby calling into doubt the certainty of what we believe to be God's word; and believing that in consequence of such discussions the office of the Herald as a church organ has been abused, believing its exclusive use should be the actual reflection of the well defined tenets of faith named in "Epitome;" Therefore, be it Resolved, That we discountenance such abuse, and we hereby recommend to General Conference the taking of action relative to the general and special use of the Herald as to being a church organ.

It was moved by Brn. Joseph Smith and J. W. Chatburn that the matter be referred to the Board of Publication. This was opposed by Bro. E. L. Kelley, and then he and Bro. E. Banta moved to strike out the words "Board of Publication" and insert in the place thereof the words "a committee of five." This was approved by the conference and Brn. E. L. Kelley, C. Scott, G. T. Griffith, J. T. Kinnaman and J. W. Gillen were appointed as said committee.

Announcements were made for meetings in the morning, of the High Priests, the Seventy and the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth quorums of Elders, also that services would be held this evening both in the Saints' chapel and in the Court House.

In accordance with the above announcements Bro. James Caffall preached in the chapel, assisted by Bro. John T. Davies, and Bro. J. H. Lake spoke in the Court House, assisted by Bro. F. G. Pitt.

THURSDAY, APRIL 9TH.

At nine o'clock the Saints met for prayer, Brn. J. B. Gouldsmith and William Leeka had charge. Following it was a sermon by Bro. Hiram Rathbun. He was assisted by Bro. Henry Kemp.

At half-past one o'clock the assembly sang, "Brightest and best of the sons of the morning." Bro. M. T. Short offered prayer, and the minutes of yesterday were

MINISTRY REPORTS.

Elder Thomas Taylor, president of the English Mission writes from Birmingham, England:

I feel great pleasure in reporting to you the condition of the work in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Since we last reported we have been laboring as far as possible to spread the truth among the children of men, by the preaching of the word, and also by the press. I am thankful to say that we have been successful, quite a number have been added to the church by baptism, and new branches have been organized in the mission. We have lost some few of our fellow-laborers by emigration. We miss them, but trust that our loss may be their gain. The brethren throughout the mission, I believe, are putting forth their best efforts to further the cause; and, upon the whole, we think that the work in this country is in a very fair condition. We are not weary in well doing, and ask an interest in your prayers, that we may continue steadfast to the end. May you have a profitable time at conference, to the accomplishment of much good.

Elder 7. A. McIntosh writes from Gameron, Canada:

Another year has rolled around, and something of a report is expected from each of the Elders laboring for the Master's cause. A more full account as to my ministerial work will be found in the hands of the Fifth Quorum of Elders, which I sent some time since. I have spent my entire time in the field, and have not omitted an opportunity to preach when it was to be had. Have baptized about thirty-five, and confirmed most of them; blessed several children, and administered to the sick with good effect, and in several cases with immediate relief. On account of the extremely cold winter, have not done as much in making new openings as I could have done otherwise. Have been laid up sick for some days. The Canada Mission needs more help—those who can be in the field all the time. There is a good demand for preaching, and here there is plenty of persecution, particularly from the Methodists. Several threatening letters, with bogus names attached, have been sent to us, and masked men have made demonstrations: but no force has been used yet, and still the work is onward. As to my prospects for the future in is onward. As to my prospects for the future in regard to remaining in the field, I can not see my way clearly, as I am indebted by mortgage on my house, which falls due May 1st. I leave the matter with you, and if you can advise, or devise how to get out, let me know by appointing me again, if wisdom directs.

The following report from the Quorum of Twelve was read and received:

WHEREAS, In the present seeming crisis upon the Church, when it is the duty of every member of this quorum to be present in the councils, for the good of the whole body, and

Whereas, the members present were led to believe that this quorum was to convene for the express purpose of meeting the crisis, and such have made diligent effort to be present at considerable expense, coming from distant fields and Whereas, brethren J. W. Briggs, E. C. Briggs and Z. H. Gurley, members of this quorum have failed to meet, or report by letter to the quorum, thus virtually ignoring the members now present; and their advice should be had; and Wherereas, their thus absenting themselves from this conference is a hindrance and detriment to the quorum, and to general good of the Church; and

Whereas, no competent reasons have been assigned for thus absenting themselves; therefore,

Resolved, That we deprecate such action, and require of them acknowledgement and confession for such treatment, and that we hold them under censure until such acknowledgements are made; and further we do so report to the body.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the members of this quorum who are present, that any man who accepts appointment and ordination as a representative of the Church, is under obligations to teach, sustain, and seek to establish the faith of the Church; and no one, be he whomsoever he may be, has any right to attack the divinity of the faith, in part or as a whole, as said faith is set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants.

ALEXANDER H. SMITH, Acting Secretary of Quorum.

The case of Bro. John O. Stewart, of Texas, was presented by Bro. Heman C. Smith and referred to Brn. J. Hawley, J. W. Brackenbury and J. D. Flanders, as a committee to examine and report.

The following was moved by Brn. M. T. Short and H. R. Harder:

WHEREAS, The Voice of Warning has been revised and enlarged; and whereas, other endorsed tracts do not even bear the names of their authors; and whereas, the author of the first edition of the above named work apostatized from the faith and purity therein set forth, and said first author died by violent hands for corrupting and breaking up the family circle, by teaching polygamy; therefore, be it.

Resolved That his name be erased from all of said books on hand and for sale in the Herald Office, and that his name be withheld from all subsequent issues.

It was spoken against by Brn. E. L Kelley, E. C. Brand, E. Banta, J. A. Robinson, W. H, Kelley and A. H. Smith, and favored by Brn. M. T. Short and J. S. Patterson, and being put to vote was de-

The following from the Second Quorum of Elders was moved by Brn. W. C. Cad-well and J. C. Foss:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of the Second Quorum of Elders that it would be expedient that Elders, branches and conferences when ordaining brethren to the office of an Elder, be requested to endorse across the licenses of such Elders the words: "The holder of this license should seek to join some quorum at his earliest oppor-tunity, and present his license to be exchanged for a new one from the quorum he unites with,' or words to that effect.

This was discussed by Brn. E. C. Brand, W. H. Kelley, J. A. Robinson, E. L. Kelley, J. T. Kinnaman and W. C. Cadwell, and being put to vote it was adopted.

A resolution presented by the Third Quorum of Elders was moved by Brn. J. T. Kinnaman and D. S. Crawley. It was amended by inserting the word "some" in the place of the word "many," and as adopted reads as follows:

Inasmuch as some of the members of this church are in the habit of visiting saloons and drinking intoxicants, which habit seems to hinder the spread of the work, therefore be it

Resolved, That we as a quorum, request that it be made a test of fellowship for any member of this church who will persist in this practice.

A proposed amendment to the Book of Rules was presented, and it being ruled not to take it up at this time, it was moved by Brn. W. C. Cadwell and J. C. Foss that it be read and spread upon the minutes, and action be deferred until next conference. It was so ordered, and it was read by Secretary Cadwell, as follows:

WHEREAS, There has never been any well defind rules of procedure adopted for disposing of offenders against the law, or of adjusting difficulties that may arise in the branches, or other recognized bodies in this church; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Book of Rules be amended by striking out chapter XIII of the same, and inserting in lieu thereof the following:—

CHAP. XIII .- COURTS AND TRIALS.

Sec. 152.—Elders' Courts are courts of inquiry composed of two or more elders, or those holding offices equivalent thereto, appointed by the church, through proper officers, to sit and make suitable inquiry, hear evidence, and determine as to the truthfulness or falsity, of complaints, and the guilt or innocence of members of the church against whom those complaints may be When appointed they have the right to appoint the time when, and the place where, they shall sit to hear the case, due notice of which time and place shall be given to all persons who are expected to be present at the hearing of such case. Provided, that in fixing said time and place, care shall be taken to not purposely do injustice to either party to the case. Sec. 153.—The First Presidency, The Twelve,

High Priests, Seventies, and Elders, when traveling in missions, or in localities where no or-ganization, branch or district has been perfected; Presidents of Districts, and Presidents of Branches, branches and conferences, have power to appoint Elders' Courts, according to the nature of the complaint, the time, and the emergency of the case. Where a branch or confergency of the case. ence appoints a Court of Elders, it should be done either by vote authorizing the presiding officer to name the elders who shall compose the court, or by nomination from the members confirmed by vote. In no case whatever, should a Branch or District President appoint a court to try a case in which he is to be a party, either as complainant or defendant; or in the issue of which he is directly a party in interest. Sec. 154.—Par. 1. When the elders appointed

Sec. 154.—Par. i. to act as a court meet to try a case, or hear the matter to be submitted to them, they shall choose one of their number to act as chairman, and preside during their sittings. (The one holding the highest authority, other things being equal, has the preference; but the choice is left to the court, they to decide according to rank, fitness, qualification, &c). It is his duty to decide questions of order, the admissability of evidence, and to keep The court may also appoint some one to act as clerk, who may or may not be a member of the court, whose duty it shall be to keep a record of all the proceedings had before the court, take charge of all papers and documents presented and used in the examination of the cause heard, and return the same, with the verdict of the court, when found, to the chairman of the committee at the close of the sitting.

The Elders composing a court should take especial pains to see that the clerk keeps a full and complete record of all the proceedings, which record should be made in duplicate, one copy of which should accompany the decision to be sent to the person or body appointing said court, and one copy filed securely away by the court to be kept by them.

Sec. 155.—Par. 1. It is the duty of the court of Elders to hear patiently both the accuser and the accused; the counsel of either or both, should counsel be employed, and the testimony of the witnesses who may appear; and to strive by every lawful means to give the case a fair and just trial.
Par. 2. The functions of a Court of Elders being those of a commission of inquiry, it follows, that when they have heard the allegations and the evidence, their only duty is to decide as to the truth or falsity of the matter inquired into, the guilt or innocense of the member accused, and report the result of their inquiry to the authority appointing them. The court is not to pass the final sentence of acquittal or condemnation upon the one under trial; nor, if they find the accused to be guilty, to state definitely what shall be the to be gunty, to state dennitely what shall be the punishment inflicted; but they may recommend to acquit, to exercise mercy, or suggest what in their judgment would be adequate punishment for the colors of the co for the crime committed; and upon this suggeston or recommendation, the church may act. language of the law is: "And the Elders shall lay the case before the church, and the church shall lift up the hand against them."

Sec. 156.—Par. 1. It is permissable for members who are accused of offenses, should they so desire, to appear by counsel, or by some other member of the church, who may conduct their defense, examine the witnesses, and do other acts the same as their principal might do; but should any member so appear by counsel, but one shall be permitted to address the court, and it shall be at the option of the accused, whether to speak for themselves by counsel.

Par. 2. The same rule shall apply to Branches or Conferences as to counsel, in case of appeal. Sec. 157.—Par. 1. Courts of Elders have the right to request the attendance of the witnesses desired by either party to the suit; and all others thom they may be informed are in possession of information deemed necessary to a proper decis-ion in the matter to be heard.

Par. 2. It is not requisite to administer an oath to witnesses testifying before a Court of Elders; it is not to be supposed that a member of the church will testify falsely, either in court or out of it. Persons not members of the church are not competent witnesses to give evidence before a Court of Elders, as the court has no right to demand their attendance to testify; but by consent of both parties, such persons may be permitted to give evidence, where it is known no other proof can be offered. Matters of record, and of public notoriety, should be received in evidence, without further proof than is required in courts of law; questions of the general reputation of an individual for truthfulness or virtue should be received; records of trials and conviction for crime in the civil courts, and matters of like character, duly certified to, are to be received in evidence.

Par. 3. Any member of the church failing or refusing to attend the sitting of a Court of Elders, either as a principal or as a witness, after due notice and request, shall be held to be guilty of a breach of church discipline and fellowship, and shall be liable to be dealt with, the same as for any other act of unchristianlike conduct; unless good reasons for such absence shall be shown.

Sec. 158.—In all cases affecting the action or standing of members of the church belonging to branches, which shall appear to demand the action of the church as hereinbefore shown, charges may be prefered by any member in good standing in the church, after having exhausted the other means provided in the law for a proper under-standing and settlement of the difficulty. Such charges should be preferred in writing against the offending member to the President of the Branch, or to the Branch, in which case the said President or Branch, as the case may be, shall at once appoint a Court of Elders, as hereinbefore provided, to consider said case. In case the member offending belongs within the limits of an organized district, but is not enrolled as a member of any branch in said district, the charges shall be preferred to the President of said Dis-trict, or to the District Conference, and said President or District Conference, as the case may be, shall proceed as in case of branches

Sec. 159.—All cases relating to the action of Branches in organized Districts, from which action members may wish to appeal, shall be presented first to the District conference of the District to which the said Branch may belong; and all cases relating to the action of districts shall in like manner be presented to General Conference. All cases relating to the action of branches or members not belonging to branches not in an organized district, may by mutual consent of the parties to the controversy be referred to a committee of three, of which the missionary in charge may or may not be one, to be appointed by the missionary in charge, if there be one; but if there is no missionary in charge, or if the parties to the controversy are not agreed as to referring to said committee, then such cases shall be presented directly to the General Conference. Sec, 160.—No charge shall be preferred against a brother to be tried by an Elders' Court appointed by Branch or District authority, for an offense committed more than three years prior to the time of preferring such charge. In case of appeal, such appeal must be made by notice, in writing, to all parties interested, stating specifically action appealed from, and time and place at which said appeal shall be desired to be heard; such notice to be given in appealing from action of courts appointed by branch authority within three months from the time of the rendering of the decision in controversy, and in appealing from action of Courts appointed by district au-thority within one year from the rendering of said decision. The time governing notice of appeal from District Courts shall apply in like manner to courts appointed by missionaries in charge in cases heretofore referred to arising outside of organized districts.

Sec. 161.—Nothing in this chapter shall be construed so as to prevent any of the regularly organized quorums from proceeding to the trial of members of their respective quorums in the manner provided by the rules governing said quorums; nor the trial of difficulties in the church by judges composed of High Priests, or the Bishop and his counsellors, as provided in the law, whenever in the wisdom of the church it shall be deemed necessary for them to act.

The following was moved by Brn. G.

T. Griffiths and John C. Foss, and was adopted:

Resolved, That to-morrow be set apart and observed by us as a day of fasting, and that the morning session from nine o'clock to half-past ten, be occupied in offering special prayer con-cerning D. H. Smith and the first quorums of the church, as provided for in the resolution adopted yesterday touching this matter.

The subjoined questions were presented by the Second Quorum of Elders:

Does a member of a quorum who has been dropped from the quorum to which he has belonged retain the right to officiate in his office inde-pendently of the quorum to which he formerly belonged?

What ministry, if any, does a person possess who has been expelled from his quorum, but who is still retained in the church?

It was moved that these questions be referred to the Presidency, to be answered through the Herald. This was defeated, and it was then moved and adopted:

That the First Presidency be constituted a committee to whom the questions be referred, to be answered at this session of conference.

Motions were made favoring the following places as suitable points for the meeting of the Annual Conference on April 6th, 1886, namely: Kirtland, Ohio; Lamoni, Iowa; Plano, Illinois; Salt Lake City, Utah; and Galland's Grove, Iowa.

Kirtland was advocated by Brn. W. H. Kelley, E. L. Kelley and C. Scott. Lamoni was advocated by Brn. E. Banta, J. W. Gillen and R. M. Elvin, and Bro. J. W. Chatburn advocated Galland's Grove, each making a speech in favor of the places named. The vote was decided in favor of Lamoni by $355\frac{1}{2}$ to $164\frac{1}{2}$, and on motion Lamoni was declared as the unanimous choice of the Conference.

It was moved that we reconsider the resolution of yesterday with reference to the first quorums. Óbjection was made by E. L. Kelley.

Announcements were made for meetings of the Seventy, and of the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth quorums of Elders, also of the services this evening.

Bro. Evan A. Davies preached in the evening at the chapel, assisted by Bro. A. H. Parsons; Bro. Columbus Scott preached in the Court House, assisted by Bro. John Beaird. Both houses were filled with hearers, as was the case throughout the conference whenever the weather was propitious.

FRIDAY, APRIL 10TH.

The morning prayer meeting was placed in charge of Brn. Charles Derry and H. J. Hudson, and special prayer was offered for the first quorums of the church and for the revelation of God's will concerning them, according to the resolutions adopted yesterday and the day before.

At half-past ten Bro. H. J. Hudson addressed the Saints, assisted by Bro.

Joseph Smith.

At half-past one the business session convened and the service was opened by singing, "My faith looks up to thee," and prayer was offered by Bro. E. C. Brand. Pres. Smith in the chair. The minutes of yesterday were read by Secretary Stebbins, and it was Resolved, That the secretary be requested in giving the names of the parties speaking upon the resolution concerning expunging the name of Parley P. Pratt from the Voice of Warning, and upon all questions discussed hereafter, to record those speaking as they may appear for or against the same.

Moved by Brn. E. L. Kelley and M. H. Forscutt and adopted.

A correction was made and the minutes were approved.

The report of Elder E. C. Briggs of the Twelve was read:

Since my last report have labored in Iowa, Illinois and Michigan; did not go to Wisconsin and Minnesota as I intended to. Finances failed. I was in Chicago nearly four months. It is an interesting field. But few Saints in the city, and misunderstandings have hindered them While there took charge of the work, and asked them one and all to suspend judgment, and quietly seek the unity of the Spirit. Their desires were to see the cause prosper. We occupied a small room on Madison street on Sundays, and on Wednesday evenings social meetings at private houses. The mission ought to be vigorously prosecuted. Former difficulties came more through misunderstanding than a desire to do wrong. There are as good people in Chicago as anywhere else, and many of them are famishing for the bread of life, know not where to go for help. Have never felt more interest for any one field than Chicago. One thing that is lacking to accomplish an abundant harvest of souls is a commodious house or hall. The interest of the church demands that we shall do a vigorous work in the large cities of the United States, and Chicago is a central one. The courts and Congress are punishing the evils of the latter day apostasy, and it behooves us as the Church of Christ, to make every effort to show indeed that we are the church, and are high above the abominations charged upon Latter Day Saints, and so make our garments clean in the eyes of the whole world. This year bids fair to unravel the horrible meshes of Utah wickedness, and while the leaders of that people have done everything to disgrace the fair name of the Saints, we should make the contrast between the church and the apostates appear plain in the eyes of the nation, or we shall suffer loss. In the event of that people crumbling to pieces, as they eventually must, the true church of Christ ought to reap the benefit without any of their losses. I am not disheartened, brethren, but I am anxious to see our forces wheel into line and let each rank stand firm, with faces fixed, and with determination to gain the victory and the glory. I trust I may be able to do more church work the coming year.

QUORUM OF SEVENTY REPORT.

The following report of the Seventy was read:

"Whereas, It hath pleased God to call from our quorum, and from the church, our highly esteemed and well-beloved brother and president, Glaud Rodger: and

R. ETZENHOUSER, Pres.

Report of committee on the Bishop's report was read:

We, your committee, report that upon examination of the Bishop's books we find them correct, as set forth in his report to conference.
J. C. Crabb, E. C. Brand, committee.

The report was received and the committee discharged, with the instruction to sign their names in the books, stating that they are correct.

The committee appointed to meet the people known as Hedrickites, reported as follows:

We, your committee appointed to confer with a committee of the church known as "Hedrickites" report that we met with said committee-Elders Richard Hill, George Frisby and George Hedrick,—at the house of Bro, Stephen Maloney, and after a free interchange of views, it was agreed to arrange with the Independence branch of the church for a free, Christianlike discussion, in their Chapel in this city, in respect to questions of doctrine and church government which exists between the two societies, if found agreeable to the will and wishes of said branch.

W. W. Blark, Chairman.

STEPHEN MALONY, ISRAEL L. ROGERS.

It was moved that the committee be discharged, and the matter be referred to the Independence Branch. This was opposed by Brn. W. H. Kelley, J. C. Crabb. J. W. Brackenbury and J. A. Robinson. Then Bro. Henry Kemp asked a question, and on motion by him, Bro. W. W. Blair gave information in regard to the claims made by that organization, and on the situation between them and us. A substitute was then moved, and prevailed, that the report be received and the committee be dischar-

The committee in the case of I.O. Stewart reported, but owing to a misunderstanding by the committee, the matter was referred back to them.

The committee on the resolution submitted by the Pottawattamie District report-

The committee to which was referred the resolution presented by the Pottawattamie District conference, relative to the adoption of certain measures which shall govern in the publication of articles through the Saints' Herald, submit the following:

That in its opinion, the enforcement of iron-clad rules and arbitrary decisions by persons who were not governed in their work by broad and liberal principles of toleration, as is shown by the history of societies in the past, has had such a tendency to subvert the liberties and re-tard the progress of the race, as to make the en-actment of any set rules to be followed under all circumstances of doubtful propriety and final

2. That in our opinion there is a just and proper line to be drawn between the positions of permitting a fair hearing of the views of any and all through the church paper, and the abuse of the sacred principle of toleration and freedom adhered to by the church by using to excess the columns of the church paper, in making a series of attack upon the life of the body, or an undue effort to enforce personal views upon the people, when they are clearly in parts antagonistic to the accepted faith of the body; and that the re-sponsibility is upon the Editor and Board of Pubcation to see that this line is truly made in their discrimination, the improper exercise or abuse of such discretion, or agency, to be remedied by the selection of such persons for these positions as will fill them in wisdom and fairness to all.

3, That where radical differences of opinion occur between leading representatives of the body, the discussion of them should take place in quorum capacity, and not through the columns

4. That in our opinion in the acceptance of articles for publication through the Herald, the parties doing the same should exclude all such as make special attack upon the supposed private views and character of the dead, or that impugn motives and question the integrity of the living; there being neither sound argument nor wisdom attained by such methods.

5. The committee has not deemed it within its duty to pass judgment upon the right or abuse of the exercise of privileges in the extended controversy of the past few months, but to point out the proper steps to be taken in case the rights of the body are left unguarded in the future

E. L. KELLEY. J. T. KINNAMAN, J. W. Gillen, G. T. Griffiths.

The report was received and the committee was discharged

It was then moved that the recommends This was ations in the report be adopted:

favored by brethren Crabb, Patterson, Derry, Hudson, Scott, J. W. Chatburn, E. L. and W. H. Kelley, Gillen, A. White, and opposed by Bro. Brand. It was then moved by Brn. Forscutt and Derry to amend by adding a sixth paragraph, reading as follows:

6th. The Editor and Board of Publication shall not permit any article to appear in the Herald that is written by any member of the body as an assault upon the three standards of reference accepted by the church, known as the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Revelations contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; nor shall any assault be permitted in the columns of the Herald on the life or character of the dead, whom the church regards as honored instruments in the hands of God to accomplish His work.

This was opposed by Brn. J. R. Lambert, E. L. Kelley and W. H. Kelley, and favored by Bro. M. H. Forscutt.

Brethren W. H. and E. L. Kelley then moved as a substitute the resolution presented by the Twelve yesterday to be adopted, which reads:

Resolved that it is the sense of this body, that any man who accepts appointment and ordination as a representative of the church is under obligations to teach, sustain, and seek to establish the faith of the church; and no one, be he whosoever he may be, has any right to attack the divinity of the faith in part, or as a whole, as said faith is set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants.

The substitute was favored by Bro. E. L. Kelley, and opposed by Bro. E. C. Brand, and brethren E. L. Kelley and E. Banta moved to amend the substitute by striking out the word "quorum" and inserting instead thereof the word "body." It was so ordered, and the substitute as amended was spoken in favor of by Bro. Forscutt, and the previous question being ordered, the substitute was adopted.

Then Bro. Blair called for the reading of the whole, and suggested a further amendment, but there being no motion made, the report of the committee as amended, was put upon its passage and adopted.

Presidents Smith and Blair vacated the chair, on account of their being members of the board, and Bro. J. W. Chatburn was by vote of the body called to preside.

The following resignation was read and received:

Being assured that the interests of the Herald Office require a change in its Board of Management, I hereby, respectfully resign my membership of the Board of Publication, in order that another more suitable to the purpose may be chosen by you.
In bonds of labor and love, yours,
Joseph Smith.

It was moved that the resignation be accepted. Bro. M. T. Short favored the acceptance and Bro. W. H. Kelley opposed. Bro. J. W. Gillen asked if the regulations of the board provide that the Editor of the Herald must be a member of the board. Answered, "No."

Being put upon its passage, the motion to accept was defeated by a vote of 18 for and 55 against. Bro. Smith thereupon peremptorily resigned, and refused to serve as a member of the board, and upon a second motion to accept, he was released "with our thanks for, and our unqualified approval of his labors as a member of the boardin. The Bishop their presented the name of brother David Dancer to fill the vacancy thus made, and on his expressing his willingness to accept, the nomination of the Bishop was confirmed by the conference. Then the board, as now constituted, consisting of brethren G. A. Blakeslee, David Dancer, P. Cadwell, E. Banta and W. W. Blair, was sustained.

Presidents Smith and Blair resumed their seats, and the following was moved and adopted:

WHEREAS, The amount paid to the Elders, and expended otherwise for church purposes, by the Bishop of the Church, stands against the Elders, and the several accounts for which they were expended, and there is now no provision made to balance those accounts in the Bishop's Ledger, be it hereby

Resolved, that when Elders shall have reported labor done for the church, on account of which labor such expenditures were or shall have been made, and when their reports of labor done shall have been accepted and approved by conference, and the Bishop's report to conference shall have been audited and approved, the several accounts so presented and approved shall be balanced on his ledger by means of entries that shall cover the amounts charged, each credited entry being a statement in effect that account is closed by services rendered.

On motion of brethren J. W. Chatburn and J. W. Gillen, three o'clock to-morrow was set as the hour to consider the sustaining of the quorums of the church.

The Bishop's Agents were asked to meet the Bishop to confer with him, and appointments for meetings of the various quorums were made, also for preaching this evening, and the conference adjourned.

In the evening Bro. J. S. Patterson addressed the congregation that gathered at the Chapel, and Bro. Joseph Luff preached to another assemblage at the Court House. The former was assisted by Bro. Peter Anderson, and the latter by Bro. J. T. Kinnaman.

SATURDAY, APRIL 11TH.

The nine o'clock prayer meeting was in charge of Brn. R. Etzenhouser and Eli Clothier. The morning sermon was preached by Bro. Joseph Smith, assisted by Bro. G. E. Deuel.

At half-past one o'clock the hymn "Come thou fount of every blessing," was sung, and prayer was offered by Bro. J. W. Chatburn.

Minutes of yesterday were read, corrected and amended.

The committee in the case of W. O. Thomas and H. C. Bronson vs. St. Louis District, reported:

We, your committee, respectfully report that in our opinion the St. Louis District erred in not confirming the finding of the court of Elders appointed by that body Oct. 4th, 1884, in the case of Richard Hughes and Margaret Hughes (or Davis), and we affirm the decision of said court of Elders. Signed,

T. W. Chatburn, C. Derry, J. W. Gillen.

It was moved by Bro. B. F. Durfee that the report be adopted and the committee be discharged, which was spoken against by Bro. J. C. Crabb, who, with Bro. J. T. Kinnaman, then moved as a substitute that the report be referred back to the committee and that they be instructed to report the nature of the case. It was opposed by Brn. C. Derry, J. W. Chatburn, J. W. Gillen and E. C. Brand, and favored by Bro. J. C. Crabb. The vote being taken this motion was lost, and the original motion to receive and adopt prevailed.

The committee in the case of J. O. Stewart reported:

In the case of J. O. Stewart we report that we have examined all the evidence at hand, and in our judgment we think best to refer his case to his branch. Signed,

J. Hawley, J. D. Flanders, J. W. Brackenbury.

On motion the report was received, the recommendation was adopted and the committee was discharged.

The report of the committee in the case of D. H. Bays vs. the Galland's Grove

District:

The committee appointed to examine and report as to what action the conference should take in the appeal case of D. H. Bays vs. the Galland's

Grove District, report:

1. That while they find that notice of appeal was duly given by the appellant, yet no further action has been taken by him to perfect the appeal and make a full showing of his grievances; and we therefore recommend that it is not necessary to appoint a court for trial of the same by this body.

2. That after also carefully examining into all the matters presented to us, as contained in the proceedings of the several courts already sitting upon the case, we feel it our duty to discourage any further prosecution of the matter by way of recommendation, and further express the opinion that the true way for the matters to be rightly settled is for the original parties in the cause to come together as the law of Christ provides, and mutually become reconciled.

E. L. KELLEY, I. L. ROGERS, M. T. SHORT, J. C. FOSS, JOSEPH LUFF.

Moved to adopt and discharge the committee. Questions were asked by brethren J. W. Chatburn and C. Derry, and they were answered by brother E. L. Kelley. The adoption was opposed by brethren J. W. Chatburn and John Hawley. It was then moved by brethren T. W. Chatburn and N. Booth that all be stricken out after the word "recommendation" in the second clause. This was opposed by brethren John Pett and E. L. Kelley. It was then moved by brethren A. H. Smith and J. R. Lambert to refer this matter to the High Council of the Church. Bro. A. H. Smith spoke in favor and brethren E. L. Kelley and M. T. Short against. It was then moved by brother J. A. Robinson to substitute "Bishop's Court" for "High Council." Bro. A. H. Smith opposed and John Pett spoke in favor of the substitute.

Then the motion to so amend was adopted and the report as amended was adopted.

It was moved by brethren W. H. Kelley and J. W. Brackenbury that Joseph Smith, J. R. Lambert and E. L. Kelley be appointed as a committee to formulate a set of rules to govern in cases of trial and appeal in the church. The conference approved of it by vote.

The hour (three o'clock) having arrived for sustaining the quorums of the church, Pres. Smith and Blair vacated the chair and brother M. H. Forseutt was called to preside.

It was resolved that we sustain the Church officials individually and by a rising vote

On separate motions brother Joseph Smith was sustained as President of the Church and Bro. W. W. Blair as his Coun-

It was then moved to sustain brother D. H. Smith as Counselor to the President. Bro. J. S. Patterson asked if any communication had been received in answer to the prayers offered on the subject. President Smith replied: "The voice of the Spirit is that David H. Smith be released. He is in mine hand." It was so moved and adopted.

The sustaining of the Quorum of the Twelve being next in order, brother E. L. Kelley asked if any information had been received concerning said quorum. Pres. Smith answered, "The voice of the Spirit is that E. C. Briggs be sustained for the present. J. W. Briggs and Z. H. Gurley are in your hands, to approve or disapprove, as wisdom may direct. Be merciful, for to him that is merciful shall mercy be shown."

Bro. E. C. Briggs was sustained, only one opposing vote.

On separate motions the following members of the Quorum of Twelve were sustained unanimously: Josiah Ells, J. H. Lake, W. H. Kelley, James Caffall, J. R. Lambert, A. H. Smith and T. W. Smith.

On motion to sustain J. W. Briggs, the reading of the report of the Twelve presented by them on the 9th was called for, and the motion to sustain was favored by brethren E. L. Kelley and J. H. Lake, and explanatory remarks were made by brethren Joseph Smith and W. H. Kelley. Motion to sustain was opposed by brethren M. T. Short, A. H. Smith, E. C. Brand, F. C. Warnky, H. A. Stebbins, C. Scott, J. T. Kinnaman and J. Hawley, and during the discussion the report of Bro, J. W. Briggs was called for and read. The previous question being called for, the motion to sustain was defeated by a vote of 44 to 40. Before the vote was announced Bro. E. L. Kelley called for the yeas and nays, which was decided by the chair as out of order, the conference having ordered sustaining by a standing vote. The decision was appealed from, but the chair was sustained by a vote of 66 to 36, after the subject of right in the case had been discussed.

Pres. Smith here took the chair, and on request, Bro. E. L. Kelley's request for the yeas and nays being also denied by him, a rising vote was again taken, resulting in 46 to sustain Bro. Jason W. Briggs and 53 against.

It was moved to sustain Bro. Z. H. Gurley, and the result was 9 in favor and about 60 against.

Bro. E. C. Brand inquired if any information had been received regarding the Seventy, and Pres. Smith replied: "The voice of the Spirit in relation to the Seventy is that those who are present of that quorum shall choose from among their number the seven presidents provided for in the law, the members of the presidency now of that quorum to be included among the seven." The question was asked as to what should be done if either of those now living were under censure, or not sustained by the quorum. The president replied that then they should be released.

It was announced that the subject of sustaining would be continued on Monday. Meetings of quorums were announced, also services for this evening and to-morrow, and after singing "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet," the benediction was pronounced by Pres. Smith.

Bro. E. C. Brand preached in the even-

Bro. E. C. Brand preached in the evening at the Chapel, assisted by Bro. Heman C. Smith, and Bro. W. H. Kelley addressed the assemblage at the Court House, assisted by Bro. G. T. Griffiths.

SUNDAY, APRIL 12TH.

In the morning three persons were baptized by Bro. Robt. M. Elvin, Bro. F. G. Pitt having charge of the services at the water's side.

At eleven o'clock, at Wilson's Opera Hall, President Joseph Smith preached the morning discourse, assisted by Bro. M. H. Forscutt. As the house was so crowded, it was announced that services would also be held at the Saints' Chapel in the evening, in order to accommodate all who wished to hear.

At half-past two, at the Chapel, the sacrament was administered by the branch officers, brethren F. G. Pitt and R. May, and the time was spent in bearing testimony. The spiritual gifts were enjoyed, and the Spirit of God gladdened every heart present. The three previously baptized were confirmed by brethren J. H. Lake, R. M. Elvin and F. G. Pitt.

In the evening President Smith again preached in the Opera House, assisted by brother J. H. Lake. The sermon at the Chapel was by Bro. J. R. Lambert, assisted by Bro. E. L. Kelley. Both places were filled, in fact crowded, with earnest listeners.

MONDAY, APRIL 13TH.

Brethren J. A. Robinson and R. C. Elvin had charge of the morning prayer meeting. It was followed by a sermon from brother E. L. Kelley, who was assisted by brother G. H. Hilliard.

At half-past one, sang, "All hail the power of Jesus' name." Prayer by brother E. Robinson. The minutes of the sessions of Saturday and Sunday were read. President Blair in the chair.

President Smith suggested that the committee appointed in April, 1884, to compare the Book of Mormon with the manuscript be discharged, their work having been done and reported through the Herald. On motion the report as published was received, adopted, and the committee was discharged. Inquiry as to the expense incurred was answered by the Bishop and the two of the committee present, who together showed that all expenses had been paid by the Bishop.

The committee on repairing the Kirtland Temple reported no work done the past year, on account of circumstances. It was then moved and adopted that the Bishop be requested to make out a state.

ment of the sources from which moneys were received for reparing the Temple since his last report of the same, and the committee on repairs was continued. In answer to questions it was stated that it was intended that the work go on, and it was expected that the cost of finishing the repairs would be about $3,000, of which there are now $600 on hand. It is not thought best to continue the repairs till they can be completed.

The regular order was taken up, namely, the sustaining of the quorums and officers of the church.

Brn. G. A. Blakeslee, E. L. Kelley and E. Banta were sustained as the Bishopric of the Church.

The motion of Saturday to sustain each man singly was rescinded, and it was decided to read the names of the High Priests and of the Seventy, and if any objection shall be made to any they can be considered separately, but those not objected to in each quorum shall be sustained as a body.

Secretary Stebbins read the names of the forty-four High Priests, as found in their report to this conference, and, no objection being made to any, the quorum was sustained.

The thirty-two names presented by the Seventy, as sustained by them and named in their report to this conference, found elsewhere, were read by the Seventy, and, no objections being made, those presented were sustained as a body.

Following this the five quorums of Elders now organized were sustained as quorums; also the quorum of Priests now organized was sustained. Following this, it was Resolved, that we request the Bishop to organize a quorum of Teachers and a quorum of Deacons, also another quorum of Priests.

On separate motions Bro. Henry A. Stebbins was sustained as Secretary and Recorder of the Church, and Bro. John Scott as Church Librarian.

It was then moved that we sustain Bro. J. W. Briggs as Church Historian. Bro. M. T. Short opposed this, and brother J. W. Chatburn moved that the motion to sustain be laid on the table till next conference. Brn. J. W. Chatburn and J. C. Crabb favored this, and brethren E. L. and W. H. Kelley opposed it. Bro. H. C. Smith asked a question, and the chair decided that if the motion to lay on the table prevailed it will leave the matter in Statu quo, the same as if the question to sustain had not come up. The motion to lay on the table was put to vote and declared lost, and the motion to sustain was adopted.

A communication from brother Alfred Munns was read:

I have purchased thirty-two acres of land, laying south of the Missouri Pacific Depot, and have got it all layed off in lots ready for market, for which I paid and am to pay nine thousand dollars. The balance due is five thousand six hundred sixty-five dollars, with interest on the same, and has been at eight per cent interest since August 20th, 1884. I propose to let one man, or more, pay moneys and take an undivided interest and form ourselves into a company to do business. I lay it before the conference to have them set a price on the same.

On motion, it was referred to the Presidency, the Bishopric and Twelve.

The chairman of the committee appointed to examine the books of the Church Secretary and Recorder reported that they had not been able to meet together at Lamoni, one in Michigan and one in Ohio, and the committee being so separated he desires to be released.

Bro. E. C. Brand moved the following: Whereas, This body requested that the Concordance be bound with future editions of the Doctrine and Covenants, and as this has not been observed; therefore be it Resolved, That the attention of the Board of Publication be called to this omission.

Secretary Stebbins read the resolution adopted on April 12th, 1880, as referred to above, and the foregoing preamble and resolution was adopted.

In answer to a question about the music book, Pres. Smith replied as follows:

There are two hundred and five of the tunes for Saints' Harmony, in manuscript form, now in the possession of the Board of Publication, ready for the procuring of plates. R. R. Meredith & Son, publishers of Chicago, was visited, and an offer secured to put into plates, at $2,50 and $4,50 per page. Owing to want of funds to appropriate to this use, no plates have been procured. It was proposed that plates for twenty to twentive pages should be obtained at a time, and proofs be printed and issued to choirs and others who may wish them for use until the whole can be published.

A resolution regarding two branches at Stewartsville, each called the Stewartsville Branch, was referred to Brn. J. C. Crabb, Wm. Leeka and H. L. Holt, as a committee.

The following concerning the Church Library was offered:

WHEREAS, There are books in the Church Library which are rare, and valuable to the office of Publication; and Whereas, said books are becoming worn and defaced by handling; and Whereas, it is important that said books be preserved and kept in the office of publication for the use of those who control the literary concerns of the church; Therefore, be it of the church; Therefore, be it Resolved, That the Editor be and is hereby instructed to select and control such books as he nay choose.

It was amended by including the Church Librarian with the Editor to carry out the resolution.

Elder M. R. Scott's report, written at Canaan, Indiana, was read:

Since my reappointment by you I have labored to the best of my ability. By the sickness and death of my wife I was hindered for some time. I have labored at different points in Floyd, Ripley and Jefferson counties. There is among the people an increasing desire to hear, and judging from the increased attendance the interest was never greater than now. I have administered to some sick with good results; blessed some children, and baptized two persons. I sowed the seed in some new fields, and the harvest will come by and by. We see a demand for more laborers. I thank God for the blessings of his spirit in presenting the word of truth. I never enjoyed it to such an extent in all my life as I have in the last few months. Should it be wisdom to sustain me in the ministry I will do the best I can. May peace and harmony prevail in your conference.

Elder E. Delong reports from Reese, Michigan:

I have labored in Tuscola, Iosco and Lapeer counties; have baptized seven, and in most places there is a desire to hear more of the Gospel. Michigan is a fine field, and seems white for harvest. Hope the conference will send two or more Elders to labor in Northern Michigan. wish to be released from further appointment at present, but will do what local preaching I can and provide for the needs of my family

On motion of brother Joseph Smith, the suggestions of brother J. W. Briggs, contained in his letter read on the 7th, were ordered to be upon the minutes.

The chair ruled that no new business will be received after this session

The following was moved by brethren Crabb and W. C. Cadwell:

Resolved, That the report and resolutions of the Quorum of the Twelve, as printed on pages 285 and 286 of the Herald for 1884, General Conference proceedings, and as acted upon as shown on page 299, be and the same are hereby repealed.

Brethren Joseph Smith and C. Derry moved that the resolution be received, and action thereon be deferred till next Annual Conference, and be made the special order for the third day of the session.

The resolution concerning names of contributors being attached to articles which was presented and tabled on the 8th instant was taken up and favored by brethren Morris T. Short, William B. Tignor, J. T. Kinnaman, E. C. Brand, Thomas W. Chatburn and Heman C. Smith, and opposed by Bro. John Patterson. Being put upon its passage it prevailed, by a vote of 40 to 26. Then the following was moved by Joseph Luff:

Resolved, That it is not necessary to publish the names of contributors to articles in the Herald, unless requested by the writers.

This was spoken in favor of by brethren Joseph Luff, William H. Kelley, Jonas W. Chatburn, E. C. Brand, Henry Kemp and J. A. Robinson, and opposed by breth-ren M. T. Short and J. T. Kinnaman, after which it was adopted.

The names of those chosen by the Fourth Quorum of Elders as president and counselors of said quorum were read, and their ordination was ordered.

The subject of the ordination of brother John McKenzie was referred to the First Presidency. They reported favorably, and his ordination was also ordered.

Bro. J. Brackenbury said that he had some books, the former property of the late Wm. E. McLellin, and if among them there were any that would be valuable to the Church they could have them. A vote of thanks was given to Bro. Brackenbury, and brother Joseph Smith was appointed to examine said books and make selections therefrom

Bro. J. W. Gillen called for the report of the Seventy received on the 10th, in relation to the Apostles and Seventy being first sent out as missionaries before other quorums are sent.

In connection therewith Secretary Stebbins read the action of the conference, September 16th, 1880, endorsing the resolutions presented by the Quorum of High Priests at that time.

It was moved that the resolution of the Seventy be adopted as the sense of this body. Brn. Luff and Brand favored it. Bro. W. H. Kelley favored in general, but thought there was a misunderstanding in part. Bro. Joseph Smith thought there was no need to re-enact, as the body in September, 1880, had declared the will of the church on the subject.

Pending the discussion the motion to adjourn was made, and after announcing various quorum and committee meetings the conference adjourned.

The evening sermon was by brother Heman C. Smith, assisted by brother R. M. Elvin.

Following the afternoon adjournment, Brn. W. H. Kelley and E. C. Brand officiated in ordaining Bro. J. D. Flanders as president of the Fourth Quorum of Elders, and Brn. D. E. Powell and J. T. Williams as his counselors; also brother John Mc-Kenzie as an Elder. Bro. Brand was spokesman in ordaining brethren Flanders and Williams, and brother Kelley in the case of brethren Powell and McKenzie.

TUESDAY, APRIL 14TH.

The prayer meeting at nine o'clock was in charge of brethren G. E. Deuel and J. A. Robinson. The morning sermon was delivered by Pres. Joseph Smith. He was assisted by brother John Hawley.

At half-past one o'clock the assembly sang, "Mid scenes of confusion and creature complaints." Prayer was offered by Bishop G. A. Blakeslee. The minutes of yesterday were read.

The consideration of the resolution contained in the report of the Seventy that was pending at adjourment yesterday was taken up. Brn. J. C. Crabb and E. L. Kelley opposed to the adoption of the Seventy's resolution reaffirming the action of the General Conference of September 16th, 1880. Bro. J. W. Gillen favored it, and brother A. H. Smith made some explanatory remarks. The motion to adopt was then put before the house and lost by a vote of 20 for to 37 against.

We are deeply impressed with the conviction that our brother had so lived that he has now gone to his rest, to await the distribution of rewards promised the faithful; and that we, his brethren of the High Priests' Quorum, may be worthy to meet him and his family in the kingdom of the redeemed, is our earnest prayer.

ALEXANDER H. SMITH, Acting Secretary of Quorum.

The items were read separately, and after the following amendments were made, the report was accepted as amended.

On coming to the consideration of the mission field of Bro. E. C. Briggs, President Smith presented the following as being the mind and will of the Lord:

"It is my will that my servants shall contend no longer one with an other in regard to the Chicago Branch. Let that branch be instructed to report to the conference of my Saints of the district where the branch is located, the Northern Illinois District. My servants, the Elders when passing to and from should labor in the city when time and opportunity permit, that my people there may be strengthened and encouraged. And this should be agreeably to the Elders in charge of the branch and the district, who should ever be willing to aid such ministration; and this should be without jealousy on either

Bro. E. C. Brand moved to amend the report by striking out the words, "and Chicago Mission," which was done.
On reading the recommendation concerning Bro. Luff, he objected to his appointment to St. Joseph. Bro. W. H. Kelley favored it, and Bro. Forscutt made an explanation. Bro. Luff then moved that his name be stricken out, which was adopted. It was then moved by brethren J. A. Robinson and Short, that brother Luff be assigned to the Utah Mission, should he find himself able to go. It was favored by brethren Short and Brand, then a substitute was moved by brother Banta: That when he finds that his circumstances permit him to go, that he so report to the First Presidency; and that, thereupon, he be sent, if thought wisdom. This was adopted.

It was moved that we do not approve of that part of the report wherein request is made as to the reasons why the conference did not sustain brethren Briggs and Gurley. A substitute was moved, that a committee of five be appointed to draft reasons and present to this conference. It was then moved to amend by providing that the committee shall report at the next conference, instead of at this. This was debated and the motion to amend being put to vote was declared lost, as also was the substitute. Then the original motion of disapproval prevailed by a vote of 31

Bro. J. S. Patterson objected to the appointment made for him, and asked to be returned to his former field, according to the petitions sent in. It was moved to strike out "Canada Mission" and insert "present field." This was defeated by a vote of 26 for and 29 against. Bro. Patterson said that his circumstances were such that he could not accept the appointment to Canada. It was then moved and carried that the name of brother Patterson be stricken from the list of General Conference appointments. The report as amended was adopted.

Bro. E. L. Kelley asked a question as to the appointment of the Bishopric to travel, and a motion was adopted that the law fully provided as to that, and they were instructed to so travel.

Brn. M. H. Forscutt, Joseph Smith and others, spoke concerning the appointment of a mission to Holland

On motion of brother J. C. Crabb it was Resolved, That the Chicago Branch be instructed to hereafter report to the Northern Illinois

The question being asked as to who had the right to reorganize the branch, whether the one in charge of the mission or the authorities of the district, President Smith stated as a special and general decision that the Chicago Branch is under the supervision and control of the Northern Illinois District, as are all other branches in the district.

A communication from Mr. Cornell Crysler was read:

Brn. George W. Beebe and Chas. H. Porter, were installed as members of the Quorum. The resolution offered by the Quorum of the Twelve, respecting the obligation of the ministers of the church to teach, sustain, and help to establish the faith of the church, and no one be he whomsoever he may be, has any right to attack the divinity of the faith, in part or as a whole, as said faith is set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, was adopted as the sense of this Quorum.

It was ordered that hereafter, all members of the quorum furnish his report in writing. officers of the quorum as now constituted were continued. A contribution of ten cents from each member was requested to defray necessary expenses as to records. The President then gave the quorum timely advice and encouragement as to future work, after which adjourned

We have held four meetings; elected J. D. Flanders as president protem., and J. T. Williams secretary pro tem. The following was adopted: Whereas, the Fourth Quorum of Elders since its first organization has been in a bad condition and we see the necessity and propriety of setting ourselves in a better working order; therefore, Resolved, that not because of default of moral

FIRST QUORUM OF PRIESTS:

Report of First Quorum of Priests read as follows:

In accordance with the appointment of the Bishop, the First Quorum of Priests met and transacted the following business: Charles H. Derry, George M. Jemison, H. R. Harder, Geo. E. Ross, Henry Scarcliff, Roderick May, Thomas Hatty and William Pooler, were enrolled in the quorum. Bro. J. B. Gouldsmith was chosen President and recommended for ordination, with H. R. Harder and Robert White as his counselors.

E. L. Kelley, Chairman,
H. R. HARDER, Sec. pro tem.

The recommendations were endorsed, and the ordinations ordered.

Letter from William B. Smith was read by the secretary:

ELKADER, Iowa, April 5th, 1885 It is to be hoped that the General Conference at this session will pass resolutions advising the Elders not to hold debates on the Book of Mormon with men who are confirmed liars, and who manufacture falsehood as a means of argument in debate. It is also further to be hoped that the conference by a decisive action will determine what is law in the books, (viz, Book of Mormon, Bible and Book of Doctrine and Covenants) for the government of the church and its Ministers, also that all teachings and doctrines found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants (should there be any) that does not accord with the true spirit and principles of the Gospel of Christ should, and of right, ought to be expunged therefrom by act of the conference. Also your petitioner asks that this report and petition be read before the General Conferance and be placed upon the minutes for publication and record.

I wish it distinctly understood and to have my name so recorded that I endorse the books and stand by the doctrines revealed in the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants.

WILLIAM B. SMITH.

The following was moved by brethren Luff and Etzenhouser, and adopted:

Resolved, That the Bishop, and such others as he may associate with him, be constituted a committee on rail road rates to the conference at Lamoni, in April, 1886.

Adjourned to meet at nine o'clock tomorrow.

At the house of brother J. C. Foss, after adjournment, brethren Patterson, Davies, Gillen, Smith and Scott, were ordained presidents of Seventy; E. L. Kelley was ordained counselor in the First Quorum of Elders; and J. B. Gouldsmith was ordained president, and H. R. Harder counselor to the First Quorum of Priests. Brethren Lake, Caffall and Brand, officiating. Bro. Lake being spokesman in ordaining brethren Patterson, Smith, and Gouldsmith; brother Caffall in ordaining brethren Davies, Scott, and Harder; and brother Brand in ordaining brethren Gillen and Kelley.

In the evening the congregation was addressed by brethren Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair and G. A. Blakeslee.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 15th.

At nine o'clock the conference assembled to do the last items of business before final adjournment. The hymn, "Come thou fount of every blessing" was sung, and prayer was offered by David Judah. Minutes of yesterday were read and corrected.

Committee on names of Stewartsville Branch reported:

branch reported.

We, your committee to whom was referred the matter pertaining to the names of branches in and near Stewartsville, Missouri, would beg leave to report:

First, that the branch organized near Stewartsville, being the first branch organized, has a right to retain its original name, which is the Stewartsville Branch, until such time as they may see fit to change it

Second, that as it appears in evidence that the branch last organized, which is in the city of Stewartsville, is known on the District record as the Stewartsville City Branch, said name being sufficient to distinguish the one from the other, we deem it best, to let the matter rest, for the present.

WM. LEEKA,

J. C. Crabb. Hiram Holt.

Its adoption was moved, then the following substitute was offered:

Resolved, That the matter of the names of the two branches at and near Stewartsville, Missouri, be referred to the missionary in charge, and the District Conference, with the direction that the name of the Stewartsville Branch, be changed on the record, and be called the Zion, Olive, or other name that they may choose, other than Stewartsville; and that the properties, plate, goblets, &c., remain the property of the said Stewartsville Branch, and not to the Stewartsville City Branch, the latter to retain its name.

This being put to vote, was adopted.
The following was moved by brethren
Kinnaman and Gillen:

Resolved, That the further continuation of the work on the Church History now in progress under the watch-care of Jason W. Briggs, Church Historian, be left to the Bishopric to continue or suspend at their option.

It was asked if this was not really new business, and the chair replied that it might be so considered. It was then moved to suspend the rule for the admission of this one motion. Being put to vote, the motion to suspend was declared lost. On motion to reconsider the appointment of brother I. N. Roberts, his field of labor was changed from Kansas to South-Western Mission.

The First Presidency asked for further time to reply concerning brethren J. W. Briggs and Z. H. Gurley. The request was granted, and they were asked to answer through the Herald.

From the following missions and districts no statistical reports were received at this conference, namely, The Australian, English and Danish Missions; the London (Canada), Alabama, Northern California, Southern California, Central Florida, Idaho, Kewanee, California, Northern Illinois, Pittsfield, Nauvoo and String Prairie, Southern Indiana, Eastern Iowa, Central Kansas, Northwestern Kansas, Spring River, Southern Michigan, Central Mo., Far West, Nodaway, Nor-thern Nebraska, Nevada, Southeastern Ohio, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Wyoming Valley, Central Texas, Utah, Montana, and Western Wisconsin Districts. The attention of their officers is called to the requirements of the past General Conferences, that missions and districts should report annually to General Conference.

Thanks were voted to the committee of arrangements, and to the Saints and citizens for their kind hospitality; also to the chorister and choir, and to the janitors and ushers; also to the reporters of the Kansas City daily papers for their fair and just reports of the proceedings, and to the Times and the Fournal of Kansas City, and to the Sentinel, and the Progress of Independence, for publishing the same; also to the railroads which gave us special return rates from conference.

Pres. Smith said that it was thought by some that the time of holding the Reunion (October 17th) was too late in the season and he had been asked if the General Conference could change the time, to which he replied that it could not, the conference having no jurisdiction over the Reunion. If any change is made it must be by those who have charge over the affair.

On motion the conference adjourned to meet at Lamoni, Iowa, April 6th, 1886. Pres. Blair pronounced the final benediction.

Thus closed one of the most memorable and pleasant conferences ever held by the Reorganized Church. The Saints separated with feelings of confidence that God has not forgotten his people and assured that greater good lies before those who shall continue faithful till the greater blessings come.

JOSEPH SMITH, President,
W. W. BLAIR, Associate President.
H. A. STEBBINS, Secretary,
W. C. CADWELL, Assistant Secretary.

THE Covina California, Independent of the 11th inst., notes the following:

"Elders J. R. Badham and A. W. Thompson of the 'Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," were in town on last Sunday and preached at Griswold's hall. They organized a branch of the church, consisting of fifteen members, with Wm. Pickering presiding officer."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Editorial in HERALD for May 2d, needs a "not," placed in it "where it will do the most good." Please read "and the idea that the church had not spoken," instead of "and the idea that the church had spoken," &c.; near bottom of page 285. The Elders present as a mass believed that the church had spoken with sufficient clearness to be understood, without compromising the honor and dignity of the body, or endangering the liberty of the members.

Bro. H. J. Hudson of Columbus, Nebraska, sends us The Christian Hour, published at Omaha, Nebraska, in which we find a fair article from the pen of Rev. J. H. Miller, which contains the outlines of the "Epitome" as published in the Kansas City Times of late. It is gratifying to have our faith fairly and extensively published.

Lamoni is said to be improving far more rapidly and substantially than any of the towns of like size, lying within one hundred miles of it. It has a fine stock, dairy, and grain country around it, and it bids fair to continue to improve. Capital and well directed industry will make it improve.

Elder J. R. Badham writes to say: "I omitted the names of Bro. and Sr. A. B. and H. L. Wise, in list of donations by San Bernardino, California Branch. Please credit Bro. Wise with $4.60, and Sr. Wise with $2.00. This amount should be added to account of Bro. D. S. Mills. See Herald, April 18th, 1885.

Bro. R. R. Gaither writes us from Wellington, Kansas, that he can not now read the Herald nor Bible, and asks the prayers of the Saints, that this affliction may be removed.

Bro. William Sparling, Pembroke, Dakota, asks to know the street and number where the Branch in Leeds, England, holds its services. He says: "I am a native of that place, and have a father, mother, and six brothers and sisters there, to whom I have communicated some knowledge of this work by letter, but would like them to be further instructed."

Sister Nancy I. Fuller writes from Phænix, Yazoo county, Mississippi, that the friends there are trying to raise means to send an Elder to Jackson, Louisiana, and to Yazoo county, Mississippi. She says, "We can raise ten dollars now for one that will accept the call and come and preach in Jackson, Louisiana. We have connection there, and an Elder could find a place to stop with William or James M. Fuller." If Bro. Heman C. Smith can provide for this call it will be well. Any one going, should write and get full directions how to reach those localities.

Elder Columbus Scott, of Galien, Michigan, now visiting relatives and friends here, preached at the "Old Church" Sunday the 26th ult, at 11 a.m., and in the Brick Chapel in town at night, to large and attentive congregations. His sermons were excellent. May heaven continue to favor him and make him successful in persuading souls to accept and follow the Good Shepherd. A field of marvelous opportunities lies before him and many others. Conquest and triumph await their wise and patient efforts. Elder Scott preached on Tuesday evening, April 28th, at the chapel in town.

The Saints and other citizens at Independence are having a rainy time, which beginning soon after Conference closed, continued to the 25th, the day the Senior left the city, and has stopped all work in land, gardens, or farms. They complain some, but to those who are over anxious to leave their present places for that region, it may serve as a reminder that that country, as well as others, has its changes. It rained heavily the night of the 25th. The branch at Independence, numbers over four hundred at present. Bro. Thomas W. Chatburn is fitting up a four roller flouring mill at the foot of Liberty street, south of the square, which he hopes to get in operation about May 15th. Brn. J. W. Brackenbury, F. C. Warnky and S. C. Mayo, are engaged in the real estate business at Independence, each having lands and town lots for sale and to rent. Bro. Stephen Maloney also has a number of lots in the South Addition for sale. Lands and town property are both comparatively high in price, anywhere within twentyfive miles of Independence and Kansas City.

Bro. A. Walter Head has removed with his family from Creston, Union county, Iowa, to Stewartsville, KeKalb county, Missouri.

Letter from Bro. J. M. Tousley, Chester, Illinois, April 22, who states that the little flock down there are still in the faith.

Bro. Alfred Munn has bought a tract of thirty-two acres of land near the Missouri Pacific station, at Independence Missouri, in the sale of which in town lots, suitable in size and price, he wishes a partner, or more than one. He wishes one who has some ready means, and is willing to do the best he can for the good of all.

Bro. Wheeler Baldwin now in his ninety-third year, is living at Stewartsville, Missouri, staunch and true to the faith received by him fifty-four years ago. So writes Bro. A. W. Head.

Sr. Emma Newham, of Brown county, Illinois, ill of lung complaint, desires that the Saints pray for her recovery.

Sr. Nancy Fuller writes from Phonix, Yazoo county, that there is an effort being made to raise money to defray the expenses of an Elder to come there and labor, and in Jackson Parish, Louisiana. Ten dollars are already in hand. Can not Bro. Montague take it en route for his field, and labor there.

Wanted.—The whereabouts of sister Wilhelmina Bellamy, member of the Alliston, Ontario branch. Is she still in fellowship with the church? Address, T. W. Mooney, Alliston, Ont.

B. V. Springer's permanent address is Lucas, Lucas Co., Iowa.

Bro. Chester, Minnesota, in a late letter decides that coffee drinking is not a very great "abomination," thinks the matter should give place to those of greater importance.

The address of Elder Hiram L. Holt for the present, is Sioux City, Iowa. The friends in Northern Iowa, Minnesota, and Dakota, he requests to write him, as he is appointed to labor in those regions.

We thank Bro. William Street and others for papers sent us.

Letters are received from Sr. E. Ray, Des Moines, Iowa, April 25th, 1885; J. S. Walker, Jonesport, Maine, March 25; J. T. Dhester, April; Sister Sarah Griffin, Braidwood, Illinois, April 19th; George W. Melvin, Watson Post Office, Monroe county, Alabama; W. R. Calhoon, Cortland, Illinois, April 18th; John David, Sparta, Wisconsin, April 11th; Bro. J. A. Hinkle, Pleasanton, Iowa, April 8th; Louis Strack, Cortland, Illinois, April; A. W. Head, S'ewartsville, Missouri, April 23d; G. S. Yerrington, East Providence, Rhode Island, April 14th.

This note in respect to brother Rogers and our late conference is from the Sandwich, Illinois, Gazette:

"I L. Rogers, who has been absent several weeks returned home Tuesday. He has been at Randalia and Lamoni, Iowa, and also attended the Latter Day Saints Annual Conference at Independence, Missouri. The conference was the largest and most successful of any yet held. The utmost harmony prevailed and reports from all quarters were encouraging."

Thanks for the kind words. Editor Robertson knows something of the faith and works of the Church in and about Sandwich, and he has the good sense and manliness to commend the right whenever and wherever he sees it.

WE suspect that the telegram below, like this same John Taylor's denial of polygamy at Boulogne, France, in 1850, is not reliable; but we give it at its face value, and await further information:

"SALT LAKE, Utah, April 23.—President John Taylor of the Mormon Church, being asked his views of the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Clawson polygamy case, said he considered that the decision ended the controversy and should be respected by every good, loyal citizen."

If John Taylor said what is here reported, and is sincere in it, then there is some prospect that the Utah leaders intend to "back down and out" of their peculiar methods of saving and exalting, and put up with the poor ways(?) of Adam, Noah, Isaac, the early Christians, the Jaredites, Nephites, and the Latter Day Saints prior to 1844, and stand their chance of passing through "the gates of the city" with only one wife. We shall see.

THE following is from the Chicago Tribune, April 25th, past, dated Salt Lake City, April 24th:

"Bishop Hiram B. Clawson was arrested to-day on a Commissioner's warrant charging him with unlawful cohabitation. His bond was fixed at $1,500, and an examination was postponed until to-morrow."

Verily, the bolts of the Nation's wrath are falling very near the "throne." Bishop Clawson (who by the way is very much of a gentleman, aside from polygamy and its concomitants) was one of the late Brigham Young's sons-in-law. His interests have been closely identified with the Utah Mormon Church from its organization after the death of Joseph the Seer until now, he having occupied in it various positions of trust and emolument. It is sad to think that now, when his days should be restful and golden, the rod of the Nation is drawn to smite him and consign him to shame and dishonor. President Joseph Smith and he were schoolfellows in Nauvoo; but their life work has been very different. The former waited in "the beautiful city" in comparative pove erty, till the Lord should "arise and have mercy upon Zion;" while the latter was a chief favorite of Brigham Young. The latter has spent his life in building up a system which God, in the standard works of the church, declares a "crime;" while the former, by deed and word, has opposed the iniquity in all his walks in life. Joseph, the son of the Seer, stands by the word of God found in the law given the church, is "pleading the cause of injured innocence" as predicted by his father, is beloved by his fellow Saints, respected by his neighbors, and has the confidence of the Nation. The days of recompense are come.

Mr. Clawson, when arraigned for trial, stated that no witnesses need be examined as he "plead guilty" to the charges as made, and awaited the clemency of the Court; that he would not run, nor would he suffer any of his family to run.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS IN HOPE.

We call attention to the efforts made in furnishing the Hope with Sunday School lessons, and would suggest that close attention be paid to them by Sunday Schools and the readers of the Hope alike. This work is in the hands of thoroughly competent parties, those who will spare no proper effort to make that branch of our church work both interesting and profitable.

We discover a nice sense of propriety in the selection of texts, skill in their arrangement, and a high degree of capability in their treatment. They can not fail to bless those who study them, and we bespeak for them a hearty welcome by all the Saints, and the friends of the HOPE.

W. W. B.

THE Descret News of the 14th, inst., contained an article in which is a sermon from George Q. Cannon, from which we clip the following in which it is seen the Mormons are urged to stand by their peculiar and offensive doctrines, let come what will. Mr. Cannon thinks there will be "fun" should a mob interfere with them. The elder should "forbear threatening," and do nothing to provoke such things. The near future will reveal the impotence of Mr. Cannon and his fellows in resisting our nation's laws.

"The question is, will you abandon your religion? Will you renounce those principles that God has revealed to you and which He has declared are essential to salvation and exaltation in His Kingdom—will you renounce them? Will you renounce obedience to the Priesthood of the Son of God? If you will I expect you can enjoy some sort of peace—a peace that would be the peace of death. Who will accept it? Will any true Latter Day Saints? No; no true Latter Day Saint will accept that. What next? You can not have your rights as citizens. You must be put under bonds. You must have penalties affixed to your practice or to your faith. If you continue to be Latter Day Saints you must be discriminated against. That is another alternative presented to us. Will we accept that? Yes, I believe that I speak your feelings. I believe I give voice to them when I say that you are willing, all of you, to take this choice and these consequences. What this choice and these consequences. next? Will a mob come and drive us from our homes? Not yet. You will see fun whenever that occurs. That is not in the programme as I view it at present. No mobs. What then, shall we do? We shall have to contend in the courts; we shall have to make this a legal fight. It is mobocracy in legal form and in legal guise that now attacks us. It comes to us in a shape that we can meet better than we could the old forms, when a mob banded together and came in such overwhelming numbers that we could not resist it. It may be just as wicked. The present mode of attack may be just as cruel; the ultimate object may be just as bad in every sense and in every respect; but it can be met in a different form and in a different way. We have to contend now for our rights in the courts of the land; we must see whether there is a willingness on the part of those who hold authority as judges, to give us our rights, and in this way we shall test the nation, our Government, and prove whether there is a willingness on the part of those who administer the government, to give us those rights that belong to us as American citizens. If they do not, who will be the sufferers? We shall suffer to some extent; but our sufferings will be light compared with those that will fall upon the men who shall prove untrue and recreant to the princi-ples of liberty and truth."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. H. C. Bronson writes us from Kewanee, Illinois, April 4th:

The Kewanee conference has just closed. A more peaceful and quiet time has not been experienced for some time; an unruly element that has seemed to disturb the peace of the church in this district for some time, is now pretty well cornered, and we hope to hear no more from it, except in the way of usefulness in the church.

The Porte has replied to England that in event of war between England and Russia Turkey will remain neutral and will close the Dardanelles and Bosphorus to men-of-war of either nation. Notice of this decision has been sent by the Porte to the various foreign Ambassadors, at Constantinople.

A volcanic eruption has occurred at Passarvean, a province in the east end of the Island of Java. A number of plantations have been devastated and it is thought that over a hundred persons have been killed.

Correspondence.

Deckerville, Michigan, April 23d, 1885.

Bro. Foseph: I have just arrived home from Canada. I have visited several places, and was pleased to see many of the brethren whom I had not seen for years. I labored considerable in Inwood, Ontario, a new place; baptized three there that makes a start. There are many believing there, and no doubt will soon obey the gospel. It did me good to meet with the London Saints. I did some preaching in St. Mary's, Ontario, baptized two more there. Bro. Robert Brown has purchased a good church there, and he is and has been doing all he can for the advancement of this great latter-day work. But the people don't care to come out to hear the word. The Usborne Saints were glad to see me, and I was just as glad to see them. This is the place where about twelve years ago, myself with two other brethren, were taken by a mob of about fifteen persons into the woods where we saw the tar. Great threats were made that if we did not leave the place; but they quarreled among themselves, and out of all we were set free. But the Lord said not to stop on that account, but to go ahead; and so we did, and many were baptized. They now have a nice little church there, and it is paid for. 'And just let me say, that the Saints are prospering in temporal things; whilst the others, those who took part in the mob, several have died off, and others have come to poverty. Bro. Joseph, I feel satisfied that those weapons that are formed against the latter-day work can not prosper; and I feel the Spirit to testify to it now whilst I write. Ah, yes, it's hard to fight against the God of Israel! If it could be possible for the brethren in St. Mary's, and Usborne, and a few other places, to have an Elder around there to labor and have regular appointments for a few months, good would be done. I expect to do much good north of this place during this summer, especially in Huron county, Michigan. I am sorry that Bro. W. J. Smith has left Michigan. It is a large field, and few to labor. I have said I would like to move westward; but when I see so many leaving, and no one to carry on the work here, I feel like staying here yet.

I am in the faith,

J. J. Cornish.

CITRUS, Los Angeles Co., Cal. April 12th, 1885.

Pres. Joseph Smith:—Brn. J. R. Badham, A. W. Thompson, and E. J. French, were with us last Sunday and organized the Saints of the Azusa, thirteen in number, into a branch to be called the Covina Branch. Wm. P. Pickering was ordained to the office of priest, and elected president of the branch. Sam H. Eye, a priest, was elected presiding Teacher. Sister M. E. Eye clerk, and W. P. Pickering, treasurer. We had some excellent preaching by Elders Badham and Thompson. Some are near the kingdom in this place and we feel that the work is onward.

Wm. P. Pickering.

PEMBROKE, Potter Co., Dakota, April 14th, 1885.

Dear Herald: I have been a constant reader of your pages for some time, and yet have seen but once a few short lines from this great territory. We are striving to lay up treasures in heaven. On Sunday the 12th inst., I had the pleasant duty of baptizing nine; and another one deferred it on account of extremely delicate health. We are anxiously wishing for an Elder to visit us. We are nearest to the Northern Iowa, or Western Minnesota branches. Our nearest depot is forty-eight miles away. Any one coming should book via Sioux City to Huron, then west to Blunt, over Chicago and North-western Railway. I understand there are a few Saints at Highmore. Would like to correspond with them. It may tend to our mutual benefit. I ask the prayers of the Saints that we may be kept faithful to the end, for the promise is, "The same shall be saved." Yours in truth and love,

WM. SPARLING.

Limerick, Jackson Co., Ohio, April. 11th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-From April, 1884, until December 27th, my labors were confined to this county; since then I have been engaged in the work about as much as my health, and the weather would permit. From December 27th, until January 23d, Bro, T. J. Beatty and I were associated in labor in Wayne county, W. Va. Our labors were blessed by four additions by baptism. We each baptized two. Circumstances then warranted his return to Ohio. I remained, preaching at Centerville, Tom's Creek, Wayne C. H., Cassville, and Queen's Creek and baptized seven more. Wife and I left Wayne C. H., March 18th, for Ohio. Came by hack to Huntington, on the Ohio River. There we took boat for Gallipolis, Ohio; from there we were conveyed in Nahum's chariots to Creola, in Vinton county. Remained with the Saints there from the 19th to the 24th ult. Spoke three times in a schoolhouse near by, to fair assemblies.

On the 24th ult. we left for Vales' Mills, in Vinton county, a new field. The way had been prepared by the brethren Kirkendall. I began preaching that night; our domicile was an old vacated log cabin, which the owner, Mr. Arthur Vale, assisted in seating &c., for our use; it was the best we could do, although there was a commodious church near by, belonging to the United Brethren Order. When asked for its use, we were refused. I spoke each night during the week, and twice on Sunday.

At the close seven came forward for baptism. I announced that at two p. m. the next day, the baptism would take place; but one of them Sr. Eva McLaugiin, had a school in session and in order to return to it on the following morning, she desired baptism that evening; We repaired to the water, and babtized four, leaving three, as we thought to baptize next day; but when the hour came, instead of three there were six, ten in all. We rested then until the following Friday night, spoke also on Sunday night and Sunday forenoon. During the time, ten more united, making twenty. On Monday, April 6th, the anniversary of the organization of the church, I organized them into a branch, by ordaining Bro. Samuel Bennington teacher. He was then chosen president of the branch. Bro. Barrett

Allen was chosen branch clerk. Bro. W. F. Gregory treasurer. The branch was named Vinton.

A number of them came out of the United Brethren Church, and already a persecuting howl is being heard by their shepherds. Their "craft is in danger." We have reason to believe that the branch is of excellent material; there are nine men and eleven women. Since January 1st I have baptized twenty-nine; Since I entered the ministry, one hundred and twenty-five. During the past winter there have been forty-nine additions by baptism in this district. My experience the past winter is, that never before have I been so blessed with the measure of liberty in declaring the word. We are now at home, arrived on the 8th inst., having been absent since last Christmas. Yours in Christ.

BATTLE LAKE, Minnesota, April 16th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith: - This branch was organized a little over one year ago by Bro. Thomas Nutt. Since that time he has baptized three, and I two. Bro. Martin was down from Becker county and did some preaching in the Hope of Zion branch, and also in this. He also baptized one. He is alive in the cause, and he did us good in the way of instruction and encouragement. We have kept up our meetings through the winter, although some have to go eight or ten miles. The Spirit of God has been with us at our meetings, and also in our administrations for the sick. Dear Saints, the doctrine as taught by the Latter Day Saints is the best that the world has ever known; for when we have a perfect knowledge that God hears our prayers and answers them to our satisfaction, all I can say is, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." I have belonged to the Baptists twenty years, and in all that time I knew nothing of the blessings that the Christians or Saints could enjoy. I was baptized about nine years ago by T. W. Smith, and also ordained an Elder at that time. Since then I have remembered the promise that I made at the water's edge, and have tried to keep my promise. May God be with all those who write for the Herald, that ere long all disputations will end.

In bonds,

GEORGE GOULD.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Heman came over and lit up our village and neighborhood with four latter day gospel sermons. Crops look fine. I have been plowing corn. That hail storm spoken of in the last Herald done some damage, but not so much as you heard. If there is a brother or sister living in Los Angeles, Cal., that knows a J. C. Barnes, or his folks, they will bestow a favor upon me if they will write me.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

April 21st.—The Blue Book puts the effective strength of the British army at 188,000 men, that of the reserves at 47,000, that of the militia at 125,000 men, and that of the volunteers at 21,000.

Dispatches from Cronstadt state that the Russian fleet there has been ordered to prepare for war instantly, and that thirty-two Russian menof-war have hoisted their flags and put to sea.

Earl Dufferin Viceroy of India, in an address to the Indian Association, again referred in a marked manner to the offers made by the native Princes and people to give England assistance in any struggle which she might have with Russia, and assured his hearers that England would know how to use this help when occasion required it.

A Tiflis dispatch to the Moscow Gazette says that Russia cannot rely upon Persia in the event of war. Some Russian tourists have lately been expelled from Khorassan, while Englishmen have been freely admitted.

The Government has chartered the Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamship Lusitania. She is of 2,420 tons burden.

The Fanfullo of Rome says that England has ordered 500,000 cans of preserved vegetables from the Ciris Company.

Eleven fast steamers have been bought ready equipped at various ports for use as Russian privateers.

Two hundred converts to Mormonism, eighty men and one hundred and twenty women, reached New York yesterday en route from England to Utah. The Mormon leaders are poor meteorologists. They do not know that seed-time is past.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court sustaining Judge Zane's ruling in the Clawson case greatly pleases the non-Mormons, while the Mormons are much depressed. Angus M. Cannon, a brother of George Q. Cannon, and the only leading Mormon now visible to the public, says: "It was a great surprise to me. I had no doubt the Supreme Court would reverse the decision in regard to the open venire. I am sorry on account of the country. I know the Edmunds law is unconstitutional, but when it passed I told my children I would live within the law and had my rooms fitted up purposely to do so. The reason was that my children's bread and butter depended on it. I knew there was a number of hungry office-seekers who would like my office and did not propose they should have it. I would be torn to pieces before I would give up one jot of my religion. If I were called upon to marry a young woman to-morrow I would do so." Other Mormons are equally defiant.

Speaking of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Clawson case, the Salt Lake Tribune says:—"The synopsis of the decision in the Clawson case furnished by the Telegraph indicates that it is as square and sound a document as has ever been issued from the court of last resort in this country. It vindicates the absolute correctness of the ruling here that a grand jury is a part of the prosecution; and therefore anything which would disqualify a man from sitting on a petit jury would necessarily make it impossible for him to sit on a grand jury, and it brushes aside completely the theory that the law which gives general directions for the impaneling of a jury can be so manipulated as to close the courts and practically defeat the ends of Justice. The decision, in its effects upon Utah, is about the most important one ever rendered. It leaves to the men who are determined here to oppose the laws nothing whatever to stand upon. All the talk of illegal methods and persecution fall to the ground. At last the violators of the law stand face to face with inexorable justice. We hope they will be given the wisdom and the grace to see their position and to accept the inevitable."

What have American ship-owners and ship-builders to expect in the event of war between Russia and England? Roughly speaking, one-half of the world's tonnage engaged in carrying the world's commerce on the high seas sails under the flag of Great Britain. The sea-going merchant fleets of all nationalities aggregate about 56,000 vessels and 23,000,000 tons. The tremendous preponderance of England in the carrying trade of the world and the order in which competing nations follow her long lead are shown in this table of approximate figures:

	Vessels.	Tons.
Great Britain	22,500	11,200,000
United States	6,600	2,700,000
Norway	4,200	1,500,000
Germany	3,000	1,400,000
France	2,900	1,100,000
Italy	3,200	1,000,000
Russia	2,300	600,000

England's tonnage on the ocean highways is between four and five times our own. It is seven times that of Norway, eight times that of Germany, ten times that of France, eleven times that of Italy and eighteen times that of Russia. If the comparison is confined to steamships, which now carry so large and so important a part of the commerce of the world, the supremacy of Great Britain is exhibited in a still more striking way:

	Steam Vessels.	Tons.
All nations	7,764	9,232,000
Great Britain	4,649	5,919,000
France	458	667,000
United States		601,000
Germany	420	476,000
Spain	282	305,000
Italy	135	166,000
Holland	127	155,000
Russia	194	149,000

England's steam tonnage is almost ten times as great as that of her nearest rival—France. It is ten times our steam tonnage, and forty times Russia's. The British flag covers nearly two-thirds of all the ocean steamers afloat.

CHURCH LIBRARY.

By the kindness of Elder J. W. Brackenbury, Independence, Missouri, the following eight books have been placed on the shelves of the Church Library, as a gift from him:—The Evening and Morning Star, published at Independenc in 1832 to 1834. Latter Day Saints' Messenger and Advocate, published at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1834 to 1836. Messenger and Advocate of the Church of Christ, published at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1844 and 1845. The Olive Branch; or Herald of Peace and Truth to all Saints, published at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1848 and 1849. The Millennial Star, vols. 1 and 11, published at Liverpool, England, in 1840 and 1851. The History of the Saints; or an Expose of Joe Smith and Mormonism, by John C. Bennett, published in 1842. And also a very early edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, the title page of which is gone.

Elder Charles A. Bishop, of North Yakama City, Washington Terrritory, has placed in the Library Cabinet of curiosities for a time, an ancient grist mill, accompanied by the following note:—

"This ancient grist mill was dug out of the ground by Elder Charles A. Bishop, Railroad Contractor, Northern Pacific Railroad, thirty-five feet below the surface. The said contractor in his excavations dug out the bones of a man eight feet high, and also bones of a larger animal than any yet discovered in America, the jaw bones about six feet; one of the bones of the leg one foot in diameter. These were discovered in forty-nine feet of earth."

We have also received from Bro. James Whitehead, the original manuscript copy of the "Key to the Revelations," in Joseph the Seer's own handwriting. This is a valuable souvenir in memory of the dead. At the close of the manuscript Bro. Whitehead makes the following affidavit, in presence of Joseph Smith, Editor of the ALTON, Illinois, April 20th, 1885.

I, James Whitehead, resident in Alton, a former clerk in the office of Joseph Smith, Jr., at Nauvoo, Illinois, certify that the writing going before this certificate is the handwriting of Joseph Smith, Jr., aforesaid; and that this book was in my possession at said Joseph Smith's death and has remained so until this date.

JAMES WHITEHEAD.

Another donation for the Library Cabinet is from Bro. Noah N. Cooke, of St. Louis, Missouri, and consists of a small string of wampum, (Indian money), made of peculiar looking stones of different sizes, with a hole in the center. Also, a small ingot of cast steel, a portion of the first ever manufactured west of the Missouri river, and was made at the Vulcan Iron Works, St. Louis, July 25th, 1876.

REPLY TO CONFERENCE QUESTION.

In reply to the question submitted to the Presidency at the late April session of conference, respecting the official standing of brethren Jason W. Briggs and Zenas H. Gurley, by reason of the vote of the conference failing to sustain them: We answer that they are still members of their quorum, and hold priesthood; but by reason of the vote not to sustain, are not authorized to act as ministers for the church, until such time as the disability imposed by the vote of conference is removed. JOSEPH SMITH, W. W. BLAIR.

May 4th, 1885.

THE Editor of the HERALD, Joseph Smith, has retired from the Board of Publication, and has been succeeded by Bro. David Dancer, of Lamoni, who was at the last session of the Board chosen Business Manager. The patrons of the HER-ALD, and all doing business with the office, will please take notice, and bear in mind that all matters of business connected with the office will be under the management of Brother David Dancer. All communications on business, subscriptions, orders and remittances, should be addressed to him, Box 82, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa.

Communications and articles for the HERALD, or HOPE, may be addressed to Joseph Smith, Box 82, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa. All articles and communications must be accompanied by the name of the contributor, whether such name is affixed to the article or not. Anonymous articles will not be published. Articles to insure attention should be written on one side of the paper only. Avoid fancy inks; especially blue and mauve, they will fade when exposed to the light; and sometimes articles kept for a time become illegible through fading.

In taking leave of the patrons of the HERALD, and those with whom I have had business relations, as Business Manager, I do so with grateful remembrance of the uniform kindness with which I have been treated by all. I resign the business cares of the office without other regret than that born of a desire to have done better than I did; for to err and fail is but humanity's lot. I resign the business reins into good hands, and bespeak for Bro. Dancer, my successor, the same kind consideration hitherto shown to me.

For the cordial support that the Saints have given me as a member of the Board of Publication, I return my thanks and express my appreciation of their motives and acts. I shall give to my successor the same aid and support extended to me to the extent of my ability.

ONE of the men against whom the Grand Jury of Utah county, Utah, found a bill for violation of the Edmunds law, was Mr. Orson P. Arnold, the superintendent of the Salt Lake City Railroad. When arraigned before the court for trial, he pleaded guilty and asked the clemency of the court. As we have been asked what would be the proper and better course for those who have been inveigled into the meshes of polygamy to pursue, to be made free from it, and its consequences, we publish the proceedings of the court in this case as a part of our answer, and as a precedent in point. It is taken from the report in Salt Lake Tribune for April 16th,

The unlawful cohabitation case against Orson P. Arnold, the Superintendent of the Salt Lake City Railroad, came up in the District Court Monday morning, and, it having been whispered that he intended to plead guilty, quite a crowd was present to witness this phenomenal proceeding. Soon after the court was convened,

MR. ARNOLD ARRAIGNED.

Mr. Varian rose and said there was a prisoner to arraign, and asked if his honor would hear it before the impaneling of the Grand Jury. Court-Yes, sir.

Orson P. Arnold was then arraigned on the indictment for unlawful cohabitation, and after stating, in answer to the Clerk's inquiry, that that was his full, true name, pleaded guilty to the charge.

Mr. Varian-The defendant wishes sentence passed now.

Court-Have you any statement to make in connection with it?

LENIENCY ASKED FOR.

Mr. Varian-May it please the Court, we have investigated the case of Mr. Arnold since he has been indicted, upon his request as well as the request of many prominent citizens of all classes, and we are advised by him personally that he intends hereafter-and he will so state to Your Honor—to live within the law and lend his moral influence in favor of the administration of the law. We believe that is so. We believe this is a case particularly appealing to the Court now, under all the circumstances and the plea in this case, and we join in requesting that, if Your Honor entertains the same convictions as to his truthfulness as we do, that you will not imprison him.

Mr. Varian sat down, and Commissioner Mc-Kay rising to his feet, the Court asked: "Do you wish to make any remarks?"

Commissioner McKay-Yes, your Honor.

A PLEA FOR MERCY.

May it please the Court: Several gentlemen of this city, friends of the defendant, men for whom I have great respect, and all of whom hold in reverence this government and its laws, have requested me to state to Your Honor some matters in relation to the case of this defendant. Before doing so, however, I desire to say in my own behalf that I do not appear here as his attorney. I have no retainer or employment from him or his friends; what I shall say, therefore, shall be said as a friend of the Court, and solely for the purpose of bringing some facts in connection with this case before Your Honor, which, in the multiplicity of other pressing business would, in all probability, escape the attention of Your Honor and of the District Attorney.

THIS MAN HAS PLEADED GUILTY

To the offense charged against him, and, strange as it may appear to some people, I come before this court to ask in behalf of this man, his family and friends, that in the exercise of that discretion which the majesty of the law has reposed in you, in fixing the punishment for the offense whereof he stands convicted, that you deal with him in gentleness and charity. I make this request because it would probably be hazarding nothing were I to say to Your Honor that, aside from the offense to which the defendant has pleaded guilty, there is absolutely nothing against this man's character. He has been connected with the Mormon Church since childhood, and, like many of his associates and friends, he fell a victim in early manhood to

THAT FATAL MÆLSTROM—POLYGAMY— In which so many souls have been engulfed in this Territory. He has two families—two children in the first, and four in the second. I do not doubt but he loves them all—one equally with another—and because of this, he has since the enactment of the Edmunds law and until a recent period continued to associate with and treat his two wives as he had been accustomed to do for many years past.

MANLY CONDUCT.

I am informed and believe, and to this I desire to call Your Honor's particular attention, that when it first became apparent to this man that his family relations were about to be the subject of investigation by the Grand Jury, he called his wives and children around him and stated to them what was likely to take place, and advised them that in the event any of them were summoned as witnesses in a case against him, they must state the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth! He did this, well knowing that to do so he was opening the doors for his entry to the penitentiary, but as he has stated to me this morning, he had rather serve in that institution at hard labor for the balance of his natural life than ask or permit any wife, child, or friend of his to prevaricate, much less commit perjury, to save him from the consequence of his acts. There has been no waiting by this defendant for official information that he was wanted by the deputy marshals; there has been no evasion of the service of the process of the Court; no perjury has been committed; no wife or child or friend of his has been arraigned before the Court for contempt, in trying to shield from punishment one who has broken the law. On the contrary, he has met the case against him

AS BECOMES A MAN.

And from first to last has evinced a manly determination to do what was right, and in a way, too, that, no matter what we may think of the acts which have brought him face to face with this Court, we cannot do otherwise than sympathize with his misfortune, and in every legitimate way strengthen his present purpose to come within the law, and obey its mandates in the future. We do this because he admits the errors of the past, and promises a recognition of the sovereignty of this Nation and a compliance with its laws in the future. The statutes provide, that, in cases of this character, the Court may impose as punishment, both fine and imprisonment, or one without the other, as the circumstances of each particular case may seem to require. If your honor can come to believe as I certainly do, that the circumstances of this case are such-circumstances, which, in the administration of the laws of the United States in this Territory are to say the least a novelty—that by imposing a fine without imprisonment will sufficiently meet the ends of justice, I am assured that this man, his family and friends will see to it that the mercy of this Court shall not be abused, nor its confidence misplaced.

BY THE COURT.

Mr. Arnold, the laws of the United States provide, "that if any male persons in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, hereafter cohabits with more than one woman, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court." This law affords the court a discretion of imposing a penalty of a fine of not more than three hundred dollars, or imprisoning you for a period of six months, or by both fine and imprisonment. The maximum punishment, in view of the punishment imposed for polygamy, which is imprisonment not exceeding five years and fine not to exceed five hundred dollars, seems to be rather light. Polygamy is treating more than one woman as a man's wives according to the forms of marriage, and unlawful cohabitation is treating more than one woman as a man's wives without going through these forms. There does not appear to be so much difference in the substance of the offenses, except that polygamy adds to the crime the tendency to bring marriage into contempt and to treat it as an idle ceremony, by placing an unlawful marriage, or an unlawful ceremony of marriage, on the same footing as a lawful one.

But the law-making power has described this offense and prescribed the punishment, and it is not for the court to make any criticism on the law, but only to enforce it as it appears on the statute books, fairly and honestly.

Now, before I impose this sentence I wish to inquire of you whether you propose to continue the practice of unlawful cohabitation or not?

Mr. Arnold—It is not my intention, Your Honor, else I should not have come in and pleaded guilty.

Court—What is your purpose with respect to the future?

Mr. Arnold—My purpose is to try to obey and sustain the laws of the United States, but I would like the privilege of taking care of what I call my second family and supporting them as I believe it is my duty to do.

Court—Nothing more than to support them? They need your support, do they?

Mr. Arnold-They do.

Court—You propose, as I understand, to cease to treat your second wife as your wife further than merely supporting her?

Mr. Arnold-Yes, sir.

Court—And propose hereafter to throw your influence on the side of the enforcement of the law?

Mr. Arnold—Yes, sir.

Court-These statements have great weight with the Court. The purpose of the law is not vengeance; it is not the persecution of any man on account of his religious belief; it is to protect society from this crime of unlawful cohabitation and of polygamy. That is its object, and if it could do it without imposing pain or suffering upon man, it would be better to do it without it. But it has been found that the best mode by which the laws can be enforced is by punishment. Punishment is not imposed for the purpose of inflicting pain and suffering upon the individual upon whom the punishment is imposed, but it is to protect society. The object is to protect the innocent by punishing the guilty; to protect society by punishing those who violate the law.

In your case you state that you now propose to abandon the practice of unlawful cohabitation, and, in good faith, to observe and obey the laws of the country?

Mr. Arnold-Yes, sir.

By the Court—That is a noble and worthy purpose. Man, as a citizen, can have no higher or nobler duty than to respect and obey the laws of his country. In view of your statements, I am of the opinion that the ends of justice and the purposes of this law, in your case, will be subserved by a mild punishment; because the law does not harbor any ill-will or malice toward any man, and does not allow any of its officers to do so. I will impose a fine upon you of three hundred dollars and will not impose any imprisonment.

Mr. Arnold—Thank you.

The Reorganization has pointed out long since that the only safe course for those calling themselves Latter Day Saints and practicing polygamy, was to abandon such practice at once and forever. This was the advice given in Utah years ago, and by all the representatives of the faith of the Reorganization ever sent there. There was to be no dallying, no compromising; abandonment full and complete was advised as the safest and surest way for the welfare of all concerned.

Had this advice been followed, a great deal of perplexity would have been avoided. But, it was then deemed arrogant assumption on our part, and the part of the elders of the Reorganization to offer such advice to hoary headed Israel. We were denounced as a "degenerate son of a noble sire," who had sold his birthright for ease among the Gentiles. But times change, and with the course of events the vindication we have waited for has come. We loved Israel because we were of Israel. We had sympathy for the children of Zion, because upon our heart, too, had fallen the hope of Zion's redemption. We saw the pending woe and cried out against it. We foresaw the advance of the slow marching forces that meant sore calamity to the heedless and proud transgressor of the law. We knew that behind the seeming security of carnal advancement the hand with the rod hung ready to smite. We kept knocking at the entrenchments of the wrong doers, warning them; but they did not heed.

Now, the strong hand of government long defied has been laid upon them who have been at ease in Zion. We pity, sympathize, but know that there is no remedy save submission to the law. The course pursued by Mr. Arnold, if he keeps the promise made to the court, will bring him rest from fear of the law and its officers; and peace of mind from the knowledge of guilt before both the law of God and the land. The same course will answer the same ends for all who do as he did. It was consistent for Mr. Arnold to present himself to the court and make the statements that he did; and it was the proper place in which to make the promise that he did, that he would not again break the law; and would not only keep it himself, but would counsel others to observe it. We commend him for his course in thus abandoning polygamy.

THE following telegram is clipped by us from the Chicago Tribune, of May 4th, and is dated Salt Lake City, Utah, May 2d:

"The arguments in the Musser unlawful cohabitation case consumed this afternoon, but within fifteen minutes after the case went to the jury a verdict of guilty was returned. Sentence was suspended by agreement until next Saturday, when Angus M. Cannon will also be sentenced. Parley P. Pratt, eldest son of the last Apostle P. P. Pratt, pleaded guilty to the charge of unlawful cohabitation. His counsel begged the court's clemency on the ground of the defendant's poverty and his obedience to the processes of law. He refused, however, to promise to hereafter obey the law. The court fined him $300 and gave him six months. James C. Watson pleaded guilty to unlawful cohabitation, and by consent had his sentence suspended until next Saturday. Prosecuting-Attorney Dickson, his assistant, Mr. Varian, and the United States Commissioner were greeted with hisses and cries of: "Put them out!" at the Mormon mass-meeting to-day."

The foregoing facts are terribly significant. When Joseph and Hyrum Smith attempted to keep from arrest on a charge upon which no earthly tribunal would have convicted them; and upon which even some of those who were instrumental in prosecuting them acknowledged that the law would not touch them; their brethren implored them to return, submit themselves to the custody of the officers and the courts, in order that the people, the brethren, might not suffer. They did so, notwithstanding Joseph told those urging him to yield to the course of the law, that he was "going to his death." Not that he, or Hyrum feared conviction, but they did know that violent men without regard to the law to which they demanded that the Smith brothers should be subject, sought for opportunity and would kill them if such opportunity occurred.

Comparisons may be "odious," but one just now may be profitable, and therefore pardonable. Quite a number of those who have been practicing polygamy in Utah have been arrested and convicted, either upon confession, or evidence, and are being punished. But indictments by the Grand Jury, and warrants in the hands of officers against the leading men go unanswered, because the men against whom they are issued are evading service of the writs. In these cases it is not the fear of assassination by violent men that deters these men in hiding from giving themselves up to the officers and the courts, but it is the knowledge that almost certain conviction before the court awaits them. It is the legal penalty, not unlawful death that threatens them; and of that penalty they are afraid.

THE Potter County, Dakota, Union, for May 16th, 1885, is sent us by brother Wm. Sparling. In it is the following notice of baptismal services, held April 12th, at Bro. Sparling's house, near Pembroke.

BAPTISMAL SERVICES.

"Last Sunday, in company with Mr. Richelson, we attended religious services at the house of Mr. Wm. Sparling, near Pembroke. The services were made short in order to give time for the ceremony of baptism, which took place at a pool in the draw a short distance east of the house. Mr. Sparling preached a good orthodox sermon on the subject of baptism, after which the congregation adjourned to the pool where the following candidates were baptized: Joseph Cook, Henry M. Richelson, Samuel Lovett, Mrs. Wm. Sparling, Mrs. Harry Sparling, Mrs. Samuel Lovett, Mrs. Samuel Blakeley, Maud and Edith Cook. Mr. Sparling is quite earnest in his work, and has gathered a small flock of converts about him. He is a representative of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, sometimes erroneously called Mormons. But the church has no connection whatever with the Mormons, nor do they believe in polygamy. Their headquarters are at Lamoni, Iowa."

Our hand is hereby extended to our associate, W. W. Blair, whose salutatory the Saints have already read. May his shadow never grow less; and his already great usefulness be still more widely extended.

[OSEPH SMITH.

Letter from Bro. John C. Foss, Independence, Missouri, recites the story of good preaching enjoyed during and after Conference; and states that he is ready to start for his field of labor.

Sister A. M. Snow wrote card from North Brooksville, Maine, April 27th. She is a sufferer, in poor health and with poor eyesight; belongs to the "Shut-In Society;" meaning those who are invalids, and so precluded from mingling with their fellow men as do those who are well in body and have the use of all their faculties. She rarely sees a fellow Saint and gets to meeting about once a year. Pray for Sr. Snow, she desires it.

Some time ago a brother living in an eastern branch called on the Saints in a letter to the Herald, which was published, for aid to relieve necessities incurred by reason of failure of crops and general depression in business. The Saints in different places subscribed and sent various sums, aggregating something near ninetydollars. Bro. C. G. Ruley sent a report of names of donors with a statement respecting the distribution of the moneys so sent. This report will appear next issue.

The address of George E. Ward as inquired for in Herald a while ago, is Montrose, Colorado.

Bro. E. C. Elliott, writing from Lansing, Kansas, April 12th, wishes that an Elder passing that quarter of West Virginia, will visit his mother, Mrs. Rebecca Elliott, Bealington, Barbour county, West Virginia. He thinks that one from Clarksburg, could visit there with but little trouble.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Joseph Burton wrote from Sydney, Australia, March 25th, 1885:

Everything is going on as usual. We reorganized, or revived the Wallsend Branch; but the Sydney Saints do not wish to be organized. They never were a regularly organized branch here. We are still preaching on domain and in hall. Expect Bro. T. W. Smith by steamship fanet Nicoll, which leaves here to-day for Tahiti via Auckland. He will probably get here by May or June. We are all well, and hope God will abundantly bless you in your increasing responsibilities and labors. May peace abide with you.

An Elder in the field, active and diligent, writes in regard to the late action of conference sustaining the Books, thus:

"I am glad to learn that the satisfaction is general and sincere, that the Church of Christ will stand by its Master's word. To me that word is the end of controversy. When the church accepts a platform, it certainly ought not to be dogmatism to occupy it. To lay an embargo upon the Elders not to preach the word of the Lord,—not to preach the doctrines revealed through the Lord's Seer, not to preach as the word of the Lord what the church has accepted from shortly after its organization, from the date of each revelations publicity and acceptance by the church as that word,—is to ask the church to stultify itself, and to bid its ministers sacrifice their liberty, their manhood, nay their very faith itself at the caprice of dogmatists to the very shrine of scepticism itself. Thank God, the embargo is removed, and we can again lift up our heads as freemen whom the objections of one, two, or three can no longer enslave by the fiat of a repulsive prohibition against the law itself, against at least, its palpable and manifest truths."

Bro. Wm. Gibson wrote from San Bernardino, California, May 1st.

"This branch is improving very much. There are some of the old members coming back, a good many are being baptized."

Bro. J. F. Kingsbury wrote from Watsonville, Cal., April 30th:

"The cause begins to look up in this district."

Bro. M. H. Forscutt was at Shenan-doah, Iowa, May 5th, and wrote from there on that date:

Am giving a series of discourses here by special request. Will, God willing, spend next Sunday at home.

THE Western Watchman, published at Eureka, Humboldt county, California, in its issue for Saturday, April 25th, 1885, goes for the Spaulding Story—Romance—Manuscript Found, in the following pithy fashion. As Captain Cuttle remarked, "When found make a note on't."

THE BOOK OF MORMON.

THE FINDING OF SPAULDING'S MANUSCRIPT IN HONOLULU EXPLODES
AN OLD THEORY.

It has hitherto been currently assumed by non-Mormons who profess to be conversant with the origin of that sect that their "Book of Mormon" was a plagiarism of a manuscript by Solomon Spaulding, written avowedly as a work of fiction, purporting to give the history of some extinct Indian tribes. As the Manuscript was never published and soon disappeared, that theory was generally accepted, there being no opportunity for comparison.

Quite recently, however, the Spaulding manuscript was discovered in the possession of Mr. L. L. Rice, of Honolulu, in consequence of a visit there by the President of the Oberlin, Ohio, University, Mr. Fairchild, who asked Mr. Rice (formerly an anti-slavery editor in Ohio) for such anti-slavery documentary relics as he would be willing to contribute to the Oberlin college library. When Mr. Rice was overhauling his papers for that purpose, he stumbled on this Manuscript, which purports to be a narrative of the migrations and conflicts of ancient Indian tribes occupying the territory which is now known as New York, Ohio, and Kentucky. On the last page "is a certificate and signature giving the names of several persons known to the signer, who have assured him that to their personal knowledge the Manuscript was the writing of Solomon Spaulding. What the object of the certificate was does not appear. Mr. Rice has no recollection of how or when the Manuscript came into his possession. It was enveloped in wrapping paper and endorsed in Mr. Rice's handwriting, 'A Manuscript story.' "

The above is found in an article by Pres. Fairchild in the Bibliotheca Sacra—a long established orthodox, theological magazine of repute, published in New York.—[Oberlin, Ohio.—Ed.] Fairchild and Rice both examined the Manuscript, compared it with the "Book of Mormon" and found the two to be totally unlike, both in style and subject, the only feature common to the two being that both professed to give a history of some, though not the same, Indian tribes.

Mr. Fairchild writes Joseph Smith (son of the founder of Mormonism and leader on the antipolygamic Mormons): "Certainly the Manuscript I saw was not the source of the Book of Mormon." He adds, however, that since the discovery was made public it has been claimed that there were two Manuscripts by Spaulding, one on the Indian and the other on the Hebrew tribes, the former being that discovered in Honolulu and the latter the source of the original J. Smith's alleged inspiration. Nothing, however, seems to have been heard or circulated about any second Manuscript until after the first (so termed) was discovered, which gives the hypothesis a decidedly expost facto smack that some may call "fishy."

Whatever may be the merits of Mormonism or the facts of its origin, it seems clear that the theory which derives it from Spaulding's book will not hold water.

We thank the brother who sent us the Watchman.

From the Oakland, California, Evening Tribune for April 25th, sent us by Bro. Wm. Anderson, we clip:

A branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints, exists in this city, with a presiding Elder, Priest and Teacher. They hold regular services on Sunday at Kohler's Hall on Seventh street, near Chester. They have a flourishing Sabbath School. Their faith is predicated upon the principles of the gospel as taught by Christ and his Apostles. The local church and ministry are self-supporting. Their missionary labors are supported by a system of tithing, which is a general law of the church. These religious meetings are conducted similar to those of other denominations. They utterly repudiate polygamy and all its concomitant evils and hold no fellowship with the Utah Mormons. They have missionaries at work in Utah, and are proselyting many among the polygamous Mormons. Elder William Anderson will preach on Sunday evening at Kohler's Hall, on "Christian Association, Morally and Philosophically Considered."

THE discovery of a Manuscript Story by Rev. Solomon Spaulding, at Honolulu, Hawaii, in a late issue of the Bibliotheca Sacra, and still later in the HERALD, has created quite an interest among the elders. We herein give Mr. Rice's reply to our letter to him in which we suggested the propriety of sending the Manuscript to some Historical Society of Chicago, for deposit.

Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, March 28th, 1885.

Mr. Foseph Smith: - The Spaulding Manuscript in my possession came into my hands in this wise. In 1839-40 my partner and myself bought of E. D. Howe the Painesville Telegraph, published at Painesville, Ohio. The transfer of the printing department, types, press, &c., was accompanied with a large collection of books, manuscripts, &c., this manuscript of Spaulding among the rest. So, you see, it has been in my possession over forty years. But I never examined it, or knew the character of it, until some six or eight months since. The wrapper was marked, "Manuscript Story-Conneaut Creek," The wonder is, that in some of my movements, I did not destroy or burn it with a large amount of rubbish that had accumulated from time to time.

It happened that Pres't Fairchild was here on a visit, at the time I discovered the contents of it, and it was examined by him and others with much curiosity. Since Pres't Fairchild published the fact of its existence in my possession, I have had applications for it from half a dozen sources, each applicant seeming to think that he or she was entitled to it. Mr. Howe says when he was getting up a book to expose Mormonism as a fraud at an early day, when the Mormons had their head quarters at Kirtland, he obtained it from some source, and it was inadvertently transferred with the other effects of his printing office. A. B. Deming of Painesville, who is also getting up some kind of a book, I believe on Mormonism, wants me to send it to him. Mrs. Dickinson, of Boston, claiming to be a relative of Spaulding, and who is getting up a book to show that he was the real author of the Book of Mormon, wants it. She thinks, at least, it should be sent to Spaulding's daughter, a Mrs. Somebody-but she does not inform me where she lives. Deming says that Howe borrowed it when he was getting up his book, and did not return it, as he should have done, &c.

This Manuscript does not purport to be "a story of the Indians formerly occupying this Continent;" but is a history of the wars between the Indians of Ohio and Kentucky, and their progress in civilization, &c. It is certain that this Manuscript is not the origin of the Mormon Bible, whatever some other manuscript may have been. The only similarity between them, is, in the manner in which each purports to have been found—one in a cave on the bank of Conneaut Creek—the other in a hill in Ontario county. New York. There is no identity of names, of persons, or places; and there is no similarity of style between them. As I told Mr. Deming, I should as soon think the Book of Revelations was written by the author of Don Quixotte, as that the writer of this Manuscript was the author of the Book of Mormon. Deming says Spaulding made three copies of "Manuscript Found," one of which Sidney Rigdon stole from a printing office in Pittsburg. You can probably tell better than I can, what ground there is for such an allegation.

I knew Joseph Smith, Jr., and Sidney Rigdon, when they were located at Kirtland; and I once visited Smith, in 1841, when he was at Nauvoo. I have heard Rigdon preach, both as a Campbellite and as a Mormon. I knew Eliza R. Snow well; she was a poetic correspondent of mine when I published a paper at Ravenna, Ohio.

I understand that you are a leader of a dissenting sect of Mormons, sometimes denominated "Reformed Mormons," who repudiate the polygamy of the sect at Salt Lake. I should like to know something more about your division of Mormonhood. I told my friend H. H. Cluff, who was at the head of the Mormon brotherhood on these Islands, and who left here a year or so ago to return to Utah, that I did not believe that Joseph Smith ever practiced or advocated polygamy; and that I supposed it was born altogether of lust, during the days Brigham Young's ascendancy. He agreed to furnish me evidence that I was mistaken in that regard; and although he has sent me a large number of Mormon documents, he has sent nothing on that subject. I should like to know from you, or some other authentic source, whether or not Joseph Smith advocated polygamy in his day.

As to this Manuscript, I cannot see that it can be of any use to any body, except to the Mormons, to show that IT is not the original of the Mormon Bible. But that would not settle the claim that some other manuscript of Spaulding was the original of it. I propose to hold it in my own hands for a while, to see if it cannot be put to some good use, Deming and Howe inform me that its existence is exciting great interest in that region. I am under a tacit, but not a positive pledge to President Fairchild, to deposit it eventually in the Library of Oberlin College. I shall be free from that pledge, when I see an opportunity to put it to a better use.

Yours, &c.

L. L. RICE.

P. S.—Upon reflection, since writing the foregoing, I am of the opinion that no one who reads this Manuscript will give credit to the story that Solomon Spaulding was in any wise the author of the Book of Mormon. It is unlikely that any one who wrote so elaborate a work as the Mormon Bible, would spend his time in getting up so shallow a story as this, which at best is but a feeble imitation of the other. Finally I am more than half convinced that this is his only writing of the sort, and that any pretence that Spaulding was in any sense the author of the other, is a sheer fabrication. It was easy for any body who may have seen this, or heard anything of its contents, to get up the story that they were identical. L. L. R.

Ques.—If a child has been baptized through the persuasion of others, when not properly instructed as to the ordinance, its purpose and pre-requisites, is it proper for such one to be re-baptized. If so, should they be re-confirmed also?

Ans.—Yes, it they desire baptism. They should be re-confirmed.

Q.—Would the receiving of the Holy Spirit, after such baptism first mentioned above, to the degree affecting a change of character, and the manifestation of some of the gifts, be evidence that God acknowledged the baptism?

A.—Certainly it would.

Q.—When a member is reprimanded for any real; or supposed offense (in a meeting) by an Elder, has the member the right to exculpation; and has such Elder the right to persistently deny such right, when demanded twice by a member when demanding with the promise of using humility and respect in such exculpation?

A.—Persons reprimanded, if guilty should ask pardon for breach of rules, and not as exculpation. If innocent they should be allowed to explain.

2.—Has any one the right to so reprimand, except the officer presiding over the meeting.

A.—It is his duty first, after he fails, any other may do so in proper manner.

A brother wishes to know whether persons over eight years of age who hear and understand the gospel, but will not obey it, are citizens of the kingdom of God. We answer, No.

2.—Is it wrong to have a supper in the church to pay its indebtedness?

A .- It need not be.

A brother quotes the following from Doctrine and Covenants, 46:5: "To some it is given by the Holy Ghost to know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and and that he was crucified for the sins of the world; to others it is given to believe on their words, that they also might have eternal life, if they continue faithful;" and then asks to know how to reconcile it with these words of Christ, John 7:17: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."

We answer—If the person to whom it "is given to believe" as above, will "continue faithful" in seeking and serving God, he will be brought to the actual knowledge promised. His "belief," given him of God, will lead him into further "knowledge of the truth." To answer the brother in respect to the first three paragraphs of same section, would overtax the query column.

Q.—What is the moral law? To whom given? And when?

A.—It is commonly understood that the law given to Moses, at Sinai, is the moral law. Of this Dr. Buck says: "Moral law is that declaration of God's will which directs and binds all men, in every age and place, to their whole duty to him. It was most solemnly proclaimed by God himself at Sinai, to confirm the original law of nature, and correct men's mistakes concerning the demands of it." But it must not be assumed that this was the beginning of law touching man's relations and conduct toward God and man. We must conclude that the moral law-that which determines the right and the wrong of man's conduct-was given to him in the beginning of the race; for in his creation he was made capable of perceiving and doing both good and evil. -Christ has given us the highest and best definitions of moral duty.

WE give below the gist of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, respecting the constitutionality of the Edmunds Law. Those wise acres of the Utah church, who were inclined to ridicule the Herald's position in regard to Constitutional Law, may now find the language of Chief Justice Matthews, who delivered the opinion of the Court, very interesting reading. Let them contrast the statement by the Herald with this passage in the decision: "The people of the United States, as sovereign owners of National Territories, have supreme power over them and their inhabitants."

Joseph Smith the Martyr held that Congress was in its sphere supreme, and that what Congress could not do in regard to the laws of the land and the enforcement of them, could not be done. The decision of the Court is in direct harmony with what Joseph Smith wrote long ago to the church.

The decision is as follows:

THE CONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE LAW.

In conclusion Justice Matthews, who delivers the opinion of the Court says with reference to the constitutionality of the above mentioned act: "The counsel for the appellants in their argument seemed to question the constitutional power of Congress to pass the act of March 22d, 1882, so far as it abridges the rights of electors in a territory under previous laws. But that question is, we think, no longer open to discussion. It has passed beyond the stage of controversy into final judgment. The people of the United States, as sovereign owners of National Territories, have supreme power over them and their inhabitants. In the exercise of this sovereign dominion they are represented by the Government of the United States, to whom all powers of government over that subject have been delegated, subject only to such restrictions as are expressed in the Constitution, or necessarily implied in its terms, or in the purposes and objects of the power itself. In ordaining a government for Territories and the people who inhabit them, all discretion which belongs to the legislative power is vested in Congress, and that extends, beyond any controversy, to determining by law from time to time the form of local government in a particular Territory and the qualifications of those who shall administer it. It rests with Congress to say whether in a given case any of the people resident in a Territory shall participate in an election of its officers or the making of its laws; and it may, therefore, take from them any right of suffrage it may previously have conferred, or at any time modify or abridge it, as it may deem expedient. . . . The personal and civil rights of inhabitants of Territories are secured to them as to all other citizens by the principles of constitutional liberty, which restrain all agencies of the Government, State and National. Their political rights are franchises which they hold as privileges in the legislative discretion of the Congress of the United States. If we concede that this discretion in Congress is limited by the obvious purposes for which it was conferred, and that those purposes are satisfied by the measures which prepare the people of Territories to become citizens of States in the Union, still the conclusion can not be avoided that the act of Congress here in question is clearly within that justification. For certainly no legislation can be supposed more wholesome and necessary in forming a free, self-governing commonwealth, fit to take rank as one of the coördinate States of the Union, than that which seeks to establish it on the basis of the idea of the family, as consisting in and springing from the union for life of one man and one woman in the holy state of matrimony; the sure foundation of all that is stable and noble in our civilization; the best guarantee of that reverent morality which is the source of all beneficent progress in social and political improvement. And to this end no means are more directly and immediately suitable than those provided by this act, which endeavors to withdraw all political influence from those who are practically hostile to its attainment.

JUDGE FIELD DISSENTS.

The judgments of the court below in the cases of Jesse J. Murphy, Ellen C. and Hiram B. Clawson, and J. M. Barlow are affirmed as to all the defendants below, and appellees here. In the cases of Mary Ann M. Pratt and Mildred E. and Alfred Randall, judgments are affirmed as to all the defendants and appellees except E. D. Hoge, John S Lindsay, and Harmel Pratt. As to them the judgments are reversed and the cases remanded, with directions to overrule the demurrers. Judge Field dissented from parts of the opinion of the court.

Since the foregoing was written the Supreme Court has affirmed the finding of the Court below, fining Rudger B. Clawson $800, and an imprisonment of four years as a penalty.

PAUL said—"Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution."—2 Tim. 8: 12; and many interpret this as a prediction that every true, faithful Saint will be persecuted, and persecuted in proportion to their righteousness. Does not the text mean rather that, it is required of those who "will live godly in Christ Jesus" to suffer persecution in the sense of patiently enduring it, and to not resist it?

While persecution and tribulation are the heritage of God's people in this world, yet it must not be forgotten that "Great peace have they which love thy law, and nothing shall offend them."—Ps. 119: 165. and again—"O that thou had'st hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea."—Isa. 48: 18. When the angels heralded the advent of Christ into the world, they chanted—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward man;" from which we may learn heaven wills the Saints should have peace.

Much of the tribulation suffered by God's people in various ages has been the legitimate results of their own folly and iniquity, though they have been slow to perceive the fact, and would rather assume they were persecuted for righteousness' sake.

The Apostle Peter was confident God would give his faithful children rest and favor. He says—"For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers; but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil. And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good? But, and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye; and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled."—I Pet. 3: 12-14.

The Saints should beware, lest when they suffer for their errors and evils they claim it to be for their righteousness in faith and conduct. They should not measure the rightness of their faith, nor the uprightness of their conduct by the amount of persecution they either receive, or avoid—they should measure both faith and conduct by the unerring principles of truth and right.

GOOD INTENT, Kansas, April 27th, 1885.

Dear Herald: After writing you from Medina City, Texas, we (Bro. Currie and I), remained there for some time, during which time we held some meetings, and Bro. Currie taught a singing school. Thence we went to Bandera where we remained over two Sundays, the first, preaching in the Court House, and the second at Bro. Davenport's on the Verde, seven miles from town. March 6th we rode to my old home, twelve miles below Bandera on the Medina, the place of my earliest memories. The valley, the mountains surrounding, and the beautiful river gliding by, look as they did in my childhood days; but oh, how changed in other respects! The places once teeming with life and industry are now desolate, the houses gone to decay, and many of the familiar faces which once greeted me there, are in far distant lands, while some rest beneath the sod. One solitary grave, with a rude stone wall erected by loving hands so long ago, stands there to mark the last resting place of Mother Montague, the only one of the old company who passed away during their sojourn in this lovely valley of the mountains.

On the 9th Bro. Currie and I took passage on Mr. Powell's wagon, bound for the city of San Antonio, where we arrived on the 11th. Here Bro. Currie and I parted; I to go to Oak Island, he to his home near Stockdale, expecting to meet the next week; but I subsequently received a letter from him stating his mother was sick and so he could not come. I went to Oak Island for a few days and preached several times in their new church. On the 17th we were made sad by brother and sister Waterman unexpectedly driving up with the body of their infant, which had died at their home in San Antonio the night before. We laid it away in the new grave yard—the first grave in the place.

On the morning of the 20th, I left San Antonio for Paige, and arriving at Austin, I had to lay over for a few hours; and as the Legislature was in session, I walked up to the hall to hear what was going on, more for pastime than anything else. I had been there but a few minutes before the Hon. George Pendleton, of Bell, recognized me in the lobby, arose from his seat, came and shook hands with me, inviting me to a seat upon the floor of the House; and at the adjournment introduced me to the Speaker, the Secretary of State, and several members of the House, thus showing me all the respect I could ask or expect. Mr. Pendleton is one of those few whose social bearing is the same while in office that it is while seeking position.

I arrived at Live Oak Branch, where I met my colaborer, Bro. A. J. Cato. We labored and counseled together until the 28th, when our district conference convened. The attendance was not large, but we had an enjoyable time. The Spirit's peaceful influence was felt, and I think good was done. Adjourned to meet with the Central Branch, June the 20th, when I hope all who can possible come will do so, contributing their part toward making the conference a success. April 1st found me at Elmwood, where I made a flying visit on my way to the General Conference. My opponent in the August debate has been bragging that he had broken us down in Bell county, but I arrived there on Wednesday, left on Friday, during which time I baptized three, two of them being heads of families, confirmed the last at the water's edge, and hurried on to catch the train. In company with C. A. Norwood, had a prosperous journey, arriving at Independence the morning of the 6th of April. It is needless to say I enjoyed the conference; I think it one of the best I ever attended. I think the work was never in better condition than now. I am now enjoying a visit, which will probably last a week or two, and then away again for the "sunny south." I hope the Saints of the South Western Mission will renew their diligence, and help to move on the great work. I will join you in your labor of love as soon as possible. God is speaking in no uncertain tones for our encouragment; so on to the conflict; the victory is ours! Only be humble, strong, and unwavering.

In bonds of peace, HEMAN C. SMITH.

Mondamin, Iowa, April 1885. Dear Herald:-It is some time since I have attempted to address you, although I have enjoyed your weekly visits very much. This Sabbath morning it rained so we could not attend church, as we have about four miles to go, so I thought to do the next best thing, viz., to peruse your interesting pages; and I am sure I feel encouraged to press onward in this good work, although I fear I make but slow progress. I shall ever pray for faith and wisdom and the Spirit of God to direct my wavering footsteps aright. I was baptized when fifteen years old, thirteen years ago. I was the only one in my father's family, for some years, who professed religion. A sister once spoke in prayer meeting with the spirit of prophecy, when I was quite young in the work, and said if I would be faithful some of my folks would come into the church. I waited three or four years, trying to be as faithful as I, in my weakness knew how, and began to fear it was not the right spirit that prompted the prophecy, or that I was not faithful enough, when a sister was led to see and obey the truth. Afterwards three other sisters and mother were brought into the fold; and last, but not least, my father at the last Reunion was led into the waters of baptism, to be born again. For all these mercies and blessings I am very thankful, and I do pray that all the precious souls who are born into the kingdom may "grow in grace, and in the knowlege of the truth," till they all come to a perfect knowledge of the Son of God, whom to know aright is life everlasting.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion and the spread of the gospel every where, I remain your CHRISTIE A. STEWART.

NEWTON, Iowa, May 2d, 1885.

Editor Herald:—The work at this place assumes the appearance of an improved condition, which we believe will be permanent. Our esteemed brother and branch president, George Walker, has been severely afflicted for several months, and has consequently not been with us as regular as he and the Saints desire. Our officiating branch Priest, (another old veteran) J. X. Davis, presides in the president's absence with a good degree of the Spirit. The spiritual gifts have been among us recently in considerable degree, and rich promises to saints have been given. Our district president, brother W. C. Nirk, was with us on last Sunday, and spoke to us on the unity of all true believers, and gave us excellent exhortation, and imparted to us some spiritual gifts. He administered to two sick children with immediate benefit. No true Saint can be with him and not feel that he is a temple of the Holy Spirit. It seems to encircle him as the atmosphere does our earth, and all who are in his presence, and are in proper condition, are nourished and strengthened by its bracing influence. We feel encouraged and hopeful, and look for orders to advance and take the fort. Yours in bonds.

WILBER, Neb., May 4th, 1885.

Dear Herald: - I am pleased to report that the clouds of trial are lifting. I am now permitted to be about my Master's business, in hope that nothing will prevent a continuance therein. The west bound train from Nebraska City, April 25th, carried Brn. James Caffall, J. W. Waldsmith, R. C. Elvin, J. Armstrong, J. B. Gouldsmith, J. Perrin and the writer, to the quarterly conference of the Southern Nebraska District; and notwithstanding we began the journey in a rain storm, all were cheerful and willing to trust to Him that doeth all things well.

The conference passed satisfactorily; the preaching was pronounced exceptionally good, and had the effect to remove the wire edge of prejudice to a considerable extent. There is a favorable opportunity of accomplishing some lasting good to the cause. The best of the wine was left till the last of the feast, or at least that was the feeling and expression of many upon the departure of the brethren for their homes and fields of duty. I was left to pull the laboring oar, which I sought to faithfully do during the remainder of the week. The labor was sealed by the addition of two; and those who were present at the confirmation, will long remember the peaceful influence of the divine spirit of love and light manifested.

By the advice and timely instruction of Bro. James Caffall, the branch gave due notice, and Bro. James E. Malcom was ordained and appointed a Teacher.

Last Saturday afternoon I arrived here, and was permitted to occupy the pulpit of the Baptist Church. There was a fair attendance; and vesterday at 11 a.m., I pronounced the funeral discourse of Bro. Wm. C. Nutt, from the same stand, Rev. Geo. E. Dye assisting; his choir doing the singing, using the Saints' Harp. The house was crowded to an excess, and many were compelled to leave, not being able to get in. I was gratified at seeing the interest taken in the occasion by Rev. Dye, who has proved himself to be a fair and honorable man. It is quite refreshing to meet such among the ministers of the present time, and more especially so here.

As many of the Herald readers are acquainted with Bro. Thomas Nutt, and knew that he was called home from the General Conference, by telegram, on account of his son getting hurt, a short explanation of the circumstance would be best, as many letters are coming to Bro. Nutt; which but continues and prolongs their sad feelings. Bro. Wm. C. Nutt was working in the mill at this place, and on the morning of April 4th got his right arm caught in the gearing, which severed the main artery. The flow of blood was stopped; his father was wired for, but he failed to arrive till the 8th. The great desire to save the arm prevented amputation, until it was a necessity to remove the arm in the shoulder joint. At 8 p. m. of the 14th ult., unperceived, the artery began to bleed, and was not discovered until Bro. Charles said, "There is something wrong." These were his last words; he passed away at once, without a struggle. Both Saints and friends have been kind to the family in their trying hour. In bonds,

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

The Moscow Gazette says it has reason to believe an honest expedient has been found by which both sides can settle the Russo-English dispute.

The London News, in a leading editorial, says the prospects for peace have been much cleared and more amply confirmed within the last fortyeight hours. A Russian dispatch, conciliatory in tones and substance, was sent to the Government by telegraph after the Czar conferred with his Ministers, and a courier with the official written reply to Earl Granville is now on the way to London. The News warns its readers, however, against hasty conclusions that peace is assured.

The Varna correspondent of The Tribune says that, notwithstanding every appearance that the danger of an Anglo-Russian conflict may pass away, the Sultan is very apprehensive as to the future. His Government has decided to strengthen the defenses of the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles in all possible means without delay, strengthening several of their weak points. A large battery of twenty guns has just been commenced in a most commanding position in the upper part of the Bosphorus. A small squadron of iron-clads will shortly be stationed in the Dardanelles. The plan proposed includes the establishment of Whitehead torpedo stations along the shores and electric lights to guard against night surprises. A firm at Berlin is supplying the necessary Whiteheads.

The greatest activity prevails in preparing the torpedo defenses on the Baltic. The entire coast of Finland is one network of traps for British

In the threatened conflict between England and Russia the situation is well characterized by a bon mot ascribed to Prince Bismarck: "It is easy enough to know what a wise man will do, but the reverse belongs to the unscrutable." Of course Gladstone is meant.

The Sunday editions of the London newspapers confirm the report that a secret treaty has been made between England and Turkey, according to the terms of which England will be allowed to send men-of-war through the Dardenelles in case of war.

FIVE GIANTS' SKELETONS UNEARTHED.

One of the most important discoveries of the many made in this prolific field of Indian mounds was made near Homer, Ohio. Beneath a small mound and five feet below the normal surface. five gigantic skeletons with their feet to the east were found in a grave with a stone floor. Remnants of burned bones and wood charcoal are plentiful, together with numerous stone vessels and weapons. The skeletons are of enormous size, the head of one being the size of a wooden bucket. The most striking articles besides the skeletons were a finely finished stone pipe, the bowl being large and polished and engraved with considerable care in a simple way—the figures are birds and beasts; a knife shaped like a sickle reversed and having a wooden handle held by leather thongs, and a kettle holding perhaps six quarts. Those who know say this find is one of the oldest in America and perhaps the most val-

THE NEW ORLEANS EXPOSITION.

A meeting of prominent citizens was held to consider the feasibility of continuing the exposition for another year. It was determined to send a committee to Washington to ascertain if the Government will permit its exhibit to remain another season, and to ask the War Department to garrison the grounds with troops to save the expense of a police force. On the report of this committee will rest the question of re-opening or not. There appears to be no trouble in raising the necessary funds to meet the expenses.

JOHN'S BAPTISM.

I wish to notice an article written by Bro. John Macauley, in the Herald, February 24th, 1883, claiming that John did not baptize for the remission of sin. He calls our attention to various scripture texts to support his claims. Also he says, "I now call upon my brethren, who hold John's baptism to be for the remission of sins, to give me their scripture texts for so doing, as fully as I have given mine." Furthermore he says, "Permit me to ask them to answer me one question, Was not John sent with the keys only of the law, to the Jews who were under a school-master, the Aaronic Priesthood, whose ordinances Paul says could never take away sins." Now, brother John, let us reason together, as children in the Kingdom of God, and ask our Father in heaven to give us the Holy Ghost to guide us into all truth. Permit me to say, that after reading all the texts you have given, I confess I fail to find one sentence of evidence to support your theory, that John did not baptize for the remission of sin; but rather must be admitted as collateral evidence to the reverse, that John did baptize for the remission of sin, and for that design and intent was he ordained, as is so plainly set forth in all the predictions leading to John's all important mission. But I will first answer your question, Was not John sent with the keys of the law, to the Jews, who were under a school-master to the Aronic priesthood? I say, no; John the Baptist was not sent to administer in the ordinances of the law, given to Moses for Israel, which Paul says, was a school-master to bring them unto Christ. Allow me to say that the covenant that the Lord made with Moses for Israel, which is called the law, or the old covenant, was a broken covenant, and had been thus decreed by the Lord six hundred years before John the Baptist came on to the stage of action. As proof, I call your attention to the 19th, 20th, and 21st chapters of Jeremiah, the prophet, where he says: "Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends, and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it; and I will give all Juda into the hands of the King of Babylon, and he shall carry them captive into Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword; moreover I will deliver all the strength of this city and all the labors thereof, and all the precious things thereof, and all the treasures of the King of Juda will I give into the hands of their enemies, which shall spoil them and take them and carry them to Babylon,"

The Lord's decree was fully and promptly executed in the reign of King Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, six hundred and six years before the coming of John the Baptist. Also, see Matthew 1:16. "All the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen, and from David until the carrying away into Babylon, are fourteen generations, and from the carrying away into Babylon until Christ are fourteen generations." Much more is said on this by Jeremiah, also Ezekiel and Isaiah; but suffice it to say, that Israel, by their disobedience and neglect to comply with the laws and ordinances of the covenant, the Lord did declare the covenant, with all its appendages, promises and blessings, null and void for fourteen generations before the coming of John the Baptist. But yet at sundry times and under divers circumstances, the Lord sent unto them angels and prophets. But which of them did they hear and obey? And what does the Lord say to Malachi, speaking of Israel chapter 1: "They have polluted my altar, and I have no pleasure in them, saith the Lord of Hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hands." Also, what says Jesus? Read Matthew, chapter 23d, there it says: The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat; "they say and do not." "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves. Ye blind guides, for ye are like unto whited sepulchres. Ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity. Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, ye build the tombs of the prophets, and say if we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets; wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets. Fill ye up the measure of your fathers. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers! How can ye escape the damnation of hell. Behold I send unto you prophets, and wise men and scribes; some of them ye shall kill and crucify, and some of them ve shall scourge in your synagogues, and prescute them from city to city, that upon you may come all the righteous blood shed on the earth from the blood of righteous Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar."

They had filled the measure predicted by the Prophet Isaiah, they had "transgressed the laws and changed the ordinances, which broke the covenants, and for about four hundred years the Lord had withdrawn his Prophets from the earth, and left the people to walk in their own ways, without a Prophet, without an Angel, without a revelation; and we may say without a God, to guide them; for all divine communication had been cut off, from the days of Malachi to the coming of John the Baptist, which covers a period of four hundred years. The people had spiritually been without God, and in this time of spiritual darkness, the God of heaven and earth thought proper to fulfill the promise made to his Prophet Jeremiah, 31: 31, which reads. "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the House of Judah. Not according to the covenant I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt, which covenant they broke, although I was a husband unto them, saith the Lord. But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel, after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws in their inward parts, and write them in their hearts, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people; and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, know ye the Lord; for they shall all know me from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord. For I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sins no more, saith the Lord." Thus we see that all the subjects of this new covenant were to have their sins and their iniquities remitted; for the Lord said, (that lies not), "I will forgive their iniquities and I will remember their sins no more." And may we not call this a remission of sin; I say yes.

We will now examine and see; how and by what means, this sin and iniquity were remitted, and this covenant established, Yes, this New and Everlasting covenant of life and immortality, in which all men are to know God. For Jesus said, it was immortality and eternal life, "To know God and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent; The Lord said to his Prophet, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way, before me." If I understand this language, we have to look for a messenger direct from God, to prepare the way for the establishment of this New covenant of life and immortality. I will now call your attention to a careful reading of the first chapter of St. Luke, where it reads, "There was in the days of Herod, the King of Judea, a certain priest named Zacharias, of the course of Abia. And his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elisabeth, and they had no child, because that Elisabeth was barren. And it came to pass that while he executed the priest's office before God according to the custom of the priest's office, there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord, and the angel said unto him, fear not, Zacharias, for thy prayer is heard, and thy wife Elizabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shall call his name John; for he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink, and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb, and many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God. And Zacharias said unto the angel, Whereby shall I know this? And the angel answering said unto him, I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am come to speak unto thee; and to shew thee these glad tidings." Also it reads: "In the sixth month, the angel Gabriel was sent from God, to a virgin, espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the virgin's name was Mary." Then here we have an account of a messenger direct from God, with authority and power to prepare the way for the establishing of this new Covenant, and I doubt not, that he did all things in accordance with the will of God that sent him. What did Gabriel do? First, he calls John the Baptist from his mother's womb; and filled him with the Holy Ghost. Also the same angel Gabriel calls forth Jesus from his mother's womb, and says he was sent from God so to do. Then in this also he is God's special messenger to this earth, to do the work of preparing for the establishing of this new and everlasting Covenant of life and immortality.

Now, let us for a moment review the positive, certain, absolute language of the Angel Gabriel, in the word shall. "Thy wife shall," "thou shalt," "he shall," which go to show that he had legal authority to execute and perform. We will now turn to Luke, third chapter, where it reads: "The word of the Lord came unto John, the son of Zacharias, in the wilderness. And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. As it is written in the book of the prophet Esaias: The voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." And as the people were in expectation of a Messiah, which had been predicted by the old prophets, "All men mused in their hearts of John whether he were the Christ or not. But John an-swered, saying unto them all, I indeed baptize you with water, but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose; he shall bap-tize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire. And many other things in his exhortations preached he unto the people." We will now turn to Mark, first chapter, where it reads: "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God; as it is written in the prophets, Behold I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare the way before thee; the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." Also he says, "John did baptize in the wilderness, and preached the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. And there went out unto him all the land of Judea and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river Jordan, con-fessing their sins. And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Gallilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. And coming up out of the water he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descended upon him; and there came a voice, saying, "Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

We will now turn to Luke, first chapter, where it reads, "And it came to pass that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child, and they called him after his father, Zacharias; and his mother said, Not so, but he shall be called John; also his father wrote, saying, His name is

John. And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost and prophesied, saying, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people, as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began, to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant. And [now the laws of Moses] thou child, John, shall be called the prophet of the highest; for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord, to prepare his way; to give knowledge of [what? the laws of Moses? no] salvation unto his people, by the remission of their sins." By an absolute obedience to the gospel covenant. Therefore I claim, that John the Baptist was a legal messenger to the people, to whom he was sent, called of God by the Angel Gabriel, who stands in the presence of God to do his will; and second, I claim that John's calling was to preach the gospel of the kingdom of God, and not the laws of Moses. And third, that his message was to all men that may come under the sound of his voice, Jew or Gentile, bond or free, and to the Jews only; and that John was legally authorized to administer in the ordinances of the New Covenant, the gospel of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, the Son of God; faith, repentance, and baptism in water for the remission of sins, as those are positively God's decreed ordinances, established in the new and everlasting covenant, for that purpose as the door of adoption into the covenant and kingdom. And that there is no other way by which a man can become a legal subject of that covenant, or kingdom. Furthermore, I say, if the baptism of John was illegal, then the baptism of Jesus was illegal; for Jesus received his baptism at the hand of John. And if it can be proved that the baptism of John was null, or nullified, by whom it may, then the whole mission must fall, and we are yet in our sins. May I ask you the question, Who ordained Joseph Smith and gave him the authority to go forth and baptize for the remission of sins? I say, John the Baptist, May 15th, 1829.

Brethren, it must be that we remember that the kingdom of God is a kingdom of order; and honor must be given where honor is due. John the Baptist is God's chosen messenger, and has the legal authority to administer in that ordinance in the new and everlasting covenant, and in order to obtain that authority, it must come through John the Baptist, and those on whom he may confer the authority. And what said Jesus? "Suffer it to be so, for thus it behooveth us." He knew it was the legal order of the kingdom, and even the king himself must obey. It is evident from the history that Jesus did not preach or practice baptism, until after he was baptized by John; and from that time he was esteemed as one of John's disciples. And out of the immense concourse of people that had followed him, that believed in the gospel as taught by him, and that before John was cast into prison where he was beheaded, he did positively identify Jesus to them, as the one that should come after him, As proof I call your attention to John, chapter 4, where it reads: "The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and said to them, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me; for he was before me, and I knew him not; but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he which baptized with the Holy Ghost. And I saw and bear record, that this is the son of God. And one of them that heard John speak was Andrew. And Andrew then goes and finds his brother, Simon Peter, and said to him, we have found the Messias, or Christ. And the day following they findeth Philip, and Philip findeth Nathaniel, and said unto him, we have found him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets did write, the Messias, or the Christ, the son of God."

And thus we see, faith had come by earing. And on this faith Nathaniel said: "Thou art the son of God, thou art the king of Israel." Also we read in Luke, chapter 7th, verse 29. "And all the people that heard him, and the Publicans, justified God, being baptized of John; but the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God, against themselves, being not baptized of him." And shall we reject John, or his baptism? If we do, we will reject the legal counsel of God, sent to us by his holy angel and prophet. But I say, God forbid. "Better a millstone was hung about our neck, and we be cast into the sea." And what did Jesus himself say of John: "What went ye out for to see? a prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more then a prophet; Verily I say unto you, among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist." And it must be admitted that John the Baptist laid the foundation of the primitive church, and opened the door of the gospel dispensation. His doctrine was faith in Jesus Christ as the son of God; repentance for sins, and baptism in water for the remission of sins; and thousands believed and obeyed his message; and thus a people was prepared for the Lord, watching and waiting for him that should baptize with the Holy Ghost. R. SMITH.

MORE APOSTLES THAN TWELVE.

Now the names of the first apostles are these; Simon, (Peter), Andrew, James, (son of Zebedee), John, Philip, Bartholonew, Thomas, Matthew, James, (son of Alpheus), Lebbeus, (Thaddeus, Judas), Simon, (the Canaanite), and Judas Iscariot. Matthias, Andronicus, Junia, James, (the Lord's brother, son of Joseph and Marv), Sosthenes, Barnabas, Paul, Apollos, Silvanus, and Timotheus—ten more, making twenty-two in all. I would be glad, if I could point out the proper order in which each man took the office as to place and date, but I can not. But no doubt when one fell through death or transgression, another was placed in his stead, as may be seen in the case of Matthias, (Acts 1: 25. 26), who took the place of Judas who fell by transgression, and thus kept the quorum of twelve men, as apostles, in the church. For proof that there were twenty-two apostles see first the twelve Jesus chose:

"And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease. Now the names of the twelve apostles are these: The first, Simon, who is called Peter, and Andrew, his brother; James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother; Philip, and Bartholomew; Thomas, and Matthew the publican; James the son of Alphæus, and Lebbæus, whose surname was Thaddæus; Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him."—Matt. 10: 1-4.

See also Mark 3: 16-19; Luke 6: 13-16. Matthias took the place of Judas who

"And they appointed two, Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias. And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen, that he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place. And they gave forth their lots; and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles."—Acts 1: 23-26.

"Salute Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellowprisoners, who are of note among the apostles, who also were in Christ before me. -Rom. 16:7.

Andronicus and Junia, we think were apostles, but the passage does not clearly prove it; if they were we think they were such before Paul, and some others. James the Lord's brother comes next:

"Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

"But other of the apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother." Gal 1: 18, 19.

Sosthenes, an apostle.

"Paul, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God, and Sosthenes our brother."—I. Cor. I: I.

Barnabas and Paul.

"And they called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul,

Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker.
"Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and would have done sacrifice with the people.

"Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard of, they rent their clothes, and ran in among the people, crying out,

"And saying, Sirs, why do ye these things! We also are men of like passions with you, and preach unto you that ye should turn from these vanities unto the living God, which made heaven; and earth, and the sea, and all things that are there in:—"Acts 14: 12--15.

Now read Acts 13: 1-3 where you will find how they were called and set apart.

"Now there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.

"As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

"And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.'

Apollos was also an apostle.

"Let a man so account of us as of the ministers' of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God. * * * *

"And these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollus for your sakes; that ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another. * * * "For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels and to men."—1. Cor. 4: 1, 6, 9.

Silvanus and Timotheus were apostles, and to clearly prove it read the following:

"Paul, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians which is in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ: Grace be unto you, and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

"Nor of men sought we glory, neither of you, not yet of others, when we might have been burdensome, as the apostles of Christ."—1 Thess. 1:1;

Peter, James, and John, may have become the three first presidents as the church grew.

"And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be ipillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision." Gal. 2:9.

And, that James may have been the head of the three, is seen in Acts 15: 13-20. Gal. 2: 12, and yet they may still be called apostles, as Jesus Christ was, and yet not be of the quorum of twelve but higher.

"Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus;

"Who was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house." Heb. 3; 1, 2.

COMMON SENSE VS SCIENCE.

ELMIRA, Mitchell Co., Kan.

BRO. JOSEPH SMITH:-The few thoughts I have penned of the geology story, is the other side as I have learned it from a practical experience of over twenty-five years in mining. I have read many of the suppositions of those who must never have dug coal, else they would not have need to suppose; and ofttimes men have tried to destroy the Bible while we would be discussing religion on the geological story, but I have always been able to beat them off in the coal story. I am no writer, and don't lay claim to learning; and these few lines in which I have tried to be as brief as I could on such a great subject, are written with but one aim; that is, in showing up the other side. The falsehoods will appear, and mayhap help them to see who may not understand. Much could be written to disprove the story of geology, but I don't want to intrude; and unless you think these lines will be able to show some light you need not give them room-just throw them in the waste basket, there will be no offence; there is where I will get sent myself if not worthy of a better place.

Yours sincerely, WILLIAM CAIRNS.

IS THE STORY OF GEOLOGY TRUE?

The geologists tell us that the earth as we now know it was from sixty to eighty millions of years in forming, ere it was fit for the abode of man. They say coal was once a mighty forest, or a great marsh of ferns, which grew to great size, fell into the water, formed into peat beds, was subject to great heat and pressure, and was transformed into coal.

Peat beds, as we find them, are composed of a black, soft, spongy substance, but if it ever was vegetable, there is no evidence in any of the peat beds that I have worked, for rootlets, trees, ferns, or even their stems, were not to be found.

Lignites, or brown coal, as we find it here in Kansas, lies in beds from one to three feet thick, and sometimes divided into two and three parts by bands of slate; the poorest and heaviest is always at the bottom; the lightest and best is always at the top. Mixed through it are small balls of sulphur about the size of marbles. There is no tarry or resineous matter in it.

Bituminous coal is a black substance, full of tarry or resinous matter, often divided with bands of slate; and the lightest and best is most always at the top, while the heaviest and poorest is at the bottom. In this case the sulphur is most always in cakes.

Semi-bitiminous, is a brittle black substance, full of resinous matter with no tar, and but little sulphur, though often divided with bands of slate-the best coal always at the top.

Anthracite coal is a very hard, black substance, with no tar or resinous matter; sometimes almost free from sulphur, and sometimes so full of it as to be unfit for use as fuel; often divided with bands of slate, and sometimes, as in the big veins, the bands of slate are from one to three feet thick. Some beds of coal are laid on sandrock, others again have a few inches of fire-clay, then sand-rock; others are found with slate beneath, while here in Kansas the lignites have mostly all a sandrock bed, with sometimes a fire-clay roof.

Geologists tell us that the fire-clay under the coal was the soil on which the trees and ferns grew. If so, there must have been roots; but I have yet to find the first one, and I have made many a long search, but never yet saw anything in the shape of a root or rootlet. But what of the coals where there is no fire-clay beneath to call soil? Was it also transformed? If coal was transformed from peats to lignites, how came the beds of slate and sulphurballs, since there is none in peats? And where did the bituminous coal get its tar and resinous matter, since there is none in lignites? And how comes it that there is no tar in semi-bituminous, since there is tar in bituminous, and neither tar nor resinous matter in anthracite?

Yes; it was transformed they tell us by great heat and pressure, yet in the rocks and clavs above and below the coals there is the tiny shells just as the fish left them. There are the slugs and mussel shells in great abundance, and sometimes the skeletons of serpents, but never a bone of a land animal to be found, and there must have been animals in those great forests claimed. I have searched long for the claimed. I have searched long for the evidence, but never found it; and I have yet to know the first thinking miner who has looked for the proofs, who has ever found anything that would enable him to believe the story.

Geologists tell us that the stratum of the earth was laid in deep earth, settling as sediment; then so was coal, as the shells of fishes above and below do truly testify; and even the coal as it is laid gives evidence that it was just laid the same way as the rocks above and below. If the story of geology is true, then we can not believe the story of Moses that in six days the Lord God made the heaven and earth—no not even if we take the Lord's day of a thousand years, as some believe it was, and that when the Lord tells us, his children, of his works, it is his time; but what we are told to do, it is in our time, so we may understand. There is no supposition about Moses' story; he tells us that in the beginning God created the heaven and earth, and so on all through, as the Lord revealed it to him. And as there was no need to misrepresent, and as God our Father always tells us in plain and simple language, if it had not been as Moses has related, we would not have the revelation as it reads. And Moses is so plain and easy to be understood, it is much the easiest to believe; for by the word of his power it was done, even as he spoke. God said let there be light, and there was light; and so on till the heaven and the earth were finished; and on the seventh day he rested. And when we look abroad to the starry sky and see the wonderful works of the great I AM, who can help but believe that he who knew all things was able to complete this earth as Moses has related?

Geologists set up in opposition a great many suppositions. They tell us of Cenozoic time, of Mesozoic time, and Paleozoic time, using a great many jaw-breaking words to tell of what they have, which is only this or that supposition, to make it appear as truth, when the plain facts are they don't know anything about it, though it would not do for an ignorant, coal-digger to tell them so. But even coal-diggers can think, and they often think as did Burns, that what these geological fellows lack in common sense, they eke it out with learning.

They tell us how that these great canyons in the Rocky Mountains were all worn down by the slow disintegrating action of water, and that everything was slowly formed through fixed laws. Who ever reads the records and believes therein, learns that all the great changes that have been on this earth were not by any slow process, but more like the story of the beginning "by the word of his power and it was so," such as the flood, the destruction of Sodom and Gomorah; and in the Book of Mormon of the many cities that were sunk, the lakes that was formed, all in the short time of a few hours. Read it for themselves who will, and it will be seen that it is just the reverse of what the geologist would have us believe. therein is the great evil that the geologist has done, to destroy the truth of the records, as that is the first thing the unbelievers will bring up—"Just look what science has done to confound that old book." And so it is with the unthinking, they would rather believe so-called science than the revealed word. But with those who have taken the books for their aid, there is nothing in geology that they need fear; for since they have made so many blunders in trying to prove that coal was once a forest, what can they know about our good old mother earth? And until they can give us something better than supposition, it is best to believe the records as they read, for therein there is nothing of suppositions.

THE BIBLE.

THE word bible is from the Greek word biblos, meaning book—The Book, to distinguish it above all other books. God's word given to men for his spiritual guide; heaven's best gift. "How do we know that it is true?" inquires one who has not had interest enough to investigate the subject. We will answer; there are many, very many ways of knowing that it is true, and now point out such as shall come to mind.

Those who have travelled in the country where the historical events recorded in the Scripture transpired, find many relics which prove that history to be true. The customs of the people, and their traditions prove the same. There are other histories that harmonize perfectly with its historical accounts: Josephus for example. If we notice the commands God gave the Israelites, the promises he made them, and the conditions on which they were made, and then trace their history down to the present day, we shall find his word as given in the Scripture perfectly verified, and not in their case only but in the case of all other nations of whom the Scriptures speak. That should be enough to satisfy the mind of any reasonable person; but it is not all that is given us. The beautiful rainbow which has never forgotten since the flood to decorate the sky, adds its testimony to the word of God. "What measure ye mete it shall be measured unto you again," and like passages of scripture, are daily being fulfilled before our eyes, and yet many will still stand up and show their willful ignorance by asking how we know it is true, or by denying it.

But thanks be to God, there are a few who have obeyed his commands, and have by his Holy Spirit received an unmistakeable evidence that the Bible is His word, and His word is truth—and infallible truth. The heavens and the earth shall pass away, but His word shall stand the same forever. To the honest hearted, although unregenerated, every passage of a temporal nature shows itself to be true, and every spiritual one seems to the spiritually born like apples of gold in pictures of silver.

O, brother man! no longer walk in this bible land with your eyes and heart closed to its truthfulness! There are many ways to know of its truthfulness; and on that knowledge hangs your soul's salvation.

Had not the Bible been the word of the living God, it never could have lived through the tests it has passed through. In the dark age, or when the Roman power held sway, every means, even to the sentence of death, was restored to that the Bible might be put out of the land. People were authorised by the Pope to go into every house and demand their Bibles. Possession of a copy of Tyndale's translation of the New Testament was sufficient to convict the owner of heresy, and subject him to the flames. In A. D., 1534 a revised edition of this Bible was published on the continent; and two years later, in England, Tyndale was strangled and burnt, A. D., 1536, in the reign of Henry the viiith. In 1540, a copy of this Bible was required by law to be placed in every parish church, but two years later the Papist power succeeded in suppressing it. It was soon restored however, and before 1570, was quite common. We read years ago of the wonderful preservation of one Bible, and the only one in that place. A woman saw the Bible robbers coming, and hid hers in a barrel of meal. She quietly let them search the house, and they left being satisfied, not once thinking of such a hiding place for the precious book.

A few years since, there was in Ohio a very old Bible, one which had passed through the trying days of the Reformation. It was in the possession of a German family. In those days each volume was hunted like a wild beast, but this one's escape was wonderful. The owner was kneading her bread when some one told her, her precious volume was in danger. She hastily wrapped it in a thick cloth, placed it in the dough, and set it to rise. The cruel men came in, overturned and searched every thing in the house except the dough. They never dreamed that the loaf that the good woman watched so attentively contained what they sought. They still lingered, and the bread became light, so with a prayerful heart she placed it in the oven. When they had gone, she took out the bread with a throbbing heart and found her book unharmed. Bible was saved in a simple way, for generations then unborn. God has thus simply, yet wonderfully, taken care of the sacred history of the Jews, or the stick of Judah, as it is called in Ezekiel; and he has also as simply and as wonderfully taken care of the sacred history of the prehistoric races of this continent, "the stick of Ephraim." It matters not in what age God's word was given, or through whom it was given, it can not be destroyed. It will stand as firm as the everlasting hills. One might as well war against the sun, the planets, or the innumerable host of stars, or even God himself, as to war against his word. O puny man, puny man; study the word, know thyself and fear thy God. For if you have it within your reach, you must be judged by it. Those who are without the law, are not judged by it; but those who have it must certainly be condemned or justified by it, in accordance to their doings.

In the days of Christ, the Old Testament was all the written spiritual guide It was called Scriptures. Bible was applied as a name only a few hundred years ago. There were more books in the Old Testament then, than we now have, as the close observer knows. In the early ages, the art of preserving literature was quite different from the present. No printing, all pen work, all done on parchment, wax, plates of metal, etc. A copy of the scriptures was so expensive, only the most wealthy could obtain them. Consequently they were kept in the synagogues, and the devout assembled there on the Sabbath and heard them read. Hence Christ said, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me."

The Old Testament was written in the Hebrew language up to the time of the Babylonish captivity; then in the Chaldean. The New Testament was written in the Greek. The Old Testament was translated into the Greek about three hundred years before Christ. It was called the Septaugint version, from a Latin word signifying seventy. It was said to have been translated by seventy elders, and also approved of by the Sanhedrim, which consisted of seventy persons. Soon after the Apostles' writings were published, the whole was translated into the Latin for the use of Christians that spoke that language. This was called the Vulgate, because that was the common language spoken by the Romans. The first edition of this, and the first entire Bible bearing date, was published in this language in Mentz, Germany. About the middle of the last century a copy of it was found in the Library at Paris. Its publication referred to 1450. As printing was invented in 1444, it could not have been earlier than that date. The art of printing was then but in its infancy, very rude compared with the present. The Bible was the first book ever printed, so we see that in that age the first fruits were dedicated to the Lord, and no doubt that is why it has been so prosperous. In the reign of Edward I. of England, the price of a fairly written Bible was £37, or $164. At the same time the hire of a laborer was three cents a day. At that rate it would take a laborer more than fifteen years to procure a Bible. They had a better excuse for not reading it than we have. People now have far greater facilities for understanding the Scriptures than in any other age of the world, consequently less excuse if they do not.

In 1603 Dr. John Reynolds, of Oxford, England, proposed a new translation. The king, James the I., favored the suggestion, and appointed fifty-four learned men to do the work. Only forty-four engaged in the work. Their's was a great and a glorious work, yet not a perfect one, as the close observer knows there are many mistakes in that work. In 1611 this Bible was published, and has been more generally used than any other version.

The first Bible printed on this continent was in native Indian—the New Testament in 1661, and the old in 1663; both by Rev. John Eliot. They were published at Cambridge, Massachusetts. The next was printed in German, in 1676, Philadelphia, by Christopher Sower. The first American edition in English, was printed in Boston, in 1752, by Keerland and Green, in small quarto, seven or eight hundred copies. We wish that some reader of the Herald would inform us through its columns how many different translations of the Bible there are in use at present. We felt constrained to write this article, and hope it may do good. We give it to the Lord. ALMIRA M. SNOW.

IMMORTALITY AND ETERNAL LIFE.

THERE seems to be a marked difference in the signification of these two words. In Rom. 2:7, those who seek for "immortality," are promised "eternal life;" and in 1st Tim. 6: 16, it is stated-God "only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto." If we view an immortal being as one who can not, under any conditions, die; then we must judge that God only is such an one. Christ was the world's Creator, and was with God when he said, "Let us make man," yet he was not immortal, for under conditions he died; but God is so far superior to all conditions that he can not possibly die, being absolutely independent. Eternal life is promised to all who obey the gospel, and seems to be a state of never-ending existence, dependent upon conditions.

The great aim of christians is to become Christ-like; and one attribute in which his superiority to man was shown was that he could die for his enemies, whereas man can have no greater love than to die for his friends; and to be perfect in this stage of existence in that attribute is to be able to do so. But we hope by the instructions we may receive during the Millenium to be able, (if needs be), to do as he did—die for our enemies. Until we have arrived at that state of perfection, we have not become Christ-like in that sense. And if man ever attains to immortality, he must arrive to a status of independence of, and superiority over, all or any conditions exceeding Christ's, at least until his resurrection.

In the present life we obey the gospel, and then "pass from death unto life;" but it is understood that we retain the life under conditions. During the Millenium we will have eternal life; but we certainly will retain it under conditions. After the elements have melted with fervent heat, the earth becomes like a sea of glass, and the redeemed celestialized, will they not still live under conditions? Is there a kingdom in the universe in which the citizens are not governed by law? they not then be dependent upon God? And with their agency acute, will they not exist under conditions? And so long as this is the case, are they absolutely immortal? I judge St. Paul was right, God "only hath immortality." But it was reserved for the "Seer of Palymra" to restore the highest standard of hope that ever had been given the race, to give us again that more sublime, far reaching, and consolatory declaration, than ever was made by Prophet, Seer, or Revelator, since Moses' day. God speaking by him affirms—

"This is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." He will most assuredly accomplish it, and we can again only ask, when?

We publish the following by request:

TO THE BOYS WHO WORE THE BLUE.

At the last State Encampment of the G. A. R. the question of a re-union of the old soldiers of Iowa and the Northwest was freely discussed, and not a dissenting voice heard. It was proposed that such meeting be held in the summer of 1886, at Des Moines, Iowa. It is believed that the Iowa Legislature to convene in January next will gladly aid in making the re-union a part of the history of our glorious commonwealth. In order that a convention may be called at an early day, looking to a thorough and complete organization, correspondence is invited. We wish every old soldier could be heard from.

Address Geo. H. Nichols, Com. Kinsman Post, Des Moines, Iowa.

BORN.

CASE.—Near Clairville, California, April 5th, 1885, to William and Sr. Tryphena Case a son; named Edward Franklin.

DIED.

CARMICHAEL.—At San Benito, San Benito county, Cal., March 27th, 1885, Bro. John Carmichael, aged 65 years. Bro. Carmichael leaves a dear companion and several children and a host of loving friends to mourn his loss. Our brother embraced the everlasting gospel in Scotland, his native home, when he was about twenty-two years old. He had been raised up strictly in the Presbyterian faith and discipline, and when the fulness of the gospel was presented to him his young and honest heart responded to the Shepherd's voice, and he went forth and obeyed the gospel of Jesus Christ as it was fully restored in these last days.

Having been called to the ministry, he labored hard for the Master in his native land. As he was far away from Zion in America, and not knowing the depths of the apostasy of the church, he emigrated to Utah; but, on landing, he soon saw and felt and knew that they had disobeyed the law of God given to the church in 1831, and, as a consequence, that the leaders of the church at Utah had denied the original faith and lost the spirit, and that Utah was not Zion, nor one of her stakes: he, therefore, left Utah in disgust and came to California.

When the Missionaries of the Reorganized Church came into his neighborhood and preached by the same spirit the elders did who first brought him the fulness of the gospel, he knew the Shepherd's voice and was received into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and once more enjoyed the Holy Spirit, by which he was sealed on entering the Charch in Scotland before the apostasy of and rejection of the old church. Holding the priesthood and office of an Elder, he has labored faithfully in the ministry ever since, having filled with credit to himself and with profit to the church the office of Presiding Elder over the Northern District of California for two terms, and when the district was divided he was left in the Middle District, where he has since lived and labored faithfully in the ministry until he was struck down with paralysis over a year ago; sometime afterward he received a second shock, and on Friday March 27th, received the third while going from his house to the barn and died instantly.

He was brought to Hollister, over thirty miles from his residence, where the funeral services were held in the Christian Church; that body of Christians not only giving us the use of their church but their choir discoursed sweet music on the occasion. It was estimated that over four hundred attended the services.

We officiated, and endeavored by the aid of the Divine Spirit to portray the beauty, glory and fulness of the gospel of Christ, and His wonderful plan of salvation and redemption of the human family, and to speak words of consolation and encouragement to the bereaved ones, and point out the fruition of the hope set before us in the gospel, and to urge the believing ones "not to sorrow as those who have no hope."

The weather was cool, the day propitious, and many Saints, who loved, honored and revered Bro. Carmichael, were present to assist in paying their last tribute of respect to his mortal remains. He rests with the just, to come again with his Master to reign on earth a thousand years. May our last days be like his. He was prepared to go. God bless and strengthen Sister Carmichael, and her children and adopted children, and all the Saints who love her in the Lord! is our prayer. Amen.—Expositor.

COBURN.—At Blenheim, Ont., April 4th, 1885, of paralysis of the heart, James Asil, son of Richard and Margaret A. Coburn; aged 6 years, 11 months and 24 days. Funeral sermon by Elder Samuel Brown to a large congregation. This is their second son which has died within the last year. The Saints and friends of this place sympathise with them in their sad bereavement.

Fare thee well, thou fondly cherished! Dear, dear Asil, fare thee well; He who lent thee, hath recalled thee, Back with him and his to dwell.

Johnson.—At Reese, Michigan, April 20th, 1885, Sr. Charlotte Johnson, aged 52 years. She bore her sickness with patience, and departed in peace. She was baptized by Elder Luff, eight years ago last February. She leaves a family of six, who deeply mourn her loss. Funeral held at M. E. Church, by E. Delong.

WOODSTOCK.—At Janesville, Wisconsin, April 6th, 1885, with pneumonia, Sr. Samantha Woodstock, aged 79 years, 2 months and 17 days. She was baptized in 1832, by Elder Gideon Carter, and always lived a consistent and devoted Saint. She was the mother of twelve children, six of whom, three sons and three daughters, survive her.

NUTT.—At Wilber, Nebraska, April 14th, 1885, at eight p.m., from bleeding, resulting from a hurt received in the Wilber Mills, April 4th, Bro. William C. Nutt. He was 25 years, 8 months and 24 days old at the time of decease; was baptized and confirmed by his father, Thomas Nutt, February 6th, 1871; was a good and dutiful son, a faithful and exemplary member of the church; esteemed and respected as a citizen. Funeral sermon at First Baptist Church, May 3d, by Elder Robert C. Elvin, assisted by Rev. George E. Dye. The song service by the choir of the church. Death loves a shining mark.

Adamson, -Milton Adamson, of throat and lung consumption, near Petaluma, Cal., March 24th, 1885. A few hours before his death he was seen gazing intently above his head, and reached his hands up as if to grasp at something. He was asked if he had seen angels; he faintly answered, yes; then his struggles commenced, and he died with the setting of the sun. Milton often expressed his desire to live, but was perfectly resigned to go if it was the Lord's will. He was honored and loved by all who knew him, was never known to speak a cross word to his mother, was a dutiful and loving son, devoted in religion. When leaving home for a time, would never forget to give his mother a parting kiss, and his brothers a warm, hearty grip of the hand. He leaves three sisters, five brothers and and an aged mother to mourn his death.

We miss thee at home, dear brother,
The home of thy childhood days;
Thou'rt gone to meet the departed,
That the angels have borne away.
When we cross the river of death,
To dwell on the radiant shore;
We'll meet thee again, dear brother,
May we meet to part no more.

EARLY.—At her home in Pleasanton, Iowa, after a brief illness, Sister Una Early, April 1st, 1885, aged 35 years, ten months. A grief stricken husband and three loving children, together with her aged mother, sister Griffith, are left to mourn her departure. She passed in full hope of the resurrection of life. Sermon by Elder Z. H. Gurley.

WAIT.—At Whitcomb, Wisconsin, March 24th, 1885, Zaida E. Wait, wife of Elder J. M. Wait, aged 60 years, 4 months and 23 days; was baptized May, 1847, by Elder J. M. Wait, under Jas. J. Strang; was re-baptized by Elder J. M. Wait, and united with the Reorganized Church in May, 1862. She was a devoted member, never was ashamed to let it be known that she was a Latter Day Saint, and was always ready to bear her testimony to the truth of a restored gospel. She died very suddenly-was sick only about one hour with disease of the heart. Her last words to her husband were, "Let me go! Let me go!" and calmly passed away. Funeral services by W. S. Montgomery.

BRATTAIN.—At his home near Pleasanton, Iowa, March 15th, 1885, of pneumonia, Brother Brattain, of Pennsylvania, aged 70 years. A wife and children mourn his loss. His faith and confidence were in Him who is the resurrection and the life. Sermon by Elder Z. H. Gurley.

GRADY.—At Rockford, Illinois, April 15th, 1885, of pneumonia, after two months' illness, sister F. W. Grady, aged 72 years, four months and nine days. Numbers of the Saints will remember having met Sr. Grady at Amboy and Plano. She was born in Oneida County, New York in 1812, and was baptized at Amboy, Illinois, April 19th, 1863 by Elder Charles Williams. She was steadfast in her faith unto the end, though seldom during her last year even seeing one of the saints. The Rockford paper sent me by Sr. Jennie Leland says of Sr. Grady: "She was a lady greatly respected in her life. Calmly and peacefully she passed away, without pain or lament."

LANDLES.—At Twin Creeks, Wyoming, April 23rd, 1885, John, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. David and Christina Landles, aged four months and eleven days. Funeral services conducted by A. J. Layland.

Bays.—Near Persia, Harrison county, Iowa, March 23d, 1885, of typhoid pneumonia, after eight days' illness, Sr. Elizabeth J: wife of Elder Davis H. Bays, aged 42 years, six months and seventeen days. She was born in Madison County, Illinois, and joined the Reorganized Church by baptism in 1860, the rite being administered by Elder E. C. Briggs.

GAINES.—Near Victoria, Illinois, April 20th, 1885, of congestion of the brain, while visiting at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Cook, Sister Ellen E. Gaines, aged 35 years, 11 months and two days. She joined the Reorganized Church at the age of nineteen and has lived a consistent Christian life; leaving behind her a shining example and blessed memory, to those who mourn her early and sudded death. She leaves a husland and three children, and a large circle of relatives and friends.

SNYDER.-At the same time with Sr. Bays was buried her son-in-law, Mr. Luther M. Snyder, aged 23 years and two days. He was killed by his team running away the next day after the death of Sr. Bays. The double calamity to this family called out the sympathy of the entire community, and the gathering at the grave was very large. No sermon was preached, but Brn. Phineas Cadwell and David Chambers held services when the bodies were laid to rest in the cemetery at Persia. It was a sad and impressive time to all present.

VALIER.-In Hazel Dell Township, Pottawattamie County, Iowa, April 29th, 1885, Sr. Mary, wife of Mr. Alexander Valier, aged 74 years, 11 months and nine days. Sr. Valier received the gospel as taught by the saints in 1836, in Canada; passed through the dark days of apostasy, but retained the faith and embraced the work of the Reorganized Church of which she was a member until death. She leaves a husband and eight children to mourn her loss. Funeral services by Elder H. N. Hansen.

MATTHEWS.—At New Park, York county, Pa., March 11th, 1885, Ozella Matthews, aged 4 weeks and 4 days.

BROWN.-At her home in Leon, Iowa, April 16th, 1885; after an illness of four months, Sister Brown, aged nearly 87 years. She leaves 8 children, 44 grand and 34 great-grand children to battle with earth-life. She rests in peace. Services by ${f Z}.$ H. Gurley.

WILDER.—At the residence of his son, J. R. Wilder, Knokville, Illinois, April 22d, 1885, Joseph Wilder, in the 87th year of his age.

ELDER ANGUS M. CANNON, brother of George Q. Cannon, one of the First Presidents of the Utah Mormon Church, who was recently convicted of unlawful cohabitation, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of three hundred dollars, states the following in an address in Salt Lake City, the 3d inst., from which it will be seen that, up to 1851, but little was known even by the Utah Mormon ministers in regard to polygamy then existing in their church. And it is also seen how ignorant they were-Mr. Cannon at least—of the teachings of the books they professed to believe, in respect to marriage and polygamy.

Here is what he says:-

"In 1851, in these mountains, I had occasion to be tried with the practice of the Saints in the principle of celestial marriage, vulgarly termed by the world polygamy. I remember on one occasion telling a brother who was paying addresses to a sister of mine two years my senior, that if she married him I would disown her.

"Why?" asked he.

"Because it is a principle that I do not know anything about, and my sister has neither father nor mother to council her," said I.

"You will think better of this, Angus, hereafter," he replied.

"And in the fall of 1852 the revelation on celestial marriage was read, and I was made familiar with its truths. I endeavored to controvert it by the Scriptures that I had demonstrated through the testimony of the Lord Jesus to be true. I failed. While I expressed myself as regretting that God should have revealed such a principle, I asserted that while I wanted to curlail no other person's liberty, I never expected to practice it."

From this it appears Mr. Cannon knew nothing of polygamy in their church till 1851; and that in the fall of 1852, when the revelation on that matter was first published, he opposed it, and "endeavored to controvert it by the Scriptures," but "failed." If he had read the Book of Mormon and believed it, he would have rejected polygamy, and controverted it with success; for it declares it to be "abominable" before God, a "grosser" crime than pride and covetousness, a cause of "great condemnation," and denounces "wo, wo" to those who practice it except they repent. This may be seen in Book of Jacob, second chapter. The Book of Ether, chapter four, denounces polygamy as a huge evil; and the Book of Mosiah, chapter seven, exhibits the polygamy of King Noah and his priests, denouncing it as infamous, and then foretells the curses and judgments which follow it. Mr. Cannon and his fellows should bear in mind that "like causes produce like effects," now as

Had Mr. Cannon read the law to the church, given February 9th, 1831, and endorsed by the unanimous voice of the church in a formal and most public manner, and then measured the doctrine of polygamy by that standard, he would have found that the theory and practice of polygamy were utterly contrary to the latter day Scriptures, for that law commands, saying: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else." This law being true, the doctrine of plurality must be false; and Mr. Cannon should have known it.

Mr. Cannon and his fellows can never blame the Book of Mormon, nor the Doctrine and Covenants endorsed and used by Joseph the Seer, for any of the pains, penalties, and losses resulting from polygamy; for those books denounced it, and everything like it, in plain and decisive terms. Ane if the Utah polygamists suffer as did King Noah and his priests, the polygamous Nephites and Jaredites, they can only contemn themselves for not being admonished by their history contained in the Book of Mormon. Had they obeyed the law in the Doctrine and Covenants, polygamy could not have ensuared and cursed them and theirs. Had Mr. Cannon and his fellow polygamists followed strictly and honestly the teachings of those two books, commonly known and properly called, Mormon books, their present peril and misfortunes could not have overtaken them.

When these facts are carefully weighed, it is seen that all has been done that could be to keep the Saints from polygamy and its like, except God or the nation had deprived them of their personal agency. God, and these books, and the voice of the church in General Assembly—all are clear of the charge of teaching or tolerating polygamy, and emphatic in their denunciations of it. The Saints and the nations will yet see and understand this.

While we pity Mr. Cannon and his like, we are assured they are simply reaping the fruit of their own doings. Will they profit by it?

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Card from Bro. H. C. Bronson, Montrose, Iowa, May 13th, says:

I have just received an urgent call for preaching at Lacross, Hancock county, Illinois. It is stated good can be done there now. And, so it goes, or comes on every hand; plenty of work for Elders. I go to Rock Creek next Sunday. The work of the Lord is prosperous here. All happy.

Bro. Joseph F. McDowell wrote from Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 12th, 1885.

We had a fine assemblage last Sunday evening of intelligent citizens; a church was crowded; and the best of attention. We are gaining favor among the best class of citizens.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. Hyrum C. Bronson has removed from Kewanee, Illinois, to Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, which will be his post office address, until further notice. Bro. Bronson was selected to deliver the discourse on the Sunday preceding Decoration Day, before the Montrose Post of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Bro. Joseph Lakeman, wrote from Grand Manan, New Brunswick, April 30th. There has been a great change in the sentiment of the people. Now they are asking after the preaching of the word. He was to lecture alternately at Woodward's Cove, and North Head, the two principal places on the island. He feels well that the work is opening up.

Bro. Joseph C. Clapp writes to Bro. Blair from Bozeman, Montana, May 8th, "I am here in the field; thank God, with bright prospects. I preached ten discourses in the chapel last week, and was greeted with good audiences."

Bro. Walter S. Taylor wrote from Wilsonville, Kansas, May 4th, that the Saints there were doing all they could to progress. Bro. M. T. Short had been with them and baptized one. One other was baptized at their conference.

Bro, J. H. Lake occupied the pulpit at Kirtland, Ohio, May 10th. So Bro. E. L. Kelley informed us to that effect in a line May 6th.

Bro. H. P. Brown writes most encouragingly of the prospects in California. The Expositor is being well received and is having an excellent effect. Good. Courage brother. Let the watch-word ring all along the line.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is there any promise in the Scriptures of eternal life outside of the Church or Celestial Kingdom?

Ans.—No.

Q.—What are we to understand by this saying of Paul concerning Christ and the church:—"That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word."—Eph. 5: 26?

A.—Paul is here speaking of water baptism, that God had appointed it by his "word," or command, to be a means whereby to cleanse and sanctify the Church of Christ. God having appointed that ordinance, (Luke 3:3; Matt. 28:19; Mark 16:16; 1 Pet. 3:21; Acts 22:16; John 3:5), those of whom Christ's Church is composed must obey it in order to be cleansed from their sins and be made holy in the sight of God. This baptismal "washing" is but one of the principles of the gospel—the others must be honored and observed in their place.

2.—Has any young brother a right to preach, or exhort, or teach without being ordained an Elder?

A.—Yes; and No. "Let every man who is warned, warn his neighbor in meekness and mildness." This applies to any who are capable, and comply with the conditions. Wisdom, skill, and charity must be used. But no one has ministerial authority to teach, preach, or exhort, unless he has been regularly ordained to that authority.

2.—Should consecrated oil be kept pure and unadulterated, and used only for those purposes for which it was set apart?

A.—Yes.

2.—May a lay member take charge of prayer and social meetings?

A.—Yes; if invited to do so by those composing said meetings, or by the presiding officer of said meetings; but it is necessary that the presidency of all church assemblies be held by some ordained and appointed minister, if any be present.

The following synopsis of a sermon delivered in Chicago of late, by Dr. Thomas, contains so much of advanced and correct thought that we present it to our readers, that they may see how the noble minds of our age are breaking away from old theology as taught in the creeds, and are coming nearer to the Christianity of Christ, as He has taught it to both former and latter day Saints.

"Dr. Thomas preached May 10th, 1885, from John 8: 32, "And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

It was not the plan of the Creator, he said, to do everything for man, but only to give him opportunities and conditions under which he could work out his own destiny. Man's power has always been proportioned to his knowledge. Left to his hands alone, man is weak, but bringing to his service wind and water, steam and electricity, he can tunnel mountains, traverse oceans, and bridge even the arms of the sea. The social life of man has always moved side by side with his physical condition. When savage, man fought with stones and axes, and devoured his food raw, he knew nothing of high principle or noble sentiment, nothing of the respect for womanhood or the sacred light of home. Among the Kaffirs and the Zulus a man who wanted a wife knocked her down with a club and carried her to his lodge. With the gradual growth of knowledge and truth, the woman earned greater freedom of choice. She was allowed to ride a race to escape from her suitor if she chose, or her lover would walk about her seven times in a circle to enable her to weigh his qualifications. But now in the light of a civilization founded upon the truth the nuptial bond is sealed by mutual attractions, by harmonious intellectual pursuits, by the blending qualities of heart and soul. It is knowledge of the truth that has brought about this revolution-knowledge that woman is the equal of man.

Under the old reign of error authority was the leading motive of government. Might made right, and the King who bound a neighboring tribe crouching at his mercy, sought for no pretext for an invasion, but considered his power the best excuse for his tyranny. In those days the King was the only man that was free. Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, and Alexander thought nothing of the slaughter of countless victims, for the great principle of the brotherhood of man was undiscovered. Now that truth is known and the truth has made us free.

In the dark days there were some bright lights, but they were solitary. China had its Lao-tse and its Confucius, Zoroaster lived in Persia, Buddha in India, Socrates in Greece, but these men were not the measure of the common thought of their fellows, and in the expiring gasps of the great Greek religion Socrates was put to death, and our Savior perished after him. They were both martyrs to ignorance before the truth had set men free.

The life of woman was low in those dim days. The mere domestic wife was a drudge, and though there must always have been some sentiment of chivalry in the breast of man, the true companions of the thinker and the statesman were Aspasia, and Sappho, and Cleopatra.

In the middle ages religion had degenerated to fear, and then came Dante with his hell of unspeakable horrors. Many centuries of civilization had to struggle with witchcraft and intellectual slavery before the truth could make men free.

The emancipating power of truth has familiar practical applications. Write over the fires that devastate a city, "Want of knowledge;" write over the disasters that send hundreds of souls to the bottom of the sea, "Want of knowledge," A time will surely come when men will build houses that cannot burn, when man will be able to cope with the anger of the winds and ocean. Write over the lives of men who spend their breath for the mere-acquisition of wealth, "Want of knowledge of the true boons of life;" write over the career of the selfish politician, "Want of knowledge of the principles that animated Hamilton, Washington, and Sumner;" write over voluptuary, "Want of knowledge that his body is the temple of the living God." As the Master himself said, "Ye know not what ye do," for had they known they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory.

THE Holiness Evangelist, of February last, contains the following from the pen of one who signs himself "Aged Minister." He asserts:

"1st, That Christ himself at the very beginning of the first age instituted the model church.

"2d, We assert that the world, not being in a state of readiness, this model church, or visible kingdom, passed away.

"3d, That the spiritual elements of this church or kingdom have been found in all ages in individuals.

"4th, That the true ideal of the church was clearly outlined in the New Testament, and is to be found there to-day.

"5th, We assert that the true ideal church as a visible body can not be found on earth at the present. The Catholic is not that body, neither is any one or all of the Protestant churches.

"6th, We assert that the true ideal church as a visible body will be re-established with all its prerogatives and power, and that this will bring in the latter day glory; then sects and strife will be no more. If spared I propose to discuss these several points in future numbers."

It is true that Christ, personally, in what is known commonly as the first Christian age, did institute "the model church;" and it is both historically and prophetically true that "this model church, or visible kingdom passed away." It is furthermore true that "the Spiritual elements of this church or kingdom have been found in all ages in individuals." This is exactly what the standard books of the Latter Day Saints claim. It is also true that "the true ideal of the church was clearly outlined in the New Testament, and is to be found there to-day." And these things being true, it places Catholicism and Protestantism outside of "this model church or visible kingdom." They do not fill the measure of the New Testament pattern in respect to doctrine, organization, ordinances, spiritual powers, nor methods of church building. In their work they do not harmonize nor agree with "the law and the testimony" found in God's written word, and this demonstrates the fact that they lack "the true light."

But "Aged Minister" makes a huge and harmful mistake when he says: "The true ideal church as a visible body can not be found on earth at the present." A similar mistake was made in the times of Christ and his first apostles, as may be seen by the following, "Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of this salvation sent. For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every Sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him."-Acts. 13: 26, 27. The Jews were looking then for the Messiah, and the manifestation of his kingdom. They had "a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge;" and having these expectations, and this zeal, and guided chiefly by the false traditions and perverted interpretations of their teachers instead of the pure light of God's written word, they failed to see in Jesus of Nazareth their promised Messiah, and to see that His Church was indeed the "visible kingdom." But their blindness did not make the promises and work of God to none effect-the Messiah had already come, but "they knew him not;" the visible kingdom was then in their midst, (Luke 12: 32; Col. 1: 13; Rev. 1: 19; Matt. 15: 28; 21: 31-43; Luke 17: 21; Matt. 11: 11; 23: 13; &c), but they did not perceive it and accept it. On the contrary they refused it and rejected it.

We assert that "the true ideal church as a visible body" is found on the earth at this time, and has been since April 6th, 1830, and that, too, in an organized form authorized by divine command, and that it has developed, gradually, into the full pattern as set forth in the New Testament. And this has occurred in fufillment of those very scriptures which "Aged Minister" and the Christian world hear "read every Sabbath day," as may be seen by consulting Rev. 14: 6-8; Matt. 24: 14; 13: 47-49; 25: 1-13; Rom. 11: 25-27; Dan.

2: 34, 44, 45; Isa. 18: 1-7; 29: 13-24; Jer. 16: 14-19; 31: 7-12: Joel 2: 28-32; Rev. 18: 4, etc. The church "as a visible body" is established, not only in its proper, organic form, ordinances, doctrines and New Testament methods, but in the divine authority to teach and administer in and for it, as also in the spiritual powers, gifts, and graces, as scores of thousands of living witnesses testify in America, Europe, and the Islands of the sea. From 1830, and before, the Lord has been "working with" his Saints, "confirming the word." Every where the restored "gospel of the kingdom" has been preached, received, and faithfully obeyed, and this "with signs following" them who believe, as in the primitive Christian Church. This "Aged Minister" need not predict that Christ's visible church will, in the future be "reestablished;" for that work has been done; that is now an accomplished fact; and none who put away their anti-scriptural traditions, and unchristian prejudices, and prayerfully seek for it in the light of Bible precedents and prophecies, but what will find it in word, "in power, in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."

Zealous professors, if they submit to false teachings and yield to popular notions, are just as sure to err in judgment now as the same class were who lived in the times of Christ and his apostles.

ONE of the serious objections made against the prohibitory law of Iowa, as against all prohibitory laws in other states is that it "does not prohibit." "Prohibition does not prohibit," is a sort of knock down and drag out argument, to which those who use it seem to think there can be no successful answer. But why does "prohibition not prohibit?" Is it not because there is a class in society who will not heed and obey the law? Is it not because there is a class of men largely in the minority, in Iowa, Maine and other states where prohibitory laws have been enacted, who are willing to become and are violaters of the law, law breakers; for whom there is no legal, or social excuse. In opposition to the argument we present the following from the Iowa State Leader, Des Moines, for March 19th.

"The great gob of gloom and silence that hung omniously around the average saloon yesterday was in strong contrast to the ever moving endless procession that has heretofore made happy the mind of the proprietor and chucked the till full of shining dimes, quarters and halves. It was plain that something was wrong. Many of the doors to saloons were closed, and the air of dejection and general loneliness that prevailed in the atmosphere in the immediate vicinity was suggestive of a funeral, and indeed such was the fact. Gambrinus was taking his last bier, and his devotees hung around in a disconsolate way, apparently waiting for the procession to start. The reader may ask what was the cause of this? The answer is brief. It was the Fritz injunction case. The Supreme Court, at its Council Bluffs session, had placed crape over the doors of every saloon in Iowa, by rendering one of the most remarkable decisions in the history of our state jurisprudence. It had riveted and clinched the stringent provisions of the prohibitiory law, and thereby placed in the hands of the temperance element a legal weapon which if used-and it certainly will be-will close every saloon in Iowa. Recognizing the far reaching influence of this most potential weapon in the hands of their opponents, the saloon men, not desiring to incur the severe penalties imposed for violation of the law, voluntarily closed their doors and decided to quit the business, since it could no longer be carried on without constantly staring the penitentiary in the face-a not very agreeable occupation. It is doubtful if a half dozen places sold liquor on the west side yesterday. Seven of the most prominent saloon men on being approached stated positively that they had quit the busidess and meant to keep out of it. They believed it would be impossible for a saloon to exist in Iowa since the Supreme Court decision. It was flying in the face of fate to follow the business, hampered as it is and beset on all sides by legal dangers.

"The temperance people feel greatly elated and take no pains to conceal their joy. Judge Nourse and Baylies Bro's, each wore a cavernous smile of delight all day yesterday, while Mrs. McMurry, responsible head of the local Temperance Alliance, was in a most remarkable elated frame of mind, and expressed unbounded confidence in the ability of the temperance people to throttle the saloons now that the Supreme Court had rendered a sweeping decision. It is now proposed to bestow attention to the drug stores, and keep them under a strict surveillance. If the law is violated and the druggist caught violating its provisions he will be made to feel the heavy hand of the law. The sweeping character of the decision renders it an easy matter to attack the saloons in even the most radical antiprohibition strongholds, and force them to close.

"One or two healthy prohibitionists attending strictly to business, turned loose in Ottumwa, Burlington or Keokuk, can create more consternation to the square inch than a whole nest of hornets attending a picnic. The decision settles the saloon and brewery business in Iowa."

ENTITY OF THE SOUL.

THE clipping below from the Chicago Tribune, helps to illustrate the separateness and superiority of the soul, and the truth of Paul's saying: "But though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day."—2 Cor. 4:16.

It is a curious thing, this return to youthful scenes of the mind of one to whom the grave is very near. When, so recently, Grant was but awaiting the death which seemed at hand, he talked of his young life upon the Ohio farm; and when Garfield lay dying, his thoughts wandered back past years of busy life to the pure existence of the country, and he spoke to those at his bedside, as a child might talk, of the farm, and the woodland, and of one time when the children went out together to gather wintergreens. The first and brightest life came back to him. The later one of ambition, and triumph, and tragedy was all obscured and once more his feet were upon the green sward, as in his youth. The sweet, strong breath of spring was in his nostrils; there were liverworts, and blue and yellow violets, and wild phlox, and almost a carpet of the pink anemone in some places in the wood; bluebirds, and robins, and brown thrushes were filling the thickets with sweet sounds in the morning; there were squirrels upon the fences again and the pickerel were coming up the streams. The full rivulets flashed like gold at morning and evening, and there was a pulse of glorious life in everything. And in the midst of it stood the Boythe type himself of all the life about him-radiant, and strong, and hopeful. Is it wonderful that before the soul goes into the unknown it should grope its way back for one glimpse more of such a spring time, for a sweet memory to carry into the unexplored country? Nature is kind to us that men are allowed to pass away in this sort. There is no discrimination. This death privilege belongs to all. There is no touch of wiser pathos in all Shakspeare than where it is said of even poor old boastful Falstaff that, when he died, he played with flowers it 'babbled of green fields."

WE presume that "honor to whom is due, tribute to whom tribute should be paid," is as true in the political life of a nation as it is in the religion of society. Honest men for representatives should be the people's maxim; and this maxim should be as carefully followed as practicable. All the honest men, all the brave and patriotic men, all the true, consistent and upright men are not on one side of the political broil only. As an instance of this, we quote the following from an exchange, a paper the management of which was and is moderate in politics.

"Before the election we heard a good deal about turning the rascals out, and so persistent had the cry been kept up that many a conservative man said in his heart: "It will be better to have a change, that the roguery and carelessness of a twenty years' rule may be looked up and corrected." But, after a month's examination, the new administration finds little to complain of. The changes so far made have been in political offices almost exclusively-like those of diplomats and consuls, and heads of bureaus. In the departments at Washington no mistakes have been found, and all the reforms so far instituted have been the discharging of a few surplus clerks and the selling off of a few old carriages and horses-an economy which is right enough, but which is not wanted by the people who pay the taxes, for they are willing that Cabinet officers shall be supplied with the means to appear in public life as gentlemen and the heads of the Government. In an interview last week one of the new Cabinet said to a correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette:

I have become convinced that in no private establishment in the land, no matter how strictly conducted, is there the perfection of system, the thoroughness of discipline, the general faithfulness and efficiency that exists in my department. There are men in the offices who have spent their lives there, and who are as much a part of the system as a spoke is a part of the wheel. When I want to know anything in my department the messenger who has been there for many years can tell what gentleman to call upon, and he will come in and tell me anything I want to know down to the minutest points, go back a generation in personal knowledge, and in a moment can lay his hand on and produce anything in the way of history, documents or written matter for my information. Now, suppose I put such men out for party reasons, and fill their places with new men, more utterly ignorant of the matters of the department than I myself, do you not see that it would be ruinous to the department and to the Government, though it would satisfy some political workers? I was surprised, too, to find what a large proportion of the men are men of family; sober, quiet, reliable citizens, doing their duties steadily, faithfully and efficiently, rearing families and holding their places in the world as good citizens, husbands and fathers. A large portion of the clerks are of this character, and I have not been able to trace a score of men, so far, placed in the department purely for poltiical reasons.

To honest men of all parties we are sure the foregoing will be welcome intelligence. There certainly ought to be no feeling except of satisfaction in every mind to know that the offices of the Government are being honestly conducted. Of course partisan hate often prejudices people, and makes them willing to believe their adversaries dishonest. Even Thomas Jefferson was afflicted with this infirmity, but as he was mistaken, so it seems the officers of the present Administration are finding out that they do not succeed a party of thieves. It is a good showing, and we hope and believe the present officers will go out with hands quite as white as were those of their predecessors."

Here are two classes of honest men, one of the class long in office, or engaged in the affairs of the Government; the other of the class newly installed. It is a sufficient answer to the demagogue of partisan calibre only, on either side, that honest men going into offices of public trust and emolument found honest men there.

If this principle of magnanimous recognition of merit in an enemy were not so rare, in both church and state, society would soon be moved upon by higher motives of association than a scramble for loaves and fishes, of place and power.

It is a comparatively easy thing for a man to say, "I love the truth and the right; but it is not so easy for a man to admit that his enemy, or his opposer, is or may be right, and has the truth. Most men are wise in their own esteem, and genuine humility, always itself is rare. It is the devotee's work to overcome himself; to make his natural abilities greater, by use; to bring his evil tendencies into subjection to the rules of spiritual good behavior, to so cultivate the good that to do good becomes his second nature. To do all this the spirit that accompanies the gospel is given, and by its influences man may be cultivated in grace that he may be able to "give" even "the devil his due."

Bro. John Smith, Bishop's Agent for the Massachusetts District, has issued a small four page circular letter of appeal for aid to the missionary work of the church; the first three paragraphs of which we give below, regretting that space forbids a corner for the whole of it.

"In the name of Our Blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ I am under constraint to appeal to your generosity for means to carry on the missionary work in this district.

"I am aware that, under the great depression of labor and business, which has afflicted the channels of trade and commerce, the financial resources of all have been more or less crippled; yet we should remember that He who smiles upon us in prosperity will not be disposed to frown upon us in adversity, if we seek to do those things which are pleasing in His sight.

"In believing, obeying, and accepting the gospel, we have placed ourselves under bonds to be governed by the law of the gospel, which, as a part, says that "they who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel;" that is, those who give their entire time to the ministry shall receive that support which is needful for themselves and families; and, as we often sing, "Sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven," it needs reducing to practice. In the financial law which has been revealed to the church, every member must be their own assessor. It is not my duty to say how much you shall give, or how much you shall withhold; this you must settle between yourselves and the Lord, wherein he says "onetenth of the increase," and not one-tenth of your substance. Often I have heard it said, "I am not rich enough to be under the law of tithing," and because of this claim exemption.

Correspondence.

Santa Ana, Los Angeles Co., Cal., April 29th, 1885.

Elder W. W. Blair, Dear Sir:-Yours of the 22d, inst. at hand. Thanks for the same, and thank God for the good news it contained—the voice of God to his Saints; the voice of consolation; the voice of gladness, like oil on the troubled water! It is to the body, light bursting forth mid surrounding gloom! The word of the Lord, with the firm stand taken by the prophet, the united action of conference, sound and legal answers of the Bishopric, endorsed by the First Presidency in Herald No 17, will strengthen the Church more than anything yet transpiring in its history. I can now see the real wisdom in publishing the late controversial articles in Herald. Their first effect on the body was discouraging, and damaging; but it set the body to praying most earnestly, and the result is most satisfying and glorious. The ship will now move on, true to the compass; Saints are beginning to rejoice, and confidence is becoming strong. counsels of the Presidency will be heeded more than heretofore, and Zion will prosper. Added, the situation in Utah, brother [oseph will go and interpret the handwriting on the wall to them. The nations are angry; but the saints will stand in holy places. God, even our God, is moving behind every throne. In every victory, in the strength of every crown and scepter we can see the divine purpose. The witnesses are multiplying fast for truth. Our kind Father has in good time put every weapon needed into the hands of his servants to meet and overthrow every opposing power and craft both of men and devils. I am more than satisfied; I feel good clear through and through, and am out for active service as long as the Master wishes. As long as I know that God accepts me and my work I feel assured but without that I should not. Oft when I am weary, I open the Doctrine and Covenants and read "I the Lord have spoken it, and the Spirit beareth witness. Amen."-When, quick as a flash, it bears witness and fills me to overflowing. Truly; living words to me.

Yours ever,

D. S. Mills.

Joseph Smith, Dear Brother: - We have, as a branch, just had one of the best business meetings it has been our privilege to attend, since this branch was organized; which was no longer ago than September of last year. All our members present were of one mind, and we all felt to thank our Father in heaven that he had mercy upon us as a people, in sending Brn. J. H. Lake and J. A. McIntosh to this part of the Lord's vineyard, to open up to us the plan of salvation, and cause the scales of darkness, and of traditional idolatry to be wiped away from our eyes and hearts. We can say with the Psalmist, "What are we? that thou art so mindful of us, and what have we done that thou visitest us with mercy?" Though we are but a young branch, yet the Lord has poured out of his rich blessings abundantly upon us. The gifts of the gospel have been given according to the promises of our Savior and his apostles, through obedience to the gospel, and we have to thank God that we have verified that it is "the gospel" we have obeyed. Our sick have been healed when they have called on the Elders with "strong abiding faith" We can not recall one instance of failure when Elders J. H. Lake and J. A. McIntosh, have been so called on to administer to the sick, and we have to thank God that the blessings are with us.

Though these two good, faithful brothers are absent from us at present, we still find when we go, depending on the Lord for help, he never fails to answer the prayers of his faithful Saints. Your humble servant, the writer, can indeed testify that, though he has gone forth in much weakness, yet the Lord has been more then ever a very present help in time of trouble. At our business meeting I have been again called on to take the charge of the branch. I do so with much diffidence, for after the great blessings we have had of hearing the glorious principles of "the gospel of Christ" unfolded by our dear Brn. Lake and McIntosh, it is no small work to stand up and try to even supply the Saints with the "milk of the gospel," after they have been fed well with strong meat. But, thank God, when I feel the weakness most, then it is that God comes most to my help; and we can then all feel that our Lord has taken charge of our little branch. May his good Spirit ever be with us. One of our young members, who is an officer of the branch, is greatly blessed of the Lord by visions. About four months ago the Lord showed to him that we should lose one of our number by death. We were then all in the best of health, and though he told his vision, it was not thought much of at the time. But the Lord works in his own good way; for on the 18th day of April our dear sister, Mary Lake, was called away. We have great cause to thank God that she died in the true faith of "the gospel;" her end was peace; and we look forward with joy to the morning of the first resurrection, for we know if we are faithful to our covenants made to our God, we shall meet her there.

The Lord has also blessed us with the gifts of tongues, interpretation, and prophecy; and several of us have great cause to bless God for his mercies toward us. On our night of business, the Lord was among us. The gifts of tongues and interpretation were given by which four of our brethren were called to offices in the Aaronic priesthood; and we can say indeed, hitherto has the Lord helped us. For though some few of our members are under a cloud, through reading those letters in the Herald about tithing and gathering, and also are finding fault with the book of Doctrine and Covenants, about what is said of gathering and the boarding house etc.; proving to us who are faithful, that the strong meat of "the gospel" is too much for them, and it seems as if nothing but milk, "and that must be well watered, would suit them." We thank the Lord we have come into the gospel-ship, and we mean, with the help of the Lord, to never leave the "old gospel-ship" while a plank of her holds together; for though we have been turned out of our hall through the false reports of our enemies, yet the Lord is with us, as we worship in the different houses of the Saints; for we keep up our regular meetings, and we have God with us, and we are no worse off than our Savior, nor half so bad, for he had not a place to lay his

I remain, dear brother, yours in the bonds of the gospel,

George F. Robinson.

ELKHART, Texas, May 6th, 1885.

We want a place to live, and we want something to do. I would like to work for some brother who is in the mercantile business; groceries, or hardware preferred; I am not particular as to locality. Brethren, we sold every thing we had but our wearing apparel in 1877, and spent all in an effort to spread the gospel. Of that time, about six years have been spent under General Conference appointment. Now we are left without a home, or anything else but some clothing, and I am not able to do out door work but very little. We have no children, and my wife is willing to help in doing house work. We don't want big wages, we simply want to make a living, with the privilege of preaching some. Any one that can give me employment please address me at once at Elkhart, Anderson Co., Texas, and you will confer a favor upon your brother,

A. J. Cato.

PAICINES, CAL. April 15th, 1885.

Dear Brother; -- I have been very busy since coming home from Tulare, part of the time with secular, and part with spiritual matters. I have visited Bear Valley lately fifteen miles south of here; was there four days; preached once, the first time any of our faith have held meeting there; then attended Conference at Watsonville with my family; had a good peaceable time. We have all felt much interest in the eastern Conference; have felt that your burden and calling, are great; have in our weakness tried to uphold all the faithful authorities of the Church, believing that she is passing through a trying ordeal, and that every timber in the "ship" will be strained to its utmost capacity;" but I also firmly believe that she will breast the storm, and outride the blast; for God is at the

I have just got a letter from a sister in Tulare county. She says that Bro. E. S. Burton held his third meeting since we left there on Sunday, April 5th, at Bro. Mathias Clark's house; and he preached to them about two hours. Bro Joseph, he is a noble man. I am proud of him. He is, I think calculated to do much good in the cause. The worst feature about him is that he is poor in this world's goods and has to work hard to support himself and family of six small children, with nothing to help him but one of the best women in the world, his estimable wife. Let me ask you all, dear saints, to breathe one special payer for them and the prosperity of the work in Tulare county.

Your Brother in faith and gospel bonds, J. H. LAWN.

> CAMERON, Victoria Co., Ont., March 18th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-In my last two letters I told of making openings at Fenlon Falls and at Cambray; where I met with hot opposition in shape of slang and mobocracy. Still the work is onward. I have baptized ten more of late. Two of them are from the Falls. We were told by the dear Lord in our social meeting that there were souls in Fenlon Falls and at Cambray, to be born unto God. The prediction at the time was the most unlikely thing one could imagine, as I had but lately returned from the Falls. For the first time gifts of tongues and prophecy were given and during the interpretation of the tongue it was given us to know that souls would be born unto God; which gift we have since seen verily fulfilled. I have been back to the Falls and preached there again for two nights. The brother who lives there, A. Q. St. George, having hired a hall for two nights at two dollars a night. What a change! not a word, no insults. Perfect order, good behavior and earnest attention, and all that is necessary to make up a good audience prevailed during the two nights. What a change since I was there about two months before. Then I could scarcely hear myself speak at times for the constant tumult. Now it is the reverse, men call me into their shops, or places of business, as they see me passing along the streets, and ask all manner of doctrinal and abstruse questions; most of them however with earnestness pictured on their faces. I scattered all the Epitomes you kindly sent, and in my meeting I spent about half an hour in teaching how to understand that Epitome. We would naturally think that a declaration so clear on each point as the Epiteme is could be understood by every one who reads it. They read it all over, and I asked do you believe it? "O yes." "Well now, let me see. Do you believe that the church must be organized now the same as it was in Christ's day, with prophets, apostles, gifts?" &c., &c. "O no. That aint the way I understood it. I thought you (the Epitome) meant that you (Latter Day Saints) believed there was apostles, prophets, gifts, &c., in the old church, so do we. But we did not think you (the Epitome) meant that those things should be there now." "Do you believe that a man must be called of God as Aaron was?" "Yes." "How was Aaron called?" "I don't know." After turning to the citations and reading them,-"O, if that is what you (the Epitome) mean, we don't believe that; because God don't call any more by direct revelation." And several in different parts of my travels have spent a good deal of time looking for the book of Jacob in the Bible; and when they can't find it then say you have a different Bible. So great is the darkness and so gross the ignorance of people who have been lulled into deep sleep by the cunning, crafty priests, that their eyes are shut. They can't see; they can not understand. The foregoing is only a sample of how people understand the Epitome, and it is quite general. But when I have taken the pains to take each clause and explain-what a different light; and it sets them to search and the general result is they come back and acknowledge that their own Bibles are as different now as mine was then. Generally all tumble into one trap in the end about that declaration "We believe that in the Bible is contained the word of God so far as it is translated correctly." After being shown a few mistranslations, it nearly takes their breath away to find the same in their Bibles.

I think the Epitome should be enlarged so as to give a few references on each of the two points; viz; "We believe that in the Bible is contained the word of God so far as it is translated correctly." 2 Kings 19: 35; Gen. 9: 5; John 10: 8; Ex. 32: 25 &C.

"We believe the canon of scripture is not full."

I Kings 1: 32; 11: 31; 13: 11, 25; 18: 36; 1 Chron.

25: 2; 2 Chron. 9: 29; 12: 15; 13: 22; 15: 8, 20:

37; 33: 19; 20: 34; Num. 21: 14; Josh. 10: 13;

Isa. 29: 11; 1 Sam. 10: 25; 22: 5; Jer. 26: 20;

Luke 1: 1; 1 Cor. 5: 9; Eph. 3: 3; Jude 3; Col.

4: 16; Jude 14, &c., &c.

I think the Epitome should be so enlarged as to also show wherein we differ from the sectarian professors in our first article. "We believe in God the Eternal Father," &c. Here is no distinction. They also believe in God the Eternal Father, without body, parts or passions. I think the Epitome should be so amended as to show who and what we believe God the Eternal Father is, by referring to his body, parts and passions, such as: Gen. 1: 26, 27; 5: 3; 9: 6; 1 Cor. 11: 7; Heb. 1: 2, 3; 2 Cor. 2: 10; Matt. 27: 24; Ex. 33: 23; Gen. 32: 30; Num. 14: 14; Isa. 60: 13; Zech. 14: 14; Ex. 14: 10; 31: 18; Deut. 9: 10; John 8: 6; Amos 9: 8; Ps. 10: 17; 94: 9.

I don't offer these things with the expectation of having them acted upon now, or for any kind of dictation, but simply suggest these ideas as they may not have occurred to others. They would aid in the search for truth as we set it forth.

I believe that if a tract on divine authority was circulated that it would do more toward assisting the ministry and enabling people to see their true position and the false one now occupied. As to the liberality of the Herald columns, I do not feel to abuse a liberty by turning it into a license as some are evidently doing and monopolize the liberty of others.

The work is onward here in Canada and God is blessing some of our new branches with gifts of tongues, prophecy, healing, dreams, &c., so may he bless them is the prayer of your brother in bonds.

J. A. McIntosh.

Audubon, Minnesota,

April 6th, 1885.

Dear Bro. Foseph: I wish to pen a few lines to the readers of the Herald to let the church know what we are doing up here in northern Minnesota. The Lord is truly with us in power, and the blessings of God attend both the officers and the laity. I went twelve miles south and held a meeting; my daughter Fanny went with me, and the Lord gave perfect liberty in delivering his word. About three o'clock in the morning I was called upon to administer to one of the sisters that had been afflicted with a pain in her head, and one side of her face, and one of her ears was swollen to the thickness of two ears; and her head was so sore she could hardly let me anoint it. She had been sick for seven days. But, thank God, in less than two minutes she received the blessing, the soreness was all gone, and her ear was restored; the swelling, too, was all gone, and her face shone with the blessing of health, and she exclaimed. "I know for myself now, and do not have to ask another;" and she went to bed and slept as the blessed of the Lord can, and in the morning she rejoiced, giving God the glory, and went to meeting, walking some seventy rods and back. Two weeks after, Bro. Martin and I went down again, but the enemy of truth had his servants to close the school house against us; but Bro. McLeod opened his grist-mill and we held our meeting in there with a fair congregation, and the best of attention. Now, dear readers, just imagine a servant of God standing behind three sacks of bran for a pulpit and delivering a discourse on the organization of the church, proving that the church was organized in the days of Moses, and bringing it down to our day, and you have Bro. Martin. Bro. Shaw and I go seventeen miles, May 3d, to hold a meeting. The Elders in this branch, (Oak Lake), will do some work in delivering the word during the Summer. Hoping many may be brought into the Church of the living God. Yours ever,

CLEAR WATER, Nebraska,

April 22d, 1885.

Brothers and Sisters in Christ:—When first we heard and listed to obey the blessed tidings of peace, what a hope sprang up in our souls, what a joy pervaded our beings. How sweet was the name of Jesus, Blessed Jesus. Its gentle cadence was as the murmuring of pleasant waters to our souls. Our heart's aspiration went out in quest of the pure and the good. No sacrifice seemed too great, no labor too arduous, in the new and delightful sphere of our service to God. We felt strong in our weakness to do battle for the Lord, and for the din of persecution we did not care. With devotion we sang—

Days, months, years, have passed and are passing. The everflowing tide of time bears us further from the dawning of our first love, the morn of our regeneration. Notwithstanding the trials through which we have passed, our faces are set Zionward; our hopes are fixed upon the love of God, and we wait—yes, are waiting for his coming.

Through all these years of trial, anxiety, and frequent sorrow, have we not found in God a friend—a present helper in every time of need? Yes, God the Everlasting Father has been our shield, our anchor, and our strength. Our souls go out to him in love and adoration, and we render to him the earnest tribute of our contrite hearts. Within is the Spirit's assurance that our sins are forgiven and an abiding testimony of the truth more precious than silver or gold.

To me such a religion is sufficient, and entirely satisfactory; I ask for no better. I find no lawful desires but what in the providence of God may be realized; no hopes but what will be satisfied, no promise of God but what will be verified. Jesus was content to endure the hardships and fatigue of life waiting for the time of his departure to a "better country" when his work on earth was done.

May we, dear saints, be as faithful and patient as he. If so, we shall surely share his reward; mental and physical pains will cease; this mortal shall have put on immortality; the bright sunny, golden days of eternity are before us, and can not cease. Who can count the joys of eternal life, or potray the excellencies of that bissful realm whether Jesus has gone and toward which we are tending. The gospel is true; our religion is real; our hopes and experiences are not imaginary.

In bonds of love, GEO. S. HYDE.

PENDLETONVILLE, Bell Co., Texas, April 13th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-Time with its mighty changes glides swiftly by regardless of circumstance, change, or place. Days, months and years, pass as heedlessly by as the gentle zephyrs of the bright May morn. Each and every one brings to us the blank of some neglected resolve which, with but litle exertion might have been attended to ere this. I have felt for some time as though I should write and bear testimony to the work, but never having before felt perfectly satisfied as to its trueness, have kept putting it off from time to time, until the present moment finds me trying to pen a few lines to your columns, which I trust you will deign to accept from one who feels to encourage the onward march of the children of God. I have been a member of the church since June 11th, 1880, and I, being the only one of the family to enlist in the cause at that time, and also the only one of it but what was bitterly opposed to it, of course my life was a lonely one; and while I did not exactly doubt its being a true work, yet from some cause or another, probably because I was not so zealous at times as I should have been, I did not enjoy myself as I desired.

This life glided on and on until we found the relentless finger of time had began to paint the leaves of December, 1884, when afflictions began to assail me, and darkened my path for the space of several months, during which time I spent many hours in fasting and prayer for the restoration of my health, and also that my brethren and sisters might come to a knowledge of the truth, that they might have a part in the first resurrection. Soon I began to realize that my efforts were not in vain; for my afflictions are being removed and I feel strengthened.

The curtains of night have been gently folded back, and the sun of glory shines through and softly sheds its bright rays across the dark path so long clouded by the cares of this world. One sister has lately been initiated into the fold by Bro. Heman C. Smith, who has recently left here for conference; and may God grant to hasten the time when others may obey the same call, and no longer listen to the lullabys of the one who is ever seeking to hush the cries of those who have their voices lifted to heaven in behalf of a confused and unenlightened people; and may God in his goodness and mercy ever guide and keep our footsteps in the paths of right, pressing onward and upward, until heaven shall have reached forth her snowy hands and closed behind us the pearly gates, through which we all hope to pass ere we enter upon the land of everlasting felicity, is the prayer of your sister in Christ, BETTIE HOGAN.

Summary of News.

TEXAS OUTLAWS.

From a special received from Gainesville Texas, May 7th, it is learned that part of the posse that went in pursuit of the second gang of desperadoes and cattle thieves have returned to this place. The blockhouse on Lee's ranch in which it was reported that the outlaws took refuge, was burned and the ranch taken possession of. The four outlaws that were captured and brought into Gainesville have been identified as members of the gang which have been terrorizing and killing people indiscriminately for the last two years, but only one-William Bourland-has been recognized as a participant in the fearful tragedy of last Friday. A posse is still in pursuit of the Lee brothers, and the news of other arrests is hourly expected. A reward of $7,500 has been offered for their capture. Deputy United States Marshal Grant arrived at Gainesville last night and left this morning for Sherman with John and Bill Bourland, Tom Culp, and Arthur James, for a hearing before United States Commissioner Rickets.

THE ANGLO-RUSSIAN AGREEMENT.

The announcement of Earl Granville the Foreign Secretary, that a conference on the Afghan boundary question has been held between the Russian Minister in London, the Earl of Kimberley, Secretary for India, and himself, and that an agreement had been arrived at which was perfectly satisfactory to England and Russia and to Lord Dufferin, as representing India, is tantamount to an assurance, on the surface at least, that a peaceful solution of the question at issue will be reached. So far as the violation of the compact of March 17 is concerned-which bound the Afghans and the Russians not to advance pending the settlement of the boundary question—that is a matter of little consequence. It is not the main issue in dispute and it was substantially settled when England allowed Russia to occupy Penjdeh.

The important point now reached is that Russia has accepted the principle of arbitration, and this is a great point gained when it is considered that the concession is made by an autocratic Government. Either Russia was not ready for war, or some unusually strong influences must have been brought to bear upon the Czar, whose word is absolute and who could have had war if he had wished irrespective of the wishes of any one else, to induce him to stop and reason about the matter and to pay some heed to the dictates of humanity. Perhaps this influence has already been pointed out by us as growing out of strong family ties which exist between Germany, Russia, and England. Whatever it may have been, by her consent to arbitrate Russia has declared herself as willing in future to see if a controversy cannot be settled in some other manner than by the sword.

It now remains to be seen of course whether Russia will prove loyal to whatever agreement she may have made with England, supposing a decision should be made adverse to her policy of a further advance towards Herat; but the balance as it now stands is in favor of peace. Should Russia, in defiance of all agreements, continue her advance to the point of occupying Herat even, Mr. Gladstone is none the less to be commended for the bold and manly position he has taken for a peaceful settlement. No act of his life has displayed greater moral courage. In the face of a storm of Troy abuse, slander and taunts, he has held by his conviction that everything should be conceded compatible with honor rather than plunge headlong into war for the sake of a distant and compararively worthless strip of territory. It has also given him a splendid vantage ground for the future. If in the face of all these concessions Russia should force a war the moral advantage would all be on England's side. But from the present outlook it would appear that the war-cloud which has been so theatening has at last dissipated, and the sun of peace is once more shining.

MORMONS IN MEXICO.

A telegram from the City of Mexico contains the annexed budget of news: In regard to Mormons emigrating from the United States to Mexico, the Government officials announce that none coming will have any concessions granted them, but are at liberty to come as other emigrants, subject to the laws of the country, which forbid polygamy.

THE TRIAL OF TWO MEDIUMS.

The trial of Mr. and Mrs. Miller, mediums, charged with fraud is still progressing in the Court of Criminal Correction, Saint Louis, Missouri, May 5th. So many respectable and credible witnesses have testified to the supernatural things which they have seen at Mrs. Miller's seances that the court startled the counsel last night by proposing a test in open court. He suggested that he name six gentlemen and the medium six ladies, and that they retire to his private office, where he would have a cabinet constructed in a few minutes, and that a seance be given. If he and the sworn officers he would name were convinced of the genuineness of the phenomena he would discharge the defendants instantly. The medium signified her willingness to put herself on record, but her attorneys objected, and claimed that it was improper to ask such a test from the medium. Judge Noonan only suggested the case, and sustained the objection. Mr. McBride, for the State, offered to abandon the case if she would give any exhibition of table-tapping or slate-writing in court. The testimony was concluded to-night.

CRANMER'S OLD BIBLE AT CANTERBURY.

At Canterbury Cathedral yesterday the old chain Bible was replaced in the position originally occupied upon what is known as Cranmer's desk in the north-east aisle of the cathedral. Upon receiving the Bible from Mr. Wetherelt, by whom it has been carefully renovated, the Bishop of Dover said that it gave him great pleasure to replace the volume in the position in which it was chained in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, at the time when Bibles of the same edition were placed in cathedrals and Deans' houses throughout the country. The event in which they were then engaged was one that would recall to their minds the commencement of one great era in the history of Christianity, inasmuch as the position in which he had just replaced that volume was undoubtedly constructed in the reign of Henry VIII. and was the place from which the first English Bible was read in the English Church for the benefit alike of the clergy and laity. The Dean of Canterbury and Archdeacon Harrison also spoke.

SEEKING SAFETY IN THE STATES.

Fifty Roumanians from Quappelle, Canada, arrived at Fargo, Dak., May 10th. They state the war was making it too hot for them, and they are now on their way to settle at points along the Northern Pacific, especially north of Jamestown. The women and children are along, and the men seem to have plenty of money. They have their priest with them, and say this is but the first of a large number who will come from Manitoba to Dakota.

TRAMPS.

The tramp problem is assuming its usual magnitude for the season of the year, and in New York is a little greater in its proportions than heretofore because of a bill before the Legislature of that State. This bill proposes that all tramps, or, in other words, all persons of nomadic habits and with no visible means of subsistence, be arrested, and upon conviction of vagrancy, imprisoned for a term of six months at a cost to the State of not more than $1 a week per head. Socialists maintain that to enact such a law would be shamefully unjust, because under its provisions any one of the 70,000 unemployed men in New York City could be arrested-and rearrested after his six months' term had expired-because ninety-nine out of every hundred tramps in America are not criminals, but victims of untoward circumstances. This is the view of the trades-unionists, at least of some of them who have expressed themselves. The fault is with their statistics. The figures would be better were they reversed. As a matter of fact it is the one out of a hundred, not the ninety-nine, tramps who is the victim of circumstances. The record of harvest-time proves it.

MOUNT VESUVIUS AGAIN ACTIVE.

On Sunday evening a new opening came in the side of Mount Vesuvius near Torre del Greco, twelve kilometres from Naples. The lava abundantly flowed from the new mouth, while the grand crater only belched a redish smoke. Scientific observers said in the morning that there was no great danger, but there was a panic in Torre del Greco, the site of which has been several times covered—first in 1632, when many thousands perished; again in June, 1794, destroying the 'cathedral, the churches, and houses: and last in 1861. The inhabitants who witnessed this last eruption say that the present appearances are like the beginning of that one. No sand or ashes have yet been seen as at the memorable eruption of 1877, when showers of these reached Rome. Signor Louis Palmieri, the celebrated meteorologist, who since 1854 has had the direction of the Vesuvian observatory and has written books on the eruptions, said this evening to your correspondent: "The absence of any trace of wemblings indicates no immediate grand eruption, and I think this a light growth of the eruptive period beginning in December, 1875." Nevertheless, the alarm continues at the town of Torre del Greco and the Village of Camaldoli, to the southward of it. Lava is still flowing in great streams.

A PRODIGAL'S SAD FATE.

William H. Cooke, at one time a wealthy civil engineer, but reduced through dissipation to beggary, blew his brains out, in Pittsburg, Pa., in a low dive. Cook was well connected, and a few years ago was worth $250,000.

May 8th—At a special meeting of the English Cabinet Council yesterday it was definitly decided to begin the partial evacuation of the Soudan. For the present, however, ample forces will be retained at Suakin and Wady-Halfa.

It is now said that the only foundation for the report that shots were fired at the train in which President Cleveland was returning from Gettysburg to Washington was the fact that a man on the cars discharged a pistol which he disliked to carry while loaded.

Yesterday morning a desperate burglar compelled Mr. Charles Ray, a Milwaukee millionaire, at the point of a revolver to give up what money and jewelry there were in the house. He then escaped, and is thought to be in Chicago. Mr. Ray's residence was "burglar-proof" until the intruder cut all the wires.

The mercury fell several degrees below freezing-point last night in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, and Dakota. Ice formed in many places from half an inch to one and one-half inches thick, and snow and cold winds are reported. It is thought that small fruits and garden vegetables have been hurt in most places. Snow is reported from Kansas.

The police seem to have at last unearthed the mystery attending the murder of Filippo Caruso. The expressman who carried the trunk to the depot was found, and three persons in the house from which he took it are in custody. An Italian named Jurado and a woman known as Victoria are under arrest in New York. They were identified as the persons who checked the trunk at the Chicago depot.

May 11th.—The ministers representing the various religious denominations of St. Louis, Mo., have called a meeting to protest against the ålleged desecration of the Sabbath by base-ball nines and theatrical companies. The movement was set on foot by the discovery that while the aggregate attendance at the churches Sunday was not more than 10,000, 40,000 witnessed a cow-boy exhibition at the fair-grounds, 20,000 attended various base-ball games, 20,000 spent the day in beer-gardens, and 5,000 heard two lectures by Bob Ingersoll; hence the wrath of the preachers. The newspapers want the people to have the freedom of the city.

May 12th.—Earl Granville made a public state.

ment in the House of Lords yesterday to the effect that a conference had been held with the Russian representative on the Afghan question, which resulted in an agreement satisfactory to all concerned.

Great Britain is preparing for the complete evacuation of the Soudan and the abandonment of the advance on Khartoum.

The burning of the village of Cabery, Ills., is now believed to have been accidental. The rumor of the arrest of suspected parties is untrue. The losses aggregate upward of $100,000. Jacob Speis and other leading business men began rebuilding.

The terrible conflagration at Vincennes, Ind., has put the town in chaos. The total loss now appears to be about $150,000. Two squares of buildings were burned, forty-five business menwere burned out, and thirty buildings consumed. There is considerable insurance.

Fire in the Lackawanna Iron & Coal Company's steel works at Scranton, Pa., destroyed property valued at $250,000.

Fire losses in the United States and Canada for April aggregated $7,750,000, and for the four months of 1885, $32,250,000, or at the rate of over $105,000,000 for the year. This increase is said to be out of proportion to the advanced value of property.

Timely rains are reported throughout the interior of California, but even with plenty of moisture the prospects are not encouraging for a full wheat crop. A few counties report a slightly increased acreage in grain, some about the same as last year, and many a decreased area. Those which report less average a promise of scarcely more than half of last year, and some of them only one quarter to a third of the yield of 1884.

Sunday night last a fracas occurred between some Jamaicans and native soldiers at Culebra, on the Istmus of Pa iama. The latter were disarmed and afterward retired. Procuring reinforcements, they returned and broke into the barracks where the Jamaicans were sleeping and killed twenty-five and wounded twenty others.

The work of counting vast sums of money in the Treasury vanlts was contpleted yesterday. Two cents shortage discovered the other day was the only discrepancy to be found, and the missing pennies were promptly supplied.

Secretary Lamar has made a definit announcement to the effect that the cattle kings must leave the Oklahoma strip in the Indian Territory. He frankly says that it will take some time, but makes a firm declaration that if the settlers are not to be allowed on the land the rich cattlemen will be kept off as well.

Edwards county, Illinois, has not had a licensed saloon for the last thirty years. During this time only one man has been sent to the penitentiary from that county, and he for a crime committed while drunk on liquor had from an adjoining county.

The Chicago produce market were very quiet yesterday, and generally firmer, the reason for the increased confidence in prices being very cold weather over a large part of the West, the season being already a late one. As compared with Wednesday pork closed 15 cents higher, lard 2½ cents higher, meats 7½ cents higher, wheat 1 cent higher, corn ½ cent higher, oats ½ cent higher, ry ½ cent higher, barley and flax-seeds firm. Some corn was taken for export via Boston; but foreign business in wheat was at a standetill.

THE COVENANT MADE AT MOUNT SINAI;

OR THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

When God speaks he directs his utterances to some one. The commands given to Adam, Noah, Abram, Lot, Moses, the children of Israel concerning the passover, circumcision, feast of unleavened bread, &c., establish this idea, which is almost universally accepted, in fact it is evidenced by all the history of God's dealings with man. Those to whom God speaks, are held responsible for the fulfillment of the instruction given, under penalty by punishment or loss of blessing as God may determine. But he does not, and will not hold one responsible for that which is not given him, for "where no law is there is no transgression;" that is, where a law is not given to be observed, there is no transgression in not observing it. When a law is given and punishment affixed by any power, the power that fixes the penalty, or one of higher authority only can change the law, or remove or change the penalty. The penalty is part of the law, the legal power by which to enforce it. human laws that have been enacted, have been found not sufficiently powerful to answer the purpose for which they have been made, and this because of the finiteness of human wisdom. With God's laws this is not the case, neither indeed can be; for when a law is given by him, it will remain as given until it answers the purpose for which he gave it; because he is all wise, perfect, and can not change, and hence that which comes from him must be perfect and unchangeable; for, "God is not man that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?" -Num. 23:19. See also Isa. 55:8–11, where language is found, beautifully convincing in relation to this important idea: "For my thoughts are not your thoughts. neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it." The purpose for which a penalty is affixed to a law being that of enforcing the observance of that law; when God affixes a penalty to a law, that penalty can not be changed or removed until the law shall have answered the purpose for which it was given; for God is without change, (Mal. 3:6), or variableness, (Jas. 1:17). To remove the penalty would signify as much change in the mind of the lawgiver as to affix a different penalty, and in either case it would show deficiency in the knowledge of the one giving it. A penalty affixed by God to enforce the observance of a law must remain affixed till the law needs no longer an enforcement.

A good example of the principles above advocated, is furnished in the case of Adam.

And the Lord God took the man and put him in the garden of Eden to dress it and keep it. And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."—Genesis

This law was given to Adam, and could not apply to others than those who were in the garden, for the tree of which they were commanded not to partake was therein. And as the law could apply to none others, neither could the penalty; yet while man suffers death, it is not as a penalty for the breaking of the law by each, but because of the law of transmission through the flesh; as is the fountain, so is the stream. Nor could the penalty God had affixed as the effect of breaking the law be removed, or in any wise changed, as long as there were those in the garden of Eden to be affected by the law forbidding the partaking of the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

Another illustration is furnished us in the case of Noah. He was given certain commands and instructions; which not only affected him, but all to whom God designed they should be given through him This extended to the then existing inhabitants of the world; and while the whole of the then existing world was affected by those commands, no one presumes to admit that those instructions or commands in whole or in part, would have any effect directly upon the present generation, unless recommitted to this generation. Nor can we believe that the penalty to be endured by those who did not observe those instructions or commands will be changed or removed until the laws given shall have answered the purpose for which they were given; but when they shall have answered such end, they were fulfilled, and no longer in force, and of no benefit only as an illustration of God's dealings with his creation, and with sin, and a proof of the principles by which God will move in dealing with the present generation, and with sin; for "as the days of Noe were so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."-Math. 24:37.

We shall now notice the covenant and commands given to the children of Israel through his servant Moses, in the light of the foregoing principles and illustrations, noticing first the fact that, the ten commandments were a covenant in which is mentioned the two contracting parties, and the mediator through whom the covenant was made. It is a principle that in all contracts or covenants the parties of both parts are mentioned the one making and the one or ones to whom made, and so it is with this covenant.

We shall now notice a part of the proof bearing upon this part of the subject.

"And the Lord spake unto you, [Israel, see 1 v.] out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice. And he declared unto you his even ten commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone," Deut. 4:12,13.

"Remember, and forget not how thou provokedst the Lord thy God to wrath in the wilderness: from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, been rebellious against the Lord. Also in Horeb ye provoked the Lord to wrath, so that the Lord was angry with you to have destroyed you. When I, [Moses] was gone up into the mount to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the Lord made with you, [those that "didst depart out of the land Egypt" see 7 v.], then I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights. I neither did eat bread nor drink water. And the Lord delivered unto me two tables of stone, written with the finger of God: and on them was written according to all the word which the Lord spake out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly. And it came to pass at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the Lord gave me the two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant."-_Deut. 9 :

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel, and he was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments, And it came to pass, when Moses came down from Mount Sinai." Ex. 34:27,29.

The proofs offered are very plain and conclusive upon the idea that the ten commandments were a covenant, given at Mount Sinai, through Moses as mediator, and made with Moses and with Israel. The contracting party of the first part, "The Lord God," and the contracting party of the second part, thee [Moses] and the children of Israel, "who had been in Egypt" and in "the wilderness" and at "Mount Horeb," extending to them and to their children as a perpetual covenant, throughout their generations." To them and their posterity only would God look for a fulfillment of this covenant; only unto them were they given. As proof that this covenant had not been made before with their forefathers, we cite the reader to Deut. 5;1-3, where it plainly tells with whom the Lord made it.

"And Moses called all Israel, and said unto them, Hear O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep them, and do them. The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us alive this day. The Lord talked with you face to face in the mount out of the midst of the fire. I [Moses] stood between the Lord and you [Israel] at that time, to show you the word of the Lord: for ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount, saying." Then follows the saying of the Lord at that time which were the ten commandment covenant, prefacing his sayings, or the covenant, by a statement of the parties covenanting. "I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage." Thou shalt or shalt not do so and so, as the stipulations of the covenant are given.

God addressed himself to the children of Israel after they had been in Egypt, and had been brought out; hence it was not given to their forefathers who had never been brought out of Egypt, nor to those who were not included in the generations of those who had been brought out, who were the literal seed, or those who became one with them by adoption, even circumcision. Moses desired to impress it upon their minds when he said: "The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us." This removes the thought that this covenant had been formerly given to any before this time; and then recommitted to them after their being led out of Egypt; but that it was a covenant then and there introduced.

If these commands are now in force, and the people are now held under this covenant, by what penalty must we conclude they are to be enforced? Is it by those penalties that were affixed by the Lord God in the day they were given? If not, how shall we avoid it by evidence? We can not. God affixed a penalty as punishment to those who should ignorantly or willfully transgress them. God has not severed the penalty from the law; "What therefore God has joined together, let not man put asunder." The facts in the case are, the covenant has been fulfilled in answering the purpose for which it was given, and hence no penalty attaches, because of not keeping it. As is the nature of the punishment for transgressing a law, and the nature of the blessings to be obtained by complying with it; so is the nature of the law itself. The punishments for transgressing this law, and the blessings for complying with it were of a temporal nature. So then must be the law. Only ordained and given for a time, to answer a certain purpose. As the punishments are only for time, as is admitted by all Christian (?) people who try to argue this covenant of ten commandments binding upon all Christians to-day, so we conclude that only so long is said covenant binding upon the people, and that so soon as the punishments were done away, of which we have no evidence only as is contained in the fulfilling of the law, just so soon must the law end by fulfillment. This is plain when we consider that God sent his Son into the world for the express purpose of fulfilling the law, not by destroying it, but by introducing a new, an everlasting covenant, which was to "all the world, to every creature."

The Apostle Paul was an Israelite according to the flesh, and was very zealous to uphold those laws and ordinances God had given to them by Moses till the Lord met him as he was going to Damascus to bind the saints, that they might be judged and punished according to the law of the Israelites. At this time was introduced to his understanding that he was doing wrong in persecuting the saints because of their having accepted Christ and the covenant he brought, and that instead of trying to bring them subject to the ruler of the Israelites according to the flesh, he must become subject to the rule of Israel according to the Spirit, or of true Israel, as it should be made known to him at the city, which rule had the power of giving life and immortality. Then was made known to him "the righteousness of God without the law," see Kom. 3:21, and he from that time on tried to persuade his brethren according to the flesh, that they were not the "children of God," see Rom. 9:8, but they, although of Israel according to the flesh, must become heirs of the inheritance promised, by the righteousness of faith.

"For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise of none effect: Because the law worketh wrath; for where no law is there is no transgression. Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also that is of the faith of Abraham," &c.—Rom. 4: 13-19.

This faith was that of the gospel:

"The Scriptures foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel to Abraham, saying, In thee shall all the nations be blessed."—Gal. 3: 8.

Continuing the instruction to the Galation brethren upon this same subject, Paul argues:

"For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise, but God gave it [the inheritance] to Abraham by promise."—Gal. 3: 18.

After which argument he interrogates them in a way to make his arguments the most effective in giving them an understanding of their position, did they rest their hope in the law:

"Wherefore then serveth the law? It [the law] was added because of transgression, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made." Gal. 3: 19.

This seed was Christ. See 16th verse. And then plainly instructed them why it was necessary that the law should be superceded by the giving of a superior law:

"For if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law."—Gal. 3: 21.

This is a conclusive passage that all the laws given, except the one by Christ, which was the gospel, see 2 Tim., 1:10 were deficient in that particular; and because of that deficiency it was necessary that a law should be given that would liberate from all other laws by being perfect within itself, to the end that all might be saved by true, practical belief therein. Being perfect within itself, it included all perfect principles contained in former laws.

It is thought by some that the law is necessary in order to a knowledge of sin; but here we are again relieved of a misapprehension, for he "hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe." Gal. 3:22. For further proof we present the fact of repentance and remission of sins being preached in all the world to every creature. See Luke 24:47, compared with Mark 16: 15, which would be an absurdity unless every creature had been concluded under sin. Paul sums up the whole matter.

"Wherefore the law was our school-master to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a school-master. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the prom-

Abraham's seed and nears according lise."—Gal. 3: 24, 29.
"For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth."—Rom. 10: 4.
"But if ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the law."—Gal. 5: 18.
"For all the law is fulfilled in one word even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thy-self."—Gal. 5: 14.

"Know ye not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law) how that the law hath dom-inion over a man so long as he liveth? For the woman which hath a husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. "So then, if while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adultéress; but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man."—Rom:

Here Paul is giving an illustration by comparison. He represents the children of Israel according to the flesh as the bride married to a husband, the covenant given at Mount Sinai through Moses as mediator, and until that husband was dead they would have no right to enter into another covenant as a guide to their lives. long as they were under the old covenant they were bound to serve under, it in all the rites, ceremonies and ordinances thereof. The word husband signifying a band or house-band, and a covenant being also a band, the covenant at Mount Sinai made as a band to keep them in the family of God through the flesh, beautifully represents the principle Paul desires to convey to their minds, which he delivers to them in the following definite language:

"Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; [the bride the Lamb's wife, see Rev. 21: 9; John 3: 29; and 2 Cor. 11: 2]; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God

"For when we were in the flesh, the motions of sin, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death. [Because the sins that were committed under the former husband, the law, were made punishable by death, without any chance of forgiveness, no matter how truly they might have repented, but under the husband, Christ, the fruits of God abound, even the forgiveness of sins, through repentance on the part of those who compose the bride, it having been wrought out in them by the goodness of God]."—Rom. 7: 4.
"But now we are delivered from that law [the former husband] that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter."— Rom. 7:6.

"So, then, brethren, we are not children of the bond-woman, but of the free, [and such we should be, by having] cast out the bond-woman and her son; for the son of the bond-woman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman."-Gal.

Christ speaks as follows:

"The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it."—Luke 16:16.

The law and the prophets were read in the synagogues every Sabbath day by these rulers whom Christ addressed, to instruct the people what they should do, and by what they should be guided to render themselves pleasing before God, and they were given for this purpose till John. The people were to continue to be subject to this guide till such time as God had fulfilled it, by giving to them, and from them to "all the world," to "every man," a better guide, which he did in declaring to them through his son, the kingdom of God, which, did they become subject to it would give to them the promised comforter, the Holy Ghost, which guides "into all truth," and being led by it, they would not be "under the law"—Gal. 5: 18. Then the evidences adduced prove, that the covenant of ten commandments was given at Mount Sinai, not before; was given to the children of Israel who had been brought up out of the land of Egypt, and their seed, by birth or adoption, as a schoolmaster, or guide; to remain in force "till the seed should come to whom the promises were made," till "faith is come," and then to be fulfilled, because to that end Christ come as pertaining to the law, "not to destroy, but to fulfill."-Matt. 5:

Every man since the days when John began preaching the gospel, see Mark 1: 1, saying "Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matth. 3: 2, has been, and now is under the new covenant, is now, or should be, governed by the order of the kingdom of God; and they who will not become subject to this order, will have no inheritance therein, when King Emanuel shall take the kingdom, and become the triumphant king over the whole earth. When all who would not become subject to the order of the king, will be subdued as enemies when he shall come to claim his own.

Dear reader, stop and consider ere you go farther in observing ordinances and commands never given you to keep, or of trying to bind burdens upon yourself or others not revealed through Christ's teaching as those commands by which cometh life everlasting, and those God gave, or may give as the order of his kingdom; remembering that all that is holy. just, and true, is incorporated in the new covenant. FAITH AND TALENT.

JOHN Knox said, "O God! give me my Scotland, or I die!" and God gave him Scotland; and the English people said God had heard John Knox's prayer, and it was better than an army of 10,000 men. George Whitfield said "O God, give me souls, or take mine;" and God gave him 5.000, and twenty persons went crazy the first time he preached, through fear, he preached with that power. John Wesley was crossing the Atlantic Ocean and saw the calm, peaceful mind of the Moravians; and he asked and wrestled in prayer, until he found it. From the beginning of the Reformation up to the 19th century, few families have been born to equal the Wesleys. John had forty direct answers to his prayers; and the hymns of his brother Charles and his, are sung by every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, where civilization exists. Shall we who are in the light do less? O, Lord, prosper Zion's children! O, God, send talent into thy vineyard. WM. STREET.

THE LORD WILL PROVIDE.

YES, but how? In his own way; according to his law, will he provide all things necessary for the happiness of the Saints; and if man were so disposed, he need lack for nothing, all his wants are known to his Creator, and provisions made for them; but man seems slow to accept his terms. It should be borne in mind by the Saints that when God has laid down a rule he will work according to no other. He would be dishonoring himself. God has said to his ministry, Go without purse or scrip; take no thought for temporal things. Is it reasonable to suppose, that if the elders remain at home and labor for gain, that he will in a special manner bless and increase them in their worldly goods, to the extent that they can go and be selfsustaining? I have seen many try and fail. If they did not fail in their accumulations, they did to go afterwards; and why not bless, when it is their desire to free themselves so that they can go out and do good? For the reason already stated: it is not God's way. To him who is not called to the ministry he says, Obey my law, (tithing), and I will increase your worldly goods. If the elders are not to provide for their families, who will? Will God care for them as he does the elders? It is nowhere stated that he will. To them he says, Go, take no thought; I will provide. He does, and wonderful are the circumstances related of his doing so. But rare, indeed, are the instances related by the patient, toiling wife, of his miraculously supplying her wants, although often they have been sore. Their sufferings are little known to the body. Those who will sacrifice so much are not of that kind to say much about it. They toil in loneliness and consequent sadness, and too often in poverty; but they are silently earning bright crowns, whose brightness will be a surprise to many, to wear throughout the great role of eternity, when separation from loved ones will be no more; but standing beside those they now are assisting to become great, they will be honored, loved, and their works appreciated, which is not often the case now. The elder goes forth from his home, meets new scenes and faces; if faithful, rises in the estimation of his brethren, is praised, and sometimes flattered, and has some little to comfort him; but who cheers and comforts the lonely wife? The Saints? Yes; sometimes the elders hear of their comforting words. Brethren, be careful; your words, may be, wound, when you least intend they should. How shall their constantly occurring wants be supplied? As the elders'? No. God has provided a system for that; has given a law, and through that will supply their wants; has thus ordained a way by which all his people can assist to roll on the work; and is it not just and right? Should poverty add sorrow to the lonely wife and mother? God's plan is that his people should supply her wants, and that in a manner which will relieve her from all care. There will be enough left when that care is removed. He whose duty it is to care for her wants, is called away; surely God will supply that which he has taken. I am thankful that a more favored day is dawning on latter day Israel. When the blissful time comes that the Saints honor all the laws, then will all their grievances be removed; for to be just to all people is the design of God. When we see heavy burdens borne by some, and others bearing none, we are apt to be grieved in our hearts at the want of justice; but if we examine we will see that God's laws are not honored. The time will soon come when justice will prevail over all the broad earth. Oh blessed day, how I long to behold it!

HEAVEN.

HEAVEN on earth as seen by a happy made man, who thinks it is the only heaven he'll ever see. In the first place, I think all people shall be equal in material things. We shall all be soldiers in the army of the Lord; and as soldiers are fed, clothed and sheltered, by Government, in times of war. So shall it be with us all in the times of peace; no one should have better clothing, food, or shelter, than the remainder. There would of course be no longer any necessity for "the root of all evil"money. The nation's gain or loss would then be the gain or loss of the individual. Hoggishness will then be no longer looked upon as the most desirable quality of the human mind. It will be no longer necessary for any of us to live in hovels, dress in rags, or go half starved. We shall study to retain our health and strength, and how to be happy ourselves and make others happy. We shall have no incentive to manufacture, or produce anything that shall be injurious to humanity. Two or three hours per day (merely healthy exercise) of our united labor will provide for everybody all the comforts at present enjoyed by the middle classes. The remainder of our time we can spend in developing the mind and muscle, and in the enjoyment of all the good things God has given us. PHILOS.

THINGS I WOULD NOT DO.

FRIEND HERALD:—Here are some things I would not do; would you?

I would not waste time in connecting my wires with non-conductors for transmission of light, truth, and knowledge.

I would not refuse sunlight, and then descend a pit to obtain greater light from

I would not walk out of the straight and narrow path among stumbling blocks, to fall and grumble over them.

I would not hold my light on one side, and fall into a pit on the other.

I would not carry my light behind me, and so grope in the darkness of my own shadow.

I would not carry my light under a cloak, for fear some one might see my name should I hold it aright.

I would not establish unlawful or false beacon lights and cry, Lo here, to those who would steer by the true lighthouse.

I would not proclaim a feast to the famishing poor and blind, and then feed them with husks, nor tell them to read a good bill of fare, and be satisfied.

I would not accept any counterfeit bill while reading the open detector.

I would not wait for a more convenient season and plant corn in harvest time to please other people.

I would not enter the field to do my own will as a standard for the Master who came to do his Father's will only.

I would not take passage on a ship whose officers reject the compass, chart, and quadrant.

I would not pray "Thy will be done on earth as in heaven," and then go forth saying, Lord let it be in my own way, or I'll oppose it.

I would not pray, "Lord, send us a pentecostal shower," and at the same time deny tongues, revelation and prophecy.

I would not smite a fellow servant for reading with delight a message from his Father, and call it a delusion because my supposed Father never sent me one.

Selections.

POWER FROM ON HIGH: WHAT IS IT?

THE apostles and brethren, on the day of Pentecost, received it. What did they receive? What power did they exercise after that event?

They received a powerful baptism of the Holy Ghost, a vast increase of divine illumination.

This baptism imparted a great diversity of gifts that were used for the accomplishment of their work. It manifestly included the following things: The power of a holy life, The power of a self-sacrificing life. (The manifestation of these must have had great influence with those to whom they proclaimed the gospel.) The power of a cross-bearing life. The power of great meekness, which this baptism enabled them everywhere to exhibit. The power of a loving enthusiasm in proclaiming the gospel. The power of teaching. The power of a loving and living faith. The gift of tongues. An increase of power to work miracles. The gift of inspiration, or the revelatian of many truths before unrecognized by them. The power of moral courage to proclaim the gospel and do the bidding of Christ, whatever it cost them.

In their circumstances, all these enducements were essential to their success; but neither separately nor all together did they constitute that power from on high which Christ promised, and which they manifestly received. That which they manifestly received as the supreme, crowning, and all-important means of success was the power to prevail with both God and man, the power to fasten saving impressions upon the minds of men. This last was doubtless the thing which they understood Christ to promise. He had commissioned the church to convert the world to him. All that I have named above were only means, which could never secure the end unless they were vitalized and made effectual by the power of God. The apostles, doubtless, understood this; and laying themselves and their all upon the altar, they besieged a throne of grace in the spirit of entire consecration to their work.

They did, in fact, receive the gifts before mentioned; but supremely and principally, this power to savingly impress It was manifested right upon the men. It was manifested right upon the spot. They began to address the multitude; and, wonderful to tell, three thousand were converted the same hour. But observe, here was no new power manifested by them upon this occasion, save the gift of tongues. They wrought no miracle at that time, and used these tongues simply as the means of making themselves understood. Let it be noted that they had not had time to exhibit any other gifts of the Spirit which have been above named. They had not at that time the advantage of exhibiting a holy life, or any of the powerful graces and gifts of the Spirit. What was said on the occasion, as recorded in the gospel, could not have made the impression that it did, had it not been uttered by them with a new power to make saving impression upon the people. This power was not the power of inspiration, for they only declared certain facts of their own knowledge. It was not the power of human learning and culture, for they had but little. It was not the power of human eloquence, for there appears to be little of it. It was God speaking in and through them. It was a power from on high-God in them making a saving impression upon those to whom they spoke. This power to savingly impress abode with and upon them. It was, doubtless, the great and main thing promised by Christ, and received by the apostles and primitive Christians. It has existed, to a greater or less extent, in the church ever since. It is a mysterious fact often manifested in a most surprising manner. Sometimes a single sentence, a word, a gesture, or even a look, will convey this power in an overcoming

To the honor of God alone I will say a little of my own experience in this matter. I was powerfully converted on the morning of the 10th of October. In the evening of the same day, and on the morning of the following day, I received overwhelming baptisms of the Holy Ghost, that went through me, as it seemed to me, body and soul. I immediately found myself endued with such power from on high that a few words dropped here and there to individuals were the means of their immediate conversion. My words seemed to fasten like barbed arrows in the souls of They cut like a sword. They broke the heart like a hammer. Multitudes can attest to this. Oftentimes a word dropped, without my remembering it, would fasten conviction, and often result Somein almost immediate conversion. times I would find myself, in a great measure, empty of this power. I would go out and visit, and find that I made no saving impression. I would exhort and pray, with the same result. I would then set a day apart for private fasting and prayer, fearing that his power had departed from me, and would inquire anxiously after the reason of this apparent emptiness. After humbling myself, and crying out for help, the power would return upon me with all its freshness. This has been the experience of my life.

This power is a great marvel. I have many times seen people unable to endure the word. The most simple and ordinary statements would cut men off from their seats like a sword, would take away their bodily strength, and render almost as helpless as dead men. Several times it has been true in my experience that I could not raise my voice, or say anything in prayer or exhortation, except in the mildest manner, without wholly overcoming those that were present. This was not because I was preaching terror to the people, but the sweetest sounds of the gospel would overcome them. This power seems sometimes to pervade the atmosphere of one who is highly charged with it. Many times great numbers of persons in a com-munity will be clothed with this power, when the very atmosphere of the whole place seems to be charged with the life of God. Strangers coming into it, and passing through the place, will be instantly smitten with conviction of sin, and in many instances converted to Christ. Christians humble themselves, and consecrate their all afresh to Christ, and ask for this power, they will often receive such a baptism that they will be instrumental in converting more souls in one day than in all their life-time before. While Christtians remain humble enough to retain this power, the work of conversion will go on, till whole communities and regions of country are converted to Christ. The same is true of ministers. But this article is long enough. If you will allow me, I have more to say upon this subject.

THE REORGANIZED CHURCH.

ELDER ALEXANDER H. SMITH'S TWO SERMONS ON SUNDAY.

AT the chapel of the Reorganized Church on Second South street, in this city, Sunday morning and evening, Elder Alexander H. Smith preached to congregations composed of communicants and members of the Utah Church. Among the latter were the Patriarch and the Presiding Bishop of the church, besides many of lesser note. Elder Smith treated them to some good advice in reference to rendering obedience to the laws of the land, and showed that such a course of conduct is strictly enjoined by the revelations; that when they were following in the ways of the Lord they were promised the respect of their neighbors, freedom from molestation and persecution. He left it for his hearers to say whether the Utah Saints challenged the respect of their neighbors or not, whether they were being molested, or not, and why. If the revelation which enjoined obedience to the laws, and contained these promises, was good when it was given, why not now?

At the evening meeting his remarks were directed to the subject of the reorganization of the church, in which he showed why this measure became necessary, and how Brigham Young and the Twelve Apostles usurped the leadership. He quoted from declarations of Joseph Smith and Brigham Young, and the revelations to show what the organization and order of the priesthood were, and how, in case of the death of the prophet, the word of the Lord was to be given to the Saints. It was to be through the high council of the chief or center stake of Zion, in which jurisdiction the Twelve Apostles had no Their work and business whatever. powers extended only to matters beyond the borders of Zion. When the prophet was killed, therefore, the right and duty to rule fell upon the high council at Nauvoo, of which Elder Marks was the president. But Brigham Young and eight others of the Twelve, brushed this order, of the priesthoed to one side, and seized the reins of government themselves. Five years later these men issued "an epistle to the church," announcing a "reorganization with a first presidency." If the objection of the Utah priesthood that the "Josephite" is not the true Church, because it is a "reorganization" is good, why is it not also good as to the reorganization made by Brigham Young?

We find by the history of the church that Brigham Young and his eight Apostles did not only disorganize the church and seize the reins of government, but that they reorganized it on a basis foreign to the order established by revelation, by overthrowing the authority of the high council, usurping its functions themselves, and then, by virue of their usurped authority, providing a first presidency.

The speaker gave the Utah Saints many a nut to crack of this kind, and at the conclusion of his remarks invited the congregation to accept some tracts in which they would find more. At this particular juncture in Utah affairs the preachings of the sons of the first Mormon prophet will be listened to with great attention, for what they say is calculated to affect the personal interests of many people. In their power to successfully defy the laws of the land, they were arrogant, indolent and blind. In their weakness, a spirit of humility is coming over them. They hear better; coming over them. their sight is improved a little, and they are asking each other, where is the true Mormon shepherd? And it seems to be dawning upon many that he is the son of their first shepherd, standing within the laws crying to the flock to come out of the mire, and come into the fold.—Salt Lake Tribunc, April 2d.

____ HOLINESS.

HOLINESS sought, holiness received and holiness enjoyed is the only safeguard against backsliding and final apostasy. As long as one has in him the "carnal mind," he has the worst foe to his spiritual welfare in the world, a foe that is ever on the alert to betray, deceive and destroy him. It is called an "evil heart of unbelief." St. Paul upbraids the Hebrew Christians for not obtaining holiness (Heb. 5: 12-14), and then tells them, "Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God." much as to say if they did not thus go on unto (mark he does not say towards, as though one might be ever approaching but never attaining it, but unto, perfection, implying its obtainment) perfection they would thereby backslide and lay the foundation of "repentance from dead works," or works that involve and lead to death. He also shows that this is the high-road to utter apostasy, for he adds, "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened and have tasted of the heavenly gift and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost and have tasted of the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away to renew them again to repentance."

This falling away means not backslidings, but utter apostasy, denying the Lord Jesus Christ and the efficacy of his blood, for the apostle immediately adds, "Seeing they crucify to themseles the Son of God afresh and put him to an open shame;" in other words, they in their hearts set Christ aside as an impostor, and sanction the deed of his crucifiers. All this comes from not going on unto perfection. No wonder the world is full of apostates when we see how little understood and held forth as a present privilege and duty is the work of complete holiness in the churches of Christendom.

Sixthly, the glory of Christ demands that we be holy. It has been proclaimed to all the universe that Christ Jesus came to earth for the express purpose of "saving his people from [or out from] their sins" (Mat. 1: 21); of "destroying the works of the devil" (1 John 3: 8); of "delivering us out of the hands of our enemies that we might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him all the days of our life." Luke 1: 74, 75. Now if this is not done because God's people will not meet the condition on which it is effected, Christ is dishonored and his mission to earth declared a failure. Man in this case makes the promises of God without effect through unbelief. Christ's "inheritance" is in "his saints;" if his saints are not saved from all sin and filled with God, Christ's possessions, they are very poor and unsatisfactory.

2.—Is it not very hard to live in this experience?

A.—No, if one intends to live a Christian at all he will find it much easier to serve God when all the inward foes of Christ are destroyed. Serving God with the carnal mind undestroyed is like rowing a boat against the wind and tide. When everything which opposes Christ is taken away, the wheels of spiritual activity move without friction or resistance; religion then becomes the soul's native element; man's nature then harmonizes with God, and it is easy and delightful to do God's will. Just as robust health makes active life a luxury, so abounding spiritual life in Christ makes Christian service a delight.

To every one not sanctified wholly much of the religious life is a drudgery, and all of it unsatisfactory. To one in perfect union with God, there are no sacrifices, no burdens. Whatever God requires is a privilege and pleasure, because done for him whom the soul loves and adores.— Evangelist.

FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

We are entering upon another year's work; let it be done with a will and effort that can not fail. We have more reports than the other quorums, and let us continue to have more if they do not reach ninety-six. We would desire all members of the quorum to read the report of the quorum to General Conference, in the conference minutes in Herald, and comply with the resolutions concerning them. A resolution was passed that all those, who, in six months from date of this notice in Herald, have not applied for license will be dropped, and the vacancies filled by new applicants. A year and a half and eight notices should reach all. A printed circular letter is to be issued when all are heard from and addresses secured, which will enable each to know the location of the entire quorum, this will be hastened by diligence, let all come to the rescue promptly. All are requested to write to the presiding officer several times during the year. The following are the names that are still delinquent:

Let us have "Onward to perfection and victory" the motto and watchword; the outlook is good.

CONFERENCE NOTICES. .

The conference for the Eastern Iowa District will meet with the Jackson Branch, at Amber, Jones county, on the first Saturday in June, 1885. My brethren, it is my wish that as many of you as possibly can will attend this meeting. It is not necessary that I should enumerate the whys. You are, all of you, familiar with the condition of affairs in the district, and therefore need not that I should remind you that more earnest effort is necessary on our part if we expect to maintain our district organization. Come then one and all, and come praying and trusting, and remembering that "God will bless the faithful, and those who love and trust him." There is work to be done; "come let us reason together," and if possible give the wheel another revolution. Praying for the success of the cause and for the good of all, I am your brother in the gospel, JEROME RUBY, Pres. of Dist.

The conference of the Fremont District, Iowa, will be held at the Keystone Branch, near Emerson, on the C. B. & Q. R., the last Saturday and Sunday in May, [30th and 31st], 1885.

HENRY KEMP, District Pres.

The district conference of the Wyoming Valley will be held in the Chapel at Nanticoke, Luzerne county, Pa., May 30th and 31st, and not at Plymouth, as inserted in the conference minutes published in the Herald. The reason for the above change is, the Saints at Plymouth are unable to obtain the use of a convenient hall, as Mr. McHarney's large hall is now engaged by the Congregational Church, and the Opera House by the Salvation Army, and there is also a great deal of sickness raging there. We desire all the branches to be reported, and all officers to be in attendance if possible; if not then report by letter to the conference. A good time is anticipated, so come one and all, and bring the good Spirit with you from your homes, and let us have a rejoicing time—a Pentecost. Reports may be addressed to L. B. Thomas, East Nanticoke, Luzerne county, Pa. Your brother in Christ,

John J. Morgan, District Pres.

The next quarterly conference of the Nauvoo and String Prairie District will convene at Farmington, Iowa, at ten o'clock in the forencon, on Saturday, June 6th, 1885. A representation from each branch is urged, and all Elders in the district are expected to report in person if possible.

H. C. Bronson, Pres.

SAVAGE.—At Wilber, Nebraska, October 9th, 1884, to Bro. Wilber and sister Lydia A. Savage, a son. Blessed May 6th 1885, by Elder Robert M. Elvin, and named Henry Levi.

DIED.

LAKE.—At Fenelon Township, near Cameron, Ont., April 17th, 1885, sister Mary Lake, wife of Elder Amos Lake, aged 65 years, 5 months and 17 days. She had been brought up among the Society of Friends, but when her brother-in-law, Elder John H. Lake came here, the truth came with power to her heart. She was baptized on the 15th of September 1884, by Elder J. H. Lake, and on the day of baptism rejoiced greatly that both herself and husband had come to see the true light of the gospel. Her end was peace.

HARDING.—At her residence in Crescent Township, Pottawattamie county, Iowa, on the 5th of April, 1885, Sr. Jane Harding, aged 28 years, 4 months, and 21 days. The deceased was born in Pottawattamie county, Iowa. She joined the Reorganization October 27th, 1877, and was a daughter of brother Strang, lately deceased, and leaves two small children and a husband to mourn her loss. But such is life. As the Scriptures says, The race is not given to the swift, nor the battle to the strong; but to whomsoever the Lord willeth.

EATON.—Died of heart disease, sister Zemira J. Eaton, wife of Elder Otis C. Eaton, at her home in Winterport, Maine, March 22d, 1885, aged about 47 years. Sister Eaton was born at Deer Isle, and about eighteen years ago, she consecrated her life to God in holy baptism. All through the subsequent years she honored her covenant vows. She was a firm, decided christian woman; a tender, loving companion and mother, a firm believer in prayers and the promises of God. She was the mother of twelve children, nine of whom still survive her. She gave the clearest evidence that her spiritual change was deep and thorough, and that the Master she had served would reward at last. Funeral services were held at the Methodist Church. Sermon by A. A. Lewis from the words "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his Saints." May the comfort of divine grace sustain our bereaved brother and the afflicted children.

Springer.—It is with a sad heart that I am called upon to chronicle the death of our dear old mother, Eliza Springer, who fell asleep on April 27th, 1885; aged 75 years, 4 months, and 23 days. I was summoned by telegram as soon as she passed away, as were also her other children. Three of the five responded to the call. Funeral services on the 29th by Elder Hawkins, of the Christian Church; after which we laid her away to rest beside our father, who passed away in August 1867. Mother was baptized in May, 1840, by Elder Z. H. Gurley, Senr.; and from that day to her death, her purely Christian life gave evidence of her implicit faith in God and his glorious plan of human redemption. The gospel was her living and dying sentiment. She rests in peace. She was the mother of ten children, five of whom survive her; myself the oldest, residence, Lucas, Iowa; Anna M. Pennington, Plattsmouth, Nebraska; Harriet Hart, Lewisville, Indiana; John M. Springer, Maryville, Missouri; and Mary E. Ross, of Burnside, where mother lived and died.

"Farewell mother, we shall miss thee, "Farewell mother, we shall mass thee,
But we know thy rest is sweet;
And again we hope to greet thee,
When our joy will be complete.
Yes, we'll meet thee, sainted mother,
When the cares of life are o'er;
The loved ones gone and loved ones coming,
All will meet to part no more.

B. V. Springer.

MARKS.—At Fenelon Township, near Cameron, Ont., May 1st, 1885, brother Richard Marks, aged 79 years, 2 months, and 10 days. He was born at Kinnenhall, Norfolk, England. Was baptized September 8th, 1885, by Elder John H. Lake. He lived his religion and died feeling sure of having part in the first resurrection.

The Saints' Perald.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIRS

- - EDITOR.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, May 30, 1885.

In the quarterly conference of the Brighamite Church in Salt Lake City, the 4th inst., "Elder George B. Wallace said he looked forward with great anticipation to the time when the man like Moses should be raised up to deliver this people from bondage."

What evidence does Elder Wallace and his fellows give that they would know and receive the "man like Moses" in case he should visit Utah? The very bookthe Doctrine and Covenants-from whence he takes the idea, teaches loyalty to the laws of the land; teaches monogamy and condemns polygamy; teaches that Joseph the Seer's successor would be of his "posterity," "seed," "lineage," and prophetic appointment; yet they wriggle, pettifog, evade, and oppose the very work set forth in that book and the facts it teaches on these matters. If they were teaching, and carrying out in their practices the principles provided there, and were willingly and faithfully waiting upon all the promises contained in that book, then we would have the right to expect they would know and joyfully receive the "man like Moses," for they would know whence he came as decreed of God. But when they do violence to "the law and the testimony" contained in those revelations, we have doubts and fears as to what they may do towards this deliverer they are looking for. History often repeats itself, and it is a recorded fact, that the zealous but misguided Jews rejected the very Messiah they were looking for and praying for. Paul says of them and to them, "Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of this salvation sent. For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every Sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him."—Acts 13: 26, 27.

These zealous Israelites, though they had "the voices of the prophets," and had them "read every Sabbath day," yet "they knew him not," but "fulfilled them in condemning him." Will like things prevail on the part of the Utah Mormons, and "their rulers," in respect to the "man like Moses?" Time will tell. They have the revelations which promise the coming of this man, and the same book points to the source whence he must come, the time when, and the work he will do. These revelations point out every essential feature touching the matter, and whoever will be guided by them need not err.

A VICTIM'S VIEWS.

C. I. Kempe, now paying the penalty for violating the laws of God and the nation in practicing polygamy, writes from prison, Detroit, Michigan, May 3d.

"My brethren, Christopherson and Tenney, and I, are here cast into the society of murderers, thieves and all kinds of criminals, and not a friend within a thousand miles to speak to or associate with. And why are we here? Echo answers why. We are not Nihilists, nor Communists, nor Fenians. All we have done is to obey the injunction of Jesus Christ as implied in his remark to the Jews: "If ye were the children of Abraham, ye would do the works of Abraham." I feel to ask, Why was Jesus crucified? Why were the Apostles imprisoned, persecuted and cruelly martyred? Why were the Prophets of ancient day cast into lion's dens and fiery furnaces, and compelled to hide in mountains and caves of the earth? Were all those pure and noble men criminals. Why are such men as Brothers Skousen and Flake and others to-day imprisoned at Yuma, Arizona? I have long been well acquainted with Brother Skousen, and knew him to be an innocent, honest old farmer—as good a man as can be found, and what has he done to deserve punishment? It is the same old, old story over and over again."

He quotes good Scripture, but he does not quote enough. He claims that doing "the works of Abraham" was just what landed him and the others he mentions in prison. This is a painful mistake to both himself and them; for one of the works of Abraham was to put away the woman whom his unbelieving wife gave him for a plural wife; (Gen. 16: 1-3); and he put her away by the command of God; (Gen. 21: 12-21); and all polygamists by this may know what kind of works they must do if they "would do the works of Abraham" which were ordained of God. Abraham kept clear and clean from polygamy after this, for he did not marry Keturah (Gen. 25: 1) till about seven years after Sarah's death, (Gen. 23: 1). If all the Utah polygamists would do those "works of Abraham" which God commanded, their troubles might rapidly disappear.

Mr. Kempe enquires to know why Jesus was crucified, the apostles persecuted and martyred, and the ancient prophets maltreated. It was not for polygamy nor anything in that direction; and if he would read well the Scriptures he could readily and correctly answer his questions on that point.

We sincerely pity those who have been ensnared by polygamy, and we feel assured if they would read the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Nauvoo or European editions of Doctrine and Covenants thoroughly, they, like Abraham, would find that God hates polygamy and demands of them to put it away. Must they "learn obedience by the things they suffer."

THE following from The Progress, published at Independence, Mo., indicates that the Saints can win a good name among non-Mormons, and that, too, right at the center stake.

THE LATTER DAY SAINTS AND POLYGAMY.

Nothing is lost by candor and fairness, and it is simply in the spirit of candor and fairness that the Progress bears testimony as a secular journal to the sincerity of the profession of those in our community called Latter Day Saints, who proclaim their antagonism to the [evils of the] Salt Lake church, and the polygamy heresy.

A copy of the Saints' Herald, published at Lamoni, Iowa, on our table containing a complete report of the conference recently held here, contains the creed of the organization in which the declaration of the doctrine of monogamy is probably more emphatic than in other creeds.

The people who have become so numerous in this community, as one man, condemn the practices of the Utah church, by both precept and example, and it is wrong to attribute to them the contrary doctrine.

No more zealous commendation of the United States courts sustaining the vital principle of the Edmunds law has been written than that found in the paper to which allusion has been made, and no body of religionists in our community, will have greater cause for rejoicing at the overthrow of polygamy, than that for which the Herald is the official organ.

WOMEN AS TEACHERS.

WE are sometimes asked why may not a sister teach? Is there any good reason why a woman who has a good knowledge of the latter-day work should not make her knowledge available by imparting it to others, that they too may be aided on in the way of the divine life.

In answer to this we can only say that much, very much depends upon the women of the faith, whether their children shall be led by education into ways of thought, conducive to faith in God, Christ and the church. What is not in some sort done at home by the teaching and example of father and mother, more especially the mother, will never be so fully done thereafter by those out of the home circle, and this is true of religious training and instruction as of education in any other direction. The bent of the mother's mind will more largely mould and fashion the inclinations of her children, than many women in the church will be willing at first thought to admit. But physiology, the laws of heredity, the examples culled from the history of the world, the remembrance and contemplation of the noted men of our own day, all point to the fact that the mothers of the men, are more frequently the responsible agents in the forming of great and good characters than are the fathers, especially in cases where the fathers have been, by profession, or business pursuits called much away from home. Why is this?

If so grave a responsibility attaches to the character of the mother of a man as a teacher, director or former of the character of her own offspring, and she is properly qualified for so important a trust; why is she not by reason of those very qualifications prepared in some sort to help teach, direct, and form the character of others not of her own household.

That this question may be answered in the affirmative is witnessed by the choosing of women as teachers in schools, where she wields quite as potent an influence as do men in the same avocation. And it is quite possible that in the battle of life the moral education of many a successful man was begun and fostered by that influence, perhaps unconsciously to him, but permanent for his good just the same.

Personally we can see no good reason why women may not become in some way associate teachers in the gospel work. But how may she do this work.

It may not be that she may take the pulpit as an ordained minister, teaching ordinances in which she might not administer; but as a co-worker, in a similar way as did those named in the New Testament.

THE UTAH PROBLEM.

Junius, the Chicago correspondent of the Deseret News, hopes for a settlement of it with but little harm to any, if wisdom is used. He says:

"For the sake of humanity and the honor of American citizenship keep the missionary spy, the discoverer, and the informer, out of Utah. It is not creditable to us as a people that any section of our country should be under penal legislation. It is not creditable to us to encourage a spirit of hostility against any sect or creed, even though we don't believe in them. We tolerate things every day that we don't believe in. There are thousands in this country who don't believe in Methodism, and who would rather drink hemlock than embrace its doctrines, yet not one of these would hurt a hair of Dr Newman's head, or on what Joe Cook calls his head. Polygamists of Utah are no hypocrites. What they did they have done in the face of modern civilization and in the light of day, and under the firm belief that they were acting out their divine mission without violating the Constitution of their country. Anyhow they are but a small percentage of the people, and with a fair understanding and an honest administration of affairs in Utah, that matter can be settled without humiliation or persecution to anybody, or without working injury to many women and children."

We would suggest to Junius that what is needed now is for the Utah leaders to bring their people into line with the laws of the country, and then the problem is solved so far as national interference is concerned. Either the Utah leaders must obey the laws, or the trouble will continue and augment.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. J. F. McDowell delivered a sermon in the Saints' Meeting House at Council Bluffs, Sunday evening, May 10th, on the Prohibition issue, at present of great local interest in the city where delivered. The sermon appeared in the Daily Herald for Monday, May 11th, and excited much favorable comment. Don't fail to strike them again, Bro. McDowell, when opportunity offers. Saints can hold no compromise with the Devil on the drink "abomination which maketh desolate." We give the sermon elsewhere, and most cordially commend the positions taken by Bro. McDowell to all.

Our aged sister, Mary Barnes, now living at Mondamin, Harrison county, Iowa, wants to know where she can procure a shrub or plant called man-under-the ground, which is said to be beautiful, and to possess excellent medicinal properties. Any who can will please furnish the desired information.

The minutes of the Spring River District Conference, February 27th last, did not come to hand until too late for publication prior to May 22d, the time to which it adjourned. Conference clerk's should be careful to have their minutes prepared and sent in good time for publication.

Sr. P. Sterrett of Pleasant Grove, Utah, writes under date of May 13th, that many in that region are getting interested in the Reorganization; and she expresses the hope that better times are at hand for Utah; and says further, that the Saints in their branch are feeling strong in the faith and feel assured truth will prevail.

Bro. D. S. Crawley writes from Independence, May 17th, saying he had lately been preaching in Caldwell county, Missouri.

Bro. F. C. Warnky of the same place, under date of May 18th says,—"I have just returned from Ray county where I held excellent meetings. Had a pleasant time with Bro. David Whitmer. He manifests an excellent spirit towards us. All the Whitmer's attended my meetings at King's school-house. I begin a series of meetings at Coralton the last Saturday in this month, and expect to continue over two Sundays. I preached in Kansas City yesterday. Everything is lovely."

Bro. R. J. Anthony in a letter dated Soda Springs, Idaho, May 15th says—"The Brighamites are dreadful bitter here since the conviction of A. M. Cannon and others. I find the people at Malad are extremely bitter, more so than formerly, and yet they are much divided in sentiment. From report there are men and women traveling through every settlement, lashing the people into line. I attended one of their meetings in Malad. It was treason from its beginning to its close. Must the rod be laid on heavier yet! I sometimes think they have but just begun to feel the lash."

Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths reports from Wheeling, West Virginia, that thirteen were baptized at New Philadelphia, last week and a branch organized there of fourteen members. May 12th was the date of Bro. Griffiths note.

Bro. Carlton writes from Petrolia, Ontario, May 11th, that three were baptized there lately.

Sr. Eliza Dingle writes May 12th, that they expect Bro. J. C. Clapp to come soon and preach in Deer Lodge Valley, Montana. She says further—"If there are any Elders in Connecticut, I should like them to call on Mr. and Mrs. Wellington, in Cromwell, saying I desired them to call."

Letters from Bro. T. W. Smith indicate that he was about to visit Mattea, Tikahau, Raiwa and Koukura and other islands of the Society group.

Bro. H. J. Hudson of Columbus, Nebraska, sent us a State Fournal of May 12th, giving the details of an interview with Ex-Senator Paddock, one of the Utah Commission. The Senator thinks that Pres. Cleveland will not interfere with the enforcement of the laws in Utah.

The papers state that there was a resistance to the service of writs in the hands of United States Marshals at Paris, Idaho. We hope the statement is exaggerated.

Bro. Thomas Bearss writes from Corinth, Ontario, that the Saints at Corinth were well except a daughter of Bro. W. Jenkins, sick of consumption. Should not the Father's power intervene she can not last long. They are glad that Bro. J. H. Lake is returned to the Canada Mission.

Wanted, a large increase to the subscription lists of our church papers. Help in this direction is help to the church as a whole; for the publishing department belongs to the church—is its property—the Saints and to the world. Success in and is expected to be of immense value to the publishing department is success to the church. We invite all to renewed efforts in making it felt in all proper ways, and to the utmost extent. Pay the printer promptly and be happy.

We call attention to the advertisement of N. W. & H. C. Smith in another column. They are reliable gentlemen.

Hopkins & Smith are competent and pleasant dealers and we take pleasure in calling attention to their card in this paper.

In this issue, "S. F. W," has another article, No. 7, on the origin of all things. It is full of valuable historical data and monumental evidences supportive of Christianity, especially as taught in the sacred books of the Latter Day Saints; yet it discredits what is commonly accepted as Bible Chronology, and casts a doubt upon the popular renderings of some Bible texts. It should be remembered that scienceso-called-has had to change its base and correct its data and its methods more than once in the past, and therefore it is not always safe to trust its claims. The same may be said of the various rules of Bible interpretation also; and here we see the propriety of following the instruction of Saint Paul—"Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

CONTRIBUTIONS to the HERALD and HOPE are earnestly solicited; and contibutors are respectfully requested to write on subjects which are now practicable and of interest. Furthermore, they should make themselves well acquainted with the subjects on which they write; and then go direct to the points they seek to make in plainness and clearness, and with as few and as easily understood words as possible. The objects in writing for the church press should be to instruct and entertain; and neither can be accomplished unless the writer is thoroughly understood and appreciated. Be sure you see your points correctly and clearly, and then go for them in the shortest, plainest, and happiest Study brevity. Embody the most you can in the fewest and easiest terms available. Long periods, and rare and high-sounding words, are not evidence of either skill, education, nor inspiration. Avoid everything of a slangy character, either in word or sentiment. "Let your speech be seasoned with grace," remembering that the Master has said, "By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." In no case can this apply with greater force than in respect to writing for papers whose chief effort should be to promulgate the truth and the righteousness ordained of God.

Write only on one side of the paper. Write in plain style. "Dot your i's and cross your t's." Don't crowd your words together. Don't make your "n" nor "a" like "u;" neither make "c" nor "a" like "e." Make your letters plain, and then the editors and printers will understand you and make few or no mistakes in publishing your articles.

When you have written an article, review it thoroughly and correct it fully. Don't be in haste to mail it, but give it the benefit of your "sober second thoughts," and re-touch it till it fills your ideal of what you think it should be, and then forward it and we will deal kindly with it, and send it out into all the world, that others may see you and read you as you are expressed in your work. Study, study, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." Our church papers should be of the highest excellence in doctrine, in purity of sentiment, in historical data, and in everything that is good to build up the Saints in all things pertaining to life and immortality. We respectfully ask our old and valued contributors to rise up to the needs of the times and prove that "the pen is mightier than the sword;" and we invite to our columns new candidates, both as contributors and correspondents.

THE petition and protest carried to President Cleveland by John T. Caine, John Q. Cannon and John W. Taylor, and presented on the behalf of the Utah Church, closes in these words:

"In conclusion, Mr. President, permit us to express the belief that a fair and candid investigation of the 'Mormon problem' would disabuse the public mind and remove much of the prejudice existing against us. May we not, therefore, entertain the hope that you will institute such an investigation, and thus open a door for the settlement of this 'vexed question?'"

The door for the settlement of this vexed question is open, wide open. The keys are found in Jeremiah 31:31; Ezekiel 18:21, 27; 33:15. All that these protesting church men need to do is to turn into the door already opened—stop breaking law and live.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Can or should there be a limit placed upon Priests, Teachers, Deacons or members, upon the "question of privilege or expendiency" as to their officiating in administering to the sick.

Ans.—Yes, if such limit were practicable, which in doubtful.

Q.—Where is the word of authority for the Elders to give the oil, when they are called upon to anoint, and pray for the sick

A.—We know of none—custom of some only.

2.—Should action be taken against Priests, Teachers, Deacons and members, when they assume the duties of Elders, when Elders are available.

A.—It would be owing to circumstances, and of doubtful propriety; the offense is very rare.

2.—It it right for an Elder to announce to the public that he will preach at a certain time and place, and at that time get up and read some other man's views from a book, without giving the another's nane.

A.—Every one should be credited with their own production. When an Elder announces that he will preach, he should keep his promise if practicable, and not change the order of the exercises without ample reason.

2.—What is the duty of all members leaving one branch and uniting with another?

A.—Such members should take letters from the branch to which they had belonged.

2.—Is an Elder privileged above any other member that he may be voted in and put on the branch record, without a letter of removal?

A.—No. All members should be treated alike.

2.—Should such members be returned on the strength of the branch, or district, till they bring a letter of removal from the branch they were in, and conform to the law?

A.—Branches may make their own rules in regard to the reception of members into fellowship in the branch and the requiring of letters from other branches before voting to receive persons into membership in the branch. The law is a resolution of Conference, directing members from the branch to which they belong when removing from it.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

THE following letter from Sr. P. L. Hyde of Belmont, N. Y., to Bro. J. Smith, is filled with so much of steadfastness, patience, and holy trust, that we take pleasure in calling special attention to it. She now sits at the gateway of the world beyond, under the golden beams of the Sun of Righteousness, the last of the thirteen children of her father's house, filled with longings indescribable for her children's weal, and sending forth testimony for God and his marvelous work with a sweet cadence which awakens and charms the soul and fills the heart with high and holy resolves. Well done, faithful soldier of the cross! May heaven richly reward thy waiting and watching, and give thee the desires of thy heart in righteousnss. Sr. Hyde's testimony in respect to the sayings of the patriarch Joseph Smith, the father of the Seer, is timely and edifying—they are being fulfilled to the joy of many souls.

I read in the Herald of the good reports of the Elders, for which I am truly thankful. Although I do not have the privilege of hearing the gospel preached, yet I am a firm believer in it as it was preached by your father, the Seer. It has been over forty years, and I have only heard 'the gospel preached twice, that was years ago, by brethren C. G. Lanphear and S. J. Stone. I pray God to send some of the brethren into these parts, and that I may see my children led down into the pure cold waters of the Genesee, which runs through our place, and it will be the happiest day of my life. The tears often fall from my eyes when I look over the pages of the Herald, and read the names of those Elders whom I once knew, who have gone to receive their reward. which I trust will be glorious: among them brethren D. M. Gamet and Austin W. Cowles. We were grieved to hear of the death of Bro. C. N. Brown, of Providence, R. I. He was a true pattern for all Latter Day Saints. He called to see me when I was in Hornellsville with my daughters, a number of years ago, and left a strong and lasting impression for good in their families. Your grandfather and his brother, John Smith, came to my father's and Elder Z. Coltren. There was a large branch here then. No one here now but me. And I well remember what your grandfather said when my mother said to him that there was a possibility of Joseph the prophet being put to death by wicked men. The Patriarch walked across the floor, and in a voice that I never can forget, he said, It may be so; but he has a son that would take his place. I was only thirteen years old, but I felt sure it would be as he said, although the days have been long and dark; but they grow brighter. I am the last of my father's family of thirteen children.

Bro. Geo. H. Hulmes, of Pittsburg, Pa., in a recent letter writes:

"Our branch is in a more favorable condition now I believe than I have ever known it, except in its very early history. We were trying to pull bravely against the tide when Bro. Mark came. His coming and stay was very profitable to the branch. Bro. John H. Lake labored with us some three weeks and gave us excellent sermons, advice, and counsel. May the Lord bless and increase such men in the church. Bro. Gomer Griffiths is doing a noble work in the western district, at New Philadelphia, Ohio. Had baptized fourteen, most of them heads of families, and people of influence in the place."

Correspondence.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 18, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—When I wrote last to the Herald I was at New Philadelphia, Ohio. Since then I have visited a number of places. On my way to General Conference, I called at Sandwich, Ill., and had a pleasant visit with brother and sister Rogers, who have the faculty of making every one feel at home. My next stop was Lewiston, Ills., where my sister and her husband live. Enjoyed the visit very much, and regreted I had not a longer time to stay. In the meantime I called upon brother and sister Stafford, whom I found strong in the faith of the Saints. I spent several hours conversing about the gospel, and baptized one there.

From there I went to Macon City, Mo., where another sister and her husband reside, where I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. J. R. Lambert, with whom I spent several hours agreeably. May the Great Physician restore him to perfect health again, as his presence and labor are very much needed in the church. The next day I reached Bevier, Mo., my mother's home. I was glad to meet with her and the rest of my folks who live there. At this place I baptized twentytwo, the result of others' labor. Many of them are young. It was with much reluctance and sadness that I parted with my loved ones there. I am grateful to our Heavenly Father that the time is coming when parting will have an end. I oft-times wish that time had come, but then we must be patient and do as we are bidden, so as to be worthy at the coming of our Redeemer, to be of the number of whom it is written, they shall dwell in the presence of the Great I Am

On the 28th of March I paid the Salt River Saints a visit, whom I had not seen for nearly five years. It afforded me much pleasure to meet with these good hearted people again. Bro. Robert Thruchley is the president of this branch, and is one of the faithful soldiers of the cross. On the 4th of April I reached Independence. The conference in my opinion was a grand success. On the 25th ult. I arrived at New Philadelphia, Ohio, again. Remained two weeks and preached seventeen sermons, and baptized thirteen, all of whom are heads of families; organized a branch of fourteen members to be known as the Blakes Mills' Branch. Bro. Henry A. Miller was called by revelation to be a Priest, and was chosen president of the branch. Bro. J. H. Cramer Teacher, and Edward Steinbaugh, Deacon, Charles Warner, clerk. There are a great many more who are on the verge of uniting with the church. I return there again the latter part of this week. On the 30th inst. I expect to meet Bro. E. L. Kelley at Diamond, Ohio, and expect to labor with him for a month at least. I hope the Saints in this district will not get impatient, as I can not open up new places and travel in the branches at the same time. Unless something unexpected occurs, brethren J. Ells and R. S. Salyards will labor some in the branches this summer.

> Yours in the everlasting covenant, G. T. GRIFFITHS.

ZIONA, Tahiti, March 1st, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-I find from various letters to me that it affords many of the Saints pleasure to hear from us concerning this mission. Helen has written at least four letters to the Hope, but as we have not seen one since we left America, I do not know whether they have been received or not. You informed me that my letter written on board the ship was a week behind the one written by Metuaore. I can account for that in this way, I was offered by the captain the forwarding of my mail by him at his expense, as there was some twenty-one letters in all, it was quite an item, some requiring two and three stamps. But I suppose through press of business, he forgot to put them in the office for a week. The letter of Metuaore, who is the president of the branch there, and quite an able man, states that the language here is easy to learn, as there are but fifteen letters in the alphabet. That is true, there are but fifteen letters, but they have a multitude of words, and many spelled precisely alike, but have vastly different meaning. For instance, the word "ao," as "ou" in "bounce," "pronounce," "flounce," while it is a little word, has twenty-one separate meanings, signifying among them, day, blessedness, the present life, opening buds, a sea bird, a spy, the sides of a square, fat of turtles. fowls, fishes, &c. The connection, of course, has to determine the meaning in each case. Now, on another point I find a difficulty. Many words spelled precisely alike, differ in the pronunciation. one or two vowels, being shortened or prolonged as the case may be; and again, the emphasis being on the first or last syllable, changes the meaning entirely. The letter o, which is a word also, is an article, adverb, adjective, also a preposition, as "of," "belonging to," and also "at" and "with." It is an interjection, and active verb. and a noun or name of five different things, and an adverb of place, meaning either here or there, as the particles tu, atu, mai, nei, ae, i, tei and e may direct. And then again, numbers of words are spelled alike except the first letter, p and t, r and m, changing places. The brevity of some words is commendable (?), for instance, a stingy old woman is only a Ruahineaimaamua, while the goddess of strife and cruelty is simply a Ruahinetamaumauoreore. But when divided as it can be, the latter is not so bad, Ruahine ta mau mau ore ore. But these words are not used, as they belonged to the heathen state which the natives were in some fifty years ago. However, this language, like the English, contains hundreds of words very seldom if ever used; and like the English the words commonly used are comparatively few. I have not had faith enough yet to be able to speak, i. e. preach a sermon in this tongue; yet I can make myself understood quite well in ordinary conversation. Helen does quite well also; she has picked up a class of words concerning household things, and their uses, and articles of dress, and such like, while I grasp a different sort: and thus we can help each other in talking with

I have not got used to their manner of living, nor ever expect to; and it is not necessary. We have a small cook stove which the Saints have bought, and the necessary utensils, and Helen makes bread and biscuits out of California flour. We have potatoes, beans, and peas, of California production; while cabbage, onions, carrots, and such like are raised here. Butter we have not seen since we left the ship-four months ago. We can get some "oily margin" at sixty cents per pound, but I would prefer to do without than eat that stuff. I wish we had a small cheese from the factory at Lamoni, but it would cost us some twenty cents a pound to get it here. Canned fruit costs forty cents per quart can; pork twenty cents per pound; beef twenty to twenty-five cents; chickens fifty cents; eggs five cents a piece, and small at that. By being economical (and all who know Helen can testify to her frugality) we can get along on about four to five dollars per week. The Saints will keep us supplied with food; the great trouble is to hinder them from getting too much on hand, at times, of articles of diet that quickly perish in this climate. One thing I refer to in not getting used to the native way of living, is that they have no regular time in eating, they eat when they get hungry, and eat till they are full. And another thing, they will eat out of the same dishthree or four or more—and use their fingers, or a piece of bread to sop with. They are cleanly, however, and wash their fingers before eating; but I do not admire the style. Dogs are eaten by outsiders, but brethren who have preceded me, have forbidden the Saints to eat dog, and I saw it was wise in me to continue the restriction. I have not discovered any erroneous teaching by those who have been here. Brethren Rodger and Wandell were here too short a time to teach much of the laws and usages of the church; but we know that they were honest, capable, and earnest men. Benjamin Grouard taught very correctly, and left a good name here, although he spent most of his time on the Paumotu's. I must say that I am pleased with the obedient and humble spirit of the natives.

For over forty years many of them have withstood the efforts of other churches to both persuade, and force them to renounce their faith; and now I feel that I am only doing myidutyjin try: ing to get translated into their language all the history, law, and order of the church necessary to help them to understand more fully than they ever have yet, the grandeur and glory of the faith they have so long contended for. How many times in America have I said that I felt that this people were my children in some sense; and that I had to do a work for them. Yet they are children in so many ways, trustful and humble as children, yet often stumbling and acting unwisely, and needing "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little," day by day. I oft would be disheartened, and would seek a field of less trouble and care, if I did not realize that every field that I have been called to labor in as yet, has been in many respects a hard and disagreeable one. And one of the hardships that an Elder in the field has sometimes to encounter, is an exhibition of friendship to his face, and an assault either on his character or judgment or motives, after he has gone.

We have among the native Elders here, men who would rate as men of marked ability among the Elders at home, if they spoke the English language; of course they are considered able here. Tapuni, the president of the branch at Papeete, is an able man, and a good man, and one of the most spiritual minded men in these parts. Terohia is a good man, and quite able. Paita, one of the oldest of the Elders both in age and in association with the church, is an able man; he belongs to Avatura Branch, one of the Paumotu's. Vairau, of the Matea Branch, is an able man, but rather too anxious for office and power. There are many others whom I have not seen as yet. Of Matea, Tikahau, Rairoa and Kouteura, I may have semething to say, as I expect to visit them before the first of April. People may say what they please of the Catholic Church in other parts, or of French aggression, we as a church may thank God that the French rule here, and that the Catholic influence predominates. If the Protestants ruled these islands, as they do some others, we might have a taste of Smithfield experience. We have in some of the South Sea Islands religionists who show their lack, or want, of the Spirit of Christ in the same way. The Protestant world, children of the Church of Rome, have drawn the "auto de fe" spirit from her breast; she has become tolerant and Christian, while they have become bigoted, intolerant, and hateful. Of course there are exceptions in persons and neighborhoods. No wonder there are so many infidels in the world; for they are led to doubt the worth of Christianity by the anti-Christian spirit of so many of its pretended followers. I hope the time will come when the French government will get control of these independent islands, now ruled, nominally, by petty kings and queens, but in fact by Protestant missionaries. Leipo, and Pipi, his wife, who provided a home for brethren Rodger and Wandell, are living yet, and dwell here at Ziona, and they show great interest in our welfare. They are quite advanced in years.

Well, I must close; but before I do so I wish to say that I do most heartily approve your position in Herald of January 3d, on "the law and its teachers." The defense of Tithing and Gathering, by Bro. Blair, is timely, and as a whole very excellent argument. I do not believe that God ever intended the Saints to fight their own battles, or to take from any man his property by force or fraud; but that whatever lands they obtain must be purchased with money, or exchanged for other property, which would amount to the same thing. The revelation of 1873 wisely enjoins the "counsel of the Elders" with the "command" to gather into the regions round about.

If the Hope is published yet, and the Advocate, we would like to see them out here. Please say in Herald that all papers should be sent direct here, as they cost but little more. Direct all letters to me in full name, for good reasons; it is best to put it Rev. Thomas W. Smith, Ziona, Papeete, Tahiti; and if for Helen, it could be addressed in my care, or the words "For Helen" put near the edge of the envelope. I hope all Saints will pray for us.

Your brother in the one faith, T. W. Smith.

> SAINT JOSEPH, Mo., May 15th, 1885.

Bro, Foseph Smith:-How fortunate for the church, and its defenders, that the Spaulding Romance has fallen into the hands, or rather under the inspection, of seemingly disinterested and fair minded parties, such as L. L. Rice and Pres. Fairchild. What will our opposers do now? But I feel as if I would like to have the opportunity of comparing, (contrasting is probably the better word), the Book of Mormon, with the manuscript found, and I presume you and others would. I am therefore anxious to see the "Manuscript Found," in print. It seems now uncertain to what use Mr. Rice will put it; but I sincerely hope a privilege of an examination of a production of the Rev. Spaulding will be furnished at no distant day, though the statements already made concerning it relieves the Book of Mormon, so far as that manuscript is concerned. What a strange thing that the writings of the Rev. Spaulding of which so many are said to have been extant, somewhere, have so mysterously disappeared and that in fifty years, with a continual agitation, only one has turned up! I am happy over this "find" Your brother.

E. T. Dobson.

Савоов, Texas Co., Mo., Мау 17th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:-Recent observation has led me into a little train of thought on "Practice what you preach." I preach that doing right in all respects, constitutes Bible righteousness. But suppose we promise to pay for food and raiment, and at the same time owe five or ten times more than we ever can pay, and a man offers a job of work to assist us in making payment, gives us the privilege of doing said work at intervals not interfering with day or job labor, and we, instead of working for our benefactor, idle away our time in town, or in bed at home, and practice these idle ways till the public say it is laziness that ails us; is it right to be administered to for such sickness? Are not Deists and Athiests who make honorable promises, and meet them-pay their just debts-better men than those who call themselves Saints who live on making bad promises?

If we do not regard God's commandments, doing His will through good moral principles, and motives, and because it is just and right and due Him as our indispensable benefactor, do we deserve any credit from Him? Is there any virtue in being compelled? A favorite saying with us is, trust in God. Does not God in His word promise to bless us on the conditions of our complete obedience to His laws, a hundred fold in this life, and in the world to come, life eternal? If we can not trust all our cares spiritually and temporally, with God, how can we trust any of them with Him? Our conduct measures our pretended trust. B. A. ATWELL.

REESE CREEK, Montana,

May 15th, 1885.

Elder W. W. Blair: - Things are moving along here quite nicely. I have preached fourteen discourses here in the Chapel, and I am happy to say that I have had the good old fire in great abundance, and I have truly felt "'tis good to be a Saint of Latter Days." Bro. Smart and wife will take hold anew. Several of the old Saints will come once more to the front. Your name is often mentioned in love by the Saints here. A letter from you would be very acceptable. I am to commence a course of about fifteen lectures at Willow Creek next Tuesday.

Love to Bro. Joseph and all Saints.

As ever your brother.

J. C. CLAPP.

AUDUBON, Minn., May 18th 1885.

Bro. T. J. Martin and myself, have been holding meetings for some time past fifteen miles from our homes, and we hope to bring some four or five into the Church, on the 24th inst; and we intend to push the gospel car into other parts, that honest souls may have the privilege of ticketing through to the shining courts of salvation. The best of attention is given to the word when spoken, but the evil one that dare not meet us, does all be can behind our backs.

Yours in the one faith.

HENRY WAY.

ELMWOOD, Neb.,

May 11th, 1885.

Dear Herald:-I spent a week at Wilber, and did what I could to encourage the household of faith, and instruct those who are earnestly enquiring after the way of life. Our people there have been patient in all that has been brought against the cause, and have been successful in so walking, that the good name of the church is unsullied. However, the trial of their faith has been somewhat severe, still new and untried experiences are upon them, and await them, and I most earnestly pray that, that portion of the Holy Spirit may be granted unto all, that they "be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter,' concerning the "pillar and ground" of their acceptance of the word of life. No heartache, or unrest will come unto any, if they hold in rememberance that, "It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." It is written. should be an ever present admonition to every disciple of the Lamb of God, that we should abide in the accepted, approved and written word. There is enough found there to employ our entire time to put to practice, and teach others to do likewise. Those only who are fixed in their purpose, will be able to outride the coming storms,

A good work has been accomplished by the Saints at Wilber, but a greater work yet remains to be done. And it will be done, if the unity of purpose and spirit shall abide. Books and clothing of one Clark Braden, is advertized to be sold under the Sheriffs' hammer, on the 19th inst. How are the mighty fallen? Something over twenty-nine years ago, my father made his home in Nebraska; and yesterday, for the first time, was I permitted to speak the word of truth in that vicinity, where he first located. It was a gratification to receive the kind and pressing invitations, to come again and preach for us. For a week past it has been very cold, for this time of the year. Three nights there was frost that made ice. The prospect for fruit is doubtful. Farmers are quite busy planting corn. In bonds,
ROBT. M. ELVIN.

Reports from Teheran which find publicity at St. Petersburg speak of a revolt of the Mohammedan population of Kashgar, in Chinese Turkestan, against Chinese rule. It is stated that the revolutionists have driven the mandarins from all the principal towns. It is also said that the leader of the Mohammedans has invoked Russian protection and has asked Russia to occupy Kashgar and supply the rebels with arms and ammunition.

DEATH OF A LIVING SKELETON.

Abram Crites, of Braxton county, W. Va., died May oth. He was known far and wide as a walking skeleton. Five or six years ago his muscles began to waste away and continued to do so until he became so emaciated that there was actually nothing but skin and bones left. He was fifty years old, a little above the average height, and weighed but forty pounds. He was able to walk about until a few days before his death. Every bone in his body was distinctly outlined, and by laying a hand on his stomach his backbone could be plainly felt underneath. His case baffled the learning of all physicians that waited on him.

A MIRACULOUS CURE.

An achievement of surgical science, amounting to almost a miracle, is reported from the State Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind at Romney, Hampshire county, West Virginia. Henry McRea, blind from his birth in 1870, has been a pupil of the institution from Pocahontas county for the last three years. At the recent meeting of the Board of Regents the attention of Dr. J. R. L. Hardesty of this city, a member of the board and a specialist in diseases of the eye, was attracted to the boy by seeing him frown when the rays of the sun fell on his eyes, and after a thorough examination he announced his belief that the boy's eyes could be operated upon so as to enable him to see.

The boy was affected with a double congenital cataract, and, while his optic nerve was unimpaired, it was shut out from the rays of light. After consulting his fellow-regents it was resolved that Dr. Hardesty should undertake the operation. A room was thoroughly darkened and the operation successfully performed with the most gratifying success. The boy's eyes were opened, and the light being gradually admitted to the room he became accustomed to it by degrees, and to-day was sent home to his overjoyed family with as keen eyesight as any of them.

The case is a most interesting one. Young McRea had become so accustomed to obtaining all his impressions of the outside world by other senses, that at first his sight was of no use to him. The most familiar objects were not recognized until the boy could touch them. He did not know a key from a book by the sense of sight alone. With a nearly mature mind his sense of sight was as uneducated and useless as that of an infant when it first comes into the world.

HOT-WATER APPLICATION.

Writers in the Lancet call attention to the great value of hot-water applications to the head in cases of fainting or syncope. They say also that a prompt use of it, applied to the forehead with cloths, will very often avert such attacks.

May 19th.—Those who believe that the living and the dead may sometimes communicate have far better proof than the Spiritualists afford in circumstances preceding the death of Engineer Cushing in Boston last week. Last Tuesday night Mr. Cushing dreamed of his dead wife; he thought they were together again-that he was in the grave with her; and her presence remained with him when he awoke. He was so impressed with it that he spoke to his assistant about the matter, and expressed the belief that he was soon to see his wife again. They had work to do on the machinery of a building on Kingston street, and while engaged there a little later adjusting a belt, Mr. Cushing was caught by the shafting and instantly killed. He was with his wife again.

The Rev. John Davis, a Methodist minister of Chattanooga, Tennessee, was arrested yesterday charged with beating his wife to death.

Taff and Babe Langford were fatally hurt and John and Abraham West were badly cut.

Asiatic cholera is epidemic in twenty towns of Spain.

CYCLONES.

Reports are just to hand detailing the facts of a cyclone in the western portion of Kansas, occuring late Saturday night. A cloud appeared in the northwest, dark and ominous, which gave rise to much speculation. People prepared to meet it, but night coming on confusion reigned, and none knew how to act. The funnel-shaped cloud, whirling, twisting, and roaring, struck the earth on the line dividing Osborne and Rooks Counties at the southeast corner of Medicine Township, taking a westerly course. Death, desolation, and destruction followed in its wake for many miles. It is reported that upwards of fifty persons are injured, including the following: the Rev. Mr. Grimes, wife, and child; killed at once by flying timbers. Gertie Allen, a small child, fatally injured. George Campbell, missing, and supposed to be buried under the debris. S. I. Johnson, fatally injured from the timbers of a falling barn in which he sought refuge. The hail and lightning were terrific, some of the stones measuring four inches. The damage at Bull City, Stockton, Edmund, and Kirwin consists of unroofed houses, chimneys, fences, and trees torn down, broken windows, and wrecked houses. The damage in Rooks County alone is estimated at $50.000.

A cyclone struck the little town of Taylor, Tex., Saturday evening, May 16th, and played havoc for a few seconds. The Missouri Pacific Railroad freight-house was demolished, the roundhouse unroofed, the city hall wrecked, and more than a dozen other buildings were more or less damaged. The railroad company's loss is $5,000 and the damage to other buildings will reach $12,000 to $15,000. No lives were lost.

THE COLOR LINE.

In one of the negro churches of Charlotte, N. C., there is a movement for a division of the membership on the color line. The pure blacks favor a congregation composed of themselves, and the mulattoes express a similar desire on their own part. At a recent meeting the proposed division was agreed to, but the terms could not be settled. The minister being black, the blacks naturally claimed him, and also the church and furniture. Some of the black men have mulatto wives, and some of the black women have mulatto husbands. The difficulties seem insurmountable.

RELIGIOUS RIOTS.

May 19th.—Late advices from Conception Bay, New Foundland, state that there has been more trouble between the Orangemen and Roman Catholics. At Bay Roberts the house of James Dailey, a Catholic, was attacked, windows were broken, and considerable damage was done to the property. Dailey was compelled to seek protection here. Valuable property belonging to Capt. Patrick Henneberry, also a Catholic, was thrown into the sea. Sunday an Orange mob paraded the principal streets of the Town of Spaniards' Bay, contiguous to Bay Roberts, and either assaulted or insulted every Roman Catholic. They frantically howled that they were going to sweep every Catholic off the face of the earth, and that they had only one hour to live. By the time they had moved up and down for some two hours the Orange mob numbered 100 persons. They attacked a number of Catholic young men returning from Sunday-school. At the Roman Catholic Church they threw the worshipers to the ground and kicked and beat them mercilessly. They next overtook two young men, Ryan and Finn, about crossing the street to a friend's house. The mob assaulted the young men. Ryan's wounds are thought likely to prove fatal. Thos. Ryan, brother of the injured man, having heard of the bloody affray, rushed from his home with a double-barreled rifle and presented it at the aggressive Orange crowd. The mob quickly fled and have not molested any one since.

GEN. GRANT IMPROVING.

19th.—The improvement in Gen. Grant's condition continues. This applies to his general condition bodily not to his local condition as affected by the cancer. He passed the day quietly, reviewing some of the work of his book, and expects Tuesday to resume dictation if he feels as he did to-day. "This was one of his good days," said his son, "but he did not feel like going out. He may go out to-morrow, possibly, if the weather permits. His throat continues very sore."

ROOTING OUT THE MORMON CURSE.

Lucy Devereaux, a witness to-day before the grand jury, Salt Lake City, on her refusal to answer a question in the Newsom polygamy case (she was reported as his polygamous wife) was sent to the penitentiary for contempt of court. Joe Phelps, a fugitive from justice from Idaho, was arrested here to-day on a telegram. It is supposed he is wanted for unlawful co-habitation.

The strikers at Spring Wells, Mich., exhibited more symptoms of riot yesterday, and beat several workmen at one of the brickyards. The mob was brought to terms by the determined behavior of the authorities.

A harpoon of the pattern made over forty years ago was taken from a whale caught near Coos Bay, Oregon, recently.

The vaccinations against small-pox in the Punjab, India, last year reached 633,062. The natives of India hail the operation as the greatest of blessings.

FOOD FACTS.

May 16th.—St. Louis was yesterday the great gathering point for news of damage to the winter wheat crop. The mails from the country were full of reports of Hessian fly and chinch-bug devastation, while the army-worm was said to have appeared in the wheat-fields of farther south. Many farmers in Missouri and Illinois were reported to be plowing up wheat-fields because of the ravages of the pests.

INSECTS IN THE GRAIN-FIELDS.

The semi-official intimation that this year brings round the coincidence of two locust periods, which has not been the case for over 200 years previously, is calculated to excite some alarm. It would not be so much entitled to notice were it not that the reports from the farming districts contain news bearing upon the point. The grasshopper is said to be already doing great damage in the corn-fields of Texas, a worm is at work in the wheat-fields of Kansas, the Hessian fly has appeared in Southern Illinois, and there are rumors of his presence in Indiana. Is the deficiency of our wheat crop, that is already considered by many as assured, to be made greater by the ravages of these insect pests?

A year of short crops in the United States would be strange, but not out of the order of Nature as established by the course of agricultural history in other countries. There have been times in the past when the ground has refused to bear its accustomed fruit, and the science of those days was not always adequate to the task of accounting for it. But there is one fact that stands out boldly in the recount. It is that crop fails ures, like the epidemics that sometimes afflict the human family, are only local. They may extend over vast areas, but it will be in successive years. The sad tales of famine that greet the eye in reading the history of so many peoples were true simply because of conditions that do not exist to-day. The starving of the population of a large district resulted from a lack of transportation facilities, whereby the needed food could be carried from places where it was plenty to those in which it was scarce. This is even true with regard to the unfortunates who have been shut up in besieged cities; the only difference being that in those cases the lack of transportation was forced, not natural. When the sons of Jacob had to go we do not know how many scores of miles to buy corn for their wives and little ones, and then could only carry home a sackful apiece, it was rather hard work to lay up much of a supply ahead, and was impossible to carry food far enough to prevent many from starving. And those conditions obtained for many centuries later. Not very long before the time of Queen Elizabeth, the only means of interior transportation in England, away from watercourses and a very limited amount of Roman road, was by the back of a pack-horse. Anything that could not be carried in that way, or on human shoulders, was not carried at all. The same was true of the Continent of Europe, and in many parts of it to a much later date, while in British India whole districts have been depopulated by famine within the present century, though there was enough to eat in a valley not far distant. In such case a few score miles have formed an effectual division between plenty and famine.

We may have grasshopper visitation in this country during 1885, also the Hessian fly, and the much-dreaded army-worm. These pests may appear in such numbers as to lay waste the country, as has been the case in Minnesota and Kansas within the memory of persons who are yet young. But no one need fear that the plague will be more than local in any one year. The havoc may be so complete as to prove the ruin of many farmers, but even they need not starve; still less is there any occasion for fear of a general lack of something to eat. Only recently the news came that Russian flour was being offered in New York, and if the worst should come, supplies of breadstuffs would be thrown in upon us from several other countries to fill the temporary void. We have no idea that it will come to this. Our own country is too vast in extent to permit crop failure over more than a small percentage of the whole area. Still it is no harm to look at the case, as if such a thing were possible, and draw comfort from the assurance that the disasters of the past can not be reproduced in this age and Nation.

FROM MAN TO GOD.

Aye, true it is, that as man grows mature, Grave thoughts of human wo, and wrong, and sin, Press heavily upon the heart within—*
A sad, sore weight, 'its bitter to endure.
But, as life, waning, makes the spirit sure of all that from God's goodness man may win, The aged hallowed spirit will begin To find the light of Heaven more bright and pure. Then will he see beyond the things of Time The calm and wonder of a loftier way, His soul uplifted, with a faith sublime, Into the vision of a happier day, Where all men's wrong and trial, borne in pain, Become sweet peace and turn to glorious gain.

LET US TRY TO BE HAPPY.

"Let us try to be happy; We may if we will Find some pleasures in life to o'er balance the ill; There was never an evil, if well understood, But what, rightly managed, would turn to a good, If we're but as ready to look to the light As we are to sit moping because it is night. We should own it a truth, both in word and in deed, That who tries to be happy is sure to succeed."

"Let us try to be happy; Some shades of regret Are sure to hang round which we cannot forget; There are times when the lightest of spirits must bow And the sunniest face wear a cloud on its brow. We must never bid feelings, the purest and best, To lie blunted and cold in our bosom at rest; But the deeper our own griefs the greater our need To try to be happy lest other hearts bleed."

"O try to be happy! It is not too long,
We shall cheer on each other by counsel or song,
If we make the best use of our time that we may.
There is much we can do to enliven the way;
Let us only in earnestnesse each do our best,
Before God and our conscience, and trust for the rest;
Still taking this truth, both in word and in deed,
That who tries to be happy is sure to succeed."

PATIENCE.

PATIENCE is a virtue unexcelled, and one of the rich adornments of Christian character. Without it no one in this life can be successful, or happy. It is that quality of the human soul which enables one to endure the trials of life without complaint or reproach upon its surroundings.

It always pictures the bright side, and makes the best of everything. It looks trouble calmly in the face, and turns it to a blessing. It sees far beyond the present. to the ultimatum of things. It appreciates the comforts and encouragements of to-day. and worries not for what the morrow shall bring forth. Borrowing no trouble, it is always prepared to meet it when it comes; is not selfish, but contented with her own; hopeful, ever hopeful of the future. Who ever accomplished more by losing their mental equilibrium and getting out of patience? Does it render our judgment better? No. Does it make us stronger? Certainly not. Does it better enable us to accomplish any good design? Never. A calm and gentle spirit is like the dews of Hermon and the soft rain upon the tender grass. Blessed is the man who loses not his temper, and turns not aside from his integrity. I believe it was Solomon who said: "Greater is he that ruleth his spirit, than he that taketh a city." Those who trust in God can afford to be patient in view of its ample reward.

Present life at best presents a scene of anxiety, of toil, of mingled adversity and prosperity. In consideration of this, Jesus gave the needful warning that we be not overcharged with the cares of life. How many are there who can not see those around them who are apparently in more trouble, or in a worse condition, than themselves? Positively, but one thing need cause sorrow and gloom—the will-ful commission of sin. There is no hope, not one ray of sunshine, to the unrepentant sinner. His way is dark, and the future uninviting. But to the faithful observer of truth, there is the continued geniality of God's favor. The flowers of peace and happiness bloom by the way, and the summer sunshine of the love of God and humanity lends a golden tinge to every cloud. In the hour of bitter trial, or in the ordeal of disappointment, the angel of hope draws near, inspiring confidence, and whispers words of cheer.

The virtue of patience can only be developed and exercised by our contact with elements and conditions foreign to our natural choice, The apostle James pronounces the following benediction upon the practically patient: "Blessed is the man that resisteth temptation; for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love Him."—Jas. 1: 12. John, in celestial vision, saw many of the redeemed and listened to their glad refrain; and the angel said, "These are they which came out of great tribulation."

It is better to regard life as a season of trial, and meet its perplexities, vicissitudes, and disappointments, under this head. Those who are waiting for the conditions of their sphere to so change that calmness is solely the result of surroundings rather than the fruit of patience, can not reasonably expect to be numbered with that happy throng who have come out of "great tribulation." Paul the apostle said, "I can endure all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." We have the promise that none shall be tempted, or tried, above their ability to endure. If we cherish in our hearts the sentiment-Lord thy will be done, shall we not, after doing what we can, submit cheerfully to the inevitable: believing that the decrees of providence are better in finality than the gratification of present desire!

A safeguard against impatience will be found in the cultivation of a true regard for the feelings of our associates, whether man or beast. We are not apt to treat harshly that for which we have a tender regard; hence we should be better by reason of the associations of life.

In the family circle, who can estimate the value of patience. Patience to bear with the faults, and overlook the mistakes of each other? It is well to ever be conscious of our own weakness and liability to err. This will lesson the apparent magnitude of faults in others. The moment we see the blunders of another are only such as we are liable to make, it becomes an easy matter to pardon.

A philosopher has couched fine sentiment in these words. "A soft answer turneth away wrath." It is like the sun's rays upon the melting snow. Bitterness and sorrow will be averted by the observance of this rule. It is a practical application of the precept—"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good," yielding to the disposition to retaliate is a root of bitterness and the source of untold misery.

Revenge in a mild or increased form is reprehensible and sure to return its deadly poison upon those who indulge it. "Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy," is a Divine decree. The gospel teaches that Jesus Christ came into the world to set an example of enduring patience, and to "overcome the world" by virtue of faith and obedience to his Father's commands. His life was one of incessant toil, of ceaseless anxiety, of tribulation, and ofttimes of bitterness and woe.

Hear him, ye weary and heavy laden: "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done."

The experiences of this "man of sorrows" were not imaginary, but real. The anguish of spirit in times of trial was not fictitious, nor assumed, but the actual pangs of a troubled soul. When the terrible hour of darkness had come, and angels witnessed the scene of his crucifixion, there is no word of reproach from his lips; no expression of retaliation or revenge; but from the fathomless depths of that tried heart, well up the desire to save, finding expresion in the prayer—"Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

The soul that is free from prejudice is like the pure sunlight of a summer day, and its radiance a halo of glory to all who are near. Let us be cheerful. A kind word spoken to-day, may save some soul from evil or despair. Opportunities to do good are ever passing with time, and the wheel of human experience never reverses its action. If we make sunshine for others, we shall enjoy its light and warmth ourselves

He had a good conception of life who said, "This world is not so bad a world as some would like to make it. Though whether good, or whether bad, depends on how we take it." Geo. S. Hyde.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 7.

BY S. F. W.

"The religion of the Chaldeans, from the very earliest times to which the monuments carry us back, was, in its outward aspect, a polytheism of a very elaborate character. It is quite possible that there may have been esoteric explanations, known to the priests and the more learned, which, resolving the personages of the pantheon into the powers of nature, reconcile the apparent multiplicity of gods with monotheism."—Rawlinson.

It is possible that Noah had a meagre system of faith and doctrine to transmit to his descendants. It may have been the hunger of the heart to know what had not yet been revealed that stimulated the people to the formulation of systems of faith, based upon fancies, longings, and dreams. The systems, false though they were, were the products of the human heart, and no wonder if we find in them types and shadows of what was afterward confirmed. The standing argument for centuries has been that Christianity was not true because not all new. But there is a spiritual law of evolution. Christ was "the desire all nations," the fulfillment of all types and shadows, the end of the law. The beginnings of history reveal the worship of the powers and phenomena of nature, as the sun, moon, plants, morning light, the seasons. Ancestors and heroes were blended with these objects and powers, as demigods and gods. Poetical conceptions were added also. All these deities were national, and to piety was added the fervor of patriotism, and the delight of poetic fancies. The mysterious, the beautiful, the good, the heroic, the powerful, the brave, were combined in the objects of devotion, and so it is said Paganism died hard.

In applying the principles of evolution to politics, philosophy, arts and religion, the philosophers of the present day tell us every principle was evolved and not originated. If this is true, it must, notwithstanding, be in a sense that leaves the Christian faith impregnable. Aristotle says that before arguing a point it is best to define terms, and then perhaps argument will not be necessary. It is true that the natural unfolding of ethnological and physical laws prepared the world for the different religious dispensations, each in its time; and each dispensation was preparatory of the one that succeeded it: but at the same time it must be admitted that each dispensation was, in the main, independent of each other, and of all human agencies, and began in revelation and miracle. So therefore the assertion that no principle has been originated is not true. As in the physical world we saw that the true statement was, Creation amid evolution, so in the moral domain we find the true law to be, revelation amid evolution.

The known regions of the earth are dotted with tumuli, tombs, shrines, barrows, cromlecks, mounds, and buried cities,—the greater part of which are monuments of barbarous races, and show the various stages of progress to civilization. The most wonderful of all monuments are those of Egypt. In them we see no back ground of barbarism. Here the most ancient civilization bursts suddenly upon the mind. There is no evidence of evolution from stone to bronze and iron. Parallel with the stone ages of other countries and forty hundred years before Christ, was a civilization that included a settled throne, a great city, magnificent temples and towers, a vast system of irrigation, and a literature. The oldest inscribed tablets are of 1400 B. C. Pictures on the walls of this date represent negroes with all their present distinguishing features; also Egyptians, Assyrians and Arabians, are pictured and named as the red race, and all have dark eyes. The Ammonites and Semites, with dark eyes also, are represented as yellow. The Lybians are called white-Tamhu, meaning man of the north, or of the Lybian coast. A few years ago those who made opinions for the world, taught that the first Egyptian colonists descended the Nile. The improved science of to day teaches that Egyptian civilization passed full fledged from Asia, by way of Suez, to the delta. This primordial civilization is an unquestioned fact, but it can not be definitely located, nor traced to its origin.

The Book of Enoch states that Azazyal taught the antediluvians to make knives, shields, breast plates, mirrors, bracelets and ornaments, and the beautifying of the eyebrows, the use of stones of every valuable and select kind, and all sorts of dyes. This book has internal evidences of inspiration in regard to spiritual truths; but that does not make it infallible in matters of histo-We must await developements from the less pretentious records. The great pyramid with its clamps of iron, built a thousand years before Abraham, and the diversity of races, are enigmas not easily disposed of by any theory yet proposed. The biblical assumption that all events and conditions are determined by Divine direction, and the more important emergencies determined by direct miraculous interference, is not illogical nor unscientific. It does not cover the ground, nor meet all objections, but it does afford a key to the mystery of the pyramid with iron clamps, and to the fact that God is named in the old Hermetic books as He that was before all things that actually exist, and before all beginnings; "one God and king remaining unmoved in the singleness of his own unity," "the sole generator," &c. Those who had been initiated into the mysteries of Isis, had scrolls buried with them at death, having among others these words: Nik Pukuk-I am that I am. Moses knew all this, and all that the Hebrew elders knew; all that Jethro knew, who, being a priest and true worshipper, probably inherited the knowledge of the Melchisedec line. Moses had forty years of solitary life in which to meditate on all the things to be done in restoring the true faith to Israel. While Moses was thus providentially prepared, the people of Israel had acquired arts and elements of civilization from the Egyptians, and were prepared by suffering for the great experience that followed.

The setting up of the Egyptian worship while Moses was in the Mount was simply going back to a worship from which they had not been fully weaned. Aaron's part in the act shows that he was an Egyptian priest, and his affections had reverted to an old love. The suppression of the name of God, the breast plate of the priest, tank of water, and holy of holies, the ark, cherubim, manner of carrying the ark, anointing of kings and priests, lineal descent of priesthood, the white linen of the priests, festival of new moon, burnt offerings, the scape-goat, red hiefer's ashes, aborrence of swine, and purification, were Egyptian ideas. There is no possible defense of the orthodox faith but evolution. As Judaism extends back into the Egyptian system, so the Egyptian has its roots in the antediluvian, and thus we are forced again to the recognition of our fundamental principlerevelation amid evolution.

This philosophy provides for and accounts for all such facts as the following:

"There are very strong reasons for connecting Hea or Hoa with the serpent of the scripture, and the paradisaical traditions of the tree of knowledge and the tree of life"—(Rawlinson). We find it admitted that Socrates and Plato drew their wisdom from Egyptian sources. But they both had and expressed a knowledge of the coming of Christ. Whence then that fact? All antiquity was permeated with a knowledge of Christ. How much was traditional, how much inspired, present facilities do not enable us to determine.

hundred years before Christ, Four Plato the Grecian philosopher, taught that the divinity, "next to the Supreme Being, was universally prefigured by the sign of the cross." Nebuchadnezzar said-"Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like unto the Son of God." The sign of the cross appears suspended from the necks of oriental prisoners, pictured on Egyptian monuments 1500 years before Christ. The Book of Enoch contains prophecies of Christ. Ovid, the Greek poet, plainly prophesied of Christ and the resurrection. Confucius says mankind first "dwelt in a beautiful garden in the midst of which grew a tree bearing the apples of immortality, guarded by a winged serpent."

The cross was a religious emblem among the Druids. An early Christian controversialist says,—"the Pagans, not only place a cross, but a cross with a man on it." The cross was employed by the Greeks, Hindoos, Syrians, Phoenicians, Egyptians and Persians, as a religious symbol. It appears in connection with the Ephesian Goddess. It was associated with Astarte, who was figured bearing it. It is found in the ruins of Nineveh; one hung to the neck of an early Nimrod king. Crosses were worn on the foreheads of the believers in Mithras the Persian Mediator, as a badge of worship. The Egyptians wore the cross of Osiris. Alexander crucified two thousand Tyrians, in order to degrade their emblem of the cross. meaning of such facts is, that a revelation more or less full of the redemption through Christ was made known to the first parents after the first sin; that such knowledge by revelation and tradition obtained through all generations down to the fulfillment on Calvary.

work of inspiration, yet not competent in evidence of purely historical facts. It is genuinely prophetic, yet false. If this be paradoxical, accept the paradox. This then is the true rule of interpretation—A work may be dogmatically true and historically false. Then, if it be found that there were men on the earth in the precglacial era, and that there were pre-adamites, and that Egyptian civilization extends back 5000 years B. C., and Egyptian occupation twice that far; still all that pertains to the gospel plan of salvation; of flood or fall or redemption, may still be true. Apologists for the inaccuracies of the Bible are wont to say, It was not intended as a teacher of science; this is true,

It is not scientific. But he who knew the end from the beginning, comprehends all science. And those who are the channels of communication of divine messages are superior in dignity to the interpreters of physical nature. The prophets overlooking the whole field of human endeavor, and telling what shall be in the latter-day, are greater than any actor in that scene, so, too, the miracle worker, or the man who acts independently of the known laws of nature, is greater than he who can only work in subjection to those laws. need such a word as superscientific. There is a sin of presumption. It is not set down in the text books of morals, but it is clearly defined in the record of the earliest times, and is predicted as a characteristic of the latter-day.

There was a great conflict in the world eighteen centuries ago, when a few unlearned men undertook the overthrow of the world's heritage of wisdom held in Grecian schools. The wisdom of the wise of that age did not perish. It was transfused and subjected. It is now taught in all colleges in a modified form. It is ready to assert its old dominance. It is restive in its subordinated relationship. It does not want to compromise with revelation that does not come in at the appointed door. God cannot change his policy. His first revelations to the race were to those who had not learned, and could not understand learning. When Christ the Lord came, He came subject to the reproach of not having "learned letters." The fishermen could not teach science, and did not. Now, shall God change his policy, and choose learned men for his special work? It is too late; he must be consistent. The promised spirit that leadeth into all truth must be honored. This reasoning brings me back to the proposition that spiritual truth is super-scientific, and we must adhere to it, whatever scientists may teach. And, too, we must have wisdom to separate it from the errors of fact with which it may be connected, or in which it my be enveloped. A work may be dogmatically true, and scientifically imperfect; or, as before said, historically false or incomplete. "We hold our treasures in earthen vessels."

The subject is still Egyptian history. The era of Menes the first Pharaoh is placed by some at 2350 B.C., but by the best and latest authorities at about 4000 B. C. This is too high an antiquity to be easily reconciled with cunieform dates of the era of Nimrod, but time will probably remove the difficulty. The method of determining Menes' era is by the old lists of thirtyone dynasties, transcribed by Menetho from the archives of the temple of Bennytus, 275 B.C. There are four other ancient lists. One of them is part of an inscription of Ramases II, who built Pithom and Raamses, by the enforced labor of the Hebrews. We have inscriptions made by Senofera, predecessor of Cheops, who built the great Pyramid. So the past of Egypt in its greatest power, is now historical. This pyramid was a thousand years old when Abraham first caught sight of In its sha it across the desert of Amenti.

dow Melchisedek and his kingdom seem young. Abraham's visit occurred near the close of the twelfth of the thirty-one dynasties, reaching down to the time of Alexander. Two thousand four hundred years of national greatness preceded his visit to the valley of the Nile. It was a strange journey he made from Padan and Canaan to Egypt. He found an unoccupied country for his flocks, and a country that never had been occupied, as the number of the flocks it supported proves. The kings he met with were so petty that his cow-boys whipped a confederation of them. All this newness midway between empires 2,400 years old! Yet we can not deny the dates. They would be incredible, however, if the pyramids were out of the way. The Egyptian chronology is as firmly based as the pyramid. It can not be made to yield in conformity to any scheme of man. It is a pyramid itself; its base immutable fact; its apex rising over the waste of time. What then of the derivation of Egyptian civilization from Babylon? simply this: If necessary extend the Babylonian chronology. Egypt no less than Assyria was a daughter of Babylon. There was the first writing; there the first pyramidal temple. It has been stated that the date of Sargon I was about 3,800 B. C. The Antiquarian for January, 1885, states that the announcement of a "still more ancient king of Tello was made to the French Academy of Inscriptions in February last, by M. Henzey, and the inscription from which this is drawn has since been translated by M. Oppert. It enumerates the grand works undertaken by the king, the temples that he built, the canals that he dug for irrigation, &c. Finally, it adds a text containing an invocation to an inferior deity, who is besought to intercede with a superior god. The inscription is written in the Linear Babylonian character, and its comparative age is determined by this."

The chronology of the Bible rightly interpreted must agree with this lengthened scheme of the tablets, and the subject rightly comes up again for reconsideration in this new light. We have definite knowledge concerning post-diluvian humanity. Phthahotep, one thousand years before Abraham, wrote a book that antedates all other books. It contains thirtyfive moral precepts enforcing filial obedience and affection. Phthahotep calls himself "one of the old men of the land, having accomplished one hundred and ten years, by the grace of the King and the favor of the elders." This little item also necessitates a revision of the ages of the patriarchs, as well as a reconsctruction of the world's chronology. An old theory has been confirmed by a new rendering of the texts concerning the lives of the patri-"Adam one hundred and thirty years, and "Seth one hundred and five years" are each a complete sentence. The figures relate to the whole length of the time and not the times when sons were The Hebrew for "lives" is never used with definite numbers to indicate the age of a man at the birth of a son. Genesis 21:5 should be rendered: "Abraham was a son of an hundred years when his son Isaac was born unto him." "Liveth" and "lived" are used to indicate the termination of men's lives, and are never used to mark a period midway in one's life. Genesis 6: 3 should read "yet his days have been 120 years." In the phrase, begot a son in his own likeness, the words "a son" and "own" are not in the original, and "heir" or "successor," or "representative" should be supplied. Abraham's age of 175 years is called "a good old age." The figures represent patriarchal houses, dynasties or governments; the sum of the two tables is 10,500 years. The idea of the great age of the patriarchs has always been associated with their supposed great size. The coffins found at Babylon are seven feet long at most. Of all the Pharaohs there was one a giant. The mummies are all of medium size or less.

The Hyksos were Arabian and Syrian tribes led by Hittites. They obtained dominion in Egypt by leaguing with a prince of Xois, and without fighting, in the year 2214 B. C. Their reign lasted 400 years, and included the 15th, 16th and 17th dynasties. The last shepherd king was a worshiper of Zet, the God of the Philistines, whom he added to the pantheon, and to whom he built a temple. Before the time of the exodus we read of a Pharaoh who undertook to restore the monotheistic worship. His mother was blue-eyed, and probably of some other nation. The ceremonies introduced by him were strikingly like the external form of Israelitish worship. He may have been influenced by the Hebrews. Soon there was a reaction against him, and after this time the bondage was made unendurable to the Israelites. Notwithstanding these political revolutions, the priesthood of Egypt never gave up the ancient monotheistic faith taught at the time when no idols or statues were had in the temples,—they taught it to a select few to the last.

Parts of Canaan were occupied first by the giant tribes (and later by the Canaanites) twenty-four hundred years before Abraham's visit. He found the people of the interior weak, scattered and rude. Hebron had been built by the Anakim, seven years before Zoan in Egypt, which was the capital of the shepherd kings; and before Abraham's day. The Pharaoh who received Abraham on terms of equality, must have been one of the Hyksos kings. It seems probable that there was a religious affinity between them, and that Melchizedek, Abimelech, and the shepherd kings, were of one speech and faith; and that Abraham, though called of God, found in the land to which he was called, men of the true faith as handed down from the fathers. This will explain Pharaoh's regard for the moral law, and Abimelech's dream. And, as the line of shepherd kings continued till Joseph's day, it will account for his reception and advancement; for Pharaoh's dreams; for the apportioning of land to the Israelites in Zoan—the special province of the Hyksos. A new dynasty, the fourteenth, came in after Joseph's death, who knew not Joseph, and who reversed the friendly policy concerning the Hebrews,

The names on the monuments include Kudur-mapula, son of Sentishil-Hak, called "ravager of the West," and thus identified with Chedor-Laomer.

Somewhere near the center of these populations lived Job, in an era so early that it can not be determined. He was so great and so wise that he has few peers. He not only knew of the art of writing in rock, and spoke of books, but himself wrote a book that takes front rank among the classics of all times and countries; and he had a knowledge of God that is so superior to anything found on the tablets that we must suppose it a heritage from a distinct line of ancestors, reaching back through Joktan to Shem. He makes no reference to the exodus or to Sinai, and though he speaks of the country about Sodom, he makes no reference to its destruction, priesthood and Melchezedek are not mentioned. Star-worship is noticed. Some people of that vicinity lived in caves. He is reckoned, from his age and ideas, among the patriarchs, from whom he seems to have learned wisdom, as he thus refers to them: "Inquire, I pray thee, of the former age, and prepare thyself to the search of the fathers; (for we are but of yesterday and know nothing because our days upon earth are a shadow) shall not they teach thee, and tell thee, and utter words out of their heart?"

A few quotations will fortify the conclusions arrived at in these papers. "It is certain that the Babylonians, like the Egyptians, began with picture writing."-Rawlinson. "The Toldoth Beni Noah is undoubtedly the most authentic document we have for the affiliations of those branches of the human race who sprang from the triple stock of the Noachidae."-Ibid. "Physiological Ethnology has accounted for the varieties of the human race, and removed the barriers which formerly prevented us from viewing all mankind as members of one family, the offspring of one parent. The problem of the variety of language is more difficult, and has still to be solved, as we must include in our survey the nations of America and Africa. But over the languages of the primitive Asiatic continent of Asia and Europe, a new light begins to dawn, which, in spite of perplexing appearances, reveals more and more clearly the possibility of their common origin."—Max Muller. "It is pleasing to remark, that if we were to be guided by the mere intersection of linguistic paths, and independently of all reference to the scriptural record, we should still be led to fix upon the plains of Shinar as the focus from which the various lines had radiated."—Rawlinson.

PAPA'S POWERFUL PRAYING.

"Mr. Moody says that if a person prays while roller-skating he is all right," said a little Brooklyn girl to her mother.

"Well, my child, did you ever hear any body pray while at the rink?"

"Oh, yes! Papa did last night when he sat down so hard that the gas went out."
"What did he say?"

"He said, 'merciful heavens!' and lots of other things just like a minister does when he pounds the pulpit,

PROHIBITION IN THE PULPIT.

REPLY TO "MORAL ASPECTS OF PROHIBI-TION," WITH AN ADDRESS TO OUR CITY FATHERS.

PROHIBITION is an all absorbing topic; at least we think it should engage our profound attention. My only apology that I shall have to offer for this discourse is that God has commanded his ministry to "teach the difference between the holy and profane, and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean," as recorded by Ezekiel 44: 23. Anti-prohibition is "unclean," prohibition is "clean." I propose bringing my discourse first under four different divisions and then give my general

This question interests us in many ways and should not receive only a passing

Firstly, All men are brothers. It can not be denied that all humanity constitute one great, grand and universal brotherhood. It matters not what their conditions may be; high or low, rich or poor, great or small, Christian or heathen, black or white; the great, incontrovertible fact remains just the same, inscribed as it were by the finger of Deity: "God hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the earth." Temperance is a Christian grace or principle. Christianity has broken down the middle wall of partition, that once caused the Israelites to view the Gentile nations as anything but belonging to the great brotherhood of humanity. And we, living under Christian influence, or the influence of great Christian institutions, must recognise the fact that between man and man stands no middle wall of partition, of any phase or caste whatsoever.

We must stand shoulder to shoulder. If a brother falls lift him up. If he errs guide him into the right. If he is liable to fall through temptation, do not tempt When we were commanded of Christ to love God, it did not mean that we were to profess to manifest some particular, and in some incomprehensible way, a love for God, to the neglecting of our duties toward humanity. Human service is God's service. Efforts to serve the best interests of humanity, are efforts to serve the interests of God. God and humanity are inseparably connected, or related one to the other. No man can do a good deed to his fellow man without doing good, for God has so commanded.

Secondly, It is our duty to do the best we can for one another's good. Any man that lives for self interest only, is worth nothing to society. No man can aid in supporting an evil work, and make any shadow of claim that he is doing good either for himself or anybody else, Ite is not for your good that some one entices you to do wrong. It is not for your good that any man should hand you anything intoxicating; that he should teach you to gamble, to defraud another man, to do any kind of an injustice. It is our duty to do the best we can for another's good, because any man who would be guilty of doing otherwise is an unsafe character to and in society. If we do good to any one it makes us happy in the act and in the thought. It is not doing our duty to invite a cause of evil into our midst when we can keep it out. Intoxicating beverages are not blessings in anywise. In doing our duty toward others as well as ourselves, we can not better perform that duty than by lawfully, righteously evading everything that would serve to injure them, and do no credit to ourselves, by giving our sanction thereto. If you would not inflict, knowingly, dread, contagious disease upon others by permitting exposure, we should not to permit the sale of intoxicating beverages to have an existence in this town—thus permitting the exposure of an unprincipled accursed foe, by which many fall into eternal error. No man does his manly, righteous duty to his fellow-man, to his own family, to the interests of all about him, who gives his voice, directly or indirectly, for such a thing to be done! You would not say it was for your good, if some man burned your home, your store or in any wise injured anything that belonged to you. Not for any man's good that some member, some loved one of the family be injured in some manner by the unlawful act of some vagabond. Not to any one's good that a son or daughter, mother or father be led into the degraded depths of sin. We would regret, forever regret that such a terrible thing had occurred when we might have given our influence and voice against its commission or occurrence, but we did not.

Thirdly, We are under moral obligation to do that which will be for the advancement of those things best calculated to do our community good. We are under moral obligation as creatures of intelligence to put forth every possible, plausible effort to found institutions of moral and intellectual worth in the community which we reside. We cannot live properly without a strong moral power in our midst; something that is calculated to better the condition of society; something that will throw the guard of defense around the young, middle-aged, and also the aged, perhaps; that will not serve as a constant snare; a living, alluring, enticement to do unrighteously, to sin against their own soul, to degrade their own being! That guard of defense is not found in the bar-room, in a dram-shop! It may be found in the reading room, in the Sabbath School, in the church! should be found in the home circle. there is any place more enticing, more pleasurable than home, that house is deficient in its moral, intellectual, entertaining attractiveness. If a hall of revelry and giddy banqueting is more attractive every night in the week than home, then there is lurking in that place a snare of evil and degrading sin; This place must be removed; you hold the power in your own hands to do it. A place calculated to elevate, instead of degrade; to enlighten the mind, instead of darkening it, is what is needed. And it seems to me that if there is sufficient demoralized intelligence to invite a curse, a wickedness into a town, and let it live, there ought to be in a place of Christian enlightenment sufficient Christian intelligence, Christian integrity, and moral courage, to out-weigh the other and say that such a thing cannot live where I live, where we live! It is our moral, religious, social obligation to do this thing. That which is evil is not intellectually, religiously, nor morally progressive; and if it is to our advantage, the advantage of our neighbor, our brother, to establish and sustain anything calculated to serve our best interests, the best interests of society, then we cannot in anywise sustain any accursed traffic that has the severest anathema of Deity pronounced upon it, for from such no possible good can come.

It is our moral duty to have our community as free from every wickedness as possible. For as the wise man said, "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." It is a lamentable fact that sin is made attractive and highly enticing to the unwary. The line of demarkation between the purely good and truly bad is becoming so obliterated, that sin is being called undeveloped good; falsehood, undeveloped truth. And so with the liquor traffic; there is thrown about it a certain mantle that seemingly covers its hideous form, its condemnable destructive powers and capabilities for evil. It is like the old-time school book story of "walk into my parlor, said the spider to the fly." The ungodly wiles, the entrapping evils, the ever binding cords of hellish design are not always disclosed to the vision of the tempted party. But stronger than chains of iron are the silken cords that bind the soul in a state of universal servitude!

Fourthly, It is to our interest to suppress by every lawful means, everything, the tendency of which is to degrade, to demoralize society. The liquor traffic interests no one particularly, save the manufacturer, and the dram-seller. True, it brings the government a revenue of $60,000,000 annually. It may pay into the municipal government a few hundred dollars annually, but the crime costs more, for it not only costs money, but it costs lives. That the liquor traffic is demoralizing in its tendencies need not be told; everyone knows that. No one has ever seen one drop of good that has ever flowed from the filthy fountain. Its only mottoes are: Demoralization, death, condemnation and perdition! No man can touch the soul destroying cup with impunity. No one can handle the deadly poison, quaff the blinding bowl, without leaving the mark of sensuality and sin stamped upon his visage. * * *

"Moral Aspect" says: All Christians do not agree as to the essentials of salvation, and differ widely as to the means to be employed. There may be and are minor points of difference, but all Christians, invariably with one grand universal assent of mind and heart see Christ as "the only door of heaven." All Christians admit that strict abidance by the ten commandments is a great means to the end—salvation. This is a saying of dust, calculating to blur the vision. The decalogue is all prohibitory, and prohibition is God's way in regard to the alcoholic business.

Again, 'twas said: "This world is not a penitentiary, neither is it a prison, nor are men to be treated as prisoners under restraint. To do this is to obliterate the distinction between the man and the brute, and utterly ignore the fundamental truth of the 'freedom of the will.'"

If this world is not a penitentiary it has in it penitentiaries. There are laws everywhere, and no man lives in civilization without the law's restraint. We may live without feeling the force of the law's penalty, but we are not living independent of its mandates, and whenever a man's "freedom of will" leads him to commit a state's-prison offense, he generally gets there. His "freedom of will" is not freedom of license.

We have it further stated: "Were you to abolish the means to-day by which men get drunk, you would wipe the virtue of temperance as well as the vice of intemperance out of existence, for virtue is a positive quality, and not a negative."

presume there would be no such word as "virtue" were the word "vice" not known. From such language we are to understand that virtue's grace and beauty are best seen, and more highly regarded when brought into strong contrast, or close proximity with vice. We cannot, then love a sober man so well as when we see him beside the sot. We love virtue in our home the best when one of its memders abides 'neath the damaging effects of vice. In order to have virtue full fledged, we must have vice in giant form. Is virtue known, and its beauty admired, its power felt in heaven, where vice has never entered! It is not admired because vice is abhorred. Heaven was, ere hell had place or name! The weakness of the philosophy of the "Moral Aspect" speech may be discovered in a seeming retracting of position in statement of penitentiary, restraint, free will, etc., when afterward these thoughts are substituted by wording that "moral freedom of the will is not liberty to violate any or all the laws of God and man." Here the speaker admits the restraining power of law. All men may have the privilege to do wrong, but, no man has the moral right to do wrong.

We have no works, or establishments claiming to be of a business kind that injure the morals, endanger the life and liberty of society as do those who deal in alcohol.

In speaking of "every character from Adam to Christ," it has been said, "that it was by means of temptation resisted, by trials of patience and faith, that they attained the perfection of character which they possessed, and which entitled them to be called brethren of God."

It would seem by this that we are to tolerate any and every evil, whatsoever its name or nature, simply to perfect character by wonderful resistance. * * *

You may see all the scenes of wickedness under the enchantment of the winecup. It is what glows on the table; it shines in illuminated gardens, it flushes the cheeks of the patrons. No one runs drunkenness alone. That is the carrioncrow that goes in a flock, and when you see that beak ahead, you may know the other beaks are coming. There is not a single place of sin in the United States to day that does not find its abettor in the chalice of inebriety. It should be well known to that any mayor, or council, or court, that licenses or in any wise permits the sale of intoxicants, allows of gambling houses, libertinism, disease, death, crimes, despoliations. It is the courts that are swinging wide open this grinding, creaky stupendous gate of the damned. Officers of the law are sworn to abide by and enforce the laws of which they are made the administrators, by the voice and vote of the people. It is for no mayor, no city council to say this or that law cannot be enforced. It is not for them to sit in petty judgment of the legislature, reverse the decision of the state supreme court and seemingly cast the same under foot. The prohibitory amendment is not a local option enactment. It was not acted upon by two legislative assemblies, given to the people for their approval or disapproval, but receiving an endorsement of 25,000 majority to be flung aside by any mayor or city council as unworthy their consideration or action. The legislature enacted that mayors of all cities in the state should see that the law was enforced. Every official who swears to perform the duties of his position in sustaining and enforcing law and does not do so, is thus actually violating his oath of office. What kind of an act do or would you call it? At last Monday night's session of the city council, one councilman said of the amendment, "it is a state law; we can't enforce state laws!" I wonder if. What are our "city they couldn't try? fathers" for? As some people pray for ministers, "that they may be bright and shining ornaments (?)" it would seem so, for surely in prohibition they seem of little practical use! How much force or power of support to the main building do galvanized cornice brackets afford? ornamental. How many galvanized officials we have—very ornamental and never rust? By what laws are the citizens of Council Bluffs supposed to be governed, state laws or simply city ordinances? Does the legislature enact special laws for this city? Is that why our council fathers can't enforce a state law? Is Council Bluffs a part of the state of Iowa? Is it in any county of the state? All cities, towns, villages, in their respective townships and counties, are portions of a state. All combined within a given territory comprise the state. Laws are enacted that have a special and general bearing upon every one of these parts, hence, Council Bluffs is not exempt and her officials have no legal right to ignore, or set aside any law, or spurn any constitutional amendment of the state's law.

I thought it had been patriotically and triumphantly proclaimed. "This is a government for the people, of the people, and by the people." Thus evading the one man rule, the ring clique, the oppression of royality; yet we find here as in many other places, that the general outcrying desire of the people by 25,000 majority is laid on the shelf, the will of the people treated with contempt. But what is the strange spectacle presented in that council room! Some men, sworn to support and enforce law, and yet say they can't. Have they tried? If the mayor, and council supporting him, will try it thoroughly, without compromise or any of intention or purpose, and can not do so, let them resign, and let the city hunt up some others and try them. The clerk read the oath of office, that it required the mayor to support the constitution, making no allowance for any portion to be exempt from his notice. For any mayor or councilman, or lawyer, to state that it would injure the business interests of the city, is to state that which has no foundation in fact or experiment. Any law inscribed on the statutory books is powerless and a significant failure now and always, if officials whose right and duty it is never enforce the same. For anybody of such men to say prohibition is a failure is simply to caricature the facts of history to the contrary.

Instead of three or four hundred citizens running the town, we have a more woeful spectacle, that of three or four individuals: that of a number of saloonists who live open and above board in their outspoken, defiant violation of law, constitutional law. Those engaged in the traffic have a principle in them I always did abhor, and that is their brazen, insulting resistance of law.

For the mayor to say he "would examine the petition, and pass his opinion of it:" or to say if the majority of the business men of the city or of the tax payer said so, he'd close up every saloon, is to say that the opinion of a mayor is greater than the decision of the supreme court. Is to say that the supreme court's decision is susceptible of a city mayor's veto! Is to say that taxpayers and business men have in their power to ride over the court de-That the supreme court is governed by Council Bluffs business men, and taxpayers! Is that the size of the newlyborn monstrosity? Is that the way supreme courts are governed? It would seem from the peculiar talk we have had, that a strange, unprecedented example among law-makers has had an existence in this state. That, of two legislative bodies passing upon a constitutional amendment without considering the business interests of the state, and the alleged prejudicial effect such a law must inevitably produce Of eminent, sound-minded men lecturing everywhere throughout the state, canvassing the question in all its real and supposed bearings on the public's interests, and none of these men, it would seem, discovered or even noticed what a tide of destruction to the business interests of the state would come in upon us, and especially on Council Bluffs, as seen by the mayor and three of his council. All this seems to have been left as a grand discovery, the supposed honor of which has fallen to some of our city fathers! O, ye legislators of Iowa; O, ye people; O, ye members of the Iowa supreme court, what blindness, what stupidity ye have manifested, as brought to light so recently in this city!

High Priest, H. P. Brown, Elders D. J. Phillips, Owen Dinsdale, Albert Haws, R. Ferris, G. W. Harlow, T. J. Andrews, G. S. Lincoln, Archy Bryant, Wm. Anderson, James Parr, Joseph Vernon, Thomas Daley (baptized 4), William Potter (baptized 3). Priests G. S. Parkins, — Anderson, Samuel Weldon; and Teacher C. J. Monkcom, reported.

Resolution adopted supporting the Expositor by faith and prayers. Elder William Potter was elected president, Elder Thomas Daley vice president, and Elder R. Ferris secretary of the district. Resolution adopted recommending Elder William Anderson to General Conference as missionary. Resolution adopted supporting the authorities of the church in righteousness.

The preaching was done by Elders T. J. Andrews, William Anderson, Albert Haws; exhortations by High Priest H. P. Brown and Elder Wm. Anderson. Several testimony meetings were held, which were greatly enjoyed, being blessed by the presence of the Spirit. The most prominent characteristic of this conference was the almost if not perfect unity that existed. Strong men were melted to tears during the business sessions. Many expressed their gratification at the establishing of the Expositor, and the ability of some of the articles appearing therein, one Elder affirming that it was equal to fifty Elders in the field. President of district, Potter, remarked that he had not been at a conference for twenty-four years where there was such a unity of spirit. High Priest H. P. Brown felt to devote balance of life to preaching and editorial work. Was sending the Expositor to the Utah Priesthood, Members of Congress and others, giving many away to try and break the shackles of those that are in bondage. Bishop's Agent, T. J. Andrews' sentiments were that the point in time had arrived when much good would be done.

Conference adjourned to convene at San Francisco, Cal., Friday, October 2d, 1885.

It is said that the largest grapevine in the United States grown on the premises of Mr. Madden, in Pike county, Georgia. It is eighteen years old, is thirty-four inches in circumference at its base, is a quarter of a mile long, and yields five wagon loads of grapes.

Miscellaneous.

REUNION MEETING.

To whom it may concern: We, your committee, consider the time we adjourned to, to meet at Galland's Grove (which was October 17th next) to be too late, and have thought best to change the time of said meeting to the first Saturday in October next, which will be the 3d; believing this time will better suit the farmers in this western Iowa. Again, it is likely to be a little warmer then; and as the burden will fall on the Galland's Grove Branch in preparing for the meeting, it will suit them better then. Will write again before our meeting, so the Saints will know what to depend upon. If Joseph Smith will say he will be present with a large escort of Elders, we think it would help the gathering. John Hawley, John Pett, Gideon Hawley, Committee.

CAMP MEETING.

To the Saints and Friends, Greeting: This is to inform all those who may be interested in this great latter day work, or their own salvation, that the Southern Nebraska District, will make the effort to hold a Camp Meeting at McCaig's Grove, near Elmwood, Cass county, Nebraska, nine miles South of South Bend, on the main line of the B. &. M. R. R., and fifteen miles north of Unadilla, on the Nebraska Railway, beginning July 8th. We have the promise of some of the able Elders, and are now making arrangements for others. There is a nice grove, and ample provision will be made for all who desire to camp out, as also those who may want homes. We, therefore, cordially invite the Saints of Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Northern Nebraska, to come at this pleasant season of the year and help us make this gathering a success. Any information desired will be furnished by J. W. Holenbeck, Elmwood, Nebraska; or by Robert M. Elvin, chairman, Nebraska City, Nebraska.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

In consequence of action had by the Armstrong Branch of Independence District, May 4th, 1885, requesting a change, I hereby notify all interested that our next District Conference will be held at Independence, Mo., June 27th, 1885, instead of at Armstrong as decided by last conference. Hour of convening ten a.m.

JOSEPH LUFF, Pres. of Dist.

The conference of the Far West District, Missourl, adjourned to meet with the German Stewartsville Branch, May 30th, 1885.

J. S. Constance.

The Northern Michigan District Conference will be held at Delaware, Sanilac county, Michigan, June 6th and 7th, 1885, with the Delaware Branch, seven miles east of Palm Station, on the narrow guage running from Port Huron to Sandbeach. Visiting brethren on arriving at Palm Station, will enquire for James English, or Charles Green. We request every branch to send a statistical report, and a delegate, if possible; otherwise you can send your reports to A. Barr, Forrester, Sanilac county, Michigan. Come one, come all, and bring the Spirit of the Master with you; so that we will have a meeting long to be remembered. Hope to have the president of the mission and other laborers present with us.

A. BARR, Dist. Pres.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN DISTRICT.

Our district conference for Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana is appointed to convene at ten o'clock a.m., June 27th next, at the Fowler School-house, about five and a half miles southeast of Coldwater, Michigan. Those coming from the east will find a conveyance by getting off at Quincy, on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad. Those coming from the west will find conveyances at Coldwater. Enquire for E. Whaley, James and William Lockerby, or William H. Kelley, at Coldwater. The residences of brethren Chancy and Chester Smith, F. Granger, Thaddeus Ball, Jacob Thomas, Samuel Stroh, &c., may easily be found from either of the places, where those wishing will find a welcome and a home. The conference will be late, but the time was fixed at last session. We hope to see many of the Saints at this meeting, and specially request as many of the General Conference appointees, and other officials, as well can, to attend. It will doubtless be a busy time. The toiler will be tired, and will need a change of work. Rest the day before starting, so that we may not have a tired conference.

W. H. KELLEY, Pres. of Dist.

Bro. J. H. Lake is invited to labor in the State of Michigan, as may be deemed wise by him.

Bro. John Gilbert's appointment to Philadelphia should read Philadelphia District, Pa.

W. H. KELLEY.

KEWANEE DISTRICT.

We sincerely desire the Saints throughout this, the Kewanee District, the official strength especially, and the traveling Elderships accessible, to please remember that our next conference will convene on the 20th of June, at the Buffalo Prairie Church, seven miles northwest of Millersburg, Illinois. The district has been and still is in a somewhat paralyzed condition, but no grave difficulties are now on the carpet.

Indifference and inaction, along with sedition and perverse rebellion, have hitherto closed up the avenues of progress, and actually rolled in a tide of priestly jealously and division. We apprehend a better time is dawning and hope to meet with a large representation of devout and humble worshipers. Elder H. C. Bronson has recently moved to Montrose, Iowa, and J. A. Robinson intends to settle in Fort Madison, the same state. There is only one person in the district that is working under missionary appointment, and he wishes to devote his time mainly to opening up new fields, hence the local ministers are urged and exhorted to buckle on the whole armor of the Lord, and not only "hold the fort," but advance upon the common foe, and plant the standard of King Emanuel in the inner parts of the hungering, seeking, thirsting souls. The secular press is growing more liberal and the rural population are quite generally willing to hear, and after judge. Please remember to observe the law of tithing along with systematic benevolence in the way of donations, oblations, offerings, charity; and in fine every good word and work. The active and approved workman should be cheerfully liberated and cleverly sustained; therefore no baptized believer should appear before the kind Father empty handed, and settle up in praying for the good Lord to move upon some one else to give. As a steady drop will wear a rock, so constant giving will supplant the stony heart with one of flesh, wherein the holy law to "love your neighbor as yourself," will become indellibly inscribed. We wish full statistical reports from all branches and the spiritual interest of all localities. We want to arrange for a series of meetings all over the district and strive ardently and fervently for a general looming up of the work. We devoutly pray that the Holy Spirit may superintend the various sittings and revive and encourage all.

Jas, W. TERRY, President.
M. T. SHORT, Missionary.

Owen, formerly an Elder of the Brooklyn Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and was appointed to labor in and for the church under the hands of Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, has been disfellowshiped, and his name erased from the church record of names at East New York, for refusing to make an apology and restitution, charges having been preferred against him by Elder William H. WHITE.—At Gallen, Michigan, April 11th, 1885, Sr. Pamelia White, aged 64 years, 7 months and one day. She embraced the gospel at Veteran, N. Y., in 1850; learned of the Reorganization on moving to Michigan in 1865, and united with the church in March of that year. Life's pathway for her was strewn with many severe trials and deep afflictions, all borne by her in patience and resignation. Her life was that of a consistent Saint, and her death was like theirs. Her testimony to the truth of the latter day work, strong and convincing, will be vividly remembered by those hearing it. After illness with consumption for several months, she peacefully and resignedly passed into the rest that awaits the faithful, in full hope of the glory to be realized through the resurrection of the children of God. Funeral exercises conducted by Elder Cyrus Thurston.

"VERY STARTLING STATEMENTS."

THE Boston Journal says: "Prof. Christlieb, of Bonn, Germany, read a paper before the recent meeting of the Evangelical Alliance at Copenhagen, which contained some very startling statements. According to the statistics of the last twenty years, he said, there has been a large falling off in attendance upon religious services throughout Europe, and this has been followed by an increase of crime. Paris has more atheists to-day than ever before existed in any great city. In no Christian country, however, were things so bad as in Germany. In many districts of Berlin there was only one church to every 50,000 of the population. In New York there were 200 places of public worship; in Berlin, only 50. Besides this, out of the whole population of Berlin, namely, one million, only 20,000, or two per cent., attend divine service. Hamburg was even worse, for, out of a population of 400,000, public worship on Sundays was attended only by 5,000. In certain provinces of Germany there are suicides at the rate of forty a week. The ordinary religious teaching of the country is quite dead, and Christianity resolved into mere education. Skeptical works are popular with the working classes, and in the middle and upper classes hundreds are led away by the influence of scientific discovery and invention.

HARD TIMES.

If the working people of this country want to know why they have hard times every few years, we can tell them. It is not over-production nor under-consumption, as those phrases are commonly employed. If they had kept the $000.-000,000 they spend every year for strong drink in their pockets for the past five years of good times, the present temporary lull in manufacturing and business activity would find many of them better able to bear it without being pinched for the necessaries of life. It is the over-consumption of whiskey that makes unconsumption of food and clothing in this land of liberty and liquor. The annual bill for bread, meat, cotton and woollen goods, of this great American people, foots up à total of about $1,250,000,000. But its annual bill for whiskey, beer and taxes thereon, is $1,400,-000,000. In other words it unnecessarily drinks $150,000,000 worth more than it necessarily eats or wears.

A PROMISE.

A promise should be given with caution, and kept with care. A promise should be made with the heart, and remembered by the head. A promise is the offspring of the intention; and should be nurtured by recollection. A promise and its performance should, like a true balance, always present a mutual adjustment. A promise delayed is justice deferred. A promise neglected is an untruth told. A promise attended to is a debt settled.

THE TEMPORAL LAW IN FORCE.

In this issue is an article entitled "Tithing and Gathering," in which will be found these words-"It is the writer's opinion that the law relating to and governing the property interests of the church as taught in the commandments and revelations which have been quoted and referred to in this article, are not now in force." We hardly think the writer intends all that may be inferred from this statement, for in his article he has quoted parts of the specific law to the church which says-"If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the Bishop of my church and his counsellors, two of the Elders, or High Priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose." * * * "And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individual of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue, to be consecrated unto the Bishop, it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants. Therefore, the residue shall be kept in my store-house, to administer to the poor and needy, as shall be appointed by the High Council of the church, and the Bishop and his council, and for the purpose of purchasing lands for the public benefit of the church, and building houses of worship, and building up the New Jerusalem which is hereafter to be revealed, that my covenant people may be gathered in one, in that day when I shall come to my temple. And this I do for the salvation of my people."

This law to the church was binding in those parts which related to "property interests" equally with those which related to doctrine, morals, and ministerial duties, and were of equal force. Those parts relating to "property interests" were of force and validity in administering "to the poor and needy," "purchasing lands for the public benefit of the church, and building houses of worship;" and the nineteenth paragraph provides that the active ministry are to be aided also. This law was given February 9th, 1831,—before the place of the New Jerusalem and the land of Zion were revealed.

If "the law relating to and governing the property interests of the church as taught in the commandments and revelations" quoted in the article on "Tithing and Gathering" "are not now in force," then the church is without any special and specific law by which to supply the needy among either its ministry or its members, or to raise moneys to purchase lands in the in the place appointed for Zion, or for any of its stakes, or for building houses of worship-indeed, in that case the church would be left without a provided law for any of these matters. Such a construction if adopted, would hinder, if not entirely prevent, the raising of means by which to accomplish these ends. To say the law alluded to is not in force now, because some of the present conditions of the church do not make it needful to execute each and every provision of said law, is not the correct thing. To illustrate—the laws of States provide that taxes may and shall be assessed and collected for school purposes, and they provide how, and to what extent this may be done. Those who have the administration of said laws determine the amount needed, the time and manner of its use, and decide whether a large or small amount is needed for this or that purpose, or whether none is needed for one or more purposes. For instance; if means are needed to buy lands upon which to erect a house, also to build the house, and for no other purposes, then apply the law for those purposes only. If means are needed to pay teachers, and for that only, then apply the law for that purpose only. But if no land is to be bought; if no house is to be erected; or even no teachers to be paid, it would not follow that the law was not in force which provides for these thing. The law would be in force, but existing conditions might not demand its application or execution in some or many of its provisions. That is all. We think the decisions of the General Conferences are what is likely to be right or nearest right, and it is certainly safe to follow them till amended, or annulled. Those who have immediate charge of these matters are likely to be best informed on them, and their views should be observed and honored.

BRO, F. G. PITT of Independence, Mo., has been visiting relatives and friends here of late, and on Sunday 24th he preached an excellent sermon in the evening in the Brick Chapel. His effort was to show that, however valuable the various gifts and manifestations of the spirit were to the Saints, they must not overlook nor underrate "the fruits of the spirit," and urged that these fruits were the surest, clearest evidences of genuine Christianity, and that they should always adorn the conduct and character of the children of God. He fortified his position by suitable Scripture texts and illustrated it by some excellent comparisons. His leading text was John 15: 2.—the words of Christ—"every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth . more fruit." From this and similar texts he argued that a name, and a spiritual evidence, were not all of the life of the Saints; but beyond this there must be such a life of faithful devotion in keeping all the commandments of Christ as would produce "the fruit of the spirit," as taught by Paul.—Gal. 5: 22-26; Eph. 5: 9, and as is taught in various parts of the word of God. The sermon was a sensible and appropriate plea in behalf of self-culture, self-denial and self-discipline by the children of God. To this he joined the testimonies of his personal experience since uniting with the Saints, and his joyful determination to "follow on to know the Lord."

Such sermons are always good and edifying, for they tend to build up in all the ways of life and salvation.

Come again, Bro. Pitt.

BUSYBODIES.

THE apostle Peter seldom gave a sharper rebuke to any than he did to the busybodies among professed saints in his time, and it applies with equal force to that class now when found among Latter Day Saints. He places them in the catalogue with the vilest of sinners: "But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evil doer, or as a busybody in other men's matters."-1 Pet. 4:5. Paul, too, rebukes this same class, and warns the church against "tattlers also, and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not."-1 Tim. 5:13. It is probable the church always has been and always will be annoyed, tried, and defiled, by this kind of sinners: but timely steps should be taken so as to render the infliction as light, as brief, and as infrequent as possible. True Saints will use due precaution lest they become such, and they will place parties suspected of being such in some sort of moral quarantine, and those known to be diseased, they will shun as they would a small-pox or cholera victim, and refer the matter to those who have competent authority to examine, cleanse, and if possible cure the case. Once in a while we see persons who seem never so diligent and pleased as when they are intermeddling with other people's affairs. They do not wait till they are thrust upon their attention, nor till their attention is invited; but they will search, and pry, and pump, till they get a shadow, a hint, or more; and thus equipped they start out on their vicious work of sowing discord, strife, bitterness, heart-burnings, and wrath. Such parties should be chided, warned, and rebuked if needed.

No faithful and wise person will suffer a "busybody in other men's matters" to fill their ears with evil communications. They will pleasantly request, and firmly demand if need be, that such person stop their harmful and contemptible work; and if this does not remedy the evil, then avoid them altogether. Personal reputation, honor, social standing, business interests,—nay, everything good,—are the slain or polluted victims of this hateful creature—the "busybody in other people's matters." When offenders of this kind are duly warned and will not repent, they should have "mind your own business" indellibly written upon the palms of their hands, and then be made to read the same lesson in all the works of God, from the smallest leaflet to the remotest star. Everything in nature obeys the laws of its creation and province, except fallen man. His carnal, prying, over-curious qualities prompt him to be meddlesome to his own hurt and that of others. This can not be put away too soon.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. R. M. Elvin in his letter in the last Herald, when speaking of Mr. Clark Braden, asks to know "How are the mighty fallen?" to which we reply—By the very weapon he helped to forge, and with which he boasted he would destroy Mormonism! That's how "There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets," now as well as anciently.

Bro. I. F. Kingsbury writes from Watsonville, Cal., under date of May 18th, saying the California Central District held a two-days meeting with the Jefferson Branch, and "had a feast of good things." He further says—"The Spirit of the Master was with us in the gift of tongues and the spirit of prophecy. All were strengthened and comforted and made to rejoice in the goodness of God."

Bro. R. J. Anthony, in a letter dated at Soda Springs, Idaho, May 19th, says he was surprised in having large and attentive audiences there, as the Mormons have been very much embittered of late. He also says the most of the Mormons who heard him seemed happily disappointed with the views he presented and the doctrines he advocated, and concludes by adding—"I want to see God's hand manifest in the deliverance of this erring and much troubled people. My heart goes out for bleeding Zion. May her sons and daughtersbe purified by love."

Bro. E. Barrows of Salt Lake City, in a letter dated the 23d of May, writes encouragingly of the work there. The Scandinavian meetings in the chapel are proving a success. He says—"One person was baptized here last week, and one in Pleasant Grove. I met Bro. Ezra Strong on the street yesterday, just in from Washington Territory: I think he will be a help in this mission. There are several, not members of our church who express the hope that Joseph will be their guest while in the city."

Sr. Agnes Brodhed writes us from Ellenville, Ulster Co., N. Y., ordering books and papers, and saying further, "I have been waiting for an opportunity to join the church for years. My father and mother both died in that faith. We would be glad if there could be a good Elder sent to our town. There might be a great deal of good done; but it must be a man who knows how to approach the peopeople: there are so many who will not endure sound doctrine."

Bro. J. V. L. Sherwood has recently returned from Grant City, Missouri, to relocate here in his business of silver-smith, jeweller, clock and watch repairer. From numerous testimonials given by the citizens of Grant City, it appears he gave excellent satisfaction in his line while there. Bro. John intends to make this his permanent home. Give him a call.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser's address is Box 40, (instead of 10, as before published) Rhodes, Marshall Co., Iowa.

BRO. H. A. STEBBINS left here on a ministerial tour to Lucas, Iowa, and other points, May 29th, to be gone twenty days or more. He is one of the Lord's diligent. wise, and worthy workers. He trusts in God and does not wait till the church treasury is full before he enters upon his mission-work; and in this way he proves God, the Saints, and the world, as required in the following—"And thou shalt take no purse, nor scrip, neither staves, neither two coats, for the church shall give unto thee in the very hour what thou needest for food, and for raiment, and for shoes, and for money, and for scrip; for thou art called to prune my vineyard with a mighty pruning, yea, even for the last time. Yea, and also all those whom thou hast ordained. And they shall do even according to this pattern. Amen."-D. C. 23: 7.

"And again I say unto you my friends, (for from henceforth I shall call you friends), it is expedient that I give unto you this commandment, that ye become even as my friends in days when I was with them traveling to preach this gospel in my power; for I suffered them not to have purse or scrip, neither two coats; behold, I send you out to prove the world, and the laborer is worthy of his hire. And any man that shall go and preach this gospel of the kingdom, and fail not to continue faithful in all things, shall not be weary in mind, neither darkened, neither in body, limb or joint; and an hair of his head shall not fall to the ground unnoticed. And they shall not go hungry, neither athirst. Therefore, take no thought for the morrow, for what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, or wherewithal ye shall be clothed; for consider the lilies of the field, how they grow, they toil not, neither do they spin; and the kingdoms of the world, in all their glory, are not arrayed like one of these; for your Father who art in heaven, knoweth that you have need of all these things. Therefore, let the morrow take thought for the things of itself. Neither take ye thought beforehand what ye shall say, but treasure up in your minds continually the words of life, and it shall be given you in the very hour that portion that shall be meted unto every man. Therefore, let no man among you (for this commandment is unto all the faithful who are called of God in the church, unto the ministry) from this hour, take purse or scrip, that goeth forth to proclaim this gospel of the kingdom. Behold, I send you out to reprove the world of all their unrighteous deeds, and to teach them of a judgment which is to come. And whoso receiveth you, there will I be also; for I will go before your face: I will be on your right hand and on your left, and my Spirit shall be in your hearts, and my angels round about you, to bear you up. Whoso receiveth you receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money. And he who feeds you, or clothes you, or gives you money, shall in no wise lose his reward: and he that doeth not these things is not my disciple: by this you may know my disciples. He that receiveth you not, go away from him alone by yourselves, and cleanse your feet, even with water, pure water, whether in heat or in cold, and bear testimony of it unto your Father which is in heaven, and return not again unto that man. And into whatsoever village or city ye enter, do likewise. Nevertheless, search diligently and spare not; and wo unto that house, cr that village, or city, that rejecteth you, or your words, or testimony concerning me. Wo, I say again, unto that house, or that village, or city, that rejecteth you, or your words, or your testimony of me; for I, the Almighty, have laid my hands upon the nations to scourge them for their wickedness; and plagues shall go forth, and they shall not be taken from the earth until I have completed my work, which shall be cut short in righteousness; until all shall know me, who remain, even from the least unto the greatest, and shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, and shall see eye to eye, and shall lift up their voice, and with the voice together sing this new song, saying: * * * And again, verily, verily I say unto you, it is expedient, that every man who goes forth to proclaim mine everlasting gospel, that inasmuch as they have families, and receive moneys by gift, that they should send it unto them, or make use of it for their benefit, as the Lord shall direct them, for thus it seemeth me good. And let all those who have not families, who receive moneys, send it up unto the Bishop in Zion, or unto the Bishop in Ohio, that it may be consecrated for the bringing forth of the revelations and the printing thereof, and for establishing Zion. And if any man shall give unto any of you a coat, or a suit, take the old and cast it unto the poor, and go your way rejoicing. And if any man among you be strong in the Spirit, let him take with him he that is weak, that he may be edified in all meekness, that he may become strong also."-Doc. & Cov. 83: 13-16, 18, 19.

These are God's promises; and it remains for the traveling ministry to trust him, try him, and prove him; while he in this and other ways will try them, and prove them; and at the same time he proves and tries the Saints and the world.

ANOTHER.

Another Spiritist Philosopher and his pet theory came to grief. Not long since the San Francisco, California, Chronicle, sent a reporter to Santa Rosa, up the bay from the city, to look after the spiritual and temporal welfare of Mr. Thomas Lake Harris, leader of a small community known as the Fountain Grove Community of Spiritualists, or The Use. The reporter did his work well, for following directly on the heels of his expose of the things he found there, the community collapsed. We give below the last from the Chronicle received by us, Tuesday, March 10th, we believe the date not being on the slip sent us.

EXPOSE OF A SPIRITIST FRAUD—THE COMMUNITY BROKEN UP.

Chrysantheus, the immortal Primate, has abdicated his throne and fled his kingdom. In other words, Thomas Lake Harris, the leader of the Fountain Grove Community of Spiritualists, becoming fearful of the results of the expose of his peculiar methods given in the Chronicle of February 10th last, has suddenly left the scene of his successful operations of the past few years and is now on his way to Europe. Previous to his departure he signed papers conveying all the Fountain Grove property, said to be worth over $300,000, to Thomas Loy, Naga Sawa, and Ray P. Clark, the three of his followers who have the largest interest in the property, and who, since the revelations of his methods, have clamored loudest for restitution. In his departure Harris was accompanied by a woman, said to be the same person with whom he has been living for the past few years. The two left under assumed names, coming to the city one night about a fortnight ago, and purchasing tickets next day for New York. The brethren of The Use on receiving the number of the Chronicle containing the expose, were considerably astonished, and immediately began to take a different and more worldly view of their situation. Their Edenic dreams were dispelled, their eyes opened, and the recoil from the shock was of a nature to make the Primate tremble in his big-buckled shoes. A strategic course was resolved upon, however, and it was decided to secure the Primate's Chronicle before his spirit-seeing eyes had alighted upon the fatal article. The Primate, being engaged in a two-hours' coversation with the inhabitants of the unseen world, the paper was easily abstracted without his knowledge, and the brethren retired to hold another consultation in the "Commandery.

DEPARTURE OF HARRIS.

For four days the primate was kept in blissful ignorance of the expose, while at Santa Rosa, three miles distant, his scandalous conduct had become the talk of the town. No one had dreamed of the gentlemanly, the profound, the learned Harris being such a sad rogue, though there were many ready with their "I told you so" when the delectable gossip was going the rounds. When the storm which had been gathering above his head broke with all its violence and Haris became aware of the exposure, he astonished his followers by declaring, with a smile that such an article could work no injury to the Brotherhood of the New Life; that it was a palpable attempt at blackmail, and that he must go to England and bring an action against the Chronicle for libel. It was not very clear to the brethren why it was necessary for the Primate to go across the broad Atlantic in order to prosecute a California newspaper. However as they were entirely disenchanted with the spiritual doctrines with which they had lately been so infatuated, and and were disgusted with the man who had led them into a belief in the esoteric powers the doctrine of "counterparts" and the Two-in-one," as represented by himself and his unseen Chrysanthea, they were nothing loath that he should depart. First, though, there should be a settlement of affairs. While it was not possible that all the dupes of Harris' twenty years of scheming and conniving could be restored to their property rights, Loy, Clark and the Japanese were willing to assume the responsibility of the control of the estate, and it was accordingly made over to them. Harris and his female partner then packed up a few of their belongings and left the place. It is believed by some of the brethren he is gone not to return, but others are of the opinion that his mission to England is simply to warn those of his moneyed dupes in that island kingdom against believing in the expose, that they many continue their contributions as before. Then, when the storm has blown over, he will return and demand reinstatement as Primate and leader of the community.

CHAOS OF "THE USE."

Miss Waring, one of the believers in the doctrine of counterparts, fearing the scandal arising from the disclosure, left the community soon afterwards for Cloverdale. A short time before Harris' departure the community was re-enforced by two trusting Japanese, and there are now four of these simple people at Fountain Grove. These and R. P. Clark, his wife and two daughters, with a Mr. Dapling, Arthur Cuthbert, James Fisher, Dr. Hyde and Mrs. Caroline Suverkrup, of San Bernardino who recently brought $60,000 into "the Use," are all that remain of the community, the others having wandered forth from the modern Eden, probably never to return.

As a matter of justice to Rev. Dr. Shepherd of the Episcopal Church of Santa Rosa, who was mentioned in connection with Harris, and as being an intimate friend of that enterprising imitator of Swedenborg, it should be stated that he knew nothing of the Primate's teachings and mode of life, and was more surprised than any one at the revelations. A letter has been received at this office from T. W. Fisher, of Cincinnati, whose brother James Fisher was one of Harris' most tractable followers. The writer states that for years he had heard nothing from his brother until he read the Chronicle's expose, and that there is a legacy awaiting him in the East. Mr. Fisher is very anxious that Harris shall not secure possession of the legacy, and has taken legal means to prevent his doing so. In view of what has transpired, it is scarcely possible that the ex-Primate will get his bony hands on James $1,200.

It is not easy to predict what Harris' future course will be, or what his disgusted brethren will do in the premises, but one thing is certain—the Fountain Grove community is, to all intents and purposes, broken up, and its power for evil sadly demoralized.

NATURE'S REMEDIES.

THE following from the St. Louis Globe-Democrat may prove of value to the HERALD readers, coming as it seems, from a reliable source. We have believed for many past year's that in the store-house of Nature there were remedies for every curable disease, and that it was and is heaven's will that such be sought out and used as blessings from God. In the book of Alma 21: 16, it is said the ancient Nephites on this Continent, were favored of heaven "because of the excellent qualities of the many plants and roots which God had prepared to remove the cause of diseases to which men were subject by the nature of the climate." The list below may be just what is claimed for it, and if so, it is well to know it.

"Consul Wright, of Santos, Brazil, incloses in a letter to the State Department notes, upon the medicinal plants of that country. The compilation is the work of S. S. Schindler, a native born citizen of the United States, who is now in Brazil. From Mr. Schindler's notes it appears that the country abounds in herbal remedies, and that alvelos, the new cancer cure, is but one of hundreds of plants or trees possessing properties of great value, as yet almost unknown to materia medica.

"Alvelos is a shrub, Mr. Schindler writes, discovered by an eminent physician of Pernambuco, to be a specific for cancerous ulcers. The juice is a powerful caustic. Applied to cancer, it produces an irritating effect, which increases to strong inflammation, and at length cicatrization takes place. The manner of application is this; A camel's hair brush is dipped in the juice, which is applied to the cancer and allowed to dry. Twenty-four hours afterward a little lint dipped in water is applied to the cancer, and in another twenty-four hours the juice of alvelos is tried again. Dr. Velloso advises for a speedy cure the application of the juice every day, using an infusion ef tobacco instead of the arnica and water. This course of treatment is more rapid. The inflammation is much stronger, but can be regulated by the physician according to the nature of the cancer and its proximity to vital organs. Mr. Schindler says that the alvelos treatment has proven successful in every case of cancer of the lips, tongue, nose and breasts, where it has been tried.

"Baycuru, Mr. Sehindler says, is a curious plant of Brazil, which buries itself in the sand, a number of leaves rising above, seven inches long by two inches wide. The flowers resemble a saxifrage. The whole plant is sometimes for days together covered by the sea. The root is six to seven inches long, one inch thick and tortuous shape. Externally it is chocolate brown; internally, flesh colored. It is an unfailing remedy in all kinds of enlargement and glandular swellings.

"The juice of the fruit of the cajueiro tree is one of the most powerful blood purifiers known.

"A decoction from the bark of the root of the calunga shrub is a remedy for dyspepsia and intermittent fevers.

"The leaves of the camapa plant contain a narcotic principle, and the juice of the root and fruit is found excellent for rheumatism and liver diseases."

"Boiled fruit of the arvore do pao tree makes a powerful poultice for ulcers.

"The fruit of the cabacinho has an admirable effect upon dropsy.

"The most stubborn coughs yield to a tea made from leaves of the malvarisco shrubs.

"Papaw has been found to possess the property of destroying the false membranes of croup and diphtheria.

"Papaine is another diphtheria cure.

"Poracary is a sure antidote for bites of poisonous snakes.

"Sapucareira bark makes a decoction which seems to be nature's remedy for kidney ailments,

"There are no less than 312 plants or trees in Brazil which possess strong medicinal properties. Mr. Schindler's catalogue of them contains a remedy for every ill known to human flesh."

Correspondence.

Santa Rosa, Cal., May 1st, 1885.

Dear Herald:—I have just read a letter in the Herald where a sister speaks in harsh terms of the Herald. I wish to say in reply, that I have been a reader of many church newspapers, but the Saints Herald is the most instructive, the purest in sentiment, and the best edited church organ I have ever seen, and perhaps the best in the world. It is systematically arranged as follows.

1: Division—Remarks and editorials from the editors; 2: Questions and Answers. Under this head we are permitted to ask questions concerning our duties as church officers and members, and hear the opinions of the best authorities. 3: In the Correspondance columns we can tell of the work we are doing for for the cause, and hear of the progress of others. 4: Summary of news. In this division we have a brief account of the calamities which continually take place throughout the world, showing the fulfillment of prophecy, etc. 5: Communications. Here we are permitted to express our views concerning religious matters. 6: Conference minutes. Here we have a brief account of our general progress. 7: Miscellany. Under this head appears every thing we wish to publish of less importance, including births, marriages, deaths, etc. The Herald should be appreciated by all Saints, and it is the imperative duty of all Saints who are interested in the work, to help sustain it by their subscriptions and influence and to extend its circulation.

Dear Herald:-To-day is my last Suuday in Edenville, as I start tomorrow with my family by team to Clinton, Henry Co., Mo. I feel a spirit of sadness, leaving behind those that I love. I have spent some happy times in the ministry while living here; seen some strange things, and endured something for the gospel. It will be cheering news to me if I can do as much for Christ and His work in my new field as 'God enabled me to do while in central Iowa. Bro. Roth writes cheering news from Viola, where Bro. Etzenhouser and I hazarded our lives more than a year ago. The brother baptized three good and noble souls, and others are anxiously inquiring. I read the letter and wept for joy. Our labor at Viola is one of the remembered one's of my life. At that place we had trials, but felt the power and Spirit of our calling-and the battle is won! Six, all heads of families, rejoicing in Christ! I feel to honor God as He has the word of his servant to that people.

This week's Herald is good. Bro. D. S. Mills speaks my sentiments in regard to the late controversial articles in Herald. The result is what I thought it would be. I can see the church is moving forward step by step. Nothing short of a radical opposition would have prompted the church as a body to have enquired. "What do the Books teach?" We have "Moses and the prophets" of the past; and a "Moses" and the books of the present-and we will do well to give heed to their counsel and teaching. I have labored but little since General Conferencesome at Newton, baptizing three, and leaving the Saints rejoicing. Those of the Second Quorum of Elders can address me at Clinton, Mo., my permanent residence for the present.

Dear Herald:—I wish to bear my testimony of this great latter-day work. I know that this gospel preached by our Elders is of God. I have never regretted obeying our Savior's words to Nicodemus,—"Ye must be born again." And many times I have thanked our heavenly Father for his Holy Spirit that has burned in my bosom from time to time. I have still a desire to press forward, and that my feet may be kept in the narrow path in this the trying hour of temptation; that the God of ancient and modern Israel may bestow his grace upon me, and that the eyes of my understanding may be opened that I might ever see the nothingness of the things of this world, that I may ever take Christ's yoke upon me, which is easy, and his burden, which is light. It is my prayer that our Father in heaven will keep his people under the shadow of his throne, and that we might ever have our lamps trimmed and burning, so that the cross swords will not debar us from an entrance into eternal rest.

CURRINSVILLE, Oregon,

Bro. Foseph: - It has been some time since the readers of the Herald have heard from this corner of the United States. Myself and family have been here close to the foot hills of the Cascade Mountains west, one year; and have been praying and expect to keep on praying until we can get one or more Elders to preach the gospel here. I believe the minds of the people are running in the right channel to receive the truth. I will state to the readers of the Herald how this was brought about. This neighborhood had not heard anything but the M. E. doctrine for thirty years, until about a month ago. I sent to the city of Portland, twenty-eight miles from here, if they had a spare Elder to send him out here and I would get the school house, circulate the appointment, and board him awhile here. The offer was accepted, and he preached thirty or more discourses. I told the people at the first meeting I was the man that sent for this Seventh Day Adventist to preach and give us a change, and to come out and see how much Scripture he will give us. Those that made a profession and those that did not, said at the close they heard more Bible than they ever heard before. I told them, if he would tell the whole gospel story I would board him another month, although the neighbors were good and relieved me of part of that burden. I told the preacher and the people that I had heard the Sabbath question, Daniel's prophecies, and the sleep of the dead all talked on long ago, and if love and a little money would get a man here that would give us the other side of the question I would get them here, as I was not afraid to come out and hear any one preach. Now, you Elders that can defend the Sabbath question, and the sleep of the dead, and the heavenly sanctuary, I hope to hear from you; and I will meet you at the depot.

Brother Joseph:—As I read the reports of my brethren of the ministry my heart burns with the glowing but gentle spirit of the gospel. I long to stand side by side with them in the battle of life. What noble service to render, to battle for the Lord of hosts. Noble, true hearted men have been inspired of God to know and do his holy will; and the message of peace and unexampled love has been published to a partially benighted world. Thousands of hearts have been made glad, homes have been rendered peaceful and communities evangelized by the wonderful power of truth and love. A new and abiding impetus is given to the toiler in life by this glorious mandate from God. Narrow, selfish views are exchanged for the broader conceptions of the gospel. The few years of probation that used to seem so long now appear as but a moment of time compared with an endless eternity. Our hearts aspirations are fixed upon the loys and blessings of the kingdom of God. The Holy Ghost bearing witness conjointly that Jesus is the Christ and that our sins are forgiven, dwells as an abiding comforter in our hearts, assuring us of the reality and divinity of our faith in God. Thus the "husbandman that laboreth is made partaker of its fruits," and prepared to tell "the old, old story of Jesus and his love." It was this influence that moved upon faithful Abraham to say "Let there be no strife, I pray thee between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen, for we are brethren." Difference in views of brethren may obtain without strife. My belief is that unity of sentiment can be obtained in the church only by a faithful observance of what God has revealed in the three authoritative books of the church. I like the adoption of the resolution by the Board of Publication placing some restriction upon the character of articles printed in the Herald. The kite of free thought and expression is all right; but it, like all other kites, needs a string, and I am willing the Herald Editors should hold the string. If they don't hold to suit, the body may instruct In fellowship,

GEO. S. HYDE.

Mesa City, Maricopa Co., Ariz., May 15th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—I arrived here from California, on the 17th day of April last. I came to visit my relatives, (having a brother and his family here), and also thinking I might do some good in my official calling, having obtained from Bro. A. H. Smith, a written permit to labor in the capacity of an Elder during my stay (if I so desired), and he would stand between me, and the one in charge of this part of country, in case any misunderstanding should occur, because of any official labors I might perform while here. I do not know who is in charge of this territory, but whoever he may be, if he will send me his address, I will report to him my labors, and the prospects here.

I will just say this much more; there are some five or six hundred numbers of the Utah Church residing in this vicinity, under the presidency of Mc.Donald, who at present is said to be absent on missionary labor among the Yaqui Indians, or in their territory, having charge also of a colony of Mormons who went there to settle, but have been ordered out by the Mexican Government, because of polygamy, at least report says so, and so do letters from there to their relations here. Many of their number here seem very firm in their convictions that polygamy was revealed by God to the Martyr, while others are getting quite doubtful on the subject, and are waiting to see the salvation of God (in behalf of those who are now fleeing from the law against it) if the doctrine is of divine origin. It it goes to the wall (which it surely will) many will seek true safety in the principles of the gospel, as taught by the Reorganized Church, while some will adandon all religious faith, and no doubt some will follow their leaders to the islands of the sea, or anywhere else, rather than give up their much cherished and pet doctrine. I have made it a point since coming here to defend the Reorganization, both in public places, and by the fire side; have not held any meetings, but if there was another elder with me, who was a good public speaker, (as I am not), I would assist him in every possible, and legitimate way. Many, or some at least, are anxious to see, and hear either Joseph or Alexander, and if either could come here this fall, I believe much good would be done. I have succeeded in getting considerable reading matter among them, and some are reading with great interest, and are delighted with the following tracts: Polygamy, was it an original tenet of the church? Joseph's Reply to Orson Pratt, and the Successor. May the Lord assist the honest in heart, to judge aright is the prayer of one who desires Zion's prosperity.

SAINT JOSEPH, Mo., May 25th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—I herewith enclose to you Programme of the concert recently given for our benefit to aid us to recover from the loss sustained in the recent court-house fire.

We were treated very nicely. Bro. Winning's business influence told well for us in several ways, of course. The concert netted us about $150, which is considered a large return, even for many of the popular churches here.

The indications are quite favorable for future work here. I am fully satisfied, however, that I am not equal to the task of doing more than one man ought to do at book-keeping and take the oversight of the branch also. I have consented to try for a while, hoping that Bro. J. R. Lambert, president of mission, will secure a man to labor with us here. I am sure I am not "reckoning without my host" when I say we can get a much better hearing here now than we could have done in the past. I wish Lamoni was a little nearer; perhaps we then could prevail on Bro. Blair to come down on Saturdays and spend Sundays with us, by securing for him a pass. You know it does not take so long to make the run now since the C. B. & Q. took possession. Now that this public entertainment has brought us prominently before the public, we feel more keenly than ever the need of a man "qualified" by experience, education, manners, tact, and humility, to give the church a standing and character that at present we do not have. I am quite sanguine in regard to the success that might be attained now with proper attention. An effort of a year would find us with a chapel in which to worship. I feel quite sure that the above result would follow a continuous effort. Do you see any way to help us out? Yours in bonds of fellowship,

Audubon, Minnesota, May 26th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—I have been ten years in the church, and this is my first letter to the Herald. I do enjoy reading it. There is so much that is good, so much to cheer, and from some writers so much of love. With some I feel to rejoice, and with others to weep. I do love the brethren, and I know that they love me, for when I go to visit Saints, the glad light that comes into the eye, the warm grasp of the hand, the enquiries as to my wants, and their conversation about the things pertaining to the kingdom all show it, and we do rejoice together.

I was baptized and ordained an Elder in 1875, under the hands of Apostle T. W. Smith. (In confirmation and ordination (and you will find it recorded in the issue of Herald, September 15th, 1875), it was said that my voice should be heard in defense of the truth, and that I should be successful in winning souls for Christ. I believe that my mission has commenced. Since the last of February I have not missed but one Sunday, either with the branch or in some other neighborhood. I have had the best of liberty in speaking, and have baptized three. Have been preaching at Cormorant and vicinity; brother and sister Way and self, and brother Shaw once, and he is to go again. I speak of sister Way for she has her place, and it would be noticed if it was not filled; and so we have worked together, nobly assisted by Bro. and Sr. McLeod who have secured us places to preach in, and kindly cared for the inner man. (May God bless and prosper them). Last Sunday we had the pleasure of baptizing his daughter and her husband, now Bro. and Sr. Mathewson. Bro. Nutt sowed the seed; I was permitted to reap the harvest. At the confirmation the Spirit testified that there were others yet to come. Bro. Bond wrote a grand letter and said something about going into the water and there remaining. But these came out of the water and know for themselves these things are true. Dear Şaints, let us know nothing only Christ and him crucified, and God will bless you.

Your co-worker in Christ, T. J. MARTIN.

> MILLVILLE, New Jersey, May 10th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph:—I am reading the Life of Joseph the Prophet and the Mormon Theology; Exegesis; and the Mormon. Genesis, is worth a thousand dollars to any Latter Day Saint. Every Elder and every Public Library in the United States ought to have one. I could not keep the tears from flowing, the spirit manifestations were that strong. It gives me strength and vigor to press onward to the goal. My kind love and best regards to all the household of faith; and may God help all his children to see Zionward is my prayer.

WILLIAM STREET.

Council Cluffs, Iowa,

May 20th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith:—Will you please grant me space for a few words in the Herald?—I still rejoice in the church, and in the gospel of my Redeemer. The two last Sundays we have had meetings four times, besides the Sunday School. I feel thankful that I was ever permitted to have my name on the Church Record. We are well pleased with "Sandhedens Banner." And now we can say as David said—"The Lord hath given us a Banner, that it may be displayed because of the truth."—Psa. 60.

The theme of the Banner is to explain the holy principles of the gospel in the spirit of love; to point out that way which leadeth to the kingdom of God. And without doubt it will be the means of leading many souls to the kingdom.

The rejection and reorganization of the church has been set forth by brother H. N. Hansen; and the mission of your martyred father, by the Editor, in the light of Scripture. And suffer me here to invite all the Scandinavian brethren to help lift up the Banner of truth. I know that we have power to do it, therefore let us lift it up. And when we do so we bring the glad tidings of salvation to our fellow-men, pleading with the earnest in heart in behalf of the cause of Jesus, and bringing the burdened soul from the wilderness of sin to the throne of grace. And in doing this we do nothing more than that which we owe to Jesus the author of our soul's salvation. The number of Scandinavians belonging to the church in this city is between thirty and forty. Some very good members have been baptized by Bro. Andersen, and I think there are some more who will be baptized before long. As the Lord said: "My sheep hear my voice, and they will follow me." We are thankful for the privilege of hearing of Him who has made a security for our souls upon the cross, and to be taught the principles of the gospel in our own language, because there are some old Saints among us who can not understand the English-speaking brethren.

It is my desire ever to live faithful to the gospel, because I know there is nothing better. I have not much experience, but I can say this, that I have tested the bitterness of sin, and I have also tested the sweetness of the grace of God. I feel a great need of watching and praying; and to be up and do the will of God. I pray God to bless us all with the holy spirit.

Your brother,
PETER PETERSEN.

Dorchester, Nebraska, May 23d, 1885.

Dear Herald:—Sometimes it is a pleasure for us to transmit our doings, and as we are mutually benefited by an exchange of thought, I embrace the favorable opportunity of inditing a few lines descriptive of the work as seen from my standpoint. Never, during my life in the glorious union of spiritual connection with Christ, have I felt the full, unspeakable joy and peace, as now. Spiritually, socially, and financially, I feel that we occupy higher ground than at any time in the near past, and the outlook promises good to all those who are willing to rise up to the work and progress in the onward march unto victory.

I spent a week at Elmwood, and while the farmers were very busy in planting corn, still they gave me a full house for four evenings. Heavy rain stopped us for two evenings, and an attack of paralysis upon Bro. A. Tyson, divided our friends some in caring for him. The Christians are building a church, also the "G. A. R." On Sunday the 17th inst., I occupied the hall of the latter, and a "still hunt" was set on foot, and the unfinished church was also used; but I feel satisfied our cause was not hurt. Last Monday I went to Wilber, and was in attendance on the Sheriff's sale of the books and clothing of Clark Braden. Had the same results overtaken Bro. E. L. Kelley, as his opponent, there would have been no living in peace, in any part of this country for the Saints; but as it is, kindness and friendship are bestowed. Stormy weather kept me from holding more than two meetings. I however went to the Blue River, and added one to Christ's family on earth. God blessed us with his Holy Spirit, both at the water, and in the confirmation. Came here yesterday afternoon, and spoke last evening at the dwelling house of sister R. S. Coats; had good liberty, and the largest gathering that has attended any of the meetings of our Elders at this place. The Christian minister was present, and by request opened with prayer, and gave the benediction. Since writing the above I have had a very pleasant two hours conversation with the above minister. He treated me kindly and fair, and was free and frank in an exchange of views. He also showed me a false statement in the Oracle, written by N. B. Alley, concerning the meetings of last Sabbath. Strange that those who claim to be ministers for Christ would be guilty of publishing untruths, I believe that it will work an injury to those who so practice. Oh God; grant to let only truth be upon my lips, that I may not be ashamed before either God or man!

Summary of Aews.

May 25.—At yesterday's session of the Presbyterian General Assembly in Cincinnati, resolutions were offered condemning Sunday newspapers and committing the church to the policy of "what is commonly known as prohibition." The Freedmen's Committee reported that while the white population of the United States doubled every thirty-five years, the colored population doubled every twenty years. In 1985 there would be 96,000,000 white people in this country and 192,000,000 colored people.

A tremendous waterspout eight miles south of Nashville, Tenn., did great damage. Fields of corn were washed away and fences scattered in every direction. The spout traveled in a northeasterly direction and was a mile in width.

Fred Grant said this morning that last night was the most comfortable his father had passed in two weeks. He had eight hours of good and restful sleep and this morning was free from pain.

Lulu West, a young girl of Laurens, S. C., was stricken with paralysis two months ago, and has not taken a particle of nourishment for fiftyeight days.

The secrecy preserved by the Gladstone Government regarding the Russo-Afghan situation is deepening the already prevalent conviction that some serious hitch has occurred in the negotiations. Meanwhile the Grand Old Man is trying to frighten the Czar with warlike preparations.

The news from Northern Mexico will not raise the spirits of the polygamists in Utah. It is announced that at last the Mexicans have whipped the Yaqui Indians and captured their stronghold. These are the Indians with whom the polygamist leaders are said to have made a treaty, and upon whose territory a small Mormon settlement has been established. Not long ago the aged President of the polygamists visited the Yaqui region, and it was rumored that he was looking for a place in which the persecuted Saints might find shelter in the near future. If the Yaquis have been subdued the Mormons will be forced to deal directly with the Mexican Government.

A COMMON SCOLD.

May 27th.—Margaret Brooks was convicted in Philadelphia, Pa., to-day of being a common scold, and was sentenced to four months' imprisonment. After her sentence her eighteen-year old daughter jumped to her feet and struck one of the witnesses, an aged lady, in the face with her fist. The mother and daughter then became intensely excited, crying, screaming, and striking right and left. After the mother had been removed to the prison van the Judge sentenced the daughter also to four months' imprisonment for contempt of court. At this announcement the girl became frantic, began screaming at the top of her voice, and resisted desperately the officers who took hold of her to remove her to the van. She fought with all her strength, and, being a strong, robust young woman, it took all the strength of two of the strongest officers of the court to remove her from the room.

Francis Xavier Beaudry, a very mean old miser, recently died in Montreal and bequeathed nearly all $2,500,000 to a church, and cut his widow, who is a young woman of thirty, and several children off with next to nothing. In fact he bequeathed his widow nothing, but left orders with his executors, who were members of the church, to provide for her. They generously assigned her $1,000 a year out of the immense estate. The worst of it is that Beaudry was not a pious man and ignored religion until he found he was dying. He then said he meant to atone for his immoralities during life all at once by leaving his wealth to church purposes. This he did and the church gave him a magnificient funeral, brilliant with pomp and pageantry. The widow Beaudry refused the $1,000 pittance, and will claim her share of the estate and dower before the courts. As the church gave Beaudry a good send-off, he is doubtless safe, and as his object is accomplished, he could hardly object to his widow and children getting some of his money to

A dispatch from Deming, N. M., reports a fight between the United States troops and the Indians in Cook's Canyon. Six Indians were killed and four soldiers. The total number of white people killed by the Apache raiders so far as known is thirty-three.

Two car-loads of miners going up an incline road on a mountain near Charleston, W. Va., yesterday, were precipitated down the hillside by the fracture of a brake-band. Nine jumped for their lives, and four remained in the cars. Three of the latter were killed and the other fatally injured.

Two dynamiters from New York have arrived in Paris with patterns of a new explosive apparatus which is provided with three springs. Failure in future dynamite enterprises is rendered almost impossible by this invention, for it is only necessary that one of the springs should go off to cause an explosion.

A three-story frame tenement-house in Jersey City, N. J., collapsed yesterday morning, killing four persons and injuring ten more.

King John of Abyssina is collecting an army at Adowa to prevent the Italians now occupying the Red Sea ports from advancing upon Serheit.

REVOLT IN CENTRAL AMERICA.

The Salvador Government is concentrating a military force at La Libertad and constructing earthworks and intrenchments. Bands of insurgents, largely composed of Indians, are concentrating fourteen leagues from here. An attack on La Libertad is threatened. There is no American or other war vessel on this coast, and foreigners are consequently much alarmed.

Secretary Whitney has ordered the United States vessels at Aspinwall, with the exception of the Tennesses, to proceed to Key West and await further orders. Admiral Jouett is instructed to remain with the Tennessee for the present to watch American interests on the Isthmus.

A TRAIL OF BLOOD.

The Indian out-break in New Mexico is becoming more serious every day. The Apaches from San Carlos Agency crossed into New Mexico several days ago. They killed several men at San Francisco River, four men at Alma, three near Grafton, and two near Cuchillo Negro, and to-day's work has not been fully heard from. It is reported that a band of Navajos has joined Geronimo's Apaches, and there are supposed to be about 200 of them now on the war path. The troops, anticipating an attempt by the Indians to escape into Mexico, seem to have gone astray in guarding the passes and trails to the south. The Indians seem to be heading east, designing to reach the Mescalerio and Jicarillo Agency, in Lincoln County, and it is feared that if they reach this agency the restless Jicarilloes will go with them. They are to-day near Cuchillo Negro, and some of the troops are near them on the east side of the river. It is thought that the Indians will attempt to cross to-night, and if they do the troops may be able to reach them. The military authorities seem determined to prevent their escape into Mexico, and if this can be done there are enough troops now in the field to annihilate the Indians. At Ojocaliente they killed Charley Stevenson, foreman of the Alley & Ingersoll ranch, and M. Moreland, who had a horse ranch near that place.

DEBARRED FROM THE WHITE HOUSE.

Although an official order has not yet been promulgated, the President has requested that Charles A. Hamilton of the Buffalo Express and J. A. Truesdell of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press, the two newspaper correspondents who sent away the scurrilous story about an unpleasantness between himself and Miss Cleveland, should not be allowed access to the White House in quest of news again. A precedent for this action was established during the Administration of President Grant, when a newspaper correspondent who sent to his paper a series of fictions about the departments was by name prohibited from ever entering the departments. About two weeks ago the two correspondents in question sent to Buffalo, New York City, and St. Paul papers a story to the effect that Miss Cleveland had left the White House on account of a difference between herself and the President, and that she was not even attended to the depot by one of the attaches of the White House. This was such a baseless fabrication that it was not thought worth a denial, but the story traveled and was printed in other papers. Finally a paragraph was sent out by the Associated Press containing an official denial of the story, and the return of Miss Cleveland to the White House last week stamped the story as a malicious falsehood. Conversation with reputable correspondents last evening indicated a desire on their part that summary punishment should be meted out to the offenders, and a case was cited in which President Arthur was compelled to deny a correspondent the courtesies usually extended to the profession at the White House, because of the publication in his paper of a scandalous dispatch sent by him from this city. It is generally understood that the President has the same right to forbid a person's admittance to the White House that a private citizen would if his hospitality been returned with a wanton insult. It was at first thought best not to notice this story, but the opinion seemed so universal that an example should be made of the traducers, that it is likely the necessary order will be issued to-day.

TITHING AND GATHERING.

IN HERALD of September 6th, 1884, page 572, a brother writing from Moss Point, Mississippi, asks several questions, one or two of which I will endeavor to throw some light upon from the word of God, which has been accepted by the church as the law by which we can obtain an inhertance in the kingdom of God.

The brother says—"If I was to ask the church, being rich, what I must do to inherit eternal life, would the answer be like that in Mark 10:21? Did he require this of this person because Jerusalem was going to be destroyed, and his property also; or did he tell the person to do this to inherit eternal life?"

Again, he says: "Was not the kingdom like a hidden treasure in a field, the which when a man found he hid, and sold all that he had, and bought that field. And is not this the reason that the Saints that owned property (Acts 4:34) sold it, and brought the price to the Apostles?"

In answer to the question as to the "reason" the Saints that owned property and sold it and brought the price of it to the Apostles, we would simply say, that evidently the reason they did so was because that it was an order instituted by the authority of heaven, either by Christ when he was on earth, (as hinted to the man in Mark 10: 21), or by the revelations of the Holy Spirit to the Apostles after he had ascended to heaven, from the the fact that Peter said that those who undertook to take advantage of the order by withholding a part of the price of their possessions, had not lied unto men but unto God: showing that the authority by which the order was established was from heaven, and not simply of men. We also find an order of a similar nature established and practiced by the church in America. (See Book of Mormon, Book of Nephi, 12:2).

In the prophecy of Enoch we read: "And the Lord called his people Zion, because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them." Doctrine and Covenants, 36:2). Evidently they also must have had some system of equalization of property among them, if there were "no poor among them."

Having now shown that the order of Apostles mentioned in Acts 4:34, was an order authorized by heaven, and that a similar order existed in the church on this continent, by the same authority no doubt, and also that something of the kind must have been established in the days of Enoch, we shall now endeavor to find if there are any grounds for expecting anything of the kind to exist in the church in this dispensation, when the church is observing all of the commandments which were given for her observance. And whatever we may find having a bearing on this subject, we will present as an answer to the question as to what the answer of the church would be to the man who was supposed to be rich, and wanted to know what he must do to inherit eternal life.

In 1842, Mr. Richard Savary of Pittsburg, Pa., wrote to Joseph Smith as follows: "I wish to know through you, the laws and regulations of your church-what is required of its members—how much (if a man of property) must he contribute annually for its support? In short, what is required to constitute good member-Joseph in answer, after presenting the doctrine of faith, repentance, baptism, &c., says: "I would respectfully refer you, Sir, to our book of Doctrine and Covenants for information concerning the laws and regulations of our church, as being given by the revelation of God for our guide and instruction. Respecting how much a man of property shall give annually, we have no special instructions to give; he is to feed the hungry, to cloth the naked, to provide for the widow, dry up the tears of the orphan, to comfort the afflicted, whether in this church, or any other, or in no church at all, wherever he finds them; to believe and obey all that God has revealed, does reveal, or will reveal; to do good unto all men, to be a member in good standing in the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints."-Times and Seasons, vol. 3, p. 732. Having then the authority of the prophet of this dispensation to take the Book of Doctrine and Covenants to find the "laws and regulations" given for "our guide and instruction," and being required to "believe and obey all that God has revealed, does reveal, and will reveal;" "to be members in good standing in the church," we will now turn to the book to find what "instructions" have been given for the "regulation" of the property interests of the members of the church, and also refer to and quote some of the explanatory teachings of the prophet on this subject not found in said book. "Behold now it is called to-day, (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming)."—D. and C. 64: 5.

In section 42:8, 9, 10, 11, are commandments to remember the poor, and consecrate properties for their benefit with a deed and a covenant that can not be broken; the properties to be laid before the Bishop and his counselors. The means so consecrated (for the use of the church) can not again be recovered by the individual consecrating the same. But every man will be made a steward over his own property, which he has received by conse-The law, evidently, requiring cration. every one who has property to consecrate all of his property to the Bishop, and then receive an inheritance as stewardship back again from the Bishop; but the surplus, or that which he consecrated unto the poor and for the general use of the church, he can not receive again from the church. This view of the law we believe to be in harmony with the teachings of section 72: 3: "For according to the law, every man that cometh up to Zion, must lay all things before the Bishop in Zion." Section 51: 1, 2, teaches the necessity of being organized according to the law, or else they will be cut off; under which law the Bishop is to "appoint unto the people their portion, every man equal according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants, and needs." The Bishop being required, when making his apportionment to a man, to "give unto him a writing that shall secure unto him his portion, that he shall hold it, even this right and this inheritance in the church;" and this right he holds whether he remains in the church or not. But if he has consecrated a surplus, or a gift to the church, that he can not recover, or reclaim from the church, "but shall only have claim on that portion which is deeded unto him. And thus all things shall be made sure according to the laws of the land." "And let every man deal honestly, and be alike among this people, and receive alike, that ye may be one, even as I have commanded you."

The instructions of Joseph Smith to Bishop Partridge on this matter are perfectly in accord with the idea of consecrating all of our property to the Bishop, and then receiving a portion as our inheritance or stewardship; and he also emphatically teaches that "a man is bound by the law of the church, to consecrate to the Bishop, before he can be considered a legal heir to the kingdom of Zion."-Mill. Star, vol.

14. p. 450. In speaking of stewardships the Lord says; "none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God;" and declares further, that "in your temporal things you shall be equal." Section 70:3. Joseph the Martyr wrote to W. W. Phelps in 1832—"It is contrary to the will and commandment of God, that those who receive not their inheritance by consecration, agreeably to his law, which he has given, that he may tithe his people to prepare them against the day of vengeance and burning, should have their names enrolled with the people of God; neither is their genealogy to be kept, or to be had where it may be found on any of the records or history of the church." (See Concordance to Doctrine and Covenants, page 16). In section 77: 1 we read, "The time has come, and is now at hand; and behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people both in this place [Kirtland] and in the land of Zion, or in other words, the city of Enoch, for a permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my church, to advance the cause which ye have espoused, to the salvation of man and to the glory of your Father who is in heaven, that you may be equal in the bonds of heavenly things; yea, and earthly things also, for the obtaining of heavenly things; for if ye are not equal in earthly things ye can not be equal in obtaining heavenly things; for if you will that I give you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you." The parable of the twelve sons in section 38:5,6, teaches the doctrine of equality. The instructions to the Elders of the church in an early day were that "ye shall see that my law is kept."—section 41:2. A revelation given in Zion, August, 1831, says: "For verily I say unto you, my law shall be kept on this land."—Section 58:4.

In the order of things as commanded to be established in section 81, they were to bind themselves by a covenant according to the laws of the Lord, and they were to have "equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of their stewartship, every man according to his wants, and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just." They were to seek the interest of their neighbor, and do all things with an eye single to the glory of God. The order appointed was to be an everlasting order, and the soul that sinned against the covenant made was to be dealt with according to the laws of the church and was to be delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption.

In section 101: 1, 2, the Lord in speaking of those who had broken the covenant of the order he had established as an everlasting order for the benefit of the church, says—"I have cursed them with a sore and grievous curse; for I, the Lord, have decreed in my heart, that inasmuch as any man belonging to the order shall be found a transgressor; or in other words, shall break the covenant with which ye are bound, he shall be cursed in his life, and shall be trodden down by whom I will, for I the Lord am not to be mocked in these things: * * * ye can not escape my wrath in your lives; inasmuch as ye are cut off by transgression, ye can not escape the buffetings of Satan until the day of re-demption." Then after giving some further instruction on the subject he says-"I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handy work; and all things therein are mine; and it is my purpose to provide for my Saints, for all things are mine; but it must needs be done in mine own way; and behold this is my way, that I, the Lord, have decreed to provide for my Saints; that the poor are exalted, in that the rich are made low; for the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare; yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. Therefore, it any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor and needy, he shall with the wicked lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment."

In the last two sections quoted from, the teachings are very emphatic, that those who will break the covenant and deed, or bond, which the commandments of God as contained in Doctrine and Covenants required the Saints to enter into, would come under the penalty of being delivered over to the buffetings of Satan. And those who had an abundance, and would not impart of their portion according to the law of the gospel, would with the wicked lift up their eyes in hell.

Just what the nature of the penalty of being delivered over to the buffetings of Satan is we are not informed, but possibly it may be that Annanias and Sapphira suffered that penalty, inasmuch as they broke a covenant of a similar nature.

The most of the revelations above quoted were given to the church before September, 1832, and in September, 1832, the Lord complains that the church had treated lightly the things which had been given unto them, and were all under condemnation, and should so remain until they repented and remembered the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which he had given them, not only to say but to do according to that which was written, and unless they did repent there remained for them scourges and judgments to be poured out upon the children of Zion, for they would not be allowed to pollute the Holy land, or the land that was to be sanctified and made holy by the observance of God's laws. (See sections 83:8; 106:2). Zion could only escape the judgments of God by observing to do all things whatsoever the Lord had commanded her. (Section 94:5). The promises of God are upon conditions as he himself declares; "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say; but when ye do not do what I say, ye have no promise." Section

After the troubles of the Saints in Jackson county, Missouri, the Lord in June, 1834, tells them to gather as much as consistently can be with the feelings of the people, and purchase the lands that can be purchased in Jackson county, and the adjoining counties, and says that it is his will that they should afterwards possess them according to the laws of consecration which had been given to them. Section 102: 7, 8. And in paragraph ten it is said, "Let those commandments which I have given concerning Zion and her law be executed and fulfilled after her redemption." This latter quotation, we hold, suspended the execution of certain laws and commandments relating to the government of Zion when Zion is observing all the laws given to her—until certain other things are first accomplished, viz., the redemption of Zion. Query: Are those things yet accomplished? If not, then certain laws and commandments are not in force, neither will be until the other things are first accomplished.

It is the writer's opinion that the law relating to and governing the property interests of the church as taught in the commandments and revelations which have been quoted and referred to in this article are not now in force, inasmuch as all the evidence produced already, as well as some yet to be produced, points to the fact that there must be an organization in accordance with the requirements of that which can not be carried out only in a gathered state of the church, and the law was only designed to be executed and fulfilled in

Zion and her stakes, as is clearly shown in section 106: 2, which says, "Verily I say unto you, it shall come to pass that all those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you. And I say unto you, if my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy, behold, verily I say unto you, it shall not be a land of Zion unto you; and this shall be an ensample unto all the stakes of Zion. Even so. Amen." The first paragraph of the above section says the law of tithing therein set forth, "shall be a standing law We also hold that the organization of the church under the law which was to be "executed and fulfilled after Zion's redemption" includes the inheriting and possessing of the lands, or real estate, of the land of Zion. See sections 38:4; 45:12; 48:2; and also section 102:8, where the Saints were told to "fulfill that which had been commanded concerning the purchasing of all the lands in Jackson county that can be purchased, and in the adjoining counties round about; for it is my will that these lands should be purchased, and after they are purchased, that my Saints should possess them according to the laws of consecration which I have given.'

The Bishop is to be a "Judge in Israel like as it was in ancient days, to divide the lands of the heritage of God unto his children, and to judge his people by the testimony of the just, and by the assistance of his counsellors, according to the laws of the kingdom which are given by the prophets of God; for verily I say unto you, my law shall be kept on this land." (The land of Zion where the revelation was given) section 58: 4.

In perfect harmony with the above, the Spirit testified to J. W. Briggs in 1851, that "the Lord had not cast off his people, nor changed in regard to Zion;" that his people should be "redeemed" and his "law shall be kept which he revealed to Joseph Smith;" that the "pure in heart" should "gather, and Zion shall be re-inhabited." (See Life of Joseph the Prophet, page Inasmuch then as Zion is not yet fully redeemed, as commanded in section 98: 9, 10, and the law is not to be executed until after Zion's redemption, we believe it is the duty of the church now to carry out the instructions given in a revelatiom of March 1st, 1873, which says—"It is not expedient in me that there shall be any stakes appointed until I command my people. When it shall be necessary I will command that they be established. Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about and the counsel of the Elders of my church, guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me. (See Life of Joseph the Prophet, page 716).

This revelation tacitly admits the validity and force of the commandments in the Doctrine and Covenants relating to the gathering, and undoubtedly makes binding on the church new all the commandments relating to the gathering of the Saints and purchasing the lands in Jackson county, Missouri, and the adjoining counties. And those commandments with the counsel of the Elders in harmony therewith, (and not the doing of them away as of no force), is to be the guide for the church until it shall be otherwise given. And no doubt just as soon as Zion is redeemed and the Saints are prepared, the commandment will be given to organize according to the law which has been given, and which was to be "executed and fulfilled after Zion's redemption." "For Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom."—Doc. and Cov. 102: 2.

And without any doubt, when the church arrives to that point where she will be keeping all of the commandments of God which were given for her "guide and instruction" in the Doctrine and Covenants, which Joseph Smith said contained the "laws and regulations" for the church, if the brother from Mississippi, or any one else who might be in possession of property, was to ask the church what they must do to inherit eternal life, the answer would be similar to that which Christ gave to the individual in Mark 10: 21. And that answer would certainly harmonize with the doctrines and principles which I have shown to be contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, which is the source referred to by Joseph Smith for those who wanted information on a similar subject.

It is evident from what is written on this subject that all must observe these commandments—when once the church has arrived at that state that it can be fully observed—or else they will certainly come under condemnation and must suffer the consequences of disobedience to the commandments of God. It is also evident that in entering into this order of things, men must do so by covenant and a deed which can not be broken-one that will stand the test of the laws of the land. And all who receive an inheritance in Zion, or any of her stakes, under this law, will have the same deeded unto them by the Bishop, so they can hold the same whether they remain in the church or not; "and thus all things shall be made sure according according to the laws of the land." Section 51: 1. And under that law, women shall hold the right to the inheritances of their deceased husband's, even if disfellowshiped from the church. And childrenwhose parents belong to the churchwhen they became of age, have a claim on the church for an inheritance if their parents have not wherewith to give them in-Thus it would heritance. Section 82. seem in the light of the teachings of Doctrine and Covenants, that simply "a certificate from the Bishop" stating a person had been thithed, as taught on first page of the Herald for January 17th, 1885, falls short of the requirements of the law. * And we further learn from the instructions of Joseph Smith to Bishop Partridge, that if so be that the individual who desired to comply with the law of tithing, and the Bishop who was to execute that law, could not agree as to what was to remain in the hand of the Bishop—as the surplus of the one who was tithing himself—and what he was to receive back from the Bishop—as his stewardship or inheritance—that instead of the "Bishop going his way and leaving the matter as it was before" as taught in the Herald above mentioned, the matter was to be "laid before a council of twelve High Priests; the Bishop not being one of the council, but is to lay the case before them," instead of having nothing more to do with it.

As an advocate of the "faith once delivered" to the Latter-Day-Saints I submit the above to the consideration of all who desire to investigate the subject herein presented; ever praying that God's law may be honored by all of his children.

Joseph Flory.

MOUND CITY. Mo., Feb. 1st, 1885.

Note.—*Bro. Flory it appears does not fully comprehend the scope of what was said on page 33 of Herald, January 17th, 1885. The point made there was, that the "certificate" of the Bishop must be the evidence that the party had complied with the law; and it would not matter whether that certificate was obtained without or with the aid of "a council of twelve High Priests." In any case the Bishop, though aided by others, was, is, and must be the officer to administer the law alluded to, and his "certificate" is official evidence in the premises.—Ed.

LETTER FROM HIRAM HOLT.

To the Saints of California:—Having discovered that I have made too many promises, to fulfill as made, I will avail myself of the columns of the Herald to give such information as I think will benefit its readers.

I found the excursion train, which is running monthly from Boston to Los Angeles, by what is known out there as the Boston Company, a very desirable way of traveling, running through from Los Angeles to Kansas City, changing cars but once. After seven days of weary travel I arrived just at dusk at the town of Independence, in time to hear Bro. Joseph preach one of his sermons. I soon found I was among friends—Saints are Saints the world over. The town of Independence is some nine miles from Kansas City, which is a large and flourishing city, building up very rapidly. The town of Independence is beautifully situated, and can be made one of the finest looking cities in the west. Land is quite high in and around the town; but at a distance of two or three miles can be got reasonable—from $30 to $50 per acre. The land is good, a rich black loam, capable of producing large crops of hay, oats, corn, and sometimes of wheat. Corn never fails. The land is adapted to almost every thing. Fruits do well, with the exception of peaches, oranges and tropical fruits. Apples are very much better than in California. Stewartsville is, in my opinion, the most favorable place to locate at. Land is cheaper, and just as good as at Independence. There are three branches—two which I visalted. I was made glad to there meet sevo eral of the California Saints, who when coming here, brought their first faith with them, and are bravely trying to keep it. God help them to do so. To the earnest worker it is a trying hour. Saints coming to this country must not think they are leaving the missionary field, and going home to rest. That time may come, but it is not yet; it needs strong and abiding faith, to abide here, as elsewhere; but there are pleasures here that are not obtained away from here. The Saints are steadily gathering in, preparing the way before them; and as a rule are well satisfied; but others are not. A spirit of immigration seems to be upon all but Saints. The talk is "west, west." California is destined to be filled as long as there is standing room. There is an immense tide of emigration setting that way.

I visited the notable Temple Lot. As I stood and gazed upon it, my mind was filled with the past; of the fond hope that was still clinging to this sacred spot; of the trials and sorrows the people had borne, who still look upon this fond relic of the past, with an earnest desire that God's power may soon o'ershadow it, and his loved ones behold it. I felt like uttering the cry of the Jews: "How long, O Lord, how long." It is the finest block in the city; is said to be the highest piece of land east of the Rocky Mountains. Another singular thing connected with it is, that it is supposed to be about the center of the continent. These two facts, if facts they are, could not have been known at the time by those who located the Temple lot, but have been subsequently ascertained. Our people have the confidence of the business men; it is not surprising that they should; but some suppose that here where such fierce persecution once assailed the Saints, it would be hard to gain the confidence of the people. But an honest, upright walk, will soon be recognized among business men, no matter what their religious views may be. The men they respect are those who pay their bills.

In Stewartsville I was made glad, while standing in a shop, talking to the proprietor. A man came in and asked for a former owner, stating that he owed him a bill, which was to be paid by the shop; asked if it would be paid. The answer came quick and ready: "Yes; his name is good here as one dollar is for another." While the Saints live in that relationship to each other, they have little to fear. I was highly pleased with the conference proceedings. I feel justly proud of my brethren. Conference is not a good place to judge of a man's ability as a speaker. It is a very hard and trying place for the experienced Elders to speak, and a good place for the young ones to fledge out. They have the advantage over the "able Elders," in not having a reputation to maintain. There was a deep earnestness that prevailed in the sessions; an earnest desire to do right; and a manifest determination upon the part of nearly all, that the principle of right must be held inviolate. That desire is so strongly manifested, that some supposed the Elders were quarreling on warmly and ably debated questions. I am convinced, from closely watching the proceedings, that few argued but from convictions of right. And so it should be: let right be the standard. I was pleased to see that each man stood for what he thought was right, no matter what another thought. There was no lobbying there. One sees many things of an encouraging nature at General Conference. I am at present on my way to my field of labor; have spent some pleasant seasons with the Saints in these parts, for which I feel to thank them, and pray that God will bless them, and hasten the day when his people may gather home.

HIRAM L. HOLT.

SABBATH BREAKING AND DANCING.

It is with pain that I see these two evils are gaining entrance into the minds of some of the members of the Church of Christ, and leading them astray, so that even the world is pointing to us with scorn and derision; because we are not living up to the rules of our church. In D. & C. page 98, par. 24, we read,—"Any member of the Church of Christ transgressing, or being overtaken in a fault, shall be dealt with as the Bible directs." Our attention has often been called by outsiders to some of our officers and members by having them say, Look at that man, he is an officer in your church and teaches your people, and yet he is constantly breaking the Sabbath day and doing worse than those that make no profession; for some in your church I notice do a great deal of unneccessary work on the Sabbath, just for the sake of making money and satisfying their own carnal desires. If they are God's people I do not wish to be counted among them.

My dear friends, by reading the Bible, we find that neither God nor Christ did countenance any such evil doings. And if those that call themselves "Latter Day Saints" are indulging in such sins they are not living up to the rules laid down in the Bible or Doctrine and Covenants, and I claim the officers ought to labor with such and show them where they stand.

Turn with me to Luke, 23:56 and read the following-"And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested on the Sabbath day, according to the commandment." What is that commandment? Ex. 20:10. "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work: But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shall not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates: For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested on the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the seventh day and hallowed it." Here we see that God gave a law to the Jewish people, and set apart a day for his worship, and that time he claims for his own; and when they violated that law they had to pay the pen-We have a law given to us in these latter days that is just as binding on us as the law of Moses was to the Jews

Doc. & Cov. page 181, par. 2, we find the following—"And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righte-ousness on all days, and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments, unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, before the Lord. And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words, that thy joy may be full. Verily this is fasting and prayer; or in other words, rejoicing and prayer."

We as Saints of God can plainly see that this is a very strict command; for we are to do no kind of labor on the Sabbath day that it is possible not to do; so when we see any of our members breaking the Sabbath day we find they are robbing the Lord of his time; for he requires us to give him a portion of time to his worship. When members, for the sake of saving time, and for gain, make bargains and do manual labor on the Sabbath, they disobey the law of God, and injure themselves and the cause; for it is through covetousness and mercenary principles that they do so; and if it is allowed in branches, those branches will never prosper; for they are resting under condemnation. D. & C. page 181, par. 5, says—"And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his com-mandments. * * But learn that he who doeth the works of righteousness, shall receive his reward, even peace in this world, and eternal life in the world to come." Some may say, According to your views it will be wrong to do that which is even neccessary. No; I do not think I have made any such remark; for the Bible does not teach that at all; it is only work that is done to save time, money, and unnecessary work that I speak about. Christ says to do good on the Sabbath day, and help those in distress. We read in Matt. 12:11, the following-"And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out? How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days." We here see that it is lawful to help anything in distress, or to relieve suffering on the Sabbath day.

The other evil I wish to speak about is dancing; which, when allowed, always kills a branch. I have been acquainted with branches that were spiritual and enjoyed the Spirit of God; but after a while dancing entered, and to-day they stand sad monuments to us, the result of disobeying the laws of the church; for they are like the church of the Laodiceans, neither hot or cold: and God will surely spew them out of his mouth as he did them, if they do not repent, and turn from the path they are traveling. To those of our members that uphold dancing in defiance of the officers of the church, I will say that General Conference passed a law in 18- prohibiting dancing; and also I find by reading the Bible that the dances in Bible times were not like the modern dances; for we notice that the mingling of males and females so common in modern dances was unknown to the Jews. Judges, 21:23; 1 Sam. 18:6. One case can be found where the inference may be drawn that the sexes danced together, that is in Ex. 32: 6-19, when the children of Israel went into idolatry and madness, and danced before the molten calf. This dance certainly did not lead them to God, nor did he sanction it; but on the contrary his anger was kindled against

Again we read in Job. 21:11, 14. "They send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance." "Therefore they say unto God, Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways." Again we see that dancing leads the mind from God instead of bringing it to him; and the same can be said of the dances of to-day. How can God be in a ball-room where his name is taken in vain; where there is drinking, gambling, and all worldly vices? We read that God will not dwell in unholy temples. Certainly then he cannot be there. It is said that small beginnings makes great endings. can apply to dancing; for at first it begins with a social dance at a private house, and they still the conscience with the remark there is certainly no harm in that. Satan then commences to weave his web around them; next a ball; next a public ball where liquors are freely passed around; next a game of cards; finally ruin and death. We say to all those of our members that are indulging in dancing, Stop before it is too

Again we read in Mark 6:22, what were the results of a dance. A good looking damsel danced before the king, and while he was heated with wine and the lusts of the flesh, he said, "Ask whatsoever you will and it will be given you." The result was that John the Baptist lost his head, all on account of a dance, by which a harlot gained her desire. Most of the dances in our day, tend to lead the mind to the lust of the flesh; and we as God's people are commanded to keep ourselves pure, and to go on to perfection. If the rules of our church prohibits dancing, we ought to obey them, and not reject the counsel of those in authority over us, as long as they teach the law of God and the church.

A DREAM.

About the 15th of January, 1885, I dreamed that I was on board of a very long She was so long that I could not see the bow, but could see the stern, also the wheelsman or helmsman. There were others standing by him. I stood about midships. This ship had a hurricane deck, but she was open between the upper deck and the main deck. The ship was sailing along all right for some time, and I was looking over the side. I saw a large rock, as it were rise up out of the sea; and all at once the ship was grounded on it, and caused quite an excitement. I heard some say, We will get off with the next tide; and all at once she was affoat, and went ahead again, and struck a point of the same rock with a terrible crash. I said, That rock has gone through her; but if it breaks off and fills the gap, she will not leak. However, she got afloat again, and sailed about as well as ever; but in the excitement she was headed the other way, and made a big circle to head in the right direction; but by this time it became very dark and misty, and when she got headed right, she made for the same rock; and seeing the danger, she became unmanagable, and seemingly would not answer the helm; and instead of striking the side of the rock as before, she entered the middle, and it opened, or divided ahead of her, and as she was getting through by tight squeezing, the mist cleared away, and I could see the land on every side, and it was a terrible place to behold. Ahead was nice, clear water—the deep blue sea—and looked so beautiful; and I heard delightful music; and on looking to the northwest, I saw a large ship on shore on an island getting repaired. She was badly wrecked. I awoke and slept again, and dreamed the same dream three times the same night.

MISSIONARY EXPERIENCE.

DEAR HERALD:-I have been feasting to-day from your pages. (We who live so far from "the table," have to wait four weeks, then have four weeks rations at Was much interested in Bro. W. H. Kelley's account of his trip east. I fairly forgot my whereabouts, so thoroughly did I enter into the spirit of the letter, and of traveling east, and seemed myself to be again at Bro. Webster's, and visiting in the Boston Branch, where we were last spring-and Bro. Lakeman was there also. I shall not forget the kindness shown us by Bro. Webster's wife during our stay of one week. May the Lord continue to bless her till she may see, to her full satisfaction, and be convinced of the truth of the latter day work and rejoice in its blessings, for she has a kind heart.

I have felt since we came here we had got out of the world, on an island, and only heard from the real world once in a while. Every thing is so different from America; (even the moon is upside down). There is world enough all around us, but it is such a different element, and the hurry and bustle, noise and clatter of city life, where one almost forgets there is any higher object in life, than to look out for But we are becoming ones mortal self. quite accustomed to the different way of living, and I guess will like it very well. As yet have made very few acquaintances, and although I seldom have time to be lonesome, I often yearn for the companionship of the dear friends and sisters, over the water, whose friendship was ever true and unfeigned. As soon as we got a little settled here, and the Christmas holidays over, I sallied forth, charts in hand, to see what prospect there was for making a fortune in Sydney; did not succeed in making a single sale, so I have opened a dress making shop. The place we rented was well calculated for the busiuess—one room down stairs with two large windows, and opens right out on the street, so the people passing can see the System in the window, and read the notice hanging against the window. And just above is a large sign that can be read from the Train Station—New York Eclipse dress cutting system. I must say I had many doubts and fears as to whether I should succeed or spoil the people's dresses, and have them leave in disgust. I knew my cutting and fitting could not fail to give satisfaction; but the rest I should have to learn as I went on. And again, I feared to take the money that the Saints had given for our support, to fit up the room, lest I should not be able to replace it. While I was turning the subject in my mind one evening, all the difficulties suddenly cleared away, and I had a full assurance to go ahead, and all would be right. So next morning we all three set to work in earnest to get the sign painted, a cutting table made, the room carpeted, and a large mirror hung. Then it was plain I could not make dresses without a sewing machine, and equally as plain that I could not buy a sewing machine unless I made dresses to pay for it. We got out of this dilemma by deciding to do both at once. Joseph went to the company and found he could get one by paying ten shillings down, and two shillings and sixpence per week till it was paid for. Then, as soon as the first dress was ordered, the machine was ordered also.

Since then I have been steadily at work from eight o'clock in the morning till ten at night, and both earlier and later when occasion requires, with the exception of two holidays and the time I take to write. As yet I have not allowed myself even an hour's nooning. There is always so much work on hand that I am in a hurry to get done. Through observation, patience, and perseverance, accompanied with a due portion of fatigue and weariness, I have succeeded very well, and have gained quite a reputation as a dress maker. But I miss the buoyant, life giving influence of the out-door air that I have been so accustomed to for a few years past. I was beginning to congratulate myself as doing very well indeed, till I read Sr. Hellen's letter in the Hope, of her labor of love, since then I have felt uncertain as to whether I was on the right track, as my labor was simply for money.

Perhaps the position I have taken is not in true keeping with the missionary spirit, or work. But it is most decidedly is, with the demands of the body, and the faint struggles of expiring ambition, and so long as health is given me, I hope not to be burdensome to any for any personal expenses of myself and daughter, and so far have been able to add quits an item towards paying rent, and for groceries; for it costs us very much more to live here, than it did when we were on our own place in California. But the Saints are very kind, and we are getting along nicely. Joseph is now at Wallsend, has been gone a week, will probably stay three weeks We are expecting Bro. and Sr. longer. Smith in about two weeks, if they come on the steamer that is making a trip to the Ta-hi-ti Islands as an experiment. But perhaps, without their knowledge, they are instruments in the hands of the Lord to bring out these missionaries. We will hail their coming with joy. To see some one that we have seen before in this work, will infuse new spiritual life. At present the city and whole country is in great commotion, making speedy preparations for war and self-defense; and it may be that ere this letter reaches its destination the "shells" of the Russian will be dropping in our This is considered to be one of the first places that Russia will attack with her gun-boats. If war is declared, the people here will indeed have cause to be alarmed. I know we are living in the last days, and must expect such calamities; but I do earnestly pray that this may be

The hot weather is over, and for a few weeks it was clear and beautiful as weather could possibly be; but now it is evident that the rainy season has set in, for it is cold, cloudy, foggy, and rainy, accompanied to-day with a very high wind. There has been the most terrible thunder and lightning here that I ever witnessed.

CREATION OF THE WORLD.

HOW ITS HISTORY READS IN THE REVISED VERSION.

FULL TEXT OF THE NEW FIRST CHAPTER OF GENESIS RECEIVED BY CABLE.

CHANCE FOR STUDENTS TO MAKE COMPARISONS.

THE following is the first chapter of Genesis, according to the revised version. The notation of the verses follow that of the authorized version for the sake of comparison, though the new version will be printed in paragraphs with the verse numbers in the margin:—

- 4. And God saw the light that it was good; and God divided the light from the darkness.

5. And God called the light day, and the darkness he called night. And there was evening and there was morning, one day.

6. And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

8. And God called the firmament heaven; and there was evening and there was morning, a second day.

9. And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear; and it

15. And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth; and it was so.

16. And God made the two great lights; the greater light to rule the day and the lesser light to rule the night; he made the stars also.

17. And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth,

18. And to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

20. And God said, Let the water bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and let fowl fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven.

21. And God created the great sea monsters, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly, after their kinds, and every winged fowl after its kind: and God saw that it was good.

in the earth.

23. And there was evening and there was morning, a fifth day.

24. And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after its kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after its kind: and it was so.

27. And God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.

29. And God said, Behold I have given you every herb yielding seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat.

CHANGES IN JOB AND THE PSALMS.

Authorized—Job xviii., 4: "The blood that breaketh out from the inhabitant; even the waters forgotten of the foot, they are dried up, they are gone away from men." Revised—"He breaketh open a shaft; away from where men sojourn they are forgotten of the foot that passeth by, they hang afar from men, they swing to and from."

Authorized—Job xxxi., 35: "Behold, my desire is that the Almighty would answer me." Revised—"Lo, here is my sign above, let the Almighty answer me."

Authorized—Job xxxvi., 18: "Beware lest he take thee away from his stroke." Revised—"Beware lest thou be led away with thy sufficiency."

Authorized—Psalm xii., 5: "I will set him in safety from him that puffeth at him." Revised—"I will set him in safety at whom they mock."

Authorized—Psalm lxviii., 4: "Extol him that rideth upon the heavens." Revised—"Cast up a highway for him that rideth through the deserts.'

Authorized—Psalm lxviii., 19: "Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with Revised—"Blessed be the benefits." Lord, who daily beareth our burdens.

Authorized—Psalm Ixviii., 30—"Rebuke the company of spearsmen." Revised—"Rebuke the wild beasts of the reeds."

Authorized—Psalm lxxxii., 7: "As well the singers as the players on instruments shall be there. All my springs are in Thee." Revised—"As well the singers as they that dance say all my fountains are in Authorized—Psalm cxli., 5: "And let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil which shall not break my head." Revised—"And let him reprove me; it shall be oil upon my head; let not my head refuse it."

Authorized—Isaiah ii., verse 4: "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord." vised-"The voice of one that crieth, Prepare ye in the wilderness the way of the Lord."

Psalm ii., 12, "Kiss the son" remains, and references to entirely different versions are given in the margin. Similarly in Genesis xix., 10, "Until Shiloh come" is kept, but "Till he came to Shiloh" is noted as an alternative.

In all these cases, as in many others, there seems to have been a strong minority among the revisers which held out for the alternative readings, and they succeeded in putting it in the margin, which contains of the scholarship of the revision. The first verse of Genesis in both authorized and revised versions is the same. The first alteration occurs in the second verse, where instead of "and the earth was without form and void," we read, "and the earth was waste and void." The text of the story of the creation is without other striking variations. The same may be said of the description of the fall and the flood.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD.

"LOVE not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."—I John 2: 15.

This is the language of the inspired apostle, and it is true to the present day. Our own opinions upon this important subject are worthless unless they are in perfect harmony with the teachings of the Therefore, we stand upon the Bible platform, and advocate the principles of our holy Christianity and the claims of the church.

It is a fact admitted by all and recorded in the Bible that the world will love its own. John 15: 19. We do not wonder at this, because it is natural for the minds of the unconverted to seek for happiness in the things of the world. It is our business as Christians to point out to them the excellency of the experimental knowledge of salvation, and its superiority above everything of a worldly character as a source of happiness. But alas! when we tell them we love their souls, and ask them to seek Christ and his righteousness, (which is a satisfying portion to the soul), they point out to us our numerous imperfections, and remind us of the members of our churches are going hand in hand with them in their worldly amusements and sins, contrary to the Bible and our church discipline. there no one in all churches, not even the ministers, to "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgression and the house of Jacob their sins," (Isaiah 58: 1), in these days of church festivities, shows, theaters, and last, though not least, skating rinks with prize drawings, etc., connected with them, and worse than all, conducted by church members!

"Whosoever, therefore, will be the friend of the world is the enemy of God." James 4:4. In the name of our blessed Lord, and of the fathers and founders of our beloved church, for love of the Bible, which has come down to us through the ages of the past over the blood of martyrs, and for the love we have for our children and their future welfare for time and eternity, let us be true to God and obey the commands of the Bible, and "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."—Eph. 5: We can transact business with the world in our daily avocations and be honest and upright, and work with our heads and hands and make money, and this is right, so long as we obey God and use it for his glory. "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."-Rom.

Christianity is intended to elevate the mind, and impart joy and substantial happiness to all who possess salvation, and it does undoubtedly accomplish its design with those who make no compromise with sin. But those who leave it and go back to the world for its gains and pleasures, make a sad mistake. Thousands have been taken by this snare, and have made shipwreck of faith and have gone down in the vortex of eternal night and banishment from the presence of God. Oh! who can estimate the value of one immortal soul? What a fearful responsibility rests upon us as church members for the faithful performance of our vows to God and the church, while hundreds are witnessing our daily walk and conversation, who, perhaps, estimate the value of Christianity by our example. Oh may our example be according to our profession, and such as will lead others to accept the great truths of the Bible and embrace Christianity and obtain eternal life.

Brash.—Sr. Isabella Brash, May 13th, 1885. She was born in Glasgow, Lanarkshire, Scotland, January 23d, 1827. She embraced the faith in her early days, and had a strong testimony of the restored gospel through Joseph Smith. She united with the Reorganized Church in Brooklyn, April 2d, 1871, and remained firm in the faith up to her death, and died in the hope of a glorious resurrec-

Johnson.—March 8th, 1885, at his home in Deerfield, Lapeer county, Michigan, of consumption, Bro. Lewis Johnson, aged between 75 and 80 years; was baptized and confirmed by Joseph Snively at St. Clair, Michigan, and united with the St. Clair Branch, September 23d, 1873. Bro. Johnson left a bright evidence behind him to cheer his companion and friends that are left to mourn his loss. Funeral service by Elder James A. Carpenter.

DAVIES .- At his residence, Green Meadows, Los Angeles county, California, May 10th, 1885, of spinal meningitis, David Davies, aged 46 years, 11 months and 15 days. He joined the church in the early reorganization, and was a firm believer to the last, and is now at rest, on the mystic shore beyond the river of death. Funeral services were conducted by Elder J. R. Badham.

EMSLEY.—At Wisner, Nebraska, May 22d, 1885, at four o'clock a. m., of cancer in the breast, Sr. Mary M. Emsley. Deceased was in her 68th year and the mother of fourteen children, eleven of whom are now living and rank among the best citizens. She was beloved by all who knew her, and was often cited as a model of piety and Christian excellence. Her husband, by whose side she had walked for forty-four years and eight months, deeply mourns her loss. Seemingly it is a sad blow to the bereft family; but in the kind providence of God we trust all has been ordered for the best. Services were held in the Congregational Church, which was kindly proffered by pastor and members of that body. Much credit is due the citizens of Wisner for their assistance rendered in time of distress and in the trying ordeal of death and interment. The Congregational minister, Mr. Hall, was very kind, taking charge of the services at the church and at the grave by our request. Appropriate music was furnished by the choir. The congregation was large, attentive, and sympathetic. An additional courtesy was manifest in the gratuitous offer of the Methodist Church in which to hold the services. We believe our sister is in the Paradise of God. Her life of good works is a guarantee of rest and peace to her wearied soul now. Funeral sermon by Elder Geo. S. Hyde.

WHITCOMB.—Zenas Whitcomb died May 3d, 1885, at Red Oak, Iowa, aged 74 years, 5 months and 2 days. He was born in Canada East, and came to this country at an early day. He had been an invalid for about seven years. His last hours were peaceful and happy, and full of hope of the better land. He was for forty years a member of the Church of Latter Day Saints, and in his life he was a consistant Christian man. The funeral services were held at the residence of Geo. Erwin, of Emerson, Rev. Gilman Parker, of the Baptist Church, preaching the funeral sermon, when his mortal remains were laid to rest in the Emerson cemetery.

Bro. Whitcomb and his family were among the very first in Boone county, Illinois, to unite with the Reorganized Church. The deceased, though not a preacher, was an active and efficient helper in the church from 1859 till he became infirm. The writer remembers with joy those early and trying times when the church numbered but a few score, when brother Whitcomb and family were among its chief supporters in many ways. God is not unmindful of the labors of love manifested by his faithful ones, and will reward his children according as their works shall be.

WALTERS .- Near Decatur, Burt county, Nebraska, May the 12th, 1885, of diphtheria, Alice L., daughter of G.W. and I.L. Walters, aged 3 years and 11 months. She was taken ill very suddenly and survived only five days. She had great faith, and often said: "Mamma, pray to the Lord to make me well." But the Lord knew what was best; he took her to himself. This is the third time we have been bereft of a daughter. May the Lord help us so to live that we may join them in that land where none are dying, where no broken hearts are sighing. —Ida Walters.

CLINGBACK.—At his residence, near Emmettsville, Ada county, Idaho, April 1st, 1885, Bro. John F. Clingback, aged 69 years, 9 months and 24 days. He united with the Church in 1869, and remained firm in the faith till death.

The Saints' Perald.

Joseph Smith W. W. Blair - - - Editor.
Associate Editor.

Lamoni, Iowa, June 13, 1885.

It is a very difficult thing for us to answer to every Latter Day Saint in theory, in a way fully satisfactory to them. One reason whyit is difficult is that we can not answer in the way others have done. That we have lost somewhat in the estimation of these to whom we have not so answered we admit; because when weighed in their scales or measured by their standards, we shall always be found wanting. Whether those standards and scales are correct, or incorrect, we neither affirm nor deny; as both must await final decision elsewhere, and further on in the conflict.

Some time since some one wrote us: "or are we to go by the books, as are the sectarian churches."

The commandment of God to the church was, and is, "and this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them."

One evidence to which we now point with a degree of pleasure, and which we believe should be of force and value to any and all Saints, or would be Saints, who regard the word of God, is the persistent endeavor to remember the words of the revelation above quoted, and to regard the former commandments, which had been given to the church.

Some of the "revelation" by which many of the Saints have been led since the death of Joseph Smith, the martyr, has been of this doubtful character, that it controverted the words above quoted, and also disregarded the Scripture. For this reason, if for no other, those who have given credence to that "revelation," and been led by it, do not receive the message that we bear; because we prefer to accept the words of God contained in the books.

We fail to answer those who may favor the plural-wife system as they desire; because we have not changed our opinions upon that doctrine, nor shall not so change, until we are able and willing to forget the "former commandments," and the "Book of Mormon."

For somewhat similar reasons we shall not be able to answer to many, who advance and hold various theories touching the work, and the doctrine as they desire; because to do so involves our partial abandonment of "what is written;" if not a denial of it. This we are not willing to do for several reasons, of which we name two. The first is we see no real reason for abandoning; nothing better having been offered to us. The second is that we regard such a measure as extremely dangerous; for to us an abandonment of any portion of Scripture, hitherto acknowledged by the church, and by the elders for the church, is a practical denial of the whole series of revelation, and to discredit the principle of direct revelation which we have so long and so earnestly believed, presented, advocated, and defended.

To them who are in the fold we can say, Be of good courage, hold fast to the "rod of iron," the word of God, that which is written, therein has been the hope of our organization and the secret of our success

We shall not be able to answer to many a scattered sheep whose voice attuned to mournful accents is heard now and again in pleading for the fold, while that sheep persists in turning his head away from the shepherd's call; because the shepherd tells him to lay aside his idols, to leave the green hills of forbidden pasture and to feed in the valley of repentance and lowly humility.

Speaking of a knowledge of the true fold one writes; "Can you, will you, give to me this all important knowledge."

We can to this only reply, in the words of one more patient that we are, "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." Or, in the language of the Apostle, "I have planted, Apollos watered; but God giveth the increase."

Many of these men claim that they can present what they believe to be correct in so plain and forcible a manner that "any unprejudiced mind must believe and accept." Our failure to believe and accept is by them attributed to our prejudice. It is possible that this is partially true; but are they "free from prejudice." Are not their convictions and conclusions as likely to be the result of their prejudice as are ours, or those of others than themselves.

We have no power to produce knowledge in the heart, nor belief in the mind of very many who feel and say as do these writers referred to. All we can do is to set before them what are to us good reasons for our belief and hope, leaving the result to the exercise of their own judgment in accepting, or rejecting; or to the convincing power of the Spirit, as he who controls all things may choose to direct or withhold.

We think that our twenty-five years of labor have not been barren of fruit. We believe that we have given assurance to the thoughtful and the believing, that we have earnestly believed and sincerely endeavored to teach the revelations of God. Nor shall we depart from our devotion to what we believe to be honest and right principles of action, to grasp after the favor of the many, or by so failing to depart deprecate the wrath of the few. Let come what may we shall stand by what is written; until we see better cause to change than has as yet been presented to us.

There are some, thank God not so many as formerly, who in their strange wanderings, are aptly represented by the poor Indian astray in the streets of the crowded city, who when asked if he were lost struck himself proudly on the breast and said; "No, Indian not lost, Indian here, wigwam lost." These scattered sheep solace themselves in a similar way. The shepherd is lost, the fold is lost, but the sheep are here.

We would gladly go to the help of these scattered sheep; but to go to many of them, would be to meet the flat assertion, "If you do not indorse this doctrine which I believe, I will not hearken to you." Not being as yet prepared to do this, and not expecting to bear fruit of the sort indicated, we can only cry unto them, "Repent ye, repent, for the kingdom of heaven is nigh, and the hour of God's judgment is come." "Seek for the old paths." "Remember the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the former commandments."

If it be heresy to believe that God does command his people to remember his words formerly spoken; to call upon those who have known the truth as it once was, to know the same truth as it now is; to ask that the scattered sheep do return to their allegiance to God, in fidelity to his word; to think, that he has by his Spirit moved those who loved the truth, and had received his gospel, to gather together for the establishing his righteousness, (the gospel), upon the earth; to believe that he has, out of the few who came forth in response to his call, chosen apostles, prophets, pastors, and teachers, and is giving gifts, helps, governments, and other blessings, then are we an heretic. But if to believe all this, is to be a follower of Christ; to promulgate the gospel, as it is in the "books," is to be a servant of God; to bear a testimony to the mercy of God, is to please him; and to be called to bear the reproach of Christ is to bear the fruit of our calling, we shall continue to trust him that "doeth all things well," for these things shall we do if God permit.

QUITE a controversy has originated at Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, the cause of which may be easily inferred from the following:

"The G. A. R. Post and W. R. C. attended service at the L. D. S. church (Rev. H. C. Bronson, pastor) at 11 a. m. Sunday, where they listened to a very excellent and appropriate memorial sermon from Isaiah 18:3. The church was nicely decorated with flags, mottoes, evergreens and flowers. The music and singing were very good. Our Post is non-political and non-sectarian. We believe we have attended all the churches in town, as a Post, and have invited all the preachers in the place to be present and take part in the exercises on Decoration Day, next Saturday. Rev. C. M. Lombard, (Presbyterian), refuses because of the invitation given to Rev. Bronson. Everybody else will be there."

The same Rev. Lombard took occasion of the absence of Bro. Bronson at Rock Creek, Illinois, to deliver a sermon upon the origin of Mormonism. He was particularly vituperative towards the mother of Joseph Smith, and so managed in his spleen that he hurt the feelings of a number of his own people, thereby injuring himself and his cause, but helping the people against whom his phillipic was directed. Quite a number of the Saints attended at his service and listened to his presentation of their origin and themselves they were instructed if they were not edified.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Some persons send articles to this office on which they fail to pay full postage. This would not call for mention only for the fact that it occurs so often, and to such a degree. Only to-day a letter came on which was paid two cents postage, and there were four cents due. Now, all this may seem a small matter, yet its frequent occurrence annoys, increases the expenses of the office, and no real good arises from it, especially when such letters contain articles which find their place in the wastebasket. To all such parties we say, pay your own postage.

May 23d, Bro. John S. Patterson was at Turner Junction, Illinois, en route to Wisconsin. By card to Bro. I. L. Rogers of the date given we learned that he had been at Cortland, DeKalb county, Illinois, for a week, having the use of a large hall there free. He had made use of the time; and the effort was favorably received. Bro. Patterson was to be at Lyons, Walworth county, Wisconsin, the next day after he wrote—but for how long card did not state.

Bro. Joseph C. Clapp was at Reese Creek, Montana, May 28th. He had preached six times at Willow Creek the week before. Had spoken sixteen times at Reese Creek and was to speak on Saturday evening following his letter, and three times on Sunday, one of the Sunday services to be a temperance lecture.

We are informed by Bro. E. L. Kelley that the second edition of the Braden-Kelley Debate is out and ready for sale. All who may desire this work can be supplied on application to the office, or to E. L. Kelley, Kirtland, Ohio. The work on the Book of Mormon promised last year is also about ready, as Bro. Kelley informs us.

Letters from M. R. Scott of Galena, Indiana, June 1st, and S. Rector of Wirt, Indiana, give us to understand that there is no one laboring in that district now, Bro. Harbert Scott not being able to longer continue as their president of district. Bro. Rector states that Bro. I. P. Baggerly, has been at work there all winter and has done a good work; baptized two at Wirt, and opened a new point; but returned to his home in Missouri. Bro. Rector was of the opinion that some one ought to be sent to the district to labor at once. So it is every where almost, plenty of openings for preaching but too few preachers.

Bro. J. B. Wasson writes us from Memphis, Tennessee, where he is located, May 20th, 1885. He thinks some sort of effort should be made to enlighten that large city—but how? is the question with him. May he be sustained will be the prayer of every Saint.

Brethren H. P. Brown and William Anderson of Oakland, California, both write respecting the work on the coast. Not much labor is reported, yet many doing the best they can. Bro. Brown thinks that the meetings in Oakland are rather better attended of late. Bro. Anderson feels like doing something more in the field before being called away.

Bro. D. S. Crawley was to go to Fanning, Kansas, where it is reported Rev. Williamson, of the Christian Church is "spoiling" for a discussion.

Bro. A. H. Smith, and Bro. Joseph Luff, were about ready to get out into the field when Bro. Crawley wrote.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser has left Independence, Missouri, for his field of labor.

Letter from Bro. H. R. Wallace, Chicago, containing a vision, or dream; necessity compels us to leave it out of our colums, there is so much offered us some must needs be omitted.

Who will sell or loan us the 16th volume of the Millenial Star? Please let us hear at once, that we may make due arrangements for it. Address Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

Below we give another version of the Spaulding Story. It is very extraordinary that that wonderful production, the Spaulding Romance, should be so restless and uneasy; it appears in a thousand shapes; this is the last one we have seen, and it looks terribly out of shape. The St. Louis Republican in which it appeared Friday, May 29th, 1885, justly concludes that the statement that the Book of Mormon was made from such a source is a matter of "inference." What next; Solomon Spaulding will soon have more vocations than the fabled "nine lives of a cat."

THE MORMON BIBLE.

The venerable Col. Wm. H. Leffingwell, accompanied by an old Mormon friend from Utah, was met by a Republican reporter yesterday afternoon on Olive street. The colonel's friend remarked to the reporter: "Did you know that Leffingwell corrected the manuscript of the Mormon Bible alleged to have been written by Rev. Solomon Spaulding?"

This was something like a new revelation, and on Col. Leffingwell stating that is was a fact, and as all the parties knowing the circumstances are now dead, except Mr. Leffingwell, he was asked to add to the truth of history by telling what he knew about the origin of the Mormon bible. The colonel readily consented, but his Mormon friend, observing his readiness to do so, walked on and beckoned to the colonel to come along, evidently objecting to having the story told for publication. Col. Leffingwell commenced by saying: "Long ago in the past, I have forgotten the year, Mr. Spaulding wrote a drama called 'The Book of Mormon,' in a hotel at Conneaut, Ashtabula county, O., where I had been teaching school. I was known through the country as a good grammarian and possessing an accurate knowledge of the English language. My father had been principal of the Meadville school at Meadville, Pa., for eight years, a position which I subsequently filled on my father retiring to a farm. Mr. Spaulding was a lawyer by profession and had taught school. He had never been a reverend, as some accounts give that prefix to his name. He was about thirty-five years of age when I first fell in with him, was very poor and sick with consumption, and towards the last nearly lost his voice so that he could not plead at the bar. He said he wanted to make some money, and wrote the drama, which he handed me for correction. It was full of Bible expressions, and as I had read the Bible from lid to lid I knew the proper phraseology to use. I corrected the grammar, and had to reconstruct and transpose entrees to make good English out of it. I was engaged three months, and my notes and pencil marks may be found on every page.

NEVER PAID FOR IT.

"He wanted it to conform to Bible language. He never paid me a cent for my labor. It was entitled the Book of Mormon, and he told me he was going to Pittsburg to sell the manuscript. I afterwards learned that he got hold of Sidney Rigdon, and I knew within six months that Spalding sold it, and that Rigdon got it. Rigdon was a preacher in the Cumberland Presbyterian church. He was a scholar and a smart fellow. I had seen him baptizing converts in Mahoning county, Ohio. Some years afterward I was on a lecture tour in Ohio, lecturing on grammar and the construction of English language. I went to Kirtland in a buggy accompanied by a young lawyer, to see Joe Smith and the Mormon leaders. We drove up in front of a large tent and Sidney Rigdon came out. I told him that I corrected the Mormon Bible when it was Spalding's manuscript. I assured him I gave it the proper construction and what grammar it had. He smiled and said that was all right, but requested me to say nothing about it. I told Rigdon that we came over there to see him and Joe Smith. He said, 'It is just our dinner time; you can't see Joe Smith, because he is marking goods at the store,' they having received forty wagon-loads from the lake shore the day before. Afterwards we were introduced to the prophet. Joe Smith had a round face, and his hair was cut short down on his forehead. The color of his hair was between a deep brown and dark red. He sent a young man with us into the temple, which was but newly finished. The front had a projecting roof, supported by pillars. We entered the portico, when the young man, our guide, said:

'Take off your hats!' I replied; "Our hats are already off, sir. We've a long ways to drive, and want you to hurry up, sir!'

THE TEMPLE DIVIDED.

"We were then conducted into the interior of the temple. A broad aisle ran through the middle of the temple with a a cross aisle in the centre, above which a curtain hung, dividing the temple into two parts, Sidney Rigdon occupying, we were told, the eastern portion and Joe Smith the western portion, which included the grand altar. The arrangement seemed to be thus made in consequence of the incomplete conditione of the temple. By mounting on one anothers shoulders we were enabled to pull ourselves up through a hole into the attic where we were shown several mummies including that of Joseph and other patriarchs mentioned in the Bible. After visiting the temple we were invited into the tent where we were provided with a good dinner, and taking leave of the saints we drove out of Kirtland well satisfied with our visit."

The above chat with Leffingwell left the impression that his statement of the part taken by him in the correction of Spalding's manuscript is undeniable, but the other fact that said manuscript was the original of the Mormon Bible is rather a matter of inference than supported by direct and incontrovertible testimony. Col. Leffingwell, however, asserts that so far as he has compared his recollections of the Spalding manuscript with the Mormon Bible they are identical. That is his belief.

In our issue of the 30th ult., page 349, we said, editorially, "The papers state that there was a resistance [by the Mormons] to the service of writs in the hands of United States Marshals at Paris, Idaho;" and then added, "we hope the statement is exaggerated." The following clipping from the Deseret News of late date denies such resistance, and we cheerfully give it place in our columns; for what is needed is exact truth and right.

REPORTED RESISTANCE DENIED.

We took occasion yesterday to brand the dispatch which had been sent throughout the nation by the unscrupulous Associated Press agent of this city, charging the "Mormons" of Paris with having resisted the deputy marshals, as an infamous lie, circulated for the purpose of inciting greater hostility against a people towards whom the whole world are already most bitterly and unjustly prejudiced. That we were correct in what we asserted is now amply proved by the following statement, signed by prominent and reputable citizens of the place where the resistance was said to have been offered:

PARIS, Idaho, May 21st, 1885.

The report in circulation stating that United States deputy marshals were driven out of Paris, Idaho, by an armed force and were interfered with in the performance of their duty, is entirely false. The facts are these, that on Saturday morning, May 9, Chris Nielson, a supposed deputy marshal, served papers on Samuel Matthews in a religious meeting; also upon John A. Hunt, just outside of the meeting house. No attempt was made to serve papers on anyone else. Not a single person interfered with any officer whatever. After these papers were served he (Nielson), in connection with one John H. King, another supposed deputy, left Paris.

That the above is a true and correct statement we, the undersigned, most solemnly declare.

HENRY MARGETTS, Probate Judge, and more than fifty other citizens.

THERE are some items in the current religious news of the day that are very significant, we give a few of them, taken from the Chicago Times of May 31st. The Episcopal Church of New York under the pressure of various causes which are set forth, has united with a revival movement to be inaugurated in November next, undertaken for the purpose of mending the fortunes of the church; the causes are:

1. A large class of well-to-do and refined people, who have ceased to be, or never have been church-goers. 2. Formal communicants. 3. The irreligion of the young men of our well-to-do families. 4. The evils in the life of men and women in fashionable society. 5. The feeble recognition on the part of masters and mistresses of the need of church attendance by their servants, resulting largely from a want of care for the spiritual welfare of servants. 6. The evils of class churches. 7. The evils which come from the instability of church connection. 8. The lack of opportunity for private prayer, consequent upon the condition of our tenement and boarding houses, and the fact that few churches are constantly open. 9. The want of definite, positive instruction in religious duties, and in what practical Christian living consists. 10. The lack of personal spiritual ministry to the rich. 11. The drain upon the minds, souls, and bodies of two classes: (1) Of those who give themselves up to the demands of society life; (2) of those laden down with too much work, unfitting both classes for a healthful Christian life. Among the causes of this drain we specify: (a) Late hours; (b) stores open late Saturday nights; (c) no Saturday half holidays. 12. The religious deprivation suffered by the large and rapidly increasing portion of the population called to labor at night, in connection with the homeless and the vicious classes abroad under cover of darkness. 13. The wrongs inflicted by employers upon their employes. 14. The lust of wealth, issuing in the manifold evils of unscrupulous competition, overwork, underpay, scamped work, and mutual enmity and discontent between employer and employe. 15. The immorality and irreligion caused by the unrighteous denial to a large and increasing class of one day's rest in seven. 16. The prevalence of the sins of intemperance and impurity. 17. The special religious difficulties caused by the constant flow of immigrants. 18. The hindrance to the growth of the Christian life caused by our luxuriousness and selfishness. 19. The ostentatious display by church-goers of all classes. 20. The want of public spirit in its bearing upon the church and state.

Of these causes we notice those found under the numbers 4, 6, 7, 16.

Fashionable society is to the spiritually cultivated a whirlpool of folly; but to the aspiring and ambitious of all the land, citizens and countrymen alike, it is a city set on a hill, dazzling and brilliant, the paradise of earthly attainments. It is a whited sepulcher. Its promises and blandishments alluring as they are, are but the apples of Sodom that turn to ashes upon the lips; leaving disgrace and sorrow as a heritage.

The evils complained of in this plea for a revival of religion have been fostered by improper countenance on the part of the church itself, using the term church to mean the whole number of so-called churches.

The unstable nature of church relationship we have frequently seen and noted; and to us the reason is plain. The facility with which such men as Dr. David Swing, Dr., Tyng, Dr. Adams and Dr. H. W. Thomas, can either disrupt the connection between themselves and the body of which they had been honored members, or be dismissed from fellowship for heretical opinions; and when so dismissed assume the character of Christian teachers called of Christ, and essay to teach independently of church relationship; teaches the lesson imperatively to all other members of the same churches, that there is no value attached to membership, and no real and lasting benefit derived from those associations; showing that the men themselves, the able and apparently noble men of the church, place no valuable estimate upon the church, as an intermediate state of preparation for the world to come; the place, the home of the embryo Christian ready to step from that earthly Christian residence into the heavenly place for which he has been so prepared.

"Class churches." These are the churches created by the demand for class association. There must be Fifth avenue palaces, uptown hotels, palace cars, Long Branch cottages, and churches for the upper classes, in order that this "class" may not be obliged to mix with the mediocre, the plain, the humble, the low; it is in society, (the fashionable and would be fashionable society), as in the class so long ago rebuked by the Savior, "stand aside, I am holier than thou art."

For this condition of things the church, the Episcopal with others, if not more than others because of its first departure from the rule of the mother church, thus being the oldest of the churches, is itself largely in fault; because that a false estimate has been put on riches and standing by the prelates of the church, almost time immemorial, until it has become crystalized into the public opinion of the religious body, with all its mischievous consequences ever apparent. That the church has not put forth the effort to mend the consequences by removing the causes long ago, is to be deplored. Can it now be done. Perhaps the effort next November will show.

As appropos of the effort to Christianize the world and of the revival talked of look at the following from Bishop Littlejohn:

"The case of Brooklyn, N. Y." says Bishop Littlejohn, "furnishes another illustration of how inadequately our best cities are supplied with the gospel. Brooklyn has been called the city of churches, yet it has only one place of worship to every 2,600 inhabitants; only a fraction over 1 per cent. are communicants of churches, and that is less by ½ per cent. than it was fifty years ago. Over one-third of the population is not reached either directly or indirectly by any religious agency whatever. A recent visit to six hundred families showed that three-fourths of them are without Bibles or Christian literature of any kind; and this within sight of the Bible house which is sending the scriptures all over the world."

The intemperance and impurity of life that are complained of are manifest among those having nominal connection with the church. It can not be that the church would complain of what was outside of its ranks as a detriment within. The indictment is just, let that church work it out.

One of the good indications that may be seen is the desire to get rid of what barriers there may be between different portions of the so called christian church that have tended to prevent harmony of action, in the common existence of those churches. It is seen in the following:

"The Methodist Church South, tired of the sectional appendage to its title, is about to vote on the question of changing its name to the "Methodist Episcopal Church in America." To this the "original" Methodists of the north are objecting, on the ground that the change would give the church an American character, which they regard as undesirable, since the denomination is co-extensive with the world. But, What is there in a name?"

The original cause of this sectional distinction in name, was political. The one section sustained slavery as of divine right; the other denied that there was any right founded in divinity to hold human beings in servitude. The question was solved by the secular sword, wielded by brothers against brothers, and now that the cause of the distinction is removed it is well that the heraldic signs be taken from the church escutcheon.

We might object to the statement made by the "original Methodists of the North," that the appellation, The "Methodist Episcopal church in America," would be improper because it would "give the church an American character." The Methodist Church South and the Methodist Church North, are peculiarly American; and have for more than half a century represented two bitter extremes in American politics. Neither of these churches is "co-extensive with the world." Each is sectional, and it will take years of the most careful efforts of the Episcopacy to rub out the lines of sectionalism. The one has fostered the education of the negro; the other has denied education to the same race; the one is now favorable to the emancipation of the negro from race domination because of color alone; the other hostile, if not bitterly so to such emancipation. We are glad to see the effort to secure unity but fancy it will fail.

That thought is advancing in right directions is seen from the following:

"The Rev. Henry M. King, D. D., in an article on "The Prayer-Book and Baptism," says: "Sprinkling is absolutely unauthorized by the prayer-book, and any member of the Episcopal Church, or of any other church, who has accepted sprinkling for baptism is unbaptized, and any rector who substitutes sprinkling for baptism is violating not only the requirement of God's word, but the canons of his own church."

What say our sprinklers to this.

The Archbishop of Armagh, Ireland, in a late letter in The National Church, expresses the following view of the disestablishment of the church of Ireland, a political measure of the British Parliament.

"The disestablishment of the Church of Ireland has been only an evil, with no compensating benefit whatever. It has been of no advantage socially or religiously, and instead of conferring strength has caused weakness. Long may our Heavenly Father in His mercy avert so great an evil from the glorious Church of England! I have been twenty-nine years a rector, and thirty years a Bishop and Archbishop, and have had long experience of ecclesiastical affairs, and I hesitate not to say that I regard disestablishment as a most disastrous failure."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Noah N. Cooke writes from No. 2723, Rutger street, St Louis, Missouri: "I was at the Gravois Sunday last; Bro. Hazeldine would have liked to see you. He could not come to the city, as his wife was sick. The saints in the Gravois are firm in the faith, and far in years. We had a good time; God's spirit was with us to cheer. In August next, Bro. Hazeldine will be in his eightieth year; he still clings to the rod of iron, firmer as he grows older. May his reward be that of the righteous.

Postmaster General Vilas is said to be after the Louisiana Lottery now. It is reasonably safe to say that the Louisiana Lottery will not be crushed by Postmaster-General Vilas. The Louisiana Lottery has political influence, and Louisiana is not yet a first class Democratic State, hide-bound and assured like Missouri or Arkansas. Correspondence.

SYDNEY, Australia, January 28th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph: The last day of 1884, I left Sydney to visit the folk of Newcastle, and on further. I met Sr. Ann Webster early on the evening, and the next day, New Year's Day, we visited some Saints in Hamilton and Waratah; then on to Wallsend, and put up with Bro. Gregory. Next day we visited the Saints there, and Sunday we held meetings at Bro. Gregory's in the morning, at Bro. Haworth's in the afternoon, and in Harris' Hall in the evening. Before Bro. J. W. Gillen was appointed to this mission, I dreamed of being in a hall with my father and Bro. Gillen. He, Bro. G., was arranging the seats and clearing up the hall ready for services; and after this he came to where father and I were standing and said to him: Bro. Burton, you must preach here to night, for I am going away, and I am not well. Father replied: I can not, but my son Joseph will. Bro. G. answered: Well; that will do just as well. I had not then seen Bro. Gillen, and when I met him in California, I knew him by the dream; and when I opened services in Harris' Hall in Wallsend, my dream came before me; for the same hall precisely was now before me as I had seen in my dream so long before.

Sunday before last we went to the "Domain," in company with brethren Ellis and Morris. Crowds of people assemble here Sunday afternoons to listen to Salvation Army, Blue Ribbon Army, Methodists, Temperance, Political, and Free Thinkers, Orators, and we intended to number ourselves as one more. Before we got to work a dreadful fear came over me, so that I thought that I would vomit; it really made me sick at the stomach. Then I thought, if Satan can stop me that way, he will; but I will not allow that; so I began reading a chapter—no one came to hear; then we sang a hymn, a few came and I forgot all my fear, and lost all consciousness of my surroundings, only that before me were anxious looking persons; and gradually I discovered I was talking rapidly to at least one hundred and fifty persons, myself quite warm, but feeling happy. I stopped; several came up and shook my hand heartily. One evening meeting was in Protestant Hall, and was a failure. The Salvation Army below us played their fifes and drums so vigorously, we could hardly hear ourselves.

Last Sunday we were again on the Domain, and about the same sized audience. After I got through, Bro. J. E. Haworth gave them a few minutes calm talk, reasoning upon the first principles. After we dismissed, a lady came to me and asked me to preach next Sunday on the second coming of Christ. We had quite a good meeting in the evening at the I.O.O.F. Hall. A Rev. Mr. Anderson, an East Indian I think, who heard us on the Domain, came this evening and introduced himself. I invited him on the stand, and after Bro. Haworth and I had spoken for about an hour, he, by request, spoke about fifteen minutes, very much like many of our Methodist exhorters-"Come to Jesus," believe and be sayed," "look and live," etc.

We have meeting Thursday evening at North Willoughby, and next Sunday on the Domain and I. O. O. F. Hall in the evening.

Sr. Burton has got her sign out—"New York Dress Cutting System," and hopes to be able to gather a share of the custom from those who may need such work. We are all fairly well. The very sudden changes of this climate is a little hard on us, but we hope to get used to it. Please remember us in your petitions occasionally, for I am of the opinion I will need them. May God bless you all you need, that Zion may be redeemed and sinners saved. Yours in Christ,

Jos. F. Burton.

DIAMOND, Ohio,

May, 24th, 1885.

Brother Joseph:—Bro. E. L. Kelly, wife and baby have visited us; did some preaching, and next Sabbath Bro. Griffith and E. L. will be with us again, and an invitation is sent from the next town east, (Milton) for them to come there and preach in the Town Hall. Though they have appointments here for eleven and seven, I have promised they will be there at three. Hoping much good will come from it. We are having beautiful weather for crops and everything looks in beautiful green, and trees are in bloom.

Am so glad that controversy is finished in the Herald. I do not enjoy such among the brethren, but with the outside world I am glad of any thing to make the people hear. And the affairs in Utah I am greatly interested in; hope their evils may be soon buried, and that they who are earnest and true may join the true church and find rest. They need you, Joseph, I can see how lost they are without a proper head. God bless you and Bro. Blair with courage and love to stand in Zion's might. Remember us ever in your rejoicings.

CHARLOTTE H. STEWART.

Dear Bro. Joseph: We left Papeete on the 11th of this month, to go to Matea, about a hundred miles north of Tahiti; but after sailing three days, trying to find the Island, the captain concluded to try to find Koukura, a hundred miles further, which place we made at about six p.m., Sunday, the 15th. When the captain was not asleep, which was about two-thirds of the time, he was reading novels, &c. I have learned since I came here, that he has lost two vessels already. It will not take much more such recklessnesss, and carelessness, to lose the one he now is supposed to be captain of. We had a severe gale on Friday night, when instead of being cool, and steady nerved, he was almost wild with excitement, and it was simply providential that we escaped danger. He is not worth naming as a captain of a vessel the same day with Captain Burns of the Tropic Bird. We will go on that schooner again, only when it is our only chance to go. This Island is one of Paumotus. "Pau" meaning "many," and "motu" "low, flat land"; being one of the coral islands; these islands are in the form of a ring. An immense lagoon several miles in width and length is in the center. There may be from six to twelve islands that form the ring; a small space of coral of bare rocks connecting them. These islands have separate names, but collectively are called (in this case) Koukura. There are many in these parts:

some larger in extent, and some smaller than this. The link which we are stopping upon is called Panau, and there are nine links in all. These groups of coral islands are not all round, many are oblong, some egg shaped, some like a bent ring or link of a chain. The foundation of them all is coral: not the bush-like coral that is brought to America; but solid, and very hard. The sea has washed the sand upon them to the depth of from ten to fifteen feet, and cocoa nut trees are planted, and grow finely. Bread-fruit, bananas, viis, and other fruit will not grow. Bananas will grow if a large hole like a cellar is dug, and they planted, where moisture from the sea will ooze through the soil; but very few of the natives will take the trouble to dig such a hole. Fish and cocoa nut,—which they get for the taking of them, and bread which they buy from a baker,—is sufficient for them. Occasionally a vessel brings bananas and fees (fays), a sort of mountain banana. The sand which covers the islands is white, and a tropical sun shining on it, makes it scorching hot to tender feet. Fortunately, there is most of the time a good breeze, and frequently plenty of clouds. Rain is always welcome.

Here pearl fishing is in season, this being one of the islands where the pearl oyster is found, and there are now large numbers from other islands; nearly all of the Manihi Branch, eighty miles away, is here. The Parau shell is nearly round-and flat, ranging in size from the silver dollar to a breakfast plate, and pearl lined, as the shells found on the California coast; they bring fifteen cents a pound here. But occasionally there is found inside a geve or round pearl-from the size of a pin head to an ordinary marble or hazel nut, and are worth from one dollar to two or three hundred dollars according to size and quality. They bring double and treble the price in Europe and America which the traders pay for them here. The natives have no chance to sell them except to those who buy here, or else take them to Papeete and they might get a few dollars more there. But they might not get a chance to get back in a month, and would be under expenses there, and lose the opportunity of fishing for more all that time. I regret that it is so, that they can not get the full value of the pearls, but so it is. However, what would they do with the money? Nine-tenths of them would spend it for fine clothes, and luxuries, and many would get drunk, and keep so while the money lasted. Very few of the church however get drunk, and they are expelled if they do not repent and confess. But there are many who belong to the Catholic or Protestant churches, who are allowed a looser rein than we give our members. They are however, with very few exceptions, extremely improvident-they "take no thought for the morrow."

The Paumotu people cannot be called enlightened, they are simply civilized I was out fishing one day last week with a couple of the men, and one of them wanted some bait, so he took one of the fish, and with his teeth tore strips of it off, and after swallowing some, he laid the rest down for bait. It is a common thing for them to tear out the entrails of the fish, then lay them on the fire, and roast them, and then eat them. The less trouble it takes to cook food the better they think. Formerly dogs were frequently eaten by all parties, but now only the class who do not belong to the church eat them, the Catholics, Protestants, and ourselves prohibiting it. Drinking is a common vice here, and we dare not allow it, for if we say that they can drink beer or wine, they will be drunk half the time. They say it does them good, just as they say at home. But I simply tell them as I do our beer and wine drinkers at home, either you are deceived or else God has not spoken the truth. He says that "strong drink" and "wine" are not good, and they with "tobacco" and "hot drinks" are not for the "body" nor the "belly" or stomach. Either God has not told the truth, if their statements are correct, or else Joseph Smith has palmed a bogus revelation on the church. It is called a "thus saith the Lord." It goes hard with me to deprive a native Elder of his license for drinking intoxicating liquors, and remember at the same time that it is not always done in America. And if allowed here, there is not one in fifty but would drink, and there would be no stopping short of complete and continued intoxication, and that means the committal of all manner of indecencies and crimes.

I am sometimes led to think that the Lord intended a deeper and wider, and more comprehensive meaning—to the words—"the work of the reorganization of my church be more fully established" in the revelation of September 1882.

This island, or this part of the island, was destroyed by a great storm. A hurricane drove the sea over the island some seven years ago, sweeping away the houses, and drowning one hundred and seventeen persons, destroying all the trees, and everything in the form of vegetation. There was a stone church owned by the Catholics, several stone houses, and a number of large frame buildings, beside numbers of native cottages and huts; other parts of the chain suffered in like manner. The loss of life named, included those who were drowned in the several links. The buildings referred to were on this part. The ruins are seen on every side. The natives or inhabitants were chiefly Catholics at that time; those who are here now are identified with our church, or nearly all are. These islands are not over fifteen feet above the level of the sea, and not over twelve at high water at any point; and if the Pacific was as tempestuous as the Atlantic, they might be inundated often. All of these islands are surrounded by a reef of coral-about a half mile from shore which breaks the surf, and serves as a barrier to the ingress of the waves. But while they are subject to danger from the water, in other parts of the world cyclones, earthquakes and fire threaten destruction; and who is safe anywhere?

The Tahitian tongue is spoken by thousands of people who are not native Tahitians. The Marquesans, Paumotus, Society Islanders, as well as the Georgian Islanders of which Tahiti is a part, speak the Tahitian tongue, although they have a language of their own, very different from the Tahitian. Beside these large groups, there are scores of small imdependent islands where Tahitian is spoken. It is the language in which all trading and social intercourse is carried on in this part of Oceanica. I do not know whether I will have a chance to send this to Papeete before the April mail leaves or not. We are as well as usual, and try to be contented; but it is only because we know it to be our duty to remain here awhile as we knew it to be the Lord's will for us to come. My apparent or supposed anxiety to come on this mission, was caused by a conviction of a number of years standing that it was my duty. I expected it to be a mission of trial and hardships, and of vexation, and sorrow, and so expressed it to many, and I would be glad to learn that my work will be done this fall, and that we can be free to go on to Australia, or what would be more pleasant, to return to California, or to our home. The pleasurable part of the mission I have not seen. With ten thousand ants to fight against to keep out of our victuals, with countless mosquitos that cause us to stop every minute or two to drive away or kill, while we try to write or read, and fleas and flies, with scorching sun and burning sand, and half salty water to drink, makes it very enjoyable. But to eat a banana or two in a day, and an orange now and then, and to drink cocanut water, offsets all these troubles. It is worth all the money spent, and all of these vexations to eat bananas and oranges.

Your brother in Christ,

T. W. SMITH.

East Delevan, Wis., June 1st 1885.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Since General Conference, my rheumatism has let up on me, and I have been trying to do a little for the cause. On my way home I made a short call at Buffalo, Iowa, renewed old acquaintances, and preached once. I also called on the Saints at Davenport; and although they have no organized branch there, I found them in the faith, and desirous of the privilege of worshiping. Bro. Jerome Ruby is in charge of that district, and is anxious that all should have that privilege. I also visited Kewanee, my old home, and found the Saints there still striving to hold the fort, under the presidency of Bro. Robert Holt.

On May 3d I dispensed the word twice, at Plano, and felt refreshed in the society of the Saints there. The following Sunday, May 10th, according to previous arrangement, and in compliance with instructions received at General Conference, I met with the members of the church in Chicago, at No. 213, West Madison street, and there reorganized the First Chicago branch, assisted by Bro. Israel L. Rogers. We had a very pleasant and profitable time; the business was all transacted peaceably and unitedly, with not a dissenting voice. All present expressed themselves well satisfied with the proceedings, and pledged themselves to work unitedly in the interest of the cause, and to discourage any and every attempt to resurrect the grievances of the past, from whatever source. They intend as soon as possible to make an opening for the preaching of the gospel. We bespeak for them the aid of the traveling ministry, and the prayers of all Saints.

From there I went to Cortland, Illinois, where I preached three times in Martin's Hall, which the owner kindly granted us the use of free. We also held prayer-meeting at the house of Bro. Cherry, the evening before I left them; all felt refreshed, and were encouraged. I came to this place on the 23d, via Lake Geneva, and on the morning of the 24th, preached in the house of Bro. Henry Southwick, to a few Saints and neighbors who had gathered together to worship. Spoke again in the evening in a hall at East Delevan, the name of the owner of this hall is Rand. Although the notice was short, yet we had a good turn out, and good attention. I have spoken four times in the same hall up till date, and we all think that good will result. I go from here to Lyons, Wisconsin, where a hall is procured for next Sunday. The Saints here under the presidency of Bro. Southwick, assisted by Bro. Delap, are trying their best to live their religion and warn their neighbors. This is as it should be, and gives encouragement to the traveling ministry.

I intend to spend the time between now and District Conference in these parts, returning by way of Chicago. Wishing you success on your contemplated visit to Utah, and with best wishes for the cause and all its laborers, I remain your brother in bonds,

John S. Patterson.

MONTROSE, Iowa, May 21st, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:-Myself and family have just returned from a short visit over the Father of Waters to Nauvoo. We first called on Major Bidamon at the Nauvoo House, and after a trip through the once beautiful city, we returned to the Major's, and were pleasantly entertained for an hour or so, and partook of a sumptuous dinner, in company with Mr. Franklin D. Richards and son from Ogden, Utah, who were making a tour through the state of Illinois and Missouri. They crossed the river with us, and took the train for Keokuk and the west. They are very pleasent gentlemen in conversation. We had no time to enter into any conversation on any important points of doctrine, which I should liked to have done, for my own information. I hope they are not absent from home to evade the strong hand of Chicago, Ill., May 26th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—In accordance to revelation given at the last General Conference at Independence, Mo., the First Chicago Branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was reorganized on May 10th, and is now in full working order. As a branch, being desirous of being in harmony with the said revelation, we respectfully request traveling Elders and others who may from time to time pass through our city, to tarry with us such length of time as may be convenient to them. We have pledged ourselves to bury forever difficulties of the past. By order of branch,

S. C. Good.

Summary of News.

[From Deseret News].

May 26.—An indictment having been presented by the Grand Jury, charging Isaac Groo with unlawful cohabitation, he was to-day arrested and brought before Commissioner McKay, who released him on $1,500 bonds, Wm. Fuller and W. Peterson being sureties.

Yesterday afternoon Bishop H. B. Clawson was arrested, and brought before U. S. Commissioner McKay, an indictment having been found by the Grand Jury of the present term, charging him with unlawful cohabitation. His bail was fixed at $1,500, and he was released, O. S. Clawson and H. B. Clawson, Jr., becoming sureties.

A special to the Deseret News, from Beaver, informs us that another victim has been added to the swelling list of the anti-"Mormon" crusade. We learn on good authority that all classes of the community in which Bro. Fotheringham is a resident, without respect to creed or condition, regretted his prosecution and conviction. We understand the feeling was akin to a sensation, owing to the respect in which the gentleman, well known for his straightforward qualities, is held.

From a private dispatch to Bishop Sharp from Blackfoot, Idaho, we are enabled to glean the following facts concerning the cases of brethren against whom legal (?) proceedings were recently instituted for unlawful cohabitation with their [plural] wives: On Saturday last Judge Morgan sentenced Messrs. Stuart, Pratt and Roberts each to four months' imprisonment and a fine of $300; Messrs. Winn and Simpson to a fine of $300 each, and Samuel Humphreys to six months' imprisonment and a fine of $300. The last named defendant gave notice of appeal, pending which he was admitted to bail. In the case of Boynson the sentence was suspended. Messrs. Hendricks and Walker have not yet been sentenced.

Shortly after eight o'clock last evening Marshal Ireland, having learned that Mr. Aurelius Miner had returned home, went, in company with Deputies Sprague and Collins, to the house of Miss Adams, the lady alleged to be the plural wife of Mr. Miner, and where the gentleman was understood to be. Deputy Sprague went around to the rear of the house, the other two remaining in front, where he saw Mr. Miner, who was out in the garden. The officer stated his business and was invited into the house. The three marshals and their prisoner then went to the Marshal's office, and the accused was released on $2,000 bail. A. H. Hyde and W. McIntyre becoming sureties. Mr. Miner was arrested on indictment found by the Grand Jury for the February term, charging him with unlawful cohabitation. Last December he left this city on a tour through the States. He returned to the city a few days ago and having heard that an indictment had been found against him, had decided on surrendering himself Saturday.

Yesterday afternoon, in the First District Court, at Ogden, Messrs James Taylor, F. A. Brown and Moroni Brown, were arraigned before Judge Powers, each having been indicted for unlawful cohabitation, Messrs. Richards and Williams appearing for the defense. The statutory time, two days, was taken in which to plead, and they will again appear in court on Monday at ten a. m.

Yesterday afternoon being the time set for the sentence of David Levi, in Beaver, Utah, who pleaded guilty of unlawful cohabitation, he agreed to put away his second wife, who has borne him seven sons, the youngest of whom was born on the 16th inst. He agreed to use his influence with others similarly situated to caterpillar [crawl] with the pledge. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $200.

June 1st.—Great uneasiness is felt in Paris on account of the threats of the Communists to make trouble at Victor Hugo's funeral, which is to come off to-day. The catafalque erected in honor of the dead poet in the Place de l'Etoile was visited yesterday by thousands of people who literally buried the structure under floral offerings.

A force of about 500 Indians under Big Bear gave battle last Thursday to the troops under Gen. Strange some twelve miles north of Fort Pitt and about four miles north of the Saskatchewan river. Gen. Strange's loss was one man killed and two wounded; the Indians, loss is unknown. The fight was begun by the Indians, who were waiting in ambush for Gen Strange's detachment. The latter is reported to be in need of reinforcements and supplies.

Australia has one broad, shallow river, the Murray, which is larger than the Danube, being navigable for boats of a few inches draft for 1,703 miles, while one of its tributaries is navigable for canoes for 500 miles. Another stream, the Darling, is navigable for scows for 758 miles, and with the Murray, which it joins, it furnishes a line of navigable water 2,345 miles in length for small craft.

Absolute prohibition prevails in nearly 100 counties of Democratic Georgia, and partial prohibition in a few more counties, leaving only twenty-two of the 138 counties in the State untouched by the coercive temperance agitation; but prohibition is only practically enforced against the blacks; the whites have no difficulty in getting their Bourbon tipple.

Gen Booth of the Salvation Army has ordered the Toronto detachment to organize for service among the half-breeds of the North-west. If Gen. Geronimo, the Apache Chief who is leading the band of murderers in the North-west, has had a stirring career. He was a war chief with the famous Cachise, was a great Mexican raider, and later was a leader in Victorio's band of murderers. He has been prominent in more raids and massacres, probably, than any other Indian living. He owns a farm near San Carlos, but could not endure peace. He is an excessively bad Indian EARTHQUAKE HORRORS.

June 3.—Dispatches from Bombay state that news has just reached there of a disastrous earthquake in Cashmere, a county of India. The shocks began Sunday and have continued at intervals of ten minutes ever since. The shocks were very severe at Serinagur, the capital of Cashmere. The barracks, in which several hundred soldiers were quartered, was completely destroyed, collapsing so suddenly that nearly half of the men were imprisoned in the debris. Fifty are known to have been killed, while fully a hundred were more or less injured. A portion of the city has been demolished, while very few of the remaining buildings escaped injury, many having large rents made in them. The people became panic-stricken shortly after the disturbances began and fled from the city, taking refuge in boats and tents in the open fields. The total number of killed and wounded is not yet known, nor the full extent of the damage done, owing to the interruptions of the working of the telegraph wires. It is feared that the loss of life will be very heavy, as the latest information from there calls for help, saying that hundreds of animals have been killed, and that the distress among the people is very great.

The terrified inhabitants are now camped in the fields that surround the town. Serinagur is near the centre of the Vale of Cashmere, and the whole territory experienced the terrible earthquake shocks. The damage caused throughout the vale is enormous, the loss in cattle alone being very great. The affrighted people seem to be utterly helpless, and succor is being sent them as rapidly as the Indian authorities can organize relief. Many of the houses, on account of the large rents in the walls, must be razed to the ground. The shocks have not yet ceased, and this fact greatly retards the work of rescuing the people pinned down in the debris, and it is feared that many of these must perish before they can be reached by the relief parties.

An earthquake shock was felt around Cape Town, South Africa, the 29th of May.

A furious wind, rain, and hail storm swept over the Northwest yesterday, doing great damage to property. It burst over Chicago at five o'clock in the afternoon, and was accompanied by a brilliant electric display. Two men were killed by the lightning at Fuller's lumber-yard.

The faith-cure people lately pronounced a sick man cured. The old allopathists in attendance said his disease was incurable. The man lived only a week, and down goes another fancy of the dudes of psychology.

Veneration for the clergy seems to be dying out in Rome. During the recent meeting of the Irish Bishops in the Eternal City they were pestered with swarms of beggars and children on the streets who wanted blessings and coins in about equal degree. The Rome correspondent of the Dublin Nation naively says: "The coadjutor of Kildare and Leighlin was the other day besieged by a band of youthful devotees, one of whom in the ardor of his devotion kissed the ring off his lordship's finger and has forgotten to give it back.

In the second of his series of lectures upon evolution Mr. Beecher said: As it is now, very vaguely the bigoted theologists, ignorant pietists, and the whole broad of shallow and ignorant men whose sustenance seems like a sarcasm upon creative wisdom, swarm about the adventurous survivors who are searching God's handiwork and adding to the realm of the knowledge of God the grandest treasures; and when men pretending to be ministers of God, with all manner of grimace, and shallow ridicule, and veteran wit, and unreproductive reason enacting the very feats of the monkey in their attempts to prove that that was not the origin of the human family, it seems to me that there will yet be an internal evidence that it was the origin of the human family, and that the law is established.

If this extract is read between the lines it will be impossible to arrive at any other conclusion than that Brother Beecher was aiming point blank at Brother Talmage. The latter has been assailing evolution recently, and Mr. Beecher not inaptly locates his man when he speaks of "all manner of grimace, shallow ridicule, veteran wit and unreproductive reason." It becomes an interesting question, therefore, to Mr. Talmage and his congregation what Beecher means when he says that his great Brooklyn rival is "enacting the very feats of the monkey." This is a pretty personal charge, and will rouse many queries. People will ask if he meant Talmage, and if he did the fur will fly. If Brother Talmage gets after Brother Beecher, monkey-wise or otherwise, when they get through the latter will fully appreciated the condition of the parrot after his memorable encounter.

The nineteenth anniversary of the Universal Peace Union began to-day at Philadelphia. The annual report stated that complimentary letters had been sent to Gladstone and others relative to the settlement of the Afghan question without bloodshed. The death of Victor Hugo was also mentioned. He was a member of the French branch of the society. The final session will be held to-morrow.

Victor Hugo's funeral in Paris yesterday was most imposing. Hundreds of thousands of people were abroad at daybreak, crowding the streets and boulevards through which the great procession was to move. In the morning large bodies of cavalry occupied the streets leading to the Champs Elysees, and minute-guns were fired from Fort Valerien and the Hotel des Invalides. The funeral procession started at noon and was conducted without interference from the riotous element, but few arrests being made. Beneath the Arc de Triomphe orations were delivered by M. Lerover, President of the Senate, M. Goblet, President of the Chamber of Deputies, and M. M. Floquet and Augier. It is estimated that the pageant attracted fully a million spectators. To emphasize the secularization of the Pantheon, a luncheon was spread in that hitherto sacred edifice for Victor Hugo's family. This incident has greatly increased the rage of the Clericals.

Louis Reaume, a French Canadian coming from Denver, Colo., became a raving maniac on the Wabash train due at Chicago yesterday afternoon. After the train had left Peoria he drove all passengers from the chair-car which he occupied and kept everybody, including police officers called in at the several stations, at bay, until the train arrived in Chicago. The first shot he fired at the depot killed officer Con. Barrett, and it took a long time to disarm and secure him. Lieut. Laughlin was badly wounded while struggling to secure the maniac, who himself received three shots in the back which may prove fatal.

It does not speak very well for the manner in which railway companies and police authorities protect passengers, that a lunatic should have been allowed to hold complete possession of a train from Denver to Chicago, even if he were armed, and finally succeed in killing one of the policemen sent to capture him at the end of his journey. If there were not resolution enough to seize and disarm him it seems as if there might have been shrewdness enough to outwit him. There does not seem to have been courage enough on the part of the train officials even to side-track him when he objected to it. The condition of affairs was known all long the line long before the train arrived at different points; but at no place could the police muster up sufficient courage to arrest him until the train arrived in Chicago. If a brakeman could approach him, talk with him, and take his knife away from him and keep it, it seems as if two or three resolute fellows might have seized him at the same time and taken his pistol away also, and thus have saved Officer Barrett's life. If one man can travel from Denver to Chicago and hold the train in his own hands, direct the movements of the trainmen and passengers to suit himself, and hold the police at bay the entire distance, railroad traveling is not very safe for the public.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

Reports received in San Francisco place the shortage of this year's wheat crop on the Pacific coast at 26,500,000 bushels as compared with 1884.

Land-Commissioner Sparks claims to have discovered and frustrated since he went into office two immense land steals and a number of smaller ones. He intends to insist upon a strict construction of the Home-stead and Pre-emption laws, which he says have been prostituted heretofore in the interest of land-sharks, to the great detriment of honest settlers.

The elevation of the laboring classes in political matters is surely though slowly proceeding in England. A recent evidence of this is found in the fact that three representative workingmen in Lancashire have been appointed Justices of the Peace. This is a marked innovation on ancient customs. Hitherto the magisterial bench has been recruited exclusively from the capitalist, property, and professional classes. Noblemen, clergymen, merchants, manufacturers, and successful professional men have hitherto enjoyed a monopoly of the peace commission while the vast majority of the population—small tradesmen, artisans, and the like-have been rigidly excluded. Wealth was the qualification, and want of it a disqualification. Though a fresh innovation, this is in line with the political tendencies in England. Workingmen sit on school boards and boards of guardians, they have seats in the House of Commons, and it is admitted by all parties that in future Parliaments they must be accorded their due share in the management of imperial affairs.

June 3.—The Administration seems inclined to pursue a secretive policy. Secretary Manning refuses to publish the reports of the special agent who investigated the frauds in the New York Custom-House on the ground that the abuses can be better corrected if the offenders are not notified of every discovery made. The New York importers claim, on the other hand, that the publication of the reports would be generally beneficial. They say that the frauds in connection with the drawback-allowance system were of colossal proportions, and should be thoroughly exposed.

Secretary Manning's report for May is rendered in both the new and old forms. The decrease in the public debt for the month is stated at $3, 350,833 by the new system, or $4,425,484 by the old system. The Treasury officials are satisfied that the silver policy of the Administration has done away with all cause for anxiety as to the ability of the Treasury to meet all demands until Congress reassembles. The small loss of gold during the month renders it certain that the Treasury will not be compelled to borrow gold of the banks, or resort to any other of the many expedients which were thought of.

Striking mill-hands at Denver, Colo., yesterday blew up a barn belonging to an obnoxious capitalist with dynamite. Two days ago five sticks of giant powder were found on the Denver & Rio Grande track, near the city. The Chicago produce markets were active yesterday and very strong, in decided contrast to the weakness of the previous day. The first incitement to the change was a lower quotation for consols, with the report of a decreased wheat yield in Europe, and the strength was aided by an unexpected decrease in the visible supply of our principal cereals according to the Chicago report. There was more buying on account of outside parties than for many days previously. As compared with Monday, pork closed 25 cents higher, lard 10 cents higher, meats 15 cents higher, wheat 2 cents higher, corn 13/4 cents higher, oats 3/ cent higher, rye weak, barley easier, and flaxseed firm.

A PREDICTION!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

FRIEND HERALD.—On or about the year 1866, the precise date has slipped my memory,—(it was at the time that Bro. Isaac Sheen was editor of the Herald, and was defending the Book of Covenants in its entirety, against the Hedrickite Truth Teller, which professed to accept all the revelations in said book, up to 1834 and no further,)—the late Bro. Z. H. Gurley, senior, and the writer, were standing together in the yard of Bro. Lorin Page, in Galesburg, Illinois, in the intermission between morning and afternoon meeting, when the conversation drifted on to this discussion of Bro. Sheen's, and the position occupied by the Hedrickites with respect to the Book of Covenants. Brother Gurley laid his hand upon the left shoulder of the writer, which action caused him to look directly at the speaker, and saw in his face the light of inspiration, and the following language was uttered:—Brother Stafford, I tell you in the name of the Lord, that the time will come when men will arise in this church—I will not live to see it, but you will—who will seek to do away with the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; but you stick to the three books, they will carry you safe through." E. Stafford.

LAMONI, Feb'y 26th, 1885.

[In a late visit to Illinois, the Senior Editor was told by another member of the church that he heard Elder Gurley make such a statement. The second assurance that such a statement had been made, determined us to place this statement of Bro. Stafford before the Saints.—Ed.]

PRIEST HOOD.

FROM time immemorial, and among all nations and tribes of earth, there has been found reputed and respected as holy men, acting in the capacity or office of Priest; and the practice is almost, if not altogether universal, that men seek for the ministrations of those whom they esteem more worthy and more capable than themselves to mediate between the Omnipotent Jehovah, and sin enthralled humanity.

 There is, nevertheless, to be observed a marked distinction between those whom necessity, or man, hath appointed to officiate, and those who have been set apart for the holy purpose by divine appointment. The true Priest's potency for good or evil depends upon his fidelity or neglect of the divine law.

William Smith, L. L. D., in his Antiquities, Biography, Geography, and Natural History of the Bible, p. 547, states upon the article, Priest, that "The Engtish word is derived from the Greek Presbyter, signifying an "elder," (Heb coh-en). And further-"The idea of a priesthood connects itself, in all its forms, pure or corrupted, with the consciousness, more or less distinct of sin. Men feel that they have broken a law. The power above them is holier than they are, and they dare not approach it. They crave for the intervention of some one of whom they can think as likely to be more acceptable than themselves. He must offer up their prayers, thanksgivings, sacrifices. He becomes their representative in things pertaining unto God. "He may become also, (though, this does not always follow) the representative of God to man. The functions of the priest and prophet may exist in the same person."

It must be quite evident to the student of Christian religion that but very little advancement has been made during many decades of the past, in reflecting light and understanding upon this all-important subject, of God's priests; but to the reverse, men in their own wisdom have increased the darkness, and established such great confusion that very many are vehemently opposed to aught that claims a higher authority than that which man can bestow. It shall be the purpose and object of this paper to press an investigation into the deep recesses of the past, and seek light that has been covered by the rubbish of ages, and to that end we most earnestly invoke the aid of the promised Comforter, and wisdom to be directed in harmony with "the law and the testimony," knowing full well that if we "speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in us (true light, heavenly light we mean) that is able to light our pathway out of the meshes of uncertainty, into the peaceful habitations of everlasting life and immortal glory.

"For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins; who can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity. And by reason hereof he ought as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins. And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron. So also Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee. As he saith also in another place, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec."—Heb. 5: 1—6. That our progress may prove safe and satisfact-ory, it will be best, here to institute a careful and critical examination of this scriptural language. First, let me state, the Bible I use is the "Inspired Translation, as given to the world by the Prophet and High Priest, Joseph Smith; for the reason that it is the most clear and comprehensive.

1st. "Every High Priest;" This clearly indicates, and instructs the Hebrew saints, that under the gospel dispensation there were to be more than one person who should bear the office of High Priest.

2d. "Taken from among men;" that is, those who occupy the responsible position of an High Priest, are selected from among those in whom the Father finds the required qualifications, and illustrative of this truth is the calling of Joshua, "full of the spirit of wisdom." Deut. 34: 9. However men in their zeal to cast ridicule and odium, either ignore or overlook God's apology for his own selected ministers from among men .- "Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men. For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh; not many mighty, not many noble, are chosen; for God hath chosen the foolish things [men] of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things [men] of the world to confound the things [men] which are mighty; and base things [men] of the world, and things [men] which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things [men] which are not, to bring to naught things [men] that are mighty."—1 Cor. 1:25-28. I emphasize the words "foolish," "weak," "base," "despised" and "not," and substitute for them the word men, which makes more euphonious and plainer reading.

3. "Ordained for men."—Here the High Priest is vested with functions from one who clothes him with the authority that permits him to act in behalf of God for the benefit of man, that the "things pertaining to God" may work the emancipation of man from the rule and power of sin. This is the reason,

4th. why "he may offer both gifts and sacrifices," that the "perfect law" may bring about an acceptable reconciliation, and man give adequate evidence of his appreciation of the hope of eternal life.

5th. The next describes the absolute knowledge that Christ had of man in his helpless condition, and the necessity for the adoption of a ministry that was so closely allied in sympathy with suffering humanity, so preventing the Priest from arrogating to himself any undue authority, but rather to the fulfilling of the instruction—"Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples of the flock."—1 Pet. 5:

6th, "Taketh this honor."—This rule has been urged by the eldership in their preaching as having a general application to every grade of the priesthood; whereas, it seems to extend to none others than the High Priests.

7th. "Called of God."—It would seem pre-eminently proper, that God alone should choose his own High Priests. While the work of salvation and redemption is God's free gift unto man, all men need this aid, for the reason, "the Scripture hath concluded all under sin." Gal. 3: 22. Still more pointed—"that at that time ve were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenant of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." This all clearly shows that Eph. 2:12.

there can be no alternative, or escaping from God's reserving unto himself, in every age, and under all circumstances, the election of those with whom he officers his church.

8th. "As was Aaron."—Here is the guiding star, and if man will heed and be governed thereby, the present darkness in the domain of religion will give place to unity and peace, and a brotherhood of those whom God "hath made of one blood" will be found in "one Spirit," with "one hope."

oth The next exhibits the fact, that Christ did not assume to himself the office of an High Priest. He filled the office because it was his Father's will—this was the mission that brought the anointed from the abode of bliss and glory; "for I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."—John 6: 38.

10th. "Order of Melchisedec."-Here seems to be the pivot in the discussion of the whole question of priesthood; and the word "order" is of paramount value, for it carries with it the idea of an association of persons, living and working under laws, rules, and regulations understood and obeyed. I now pass to the examination of what, in the common version of the Bible, has been the darkest and most perplexing to understand. "For this Melchisedec was ordained a Priest after the order of the Son of God, which order was without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life. And all those who are ordained unto this priesthood are made like unto the Son of God, abiding a priest continually." Heb. 7:3. Here we have what some have been pleased to call a palpable contradiction, because it is stated in Heb. 5:6, that Christ was ordained after the "order of Melchesidec," while in Heb. 7:3, it is stated that Melchisedec was ordained after the "order of the Son of God." Some, to ridicule, have called this the mutual admiration society, with two members. If you will receive it, we herewith submit a reasonable, logical, and philosophical explanation of this seeming contradiction.

"There are, in the church, two priesthoods, namely: the Melchisedec, and the Aaronic, including the Levitical priesthood. Why the first is called the Melchisedec priesthood, is because Melchisedec was such a great high priest; before his day it was called the holy priesthood, after the order of the Son of God; but out of respect or reverence to the name of the Supreme Being, to avoid the too frequent repetition of his name, they, the church, in ancient days, called that priesthood after Mclchisedec, or, the Melchisedec priesthood."—Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 104,

Having found that the "order of Melchisedec" and the "order of the Son of God," are identical, we are inclined to the opinion expressed by "an old man in Israel," wherein he says: "Thanks be to Jesus; the honors and powers of the priesthood are not obtained, by money or craft. They are handed down by lineage from father to son, according to the order of the Son of God."—Times and Seasons.

The above statement without any explanation, contemplates all covenants on priesthood from God to man. The blessings and possession of the priesthood, are not unlike other gifts and blessings bestowed upon man by our heavenly father; hence the advice and instruction of Christ; "Ask of God; ask and it shall be given you, seek, and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and unto him that knocketh, it shall be opened."—Matt. 7: 12, 13. In harmony with this is the case of the "Father of the faithful. "In the land of the Chaldeans, at the residence of my father, I, Abraham, saw that it was needful for me to obtain another place of residence, and finding there was greater happiness and peace, and rest for me, I sought for the blessings of the fathers, and the right whereunto I should be ordained to administer the same; having been myself a follower of righteousness, desiring also to be one who possessed great knowledge, and to be a greater follower of righteousness, and to possess a greater knowledge, and to be a father of many nations, a prince of peace; and desiring to receive instructions, and to keep the commandments of God, I became a rightful heir, a High Priest, holding the right belonging to the fathers; it was conferred upon me from the fathers; it came down from the fathers, from the beginning of time, yea, even from the beginning, or before the foundations of the earth to the present time, even the right of the first born on the first man, who is Adam, or first father, through the fathers unto me."-Pearl of Great Price, p. 19.

I do not quote the above as authoritative, but rather as inferential evidence that the Holy priesthood had been with the sons of men prior to the age in which Abraham sought for the blessings thereof. Those who were High Priests according to the "order of the Son of God," were called the "Sons of God;" and mention is made of some of those High Priests as follows: "And Noah and his sons hearkened unto the Lord, and gave heed and they were called the sons of God."—Gen. 8: 1. We next raise the curtain of the past, and are rewarded with one more gem of priceless value. "And thou art after the order of him who was without beginning of days or end of years, from all eternity to all eternity. Behold thou art ore in me; a son of God; and thus may all become my sons." Gen. 6: 70, 71. There certainly can arise no dispute as to what priesthood Adam was ordained to; for it must be clear to all that the "him" of this last quotation, is the person described in John 1:1: Heb. 13:8; Rev. 22:13. This being true, that Adam, Noah, Melchisedec, Abraham, and Christ, were each and all High Priests, of the same "order" of priesthood, it should not startle or surprise us if we discover that others have likewise obtained the same blessing. The first quorum meeting of Hight Priests that mention is made of, is that recorded in Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 104, par.

28, and the following are named as being present, and "were all High Priests:" r Adam, 2 Seth, 3 Enos, 4 Cainan, 5 Mah-alaleel, 6 Jared, 7 Enoch.

It was quite fitting that "a son of God," (Adam), the first great High Priest on earth, should have presided and taken part in that meeting; for the "order" and office are granted unto man for blessing. High Priest, is the highest office in the church. We arrive at this conclusion in the following manner.—"Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our pro-fession, Christ Jesus." Heb 3:1. The brethren are here appealed to, in consideration of the "calling" and "profession," of their office of "Apostle and High Priest," the same as their Master, for he was identical with them with office and labor, with the exception of his Messiahship. "Wherefore in all things it behooved him [Christ] to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful High Priest in things pertaining to God, to make rconciliation for the sins of the people." Heb. 2:17. The calling and office-work Heb. 2:17. The calling and office-work to which Christ devoted himself, surely were the same the Apostles were invited to take part in. "But as many as received him to them gave he power to become the sons of God; only to them who believe on his name." John 1:12. And to these same "Sons of God," he addressed this very significant language.

"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it to you."—John 15:16. Here is a plain and positive statement, that Christ selected the Apostles, and ordained them, and in his last blessing, like Adam, in that High Priests quorum meeting. He likewise, moved by the inspiration of God, gave words of wonderful wisdom. "Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you; as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost." John 20: 21, 22. The Father sent Jesus as an High Priest, and likewise Christ sent the "Apostles into the world. At the first conference of the church, held in England, in the enumeration of officers present, notwithstanding that four of the "Twelve" took part and were present, their names are enrolled as High Priests. And to this agrees the actions of the Reorganization in the case of Charles Derry, who was ordained one of the "Twelve," and upon the acceptance of his resignation from that especial place in the priesthood, he was numbered with the High Priests. The same is true of William B. Smith who was ordained one of the "Twelve" in 1835; and upon his reception into the Reorganization, he was placed with the High Priests. But more particularly in point is the following.—"Then comes the high priesthood, which is the greatest of all; wherefore, it must needs be that one be appointed of the high priesthood, to preside over the priest-hood; and he shall be called president of the high priesthood of the church, or, in other words, the presiding High Priest over the high priesthood of the church. From the same comes the administering of ordinances and blessings upon the church by the laying on of the hands." Doctrine and Covenants. Sec. 104: 31. Here is the president of the whole church, or the highest officer of the church, pointed out as the "presiding High Priest." And from this issues the peculiar work of the "Twelve." They are "to confirm the church by the laying on of the hands, and the giving of the Holy Ghost." Section 17:8. But once more a golden grain we weld in this claim of evidence.—"Of the Melchisedec priesthood, three presiding High Priests, chosen by the body appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith and prayers of the church, form a quorum of the presidency of the church." Section 104:11. Thus we perceive that the three pillars of the church, having the watch care of all others of the body are three High Priests. The persons who hold office in the "order" of Melchisedec priesthood, are known to the church in the law, under the following division:

1st, The First Presidency. 2d, The Twelve, a traveling, presiding High Council. 3d, The High Council. 4th. High Priests' Quorum. 5th, Evangelical ministers. All of these names here employed, indicate separate or special work assigned to the several parts of the whole. Here I will explain the reason for my dividing the caption of this article into two words. To me, a "priest" signifies one who has been consecrated by the imposition of hands for the express purpose of commissioning them in an office of trust and responsibility to bear the terms of salvation to man. While the word "hood" signifies a covering or clothing for the head, thus the priest clothed with authority of or from God stands with the covering that God furnishes and can be very properly presented in the word priesthood, which constitutes the office with the "hood" of God upon the true representative of both man and God. In the bestowal of blessings the rule seems to have been carefully observed to put the hands of the Priest on the head of the one blessed. "And Israel stretched out his right hand and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, guiding his hands wittingly, for Manasseh was the first-born."—Gen. 48: 20.

Unite with the above the promise of blessings made to Joseph, as found in Gen. 49: 26,—"they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren." Again, a fitting and complete evidence of the "hood," or office, constituting the compound word of priesthood, is found where the church is presented in the metaphor of Joshua the High Priest:—"And I said, Let them set a fair mitre upon his head. So they set a fair mitre upon his head, and clothed him with garments."—Zech. 3:5. The word "mitre," meaning the bishop's "crown," "bonnet" or "hood," is quite in keeping with the practice and command as found in Ex. 28: 39, 40. As there are some in the church who profess to accept the Book of Mormon, and to endorse the teachings thereof, but repudiate High Priests in the church, for them I transcribe a few extracts from the Palmyra edition of said book upon the question of the Melchisedec priesthood, and the office of High Priest.

"My brethren, I would cite your minds forward to the time in which the Lord God gave these commandments unto his children; and I would that ye should remember that the Lord God ordained Priests after his holy order, which was after the order of his son, to teach these things unto the people; and those Priests were ordained after the order of his son, in a manner that thereby the people might know in what manner to look forward to his son for redemption. And this is the manner after which they were ordained, being called and prepared from the foundation of the world, according to the foreknowledge of God, on account of their exceeding faith and good works; in the first place being left to choose good or evil; therefore, they having chosen good, and exercising exceeding great faith, are called with a holy calling, yea, with that holy calling which was prepared with, and according to a preparatory redemption for such; and thus they having been called to this holy calling on account of their faith, while others would reject the Spirit of God on account of the hardness of their hearts and blindness of their minds, while, if it had not been for this, they might have had as great privilege as their brethren; or in fine: In the first place they were on the same standing with their brethren; thus this holy calling being prepared from the foundation of the world for such as would not harden their hearts, being in and through the atonement of the only begotten son, which was prepared; and thus being called by this holy calling, and or-dained unto the High Priesthood of the holy order of God, to teach his commandments unto the children of men, that they also might enter into his rest; this High Priesthood being after the order of his son, which order was from the foundation of the world; or in other words, being without beginning of days or end of years, being prepared from eternity to all eternity, according to his foreknowledge of all things. Now they were ordained after this manner: being called with a holy calling, and ordained with a holy ordinance, and taking upon them the High Priest hood of the holy order, which calling and ordinance, and High Priesthood, is without beginning or end; thus they became High Priests forever, after the order of the son, the only begotten of the father, who is without beginning of days or end of years, who is full of grace, equity and truth."-Alma 9:6.

Was there not another reference within the limits of the Book of Mormon, direct or indirect in relation to High Priests and the High Priesthood, this one should settle every doubt, for its meaning is so plain that a child may read and understand; and surely all will see unless it is for the "blindness of their minds," or they are afflicted as were those upbraided by the Master, "having eyes, see ye not? And having ears, hear ye not?" Mark 8: 20. Truly, the adage holds good. "There are none so blind, as those who will not see." Such are to be pitied.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 8.

BY S. F. W.

DISPERSION.

They went to the narrow Central lands, Where the ghosts of ruin hover, Where ancient cities, vast and grand, With trees are now grown over.

"And from thence did the Lord scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth."

The dispersion, like the preservation, was miraculous. It is asserted to be so. The prophecy connected with the Sons of Noah requires for its fulfillment not only that the dispersion be divinely directed, but that the races be under the divine guidance until the fulfillmant is accomplished. As the expression "all the earth" is used, we must suppose it is done intelligently. Half only of the earth is embraced in the Eastern Continent. Would God in miraculously re-peopling the earth leave out one half? The only reason for supposing that America was not included in the apportioning of the lands to the Beni Noah is the difficulty of getting to it; but as greater difficulties were overcome in the history, this one should not be considered insurmountable. If we find that men did reach this continent in ancient times, there should be no objection to the supposition that they were miraculously led here, or at least led here as Columbus claims to have been led. Having the whole biblical account confirmed except this one thing, and it paralleled in other cases, and it necessary to causing accomplished facts, philosophy and strict deduction require the admission of miracle here. Finding the statements of the wondrous narrative all true up to this one, viz.: That God scattered the people abroad upon the face of all the earth, it is presumably true in its fullest sense. We have found inspiration common in the olden time, and the argument from analogy is strong that in that early era there was some earlier Columbus, who had enough of the inspiration of God to find America.

Preliminary to treating upon American archæology some other a priori conclusions may be stated:—

- 1. The cross being found among all ancient nations, ought to be found also in America.
- 2. Pyramidal temples being common to all eastern nations, should be found in America.
- 3. As traditions of the flood are common to the ancient eastern nations, they should be found in America.
- 4. If the Bible narrative be true, and men found to be in America in ancient and post diluvian times, it follows they were Noachian.
 - 5, If details of the flood are found in the traditions of America, no local cataclysm could occount for them.

6. As the eastern nations of antiquity were civilized, the first Americans should have a like degree of civilization.

7. As hieroglyphics and other characters were used at Babylon, the Americans should have writings.

8. As an ark and a tower had been built in the olden times, those who came to America should be capable of building ships to come in.

9. As the true faith rapidly declined in the old world, so should it be found to do

10. As no nation ever had arts and a religious system, who did not seek to perpetuate a knowledge of their system for future generations, therefore the Americans should do so.

11. If there are ancient sculptures in America they necessarily contain a record of wars, beliefs, &c.

12. The most ancient faith should be found to be monotheistic.

13. As the race found here was unlike the known Noachian races, the old stock must have perished.

14. The causes of extermination are change of environment, natural convulsion, drought, &c., and war—internecine or inter-national.

That there was such a civilization in America in ancient times as here delineated, is made almost certain by the following account from Diodorous Siculus, who was a Greek who wrote a "Historical Library," in forty volumes, extending from the earliest times to B. C. 60.

"Over against Africa lies a very great island, many days' sail from Lybia, westward. The soil there is fruitful: a great part whereof is mountainous, but much likewise champaign, which is the most sweet and pleasant part: for it is watered by many navigable streams, and beautiful with many gardens of pleasure, planted with divers sorts of trees, and an abundance of orchards. The towns are adorned with stately buildings, and banqueting houses pleasantly situated in their gardens and orchards."

This description is not unlike that given by Grijalva and other early voyagers to the coast of Central America.

Diodorus further states:—"The Phœnicians having found out the coast beyond the pillars of Hercules, sailed along the coast of Africa. One of their ships, on a sudden, was driven by a furious storm far off into the main ocean. After they had lain under this violent tempest many days, they at length arrived at this island."

The Phoenicians were wont to sail beyond the "pillars of Hercules" into the great "exterior ocean." This account is made more credible by a like narration that Bearni, an Icelander was driven to the coast of Massachusetts in the year A. D, 985. This leads to the notice of another neglected fact that the Basques were in the practice of visiting the coasts of America before and at the time of the discovery by Columbus.

The Mayas themselves were not inefficient as sailors. Columbus saw them near Ruatan, a hundred miles from the coast, in a sailing vessel, manned with twenty men, and laden with textile fabrics, furniture, cacao, &c. These facts destroy the theory that the Americans were Autochthones.

"According to old traditions of both Mexico and Peru, the Pacific coast was, in both countries anciently visited by a foreign people, who came in ships. Why did the ancients say so much of a great Saturnian' continent beyond the Atlantic?"

The only direct evidence extant that persons of the eastern continent ever visited America in ancient times is given in the following: "In the month of December, 1827, a planter discovered in a field, a short distance from Mont-Video, South America, a sort of tomb stone, upon which strange, and to him unknown signs, or characters were engraved * * two exceedingly ancient swords, a helmet and a shield which had suffered much from rust; also an earthen vessel of large capacity. The translation of the (Greek) characters read: "During the dominion of Alexander, son of Philip, King of Macedon, in the sixtythird Olympiad, Ptolemais." On the helmet was a representation of Achilles, dragging the corpse of Hector around the walls of Troy.

To make it more plausable that some ancient seer was directed to America, I add here the secret of Columbus' strange success. He was a diligent student of the Bible, and thought the fulfillment of the prophecies required the establishment of communication between all parts of the earth. The Bible is still extant in which he marked the prophecies that related to what he thought to be his mission. He thought himself an agent of heaven to extend the influence of the Catholic Church, and to bear the knowledge of Christ to foreign lands. In a letter to the nurse of the Prince John, he said: "God made me the messenger of the new heaven and the new earth, of which he spoke in the apocalypse by St. John, after having spoken of it by the mouth of Isaiah; and he showed me the spot where to find it." To Ferdinand and Isabella he wrote, "In the execution of my western enterprise to India, human reason, mathematics and charts, availed me nothing. The design was simply accomplished as the prophet Isaiah had predicted. Before the end of the world, all prophecies must be fulfilled, the gospel be preached over all the earth, and the holy city restored to the church. Our Lord wished to do a miracle by my voyage to India. It was necessary to hasten his purpose, because, according to the calculations there only remain one hundred and fifty years to the end of the world."

During one of his later voyages Columbus became discouraged, and when in deep trouble was comforted by a voice from heaven, speaking as God, telling him what blessings he had conferred, and what was in store. It is because that the philosophers of the day reject revelation that they have gone so far astray in judgment.

In the Report of Davenport Academy for 1882 is an interpretation of tablets found in a mound in that vicinity, that confirms the a priori conclusions arrived at above:—

"The Tablets Nos. 1., 111., 1v., contain nearly 200 characters, of which, however, 16 occur several times. The remaining 150 or more different figures, the human and animal delineations not being taken into the account demonstrate that the primative inhabitants of the country did not use the simple Noachian alphabet of twenty-five letters, but a great number of syllabic signs, originated from the said alphabet, as was and still is the case in Egypt, Japan, Corea, China and Central Africa." "The harmony of the Iowa, of Mexican

"The harmony of the Iowa, of Mexican and of South American characters, puts beyond question that all the primitive inhabitants of America must have descended from the same aborigines."

"Plate 1, shows a sacrificial festivity. The fire and flame upon a hill are apparent. The top of the hill is encompassed by a stone wall. * * The sacrifice is offered to the sun and the moon and the twelve great gods of the starry heavens. * * It is evident that the North American Indians formerly worshipped the seven planets and twelve signs of the Zodiac, i. e., the twelve great gods of all the nations of antiquity."

Plate 11.—"It is a well known fact that the history of the deluge has been preserved amongst the most different nations of America, and the universality of the Noachian inundation of the globe has been placed beyond the reach of controversy by an excellent treatise of Pajana. * * * * On a Mexican temple, the deluge was represented by the image of an immense ocean, bearing only one boat, occupied only by a male and female. Instead of a dove. already forgotten by the ancient Mexicans, a humming bird returns with the olive leaf. * * In contemplating our Davenport tablet, what do we find? First we distinguish thirty or more animals, well known in the present world, of which the most interesting is the elephant, not at all domestic in America. A number of these animals appear included in two large cases, intersected with lattice-work. In the midst of these animals we see a patriarch with the sceptre in his hand, and behind him a sitting woman; apart from these we notice three other men, and three other likewise sitting women, but scattered among the animals."

Plate 111. "This tablet * * represents a planetary configuration, the twelve signs of the Zodiac, known to all nations of old, and the seven planets, conjoined with six different signs. * * * The figures of the signs are the same which we find depicted on Egyptian, Greek, Roman and other monuments. * * The signs Aries, Taurus, Gemini, are plain enough. Gemini is expressed by two sitting children, like the constellation of Gemini, at present Castor and Pollux. Cancer is expressed by the head and shears of the animal. Leo and Virgo are likewise naturally delineated, and Virgo, as it seems to me, bears in her hands Spica. The same is to be said of the figures of Libra, Scorpio, and Sagittarius. The latter is expressed by a bow and arrow being nearly invisible. Capricornus was, as we learn from the astronomical monuments of the Egyptians, a species of antelope, and the same animal, though a little deformed, resembles our Capricornus. Aquarius and Pisces explain themselves, for the former was on ancient monuments, very often symbolized by an amphora. *

* * These short lines, placed below Pisces, and Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius argue that at that time, at the beginning of spring, the sun stood in Pisces. * * *

It being known that in 1579, в. с., the sun entered the constellation of Aries on the day of the vernal equinox, our planetary configuration may have been observed before the year 1579, B. C. The result will certainly be confirmed so soon as the astronomical signification of the Nos. 2, 3, 5, 9, 11, 12, will have been fixed by other researches, which is not impossible. * *

Plate VII, is a memorial of a great eclipse of the sun. * *

Results: * * *

1. The primitive inhabitants of North America were no pre-Adamites, nor offspring of the monkeys, but Noachites.

2. They belonged to the same nation by which Mexico and South America were populated, after the dispersion of the nations in 2780, B. C.

3. The literature of the American Indians evidences that they emigrated from Japan or Corea, or proper, China.

4. They must have come over prior to the year 1579, B. C.

5. Our Indians, as well as those in Mexico and South America, knew the history of the deluge, especially that Noah's family then consisted of eight persons.

6. The primitive inhabitants of America were much more civilized than our present Indians.

7. The former understood the art of writing and used a great many syllabic characters, based upon the Noachian alphabet, and wrote from the left to the right hands, like the Chinese.

8. They were acquainted with the seven planets, and the twelve signs of the Zodiac, and they referred the same stars to the same constellations, as did the Chaldeans, Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, &c.

9. They had solar years and solar months, even twelve hours of each day. They knew the cardinal points of the Zodiac, and the cardinal days of the year.

10. Their religious creed was that of the Babylonians, Egyptians, Assyrians, Greeks, Romans, &c., because they worshiped the planets and twelve gods of the Zodiac, by sacrifices."

In this same description mention is made of brass and copper rings.

In Priest's Antiquities, page 174, is an account of an ancient Persian copper coin, at Little Miami. 176, in West Virginia, a steel sword. 177, a gold ornament, near Chillicothe. 178, handle of small sword made of elk's horn with ferrule of silver, and through it a hole where the blade had been inserted, filled with iron rust. 180, a copper cross. 261, iron ore. 254, in Scipio, N. Y., on Salmon Creek, a Mr. Halstead has, from time to time, during ten years past, ploughed up, on a certain extent of land on his farm, seven or eight hundred pounds of brass, which appeared to have once been formed into various implements, both of husbandry and war; helmets and working utensils mingle together. The finder of the brass, from time to time as he discovered it by plowing, carried it to Auburn and sold it by the pound, where it was worked up." The field had been heavily timbered.

"In the same field was found much wrought iron, which furnished Mr. H. with a sufficiency to shoe his horses for several years. Hatchets of iron were also found there, formed in the manner of the ancient German hatchet."

(Delafield 55). "In Liberty township, Washington county Ohio, are yet to be seen twenty or thirty rude furnaces, built of stone, with hearths of clay, containing pieces of stone, coal and cinders, perhaps used in smelting ore. Large trees are still growing on them, and attest their They stand in the midst of a rich body of iron ore, and in a wild, hilly, and rough part of the country, better adapted to manufactures than to agriculture.'

Priest gives a tradition of the Indians of the island of Cuba, that contains the minute particulars of the biblical account of the flood, including the curse of Ham, who is made progenitor of the Cubans.

In the Codex Vaticanus, a Mexican manuscript kept at Rome, is a pictorial history of the temptation of Eve, and the killing of Abel. The principal objects are a woman, a serpent, two boys contending; one of them colored like the woman; two altars, one of which is upside down, and a serpent.

Priest, p. 268:—"Not many years since was discovered by some Spanish hunters, on descending the Cordilleras, towards the Gulf of Mexico, in the thick forest, the pyramid of Papontla. The form of this teocalli, or pyramid, which had seven stories, is more tapering than any other monument of this kind yet discovered; but its hight is not remarkable, being but fifty-seven feet; its base but twenty-five feet on each side. However, it is remarkable on one account. It is built entirely of hewn stone, of an extraordinary size, and very beautifully shaped. Three staircases lead to the top, the steps of which are decorated with hieroglyphical sculpture, and serpents and crocodiles."

The seven stories of this structure allies it to the pyramidal temples of the old world; we have seen on the Davenport tablet the signs. P. 269:-"The pyramids of Ohio, are, in several instances, built in the same manner, with several stages, on top of which were, unquestionably, temples of wood, in the day of their glory, when their builders swarmed in populous ten thousands, over all the unbounded west; but time has destroyed all the fabrics of this sort, while the mounds on which they stood, remain." MacLean, 42:—"Temple Mounds. This class of mounds is characterized by their great regularity of form, large dimensions, and are chiefly truncated pyramids, having graded avenues, or spiral pathways to their summits. In form they are round, square, oval, oblong or octangular, all having the appearance of being left in an unfinished condition. They are generally high, yet examples are known in which they are only a few feet in elevation. They are usually surrounded by embankments. They are not numerous in Ohio, occurring only at Marietta, Newark, Portsmouth and in the vicinity of Chillicothe. The farther south we go the more numerous and the greater in magnitude they becomebeing very abundant in Tennessee and Mississippi. The summits of these mounds were probably crowned with temples, constructed of wood, but no traces remain to tell of their existence.

The gigantic mounds of Izamal, Central America, are, traditionally, the tombs both of kings and priests.

The monarch of all the mounds was that of Cahokia, Ill. It was situated in a group of sixty structures. Its form a parallelogram, with sides at the base, respectively, seven hundred and five hundred feet in length; its summit ninety feet; the area occupied six acres. On the south was a broad terrace. The summit was truncated, affording a platform two hundred by four hundred and fifty feet. From this platform rose a small conical mound about ten feet high, which on being removed, was found to contain human bones and various implements of stone and pottery, undoubtedly belonging to a more recent period. Upon the summit was probably erected a capacious temple, where were celebrated their religious ceremonies. This mound is no more. Its age is undetermined. Its size would indicate that it was one of the oldest. Its form and purpose were a reflection of the traditional mount of Para-

The great mound of Chitzen Itza is 75 feet high. It has on its summit a ruined stone edifice. That at Uxmal is 60 feet high. The great mound at Miamisburg is 68 feet high. The mounds of the north, doubtless were crowned with temples, as those of the central lands, but being of wood have disappeared.

"The ancient Carthaginians practiced raising mounds over their glorious dead. Hannibal was thus honored. At the place where he fell by his own hand was raised a lofty mound of earth. The mound of Hannibal was erected 182 years before Christ. If, therefore, the Carthaginians, the Greeks, the Romans, the more ancient Phænicians, the Egyptians, the Jews, and all the first nations immediately after the flood, were found in this practice; is it not fairly inferrable that branches or colonies of these same nations or races of men were also the authors of the mounds of America?"

"Clavigero supposes these nations of Aztalan came from Asia, across the Paci-

Of burial mounds that of Grave Creek is a type. It is of immense size, and contained two chambers, like the pyramid at Cheops, in which skeletons were found. So it was doubtless a royal sepulchre. With the skeletons were shell beads, copper bracelets, and carved stones, and an inscribed stone which allies the mound to the civilization traced in these papers. Another stone found in a neighboring mound had only straight lines on it; but otherwise resembled the one with letters. The finder of the inscribed stone, in his old age, took oath that he took it from its original bed in the upper chamber. The letters are like those used by the ancient nations, but are indecipherable. At the Congress of Nancy, M. Bing detected in them eight Canaanite words: "What thou sayest, thou dost impose it; thou shinest in thy impetuous clan. According to M. Schwab the characters read: "The chief of emigration who reached these places, has fixed these statues forever."

M. Opert: "The grave of one who was assasinated here, may God, to avenge him, strike his murderer, cutting off the hand of his existence." The failure to read is in favor of the theory of migration from Babylon, the language was invented and perfected by a race to suit their own conditions, just as the others were. Its similarity to Phænician is proof of kinship of race. As these Grave Creek characters are different from those of Davenport, it may be they represent different races and different eras, in which case it would appear that the Grave Creek inscriptions are more nearly allied to the early Noachian. The following quotations from E. R. Emerson will show their true nature.

"Upon a Babylonian cylinder that is thought to represent the building of the Tower of Babel, is seen the closed cross at the base of a parallelogram; and in a cylinder illustrating the migration of an Eastern tribe, the plain cross within a parallelogram is seen. These cylinders are relics of the earliest Babylonian people; and their inscriptions are of a cuneiform character, of which an illustration is copied from a fragment of pottery, found by Layard in his excavations at Nimroud."

In an Indian mound a globular stone was excavated, bearing inscriptions. The first two are seen to be like the fifth and second characters in the Babylonian inscription.

"Upon the celebrated amulet taken from the Grave Creek mound in Ohio, are seen devices similar to the cuneiform inscriptions on the Babylonian cylinder described above. Their veri-similitude to the other characters of Indian pictography will be recognized, and their authenticity admitted. The ancient crowns placed upon the head of the 'elder gods' of Hindostan disclose the use of the symbols of the [American] Indians. * * It is evident that the more remote the time in the past cycle of years in which these emblems and figures were wrought, the more complete the similitude between the Asiatic and the North American signs. These symbols appear, indeed, to have been wrought in the childhood of mankind, when the races were united in one human family. Comparing the most ancient Chinese, Egyptian, Persian, Hindoo, and Assyrian symbols with the more modern hieroglyphics used in those countries, we find, as in the case of the handwriting in childhood and maturity, a development without change of essential characteristics. The Indian symbols are, as has been shown, like those of the older Eastern nations." "The mounds bear evidence of great antiquity; on the summit are trees eight hundred years old. The altar mounds disclose burned clay and blackened stone, indicating their use."

"It appears that the mounds are the earliest records of the aboriginees, bearing marks of antiquity perhaps even greater than that of the hieroglyphic figures upon the moss-grown rocks. Their conformation is remarkably various. Distinguishing the object and purpose of their structure, are seen the Sacrificial, the Burial, the Festival, the Matrimonial and the Historic mounds."

THE BIBLE.

DEAR HERALD: In compliance with the wish of Sr. Almira M. Snow in Herald, page 315, present volume, I wrote to the American Bible Society, New York, and received the following reply. The Bibles issued by the British and Foreign Bible Scociety since 1804, its comencment, is 103,000,000. The Bibles and Testaments issued by the American Bible Society since 1816, its commencement, is 45,500,000. The Scriptures are now printed in 261 languages and dialects. Bibles published and issued by other firms and publishers may be estimated by these two great societies. The society sent me a souvenir of the exposition at New Orleans, passages of scripture in 242 languages and dialects.

Statistics show that since the year 1804 more than one hundred and eighty million of Bibles, Testaments, and integral portions of Scriptures have been distributed in all parts of the world by Bible societies alone. Upwards of 1,000 persons are employed by the Bible societies in distribu-The earliest Bible printed from movable type was at Mentz in 1455. No tradition gives the number of copies printed but it is supposed to be less than 300. The Bible now in common use was printed in A. D. 1611, in a volume containing 1,200 pages. In 1877, one hundred copies of the Bible were printed at Oxford, thence forwarded to London; fully bound in morocco and exhibited at the South Kensington Museum the same day.

If the reader desires any more concerning the Scriptures, write to the society in New York.

Respectfully your brother, WILLIAM STREET.

SERMON BY PROF. SWING.

The subject of Prof. David Swing's discourse at Central Church, Chicago, Sunday, May 10th, was "Spiritual Estates." He used the following text:

"Visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generation."—Exodus 20: 5.

The speaker said that the life of an individual never begun and ended in himself. The procession of thought and action which filed along through the three-score and ten years of the special personage was organized before it came to the particular soul, and it would move on and be dispersed or widened out and enlarged far beyond the grave of the special heart of any name and greatness. There was, he held, no such an article as an independent mind all such independence being only comparative. What should be expected of a single member of society was that what passes along through that one mind shall be in some way modified, made purer and larger, or more beautiful, or more useful. Even genius could accomplish but little as a creator, but it could become the agent of a great advance and could thus rank next to the one who made the human race in its strange beginning. The expression 'self-made' contained, he thought, a certain kind of possibility, but it contained also a large element of the impossible, for no self-made man had ever formed his own language, or arts, or sciences, or politics. Even Benjamin Franklin did not make himself. He was made by the preceding centuries of England, Germany, and France. The whole seventeenth century was busy in the formation of the Franklins, Washingtons, and Jeffersons, but along came at last these individual wills; they took up the materials in and around themselves and reorganized them by means of a marvelous addition and substraction. In that passion for liberty which these men revealed, there lay the enthusiasm of the Greeks, of Brutus, of many Romans, Germans, Swiss, French and Britons. Each hero of the several epochs dying, left something for the third and fourth generations. Individual duty was partly to be exhausted in finding the fact and the merit of these spiritual estates, and then in developing these estates until this intellectual and emotional inheritance should pass to the fourth generation much more valuable than it was when it passed from the first to the second, or from the second to the third.

Life, he asserted, was not made the less responsible by this fact that we are flowing in a great stream. If we were not wholly the creators of our own choice, and were thus something which the Greeks pictured as children of fate, there was one thought that came between man and moral innocence, and that thought was that we are responsible for the shape to be assumed by the generations lying in the future. If this age could go back and find in the past a reason for many of its vices, so the next generation could look back to this nineteenth century and find here the seeds of its unhappiness. By as much as the individual was discharged from the claims of the past he was retained by the sorrows of the future, and the guilt which could not come down from the yesterday comes as heavily from the morrow. Thus must each mortal bear a load of responsibility, if not in what was before he came it would be in what was to follow him. If life was a sweeping sfream which made us in its flow, so accountability was also a sweeping stream which touched every mind and heart as it moved onward.

When slightly tempted, Adam fell. Upon him rested the guilt, and Calvinism was wrong in asking that the people of this generation be arrested and convicted for the sin of an ancestor. While this was good reasoning, there was after all little help to be found in it, because such reasoning would tell one that he must be the Adam of to-morrow. Suffering millions in the next age would look back and exclaim: "What moral cowards were those nineteenth century men and women! Placed in an eden of liberty, wisdom, and genius, they fell from their high estate, and, yielding only to slight temptations, they wore garments of sackcloth and ashes for us, their children." It is almost certain, he said, that what is called public life, whether it be that of illustrious individuals or of the Kings, Presidents, and all great officials, held the third and fourth generations under its baneful or beneficent spell. Anything that clothed a person with unusual charm caeated a new relation to the multitude, and since genius, eloquence, and political station attracted the longest and most fixed gazed these became the great makers of destiny. Although there were a thousand millions of people on the earth they did not contribute equally to its glory or shame. The moment any person appeared to be aminent for any cause the millions began to raise their eyes, and, if the person were indeed in some manner impressive, these worshippers soon began to wear the qualities contained in their great or little divinity. The decline of Rome began with its great men. Fabricius the Inflexible lived 300 years, Aristides the Just 500, before that Nero-period when the aim of the most conspicious was to be more and more animal and less and less man. It was not illogical to suppose that could some power, human or divine, have kept in sight of the Roman people a hundred great men, that gulf would never have yawned which swallowed up the millions who came into being at the beginning of our era. When their lights had been extinguished the people stumbled and fell by myriads.

Thus it appeared that in our relations to the city, and the State, and the Nation we should toil hard to place in power men who would be a light to the poeple and not a midnight gloom causing them to fall into mire and deep pits.

Miscellaneous.

NOTICE.

Editor Herald:—Under the caption of "disfellowshipped," Bro. Squires states in Herald of May 30th, that Bro Owen "was appointed to labor in and for the church under the hands of Bro. Zenas H. Gurley." This statement though harmless is incorrect, as it conveys the idea that I ordained Bro. Owen, who was an Elder in the church for many years prior to our first meeting, which occured at Brooklyn, and where he was highly recommended to me as an able minister.

This is intended to correct that error (where so understood), as my attention by a brother was called to it.

Allow me to state also, for the benefit of those concerned, that as I go preaching, (for I intend to preach while I live), that accepting the act of General Conference to myself, I will take good care to make proper statement before the public, that the church shall not be compromised by anything I may say. I regard it as due the body and due myself. Fraternally, etc.

Z. H. GURLEY.

[We noticed the statement of Bro. Squires in the matter referred to by Bro. Gurley, but supposed that the Saints would comprehend that the appointment of Elder Owen was under the direction and in the field of Bro. Gurley. We see now that it might appear to some as suggested by Bro. Gurley.—ED.

SANHEDENS BANNER.

We take this method of expressing our appreciation of the patronage and help received, by which this little messenger has been sustained in the first year of its existence, which closes with the September number. Wishing its continuance, we lay by our usual modesty, and cry, Help! Help! Help! for the Banner. We had hoped to begin the second year at a reduced rate; but find this impracticable, without a guarantee of five hundred bona fide subscribers, at fifty cents a year. Bro. P. Anderson, in prosecuting the Editorial labor, is as ecenomical as possible; but he can not proceed without incurring some expense. If it be asked, what are the expenses in the editorial department, we reply, paper and stamps. In editorial correspondence, sending copy to and having proofs returned to him, from the office for correction. For while the compositors set the type, the proof reading has to be done by the Editor; he being from the office, sending and resending copy is a matter of necessity. This, with the cost of printing, includes the expenses of the Banner. The arragement with the Herald Office has been satisfactory; save perhaps a failure in one or two cases to promptly receipt for donations, which doubtless will be rectified. It is much more gratifying to have the Banner sent forth from our own office than to have it handled by strangers. We doubt not but the Board of Publication will be as lenient to the struggling child as possible.

In view of the necessity of sending out the Banner for fifty cents a year, if possible, we suggest, that all the present subscribers forward by July 15th, 1885, one dollar; fifty cents of which will be credited to them for subscription, and fifty cents as donation. Induce as many others to do the same as you can. If by this method we have assurance of $200, we will venture to send forth the Banner on its important mission, at fifty cents a year, otherwise the present price must be charged for the coming year. For it must be remembered that we are not prepared to assume any risk, nor do we think it wise to enter into any wild speculation to make a big display in the beginning, to come down with a crash after a short time; better move cautiously, rise slowly, with a view to permanancy.

It may not be practicable for all to send the money by the above date; but it is desirable that it be known by that time what all will do; we therefore advise that you send to Mr. P. Anderson, 1616, Ninth street, Council Bluffs, Iowa, and inform him by letter what you will do for the Banner the coming year. When, or about what time, you can forward subscription, or donation. We suggest that all agents bestir themselves to secure new subscribers. Ask presidents of branches to call the attention of their members to this appeal. We appeal especially to the Danish brethren; but will gladly receive help from all who desire to help. Should there be a surplus at the close of the second year of the Banner's existence; it will be used in the interest of the Banner; or reserved to assist in publishing the Doctrine and Covenants, and Book of Mormon in the Danish language. Therefore, have no fears in being liberal, that you will send, or give too much, for the more help you render, the sooner a great work will be done for those of your own nationality; and thereby you will show your love for the latter-day work. Brethren, don't let your little Banner, which has made so commendable a beginning, stagger and fall for the needed help. JAMES CAFFALL,

> H. N. HANSEN, PETER ANDERSEN.

HOW TO KEACH THE RESORTS OF COLORADO.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR - EDITOR.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, June 20, 1885.

THERE is a speck of war in the good old city of Boston, the city of baked beans and esthetic culture. This time the casus belli is the right to preach on Boston Common. A summary of the trouble runs thus. In 1882, William F. Davis asked the Chief of Police if preaching on the Common would be construed into a breach of the peace. He was referred to the Police Commissioners, who decided that it would not. Meetings were held by Mr. Davis and others during the summer. In 1884 meetings were again began, were interrupted a time or two by the police; but upon controversy were continued during the warm weather. May 17th, Messrs. Davis and H. L. Hastings of the Christian Church; Dr. A. J. Gordon, and the Salvation Army, held services at different hours and different parts of the Common; and were arrested, taken before the Municipal Court in criminal session and fined $10,00 each, without costs. May 24th, Mr. Hastings read three chapters of the Bible; Mr. Davis read a portion of Scripture and made brief comment. For this they were arrested and fined $30.00 each for reading and speaking on the common.

As a comment on the peculiar condition of public sentiment as judged of from the action of the licensing authorities of Boston, a rule was adopted by the Common Committee to "refuse all requests to preach on Boston Common." But license was granted to Buffalo Bill and his cow-boys to give a performance of "Scenes in the Wild West" at Beacon Park, Boston, Sunday, August 24th, 1884. Boston culture could not stand Sunday religious services in the open air on the Common, but it could abide the coarse exhibition of border life and warfare. Five to fifteen hundred people must not meet on public ground to hear some man talk on Scriptural topics; but ten thousand, five hundred of them women, might meet on public ground to witness the show of Cortinas and his Apaches. It is almost time for another "Tea party" in Boston.

Mr. H. L. Hasting, of The Christian, published at Boston, has prepared and is circulating a circular letter, from which we glean the facts stated above; and from which we quote Article Two of the Massachusetts Bill of Rights, and the closing paragraphs of the address.

"Art. II. It is the right as well as the duty of all men in society, publicly and at stated seasons to worship the Supreme Being, the Great Creator and Preserver of the Universe. And no subject shall be hurt, molested, or restrained, in his person, liberty or estate, for worshiping God in the manner and season most agreeable to the dictates of his own conscience; or for his religious profession or sentiments; provided he doth not disturb the public peace, or obstruct others in their religious worship."—Mass. Bill of Rights.

"Boston officials do not hold their offices by a life tenure, and it may be that the tax-papers and voters of the city of Boston will by-and-by have something to say that may be of interest to their servants who have thus presumed to prohibit the preaching of the gospel on the public grounds of the city. If these gentlemen shall see it their duty to make suitable provision for the public wants in this respect, recognizing the rights of people and preachers as guaranteed by the fundamental law of the Commonwealth, it will be unnecessary to pursue the matter much further. But otherwise it will be exceedingly desirable to learn from competent authority, whether it is within the power of a committee of three to prohibit gospel preaching and the public worship of Almighty God, "upon the public grounds" of Boston.

There are thousands on thousands of people in the city who have no opportunity to hear the Gospel. They do not belong to wealthy churches, they are not able to hire costly pews, they have no suitable clothes in which to appear in the Sunday dress parade of prosperous churchgoers; and they have no right in those private places of worship, owned by wealthy men. Doubtless they would be courteously welcomed in some of them, if they only knew where to go; while in other cases they might be appalled by the grandure of the ushers and pew-openers, or repelled by the majesty of aristocrats, whose money builds churches and buys pews. But if every church in Boston were crowded to its utmost capacity, a large majority of the people would still be outside. Without religious instruction, what can we look for but anarchy and ruin? It is asserted by the eloquent atheist and blasphemer who publicly boasts of violating law in Boston, and does it without arrest or fine, that infidelity is spreading throughout the land. It is doubtless true; and it is also publicly stated that the number of homicides in the United States in the year 1884 was more than twice as large as in the year 1883. It is believed by many that the masses of the people of Boston, who "labor and are heavy laden," need to hear the Gospel of Christ much more than they need to see Buffalo Bill's war dance and Sunday pow-wows. Has any committee of Boston officials the right to prohibit the public preaching of that gospel to the poor to whom the Son of God proclaimed it? This is the question which needs to be authoritatively and permanently settled."

Messrs. Davis and Hastings have appealed from the action of the Municipal Court by which fines were assessed to the higher courts; and it will be a matter of interest to all to learn what the decision of the court will be.

THE Alta California for May 15th, has an editorial, from which we cull the following:

"Polygamy was not included in the tenets or practices of the early Mormon faith. It was not conceived in the brain of Joseph Smith, the founder of the Mormon Church. It was an afterthought of Brigham Young, who promulgated it as a revelation, similarly as Mahomet declared his desires by cunning promulgation."

The circle of knowledge is widening. Fifteen years ago, it would have been difficult to find a paper of the status of the Calfornia that was bold enough to state what is given above. Facts are facts, and though they travel slowly, they get there in due time.

FROM the Daily Echoing Nemesis, published at Eureka Springs, Arkansas, for June 4th, we learn that

"The Elders of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, Elders H. C. Smith and I. N. Roberts, who have been discoursing on the doctrines of their creed, near the Harding Spring for the last two nights, are having crowded houses every evening."

Of one of the brethren the editor says:

"We had an interesting conversation from Elder I. N. Roberts, of the Latter Day Saints, today. We found him an intelligent and well informed gentleman, and he gave us some valuable information concerning the history and creeds of his church, in which our information has been much at fault."

THE following notice appears in the East Kent, Plaindealer, published at Ridgetown, Ontario, for Thursday, June 4th, and is remarkable from the fact that it has been very difficult and hard to get recognition in the public prints of the Dominion.

LATTER DAY SAINTS' SEMI-ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

"This body met on Saturday last, at the town hall, Ridgetown, under the presidency of Elder John H. Lake, President of the Canada mission, and Arthur Leverton, President of the Kent and Elgin District.

"A Committee was appointed to look after the repair on the Lindsay meeting house, consisting of Henry Leatherdale, Peter McBrayne and Mr. Vickery.

"Certain members of the church in the Kent and Elgin District, having left the country lately, leaving debts unpaid, Elder Lake and Mr. Arthur Leverton, were appointed as a Committee to bring the discipline of the church to bear on such parties, with a view to have the said debts satisfed, or the delinquents expelled from the church

"Branch reports were read and disposed of. The reports showed an increase in church membership, and a revival of interest in the work throughout the district. Elders and Priests gave reports of their labors in the field. Other reports referred to finance and statistics. This closed the secular business, and preaching took place on Saturday night, and three times on Sunday. Elder Lake and Mr. Arthur Leverton preached. Mr. Leverton is a good speaker, and one of the leading men of Kent, having been a member of the County Council, and having filled other high positions. Elder Lake is a gentlemen of pleasing and forcible address, and no one can hear him without admitting that he is fluent and thoroughly conversant with his subject. He brings his arguments wholly from the authorized Scriptures. He makes his points clearly and supports his position with a great deal of logical exactness. His discourses, while being controversial are entirely free from anything offensive."

Brethren Blair and Bell are building a store 25 x 75, two stories, at Lamoni, on the main street; they having some time since bought out the stock of Bro. David Dancer, general merchandise.

Bro. John Shippy of Hershey, Michigan, has bought lots for himself and a son, in Lamoni, and is putting up a house.

Bro. J. A. McIntosh wrote from Alliston, Ontario: "I baptized one here on the 4th inst., expect some more soon."

The Senate of Illinois passed, on June 9th, the bill fixing the lowest punishment for burglary in the night time at five years; the highest being twenty years. If a burglar carries a deadly weapon, drug or anaesthetic, the term of imprisonment may be for life.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. S. Patterson wrote from Lyons, Walworth county, Wis., June 8th:

"This leaves me well, and working for the Master. Held two meetings here yesterday, with fair liberty, and baptized two ladies, who bid fair to make good members of the church. Kind regards to all in the office."

Bro. Charles W. Dillon, in writing from Colo., Story county, Iowa, says:

"Please say through the Herald that we would be glad to have any of the Elders or Saints that might be passing through here to call and see us. We will try to entertain them the best we can. We ask the Saints to remember us in prayer."

In writing from Canton, Fulton county, Illinois, June 11th, Bro. M. T. Short says:

I baptized four here last Sabbath; blessed a half dozen children; conducted sacrament, social, and business meeting; and set the branch in better working order. I have preached in this vicinity more than a fortnight and felt just excellent. The entire community is aroused and the heathen are in trouble, but the children of Zion rejoice.

Our exchanges from abroad, the Vindicator of Truth, our English visitor; and the Expositor, from the Pacific Coast, put in their appearance promptly this week, (June 10th), and are welcomed with pleasure, as their contents indicate that the latter-day philosophy and Christian pluck are manifestly known to those engaged in the literary and business management.

The pen wielded by Bro. H. P. Brown of the Expositor is a trenchant blade; and woe betide the unlucky victim that dares its point. The managers deserve credit for the good paper and neat appearance of the Expositor; keep it alive and push it ahead.

Our brothers of the Vindicator are doing splendidly. In their number for May, they offer the tract, "Who then can be saved?" at two pence per dozen; eight pence per hundred; six shillings per thousand. This is equivalent to $1.50 per thousand.

and; 16 cents per hundred, and four cents per dozen.

By the Vindicator we learn that the Annual Conference for the English Mission would be held May 23d, 24th and 25th. We hope the brethren had an excellent session.

The meeting places advertized in the Vindicator are:—

Ashton-under-Lyne—83, Exbridge Street, Portland Street. Birmingham—Temple Row Meeting Room; and in Upper Room, Icknield Port Road. Burton-on-Trent—Meeting Room, Henhurst Mount, Shobnall Road. Clay Cross—New Street. Derby. Farnworth—Saints' Meeting Room, top of Market Street. London, Limehouse. Leeds—42, Oldfield Road, New Wortley. Manchester—Latter Day Saints' Chapel and Meeting Room, 113, Clarenden Street, Hulme. Sheffield—Meeting Room, Dun Lane, Shales-Moor. Stafford—Saints' Meeting Room, 82, Foregate Street. Wigan—Latter Day Saints' Meeting House, 33, Leader Street, Birkets Bank, Schofield Lane.

Bro. Foseph Smith:-It has now been a long time since I wrote to the Herald. I have just been thinking how wrong it is to so neglect, as I know there are many to be found in the land of the west who would read with interest any items of good news coming from the old country, as it is called. Yes, there are many now in America with whom I have met and worshipped, and in whose society I have felt as secure as a brother and a friend could do. To these, dear Herald, I desire you to act as a kind reminder; and also as a messenger of love and sympathy; and if you should get in the hands of Bro. I. N. Bishop, formerly of Wales, tell him I hope he will send nie his address. I hear he is in America; and I wish to write to him.

We have just closed our Mission Conference, held at Sheffield, Yorkshire. We had a very good time. The Spirit of God was present, leading his servants to adopt good and wise measures for the spread of truth. The Spirit of peace, holding sway in every heart, made the various sessions a pleasure to all who took part. The services on the Sabbath were well sustained and well attended by enquiring people. We feel to rejoice that we are engaged in the work of the Lord; for it is good to be a Saint of latter-days.

Dear brethren; what a joy, what a pleasure, to feel the Spirit of God burning within, driving all evil out; making us to feel a fervent love to God and men. We are trying what we can do for the work of the Lord in this country.

The people are beginning to distinguish the wide difference that exists between us and the Utah people. The past has been a hard time, fighting down the great evil of polygamy and other crimes. But we thank God that he has permitted some, yea many, of our older brethren to live to see the day when the Church of Jesus Christ, that we represent, has attained the position it now assumes in this country, i. e., a power for good. None but the wilful and ignorant will now venture to say there is no difference. We are glad to say, from coming in contact with the people, that the difference is becoming widely known, and by none more appreciated than by us, who have been laboring so many long years to clearly establish the difference, so that we could lift up our heads without shame, and preach the gospel of Christ, brought forth again in these days by the power of God, as manifested through his servant the Prophet. This we are doing with good results.

I believe the English Mission to be an important institution. I believe there are thousands of honest hearts in this country, who will ere long receive this gospel as brought forth by the revealing power of God, despite man's traditions and preconceived notions. Truth must triumph; for men every where, who love religion, true and simple, are seeking for freedom. And truth only can make men free. Therefore, Jesus says to all honest truth seekers: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." I rejoice in this fact; and also in this one: "God our God is no respecter of persons; but in every natlon, he that feareth him and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him."

Elder Thomas Taylor still presides in this mission, and he is loved, respected, and sustained by all who are associated with him in forwarding the interests of the work in this country. We are adding to our numbers, and before long, a good work will be done in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for us, that we may be mighty in word and deed, in spreading the knowledge of those holy doctrines, which will save all those who obey them, and live faithful to the same, into the highest glory, even the celestial, of which glory the sun is spoken as being typical. Brethren; who will be able to stand in the day of the Lord? Shall we? Let us try to live up to the standard of truth and righteousness, so that we may fill up the following, uttered by the servant of God: "He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully, he shall receive a blessing from the Lord." Where is there a greater or higher blessing than eternal life. God has promised this to all his faithful ones. May we be of that number, is my prayer. Geo. S. Greenwood. Yours,

> MILLVILLE, New Jersey, May 17th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph:—I forward you by this mail "The Baptist Home Mission, monthly," containing a few articles on Mormonism, sent me by my brother, Rev. Geo. T. Street, of Cairo, Michigan. I have sent a first number of the Conference Herald, and the fourth number of the Expositor to the Editor, with a brief reply to the articles. What will be the result I do not know. Should you make a reply through the Herald, send me an extra number, or one to the Editor of the Baptist Monthly. Brother John Smith, and John Gilbert once had some arguments with my brother; but he could not stand the fire.

I am pained to hear the Macedonian cry, having been in the church upwards of fifteen years, and do not hold any office. Only two years out of these fifteen have I lived where there were branches. I have defended the cause by word of mouth, and in newspapers having from 2,000 to 20,000 circulation, and once in a paper having 50,000 to 100,000; suffered almost all kinds of abuse, from both friends and enemies, and in my anger have said words I have had to be sorry and repent for.

Yours in bonds,

Dear Herald:-Immediately after writing you I came here, and was permitted the very pleasant task of baptizing two of Bro. F. M. Baker's children. Spoke in the school-house in the evening. For some time Bro. D. Bowen, who lives in Seward county, about three miles north of Friend had been writing me to come up there; so Bro. Baker took me up there on the 24th ult. Bro. Robt. White, of Wilber, accompanied us, and gave timely and acceptable help. The people of the district in which Bro. Bowen lives, at a called meeting, were almost of one heart and one mind, namely; that we should not occupy their school-house. The district north, however, give us welcome, and we unfurled the flag of liberty and truth, three times; the house was well filled with attentive congregations, and many expressed a desire to hear more of the preaching. Having a wish to occupy the forbidden ground, we made arrangements by which Bro. Bowen turned his large front room into a church, and we spoke seven times; the attendance was not large, stormy weather and an opposition that is fearful to come out into the field of investigation, where the light of eternal truth may shine to the detecting of error, was the cause; but there were enough who ventured out to assure us of friends in the future. One man made bold enough to state that if he had known that we preached that kind of a doctrine he should have voted for us to have had the school-house. Thus we gained one convert to the God-bestowed and Americanpromised doctrine of Free Speech. I am of the opinion that the intolerant, soul-dwarfing prejudice of that vicinity was perforated with a few red hot shot from one of the sharp shooters of "the army of the Lord." He that has ever sought to prevent the introduction of saving truth, was not only at work by his human agents, but likewise gave evidence of his spiritual presence. Thanks be to Him who gave us this spiritual victory, we praise with all our powers His Holy name, and fear not to confess and teach His goodness among the congregations of the people. Bro. Baker having obtained permission for me to use the United Brethren Church of this vicinity, I came on the 1st inst. It was somewhat amusing to me to see how disappointed Bro. Baker was, when we went to give the appointment, that we could not have the house, for the reason we were not "orthodox." I entered my protest against the entering of judgment before the evidence had first been presented. A school-house hard by the church affords us a most excellent opportunity to grant the people the privilege of a contrast, and we are faithful in the discharge of our duty. A refusal to allow me to tell the glad news of the gospel causes no discouragement, but rather prompts to greater efforts. If I can not capture the fort, I may succeed in spiking some of the guns. I have made a proposition to Elder Shields and the Christian Church of Dorchester, to hold joint meeting there; we expect an answer this week. Will report progress.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

Kukaiau, Hamakua, Hawaii, April 17th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph Smith: - I have just received a letter from Bro. William Hopkins, he gives a promising account of your settlement in Iowa, but rather a freezing account of your winter climate, and low prices for farm products. But I see that prices have improved some since I was in Iowa thirty years ago. Then corn in the country was worth only seven cents per bushel, and other farm products in proportion. Here things are different. Most of our supplies come from California, excepting fresh meats. grain is grown here except corn, and that to a very limited extent. Fresh beef and mutton are retailed at 10 to 12 1/2 cents per pound. Pork is somewhat higher; a fat hog is worth, live weight, 10 cents per pound. Chickens $10 and $12 per dozen; eggs fifty cents per dozen. Many farm products can be raised abundantly here; but the market has been limited and the industry of the people still more limited. This seems as new a country to me as California did in 1847. I think there will be a great improvement here in the near future. Sugar is our great staple; rice comes next; both do well here. The yield of sugar per crop averages three tons of sugar per acre, but it takes eighteen months to grow. Our best crops average six tons of sugar. Wages are about the same as in California.

> Yours truly, JNO. M. HORNER.

REXBURG, Bingham Co., Idaho. May 25th, 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - We have long since felt a desire to drop a few lines to you; besides we thought that you together with the Herald readers might wish to hear from this part of the country. We sold out our little place at North Ogden, a year ago this spring, and moved here, into this new country situated in the forks of the Great Snake river, where there is formed a number of islands. The famed Teton peak is situated due east of us about 75 miles, towering up to a great hight, having the appearance from our house, of a large wheat stack, leaning a little to the northeast. It is said of the Teton Peak that no one ever ascended to its top, or summit; but that an Indian squaw ascended higher than any white personthat she went up until blood came out of her ears; and for the feat she received fifty dollars.

This country is settling up fast, principally by emigrants from Utah, many very poor, and some digusted with Utah doings and oppression. There are some polygamists, but the officers of law overtake them now. The Bishop's Counsellor and another polygamist were taken by an officer a few days ago at Rexburg. Bishop Ricks locked himself up in his room, and the officer having no process by which he could force an entrance, the old Bishop has escaped for a short time longer. I have been very busy trying to make a farm. There is work here to do in the Lord's vineyard. We have done all we could in speaking to the people in their houses, the fields, and by the way-side; for they don't open their doors for public preaching; yet as you know. I expect to commence holding meetings in my neighborhood soon, for there are some believing and others willing to hear, and we have no Brighamite Bishop in our neighborhood to say what we shall do, or what weshall not do. When we read the account of the discovery of a quarry of marble in Independence, it caused our hearts to leap for joy; for we look upon it as an indication of the near approach of the building of the Temple of the Lord, even the house of his choice. And how can the Utah people expect to be permitted to have a hand in building that holy house, holding to blood atonement and with animosity in their hearts? They should bear in mind that King David was not permitted to build the temple of the Lord because he had been a man of blood. It must be built in a time of peace and by hands unstained with blood. Oh, why can not this people see the truth? Can they not see that the Josephites are "pleading the cause of injured innocence," not only in Missouri, but the cause of injured innocence in Utah and in the whole world. But no; they harden their hearts and stiffen their necks, until "the Lord will feed the fat shepherds with judge-S. S. THORNTON, and wife.

> EUREKA SPRINGS, Ark., June 6th, 1885.

Dear Herald: - After writing for your columns from Good Intent, Kansas, I remained there a few days enjoying my visit and preaching with good liberty. I then visited the branch at Netawaka, and found there warm-hearted and generous Welsh Saints, as kind and true as in years when our labor was thrown together. Stopped a few days at Independence, and May oth found me at Pittsburg, Kansas, where I met brother Wheeler and Evan A. Davies. Learning that they were to hold a meeting in town, I decided to remain with them; accordingly we repaired to the house of Mr. Freed, whose companion is a Saint, where I was kindly entertained during my stay. At night, Bro. Evan preached, and I was well pleased. If he remains faithful he will be useful to the cause in the future.

Sunday morning, the 10th, I accepted an invitation to speak, and was blessed with fair liberty in so doing. At night, in company with Bro. Holt, walked three miles in the country to hear Bro. Jap. Richards, but he insisted I should stand in his place, which I did. After meeting, went home with Bro. Richards, which brought me within the bounds of Pleasant View Branch. I remained with them several days, and preached four discourses. I found, so far as I could judge, a zealous, earnest band of Saints; especially can this be said of the young Elders. There are several of them there who have to labor for the bread that perisheth, but instead of idling away their time on Sunday, they are out in the neighboring school-houses, breaking the bread of life. God is blessing their labors, and their influence is being felt. While there, I was the guest of Bro. John T. Davies, and was greatly benefitted by his wise counsel. He is one of the staunch men of the church, whom it would do to trust in any field.

May 16th found me at Webb City, Missouri. The brethren procured the Opera House and I began discoursing to them as light was given. On the 19th, Bro. Roberts, my companion in labor, arrived and spoke once. We left there on the 22d, and spent the night at Pierce City. The next day about ten o'clock, we arrived at Seligman, Missouri. We lacked two miles and a half of being in our field; but as we had previously been requested, we stopped. We remained at Seligman over a week, preaching ten discourses to attentive listeners, with good liberty. While there we were offered a pleasant home at the residence or Bro. Ellis Short, a brother of Morris Trimble Short. The last named was down there last winter, and created a great interest and enquiry. He made some positive enemies, but many warm friends. Neither he nor the church need be ashamed of the record he made there. The more liberal class would welcome him back at any time.

On June 1st, we came to this place, where we are being entertained at the pleasant home of Bro. W. R. Pickering. We have held for meetings which have been fairly attended, and will continue for a few days longer. Circumstances are rather against us, as the only house we can get is an old store, which has been seated for a school and the ventilation is very poor; while the weather is quite warm. Taking these things into consideration, together with the fact that there is some kind of entertainment in town nearly every night, and we are well satisfied with the result of our work. This may not be a very good place to permanently establish the work, but it is an excellent place to scatter the seed; for this is a great health resort, which brings many people here from almost all parts of the world. It may be they will take some of the leaven home with them, and it will work in distant fields, making openings for the preaching of the word. We will sow with liberal hand, and leave the harvest for the Master.

I do not expect we will ever be free from care and trials, either as individuals or as a body; but I believe the prospect for the latter at least are brightening, and I feel encouraged to labor on, leaving my future in the hands of him whom I serve.

To the Elders of the South-Western Missouri, I appeal to use diligence, zeal and humility, in prosecuting the work. De not bury your talent, but press on to the victory which awaits us.

In hope.

HEMAN C. SMITH.

Dear Herald:-In your columns for June 6th, I. N. Adamson replies to the Sister who is said to have written harshly of the Herald. Presuming that I am the Sister refered to, permit me to say that I expressed no fault with the Editors nor the system of arrangement. The remarks and Editorials are unexceptional; nor did I refer to question and answers, though I do think many of the former are rather simple; but I am able to throw the broad mantle of charity over any amount of simplicity and ignorance in either church officers or members while they show an honest desire to improve. I believe that the correspondence columns is intended for, and capable of great good, and for that reason I protest against its abuse and the advantage that has been taken of it to vent personal spite and other unchristian feelings.

The above writer says that "in the communication department we are permitted to express our views." Yes, and the number of views expressed have been simply appaling, one after this manner and another after that, causing the perplexed enquirer after truth to ask, "How are they all led by the same spirit?" "For God is not the author of confusion, but peace."

I rejoice at the action of conference in giving the Editors control of the Herald in the selection of matter, I hope great things from it, and expect to see its power for good vastly increased. The world may now have a chance to learn something of the church's views and teachings. If the Herald becomes properly the church organ and faithful exponent of church principles and practices, I will be only too glad to support and circulate it to the best of my ability; but I cannot see the "imperative duty" of any one to sustain and circulate the speculative views, wild reasoning, and unarthorized teachings that have so largely filled the communication columns in the past.

The Sister.

Editors of the Heraid:—I wrote the following to the National Tribune, April 24th, and asked the editor to insert the same in his paper. As he has not, I will send a copy of it to the Saints' Heraid, to see if it will find its way to the waste basket.

"Editor of the Tribune: As a member of Tindel Post, No. 29, Chilicothe, Missouri; and as a reader of your valuable paper; Sir, I see from the Kansas City Times, of Kansas City, and the Saints' Herald, published at Lamoni, Iowa, that a large conference of that people (Saints) was held at Independence, Missouri, April 6th to 15th, 1885; and that during the said meeting, a resolution was made and prayers were offered for our Comrade, U. S. Grant. I see from the reading of the Tribune that he is much better. Has any one else seen the same things published in said papers? If it is true; Gen U. S. Grant may look and live yet, if it is real."

CHEYENNE, W. T., June 7th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—I make it a rule when on my ranch to go to prayer at ten o'clock. When the hour is come, I say to my men, "Come, boys, let us go to prayer." Some one will say: "O, Mr. Eames, it is so far to the house, and we want to finish this job. Let us put it off." I will then say: "My boys, stop work; and I will pray here." So I kneel down in the field and pray. I read in the Book of Mormon: "Humble yourselves, and continue in prayer unto him. Cry unto him when in your fields; yea, over all your flocks; cry unto him in your houses."—Alma 16: 28. Please read. No blame to that people; they were taught to pray in their fields and their houses. That is what I believe in.

I was minister to the M. E. Church, colored, for a while; the colored minister being called east, asked me to take charge of his flock, which I did; not being afraid that my pale face would change by contact. I gave them a few Baptist sermons, and then told them the latter-day-story. That Joseph Smith was a prophet; that an angel came to him as he was praying in the woods. In two weeks one of their number wished to be baptized; but not wishing me to baptize him, got the colored Baptist minister to do it. I was in strong hopes to get all of the congregation baptized before the new minister came, but only got one. I have been speaking to the Baptist, colored, four months ago we had a branch here; but nearonce each Sabbath. They call me a Baptist-anda-half; I am so strong on baptism. A year and ly all are now away: some in Idaho, some at Rawlins; some in Colorado, and one left alone—I am the salt of Cheyenne, I hope. I shall never leave my Savior. I have tried a long time to salt the people of Cheyenne; I think they now need a little pepper. I wish that Bro. Joseph could stop and speak to us. I could get a church or nice hall, for him, and believe that he would have a good house.

Cheyenne was baptized July 4th, 1867, with two barrels of wine; I tell them that they then got a draught of the wine, and some of them have liked the bottle ever since. Pray for John Eames, alone in a city of six thousand people—waterworks, gas-works, the electric light, telephone, and a town clock; and wickedness to match, VIOLA, Iowa, June 1st, 1885.

Dear Herald: You are a very welcome guest to me, the letters I love, because I learn through them how the glad tidings is being carried over land and sea; and that many precious are being gathered into the fold. It makes the heart of every true Saint rejoice to learn of the onward progress of this glorious work.

On the 4th day of March, 1884, I was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. The persecutions I received were almost past enduring; but by the blessing of God's Spirit, I was enabled to stand firm, relying on the promises of God to the finally faithful. On the 19th of may, 1885, three others were baptized —all heads of families, and in good standing in society; one of them a member of the Methodist Church,-making three from that church, and five in all. No wonder they were so furious, for they saw their "little craft was in danger of being overthrown." There are two or three others now awaiting an opportunity to obey the gospel. So the good work is slowly, but surely progressing, not only here but everywhere where the message has been sent.

God's spirit was present with us at the water and also at the confirmation. J. S. Roth, the Elder officiating, made the most eloquent prayer I ever heard. There were about forty people went to witness the baptism, and also the confirmation. which was very solemn and impressive. I never before so fully realized the grandeur of the latter day work; and I truly felt to thank God that I was counted worthy to be called "Latter Day Saint." Ever yours in gospel bonds.

MARY E. HART.

Independence, Missouri, June 10th, 1885.

Bro. Foseph Smith: Last week I felt strongly impressed in the Spirit of God to go to Armstrong, Kansas, and on Saturday, with my family, went there. On Sunday morning I spoke on the revelation of God's power to his people in ages past, and according to the existing law of God, the offer of the same power is to be given to us as a people, if we live for them; but in order for us to obtain the gifts and blessings and power of God, we must walk in obedience to the commands of God, for his Spirit will not dwell in unholy temples. The Spirit came on the whole congregation, and as I looked at the many present, I saw none but were in tears; and as one man said, I never experienced any thing of the kind before in all my travels. I must say I have never enjoyed any greater power of the Spirit on that subject, as I did on Sunday morning last.

In the afternoon, testimony and sacrament meeting. In forty minutes twenty-three had borne testimony to the blessings of God to them, including four that demanded baptism. I closed the meeting, and by the request of Bro. Willard Smith, the president of the branch, we went to the river, and I baptized four, one of them had belonged to the Brighamite Church for years, another who belonged to the Baptist Church.

Sunday evening, I spoke on the resurrection of the dead, and on Monday I baptized two more; and at night I spoke on church organization and the duty of members belonging to the Church of Christ. Bro. Smith desires me to hold forth a few more meetings, and so I commence again on Thursday night, and stay over next Sunday; after which will work my way to my field of labor, if I don't have the means to go through from here.

On Monday last, as we returned from baptizing, Bro. Smith and myself were called to administer to Bro. George Edwards, who had fell from a building twelve feet, and struck on his back upon the first story, with a plank on him, who came very near his end. In the excitement the doctor had been sent for, but as soon as we administered, he turned over in the bed and told his brother to go and tell the doctor he need not come. I called to see him on Tuesday morning before I left, he said he felt a little stiff, but was feeling himself out of danger.

Summary of News.

The British Parliament failed to act favorably upon the budget presented by Gladstone, Premier of England. This makes the resignation of the entire Cabinet probable. From the telegraphic news we gather:

Mr. Gladstone, a few minutes after four o'clock this afternoon, entered the House of Commons. His appearance was that of a firm man, perfectly undisturbed. He at once proceeded to the speakers desk and entered into conversation with Mr. Peel. During the conversation the Premier was evidently in bright spirits, and he was loudly cheered by the Radical members of the House. When he seated himself in his usual place his very self-possession seemed to enthuse his admirers, and the chamber was fairly rent with cheer after cheer, and the applause became deafening. At last Mr. Gladstone arose, in deference to the greeting. He said the Cabinet, on assembling to-day, thought they were under obligations to submit a dutiful communication to the Queen. [Cheers.] It would be premature on his part to enter into particulars concerning the nature of the communication just now. He would say, however, that, as on former occasions, a few days must elapse before the result of that communication could be arrived at so as to be made known to the House, During the interval, Mr. Gladstone concluded, the House would follow its usual custom in refraining from the transaction of its ordinary business, and he would move that the House, on rising, do adjourn until Fri-

The House of Commons and the House of Lords have adjourned until next Friday.

Gladstone will have to make a journey to Scotland to tender his resignation and those of his colleagues to the Queen, as her Majesty is still at Balmoral Castle. Some critics think her absence from England at this crisis is illtimed, and that she should return to Windsor. It is impossible to find a single sincere mourner over the fall of the Gladstone Ministry.

Although Mr. Gladstone's statement in the House of Commons this afternoon did not contain any direct announcement of resignation by the Cabinet, the terms he emphasized were those which have been invariably used on similar occasions, and were taken to indicate that the resignation had been decided on and tendered to the Queen. It is rumored that Mr. Gladstone intends to entirely abandon political life.

The crisis postpones indefinitely a settlement with Russia. The Conservatives will adopt Earl Granville's frontier convention, but will insist upon stringent guarantees against a further Russian advancę.

The Government have notified the different officers of the internal revenue department throughout the United Kingdom that the additional duties on spirits and beer have been abandoned.

The Ministerial circle take the defeat with equanimity. It is supposed that the Cabinet, in view of the tendency to disruption and internal discord, were willing to take advantage of a chance to resign.

THE NEW MINISTRY.

As to the personnel of the new Ministry nothing appears to be settled except that Lord Salisbury will be the Premier, and that Lord Randolph Churchill will have a place in the Cabinet. The illness of Sir Stafford Northcote comes at an inopportune time, as it will prevent him from accepting the portfolio that will undoubtedly be offered to him.

A latter dispatch says: It is reported that the Conservative leaders, at a conference late this evening, decided to accept office. The following is a forecast of a portion of the new Cabinet:

The Marquis of Salisbury, Prime Minister and Secretary of State for the foreign department. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chancellor of the Exchequer and leader in the House of Commons. Sir Stafford Northcyte (who will go to the House of Lords), Lord President of the Council. Lord Randolph Churchill, Secretary of State for India. Col. Frederick A. Stanley, Secretary of State for

The new Ministers will attempt no measures calculated to give the Liberals a chance to gain a victory. They will recast the budget in accordance with the votes of the House, and when the estimates are passed will dissolve parliament.

The defeat of the Government has produced a general depression on the Stock Exchange. The resignation of the Cabinet has caused a feverish feeling on the Stock Exchange, and consols declined 3-16, while Russian securities are half lower. On all the provincial exchanges the weak feeling in financial circles is more marked, as is also the decline in the above Government bonds.

The bourses on the Continent were considerably agitated by the report of the resignation of the Gladstone ministry.

June 9.—A decision in the now famous Scott law liquor cases to recover the amount of money paid into the Ohio state and county Treasuries before the law was declared unconstitutional was rendered by the Supreme Court this morning. Decisions were rendered in five cases, and under them the saloon men are prevented from recovering the amount of money paid into the Treasury, even though it was done under protest and suit commenced to recover the same. About $2,000,000 is involved in the question.

The June report of the Illinois Department of Agriculture, based upon returns of correspondents representing each township in the State, indicate that there will be less than ten million bushels of winter wheat harvested in Illinois this season. The correspondents of the department are, as a rule, farmers of extended experience and deeply interested in the accuracy of the returns. A large number of the correspondents have been reporting to the department during the last nine years, and their estimates for a term of years, when compared with subsequent official returns made by assessors, have confirmed the superior judgment and conservative character of the re-

Madrid, Spain, June 9.—Special wards in the hospitals have been assigned for suspected cases of cholera. The authorities are visiting the poorer quarters of the city and attending to the disinfection of the houses. Vessels from Valencia are subject to three days' quarantine at other Spanish ports. France, Italy, and Germany quarantine vessels from Valencia. There were eight suspected cases of cholera reported here to-day. There was also a rumor that four deaths had occurred from the same disease.

The Guardia Civile have evacuated their barracks owing to the breaking out of cholera. Of four cases in the barracks three proved fatal. The men are now encamped in a village on the outskirts of the city. Measures are being taken to thoroughly fumigate and disinfect the barracks, also all private houses in which cholera has made its appearance. There were seven fresh cases of cholera in Valencia yesterday. All persons arriving in Valencia by sea are subject to three days' observation, and all persons wishing to leave the city must show a properly-attested certificate of good health; all persons arriving from towns where there are cholera cases are promptly sent to the lazarettos.

June 10.—Premier Gladstone has not yet left London for Balmoral to place his resignation in the hands of the Queen. Things are at a deadlock, and no one knows what the Ministry is going to do. The initiative must come from the Queen, and she is 500 miles away. Meantime all is chaos, and the crisis is not only embarrassing but dangerous. It is believed that the Queen will advise the present Ministry to remain in office until the general election.

The Iowa State Board of Health has prohibited public funerals of persons who die from small pox, scarlet-fever, or diphtheria.

ASSEMBLIES OF THE SECTS.

June 10.—At Syracuse, N. Y., to-day's session of the Reformed Church Synod, reports were made on the condition of the theological institutions at New Brunswick, N. J., and at Hope College, Holland, Mich. The total number of young men in training at both was given at thirty-one. The committee lamented the scarcity of theological students. They also called upon pastors to do their duty in directing young men to the ministry, and upon parents to consecrate their sons to the sacred calling. A stormy debate was called forth by a resolution in the report recommending the adoption of measures for the support of the North-western Academy of Iowa. The Rev. L. Dykstra of that state spoke in favor of the institution. Elder G. J. Koller of Holland, Mich., said that he was stoutly opposed to "flooding the church with so many hungry wolves," or "turning mendicant tramps loose upon the fold of Christ." The Rev. A Paige Peeke of Michigan, showed the animus of the opposition by his remark that Hope College would suffer by the granting of financial aid to the Iowa institution. The resolutions, as reported, were carried.

The American Protestant Association began its thirty-sixth annual meeting at the Keystone Hotel, Pittsburg, Pa., to-day. Delegates are present from Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Kentucky, and Mississippi. The afternoon session was taken up with debate on a proposition to change the age of applicants for membership from twenty-one years to nineteen years. The subject was finally posponed for one year, when it will likely become a law.

At Minneapolis, Minn., to-day's session of the Minnesota State Baptist Association it was reported that there is a debt of $118,000 existing in the Home Board. The total receipts of the board for the year were $447,000. It was said that there are 6,000 Baptists in the state, exclusive of the foreign element, of which 3,000 belong to this association.

A church congress was held at Detroit, Mich., last fall and then entered at length into a revival of the church work for the last year. The report of the trustees of the Episcopal fund shows the amount of the fund to be at present $86,193, of which $12,000 are shares of Chicago, Burlington & Quincy stock, $10,000 New York Central, $40,700 in mortgages, $23,000 in temporary loans, having $39,328 on hand.

Over a thousand men and boys made a raid upon the Salvation Army at Akron, Ohio, last night, pelting the soldiers with mud and stones, tearing their flags to pieces, and destroying their drums. Several of the women soldiers were assaulted and badly injured before the police dispersed the mob.

Night and day, and every day in the year, says the Country Gentleman, we are lessening the debt $100 a minute. This is about the rate at which the United States Government is paying off its indebtedness, and is hardly one third as fast as during several previous years. But $100 a minute amounts to only $42,560,000 annually, or scarcely 75 cents, during a whole year, for each of the inhabitants of our great country. The most of it, however, is paid by the wealthy, who do not feel it, and by a tax upon a few articles of luxury. But, were it equally divided, there are few who would not cheerfully contribute this small amount (75 cents) for the sake of sustaining the splendid reputation our country enjoys throughout the world as a prompt, honest, debtpaying people. The United States could now borrow money at a lower rate of interest than any other nation under the sun. There are several advantages in this. To name one: A nation's strength depends largely upon its ability to provide the "sinews of war," of which money is the greatest. Great Britian is stronger from this cause than from the actual number of fighting men she could raise among her own population proper. For this reason we are able to get along with almost no standing army or navy—barely enough to act as a police force and take care of the fortifications to save them from dilapidation, and to keep a corps of skilled officers in training for any emergency that might arise demanding the sudden action of a large force of citizen soldiers. Nearly every other nation has a large percentage of its most vigorous men in field or camp or fort or on shipboard, with another heavy percentage toiling to support these and the expenses they incur.

Adjustant-General Drum, U. S. A., has just completed a list of casualties in the National army during the Rebellion. The list is thought to be the most accurate yet published. The aggregate number of deaths is shown to have been 359,496. Of these 29,498 occurred among Union soldiers held as prisoners of war. The total number of troops reported as furnished by the various States under various calls is 2,772,408. Some of the returns were duplicated, and it is estimated that the actual number was about 2,500,000.

June 12.—A Russian newspaper reaffirms its statement that the Ameer of Afghanistan has been assasinated. Rumor says that ex-Ameer Ayoub Khan will be raised to the throne by Russian influence.

A heavy stone stairway in the court-house at Thiers, France, fell yesterday upon a crowd of people who were making their exit from the building, killing twenty-four persons and injuring 163.

Gen. Grant has accepted an invitation to occupy the cottage of his friend Mr. Drexel at Mount MacGregor, near Saratoga. He will start June 23.

Queen Victoria will return to Winsdor to-morrow and will at once hold a consultation with the Ministry. It is rumored that the Marquis of Hartington, Secretary of State for War, will be asked by her Majesty to reconstruct the Liberal Cabinet, permitting Mr. Gladstone to retire.

Cholera is spreading in Spain, and the increase in the number of cases daily reported is causing great alarm. In Valencia alone there were fortyfive new cases within less than twenty-four hours.

The liquor question brought the Democrats into power in Ohio, and it now promises to contribute to their defeat. When they secured control of the State the Prohibitionists were aggressive and aided the Democrats. The Scott law was then in force, yielding an annual revenue of about $2,000,000 and regulating the trafic by suppressing many of the low places were liquor was sold. The Democrats caused the annulment of that wise measure and left the liquor traffic absolutely free. The entire control of the Legislature and State Government was in the hands of the Democrats, but they refused to pass any law restraining or regulating the traffic, and neglected to submit a license amendment to the Constitution as they promised to do. This has thoroughly disgusted the temperance men, and no Prohibition ticket would be of much service to the Democrats this year.

DEFEATED.

The English Government was defeated on the second reading, the budget being rejected—264 to 252. When the result was announced Lord Randolph Churchill and Mr. Parnell jumped up on their seats and enthusiastically waved their hats, and the cheering was renewed. Thirty-nine Parameters of the second secon nellites and all the Conservatives voted with the majority. The minority included Sir Michael Bass, the brewer, and several Irish Liberals. Although strong whips had been issued, many Government supporters were absent.

When the result of the division was announced, Mr. Gladstone, who had been leaning forward in his seat and cynically smiling, started, turned pale, and clutched his hands nervously together. The House immediately became a babel of confusion: members yelling, stamping, and waving hats, neckties, and handkerchiefs. A tumultuous cheer came from the galleries, and Speaker Peel vainly howled for order. The Parnellites pointed at Gladstone and yelled. "That is the price of coercion!" "Down with Buckshot Forster!" "Remember Myles Joyce!"

Mr. Gladstone arose to move an adjournment, but stood in his place fully a minute before he could be heard. The Commons was immediately adjourned. It is rumored that Gladstone will visit the Queen to-morrow, and tender his resignation. The Cabinet has been summoned to meet to-day.

Upon the defeat of the Gladstone Ministry in England the Chicago Tribune says:

"The question now arises, What will the Tories do with the elephant they have drawn? It is evident they did not believe Mr. Gladstone would resign with an election so close at hand, and that they did not want him to resign. Probably all that they had planned was to humiliate him by a defeat and force him to go on until the election under a cloud. They can not expect to rule without a majority, and they can not afford two elctions in three months, which may invite a double defeat. Suppose that the opposition takes possession of the Government, what can it do with the legacies bequeathed to it? If it leaves the Afghan question where it is it will concede Mr. Gladstone's wisdom. If it undoes what he has done it must invite one if not more disastrous wars. If it muddles up the question Russia will improve the muddle by going straight into Herat, and she may do it anyway. What will the opposition do with the Egyption question? Can it avoid paying the expenses of the Soudan campaign? What will it do with the Scotch and Irish land question, and with the renewal of the Crimes act? How will it meet the budget deficiency in a manner more satisfactory than the Liberals proposed? Upon each and every one of these questions Mr. Gladstone has been assailed with even brutal malice. He has been hounded and persecuted with a bitter eagerness such as no other English Premier ever encountered, and he has waited his opportunity, which came on this side issue, to turn upon the pack and demoralize their lines by suddenly resigning and throwing the whole burden upon them at a time when they did not expect it, and when it is questionable whether they have a leader competent to grapple with it."

The Times in an editorial says: The resignation of the Cabinet in the present condition of affairs must not be hastily decided upon. It is the Government's duty to consider whether such a course would not be a wrong to the country. The financial modus vivendi might easily be arranged, abandoning the increase in the duties on beer and spirits, without leaving Childers a larger deficit to carry forward to the next budget than would have been the case if the £11,000,000 of the vote of credit had been spent instead of only £9,000,000.

The Standard, in an editorial, says: We can not believe that the Ministers will leave office. They have received a mortal stroke, but they must, whether they like it or not, agree to linger on until the general election. Their very blunders render them indispensable. Everything is unfinished and hangs in suspense. What Cabinet can succeed? If the Conservatives are to rule they must have a majority, for which they must look to the constituencies. An election now is impossible. The Government can not retrieve their loss, but can at any rate prove themselves conscious of their duties to the country by struggling manfully in their painful position. Party life must remain in suspense until the election.

The Daily Telegraph is doubtful whether the Conservatives will accept office.

The News, in an editorial, says: It is impossible to forecast the consequences of the vote. The Ministry probably will resign and the Opposition take possession of the Government. We do not suppose that even the Conservative leaders will seek to undo what has been done on the Afghan question. The whole policy of the country is thrown into momentary (we hope it may not be lasting) confusion.

The infidel colony in Barton County, Missouri, having proved a failure, it is understood Pope Bob Ingersoll will abandon his famous lecture "Mistakes of Moses," and write a new one entitled "Blunders of Barton."

LETTER FROM BRO. J. CAFFALL.

TO THE Reorganized Church in Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado and Wyoming; greeting: Having been placed in charge in the above named localities; and the impracticability of soon visiting every part of so extensive a field being apparent; I respectfully suggest the following: To teach admonish, rebuke, etc., seems so clearly set forth in the gospel economy, that a neglect therein is as sure to bring condemnation as day follows night. All members of the church are under obligation to act in their several places and callings; failure therein will bring condemnation. One among other evidences of a proper conception, and realization of our individual resposibility, is seen in the legitimate efforts put forth to help others; as we ourselves desire help, purity of intention, and corresponding zeal, leading to the performance of labor as opportunities and abilities render practicable. It makes little or no difference what place we fill in the great family of God on earth. For diligence in a position brings justification from God; rather than the mere fact of being raised to a position, without evidence of diligence therein. In view of this, evidence of vain ambition, to fill positions, before invitation to the coveted place is given, is to be regretted. Nor are jealousy and dissatisfaction, the result of disappointment to the ambitious; because others are called to those places the ambitious thinks belong to them, less lamentable.

Our membership in Christ's body is reached only by compliance with plainly prescribed conditions; its perpetuity can not be effected through any other method. Let us not, therefore, deceive ourselves. We hold baptism most essential; but it is not the only means of grace. Yet startling as it may be, the thought of attaining to the inestimable gift of eternal life, is cherished without regard to diligence, and purity of life subsequent to the act of baptism, on the hypothesis, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." There is nothing said there of conditional salvation it is said. Admit it. But as conditional salvation is made a fact; it is always inferred in any and all of Christ's teachings, or must be so understood. To the biblical student the following is most essential in his studies with a view to understand the divine economy. 1st. Who writes? 2d. To whom he writes. 3d. The circumstances under which he writes. 4th. The subject matter of that which is written.

A strict observance of this rule will prove a preventive to hasty, and positive conclusions upon isolated passages of scripture. Doubtless Paul saw the necessity of such a procedure in saying, "Compare spiritual things with spiritual." The gospel imposes practical duties and therefore imperative. The temporal and the spiritual are closely and sweetly blended. The financial basis for bringing means into the coffers of the church; to sustain the families of those the church calls to devote their whole time in preaching the gospel, to aid the widow, the infirm, fatherless, etc., all of which is contemplated in the law, is tith-The exposition of the law and order of tithing being left to the Bishopric, who are authorized under the law to attend to the temporalities of the church. And as benevolence is one of the evidences of the love of God; and, as benevolence seeks to lessen the suffering of humanity by attending to its necessities, discriminating between the worthy poor, and the impostor, comforting the former and reproving the latter, it is within the regions of consistency that the worthy and needy members of the church should receive temporal aid from the same source; they expect spiritual consolation. Hence the necessity of a fund; and how, or from whence shall it come save by the members of the church? To reach, and impose any system that will give universal satisfaction is difficult, especially when the question of finance is involved. Nor does it seem possible under existing circumstances to enforce a more equitable system than tithing; which is called, "a systematic free will offering, taken from where it is not wanted and placed where it is wanted for the general weal of the church." The fact of Israel being left to be their own exactors, to tithe themselves as God has prospered them ought to be evidence that there is no disposition on the part of the church to force, or coerce its members. Nor should the fact of the law, contemplating the impartation of temporal aid, through the above method, fail to convince the members that financial aid given to organizations outside of the church, which deprives the church of so much aid, and thus far proves a preventive to God's designs through the law, is a mistake.

If the gospel alone can do for us that, for which we thirst, why not give it all our support? If our strength, or aid, is divided between the gospel and some other institution, does not that evidence a division of interest? If God promises eternal life on condition of giving our whole heart to him, and evidence of giving him our whole heart only exists in rendering his cause all the aid we can command, is not this division of strength, or aid which shows a division of interest a mistake? And if we raise our expectation to a full, and complete reward, which depends upon a full and complete labor, as our opportunities permit, and we but render a partial aid, are we not deceiving ourselves? And if a ray of gospel light reflects across our path, revealing defects in a mode of procedure, will not a persisting therein prove fatal?

That I may be charged with treading on sacred ground, is more than possible, for so tenacions are we of individual rights, that any invasion, or that savoring on invasion of those rights arouses the sensitiveness with efforts to berate, or expel the invader for tampering with, or subverting individual rights or liberty. Yes, there are few but want to be left alone; law and order are magnificent; transcendently grand, until their enforcement disarranges our calculation, then it is another affair, and the air is likely to be pregnant with

I once heard a young member say, "I can't go to preaching to night, I must go to my lodge or pay a fine." And we say, we must not subvert the liberty of the Saints. So while one claims the right to go to a lodge, another thinks it not amiss to visit the opera house; and if something thrilling is on the tapis, a night at the theatre is quite gratifying. No harm in this. We are free, and propose to do as we please. Going to meeting becomes monotonous; we want a change, hence an occasional visit to the church, especially if a good Elder is to hold forth; singing fair, weather pleasant; and hearing an intellectual lecture; now and then a visit to a good glee club, for cultured society is enchanting, and all that tends to make life pleasant. If one member can have this latitude, another wants to be left alone in his visits to the ball room; and so make his religion secondary, or a matter of convenience; without any sacrifice on his part, to let his light shine and guard the fair fame of the church. If to abstain from the appearance of evil has any significance, and imposes an effort to curtail the carnal propensities, how then, can we be justified in standing in the congregation of the wicked and sitting in the seat of the scornful? And if it does not impose an effort ultimating in such curtailments, then where is its significance?

Scattered Saints should remember that the policy of the church is, that its members be enrolled in the nearest branch, those going from one branch to within the limits of another, should, ere they depart from the first apply for a certificate of membership, which change should be duly noted both in the branch he leaves and the one he joins, and with such promptness in noting this, and other changes, which is but the reasonable service of branch officals; the general Church Secretary would be relieved of much labor and anxiety, in presenting a correct church record, for which he labors with such assiduity.

One object in the division of the moral vineyard into branches, districts, and missions is, that the burden of the work should be more equalized, and if we fail in bearing our portion of the burden we may miss the reward. Let us see to it. You who are deprived of church fellowship would be greatly benefited, and do so much to help the cause by subscribing for the Herald and Hope; and if possible help the Sandhedens Banner, Advocate and Expositor. Not forgetting the paper the brethren in England are striving to send forth. Beside this, if possible, aid should be given to the tract fund.

The acceptation of a membership in the body is tantamount to a covenant to labor for its perpetuity. You will learn from the Bishop's report given at conference, that the amount of money received in the past year, is below five cents per week for each member, the membership being as shown by the Secretary's report, to be sixteen thousand; and though many have paid very much more, if there was a thorough co-operation with the entire membership in observing the oblation method, as shown in sec. 59, D. and C., admitting there were but ten thousand out of the sixteen, that could contribute five cents per week, it would aggregate twentyfive thousand dollars a year. Allowing five thousand of this to meet current branch expenses, there would be twenty thousand to be turned over to the general coffers of the church, and with twenty-five thousand more from tithing, the ministerial force might be greatly increased, and much could be done also to help the needy. It is thought by some, that tithing supercedes or does away with alms-giving, but this can not be, for both are imposed. Tithing being an obligation on those who come under the law, are free to aid in other ways when said obligation is discharged. And the mite system is overlooked, because of its insignificance. This is a grave error. As little drops of water and grains of sand, make the ocean and land, so these practical and every day duties justify, and will prepare us for the great ultimatum reflected through the gospel economy. But their observance requires continuous attention and labor; and their sameness in the absence of a proper appreciation of their importance causes us to grow weary; and so these little practical duties are overlooked, neglected, and as a consequence we lose interest, grow careless, fail to prevail with God; darkness and spiritual death ensue. our physical strength is retained by constant and daily application of what is received into the stomach, which involves a necessity for daily and continuous labor, which savors of a sameness too; but because of its importance, though we may feel weary, we do not neglect. And as the soul is made to depend on constant supplies for its development; the same anxiety and care with continuous labor to receive such supplies as for the body is necessary. No better proof of this can be demanded than the fact that a decrease of interest, bringing a loss of spiritual life with trouble which involves litigation, is traceable to a failure in present duties, or a misconception of the same, creating a zeal without knowledge, which leads so far astray as to put light for darkness, vice versa, etc.

The grandeur of the gospel consists in its simplicity and adaptability to all ranks and conditions of mankind; and to evidence its effects on our lives, and a gradual rising towards Christ's purity, not only simplicity, but purity of motive must be by us evidenced; by which our carnality is subdued, and the divinity in us thereby thirsting for righteousness, which secures the light and power of the Spirit our solace, strength and guide. And that which we seek to enforce on others by theory must by us be made formidable by practice, otherwise it were better we cease to theorize. How dare we reprove the world for a lack of moral excellence unless we offer evidence of that excellence among ourselves? Labor and duty imposed by the gospel are practical, and therefore imperative.

In view of these things, I respectfully suggest to officials of branches and districts a united and continuous labor to encourage Saints, and arouse sinners; ever remembering that the preaching of the gospel is the primary object. That its foundation is solid as the pillars of Heaven. That as God's mercy, it will ever endure. It is God's perfect and celestial law. That Joseph Smith's mission was made valid in the presentation of that gospel in its entirety. For as the gospel is an authoritative message, it follows that a delegation of authority from its author is indispensable as a qualification for its presentation and perpetuity. And despite the fine-spun and captivating theories of the present day, made dazzling by the increasing glory of modern Babylon, the fact of baptism being changed, laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and the primitive organization repudiated; and further, that no delegation of authority is recognized since the apostles fell asleep, and the idea of an unbroken succession from the apostles to the present time being a myth, are facts sufficiently pregnant of proof in themselves, that that designated as modern, or orthodoxy, in the light of the primitive gospel is a counterfeit, and a religious fraud.

The gospel being therefore our foundation; its promulgation being obligatory; and as this work is to be effected systematically, it places every member under obligation to act. But the necessity for system, suggests the thought of various members, with duties differing, to reach the same object. And so we find in a thoroughly organized branch of the church, a presiding Elder, Priest, Teacher, and Deacon. And as the body has three departments of government; viz, legislative, executive, and judicial, so a branch by a recognized right of the body to exist, becomes a body corporate with these functions. So these officials by virtue of their ordination become executors, to, and for the branch; and one means of qualification is a frequent consultation effected by coming together, to take and give advice to each other, for thereby they are prepared to act individually in their respective spheres, when occasions demand. But branch officials, who never thus confer seldom become efficient.

A system of visitation by which all members may be known, and their spiritual status understood by the officials is very necessary; indeed, it is imperative. And if one Priest and Teacher can not effect this, others may be called. But a too large number of officials should be guarded against, as evil is likely to grow out of having a superabundance. Necessity for, and adaptability should govern in ordination; but a failure in this, and a prostitution of power in ordination have worked mischief; shall we not be more cautious in the future? Where branches have a superabundance of Elders by removals, such Elders ought to know that an undue interference by them in branch matters is unwarranted, and if persisted in will work evil. Let them rather learn that their duty is to travel and preach as circumstances admit; and only as solicited have they a right to act in branch matters. That in branch business meetings they may speak, act, and vote as members of the branch; but not assume to dictate because of their eldership. And that in preaching they should act in unison with district arrangements. All members of branches are free, to speak, act, and vote, at proper times and under proper restraint, but trickery and deceptive movements should never be thought of by Saints, much less practiced. A father, because six or eight of his family may raise their hand at a look or a nod from him, might congratulate himself in thus carrying a measure, but a love for equitable measures would rather lead to efforts instructing children to defer voting until they could understand why, and what they voted for. The common consent method rather presupposes measures as a result of sober reflection and straightforward acts than results growing out of trickery, sharp practice, or policy. And when measures are agreed upon, through the common consent method, by the majority, the minority should submit. And here I would suggest, that General Conference has decided, that members removing from one branch to another, should take a certificate of membership, and no branch should receive such a one without it, and that no expelled member should be admitted save by baptism, that no unbaptized person should receive the sacrament. None denies the possibility of a General Conference erring; but since in the event of any measure becoming oppressive any member of the body may petition and be heard. None are justified in repudiating acts passed upon by the body. None in the body have special rights and privileges; but all alike are subject to law and order; and a disregard for legislative acts of the body is an exhibition of ignorance or wilfulness. Necessity for an adjudicating method is seen in the fact of Christ inaugurating it, and our recognized discipline is explanatory of its working. But for such a method, there are these purposes, viz., the vindication of the innocent, punishment of the guilty, and guarding the fair fame of the church. Its necessity may be unfortunate, but the fact of its revealment by such authority precludes the thought that good can result in a failure, when a necessity for its observance exists. Much trouble may be averted by the faithful labors of branch officials; and when labors are faithfully performed, and trouble comes despite such efforts, legitimate efforts will be made to meet it; and trouble thus met is disarmed of much danger; becoming less distressing than when illegitimately fought. Live, and energetic branch officials should so continuously and effectively hold up the duties of the members, that it keeps them busy to study and perform them, having little or no time to think of quarreling. This is one of the most effective preventives of intestine broils know. For it is a notable fact, that when a godly zeal with its legitimate effects are wanting, trouble begins. And hence it is too frequently the case that we sap our own foundation by our only spasmodic efforts, blowing hot and cold without finding and pursuing an even tenor. Shall not the time thus spent suffice? and the future record better, and nobler works in our favor? Condemnation does not come so much from wrong doing, as continuing in the wrong. persistency has caused much cruel litigation. a love for victory more than for the law to meet the ends of justice. Injured innocence is not blatant, but patiently waits to establish the right. Revenge is hasty and boastful, seeking to enlist the sympathies of those who can be impressed. For which, and other similar causes, heads of families should be cautious how they encourage the busybody, slanderer, and idle gossipers, lest the beams and stones in the wall shall cry out and witness against them. For all having grievances may seek and find redress, which leaves no excuse for any peddling their grievances. Especially should representatives be discouraged if they should fall so low beneath their dignity, as to engage in the soul destroying practice.

Trials in branches are only permissable when visitation and labor which the law imposes fail to bring a reconciliation; due time of course being allowed for sober reflection. Hasty acts are condemned, while promptness is recommended. From the law we learn:—(1) Those who fail to be reconciled are to be delivered up unto the church; not to the members, but to the elders, in a meeting, not before the world.
(2) He or they are to be tried before two or more elders of the church; and if it can be, it is necessary that the Bishop be present. (3) They are to be condemned by the mouth of two or more witnesses. (4) And the Elders shall lay the case before the church. (5) And the church shall lift their hands against him or her, that they may be dealt with according to the law of God. D. C. sec. 42: 22, 23.

Surely, there is nothing ambiguous in this; and there certainly must be a torturing of language to make a negative vote permissable, admit counsel for the accused, or prevent the Elders rendering judgment. [a.—See foot note.] I have and still believe that the Book of Rules was presented and received in good faith, but think that part referring to the functions of an Elders' court needs some modifying. It seems consistent to the writer, at least, that a tribunal authorized by law to sit on a case, is certainly authorized to render judgment especially in this matter, as the law emphatically says that he or she shall be condemned in the mouth of two witnesses. Before whom? The Elders, for by act authorized by law, it is taken from the members, and given to the Elders-forever silencing the members, unless the law shall further instruct. And being condemned before the Elders, they lay the case before the church; (members); and now the law reinstructs the church (members) thus, "and the church shall lift up their hands against him or her, that they may be dealt with according to the law of God." May we not therefore say, that less or more would fail in dealing with those tried as the law of God directs? Evidence by competent witnesses is to condemn or justify. Upon the strength of such evidence the Elders are to condemn or acquit, and lay the case before the church, and the church shall raise their hands. Parliamentary rule for legislative acts is good; but there is no room for legislative act in this case; the law steps in and says thou shalt. And if we accept parliamentary rule in lieu of the law, then parliamentary rule is superior to law, or made so. And if a negative vote is permissable in the presentation of a decision of an Elders' court, said decision may be entirely rejected, rendering the act authorized by law nugatory, and void: whereas, if the decision is final as far as that court is concerned, and it leaves the way open for a rehearing or an appeal, if the party is dissatisfied and desires it; thus keeping the trouble in its legitimate channel for a final adjustment. It seems that the tribunal, as provided, is competent. Any addition, therefore, would tend to clog or hinder the work in the shape of counsel, or pleaders, especially as the law makes no such provision, except in the High Council, when for the accused and accuser the council is to be equally divided.

Branches are brought into being through labors of district conferences, and the custom in making a district conference an appellant or higher court, has obtained, becoming vulnerable by age; and so it is taken for granted. Let us see, all courts receive their adjudicating power by constitutional provisions. Branches are established by districts; but primarily the branch bears or brings forth the district. And by, and with the consent of two or more branches, a district is organized. Six or more members are organized and become a branch by virtue of their relation with the body, and a body corporate, with power to regulate its own affairs, and for the more effectual spread of the gospel two or more of these branches meet and organize a district by appointing a president, whose duty it is to travel, open new places, look after the ministry who may co-operate in preaching the gospel within the limits of said district. He may and should co-operate with the branches, for by their willingness to form this compact, they are entitled to such co-operation. But branches are not shorn of any power or rights, rather receive help, in maintaining rights and power granted them. And with such arrangement much, very much, good may be effected, and so a district has its mission and work; but in the absence of constitutional provision, is not a court of appeal, nor can it be, save by custom. A Branch Court is composed of Elders; a District Court, if appointed, is the same. But as Elders are authorized to meet in conference to do what business is necessary, if one being tried in a branch wished, and all parties concerned were agreed, a rehearing of the case by Elders appointed by the conference, might be had. But this would be different to claiming the right to grant appeal to (perhaps) change, and render former decision null and void, especially if such appeal were irregularly and disorderly obtained. There is much important work an active president of a district may do to build up, who spends all or a portion of his time by virtue of his appointment: but the retention of a district president, year after year, who can not or does not go beyond the limits of his home, is but a useless form. For if a district does not, or can not keep an energetic president in the field, to open up new fields, and learn what kinds of laborers are best adapted for certain localities, the mission or object of a district is measurably frustrated, and in the absence of measures, ultimating in opening new fields, etc., there is little for Elders to do in conference capacity save carry on useless disputations, which is too often the case. Wherever there is an available president, whose only barrier to devoting his time in a district is the inability of the district to provide the required financial aid, a conferring with the Bishop should be had, and all the facts in the case presented.

As there is a probability of instruction from another source touching the matter of appeal, I submit, or refrain from adding more. If former procedure has been to contravene any recognized law, the sooner we retract the better. This the meek and simple will do, while the wilful and opinionated will dispute and contend for the mastery, under the pretext of human liberty or rights. Liberty is good and is guaranteed under the gospel, but it is not license. A failure to discriminate between has led to the conclusion (or so it would seem) that absolute rights and liberty to the exclusion of law, is permissable, which is absolute nonsense. For that which is governed by law is perserved by law, etc. And to all law there are bounds and conditions.

Should evidence of an effectual door for the presentation of the word appear, please report; but let your report be founded on fact. Latter Day Saints should avoid the exaggerating mode, and learn to report correctly. This, or any other matter, will receive due attention. FIRE IN THE REAR.

In the days of the late rebellion in our glorious country, when our nation had such a bloody struggle to maintain the supremacy of its laws, and so many brave boys gave their lives because of their love for their country, it was said, and no doubt was true, that one great obstacle in the way of an easier victory was in the fact that, while our brave boys who left home and all that was near and dear to them, and passed through various hardships to save the nation, there were too many at home, who, by their talk, and using all their influence in finding fault with certain measures and actions adopted by the Government proved to be a fire in the rear, and thereby caused great hindrance to the progress of the cause, and by making public their sentiments, (which were disparaging), great harm was done by causing doubts to arise, discouraging many, and so weakened the cause and our hope of victory. Now if a "fire in the rear" would and did then prove a hindrance, as we have stated, will not the same result follow with regard to the Church of Christ to-day? Yes; says one, if there could be found "a fire in the rear." Well, let us see if there has not been; and then look at the result.

The Church of Latter Day Saints is struggling to-day for victory; and many have given their lives for the cause of truth, because they knew it was truth, and have loved it with all their souls, and desired to see it triumph and come off victorious. There are many noble and able Elders to-day marching on in the advocacy and defense of the work they love, and are leaving homes, loved ones, and all, for the gospel's sake, that the work for which they labor may soon be crowned with victory. Will they be successful? We think they will; but, Oh! that "fire in the rear!" Have you been a close reader of the Herald, the church organ? If so, have you not discovered sentiments made public that are calculated to cause doubt, and distrust, and lack of confidence in some of the fundamental truths revealed through the Seer, and endorsed by the church, and for which so many noble men of God fought and gave their time and lives to maintain? I think you have. When we see in the Herald from time to time, those sentiments expressed which are calculated, and not only calculated to, but actually are sapping the very foundations of our glorious cause by strong inferential and sophistical statements, denying one or more of the revelations given through the Prophet of God, which the church has for years endorsed; without a question we are led to think there is something wrong. And futher; when we are made aware that the sentiments breathed forth in the articles referred to, originate with those who are doing very little work in the way of actual teaching and defense of the Master's work, and have but little to show for their devotedness to the church, while others, faithful workers, are giving their time, talents, and energy, for the truth they love. We certainly think it "a fire in the love. We certainly think it "a fire in the rear." For one, the writer of this article is almost discouraged and disgusted with such things. One "way up" Elder at home with his pen pulling down, while the writer with others are abroad struggling and striving to build up. Is it not time this was stopped? But some one cries out, "liberty!" Yes; but liberty to my mind, has its limits. And I for one think this "fire in the rear" is going beyond those limits. The results of this fire is already seen and felt, and seems to be a glorious covering (?) for those who have always sought to evade the plain letter of the law in the Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 106. And, say others, "our confidence is shaken in all the revelations now. These and many other results of this "fire in the rear," the struggling Elder has to meet from those who are in the faith, and also from avowed enemies of the work. For one, the writer will rejoice when this fire is quenched.

[[]a.] The Book of Rules states specifically that the Court of Elders finds the guilt, or innocence, of the person accused and tried before it; but does not pass sentence, in any other sense than recommending what it should be, in their judgment. The clause, "the church shall lift up the hand against them," is definitive, and means that it is the province of the branch (the church) to pass the sentence. We presume that the brother does not intend that the opinion expressed by him shall be taken as the rule to the disregard of the Book of Rules adopted by the church. This is evidenced by what he elsewhere writes: "None are justified in repudiating acts passed upon by the body. None in the body have special rights, or privileges; but all alike are subject to law and order; and a disregard for the legislative acts of the body is an exhibition of ignorance, or wilfulness."-Ep.]

WATCHMAN.

PRIEST HOOD. [Concluded]. ALMA'S ORDINATION.

"And these are the words which he spake to the people in the church which was established in the city of Zarahemla, according to his own record, saying: I, Alma, having been consecrated by my father Alma, to be a High Priest over the church of God, he having power and authority from God to do these things." Alma 3:1. I offer no comment upon the The next we find of Alma, he is ordaining men to office in the "order of God." "And now it came to pass that after Alma had made an end of speaking unto the people of the church which was established in the city of Zarahemla, he ordained Priests and Élders, by laying on his hands according to the order of God, to preside and watch over the church. Alma 4: 1. "Now as I said concerning the holy order of this High Priesthood. There were many which were ordained and became High Priests of God; and it was on account of the exceeding faith and repentance, and their righteousness before God, they choosing to repent and work righteousness rather than perish; there-fore they were called after this holy order, and were sanctified, and their garments were washed white, through the blood of the Lamb. Now they, after being sanctified by the Holy Ghost, having their garments made white, being pure and spotless before God, could not look upon sin, save it were with abhorrence; and there were many, exceeding great many, which were made pure, and entered into the rest of the Lord their God. And now, my brethren, I would that ye should humble yourselves before God, and bring forth fruit mete for repentance, that ye may also enter into that rest; yea, humble yourselves even as the people in the days of Melchisedec, who was also a High Priest after this same order which I have spoken, who also took upon him the High Priesthood forever. And it was this same Melchic to whom Abraham paid tithes; yea, even our father Abraham paid tithes of one tenth part of all he possessed. Now these ordinances were given after this manner, that thereby the people might look forward on the Son of God, it being a type of his order, or it being his order; and this, that they might look forward to him for a remission of their sins, that they might enter into the rest of the Lord. Now this Melchizedec was a king over the land of Salem; and his people had waxed strong in iniquity and abominations; yea, they had all gone astray; they were full of all manner of wickedness; but Melchizedec having exercised mighty taith, and received the office of the High Priesthood, according to the holy order of God, did preach repentance unto his peo-And behold, they did repent; and Melchizedec did establish peace in the land in his days; therefore he was called the Prince of Peace, for he was the king of Salem; and he did reign under his father. Now there were many before him, and also there were many afterwards, but none were greater; therefore of him they have more particularly made mention. Now I need not rehearse the matter; what I have said may suffice. Behold, the Scriptures are before you; if ye will arrest them, it shall be to your own destruction."—Alma. 10: 1-2.

My only excuse for transcribing such a long extract, is because of the beauty and plainness thereof, and perhaps the study thereof may prove an incentive to some one who may be halting on the edge of that precipice, where light and darkness "play hide and go seek," to give heed to the voice of wisdom, and accept of the overtures of divine mercy, and be blest with the presence of the holy order of the priesthood. "Now Zoram and his two sons knowing that Alma was High Priest over the church."—Alma 11: 3. This is but an incidental mention of the High Priest, but makes good the thread of our investigation. "Thus they were led away by Amalickiah, to dissentions, notwithstanding the preaching of Helaman and his brethren; yea, notwithstanding their exceeding great care over the church, for they were High Priests over the church."

—Alma 21: 6. "And by all those which had been ordained by the holy order of God."—Alma 21:38. From a careful and prayerful perusal of these pointed extracts from "God's triumphal car," it would seem altogether proper, that those who profess faith and confidence in this book, would abandon and withdraw their opposition to High Priests, and the High Priesthood of the church. Priesthood seems to have been a favorite topic with "the great Apostle to the Gentiles," and he expatiated thereon quite fluently and profoundly; and while we are so deeply indebted for the transmitted knowledge, we will try and use one additional reflection from this master-builder in the great spiritual temple of our God. "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law. For he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar. For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Juda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood. And it is yet far more evident; for that after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest, who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life. For he testifieth, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec. For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof. For the law was administered without an oath and made nothing perfect, but was only the bringing in of a better hope; by which we draw nigh unto God. Inasmuch as this High Priest was not without an oath, by so much was Jesus made the surety of a better testament. For those priests were made without an oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, The Lord sware and will not repent. Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec. And they truly were many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death; but this man, because he continueth, hath an unchangeable priesthood. Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. For such an High Priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made ruler over the heavens; and not as those High Priests who offered up sacrifice for his own sins, and then for the sins of the people; for he needeth not offer sacrifice for his own sins, for he knew no sin; but for the sins of the people. And this he did once, when he offered up himself. For the law maketh men High Priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated forever more."—Heb. 7: 12-27. The skilled theologian of ancient, pure and genuine apostolic priesthood, clearly demonstrates the contrast that existed between the priesthood of the "first covenant." and that of the "more excellent ministry." Had we access to the same data as he, perhaps a better understanding would obtain. But such as is available we must accomodate ourselves to. God in the plenitude of his great condescension to the church, made manifest the vital importance of obtaining and abiding within the limits of the conditions of the priesthood—"Which priesthood continueth in the Church of God in all generations, and is without beginning of days or end of years."-Doc. Cov. 83: 2. "And this greater priesthood administers the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God. Therefore, in the ordinance thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh; for without this, no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live."—Ibid 3.

GOD'S HIGH PRIESTS.

"And as I said unto mine apostles, even so I say unto you; for you are mine apostles, even God's High Priests."—Ibid 10. These last quotations so plainly set before the reader the true position of the High Priesthood in the church, that I forbear an argument in favor thereof.

ORDINATIONS.

There is no branch of the privilege and functions of the priesthood, that is so important to understand, and care should be used, as in the imparting of office by the laying on of hands, for it is possible that there may be a mechanical performance, while no spiritual right or power is com-municated. "Every Elder, Priest, Teacher or Deacon, is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains him."-D. and C. sec. 17, par. 12. Was this rule and instruction adhered to in both letter and spirit, and men would duly honor their calling, and the responsi-bilities thereto attached, the church would not be surfeited with an army of officeholders, and such a limited corps of active There has always been a ministers. strange mystery about the conferring of priesthood by the laying on of hands, there seems to be a parallel between this and the problem of the relationship between "mind and matter," if we are able to solve the one, we certainly ought to be able to believe the other. This bestowal of the priesthood, is the operation of the Holy Spirit, acting upon and through the agency of those deputied to act in the name of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. And unless the Spirit was present in the conferring of the office, and also present where the officer acts, there can be no result that the father is under any obligation to recognize; thus it will appear, how very essential it is that men should act only in purview of their calling." And in justification of the course taken, and the principles involved in the question of authority, we have ever courted, and still court investigation in the rigid character of the facts in the first organization. Here they are: "Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were ordained to the lesser priesthood by an angel; they on the 6th day of April, 1830, ordained each other Elders, and the Eldership by direct command, ordained High Priests and Apostles; and this high priesthood ordained by commandment, the president of the high priesthood, the highest office in the church; so that the alleged lesser ordaining the greater, is common to both the first organization and Reorganization alike. The same class of facts justify both, or condemn both. But this stream rising higher than its fountain, is only seeming, not real. By what authority, according to the law of God, is any one ordained? Answer: By the power of the Holy Ghost, which is in the one who ordains him. Instead of this then being the stream, it is the fountain itself, from which flows the stream or autnority of both priesthoods, from its highest to its lowest offices. Moreover, all ordinations are performed in the name and authority of the church, and is therefore the act of the 'Spirit and the Bride,' so that, in addition to the authority which its adherence to truth guarantees, the Reorganization is technically right, and on legal grounds invulnerable; before which all the factions have melted away save the one—and they dare not assail it, but always decline."

Life of Joseph the Prophet, 601, Elder Jason W. Briggs, the present president of the Twelve, is credited as the author of the toregoing and it will be observed that he not only gives the keynote to ordinations; but likewise acknowledges the High Priesthood and High Priests. As a wise admonition to those who are sleeping upon their arms, or allowing their arms to rust for the want of use, and the danger of the pride and vain aspirations that ever lurk so thickly in the pathway of those whom God hath called to pull down the strongholds of sin and Satan. I would commend a careful reading of the following:

"If there are any among you who aspire after their own aggrandizement and opulence, while their brethren are groaning in poverty, and laboring under sore trials and temptations, they can not be benefitted by the intercessions of the Holy Spirit, we ought at all times to be very careful that such highmindedness never has place in our hearts, but condescend to men of low estate, and with all long suffering, bear the infirmities of the weak. There are many called, but few are chosen; and why are they not chosen? Because their hearts are set upon the things of the world, and are aspiring to the honors of men; they do not learn the lesson that the rights of priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven; and that the powers of heaven can not be controlled nor handled, only upon the principles of righteousness. That they may be conferred upon us it is true, but when we undertake to cover our sins, to gratify our pride, vain ambition, or to exercise dominion or compulsion over the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold the heavens withdraw themselves, the Spirit of the Lord is grieved, then amen to the priesthood, or to the authority of that man; behold ere he is aware, he is left to kick against the pricks, to persecute the Saints, and to fight against God. We have learned by sad experience that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, to begin to exercise unrighteous dominion, hence, many are called, but few are chosen. No power or influence can, or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long suffering, by gentleness, by meekness, and by love unfeigned; without hypocrisy, and without guile; reproving with sharpness when moved upon by the Holy Ghost, and afterwards showing forth an increase of love towards him whom thou hast reproved, lest he esteem thee as his enemy, so that he may know thy faithfulness is stronger than the cords of death. Let the soul be full of charity toward all men, and virtue guard thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God, and the doctrines of the priesthood shall distil upon the soul, as the dews from heaven; thy sceptre shall be an unchanging sceptre of righteousness, the Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, the ends of the earth shall enquire after thy name; fools shall have thee in derision, hell shall rage against thee, while the pure in heart, the wise, the noble, and the virtuous shall seek counsel, authority, and blessing constantly under thy hand; thy people shall never be turned against thee by the testimony of traitors, although their influence shall cast thee into trouble, and into prisons, thou shalt be had in honor, and but for a small moment, and thy voice shall be more terrible in the midst of thy enemies than the fierce lion, because of thy righteousness; and thy God shall stand by thee for ever and ever. If thou art called to pass through tribulation, if thou art in prison among false brethren, if thou art in perils among robbers, if thou art accused of all manner of false accusations, if thine enemies fall upon thee, if they tear thee from the society of thy parents, and if with a drawn sword, thine enemies tear thee from the bosom of thy wife and thy offspring, while thy eldest son, [young Joseph, at Far West, 1838, although but six years of age,] shall cling to thy garments, and shall say, 'My father, my father, why can not you stay with us! O, my father, what are the men going to do with you, and then he shall be thrust from thee by the sword, and thou be dragged into prison, and thy enemies prowl around thee like wolves for the blood of the lamb; and if they should be cast into the hands of murderers, and the sentence of death be passed upon thee, if thou be cast into the deep, if the bellowing surge conspire against thee, if fierce winds become thy enemies, if the heavens gather blackness and all the elements combine to hedge up thy way, and above all, if the very jaws of hell shall gape open her mouth wide after thee; know thou, my son, that all these things shall give thee experience, and shall be for thy good. The Son of Man has descended below them all, and art thou greater than he? Therefore, hold on thy way, and the priesthood shall remain with thee, thy days are known, and thy years shall not be numbered less; fear not what man can do, for God shall be with thee for ever and ever."-Times and Seasons, July, 1840. Extract from a letter of President Joseph Smith.

And the contents thereof contain internal evidence of the inspiration therein. Let all those bearing any part of the priesthood be upon their guard, lest they become recreant to the trust reposed in them. Thanks be to God that, that six year old son, now stands as the Presiding High Priest of this Reorganization, and he too, exhibits the wisdom that should adorn those who seek to honor God and the holy order of the Melchisedec priesthood. May we seek to drink deep from the life-giving fountain, that when the School of the Prophets shall meet, we may be amply prepared to receive the holy unction with hearts of gratitude, and be accounted worthy to abide and continue in the holy priesthood. THE DRESS OF CHRISTIANS.

THE Omaha Bee for May 25th, has a sermon delivered at Council Bluffs, on Sunday evening, May 24th, on the subject, "The Dress of Christians."

Last evening the Rev. J. F. McDowell preached a rather sensational sermon at the Latter Day Saints' Church. The following is the substance of the sermon, the text being: "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel."—I Pet. 3: 3.

We should be as gracefully and beautifully attired as our means will allow of. God loves the beautiful in nature, for it is his own handiwork; in art, for he has enlightened the mind and fashioned in man's soul the power to make beautiful work, for he is thus imitating his Maker. It is not that in the beautiful of apparel we find sin and selfishness, but in modern extravagance of dress. Jesus hath taught us that the soul is worth more than the body, the body more than the apparel; he has taught his followers that they should not have their minds so far from him, and so close to the fashions of this world, as to be ever saying: wherewithal shall we be clad, and what shall we eat? It is true, we must be in some fashion. If not in the present, in that of the past. Jesus dressed as was the fashion of the time, but not to excess or extravagance. He had a robe woven throughout without seam, so says the sacred historian.

It has been thought that white was the universal color of the Grecian garments, a distaste having been created for any other. But this idea is denied by Professor Becker. The usual color of a cloak-like garment was used, as is yet the case among several of the oriental nations, when traveling much out of doors in the full sun-Among some of the wealthy, party-colored oriental garments were worn by both sexes, and was accounted a favorite color with Grecian women of modest life. Dresses, we are informed, were quite frequently beautiful with interwoven patterns and borders or embroideries. Babylon and Phrygia were ancient cities for the embroidering art, and when spread into the occidental world, were named Phrygiones, as a reminder of the dress of this origin. It has been ascertained from monuments, by learned antiquarians that the border either woved or set to the dress consisted of one or more stripes of some dark color, either placed parallel with the seams, or running down the hem from the girdle at the sides, or from the throat in front. Phrygian dresses are represented as being adorned with gold fringes. Such were worn by the south-Italian Greeks, who were luxurious livers. In the cities the Grecians walked mostly bear-headed, supposed to be because of the plentiful hair of the southern nations, which was carefully cultivated by the Greeks. We are apprised by the historians that at Athens, during the time of Persian wars, men wore long hair, tied up on top of the head, and fastened by a pin in the form of a cicada. St Paul mentions something of men wearing long hair, that it was "a shame," when writing to the people of Corinth, which city was located on the isthmus which separated the Ionian from the Aegean sea. It was a great commercial city, and traffic poured through its gates as over the isthmus of Darien, the commerce of two oceans. It was a higway between northern and southern Greece, so this custom was evidently introduced into the Christian churches by the Grecians.

But modern times are filled with the vain, frivolous, extravagant and foolish. Some one asks: Does God really condescend to notice such small things as a persons apparel." It seems so from Biblical history, and if God notices it, surely his ministers should not pass it by. I sometimes fear the modern pulpit preacher panders too much to the idle fancies of the occupants of the pews. The danger is pride, "But," asks one, "what is pride?" I answer it is that vanity of feeling and of action that causes a well-clad person to shun one more illy clad than themselves, because of the apparel, without respect to the good character of the party. That is wherein pride comes, and God calls pride "crime." Society looks more at cloth than at character. Our gamblers are about the best dressed gentry our city affords. I would rather bow in deference to a respectable poor man dressed in ragged apparel than to the broad-cloth gentry of the gambling hell. So many people are apt to think that because they are better dressed than others, they are of course better people. There are some of our modern congregations of humble worshipers, nothing but wholesale millinery shops and flower pots. Now, I have no objection to this when it creates no vanity. I once saw a lady enter a church, and while the organ was sounding forth its sweet voluntary strains, she marched up the aisle to a front side pew, flung a couple of flashy ribbons over her shoulder next the audience, and looked at them, then at the people. Of course I do not say her heart was not filled with the Holy Ghost, and that she would not willingly have followed Jesus through the burning dust of the Palestinic roads, and washed His feet with mountain mist and wiped them with those ribbons.

I believe there will be fashion in heaven, but a different kind from earthly fashion. It will decide the color of the dress, and by a just and beautiful law the population will wear white.

I have no cast iron rules on the subject of human apparel. I have neither prim nor prudish ideas about it. But it is a fact that the goddess of fashion has set up her throne in this world, and at the sound of her musical instruments we are expected to fall down and worship. Her bible comprises the testaments of Madame Demoest's Magazine and Harper's Bazaar. We can not deny that her altars are sending up continuous flames of smoke from the sacrifices of the bodies of ten thousand victims. In counting the victims of fashion we find about as many masculine as we do feminine. Men make these easy tirades against woman as though she were the chief worshiper at this idol's shrine. Men have their club rooms, yachting parties, wine suppers, and they chew and smoke $100,000,000 worth of tobacco every year in this the United States. Some are so nice, that they cover what little brains they have with bangs, and carry canes, showing that they are either lame in limb or in mind. Inordinate fashion rules the world. There are men and women who put so much in display, that they have nothing left for God and needy humanity. Think of a Christian woman shedding tears, thick and fast, into a $25 handkerchief, over the story of a poor heathen, and then giving two or three cents to the collection covering it so that people may think it is a $10 gold piece.

There are men who are put to their wits ends to keep up their wives' wardrobes. One man likes to see his wife appear as well as another, and he must get her some articles as costly as he can and can not afford. He always purchases within his means, as a certain facetious writer has said, "if he has to run in debt to do it, and never pay the debt." The rich get what they please, and the poorer classes try to imitate. Arnold, of the revolution, proposed to sell his country, in order to obtain means to furnish his wife's wardrobe. Costly apparel is sending more men to perdition, breaking up more business men than all things besides. It was that which sent Gilman to the states prison, and Philadelphia Morton to watering stocks; it was that which overthrew Belnap the United States secretary—his wife's wardrobe. You will find clerks in stores, offices, and banks, trying in vain to ascertain how they will get this or that for themselves, or wives, if they have one. Others who have families that do want to be showy, or some dear wife that will say, "Husband, can not you get me a seal skin sacque, or a camel's hair shawl. Can not you get me a new bonnet?" "Why," says the loving husband "certainly I can," He does it, but how? Such women are dying in muffs, diamonds, seal-skin sacques, camel's-hair shawls, and the husband gets cigars, has wine suppers, and everything must be a la mode. These people sometimes die, and have a first class funeral, with elegant coffins, and it is often times tound that the last great sleep was had in an unpaid for bed-place. Any minister who preaches the funeral sermon of such, should blurt out the whole truth and tell that the man was choked to death by his wife's ribbons. The world is dressed to death. How many there are who strain every nerve, and bend all their energies toward one particular object—the getting of a dress or bonnet. Where among such are the followers of the humble Nazarene. I adopt the Episcopalian prayer and say, "Good Lord, deliver us."

Think of a dying one whose tears moisten the pillow, and in whose closet hang the fineries that once graced the perishing body. See those almost fleshless fingers! The diamond ring falls off. Two things trouble that soul. A wasted life, and the open doors of eternity. Hear Jesus speak: "Is not the soul worth more than the body, the body more than raiment?" Hear what the holy book says: "If I rejoice because my wealth was great, and because my hand had gotten much, this also were an iniquity to be punished by the great Judge, for I should have denied the God that is above." Read of the embezzlements, defalcations, defaults, irregularities, deficits, misappropriations, breaches of trust, re-hypothecations, and over-certifications. All these high sounding words are used to cover up the real mischief work performed. We call it in plain language, "lying" and "stealing." Vain pride and love of appearance is the very foundation from which all these selfish, criminal acts grow -the soil from which such festering plants receive life and sustenance. See the calico Christians, stretching their necks to keep up with the silken Christians. But who can blame the laborer in making an effort by honest means to appear as respectable and well clad as possible, when otherwise he is ostracised because he may look shabby. You will always find some one with brighter array, and with more palatial residences, and if you buy this thing or that thing, you will wish you had bought something else. The frets of such a life will bring the crow's feet to your temples, long before they are due, and when you come to die you will have a miserable time.

We must sometime appear before God's judgment seat. On that day we may see Beau Brummel, without his cloak, cane or snuff-box, like which all England got a cloak, cane, and snuff box. He, the fop of the ages, the dude of the times, particular about everything but his morals. Aaron Burr without his letters, which he gladly showed till his old age, of his early wicked gallantries. Absalom with his hair; Marchioness Pompadour without her titles; Mistress Arnold, the belle of Wall Street when that was the center of fashion, without her fripperies. While we will see them go away in great haggardness into eternal expatriation, among heaven's queens will be found Hannah, who every year made a coat for Samuel of the temple; Grandmother Lois, ancestress of Timothy, who imitated her virtue; and Mary, who gave Jesus Christ to the world. And many wives and daughters of the church of to-day, who, through great tribulation, are entering into God's kingdom.

May the Lord help us to consider how brief is our life here, and how long and lasting is eternity. Oh, eternity! Oh, judgment day of God! Oh, for a place amidst the blood-washed throng, and for a clearer sight of heaven's glory, and less of worldly things.

THE reward that the world has for the "Children of Light" is a stone and a blow.

Homer was a beggar, Plautus a serf and Terence a slave. Boethius died in jail, Paul Borghese wanted bread. Tasso starved in rags, and Cervantes died of hunger.

Camoens died in an almshouse, and the body of Vangelas was sold to the surgeons after death, to pay his debts.

Bacon lived a life of meanness and distress; Raleigh died on the scaffold, Spencer died of cold and want. Milton in obscurity, and Dryden in poverty.

Otway perished from hunger, and Lee and Poe expired in the streets from exposure.

John Lambert, Hugh Latimer and Crammer were burned at the stake. John Brown was hanged.

Socrates was poisoned, Savonarola strangled, Vane beheaded, Servetus burned and Christ crucified.

Tyranny and ignorance have dominated the world by the scourge, the rack, the wheel, the cross, the scaffold and the stake. And why? To kill an IDEA.

It was not the men they wished to slaughter, it was their doctrine.

Had the "Children of Light" been content to live for themselves alone and not for the great IDEA, to their genius and intellect would have been given freely by the ignoble world the crown of Cæsar or the sword of Napoleon.

But to preach to selfish man Liberty, Equality and Fraternity for man's own good, was to merit death and hell.

Do you thank God that these days are

Oh, blind and senseless world! The world is to-day as busily as ever engaged in sacrifices.

Look at the bleak moors of Ireland, the dungeons of Germany and the scaffolds of Russia.

And pray to God that the finger of fact may not in the future also point to men shot down by tyranny, in the streets of American cities for preaching right and justice.

SHALL WE SLEEP WITH WINDOWS.

This question introduces a subject upon which there is a diversity of opinion, both among medical practitioners and individuals. "I have had no bad colds since I learned to sleep with my windows open," remarked a gentleman in the office of the Medical and Surgical Reporter, the other day. In reply, the editor says that the only hard colds he ever suffered from were contracted by sleeping in rooms to which the night air had free access.

The editor adds that it is well known that the bodily temperature sinks slightly during sleep; the physiological functions act with diminished activity; and hence the resistance of the economy to morbific influences is proportionately lessened.

But it is also well known that at night these influences are more potent and noxious. The air is charged with greater humidity; miasmatic and malarial poisons rise to higher levels, and extend with greater rapidity; the chill of the damp night air is penetrating and dangerous; the emanations from organic decay are more perceptible.

Against these the sleeper is less protected than in the day time. He has divested himself of his woolen external clothing to put on cotton or linen, and lies between sheets of the same material, between which, at the top and sides of the bed, the air gains ready access to his unprotected surface. If he is restless, he renders such access yet more easy.

A greater risk awaits him. A sudden fall in temperature at night is no unusual occurrence. In summer a thunder gust, in winter a shift of the winds to the north, often reduces the temperature ten or twenty degrees. The sleeper is unaware of this. He remains exposed to it with no further protection than he found agreeable at the higher temperature until he awakes chilled and stiff, perhaps with the seed of a serious illness already sown.

These are such positive and unavoidable risks that we should counsel a delicate person to be exceedingly cautious how he ventured on the plan of open windows at night, however much has been said in its favor by popular hygienists.

MOTTO of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints;-The Constitution of our country, formed by the fathers of Liberty. Peace and good order in society. Love to God, and good will to man. All good and wholesome laws. Virtue and truth above all things, and aristarchy live forever! But woe to tyrants, mobs, aristocracy, anarchy and toryism, and all those who invent or seek out unrighteous and vexatious lawsuits, under pretext and color of law, or office, either religious or political. Exalt the standard of democracy! down with that of priestcraft! and let all the people say, Amen! that the blood of our fathers may not cry from the ground against us. Sacred is the memory of that blood which bought for us our Liberty-Joseph Smith, Junior, in 1838.

Miscellaneous.

PENANCE.

That part of the "report" of the members of the Quorum of the Twelve present, to the late General Conference respecting brethren Z. H. Gurley, E. C. Briggs and myself, for non-attendance, requires a notice from us. For myself I do not understand, nor never did, that it is a necessary duty for members of this quorum to attend all conferences, nor has it ever been so regarded or been the practice. And in the absence of a call to convene, by their own act, or by other authorized methods of convening them, they are entitled to the same option as all, or any Elder. Further than this, in February last I wrote to each member of the quorum, asking their views upon certain questions in controversy involving some of the quorum, looking to a convening of the quorum. To this replies were received from each, but no one of them advised the convening of the quorum, nor suggested a thought to guide us in the contemplated convening of the quorum, while some expressed the idea of its uselessness. Under these circumstances no call for the quorum to meet was made,-its members having the same right to attend conference or not, as other Elders; consequently those who did attend, (or "eat flesh), ought not to censure those who did not. The letters of those six brethren, to me, in answer to mine touching the necessity of the meeting of the quorum, certainly do not harmonize either in letter or spirit with the resolution adjudging penance for non-attendance. The foregoing is the only "apology" due-adding that penance can only lie against violators of specific As ever in hope,

I. W. Briggs.

Wheeler, Ia., June 4, 1885.

REUNION CAMP MEETING.

In accordance to appointment, the members of the Wheeler's Grove Branch met to make arrangements for the Reunion, or Camp Meeting, to be held at this place. The following resolutions were passed:—First, that we hold a meeting at Wheeler's Grove, on the grounds of H. and S. C. Smith, to commence on the fifth day of September, 1885. The following brethren were appointed as a committee: S. Wood, S. C. Smith, George Needham, P. Fredrickson and Mike Gish, of the Wheeler's Grove Branch; George Skank and D. Hougas, of Farm Creek Branch; and James M. Kelley of Macedonia.

All arrangements are now made. The hay will be furnished at a reasonable price; wood to be free. A good supply of water on the grounds.

There will also be teams on the first day of the meeting, to bring brethren from the railroad, that is from Macedonia. All there at that time will find conveyance free to the camp ground. Any other information wanted by any one, can be had by addressing J. M. Kelley of Macedonia, or L. F. Fredrickson and A. Smith of Wheeler's Grove, By order of committee,

ABE SMITH, Secretary.

FREMONT DISTRICT.

Conference of the 30th and 31st of May, 1885, was postponed till the 25th and 26th of July, 1885, to convene at Keystone. The postponement was owing to considerable excitement in that neighhood over the small-pox. There being six cases inside of five or six miles of the place of holding meetings. The people were afraid that some one might bring it into the conference. The Saints, however, held a prayer meeting on Saturday evening, and Bro. E. C. Briggs preached to the Saints in Bro. Hilliard's grove on Sabbath morning, and Brn. M. Stubbart and D. Hougas in the afternoon. An enjoyable time was had, considering the circumstances. There were present Elders E. C. Briggs, H. Kemp, Geo. Kemp, Wm. Gaylord, J. Goode, J. NaVert, D. Hougas, M. Stubbart, J. M. Stubbart; and Priest E Weed, besides a goodly number of the laiety.

MIRACULOUS.

Nettie Brown restored to life for one day. Monday, May the 25th, 1885, Nettie Brown was dying, and her person was cold above the elbows and knees, and was given up by doctors Rowell and Swift. I was insisted upon to administer to her and finally did so, after which her limbs became warm, her pulse regular and strong, her eyes natural and unfixed. She conversed freely and cheerfully and desired and took nourishment, and was perfectly conscious of her restoration, and admitted it to be the power of God, and was thereby confirmed in the faith. Her father, and mother, and sister, and brother went home, supposing she was out of immediate danger. She rested comfortable all night and until next day about ten o'clock, when she became restless, and in a few minutes fell asleep without a struggle or a groan, to await the resurrection morn. Funeral sermon pronounced by J. W. Wilcox, assisted by the writer. JOBE BROWN.

DIED.

HARTEL.—At Los Angeles, California, May 12th, 1885, Catherine Hartel, of Azusa, Los Angeles county, California. Deceased was aged 23 years and 10 days.

Brown.—At North Lacrosse, Wisconsin, May 25th, 1885, of congestion of the lungs, Sr. Netty Brown. She was born March 30th, 1858, at Bergin, Vernon county, Wisconsin; was baptized and confirmed at Clinton, Iowa, March 7th, 1880, by Elder Jobe Brown. Sermon by G. W. Wilcox, Independent, assisted by Elder Jobe Brown.

COOKE.—At West Belleville, Illinois, April 3d, 1885, Sr. Jemima Cooke, of a lingering illness. She was born in Manchester, England, 1821; joined the church in 1839; came to America in 1849, and has been a faithful Saint up to her death. Funerral services were conducted by Bro. William Jaques, and Bro. Joseph E. Betts, senior, preaching the sermon.

CHARLES.—In Kewanee, Illinois, May 15th, 1885, sister Caroline, wife of brother Thomas Charles. She was born near Dudley, England, July 28th, 1827, and would have completed her 58th year in July next. She was married November 29th, 1847, at Sedgely Staffordshire, England; has been a member of the church for thirty-two years. She leaves her husband, one son and two daughters to mourn her loss, but not as those without hope, as she was always considered to be a true, honest, faithful, and upright woman, never ashamed of the latter day message to the Prophet Joseph. About nine years ago she was called to mourn the untimely death of a beloved son; since which it has been noticable to her friends that the sad event exercised a strong influence on her mental faculties, and seemingly from its effects, coupled with change in life, she broke down some two years ago, and continued off and on to suffer, which finally ended her earthly stay. A better wife, a mother, a sister, is not easily to be found among the sons and daughters of Adam. Hence we all say peace, peace, peace to thy remains sister Charles, while thy spirit mingles with the good in paradise, awaiting the resurrection morn. Funeral services wisely conducted by Elder John Chisnell.

HALL.—At Creston, Iowa, May 14th, 1885, of pneumonia, Anna May, only daughter of Bro. and Sr. W. D. and Triphenia Hall, aged 6 years, 10 months and 1 day. Funeral services in the Saints' Church in Shenandoah, by Elder S. S. Wilcox, after which the remains were interred in Rose Hill cemetery, Shenandoah. Parents returning to their home in Creston, to find the rest of their children sick, some dangerously, with the measles, which since have recovered. They had the sympathy of all their acquaintances and Lewis.—At Bevier, Missouri, June 3d, 1885, of abscess of the lungs, William J., son of Joseph R. and Susana Lewis, at the age of eight years and five months; was born at Boonsboro, Iowa, January 3d, 1877. The Sabbath-School and Day-School turned out in mass to pay tribute of respect to their departed schoolmate; the singing by the little ones was excellent, conducted by John J. Morgan. Funeral services conducted by Edward Bennett and John T. Williams.

Sleep, dearest Willie, and take your rest. God called you home, he thought it best: Twas hard indeed to part with thee, But Christ's strong arm supported me.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, June 27, 1885.

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

In 1860-April 6th-"Young Joseph" came to the church and professed that he was called of God to take his father's place at the head of the church. He at once declared his opposition to the doctrine of polygamy, said he could not believe his father either taught or practiced it; but that, if he did, then he did wrong. From that time on till now he has striven in every proper and available way to expose and refute that doctrine and persuade all to avoid and reject it. Success has attended his efforts to a large degree, both in the disenthrallment of hundreds, if not thousands, from its baneful influence, and in demonstrating to the National authorities, the press, and the public generally, that polygamy was no part of the doctrine of the church as contained in the sacred books, but was clearly and decidedly prohibited by them.

In 1863, by his advice, the church sent two missionaries, Brn. E. C. Briggs and Alexander McCord, to Utah. These ministers on reaching their destination proceeded at once to call on Brigham Young and lay before him the fact and the nature of their mission. They were rejected with scorn, and treated with the utmost contempt. At this present juncture in Utah afairs it is well to review the course of Brigham and his fellows toward these missionaries and the work they represented, and then think what might have been had Brigham and his co-religionists received these missionaries in a Christian manner, and honestly and patiently inquired into the doctrines which they advocated.

The missionaries reached the city August 7th, 1863, and on the 11th inst., they made a formal call on Pres. Young, where there were twenty-five or more persons present, besides two reporters. Elder Briggs in a letter dated the 18th of same month, wrote to the Herald as follows:—

"I at once introduced the object of our presence, and under whose directions we came, and what we expected to accomplish by coming; and withal I bore testimony of the sure calling and true standing of President and Prophet Joseph Smith, the son of the Martyr. He [Brigham] said he knew more of that family than they knew of themselves; that Emma is a wicked, wicked, wicked woman, and always was;' that Joseph is acting under the influence of his mother, and that she is at the bottom of this work, and our mission here; that the heavens have nothing to do with that family at the present, but they shall be felt after in time; but that they are under the influence of the devil now, and that all Joseph wants is to associate with the murderers of his father, &c., &c. He said further, 'I do not want any of your preaching here, or your doctrine; and I will write and advertize you and warn the people not to receive you or your doctrine into their houses; and while I have influence over the Bowery, you can't hold meetings there.' He then threw out some intimidations to us, and gave us to understand we should be watched, that he wanted us to be gentlemen; and other low insinuations. We then told him we had come to do good, and that we were not in the least daunted or fearful, though intimidations had been thrown out at us before and since we arrived here, by him and his adherents. We then bid him good

"Since then all manner of stories are afloat against us. Every crime you can think of we are charged with, and I suppose some of the people believe them; but we console ourselves without noticing them enough to contradict them.  * We have an appointment for the first meeting in the Territory next Sunday, August 23d, at the residence of Judge Waite, by his proffered kindness, and that of his noble wife."

Under date of October 12th, 1863, he again wrote, as follows:—

"Brigham Young, at the conference in the Bowery, October 6th, said—'As for those who Abraham Lincoln has sent here, if they meddle with our domestic affairs, I will send them to hell across lots. (Many in the audience then uttered a hearty "Amen.") And as for these apostates that are running around here, they will probably fall down, and their bowels will gush out, or they will bleed some where else." * * "On the 7th inst., he, said; 'As to the subject of the Prophet Joseph;—what shall I call it—or Josephism; you have heard of that young Josephism; it is a humbug, and of the devil. Let me say here, I know more of that family than any man living, and Joseph Smith that now lives in Illinois will never lead this people, the Latter-Day Saints; but there was a son born November 18th, 1844, and Joseph told me that David would lead this church, and others can testify to this. But there is an old man Briggs; his sons are apostates. * * One of his sons is here. He is prowling around here. He can blackguard and call me a w-e m-r, and an adulterer, and call me a tyrant. and also brother Heber and Daniel Wells. He has nothing to tell you. If one of Joseph's sons get a revelation, he will be directed to humbly and meekly come to his humble servant Brigham Young. * * * While water runs and grass grows, young Joseph Smith will never lead this church, the Latter Day Saints.

"I have many wives. I got them legally. I got them honorably, and I provide and take care of them. * * * And as for them apostates, Joseph told his cousins, John, Joseph, and Samuel, and others, that he would not let them have his name used until he got his fees as any other lawyer would. * * * And Joseph has not given his name freely, honestly, honorably, or religiously to any of those letters [in Herald. Ed.] you see circulating here; for Joseph is a confirmed infidel, and Emma I know, and have known her for years; and she tried to destroy the church, and to influence Joseph against the twelve-against Brigham, Heber and others, and tried to destroy Joseph by administering poison to him, which she did several times; but she gave him too much, and he vomited it up; and she was always opposed to Joseph and filled with the devil. If one of Joseph's children take the lead of the church, he will come and place himself at the head of this church; and I will receive him as willingly as any one here; but if one wants to harbor any of these hypocrites that are running around here, let them do so, but apostatize altogether, and leave all, and have nothing to do with them hypocrites." * * *

"On the 8th Brigham said—Any one who has come here with evil in their hearts, and wishes the Latter Day Saints evil, they will have a mission somewhere,—I won't prophecy this, but how easy it would be for the Lord to call this man to go here, or there." ["To hell across lots" (?)—Ed.]

"Apostle John Taylor said on the 9th inst., of the Reorganized Church: "The whole system is built upon lies, and Joseph is associated with the murderers of his fathers."

"On the same day Brigham Young said: Now I am going to wind up. Now you that love Joseph Smith and his family, I am going to make you a proposal, that is this: Joseph F. Smith, and here is Samuel Smith, sons of Hyrum and Samuel. They have been on a mission, &c. Now I propose that we give $1,000 to each of them. Now you who love Joseph Smith's family, and you Josephites, will you show how much you love them? Here now are some Josephites.

These extracts are sufficient to show the spirit and manner in which the missionaries of the Reorganized Church were received by Brigham Young and his fellows. Bitterness, craft, falsehood, and violent threatnings were used without stint to oppose the missionaries, and to mislead and blind the masses as to the doctrines and purposes of the Reorganization. But time hath its revenges; and they who "sow to the wind shall reap the whirlwind." The Utah Mormons should know they are but reaping what their leaders have sown and what they, themselves, have aided or sustained them in sowing, perhaps in ignorance and unbelief.

Now all this took place at a time when Brigham reigned supreme all through the mountains and vallies of Utah, Nevada, and Idaho, as well as in many places outside of there. And "he ruled his people by the power of his word" as one of their own mountain ditties expressed it.

The treatment received by many of the missionaries of the Reorganized Church at the hands of Brigham and his co-workers from 1863 till of late, has been most unchristian, and at times scandalous and barbarous.

It is with no spirit of vindictiveness that we revive the attitude and the treatment of Brigham and his fellows toward the Reorganized Church and its ministry; but it is to suggest that a very different state of affairs might have marked the history of the Brighamite Church from 1860, had Brigham Young and his fellows treated "young Joseph" Smith and his call to the church in a decent and Christian manner. If then, or thereafter, they had listened to his teachings with any degree of respect, "young Joseph" might have been fully able to convince them of their errors in doctrine and their evils in practice; and they and their people might have been spared the shame, the fears, the expense, and all the harm that has come and is coming upon them, because they persist in teaching and practicing those things which "young Joseph" and the sacred books of the church condemn as evil.

The Utah Mormons can never have it to say that a vigorous effort was not made by "young Joseph" and the church over which he presides, to redeem the Mormon people from the doctrine of polygamy and its concomitants, and bring them fully into harmony with the laws of God and our nation. Both Joseph and his co-religionists have labored in this direction against prejudice, false statements, and in poverty, for the past twenty-five years; and they intend to still strive on till the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is washed clean from even the stain of such unholy and heretical doctrines, or even the imputation of them.

The murderous Missouri mob in 1838, with the drawn, sword forced "young Joseph" from the presence of his father, when the young lad with tears and lamentation was clinging to his garments; and Brigham Young and his fellows, with craft and violence, have kept young Joseph from the gospel children of the great Seer until now. As God brought the schemes and counsels of that merciless mob to naught, and made them vile and hated by all, so will he bring to utter detestation and desolation the crafty, cruel doings of Brigham and his co-workers. The Utah Mormons would do well to study the history of Joseph the persecuted gson of Jacob, and lay the lesson to heart, that the all-wise God makes the craft and the wrath of man to serve his ends and to exalt his glory. The Utah leaders "lie at the head of all the streets, as a wild bull in a net; they are full of the fury of the Lord, the rebuke of God."—Isa 51:20; "and they shall proceed no further; for their folly shall be manifest unto all men."-2

All this shame and wretchedness might have been avoided, had Brigham and his fellows hearkened to Joseph the son of Joseph the Seer, for Joseph has ever testified against the very evils which have led the Utah Mormons into collision with the nation and under the fierce rod of its wrath. Had Brigham and the people he led received young Joseph and the work of God which he is doing, the Latter Day Saints would have numbered their many millions to-day, and would have held and exerted a mighty influence for good in our nation, and abroad throughout the civilized world. This we conclude from the purity and divinity of the teachings of the sacred books of the church, the mighty power with which God blessed the administration of the doctrines taught in them, and the rapid progress made by the church in proselying up to 1844, and, indeed, up to the fall and winter of 1852, after polygamy and its kindred evils, such as tithing the poor; "Adam, our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we have to do;" blood-atonement; secret, oath-bound endowments; Utah, Zion; aspiring to sovereign civil power as a state: etc., etc.

Yes; if Brigham and his fellow-leaders had received young Joseph, and aided him in carrying out the principles taught in the Bible as translated and corrected by Joseph the Seer, in the Book of Mormon, and in the Nauvoo Edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, it might have been, and would have been infinitely better for all concerned.

LETTER FROM JOSEPH THE SEER.

WE present below a letter from the Martyr Joseph, to his wife Emma, written from Richmond, Missouri. It was among the letters left by Sr. Emma Bidamon at her death; and was handed to us by the kindness of Major Bidamon and his present wife. We take pleasure in presenting it, as it contains expressions of trust and conjugal affection that give the lie direct to those who have asserted that "Joseph could not trust Emma; she was always opposed to him." The letter is an old fashioned, unruled foolscap, and was folded without envelope, as envelopes had not then come into use; and was directed to Mrs. Emma Smith, Far West.

> RICHMOND, Mo., November 12th, 1838.

My Dear Emma:—We are prisoners in chains, and under strong guards for Christ's sake, and for no other causes; although there has been things that were unbeknown to us, and altogether beyond our control, that might seem to the mob to be a pretext for them to persecute us; but on examination I think that the authorities will discover our innocence and set us free; but if this blessing can not be obtained, I have this consolation, that I am an innocent man, let what will befall me.

I received your letter, which I read over and over again; it was a sweet morsel to me. Oh, God, grant I may have the privilege of seeing once more my lovely family, in the enjoyment of the sweets of liberty and social life; to press them to my bosom and kiss their lovely cheeks would fill my heart with unspeakable gratitude. Tell the children that I am alive, and trust I shall come and see them before long. Comfort their hearts all you can, and try to be comforted yourself all you can; there is no possible danger but what we shall be set at liberty if justice can be done, and that you know as well as myself. The trial will begin to-day for some of us. Lawyer Rice [Reese?], and we expect Doniphan, will plead our cause; we could get no others in time for the trial. They are able men and will do well no doubt.

Bro. Robison is chained next to me; he has a true heart and a firm mind; brother Wight is next; Bro. Rigdon next; Hyrum next; Parley next; Amasa next; and thus we are bound together in chains as well as everlasting love. We are in good spirits and rejoice that we are counted worthy to be persecuted for Christ's sake. Tell little Joseph he must be a good boy; father loves him with a perfect love; he is the eldest, he must not hurt those that are smaller than him, but comfort them. Tell little Frederick father loves him with all his heart; he is a lovely boy. Julia is a lovely little girl; I love her also; she is a promising child; tell her father wants her to remember him and be a good girl. Tell all the rest that I think of them and pray for them all. Bro. Babbitt is waiting to carry our letters for us. Colonel Price* is inspecting them; therefore my time is short. Little Alexander is on my mind continually. Oh, my affectionate Emma, I want you to remember that I am a true and faithful friend to you and the children, forever. My heart is entwined around yours forever and ever. Oh, may God bless you all! Amen. I am your husband, and am in bonds and tribulation, &c.

Joseph Smith, Jr.

То Емма Ѕмітн.

P. S.—Write as often as you can, and if possible come and see me; and bring the children if possible. Act according to your own feelings and best judgment, and endeavor to be comforted, if possible, and I trust all will turn out for the best.

Yours, J. : * Colonel Sterling Price.

"LITTLE JOSEPH'S" ANOINTING AND ORDINATION.

When at Galien, Michigan, the 12th inst., the Associate Editor copied what follows below from the journal of Bishop George A. Blakeslee. This Elder James Whitehead here mentioned was the private secretary of Joseph Smith the Seer, has always kept the faith as he received it at the first, and is fully competent and reliable as a witness in the matters of which he now testifies. This testimony was taken down by Bishop Blakeslee, at Alton, Illinois, April 20th, 1885, at the time it was uttered by Elder Whitehead, and reads:

"In the spring of 1844, in Nauvoo, Illinois, I was present with Joseph and Hyrum Smith and Bishop N. K. Whitney, in an upper room over Joseph's store, and saw Bishop Whitney take a bottle of oil and anoint young Joseph Smith, the son of Joseph the Seer (and now the President of the Reorganized Church), and also saw Brn. Joseph, and Hyrum Smith, and N. K. Whitney lay their hands upon him while Joseph the Seer ordained him a Prophet, Seer and Revelator to the Church, and say, 'He is your Prophet and will lead the Church in my stead.'"

Elder Whitehead, standing upon the very threshhold of eternity, can have only a pure purpose in bearing this testimony, which, at this juncture, is of high importance to all who are worthy to be called Latter Day Saints.

In Herald for June 13th, page 393, in death notice of Edward C. Lambert, instead of "Nettie Lambert," read Anna E. Lambert.

ERASTUS SNOW ON POLYGAMY.

A DISCOURSE of Elder Erastus Snow, published in the Semi-Weekly Deseret News of Salt Lake City, of the 9th inst., has these misleading items which, when examined, are found utterly false to Scriptural records:

"I said there was a time after the flood that the seed of Noah began to corrupt their ways, and God chose out from among them the seed of Abraham with whom He established His covenant that He might preserve unto himself the Priesthood and its ordinances, and a people who would receive His law, and among whom He would raise up Prophets, and through whom He would send His Son in the meridian of time to become the Savior and Redeemer of the world. Thus Abraham was blessed of the Lord to multiply and increase in the earth greatly. When the Lord determined to bless and multiply Abraham and his seed, He commanded that they should take of the daughters of Eve for wives and multiply and increase in the land. I do not say that plural marriage was not practiced prior to this time, but I say from and after Abraham it was enjoined upon Israel, the seed of Abraham, for a wise and glorious purpose in Him, namely, that of increasing them and giving them the ascendency among the nations of the earth."

To this we have to say: (1), that the priesthood by which Moses organized and led Israel he received under the hands of Jethro, in a line outside of Abraham and his seed, while Abraham received his priestly authority from Melchizedek. (Doctrine and Covenants. Rev. Sept. 22d and 23d, 1832, par. 2, with Exodus 18: 1-24). These texts prove that the ruling priesthood in Israel was preserved in a lineage outside of and separate from Abraham.

And (2d), when Mr. Snow says, as he in effect does, that God commanded Abraham and "enjoined upon Israel" to take polygamous wives, he says what he can not prove. The Bible, (Gen. 16: 1-16), informs us that Sarah, distrusting the promise God had made to Abraham, (Gen. 12: 1-3; 13: 16; 15: 4-6, 13), she gave to him her Egyptian "bondmaid," in order that she (Sarah) might "obtain children by her;" (Gen. 16: 2); but this "proxy" and plurality business proved very displeasing to Sarah, and was highly offensive to God, (Gen. 21: 9-21), as is seen in the fact that both God and Sarah demanded that the "bondmaid"—or polygamous wife-be put away; and Abraham put her away and sent her and her son out of the land, and away from the society of Abraham and his family. (Gen. 25: 5, 6). God did not command Abraham, nor enjoin upon Israel from his time and after, to practice plural marriage—He commanded the very opposite—He commanded that the plural wife must be put away.

In this same sermon Mr. Snow intimates that Isaac, the son of Abraham, practiced polygamy. This is a mischievous error. Isaac was a monogamist. (Gen. 24: 3-67; 26:8-11, 34, 35; 27:46; 49:31). Lord said of Abraham: "I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord," (Gen. 18:19). Abraham having learned by personal experience, and by the command of God as we have seen, that polygamy was an error and an evil, commanded Isaac, his lawful heir, the one in whom his seed was called, (Gen. 21:12 with Gal. 4:29, 30, and Heb. 11:18), to avoid polygamy—an evil prevalent in those times—and to abide strictly by monogamy; for the record makes it clear that he lived and died a monogamist.

Jacob, the grandson of Abraham, was by the gross fraud of an old money-loving idolator led blindly into polygamy, (Gen. 29: 18-30, with 31: 19, 30), but the sons of Jacob, whose names are to be inscribed on the gates of the New Jerusalem, like Isaac, saw the evils polygamy and shunned it, and heaven, as if to show its approval of their rejecting polygamy and maintaining monogamy, honors their deeds in this by having their names written upon the gates of the beautiful city.

Whatever commands there were under Moses, relative to polygamy in Israel, they were given simply and only to regulate that evil as were those given to regulate divorce, slavery, and retaliation, etc., and were faulty, weak, and unprofitable. Mr. Snow and his kind need to know "What be the first principles of the oracles of God."

LOVE and devotion to God and his cause may be shown in various ways, and it seems to be quite probable that all who say that they are willing and desirous to serve God, earnestly believe what they say, at the time it is said.

One way is in the strict observance of the hours of worship; morning and night, with thanks for the food used, at each spreading of the board for meals; reading of the Scriptures and occasional comment thereon in the family circle. This course is supposed to be productive of spiritual nearness to the Author of the Word; and he who neglects, is careless and indifferent to the means of grace. Another is in constantly and persistently teaching all who will listen to the gospel as it appears to the devotee, without special regard to time, place, or circumstance; under the impression that if an opportunity is let pass unimproved a soul is lost, or the person is subject to condemnation for neglect of duty. Another is to the earnest devotion of the individual, expressed in conscientious walk and dealing with the world, the members of the church, the church as a body, and with God.

Some are possessed with the idea that they are under no sort of obligation to the church, or its fellowship; that their duty is to God and him alone; that in determining what their service shall be, it is perfectly safe to ignore any claim the church may seem to have. That if they can satisfy their conscience toward God, the church may go and whistle, so far as they are concerned.

No one would dispute the idea that if one's duty is properly discharged toward God, and he satisfied, no harm can happen to the individual to put his life eternal in jeopardy. But is it not a matter for thought and close scrutiny, whether a proper observance of a man's duty to God does not require him to pay heed to his church relationship. "Ye shall observe the church articles and covenants to do them," was written for the Elders, as well as the members of the church. It is not compatible with the goodness of God, that the body which he recognizes as his church, shall be lightly set aside by any of its members; or they be discharged from duties to the body by the action of their own will, or wont, as the case might be. If one member of the body can not rightfully and consistently say of another member of the same body, "I have no need of thee," how can a member of the body say to the whole body, "I have no need of you. I can stand alone, without the aid of the body." There may be members of the body of Christ that are so endowed with life that they can live independently of that body; but if there are, we have not yet seen them, or met them, or known them. There may be those who can be a "law unto themselves" in Christ; but if there are, are they "subject to the law of Christ."

As for us, we desire earnestly to so live that we may honor the body, the church of Christ, and honor our fellowship with the members of that body in the bond of "perfectness and peace."

True devotion to the Lord, it seems to us, requires a man to be devoted to the good of the church, and the welfare of his fellowman; rather than the service of self in any direction. Hence, we conclude, that it is not alone sufficient, that a man observe the hours of prayer, at stated times, and invoke blessings on the bread that perishes with the using; nor is it yet sufficient that he preach the gospel, "instant in season and out of season;" nor is it sufficient to be self-sufficient in ones self to God. But true devotedness requires that a man pray unceasingly in thought, in word, precept and example, that he falls not when tempted; that he preach by the practice of self-abnegation, "preferring his brethren in honor" to himself; careful of his fellowship with his brethren; and observant of the church articles and covenants, "being subject unto the powers that are in the church, as unto God;" for there is no power in the church that is not "ordained of God."

If there are any in the church upon whom the dignity of their manhood and their priesthood sit so grandly, that they are removed from the necessity of the counsel and fellowship in labor of their fellow workers for Christ; is it not possible that they are also removed from the force of the saying in the "multitude of counsel there is safety."

Bro James Caffall struck a fruitful vein for thought when he suggested that he heard a young Saint say: "I can not go to church to-night; for I have to go to Lodge meeting. If I did not go I would have to pay a fine."

Just so: members of the church, who suppose themselves to be of Christ's blessed body; who hope by the establishment of that relationship with the body, to become so nearly allied to Christ as to live by the power of the Spirit a spiritual life; are so dazzled by the glittering promises of fellowship in lodges of associations of purely human origin, and for earthly benefits alone, that they form relationship with those lodges of such a nature that it dictates how and where and when their time shall be spent at stated times; requires a fixed sum of their means (moneys) as an initial condition upon which the fellowship is formed; and demands a fixed (taxed) sum as a continued tribute to the body of the lodge itself, to all of which demands the individual assents, and holds himself in duty; yes, in honor, dignified, mental, moral, and social honor, to perform; and considers himself dishonored and disgraced if he be found a defaulter therein. Fines for failing to attend are cheerfully paid; monthly, or weekly dues, are forthcoming; yearly assessments for public displays; and occasional assessments for parade, or other uses are paid upon the demand of the association: while the rule requiring the Saint to meet with his fellows and his God, passes as a thing of naught; the demands of the church, (association of heavenly origin) for service, or money, is resisted as a tax, to which were unmanly to submit; an extortion to be met with fierce resistance. The good will of co-associates, the pleasures of the Spirits' intercourse, the observance of the rites of meeting, are all as naught, notwithstanding the church is of God, and the lodge of man.

In the minds of such, no dishonor attaches to the man who pays no money into the church treasury. He bears on his breast the token of membership in his lodge, ostentatiously displayed; thereby acknowledging the right of the lodge to tax him; but repels with indignation the assertion of any claim of the church on time, or money. He holds it dishonorable to fail in duties to his lodge association, which he knows to be of the earth, earthy; but counts it not dishonorable to fail in the duties to his church relationship. takes an oath to man, which he may not lightly forget, but recks little of the covenant made with God, of which the tokens are the baptism of the water and the

To be accounted diligent and worthy in the lodge is an honor to be coveted, and to be served for; but to be thought worthy and diligent in the other body, what does it matter. Well did that brother wisely say: "My lodge association is for time only; my church association is for time and eternity.

We make no war on secret societies, as such; we write only of principles, for we have been pained to see honorable men, who seemed to prize their standing in the church less than their standing with the lodge, who submitted with grace to the demands of their society; but ignored, or denied demands on time, service, and means on the part of the church. If one is for eternity, the other for time, it would seem as if the greater should be preferred. We believe that with the great majority it is; but thinking it should be with all, we write as we do.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

PRESIDENT SMITH Wrote from Council Bluffs, Iowa, the 15th inst., that Elders A. H. Smith and Joseph Luff joined him on Saturday, the 13th inst., at that place, en route for their respective fields of labor—Bro. "Aleck" to the Pacific Mission, and Bro. Luff to the Rocky Mountain Mission. They hope to leave Omaha the 16th inst. God speed the Christian heroes! We look to see excellent results from their labors, and to know that the Lord is working with them mightily. Pray for them, dear Saints, that heaven may direct and bless their efforts and make them mighty for good.

Bro. R. J. Anthony, under date of 8th inst., says he has invitations to labor in Bear Lake county, Idaho, and that a number there intend to unite with the church the first opportunity. He also gives a good report of the labors of a young Danish Elder of the name of Johnson. Bro. Anthony thinks friends in Salt Lake City and Ogden will procure for President Joseph Smith and his fellow-laborers the use of the Opera Houses at these places, if they should be needed. He thinks many in Utah and Idaho will be glad to hear their message.

Bro. E. B. Mullin, of Georgeville, Ray county, Missouri, requests us to say that the Central Missouri District Conference will convene the first Saturday and Sunday in July, and that all the official members in the district are expected to report in person or by letter. They desire and expect Elder J. R. Lambert to be with them then. Visitors will please inquire for Frank Riser or Martin Trotter. Bro. Riser lives near the large woolen factory.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins wrote from Lucas, Iowa, the 9th inst. Had baptized three men, one woman, and one young miss. He expected more to follow. Under date of 12th wrote he expected to baptize some the 14th inst. He says "Decoration Day" was largely observed at Lucas, and that by request he delivered the address, which was well received. He speaks highly of the Saints in that region and remarks that they are generally dutiful and spiritual. We know many there to be of the noblest of heaven's faithful children. On the 15th inst, he wrote as follows-"Tell Bro. Blair Bro J. T. Phillips baptized three since I baptized the five, making eight since I came here."

The Associate Editor has been away to Galien, Michigan, a short time, and his correspondents must excuse any seeming delay in his writing them.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt was to preach in Omaha, Nebraska, the 9th inst. His health is poor. Pray for him.

Bro. John M. Horner writes to Pres. Joseph Smith, from Kukaiau, Hamakua Hawaii, the 21st ult., saying he visited Mr. L. L. Rice who holds the newlyfound "Manuscript Found" of Solomon Spaulding. He says: "I am fully convinced that it is the identical 'Manuscript Found.' Mr. Rice is an old gentleman of about eighty-five years, with eye and intellect unclouded," and that he says he will send it to Prof. Fairchild, and have him deposit it in the Oberlin, Ohio, Library, keeping a copy of it for himself. This is as it should be. And yet there is more valuable testimony to follow soon.

Bro. R. R. Gaither, of Ottawa, Kansas, rejoices in the truth, and feels specially thankful that God called him away from from the errors of sectarianism and led him into the bright light of the gospel. He thinks the sects exhibit the fact that they are patterning after their "mother" in their "ornamental" methods of worship.

By letter just received from Bro. C. A. Bishop, dated at North Yakima, W. T., he informs us he will soon move with his family to Independence, Mo., which will be his future address.

Sr. Mary L. Grover, of Albion, Boone county, Nebraska, writes that there are no Saints that she knows of in their vicinity, and she greatly desires to meet some. If any near there sees this, let them call on Sr. Grover, or correspond with her.

Some one sends us a circular of the Iowa State Normal Music School, to be held at Glenwood, Iowa, beginning July 6th, 1885. In the corps of teachers we see the names of Brn. A. D. and T. A. Hougas, of Macedonia, Iowa.

Bro. William A. Doty says, under date of the 24th ult.: "I can not do without the HERALD. It is the only paper I take, and without it I would be as a ship in a storm without a rudder."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Samuel Eckersley, of Richmond, Cache county, Utah, writes the 8th inst. and says:

"Thanks for the papers you sent me on May 18th. I am striving to make good use of them amongst the people in this settlement and elsewhere. Pen and paper are inadequate to speak in full. Hope Joseph will come in June. The field is getting ready with many, and the people are anxious to know where the foretold prophet is coming from. I have taken a stand in favor of these things, and God is with me by his Spirit. My house is at your service. My home is the center of a radius of twenty-five miles. Hope for a great work."

Elder D. H. Bays, in a letter dated at his new home, in Pratt, Pratt county, Kansas, the 10th inst., says:

"I desire to express my approbation of the action of General Conference at its session at Indepence, in April last, respecting those mooted questions. I am truly glad the Church would not allow herself to be driven to the formal declaration of a creed, nor the promulgation of any dogma. Such a course, in my opinion, would have been damaging to the work in its progress. It would have forced many free, independent, reasoning minds from the church. Of all the religious bodies in the world, our church is one of the most liberal—allowing a broader field of thought—while at the same time it is one of the most rigid in the enforcement of its discipline against offenders against the moral code. For over half a century the church has flourished and grown under her present rule, without the formulation of a written creed, except as to matters of saving faith, and why should we be disturbed at this late day? I concur in the action of the body declaring the three books to contain the law of the church, and to be the standard in every case where differences arise between members of the body.

"Allow me to lift my hat and bow to the associate editor of the Herald. I hope you may enenjoy the work in your new field."

Elder R. M. Elvin, on the 11th, writing from Wilber, Nebraska, says:

"There is a growing interest in our work out in these parts, and the need of more active laborers in the field."

Elder Jobe Brown says June 7th:

"I expect to start on a mission for the advancement of the work this coming week, and will go wherever and for as long as the providence of the Lord and his Spirit may direct. My first point will be Clinton, Iowa, which will be my address."

Sr. Hannah B. Woodward writes from Concord, Vt., the 7th inst:

"I am here alone in the faith.  I do fully believe in the gospel as preached in 1842 by Elder E. P. Maginn and others. He baptized and confirmed me.  I have not seen an Elder for about thirty-five years. How glad I should be to see one! The Saints are my people, and their God is my God. I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ."

This Sister asks the prayers of the Saints that she may be restored to health.

Bro. R. Coburn writes from Blenheim, Ont., June 14th, and says:

"Our Conference in Ridgetown was a success. The Spirit of the Master was there and the Saintts felt encouraged and strengthened.

Bro. C. C. Reynolds, of Buffalo, Iowa, writes:

"I attended our quarterly conference at Amber, last Saturday and Sunday. We were happily privileged in meeting with some of the dear Saints from Viola, and hope it won't be the last time. We had a time of rejoicing. There was a good representation of the district, and the Saints formed new resolutions to do more in the future than in the past to advance God's cause—the Elders in particular."

OF the system of weekly payments to employees in large establishments, the Chicago Tribune for June 10th, has the following:

"Our recent article recommending the payment of wageworkers on some other day than the last of the week has called out some information on the subject, which is of considerable interest. It appears that not a few of the employers of labor in this city have already learned the value of the plan, and adopted it with very satisfactory results, both to themselves and to their workmen. There is one quarter of the city in which it is the rule with searesly an exception.

In the packing-houses in the neighborhood of the Union Stock-Yards, Tuesday is the pay-day, the pay-rolls being made up during Monday. In some of the houses the men are divided into two sets, each of which is paid every alternate week. In others all the men receive their pay each Tuesday.

"The change in the behavior of the workers in the packing-houses since this alteration in the time of payment is described by some of the employers as a radical one. Formerly it was practically impossible to mass anything like a full working force earlier in the week than Tuesday, no matter how urgently it might be desired by the employer. A large proportion of the workmen habitually carried their hard earnings to the saloon, often without first going home, and staid there till a considerable percentage had been put into the doggery till. The carouse would be continued Sunday, with what was left over, and by by Monday morning the poor wretch was in no condition to work, even if all his money was gone. Now the rule is carry the wages home, and the family has the benefit of the money, while the head of the worker is clear for the duties the following day. The employer is now seldom called upon by the officers of the law with garnishee papers for the payment of debts contracted by the workmen.

"There is peace at home, and comparative comfort. The little ones have enough to eat, and clothing to hide their nakedness. The police man is not so often called in to save a wife and children from the drunken fury of the man who ought to be their protector. The bridewell is left to be occupied, and the pawnshop to be patronized, by the loafing classes of the community and those toilers who still draw their wages Saturday night, and squander them. The church and the Sabbath-school are attended by thousands who formerly never went there, because the men were too drunk and the children too poorly clad. In a word, there has been a marked reformation in the habits and morals of the people, which makes them immensely happier, as well as more respectable and less dangerous. The workman is now a valuable member of the community. who can be trusted to perform his duty as a citizen, instead of being regarded as little better than a wild beast, whose presence is a perpetual menace to the peace and comfort of society."

HIGHMORE, Hyde Co., Dak., June 15th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—Thinking a few words from this part of the world would be of interest to your readers, I embrace the present opportunity of writing a few lines. We have invitations to preach here in various parts of the country. The majority of the people seem very kind, and are anxious to know more about our doctrine. Our meetings are well attended, with good listeners; and I think by a constant effort, and a godly walk on the part of the Saints, some good can be done bye and bye. Will Bro. Hiram Holt inform us of his whereabouts. I am informed that he is contemplating a trip up into Potter country. We extend him a cordial invitation to call and see us, as it is not out of his way, and his help and counsel will be appreciated. This part of Dakota has been blessed with an abundance of rain this season. We have had some pretty high winds, which demolished several buildings throughout the county. Crops look splendid. I never saw grain look better. Wheat is in the boot, and if we do not have any disastrous storms between now and harvest time, there will be an abundant yield in this part of the territory.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

GOMER REESE.

DECKERVILLE, Michigan, June 9th 1885.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Our Northern Michigan Conference is over. We had a good one, and we were blessed and cheered. All went home rejoicing in the great latter-day work. During conference three were baptized; our church was dedicated to the Lord, and the work is onward here. I have baptized seven since General Conference. Bro. Blair; God bless you and Bro. Joseph. I am glad you are where you are, now that Bro. Joseph has gone to the west.

Yours, John J. Cornish.

DELTA, Eaton Co., Michigan, June 17th, 1885.

President Joseph Smith: - It will be only a year the first Sabbath in July coming, since my dear husband and myself were baptized at Galien, by Elder C. Scott. My husband died rejoicing in hope of a part in the first resurrection, and I am living strong in the one faith of the gospel restored in these latter-days. It is my strong desire to aid in carrying forward so glorious a work, but my means are quite limited, and hitherto have only been able to give nothing but my poor prayers and my influence. Last Sabbath I rode eleven miles to hear Bro. Scott preach, and felt well paid. I wish very much to meet with the Saints at Coldwater, at the coming conference, but can not. Perhaps things may be more favorable some other time. In closing my letter I wish to say, that I feel often to pray God to reveal his holy will to the church through you, his prophet, in these latter days I do not cease to thank Him that a knowledge of these things has come to me, even here on the shores of time. I have four children all members of sectarian churches, still out of the gospel covenant. Will you remember them and George and me before the throne.

Your sister in Christ, Mrs. R. M. Weston.

FONTANELLE, Adair, Co., Iowa, June 15th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I see in the Herald a call for some one to tell who baptized Elder Archibald M. Wilsey, I did not see when it took place, but I claim it was done by Elder Jonathan Dunham. It was him that preached the gospel in Hamilton, Madison county, New York; and by him he was ordained. By him the Colchester Branch was organized, and Bro. Wilsey presided over it. This was done in the winter and spring of 1836. Elder Joseph Young visited the branch, and in June he preached the gospel to me in my own house in Clinton, Oneida county, New York. Bro. Jonathan Delap was baptized by Nelson Bates, at that time an Elder, living in Henderson, Jefferson county, New York; Delap residing in Sandy Creek, Oswego county, New York, by whom ordained he tells me he does not know. This information about Delap comes to me by Nelson Bates himself, who lives here. That of Bro. Wilsey, by long and pleasant acquaintance, and in March 26th, 1837, when the ice was nearly one foot thick, baptized my consumptive wife, who could not speak so as to be understood when she left the house, after riding twenty rods; and in an hour she could be heard and understood all over the room. On the first of April was moved ten miles, and was all right on June 3d, 1837. She bid us all farewell June 5th; Bro. Wilsey preached her funeral sermon.

Yours,

B. Alden.

Bro. John Scott:—I sent to your address for the Church Library a copy of "Braden's Problem of Problems;" I made the purchase of it at Sheriff's sale here of Braden's goods, on the 19th of last ference. Baptized one here on Sunday and two more yesterday. In haste, ELVINA, San Benito Co., Cal., May 31st, 1885.

Bro. Joseph Smith: Four days ago I received many thanks for the same, as you have been so kind as to explain the reason for not publishing your good and kind letter of date May 6th, 1885, my reply to "Guy". After I read the General Conference minutes I was satisfied that said article would not appear in the Herald. It may be better as it is. My faith is greatly strengthened since reading the minutes of the late glorious Conference at Independence. O! what a blessing, to know that our God hears, and immediately answers prayers, even to the silencing of controversies among his children; thence we have faith, hope, and assurance, to address Him "Our Father, who art in Heaven," and then present to him our requests and anxieties. O blessed hope of the faithful Christian! It is "without price." It is worth more than all else combined. May the Lord speed his glorious cause, on and on, even till the knowledge of the true and living God shall fill the whole earth as the water covers the mighty deep. I verily believe the time is near when the Lord will command his people to build his house, the Temple, at Independence, Mo. Will they be ready and willing to obey? Are there any who are able to help the ministry who are with-holding their means from said ministry and their families for the purpose of being able to cast in the more, when the command is given to build said temple? If so, let such remember this fact is known unto the Lord, and that in the Revelation which says "Let all things be prepared before you," it does not mean to let others prepare all things and after the preparation is fully made, that such are to then step in and legally claim an interest or a share with those who have been diligent in making the preparation. For just as true as the gospel, the old adage will then apply, "Let every tub stand on its own bottom." The Lord is soon coming to claim his own; and he will not claim any but his own. There will be no ligitation there to contest for rights. I am truly thankful to see by Herald that Bro. Joseph Clapp is again on the "warpath." May much success attend his labors and all the Lord's servants is my

I can not well close this already long letter without mentioning Bro. Mills, (D. S., of Southern Cal.); his letter in last Herald has the same genuine ring as of yore; although he is just recovering from a long spell of sickness caused by the breaking of his leg. I am very thankful that he "feels good clear through and through," and is out for active service as long as the Master wishes. May the good Lord speed and prosper him. Let one and all be up and doing their duty for "the strife will not be long." Let us strive to "hold the fort," for he is coming to our release, and now while "we hear the rumbling of the chariot in the distance," let us pray that we faint not in the heat of battle. Your co-laborer for the final triumph of "the army of the Lord."

J. H. Lawn.

New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, June 16th, 1885.

Dear Herald:--Would you be so kind as to place this notice in your paper. If any of the Saints are visiting Nova Scotia or New Glasgow, I would like very much for them to call on me, as there are none of the Latter Day Saints here but myself; but thank the Lord I am enjoying his blessings, and there are many here now that I believe are ready to join us if they only had some one to teach them. There has been a great change here since a year ago, so I had a meeting in my house the other night. The object of the meeting was to see how many were ready to take God's word for their guide instead of man's as so many of the churches are doing nowadays; and the next object was to see how many made up their minds to live a perfect, holy life, or believed they could, with Christ as their shepherd, and believe that the reason that we don't receive more blessings, is because we are not living close enough to God's commands. Now you see that is what the Latter Day Saints believe. I wish you would try and send us a preacher down here for a while. I am poor, and can not do much, but I will do all I can for any one that will come for a few months. I will keep him at my house without anything but God's blessing. And anything more that I can do, I will. I am intending to buy a place, that is a house and lot, and I will have to go about eight hundred dollars in debt. So you see I can not do much, but with God's help I may be able to do a lot. I have been a great sinner, and never had any luck or pleasure till I joined the Saints in Wyandotte, Kansas, about three years ago; and ever since I have had great peace, and luck, and happiness. Thanks be to God for that.

You see now what I would like—for some Elder to come and stop the summer with me free of board, and with the promise that I will do as God prospers me in helping him along. And now I ask the prayers of the Saints.

Yours truly,

JAMES KING.

The interest in the Murphy temperance movement is on the increase at Pittsburg. Hundreds were unable to gain admission May 10th to Library Hall, where the meeting was held, and the auditorium was so densely packed that several women fainted. The crowd outside broke down the doors in their efforts to get in, and the police were finally compelled to disperse them. Over four hundred persons signed the pledge.

Summary of News.

The anti-Semitic movement appears to be still strong in Austria. Great efforts have, for instance, been made to defeat Herr Schöner, the leader of the agitation, who sits for Waidhöfen, in Lower Austria. The journals of Vienna, which are chiefly controlled by Jews, naturally detest him, and of late there has been an agreement never to mention his name. He was considered, therefore, a beaten man; but at the election it was found that 292 secondary electors had voted for him, against 113-or, in other words, that he was elected by nearly three to one. The incident is of little importance; but it shows the lingering strength of a feeling which in Austria is a compound of old Catholic animosity and modern irritation at the power of wealth. In Prussia the agitation seems to be dying away; but in Russia and Roumania it revives on the smallest provocation, and always expresses itself, as it used to do in England, in direct physical Queen Victoria has accepted the resignation of Premier Gladstone and his Cabinet, and has summoned the Earl of Salisbury to form a new Ministry. Her Majesty is expected to return from Balmoral to Windsor next Tuesday. The excitement in the House of Commons last evening when Mr. Gladstone announced the resignation of the Government was tremendous. The retiring Premier was wildly cheered. The plans of the Conservatives are still involved in mystery.

Land-Office Commissioner Sparks has declared that, in his judgment, the original Maxwell grant did not exceed 100,000 acres; that by fraud it was increased to more than 1,000,000 acres; and that suits will be brought in Colorado, New Mexico, and elsewhere against the parties whom the Commissioner believes to be responsible for the swindle.

Philadelphia has the honor of being the leading city of the country in divorces. A thoughtful student of affairs attributes this to the circumstance that so much affection is expended there on brotherly love that none is left for connubial purposes.

El Mahdi has sent a threatening letter to Gen. Wolseley announcing that Wolseley will meet the fate of Gordon. It is possible that El Mahdi has not heard of the change of administration in England.

The entire force of the Agricultural Department at Washington will be furloughed without pay from June 20 to July 1, the funds of the bureau being exhausted.

June 16th.-In the Province of Castellon de la

Plana, in Spain, yesterday, there were eighty cases of cholera and sixty deaths.

Thirty thousand people have fled from Murcia owing to the terrible dread of the disease which has taken possession of the people.

In the City of Murcia alone yesterday there were, according to the latest rumors, sixty-four new cases of cholera and thirty-nine deaths.

In the Province of Murcia, outside of the city, there were fifty cases of cholera and sixteen deaths within the same period.

The Official Gazette confirms the statement that cholera is raging in the Provinces of Valencia, Castellon de la Plana, and Murcia and in the City of Madrid.

The opposition newspapers, on the contrary, deny that cholera exists in Madrid, and say that all testimony regarding the suspicious cases is insufficient to give warrant for the assertion that they are cases of cholera.

Washington, D. C.—Acting Assistant-Surgeon Orr of the Marine Hospital Service has reported to the bureau that the Norwegian bark Augustinus arrived at Delaware breakwater quarantine from Cienfuegos to-day. All on board were well except the Captain, who was suffering from suspected yellow fever. The vessel will be detained for fumigation and cleansing, and the Captain will be taken to the hospital on shore if necessary.

Consul Willard has reported to the State Department from Guaymas, Mexico, that the west coast of Mexico is now free from yellow fever.

The Marine Hospital Bureau is informed of an outbreak of yellow fever near Cayenne, on the Salut Islands.

There were five new cases of cholera in this city yesterday, and one death from the same disease. In the City of Valencia there were two fresh cases but no deaths. In the Province of Valencia, however, outside of the city, there were forty-eight new cases and twenty-seven deaths. The City of Murcia reports forty new cases and and seven deaths, while the other parts of the Province of Murcia report twelve fresh cases and four deaths.

It was hotter to-day in New York than ever before known on a corresponing date. At six o'clock this morning the mercury stood at 70 only, but Old Sol got to work soon after and made things sizzle, and before four o'clock he had beaten his own record for the 16th of June. In 1873 he came the nearest stopping at 92°, while for the last fifteen years, except in 1873, 86° has been the highest. In eight of these years the mercury has stood at less than 80°. At nine o'clock this morning the temperature had risen to 76°, and then the extremely high humidity of the atmosphere added greatly to the distress of man and beast. But it grew hotter and hotter, and at noon the mercury registered 88°, with no indication of stopping. At 3:30 and for an hour afterward it maintained itself at 95° at Hudnut's. Even at the Signal-Service Station on top of the Equitable Building, 190 feet above Broadway, it stood at 91°. At 4:30 a seven-mile-an-hour breeze reached the city from the west and gave some relief, although the record stood at 90° at six o'clock. At eleven to-night a light rain fell, which was succeeded by a heavy thunder storm at 11:15.

June 17.—Some disappointment is felt by the Conservatives in England at the delay in the formation of a new Ministry. The Marquis of Salisbury will confer with the Queen again to-day. Her Majesty left Balmoral yesterday afternoon for Winsdor, accompanied by the Princess Beatrice. There was a conference yesterday between Lord Randolph Churchill and the Marquis of Salisbury, which is said to have resulted satisfactorily, all differences being smoothed over by mutual concessions. Lord Randolph made it a condition of his co-operation with Lord Salisbury that Sir Stafford Northcote should be removed from the Leadership of the Commons by transferring him to the House of Lords, and this was agreed to by the Marquis. The friends of the young Conservative leader say that he will be Secretary of State for India in the new Cabinet.

The President has been interviewed in regard to the settlers now on the Winnebago Reservation, and has stated in substance that he would "permit honest settlers to remain there until Congress should meet and adjust the whole matter."

One of the first difficulties the New British Cabinet will have to deal with is a big deficit. All Mr. Gladstone, foxy, grand old man that he is, left was the hole.

About the best scheme which suggests itselt now to solve the Indian problem in the Southeast, is to ship a lot of canned tomatoes and corn to some point where the Apaches can get hold of it. Death appears reasonably certain for those who eat canned goods, as put up by some manufacturers. The list of fatalities from this cause for the last month is something appalling. Apropos of the subject, it is announced that an English inventor has lately devised a method of coating tin with a material resembling glass, which removes all danger, and that the adoption of his process is likely soon to become general.

Mr. Glaustone said in the House of Commons yesterday that the Marquis of Salisbury had consented to form a new Cabinet. It is expected that the names of the new Ministers will be announced Friday. The Conservatives are far from anxious to assume the difficult task of steering the ship of state through the shoals, and there is already talk of dissension in their ranks. The London Times says it is clearly to be understood that the Salisbury Ministry must be a transition Ministry. There is no room for a new departure or policy.

The sentence of a year's imprisonment and the infliction of twenty lashes upon a Baltimore wifebeater occupying a good position in society is likely to be indorsed by public sentiment. The one thing a brute fears is the applicant of brute force to himself, and such an example as this case will afford must have more effect upon men of the type in Baltimore than could any other form of punishment. The whipping-post is not a relic of barbarism when used as a necessity to enable the only style of reasoning which will reach a class.

Gen. Grant left, New York City at nine o'clock yesterday for Mount MacGregor, near Saratoga. He arrived at his destination at two p. m. much fatigued.

THE SINEWS OF WAR IN RUSSIA.

London Pall Mall Budget: That "we have the money too," and that Russia has not the money, was one of the grounds of the light heart with which the swashbucklers at the music halls, and the journalists who instruct them, were eager to have a Russian war. The campaign was to be closed by the bankruptcy of Russia. But the question of "the money" caused as much anxiety to the Minister of Finance in Russia as it caused joy to the war-like plumers of the Daily Telegraph. A letter from St. Petersburg states that when Giers and Bunge, the Finance Minister, had an audience of the Czar at Gatschina, and the Czar talked of issuing an appeal to the people, the latter felt it his duty to caution his Imperial master as to the condition of the Russian finances. The Emperor at once rose from his seat, and said with great solemnity, "If the war should break out I hereby promise that I will sacrifice to it the entire property of the house of Romanoff (180,000,000 rubles): and I am certain that my people will not allow my example to stand alone." The writer adds that there can be no doubt that the great land owners, the rich mercantile world, and the wealthy monasteries, were fully prepared to make equally great sacrifices for their fatherland. In 1878, when there was the expectation of war with England and Austria, the Moscow merchants and clergy alone agreed to sacrifice the immense sum of five hundred million rubles.

DYING BY HUNDREDS.

Madrid, June 18.—Yesterday in Castellon de la Plana there were fifty-eight new cases of cholera and twenty-eight deaths. In the City of Valencia seventeen new cases and seven deaths were reported, while the Province of Valencia had total of 146 new cases and eighty-eight deaths. In the City of Murcia there were ninety-eight new cases and forty-one deaths. In the Province of Murcia the new cases aggregated 171 and the deaths numbered seventy-four. In Aranjuez, a town of New Castile twenty-eight miles south-south-west from Madrid, there was one case of cholera yesterday.

Another dispatch says: There were four fresh cases of cholera here yesterday afternoon. There were also two deaths from cholera. Between the 20th of May and the 15th of June there were seventy-five cases of cholera here, and during the same period there were forty-five deaths. In the City of Valencia during the last twelve hours there were four new cases of cholera and three deaths. Senor Romeroy Robledo, Minister of the Interior, declared in the Cortes last evening that the "suspicious cases" in Madrid were beyond a doubt, cholera, and of the Asiatic type.

Dispatches from New York City and other points in the East, in yesterday morning's Tribune, reported the thermometer 96° and the atmosphere very humid. This means a condition of temperature much more intolerable than would be at the same degree were the air clear and dry. It means a sticky, muggy, damp, unwholesome condition of the atmosphere, joined with intense heat, which makes life a burden and superinduces a personal discomfort faintly set forth in the almond-tree, the grasshopper, and the caper-berry of the revised version. The same dispatches also reported that people were leaving New York in large numbers in quest of cooler localities, gladly putting behind them the blazing and unhealthy furnace of glowing brick and stone, between whose narrow avenues no cooling breezes can find their way to relieve sweltering humanity.

The French Government will send a mission headed by M. Brovardel, to Spain, to study the origin and progress of the cholera epidemic.

Affairs at Plymouth, Pa., are slowly improving. The Relief Committee's report for the last week shows the total number of seriously sick at 306; destitute families, 220; death, 1; recovered, 111. This is a decidedly better showing than was made for the week previous. The committee states that it is in need of no more money.

"Bunker Hill Day" was celebrated in Boston and vicinity yesterday.

For Disraeli to accept an Earldom was not improper; for Gladstone to have accepted one would have been out of place. Disraeli was of another type. Gladstone is essentially the Great Commoner. He makes few mistakes of the moment, this wonderful Englishman; he may have erred in his policy as a whole, but his present tact is never-failing. He did not hesitate in refusing the Earldom.

Nine prisoners of war recently captured by a native Chief on the Brass River in West Africa, were killed and eaten the other day by the tribe because their ransom was not forthcoming. The Chief was converted some time ago by missionaries to the Baptist faith.

Queen Victoria is said to be determined, if possible, to induce Mr. Gladstone to accept a Peerage. In the event of his refusal she will confer the honor upon Mrs. Gladstone. It is also reported that Attorney-General James will be elevated to the House of Lords.

Admiral Jouett telegraphs to Secretary Whitney that his efforts at mediation in the isthmian squabbles have so far been fruitless, the proposed treaty of peace having proved unsatisfactory to the revolutionists. The Government forces are marching upon Barranquilla.

Negotiations are now in progress between the United States and Canada, looking to the final settlement of the fisheries question. A proposition is said to have been made by the United States Government to refer the matter to Congress at the next session, and to appoint a joint commission to equitably decide the points in dispute.

Fire yesterday destroyed the great bazaar and mercantile establishment of William Whitely in London, causing a loss of $750,000.

There was a serious riot in the City of Brunn, Austria, night before last. The trouble grew out of differences between the workmen and the factory owners concerning the hours of labor. The excited populace stormed the factories and the disturbance was quelled with difficulty by the military. A number of soldiers and many rioters were wounded. More violence is feared.

The packing and provision establishment of Washington Butcher's Sons in Philadelphia was burned yesterday. The loss is $150,000 and the insurance $100,000.

The Descret News, Utah, of the 9th inst., says: The storm which commenced at a very early hour this morning is quite general throughout the Territory. At Provo the wind which accompanied the rain was so violent that the roof of the co-op warehouse was blown off, and Z. C. M. I. of Salt Lake City had to send down a force of men this afternoon to repair the damage. The vast amount of rain which has fallen has greatly swelled the various mountain streams, and as a result many of the farms in the lower portions of the valley will be inundated and the crops considerably damaged. City Creek is the highest now that it has been this year, and the large dam put in near the head of the water-works this spring commenced to wash away this forenoon. Superintendent Ottinger sent up a number of men, who are busily engaged in repairing the break and preventing further damage. Water-master Winder is also out with a force of men laboring to prevent the canal from giving way on account of the extra amount of water which it now contains.

An indictment having been found against Alfred Best, on the charge of unlawful co-habitation with his wives, he was arrested at his farm yesterday by Deputy Marshal Greenman, and notified to appear to-day before Commissioner McKay and gave bonds. Accordingly he came into town this afternoon and appeared before that officer, who fixed his bonds at $1,000. They were furnished by Messrs. Rudolph Alf and D. L. Davis.

Edmund Ellsworth, a Mormon, under indictment of the District Court at Prescott, Arizona, for polygamy, was allowed to-day to withdraw his plea of not guilty and plead guilty to unlawful co-habitation. Before being sentenced, he stated that he understood the law and in future would obey it. Chief Justice Howard then sentenced him to pay a fine of $300, or imprisonment in the Territorial Penitentiary at Yuma for sixty days.

June 16.—Shocks of earthquake have occurred in Cashmere with increased violence. It is reported that 2,281 persons have perished in the district of Muzuffuraban. They continue throughout the Vale of Cashmere at the rate of eight to ten daily.

Martin Eddins, a laborer living at Hamburg, Preble County, O., was tak in sick after eating lettuce for supper. June 11 he died in agony, soon after taking a powder prepared by his wife. Yesterday she was arrested, and last night she was sent to Eaton to jail without bail. She confessed last night that she gave the poison—arsenic—to her husband at the suggestion of William Rowe, a man with whom she had been intimate for some time. Rowe is not to be found. She says he made her promise before he went away to poison her husband.

Postal-Inspector Seybolt of San Francisco, Cal., has received a dispatch that Isaac N. Hibbs, ex-Postmaster of Lewiston, Idaho, who issued money-orders to himself for over $20,000, was arrested to-day at Harriston River, British Columbia. Ten thousand five hundred dollars was found on his person.

During the last thirty-six hours a furious storm of rain and wind has swept through the Northwest. In Iowa it was particularly severe, partaking of the nature of a clyclone. From many points casualties are reported and great damage to property. In Central and Southern Illinois the storm was not so severe, but was chiefly remarkable for an unusual electric display. The damage done by the storm in Iowa is estimated at $700,000.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

June 17th.—The Chicago produce markets were very irregular yesterday. Wheat was excited by a very wide difference between the Chicago and New York statements of visible supply, while corn was very strong on a prospective falling off in the receipts at this point. Provisions were strengthened by a decrease in the arrivals of hogs.

The Cincinnati Price Current, in its weekly review of pork-packing of the West, will say tomorrow: "The number of hogs packed in the West the last week is 220,000, compared with 225,000 for the corresponding week last year. The total from March 1st to date is 2,080,000 against 1,815,000 one year ago. The number of hogs packed up to last week at large cities was as follows:

Chicago	1,155,000
Kansas City	344,000
St. Louis	87,000
Cincinnati	52,000
Indianapolis	65,000
Cedar Rapids	83,000
Cleveland	50,000

The following is from late Iowa notes.—Timothy.—From the fact that in those sections where grasses are receiving the most attention, where lands are in demand at good prices, where prosperity abounds upon every hand, the thought must have forced itself upon every observing farmer that grass is king. No better illustration of this need be given than the remarkable increase of acreage in one year as shown by the following figures: One thousand four hundred and eighteen correspondents report an increased acreage, 88 the same as last year, and 181 a decrease of area: but 13 report no timothy. The increased acreage for the State is a fraction over 12 per cent. Average condition of the crop reported by 1,761 correspondents, 100 per cent.

Clover.—This crop shows an increased acreage of nearly 10 per cent, reported by 1,233 as an increase of acreage, 71 acreage the same, and 261 area decreased; 53 report none grown. Its average condition from 1,660 reports is 94 per cent. There are some complaints of crop being winterkilled.

The iron industry in Michigan is in a bad way. The strikes in the East have seriously affected the market, large mines and furnaces are closing down one after another, and the outlook is on the whole a dismal one.

SUPERFICIALITY.

In these times of looseness and superficiality, when many professors are saying Lord, Lord, and are not doing His will, the pure gold, practical every-day holiness, is at a premium. As servants of the Most High and exemplars of his salvation which we proclaim, let us give to the world something more than an oral testimony; let us endeavor to make our experience in holiness an intensely practical affair. "I will show thee my faith by my works," said one, on whom rested the Holy Ghost; and "Faith without works is dead, being alone." Works, having the glory of God as their ultimate object, are but faith set in motion. Without a zealous, intelligent, well-directed, and never-flagging spirit of labor, our faith will never cause the devil much uneasiness, or redound very greatly to the glory of God in bringing about the salvation of a lapsed and ruined world. A militant, aggressive, Spirit-baptized sanctification is the urgent demand of the times.

Live as with God; and, whatever be your calling, pray for the gift that will perfectly qualify you in it.—Horace Bushnell.

WHAT IS THE PRIEST'S DUTY?

As a visiting officer, he is to "visit the house of each member and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties."—D. C. 17: 10.

I italicize the last clause, wishing to call attention on this occasion to that only. The great object of all this Christian warfare labor, and sacrifice, is that we may "make our calling and election sure." Certain manifestations of the Spirit are promised to the faithful ones in Christ Tesus in all ages, "which is the earnest of our inheritance." If we receive not these manifestations, we have no certainty about the future. No matter what the hindering cause may be, if we do not receive God's Spirit here, we will be with those who suffer when Christ comes. Our reception of these manifestations depend upon how our duty is performed. Nothing can be clearer then, than the necessity for understanding those duties, for if not understood, how can they be performed?

Such thoughts as these led to the query at the head of this article. Just how to interpret the clause referred to is what puzzles some; but we are strongly inclined to believe it needs no interpretation whatever; it being expressed in the most simple language possible. The only thing then to be determined upon this point at present is, what comes under the head of "all family duties." This little word "all" is a giant in moment; therefore, for the sake of brevity, we must mention only a few of the most important ones, and those best suited to our purpose. Congeniality and filial love are virtues, and should exist largely in every family circle. But that it falls to the duty of the Priest to visit some households "called to be Saints" where there is a lack of these virtues, and serious effects crop out in many hateful and harsh words and acts, is a fact well attested by many. It is not to be supposed that a work of God's appointing contains any superfluous appendages; he saw the need of each officer called by him, and in his economy placed them there for a purpose, the Priest not excepted. Now when the Priest knows, or has reasons to believe there is a fearful lack of amiableness in this household, is he not proving recreant to the trust committed to him if he says nothing about it? Scriptures are not silent on the union that should exist in family circles; Gen. 2:24; Mark 10: 7; and especially Eph. 5: 25with many more quotations, show clearly the pure, ardent, and self-sacrificing love that must exist in every family circle before much of God's Spirit can rest and abide there. Their union is no intimate and indissoluble, that their happiness is inseparable; and what promotes the interests and peace of one promotes that of each member of that family. If, then, one of the heads of a family are petulant, cross, and testy, its effect is felt, keenly felt by each member, and shows its ugly head in many unbecoming freaks of their offspring.

We understand it to be the duty of the Priest then, by his kind advice, to point out their duties plainly in these matters, and by his timely and wise exhortation help them to erect and rally around this standard of peace, and assist them in the promotion of this union. We believe if there is one family duty more binding than any other, it is that of being kind and courteous in our demeanor at home. Therefore, that husband or wife who know how to be sociable and chatty, and wear a pleasant smile previous to marriage, and who can still appear the same in company; but retains to themselves the right of manifesting a cold, stiff reserve of these congenial habits at home, deporting themselves as some turbulent sovereign, or supreme ruler, retains to themselves also the right of rebelling against God, and disregarding the most sacred obligations of earth. And God says (in the text), it is the duty of the Priest to exhort such to "attend to" their obligations and duties. To exhort implies not only to induce by persuasion; but to inform, advise, council, and convince.

We think, then, when the Branch Priest comes in contact with one of these specimens of humanity, who treats with cruel contempt these bonds which should be kept inviolate, he should inform him of his neglect; advise, and insist upon a reform; counsel them in the manner this reform should be brought about, and convince them of the absolute necessity of such steps being taken.

Then again it is said, "Order is heaven's law." It seems by this that prior to our becoming like the King of heaven, this faculty of order, or this capacity of mind enabling us to do things at the right time, and keep things in their proper places, must be well developed. Now if the Priest comes to visit me, whether officially or not, and finds that I have no place for anything, all my tools, instruments, implements, &c., scattered promiscuously over and outside my premises, gate hanging by one hinge, fence dilapidated, and all other things ditto, he needs no better evidence that I wholly disregard that "first law." A man's business is a good index of his religion (speaking of the way they are followed). This is a rule worth trying. Now the consequence of my neglect of this "first law" is slowness of progress. If this law of order be neglected in any branch of business, it breeds confusion and clogs the wheels of progress; and religion is no exception. What is the duty of the Priest under such circumstances? If he just exhorts me to faithfulness in prayer and my devotions to God, has he answered the end of his ordination and selection in the premies? I dare not answer in the affirmative, but do think he signally fails to follow the instructions of the Lord in the text. But among all these duties pertaining to the family, that of cleanliness stand prominent also. If then the Priest finds my house looking like a country grocery after a rainy election day, the floor not seen for dirt, the children's hair irregular mats, their hands and feet black and scaly, and freckled faces; if the husband's mouth resembles the mouth of a chipmunk when storing his winter supply of beach nuts, and no spittoon, and all the surroundings bearing similar aspect, most certainly there is need of improvement before the Spirit can abide there. Now who can say that this improvement is not a "family duty?" In the humble opinion of the writer it is, and one which God commands the Priest to "exhort them to attend to." But if said Priest through timidity or any other cause fails to speak of such faults, and exhort them in the spirit of meekness and love "to attend to" it, dare any say he has performed his duty? Just think of the gross sin of raising children under such influences.

These first impressions made on the tablets of those pure minds contaminate them at once and will adhere with fearful tenacity, and crop out in after years, much to the disadvantage of those loved ones. Under such surroundings, children will inherit these deficiencies. There are many who are born void of these necessary faculties, then raised under these influences, and have cultivated loose ways and manners their whole lives; and now in mature years or middle age, they seldom or never think of or notice it. God sees this wide depart-ure of many from those rules which are congenial with his Spirit, and in his econemy places an officer in each branch, whose "duty is to preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize, administer the sacrament, and visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties." The whole matter may be summed up in few words, by asking one simple question, i. e. Will the Spirit of God be as apt to abide with an importunate, morose, vulgar tyrant, who partakes of his filthy and confused surroundings, as it will with a genteel, kind, patient person, who keeps himself and surroundings clean and orderly? We think but one answer will be given to the above query, which to my mind establishes the fact, that that Priest who is sustained by any branch as an officer of the same, and is not found reminding those who lack these indispensible qualifications, pointing out to them the need of reform, and by his gentle admonition, his mild and simple exhortation, helping them to make a start in the culture of these heaven-born duties, is far from being in the line of his calling.

But, says one, some are so sensitive you can not even mention a fault in a general way, from the stand in public, but they put the coat on and become offended. Well, this is man's way, and many times it is fraught with bad effects. We doubtless bring ourselves under condemnation at times by whipping some particular parties over the shoulders of the public. Probably a better way would be for the Priest to go as the Lord has commanded, to their houses; first make them see that all you seek or desire is their good; be sure you have the Spirit of the Master with you, then proceed; but not in an insolent, domineering, or fault-finding manner; but meekly and plainly contrast to their understanding, and show the advantage of reform. Man's way is indirect, indefinite, hence inadequate to perform the great task. You point out my errors and faults in public, though it be in a general way, the coat fits, I have an idea all understand you mean me; after service, and a few members are grouped here and there, one says, I wonder what Bro. B. thought of that?

For a time my failings are the topic of conversation. I am quite sure to hear of it, and in my judgment (faulty though it may be) insult is added to insinuation, and add naughty words to my heavy burden of sin; or, I am wounded, and become dejected, absent myself and harbor hard feelings; I can not now eat at my Father's table, and, Oh, how soon I am enveloped in darkness! That act which was meant for good, has done an untold amount of harm. God's way is direct and pointed; he says go straightway to the field of labor and thrust in your sickle where labor is needed; not to the green field, but where the grain is ripe and damaging. If you would combat an enemy who is in Boston go not to San Fransisco. If you would attack an error fostered by a member of the church, go thou to that member and direct your conversation to him, or her, and to the point, that you may not be misunderstood_not to some confidential friend, or group of Saints and take measures to bias their minds and poison their confidence in the erring one. If the Branch Priests will do this, possessing themselves of charity, "the pure love of Christ," they will find themselves left not alone, but a power in the hand of the Lord, able to accomplish much good,—a source of strength to the weak, a help to the erring and deficient ones.

And we further believe, if each branch was furnished with the right kind of instruction by their Priests, their energies applied in a direct manner just where it is needed, and not so much in a general and indifinite way, that in the rising generation, when they fill our places, the church will be advanced one hundred per cent in good morals and in spiritual strength. We never could clearly endorse the practice of many who adopt a certain prescribed form, or sterotyped exhortation for all, regardless of whether these "family duties" were assiduously attended to, or ruthlessly neglected. Christ said, "I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." We are instructed to follow him. Consider now for a moment some model family, where none of these Christian or "family duties" are permitted to drag losely along, and tell me what possible good can come from exhorting them "to attend to" those things which are already attended to? Some one will ask, why does the text say he is to "visit the house of each member?" My view of this is, First, that he may know that these duties are attended to; Second, that he may gain strength by associating with and soliciting the prayers of the strong; Third, that he may more easily note the contrast in thrift, in success, and in the peace, joy, and attractions of illy and well regulated families, and the difference in the amount of God's Spirit enjoyed by them.

Then again, we think too much stress can not be placed upon the fact that the influence of early training, of surroundings and associates, and the consequent impressions wrought upon the youthful mind, go farther toward making men and women what they are, than all other forces combined. Therefore, that father who is so indulgent with his children as not to infuse into their minds the principles of obedience, is neglecting one of those important "family duties." For, as a rule, those who were not governed in youth in a way that taught them the need of being submissive to authority, or "subject to the powers that be," are illy qualified to govern others. Hence we see every possible shade of extreme family government, from the "blue laws" of the Puritan fathers to the total abandonment of parental influence, no matter how perfectly that father may observe every other duty, this neglect or omission should be pointed out to him, and a reform urged in meekness. And that mother who becomes unsettled and impatient, because "The old ship, Zion" sails slowly, and thinks she can do no great work toward impelling her on, needs instruction—she should be informed that the rising generation will soon ascend the stage, and we pass off; and that as upon her devotes the responsibility of moulding the character of her offspring; she has within her grasp the lever which shall help shape the destiny of the nation. Patience is one of the fundamental principles of practical religion; without it we will make but a miserable failure in attempting to serve God. All great and grand results are brought about by a gradual process. The deft hand of the wife and mother suddenly moulds a good plump loaf to her liking; but it requires time, and skill, and patience, to mould the character, and develop the child's cranium, or intellectual powers, rightly. Nature suddenly produces a mushroom; but it requires long years to perfect the mighty oak. Step from natures kingdom into the spiritual realm and we find a striking similarity. The simple act of obedience, prompted by proper motives, soon brings miraculous manifestations, but the redemption of Zion is a question of wisdom, patience, and

That Branch Priest who humbly performs his duty as a visiting officer, and instructs these anxious, impatient mothers in the magnitude of their callings as mothers; who carefully chides, entreats, exhorts and thus builds up the weak and deficient ones in all Christian or "family duties," prove himself to be one of those "helps" that God set in the church. (1 Cor.12:28)-Set in the church as a part of its grand mechanism; and as an engine with a broken piston rod, so is a branch with an inactive officer—both unable to perform their Their ability to farther us on is functions. crippled.

story runs thus: Some Yankees built a lot of buggies and carriages of pine and other soft cheap material, using soleleather in the place of iron for tires, &c. They were very elegantly painted, and a few car-loads sold readily to western dealers, owing to cheapness. Now as every family who purchased one of those ornaments were swindled, in like manner is every one of the Lord's families (branches) taken in who sustains an officer who will not honor that office by serving that branch to the best of his ability; and as we implied in the start, whoever does not comprehend his duty must of necessity be very limited in ability, and is but an ornament. Now, in order to utilize our powers and prove ourselves more than a mere ornament, we must understand our

The writer looks back with a degree of remorse, seeing what an uncomely ornament he has been in the past. While the spirit of criticism is a very objectionable feature when existing among the members, yet the word of the Lord, in the text, places upon the shoulders of the Branch Priest the responsibility of being practical critics. One duty of the Priest is to "teach," and our branches are in the similitude of a school. Imagine a school wherein the students are allowed to blunder along in all their misconceptions, errors, and mistakes, with no corrections from their teacher, and you discover at a glance, their progress will be slow. The teacher might exhort them individually and collectively to be very diligent and studious, but if their mistakes are not pointed out to them, their advancement will of necessity be very limited. Then again, if those students are left to criticise each other, they are sure to stir up strife and become divided against themselves—hence "can not stand." Or, if the teacher detects an error in one of the pupils, and takes occasion to draw the undivided attention of the whole school to the mistake, this one, if at all sensitive, will think that undue reflection is being cast upon them, and it is likely to engender hatred, and result in evil. We see that neither of these courses are advisable in schools wherein we equip ourselves for the service of humanity, and the query is: Will they work any better in this great school wherein we are trying to qualify for the service of God? We think not.

Our conclusions are, that criticisims are necessary; and that they should not only come from the proper source, and in a proper spirit, at proper times; but should be direct, and to the point. Now, for the good of the cause I most love, and for the benefit of my co-ordinates, that we may more fully comprehend our callings, and that we may strengthen our weak and erring comrades. I have essayed to give you my views of some of the duties of a Branch Priest.

Soliciting friendly criticism from any source upon this point, I am yours in hope of progression.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS .- No. 9.

BY S. F. W.

SINCE the mounds were abandoned, garden beds have been made on them, in Northern Indiana, and in the valleys of Grand river and St. Joseph's, Michigan; also in lower Mississippi. These beds consist of low rectangular ridges, four feet apart, not unlike corn rows; and cover in places several hundred acres. The Indians have no traditions of them, consequently they are attributed to a medieval race, called for distinction, "villagers." Few relics or none, are found among the garden beds, so their implements must have been of wood or iron. The great antiquity of the mounds appears from the fact that none are found on the lower terraces of the streams. Some mounds are more recent than the garden beds. It is not likely that they were all made by one race, or in one era. Trees on the mounds of Marietta were eight hundred years old. We may suppose the so-called villagers were intermediate, in time, between the ancient mound builders and the modern Indians.

It is an established fact as already noticed, that the earliest races of man were associated with the elephant and mastodon; it is now in order to bring proofs that the mammoth and man of a later age were cotemporaneous. This later age, for want of a better title will be designated as post diluvian. In a cave on the Ohio, twenty miles below the mouth of the Wabash, are hieroglyphics like those of early eastern nations, and pictures of extinct animals, among which is one of the elephant. The great elephant mound of Wisconsin is proof also that this continent was peopled at a period corresponding to that of the origin of nations. This mound is one point in proof of affiliation of the mound builders and the builders of the temples in Central America, where the head of the Mastodon was an object of worship. Of a similar character to the elephant mound of Wisconsin, are the serpent and alligator mounds of Ohio. These have altars on the top of the animals, and were places of sacrifice. This proves the worshipers superstitious and degraded. The religion of the early immigrants was doubtless superior to this, and the faith had rapidly declined in the new world, as it had in the

The animal worship, or animal symbolism, thus portrayed by the mound builders, is like that of the oriental nations, but this does not prove that it was borrowed from them; but rather that it sprang out of similar conditions, both human and cosmical; people of a common stock, with common impulses, traditions and needs, at the same time in the world's history, and at the same stage of human development, produced institutions of a particular kind, though separated by a sea. Why not? What are seas and dividing walls in the great unfolding of nature's processes that we have traced through millions of years?

Prescott, in treating of the origin of American civilization, reaches the conclus-ions: "First, That the coincidences are sufficient to authorize the belief that the civilization of Anahuac was in some degree influenced by that of Asia. And, Secondly, that the discrepancies are such as to carry back the communication to a very remote period; so remote that this foreign influence has been too feeble to interfere materially with the growth of what may be regarded, in its essential features, as a peculiar and indigenous civilization."

As evidence of the identity of the family of Mexico and Peru with that of Hindostan and Egypt, Delafield gives the following proofs: The analogies of language; the four cataclysms of the world, from which we learn their traditions of events in early Asiatic history—[the ages of famine fire, wind, and flood]; the use of quipas, or knotted cords; the use of the three peculiar system of hieroglyphical writing of Egypt; identity in the divisions of the year, month and week, and the calculations thereof, and in the use of intercalary days; identity in Zodiacal signs, sepulchral tumuli, pyramidal temples, and in the uses of these temples; the use of hieroglyphical sculpture in all their sacred buildings; identity in the practice of embalming the royal corpses. &c.

According to old Central America books and traditions, some of the principal seats of the earliest civilization, that of the Colhuas, was in the great forest that covers the southern half of Yucatan and half of Gautemala, Chiapas, and part of Honduras. Here was the kingdom of "Xibalba," which was broken up by the Toltec dominion, as that at last, by the Aztecs in Mexico, and Mayas in Yucatan. The Maya Kingdom was broken up in 1420. "It can be seen that some of the ruined cities which can now be traced were several times renewed by reconstructions." "Copan and Palenque were old cities, and may have been ruins when Uxmal was built; Quirigua, too, is older than Copan, and Copan older than Palenque." "At Palenque, as at Mitla, the oldest work is the most artistic." How does this comport with the theory of original barbarism, and the evolution from savagery? Or that civilization originated on this continent?

Palenque could not have ever been a Christian city; in its "sanctuaries are found sculptured representations of idols, which resemble the most ancient gods, both of Egypt and Syria." The casa that contains the celebrated tablet of the cross, stands on the summit of a high truncated pyramid, as all the pagan temples do. Charencey professes to have decipered enough of the inscriptions on the Cross to make out the name of Kukulcan, who "was one of the very oldest personages in Central American mythology, as Can was one of the oldest in Peru. Kukulcan, sometimes a Zama, was associated with almost everything in civilization. He introduced the beginnings of civilized life, invented the art of writing, and was to the Central Americans not wholly unlike what Thoth was to the Egyptian, and Tautus, or Taut was to the Phoenicians. If the bas-relief of the cross of Palenque were half as old as his worship, in Central America, it would be far more ancient than any one has supposed"-

Baldwin. "A figure appears occasionly in the sculptures in which some have sought to recognize Astarte; one at Palenque is a female figure moulded in stucco, holding a child on her left arm or hand, just as Astarte appears on the Sidonian medals." Dupaix says she is one "absorbed in devotion," Ibid. Charnay says "Palenque, the oldest American city, was built by the Olmecs, a mixture of yellow aborigines and the first white immigrants."

The great law of developement that we have been considering, that produced a similarity in physical conditions on the two hemispheres, should produce a simularity in human affairs—in government, religion, architecture, &c. We have seen that the nations of the old world began their careers as builders, navigators, warriors, writers; were men of energy, ambition, daring and enterprise. We have seen that the oldest cities were the greatest and grandest of ancient times; that the oldest ruins were most stupendous in proportions, and most finished in execution. Then what should we expect to find on this other half of God's footstool? Something different, as if in a different world? Something grotes-que, unique, fantastical, mystical, or enchanted? When Humboldt stepped ashore in South America and found himself walking over slate rock, so familiar to his sight in other lands, he expressed surprise. When the early navigators saw the buildings of Yucatan, and the people following the common pursuits of life, they, too, expressed surprise at the similarity of all the scenes to what they had witnessed all their lives in Spain. Now that we have been ransacking the ruins of the old world, gazing in thought upon its lofty pyramids, its ruined temples, its sculptured columns, its inscribed walls hidden in the sands, and the tablets buried in its mounds, shall we be disconcerted at finding mounds, pyramids, and inscriptions here on this side of an infinitessimal world? No; the surprise would be in place if we found no pyramids, no past. This law that we have been tracing requires that Palenque should be a ruin gazed upon in awe by semi-savages. It requires that the oldest inscriptions should be most indecipherable, because most perfect; that the old pottery of the pueblo races should be the finest found in New Mexico, and that the old relics of the mound builders should excel those of the Indians; that the greatest works all over the continent should be the oldest. So we turn to Central America to find the seat of the first civilization and places of first occupation in America, corresponding to those first occupied in the eastern countries after the flood. And, we should expect to find the high altars there used for the same purposes; the pyramids built for the same use; to find the same gods worshiped and by the same names. And if we find the symbol of the cross in these new world temples, we need to go to the old world temples of the same age to find its meaning, and that of the many other symbols and structures noticed heretofore. All civilizations have had a comon source, and the source is divine inspiration.

The art of writing was extensively practiced in Mexico and Central America at the time of the conquest. Historians were trained and employed by the governments. "They composed with such ingenuity and art that the Spanish characters and methods were of no use to them." But few books escaped the ravages of time, and the bigoted zeal of the priests of Spain. Some few were secreted and still exist. Some of the first Spanish priests wrote histories from data learned from the books of the natives. Sahagan wrote such a history; De Landa wrote a history of the Mayas, and explained their alphabetical signs. Ximenes wrote of Gautemala, and translated the Popol-Vuh. The Codex Chimalpopoca is Toltec. The Codex Cakchiquil is also preserved. The cosmogony of the Quiches "has its root in the beliefs and facts of a time far more ancient than the national beginning of this people, and has passed several stages of growth."

Baldwin says that the dialects of the Mayas, Quiches and Tzendals, were included in the language of the Colhuas, who were the original civilizers. Dialects of this family are found now on both sides of the great forest. There, within the boundaries of the great forest, where are unvisited cities, and ruined roads, now untraceable, was the ancient seat of empire. catan presents the richest field for exploration. The state is dotted with ruins of splendid sculptures, and magnificent edifi-Baldwin thinks Copan the oldest Bourbourg says: "Among the edicity. fices forgotten by time in the forests of Mexico and Central America, we find architectural characteristics so different from each other that it is as impossible to attribute them all to the same people, as to believe that they were all built at the same epoch." And Baldwin again: "In this view the substructions of Mayapan, some of those of Tulha, and a great part of those at Palenque, are among the older remains. These are not the oldest cities whose remains are still visible; but they may have been built, in part, upon the foundations of cities much more ancient."

I admit the great difficulty of identifying the remains of this supposed civilization, and of classifying the records that relate to the earliest times. The following will serve as a study of the subject.

"Votan, another mysterious personage, closely resembling Quetzalcoatl in many points, was the supposed founder of the Maya civilization. He is said to have been a descendant of Noah, and to have assisted at the building of the tower of Babel. After the confusion of tongues he led a portion of the dispersed people to America. There he established the kingdom of Xibalba and built the city of Palenque... It is certain that from them [Votan and Quetzalcoatl], whether heroes, priests, rulers or warriors, Central America received the culture which their successors brought to such perfection. The knowledge of one supreme being appears to have been among the first dogmas instilled into the minds of their people." "Votan was the first historian of his people, wrote a book on the origin of the race, in which he declares himself a Snake, a descendant of Imos, of the line of Cham, of the race of Chivim. According to Ordonez, Votan proceeded by divine command to America and there portioned out the land. He accordingly departed from Valum Chivim, passed by the dwellings of the thirteen Snakes and arrived in Valum Votan, where he took with him several of his family to form the nucleus of the settlement. With them he passed the island-strewn Laguna de Terminos, ascended the Usumacinta, and here, on one of its tributaries, founded Nachan or Palenque, the future metropolis of a mighty kingdom, and one of the reputed cradles of American civilization. After the establishment of his government Votan made four more visits to his early home. On his first visit he came to a great city wherein a magnificent temple was in course of erection. This city Oronez supposed to be Jerusalem. He next visited an edifice which had been originally intended to reach heaven, an object defeated by a confusion of tongues."—Bancroft.

"Cabrera supposes Chivim to be the same as Hivim or Givim, which was the name of the country from which the Hivites, descendants of Heth, son of Canaan, were expelled by the Philistians some years before the departure of the Hebrews from Egypt. Some of these settled about the base of Mt. Hermon and to them belonged Cadmus and his wife Harmonia. It is probably owing to the fable of their transformation into snakes, related by Ovid in his Metamorphoses, that the word Givim in the Phoenician language signifies a snake. Tripoli of Syria, a town in the kingdom of Tyre, was anciently called Chivim. "Under this supposition, when Votan says he is Culebra, because he is Chivim, he clearly shows that he is a Hivite originally of Tripoli in Syria, which he calls Valum Chivim, where he landed, in his voyages to the old continent. Here then, we have his assertion, I am Culebra because I am Chivim, proved true, by a demonstration as evident as if he had said, I am a Hivite, native of Tripoli in Syria, which is Valum Chivim, the port of my voyages to the old continent, and belonged to a nation famous for having produced such a hero as Cadmus, who, by his valor and exploits was worthy of being changed into a Culebra (snake) and placed among the gods; whose worship, for the glory of my nation and race, I teach to the seven families of the Tzequiles, that I found on returning from one of my voyages united in seven families, inhabitants of the American continent, whom I conducted from Valum Votan, and distributed lands among them."

Mr. George Jones supports the Phœnecian theory of the American origins by quotations from Isaiah.

It is evident that one man could not visit both the temple at Jerusalem and the original tower of Babel, so the above includes part, doubtless, of two histories of migrations, one from the tower, and the other from Jerusalem.

"Zamna is sometimes identified with Votan; again he seems nearly allied and later.

He is connected with Mayapan, which is a later city than Palenque. It is asserted that he was buried at Izamal. Ordonez states that Mayapan was allied with Nachan and Tulan, and constituted the Votanic empire. Among the Mayas was a "vague idea that their ancestors came originally from opposite directions. idea of the most primitive period of their history, like the idea entertained by other nations whose annals have been presented, was connected with the arrival of a small band from across the ocean. This was the little descent; by this first band and their descendants the country was peopled and the Maya institutions estabilshed. Kinich Kakmo was a companion or successor." The distinction between Zamna and Cukulcan is shown thus: "There is no reason for bringing the Itza people from Chiapas since they appear to have been like the Cocomes, descendants or followers of Zamna, whose history from the death of their great ruler down to Cuculkan's coming, is unknown."

"Vega believes that the original population of Chiapas and Soconusco were of the race of Cham. The twenty heroes whose names are immortalized in the calendar of the Chapianecs are commonly said to have been the founders or first rulers of that nation. We are told that they all distinguished themselves, and that some died in their beds, some on the battle field, and others at the hands of their rivals; but beyond this, scarcely any record of their lives has survived. It appears by the calendar that Imox, sometimes called Mox, and occasionally Ninus, was the first settler in Chiapas, according to the worthy prelate above mentioned. This Ninus was the son of Belo, who was the son of Nimrod, who was the son of Chus, who was the grandson of Cham. He was represented by or with a ceiba tree, from whose roots it is said the Chieapanic race sprang.

In the Popol Vuh, national book of the Quiches, translated by Ximenez, occurs the travels of the Quiches from a happy eastern land beyond the sea to Tulan. One passage relates a confusion of tongues.

The Chimalpopoca manuscript treating of the flood says, the "very mountains were swallowed up in the flood, and the waters remained, lying tranquil during fifty and two spring times, but before the flood began Tetlacahuan had warned the man Nanta and his wife Nena saying hollow out a great cypress," &c.

Cholula is a pyramidal mound cased

Cholula is a pyramidal mound cased with unburnt bricks, stone and plaster, nearly one hundred and eighty feet high, with four terraces, truncated and facing the cardinal points. Its base is 1,400 feet square, and covers forty-five acres. It is irregular from decay, and covered with trees. The platform on top is an acre in extent and in its center is a temple of the virgin, erected by the Spaniards. Where a road has been constructed over it, two skeletons, and a number of vases and idols of basalt have been found. It was built before the Aztecs entered the country, but was occupied by them for the worship of Quetzalcoatl by perpetual flames from the temple on its top, and by the sacrifice of human beings. At the time of Humboldt's visit the natives still believed that Cholula was built by giants from the tower of Babel, for the purpose of escaping another deluge; and that fire from heaven had caused them to abandon the enterprise. The origin of the great temple is unknown. Its condition of decay indicates that it is older than the Toltec period. "The Mexicans around Cholula had a special legend connecting the escape of a remnant of them from the great deluge." · "At the time of the cataclysm, the country, according to Rios, was inhabited by giants," * * "When the waters were assuaged, one of the giants, Xelhua, surnamed the architect, went to Cholula and began to build an artificial mountain, as a a monument, and a memorial of the Llaloc that had sheltered him; and when the angry waters swept through all the land. * * * Then were the jealousy and anger of the gods aroused, as the huge pyramid rose slowly up, threatening to reach the clouds and the great heaven itself; and the gods launched their fire upon the builders and slew many, so that the work was stopped; but the half finished structure, afterward dedicated by the Cholultecs to Quetzalcoall, still remains, to show how well Xelhua the giant, deserved his name of the architect.

Its Mexican name signifies "mountain of unburned brick." The bricks alternate with small stones.

PROF. SWING'S REPLY TO INGER-SOLL.

"More words from Mr. Ingersoll" was the theme of Prof. David Swing's discourse at Central Church, Chicago. The sermon was divided into four parts, criticising severally each of Ingersoll's four latest lectures—"Blasphemy," "Worship," "The Death of the God's," and "Nothing Survives but Liberty and Charity." The text used for the reply was as follows:

"Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge?"—Job 38: 2.
"It would seem from this verse from

"It would seem from this verse from Job's eloquent poem," said the minister, "that there may come at times from orators words in such quantity and in such illogical arrangement that instead of lighting up the path of mankind they only add darkness to the other difficulties of the journey.

"When Mr. Ingersoll began his discourses upon religious themes he let much real light shine upon the questions about Moses, plenary inspiration, Calvinism, and the church, both Roman and Protestant. In those days he did not darken counsel so much as enlighten it. By the help of his wit, scorn, pathos, and logic, the pulpit must certainly have been helped out of an immense quantity of medieval mud, and must certainly have had their chariot of the Lord pulled up to roll upon more solid ground. Many were the clergymen and the laymen who felt rather thankful to the plain, acute lecturer for coming to their aid to batter down certain foolish and injurious opinions, and for bringing a sledge.

hammer heavier than the one they were accustomed to use. But now Mr Ingersoll, having finished the work of pulling up the tares and general weeds in the great biblical wheat-field, has entered upon a second work. He is now pulling up the wheat also. His wit, and logic, and pathos avail him little. His "sledge-hammer" of yesterday is suddenly changed to a child's drumstick, of which the power and music are small compared with the noise distributed through the whole neighborhood."

The speaker said that no defect of Mr. Ingersoll was more evident than his utter inability to be either an evolutionist or a creationist. He resembled the Hebrew god in one particular-in being without time, past and future, and in having no conception of anything but now. With him the religion of Isis and Osiris was the same as the one held by Thomas Paine, William Penn, Dean Stanley, and Victor Hugo. He had made his audience almost weep when he told them Isis and Osiris were dead under the ruins of their temples, but he forgot to tell them that Isis was the goddess of cattle, especially those that had horns, and that the god Osiris was only a humano-divine husband of the former. He forgot also to remind his confiding hearers that the god of Thomas Paine, Benjamin Franklin, Dean Stanley, and Hugo was the great mind from which are presumed to have come the order and grandeur of the universe. Ingersoll's last argument seemed aimed not against religion but against the fact and value of any

In regard to blasphemy Mr. Ingersoll had said: "Blasphemy is the cry of a defeated priest, of a detected impostor. The clergyman who is vanquished in argument resorts to force and says the victor has committed a crime—he has said something to which I can not reply, and I want him punished." In such words the popular lecturer had painted in detail the crime of blasphemy as detected by priest, clergyman, and layman. But from this longdrawn arraignment, and biting piece of irony, and humorous assemblage of imagery the distinguished orator omitted the statement that the sin of blasphemy was no longer in existence. In all the Christian nations it had been killed off, not only by Christian tolerance of opinion, but by the influence of etiquette. Whatever opinions men might hold regarding the Deity, those who profess to be possessed of good manners did not revile His name in public society, and should any other person do this anywhere he could do so to his heart's content. Some laws remained upon some statute-books against such an offense as "blasphemy," but the English Parliament as long ago as 1858 admitted the Jews to the House on the ground that rejection of Christ was not an offense, and of recent years had come the effort to admit Bradlaugh, the atheist, on the ground that religious tests should no longer be imposed. In this country also the crimes of blasphemy was practically extinct.

"In discussing worship, our friend," the preacher said, "is still less like his former powerful self." No doubt lawyers were as likely to happen upon a bad case as a clergyman upon a bad text, and then neither of them could escape the decree of nature.

In answer to Ingersoll's assertion that the gods must perish with their creators, and that liberty, charity, justice, and reason alone survived and were the only gods, the preacher said: It is in certain resemblances of truth in certain instantaneous flashes that Mr. Ingersoll possesses power. It is true, justice remains, but it is not the justice of old Egypt or old India; charity remains, but it is not the charity of the old past. The old justice, old love, old charity, and the old liberty are all as dead as the old gods, Isis and Osiris, and the nymphs and fauns. The justice of old Egypt scourged men to death, it led slaves about by wires through the tongue, it made dwarfs by lashing little boys to boards and keeping them there for years so that nothing could grow but their head; the charity of the old past did not even give dead slaves and poor people a burial, but cast these corpses into ravines where the hyena and vulture could perform the only funeral rites; the old charity put to death female infants and often permitted old people to die of want, while old liberty reached up to a few men of the highest rank and doomed all the millions to a most painful bondage. These were the virtues of the past which Mr. Ingersoll found immortal alongside of perishing gods. But the justice and charity of old Egypt are as dead as her gods. Mr. Ingersoll said: "Hushed forever is the god of Mt. Sinai." Yes, and we can add: "Hushed forever is the charity of the pyramids and hushed forever the screams of the tortured dwarfs." The religion of Egypt was no sadder a failure than its justice; its worship no more defective than its love; its god was no meaner than its husband. "The god is dead, the husband still lives." We hope not the Egyptian husband.

The public was at least easily deceived when it cheered a liberty and charity taken from the nineteenth century to be compared with a religion taken from the musical statue of Memnon and the dancing woods of Orpheus. Whenever the infidel public desired to be just it would ask Mr. Ingersoll to take his ideas of God from the same time and men from which he takes his idea of liberty and charity. This strange form of reasoner looks at America and England and cries out: "Liberty and charity still live!" and then, putting on the garb of a mourner and antiquary and digging in the sand around the Sphinx, he draws tears by gravely announcing that religion is dead. Should he enter the modern sanctuaries scattered over all the world, more numerous to-day than ever before, and attended by a more reasonable multitude, he would be compelled to confess that Isis and Osiris are dead, Mount Sinai and Mount Olympus are deserted, but the idea of God still lives. The God of Guizot, Gladstone, Castelar, Whittier, and Wendell Phillips was not much affected by the death of Juno.

Mr. Ingersoll abandoned the case as it stood 3,000 years ago. It is ready for the rising generation to study those thinkers who can get away from the pyramids and from Sinai and Olympus and toil on into these new and thrilling centuries. All these looking back see an unfolding human mind, and an unfolding truth, and are thankful for these rude outlines of religion, and justice, and charity, which are to be seen in the morning of our race. The religious sentiment which could kneel before a goddess-of-cattle was indeed a badlyinformed sentiment; but the domestic love that gave the wife all the drudgery to perform, which excludes her from the husband's table, which had the power to beat her to death, was a badly-informed worship of the "wife prematurely old with grief and pain;" the benevolence which exposed infants in the wild mountains was also badly fashioned in the human bosom, and badly defined was the liberty which reached only a small minority; but the true friends of the human family do not abandon these sentiments on account of those early defects, but they toil faithfully to eliminate the false and urge the true onward toward a more useful and more glorious life.

"Such an advancing race we cannot abandon. It is finding its true God just as rapidly as it is finding its true love and true charity. The worship in St. Paul's Cathedral in London is as far above the worship of Isis and Osiris as the justice of America is above that of old Nineveh. Side by side all forms of noble truth and sentiment are moving forward, and if the idea of God and worship shall fall behind in this great march it will be because man is more sensual than he is spiritual and virtuous, and that the diviner the mountain the slower will man be to climb to its summit. But the whole universe invites you to climb the hight, it being only an erring human voice that dares urge you to die in the valley, the gods being dead. Religion, like all the sentiment, is not only living but advancing.

Miscellaneous.

INDEPENDENCE LOCALS.

Rather quiet since conference. The "bonanza" anticipated by some citizens in disposing of their property to Saints during the session, was not realized to any great extent.

Brethren F. C. Warnky and J. C. Foss are giving their entire time in preaching, with marked success, and increase to the church.

Quite a number of new arrivals of Saints have been added lately to the Independence "Roll."

Bro. A. Munn has fully completed arrangements for the erection of a large store and foundry buildings, on Munn's addition to the city, near the Pacific Depot.

Alex. H. Smith and Joseph Luff bid a tearful adieu to loved ones yesterday, as the "iron horse" sped away towards their respective fields of labor—the former to California, the latter to Utah. May success in sheaves and that peace that passeth all understanding be fully realized.

The new roller mills of T. W. Chatburn & Co. are completed, and are now running to the entire satisfaction of its owners.

June 13th.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR -

- - EDITOR. ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, July 4, 1885.

THE EDITOR ABROAD.

WE left the Sanctum on Friday, June 12th, for Council Bluffs and the west, speaking the morning and evening of June 14th, Bro. Luff occupying the afternoon, at Council Bluffs.

On Monday at 8·20 p.m., Bro. A. H. Smith, Joseph Luff, and the Editor, left Omaha for Salt Lake City, dropping in for a minute on brethren John Eames and M. Starr, at Cheyenne, on the way. We arrived at Salt Lake City on Wednesday evening at 7·51, tired, dusty, and ready for rest. No brass band, nor studied array of pomp or pageantry awaited our alighting from the train. We had dropped Bro. R. J. Anthony a line by "lightning" from Evanston, and he and Bro. Joseph Wilson only were waiting at the station for us.

We went the the Chapel in time to speak a word of cheer and comfort to the few assembled there, after which we were domiciled, the Editor at Bro. Robert Warnock's, Bro. Luff at Bro. Joseph Clark's, and Alexander at Bro. Wilson's with Bro. Anthony.

Services were held at the Chapel at one p.m. on Sunday, and at Walker's Opera House in the evening, the Editor being the chief speaker. The usual notices in the newspapers were given; and in addition thereto the following advertisement by the church organ, the News, was accorded to

"If Mr. Smith has a special mission in visiting Utah at this juncture, it is evidently of a very different character to that which is professed by him. The ungodly, who make no profession of religion, as well as those who do, are causing the unworthy to manifest their true status. He is united with them, and may prove useful, in his peculiar way, in the same direction. It is our duty as servants of God, to warn the flock to beware of wolves. This part performed, only those sheep which can be better dispensed with than retained will listen to the voice of strangers. They will be led by that spirit that enlightens every man and woman who has become identified with the work of God and has not forfeited the right to that unerring influence by transgression and the love of the world."

The usual notices and this special send off by the News resulted in filling the Opera House with an audience of near sixteen hundred people; every seat and all standing room, on each of the three floors of the splendid building were filled to overflowing;—as many being unable to find entry as were accommodated. It is stated that fully one half of the assembly were Mormons.

The choir of the little flock sang, doing excellent service both in the Chapel and at the Opera House. Bro. Luff was in charge at the evening service. Bro. Alexander leading in prayer. The speaker had fair liberty, the text being: "Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land." Doc. and Cov., sec. 58, par. 5.

This practically opened the mission of the Editor in Utah. The result remains to be seen

THE following clipping is from the Salt Lake Tribune and takes the Desert News severely to task for its savage and irrational attack upon President Joseph Smith's suggestions in a late Herald, as to what the purport of a revelation though Pres. John Taylor to abandon polygamy might be. We print elsewhere in this issue what the News had and has to say on that matter. But here is what the Tribune says:

THE RAGE OF AN ORGAN.

The Descret News was a frenzied organ last night. It is in a panic over the coming of Joseph Smith, the rightful successor to his father in the Presidency of the Mormon Church. It quoted what Mr. Smith formulated in the Saints' Herald at Lamoni, Iowa, as about the sort of revelation it would be expedient for the self-assumed leaders of this rebelious Church here in Utah to have. This has been heretofore quoted by the Tribune, its substance being a brief and loyal plan for the eradication of polygamy among the people. The News is much troubled over this little piece of work by Mr. Smith, and occupies a whole column in battering at it. But it doesn't answer Mr. Smith's position, and fails utterly to show any reason why it would not be best for the people of Utah who have been so long misled to accept Mr. Smith's plan in this business. This plan is easily understood, and beyond all doubt will bring peace to the troubled spirits here. Of course the News has heard of its having a strong effect upon the people or it would not be so frantic in its denunciation of it and in its ravings against its author.

But what troubles the News worst of all is that the Tribune, in quoting the utterance above referred to, should have reminded the Mormons that Mr. Smith is the son of their prophet, claiming to hold "the keys of the real priesthood of the Mormon Church," and asked "Who knows but he does?" In this it pretends to see the worst kind of hypocrisy; even a harder kind than that which will claim it to be a good and righteous thing to debase women and then stand by and see them go to jail to screen the Justful wretches who got them into the indecent notoriety. Well every one to his taste; but few outside of the barbaric pale of the bestial church will agree with the News in this. But hypocrisy or not, it may not be out of the way to repeat the question, Who knows different? Why shouldn't the younger Joseph Smith be the real heir to Joseph Smith's priesthood, and the holder of the keys to all the Mormon revelations and mysteries? Who has a better right to claim this succession? Certainly none of those who have departed so widely from his teachings, and have spliced an addition to them which makes the very name they bear a stench in the nostrils of mankind. Whatever power or authority there is in the business can not be so easily wrested away from the only claimant of them in lineal descent from him they all delight to honor. The rage of the News in the premises is but another evidence of weakness of its position.

It is hardly decent, either, to give vent to such a mass of venom within forty-eight hours of the arrival of Mr. Smith. To do so tends to show a dread of him and a trembling in the knees that a little more skill would have kept from the public

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 21st, 1885.

Brother W. W. Blair:—Joseph made a little skirmish in the Chapel yesterday, at one o'clock p. m.; house entirely too small. At night he occupied the Opera House. It was packed and jammed to its utmost capacity, and more had to leave than could get in. Its seating capacity is eleven hundred. The street was a living mass of people in front, unable to enter in. Joseph's effort was grand, and he closed with a strong appeal to the erring to return. The papers will give you the full particulars. The Deseret News has made a most foul and unwarranted attack on him. If this people can be made to feel the loving kind-ness of the Master, Joseph will lead them out of bondage into the spiritual enjoyment of the gospel of peace and liberty. I fully believe that the time is at hand we have labored, waited, and prayed for.

Bro. "Aleck" will go on to California in a few days. Joseph is to occupy the Opera House next Wednesday evening again. The least we can get it for is $25 per night. Our collection last night was $21.45; but Mr. Walker paid $10, leaving us a little to operate on the next evening. All through the Territory, Joseph's coming will be hailed with joy and gladness. I hope brother Luff will take up and continue the Advocate.

In gospel bonds,

R. J. Anthony.

Now that Pres. Joseph Smith and his fellow-ministers have got fairly started in their mission work in Utah and that region, the church should uphold them by their prayers of faith and see to it that the church treasury is not in want, lest they and other active ministers be hindered in their labors. A large amount of printed matter will be needed for free distribution, and incidental expenses will occur for which there should be ample and ready aid. The Saints in the Rocky Mountain Mission, though not numerous, have assisted that mission field in a prompt and liberal manner in the past, and we look to see ready help extended now. "The battle is the Lord's," and is manifestly on the side of pure religion, inherent right, and the equities and humanities of life. Let there be no tardiness nor leanness in giving the work the needed support in every manner.

The Advocate will most likely be transferred to those in charge of that mission. Pres. Joseph Smith and Elders Joseph Luff and R. J. Anthony have written of late favoring the continuation of that paper for the present; and liberal and prompt aid should be given it—arrearages paid at once, subscriptions renewed, and new subscriptions procured and forwarded as hitherto to this office, to David Dancer, Box 82.

We may look for interesting times for the church from this time forward; but let it be borne in mind that the Lord says to his Saints—"All victory and honor and glory are brought to pass unto you by your diligence and faithfulness and prayers of faith." Upon every Saint this duty rests. It means you, and every one of you, who belong to the church. Ask yourself if you are doing your duty to God and the church faithfully. If you are not, then rise up and do it with prayerful diligence.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Ottumwa, Iowa, Democrat, of June 17th, has this notice—"The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the only true and genuine Mormons—all others frauds—is holding a conference at Boonsboro." Very emphatic.

Bro. J. C. Foss writes from Independence, Mo., 18th inst, that he would leave that evening for Detroit, Minnesota, to build up the cause of God there. He wishes the local authorities in his mission to write him if they desire his help in their vicinities, and he will try and reach them.

Bro. J. O. Stewart, in a letter dated at Graham, Texas, the 9th ult., states he would go east, to Franklin County, Texas, and possibly to Columbia, Arkansas, and then return to Graham. He says he finds sympathizing Saints and friends, and hopes for good.

In this issue will be found the first pages of a very excellent article entitled "The Christian Sabbath." We bespeak for it a careful reading.

Brethren Joseph and A. H. Smith, and Joseph Luff, reached Salt Lake City the evening of the 18th of June; so we learn by papers and cards.

Bro. N. J. C. Olson writes of late from St. Louis, Mo., that he is full of gladness that he has found the light and love and power of Christ among the Saints, and in the gospel they preach.

The Utah leaders berate some of the victims of polygamy and call them "crawlers" when they promise to not violate the anti-polygamy laws again. Well, some of these leaders did not stop to crawl, but they just ran away as rapidly as they could to evade the said laws, and used the money of those they abuse to do it with. Oh, consistency!

TEMPTATION AFTER DEATH.

A SISTER writes to know if her infant, now dead, will yet have to be tempted by Satan "before he can have a celestial home with God." We have no knowledge of any Scripture, ancient or modern, which either teaches or intimates any such an idea; but there is much to the contrary. (See Job. 3: 17; Ps. 116: 15; Ecc. 4: 2; Math. 19: 14; Phil. 1: 23; 2 Cor. 5: 5: But the Book of Mormon is very plain as to the condition of little children in respect to full salvation, and all Saints should heed what it says. It says that they are not accountable, and in effect that they are not moral agents, and therefore they are not subjects for Satan to tempt, but are "alive" in Christ and are heirs of salvation. Let all read the following and consider it well. Book of Mormon, Chapter 8: par. 1, 2, 3.

- t. An epistle of my father Mormon, written to me, Moroni: and it was written unto me soon after my calling to the ministry. And on this wise did he write unto me, saying, My beloved son, Moroni, I rejoice exceedingly that your Lord Jesus Christ hath been mindful of you, and hath called you to his ministry, and to his holy work. I am mindful of you always in my prayers, continually praying unto God the Father, in the name of his holy child, Jesus, that he, through his infinite goodess and grace, will keep you through the endurance of faith on his name to the end.
- 2. And now my son I speak unto you concerning that which grieveth me exceedingly, for it grieveth me that there should disputations rise among you. For if I have learned the truth, there has been disputations among you concering the baptism of your little children. And now my son, I desire that ye should labor diligently, that this gross error should be removed from among you; for, for this intent I have written this epistle. For immediately after I had learned these things of you, I enquired of the Lord concerning the matter. And the word of the Lord came to me by the power of the Holy Ghost, saying, Listen to the words of Christ, your Redeemer, your Lord, and your God. Behold, I came into the world not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance; the whole need no physician, but they that are sick; wherefore little children are whole, for they or not capable of committing sin; wherefore the curse of Adam is taken from them in me, that it hath no power over them; and the law of circumision is done away in me. And after this manner did the Holy Ghost manifest the word of God unto me; wherefore my beloved son, I know that it is solemn mockery before God, that ye should baptize little children. Behold I say unto you, that this thing shall ye teach, repentance and baptism unto those who are accountable and capable of committing sin; yea, teach parents that they must repent and be baptized, and humble themselves as their little childdren, and they shall all be saved with their little children: and their little children need no repentance, neither baptism. Behold, baptism is unto repentance to the fulfilling the commandments unto the remission of sins. But little children are alive in Christ, even from the foundation of the world; if not so, God is a partial God, and also a changeable God, and a respecter of persons; for how many little children have died without baptism. Wherefore, if little children could not be saved without baptism, these must have gone to an endless hell. Behold I say unto you, that he that supposeth that little children need baptism, is in the gall of bitterness and in the bonds of iniquity; for he hath neither faith, hope, nor charity: wherefore, should he be cut off while in the thought, he must go down to hell. For awful is the wickedness to suppose that God saveth one child because of baptism, and the other must perish because he hath no baptism. Wo be unto him that shall prevert the ways of the Lord after this manner, for they shall perish, except they repent. Behold, I speak with boldness, having authority from God; and I fear not what man can do; for perfect love casteth out all fear; and I am filled with charity, which is everlasting love; wherefore all children are alike unto me; wherefore I love little children with a perfect love; and they are all alike, and partakers of salvation.

3. For I know that God is not a partial God, neither a changeable being; but he is unchangeable from all eternity to all eternity. Little children can not repent; wherefore it is awful wickedness to deny the pure mercies of God unto them, for they are all alive in him because of his mercy. And he that saith that little children need baptism, denieth the mercies of Christ, and setteth at nought the atonement of him and the power of his redemption. Wo unto such, for they are in danger of death, hell, and an endless torment. I speak it boldly, God hath commanded me. Listen unto them and give heed, or they stand againt you at the judgment seat of Christ. For behold that all little children are alive in Christ, and also all they that are without the law. For the power of redemption cometh on all they that have no law; wherefore, he that is not condemned, or he that is under no condemnation, cannot repent; and unto such baptism availeth nothing. But it is mockery before God, denying the mercies of Christ, and the power of the holy Spirit, and putting trust in dead works. Behold, my son, this thing ought not to be; for repentance is unto them that are under condemnation, and under the curse of a broken law. And the first fruits of repentance is baptism; and baptism cometh by faith, unto the fulfilling the commandments; and the fulfilling of the commandments bringeth remission of sins; and the remission of sins bringeth meekness, and lowliness of heart: and because of meekness and lowliness of heart, cometh the visitation of the Holy Ghost, which Comforter filleth with hope and perfect love, which love endureth by diligence unto prayer, until the end shall come, when all the saints shall dwell with God.

Moss Point, Miss.,

June 7th, 1885.

Bro. Joseph: Would it not be more edifying for the ministry to have the will of God revealed direct from heaven to them than to have it indirectly through the "first Elders?" Is not the present Elders as much entitled to have it directly as the first? Is God changed? If the present Elders has the Spirit, (the will of God directly from heaven), why is there so much quoting of the indirect will through other Elders fifty and eighteen hundred years ago? If they, (the Elders), preach as the Spirit gives them utterance, will not that be the will of God directly to the people to whom they preach? If we go to the letter of the law instead of asking of God that will give to all men (Saints) liberally, for instruction, will not the letter be taking the place of the Spirit? And if the letter gets the place of the Spirit, what will be the result? I would not invalidate the letter nor the Spirit. Let them both fill their office. I would like for some abler mind to take up this line of thought and communicate it to us through the Herald.

JOHN B. PORTER.

To the above we reply: (1) that, God having once revealed to us through his appointed and approved servants his will upon facts or principles, there is no need for those who possess such revelation in a written form, to have it repeated at the will of any and every person, themselves included. (2), God has not changed in respect to this matter; for God's written word was always quoted by his faithful servants—Christ included—as an end of all controversy on matters of which said word treated. (In proof see Lev. 10:11; Deut. 4:1-6; Josh. 1:7-9; Ps. 1:2; Dan. 9:2; Mal. 2: 6, 7; Luke 4:16-21; 10:25-28; Matt. 4:7-10; John 20:31; 1 Cor. 10:11; Acts 15:15, 16; Rom. 15:4; 2 Thess. 3:14; 2 Peter 3:16; Rev. 22:18, 19, etc).

And (3), the letter never takes the place of the Spirit; neither does the Spirit take the place of the written word which the person needing it already has at hand—the Spirit and the word agree. James, 1:5, says; "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God;" from which we may learn that it is only when we "lack" that there is a promise that God will give for our asking. And it can not be said we "lack," if the matters we wish to learn of are already treated in the "written word" which we have. In harmony with this is the provision made in the law to the church, Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 99: 10; "In case of difficulty respecting doctrine, or principle, (if there is not a sufficiency written to make the case clear to the minds of the council), the president may inquire and obtain the mind of the Lord by revelation." There is perfect order, and the most undeviating consistency, in the operation of divine law.

Jesus commands to "search the Scriptures," for the reason that they "testify" of Christ. And wherein they testify of him, we as individuals need not that the same testimony be revealed specially to us by a new manifestation of the Spirit.

THE following appears in the Lincoln, Nebraska, Journal, of 17th ult.:

CAMP MEETING.

Arrangements have been made by the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints to hold a camp meeting near Elmwood, Cass county, Nebraska, to commence July 8th, and the following ministers are expected to be present: W. W. Blair, of Lamoni, Iowa; James Caffall, of Council Bluffs, Iowa; Geo. A. Blakeslee, of Galien, Michigan; E. L. Kelley, of Kirtland, Ohio; also a number of the Nebraska ministers. The beautiful grove of the Hon. David McCaig has been secured, and the committee in charge will do all they can to make every one comfortable. Those who desire to attend by rail will be met either at South Bend or Unadilla, upon giving due notice to J. W. Holenbeck, Elmwood, Nebraska, as to when and which station they will be at.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Must the Bishop's Agent act in the Bishop's stead in all matters whereever the Bishop is required to act by the authority of his office?

Ans.—No; the agents are not Bishops—they act as the Bishop's Agent under his instructions, in regard to financial matters.

2.—Is an Elder a fit subject to partake of the Lord's Supper when he does nothing to magnify his office as an Elder?

A.—We can not judge him; to his own Master he standeth or falleth.

2.—Does the law of God require that a member knowing another member to have hardness against him or her, that the latter should go to the offended one and make reconciliation before partaking of the Lord's Supper?

A.—No; the offended one should seek reconciliation as provided for, Matt.18: 15, 16, 17; and D. C. 42: 23. Yet it is charitable and Christian-like for any who may know or think they have offended another, to be the first to seek reconciliation as indicated in Matt. 5: 23, 24; and 1 Cor. 8: 13.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Elder F. C. Warnky writes from Independence, Mo., June 20th, that he had a pleasant time at Carrolton, and baptized three. He also preached three times at Waconda. He also preached at Bro. Carter's on Crooked river, had good meetings, and baptized one. Others are believing. He says further:

"I went and looked at the old camping ground on Fishing river, and my heart was full of love for the cause. I could but weep when I thought of the trials of my brethren in the past, who labored and died to establish what we now enjoy—peace in Zion, and good will to men."

WE gather from the Attleborough, Mass., Chronicle, of June 20th, that Elders M. H. Bond and C. A. Coombs are forcing the battle and making themselves heard in their field of labor. This is what it has to say of their work:

"LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"Elder M. H. Bond preached Sunday afternoon in the G. A. R. hall, before the Latter Day Saints, from Mark 16:15, 16. Reference was made to the mistakes of Infidels in quoting and interpreting Scripture. Mr. Ingersoll nor any other liberalist has any right to torture the recorded saying or commission of Christ to his Apostles, into a sanction for all that has been taught or practiced in the name of religion or even Christianity. Many do not believe that the world was made out of nothing in six days of twenty-hours each, and Jesus did not make belief in these things a test of fellowship in his church 1800 years ago, but he did announce positively as a necessity a belief in the gospel. Some scientists ignore revelation, because it does not come under the inspection of the microscope, the crucible, the knife or the scalpel. What is science but the application of eternal law governing the forces seen and unseen, of this universe? The telegraph and telephone are not the creation of anything, but the discovery and adaptation of pre-existent law. Nothing more is claimed for the gospel, denominated by Paul to the law of Spirit of life in Christ Jesus. It is just as practical a science as any other and only needs to be tested in order to be satisfactorily proved. What we want to-day is not a religion consisting simply of moral precepts or æsthetic entertainment, or blind credulity, but a religion, with bone and muscle, marrow and sinew, with power to convert, to offset the coming tide of infidelity and skepticism of our day.

Elder C. A. Coombs preached in the evening on the first six principles of the gospel, viz., Faith in God, repentance, baptism by immersion, laying on of hands for the receipt of the Holy Ghost, resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment."

Those interested will note this card from Bro. Forscutt:

OMAHA, Nebraska, June 19th, 1885. That I may be properly placed befere the church, please say in the Herald that in consequence of ill health, the First Presidency, after consultation, decided to appoint me to labor where my health seems to be most favored, until I shall be sufficiently recovered to justify my starting on my mission east. Brethren, therefore, desiring such service as I may be able to render them in the States of Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, or elsewhere, will please write me at Nebraska City, Nebraska. I am not strong quite enough to open new places, or do the active work which open warfare involves; but would rather preach or lecture, so far as able, where I can be cared for, and rest when not in the pulpit, than lie at home useless. Your brother, MARK H. FORSCUTT.

THE New Philadelphia, Ohio, Argus, of May 21st, has this to say of Bro. G. T. Griffiths:

"Elder G. T. Griffiths, of Wheeling, closed his successful meeting at our place, and returned home on Monday. The Elder established a church here and made many friends during his stay. Should he return in the future, the simple announcement that he would preach, would insure a large audience."

And in the Wheeling, W. Va., Register of June 18th, we read that its reporter was sent to Elder Griffiths to learn the difference between the Reorganized and the Brighamite Churches, and we find the Elder gave him the desired information to the satisfaction of that journal.

Beware of the whirlpool, brother, The whirlpool strong and deep; Steer thy bark with a steady hand, And far from its dangers keep!

For a wicked siren singeth low
To lure you to the spot;
Ah! lend no ear to wooing voice!
Beware, and heed her not!

She beckons you over the fatal waves To ruin and shame; for the breath Of this cruel siren is alcohol, And the raging whirlpool, Death. No Credit for moneys received on subscription will appear on the Colored Address Label of the Herald and Hope for this issue, as no changes have been made, except in case of persons desiring a change in P.O. address.

Correspondence.

TABOR, Iowa, June 9th, 1885. Dear Herald:-Since my last report to you, I have tried to keep the camp-fire burning, so that those who are out in the darkness of the night may see the light, and, if they will, come and partake of the genial rays of divine truth. I have labored in Hamburg, Mill Creek, and at Shenandoah. In this part of the district things are not as prosperous as we would wish. Some have moved away from Hamburg, and others are a little indifferent; and for the lack of officers for the Branch, we deemed it wise to reorganize both the Mill Creek and Hamburg branches into one, to be known as the Union Branch The change was made by the unanimous vote of all concerned. Bro. Wilcox is working away, "a foot and alone," at Shenandoah, or was when I left him; but I hope Bro. Leadingham has returned from Utah ere this to help him.

I have labored at Keystone and Farm Creek. I shall return to them at some more convenient time and make up for the past. I visited the Wheeler's Grove friends, and preached for them three times in the week nights, and on Sunday; had a good time, felt free, and had good liberty. God bless such noble-hearted souls. They were arranging for a camp meeting to be held in September; a large attendance is expected, as everybody seems to be interested. The Farm Creek brethren expect to come to the front boldly in this matter, and the cry from Macedonia is heard expressing a desire to help. Come, one and all, and make this one of the most profitable meetings of the kind ever held in the west. "We expect a large attendance of non-members from a distance of ten miles around, and hope for some of the talented Elders of the Church to be on hand. Professor Almon Hougas, with his company of singers, will try to make the musical department pleasing and interesting. Other singers are also invited to attend and help.

Our conference appointed for Keystone did not come off, as that dreadful disease, small-pox, was in some places near, and some of the friends not in the Church thought it wise to not have meetings in the school house, lest some from the afflicted neighborhoods might attend, and thus the disease spread; but we did not get the word soon enough to notify the brethren, so along they came, and on Saturday night, May 30th, we met at Bro. Clites' house, and had a good sociable meeting, and on Sunday morning, the 31st, we repaired to Bro. Hilliard's Grove, two miles from where our conference was appointed, and had a splendid good time. In the morning, Bro. E. C. Briggs preached a good, sound, logical, spiritual discourse; the love of God filled each heart present, and joy beamed upon the countenances of all. We then partook of the rich repast prepared by the kind-hearted sisters, and had a good social time, after which we met again for worship. Brn. D. Hougas and Matthew Stubbard occupied the stand with good results. All returned to their homes rejoicing in the glorious hope set before them through Christ and the gospel. I shall labor for a time in this part of the district, as I have many calls for preaching in the different school houses in this vicinity. We have many friends who want us to preach for them and visit them. These feel slighted if the same attention is not paid them as to members of the Church. Daily almost it is said to me, When are you coming to preach to us again?

Last Sabbath we held forth in the Ross Schoolhouse, to a good attentive audience. Next Sunday I shall hold meetings in the church here, known as the Shady Grove Church, owned by the Saints. I shall visit and talk to friends, and do what I can for the good of all.

The brethren are all willing to do what they can for the work, and we hope to be able to give it aid throughout the entire district, and shall labor and pray that those who are convinced may be led to obey. My heart is in this work; my soul delighteth in the goodness of God, as revealed in his glorious plan of redemption. May every effort put forth for its advancement be blessed of God, is the prayer of your brother,

HENRY KEMP.

Santa Ana, Cal., June 10th, 1885.

Bro. Blair: - Although cooped up at home with my affliction, yet thought roams o'er the vast field of the kingdom, as I consider its inception, its onward triumphant march, its present needs and wants, its sure and certain success, its speedy victory over sin and mortality, and its perfection and glory, every step is but in fulfillment of the plain, ancient, and modern advertisements, sent of God through his servants the prophets for the strengthening of his Saints, leading and guiding into all truth; while God is onward and upward. moving over, in, and through all; turning and overturning, to bring to pass his act, his strange act, his marvelous work and wonder, until every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ, the King, to the honor and glory of God the father. And as the clouds of witnesses multiply thick and fast on every hand, he has also set his signs thickly, not only in the heavens and earth, but also by the straight and narrow path of his Saints; thus ever confirming his living word unto them.

As one of his servants and witnesses, I have received and borne many testimonies for the truth in the past; and now by the goodness of God I have another one to bear. During my recent affliction with broken and crushed bones, and bruises severe; when my life was ebbing out and despaired of by many, (but not by all), oft was I much blessed, and the severe pains were positively rebuked and held in abeyance by the power of God through the ministrations of his servants, and the fervent prayers of the righteous which avail much, and for which I am truly thankful. But this is not all; a little over two weeks ago I was seized violently with cramp colic, and with retching, so I could get no rest or keep anything on my stomach; as it increased, my entire body was full of pains; and upon calling a skillful physician and surgeon, he found it to be a case of telescoping of the bowels, about midway. He said medicine could not reach it, and it all relied upon a higher power. From Sunday till Thursday night I suffered much, and scores called to see me, (as they thought), for the last time, and passed out in tears. The retching was very offensive, attended with severe hiccough and astonished every one. It seemed as though there was no hope; Elders Badham and French came, then Elder Betts. At first they looked discouraged; but after a season of prayer, they seemed much strengthened and administered to me; and as they rebuked, God also rebuked; and as they blessed, he also confirmed it and sent speedy relief. Pain was removed, and the obstruction also, so that I had a good nights rest and sleep. It did not return, and I was delivered from the jaws of death again by the power of God.

Just then we received a dispatch from brother Howland, some thirty or more miles west of us, saying, Send Elders quick, William is very low. So off they went and found brother William just as I had been, was taken about the same time. he was also blessed in like manner, the power of God also again manifestly saved his life. This had been shown me in a dream the Wednesday night before I was taken. I dreamed that brother William Howland presented me a large brush to brush his brother Charles' hair with; as I took it I saw it was full of bugs and roaches. They jumped on me and crawled up my body fast. I picked them off and threw them into the fire as fast as I could. I awoke quite excited, and told my wife I was going to be sick, and so were one or both of the Howland boys; I felt sure of it. But little did I think it would be so trying an ordeal to us both.

His mother, sister Howland, also had a dream in connection with it, I will mention. When he was very low, she prayed much and watched anxiously day and night. She dreamed death came into the room, looking quite aged and gaunt, pointing as he advanced, toward William; whereupon she intercepted and pleaded with him to spare her son for her sake; but he refused. She then pleaded that he might be spared for his own sake, as he was just now merging into manhood; but he again refused. When fairly frantic with grief, she prayed him to spare him for Christ's sake; when he said Yes; I will spare him for Christ's sake; and he then backed out of the room and disappeared. So, for Christ's sake I believe we both live. And, that we may ever be able to demonstrate it in our life-wook, is my hope and prayer. I can say with Elihu, in Job 33: 15, "For God speaketh once, yea twice, vet man perceiveth it not. In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed; then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction." Although this was declared some three thousand four hundred years ago, it is still a living and a present truth; in it God has not changed; his ways continue, and as it is true now, there are no just grounds for disbelieving its truth in the long past; and so it is in testing the validity of the promises made by Christ eighteen hundred years ago, Mark 16: 17-19: "These signs shall follow (not go before) them that believe." Honest skepticism arises and asks-Are you a believer, sir? and if affirmatively answered, then comes the test question,-Do these signs follow you, sir? And if the answer is, Oh no; from one who has "a form of Godliness, denying the power thereof," then comes the sledge hammer blow; Then Christ's promises are void, or else you are a falsifier, and not a believer, and if these signs do not follow believers now, how can you prove to me that they ever did; or that salvation will follow obedience in the future. But when the answer is given, Yes, sir; by a believer who knows the power of God, as well as the form of Godliness, it disarms and silences an honest skeptic as the truth only can do.

I thank God for the light and power of the everlasting gospel revealed to bless his people in this age of speculative philosophy. Before truth, error and false doctrine must fall, as dagon fell before the ark of the Lord. But truth is said to be the daughter of time; and as the tocsin of war is sounding among the Gentiles, in fulfillment of Joel 3:9, so also is the heaven-sent message of Rev. 14:6, sounding in "the hour of his judgment" and the Saints are beginning to "stand in holy places till the day of the Lord come; for behold, it cometh quickly, saith the Lord, Amen."

In Southern California the work is looking up, and prospects are good, if a reasonable amount of labor is done in the field. The laborers are few, but the body are waking up, and many of the honest in heart among the best class of thinkers are beginning to enquire if these things can be so; and knowledge is being increased among the Saints. The season here is now propitious, and times may be expected to be better ere long financially. The "sanctified" wave is sweeping over the land, to be followed by another phase of spiritualism—all doing their work—and we must see to it that we do ours.

Yours in Christ,
D. S. MILLS.

London [East], Ontario, June 11th, 1885.

Foseph Smith, Dear Brother:- I arrived in Canada the 13th of May, and commence labor near Chatham. Preached in Bro. Liveley's house; not many in attendance, tried to encourage the Saints. From there I went to Blenheim, preached there a few times, then attended the Kent and Elgin District Conference, held at Ridgetown, on the 30th and 31st of May. We had a very pleasant session, and the Saints returned to their homes renewed in their spiritual strength. By the will and energy of Bro. James H. Tyrrell and others, all were well cared for during the conference. I remained and preached Monday evening (by request) on the subject of Eternal Judgment; enjoyed good liberty; trust the seed sown may yet bring forth fruit to the glory of God. From there I came to this place to attend the London District Conference, which was to be held on the 6th and 7th of June. We had a fair representation of the Saints, and the branches were well reported. The officials were few. Brethren Samuel Brown, R. C. Evans, and the writer, doing the preaching with marked liberty. It may be said we had a pleasant conference. One item of the business was to recommend the release of one from membership from the church, (by his request), and for apostasy, as he had found one who said he was God, Prophet, Priest and King; the only man on earth that has the right to preach the gospel, and build up the church since the days of Paul. He says he is one of the witnesses that is to be slain in Jerusalem, at the coming of Jesus Christ to the Jews. He has promised to the brother who has left us and united with him, that he shall live forty years; and as he is lame in one of his legs, it being some shorter, it is to be restored, and his back is to be straightened, (as he is much stooped), and he is to have a new set of teeth, (I guess he means if he gets a dentist), and his hair is to be restored to its original color; and many more things too numerous to mention he has promised to do for him. So you see the United States has not all the religious cranks there are in the world. Canada, I presume will be able to supply her ratio. It is a trying time for the Saints. Many say "Lo here," and "lo there." They should "try the spirits." "To the law, and the testimony. If they speak not according to that word, it is because there is no light in them." Isaiah 8: 20. It seems quite lonely; no help from the west; twenty-three branches, and about one thousand members to be cared for, and all wishing me to come and see them at the same time. I have not met with Bro. McIntosh since I have returned, but learn by letter that he is preparing to start out in the mission about the 15th inst. I have not heard from J. J. Cornish, but I hope he will labor in Canada as much as he can. Bro. R. C. Evans is trying to get out of his shop for one month to help me, but I will continue my self, as I know I am working for a just Master. He will only demand of me what I am able to do.

The weather is pleasant and the prospect for crops is good. So far as I am informed, (with but few exceptions), the health of the Saints is good. Will close with respects to you and yours, and all the friends. Remember me in your prayers.

Your brother in the one faith,

JOHN H. LAKE.

WALLSEND, Australia,

Dear Bro. Joseph:-I rejoice exceedingly in the work of our Master, as demonstrated in these the last days, in accord with the many predictions previously uttered, in connection with our present history. The light of God's word has been shown us by those eminent lights of the church. who have been sent to these far away shores, to labor in word and in doctrine for the reclamation of our souls, and those of our fellow men; and thus the love of true principle has been begotten within us, as the most beautiful and sublime illustration of God's dealings with men, have been set forth amongst us by Brn. Glaud Rodger and J. W. Gillen, as also by Bro. J. F. Burton-men who are eminent for truth in very deed, each in their order. They must have a degree of satisfaction to know that they are loved for their work's sake, if I am allowed to speak in this connection. It might appear to encourage the brethren somewhat to say to them, Be warmed and be filled, and many other words of apparent love; but do our words proceed from our mouths alone, or from our hearts? God knows; and our brethren will know. We may deceive ourselves; but we can not deceive our brethren, nor the Master, of the church. I hope however that those brethren who have been amongst us, with those who may yet be sent, will pardon all my coldness and indifference toward them, with every act of inattention. Since Bro. Gillen's departure from Australia our experience has been varied-some times good and strong, and well and happy like the queen's daughter, "all glories within"-at other times the reverse has been true. And in this state, or condition, measurably, Bro. Burton found us; and with some degree of force the same may be said at present; but still we are much improved of late, and since his arrival here additions have been made in our numbers. Eight persons have been added by baptism, and we expect shortly some others. One brother who has been added will make a very useful man and a good Saint. Bro. Gillen will rejoice to hear of his being brought to this position; I refer to Mr. Wm. Bains.

Bro. Burton is a good worker, and is much engaged; preaches five times a week, and attends all our meetings. We expect much good to result from his labors, as also from brother T. W. Smith's. It is only right that thankfulness be expressed to Bro. Gillen for the valuable service rendered by him in this field; his memory will live with all who heard him understandingly, and we hope that the fruits of the labor of his hands will be given him, as also to Bro. Burton and Bro. Smith.

CLITHERALL, Minn., June 13th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:-It has been some time since I have written to the Herald. The work is onward in this part, and the Spirit has said it should continue to move, if the Saints would do as they should. I expect to baptize two or three tomorrow, and there are others that are favorable and perhaps will be at our conference, which will be held the 27th and 28th of this month, for we kindly invite all of our friends and neighbors to attend that desires to do so. We have our new church enclosed now, ready for meetings, so we will have room for all that wish to come. The Saints in these parts all feel satisfied with the decisions of the General Conference, and I hope the Saints every where will take the books for their guide, and stand by them, instead of taking any man's teachings except they agree with the books.

Brother David: -- I went to Boston on Saturday the 13th, and found one good faithful brother-Webster. He was somewhat cast down but when he saw me-one of the household of faithhe cheered up. I went to meeting on Sunday, and by request preached, and the Lord blessed me with his Spirit, and I had great freedom; we had a good meeting, and the Lord had blessed us. In Boston there are some good faithful Saints; their hearts full of love and kindness. May our father in heaven bless them. And those who are careless and indifferent, may the Spirit of God strive with them. One, (a man), had been baptized; the other day I visited him, and I believe he is a good honest soul. Through the kindness of brother Mortimer I was able to visit others, and found them in good standing.

Your brother in Christ,

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., June 20th, 1885.

W. W. Blair; Dear Brother:—This the third Sunday I have been here in Philadelphia. I think with patient and persistent labor the work can yet be built up here, although there are many discouraging features connected with the advancement of the work here. One was baptized last Sunday by the presiding officer of the branch. What few attend upon the services are earnestly striving to maintain the cause. I shall take a run up to Delaware to-morrow; on Thursday to Allentown and Hornerstown; and go from there to Brooklyn. Shall strive in every legitimate way to build up the cause and present the gospel to the people. May wisdom and grace be given me to labor acceptably. Have been kindly received, and well treated by all, so far.

My address at this place is 2054 East Cumberland St., Philadelphia, or, at home, 385 Pleasant St., Fall River, Mass.

In hope.

JOHN GILBERT.

RICHMOND, Utah, June 10th, 1885.

Elder Joseph Smith; Dear Brother:—I can not well resist the urgent promptings of the good Spirit at this time to write you a few lines. I have for several years passed through an ordeal of most rank and determined persecution, causing privation and loss that at times seemed more than mortal man could long endure, because I have for many years refused to endorse a policy of government fostered and carried on by the rulers over the people here which I am well satisfied in very foreign to the true Spirit of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

I have striven wisely to lift a warning voice from time to time, for over twenty years against wrongs I have known to have been committed, although it has caused mine to be an up hill road to travel, yet to-day in these critical times it affords me much comfort, and satisfaction of conscience. I have, fearless of man's power and threats, done a duty in the name and fear of God; for He has been my reward; and the promptings of love for truth and right to govern and prevail over all mankind as God would have it. has been the earnest desire of my heart from my early youth. And this desire has been riveted, I hope, on my heart and Spirit indellibly as with the pen of iron, for future use, for good to the cause of God, in the redemption of man, in this the day of the establishing of God's righteousness and power, which your honorable sire, our seer and prophet has been instrumental in the hands of God to establish on the earth: and who, strange as it may seem to you on reading this, appeared unto me in vision, in the summer of 1844, soon, or not long after, he had been martyred, in a place and position I have been anxiously looking to behold ever since that vision. For I then had only just been confirmed a member in the church, and being only in my 15th year of age, and then in England, the place of my birth. He met me at an angle of a turning point, in an elevated city laying to the west, in America, as my impressions at the time were. He met me, calling me by name, and made some enquires of me; and it seemed as though I was an old acquaintance. I remember my answers to him were in the same familiar manner. This has often been with me, on reflection, a strange circumstance and manifestation, and has caused a deep feeling in the welfare and interests of his family, and a desire to be identified in some way with his family.

Hoping I have not wearied you with this singular narrative I have truthfully related, I close by solicting your favor and esteem as a brother in the bonds of the gospel covenant.

My house and grounds will be open to your reception, and the Elders of the Reorganized Church to hoist the standard upon. My domestic accommodations are not of the best, but such as I have, give I unto thee and my brethren.

Yours truly,

SAMUEL EKERSLEY.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., June 18th, 1885.

Bro. Blair:—Since General Conference, I have been doing duty in the Spring River District, both in Kansas and Missouri; preaching at different points as the way opened for me; and I think, with good effect; and have been blessed and encouraged by the Spirit of the Master in my labors. I baptized a worthy brother at Webb City—prospects are encouraging for good there, and their efforts for the work are commendable. E. A. Davis baptized two at Pleasant View—so moves the work. Worthy efforts are put forth here to sow the seed of truth. If the older and more experienced of the Eldership will throw in their efforts with the young Elders, the cause will move on fast.

I attended their District Conference at Mound Valley-the representation was not large, owing to the lateness of the season to get in crops, yet the attendance of friends and enquirers was large, and filled their commodious house, and generally speaking we had good times, and the Saints here, as elsewhere, preach very effectually in their lives and conduct. Yet we would suggest a little better attention to the finances of the church, that the gospel may be more widely spread for the salvations of many more. The visit of Bro. H. C. Smith was appreciatep; but we all regretted that it occurred on "such busy times." I left home on the 9th, inst., for Independence, Mo.,-had a few pleasant days with the Saints "in Zion," and preached for them on Sunday. Arrived here on the 16th, and will labor some here and in the vicinity before going into northern Kansas. At present I am the guest of brother J. T. Kinnaman, (and his amiable family) in whose company I hope to labor for a few weeks at least. My address will be at this place for the time being. In gospel bonds.

J. T. Davis.

Hebron, Nebraska, June 10th, 1885.

Brother Foseph: -I have been a member of the church for eight years, and have not thought myself capable of writing to the Herald; but as I am far from the church, and none of the Saints to talk with, yet it may be that some of the Saints would like to know my whereabouts. I am in Thayer County, Nebraska, on Blue River. As I read the reports in the Herald it makes my heart rejoice and burn with the glowing but gentle spirit of the gospel. I long to stand side by side with them in the battle of life. What noble service to render, to do better for the Lord of Hosts. Noble, true-hearted men have been inspired of God to know and do his holy will, and the message of peace and unexampled love has been published to a partially benighted world. Thousands of hearts have been made glad; homes have been rendered peaceful with the power of truth and love. A new and abiding impetus is given to the toiler in life by this glorious mandate from God! Narrow, selfish views are axchanged for what is better. I strive to spread the gospel banner as far as I can in my weak way, by giving the Book of Mormon and Voice of Warning to the people to read. Some take an interest in these books and others say the Book of Mormon is but Spaulding's romance. But thank God there are some here honest in heart, who has heard brother Joseph preach, and they say that he preaches the gospel. My desires are to do all I can for God's work while in the flesh. If an Elder travels this way address me at Hebron, Nebraska, and I will meet him. I can get school houses to preach in, and the people say they would like to hear a Latter Day Saint preach.

M. A. Love.

SAN FRANCISCO, California, June 9th, 1885.

Dear Herald:—I wish to send you a few words, that the Saints may know where I am, and how I am. I left Guerneville in good favor towards the church, i. e., none having hatreds towards us; but I had to endure hardness for a long time in the beginning, from the time I first went there. Any of our elders can now get a hall to preach in, whosoever will go there.

When I got to Santa Rosa I found Sr. Parks home from Washington Territory, strong in the faith, with brother Hawkins and wife. Thence I came to San Francisco and Oakland to see the Saints. In Oakland, brother H. P. Brown was lecturing on the Book of Mormon. My experience shows that the church is more respected to-day in this land than ever before. When I can, I am visiting people of other Churches, and library's and reading-rooms. I give tracts, Heralds, Expositors, and what I have.

The Pastor of the Mariners Church to-day, with whom I have been acquainted for some time, asked me "what Church I did belong?" I told him promptly, to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He did not seem surprised, but asked if it was the Church in the Salt land. I told that we had nothing to do with that one. He said, "Your Church is that of Joseph Smith?" I answered yes.

In conclusion I ask the Saints to pray for me, that I may do my duty in all things.

Yours in the Gospel,

J. A. Stromberg.

Dear brother Joseph:—I have long had a desire to drop you few lines for some place in the columns of the Herald, although I am young in this cause. But I rejoice because this work has brought peace to my soul, and a desire to do what is right. As weak as I am I can truly say that I know this work is of God, and not of man. I have seen the sick healed of a burning hot fever, so thy got right up and eat supper; what they had not done for two days before. And other testimonies I have had. We have had a cold time in this branch, for the Spirit was withdrawn just as it was prophesied some time since, but now I begin to feel some better.

A COLONY OF JEWS IN THE CAUCASUS.

London Times: A colony of Jews called Dagh Tchoufont live in the mountains of the Northern Caucasus. The Dagh Tchoufont live in several small but distinct communities in the provinces of Daghestan, Terek, and Kouban. They say that they are the descendants of Persian Jews who arrived in Daghestan in the fifteenth century, and who established themselves some time later among the Koumyks, whose Princes greatly valued their commercial aptitude and their skill in the cultivation of madder, rice, and the vine. Considerably before the Russian conquest of the Caucasus these Jews were established at the aoul of Andreievsky, on the plateau of Koumyk, and it was after this that they came into the Terek, where they settled in a place named Portytch, between the present stanitzas of Schelkazavodskaia and Stchedrinskaia. With the view of more successfully resisting the attacks of the mountaineers, they were then installed in the aouls of Andreievsky, Taschketchi, Kizil-Yurt, and others, which they occupy at the present day. They number about five hundred families. They speak different dialects of the Circassian mountaineers, but they prefer writing and talking the language of Farsistan, which they brought with them from Persia. Their Talmud is translated into that language. They have nothing in common with Russian Jews except their religion, which, however, possesses some distinctive features. Their rabbis are subordinate to the Chief Rabi of Derband. The Dagh Tchoufont are engaged both in commerce and agriculture. They were the first mountaineers of the Terek to visit the towns and distant fairs of Russia, and their example has much contributed to the industrial development of the mountaineers. They now enjoy the same rights as the other Circassians, they can possess lands, and pay equal taxes with the rest.

A large band of German pilgrims have just returned to the Fatherland from Rome, after having obtained what to a good Catholic is the acme of earthly bliss—namely: to see the Holy Father face to face, kiss his hand, and to receive his blessing. Meanwhile the minor pilgrimages to the shrines of saints and martyrs are again beginning in Catholic countries. In France a continuous stream of devotees has been bent toward Argenteuil, there to worship the holy tunic of Christ which is annually exposed between Ascension-Day and Whit Monday. There is a curious little volume, published in 1746 by Thiboust, in which the author endeavors to prove the authenticity of the holy garment, not only by enumerating the miracles done by the tunic, but also by tracing its career from the day when the Roman soldier brought it to a town in Galatea. From this town it was brought over to Jaffa, thence, in 594, it was taken to Jerusalem, and in 1156 it was again discovered in the Argenteuil convent, where it was exposed before King Louis VII. and the public.

MORE SUN-SPOTS.

The sun-spot fiend will be in his glory this summer. A whole belt of spots extends clear across the sun's disk, and just coming into view on the eastern edge is a cluster of them that beats the record for size and activity. If we don't have a horrible succession of tornadoes for two weeks now, and some more in the latter ends of July and August, then there is nothing in the sunspot weather philosophy.

The huge group of sun spots which was seen coming around the eastern edge of the sun several days ago has now advanced nearly to the centre of the disk. It is large enough to be seen without telescopic aid by protecting the eye with a dark glass. In the telescope it is a wonderful phenomenon, and a rough measurement shows that its length exceeds a hundred thousand miles and its breadth thirty thousand. The brilliancy of its bridges of light, the grotesque forms of its chasms, the strange appearance as of shadows and reflections deep within its principal abyss, and the singular changes that it undergoes from day to day, and indeed from hour to hour, can not be adequately described in words. It is not every year that the sun presents such a spectacle.

Selections.

SACRILEGIOUS AND HYPOCRITICAL. [From the "Desert News," Utah].

On the 24th of April, under the above caption, we published an editorial article which defined with considerable clearness the position of Mr. Joseph Smith, head of what is denominated the Reorganized Church, upon a prominent local question of the hour. A friend whom it appears to have interested, has suggested that—in view of the presence of Mr. Smith, accompanied by his brother Alexander, in our city, presumably on a special mission—it be reproduced at this time. Having concluded to act upon the desire expressed by our friend, the article in question is herewith presented:

Before us is the April 18th number of the Saints' Herald, the organ of the so-called Reorganized Church, at the head of which is the eldest son of the Prophet Joseph Smith. He is also editor of the paper named. It makes elaborate comments on the articles which appeared in the News some time since, in which the fallacy of expecting the Church to abrogate the doctrine of plural marriage was exhibited. Of course the editor of the Herald, who is en rapport with those who persecute the Saints and on excellect terms with the world generally, favors the abrogation of this vital and prominent doctrine. He evidently considers that the issuance of a "revelation" by the visible head of the Church would be the proper course to pursue under the circumstances. The pith of his position is incorporated in the following, which we extract:

"Would John Taylor have the courage to say to the polygamic men and women already in the practice of plural marriage, and to the thousands to whom the dogma has been so industriously taught and its practice urged so strenuously:

taught and its practice urged so strenuously:

"Thus saith the Lord, your Redeemer and your God; hear ye, O my people in the mountains and valleys of Utah, and listen to my voice. Lo, these many years ye have been following in devious paths, and I, your Lord, command you that ye no longer walk in them. Let all those among you who have taken unto you more wives than the one wife of your youth, put them away from you. Provide for them and their children, that they have borne to you, according to the riches and goods ye possess; but put them away even as I commanded Abraham of old to put Hagar away. Let those among you whose first wife is dead (or is married to another), and who had more than the first wife living at the time of her death, take the one first chosen to be plural wife as your companion; and be ye married unto her as provided by the law given unto my church and published in my Book of Doctrine and Covenants before the death of my servants Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and put all other of your plural wives away from you and live no longer with them as your wives. And this shall ye do that ye may keep the law of the land, and no longer incur my displeasure."

"This would most likely be the tenor if not the text of such a revelation as God would give in the case if He should speak like Himself as He is revealed in the three standard works—Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants."

It there were no other proof than the foregoing to show the falsity of its writer's claims to the position he has assumed as the successor of his father it would of itsself be sufficient. It is not only sacrilegious, but indicates with what easy facility he could act the part of the pretender. He is correct in the intimation that President John Taylor would not have the "courage," if that is what it should be called, to issue a spurious revelation and palm it off upon the people as the voice of Deity to them. The venerated head of the Church would not dare to do what could evidently be done by this "degenerate son of a noble sire" without compunction of conscience. He flippantly frames a bogus revelation and then flimsily intimates that he understands that it is such an one as would be given by the Almighty were He to speak on the subject.

Joseph Smith may reel off imitation revelations by the yard, but when anything of that character comes through the presiding authority of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints it is the genuine article. If any man occupying a position of such immense responsibility should in that respect attempt to perpetrate a sacrilegious fraud, an offended God would speedily hurl him from his station, and place his oracles in hands more honest and true. But there is no danger of anything of that kind occurring.

The citation of the course of Abram in relation to Hagar is doubtless not as happy as the writer of the article could have wished. It is scarcely complete, as the "Father of the Faithful" remained to all intents and purposes, a polygamist, there being no ground for assuming that his wife Keturah was at any time dispensed with by him.

The closing paragraph of the quotation shows the dishonesty of the entire presentation. It assumes the absurd position that Joseph and Hyrum Smith did not pactice, and certain standard works do not teach, under proper conditions, the rightfulness of partiarchal marriage. As a fact in point connected with this claim, Bishop H. B. Clawson informs us that he and the head of the so-called Reorganized Church were school-mates in Nauvoo, and that it was well understood by both, that the Prophet Joseph had a number of plural wives, and it was no particular secret as to who some of them were. It is a fact also that several of those ladies are now living in this city, and by them Alexander Smith, brother to the editor of the Herald, was at one time confronted, they claiming, in his presence, their relationship to his fath-

The chief of the Re-organized Church is, of course, patted on the back by the Salt Lake Tribune, the notorious organ of slander and of the anti-"Mormon" crusade. Here is what it says about the bogus revelation:

"The 'Mormons' should remember, in reading the foregoing, that it was written by the son of the prophet—by the one who claims to hold the keys, the real priesthood of the 'Mormon' Church. Who knows but he does?"

This is hypocrisy backed by hypocrites, for why should not hail fellows fall on each others' neck and weep. Listen to the rank deception: "Who knows but he does," yet there is not the most infinitessimal approach to a question in the mind of that Tribune scribe regarding the holding of the "keys of the real priesthood," by the person to whom he alludes. The advancing of a suggestion as to the probability of such a thing by such a source is grotesquely absurd. Such hypocrisy has not even the merit of a slender covering of ingenuity. It simply affords more evidence that the tactics of the crusaders are all turned in the direction of creating schisms in the Church. But they will have to get up something different to such fusty chaff as that to attain any success, and if they get any by whatever means they employ, it will only act as a smutter, leaving the wheat all the cleaner for the elimina-

The term "witnessing for Jesus" is generally restricted to the delaration of what hehas done for us or the relation of our Christian experience that we are apt to lose sight of the fact that some of the most important witnessing for him lies in other directions. When John the Baptist witnessed for him it was by declaring his true character and mission, and the direct effect of this testimony was to induce two of his own disciples—Andrew, and John—the evangelist, to follow him. The most effective way in which we can witness for Christ is to exhibit such devotion for him in every day life that all with whom we come in contact shall know and acknowledge that we are his dicsiples, and that our lives are purified and exalted thereby.

Selected Poetry.

THE MASTER'S QUESTION.

Have ye looked for sheep in the desert,
For those who have missed their way?
Have ye been in the wild waste places,
Where the lost and wandering stray?
Have ye trodden the lonely highway,
The foul and darksome street?
It may be ye'd see in the gloaming
The print of wounded feet.

Have ye folded home to your bosom
The trembling, neglected lamb,
And taught to the little lost one
The sound of the Shepherd's name?
Have ye searched for the poor and needy,
With no clothing, no home, no bread?
The Son of Man was among them,
He had nowhere to lay his head.

Have ye carried the living water
To the parched and thirsty soul?
Have ye said to the sick and wounded
"Christ Jesus makes thee whole?"
Have ye told my fainting children
Of the strength of the Father's hand?
Have ye guided the tottering footsteps
To the shore of the "Golden Land?"

Have ye stood by the sad and weary,
To smooth the pillow of death,
To comfort the sorrow stricken,
And strengthen the feeble faith?
And have ye felt when the glory,
Has streamed through the open door
And flitted across the shadows,
That I had been there before?

Have ye wept with the broken hearted
In their agony of woe?
Ye might hear me whispering beside you,
"Tis the pathway I often go!"
My disciples, my brethren, my friends,
Can ye dare to follow me?
Then wherever the Master dwelleth,
There shall the servant be!

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

BY ELDER D. H. BAYS.

INTRODUCTORY.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser, Edenville, Iowa:

Your favor of October 12th is at hand, and your request to give you my views on the Sabbath question, now agitating the public mind, will be cheerfully complied with.

From sheer force of circumstances I have been compelled to give the subject much serious thought and candid consideration. I have read several works, pro and con, said to be among the best written on the subject. In addition to this, I have, at different times during the twenty-three years of my ministerial labors, been called upon to publicly debate the question with the advocates of the Seventh-day Sabbath. Yet I undertake the task with a degree of reluctance, conscious, as I am, of my inability to do ample justice to a subject some what complicated, and at the same time one fraught with such grave consequences to all Bible believers. Of necessity I shall be brief, giving only the principal points of the many that might legitimately claim our consideration.

The advocates of the Seventh-day Sabbath rest their cause mainly upon the binding force of the fourth commandment of the Decalogue namely, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." (Ex. 20:8). They maintain that "the law," and especially that part of it which relates to the Sabbath, has never been abrogated, nor even so much as modified. Hence, they affirm that "The seventh day of the week, or Saturday, is the Sabbath of the Lord, and is binding in the Christian dispensation."

Let us now proceed to examine this proposition under the light of the "law and the testimony." And in order to get the question squarely before the mind, that we may not mistake the issue, allow me to propound the following interrogatories.

ist.—Is there a passage in all the Bible to prove that the seventh day of the week, or Saturday, is to be observed as the Sabbath of the Lord? If so, where is it?

2d.—If such passage can be found, then is there a passage in the book to prove that the observance of such seventh day of the week is binding upon Christians in this dispensation? If so, where? It will be observed that unless these questions can be answered affirmatively, there remains but little substantial ground upon which to base an argument in support of the Seventh day Sabbath.

We shall probably review a few of the arguments presented in support of the perpetuity and binding force of the fourth commandment of the law in this dispensation. In order to fully understand the nature and design of a law, we must acquaint ourselves with the conditions and surroundings of the people for whom the law was intended.

The word "Sabbath," from the Greek "Sabbaton," (long o as in tone) signifies "a rest," "a Sabbath." A rest day, a Sabbath day, is designed for those who labor and are weary. The Israelites labored in the land of Egypt, and toiled in the wilderness on their way to the promised land, and were, in a pre-eminent sense, in need of "Sabbaton"—a rest. This rest was instituted for their especial benefit, as will be seen by what follows. In the examination of this subject we shall observe, substantially, the following order, to wit:

1. The law, as given to Moses, under which the Sabbath was instituted, was to continue till Christ—till then, and till then only.

2. The Seventh-day Sabbath, like the passover, was designed for the children of Israel; and for them only.

3. The law, including the ten commandments, with all its institutions and appointments, including the Seventh-day Sabbath, was fulfilled in Christ, and by him was repealed.

4. That the "first covenant," which was "written and engraven in stones," was the ten commandments.

5. That this covenant was superceded by the "new covenant," including a new Decalogue; and,

6. That the time for observing the Sabbath when "old things had passed away," and all things had become "new," was changed from the seventh, to the first day of the week, as seen in the types and shadows of the law, and in the example of the Apostles and early Christians. Let us now proceed to a careful examination of the whole question, searching the Scripture to see if these things be so.

CHAPTER I.

INSTITUTION OF THE SABBATH.

It is fair to presume that when the law shall pass away, all institutions under it will cease. The Seventh-day Sabbath was instituted under the law, as we shall presently discover, and, like circumcision, was given to the Israelites, and was binding upon them only. In order to determine the correctness of this position we have but to consider the three following points, namely:

1. Where was the Sabbath first given?
2. When was the Sabbath enjoined?

And,
3. To whom was the Sabbath given?

I. WHERE WAS THE SABBATH FIRST GIVEN?

By reference to the twelfth chapter of Exodus it will be seen the Lord gave a commandment to Israel, that on the tenth day of the first month, every man should take a lamb—one lamb for each house—and "keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month;" and, that, in the evening of the same day, they should kill the lamb and eat of its flesh, which should be "neither raw nor sodden," but roast with fire. They were further instructed as follows:

"And thus shall ye eat of it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat of it in haste: it is the Lord's passover."— Ex. 12: 11

The children of Israel were making preparations for their departure from the land of Egypt, under the leadership of Moses, the great Hebrew, lawgiver. The history of their journey from the land of bondage towards the land of promise, is continued as follows:

"And he [Pharaoh] called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, both ye and the children of Israel, and go, serve the Lord, as ye have said." "And the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth, about six hundred thousand on foot that were men, besides children."—Ex. 12: 31, 37.

children."—Ex. 12: 31, 37.

And they took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness."—Ex. 13: 20.

"And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they turn and encamp before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the [Red] sea, over against Baal-zephon: before it ye shall encamp by the sea." "But the Egyptians pursued after them, all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen and his army, and overtook them encamping by the sea, beside Pi-ha-hiroth, before Baalzephon." "And Moses said unto the people, Fear not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will show to you to-day." "And the Lord said unto Moses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward: But lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it: and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea." "And the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground:" "Thus the Lord saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians; and Israel saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea shore."—Ex. 14: 1, 2, 9, 13, 15, 22, 30.

Having thus miraculously passed through the west arm, or gulf, of the Red Sea, Israel encamps upon its eastern border, and join in singing their memorable song of deliverance, rejoicing in the knowledge that God is mighty to save.

Now in the land of the Amalekites, they take up a line of march, in a south-easterly direction, for the promised land; and the historian thus continues the narrative of their journey.

"So Moses brought Israel from the Red Sea, and they went out into the wilderness of Shur; and they went three days into the wilderness, and found no water. And when they came to Marah [on the Red Sea] they could not drink the waters of Marah, for they were bitter."—Ex. 15: 22, 23.

These waters were miraculously made sweet, and after resting sufficiently, they took up the line of march;

"And they came to Elim, where there are twelve wells of water, and three score and ten palm trees: and they encamped there by the waters."—Verse 27.

Elim is situated near the border of the Red Sea, south-west from Marah, in the direction of Mount Sinai, to which latter point let us follow them.

"And they took their journey from Elim, and all the congregation of the children of Israel came into the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departure out of the land of Egypt."

—Ex. 16: 1.

I have been thus particular to give the tortuous journeyings of the children of Israel, to show with unmistakable exactness the place where this Sabbath law was first given; for here, in this wilderness, was the first recorded Sabbath ever kept. It is a remarkable fact that the Israelites went into this encampment on the "fifteenth day of the second month," just two months, to a day, from the day of their departure from Egypt. They were in a vast wilderness, with no visible means of support.

"And the whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron, in the wilderness," (verse 2), saying, "Would to God we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into the wilderness to kill this whole assembly with hunger. Then said the Lord unto Moses. Behold I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no. And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in; and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily. And Moses and Aaron said unto all the children of Israel, At even, then ye shall know that the Lord hath brought you out of the land of Egypt. And in the morning, then ye shall see the glory of the Lord; for that he heareth your murmurings against the Lord: and what are we, that ye murmur against us." "And the Lord spake unto Moses saying, I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel; speak unto them saying, "At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and ye shall know that I am the Lord your God. And it came to pass, that at even the quails came up, and covered the camp: and in the morning the dew lay around about the host. And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay a small round thing, as small as the hoar frost on the ground. And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, it is manna: for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, This is the bread which the Lord hath given you to eat. This is the thing which the Lord hath commanded. Gather of it every man according to his eating, an omer for every man, according to the number of your persons; take every man for them which are in his tents."

"And it came to pass that on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for one man; and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses. And he said unto them, "This is that which the Lord hath said, Tomorrow is the rest of the holy Sabbath unto the Lord; bake that which ye will bake today, and seethe that which ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over, lay up for you to be kept until the morning. And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade; and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein.

"And Moses said, Eat that to-day, for it is the Sabbath unto the Lord: to-day ye shall not find it in the field. Six days ye shall gather it, but on the seventh day, WHICH IS THE SABBATH, in it there shall be none. And it came to pass that there went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, and they found none. And the Lord said unto Moses, How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws? See, for the Lord hath given you the Sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day, the bread of two days: abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day. So the people rested on the seventh day." Ex: 16: 3-7, 11-16, 22-30.

And thus passed Israel's FIRST SAB-

And thus passed Israel's FIRST SABBATH. From the foregoing we learn that the Sabbath was first given IN THE "WIL-DERNESS OF SIN, which between Elim and Sinai," in the north-western part of Arabia.

Having answered the question as to where the Sabbath was given, let us now proceed with the enquiry.

2. WHEN WAS THE SABBATH ENJOINED?

As we have already seen, the Israelites encamped in the wilderness of Sin on the fifteenth day of the second Jewish month. Allowing the first fall of manna to have occurred on the sixteenth, the next day after their arrival there, which from a careful examination of the contexts seems quite probable, the first Sabbath of which we have any account, fell upon the seventh day after the manna had fallen six, which would be the TWENTY-SECOND DAY of the SECOND MONTH after their departure from Egynt.

Egypt.
Waiving all technicalities, it is absolutely certain that the Sabbath was given prior to the fifteenth day of the third month of their exodus, and subsequent to the fifteenth day of the second month, for the obvious reason that they left the wilderness of Sin, where the Israelites kept their first Sabbath, and arrived at the base of Mount Sinai on the fifteenth day of the third month, as may be seen by the following:

"In the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day [fifteenth] came they into the wilderness of Sinai. For they were departed from Rephidim, and were come to the desert of Sinai, and had pitched in the wilderness; and there Israel camped before the mount." Ex. 19:1,2.

Further evidence that the Israelites had not previously kept a Sabbath is found in the fact that they started from Egypt on the fifteenth day of the month, which, in the regular order dating back from the time when the Sabbath was commanded from Sinai, would have been the Sabbath.

On this day a long and tedious journey was performed, and that, too, by direct command of the Almighty. Certainly no one will argue that the Lord, under any circumstances, would give one command the keeping of which would involve the breaking of another previously given. Yet this is precisely the condition here, if the Sabbath law was then force. This view is materially strengthened when we consider that Israel continued their journey for four consecutive weeks without reference to any particlar day of rest, while at the same time the Lord was their vanguard and their rear-ward. They encamped in the wilderness of Sin, after another hard day's march, on the fifteenth day of the month, which, recurring in its regular order from the day they left Egypt, would have been the Sabbath. They continued their march south-eastwardly till they reach Mount Sinai, near the coast between the two arms of the Red Sea, on the fifteenth day of the third month, which again would be the Sabbath. Hence, we infer that, although they had observed a Sabbath in the wilderness of Sin, the Sabbath law was not made binding till it was propounded from Horeb. After that period, they were no more allowed to perform such journeys on the Sabbath day. Passing from this point, we shall next consider:

3. TO WHOM WAS THE SABBATH GIVEN?

What has already been shown in the foregoing, renders it quite unnecessary that much should be said upon this point. God, though the instrumentality of Moses, wrought the deliverance of Israel from the bondage of Egypt. For them he caused the manna to fall and to them was the Sabbath law given, as is clearly shown by the following:

"See, for the Lord hath given you the Sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days." Ex. 16: 29.

In this we have the fact clearly presented, that the Sabbath was given to the CHILDREN OF ISRAEL ON the TWENTY-SECOND DAY Of the SECOND JEWISH MONTH in the WILDERNESS OF SIN, in north-western Arabia.

CHAPTER II.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH WAS BIND-ING UPON THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL ONLY.

Like the Passover, the Seventh-day Sabbath was given to, and made binding upon, the Israelites only, as may be seen by careful examination of the following points of analogy beween them:

THE PASSOVER.

"And this day shall be unto you for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast unto the Lord throughout your generations: ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance forever.

"Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread: even the first day ye shall put away leaven ont of your houses: for whosever eateth leavened bread, from the first day until the seventh day, that soul shall be cut off from Israel.

"And the first day there shall be a holy convocation, and the seventh day there shall be a holy convocation unto you: no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat, that only may be done of you.

of you.

"And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for in this self-same day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt; therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an ordinance forever."—Ex. 12:14-17.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SAB-BATH.

"And the Lord spoke unto Moses, saying:

"Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you doth sanctify you.

"Ye shall keep the sabbath therefore: for it is holy unto you. Every one that defileth it shall be put to death: for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

people.

"Six days may work be done, but in the seventh is the sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord; whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall surely be put to deeth.

"Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant

"It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever: for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested and was refreshed."—Ex. 31: 12-17.

From the above we learn that,

1.—Both were a "memorial," or "sign."
The one a memorial to preserve the rememberance of their miraculous deliverance from servile bondage in Egypt, and the other a memorial of the first creation, and God's rest from his work on the seventh day, and a "sign," token, or symbol, of the "rest that remains to the people of

2.—Both institutions were "holy."

-In either day all "manner of work" was forbidden.

4.—None but the Israelites were required to observe them.

5.—In either case the penalty for violating the sanctity of the day was "death." And,

6.—Both were limited in their operations to the "generation" of the children of Israel.

What is affirmed of the passover, is likewise affirmed of the Seventh-day Sabbath. If it be argued that the Sabbath referred to here, must be perpetuated to all future generations without modification, because of the declaration.

"It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever," the same rule will hold good as to the passover, for the reason that the same terms are employed. Now, who will be so reckless as to maintain that the passover, a purely Jewish institution, passed into the Christian dispensation and became a part of the Christian economy, upon the ground that the Jewish people were commanded to "keep it a feast by an ordinance for ever?" We venture to say none would be so daring, though it would be just as logical to do so as to assert the perpetiuty of the Seventhday Sabbath because of a similar declaration concerning it.

Of Aaron and his sons it is said: "For their anointing shall surely be an everlasting priesthood throughout their generations."—Ex. 40: 15.

Of course this does not mean that the Aaronic priesthood should continue interminably, to offer sacrafices under the law, for the Apostle Paul upon this point says: "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law."—Heb. 7: 12.

While it is asserted that the priesthood is everlasting, yet it is positively declared that it has been "changed." Those who advocate the binding force of the Seventhday Sabbath go further, and declare the priesthood of Aaron has been not only changed, but utterly abolished. If, while the priesthood is declared to be everlasting, we are in any sense justified in maintaining that it has been abolished, then certainly no reasonable person will object to our taking similar grounds respecting the Israelitish Sabbath, when both, by the declarations of Holy writ, are placed upon the same footing.

Such passages, then, only go to show that all those things were to continue only so long as the law, by virtue of which they existed, should be in force. Putting it in another form, all these institutions of the Mosaic economy were to cease with the recognized generations of the house of Israel. The Seventh-day Sabbath was a "sign" between the Lord and the children of Israel, to be observed by them, not Christians, throughout their generations.

If we can learn when the genealogical records of the Jews ceased, then we may know just when the "sign" (Seventh-day Sabbath) between the Lord and his ancient covenant people ceased to exist. In Matthew's history of the gospel we find the following with respect to their geneology: "The book of the generations of Jesus Christ, the son of David the son of Abraham. So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations."-Matt. 1: 1, 17.

When Christ delivered the gospel unto the Jewish people, they regarded his teachings as subversive of the religion of their fathers, as presented in the law, and so rejected him. While weeping over their blindness and depravity, he said "Behold your house is left unto you desolate."

Matt. 23: 28.

This prediction was terribly fulfilled. At a later date, A. D. 70-71, Titus, son of the Roman Emperor Vespasian, at the head of the Roman army, besieged the city of Jerusalem. The Jews stubbornly resisted the assaults of the enemy, but finally yielded to the inevitable, after 1,100,000 of their number had perished by famine, sword, fire, and crucifixion. Besides this, 96,000 were sold into slavery, and multitudes perished in other parts of Judea. All that remained of the proud nation were carried away into captivity, from which they have not returned to this day. This terrible destruction put an end to the generations of the children of Israel, and with them ceased all the peculiar institutions of that peculiar people, including their Sabbath.

VIEWS OF "HOPEFUL."

DEAR HERALD:—It is sometime since I penned an article or a letter for your pages, not because I am averse to your conduct as a paper, or the truths you defend and set forth; but because I care neither to speak or write without I have something to say. It often appears to me that some feel it to be their special privelege, if not their duty, to be always saying something either by tongue or pen, without any reference to the fitness of their communications, or the timeliness of their utterances. If I preach a sermon, administer to the sick, bless a child, or perform other duties, those immediately concerned know it, and I do not feel bound to publish the matter unless the results have been such that the publishing of it is calculated to give joy to others; then I think it my duty to let it be known, not for the purpose of keeping my name before the people, as exhibiting my greatness, nor yet to impress it upon the church nor the Bishoprick that I am earning the means allowed my family in my abscence; but for the purpose of strengthening others, as well as to transmit a faithful record of the fulfillment of God's promises to his believing children. This I believe to be one of the main purposes of your publication, and think your pages should not be used for the purpose of personal display by any.

I heartily endorse your instructions on page 349 of current volume, respecting "Contributions to the Herald," and wherein I have failed in coming up to the standard, I will try to profit by the lesson, that I may not need to be ashamed. My hand is clumsy, my mind needs proper training, and I terribly feel the lack of a good common education; and this shows itself in writing more than in speaking; hence I can not do the good I would, but I will do what I can. This last sentence reminds me of one of your late utterances on pages 364-5, respecting the faith and diligence of a certain brother, and I say, God bless and strengthen him, and may his faithfulness and diligence increase, until he hears the glad "well done." I would to God the church had its quorums filled with such men, and increased ten thousand fold. Thank God, there are others; for you say "He is one of the Lord's diligent, wise, and worthy workers." Here a solemn question presses itself upon me. Do I wait till the church treasury is full before I enter upon my mission work? If I do, this is positive evidence of my lack of trust in God. I may write long and pious articles about loving the work, making sacrifices, enduring privations, etc.; but God will know that those are only different renderings of the cry of the "Horse Leech," who is ever "crying, give, give!" If I have sought office in the church, in order to live from its treasury, I have made a fool's mistake. The world offers a thousand times more of worldy wealth, in the present, than the Church of Christ ever did. The Church of Christ is poor in worldly goods -does not possess the prestige of a great name. (According to men's ideas of greatness). It has no flattering honors or titles to bestow. It was founded in sacrifice, and that the most stupendous the human mind can conceive of. In fact, the greatness of the sacrifice is beyond human conception. It has lived and grown by sacrifice. It will, it must, stand, fight and conquer by sacrifice! And those who essay to put on its armor and do battle under its banner must prepare to sacrifice the ease and comfort of this world, their homes, their wives and children; yea, even life itself, if they shall ever be found successful soldiers of the cross, or be crowned with the victorious gift of eternal life. They must not watch with covetous eye the scanty droppings into the treasury, and with itching palm long to clutch the little all in order to consume it upon their lusts. This is a day of sacrifice, and God says

"Gather my people together unto me, those who have covenanted with me by sacrifice." This is the only covenant God will take a part in. If I have made any other covenant, it is not with God; it has been with my own lusts, and with the power of evil. The covenant with God can only be made through sacrifice. Talk of trust in God when I wait to hear the Bishop's report, to learn if the treasurey contains enough to sustain me and mine! I ought to blush with shame at the thought. am disgracing the name of a minister of Christ. I am staining the fair name of the church, and turning the tradition of the Elders into a fable; for it has always been their boast that they did not "Teach for hire, nor divine for money," but went forth in obedience to the divine injunction "Take no thought for the morrow," etc.

We are sometimes asked, Why does not the cause spread as rapid as in the beginning of this work! The causes may be divided between the Ministry and lay members, in part. The lay members seeing, as they believe, a lack of energy on the part of the Ministry, resulting, as they believe from a lack of faith; and again an apparent desire on the part of some of the Ministry to find places of ease and emolument, which leads many of the members to think such men are anxious to obtain the spoils and carry off the honors without performing the labor. Those who thus think fasten up their purses and declare, "They will not give a cent to pamper a greedy, lazy priesthood." And thus the proper sustenance it withheld from the families of those men who are entirely devoted to the building up of God's kingdom, and such men are debarred from working as they should,(I leave God to decide whether His servants are justified in being thus hindered), and hence the cause is hindered.

On the other hand, we do not see that self-sacrificing zeal manifest to-day among the ministry that was manifest in the beginning. Is there not a lack of trust in God's promises? If I am to claim the blessings of God in my ministry,—success in my labors, health of body and strength of mind, power over unclean spirits, and over diseases, power to convince the unbeliever, and give comfort to the follower of Christ, I must labor according to the pattern given of God through his son. Unlimited trust in God is the price of his never failing love and care. Is it written that any have ever trusted in vain? "I once was young, but now am old, I have never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." This is my testimony as well as the Psalmists. My life's record contains many short-comings on my part; but none on the part of God. "He is faithful who promised." Write me down "an old fogy" if you will; tell that my zeal is greater than my knowledge, (and I here confess that neither of these qualities in me are great), but I would rather have one solid grain of trust in God than all the worldly wisdom you possess, though you may rank as Solomon's in your generation. In conclusion, let us who are called to be God's husbandry, "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the Saints."

HOPEFUL.

ORIGIN OF ALL THINGS.—No. 10.

BY S. F. W.

"About the time the Quinames were defeated, the pyramid of Cholula was erected under the direction of a chief named Xelhua. The occasion of its being built, seems to have been connected in some way with a flood, probably that mentioned in the Quiche traditions, the reports of which may or may not be founded on actual hundation more than usually disastrous in a country subject to periodical overflow (?). The authorities are not agreed whether the mighty mound was intended as a memorial monument in honor of the builder's salvation from a former flood, or as a place of refuge in case the flood-gates of the skies should again be opened; neither is it settled whether Xelhua was an Olmec or a Quiname cheiftain, although most authors incline to the former opinion. Of course the Spanish writers have not failed to connect this pyramid in some way with the Hebrew traditions respecting the tower of Babel, especially as work on the Cholula tower was stopped by fire, sent from heaven by the irritated deities."-Bancroft.

It appears that this pyramid continued as first built until after the time of Quetzalcoatl who predicted after his departure, great calamities. "Only a few days after his departure occurred the earthquake which destroyed the pyramid at Cholula, the American Babel, and ushered in the new, or fourth age of fire, according to Ixtlilxochitl. On the ruins of the pyramid was built a temple to Quetzalcoatl, who was afterward worshiped as a god.."

The early annals of the old world, we have seen, abound with traditions of giants, and as we have found all other myths duplicated in America we might expect to find this particular class of legends paralleled also: Brancroft supplies the following: "Our knowledge of Olmec history subsequent to their first appearance, is confined to a few events which occurred in Puebla. Here chiefly on the Rio Atoyac, near Puebla de los Angeles and Cholula, they found the Quinames, or giants, a powerful people, who long kept them subordinate in rank. These Quinames, as Ixtlilxochitl states, were survivors of the great destruction which closed the second age of the world. They were, according to Veytia, more like brutes than rational beings; their food was raw meat of birds and beasts which they hunted indiscriminately, fruits and wild herbs, since they cultivated nothing; but they knew how to make pulque with which to make themselves drunk; going entirely naked, with disheveled hair. They were cruel and proud; yet they received the strangers kindly, perhaps through fear of their great numbers, they being so few, and magnanimously permitted them to settle in their lands. *

"The Quinames, traditionally assigned as the first inhabitants of nearly every part of the country, have been the subject of much discussion by the Spanish writers. Veytia rejects the idea that a race of giants existed, and Clavigero considers their existence as a race very doubtful; although admitting that there were, doubtless, individuals of great size. Most other writers of this class accept more or less literally the tradition that there were giants who were the first dwellers in the land. * * * While it is impossible to decide in the matter, it may be regarded as more than likely that this foe was a branch of that overthrown in the south; that the Xibalban power, as well as that of the Nahuas, extended far toward Anahuae in the early days, that the great struggle was carried on in the north as well as the south."

After the deluge spoken of in the Lake Tahoe myth the few who escaped built up a great tower, the strong making the weak do the work. This, it is distinctly stated they did that they might have a place of refuge in case of another flood. But the Great Spirit was filled with anger at their presumption and amidst thunderings and lightnings, and showers of molten metal he seized the oppressors and cast them into a cavern.

"These myths," continues Bancroft, "have led many writers to believe that the Americans had a knowledge of the tower of Babel, while some think they are the direct decendants of certain of the builders of that tower, who, after the confusion of tongues, wandered over the earth until they reached America."

Mr. Bancroft is not willing to be classed with the "many" or the "some," but when it is considered that the "legends" are part of the written history of a dozen different and civilized, American ancient nations, the readers will agree that they are something more than "wild speculations."

Ixtilixochitl a Chichimec king thus gives the Toltec version of the same: "After the confusion of tongues the seven families who spoke the Toltec language set out for the new world, wandering one hundred and four years over large extents of land and water. Finally they arrived at Huehue Llapallan in the year 'one flint,' five hundred and twenty years after the flood."

* * * They say that the world was created in the year Ce Tecpatl, and this time until the deluge they call Atonatiuh," &c.

The Quiche tradition as translated by Bourbourg speaks of a country in the far east where the people spoke a common language and worshiped without graven images, and which they left under leadership of their chiefs, and after a long journey reached Tula, which place Bourbourg says is on the "other side of the sea," and that was the place from which the wanderers came from time to time, to the north-western coast of America.

Mr. Bancroft says his general conclusions "may be expressed as follows:

Thoughout several centuries preceding the Christian era, and perhaps one or two following, there flourished in Central America the great Maya empire of the Chanes, Culhuas, or Serpents, known to its foes as Xibalba, with its centre in Chiapas, at or near Palenque, with several allied capitals in the surrounding region. Its first establishment, at a remote period, was attributed by the people to a person named Votan, who was afterward worshiped as a god. Whether such a person as Votan ever had an actual existence; who, or what he was; whence, or how or among what people the civilization attributed to him was introduced—we can only form vague conjectures. America was certainly peopled before the Votanic era, and that most likely by civilized, as well as by savage tribes, but pre-Votanic nations have left absolutely no record. Perhaps the most reasonable conjecture is that the Votanic power was of gradual growth, at first humble and subordinate, but constantly increasing, overcoming, absorbing, succeeding other powers, as others in later times succeeded, absorbedd, and overcame it. The Votanic institutions can only be known by the traces they may be supposed to have left in those of the later Maya The prevailing language was nations. doubtless either the Maya, Tzendal, or a mother tongue from which these, as well as the Quiche, Cakchiquel, and others of the same linguistic family, have sprung; although it is not unlikely that the empire embraced some nations speaking other languages. From its centre in the Usumacinta region the Votanic power was gradually extended northwestward toward Anahuac, where its subjects vaguely appear in tradition as Quinames, or giants. - It also penetrated northeastward into Yucatan, where Zamna was its reputed founder, and the Cocomes and Itzas probably its subjects. In other regions where its influence was doubtless felt, it seems to have left no traces.'

As Mr. Bancroft is the greatest authority on the subject under investigation, his conclusions should not be withheld, whether favorable or adverse to any theory. His date for the Votanic empire may be supplemented with that of Ordonez of 1000 B. C., and that of the Codex Chimalpopoca of 955 B.C., but these dates must now be made to conform to those of the cuneiform tablets, and carried farther back than the clvilized nations of modern times had any adequate conception of till the tablets were read. The assertion that there were people in America "before the Votanic era, leaves the case in America just as it was in Asia, where the Aryans, as they advanced, drove out a people of unknown lineage. These "conclusions" certainly justify the quotations with which this paper is principally made up.

In sequence of these "conclusions," the

In sequence of these "conclusions," the whole work of Dr. Plongeon, "Vestages of the Mayas," might be inserted; but we will be content with quotations from it:

"The dwarfed race is certainly easily distinguishable from the descendants of the giants that tradition says once upon a time existed in the country, whose bones are yet found, and whose portraits are painted on the walls of Choacmols funeral chambers at Chichen-Itza."

"Let us hope that the Mexican government will grant me the requisite permission, that I may bring forth, from the edifices where they are hidden, the precious volumes, without opposition from the owners of the property where the monuments exist. Until then we must content ourselves with the study of the inscriptions on the walls." (Mrs. Plongeon in Harper's Magazine for February, 1885, says: The inscriptions at Uxmal now have a fair chance of being deciphered, thanks to the perseverance of Dr. Le Plongeon.")

"There can be no doubt that in very ancient times the same customs and religious worship existed in Uxmal and Chichen, since these two cities were founded by the same family, that of Can (the serpent), whose name is written on all the monuments in both places. Can and the members of his family worshiped Deity under the symbol of the mastodon's head. At Chichen a tableau of said worship forms the ornaments of the building designated Iglesia in Stephens' work; being in fact the north wing of the palace and museum. This is the reason why the mastodon's head forms so prominent a feature of all the ornaments of the edifices built by them. They also worshiped the sun and fire, which they represented by the hierglyphic used by the Egyptians for the sun, a circle with mark in the center. In this worship of fire they resembled the Chaldeans and Hindoos."

"Can and his family were probably monotheists; the masses of the people, however, may have placed the different natural phenomena under the direct supervision of special imaginary beings."

"My studies have nothing to do with the country posterior to the invasion of the Nahaults. These people appear to have destroyed the high civilization existing at the time of their advent, and tampered with the ornaments of the buildings, in order to introduce the symbols of the reciprocral forces of nature."

"The language of the ancient Mayas, strange as it may appear, has survived all the vicissitudes of time, wars, and political and religious convulsions. It has, of course, somewhat degenerated by the mingling of so many races in such a limited space as Yucatan is; but it is yet the vernacular of the people."

"In some localities in Central America it is still spoken in its pristine purity, as for example, by the Choacmules, a tribe of bearded white men, it is said, who live in the vicinity of the unexplored ruins of Tekal."

"The Maya language seems to be one of the oldest tongues spoken by man, since it contains words and expressions of all, or nearly all, of the known polished languages of the earth." The name Maya, with the same signification everywhere it is met, is to be found scattered over the different countries of what we term the old world, as in Central America.

"If we start from the American continent and travel toward the setting sun, we may be able to trace the route followed by the Mound Builders of the plains of Asia and the Nile. The mounds scattered through the valley of the Mississippi seem to be the rude specimens of that kind of architecture. Then come the more highly finshed Teocalis of Yucatan and Mexico and Peru; the pyramidal mounds of Maui, one of the Sandwich islands, those of the Fejee and other islands of the Pacific; which in China we find converted into the high, porcelain, gradated towers; and these again converted into the more imposing temples of Cochin-China, Hindostan and Ceylon-so grand, so stupenduous in their wealth of ornamentation, that those of Chichen-Itza, Uxmal, Palenque, admirable as they are, well might dwindle into insignificance, as far as labor and imagination are concerned, when compared with them. That they present the same fundamental conception is evident—a platform rising over another platform, the one above being of lesser size than the one below, the American monuments serving, as it were, as models, for the more elaborate and perfect, showing the advance of art and knowledge."

The reader will doubtless prefer the theory concerning the origin of the pyramidal temple given in previous chapters, and see that Mr. P. has mistaken the direction of the migration he has sought to trace.

Many myths, names and customs are common to India and Yucatan: the printing of the red hand on the walls for instance.

"If we now abandon that country and crossing the Hymalaya's range enter Afghanistan, there we again find ourselves in a country inhabited by Maya tribe. The name of tribes that form part of the population is Maya. The name of the river Kabul is the Maya for working hand—(the red hand referred to above). The valley of Chenar would be in original American, the valley of the well of the woman's children. Kubi-Khel would be tribe of the feather. Zaka-Khel the tribe of the locust. Khiber pass, the road of the hawk, &c. Maya in Hindostan is the same as Magi in Babylon."

"Recent researches in the plains of lower Mesopotamia have revealed to us their mode of building their sacred edifices which is precisely indentical with that of the Mayas: each people using the material closest at hand, clay and bricks in Chaldea, stones in Yucatan. The filling in of the buildings being of inferior material, crude or sun dried bricks, at Warka or Mughui, of unhewn stones of all shapes and sizes at Uxmal and Chichen, faced with walls of hewn stone, many feet in thickness throughout. Grand exterior staircases lead to the summit, where was the shrine of the god, and temple.

In Yucatan these mounds are generally composed of seven superposed platforms, the one above being smaller than that immediately below; the temple or sanctuary containing invariably two chambers, the inner one, the sanctum sanctorum, being the smallest."

"The Mayas at times, * * as the primitive Chaldee in their writings, made use of characters composed of straight lines only, enclosed in square or oblong figures, as seen from the hieratic writing at Warka and at Mayapan give a Maya definition of Egyptian and Chaldean deities, Ra, Ana, Anata, Bel Beltis, Hea, Dav-Kina, Sin, San, Vul, Ishter, Uruk, (king), Ashur, &c. "The hand writing on the wall, Mene mene upharsen, are Maya! and the last

"The hand writing on the wall, Mene mene upharsen, are Maya! and the last words of the Lord, Eloi, eloi, lama Sabachthani "are pure Maya vocables!" and mean "Now I am sinking, darkness covers my face!"

Now the suppositions that the Maya progenitors brought the Noachian speech to America, and that the hand writing on the wall was in that speech, and the Lord spoke it as said, or even that the Aramaic which was his native tongue was allied to it, are all reasonable, and in keeping with the philosophy of these papers; but as to the facts as alleged by Mr. Le Plongeon I am not a judge.

One way to explain this enunciation if it be a fact, is on the supposition that Votan came as he says from Tripoli which was a Phonecian town; and that the ancient Maya language was Phonecian, which is identical, almost, with Hebrew. Then Christ's words in Hebrew might be so much like the Maya-Phonecian as to deceive Mr. Le Pongeon, and make him think they are Maya. His interpretation shows that they are not.

"The Khati who ruled Egypt as shepherd kings, the Hittites of scripture, are named from the verb Katah, to put obstacles in the way. Carchemish their emporium is, in Noachian, if I may so express it, "city of navigators, merchants." Katish their sacred city is, "city where sacrifices are offered."—

(The Kahati are the very people that Mr. Delapfield wrote his learned volume to prove the founders of American civilization, but he did not know this kind of proof).

Pages 51, 52, show the identity of American and Egyptian names and customs.

"There is a monument that served as a castle when the city of the holy men, the Itzas, was at the hight of its splendor. Every anta, every pillar of this edifice is sculptured with portraits of warriors and noblemen. Among these many with long beards, whose type recalls vividly to mind the features of the Afghans."

"Judging from the sculptures and mural paintings, the higher classes in Mayab wore in very remote ages, dresses of quite an elaborate character."

"The Mayas divined by the inspection of entrails, and had their astrologers and prophets. "By the examination of the mural paintings, we know that animal magnetism was understood and practiced by the priests, who themselves seem to have consulted the clairvoyants." "The construction of the gnomon shows that they had found the means of calculating the latiude of places, and that they knew the distance of the solstitial points from the equator. * * * If we look back through the vista of ages to the dawn of civilized life in the countries known as the old world, we find this number seven, among the Asiatic nations as well as in Egypt and Mayab.  As the Egyptians, they wrote in vertical columns, and horizontal lines, from right to left."

SUFFERING IN FAMILIES.

The cause of much suffering in families will be shown by the following table. Saying what a man spends by drinking three glasses of liquor per day, at five cents a glass, if he commences at the age of twenty years and continues to the age of thirty. We calculate only five per cent interest.

Young man would you not think what you are doing before you allow yourself 15 cents per day for useless stuff of any kind, or suppose you drink only one glass a day, it would be one third of the above mentioned amount, which would be quite sufficient for a comfortable home at the age of 50 years. This you can also apply to the useless habit of cigars and tobacco.

At 2:30 p. m., Thursday, the 11th inst., a select company, composed chiefly of relatives and near friends gathered in the parlors of G. A. Blakeslee, Esq., of Galien, to witness the marriage of Mr. George Alma Blakeslee to Miss Mary Isabelle Cone, both of Galien, and Mr. William A. Blair, a young merchant of Lamoni, Iowa, to Miss Eda Viola Blakeslee, of Galien, Rev W. W. Blair officiating.

Mr. George Alma and Miss Eda Viola, are son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Blakeslee, long and favorably known among the pioneers and founders of Galien.

The occasion was most enjoyable, the day was beautiful and inspiring, the bridal parties were happy and hopeful, the presents were numerous and appropriate, the appointments in all respects suitable and pleasant, and everybody seemed full of joy and happiness.

After a sumptuous repast the company dispersed, and the newly wedded parties took the 4:30 p. m. train for a tour to Chicago, after which Mr. Blakeslee and bride will return and make Galien their future home, and Mr. and Mrs. Blair will go to Lamoni, Iowa, their future residence.

The young couples have set out in their new conditions of life with very propitious surroundings and will have the best wishes and blessings of a host of interested and loving friends.

And say, without our hopes, without our fears, Without the home that plighted love endears, Without the smile from partial beauty won, Oh! what were man?—A world without a sun. Till Hymen brought his love—delighted hour. There dwelt no joy in Eden's rosy bower.

A GOOD NAME.

LIVING down the prejudices, the misapprehensions and misstatements of the malicious, the fearful, the credulous and surmising ones, the Saints of the Reorganized Church have everywhere won the confidence, the esteem and commendation of those of their neighbors who know them well. They have struggled for this position by honest, upright, Christian living, for the past quarter of a century. Huge and numerous obstacles have stood in their way; but they have patiently pressed forward and overcome them, and now command the respect and endorsement of those around them for good citizenship. The Lord promised to give his faithful Saints "favor and grace" in the eyes of the people, and he is bringing this promise rapidly and prominently to pass, and this clipping is but one among thousands of proofs of that fact.

MISSION OF JOSEPH SMITH, JR.

Joseph Smith, junior, a son of the founder of the Mormon Church, and the head of the re-organized body of that faith, is now in Utah, and will remain in that territory for several weeks. It goes without saying that Mr. Smith mission in Utah will be directed in the interest of the church over which he presides. He certainly has claims for consideration as the head of the real Mormon Church, and possesses the right to be heard in advocacy of such claims.

Here in western Iowa, and especially in Council Bluffs, which was at one time a Mormon stronghold, we can speak advisedly concerning the Mormons, sometimes termed Josephites, who remained here after the exodus to Utah! We have always found them quiet, law-abiding citizens, as well worthy of the privileges and dignity of the American citizenship as other people professing the faith of other religious denominations. As a consequence they have lived among us for more than a generation on precisely the same plane as other citizens. They live and thrive in the practice of their religion; they increase in numbers and influence just the same as people who differ with them in faith, and there are none to molest or make them afraid.

The people who adopted Brigham Young as their leader, and followed him to Utah, could learn a lesson from the Mormons here if they would so will. That lesson would be that there is perfect peace and security in the land for people who live within the law, no matter what their religious faith may be. It is only when they put their faith into practices in violation of common decency, in disregard of the practices of civilized people, in defiance of common law and of the law of the land made to protect the foundation of social order, that they come in conflict with legal authority, and bring upon themselves the indignation of outraged public sentiment. Hundreds of people in this locality of various religious beliefs who know Joseph Smith, junior, and his people here, wish him all success in his work in Utah.—Council Bluffs Nonpariel, June 25th.

THE MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

THE following letters, one from Bro. John M. Horner and one from Mr. L. L. Rice, will be read with interest by thousands, and they can not be regarded as less than full proof that the manuscript now in the hands of Mr. Rice, is none other than the celebrated "Manuscript Found," written by Rev. Solomon Spaulding, and which it is now seen is no more like the Book of Mormon than "a hawk is like a handsaw." But there are more proofs at hand, which will be forthcoming in due

It will be seen on reading Mr. Rice's letter, that two young Elders of the Brighamite Church testify that Joseph the Seer had many wives, and yet they admit he had no children by any except the first one-Emma. How these young gentlemen could know so much, when it is probable neither of them were born till after the Seer was murdered, is a question. They were "not there, and did not know of the facts in the case," and therefore their testimony only exhibits their presumption and audacity.

As for the revelation of 1843 on polygamy, history traces it only to Brigham Young; and he said he obtained it by chance, and at best it was but "a copy." It was not in the hand-writing of Joseph the Seer; it did not have his signature; and it contradicts everything the Seer gave to the church on either marriage, morals, or religion!

Bro. Horner is mistaken when he says Brigham never claimed to give revelations; for he professed to give "The word and the will of the Lord," at "Winter Quarters," in 1847; and to reveal to the church that "Adam is our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we have to do," besides having the polygamy doctrine revealed to him in England, in 1839-40. (See Deseret News, July 1st, 1874). In all this, and in more, he claimed to give revelations to the Saints, and yet it is true, as brother Horner states, that Brigham did not claim to be a prophet! The polygamy revelation is found in the Brighamite editions of their Doctrine and Covenants for 1876, and since then; but it was in none of their editions prior to that time; and in 1876 the Brighamite editions, with their additions and substractions and corruptions, were forced upon their church in the same general way that polygamy was —the leaders did not ask their people whether they would accept or not-they just introduced them authoritatively, and as a matter of course, as they had usually done with everything else. When the first Doctrine and Covenants was given to the church in 1835, the priesthood and the membership accepted it by vote, as their rule of faith and practice, as was commanded of the Lord and directed by Joseph Smith the Seer. But Brigham and his fellows had no use for these methodsthey lorded it over God's heritage, and did with the people as they chose to, assuming and teaching that it remained for the people to "follow their file-leaders, and do as they were told."

Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, May 14th, 1885.

Mr. Joseph Smith; Dear Sir:- I am greatly obliged to you for the information concerning Mormonism, in your letters of April 30th and May 2d. As I am in no sense a Mormonite, of course it is a matter of curiosity, mainly, that I am interested in the history of Mormonism.

Two things are true concerning this manuscript in my possession: First, it is a genuine writing of Solomon Spaulding; and 2d, it is not the original of the Book of Mormon.

My opinion is, from all I have seen and learned, that this is the only writing of Spaulding, and there is no foundation for the statement of Deming and others, that Spaulding made another story, more elaborate, of which several copies were written, one of which Rigdon stole from a printing office in Pittsburgh, &c. Of course, I can not be as certain of this, as of the other two points. One theory is, that Rigdon, or some one else, saw this manuscript, or heard it read, and from the hints it conveyed, got up the other and more elaborate writing on which the Book of Mormon was founded. Take that for what it is worth. It don't seem to me very likely.

As to Joseph Smith (your father) being a polygamist, the fact you mention, that he had no issue except from your mother, is strong presumptive evidence that he was not a practical polygamist, whatever he may have been theoretically. Since I wrote you before, I have had calls from several Mormonites from Salt Lake City, among them one Cluff, who calls himself a nephew of H. H. Cluff, who was formerly at the head of the Mormon settlement on this Island; and one Pratt, who claims to be a son of Orson Pratt. They both say that Joseph had no children except by your mother; but they insist that your father had and cohabited with several other wives-among them my old acquaintance and friend, Eliza R. Snow, who used to write poetry for my paper, in Ohio, before the days of Mormonism. Of course I can not determine positively as to these adverse allegations. I have my opinion, however.

On one other point I wish to write a few words: as to the revelation purporting to have been made by Joseph Smith, at Nauvoo, July 12th, 1843. I gather from your letter that you consider Brigham Young as the author of that revelation, and that Joseph Smith never uttered or sanctioned it. Your friend, J. M. Horner, who called on me a few days since, thinks Brigham Young was not the author of it, and says that Young never made any revelation, and never claimed to be a prophet. I have a copy of the "Doctrine [and Covenants," furnished me by Enoch Farr, who is now at the head of the Mormons on this Island. It is an English edition, published at Liverpool in 1882. The revelation in question is the last one in the book, commencing on page 463. Mr. Horner says that that revelation does not occur at all in his edition of the "Doctrine and Covenants." So it seems that it might have been added by Young or some one else, after the work was otherwise completed.

You may be at rest as to my putting the manuscript into the possession of any one who will mutilate it, or use it for a bad purpose. I shall have it deposited in the Library of Oberlin College, in Ohio, to be at the disposal for reading of any one who may wish to peruse it; but not to be removed from that depository. My friend, President Fairchild, may be relied on as security for the safe keeping of it. It will be sent there in July, by a friend who is going there to "take to himself a wife." Meantime, I have made a literal copy of the entire document-errors of orthography, grammar, erasures, and all-which I shall keep in my possession, so that any attempt to mutilate it will be of easy detection and exposure. Oberlin is a central place, in the vicinity of Conneaut, where the manuscript was written.

I have had an idea, sometimes, that it is due to the Mormons to have a copy of it, if they took interest in it enough to publish it. As it is only of interest as showing that it is not the original of the Book of Mormon, no one else is likely to wish it for publication.

Miss Dickinson, whom you call a grand daughter of Solomon Spaulding, represents herself to me as his grand niece: "My great uncle, Rev. Solomon Spaulding," she writes.

Rev. Dr. Hyde, President of the Institution, in this place, for training Native Missionaries for Micranesia, (a very prominent and successful institution), has written an elaborate account of this manuscript, and of Mormonism, and sent it for publication in the Congregationalist, of Boston. I presume it will be published, and you will be interested in reading it.

Very respectfully, yours,

L. L. RICE.

Kukatau, Hamakua, Hawaii, May 21st, 1885.

To JOSEPH SMITH, Esq.; Dear Brother:-I visited Mr. L. L. Rice, of Honolulu, as you requested; and after seeing, handling, and reading a little of the manuscript purporting to have been written by Solomon Spaulding, I am fully convinced that it is the identical "Manuscript Found," (or rather purported interpretation, or translation, of the "Manuscript' Found"). Mr. Rice is an old gentleman of eighty-five years, (I think he said), with eyes and intellect unclouded. He is now living with son-in-law, Dr. Witney. He stated that a lot of manuscripts fell into his hands as successor in the printing office in Ohio, and that he never had an opportunity or a curiosity, until recently, to look into them, he believing them of little or no value, as their former possessor had never made any use of them. Still he said he had kept them, thinking perhaps some time or other he would have leisure enough to examine them, which leisure he found in these Islands. Among the manuscripts he found this one, written by S. Spaulding, which purported to be, as above stated, a translation of the manuscript found in Ohio, in a cave or pit, nine feet deep, and in a box three feet long. Said manuscript was written with "Roman letters, and in the latin language;" so this manuscript says. The author that wrote and hid up the record, says in his personal history, recorded in the preface to the manuscript, that he was blown out to sea, by an easterly gale, when on his way from Rome to Britain, where he had been sent on a mission by the Roman Emperor. The storm continued for several days, when neither sun, moon, nor stars appeared. When the storm ceased they were lost, and the wind continued to blow westerly; and after many days they drifted on the east coast of North America; (Mr. Rice thinks about the mouth of the Delaware River); up which stream they went and found the country inhabited. They passed on in the corse of time to Ohio, where they found a large tribe of Indians, and another about equal in number on the other side of the river, presumed to be the Ohio. The two tribes were peaceable and close together. But once upon a time a young man from one tribe visited the other tribe, fell in love and ran off with and married a lovely maid belonging to the other tribe. The maid had been betrothed to a high dignitary of her own tribe, which provoked a war between them, which another wrote its history, as well as his own life and voyage, and hid it in the cave above mentioned, where it was found. Hence the name "Manuscript Found."

However, I will make no more statements about its contents; and these may not be entirely correct, as I had only about twenty-five minutes to examine, read, talk and listen. I have no doubt you will yet see the manuscript, as Mr. Rice says he is going to send it to Professor Fairchild, and have him deposit it in the Oberlin Library for the information of everybody that may wish to examine it. He will send it in its coarse paper wrapper, and tow string fastening, just as it lay in his possession for forty five years without being opened. He says that he has no interest in it, to either prove or disprove the Book of Mormon. He wishes it placed where both friends and enemies may examine it. He has made a copy of it, which he will retain. I regret I did not ask him when he would send it. I shall not consider the manuscript safe until it reaches Prof. Fairchild. Mr. Rice says there has been quite an excitement stirred up by Prof. Fairchild's notice of it in the papers. He has received several letters from different individuals-besides those received from you; and many visitors making enquiries; some from the Salt Lake Church, who, he said, esteemed it a great privilege to be allowed to handle it.

Yours truly,

JOHN M. HORNER.

This is the way the Salt Lake Tribune views the mission of President Joseph Smith to Utah; and it gives a fair statement of the situation so far as it treats of it.

A MISSION TO PRISONS.

The work of Joseph Smith, Jr., in this place was fairly and hopefully begun on Sunday last. His coming here may justly be regarded as a mission to preach to the spirits in prison. For the last fifty years or thereabouts, the people here who adhere to the Brighamite and Taylorite branch of the Mormon Church have been held in a bondage surpassing the rigor of the prisons of the civilized world, for whereas the latter do not pretend to immure more than the body, the rulers here have decreed and enforced a thralldom of the mind compared with which mere bodily confinement is mild and easily borne. Nor have they failed on occasion to enforce a bodily coercion and control but little different from an actual locking up within prison walls, as many have experienced who have shown a disposition to do as they pleased with their own time, property and family, or to depart from the crushing rule of iron which was wearing out their lives.

To these people who, while they may never have doubted that they had souls, must have seriously questioned whether they were their own, the mission of President Smith presents a glimpse of heaven. In place of bondage, he proffers them freedom; instead of compulsion, he leaves their duties to their consciences; instead of requiring all the substance of the people to be turned into his hopper, that thereby he may profit through grinding the faces of the poor, he says to all, "attend to your temporal affairs in your own way, but receive this gospel." Since, however, the gospel he proffers is precisely that which they have already received, there is no difficulty in the way. This was abundantly manifested by the remarkable turn-out at the evening services in the Opera House. The people of his faith here, who have been made to stumble by designing men who had no authority to lead them, and whose fraudulent character as shepherds is so forcibly shown by their skulking and hiding while calling on others lower down the line to face the music, are in a false position. They are doing what they really have no interest in doing, and what they are expressly forbidden to do by their faith. Many of them see this, and know that they must eventually surrender to the law, and get back within the limits marked by the founder of their church. But, as is human, they want to preserve their consistency if possible. This is precisely what Mr. Smith shows them how to do. They need not give up a single point of doctrine taught originally by their seer. Polygamy is the sticking point; but to believe in this requires a disbelief in a prior revelation concerning obedience to the laws of the land, and polygamy was never acknowledged, but always publicly condemned by Joseph Smith; its promulgation was suspicious, both as regards the delay in affirming it, and in the character and circumstances of the men who gave it light; and within a few years it has been said by the Deseret News, the official organ of the rebellious, that it was not a tenet of the church. To come to Mr. Smith's standard, therefore, involves no sacrifice of either faith or principle, and under it this oppressed people can find peace and rest from affliction, on the one hand from the plunderings and oppressions of their unscrupulous leaders, and on the other from the terrors and penalties of outraged law. For more than a generation the act of seceding from the Mormon Church bas been railed at as "apostacy by those who remained in it, until both act and word are surrounded by dreaded terrors; yet no Mormon apostatizes when he rallies to the side of the son of the founder of his faith; for was it not said by that founder that none of his seed should ever be apostate, as long as grass grew and water run. The son does not accept pologamy, yet he cannot be an apostate, or prophecy fails. And here we have two known sayings of the elder Smith to put against one that is at the very best a very doubtful one. It must be that many are tired of being held up to the rack of misery; that thousands would welcome with high-beating hearts a deliverance from their present evil straits. To all such the door is now open, and the way is their own way. We believe very many will tread in it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is it right for a lay member to take a text, take the stand and use from thirty to forty-five minutes in his discourse, when one of the priesthood is present?

Ans.—There is no law against a lay member expounding the Scriptures in private or in public, if he does not attempt to do it by ministerial authority, nor claim to administer the ordinances and ceremonies which pertain to the licensed priesthood. But neither lay member nor minister should intrude upon others' grounds, nor interfere with others' duties or privileges. Aquila and Priscilla "expounded" to the eloquent Apollos "the way of God more perfectly" than he had previously known it; (Acts 18: 24-26); and Paul called them his "helpers in Christ." (Rom. 16: 3). Emma Smith, the "elect lady," was set apart to "expound Scriptures, and to exhort the church." (Doc. & Cov. 24: 2).

Q.—Is it right for a missionary to attend a circus?

A.—Missionaries should "shun every appearance of evil," and should not allow themselves to become "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God;" but attend strictly to their work, "giving no offense in anything, that the ministry be not blamed."—2 Cor. 6: 3.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

By letter from Bro. Samuel Rector, Wirt, Indiana, June 13th, we learn that while some parts of the district are not flourishing as could be wished, something was being done in other places. He writes:

"I learn that Bro. V. D. Baggerly, of West Fork, Crawford county, is doing a good work; also Bro. E. S. Thompson, (Priest), of the Olive Branch, Ripley county. As to the prospects at this Union Branch, there appears to be a brighter future for the onward march of gospel light and truth; and while Babylon trembles around, the Saints whose souls are stayed on God, feel secure; knowing in whom they trust. Bro. I. P. Baggerly gave us a few weeks of valuable labor, ere his departure for home; for which we are thankful; may God bless and prosper him, is the earnest prayers of the Saints of Union Branch."

Elder John S. Patterson writes from Sandwich, Illinois, the 30th ult., that their late district conference was profitable and pleasant, and that a good measure of the Spirit of God blessed them, especially on Sunday afternoon at their Sacrament and testimony meeting. Two were added by baptism; one of them, Charles D. Carter, is a grandson of the Jared Carter, whose name appears in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Bro. Patterson says further:

"I leave again to-morrow for the field, going first to Mission. My health is good, and my desires, as ever, for Zion's weal. Bro. I. L. Rogers was with us, and enjoyed himself hugely. With kind regards for all, and best wishes for the cause, I remain your fellow laborer."

Bro. A. J. Cato writes from Hearne, Texas, the 25th ult., sending a clipping from the Galveston News of the 22d, giving an account of the horrid murder of of Sr. Martha Hassell, and the lynching of five negroes for the terrible crime. Here is a portion of what it says:—

"The five negroes were put in boxes and buried in one grave, near the public road, half a mile from Elkhart, one box marked 'Andy Jackson, chief of the tribe.' This is the outcome of the foulest and most diabolical crime that was ever perpetrated in this State. A thousand fiends strung up would not compensate for the life of poor Mrs. Hassell. She was a good, beautiful, fair, pure wife, the mother of two little babes; murdered in the flush of womanhood, by the very fiends to whom their innocent young mother had more than once done acts of charity and kindness. The cowards who dragged her from her children's arms to dishonor and death were not harmed until the last link of evidence against them was full and complete. Their only gravethe roadside—is a warning that colored people would do well to heed."

Bro. Cato says also, that "Prospects are somewhat propitious for the faster spread of the [Lord's] work in this mission."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

REUNION meetings are becoming popular with the Saints. Already there are five appointed in Iowa and Nebraska alone;at Elmwood, Nebraska, beginning July 8th; at Salisbury's Grove, six miles northeast of Glidden, Iowa, July 16th; at Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, September 5th; at Galland's Grove, Iowa, October 3d; and at Montrose, Iowa, time not stated. We expect to hear from others at an early time. With proper effort these meetings will prove very interesting and successful. We bid them good speed, and trust they will be crowned with God's blessings. Care should be taken in arranging for them, and close attention should be paid to their management. Let wise, active, and prudent men be in charge.

Brethren R. M. Starah and Thomas H. N. Barrett write from Box Elder P. O., Laramie county, Colorado, that Hiram and Charles Burt left that place the 11th day of June, bound for Utah, after getting into debt to some of the Saints to a considerable amount. They state that these parties have certificates of baptism from the Brighamite Church and later ones from the Reorganized Church. Look out for such.

Some persons—not members—writing of late to Bro. I. N. Delong of Andover, Missouri, from St. Paul, Howard county, Nebraska, say there is a good opening there for the Elders. Many would receive them gladly. Let those in charge of that field look after the matter.

Bro. S. H. Morse writing from Sullivan, Dakota, the 22d ult., says: "I wish to be a perpetual subscriber for the Herald while I am in this probation."

Write only on one side of your paper when it is for the press. Write on separate sheets of paper when you write on business, news, and other separate matters in the same letter. This will prevent mistakes and save trouble. Make your articles, notices, and all you write, as plain, pointed, and concise as at all practicable.

Bro. John Shippy is out with an advertisement in this issue, as a resident dentist of Lamoni. His work is well recommended. We bespeak for him a fair share of patronage.

By letter from Elder J. R. Badham, University P. O., Los Angeles, California, 24th ult., we learn the Lord's work in that region is improving, and that Elder D. S. Mills continues to gain his health and strength. The Saints are looking for a visit from Pres. Joseph Smith and Bishop Blakeslee by and by.

We have received a copy of the Aledo (III) Weekly Record, of the 3d ult., which contains a pungent, newsy article, on the Book of Mormon, from the pen of our brother, M. T. Short. We may find space for it in the Herald when our present abundance of matter is reduced.

We hope some one will furnish us with the sixteenth volume of the Millennial Star at an early time for the use of this office; also, the later volumes. We will pay a fair price for them. Send them along soon.

H. L. and A. W. Yeater, of Ridgeway, Mo., agents for the Eagle Nurseries of Montrose, Iowa, gave Lamoni and vicinity a call last week. We hear their nurseries well spoken of.

Lamoni keeps building new and refitting old establishments, and for these dull times makes a fair show of energy and thrift. Crop prospects are fair, except for corn, which in many fields is a poor stand, owing mainly to bad seed.

Elder James G. Scott writes under date of the 24th ult., saying the Lord's work in his vicinity, Scottsville, Floyd Co., Indiana, is improving some; also that he baptized two, a man and his wife, the fifth Sunday in last May. Of this we are pleased to hear, as we have had some excellent experiences in preaching and baptizing in that region in years past, and fondly hope to have like experiences there again. Keep the camp-fires blazing, brethren, you will reap in due season, if you faint not.

WE commend the following to some who write for the Church papers. If a man of Victor Hugo's brain and culture needed to write with care, and then "alter," and "tinker," and correct his manuscript before giving it to the press, let no one else be ashamed to do similarly, if need be:

"It is difficult to imagine how Victor Hugo wrote so much, considering the way he is said to have labored. It is said that he always worked in the mornings; that he wrote standing, with a quill pen, on large-sized bluish paper; that after slowly and carefully coming to a period he would read the sentence over, and immediately proceed to alter it and tinker at it until he had hammered it into the desired shape, after which he would commence a new sentence, which was predestined to undergo the same process. In other words, he rough-hewed his idea at first, then planned, sandpapered, and varished it before he chopped out another one. His manuscript presented a singular appearance. It was a sort of battlefield on paper, in which the killed words were well stamped out and the new recruits pushed forward in anything but good order. It has also been compared to a sheet of music, in which the blots looked like crotchets and quavers. But, one way or another, Hugo managed to get along."

TONGUES.

CAN Satan inspire persons to speak in tongues?

Judging from what is written, and from personal observation also, we answer, Yes.

The early Christians had their difficulties in respect to spiritual gifts; otherwise Paul would not have said to the Saints, "Covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues." (1 Cor. 14: 39); and, "Quench not the Spirit. Despise not prophesyings. Prove all things hold fast that which is good." (1 Thess. 5: 19-21.) Satanic power is subtle and deceptive, and when it gets control of individuals can move them to think, to will, and to do many things, including the speaking of other tongues. Any one who will thoughtfully study the work of Satan and demon spirits as set forth in the Bible will discover something of their power and cunning, and will not be surprised to find that they can, if permitted, cause individuals to speak in languages. Matthew 8: 28-32, gives an account of demon spirits causing a man to speak what he naturally could not know, namely, that Jesus was the Son of God, and that they, at a future time would be tormented.

Joseph the Seer, from the time he went to Cumorah to obtain the plates of the Book of Mormon, had large, and varied experience in respect to the power of false spirits to deceive and oppose. And, from that time Satan has "compassed the camp of the Saints" in order to mislead and overcome them; hence the necessity that they should "watch and pray," and "prove all things" before they accept and endorse them as of God.

Joseph warned the Saints in an early day to be careful lest Satan deceive them in respect to the gift of tongues. Human nature is so weak and erring that persons are liable to sin in thought and desire and purpose, and so grieve the Holy Spirit from them and be subject to the influences of spirits which are not of God.

At a conference of Elders at New Portage, Ohio, September 28th, 1834, Joseph the Seer made remarks upon the subject of false spirits, and "gave an explanation of the gift of tongues," saying "that it was particularly instituted for the preaching of the gospel to other nations and languages; but it was not for the government of the church. He further said, if brother Gintroduced the gift of tongues as a testimony against brother C-, it was contrary to the rules and regulations of the church; because in all our decisions, we must judge from actual testimony. . . . President Smith advised that we speak in our own language in all such matters, and then the adversary can not lead our minds astray." All of which shows that the Seer understood that Satan, if permitted, could lead the mind "astray" in respect to tongues.

But notwithstanding the possibility of unwise and unfaithful Saints being led astray by Satanic power, it nevertheless remains a privilege, nay, more, a duty for the Saints to seek for spiritual gifts to the "edifying of the body;" and none are justified, because of mistakes, in despising prophesyings nor should they treat lightly or forbid speaking in tongues.

The following rules for the Utah Penitentiary will be read with interest by the readers of the Herald. We are informed that heretofore, there have been three reception days per week; and that the admirers of Messrs. Cannon, Musser, and others, polygamous convicts, have made the stay of these convicts an occasion of hero-worship. This must now cease, and find an expression only once per month. Hero-worship may be well enough when men suffer for righteousness' sake; but men punished for transgression of known and wholesome laws, are not martyrs nor yet heroes.

RULES FOR GOVERNMENT OF CONVICTS.

By courtesy of the U.S. Marshal we have been furnished, for publication, with a copy of the folloing rules issued for the government of the convicts in the Utah Penitentiary.

To the Convict:

Your attention is directed to the following rules, for only by observing and obeying them can you make a good record as a prisoner, and secure that diminution of your sentence which the law allows.

RULES. -

Rule 1. The first duty is strict obedience to all rules and regulations, and the orders of the officer under whose charge you may be placed. Rule 2. In the evening in your cell you are permitted to converse in a low tone with your cell-mate until the nine o'clock bell rings; but conversation with other prisoners in adjoining cells is strictly forbidden.

Rule 3. You must not speak to any visitor, or give to or receive from a visitor anything, except by permission of the warden. You are expected to apply yourself diligently to whatever labor you are assigned, and after reasonable teaching, to perform the same amount of labor as would be required of you outside.

Rule 4. If sick or unable to work, make it known to the officer in charge, and act as he may direct.

Rule 5. On notice from the Guard at nine o'clock, all conversation must cease; and only one prisoner will be allowed on the floor at a time.

Rule 6. A regular minister of the gospel accompanied by not exceeding five members of his church will be permitted to preach to the prisoners, on Sunday of each week, between the hours of two and five o'clock, p. m. in summer, and two and 4.30 o'clock, p. m. in winter.

Rule 7 You must approach an officer in a respectful manner, and confine your conversation with him strictly to the business in hand. You must not address an officer on matters outside the prison. Insolence in any form, to an officer, or even to another convict, will not be tolerated.

Rule 8. On entering the Warden House, or any office, you must remove your hat, unless your duties are such that you have special permission to remain covered.

Rule 9. You are requested to attend religious services on Sunday, unless sick or excused by the Warden. Silence must be observed; no reading will be allowed; strict attention must be given to the service; spitting upon the floor, shuffling of the feet, or any unnecessary noise is strictly forbidden.

Rule 10. You are required to bathe once a week in summer, and once in two weeks in winter, unless excused by the Physician or Warden.

Rule 11. You will be permitted to have and receive only such food as is furnished by the Warden.

Rule 12. You will be allowed so long as you obey strictly the foregoing rules, the following privileges, viz.:

1. Permission to write once in two weeks.

2. Permission to see members of family on the first Thursday of each month.

You are permitted to receive such weekly papers as the Warden may approve.

In case of special letters, permission must be obtained from the Warden.

All letters written or received must first be examined at the office, under direction of the Warden, before being sent or delivered.

All the above privileges depend on you good behavior, and you will be deprived of one or all of them for bad conduct.

Rule 13. This card must be preserved in good condition; if you deface, alter, or injure it, you will be immediately reported and severely punished.

New Philadelphia, Ohio, June 25th, 1885.

Editor's Herald:—For the past month I have been trying to meet with and instruct the Saints and friends upon questions relating to Church finances, in Northern Ohio and the Pittsburgh district, and as opportunity offered, speaking upon other gospel topics. In the journey I have noticed many things which gave me strength and encouragement to continue my labors, and which evidently point to a more determined warfare and closer walk with God on the part of the Saints, than they have been able to wage in the past.

At Diamond, Portage county, I assisted Bro. G. T. Griffiths for a few days preaching here, and opening a new field at Milton Center, in Mahoning county. We had good and intelligent listeners in both places, and a number who pressed for us to return soon and stop with them, that they might hear further of the word of life. Bro. and Sr. James Stewart aid in the work here.

Having an appointment to meet with the Saints in Church Hill, I went there on June 4th, Bro. Griffiths continuing the work at Diamond. At Church Hill I found a few Saints presided over by Bro. D. M. Strachan. On account of a number changing their residences, the branch here has been reduced, but those left were firm in the work and making the best of the situation. Sister Williams was under a terrible affliction. by reason of a cancer. She had been to Cleveland, Ohio, and under the treatment of the most skilled physicians for the three months previous, only to return with the stinging words of discouragement, "There is no hope for you." In thinking over the statement I could not but deeply feel the goodness manifest by our Heavenly Father to his people, in promising comfort and succor to them in the hours of extremity. How diligently we ought at all times to seek the welfare of the cause of Zion, and "contend for the faith once delivered to the Saints," so as to be prepared against the day of trouble. Sister Williams called for the prayers of the Elders, and under the ministration was encouraged and blest, and we fell thankful that the Master would give to his children the spirit of consolation, although they were at the gateway of death and sorely tried.

The Saints at Church Hill have been studying the law relating to their duties in aiding the work financially, etc., but had not realized the necessity of placing the means pointed out in the law in the Church treasury, that it might be properly applied by those whom God has appointed for this especial work, to the building up and establishment of his cause, and that the contributors might have their names reckoned with those who render an "account of their stewartship in time, and also in eternity." This order can no more be disregarded than the order of faith and repentance, and it is just as wrong for a man to assume that he will be his own Bishop, in disregard of him whom God has appointed, as it would be to assume to be his own Elder and Priest, and perform the duties belonging to such The order of God's House must be observed, every man standing in his place, if we would prevent schism in the body. Paul in directing in these things said: "Let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." "And when I come, whomsoever ye shall approve by your letters, them will I send to bring your liberality to Jerusalem."

This agrees with the practice in the time of Jesus, of holding the means for the treasury, as shown in John 12: 6 and 13: 29. Also, under the immediate supervision of Peter, who was evidently the president of the church after the ascension of the Savior, as shown by the practice in the Acts 4: 34, 35. The father of all the faithful in Christ did not assume to be his own Bishop, and distribute, himself that which was directed to go to the poor, and building up of God's work, who was evidently the keeper of the treasury—the Bishop; and so in keeping with this wise rule the Lord directed in February, 1831, as follows:

"If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, * * * and they shall be laid before the Bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the Elders, or High Priests, such as he shall or has appointed, and set apart for that purpose."—D. and C. sec. 42, par 8.

A disregard of this rule has of late been the means of dissension and great disturbance in one of the churches in West Virginia, the means sent to them by brethren whose object it was to do good, being but in fact a bone of contention that has caused jealousies, envy, and hatred. Had the means donated to the relief of the poor there been sent to the Bishop, as the law directs, he would have directed his agent to have gone to them and distributed according to the necessities in the case, and there would have been no cause of complaint. When brethren fail to honor the law, evil will be the result, no difference how good the intention. The law is for a purpose and can not be disregarded. Neither does a true observance of this hinder brethren, or those not members, from handing an offering to the minister if they so choose, and see that they can well do; there is special provision made in the law that meets such cases, but the provision in no way takes the place of, nor can it be substituted for the general law.

At Pittsburgh I met with many good Saints, who were striving to honor the law and build up the work. The president of the branch, Bro. George H. Hulmes, was devoted to his work, as I found him the year previous when there. At the church door was the faithful Deacon, Bro. John Gillespie, whom I noticed as the ready attendant fifteen months before when at Pittsburgh. I thought how approving must the Master be of the officer or member of the church who can always be found on duty, whether in sunshine or storm. It is to the patient and faithful the rewards will be rendered, regardless of rank or station. Bro. Frank Criley, the Bishop's Agent here, is an incessant laborer for the cause, and one of the wisest and most faithful agents I have met in the church; may the Lord bless him in his work, and the Saints feel the necessity of sending oftener their names to him, No 33, 5th Avenue, Pittsburg.

The work of Eider Mark H. Forscutt here, during the winter, was very appreciable. It was quite evident that he had been industrious, and able in his ministry of the word, while his blows in the midst of the Infidel league were those of the accomplished iconoclast. The Saints look forward with hope to his early return, to continue the work of liberating those "liberals."

Bro. Josiah Ells, the faithful porter and aged laborer, is as ever giving encouragement to the Saints

At Wheeling, W. Va., I again met with Bro. Griffiths, who has incessantly labored to build in the district for the past two years and a half. He has done a great, a good work, and but for a few who have in the course of the work's progress felt the rod of discipline in some measure, the Saints heartily sustain his efforts. I have noticed in the district as elsewhere, a disposition on the part of a few to try to undermine the work and influence of the district officers. This is certainly wrong. The officers of the church have the right to expect that in enforcing the laws of the church they will meet with a hearty co-operation from every member. Should the officers of the law of the land, in their efforts to enforce it, be met with a united opposition by a part of the people, it would be termed rebellious. So it is in the church. If officers exceed their duties, there is an easy remedy laid down, both in the state and in the church; but the remedy is not by the shot-gun of the moonshiner in the one, nor by a factious and tale-bearing method to destroy confidence in the other. We should be brethren by nature and labor, as well as in name. Bro. L. D. Ullom has charge of the work in the Benwood Branch, in the absence of Bro Griffiths. He is assisted by brethren Smith, Teagarten and Humes. Here I met with Bro. R. S. Salyards, who had been laboring for a few weeks in the district, and found in him an agreeable and able worker in my visit to Lampsville and Belmont, Ohio, and Glen Easton, W. Va. I hope it may be possible to keep him in the field. The work at Lampsville and Belmont was not in an encouraging state, owing to many things. I did not meet with Bro. McCormick, president of the former branch. Brethren Barnes and C. P. Hatcher were in charge in his absence. We held one meeting at the residence of Bro. Iesse Sheldon, and found him anxious to see the work go forward. Bro. Finnecum is the officer in charge here, and does what he can. Bro. Salyards and myself after leaving the place, arrived at Wheeling just in time to occupy the places awaiting us at a bountifully spread table, furnished by the Saints at their Sunday School picnic, and thereafter enjoyed both this preparation of our good sisters and the amusements which followed. In the evening, though all were tired, they met at the church to hear a short lecture on The Book of Mormon. The following evening Bro. Griffiths baptized a young man, Bro. A Thomas, who bids fair to stand faithful to his trust, while Bro. Salyards and I left for the big hills of Glen Easton. Here is where brethren Thomas E. Lloyd, James Brown, Gordon E. Deuel, James Wagner, Josiah Ells, James Craig, and James Robinson, wrought and labored faithfully for the work in the past, and the faithful Saints whom we met, bear evidence that the Master accepted their sacrifices. Bro. Aaron Harris presides in the branch here, assisted by brethren Amos Dobbs, Joseph Wait and others. Bro.

James Craig, from West Wheeling, also was present and preached on Sabbath morning to a good audience. Here we left, all alone and lonely, Bro. Salyards to continue the work for two weeks, and proceeded to New Philadelphia, where I find Bro. Griffiths still battling and contending for the truth, in the face of a cunning and unscrupulous opposition. He has succeeded in well establishing the work here, however, and brethren John H. Cramer and Edward Steinbough, the Teacher and Deacon in charge of the work, like true soldiers of Christ indeed, are standing firmly by their colors; may the Lord bless and confirm their work, and also those who labor for the good of Zion everywhere.

We are anxious to hear from the work of our President, in his efforts to reclaim those who have wandered from the truth. When he returns, can not Pres. Blair visit us in the east.

For the truth,

E. L. KELLEY.

RAIROA, Paumotus, May 3d, 1885.

Bro, Foseph:—I wrote the other day at Matea, and left the letter with others with a gentleman to take to Papeete, I learned to-day that he could not go, and tried to get a German trader named Peter to take them, but he refused to do it, although it would have been no inconvenience to him. I will get the letters that I left in Mr. Bonafa's hands, but they will miss this mail. I will send this by Capt. Wahler, of the schooner Teva. We left Matea a week ago Tuesday, and stopped a week at Tikahau, which lies between here and Matea, about midway. The branch at Tikahau have a neat little stone church, and the island is blessed in one respect, it is free from the pest-mosquito. Here there are a few, but nothing like Matea. This is one of the largest of the Paumotus-being some forty miles long, that is the lagoon or body of water inside the numerons links of islands. These islands range from a half to two miles long, by one eighth to one fourth of a mile wide, and are separated by little straits ranging from a few yards to a half mile—of shallow water, too shallow generally for anything but a skiff to float in. The lagoons are from one to twenty fathoms deep. They are round, oval, oblong, and sometimes bent like an elbow: they abound in fish of various kinds, and of may colors. There are fish here that are red, others are blue, others yellow, others green-and bright colors at that. Others are white and black, red and black striped, spotted, and of all shapes and sizes. The natives are very experts in catching them, both with lines, nets and spears. They seldom miss when they strike at a fish. It is about all they do, except make Copara that is, old cocoanuts, spilt them in two, let them lie in the sun two or three days, and then take the nut out of the shell, and put it in bags, or ship it loose. It is but little work, and in it the women help. At other times they sit on the ground, or lie on it, and what cooking is done the men do it. In no part of the world do women have easier times than here, or have as much to say about business matters, &c. The customs differ, however: for in Tahiti the women are far more industrious, and are more intelligent, too. In Koukura the women are more industrious, and at Matea they work considerably. At Tekahau, and here, I do not see them do anything. They take no thought of the morrow in the fullest sense of the term. Give them enough food for two meals, and they will eat it at one, and get more when they get hungry, and eat whenever they are hungry, at any hour of day or night. This is their custom, and they are used to it. They also can go without eating longer than white people. I only look for them to assimilate the customs of white people, when they are surrounded by them. It would not do for the members of the church to live as we do, for they would be laughed at, and ridiculed by their neighbors. Food is easily obtained, and on many islands the sale of cocoanuts, on others the pearl shell, on a few the sale of fish, constitute the business of the people; so they have but little to do, even if disposed to do it. They are compelled to be idle, and becoming accustomed to it, when required to work, it speedily becomes irksome. It would be a great blessing to them if they were situated so that they had to work regularly. I must close, as the vessel is about ready to take this to Papeete. We go to Koukura next week.

Your brother in Christ,

THOS. W. SMITH.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—I have a great interest in the people of Huron county, the next county above me. They are poor, but there is a great interest wherever I have been. I baptized three yesterday, six miles south of Sand Beach. Is it possible that we can get any free tracts on the first principles? I have no money to pay for the tracts, or I would keep them on hand. I have all I can do to keep in the field. I sometimes wonder at the liberty and power I receive in preaching the gospel. God is with his people. I expect a great ingathering in Huron county this summer.

In the faith, yours

INDEPENDENCE, Mo.,

June 24th, 1885.

Bro. Blair: I have just returned from a visit to the Saints in my former home, Cherokee, Kan., where I arrived the evening of the 12th inst. Stopped with brother Wm. Jones, two miles southeast of town. "The next morning, being the Sabbath, called on a goodly number of his neighbors, my old friends, and paid them a visit and had them announce preaching that day at their Sabbath school for Saturday and Sunday evenings, upon the subject of the Sabbath of the Lord. I then visited the Saints in the Pleasant View Branch, and a number of them went to meeting with me that evening. The four young Elders, John and Evan Davis sons of John T. Dav is, Edward Wheeler, and Warren Peak, being of the number, who have been preaching for the advent friends, and had made many friends among them, and who were much pleased that I was to speak on the Sabbath question, as they had felt rather timid in regard to broaching that subject to their Advent friends. A goodly number were out Saturday evening, and Sunday evening about all of the seventh day people, and many others. They became so interested that, when I would try to close, they would urge me to go on, until I had continued my speech until near half-past eleven; leaving them as I think with troubled minds in regard to their Seventh day Sabbath, but with a very friendly feeling, and a special invitation to visit them again soon and remain longer. Preached in the Pleasant View Branch; spent the week in Weir, Columbus, and Cherokee, and on Saturday last went to Webb City, where I preached Sunday in a large hall, the brethren have rented, and also Monday evening. There was much interest there, as the Saints there are letting their light shine. With many requesting me to continue, (who are non-members) I returned home yesterday. The young brethren from Pleasant View will, some of them, preach there every first and third Sunday after this, and I look for some additions there soon. Will say to the Saints who have Seventh-day friends who want preaching, that I am making that matter a special study, have a great desire to preach to them, and when I can leave home would be pleased to visit and assist them.

Yours in gospel bonds,

D. S. CRAWLEY.

Kingsley, Plymouth Co., Iowa, June 27th, 1885.

Dear Herald: As members of the one body, we are all interested in that which concerns the body; for "whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it;" hence I desire to contribute my mite to the joy of my fellow-members. On my return from the last General Conference it was my mournful task to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Eliza Frick, the beloved and lamented wife of brother Martin S. Frick, late of Missouri Valley. The discourse was preached in the Methodist Church of that place. There was a very respectable audience, consisting largely of members of the Methodist Church, with their minister. While it was indeed a mournful task, yet there was great pleasure afforded in it from the fact that the departed had not only "obeyed the truth," but up to the last moment of her life rejoiced in the certain hope of a glorious resurrection. Ever since she entered into covenant with God, she had manifested a missionary spirit, with becoming zeal and unfaltering diligence; hence I am constrained to believe she has entered into her rest.

Soon afterwards I was summoned to perform a similar duty toward our brother, G. W. Conyers of Soldier Valley. It affords me pleasure to record, that what I had known of this brother was evidence to me that he had received of the spirit of the gospel, and that that gospel was the one blessed theme upon which his soul loved to dwell. He always was willing to aid the struggling servants of the Master in their works of faith and labors of love. It can truly be said of him, "Ye have done it unto me."

Since then I have labored in many places, and attended various conferences in my field of labor. The district conferences at Little Sioux and Galland's Grove, were pleasant feasts to the hungry soul. My observation, extending through many years, has confirmed me in the belief that the brethren and sisters composing those districts love the law of God, and are not desirous of shirking the responsibilities of that law. Some are inclined to find fault with them at times, from the fact that they do their own thinking, and are not willing to lay down their agency and reasoning faculties at the beck of any man, be his standing whatsoever it may. But I believe they do and will honor every man in his calling, and render all proper aid he may need in the discharge of his duties among them; but being free men, they are opposed to any man seeking to club them into obedience to his dictates. With them the tradition that "might makes right" has long since evaporated. Nor do they think that of necessity, place or position gives wisdom. They believe the latter qualification is the result of the application of the mind thereto, aided by the Spirit of God. I do not claim for these districts perfection, or even superiority over other districts in points of excellence. I can see much to improve in, greater excellence to attain to; but this should not blind us as to the good that exists.

On the 20th of May, a branch was organized in Sioux City, Iowa, Elder Hiram L. Holt, and the writer taking part in the organization of the same. Martin P. Berg, formerly a Priest, was ordained an Elder and placed in charge. A Bro. Townsend selected as Teacher, and David Jennings as Deacon. The number, all told, was seven. It is a small beginning, but I hope to see this branch of the mustard tree grow; and I anticipate good to result from this organization. I am now in Northern Iowa, and am expecting to preach in Correctionville, Woodbury county, and also in Kingsley, Plymouth county. I visited both places yesterday. They are about fourteen miles apart. I can see wrecks of the late storms all through this country, in overturned barns, wrecked churches, shattered dwellings, etc. I find the people are mindful of the clouds, even though ther forget the power that gathers and scatters them at His will. Truly, "mens hearts fail them for fear of those things that are coming on the earth." Uncle John A. McIntosh, of Galland's grove, is at Correctionville, on a visit to his daughter. He visited Little Sioux District Conference, also Galland's Grove District Conference, at Deloit. He is in his eightieth year, and seems to be feeble in body, but still strong in "The faith once delivered to the Saints." His brethren among whom he has long labored were glad to see him among them once more. The old veteran bore strong testimony to the truth of the cause of God. I am sowing the seed by the "way side," and in the unbroken fields, as well as in those which have been tilled. I leave for the future to determine the result of my labors. This I know, I want to do the will of God, and bring to pass much restoration in these last days; and for this purpose I ask an interest in the prayers of all Saints.

C. DERRY.

MONTROSE, Iowa, June 30th, 1885.

Bro Blair: - Park Bluff is just below Montrose, and has been purchased and fitted up for holding Camp Meetings and gatherings of all kinds by the Methodists of Iowa, Missouri, and Illinois. It is a beautiful place. From this bluff you have a fine view up and down the river, besides a grand view of Nauvoo, opposite. There is a Tabernacle built that will seat a thousand people, a large boarding house, with kitchen, and a large building fitted up with sleeping rooms. This work has all been done by subscription, and therefore is free for all churches. It is certainly a grand place. No place that I know of affords such privileges as this. Those having it in charge say we can have it in September; and all the expense we will have to be at is policing the grounds. Don't you think we ought to make use of such an offer? I think we will try and arrange for a week's meetings there in September. Can you or Joseph come? If so, what time in the month? We want to get the names of all the Elders who will render us aid, and publish the list when we advertize the meeting. Let us know what time you can come so we can fix the date and begin to advertize.

Yours in bonds of peace, H. C. Bronson.
